Our New Year Faith

By C. REXFORD RAYMOND

The New Year bids man venture. God knows where His tides and winds may bear his Ship of State.
Dawn lights the sky; nor wind nor tide will wait!
Cast off, break out the sails; with courage dare
To plow uncharted seas. Far forth we fare
Mid storm or calm, to seek a nobler fate;
By brotherhood to banish fear and hate,
That human life may breathe an ampler air!

Faith points the way. At dawn we bravely sail
Beyond the sunset skies of yesterday.
The swift, sure tides and winds of God will bring
Our tiny bark to port. We shall not fail.
Up anchor! Sail! Adventure while we may!
New shores, new stars, new hopes; by faith we sing!

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

It was a glad and glorious Christmas with greetings, family reunions, gifts and tokens of devotions. The New Year begins with greater cheer and comfort and strength because of what the glad Christmas time brought us.

From Rev. R. T. Grissom, Fancy Gap, Va., comes this happy Christmas announcement: "Announcing the Birth of Robert Thomas Grissom, on December 20th, 1935." Signed Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom. We extend congratulations.

The latest word from Mrs. A. W. Andes is that her good husband, Rev. A. W. Andes, after several blood transfusions and hospital treatment for some weeks, though very weak, is improved and there are high hopes of his full recovery after a season.

The financial report of The Christian Orphanage and the letter of its Superintendent, Chas. D. Johnston, do not appear in this issue of THE SUN, as the paper is a little ahead of schedule on account of the intervening holidays. A full and detailed report for the two weeks will appear in next week's CHRISTIAN SUN.

THE SUN's managing editor, accompanied by his wife left Richmond, Virginia, immediately after Christmas to attend the Florida Holiday Conference held with the Winter Park Church in Winter Park, Florida. Many of our people will be interested in a report on this Conference, which in all probability will be included in next week's issue of the SUN.

THE SUN's editor was gratified to receive from friends far and near so many cards and tokens of friendship and favors during the Christmas season and for the New Year. Of these none was more striking and appropriate than that of Rev. Ivan R. Smith, pastor of our Winchester Church, who, with a card of beautiful and appropriate setting, to "The Christmas Angels' Matin" at 6:00 A. M., and a Christmas service, "Around the Manger," at 8:00 A. M., Sunday, December 22nd.

Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, president of the Federal Council of Churches, in an address at Grand Rapids, struck home to the heart of things in saying: "As I plead for a closer fellowship between the Christian people of lands around the Pacific and urge a greater interest in Missions, I am pleading for the future peace and happiness of the human race." There can never come peace and happiness to the human race until men and women everywhere shall come to know and adopt in their lives the program of the Prince of Peace.

LIFE'S OPEN DOORS.

By REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

In every life doors are continually shutting. Every day, touched by the hand of night, closes silently. No prayer can bring back

"A day that is gone."

Every wonderful year, in which we live and love and toil and suffer, at last comes to a close. Life itself closes its doors behind everyone. No matter how much we love this life, it closes, and often closes before our tasks are completed. Arthur Hallam, after a brilliant career at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, and with the prophecy of a useful life, died when he was twenty-two years of age. Countless thousands have died in the years of youth who did not have a Tennyson to make them live through the centuries.

In life doors are continually opening. A new day dawns, summoning us to use our restored energies to worthwhile endeavors. A new year ushers itself in, bringing to everyone new opportunities. New associations await us, some of which will become dear to us. Old tasks are unfinished and new tasks need us.

"New mercies each returning day,
Hover around us while we pray;
New perils past, new sins forgiven,
New thoughts of God, new hopes of heaven."

The closing and the opening of the doors of life are the silent movings of a wise and loving Providence. It is well that many things in life pass away. Otherwise, life would be cluttered up. They have met their purpose and must give way to new and living needs and tasks. They were the gift of God and his hand swings open the door of time through which they pass and through which others come.

"Deep in unfathomable mines
Of never failing skill,
He treasures up His bright designs
And works His sovereign will."

This means that these never-changing movements of life are the processes of growth. It is well that the days and years and associations and tasks of life pass by. Stagnation would mean death. These continual re-adaptions mean enlarging life.

The best of life is still before us. This new year of 1936 is our opportunity for a purer faith, a more Christlike love, a diviner and more satisfying life. Even death to such a life is a friend that opens a door to more abundant life and service.

We should look at such changes in complete trust and reverence. The only way we can enter into such opportunities is in a spirit of humility and a sense of our boundless need of God and his companionship.

The reality of such a life grows through the changing experiences of time. Time and Eternity are one life. We carry over into a new year and into eternity all that is worthwhile. The memories, the inspirations are ours forever and the coarse and selfish and the narrow motives and aims we leave behind. When we move from one house into another we get rid of much that once was important but is now junk. The essential things we carry with us. We cast away only the outworn. Love, faith, hope and companionships are ours ever. Alice Freeman Palmer held in her hand a butterfly and in her faith saw it as a symbol of her own life.

"Now I hold you fast in my hand,
You marvelous butterfly,
Till you help me to understand
The eternal mystery.
"From the creeping things in the dust
To the shining bliss in the blue,
God, give me courage to trust
I can break my chrysalis, too."

PREPARATION FOR CHRIST.

The preparation for Christ's first coming was a long process, extending at least from the time of Abraham to that of John the Baptist, who received the final commission to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for Him and to herald His immediate appearance.

On the surface the response to this preparation was very meagre; only a few were ready to accept and acknowledge Jesus as the Christ; yet we are told that He came in "the fulness of the time," that is, when the time was ripe, at the right time, when the world was ready for the purpose for which He came. The previous preparation had not been all lost; the world was not ready to receive the first seeds of His kingdom. And so, when He first came, He sowed the seed; He instilled the first leaven of His own spirit which should eventually sweeten the whole world; He laid the foundation of His kingdom. And he established a society, a Church, to carry on His work; to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for Him against His coming again; to build up and extend His kingdom till all the kingdoms of the world should become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He should be able to take the power and reign.

Now, what is Christ going to do when He comes again? We are perhaps apt rather to over-concentrate on His coming to judge the living and the dead; on the destruction of the wicked; and the end of the world. His coming will certainly be with judgment; every coming of Christ must be; and that naturally inspires us with fear and dread. But whatever may be the nature and form of that judgment, whatever may be involved in it, and whatever its consequences may be for individuals or nations, we must never forget that it will be in the hands of a holy and most merciful Saviour, a most worthy Judge eternal; and that, like Abraham of old, we may rely upon the conviction, "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

But principally He is coming to reign on the earth; the judgment will be a passing episode, His reign will be permanent. His advent is not going to mean the end of the earth, only the end of an age, the end of one age and the beginning of a new age; He is going to reign on a new earth, an earth that has been renewed, made fresh and wholesome, an earth in which will dwell righteousness. And it is the mission of the Church to renew the earth against that day: to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for Him; to create such a strong desire for universal righteousness that when the Divine Dictator comes and lays down His laws and says, "This must stop," "This must be," the world will be ready, willingly and gladly, to accept His will, and will cry out, "this is what we have been longing for; this is the condition we have been feebly striving after; this is the Leader we have been waiting for; we are ready for His lead"; it will not be so perfect that it could do without Him, but it will be ready for Him to take control.

It is now nearly two thousand years since the Church received her commission to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for Him. Are we ready yet? If He were to come today would His rule be accepted now any more than it was before? I think not. Many of His ideals, as ideals, would meet with much sympathy; great numbers would feel that there was something in themselves which would go out to and respond to those ideals; but that he would be placed on a throne and allowed to put those ideals into practice is more than doubtful; we are not yet a people prepared for a rule of universal righteousness.

I believe that the crisis through which the world is now passing is going to issue in our taking one great step nearer to the mind of Christ; it is going to bring home to us the vital necessity for goodwill, to teach us, as nothing before has taught us, that "if one member suffer, all the members suffer with it." The world is struggling just now in the birth throes of that conception; it is just beginning to realize that it is not by weakening and injuring one another by war, diplomacy, or commerce, but only by mutual help that the world can live at all; it has been a long time learning it, but it is getting a perception of it at last, and if it comes to the birth, as I believe

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

THE CAUSE OF MISSIONS.

As long as there is a Christian Church there will be missions. Promotion of the cause of missions is essential to the life of the Church.

The main business of the Mid-Winter Meetings or the Annual National Executive Conference of the Congregational and Christian Churches to be held at Chicago and Evanston, Ill., January 24th to 30th, is missionary promotion. In missionary promotion as in other affairs, details sometimes require so much attention that the whole is obscure. But except when details cloud the visibility, the culminating event at each of the Mid-Winter Meetings is the adoption of the "Plan of Promotion" for the coming year by the Commission on Missions.

Leadership for missionary promotion in the Congregational and Christian churches devolves upon the mission boards and the state conferences. These work together in promotion through the agency of the Commission on Missions. A "Plan of Promotion" is annually prepared in advance for submission at the Mid-Winter Meetings by the Cooperative Council of the Commission on Missions. Outlines of a proposed "Plan" for next year were agreed upon at the meeting of the Cooperative Council in New York City, Friday, December 20th. The committee named to formulate the "Plan" were: Dr. William F. Frazier of Hartford, Conn., superintendent for Connecticut and chairman of the Cooperative Council; Dr. Fred Field Goodsell of Boston, Mass., executive vice-president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions; the Rev. John R. Scotford of New York City, editorial secretary of the Commission on Missions. The committee assigned Mr. Scotford to write the "Plan." The "Plan" if adopted, should constitute a "pre-view" showing what will be the distinctive aspects of missionary promotion activity during 1936.

A "PRE-VIEW" OF 1936.

The principal lines along which it is proposed to work in missionary promotion during 1936 are:

"1. The Emphasis. Let us think of ourselves as building the Kingdom of God in the light of fifty generations of a great tradition which began with Christ. Inspiration can be found in specific examples of the growth of Christian institutions. The past should heighten our courage for the future. When seen through the perspective of the years ours is a religious enterprise with evangelism at its center.

"2. The Approach. As the pastor is the leader of the local church, it is essential that his point of view be made central in all plans for missionary promotion. The boards desire to look at the work through his eyes; they wish him to feel that this is his enterprise, that the mission board is the lengthened shadow of the local church. Two definite steps toward this end are proposed:

- a. Meetings with groups of younger pastors in which there may be frank interchange between them and representatives of the boards.
- b. The preparation of material which will help the pastors in all their work as well as in missionary promotion.

"3. The Goal. Our ultimate success depends upon an informed and inspired laity. The men and women who sit in the pews must be led to feel a personal responsibility for the on-going of the Christian enterprise in the nation and the world. It is planned to cultivate their interest in the following ways:

- a. Through the holding of Church Officers' Visitations.
- b. By means of distinctly Laymen's gatherings either on an Association or a State Conference basis.
- c. Training lay leaders as had been done in Michigan.
- d. Gathering the missionary committees of the local churches by Associations as was recently done at Hartford, Conn.

In this general frame-work it is proposed to carry forward the following activities:

- a. The continued use of the Cent-A-Meal Boxes.
- b. A revised and re-vitalized Every-Member Canvass.
- c. A more adequate distribution of missionary speakers.
- d. The preparation of literature for specific groups of people, as, for instance, for doctors and for teachers."

REV. ALFRED GRANT
WALTON, D. D.

A MODERN LAYMAN'S THEOLOGY.

Dr. Alfred Grant Walton, pastor of Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., has written a book, published by Harper's, which is entitled, "This I Can Believe." Dr. Walton deals systematically with the great areas of Christian thought and action traditionally presented in theologies under headings of the doctrines of the Scriptures; of God and Christ; of man; of sin and salvation; of the future life.

It is not an adequate description of Dr. Walton's book to say it is a simplified work on systematic theology. It differs, however, from ordinary theologies on the questions anticipated from the readers. Instead of questions which may arise in the minds of ministers who have applied themselves earnestly to Biblical exegesis, church history and the philosophy of religion, it anticipates questions of laymen who are being carried along in the current of modern life with its scientific pre-suppositions and its social and international problems.

The book illustrates that the difference between a volume on systematic theology intended to be read by laymen and a volume for ministers need be in what are actually only incidental matters. Knowledge of God and salvation is not limited to those who have what is called "great learning." It is the answers, not the questions, which make a theology a vital book. The questions discussed only make it hard or easy depending upon the reader's previous studies.

IN THE LIGHT OF SOCIAL SCIENCE.

Concerning the controversy of long-standing over whether a man may be saved after death, Dr. Walton says:

"Many persons with unfortunate hereditary antecedents and with bad social environments are hindered in their discovery of God and the goodness that is to be found in Christ. One has only to contemplate the poverty of great cities, the tragedies of broken homes, the evil influences of corrupt surroundings, to realize the inequalities of life and opportunities which many are compelled to face. It is inconceivable that God would love us and seek to reclaim us as his own until the day of our death and then lose all further interest in us. Human love is not like that. Rather, we must believe that He will continue to reach out for us here and hereafter, ever bidding us to do His will."

Tompkins Avenue Church of which Dr. Walton is pastor, is the second largest in the united denomination, having 2,461 members.

An introduction to "This I Can Believe" is written by Col. Hugh L. Cooper, hydro-electric engineer, who has designed and built works producing over two million horse-power. Among these are the power projects at Niagara Falls, at Muscles Shoals, and recently, the great Dneiper Dam project in Russia. Col. Cooper was a member of Dr. Walton's former congregation at Stamford, Conn.

EDUCATION AND SUCCESS.

No matter what a person's peculiar calling may be, he can do that work with more expertness and with more pleasure if he is well prepared for the task. I have traveled a great deal in different states and I have yet to find the first person who regretted that he had gotten a sound, usable education. There is nothing more essential to a person's success in any laudable undertaking in life as a good intellectual background and it should be the supreme purpose of all parents, preachers and teachers to fit our young people for the duties and responsibilities of life with such unmistakable preparation. Some of our young people seem to have gotten the idea that education is more of an external qualification than internal, and many of them are entering our colleges and universities because it is fashionable and not because it helps them to find the way to a life of usefulness and to the secret of real human happiness. They should understand that education is to motivate life with right ideas and objectives and to inspire them to grow and achieve, rather than to settle down to the common level of their environment.

Richard Mansfield was once asked by a young man how to be a success. "First go and develop yourself," said Mansfield. I have told thousands of young people in the classroom, from the platform and the pulpit that they could never hope to make much of other things and other people, until they had first made something of themselves. Nothing but Christian education, in our homes, our schools and our churches can bring our youth to the consciousness of their dependence on righteousness for the best of which they are capable and of the success that awaits them.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christiau is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christiau character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Despite her awful fate, and tragic warning to the rest of us, Lot's wife and her kind hath done us much evil. Fact is, if all of us who look back with anxious eyes and longing hearts to the past, salt would be even more abundant in the earth and much cheaper than it is. There are those whose whole future is their past. They glory over things that are gone and pine and complain over the present and the future. To such as are thus diseased our Lord Christ's burning words, as repeated by St. Luke, come with great intensity, "Remember Lot's wife."

By the grace of God, and the benevolence of a kind Providence, we are now permitted to begin a new year—1936. Reader, mark it down here and now, for good and all, 1935 is gone. It wore itself out seeking to sustain and to help you and me. With profound gratitude for all of its blessings and bounties to us, it is now gone—dead in fact as Old Marley was, who, Dickens declares with repeated emphasis, had been dead and done for, for a long seven years, as miserly Old Scrooge well remembered. Let us not look with a longing eye back to the experiences of 1935, lest its ghost shall come to haunt us as a terrible nightmare. Nineteen hundred and thirty-six is here, now planted firmly on the solid foundation of past years and rich with the favors and fruitage of past experiences. A new year has come, and every day and every hour of it will be new. In fact, if we open our eyes we may behold a new heaven and a new earth. "Is not the prime struggle of life to keep the mind plastic?" inquires David Grayson. "To see and feel and hear things newly?" Grayson was giving us some good philosophy with which to begin the new year: "Things grow old and stale, not because they are old, but because we cease to see them. There is a tree at our gate we have not seen in years: a flower blooms in our door-yard more wonderful than the shining heights of the Alps!" No more fitting petition can be offered to our gracious and loving Lord at the beginning of a new year than that recorded by the Psalmist: "O Lord, open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."—the very law of love and life as it daily unfolds itself in Nature around about us. The new year brings us new gladness, because it is a promise of things to be, the expectation of wonderful things to do and to behold, of matchless and marvelous blessings and benefits that our heavenly Father invites us to partake of and to share from His bountiful hand.

"Remember Lot's wife" and the tragedy of her ending, and forgetting those things that are behind, let us press forward "toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." This is the spirit of 1936.

GLORIFYING THE COMMONPLACE.

It is not the uncommon but the common things that count; not the extraordinary but the ordinary. These are they with which we have to deal daily and which bring to us victory or defeat, joy or sorrow, gladness or woe. Jesus gave us the example. He took the ordinary and the common and made them the extraordinary and the uncommon. It was not the clouds and the skies, the mists and the mysteries of things far off, but the lilies of the field, the lost sheep of his native hills, the lost coin in the humble home, the lost son of a friend and neighbor. These constituted the themes and the figures which He used and immortalized. We are so prone to look for the big, the startling, the far-off things that we forget the great and the good things around about us, and the ordinary experiences which may be extraordinary, if we will make them so. How many farmer folk and others, who toil at their daily tasks, can repeat with gladness this experience of countryman, toiling, David Grayson:

I came back this evening from rioting in my fields. As I walked down the lane I heard the soft tinkle of a cowbell, a certain earthly exaltation, as of work, came out of the bare fields, the duties of my daily life crowded upon me bringing a pleasant calmness of spirit, and I said to myself: 'Lord be praised for that which is common.' And after I had done my chores I came in, hungry, to my supper."

Not complaining of the toil and weariness of the day but praising God for the common things which He has given us the privilege and the joy of glorifying—if we will.

BIG SALARIES AND BUSINESS.

What stings the "average man" is the fact, not that big business does business in a big way, but that the leaders of big business draw such enormous salaries. Automobiles, trucks and tractors have come to be a necessity, and thousands, whose daily bread depend upon these common carriers, need good machines, but cannot understand why those who have the management of their making must reap such rewards for their industry. The Securities Commission of our government puts before the public, over the Company's protest the size of some of the salaries that high officials of General Motors received the past year. The executive Vice President, Wm. S. Knudsen, drew as salary last year, $211,128.00 and an additional bonus (not stated). Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President, had a salary of $201,749.00. Twelve other "high officials" of General Motors received salaries of more than $70,000.00 each, and then some of the directors of the Company received $25,000. The "average man" is, of course, willing to concede that these officials are of more than ordinary ability or they could not have reached their position in the world, nor could they hold their jobs. And yet even an "average citizen" may well conclude that no man can, by his industry and activity, and business acumen, really earn a salary of over $200,000.00 a year—over two and one-half times as much as the salary of the President of the United States.

At a time when thousands are unemployed and much of the produce and labor of the "average citizen" command a price that hardly brings a living, one can but feel that some adjustment is necessary in our economic system, and that by some means or other there should be a more equitable division from the income of industry. In the light of such facts, laid before us at this season of great rejoicing, the burning words of the Prophet Amos written thousands of years ago come back to us: "I hate, I despise your feast days, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies. Though ye offer me burnt offerings and your meat offerings, I will not accept them: neither will I regard the peace offerings of your fat beasts. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." (Amos. 5:21-24.)

THE WORD OF THE LORD ENDURETH FOREVER.

[At the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Summerbell, November 20, 1935, Lakemont, N. Y., the pastor in charge concluded his remarks with a reading from the book, "Religion in College Life," of which Dr. Summerbell bereaved husband of deceased, himself is the author. This quotation was so apt, and also so fitting for us to think upon in these days when the New Year renews our hope that it is given herewith.—J. O. A.]

"The hope which our Lord opens to our vision is infinite in duration and immeasurable in the wealth of its promises. The true church joined to Jesus Christ has its life now and in the life of the hereafter. All who are the Lord's disciples, really so, are to be His forever. Many of them are already in the better land. You have seen some of those drawings of Dore in which long lines of spirit forms go sweeping up, and up, as far as eye can see. As you gaze there is no end to the multitude. So as today I stand on the heights of time I behold a goodly fellowship of the holy and the pure. They have chosen the better part that cannot be taken from them. They have been lifted by the Gospel to the roster of God's nobility. In consequence, whether they are in the Unseen Land, or are doing their brave part in the Lord's kingdom on the earth, they can claim every pledge that the Lord has made to the faithful. There are the waving palms, the crowns, the glory, the beautiful smile of the Saviour. For God is not slack concerning His promises. And those who live the true life walk the earth with the light of immortality on their faces; for every word of the Lord, in this glory of salvation, endureth forever."

A BLESSED SCRIPTURE.

[Rev. W. Heber O'Hara, pastor of our Lakemont Temple Church, New York, chose as his Scripture lesson, read at the funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Summerbell, beloved wife of Dr. Martin Summerbell, that blessed Scripture which portrays and magnifies the character of a virtuous woman as no other writing, ancient or modern, has done—as far as our acquaintance goes. It is a Scripture so blessed and beautiful, and one which no doubt is so seldom read, that we reproduce it in full as read so fittingly on the occasion named.—J. O. A.]

Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies.

The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her.

She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life.

She seeketh wool, flax and worketh willingly with her hands.

She is like the merchants' shops; she bringeth her food from afar.

She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and a portion to her maidens.

She considereth a field, and buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard.

She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms.

She perceiveth that her merchandise is good: her candle goeth not out by night.

She layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff.

She stretcheth out her hands to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy.

Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land.

Strength and honour are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come.

She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness.

She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.

Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her.

Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.

A PERSONAL LETTER OF GENERAL INTEREST.

[Rev. G. H. Veazey, Wadley, Ala., connected with and deeply interested in our Southern Union College at Wadley, writes so interestingly to the editor personally that he takes the liberty of giving to SUN readers the contents of his communication, December 8th.—J. O. A.]

“Wadley, Alabama,
 December 8, 1935.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

I suppose you have already learned of the loss of the girls' dormitory at Southern Union College, by fire early November 26th. The occupants escaped without injury, leaving all their possessions. Most of them had only their sleeping clothes. The entire furniture was lost. A few groceries were saved. The loss was partly covered with insurance.

The people of the town opened their hearts and homes to the girls that they might continue their college work. Classes were dismissed for four days, but regular work has been resumed and everything seems to be going good at present. A vacant store has been equipped for a temporary dining room and kitchen. The well-equipped new high school has shared space so the classes are meeting there. The Christian church is being equipped for a temporary library-study hall for evening work. The foundation has already been laid for a temporary kitchen on the campus which will be walled and covered with metal, and will later be used for a garage and work shop, feed house or anything it may be needed for.

The heating plant was destroyed, or greatly damaged, and just as soon as it can be repaired work again will be resumed at the Administration building. The boys were rooming upstairs in this building. As soon as the heating system can be repaired the girls will occupy it, and the boys will room about in the homes of the town.

Many small donations have been made of the various things for the kitchen, so they went right back to cooking and eating without buying any necessities for this purpose. Mr. J. V. Barry, the local hardware man donated a nice new range. The people of the town and adjacent communities supplied the girls with needed wearing apparel, so the embarrassment was soon forgotten. The local lumber men are donating the lumber for the temporary kitchen.

I do not know of any plans to rebuild the dormitory as yet. I know now something of the feelings you experienced when you saw Elon go up in flames. As the flames went up and the building went down, when we had done all possible, I thought of the many prayers and contributions that had been made, that the worthy youth of this section might have advantages that they could have never had if this college had not been built. I have faith somehow, to believe that Southern Union will continue to go and grow, and bless the lives of generations yet unborn.

Faternally yours,
 G. H. VEAZEY.”

LET GOD DO IT.

By H. H. SMITH.

This heading is irreverent slang—or any kind of slang. These thoughts were suggested by the Cole Lectures for 1934 by Dr. Shailer Mathews on “Creative Christianity,” in which these significant words were used: “Defeatism has always been able to rationalize itself by passing over to God the duties that really devolve upon men.” One cannot listen to many public prayers without feeling that prayer is being made a substitute for duty.

Dr. Mathews has laid his finger upon a weakness of the Church which is as old as Christianity itself. The Epistle of James, which has been called “The Gospel of Common Sense,” bears down severely on those who substitute faith or prayer for Christian activity. Our Lord emphasized the truth that knowledge should lead to action. “If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.” He taught that we should love our neighbor, and enforced the truth by the story of the good Samaritan, whose love bore fruit in benevolent deeds. The rewards of the faithful are the results of practical efforts: “Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren.”

About twenty years ago, when state-wide prohibition was being voted upon in Virginia, the writer heard a brother say: “I don't expect to vote. Christ will return to earth soon, and these matters will be settled then.” A great many people have been ruined by liquor during the past twenty years; but if the Christian Church had put forth no efforts against the evil, many more would have been destroyed by this great foe of mankind.

But even among those who are considered strictly orthodox there are many who are still in the grip of this old heresy: “God will do it; just call upon Him.” God will do it, but only through human agencies. A man was once praying for the conversion of a friend and used this expression: “O Lord, touch him with Thy finger.” Then a voice seemed to say to him: “Thou art the finger of God.” One of the pioneer missionaries (Hudson Tyler, was it not?) said that, as a young man interested in the salvation of the Chinese, he used to pray very earnestly that God would save

China. Like many others since his day, he seemed to think that if only a sufficient volume of prayer could be offered in behalf of China, God would be persuaded to save that great nation. One day, as he was earnestly pleading for China, he seemed to hear a voice from heaven: “My child, I intend to save China, and if you will consecrate your life to this cause, you may have a part with me in the salvation of these people.” Then he realized that the salvation of China waited not upon prayer to move God; but upon the cooperation of Christians willing to devote themselves to this cause.

After centuries of missionary inactivity among the churches, a young preacher, moved by the Holy Spirit, arose in a convention and said: “Have the churches of Christ done all they ought to have done for heathen nations?” A startled old minister cried out: “Young man, sit down! When God pleases to convert the heathen world He will do so without your help or mine either.” But the young preacher—William Carey—was not content to let the matter rest there, and the result was the birth of the modern missionary movement among the Protestant churches of the world. From that day to the present—some 150 years—the missionary cause has prospered in proportion as men and women have let their prayer for the coming of the kingdom of God upon earth lead to action.

“Let God do it.” This destructive heresy is causing untold suffering and sorrow to many today. Every now and then we read of someone who has been overcome by the burdens of life. He felt that a heartless world was against him. Unemployment, homelessness, debt, hungry children—life's burden seemed intolerable and his life was suddenly and tragically ended. And within a short distance from his home were dozens of Christian families, with enough and something to spare, who might have relieved distress and averted a sad tragedy had they been “Doers of the Word” and alert for opportunities to aid the unfortunate. “Lord, bless the poor and needy,” was the prayer of a wealthy man, when another said, “Now, give me the keys to your corn-crib, and I'll go out and answer your prayer.” God cannot answer all of our prayers—we have to answer some of them ourselves.

Sorrow and suffering because of the heresy, “Let God do it?” Yes. Many a poor child is maimed for life, or dies from burns or scalds, or is crushed beneath motor vehicles because of a thoughtless mother, who has not carefully shielded her child from these dangers. We know that in this present life some accidents are unavoidable; but God is grieved and human hearts are made sorrowful because of negligence and carelessness. It is not exercising faith but tempting the Lord for a mother to say: “I never worry about my children; I commit them to the Lord who provides a guardian angel for these little ones”—and then fail to do her part in protecting them from the manifold dangers about them. God does not want us to worry, neither does He want us to distrust Him; but we must not blame a “mysterious providence” for the sorrows we bring upon ourselves through our own carelessness or negligence.

THE UPWARD ROAD.

I will follow the upward road today;
 I will keep my face to the light;
 I will think high thoughts as I go my way;
 I will do what I know is right.
 I will look for the flowers by the side of the road;
 I will laugh and love and be strong.
 I will try to lighten another's load
 This day as I fare along.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Happy New Year! That greeting comes from the generous spirit of Christmas good-will. If the New Year could bring a continuation of such good fellowship as Christmas fosters, the world would advance towards universal peace. But, alas! greed takes the place of generosity, hate supplants love, war disturbs peace and covetousness creates discord.

However the New Year begins with a good spirit and many new resolutions. Thus it makes a good beginning. Business men are now taking inventory of their record during the past year. When this inventory is complete and the books are balanced, some will show a profit—others a loss. If a substantial profit is shown the executives are pleased and the stockholders are gratified. There should be a careful analysis of all business and industrial concerns not only to ascertain profit and loss but to discover the moral motives which undergird the men in office and factory. Is the business right? Is the management honest? These questions are as important as profit and loss.

The New Year is a good time to take inventory of every phase of human life. Begin with the individual. What is my personal record in finance? What care have I taken of my body—the “temple of the Holy Ghost?” What advancement have I made in mental development? What is my moral and spiritual record during the past year? Am I richer or poorer, better or worse than I was a year ago? Take inventory of the home. What is the spirit within the home? Does the home encourage religion or worldliness? Does it represent work or play? Is it a place of peace, and love, and good fellowship? Does it lack something which you can supply? Will you improve it during the year? Include the church in your annual inventory. What do you mean to the church, and is it anything to you? What is the record of your church for the old year, and what contribution did you make to its success or failure? Is it stronger or weaker because of your attitude and support?

The New Year is a time for definite ideals and goals. Resolutions are easily made and may be quickly forgotten and discarded. But ideals count for good or ill, success or failure; and they determine character and seal one's destiny. Ideals may be changed in youth, but they usually cling to middle life and old age. Everyone has an ideal. Each must determine for himself whether he will hitch his wagon to a star or drive it blindly and recklessly into the mud. One should have an ideal of the use of time. God is generous with time, and one may use it wisely or waste it in idleness. Recognize the importance of time and BE ON TIME. Many precious hours are wasted because so many people are late. Begin on time and stop on time. A father gave his sixteen-year-old boy this advice: “When you are visiting do not say anything about going home until you are ready to leave. When it is time to leave, get up and go without hesitation or delay.” That is good advice for all people.

The ideal for living is the most important objective of youth. Making a living is secondary to living. For many people making money is the chief function of time, talents and energy. Life cannot be measured in terms of the material. Life is intangible and mystical. The spiritual dominates human life regardless of creed or practice. Every life is spiritually good or spiritually bad. Therefore the point of supreme emphasis is the soul—the spritual. Wickedness is spiritual depravity. The wicked do not live by bread alone—but by wickedness. The ultimate ideal is God or the devil, good or evil, salvation or destruction. “Choose ye this day whom ye will serve.” And may it say with the Psalmist: “I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth.” (Psalm 121:1, 2.)

1936.

We are now in the closing days of 1935. By the time this article reaches the reader it will be 1936. Another year has come and gone. I don't know how many years you have seen come and go. Perhaps 10, 20, 30, 40, 50 or more. As we reach the close of the year instinctively we think of the past year of our experience, of our successes, of our failures. Some things we are delighted with, others disappoint us. We like to dwell on our successes and delights. We like to forget our failures and our disappointments. We are inclined to make resolutions pledging ourselves to greater diligence that our successes may be multiplied and that our failures may be reduced. This matter of resolving to be better perhaps has become somewhat of a habit with us. Every year there is an inclination from within to be better. Experience, however, has taught us that to merely resolve amounts to but little, there must be an unrelenting determination back of the resolution. We must not only resolve but we must act if our lives are to be more beneficial.

The year through which we have just come has been somewhat revolutionary. The trends in politics have been decidedly socialistic. There has developed in public consciousness a social unrest against accumulated wealth. More and more there are insistent demands that the poor and unfortunate receive consideration at the hands of those who have been successful in material undertakings. Increased pressure is being brought upon Governments in cities, states, and the nation to authorize legislative enactments by which individuals and corporations with large wealth will be compelled to share their earnings with the Government and with the poor through the Government.

To what success these efforts on the part of the public will attain remains to be seen. However, it is true that every man has an inescapable responsibility to the society of which he is a part. All men should have equal opportunities but all men have not been given equal ability. A man's talents are not given him for himself but for his fellow man.

1935 has also seen definite agitation for a broader and a more inclusive program for the training of youth, for the responsibilities of life. No longer is thorough training in the traditional three “R's” sufficient. Nor is the curriculum which includes the arts and sciences adequate. 1935 has experienced efforts on the part of educators to provide a broader and inclusive curriculum for the preparation of youth. The curriculum for the new day must include not only the arts and sciences but special training for all kinds of vocational endeavor. We have long since recognized the necessity of specialization for the professions such as law, medicine, ministry, teaching, etc., but the new curriculum will provide for special training for physical development, athletic achievement, social graces, conversational proficiency, etc. Just how far these agitations will take our educational institutions is a question.

The religious world had found itself somewhat restless, here we have persistent agitators. Some insisting that politics and religion are entirely separate and have nothing in common, others insisting that religion is for the whole of life and that it influences life in its entirety whether it has a political or religious slant or that it influences it not at all.

There are also those who deplore a divided church. They contend and are working for a completely united Protestantism. And too, there are others who say that there should be but one church on earth and are striving not only for a united Protestantism but are striving to unite the whole religious world, contending that there should be neither Jew nor Gentile, Protestant nor Catholic, but that there should be the Kingdom of God on earth including all who are the children of God.

Whatever the ultimate results of these agitations may be it is the hope and prayer of the writer that as we enter into the opportunities and privileges of the new year we may resolve to put ourselves at the disposal of the One who made us, that our lives may count for the greatest good possible in all of our relations. Certainly we have a responsibility for those about us and for the welfare of our church and her institutions, of our country and her responsibilities. May God give us grace and wisdom to play our part as we should.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY STEWARDSHIP COUNCIL, WASHINGTON, D. C., DECEMBER 6, 1935.

RESOLVED: In view of the prevalence of methods of raising money for Christian church purposes, methods which are doubtful and even pagan and substitutes for giving as worship, we urge a study and a facing of the whole range of Christian and scriptural method of financing the work of the churches at home and abroad. We urge all churches of the Lord Jesus Christ, in all their financing plans and methods to use only worship-giving and not to depend upon fairs, card parties, sales or lotteries of any description as methods of raising church finances.

RESOLVED: It is a matter of Christian principle as well as common sense that no individual can receive something worth while for nothing without a crucial damage to character, both moral and spiritual. We therefore, draw attention to the danger in any “get-something-for-nothing” schemes or proposals which lend themselves to political or economic manipulation. The churches need to become aware of their function to develop fellowship tasks, such as the care of the aged, the needy and those temporarily embarrassed who are victims of an unchristian order or condition. It is our duty to emphasize the fact that to receive or expect to receive money without a proper self-investment in labor is to endanger the nation, the church and the individual.

RESOLVED: We urge on the churches the teaching of the enduring values of thrift, in times of prosperity as well as in times of adversity in order that resources may always be available for times of stress. This involves, in our judgment, a proper recognition and acknowledgement of God's ownership and our trusteeship of possession, calling for the budgeting of each individual's resources, the separation of a first portion for God's purposes and work, and the use of the remainder for God's purposes and work, and the use of the remainder for the maintenance of a wisely ordered life and the protection of the future.

WHAT'S RIGHT WITH THE WORLD—AND WHAT ELSE.

By REV. JAMES M. GILLIS, C. S. P.
Editor, The Catholic World.

I see in one of the papers an editorial entitled "Giving Without Hurting." You couldn't guess from the title, but it is about whiskey. The point is not that you can give a man whiskey without hurting him. Nothing so simple. What the editor is laboring to show is that the United States didn't do itself any harm when it lowered the tariff on bonded four-year-old whiskey from $5.00 to $2.50 a gallon.

The argument seems to be that we have really done ourselves a favor, because the whiskey that will now come in was made from our grains and owned by our people, and hence when the flood of it is released on January 1, 1936, our people stand to profit.

Those are only a few of the advantages. Altogether they seem to be "too numerous to mention." The editor bravely starts to add up all the benefits to accrue from the anticipated tidal wave of January 1st, but he gives up. So, as it happens, he omitted the very items in which I was most interested. At that, he makes quite a catalogue. Let's have his list and then I will add a few items of my own.

1. It will give American interests a chance to sell at attractive prices in the American market.
2. The receipts of the Federal Treasury will be greatly increased.
3. Legal goods will take the place of bootleg goods.
4. Licensed American liquor dealers can reduce prices.
5. Millions of American consumers who heretofore have not been able to afford the best whiskey can now buy it. (This seems to be virtually the same as number 4, but from a different point of view. So call it No. 5.)
6. It will leave to the American distilling industry an effective protective tariff. That's as far as the Editor goes. Now I continue:
7. Intoxication will now be easier, pleasanter and more frequent.
8. Domestic troubles will be greatly increased.
9. Therefore the number of divorces will take a big jump. At present there are only 17 for every 100 marriages. With more whiskey there may well be in 1936 as many as 20 divorces to every 100 marriages. And who knows but that by 1937 we may have more than Russia or Japan?
10. There will be an increase of drunken drivers of automobiles. At present, only about 2,000 a year are arrested on that charge in some 750 large cities; that is to say, the average per city is less than 30 a year. With more whiskey accessible, the number of murders on the highways may go to unexpected figures.
11. Drunkenness at football games will be easier, quicker and more complete. At present not more than 3 or 4 out of every 50 in the grandstand are drunk, and at that they are not drunk until the fourth period. The trouble may be that after a fellow has paid $8.80 for two tickets, he has to economize on the drink. Now he can buy two bottles instead of one. He and his lady friend can be well-soused before the first half is over.
12. Coming to plain ordinary every-day murders: they, of course, will increase. Many a man who wouldn't harm a fly while sober gets courage to kill even his wife or his mother when he is drunk.
13. Take drunkenness on boats. Just as I was writing this little piece, a friend came in from a Caribbean cruise and told me that only one man in the entire party had been sober. With cheaper whiskey and more of it, every man can be drunk on every cruise.

All in all, a very considerable change will come over our American life with the decrease in the tariff on whiskey. The Administration is to be congratulated on this master-stroke. And by the way, how about a new "toast" for whiskey drinkers: "Here's to bigger crimes and more of them!" (Copyright, 1935, N. C. W. C. and reprinted by special permission of Director Frank A. Hall, of the N. C. W. C. Syndicated News Service, Washington, D. C.)

HEADLAND, ALABAMA.

On November the 9th, I moved here from Clanton, Alabama, where I had served a group of four churches for nine years. I have accepted a call to the pastorate of Black Woods, Christian Hill and New Hope churches, and will continue to serve the new church at Seman, Alabama. The people of this group of churches have given the pastor and his family a warm welcome, and we are very happy in our new location.

The churches here have good Sunday schools and young people's societies; the Christian Hill church has an active ladies' society and the pastor's wife has assisted the ladies at Black Woods in organizing a new society there.

On December 7th the trustees and pastor of the Black Woods church called a business meeting to consider the possibility of building a parsonage there. After some discussion the church voted to proceed at once to build. A building committee of five was elected which met with the pastor and discussed plans for the building. We hope that within a few days the work will begin.

Anyone wishing to help a needy cause, please send donations to Mr. W. Rister, Headland, Ala., Route 1, treasurer of the church or to the pastor. A parsonage is greatly needed here and any donation will be appreciated.

The Christian Hill and New Hope churches will meet within a few days to discuss the matter of a parsonage and offer the Black Woods church their cooperation in building one.

We ask for the prayers of the Christian people that the Lord will bless our work and that our churches may be really helpful.

"Not to be ministered unto, but to minister."
A. CALVIN NELSON, Pastor.

A MESSAGE ABOUT THE MANGS.

By LILLIAN PICKEN.

"On September 11, 1935, a group of Mangs sent a representative to me to say that a large number of Mangs in Satura and in the District desired to be Christian and that a considerable group of them here in the city desired regular Christian instruction in the Mang Wada for two hours every night. (Mangs or Matangas are outcasts, string-workers by trade). After showing their leader clearly that they would be laying themselves open to persecution and troubles of all kinds, and explaining to him that any desiring baptism must submit themselves to Christian instruction and Christian discipline for at least one year, after which if they proved worthy as followers of Christ, they could be baptized, I agreed to go to them on September 19th. Each night since September 19th, the Christians have rallied in the Mang Wada to sing bhajans, pray, study the Scriptures and witness to the power of Christ with this small group of Mang inquirers.

Brahmins Object to Others Being Taught About Christ.

On the fifth night a party of Brahmin gentlemen came to protest in courteous fashion against our teaching these people about Christ in their own Mang Wada. We replied that we must witness and teach our faith when requested to do so. Since then the Brahmins have aroused the whole city and in fact the whole of Maharashtra. We have several hundreds every night, sometimes thousands. Masurkar Buva was wired for and is here with his band of orthodox Sadhus holding rival meetings nearby, leaving no bitter thing unsaid against Christians and Missions in general, and me in particular. While there has been very little disturbance in our meetings and often a deep reverential silence and attention on the part of hundreds of all castes, feeling is still running high. Persecution of Christians and Mangs has begun in dead earnest. Today the Mangs in Municipal service are reported to have been threatened with the loss of their livelihood. All persons are said to have been urged to boycott every Mission activity, etc. The report runs that certain Brahmin leaders are making extravagant promises to the Mangs if they will abandon our meetings.

A Call to Prayer.

But the Mang group stands firm against all reported threats and bribes, and asks us daily to continue to teach them. The outcome is in God's hands. Please pray for us all here, that every Christian may show the love and forbearance of Christ and be faithful in witness and in personal work for these inquirers. Pray, too, for the many Brahmin friends turned suddenly hostile that hatred, suspicion, fear and all other unworthy motives may be conquered by the love of Christ Himself. We are living in strenuous days and things are moving very rapidly. Pray for us "that utterance may be given unto us in opening our mouths to make known with boldness the mystery of the Gospel." "We rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer dishonor for the Name."

A REAL MEDICAL MAN AND MISSIONARY.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, Editor.

Big game hunting is the recreation of Dr. Henry S. Hollenbeck of Sheldon, Iowa, who since 1909 has been doctoring the Ovimbundu in Sachelika, West Central Africa, for even a missionary has to have "time off" occasionally! Dr. Hollenbeck is now in America on furlough.

This business of being a doctor in Africa taxes the capacity of the best-trained men for they are constantly up against an overwhelming mass of human suffering and ignorance. It may be a delicate eye operation, for Dr. Hollenbeck is a competent surgeon, or the pulling of a tooth, that is the next job. Always there is malaria, infections, anemia, babies, yaws and, figuratively speaking, 57 varieties of parasite.

Dr. Hollenbeck, who is working under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, first broke into print in Ohio and Iowa back in college days for his clever handling of the pigskin at Beloit and University of Iowa. He has shot lions, hippos, dyakers, elands, and that crossword puzzle animal, the gnu, which by the way, the doctor says is one of the most ferocious of the jungle beasts. When the doctor kills a Hippo all the villages around rejoice for he is a generous man and they get the meat. Dr. Hollenbeck is a graduate also of Northwestern University (M. D.) and a Fellow of the London School of Tropical Medicine.

Dr. Hollenbeck speaks fluently both Portuguese, the official tongue, and Umbundu the native language. On safari he chats freely with the natives as he travels thousands of miles annually in his work. Not content with simply mending folks after the harm has been done, Dr. Hollenbeck believes in fighting the causes of disease through education. At the hospital he trains groups of young men sent in from the villages in common medicine and first aid. Hundreds of cases could be cured with simple remedies if treated at the start, he declares.

Teaching the people, also, how to vary their diet and thus improve their health and their teeth is another of Dr. Hollenbeck's lines of effort. Contrary to common notions, the Ovimbundu does not have good teeth, due primarily to wrong diet. Because peanuts grow well there and make nutritious food, even milk for the babies, their cultivation is encouraged. Cattle are looked upon by the Ovimbundus as a bank account with the calves as interest on the investment. It is quickly seen, therefore, that these animals serve neither as producers of milk or meat.

The whole theory of life and death among the non-Christian Ovimbundus is based on a paralyzing fear of evil spirits which they believe inhabit both animate and inanimate objects and must be appeased, says Dr. Hollenbeck. Death is never a natural process but is caused by someone's or something's enmity. The witch-doctor, part priest and part physician, deals out knowledge of the spirit world as well as herbs of deadly poison. If the patient lives, the drug is good; if he dies,—not so good. The witch doctor has one great and fatal weakness, he has no way of regulating doses.

A much longer and illustrated interview with Dr. Hollenbeck appears in the January Missionary Herald, which will be of interest to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

WHAT IS AHEAD IN NORTH CHINA?

[Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, who has recently returned from the Orient comments on the present trend of events in China.]

The present war threat of Japan in North China strikes close to the heart of American Board missionary interests. The effort of a heretofore unknown Chinese official to set up an autonomous state, with his capital at Tungchow, involves all our great work there. Within the compound in that city is Jefferson Academy, built largely by the friends in Broadway Temple, New York, and named for its famous pastor, Rev. Charles E. Jefferson; the hospital, under Dr. Robinson, is at this moment the object of the Woman's Thank-offering in the Middle Western States; the agricultural work of James Hunter sweeps out from Tungchow to the series of market towns where the agricultural fairs have awakened new interest and have taught new methods to thousands of farmers in the neighborhood; the school for missionaries children, with more than sixty children of missionaries in attendance, is in this same compound.

The fact that Tungchow is little more than a dozen miles from Peiping evidently dominated the choice. The next step looks toward Peiping, since Tientsin is already garrisoned by Japanese troops. Our great station at Paotingfu is but a few hours by rail, as the Japanese advance moves westward, and our stations at Taiku and Fenchow, in Shansi, are included in the autonomous state, to be under Japanese control.

Here are at least six major stations of the American Board work in jeopardy. Even if Japan permits our work to continue, we will yet look upon one of the world's greatest tragedies. Just when "Changeless China" was developing a series of moral reforms, social uplift and far-reaching improvement, this blot of militaristic conquest sweeps down to destroy progress. We cannot believe that the cause of World Peace is best served by the present silence which surrounds this war threat. Many of the same factors are present in this oriental situation which have led to the resistance of the League of Nations against Mussolini's unjustified attack on Ethiopia.

Christian people everywhere will watch the outcome in prayerful spirit, but with a righteous indignation, stirred to the boiling point, and will await with anxious concern the constructive solutions that may be determined by nations who believe in maintaining World Peace even through economic sanctions. In my opinion, economic sanctions are not "the next thing to a declaration of war." They are, in effect, a declaration of peace. They use the implementation of the League for World Peace that is the highest achievement against war in the history of civilized man. This "to be or not to be" is the world's second outstanding international problem at this moment.

THE CRADLE ROLL DEPARTMENT.

May I have the privilege of giving a detailed description of just what occurs in the Cradle Roll department of the Suffolk Christian Church Sunday School? To see about twenty children, babies all, in a very pretty room, with lovely carpet, pretty, fresh window curtains over bright, clean windows with the morning sun pouring in is a sight worth seeing, and the hope of the church. Mrs. J. W. Holland, a mother of two fine sons, who are now about eleven and thirteen, is the superintendent of the department, and she is ably assisted by Mrs. H. W. Trump, herself a young mother and home-maker. I shall quote from a report of a day's program which the superintendent handed the pastor of the church:

"We are usually in our room before 9:30. We greet the children as they come in with, 'Good morning, you have on such a pretty new coat, or dress, where did you get it?' At the same time we are helping them to get their coats off, as you know our children are mere babies from 9 months old to four years old. While we are all getting acquainted, and some a little late are coming in we have our Activities Period. Mrs. Trump leads the way to the closet from which she brings our pictures and papers which we wish to use for the morning lesson. The children follow her, and bring blocks, trains, spools, and other toys to one of our big, low tables. She sits down near the table along with others of our helpers and watches over the children as they build, maybe a house and run their train into it, or a church with a high steeple, using spools to make the steeple. Then one of the little tots will say: 'Come, and walk this way; go with me to church today.'

"Which brings us up to the Worship Period. They now put their blocks, etc., away, and bring their chairs up into a circle in front of the piano. Our pianist is playing 'Good morning to you' very softly. Then we all sing, 'Good Morning to You.' Follows a little call to worship while the piano is still softly playing: 'Come, come, listen to the church bells ringing; Come, to Sunday School this happy Day.' Then the Scripture is read: 'Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the Kingdom of heaven.'

"This is God's House,
And He is here today;
He hears each song we sing,
And listens while we pray."

Then I kneel, and all the children and helpers kneel too, each in front of their chair, and then we talk to the Heavenly Father:

"Dear Jesus, look down from above,
And fill our little hearts with love;
Bless us every single day,
And make us kind, and good always.
Amen."

Then I ask, 'What do you want to sing?' They will perhaps reply, 'Jesus Loves Me.' And I say, 'What tells us 'Jesus Loves Us?,' and most likely they will reply, 'The Bible, and flowers, and sunshine, and raindrops, and mother.' If we sing about the Bible I hold a Bible in my hand; if we sing about flowers, I set a basket of beautiful flowers before them; and if we sing about the sunshine we look out the window, etc.

Then follows the offering. Each one gets his money and sometimes we have a tiny boy, or girl carry the offering basket around the circle. I ask the question? And most always they reply, 'To help other little folks have a Sunday School. We bow our heads and thank the Heavenly Father for the offering:

"This offering to Jesus we gladly bring today,
May it help someone to love you we softly pray.
Amen."

Then in another section of the room our sandtable is displayed to carry out whatever story is to follow, as, The Christmas Secret, or The Shepherds and the Angels, or The Little Lord Jesus in a Strange Land, or The Wise Men and the Star, and the children march around the sandtable singing an appropriate little song, Away in a Manger, probably. During December we have four Christmas Sundays. We find repetition is very helpful with our tiny children, and we vary our program each time, but keep the essential question: Whose birthday are we celebrating? before them. They reply 'Jesus.' Who gave us Jesus? and they answer, God. And I perhaps further say, He gave us Jesus to show his love for us, and that Jesus might love us and watch over us. Then Mrs. Trump will tell one of the Christmas stories as they see it displayed on the sand table. As the story ends the pianist softly plays and the children are told: 'A big surprise awaits you, we are going to take a ride in a big bus. The chairs make the 'big bus' and they all sit quietly for fear they will topple out of the bus. While they play they are riding you can see their little eyes sparkle. While they are riding a short story is told of the 'First Christmas Gift' by Mrs. Elmer Brinkley, or Mrs. F. C. Copeland. The bus stops. And the big screen is removed from before a beautiful Christmas Tree. The lights are snapped on. And the children are off the bus without having to be told to alight. Every child is given a Santa Claus with a pack full of good things on his back. Of course this is the final Christmas Sunday, and the children are very happy. "It is now time to close our Sunday School. We fix our hands before our face as a clock, and say, 'Tick tock, tick tock, says the clock; little boy, little girl, it is time to go; Our Sunday School is over and we are going to part; Goodbye, goodbye, God bless each little heart.' And their wraps are on and off they go."

We are very proud of our Cradle Roll department. The workers are efficient, and firmly are laid the foundations of faith in each little child. Would you like me to tell you about the Beginners' department? The printed page can never display the lovely interplay of personality, but I feel that here is a field all too much neglected and I am willing to let you look into our Beginner's department, ages four and five, if you would like to do so.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

THE POET.

I often say my prayers;
But do I really pray?
And do the wishes of my heart
Go with the words I say?

I may as well kneel down
And worship gods of stone,
As offer to the living God
A prayer of words alone.

For words without the heart
The Lord will never hear;
Nor will He to those lips attend
Whose prayers are not sincere.

—John Burton.

A Story for the Children

"ALL MEN—"

"All men, all men," crooned Mey Ling, turning the globe before her, her fingers finding the blue sea spaces, the crooning and the thought with it easing just a little a hurt feeling in her heart, "all men about the four seas—" Her little hands froze upon the globe as the shop door opened.

"How much is that toy monkey in the window, the one hanging on to the red cord?" Ben's gaze was so fixed on the monkey that he did not notice who was in the shop, he only knew it was somebody. But at the silence he turned, "You?"

Mey Ling nodded. She said slowly, "B-en."

"Say, this is your dad's shop, is this where you live?" Mey Ling nodded towards a door at the rear of the shop room, her short thick hair whisking about her neck. "And you're mad with me," Ben stepped nearer, his grin friendly, if mischievous. "I did tease you in the school yard, I did call you 'little Chink,' and you are little and you are a Chi—Chinese. But I didn't think the others would take it up, run after you." Mey Ling stood still, two bright tears in the corners of her black, black eyes.

"How much," he asked again.

"Ten cents."

Ben ran his hands into his pockets: a whistle, a piece of red cord, two pennies, a silver quarter. "Here you are," he laid the quarter upon the counter. "You can sell it?"

Mey Ling stepped gravely across to the window. She wrapped the monkey in soft tissue paper, put it in a small bag, placed the package before Ben. Ben held out his quarter. "Say, I—I didn't mean to tease," he blurted. "I think you are cute."

"C-cute,—it means?"

"Well, sort of nice . . . Didn't I hear you singing something when I came in?" Mey Ling nodded. She held her small shoulders stiff as she slipped behind the corner to the cash box. "Mad still?" asked Ben of himself, he didn't want her to be mad, he was thinking what he could say or do when a street car clanged up the street, the late light flashed from the windows into his eyes and blinking and rubbing he forgot everything else for the moment. When he turned to get his change not a sign of thick black hair and black eyes showed above the counter. "Hey there," Ben called. Not a sound. "Hey!" Was that what she had done to pay him back—run off, no change? Ben ran towards that door leading back into the house. He passed the counter. There was a queer, subdued scuffling back there. A squat vase on its side rolled a little. Two little felt clad feet kicked out, two round legs were coming into sight. With a whoop Ben caught the two feet, set Mey Ling topside up, as she herself would have expressed it. "Fell in? Too bad. Now you don't care, the vase is all right, you're all right."

"Here's your change," Mey Ling quavered, she still held it tight in her clenched fist. "And I thank, thank you." Ben knew Mey Ling was thanking for the deed, not for the money.

"Thank you," cried Ben. "And I won't tease you any more. I won't let anybody tease you. I just didn't think. Coming to school Monday?"

Ben laughed as he slammed the door. He went whistling down the street. Mey Ling's firm little hands were again upon the globe, seeking out the blue sea spaces. "All men about the four seas," she sang, "all men about the four seas are brothers." By Lucy Meacham Thurston in M. P.-Recorder.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

NEW YEAR'S THOUGHTS.

Let us walk softly, friends;
For strange paths lie before us all untrod,
The New Year, spotless from the hand of God,
Is thine and mine, O friend.

Let us walk straightly, friend;
Forget the crooked paths behind us now,
Press on with steadier purpose on our brow,
To better deed, O friend.

Let us walk gladly, friend;
Perchance some greater good than we have known
Is waiting for us, or some fair hope flown
Shall yet return, O friend.

Let us walk kindly, friend;
We cannot tell how long this life shall last,
How soon these precious years be overpast;
Let love walk with us, friend.

Let us walk quickly, friend;
Work with our might while lasts our little stay,
And help some halting comrade on the way;
And may God guide us, friend.

—Lillian Gray.

TEN ROYAL RESOLUTIONS.

I will study the language of goodness and refuse to use words that bite and tones that crush.

I will practice patience at home lest my testy temper break thru and disgrace me unexpectedly.

I will remember that my neighbors have troubles enough to carry without loading mine onto them.

I will excuse others' faults and failures as often as I expect others to be lenient with mine.

I will cure criticism with commendation, close up against gossip and build healthy loves by service.

I will be a friend under trying tests and wear everywhere a good-will face unchilled by aloofness.

I will gloat over gains never but amass only to enrich others and so gain a wealthy heart.

I will love boys and girls so that old age will not find me soured and stiff but fresh and free.

I will gladden my name by smiling out loud on every fair occasion and by looking optimistically.

I will pray frequently, think good things, believe in men, and so do a full day's work without fear or favor.

THE HOPE THAT MAKES LIFE WORTH WHILE.

"The hope which is laid up for you in heaven."—I Col. 1:15.

There are some who deny that they have any such hope. They tell us that they do not believe in a hereafter. But if I did not believe in a hereafter, life to me would be a tragic thing.

When I was in college I had a student friend who was such a doubter. Later, however, he was converted to the Christian hope. In a letter written shortly after his conversion, he said: "In my life I have been a close student of religious things. I have sounded the depths of scepticism and unbelief. I have stood with longing eyes upon the shores of the sea of doubt, but that sea was an abyss of gloom. Over it hung the clouds of despair and settled the darkness of eternal night. No stars twinkled there, no voice was heard. The saddest thing in the world is doubt. Man is framed for an immortal hope. Such a hope gives value and dignity to life and illuminates the world with

Of the sunken sun."

These words of my friend made such a profound impression upon me, that I put them away in my memory and have carried them there ever since. Indeed, the saddest thing in the world is doubt. Man is framed for an immortal hope. It is the golden lightning of that hope, shedding its illuminating radiance over the trials and sorrows of this life, which give us courage for our pilgrim journey through this world. Take away that hope and life becomes a tragedy, the world a burying ground, and the countless multitudes of earth are left toiling and struggling on a pilgrimage of despair.

Take from me what you will; take away my health, take away every material possession; but let me keep this blessed hope. It is the one thing, above all others, which makes life worthwhile.

HABITS WORTH FORMING.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JAN. 5, 1936

Scripture: I Timothy 4:8-16.

(Consecration Meeting.)

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Habit of church-going. Luke 4:16.

Tues.—Habit of daily prayer. Dan. 6:10.

Wed.—Habit of high thinking. Col. 3:1-4.

Thurs.—Habit of good-will. Col. 3:12-17.

Fri.—Habit of trusting God. Mat. 6:24-34.

Sat.—Habit of the peaceful life. Rom. 14:16-19.

Instrumental Prelude—"O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Call to Worship—"The Lord is in His holy temple; Let all the earth keep silence before Him."

Hymn: "Come, Thou Almighty King."

Prayer.

Hymn: "I Would Be True."

Announcement of Topic—Scripture.

Leader's Talk—"Habits—Good and Bad."

For Discussion—"Habits Worth Forming."

1. Habit of churchgoing—Let all the young people resolve that this year they will be loyal to their church through attendance at the worship services. The habit of church attendance makes possible the fellowship that helps to build strong character.

Is there a danger that church-going may become "merely a habit?"

2. Habit of keeping the quiet hour.—If Jesus Christ, the Son of God, needed to go to his Father for guidance and strength, how much more do we need to commune with Him. Young People who make it the rule of their life to pray and read the Bible at least fifteen minutes a day will find their life greatly enriched and God-inspired.

What do you think would be the effect on your society if every member were a loyal comrade of the quiet hour?

3. Habit of following the example of Christ.—Discover the habits of Christ, and follow His example of courage, love, friendliness, humility, obedience to God, helping others.

What do you think would be the effect on your society, if for one week every member asked himself the question, "What would Jesus do if He were in my place," and then did what he thought Jesus would do?

Period of Directed Prayer—

1. Ask God to help us cultivate good habits.
2. Thank God for the power to discriminate between good and bad habits.

3. Thank God for Jesus Christ, our perfect Example.

Hymn: "I Need Thee Every Hour."

Benediction.

SIGNS OF GROWING BROTHERHOOD.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JAN. 12, 1936.

Scripture: I John 2:9-11; 3:17, 18.

Mon.—Sons of One Father. Prov. 22:2.

Tues.—Basis of brotherhood. Acts 17:23-28.

Wed.—Brotherly help. Luke 10:30-37.

Thurs.—The Christian Attitude. Rom. 15:1-3.

Fri.—Care for the children. Mat. 19:13-15.

Sat.—When Christ shall reign. Isa. 2:1-5.

The Kingdom of God as Jesus pictured it was founded on the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of men. The many parables of Christ give concrete expression to this shining ideal of brotherhood. The complete expression of love and brotherhood in all walks of life will transform the kingdom of this world into the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ.

Many enemies of brotherhood are evident. The hounds of racial and religious intolerance lift their ugly faces and voices. Selfishness and human pride break the sanctity of holy places. Lack of personal regeneration, lack of loyalty to the authority of Christ impede the desired progress in brotherhood. Jealousy among churches may furnish enough friction to slow down the wheels of progressive brotherhood.

Nevertheless, there are signs of growing brotherhood. There are positive signs of growing brotherhood among churches and denominations. Concrete expression is being given through various types of Federations. There are definite indications of progress toward Christian unity. The all but universal desire for Christian unity is the most trustworthy guarantee of its realization. One may also note with satisfaction the signs of growing brotherhood between races and nations.

Progress has been made, but the ideal has not been attained. We may be firmly reminded that the Kingdom of God cannot be established among men until it is first established within men. There can be no true unity or brotherhood of mankind until we are first united in Christ.

Mrs. W. B. W.

THE LITTLE THINGS.

Lord, give us strength to bear the little things:
The fancied slurs, the slights that mar the day,
The dancing shadows down the sunlit way,
Lord, give us strength to bear the little things!

Lord, give us strength to bear the little things:
When dark hours come, when fear would grip the heart,

Lo, thou art near, of our own lives a part;
But we need strength to bear the little things!

Lord, give us strength to bear the little things:
Teach us to rise above each petty wrong,
To give our foes a smile, and life a song,
To bear with grace and cheer the little things!

Sunday School Lesson
By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

A MOTHER'S SONG.

LESSON 1—JANUARY 5, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "My Soul doth magnify the Lord And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour."—Luke 1:46, 47.

What a rich feast there is in store for those who study the Sunday School lessons for the next six months! For we are to have our lessons for the period from the gospel according to Luke, and that spells opportunity and privilege with capital letters. So far as the writer of these notes is concerned, if someone should give him his choice of keeping only one book of the entire Bible, he would quickly and unhesitatingly choose Luke's Gospel. And there are many others who feel the same way about the matter. In any event, those who come to these lessons with an open and eager mind, and a responsive and obedient heart, are going to have their lives greatly enriched and blessed. And they ought to find their consecration deepened. For as in this book we find "Jesus Meeting Human Needs"—the title of the lessons in general—we ought to enlist with Him in meeting human needs today.

Something About the Author.

A word or two about the author of the Gospel according to Luke is in order. He was Luke, a Greek physician, the only Gentile writer of the New Testament, and with the possible exception of the author of the book of Job, the only Gentile writer in the entire Bible. Paul refers to him as "the beloved physician" and to him as a "fellow-worker." He was a man who had traveled widely—a man of culture, a man of high intelligence, a historian of the first order, a writer of beauty and power. He was a man of broad sympathies and of keen observation. It is quite certain that he never saw Christ in the flesh. We do not know, either, how or when Luke was converted to the Christian faith. But he was a man of fine Christian character and of Christ-like spirit. Thus it was the Holy Spirit selected him to preserve in permanent record the words and works of Jesus. Anyone who reads this gospel knows that Luke was moved by the Holy Spirit.

Something About the Book Itself.

There are several distinguishing characteristics about the gospel of Luke. 1. It emphasizes more than any other gospel the subject of prayer, both by the example of Jesus and by his teachings on the subject. 2. It is the gospel of Womanhood. The words meaning wife, widow, and young girl appear here more often than in any other gospel. 3. It is the gospel of the poor. Luke is the friend of the poor and the underprivileged. He is a great humanitarian. 4. Luke is the most literary gospel. Prof. Plummer refers to the writer as the "most versatile of all the New Testament writers." 5. The Gospel of Luke is "the Gospel for the world." As one writer has said "As Paul led the people of the Lord out of the bondage of the law into the enjoyment of gospel liberty, so did Luke raise sacred history from the standpoint of Israelitish nationality to the higher and holier ground of universal humanity." 6. The gospel of Luke is the only one of the Synoptic gospels which refers to Christ as "Saviour."

Something About Today's Lesson.

Today's lesson covers the entire first chapter of the Gospel of Luke, eighty verses. There is too much material to be embodied in Notes in these columns. But the whole chapter should be read, not only with the head but with the heart. Indeed unless one comes to this chapter with a reverent and responsive heart, he cannot understand it. There is the story, for instance of that priest and his wife, righteous and reverent people, well advanced in years, and childless, to whom it was revealed that they should have a son, a son who should have the privilege and honor of preparing the way for the Christ himself. The awe and the joy with which this news was received, the prayer and praise which it evoked, are told by Luke in prose and poetry that warm the heart and quicken the spirit.

And then there is that beautiful story of how God made known to Mary through the angel Gabriel, that she was to be the mother of Jesus, God's Anointed, the Annunciation as we call it. One wonders if Luke did not get that story direct from Mary herself, so intimate are the details and so sympathetic is the treatment of it. Read that story sometime when you are alone, and when things are quiet. Try to imagine how that young woman of godly character and humble spirit must have felt when it was made known to her that she was to be the mother of God's Son, Jesus the Saviour. No wonder she burst forth in inspired song that has become immortal. No wonder the church early set to music her words, and that today after nineteen centuries thousands will sing the "Magnificat." And whether the words came spontaneously at the instant, or whether they were composed in more leisurely fashion, there lies back of them the piety and the faith of this humble Galilean peasant girl, a knowledge of the sacred writings of her people, made familiar by constant repetition, and dear to all pious souls by use in devotions. This Magnificat is the printed lesson for today, and every line teems with high emotion and aspiration.

There is the story too, of the visit of Mary to Elizabeth. What a bond of intimacy there was between them, beyond the ties of blood and kinship. Here again, perhaps only Luke, a physician could have first secured, and then put into such exquisite language, the intimate details of this story. Perhaps it is asking too much of modern men to understand these stories. But one can be sure that every woman of tender sensibilities and especially of Christian character can find in these stories that which touches and thrills her soul.

More specifically in the Magnificat, or the Mother's Song of today's lesson, Mary praises the Lord, rejoicing in the fact that God had chosen her, an humble maiden, to be the mother of Jesus, His Son. She lauds his power and his mercy. She tells how he puts to rout those who are proud and haughty, and yet how near He is to those who are poor and humble. She recounts how God has thus fulfilled his early promise to Abraham, and in giving His Son had blessed His people forever. The words of the Magnificat are in poetic form. They are addressed to the sentiments and the imagination as well as to the intellect. They are the expression of a pure soul, speaking under the inspiration of the spirit of God, out of a great experience of life. They are also prophetic of the new womanhood which should find its highest expression in the transforming touch of Christ.

Here in America persecution and danger are rapidly driving Jew, Catholic and Protestant together. We have more and more in common. We are realizing that religion is on trial for its life. We face a fight for existence. We of different faiths must stand together or we shall all fail. The fascist brown international founded by Rosenberg in Germany is a far greater menace than the communist international. This new religion based on pagan tradition and pageantry, endangers all genuine religion. We must awake to the irreconcilable conflict between a totalitarian state and God in heaven.—Dr. W. J. Sherman (a Methodist of Oakland, Cal.)

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"AT THE GATE."

"All this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai, the Jew, sitting at the gate."—Esther 5:9-14.

All of Haaman's wealth and pomp and glory availed him nothing so long as Mordecai refused to do obeisance to him.

We are at a gate also. We are at the gate of a new year. The errors and sins of the past will counterbalance a world of blessings awaiting us in the new year. Some wretched envy or jealousy will over-cast our skies which otherwise might sparkle with sunshine.

Haaman was miserable through lack of love. He was all for self, nothing for others. Pride ruled his will. There was no room for God in his soul. It is no wonder that he was hanged on the gallows which he had built for another. That was the ultimate. We all reap what we sow.

Let us take stock of the past and beg forgiveness for all that we have done wrong and forget it, for God forgets when He forgives; and let us also take stock of ourselves for the new year and enter upon it in love, "discreetly and in the fear of God."

Prayer—Forgive us, O Lord, of all our sins. Fill our hearts with love, abolish ill thoughts and hatred and jealousy from us, and make us Thy servants in this world to shed love and goodwill always to others. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"QUESTION THE PAST."

"Ask now of the days that are past."—Deut. 4:32-40.

Moses, at the close of his life, bade his people look backward over the way that the Lord had led them, see how good He had been to them, how strongly He had defended them, how constantly He had loved them, and after this survey he bade them resolve that through all the future they would obey this Father-God, and walk in His ways.

Such a review of the past year may well be made by every one of us. We shall see how kind the Lord has been to us, how mercifully He has overlooked our sins, and what hopes He has set before us for the future.

This is Old-Year's Day. Has it been a hard year in our lives? God has not been hard. His love has been around us all the way. We may not recognize the happiness He is preparing for us, but we may be sure that it will reach us in His good time.

Prayer—With each year of our lives, our dear Father, we see more and more of Thy beneficence. We make this last day of the year a Thanksgiving Day. Glory and praise to the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit!—Amen.

"VOWS FULFILLED."

"When thou shalt vow a vow unto Jehovah thy God, thou shalt not be slack to pay it."—Deut. 23:19-25.

A vow is a sacred thing, whether it is made to man or God. A vow is a projection of ourselves into the future. A vow is a pledge of honor. If it is paid, our honor is verified; if it is unpaid, our honor is falsified, degraded. An unfulfilled vow puts our soul to shame before the universe.

Vows do not admit postponement. As soon as they are made, the paying of them should begin. We cannot postpone breathing, and a vow is part of our breathing. Postponement implies unwillingness, grudging, and a vow should be eager, born of our longing desire.

Prayer—We will make more vows to Thee, O God, to Thee who hast made so many promises to us. Help us to pay our vows for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

"EMPOWERING FORCE."

"That ye may know . . . what is the exceeding greatness of His power toward us who believe, according to the working of His mighty power."—Eph. 1:18, 19.

To think superficially, to feel indifferently, to resolve languidly, to perform little, to talk about serious things with shallow glibness, if there be no dread of the judgment and no burning sin, if the deeps of the soul are not stirred, nor the currents of life checked by divine sacrifice, life is very small and colorless indeed.

There is a force at work in the Christian heart which does not straighten or enfeeble him, but which empowers him "according to the working of His mighty power." That force is God.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for the baptism of the Holy Spirit upon us that we may know that power of His, dwelling within us, now and forever. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"GRACE AND POWER."

"Stephen full of grace and power, wrought great wonders and signs among the people."—Acts 6:1-15.

It is never enough to have power in Christian work—or any kind of work, for that matter. We must have grace with the power. Power compels but grace attracts. Power is of God's almightiness, but grace is of God's love. Power is of the Father but grace is of the Son.

Power is of the lightning, but grace is of the sunshine. Power is of the cataract, but grace is of the rain. Power awes, but grace melts and soothes and wins.

Stephen's great wonders sprang from his power, but his signs sprang from his grace. The holy spirit in our hearts will give us both. He will force men's will and He will win men's affection. We need both of them in our natures.

Prayer—And we can have both of them in our natures, if we have Thee, O God, O Christ. Thou wilt empower and Thou wilt beautify. Thou wilt be the trunk of our tree of life and Thou wilt be its entrancing blossoms and fragrance and fruit.—Amen.

"CUSTOMARY RELIGION."

"He entered as his custom was, into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up to read."—Luke 4:16-21.

Our Lord, who founded the church, was a regular church-goer. Our Lord, who was perfect, felt the need of regular religion.

And if He, how surely we! How we weaken ourselves by depriving ourselves of spiritual food! What misery we expose ourselves to when we deprive ourselves of the comfort of the church! What discipline we lack when we are careless in church-going!

The Sabbath is God's day. The church is God's house. Church people are God's people. When we neglect the Sabbath and the church and God's people we are perilously near to neglecting God himself. Practice makes perfect. We can not expect the perfection which God requires of us without practice. Church-going is not Puritanism, it is true modernism. It is the spirit of manufacture, of industry and commerce. If we want results, we must do the things that tend toward the results.

Prayer—We love Thy Church, O God, the house of Thine abode. The more familiar we become with religious customs, the more we love them. And the more we love them, the more we love Thee.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"TOO PROUD TO WORK."

"Next unto them the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles put not their necks to the work."—Neh. 3:1-5.

What scorn would Amos, the farmer-prophet of Tekoa, have heaped upon those Tekoite nobles who were too proud to join their villagers in Nehemiah's great task of rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem! They missed their great chance at real nobility. They passed over to the common people the task which made them uncommon, and themselves were lowered to the rank of the common crowd in their stead.

For noble work is the true rank. Whatever may be your station, you are of the upper class only as you are doing the Lord's work for Him. If you shirk it, you are down among the rabble.

Those Tekoite nobles held their necks too high to bend them beneath the burdens of the Holy City. The bearers of those stones held their heads the higher through all time thereafter.

Prayer—May we know, O Thou who worked from the beginning, Thou the Master Workman of the ages, what belongs to real honor. May we rejoice to toil with Thee at the lowest task.—Amen.

THE MAN AND THE HOUR.

I like to think of St. Paul when, on the Damascus road, he faced up to the challenge of his hour. "Lord," he exclaimed, in perfect readiness to accept the challenge, "what wouldst thou have me to do?" I like to think of Luther on the way to Worms, "I will go to Worms though every tile were a devil"; of Polycarp, who, offered the choice of freedom or the stake, exclaimed, "Four-score years and six have I served him . . . How, then, can I speak evil of my Saviour?" of Sydney Moore, the schoolmaster of whom I have just told you, who, facing his school on the first Sunday night after losing his only son, declared to his boys, "To me to live is Christ"; and of tens of thousands of nameless Christian heroes who have faced with high courage the hour, recognizing in it the very moment for which they came.—Christian Advocate (England).

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE GENIUS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

(An Anniversary Sermon preached on the occasion of the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Suffolk Christian Church, by the sixth [W. B. Wellons, J. T. Whitley, W. T. Walker, W. W. Staley, H. S. Hardcastle, John G. Truitt] pastor of the church.)

"According to the mighty working of His power, which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principalities and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all."—Eph. 1:19-23.

The church is out of the mighty power of God. We have not fathomed the depth, nor measured the greatness of the church of Christ Jesus. It is according to the mighty working of God's power, like the creation of the universe, or the operation of its immutable laws. It is wrought in Christ Jesus when God raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand, above all principalities, power, might, and dominion, and every name that is named either in this world or the world to come. For the church there is no going back. In the solemn hour of the dawn of a new dispensation Jesus said: "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." And the inspired apostle Paul says of him, "He is the head of the body, the church." He says of himself after the resurrection, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." Again the Scriptures say: "Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might present it to himself, a glorious church without spot and without wrinkle." (Eph. 5:25). The church moves by the power of God. Mortal man may be too little of soul, or short of sight to see it, but nevertheless the church moves on to be crowned at last the eternal bride of the eternal Christ.

It has come down across the centuries, and out across the continents conquering, and to conqueror; overcoming the frailties of its human membership, the mistakes of its mortal machinery, and the darts of its ever-present foes. The other day I watched one of our boys on the football field take the ball out of the air from the kick-off and with power, precision, swiftness and persistence, and the help of alert team-mates, take that ball all the way, zig-zagging in and out, in and out, back here, up there, across, forward, across again and ever forward, until at last through the whole field he flew with his precious victory! The church will more than do that. It will have its times of adversity and difficulty, but it is not a human institution, but one wrought out of the power of God in the person of Christ Jesus.

The history of the church is the miracle of the ages. Jesus, and a small group of average men and a few good women, from the common walks of life, in a little land in an out-of-the-way place of the world began a movement that has affected all histories written since that day. Their leader was killed, crucified on Calvary. And the little band went into hiding,—behind closed doors for fear of the Jews. The resurrected Lord came and calmed their fears, kindled their faith, and called them to prayer. Pentecostal power fell upon them, and they arose to win in a single day three thousand souls,—and many of their converts must have been those who helped to make Calvary! Stephen re-echoed the Lord's prayer of forgiveness in the first martyrdom, and Saul of Tarsus was stung to the very quick. On the road to Damascus with material power enough, if such thing were possible, to make short end of the infant church, Paul was enveloped in a light that "was never on land or sea" and one of the most outstanding young men of his day, or any day as to that matter, was sent on his way to preach the Gospel of love, and forgiveness before kings and principalities, and to suffer anything for the sake of his Saviour.

There is not time to speak of the coming of the church across the ages. What a record it is! From Calvary to the tomb. From behind closed doors to Pentecost. From Pentecost to the trade routes of both land and sea, and from the trade routes to dungeons, persecutions, and the wholesale martyrdoms of its members. Out of dungeons into still greater daring, until it entered many of the throne-rooms of the earth. Then mistaking the meaning of its own power it wrought its great apostasy by substituting pride for humility, and power for personal goodness. In the darkness of that day many monasteries housed real saints of God, thinking God's thoughts after him until there blossomed forth a new learning, a new literature, a new emphasis on schools, and scholarship. Results, the printing press, and a page worth printing; and a burning desire to see what lay beyond the unseen shores of the seven seas! A new day hammered at the hearts and heads of men, just as we feel even now the force of a new day in the history of the world.

Out of this desire to see unseen shores came America, and out of the desire to worship God in the freedom wrought by the power of the printing press came our forefathers to this New Land. An altar was made among the trees, and the Book was opened, and God was worshipped. And the finest institutions, hopes, and dreams that ever found their way to our shores were born. In such a liberty and freedom old ties could not hold, and a new government was wrought out in the birth-pangs of a new nation, and a new liberty in worship was inevitable. It was while church leaders were still holding to come of the rules and restraints of the Old World that the thoroughly and completely American church of which you and I are a part was born.

The denomination of which you are a part,—the Christian Church wing of it,—was sixty-six years old when the local church of which you are a member was organized. Brother W. E. MacClenny, a deacon of this church, and a well-known historian and author, will give you a history of this church at our services this afternoon, which eliminates the need of my taking your time with it now; but I do wish to speak of the genius of our church. It will explain some matters which at times we are prone to overlook. Liberty in Christ Jesus is a fundamental concept of our Church. There is a sense in which we do not feel that our church is ours, but that it is Christ's. So the Five Cardinal Principles of our Church are:

I. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only head of our Church. This is in keeping with the Scriptures concerning the church. Our text clearly indicates that God "gave him to be the head over all things to the church which is his body." And in Col. 1:18, "He is the head of the body, the church." Matt. 23:8, "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." When the founder of the Suffolk Christian Church, Rev. William Brock Wellons, D. D., was president of the Southeast Convention, in an address delivered before the North Carolina and Virginia Confer-it will, and the ideal develops into practice, it will be a great advance towards making ready for the Lord a people prepared for Him.

PREPARATION FOR CHRIST.

But we must remember that it is not only over the present area of Christendom that Christ is coming to reign, but over all the earth. In western lands the spirit of Christ, though not always recognized as such, has caught hold, and is slowly working God's purpose out; but there are great tracts and masses into which that spirit has not yet found an entrance, though almost everywhere it is knocking at the door; and it is the mission of the Christian Church to spread the spirit of Christ in those dark regions; it has done it before, and it must do it again. We must take a wider view of Christian missions than merely the conversion of individual heathen, though that is no small part or unimportant part of their work. The ultimate object is to instill the spirit of Christ into a nation or a country. It will be a long process, as it always has been. We ourselves are hardly yet a Christian nation; it is that sorrowful fact which tempts Mr. Gandhi and others like him to say that they can admire Christ but they cannot admire Christians. But the progress and success are not to be measured by the conversion of so many Hindus, Brahmans, and Kaffirs to the Christian faith; these might almost be called for the time being the by-product of missionary work; we cannot estimate the value of Christian missions by being told how many Japanese have publicly embraced the Christian religion in twelve months or ten years; the real test is how far the Christian spirit is slowly saturating into the minds of the Japanese, or any other, nation. Are they gradually being prepared to receive Christ? Captious critics have amused themselves by calculating how many hundreds or thousands of pounds it costs to convert one Hindu; but they take no account of how many thousands or millions of Hindus are being made to think, and to think, and to think with increasing sympathy, and are examining now for themselves the spirit of Christ.

I am one of those who are ready to believe that the open acceptance of Christ by these great nations may come some day with startling suddenness, and be a more rapid development than any that has been in the past. Hitherto, nations, including ourselves, have been slowly moving, by way of experiment, towards the adoption of a system that has been long taught, but never tried, and even now is being accepted only nervously and piecemeal; but if we are bold in our advances and true to our position these other peoples will have before them, not an experiment, but an experience of what the spirit of Christ has done for the foremost nations of the world; and they will be the more quickly ready to adopt it for themselves.—Canon Walter Jenks in Scottish Guardian.

ence he said, "Let it be understood at the commencement of my labors in this direction, that the Convention has not assumed to clothe its presiding officer with any authority to lord over others, but sends him forth to the brethren as a counsellor and adviser. Every elder upon this floor is his equal in power and authority." The preachers in our church have never been given authority to lord it over others, neither among themselves nor among the laity. It was never intended that our pulpit should serve as any man's conscience, nor be any man's judge.

II. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church. This principle was placed as one of the cardinal ones with no thought of antagonizing any other name by which Christians are called. It was thought that it was sufficient that followers of Christ should be called Christians. And it would seem that more and more we are calling all churches Christian Churches until the expression the Christian church is now well nigh universal. It was not so 141 years ago when our church was founded. It was a prophetic step. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow."

"I know of lands that are sunk in shame,
Of hearts that faint and tire;
I know a Name, a Name, a Name,
That can set those lands on fire.
Its sound is a brand, its letter flame,
I know a Name, a Name, a Name,
That will set those lands on fire."

And so it was that the Rev. Rice Haggard, arising at the first Conference held at the Lebanon Church, Surry County, Virginia, standing with a copy of the New Testament Scriptures in his hand, said: "This is a sufficient rule of faith and practice, and by it we are told that the disciples were called Christians, and I move that henceforth and forever the followers of Christ be known as Christians only."

III. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. Following the spirit of the new-found liberty in Christ Jesus, as a result of the opening of the Bible in the language of the people, and for all people, man-made creeds became less and less necessary for the spiritual edification of the people, and it was a perfectly American thing to do to lay aside all creeds and take the Bible only as our rule of faith and practice. Again that is not to say that the work of the church from Nicea to Westminster is to be abrogated, or belittled,—on the contrary what the church fathers did opened the way for the blessings of the open Book in the language of the people so the authority of the priest who only had the Bible to read and study became less and less. The people in the pew, on the street, on the frontier, in the home had a copy of the Scriptures for themselves, and by our fathers it was believed that the Holy Spirit would illuminate the open page for the plain men so that he could take the Bible for his own rule of practice.

IV. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and church membership. No other test than that of being a Christian man, or woman, boy or girl is needed for our fellowship. You are not asked what creeds you believe, what forms you follow, nor what is the method or manner of your worship. Is a godly life your aim, and Christian character your goal, then here is the hand of Christian fellowship. It is not at all claimed that members of our church measure up any better toward living that ideal than those of any other communions, but that is their only test for full fellowship, and membership.

V. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all. The Christian church does not set itself up to judge any man. "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; and in all things, charity." People sometimes wonder why certain pulpits do not attack specific social matters on which there is honest difference of opinion, but may they not find their answer just here? The preacher is not a sheriff, but a prophet; the pulpit is not a prison, but a watchtower; and a pastor is a shepherd of the whole flock, honor-bound to impartially preach the sacred Word of God, and minister it in love and mercy to the whole people. Our church holds

OBITUARIES.

Mrs. J. H. Brooks — Mrs. W. H. Carroll

that "private judgment" is your own precious right, and that "liberty of conscience" is your own sacred privilege. Not even the minister has the right to tamper with it. His is to point the way to God, use what persuasion he may have, and yours to accept the truth as you see it in Christ Jesus.

It has been a dream, hope, and prayer of the Christian Church for the union of the followers of Christ. Their dream comes more and more true, both in spirit and in actual practice. Bickerings, bitings between denominations fast are going the way of all flesh, and more and more the final prayer of Jesus "that they may all be one" is being answered. Witness the coming together of two great groups such as our own and the great Congregational Churches. May nothing of value be lost but much of increasingly rich blessings be gained for all. With each one doing our part great good will be the result, for none of the great and worthy traditions of the fathers will suffer, but rather be enhanced, and the history to each wing of our church will be the pride of us all.

In conclusion, my brethren, let us give thanks to almighty God for the great way in which he has led us. And let us humbly come before him, imploring his wisdom, leadership and guidance for the future. May we never forget the blight of sin, the power of the cross, and the glory of the Gospel which we preach. I cannot refrain from paying tribute to my recent predecessors, in concluding my message. This church is today a monument to the Rev. Dr. W. W. Staley. Thousands rise up to call him blessed. And our hearts are also strangely warm today in love and admiration for his successor the Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, who worked so happily with him, and built so lastingly and permanently upon the foundations so firmly laid by his saintly predecessor. To them the name of Jesus was above every name, head over all things to the church, and they strove out of the sincerity of their souls to serve him in absolute devotion. May we follow the challenge laid down to us by them in Christ Jesus.

An appraisal of a long, busy, useful and abundant life in a few brief paragraphs is impossible. And one is very conscious of his own limitations and of the inadequacy of his word technique when he endeavors to interpret a life full of content.

How gracious was Mrs. Brooks! Her presence was a benediction. After years of service to her home and her church she was called upon to endure sorrow and pain, and she did so with the courage of a Christian soldier and with the patience of a follower of the Lamb.

It is good that such women are. Who can estimate their value or calculate their contribution to the sum total of life? From them radiate waves of human charitableness and Christian love which will be picked up for many a year by despairing hearts and hopeless souls. Such a woman was Mrs. Brooks. One of a family which has given abundantly in economic, political and spiritual leadership Mrs. Brooks contributed her part in ways of gentleness and peace, faith, hope and love.

In her church Mrs. Brooks rendered distinctive service as a teacher in the Sunday school and through her consecrated interest in, and labors for, the cause of Missions. The measure of her capacities and abilities in these fields is revealed by the deep affection and profound respect in which she is remembered by those whom she taught and with whom she worked. "She being dead yet speaketh."

Mrs. Brooks lifted up and kept unspotted the standard of a Christian life. She maintained the finest traditions of Christian womanhood and motherhood and was ever the humble handmaid of her Lord. To Him her doctrination was complete and with Him she walked so closely her counsels were wise and her fellowship spiritual.

Mrs. Brooks' personality was engaging in its sympathetic breadth, her services were high and devoted, her life was effective and noble.

Mrs. W. H. Carroll witnessed the Victorian period but she was not Victorian. Mrs. Carroll lived through a period of deep prejudice and bitter enmities, and while she came to intimate and effective grips with the issues and problems out of which they were born and by which they were nurtured she kept herself remarkably free from them.

Living to see the terrific wounds of one war healed she lived to see her own son march off to another. It has been the lot of the women of her family to be ever mending armor.

In Mrs. Carroll strength and tact, force and charm, initiative and patience, zeal and tolerance, purposefulness and graciousness were combined in rare balance. Her weaknesses, which were few, were those of her time, her section and her station. Her endowments, which were many, were given to creative service for her fellowmen, her Church and her home.

Mrs. Carroll gave particularly high service to the causes of education and woman's suffrage in the realm of citizenship, and to Missions in the realm of the Church. In all of these her service was characterized by willingness to cooperate with her contemporaries and her superiors while retaining independence of judgment. Her fine courage was evidenced in that she supported causes and promoted movements when these causes and movements were unpopular.

Mrs. Carroll possessed a great faith and was therefore a great Christian, for whom to live was Christ. She pursued truth and sought justice, she followed after righteousness and walked in paths of constructive service.

She was endowed with a fine mind which through the years she cultured and disciplined. Carefully educated, well read, highly informed and widely traveled, Mrs. Carroll was capable of speaking to and writing upon the matters which interested her strong conviction and clarity.

This is written to the honor of these two women and to the glory of God.

MARRIAGE

GREEN—CAVINNESS.

On October 19th, Miss Nellie Caviness and Mr. Thomas Green of Ramseur, N. C., were united by marriage by the writer at his home in Sanford. The living-room where the vows were taken was decorated with ivy, chrysanthemums and potted plants. Only a few friends witnessed the ceremony. The bride wore a becoming full ensemble with brown accessories.

Mrs. Green is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Caviness. Mr. Green is a son of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Green of Ramseur. After a brief wedding trip the young couple will make their home in the Parks Cross Roads community. Their many friends will wish them much happiness.

T. E. WHITE.

FULP—MARSHALL.

On Thanksgiving Day, November 28th, 1935, Mr. James Fulp and Miss Gladys Marshall, both of the Salem Chapel community, were united in marriage by the writer in the presence of a few close friends.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Marshall. She was attired in a beautiful brown crepe dress with accessories to match.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Grace Fulp and holds a position with the Reynolds Tobacco Company in Winston-Salem. They are making their home with the groom's mother. Their many friends wish them much happiness.

D. M. SPENCE.

OBITUARIES

WELLBORN.

Thursday morning, November 13, 1935, Mrs. Charles H. Wellborn left "This earthly house of her tabernacle" to enter the "Building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens."

She had for years been a faithful member of the Ramseur Christian Church, and was affiliated with all its organizations, cooperating in a real Christian way with her co-workers in every field of endeavor.

To her loved ones, we offer our deepest sympathy and assure them that "To live in the hearts we leave behind is not to die."

Prohibition in West Virginia.—

A battle looms in the primary to be held in West Virginia next May. The Supreme Court has ruled that the Legislature can re-establish prohibition. Rev. B. E. Ewing, leader of the state's dry forces has declared that: "This decision will spur the dries to greater activity than anything else possibly could do, for they have a splendid chance within the next year or so to win back all they have lost by repeal."

Taxes on Pay-Rolls.—

Last August President Roosevelt signed the Federal Unemployment Tax Bill, remarking as he signed it: "If the Senate and House of Representatives had done nothing more than pass this bill, the session would be regarded as historic for all time." The tax becomes effective with the new year, beginning at 1% of total pay-roll. Theoretically, employers bear the entire burden, but in actual practice it will be an additional burden on the thrifty employee for the benefit of the one less able or less willing to carry his share.

"A Moral Obligation."—

Regardless of the Supreme Court's decision in the A. A. A. case, President Roosevelt is quoted as saying that he considers remuneration on farmers' contracts up to the present time a "moral obligation," which he will endeavor to find means of taking care of. Apparently the conclusion reached by him and his advisors was that the still-unexpired portions of contracts were dead, but that the government should make every effort to fulfill the contracts up to the present. Even the bitterest opponents of the agricultural program cannot fail to see the justness of Mr. Roosevelt's position.

A. A. A. Invalidated.—

That the A. A. A. was unconstitutional was not news to many people who had given serious consideration to the question. The decision of the Supreme Court, however, was none the less momentous because of this knowledge. In the South, especially, there had been built up around this agricultural program what might be called an artificial prosperity for the farmer. The court's decision, on its face, would seem a hard blow for these farmers to bear. The pity of the matter is that the administration should not have been more deliberate in the legislation that is asked for and that Congress did not pay more attention to the legality of the bills that it passed. The decision of the court will temporarily distress many of our farmers, but one cannot help but think that eventually the agricultural situation will be placed on a more stable foundation than it could ever have hoped for through this process of subsidization.

Pagans in America.—

While American missionaries are scattered to the four corners of the earth, there remains within our borders a pagan nation of more than 45,000 who still worship their tribal gods. They are the Navajo Indians of Arizona, New Mexico and Utah. Rev. Frederick B. Howden, Episcopal Missionary Bishop of New Mexico, is quoted by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat as saying that this is "the most neglected area in the United States." This paper reminds one, however, that: "Their paganism cannot be ascribed to any lack of proselyting by the Christians, because since the sixteenth century they have been subjected to systematic campaigns of conversion." Nearly all other Indian tribes have become nominally Christian, but the Navajos have remained obdurate. Yet they cannot be called irreligious, because atheism and agnosticism are said to be unknown among them. Another interesting observation of Bishop Howden is that, "There are more Indians alive today in North America than when Columbus landed!" The Navajos are certainly on the increase today, for in 1869 they numbered only 9,000, while now, as stated above, there are over 45,000.

"The Bible Unveiled."—

A pamphlet bearing the above title is the contribution of one Hanns Obermeister to the advanced learning of the Hitler Empire. Herr Obermeister has discovered that the Holy Book is entirely the work of man, and a badly done and untrustworthy job at that! Its Jewish writers are branded as rogues and swindlers, and as for Jesus Christ, he never existed at all. Peter, Paul, and the other apostles, were also products of someone's fertile imagination. After careful consideration, he arrives at the conclusion that "there is no original sin; man needs no redeemer, and there is no hell fire. "Thereby agreeing," says a contemporary religious magazine, "with some of our own Modernists who do not consider themselves pagans." The pamphlet traces the origin of the Hebrew religion to the Egyptians, and considers statements made in the Old Testament as facts, to be in many instances entirely allegorical. He tells us that "Wotan, the old Germanic god, is the divine principle that dwells in us all, and the Nordic spirit alone can free us from outworn and mythical church dogmas." No doubt Herr Obermeister will find a following among the Germans, but one cannot believe that a people such as these will be misled beyond a certain distance.

The President's "Budget Summary."—

The "Budget Summary" included in Mr. Roosevelt's message to Congress, proves quite interesting reading matter and provides food for thought. Under the heading of Receipts for the years 1936 and 1937, respectively, are the following: Internal revenue, $3,874,845,000, $5,140,114,000; customs, $353,191,000, $354,000,000; miscellaneous, $178,772,055, $155,142,606; realization upon assets, $3,985,891, $4,961,044. These figures give a total for 1936 of $4,410,793,946, and for 1937 of $5,654,217,650. Expenditures for the two years are given as follows: Legislative, judicial and executive, $38,153,180, $41,835,627; civil departments, $703,780,103, $1,006,220,145; national defense, $744,839,588, $937,791,966; debt charges, including interest and retirements, $1,294,025,000, $1,385,125,000; veterans' benefits and various emergency relief and recovery programs, run the total estimated expenditures for 1936 to $7,645,301,338, and for 1937 to $6,752,606,370. The president estimates that the deficit for 1936 will be $3,234,507,392, while that for 1937 will be $1,098,388,720. The reduction in the deficit is, of course, contingent upon the increase in internal revenue which he estimates will be over a billion and a quarter dollars. This, in turn, will be determined by the rapidity of recovery on the part of business. It seems that the best that can possibly be done will be to attempt to balance the national budget somewhere around the year 1939. If it is done sooner, there will have to be a decided decrease in the amount of New Deal spending.

The "Haves" and the "Have-Nots."—

We hold no brief for either Italy or Japan in the aggressive wars in which they have been or are now participating, but there is food for thought in the following, gleaned from a recent issue of Business Week. Under the "Haves" this paper lists the United States, the British Empire, including Egypt, France and the Soviet Union. The "Have-Nots" are Italy, Japan and Germany. They might have been called the "We've-Gots" and the "We'll-Gets." The first four nations might be said at a glance at the present time to be non-aggressive, the three latter only want a chance and an excuse for aggressiveness. Business Week points out graphically the reason for the above. There are six materials which are important for industry, essential for war. They are cotton, petroleum, iron ore, copper, rubber, and nitrogen. The United States controls half of the cotton, over half of the petroleum, a fifth approximately of the iron ore and copper, and is producing nitrogen in increasing quantities. The four nations of the "Have" group combined, control 80 per cent of the cotton; Germany none, Italy none, Japan and Manchukuo one-half per cent. Comparative figures for other items are: petroleum 72 per cent against less than one-fourth per cent; iron, 80 per cent and 5½ per cent; copper, 50 per cent and 10 per cent; rubber, 60 per cent and none. In nitrogen only does the latter group have a greater percentage: they produce approximately one-half of the world's nitrogen supply, and gunpowder is made from nitrogen. The other and smaller and less powerful countries of the world produce the balances in the above percentages, and the aggressor nations of the present time evidently consider them fair game for the hunter.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

We acknowledge the following and extend our heartiest congratulations to our good friends making the announcement and the happy pair who are announced: "Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Tucker announce the marriage of their daughter, Lucy Catherine, to Mr. John Allen Kimball on Saturday, the twenty-eighth of December, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, Union Level, Mecklenburg County, Virginia."

We are congratulating our vigorous and venerable friend, Dr. Clarence A. Vincent, pastor of Miami Shores Community Church, on the work he is doing and the recognition he is receiving in the city and state. The Miami Daily News gave two columns to a review of his poems and he was chosen to give the New Year's address at the union meeting on Bayfond Park of the churches of Miami. In spite of threatened rain, 2,500 were present to hear the Christmas music by the combined choirs of the churches and the sermon by Dr. Vincent on the theme, "A Bend in the Road."

Rev. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., after four weeks and a day of hospital treatment following an operation, has been returned to his home where he is slowly but steadily regaining his strength. The latest word from him is that he is still very weak and will in all probability be confined to his room and unable to do pastoral work for two or three months to come. The prospect now is for return of health. His churches are finding supplies, using laymen, holding their services and praying for their pastor that he may return to them in the Spring strong again to render faithful service as in previous years.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree of the U. S. Navy, now on duty at San Diego, Calif., U. S. S. Whitney, send us a clipping from the San Diego Union, Sunday, December 29th, in which a view is given of a baptismal service he is conducting on Christmas Day, which, according to "The Union" is the first baptismal of a baby ever held on a warship at Christmas time: "Robert Elwin West, seven months old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. West, baptized on U. S. S. Whitney by Chaplain H. E. Rountree." The picture shows the parents, the chaplain and a large group of children whose fathers are on the Whitney. There were 200 guests at this unique service.

A friend sends a recent copy of the Boston Herald from which the following personal is taken: "Kittery, Me., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Mary Ann Judkins, who last November observed her 103rd birthday, died late this afternoon at her home in North Kittery. She was born Nov. 24, 1832, at Kittery Point, the daughter of John C., and Rebecca Bunker Todd. Her father was a fisherman. In 1851 she was married to Gilman Judkins, a ship carpenter, who died more than 50 years ago. Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Judkins was for a number of years a domestic nurse here. She was the oldest member of the Second Christian church here. A daughter, Mrs. Augusta Caswell and a son, John L. Judkins, survive."

We wish to commend to our pastors in particular and to CHRISTIAN SUN readers in general the following item taken from the Christian-Evangelist (Disciples): "The Congregational Churches of Connecticut are in a movement to get men to take a greater interest in the church. The chairman of the present movement is Donald Adams of New Haven, past president of Rotary International. He is telling the men that they must get back of the churches like they have been getting back of their clubs, and says the very life's blood of the clubs has been drawn from the churches. His appeals are convincing and getting results in the local churches. A deacon in my own church here is doing great things for kingdom building as a result of the faithful efforts of this great layman. . . ." THE SUN's editor often wonders why Rotarians and other civic clubs and societies can get such loyalty and enthusiasm among the men and why the church can and does beget so much listlessness and indifference.

A long time subscriber and close reader of THE SUN writes personally: "I wish I could let you know what comfort the weekly visits of THE SUN bring to me. It is the only way I have now to learn of what our dear Church is doing in its councils and conferences. I would certainly wish that all who get the paper would read in the issue of January 2, 1936, and even re-read, on page 2, 'Life's Open Doors,' by Dr. Vincent, and 'Preparation for Christ,' from the Scottish Guardian." These were very wholesome thoughts indeed, for readers who seek courage and faith to press forward through the new year. Other letters have come in calling especial attention to our issue of January 2nd. And this is encouraging to those who are seeking with a pardonable degree of unselfishness and devotion to lay on the table of our readers each week, and place in the family circle, that which will be stimulating to the mind, wholesome and edifying to the soul.

We express to our friend and brother, Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Duke University, Durham, and also to the other bereaved members of the family, our sympathy in the death of their father, Brother Henry B. Smith of our Hines Chapel Church, Wednesday, January first. Rev. B. J. Earp, the pastor, conducted the funeral from Hines Chapel, Thursday P. M., January 2nd, being assisted by other visiting ministers. Brother Smith was seventy-three at the time of his passing and had been through many years a faithful and loyal member of Hines Chapel. Surviving him are his wife and five daughters: Mrs. J. M. Michael of Gibsonville; Mrs. J. W. Parker, Guilford County; Mrs. J. P. Avera of Greensboro; and Misses Beulah and Belle Smith and three sons: L. D. of Guilford County; Lacy W. of Greensboro; and Dr. H. Shelton of the faculty of Duke University, Durham. The mother of the deceased, Mrs. Sarah Jane Smith, now past ninety-three years of age, survives him. Brother Smith lived a useful and highly esteemed life and departed in the serene faith of mature experience and wisdom.

Rev. W. D. Harward, D. D., of Dendron, Va., gives this word of cheer in a personal note: "Although not able to be active in the service we love, we are happy in Him whose we are and Whom we are trusting to sustain us all the way through." Brother Harward reports that his good wife has been unwell and, though he himself is feeble, was able through the holidays to build fires and keep comfortable. One wonders if a good man and faithful servant, incapacitated for active service by frailty of body and failing health, is not of equal service and helpfulness to the world about him even as he was in days of physical strength and activity. The world needs patience and courage to face and conquer afflictions and difficulties, and it needs those faithful souls who can trust implicitly in Him to show the rest of us by living example what Paul meant when he said (II Cor. 4:17-18): "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory: While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

The managing editor, with his wife, left Richmond Friday morning after Christmas and arrived at Winter Park, Florida, to enjoy the last day's session of the Holiday Youth Conference. This was a most unusual meeting, and in spite of the inclement weather in the northernmost states of the Southeast, they were all represented by delegates. Miss Emily Carleton assigned us to the home of Mrs. Jas. E. Capen, and our hostess made our short stay most enjoyable. We left Winter Park on Monday afternoon, stopping at the Bok Singing Tower and at Sebring, where we spent a most pleasant evening and night in the home of a former Elonite, Frederic S. Jones and his good wife. Constance and Marion, his daughters, were also former students at Elon. From Sebring we went to Miami, but missed seeing Dr. Elisha King, to our regret. We did have the pleasure of a few minutes visit with Dr. Frank Atkinson at West Palm Beach, where we stopped for a night and a day. At Jacksonville we again saw Dr. Gillette and Pattie Coghill and met the rest of the office force there. Another pleasure at Jacksonville was seeing again Hon. Chas. Cook Howell, better known in the good old days at Elon as Charlie. At Savannah we visited Mrs. Pusser (when at Elon, Carrie Driver) and we hated to have to leave so soon. Part of the next day was spent seeing Charleston and the old Circular Church, and trying to find Dr. Edwards. That night was spent at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, and the next night, after a 350-mile drive, at home. We should not forget to mention that on our going trip we stopped for a half-hour in the home of Mrs. Hugh McAllister, whom so many SUN readers knew as "Miss Ramsey," at Lumberton, N. C. After having seen Winter Park and the other wonderful places to the south of us, we cease to wonder why THE SUN's editor goes into rhapsodies when he sends in his "editorial correspondences" during the months of January and February.

REV. E. T. COTTEN TO LEAVE EATON.

Becomes Pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, Price Hill, Cincinnati, Feb. 1st.

Rev. E. T. Cotten, pastor of the Eaton Congregational-Christian Church since June 1, 1926, completes nine years and eight months of worthwhile service in the community January 31, 1936, when he severs his local connection to become pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Price Hill Cincinnati.

Rev. Cotten tendered his resignation to the members of the Eaton church following the morning worship service Sunday morning, effective January 31, 1936.

As pastor of the Eaton church, he was responsible for a marked increase in church and Sunday school membership. He has also been active in county religious education activities and is a member of the State Board of Trustees of the Ohio Conference of Congregational Christian churches. He is also chairman of the Missionary Promotional committee of the Southwestern Association of the Congregational Christian churches of Ohio.

He delivered the Christmas morning sermon in the Cincinnati church. Rev. Cotten plans to move in January.

Mrs. E. T. Cotten has been active in Eaton and Preble county musical circles and has directed the adult church choir. As a talented vocalist she has participated in a number of outstanding programs.

A successor for Rev. Cotten has not been considered as yet.

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

THE ROAD TO UNION.

An appeal that "concerted action" without relinquishing "their individual emphases" rather than through "organic union" is the practical way for the various Protestant churches to work together for the establishment and maintenance of a Christian America, is made in a New Year's message to the twenty-three denominations represented in the Home Missions Council of the U. S. and Canada by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, President of the Council and general secretary for church extension of the Congregational and Christian churches.

Baptist, Lutheran, Methodist, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Reformed bodies are included in the Home Missions Council.

The message says:

"Will the New Year bring appreciably nearer the time when American churches will come into organic union? It would be a brave prophet who would venture any definite prediction. The twenty-two clergymen and seven laymen who recently issued an appeal to their fellow Americans for union with the Church of Rome represent a small continent and their proposal is so fraught with theological and practical difficulties that it can scarcely be regarded as much more than a gesture. More promising from the standpoint of efficiency in cooperation are the efforts being exerted thru the Home Missions Council, the Council of Women for Home Missions and the Federal Council of Churches, whereby without relinquishing their individual emphases the various denominations are moving forward in concerted action to the work that needs to be done.

"Such cooperation takes form in unified study of and pronouncements upon questions of social reform; in elimination of overlapping effort upon home mission fields and in uniting for effective religious service in new communities such as those springing up at government projects near Boulder City, Nev., and Grand Coulee, Wash. Another Practical expression of joint efficiency is seen in the recent establishment by the Home Missions Council of an interdenominational bureau of architecture equipped to serve all of the Council's consistent denominations.

"The united contribution made by home missions to the welfare of the nation both in the past and currently, has been tremendous. In the effort to assure the ministry of religion to the pioneer and his family, home missions took form at about the time the United States achieved a place on the roster of world governments. Home missions kept step with the frontiersman as he pushed steadily westward in the conquest of forest, plain and mountain. Home missionaries were among the foremost in establishing colleges and in promoting orderly government. No journey was too difficult for them; no place of labor too remote. Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh in her book, "North to the Orient," sketches a picture of such work as it is still going on in the bleak Arctic.

"But for the most part, although the basic motive of home missions remain the same as in the beginning, the form of external expression is greatly changed. Most home missionaries live today in well-established communities, modern in appearance and scarcely distinguishable from others which are able to carry on religiously without financial aid from outside. Indeed many home missionary churches exist today in thriving cities. If it be asked why, in the face of all our material development there still remains a need for the home missionary, the answer lies in the fact that great multitudes of people are still unable, or unwilling to contribute enough money for the adequate support of religion in their own communities. If such places are to be served it must be by the voluntary participation of the people of other sections who care enough about the widespread practice of Christianity to give towards its support. Such benevolence has always been a constructive factor in the development of our national life. The work of home missions is built upon the desirability of establishing and maintaining a Christian America. Until that great end is much nearer realization than anything at present on the horizon, that work must go on. For Christians believe that only as the principles of their faith are realized in every phase of national existence,—individual, political, social, industrial,—can either individual or nation deal with life in full worthiness."

President Home Missions Council.

NEWS NOTES FROM FLORIDA.

Rev. George L. Cady, Secretary of the American Missionary Association, is spending the winter months in Florida. He is available for missionary addresses for churches that can be reached from Orlando. He can be addressed at 402 North Broadway, Orlando, Florida. Dr. Cady has some finely illustrated lectures.

Rev. Henry J. Condit has been called to the Orange City church in Florida as pastor for this season. Dr. Condit comes from Ithaca, New York, and has for several years been director of Religious Education and Young People's Work for the Conference of New York. He has been especially strong in his leadership in the Summer Conferences held in that state.

It was a pleasure to the denizens of the Jacksonville office to have a visit from Mr. and Mrs. John T. Kernodle. Mr. and Mrs. Kernodle had been attending the Youth Fellowship and had also made something of a tour of the state. We enjoyed their visit to the office and only regretted that we did not have more time, as there was much to discuss. Come again, friends.

Two of our denominational secretaries are appearing this winter in the Florida Forum series promoted by Dr. Robert S. Holmes of Daytona Beach. They are Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, one of the secretaries of the American Board, Dr. Hubert Herring of the Council for Social Action. Both of the men are well known and interesting lecturers and both of them are available for a few lectures or missionary addresses in connection with their series of Forum lectures.

In connection with the holiday meeting of the Youth Fellowship at Winter Park, the Extension Board staff for the southeast were fully represented except for the absence of Miss Marguerite Davidson, who is spending her annual vacation at her in Massachusetts. Dr. Fred P. Enslinger, Dr. Milo J. Sweet, Miss Phiscilla Chase, Miss Annie Campbell, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Superintendent Gillette were all present, and there were important conferences with regard to various phases of the Extension Board work in the southeast. All greatly enjoyed and appreciated the meeting of the Youth Fellowship.

Rev. J. Delman Kuykendall, D. D., celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of the beginning of his ministry at Plymouth Church, Coconut Grove, Florida, with a New Year's reception. Dr. Kuykendall's ministry is unique because of his scholarly preaching, the depth of his spiritual insight and his challenging message to the thoughtful people who listen to him each Sunday. The Plymouth church is one of the beautiful architectural gems of the Miami area, and in fact one of the most beautiful in Florida. It is a vine-clad spanish mission type, with a large patio and an outdoor pulpit and a very beautiful parsonage, which has been built during the ministry of Dr. Kuykendall. Dr. Kuykendall has published several small books of sermons or meditations, which have unique and vital messages.

Miss Gladys V. Hall, who for the past five years has been on the staff of the Latin American Mission at West Tampa, resigned to take effect at the end of December. She has left for new work in a Mission in the Kentucky mountains. Miss Hall is a graduate of Wheaton College (Illinois). During the last year or more Miss Hall has been director of activities of the Mission. She has been a fine speaker in behalf of the Mission work, speaking in the churches and before the women's societies of the state. Her service at the Mission has been one of great personal sacrifice and devotion. Miss Naomi Jordan and Miss Lona Ward, who began at the same time with Miss Hall, continue their effective and fine service with the Mission. Their club work, kindergarten, and their Sunday school and young people's work has been very fine. Rev. Ray M. Busler is serving as acting pastor of the church.

KAGAWA TO BE IN RICHMOND.

Toyohiko Kagawa, the outstanding Christian of the Orient, and some think of the world, is to be in Richmond, Virginia, on January 16th and 17th. He is really a friend of the forgotten man—and of Jesus. Deliberately making his home in the slums, he has fought for those neglected and forgotten peoples for years. His books have stirred the hearts of many, and multitudes sit at his feet around the world.

There will be a youth banquet at 5:45 P. M., January 16, at the Grove Avenue Baptist Church. At 8:15 the same evening Kagawa will speak at the Mosque. The next day at one o'clock there will be a luncheon for ministers at the Hotel John Marshall. Admission will be by ticket, but there is no cost except for the eats. Banquet $.75, and luncheon, $1.00.

For information and tickets write as follows: For youth banquet, D. V. Blayney, Y. M. C. A., Richmond; for mass meeting at Mosque, Alex Armour, Davenport & Company, Richmond; and for minister's luncheon, Hotel John Marshall, Richmond.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY.

It will not hurt, it will greatly help very many of us, to give now and then, at least, some serious consideration, religiously, to the relationship of the races with and amongst whom we live and have our being. For with all our knowledge and understanding, prejudice will creep in in spite of ourselves. Fact is, some of the subjects and peoples that we think we know most about, when put to the test, we know least about. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has, for some years and we think wisely, designated a Sunday on which we may give serious and worshipful consideration to the question of race relations. This year that Sunday comes on February 9th. The suggested programs for this worship period have been presented and are offered by the Federal Council of Churches at 3c each; $2.00 a hundred. This year it chances that the message for the Sunday is written by a Southerner, Rev. Edwin McNeill Poteat, Jr., pastor of a Raleigh, N. C., church. This message, it seems to us, is so pointed and practical, that we invite our readers to an immediate and careful perusal of it. Dr. Poteat chooses as a text for his message, Genesis 37:1: "And Jacob dwelt in the land in which his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan." And we submit that he sticks to his text and presents a parable that carries power and prestige as follows:

"The whole business of getting on in our social and economic life, corporate and individuals, boils down to the matter of accommodating ourselves to new ideas and situations. Isaac was never sure about Canaan; it was a dangerous place. Yet Jacob finally domiciled in the very center of Isaac's fears. What to the father had been an area of peril became to the son a land that flowed with milk and honey.

"Here, then, is a parable apposite to our racial situation. The land of race relations was a dangerous spot to our fathers. To contemplate unprejudiced justice before the law, economic equality in our common industrial and commercial life, freedom of education and the essential privileges of full citizenship for all—this to our grandsires was a vexing and forbidding prospect. To read even the sermons of those uncertain days is to see how unyielding was the fear of the fathers. In many ways their apprehensions have proven quite unjustified. Jacob is learning to find himself at home where Isaac had feared to live.

"This is by no means to say that the problem between races in America is measurably solved. Far from it. In certain respects it is more acute and puzzling than ever before. But this is true: it is after all basically an economic and social problem and it must be solved by those who are ethically sensitive and socially enlightened. It was an economic motive that brought the Negro to America in the 17th century and has brought other races. It is in its economic aspects that the race problem rises to threaten us today. Furthermore, it is in its economic aspect that it has become acute in the whole world. Japanese activities in the Far East are largely a protest against the economic domination of the whites. Gandhi seeks to lead his brown brothers out of a bondage essentially commercial. And what of Ethiopia?

"Primarily, as was the case with Jacob, the problem is a human one. The color of one's skin is not—we dare assert—the final determinant in race attitudes. It is ignorance, not pigment, which divides us. Isaac, not knowing the Canaanites, feared and hated them. We, not knowing the other races among us, despise and distrust them. Jacob found out some things his father never knew. Surely nothing can bring our distressing racial illness a quicker guarantee of healing than can mutual understanding.

"It is not hard to know the facts involved, but by a studied or habitual aloofness we refuse to sit down with each other and learn. Except in the case of hopelessly stubborn prejudice the usual issue of mutual understanding is mutual respect. And no solution of race problems can rest upon anything less than respect.

"This may be thought to be a practical rather than a religious appraisal of the race problem. The assumption is, however, that there is no longer any respectable or considerable religious opinion that regards one race or another as the particular favorite of God. We have at least found ourselves at home in that land, a land where our fathers sojourned with great restlessness.

"Our parable, some will say, breaks down at last, for it was by bloody conquest that Jacob won his home in Canaan. Quite. It should encourage us in the hope that, since violence has been so utterly discredited as a solvent of social ills, it can never be invoked in the effort to solve race difficulties. That way lies peril indeed. And on this special day let every Christian resolve to understand his black, white, red, yellow or brown neighbor in a fashion never before undertaken. This surely is God's way of going about the business of making us feel at home in His world. Who knows but we shall discover that what we have feared shall turn out to be a land that flows with milk and honey!"

May it even be so.

SOMETHING LACKING.

One, even a whole family, can miss going to church this Sunday, and for cause stay at home next Sunday, also go visiting the next and feel too unwell to go the Sunday following. One, even a whole family, may do this and get by with it, but in such a way the habit of indifference or non-attendance is formed, and thenceforth something has gone out of the life of that individual or family. Life in the individual or in the family is not just the same after the habit of not going to church has been formed. Just mark it down and observe when and where you will, and the difference will gradually be seen. Something has gone out of the heart, life and make-up of one, or the family, who has formed and holds to this habit. Going to church, assembling at the House of God on the Sabbath Day, meeting with people at the place of prayer, observing the worship period on the Sabbath day, gives to life a fervor, a zest, moral courage and a spiritual prestige that nothing else can give. Beware, sooner or later, of the individual, or the family, who persistently and from Sabbath to Sabbath remains away from the place of preaching and prayer—unless, indeed, prevented by affliction or difficulties that cannot humanly be overcome. It was, indeed, a high day and a holy resolve for Israel when the old Covenanter, Nehemiah, declared: "We will not forsake the House of our God." And it was the joy and strength of the Psalmist David to sing: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." David knew why here was gladness and put it in these words: "Because of the house of the Lord, our God, I will seek thy good." And this holds good till this day. Those who assemble in the House of God usually are the ones who seek the good of their community and of the world. The writer to the Hebrews understood and emphasized this salient truth when he extorted: "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is."

In the early part of this new year no better resolve can be made than the high and holy resolve that during the year to be, we will be present and in the spirit of reverence and worship at the house of God on the Holy Sabbath. Without that, something is lacking in the heart and in the household.

J. O. A.

"THY WILL BE DONE."

It should be remembered that the Lord Christ used, and made immortal, these words, not as a note of defeat and despair, but as a declaration of victory and joy. He simply prayed through His agony, and any shade of doubt or despair that may have momentarily seized Him and then came out upon the mountain peak of triumph over His trials and said: "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt." This was that for which He had sought, labored and sacrificed through His earthly career and really that for which He had come into the world. John 6:38 quotes Him: "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me." And thus in His trying hour, His death and suffering impending, when He realized that He had at last prevailed over His foes, doubts or fears (if He had any), He said: "Not as I will, but as thou wilt." The Sunday School Times in a recent issue calls to mind the fact that the late, lamented H. Clay Trumbull, once editor of the Times, wrote the following which reveals the true light of our Lord's declaration:

"God's will is not so much a thing to which we must submit, as a thing in which we should glory. It is not a rod beneath which we must bow, but a flag which we may follow. It is the one hopeful, glad, and glorious thing in this world. We are too apt to think of the petition, 'Thy will be done,' as one only to be placed on tombstones and to be mingled with sobs, when it is rather our battle-cry of freedom, our cheer for hope and progress. There is no glad, good thing in all the world, in any day of any single life, but that it is the will of God being done. The triumphs, the successes, the hopes, the joys—these are the will of God. There is, indeed, a sense in which they are far more the will of God than the burdens, the tears, the failures, in which are mingled much of the fruit of the feeble, frail, and faulty will of man. Let this prayer, then, ring in our anthems; let us shout it in our praises, let us cherish it in our hearts as our exceeding confidence and our great joy: "Thy will, O God, be done!"

So, instead of looking upon the desire to do the will of God and to obey Him in all things as that to be dreaded or avoided, we should embrace it as a promise of victory, a sure symbol of triumph.

IN THE FOG.

For leading us into the fog, with that which seems to the average reader as meaningless phraseology, please commend us to some theological and scientific writers. How will this sentence do, for instance, from the eminent Dr. Shailer Matthews, of Chicago, writing on the "Atonement and the Social Progress?" We quote:

"From such a point of view (that all doctrines are derived from the total social life of humanity) the death of Christ is not to be described as satisfaction of dignity or justice but as an exponent of the forces inherent in the process through whose aid the loss of that which is good conditions the gain of that which is better—a personality more individual, less dependent upon its earlier stages and more appropriative of the personality-evolving activity of God."

Now then, does the reader know any more about the "Atonement" since Dr. Matthews has told us? In reading this, one is reminded of Herbert Spencer's "Definition of Evolution," and he did about as well on this topic as any we now recall, the Spencerian definition being: "Evolution is that process of change from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a more definite, coherent heterogeneity." Quoting this to my friend, Farmer Jones, sometime ago, he remarked: "That's what I thought myself, but I cannot get my neighbor's to agree with me."

And then that learned scholar who gave such a clear cut (?) definition of time as follows: "Time is that which in so far as it is, is not, and in so far as it is not, it is." Ah! me!!

There are many of the most commonplace and ordinary facts and events of life with which we are quite well acquainted and know how they work until we begin to define them in words, and then they elude us. Possibly the explanation of this is contained in a statement that the editor once heard the eminent Dr. Chas. Carroll Everett make, to wit: "Thought is deeper than all language and feeling is deeper than all thought." Being in the fog, at any rate, better fits us for the real sunshine of a clear day. And many of us are much clearer in our living than we are either in our learning or even than the scientists are in their definitions. And this, in a measure, explains why the Bible of all books remains the world's "best seller" and most used book; it does not define, it describes; it does not argue, it reveals the simple truth and gives it to us in lines and language that "a wayfarer man, though a fool, need not err therein."

KAGAWA IN THE SOUTHEAST.

Kagawa, the great Japanese Christian, who is also one of the great spiritual forces of the world today, is now in southeastern states. When this goes to press he will have visited Birmingham, Atlanta, New Orleans, and will be speaking at Nashville. He is to visit Norris, Tennessee and on January 13th he will be at Asheville, at Durham January 14th-15th and Richmond 16th-17th. On this visit his special emphasis will be upon the organization of "Cooperatives," which are to him the economic expression of the Christian teaching. He is devoting a great deal of his energy in Japan to this movement. Our readers are urged to hear him wherever they can.

KAGAWA'S TOUR OF THE SOUTHEASTERN STATES.

More than 100 requests have been received for dates. The time allotted us is two weeks and Kagawa asks that he be given at least two days in each place dated. With this situation the committee decided that the better plan was to ask those interested to meet Kagawa in the best central places. To that end his dates have been fixed as follows:

(We give place, date, and correspondent.)

Birmingham, Jan. 3-4. Dr. Henry Edmonds, Highland Ave. & 31st St.
Atlanta, Jan. 5-6. Rev. W. A. Shelton, 458 Ponce de Leon Ave.
New Orleans, Jan. 7-8. Sec. Vernon Gay, Y. M. C. A., Tulane University.
Nashville, Jan. 9-10. Prof. Alva W. Taylor, 101 Bowling Ave.
Norris and rest, Jan. 11-12.
Asheville, Jan. 13. Pres. James W. K. McClure, Farmer's Federation.
Durham, Jan. 14-15. Prof. James Ormond, Duke University.
Richmond, Jan. 16-17. Rev. C. Sylvester Green, Grove Ave. Baptist Church.

Kagawa prefers conferences rather than mass meetings but is willing to address a mass meeting in each place. His voice is not strong and he has to speak in a tongue not his own. For this tour his chief interest is in Christian leadership—thus conferences. He would like to meet ministers, youth groups and labor especially. His message is that of cooperation—cooperation between religious groups, races, youth groups, etc. His most special interest is in economic cooperatives which are to him the economic expression of the Christian teaching; it is to the organization of cooperatives that he is devoting his best energy now in Japan.

For the sake of the cumulative effect and to get the best out of conference it is urged that a large group of Christian leaders be organized that will agree to try to hear him in each and every meeting he addresses. This group will be the intensive leadership group in which Kagawa's interest will be greatest.

Kagawa is a brown man; to him there is in Christ neither white, black nor brown. He preaches cooperation as the heart of the social gospel. We can only express the hope that the largest measure of cooperation that can be devised will be carried out in all the cities this great Christian honors with his presence and message.

Your name is being sent to the correspondent in the city nearest you where he is to hold these conferences. We hope you will organize delegations of leaders to attend. We shall be glad to have you write your nearest correspondent or to us. Details of his meetings will be sent you when ready.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY—FEBRUARY 9, 1935.

In announcing the fourteenth annual observance of Race Relations Sunday, which comes on February 9, 1936, Dr. George E. Haynes, executive secretary Department of Race Relations, Federal Council of Churches, said today: "The people of America need to be re-awakened to the racial crisis in world affairs at this turning tide of history. With the present economic situation among Negroes and other minority groups in the United States and the conflict of nations of different races in East Africa and the Far East, decisive issues face the churches and cry aloud for Christian action."

A special message has been written by the Rev. Edwin McNeill Poteat, Jr., Raleigh, N. C., President of the southern Commission on Interracial Cooperation, and is included in the literature which the Department of Race Relations has prepared for use of churches and allied organizations. In this message Dr. Poteat urges Christian America to lay aside traditional fears that have kept the races apart. He proposes that members of different races sit down together and work out their common problems.

"In certain respects it (the race problem) is more acute and puzzling than ever before," says Dr. Poteat. "It is basically an economic and social problem and it must be solved by those who are ethically sensitive and socially enlightened. . . . It is not hard to know the facts involved, but by a studied or habitual aloofness we refuse to sit down with each other and learn. . . . It should encourage us in the hope that, since violence has been so utterly discredited as a solvent of social ills, it can never be invoked in the effort to solve race difficulties. That way lies peril indeed."

In the literature are also contained valuable program suggestions and references for the various departments of the church. A special Opinion Test for young people is featured, along with suggestions for a panel discussion. Data for Speakers give up-to-date facts and figures on the present status of the American Negro, American Indians, Mexicans and Orientals in the United States. The material is made up in individual sections and may be ordered at small cost individually or in complete sets. Authors of the material include Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield of the A. M. E. Zion Church, Miss Beulah Clear-M. E. Church, Mrs. Josephine Humbles Kyles of waters, Religious Education Director, Grace M. E. Church, Wilmington Delaware, Miss Dorothy May Fischer, Director of Young People's Work of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president Chicago Theological Seminary, and Miss Katherine Terrill of the Council for Social Action, Congregational-Christian Church.

As in previous years, community organizations are joining with the churches in the promotion of various types of interracial projects preceding and following Race Relations Sunday. In Kentucky this day will mark the beginning of special race relations activities for the year. The demand for speakers, musicians and other program participants has already indicated a wide observance of the Day. Radio broadcasts both from local stations and national hook-ups will carry special music and services emphasizing interracial goodwill in America and abroad.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Riddick, daughter of the late Col. John R. and Mrs. Catherine Hunter Copeland, was born at "Poplar Lawn" Nansemond County, Virginia, February 25, 1840, and died at her residence, Bank Street, Suffolk, Virginia, Sunday, December 29, 1935, at the age of 95 years, 10 months and 4 days. Her father was the first cashier and one of the organizers of the Farmers Bank of Nansemond. He died in Suffolk, October 21, 1892; at the age of 81 years. Colonel Copeland was noted for his honesty, high sense of honor and business integrity.

"Miss Cattie," as she was known by her intimate friends, was married to Captain Jethro Balentine Riddick on June 10, 1879. He was a veteran of the war between the states, having enlisted as a Second Lieutenant in Company I, 41st Virginia Regiment Confederate Army, and after the death of Captain Robert B. Brinkley at Hanover Junction on May 25, 1864, was promoted to the rank of Captain. He was wounded at Davis Farm on August 19, 1864, and never entirely recovered. After their marriage they made their home in Portsmouth where Captain Riddick was engaged in a profitable and successful business. Captain Riddick died after a long illness, December 11, 1887. After her husband's death, Mrs. Riddick moved to Suffolk where she made her home until her death.

She assisted her sister, Mrs. Holladay, in rearing and educating three sons and one daughter. For many years these dear relatives lived in her mind and heart as her own children. She loved them and planned for them as she would have provided for her own. In return they bestowed upon her their appreciation, affection and kindness.

She was sick only a few weeks and her mental faculties were keen and alert almost to the end. She attended to some business matters just a day or two before her death. Her funeral was conducted in the Christian Church, December 31, 1935, at 11:00 A. M., by Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor, and Rev. Herbert N. Tucker, Rector of the Episcopal Church. Her body was laid to rest in Cedar Hill.

Mrs. Riddick united with Bethlehem Christian Church when young and transferred her membership to the Suffolk Christian Church, after moving to Suffolk. Three churches—denominations—greatly influenced her through ancestral lines and personal contact, viz., The Friends, the Episcopal and the Christian. She was a great admirer of the late Dr. W. B. Wellons, a personal friend of her father and co-laborer in the organization of the Farmers Bank of Nansemond. The ministry of this great preacher and the devotion of her father gave her a strong affection for the Christian denomination. The influence of the Friends and the Episcopal Church also intensified her devotion for the cause of Christ. Her early training, the heritage of family traditions and the influence of these three denominations account in part for her own ability and strength of personality and character.

For the most part she lived her life quietly and simply, attending to her domestic and business affairs with great care, punctuality and good judgment. She was economical and industrious, painstaking and progressive, liberal in her views and broad in her sympathies. Her financial contributions were dispensed quietly and privately without any flare of trumpets or desire for publicity. She emphasized work and integrity of character. In her realm there was no place for the sluggard. She thought time and talents should be utilized and improved as precious gifts of God.

Such a life and character should mean much to the youth of this generation. Born and reared in Virginia before many people used cook stoves and sewing machines and many other modern conveniences of the household, she knew the meaning of plain living and long hours of work. She tried to take care of what she earned and sought to use it or invest it wisely for service or profit to benefit others. In her opinion, wasting money or time was a crime against self and society. Suffolk is richer because of her example and service.

I. W. JOHNSON.

EDUCATION PERIOD.

The Convention is endeavoring to provide for the support of her institutions authorized definite periods in which each institution or interest was to make known its needs and receive contributions for its support.

January and February were designated as the months in which the churches of the Convention were to make contributions for the cause of higher education sponsored by the Church.

We are now in the midst of that period. Every church in the Convention has a vital interest in Elon College. We all recognize the value and importance of the College to our work and are willing to do our part toward its support.

The recent session of the Convention held in Suffolk, Va., asked the churches of the Convention to contribute a total of $12,500 for the support of Elon College. A number of our churches took this part of the Convention's budget seriously and raised the required amount. A detailed statement, showing amounts contributed by each local church to the College will appear in next week's CHRISTIAN SUN. The amounts contributed the past conference year totaled $6,431.57 or just a little more than fifty per cent of the amount required. This is a bit discouraging when you consider the position of the College in our whole organization, the type of work that it is doing, the absolute necessity of this particular kind of work to be done by some means if the Church is to continue to go forward and the distressingly meager funds that it has with which to do its work. I think that all will agree that the amount allotted to the College is pitifully small in comparison with its most economical needs and then when this amount is cut by nearly half in our giving the question necessarily arises as to where the College will turn for its support.

1. Endowment. Perhaps so, and this would be simple if we had a sufficient endowment. Our endowment has suffered during the depression just as practically all other values have. The book value of Elon's endowment is $461,000.00. The actual producing value is about $240,000. If the College could have the income from this amount for current demands its position would be more secure. All the endowment funds of the College were previously pledged to the cost of refinancing the College. Not one cent of income from invested funds can be used by the College other than for past obligations.

2. From Corporations and Foundations, etc., set up by philanthropic individuals for such purposes. These corporations and foundations are not interested in paying debts or helping institutions that do not pay their debts. They take the position that an institution that is not able to take care of its normal obligations should not be subsidized.

3. From friends who have money. The College does have such friends who help some but even they, however generous cannot carry the whole load and we don't want them to.

4. From the College itself, that is, from the students themselves. Tuition fees, room rent, etc. This has been the source of the major part of our income for current demands for the past few years. But this is entirely inadequate. The Liberal Arts Colleges of this country receive only about sixty per cent of their current demands from students. They must be subsidized by some means or other.

Our only hope for money with which to meet current accounts including faculty salaries must come from friends of the College and the churches of our Convention.

This is an appeal. A most earnest appeal to the pastors, officials and every member in every church in our Convention to please do something substantial for the College during this Education Period. Sunday, January 26th, has been designated College Day. Wont you, brother pastor, see that your church is duly informed of the needs of the college and that an offering is received. If not on January 26th, certainly at a convenient time during the Education Period. All amounts raised will be counted on your Conference apportionments.

WINCHESTER, VIRGINIA.

In spite of cold weather and several inches of snow, nearly two hundred people enjoyed the closing service of the series "Bible Scenes and Bible Themes" at the Congregational-Christian Church of Winchester, Virginia, Rev. Ivan R. Smith, pastor, on Sunday night, December 29th.

The church was beautifully and uniquely decorated for the Christmas season. A large scene representing the shepherds on the Judean hills, was stretched across the front of the church and at a certain time during the service, angels appeared in the scene, in the heavens above the shepherds. The choir loft was arranged as a miniature chapel, with a small white altar and white candles. In front of the choir loft were two window frames in white, covered with theatrical gauze. This gave the effect of the choir being in a small chapel, which was very pretty.

By request, "The Living Christmas Tree" portrayed by fifteen young ladies, which was given at the early morning service on Sunday, December 22nd, was given again.

A special feature of the service was the showing of a series of pictures entitled "A Trip Through Bible Land," with a lecture on the pictures given by the pastor.

Another special feature of the service was the "Living Pictures" which were depicted in the large Bible which was built in one corner of the church and which has been used during the entire series of "Bible Scenes and Bible Themes." These pictures were, "My Mother's Bible," "Ruth, Naomi and Ortha," "The Three Marys," and "The Annunciation to Mary." During the showing of the living pictures "My Mother's Bible," a dramatic reading was given. During the showing of the living pictures, "Ruth, Naomi and Ortha," and "The Three Marys," suitable music was played softly. During the showing of the living picture "The Annunciation to Mary," the angel who appeared to Mary, sang to the tune of "O Little Town of Bethlehem," appropriate words written by the pastor.

For the closing minutes of the service, both the real Christmas tree and the "Living Christmas Tree" were lit and while several carols were sung, closing with that old favorite "Silent Night, Holy Night," the Bible was opened and revealed the Babe. Amid a reverent hush, the benediction was given.

ELSIE MATHEWS.

AN APPRECIATION.

One of the most pleasant features of the Christmas season is that it calls forth beautiful sentiments of friendship and good will. The writer's heart has been made glad through the months of the year by the kind words and acts of friends. Especially was this true when on the third Sunday in December we were invited to return to the dining room of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Morris, where just a short while before we had enjoyed a well prepared and bountiful dinner. (These good people have dinner in the middle of the day and another in the evening.) We heard singing and on looking in we saw quite a crowd of young people of Mt. Olivet Church. They seemed to be happy, and there was every indication that what they were doing was done cheerfully. I also saw a table laden with packages which loaded our car the next morning.

Again, on Monday after the fourth Sunday, we found the members and friends of the Mayland Church had planned a surprise, which made us grateful to them and to our Heavenly Father, Who so abundantly provides for His children.

Space does not permit mention of the many articles received in the two "poundings." Suffice it to say that the donations included many good things for the pantry, cash, wearing apparel, candy, nuts, etc.

While the other churches of our charge have not taken "concerted action" as the churches mentioned above, quite a number of individuals have remembered us with gifts, including canned fruits and vegetables, sorghum, meats, apples, pears, etc. Words fail us to express our appreciation of these acts of good will. Perhaps our deepest appreciation may be shown by this New Year's resolution which we make as we write this on the evening of the new year: "To endeavor to live closer to the Lord than ever before, that we may serve Him better as we try to serve His people." In His strength we shall strive to keep this resolution.

LANETT, ALABAMA.

Dear Bro. Editor; Just a few words to let you all know that the Lowell Christian Church is still on the "map" under the leadership of Mrs. Otis Chase and the Misses Pollard Jean Breed and others who were loyal and helpful. A Christmas Program was rendered Christmas Eve Night. The church was beautifully and becomingly decorated with christmas colors. The stage presented a very beautiful appearance, a small "tree" just behind a decorated rope with the presents arranged on and under the table and on the seats nearby.

The program of recitations and songs was very impressive. The music was by the Lowell Quartette and was very appropriate.

Everybody received a gift and many hearts were made happy. The Ladies Christian Endeavor Society, The Christian Endeavor and the Young People's Missionary Society sponsored the program, which was very much enjoyed by all who were present.

On Christmas morning a goodly number met at the church at sunrise for a prayer meeting. This was a glorious meeting conducted by Bro. Joe Harris and a deeply spiritual atmosphere was manifest throughout the service. Christmas was very quiet and orderly here. It was great to see such a small amount of drinking and carousing. Surely the powers that be will soon see the real necessity for temperance. Prohibition is coming again or our country will have to pay the penalty and suffer the consequences. God speed the day when men will view life from a high point and when His Holy Church will raise the standard of morals so high that men who are down may look up and be saved. This is my prayer.

VALLEY LETTER.

I am dictating these few lines from my bed at home. I returned yesterday from the hospital where I spent four weeks, receiving while there three blood transfusions and undergoing a rather serious operation. I am recovering nicely though still very weak. I am able to sit up several hours each day.

I want to take this means of expressing my very grateful appreciation of the letters of confidence and friendship and prayers offered by the Eastern Virginia Congregational Christian Minister's Association and by the Piedmont Minister's Association. Such expressions of confidence on the part of my fellow ministers so far away are a great comfort to me. I want also to express my appreciation of the many cards and letters received from friends where I have preached and elsewhere. Such appreciations of friendship mean a great deal to one who is ill. My days of suffering have been greatly relieved by these many expressions of good will and confidence. I hope some day to be back in the work again and to render a much more effective and fruitful service than ever and in this way, at least in a measure, to prove myself worthy of the many nice things said to me and about me.

Praying God's richest blessings to rest upon all these friends and others, I am,

Respectfully,

A. W. ANDES.

WADLEY, ALABAMA.

The Congregational-Christian Church of Wadley has taken a forward step in the purchasing of a parsonage. The church has secured and remodeled a six-room building near the church to serve as a home for their minister. The Antioch and New Hope churches, which the Wadley pastor also serves contributed liberally to the remodeling of the building.

The families of the church met at the parsonage for a covered-dish supper on the evening of December 12th. The supper was followed by a service of dedication for the parsonage. This service was conducted by the pastor with the Rev. G. H. Veazey assisting.

The church is optimistic concerning its future. The pastor is pleased with the forward-looking spirit found in the church.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

GOOD CHEER FOR THE NEW YEAR.

A New Year always has many possibilities for good and evil. On the one hand politicians in power are vying with each other in predicting reasons for optimism, while their opponents paint dark pictures of what the future holds if there is not a change in governmental policies. Economic and moral leaders point out the social evils that weaken society and religious teachers deprecate the departure of young and old from the Way of God that leads to peace and prosperity.

It is easy to enumerate reasons for disappointment and discouragement and yet we search the horizon for some "cloud the size of a man's hand," for some basis for good cheer for ourselves and our neighbors. Is there any such basis that will not disappear as a mist, that does not rest on the quicksands of human instability?

In what seemed to be the darkest hour of the world's history, Jesus Christ told His disciples to "Be of good cheer" and gave them the reason (John 16:33). Those to whom He spoke were a small band of weak and unlettered peasants, without political influence or financial resources. They belonged to a subject nation, they were following a leader who was soon to be condemned to an ignominious death and they themselves were told that they must look forward to tribulation, persecution and death at the hands of their acknowledged religious and political leaders.

It was in the midst of this discouraging situation that their Master told His disciples to "be of good cheer." It was not an exhortation to shallow optimism, but to courage. The message is also for today. Conditions are bad enough but how much brighter than in the days just preceding the Crucifixion? Not only have science and learning made wonderful progress but the forces contending for righteous have greatly increased in number and power. The Church has grown in numbers and influence; it is organized for service and has able leaders and immense financial resources. Yet not such were the reasons Christ gave for courage then and they are not the true reasons for good cheer today.

The one reason given by the Son of God before He went to His death on the Cross was: "I have overcome the world." Whatever may be the seeming evidences of defeat for His Church today, the victory is assured. Christ declares that even the devil and all his hosts cannot overcome those who have faith to follow their divine Leader. There may be trials, persecution, suffering and physical death ahead today as there has been all through the years past. But Christ has overcome the world by His victory over temptation, by rising superior to worldly conditions, by overcoming evil with good. And His followers can enter into His victory and partake of His cheer. Is there any reason why Christians also cannot overcome the world, as martyrs and saints and servants of Christ have overcome in the past—by faith, by loyalty, by fighting the good fight of faith; by cooperation with Him in carrying out His program rather than adopt the program of worldly leaders. Christ's program includes full personal surrender, following the guidance of the Spirit of God, witnessing to Christ at home and abroad. Christians may "be of good cheer," not merely in spite of the dark outlook due to evil forces at work in the world, but because of the all-powerful wise and loving Eternal Spirit with which followers of Christ are allied. He is already victor.—Missionary Review of the World.

A GREAT MISSIONARY'S AMBITION.

William Carey listed the following guiding points for himself and his colleagues in the missionary enterprise:

1. To set an infinite value on human souls.
2. To abstain from whatever deepens India's prejudice against the Gospel.
3. To watch for every chance of doing good to the people.
4. To preach Christ as the means of conversions.
5. To esteem and treat Indians always as our equals.
6. To guard and build up the "hosts that may be gathered."
7. To labor incessantly in Biblical translation.
8. To be instant in the nurture of personal religion.
9. To give ourselves without reserve to the cause, not counting even the clothes we wear our own.

TO REVEAL GOD.

Christ came into the world to give mankind a better understanding of God. This was sadly needed. The Greeks were worshipping gods that were as weak and immoral as themselves. The Romans were building temples and offering sacrifices to their emperor. The Jews had clothed Him with great mystery, and had pushed Him back behind the veil, so that the average worshiper was led to think of Him as a God afar off. They remembered that He is holy, just and powerful, but they had not learned of His great love. By bridging the gulf between the unseen and the seen, between God and man, Christ brought God very near to us. He taught the world to pray, "Our Father," thus drawing mankind close enough to feel the everlasting arms.—Edgar T. Read.

PHILIP P. DUTTON, MISSIONARY.By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

The old phrase that "China never changes" is rapidly becoming obsolete, says Philip D. Dutton, New England man who is in Boston for his second furlough in 15 years of work under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and who comes from Taiku, Shansi, North China, the Province next to Hopei Province now figuring so prominently in the news.

In his reference to "changing China," Mr. Dutton has no thought of the forcible changes wrought by Japan but the progressive development which has been going on in that country now for several years and which would undoubtedly lead, within a gratifyingly short time, to a united China were she allowed to pursue her course peacefully.

Bumping over deeply rutted roads from daylight to dark, Mr. Dutton, when he first came to China in 1919, covered the 25 miles from the railroad station to Taiku in a springless cart. Now, he says, there are motor cars by the hundreds, rickshas by the thousands and bicycles by the tens of thousands. Taiku boasts two railways with eight passenger trains daily. Radio, almost unheard of and forbidden by the military in those days, now links Taiku with the outside world.

"It has been a troubled fifteen years in China's international relations, especially with regard to Japan," Mr. Dutton says. "The loss of Manchuria and Jehol was a staggering blow to China—both to her pride and to her economics. Japan's insistence upon control of the Great Wall as well leaves China unprotected on the north, for this historic barrier is North China's last great line of defense. Whoever holds the Great Wall, and the mountain tops along which it runs, is in a position to control the territory on either side. This fact is perhaps not fully appreciated by many in the west."

When Mr. Dutton left China conditions in the so-called "demilitarized zone" stretching from the Great Wall almost to Peiping and Tientsin were unspeakable. The section was overrun with bandits and Japanese and Korean narcotic peddlers with whom the Chinese were powerless to deal because of Japanese interference. The whole region he feels was a festering sore, a disgrace to Japan and a source of constant trouble to China.

"On the whole the Chinese are facing these situations patiently, philosophically and with an amazing amount of self control," Mr. Dutton states. "They realize their helplessness in the face of Japanese aggression and are determined to avoid trouble if possible. But feelings run deep. They recall with pride the days of China's greatness. At the same time the rapidly growing spirit of nationalism in China gives them courage to believe that Nippon cannot forever remain the self-appointed arbiter of the destinies of the Far East."

Since the revolution of 1911 China's history has been filled more or less with "family quarrels" or wars between military governors, disrupting railway service and business almost annually. These, however, are rapidly going out of style and Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek with his armies and airplanes makes rebellious units think twice before starting trouble. "Only the Reds still fear things open now and then, but their forces are dwindling and becoming scattered," Mr. Dutton states.

"China is now entering a new period—a period of reconstruction," Mr. Dutton believes. "There are those who severely criticize the Nanking Government and predict its failure and fall, but the consensus of opinion, both Chinese and foreign, is that it is the best government since the revolution of 1911.

Transportation and communications are improving steadily and civil and military officials make use of the network of air lines that cover the country carrying both passengers and mail. "The airplane, perhaps more than any other factor, has speeded up the unification of this vast country," adds Mr. Dutton. New railways are being built, new rolling stock makes its appearance. Motor roads are being constructed all over China. "It will not be long before one can drive by motor car almost anywhere in China. When that day comes the tourist will see some of the beauty spots of that country that have been hitherto practically inaccessible."

"Something new under the Chinese sun," is what Mr. Dutton calls Kiangsi Province in Central China, which now ranks as China's model province. In this formerly Red-infested section the General Government is undertaking rural reconstruction on a large scale. "The farmer is enjoying blessings of which he never dreamed before—a chance to work in peace and enjoy the result of his labors—a chance to be honestly and justly governed by officials who seek the welfare of the people, a chance to benefit from modern medicine, to learn to read about the world and to use better agricultural methods.

It is in this province that the National Christian Council of China was invited to lend a helping hand and is doing a splendid piece of rural reconstruction at Lichwan under Rev. George W. Shepherd, recently in Boston, and Rev. Hugh W. Hubbard of White Plains, N. Y.

Discrimination against Christian middle schools and colleges is largely a thing of the past. Rather the Government welcomes their help to the point sometimes of giving subsidies to such institutions as meet their requirements.

"Along with all this is growing a feeling of need for a new moral and spiritual life if China's modern experiment is to succeed. Therefore Chiang Kai-Shek has inaugurated the New Life Movement based on the old Confucian virtues. The Generalissimo and his charming and capable wife, a Wellesley College alumna, have visited all the provinces of North and Northwest China stressing the need for moral regeneration if China is to become great. All along the way they have asked the cooperation of the Christian missionaries in making the new Life Movement a success.

Although Mr. Dutton was born in Massachusetts he went to high school in Watertown, N. Y., and is a graduate of Oberlin College and Oberlin Theological seminary. Mrs. Dutton, a native of Sault Ste Marie, Michigan, is also a graduate of Oberlin and there are two sons, Thomas Dutton who is studying at Newton High School and Frank Dutton who is in the Levi Warren Junior High School, West Newton.

Out in China Mr. Dutton's work has necessitated extensive touring through the country areas, travelling hundreds of miles annually over rough trails on foot, on bicycle, or crude Peking cart and sometimes, if possible, on a motorcycle. He has lived in the poorly heated village homes, sleeping on the Chinese kang and eating whatever native food the country provided.

Because the mission where he has served has felt cruelly the reduction in force necessitated by the depression, Mr. Dutton has had to be a combination of district superintendent, circuit rider, pastor-at-large and general administrator for an area of some 70 by 25 miles with 15 organized Chinese churches, several preaching centers and a population of about 300,000. "To visit one mountain church 50 miles from Taiku," says Mr. Dutton, "requires a day's journey across the plain in a Peking cart and than a day or a day and a half by pack animal over rough mountain trails in some places so steep and dangerous that it is necessary to walk."

Not only have the Chinese people in the section where Mr. Dutton works had to go through this period of adjustment and scourge of banditry but they have had widespread and devastating floods and the fear of Japanese invasion to add to all their other local problems. In spite of everything, however, the Chinese Christian Church has stuck to its guns and even made progress against seemingly impossible barriers, says Mr. Dutton.

WORLD'S DAY OF PRAYER.

Each year our missionary societies join in the world-wide observance of the World Day of Prayer for missions and this year that day is February 28th. Every Society will want to begin in time to plan for this service which means so much to the mission cause in general and is one point on the standard of excellence.

The theme of the program this year is "On Earth Peace, Goodwill Toward Men."

Let us thank God for the growing and deepening consciousness of the need for peace and for the personal knowledge of Him who brings peace on earth.

Let us ask our Father to bless all peoples and their governments in the efforts to secure peace. May nations reconsider their ways and prepare for peace.

Let us pray that the church as the body of Christ may stand firm against race discrimination, social injustice, and war.

Let us pray that we, as individuals, may be willing to walk the Way of the Cross to secure peace in this our day.

From "The Call."

The programs are two cents each. The Young People's programs are also two cents each. Children's programs are one cent each. The Call, which is an invitation, may be ordered enough for your society free, a large poster (11 x 17) with date and announcement of the meeting is 5 cents.

All these supplies should be ordered from Commission on Missions, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

The Committee on Women's Work of the Foreign Missions Conference and the Council of Women for Home Missions prepare and publish the material, and with the cooperation of the National Council of Federated Church Women promote the annual observance of this universal Day of Prayer.

Let us all unite in this world-wide fellowship of worship and prayer.

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

GREETINGS, FRIENDS.

This is just a little late for New Year's greeting, but the wish is none the less sincere for health and happiness to all those who read this page.

Three months have passed since my pen furnished much for the page that carries my name as editor. During that time I have been learning in the school of silence. Duties had to be laid aside, and rest was a necessity. There was time to think, and just to be at ease. One of my sins that sent me away for rest cure was always trying to think. The mind seems to need some rest as well as the body. It should not be driven always, and certainly not at high speed. There may be sermons in stones and brooks and everything that one sees, but in my humble opinion preachers should sometimes see them just as stones and as brooks and not sermons. That is for his own well-being.

Those who read these columns may not have missed me while away, and I am inclined to believe that the material appearing while I had nothing to do with it was superior to what I put here, but I am delighted to be back in my office and able to shove a pen or rattle a typewriter. Sickness is not altogether bad. It has many compensations. But health is far superior. It is a thing worth striving to obtain and maintain. To be visited by one's friends is good, but to visit and to work with them is glorious.

My wish for you this new year, my friends, is that yours may be a busy year in the service of the Christ, that there will be enough struggle to keep you strong, that friends will increase in quality and quantity, that wealth and poverty combine to keep you comfortable and humble, and that the next New Year will find you much further on the road to permanent success.

YOUR CHRISTMAS CONFERENCE.

Sixty-two young people and their leaders representing Virginia, the Carolinas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida met in the Congregational Church of Winter Park, Florida, on December 27th-29th, last, for their second Christmas Conference. It was the finest time in the history of Congregational-Christian Churches in the southeast that representative young people from every Conference in the southeast had met to plan and pray together.

From Friday night until far into Sunday night these young people worked together in trying to understand the world in which they live, the part they should have in making it a better place in which to live, and in developing plans for cooperative work. The program as planned (and published on this page recently) was carried out, except for minor changes. It was not a speech-making affair, but rather a consulting group. People from Virginia were interested in what was going on in Florida, and vice versa. Every conference group made its contribution, and all were enriched. In small groups these young people studied modern problems and sought to reach conclusions as to things that can be done to improve society. In each session there was apparent a yearning desire to find the way of Christ in the world of which we are part. Prayer seemed appropriate in any session. Good fellowship was manifest on every hand.

Reports of the discussion groups will be published in a later issue of this paper, and will be sent in pamphlet form to all Youth Fellowship officers in the southeast. Others desiring a copy of the pamphlet should send their request to the new secretary, Miss Emily Carleton, 541 Osceola Avenue, Winter Park, Fla.

The Winter Park Church entertained in fine southern style. The pastor and his young people proved to be charming hosts. All the delegates were delighted to spend a while in this beautiful city where citrus fruits, blooming flowers, beautiful sunshine, and Christian fellowship are found in abundance.

Those who have any misgivings about the youth of today should take a look-in on a gathering of this kind. It will do the soul good. We who are older will doubtless not agree with many of their conclusions, but we will be stimulated by their idealism and eagerness to get right at the business of making a Christian world. Many of our Conference officers could take counsel with these youths on how to conduct a meeting to the profit of the annual sessions of the Conferences. I came from Florida with new hope for the Church. In the hands of these Christ-led youths who will soon be adults, the Church is safe.

LABELS.

Today I heard a brilliant man speaking about the Oxford Movement. His message was fine. He tells a good story. For him religion has become vital, and that is a good thing. It ought to be for everyone. But for many it is not. For Jesus it was. And it is for all who really know Him.

While the man was speaking I wondered why we have to be introduced to the religion of Jesus as the religion of the Oxford Group. Why so many labels? What difference does it make whether one is a modernist or a fundamentalist? How much better is a Baptist than a Presbyterian? Aren't Congregationalists Christians? How do Protestants know that Catholics are all wicked and headed for destruction? or the other way around? Why is a Democrat more honest than a Republican? Or maybe is it the other way, who knows? Why can't one have his own convictions, vote them, and live them without having to wear a label? Who knows? Well, I am sure that I don't, and I do not know who does.

The main point is to have something for which one can live and die, something that is worthy of his best, and then give himself wholly to that something. I recommend the religion of Jesus as taught in the Gospels. That is modern, fundamental, and universal. It is free to all. Try it, and forget the labels.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

During the months of January and February will be a fine time to talk about leadership training, and to plan to go to the training school held at Elon College each summer.

I am asking all Superintendents and leaders of the Congregational-Christian Churches in the Eastern N. C., Conference to try and procure at least one person from each of their Churches to attend the leadership training school this coming summer.

It is not only a privilege, but it is an important duty of the superintendent of the Sunday schools to encourage their pupils to attend this school, held for the purpose of training boys and girls to be better prepared leaders.

If the pastor or superintendents will send me the names of those who are expecting to attend the training school next summer, I will know how to work more effectively in the future than I have in the past.

May God help us to lead lost souls to Christ.

MAYLON D. WATKINS.

Saturday—Our eternal home. I Peter 1:3-5.

Instrumental Prelude: "I would Be Like Jesus."

Call to Worship:

"Oh that I never had gone astray!
Life was all radiant with hope one day,
Now all its treasures I've thrown away,
Yet I'll arise and go;
Something is saying, 'God loves you still,
Tho' you have treated His love so ill,'
I must not wait for the night grows chill,
I will arise and go Back to my Father and home."

Hymn: "O Jesus, I Have Promised."

Prayer.

Points for Talks.

Obviously there are various ways of being "lost." The Bible indicates this. Immediately one thinks of Judas Iscariot, the rich young ruler, and others who went away without hope. There are others whose night of despair gives way to the morning of a new day. On the scroll of reclaimed souls one finds the names of Zacchaeus, Peter, and the prodigal son. One gropes in uncertainty and is lost, another has never utilized his God-given ability and is lost, still another rebels against the way of Christ and is lost.

If it be true that there are many ways of being "lost," certainly it is equally true that there are as many ways of being "found." Many young people are lost today, lost in various relationships. A great multitude whom no man can number are wandering aimlessly in the forest of time with no goal in life to challenge and steady their steps. Other unfortunate people in middle life have drifted, tossed to and fro from one position to another, and have experienced something of the outer darkness with its weeping and gnashing of teeth. A world of reforms and recoveries still has its quota of moral derelicts, out of harmony with the ways of men and the will of God.

Our scripture teaches us that the sheep was lost, but was found and brought tenderly back to the fold by the shepherd, who called in his friends to rejoice with him. The woman lost her coin and searched for it until she found it, and then called in the neighbors to rejoice with her. The prodigal son was found when he "came to himself" and returned to his father, who also called his neighbors to rejoice with him. If the shepherd and woman had cause for rejoicing, how much more so the father had cause for rejoicing over the return of his wayward son. Like the father of the prodigal son, our Heavenly Father rejoices when His children find themselves and return to Him.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

A PROPHETIC VISION.

LESSON II.—JANUARY 12, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Mine eyes have seen thy salvation, Which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples. Luke 2:30, 31.

LESSON TEXT: Luke 2.

The first part of the lesson is the story of the birth of Jesus, told with historical accuracy and in beautiful language. But because this part of the second chapter of Luke has already been used as a Christmas lesson it is not necessary to discuss it again here. Suffice it to say that it is an old, old story which is ever new. Time will never detract from its power of appeal, which is always fresh and powerful.

The last part of the lesson is the story of Jesus' first visit to Jerusalem, of his separation from his parents, and of their finding him in the Temple. But this section of the Scripture lesson will not be treated in these Notes, for they are really not an integral part of the lesson on the theme. A Prophetic Vision. These comments therefore will deal primarily with the story of the aged Simeon and the Baby Jesus when He was presented in the Temple.

According to the Law of Moses.

Jesus came from God-fearing parents and a religious background. He was, of course, the Son of God. But he grew up in a human situation and he was trained by human beings. One cannot explain the life of Jesus satisfactorily if he leaves out of the situation the influence and the training of Joseph and Mary, especially Mary for it was the Hebrew mother who had the responsibility for training the children. Joseph must have made a good impression on Jesus, too, for He used the term "father" in a new sense because of his respect for Joseph. Mary and Joseph saw to it that they observed the Jewish law. Obedience to God was gladly and graciously given. This act of presenting the baby Jesus in the Temple was not an isolated act—it was in keeping with the spirit of devotion to what they knew was the highest and best.

The Secret of the Lord.

"The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him." Here was an old man, Simeon by name, just and devout—fair in his dealings with his fellowman, reverent in his dealings with God,—waiting for the consolation of Israel, waiting with that deathless hope which was so characteristic of the pious Jew, that God would visit and deliver his people, Israel. Outwardly things did not look any too bright in Simeon's day. There was a great deal of pessimism abroad. But deep down in Simeon's heart there was a great longing for the coming of the Messiah, the "consolation of Israel." There are those today, who in a world which seems to be confused and confounded, still believe that there is a living God, and that He will work out his purposes in the world.

The old man was justified in his hope. The Spirit of God had revealed to him that he should yet see the fulfilment of his hope. Indeed the Holy Spirit had revealed unto him that he would not die before he had seen the Christ himself. And he believed that it would be as God had spoken unto him. There are times that we cannot do anything but trust. The odds seem so hopeless. But God will in His due time keep His promises. He is not slack concerning His promises. All things are possible to him that believes.

"And he came by the Spirit into the temple." That was the secret of it all. He entered into the place of worship in the high mood of worship. He was in the Spirit. His heart was expectant, his heart was prepared. He was walking on tip-toe spiritually. He was alert and responsive to the Spirit of God. It makes a difference as touching the mood in which we go into the Temple on the Lord's Day, or on any day. One reason why so many people do not take anything from a service of worship is because they do not bring anything to the service. Let him who enters the house of God prepare his heart to seek the Lord.

The Baby Jesus.

The baby Jesus did not have a halo about his head. He looked like any other Hebrew baby. But there was that inner impression on the heart of the old man that made him know that here, indeed was the Lord's Christ. With what emotions he must have looked at that Baby! Here was the fulfilment of his hopes that at times must have seemed so dim and hopeless. Simeon was overcome. He rushed to the parents, took the Baby Jesus into his arms, and burst forth into a spontaneous song born of the Spirit, which has become immortal because Luke the beloved physician found it among the sources he used in writing his gospel and included it in that gospel.

There is something impressive and touching in the picture of the old man and the baby. Old age, a generation that was passing, a baby, a generation just coming on the scene. In that Child was gathered up the hopes and dreams of all the ages. No wonder Simeon was now content to depart. His cup indeed had run over.

Another Song.

How intimately song was connected with the baby Jesus. Mary sang when the angel revealed to her that she should bear the Christ Jesus. Angels sang at His birth. And now the aged Simeon sings at his presentation in the Temple. That Baby set the world to singing. He struck a note of joy which lies beyond the power of men and circumstances to touch.

"Mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples—it is the gospel for the whole world. "A light for revelation to the Gentiles. Jesus was and is the Light of the world. "The glory of thy people Israel." The Jews have made many contributions to the world, but their chief glory is the Lord Jesus Christ.

"Behold this child is set for the falling and the rising of many in Israel—Christ has exalted multitudes, but He has been a stone of stumbling to those who have refused to yield their lives to Him. He is the standard by which men rise or fall. "And a sword shall pierce through thine own soul"—those words found fulfilment in Mary's own life. As she saw the growing tide of opposition, and when finally she stood by the Cross of her son, she must have thought of the words of the aged Simeon. No one knows what grief she did carry in her heart especially in the closing days of His ministry.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"LET US ALONE."

"Let us alone; what have we to do with Thee?"
—Mark 1:24.

The spirit of today seems to be the same spirit which in Jesus' time was called a "demon." Man is saying to man, "Let me alone." Politics says to politics, "Let us alone." The world is saying to religion "Let us alone." Man is saying to the church, "Let me alone." It is a spirit of self-sufficiency in which men think they can run their own business without advice from Divine sources.

They who think that they can run their own business and figure out their own salvation, reduce Christ to a mere man, just a mere good example, and reduces the Bible to a fairy tale good for weak-minded people and children. They deny the fact of Divine transformation, the new life, the purifying power of Christ to society, the power to change the thoughts and customs of life, the power to make hearts better, the power to make man a loving brotherly being; all of which are established facts of the Christian religion.

A further fact challenges successful contradiction: all this power to transform, make new, purify, change thought and make better, comes from God through Christ, whether it is so recognized or not. It never comes from self. And if we are let alone we are on the skids of spiritual and soul loss..

Prayer—Our Father, Thy word rings in our ears louder than ever, that "if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." We pray Thee to make it ring a reality in our souls. We would this day embark more seriously upon following our Master and Saviour, and go about doing good. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"LIFE'S BEST DAY."

"We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day."—Jno. 9:4.

This is the way Christ improved His opportunity for doing good on the earth. It is the way the apostles took the mantle of apostolic responsibility and carried it on. It is the way for us.

Ralph Waldo Emerson:

"Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year. No man has learned anything rightly until he knows that every day is doomsday. Today is a king in disguise. Today always looks mean to the thoughtless, in the face of an uniform experience that all good and great and happy actions are made up precisely of these bland todays. Let us not be so deceived, let us unmask the king as he passes."

Prayer—O Thou most high, who hast set the glory of man in the heavens, give us the power to put the highest price on ourselves. May no act cheapen us, no habit mar our character; and may everything we do redound to thy honor and glory.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"FAITH."

A Prayer by John Oxenham.

"Lord give me faith—to live from day to day
With tranquil heart; to do my simple part.
And with my hand in Thine, just go Thy way.

"Lord give the faith—to trust if not to know;
With quiet mind in all things Thee to find;
And child-like go where Thou wouldst have me go.

"Lord give faith—to leave it all to Thee.
The future is Thy gift, I would not lift
The veil Thy love has hung twixt it and me."
Amen.

THURSDAY.

"PASS IT ON."

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

Have you received a kindness or a blessing from others? Remember it was not given to you for you alone. Let it travel on until you meet it in heaven a star in your crown.

Have you received some heavenly light, and did you ever see some soul groping in darkness? Let your light shine for him. "Be a star for someone's sky," perchance you may show him the way to his success and happiness.

It is selfish to keep all your blessings to yourself. The Bible says, "Look Thou on other's needs." The poet said:

"Live for self, and you live in vain;
Live for Christ, and you live again;
Live for Him, and with Him reign."

Prayer—Dear Father, take away from our hearts every doubt of Thy goodness and mercy. Instill in us an eager passion to do Thy will, a will to let that light shine for others and shine on with undiminished faith in Thee and supply an entrance to Thy Kingdom.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of his might. Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."—Eph. 6:11.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life."—Jas. 1:12.

"When things first got to goin' wrong, I says, 'Oh, Lord, whatever comes keep me from gettin' sour!' Since then I've made it a practice to put all my worries down in the bottom of my heart, then sit on the lid and smile."

—From "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Prayer—O Lord, Thou art our light and our strength. Whatever we lack be thou our completeness, that we may be found steadfast, unmovable against temptation and always abounding in Thee.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"HEWN DOWN."

"Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—Mat. 7:15-23.

Many of us are content with living lives that are not bad. But that is not enough; they must be good. It does not suffice that a tree of life shall bear nothing but leaves; it must bear fruit as well, good fruit and much fruit.

In the East, trees are planted not for their beauty and not because they give shade, but because they give food. Beauty and shade are by-products. So are they by-products of a life. Our lives must feed others.

Christ's words have a stern ring: "hewn down," "cast into the fire." Lack of fruit calls for punishment. We are put into this world not merely to exist, but to do something; not merely to grow, but to be a blessing.

Prayer—So only wilt Thou bless us, our Saviour. Thou hast bidden Thy followers to "bear much fruit." Why should we not, if we are rooted in Thee, if we are branches of the True Vine?
Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"GOD'S GREAT THINGS."

"Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice; for Jehovah hath done great things."—Joel 2:21-27.

Do we rejoice in the greatness of our God? Do we realize the splendor of His works? Do we even begin to comprehend the fulness of His wisdom? Have we yet the faintest idea of the majesty of His glory?

If our earthly father were the sovereign of a mighty realm, we should be glad and rejoice in him; yet every Christian is the child of a King. Why do we not exult in the kingdom that is ours because it is our heavenly Father's?

All history is full of the divine triumphs. Our God has exalted kings and has put them down; he has established kingdoms and he has destroyed them; he has filled the world with blessings for His followers and with penalties for his adversaries. Why should we not be glad and rejoice in the works of His hands?

Prayer—Son of God, O Thou Most High, lift us up beside Thee on Thy throne. May we be proud, not of anything we have done, for we have done nothing, but of the wonderful things that Thou has done. So shall we rejoice all our days.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

ANTICIPATION PRAISE.

In all his prayers thanksgiving rose
For blessings that had filled his days,
While present mercies manifold
Stirred mind and heart to grateful praise.

For sins forgiven, for home and friends,
For daily bread, for birds and flowers,
For sunlight, starlight, Sabbath rest,
Prayer, Sacred Word, enriching hours!

And then one day his prayer attained
A deeper grace, a wider field;
He voiced his praise for good unmet,
For blessings untried hours would yield.

In early morn thanksgiving rose
For all the Father would provide—
The work, the food, the strength to serve—
All would be well, whate'er betide.

The fellowship of friends would bless,
Some book would add its meed of joy,
While he would give his humble store
To share in some Divine employ.

For play refreshing, wholesome fun,
For health and strength, or weakness, pain,
Thanksgiving rose with perfect trust
That Love in wisdom would ordain.

For Christ Himself, the source of all,
The Love, the Faith, the Life, the Power,
The same tomorrow as today—
Expectant wait the coming hour!

Anticipation rich was his;
Each day would fresh assurance bring
That all worked good when one in love
Went journeying with his friend The King!

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE POWER OF SILENCE.

By REV. CARL R. KEY.

"He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth."—Isaiah 53:7.

"When Pilate therefore hear that saying, he was the more afraid; And went again into the judgment hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer."—John 19:8-9.

Silence is an art that few man have learned. It is evidence of a flood-tide of power. The possessor of same is armed for many battles that appear overwhelming. Listen to Lord Chesterfield as he speaks—"Silence and reserve suggest latent power. What some men think has more effect than what others say." Mighty is he who can stand in the face of certain death and remain silent. Great is the innocent man who faces his accusers with the sword of silence and parries with them. Much to be admired is he who can think the deepest thoughts of the universe and the abiding truths and principles of human living and act accordingly.

Our forerunner in this realm is none other than Jesus who "could be silent and hear the whisperings of the gods," of God the Father of us all. The sorrows, the griefs, the transgressions, the iniquities and chastisements of our peace were placed upon Him ages ago and he bore them silently. As Isaiah clearly foresaw He bore oppression and affliction, "yet he opened not his mouth." Jesus stood in Pilate's hall accused by the mob. Accused of what! Accused of the truth, shall we say? He had declared himself the Son of God. For this and for false accusations he faced the mob. They cried—"Crucify Him." His silence shook the very soul of Pilate, the Roman Governor, who had decided to turn him over to the teeming masses. Pilate asked, "Whence art thou?" "But Jesus gave him no answer."

Amid a raging sea of human emotions and passions Jesus stood silent. This silence pierced not the mob but it gave him a chance to steel himself for the coming storm. Jesus had come as the "Mouth-Piece of God." He had preached repentance and redemption. He had pointed the way to many weary souls. His healing touch had brought renewed strength to a number of needy ones. By remaining silent in the Judgment Hall he would become the Redeemer of Humanity. This action would make possible for a host of men to serve as the "Mouth-Pieces of God" in ages to come. Meek as a lamb he allowed himself to be taken, refusing to use the divine power at his command to stay the hand of an ungodly people ready to spill innocent blood.

Finally the storm broke. Still silent about the power which was to come to him and his quest after crucifixion, burial, resurrection and ascension, "He was led away as a lamb to the slaughter." It was an hour of decision. It was one of the greatest moments in the history of Christianity. Civilization was at the cross-roads. Christ's decision did much to make possible the salvation of humanity. He had a priceless gift for the world but loudness would have destroyed its value at the moment. Jesus allowed the folly of the occasion to dissipate itself upon idle words and mockery. "He was brought as a sheep before his shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth."

Like the sheep Jesus had a gift for mankind and he was determined to place it at his disposal.

God speaks through silence. Jesus knew that man's mind was a product of the silence of God. The mind silently directs and controls the actions and words of God's children. They bespeak of the activity of God in the human organism. It is evidence of "the still small voice of calm." The silence of God functioning through the brain of man is mightier than the silence of electricity. Electricity itself is an incomprehensible, silent power but harnessed aright by the ingenuity of man it moves mighty turbines and myriads of spindles, brings the harmonies of great symphonies to the ear, sends trains speeding across the continent and covers the world with wire, auto, radio and aeroplane.

In silence the mountains lift their hoary heads and bespeak of God. Their breasts are covered with trees which show silently each season that God is nigh. The multicolored autumn tints lift one into the presence of the Almighty. Out of the deep silence comes a consciousness of the Father.

Far and near, faint and clear,
Out of the deep silence
God calls His children dear.
Comes calm, anxious response—
"Dear Father, we are here."

Like the leap of electricity upon carrier wires and like the response of nature at the touch of the Creator, the Soul of Jesus leaped upward and outward at the opportunity of giving himself for the cause of suffering and shame in the world. Isaiah pictures him as the Suffering Saviour. To this end he lived and died. Jesus was a past master in the use of his tongue and speech. He used the choicest language and the most concise, poetic, wise sayings of all time. In was an art to him. The use of silence was an art for him. He, too, allowed his soul to feast on nature and its silence. Aloneness was practiced often by the Master. Often we find him alone in the evening in the desert, or mountains or garden praying. Solitude was his big brother and teacher. Methinks the words of a German Proverb fitted him well—"Speech is silence, silence is golden: speech is human, silence is divine." When the Master answered the mob and Pilate with closed lips he showed by action what Addison expresses so beautifully: "Silence never shows itself to so great an advantage as when it is made the reply to calumny and defamation."

Jesus well knew that upon occasions silence was a shining virtue when compared to the use of thoughtlessness and injurious words. Today that virtue seems to be lost in the midst of all our mad rush. To most of mankind the art of silence is obsolete or has vanished. It is only a pleasant memory. Upon this fact hinges the loss of reverence for the Eternal. We long for the days of yester-year but they are gone forever. We have lost our grip on God. With fleeting time we move along, craving intimacy with the beneficent, all-wise and merciful Jehovah. When pain and grief comes we cry out so that men may see. When temptation comes we yield. But the Master went up into an high mountain alone. He could be closer to God alone, in the vast reaches of silence. The power of silence he well knew.

Great will be the day when human souls learn the art and power of silence. Floodlights of joy will beam on the countenance of individuals who practice it. To this end many of our great ministers moved. F. W. Robertson declares that "A silent man is easily reputed wise. The unknown is always wonderful. A man who suffers none is to see him in the common jostle and address of life easily gathers round him a mysterious veil of unknown sanctity, and men honor him for a saint." We need more saints. If silence is the highroad to sainthood would to God that men

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Rejoice with me! We reached our goal of $18,000.00 for 1935. Our report this week carries us up to $18,050.35. It always makes us feel happy to reach our goal for the year. We have had faith since the first day of 1935, when we set the goal, to believe we would reach it. We have always had faith in our church people and friends of the Orphanage to believe they would see to it that we reached the goal set.

It is an easy thing to set a goal but it is an entirely different thing to reach it. It takes a lot of planning and a lot of working the plan to make everything work out at the end of the year.

I appreciate every contribution large or small that has been sent in by churches, Sunday schools, or individual gifts. Everyone helped us to reach our goal. We invite you to rejoice with us in accomplishing the thing we set out the first of the year to do. May God bless each and every one who had a part.

The mouth is the avenue to the soul. It is the inlet for food that rebuilds strength. It is also the outlet for both the mind and the soul. Out of it issue the thoughts upon which civilization is erected and also destroyed. Out of it comes words of wisdom, peace, goodwill and love. But there is something in the mouth which can obstruct the pathway to the soul. It can damn all the beauties that proceed from the heart. Billions of gallons of water are held in check by a tremendous dam across the river. The tongue may block the streams of wisdom, peace, goodwill and love.

This counsel is best to follow when dealing with a fiery tongue. "Beware the tongue that's set on fire of hell, and flames in slander, falsehood, perjury, in malice, idle talking, thoughtless tales; speak not too much, nor without thought; let truth in all things small or great, dwell on thy lips. Remember, God hath said, 'He that in word offends not, is a perfect man; while he that bridles not his tongue deceives himself and shows his faith in vain!'" "A wound from a tongue is worse than a wound from a sword. The latter affects only the body, but the former affects the spirit."

"The cure of an evil tongue must be done at the heart. The weights and wheels are there, and the clock strikes according to their motion. A guileful heart makes a guileful tongue and lips. It is the work-house where is the forge of deceptions and slanders; and the tongue is only the outer shop where they are vended, and the door of it. Such ware as is made within, such, and no other, can come out." "Out of the heart are the issues of life." It is fitting then that we keep the avenue of real living open and free from all obstruction. The issues of life may be beautiful stones, polished and fitted together like a great mosaic. The tongue can place them in position one by one and they may become something enchanting to behold. Then they will bear a silent message of the creative genius back of them. They will stand as a monument to the originator claiming for him the honor and glory due anyone who ruleth his tongue.

Emerson exclaims: "What a strange power there is in silence! How many resolutions are formed, how many sublime conquests effected, during that pause when lips are closed and the soul secretly feels the eye of her Maker upon her!—They are the strong ones of earth who know how to keep silence when it is a pain and a grief unto them, and who give time to their own souls to wax strong against temptation."

When one breaks the silence that surrounds them they not only open a highroad to the heart but the pathway to the brain becomes a beaten highway at once. We open to the world our workshop. Both strength and weakness are made plain. Thus we should guard our thoughts so that we may control the issues of life and sweeten the emotions. Delany once said, "Think all you speak, but speak not all you think.—Thoughts are your own; your words are so no more." Once words are spoken they are borne about in stormy seas and we can never recall them. Our thoughts are precious jewels that should be treasured. Only clear, concise, prudent use of words lead us far in life.

The brain is the seat of the human dynamo. This power unit controls the whole organism. If we do not think aright the organism is thrown out of kelter. This disturbance disarranges the whole body and results in chaos. If the mouth is to remain the Golden Gate to the innermost recesses of the soul and house the tongue the brain must be clear. If a man is to remain one of the "silver-tongued" he must be sure that everything that issues from the heart is ready to pass the Golden Gate without collecting any excess baggage. Anyone who enters the sanctity of silence in these members must have a passport to go through the "Golden Gate." "He gave him no answer." "He opened not his mouth."

It is not God's will that one of His children should be "lost" and perish. His desire for our eternal life was so great that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish. To be "lost" is to be separated from God eternally. To be "found" is to live with Him in Eternity. No man cometh unto the Father but by Christ. He is the Way, the Truth and the Life.

There are multitudes who, unlike the prodigal son, never come to repentance and are "lost." We must seek for them, and show them the Way. Some unfortunate one, call him "lost" or find some better word if you choose, may await a saviour in you.

Sentence Prayers.

To Start the Discussion—

1. What did Jesus mean when He used the words "lost" and "found"?
2. In what way can we help a friend who is "lost" to find himself?
3. What was Jesus' method of restoring the lost?

Special Music: "The Ninety and Nine."

DANVILLE CHURCH BURNED.

A long distance message at 5:00 P. M., Sunday, December 29th, brought the very regrettable information that the young people's division and Sunday school rooms of our Danville Church were completely destroyed by fire following the morning service of the 29th, and that the main auditorium was very seriously damaged, much of it being burned before the fire company got the flames under control. The supposition was that the building had taken fire from a defective flue somewhere in the building. The loss is only partly covered by insurance. The Young People's Department, completely burned, had only been completed and in use for a year, so it constitutes quite a loss. Rev. M. T. Sorrell, the pastor, and his people had sacrificed most nobly to put on this needed addition to the building, and we bespeak for them the sympathy and the help of SUN readers, generally, as we feel sure the building will have to be put back at the earliest possible date in order to accommodate the large Sunday school and church attendance. Pastor Sorrell and his people have our sympathy in their great loss.

OBITUARIES

KELLER.

Charles Edward Keller was born September 21, 1864 and died November 22, 1935, aged 71 years, 2 months and one day. Brother Keller was a faithful and loyal member of Palmyra Christian Church and was held in high esteem by the entire community. His death means a distinct loss both to the church and to the community. He is survived by his widow who has the sympathy of a host of friends in this, her time of loneliness and loss.

Funeral services were held at Palmyra, November 24, 1935, and the remains laid to rest in the cemetery at Edinburg, Virginia.

A. W. ANDES.

CARTER.

Mrs. Annie Carter of Lanett, Alabama, departed this life December 29, 1935 at the age of 34 years. She was the wife of Bro. Charley Carter, and the mother of four children, three of whom survive her.

Besides her immediate family she leaves to mourn a father, mother, one brother and several sisters as well as a host of friends and relatives.

Sister Carter was a fine Christian woman, interested in her church and community. It was beautiful to see how devotedly her family attended her. All that tender hands and loving hearts could do could not stay the hand of death.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Penn, assisted by the writer. The interment was in Lanett Cemetery.

The Southeast and Elon College.—

If there had been no depression, there might have been an entirely different story to tell of Elon College. Certainly there are many individuals in the Congregational-Christian Church throughout the Southeast who would have different personal stories to tell. But, regardless of depression, each has carried on. Only three years ago, it seemed impossible that Elon College could survive, but back of the dense clouds, those who loved Elon and were willing to work for her, saw a tinge of silver. Dr. Leon Edgar Smith, at sacrifice to himself, left the work of the pulpit which he loved and undertook to attempt the job of placing Elon where she might carry on for our Church that most necessary of Missionary activities—the preparing of our ministers, and our laymen as well, for leadership in the Church. When Dr. Smith first took the helm, Elon had an indebtedness of over $600,000.00, her credit was gone, the faculty was unpaid, the student body small, and the prestige Elon had enjoyed almost gone. Today there is at Elon College a student body of over 450, she has an excellent faculty, and through the tireless efforts of Dr. Smith and a small group of helpers, her debt has been reduced by nearly three-fourths.

So far the “rebuilding” of Elon has been of such a nature that the work must of necessity be done by a small group. Now the picture changes, and if Elon is to continue to lead our Church in the Southeast, each and every individual in the Southern Convention must concern himself about her welfare. Elon has a small endowment fund, which is still tied up by the existing indebtedness. She needs not less than a Million Dollar Endowment to do the work which her constituency demands of her. But it is a fact that those agencies that might contribute to such an endowment are hesitant to do so while the present indebtedness hangs over her.

This brings the challenge direct to you. What are you going to do about the future of Elon College? The question is not for the other fellow to answer, but for YOU! Even though you may be one of the many who have little money to contribute, you may have an idea that will be worth much to the College; you may speak a word to some friend that will bear fruit for the College; you can help to make our Southern Church constituency Elon-minded.

It is for this reason that a mass meeting has been called in the First Christian Church of Henderson, North Carolina, on Thursday morning, January 23, 1936, at 10 o'clock. It will be impossible for the authorities of Elon to issue individual invitations to each member of the Church and of Elon's Alumni, but it is hoped by them that everyone who has the interest of the College at heart and can come, will. Be certain to see that your church is represented at this meeting.

This will not be a meeting to raise money, but it will be one at which plans for cancelling the present indebtedness of Elon will be laid. Study the situation before you come, and be ready to express yourself. How do you think the money can best be raised—your plan may be the ideal one. A campaign must be put on—how shall that campaign be conducted? Elon belongs to your Church. Elon is your College, Elon needs you now.

Do not forget the day and the place—Thursday, January 23rd, at 10 o'clock, in the First Christian Church of Henderson, North Carolina. Let's go forward together.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

February 26, 1936, has been set apart as the date for the World Day of Prayer, the theme for meditation and prayer on this day to be "Peace on earth, goodwill towards men." It is hoped that this day will be widely observed in homes and churches, societies and groups throughout the world.

THE SUN'S "Observatory," this week, is dedicated to the special meeting to be held in the First Christian Church of Henderson, N. C., on Thursday, January 23rd. What we have tried to say there is that there is need for a united effort on the part of those who love Elon, to place the College in a position to which it is entitled and which is necessary if it is to continue its work of leadership. Did we put the message across to you?

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor, reports that the addition to our Reidsville Church has been entirely enclosed with walls and roof, and that while the work of finishing is being held up for the time being, the prospect is promising that at an early date this large accession to the building will be completed. He and his people are working on cash basis and planning, when the work is done, to have the same paid for—not a bad idea in any business.

January and February are College months—the period of the year when the churches are called upon to make known to their membership the needs and achievements of Elon and give all the people an opportunity to make their contribution. In several of the Conferences there is an apportionment for the College, and the special offering in this period will count on that apportionment. Every church should certainly seek to reach its apportionment for this most worthy and needy enterprise.

Rev. M. T. Sorrell, pastor of our Danville, Va., Church, writing further about the fire which destroyed the church school rooms of the building and so damaging the main auditorium that it cannot be used, says: "We are going to have hard sailing for awhile, but we are still persuaded 'All things work together for good to them that love God.' We are fortunate in having a nearby school building that we can use until we are able to replace our building. We had 336 in Sunday school yesterday (January 6th) and two large congregations for worship. We do not have any idea when we will be able to get back into our own building, not before March or April."

THE SUN'S editor was in the service with Pastor J. E. Neese at his Shallow Ford Church, Sunday, the 12th. Brother Neese starts the year's work well. At a church conference prior to the Sunday service it was decided by the church to endeavor to raise for each enterprise of the church the amount apportioned by Conference during the period set aside for this purpose. The occasion last Sunday was the Communion Service, and the pastor delivered a very helpful message, preparing the minds and hearts of his people for this sacred service. The offering for Ministerial Relief, to supplant the Christmas offering, was taken and the full amount apportioned to the church was raised. If the churches follow the plan adopted by Brother Neese and his people, there will not have to be high pressure methods and desperate begging to meet Conference apportionments at the close of the year.

THE TWELFTH WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The World's Sunday School Convention to be held in Oslo, Norway, next July, will be the twelfth of these great world gatherings of Sunday school workers held within the last fifty years. Former Conventions have met in London, Glasgow, Zurich, Rome, Jerusalem, Tokyo, St. Louis, Washington, Los Angeles, and Rio de Janeiro. They have greatly aided the Sunday school cause the world over.

Among those who are to participate in the Convention program at Oslo are Sir Harold Mackintosh of England, Dr. James Kelly of Scotland, Toyohiko Kagawa of Japan, Dr. Chester S. Miao of China, Professor G. Baez Camargo of Mexico, Dean Luther A. Weigle and Dr. Robert M. Hopkins of the United States. The Convention is being sponsored in Norway by His Majesty, King Haakon VII, and the Rt. Rev. Johan Lunde, Bishop Primate of the State Church in Norway.

It is announced that the Convention will be composed of thirty-two hundred delegates representing every country in the world to which the Sunday School has gone. The allotment to the United States and Canada is seven hundred delegates.

HOW JESUS MADE CHOICES.

We have no record where Jesus ever went to the flaunted aristocracy of the world for His best friends or His best helpers. He always rated people by their goodness rather than by their material possessions. Having come from the humble environment of life Himself, He was well acquainted with the conditions of a frugal rural life; and it was from this class that He chose His disciples. No doubt one of the greatest handicaps to a serviceable Christian discipleship is the desire for worldly achievement and worldly pleasure. It is much better to have penniless pockets in the hours of material needs than to have Christian hearts in the plentitudes of abundance when Jesus calls. A genuine Christlike fitness for a place of service in His kingdom is our greatest asset in this present life, and it should be the source of our greatest earthly joy. No person can hope to grow in the virtues of Christian living unless he renders unselfish Christian service. To be a blessing to others is the greatest privilege given to anyone. There are too many people who measure their goodness and the goodness of others by their belief and not by their Christlike living. No doubt God has many ways of preparing human hearts for a more extensive service in His kingdom but we are many times unwilling to pay the price of our preparedness.

MINNIE ESTHER THORNE.

Elm City, N. C.

OUR RURAL CHURCH.

Dotting our land and countryside are the rural churches that stand as monuments and the handiwork of God through the work and labors of old pioneers of the Cross who in yonder years stood the storm and hazards and who, before giving place to the younger workers, left footprints on the sands of time. This is proof in itself that men whose lives were approved of God had traveled in those places. We should be grateful to those venerable souls and should reverence those places of worship; those altars by the side of the road standing as beacons to guide us on the way. What a pleasant memory we have of the Shepherds of those humble flocks as we review through the panorama of years. It is a great honor to those pastors of recent years to stand in the holy places and assume the responsibilities of those leaders of yesteryear. We see them as they stand at the helm of the great ship and ably and honorably steer it through the raging tempest engulfing our world of today. It is no small task, but with the faith of our fathers and power that is ours merely by doing His will, all things can be accomplished.

Surely we of our small country church, of only an average community as regards earthly wealth, can look through the eye of the optimist and be grateful for some of the accomplishments that we have realized by faithful service during the past Conference year. Following the high type of leadership that we were privileged to employ, we feel that the work begun by former pastors has been ably and honorably carried on. There are many ways in which we went forward and for which we feel thankful. At the close of the year we realized a better spirit of cooperation in the business side of our church work; increased interest in church and Sunday school work; better attention as to the needs of the church; better attendance at quarterly conferences and an increase in number of additions to the church. We feel that our pastor, in the words of Nehemiah, had a mind to work and realized results through service in the vineyard. We feel that our labors together were not in vain but that we have been blessed by the honorable manner in which he fulfilled the high office whereunto he has been called and to which he is faithful and loyal.

We feel that the several churches of our denomination in this community have taken a step forward. Through mutual consent the pastor of each church resigned and favored a move to consolidate under one pastorate. This was done and a new pastor has been employed to serve this field. We hope for a continued move upward in our work in this and the other churches.

EIGHT DAYS OF INSPIRATION.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, on February 2, 1936, launches a two-year celebration designated the D. L. Moody Centenary (1937) and the Moody Bible Institute Jubilee (1936). The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Institute by D. L. Moody begins with the opening day of the Founder's Week, Sunday, February 2. The program of former years has filled four or five days, that of this year will extend over eight—through Sunday, the 9th.

The range of program and vital interests touched are indicated by the following designations: Sunday, "Moody Day"; Monday, "Evangelism"; Tuesday, "Alumni"; Wednesday, Bible Institute Day; Thursday, "Christian Education"; Friday, "Missionary"; Saturday, Laymen and Youth Day.

Each day will present speakers of authority and understanding, some of them of world reputation. Provision has been made for the larger comfort of visitors and the Chicago public in the placing of the day and evening services. All day programs may be heard in the Institute Auditorium, at N. LaSalle St., and Chicago Ave., and the evening services will convene in the Moody Memorial Church, one mile farther north, Clark St., at North Ave., where 4,500 sittings are available.

Among the speakers already announced are: Rev. Herbert Lockyer, England; Dr. Howard A. Kelly, Baltimore; Mrs. Ralph C. Norton, Belgium; Dr. W. B. Riley, Minneapolis; "Mel" Trotter, Grand Rapids; Dr. Walter L. Wilson, Kansas City; Dr. R. C. McQuilkin, Columbia, S. C.; Evangelist Harry Vom Bruch, and the President of the Institute, Dr. Will H. Houghton. These are but few of the many speakers to be heard.

THE BLUE BOOK.

In Congregational and Christian circles there is no other book which with so small a circulation has as great importance as "The Blue Book." Its ninth annual edition is just off the mimeograph press. In its eighty-two sheets stapled between heavy blue covers are contained reports and other data in preparation for the annual national executive conference or Mid Winter Meetings to be held in the parish house of the First Congregational Church, Evanston, Ill., Monday to Thursday, January 27th to 30th.

The Blue Book has become an institution. Everyone who attends the Mid Winter Meeting will bring the Blue Book, which has previously been mailed to him or her. If, by chance, he or she forgets it, a wire is sent to his wife or her husband or private secretary to forward it. The book, in all its bulkiness, is kept constantly at hand from Monday to Friday.

Like other social institutions the Blue Book has grown from small beginnings. It was immediately preceded by the Brown Book which was produced for the mid-winter conferences of the Church Extension Boards in Chicago. The first mid-winter conferences were only gatherings of the missionary superintendents of the Home Missionary Society.

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL REPORT.

The reports in the Blue Book are divided into sections for the Commission on Missions, the Council for Social Action, the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and for the Directors of the Home Boards.

In the regional reports to the Commission on Missions, Dr. Edwin C. Gillette of Jacksonville, Fla., reports for the Southeast Region.

He states:

"The Southeast Regional Committee held its annual meeting at Talladega, Ala., November 7th-8th. Delegates were present from the various conferences in the Southeast, both of the White and Negro churches. There were also present all members of the working forces of the Extension Boards and of the American Missionary Association besides representatives from various schools and colleges.

"Dr. Rexford Raymond of Southern Pines, North Carolina, was elected chairman and Mrs. Eleanor Hithé Rush of Columbia, S. Car., was elected secretary. This meeting was a conference in which were faced many outstanding problems of our united work. Besides the subject of missionary education and promotion, pastoral problems, etc., the most important subject discussed was that of interracial cooperation in church work when the proposed transfer of the Negro churches from the A. M. A. to the Extension Boards shall have been consummated. The completion of the merger of the Negro Congregational Conferences with the Afro-Christian Convention was also discussed. In all these discussions there was a fine spirit of good will, friendliness and understanding. Among the speakers there were Dr. Warren H. Denison of the General Council, Mr. Fred Leslie Brownlee of the American Missionary Association, President Buell Galagher of Talladega College and the Rev. H. J. Bennet, missionary from Japan.

THE BUSINESS OF THE KINGDOM.

The only publication which gives a glimpse of the real grist of the work that is being handled in the denominational offices, national, regional and state, is the Blue Book. From the New York office of the Commission on Missions alone last year, Miss Lucy V. Seidler, office secretary and assistant treasurer, reports 951,382 pieces of literature were sent out. Stereoptician lectures and films were also circulated and missionary speakers assigned. If the similar activity in all the other offices of the denomination was totaled and added together with the circulation of the periodicals, national and state, the whole would give evidence that the affairs of the Kingdom are indeed big business.

NEW SOCIAL ACTION WORKERS.

Two new staff members have been added to the Council for Social Action according to its report in The Blue Book:

"Elizabeth G. Whiting, long prominent in public affairs, vice-president of the National League of Women Voters and a leader in the national work of the Y. W. C. A., is working in New England in the field of community service. Her work is directed at the organization of the local church for effective social action.

Marguerite Bro, writer and lecturer widely known, has undertaken in the middle west, with headquarters at Chicago, the same type of program envisaged for Mrs. Whiting in New England."

THE "KEY-NOTER" AND THE CHAIRMAN.

The "key-note" address at the Mid-Winter meeting will be given at the fellowship dinner, Monday evening, January 27th, by the Rev. Raymond B. Walker, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Portland, Ore., and a member of the prudential committee of the American Board.

The presiding officer at the principal session at the Meetings will be the Dr. W. Frederick Bohn of Oberlin, O., assistant to the president of Oberlin College and chairman of the Commission on Missions.

DR. AND MRS. M. J. W. WHITE.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

Many of our friends have been wondering what has become of us and so I send a line as to my new location. Before telling of this work, perhaps I should announce the arrival of a new son, Gordon Osler White, born November 14th at the County Hospital in Morgantown, W. Va. Mother and baby are both fine.

We are now living at Arthurdale, W. Va., 16 miles from Morgantown. Arthurdale is the government's new Homestead project. There are about 104 families here now and there will soon be houses enough for 200. These were originally mountain people or farmers who moved into the mining towns when wages were high and jobs plentiful. Since so many of the mines have closed they have been out of work and on relief for several years. Here they are provided with a nice new home and three acres of land. They pay rent every month and will eventually own the homestead. They have a chance to grow needed farm products and some have cows and chickens. Only one member in each family is allowed a government job which provides needed cash for groceries and rent. Others in the family sometimes take employment outside. A newly built factory will take care of some of the employment problem.

There are modern school buildings and equipment and carefully selected teachers. They teach all the Homesteader's children from nursery thru high school. Our own two children enjoy the excellent nursery school every week day. These schools will be the salvation of these future citizens. These children who have never had a chance now have the best that education offers.

As doctor for the community, I am in great demand for neglect and undernourishment during their years of poverty has affected their health to a great extent. The nurse and I are both kept busy all day and some nights too.

Work among these people was originally started by the Friends Service Commission. This welfare work which had been going on for several years attracted the attention of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt who helped start the Arthurdale project and several others like it in other parts of the country.

So we find quite a few opportunities here for mission work and enjoy being a part of this very interesting experiment.

With warmest regards,

M. J. W. WHITE, M. D.

THE DREAMER DREAMED A DREAM.

In my dream as I traveled up and down in the world I saw a great sight which astonished me much. What was this strange sight? It was a church on wheels, and the wheels were two and the vehicle was a cart, and the cart in large letters carried on its side a sign which said—"The Church." And as I looked I saw many people, young and old, riding on the cart laughing, shouting, eating and drinking, and some were playing cards and some dancing and a few I saw reading their Bibles.

And as I looked again I saw a man and the man was pulling the cart and he was pulling hard and I saw the sweat streaming down his face and falling to the ground, and on his face was written great distress because his task of pulling the cart was too great for his strength.

And I looked again and saw a well-dressed man who had a smile on his face and was going about among the members of the church who were riding on the cart and he was diligently whispering something into their ears. When he had a little leisure, I stepped up to him and asked him what it was that he was saying to the people of the church and he opened his mouth and this is what he said: "I tell them to be moderate in their religion; that there is no need of depriving themselves of the social joys of the world—such things as dancing, moderate drinking, card playing and cigarettes, all of which things help to pass away many weary hours." Moreover, he said, "I teach them to criticize the preacher and his sermons and also to criticize one another and to hold back the tithes and I teach them that an automobile ride is more pleasant and profitable than going to church."

And I saw that his heart was black and from its foulness he was speaking and that he was the Great Liar.

Then I remembered that if we resist the devil he will flee and that the Book says how the wicked flee when no man pursueth, but that they make better time when someone is after them.

So I got me a big stick and when he saw my purpose, he fled and I pursued. Truly it was a real marathon race, and when I overtook him and was about to smite him down, I tripped and fell and suddenly I was wide awake, and I heard a gentle voice saying: "Dear, if you keep on snoring so loud, you will alarm the neighbors." Truly the dream was ended.

W.

He who has a thing to sell
And goes and whispers in a well
Is not so apt to get the dollars
As he who climbs a tree and hollers!

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

KAGAWA IN THE UNITED STATES.

From a correspondent, a missionary in Tokyo, Japan, who is quite familiar with Japan's and the world's great preacher-evangelist, Kagawa, the editor gets some information that must be of much interest to many SUN readers now, some of whom will no doubt have the privilege of hearing Kagawa, as he is scheduled for several addresses here in the South. Says our correspondent:

"Our famous Kagawa—our great Christian leader here in Japan—has just sailed from Yokohama for a long trip abroad. Between December 18th, when he lands at San Francisco, and the end of June, he has a tremendous schedule thru all parts of the United States and Canada. Then he goes on across the Atlantic to England and the World's Sunday School Convention in Norway. We hope that he will finally get safely back to Japan! I am glad to report that he is in much better health. His present health seems to us like a miracle. Personally Kagawa is pretty much of a Saint—and publicly he is a Christian Evangelist. But I sometimes feel that after all, his greatest characteristic is his common sense. It is an enthusiastic, evangelical, idealistic common sense of course. He is not only an evangelist and a leader in the labor movement and a practical industrial and economical expert—he is also a popular best-selling novelist. He borrows money to carry on his evangelistic work, and then he stops aside long enough to write another book to pay back the money he has borrowed. The monthly magazine of the Japan Cooperative Movement began to publish one of his novels—a Christian story of course—and the circulation went up from 300,000 copies a month to 1,170,000 a month. For this story he received 500 yen ($250.00). And now the organ of the Young Men's Association of Japan want him to write a novel so they can boost their circulation from 80,000 to 300,000 a month. He told them it would have to be a Christian story—and they agreed. At the retreat last week, Kagawa discussed with us economical, industrial, moral, social affairs for hours on end, with endless practical suggestions and plans—and with statistics at his tongue's end. But every little while would come some reference to Christ's gospel—or to the Cross—and then his face would light up with a sudden radiance—and Kagawa, the Apostle of Love would stand revealed before us."

This, indeed, is information about this marvelous man and his power that we are sure many of our readers will appreciate.

Our correspondent in the same letter with the above items gives us some other interesting facts from Japan:

"Here in Japan we have much cooperation in our Christian work. One of the happiest examples is our common Japanese Hymnal. Supposing that in America the Methodists and the Baptists and the Presbyterians and the Congregationalists and the Lutherans and the Disciples and the Evangelicals and the Friends all had one common Hymnal!

"Another example is the Christian Literature Society. We have lately put up on the Ginza in the very heart of Tokyo a tall eight-story building as the headquarters of our Christian publication work—and all the denominations Churches and Missions—English and Canadian and American—are united in that work. And of course there are many other kinds of work in which we all work together.

"When we foreign missionaries get together here in Japan, we simply cannot tell each other apart. We have a Union Church here in Tokyo in which all the English-speaking foreign Christians—except, of course, the Anglicans and the American Episcopalians—worship together. We are not like the ancient Jews in Babylon—and we do not hang our harps on the willow trees, but we sing the songs of Zion in our own language in a strange land. This Union Church is a church home to the non-missionary foreigners—British and Canadian and American—here in Tokyo. To us missionaries of course it is a luxurious addition to our Japanese church worship.

"We brought home with us a few Sunday nights ago some of the folks from the Union Church for supper. We had two Baptists, two Lutherans, one Presbyterian, one United Church of Canada, one who was Presbyterian or Congregationalist or maybe something else, I don't know which—and two Japanese friends of Methodist-Baptist-Holiness connection. After supper we had a grand time singing out of the new Methodist Hymnal."

FINANCE AND SPIRITUALITY.

It is singular and deplorable that not a few feel that financing the Church is a process apart from spiritualizing the Church. Too bad that such a misconception ever possessed the mind, especially of a Church member. Unless financing the Church is a part of, and can be made to contribute to, the spiritual life of the Church, then something is vitally wrong. If our giving to, or for, the Church is not a vital part of our worship then we need either to change our giving or revise our worship. Giving costs something, and one cannot afford to bear the cost unless the cost price produces results. Every dollar or dime given to the Church, or through the Church, should be so much invested in the development of our spiritual life, and so much increase in our joy in worship. When our Lord promised to build His Church He knew that it would require money and a great deal of it, but He certainly did not mean to put the price of impoverishment upon His followers who would obey His command. So when we speak of financing the Church we are not talking about a thing apart from its spiritual life; we are thinking in practical terms of that which will necessarily enhance our spiritual values and deepen our spirituality.

WHENCE CAME THEY?

The achievements of life are not easy. The Creator made an abundance of gold, diamonds and precious stones, but He locked and hid them away so that energetic effort, often accompanied with danger and death, is required to secure them. Achievement has its price. Lindbergh achieved greatly by being the first to fly the Atlantic—but at what a price before and after. He faced the peril of an uncharted course at the peril of his life every moment, and the price he has paid since the achievement has been even greater in heartaches, perplexity and tribulations than before. Not every perilous undertaking brings victory, but there is no victory without peril.

This fact explains, in a measure, why there is so little spiritual achievement in our churches, communities and home today. So few are willing to pay the price, to face the peril, to make the venture. The world about us, with its disposition to east, comfort and security, lures us, and we yield to comforts and pleasures and earn rather than make the world yield to us through trial and tribulation. How the heroes of the Cross in the past have stood up against the world, the flesh and the devil and have said, "This is the way of the Lord, and God pity me if I depart therefrom." When John on Patmos was permitted to see the scroll unrolled and look into the eternities, he declared: "And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said unto me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." (Rev. 7: 13-14.). We may not, we cannot, understand why dangers and tribulations stand in the way of achievement, why trials and tribulations block our way to moral and spiritual attainment. We know from history, experience and revelation that it is true, and that if we would achieve materially, morally or spiritually we must pay the price, often the price of peril and great tribulation.

WHY THE GUNS?

Our neighboring city of Burlington is a favorable and friendly place. Good people live there and, for the most part, they seek peace and pursue it. Individually and collectively, they assume a friendly attitude and are glad to welcome people to their shops, their churches and their firesides. This being said, and truly, one wonders in coming into this good town from the East, why it is that the body and mouth of a great gun stands in the middle of the street, threatening and frowning a veritable token and emblem of death and destruction to all who travel that road. Before the early morning sun gladdens the homes and hearts of these good people, those rays, first, have to cross the threshold of this gun, and before the whole Western inflow to trade, commerce and friendship can reach this city, it must all pass that threatening gun—that grim monster of death. One wonders by what psychology or logic that gun, with suggestions of its grim tragedy, ever got installed there and why it has the power to remain there. Why put up a welcome sign to read "Bigger, Better Burlington," and then put before or behind that sign this symbol of death and hostility?

Many other towns have done the same on many a friendly courthouse green. Through our good land, and peaceable, one will find these guns mounted. It is well enough for us to be reminded that our forebears had to fight their way to freedom and purchase their liberty with the price of musketry, but our histories and monuments to heroes and buildings, dedicated to the pioneer and the nation builder, will keep us alive to these salient truths. Why should every peaceable town and city now seek to keep before the people suggestions of war, death and destruction? We are commanded to seek peace and pursue it. President Roosevelt, in his address before the Congress the other night, said that possibly not more than ten per cent of the people of the world wanted war, or desired war of any kind. Possibly his figures were about as conservative as facts will allow. Why then let the ninety per cent of us, and in fact all of us, have thrown before us in our daily traffic and travels the implements of war and the symbols of destruction and death? One day we will learn that these guns, whose business is destruction, are out of place, both on the outskirts of our towns, on the greens of our courthouses and also (and may the good Lord hasten the day) as toys, often deadly ones, in the hands of our children. One day we fathers will quit arming our children at Christmas time (when the Prince of Peace is celebrated) with guns, big and little, which are ever and always the emblems and weapons of hostility and death.

INCREASE IN CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

The official figures for 1934 with the various church bodies of the United States have been given to the public and show a gain in church membership during the year of 1,207,188. The largest percentage of increase in membership was that of the Methodists (19 bodies) of 210,475. The next largest in percentage of the churches, having over 1,000,000 members, was the Baptists (18 bodies), showing a total gain of 161,720. Coming next to the Methodists in total gains was the Catholic Church, with an increase of 198,915. The total membership of religious bodies and groups is 62,035,688. It is gratifying to note that the increase in church membership far exceeded in percentages the increase in population. This is the largest increase in total membership since 1930.

While our total population, approximately, July 1, 1934, was 126,450,000, the total church membership was 62,035,688, thus giving the per cent of our population churched (1934) of 49.07. While these figures are heartening, there is much to challenge and to stimulate the churches to redouble effort in this year of grace. With less than half of our people holding membership in any church of any name or creed and a large per cent of these quite indifferent or unconcerned, it is rather doubtful and difficult to think of ours as really a Christian nation, and yet the salvation of our country, our homes and our people depends upon the gospel, the saving love and life of our Lord and of His Christ.

J. O. A.

DIVIDENDS.

The church as well as industry must look to her dividends if she is to continue business. While the dividends of industry are reckoned in dollars, the dividends of the church are reckoned in membership and spiritual assets. The church goes forward by the accumulation of her annual dividends. Every church enterprise must be rated by the dividend it pays to the promoting church. Has the church program, has the church enterprise, has the church institution the past year brought dividends either in deepening the spiritual life or in increasing the church membership? If it has done neither it may be truthfully said that funds have been invested and efforts put forth to little, if any avail.

This explains why emphasis must be laid again and again upon evangelism. By sounding the note of evangelism, the pastor and the church are seeking dividends—they are seeking increased membership and spiritual activity.

And this explains also why our Lord commanded the church to be missionary and laid the missionary task upon the church. Through the missionary effort churches are added to the Conference, to the Convention, to the Kingdom. Through the missionary effort the gospel is preached in fields afar and the church membership is built up far, far away. It is a striking fact that during the past two years, even with decreased income and reduced missionary budgets, the increase in church membership within the United States. Note it when you will, a missionary-minded church is an evangelistic church, and the pastor and the church who have the faith to believe that Jesus can save to the uttermost, and will use some of their means to that effect, will be constantly employing evangelistic methods and efforts to increase the membership of the home church. Church dividends accrue through missionary and evangelistic effort and investment. Thus our Lord, in laying upon the church the burden of going into all the world, did not burden the church but appointed the way to sure and ever-increasing dividends.

PAUL AND MONEY.

By ELISHA A. KING.

Contributing Editor THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Very early in his career Paul learned the necessity of having sufficient money to support the new movement. Naturally he reverted back to the Jewish custom of giving one-tenth of one's income to the Lord. But he launched out into a new and unoccupied field by calling attention to the fact that a Christian is a dedicated person and all he is and all he has belongs to God, the great giver of life and prosperity. However, he would not force anyone to give a certain amount, but he did insist that Christians should give generously, gladly (hilariously is the Greek word) as God had prospered them, not grudgingly or under the feeling of compulsion. He was very careful to state the method and order of giving and that was by the week in an orderly way in proportion to one's ability to give. His idea was to make giving a part of the religious life, not only a sacrament but a matter of great privilege and joy. He has written at considerable length about the right of a worker to be adequately supported and the duty of a Church to see that it is done. Not only did he teach such doctrine, but he undertook to raise money himself for support of local churches and for the missionary enterprise. He was a very busy man, resourceful and versatile, doing first a spiritual ministry and then attending to the business side of all his churches. He was virtually a Bishop in the full right of his powers.

The modern Church that makes any attempt to carry on its work in the midst of the selfish confusion and secular distraction of this age needs loyal support of every kind. From the Christian point of view giving is a cultivated grace. It reveals the character of the giver about as well as any other action. We give to that in which we are interested. If we believe in the Church of Christ we will give to its support. If we believe in the evangelizing of the world with the Gospel of Christ we will give to the support of the Church's missionary program. If we are enthusiastic about the success of the Church we will give to its support without being over-urged.

Paul taught that all Christians are stewards and as such are accountable to God for the way they use their Lord's wealth. And the splendid thing about the Church is that countless numbers of its members do give to its support. In my second parish I visited a humble home where the mother had gathered up in her Easter envelope two dollars and a quarter. She told me with satisfaction that she and her son had gone without food—what she called luxuries—over a period of several months! I thought of Jesus' remark about the poor widow who gave her mite to the temple treasury.

Giving of money to support the work of the Church should never usurp the place of spiritual religion. We do not give to add fuel to the spiritual fires of the soul, but we give because the spiritual fires of the soul burn brightly and warm the heart and enlighten the eyes and energize the personality. The best giving is thoughtful, loving, generous giving, just as water runs out of an artesian well, or as perfume exhales from the flower, or love wells up in the heart of a lover. One witty writer says that givers are of three kinds: the flint, the sponge, and the honeycomb. Some, like flint, must be hammered to get anything out of them. To get anything out of the second you must squeeze them, but the third overflows with its own sweetness. If giving could become automatic the Church's program would go forward with great acceleration. And the secret key to this automatic quality is a sense of personal responsibility. If I feel any personal responsibility for the success of my Church I will do my share toward its support whether it be much or little. . . .

The Churches of Christ are today carrying on their work most efficiently on a greatly reduced budget. There is no lack of consecration among the workers, but in a country as rich as ours the support should be a hundred per cent. Let us pray and give to the great benevolence work of the Christian Church at large so that it may do its work effectively.

In the long reach of human experience there seems to be a recognized law of reciprocity. Jesus made use of it when he said, "Give and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again." (Luke 6:38.) And Paul the organizer and administrator of churches said, "God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that he, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound unto every good work." And finally, in the words of Paul, "Do good, be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate." Moffatt translates it, be open-handed and generous."

Life is given for wisdom, and yet we are not wise; for goodness, and yet we are not good; for overcoming evil, and evil remains; for patience and sympathy and love, and yet we are fretful and hard and weak and selfish. We are not keyed to attainment, but to the struggle toward it.—Theodore T. Munger.

There is no royal road to anything. One thing at a time, all things in succession. That which grows fast withers rapidly; that which grows slowly endures.—J. G. Holland.

The only difference between stumbling blocks and stepping stones is the way we use them.—Exchange.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mrs. Florence Ligon Moore, wife of Deacon W. C. Moore of Chuckatuck, Va., died unexpectedly after a brief illness, December 23, 1935, at her home. She had been sick for a few days but the family and friends were shocked to learn that she passed away in her sleep early in the morning. She is survived by her husband, two sons, Alex and W. C., Jr., of Chuckatuck, Va., five daughters, Mrs. Asa B. Johnson of Chuckatuck, Va., Mrs. Creston Evans of Plasterco, Va., Misses Pollie, Matsie and Addie Rawles Moore of Chuckatuck, Va., a grandson, Asa B. Johnson, Jr., four sisters, Mrs. B. R. Turner of Lynchburg, Va., Mrs. E. M. Gee of Keysville, Va., Mrs. A. A. McLaren of Niagara Falls, Canada, and Mrs. J. S. Johnson of Henedrson, N. C., a brother, Mr. J. A. Ligon of Clarksville, Va.

Mrs. Moore was a consistent member of Oakland Christian Church and had been prominent and active in the work of the church for several years. She had a large circle of friends who were associated with her in the educational, social and religious work of the community.

The funeral service was conducted by the pastor assisted by Dr. John G. Truitt, at Oakland Christian Church, Tuesday, December 24, 1935, and the burial was in the church cemetery.

Deacon Y. C. Byrd was born in Nansemond County, Virginia, October 7, 1865, and died on January 7th, at the age of 70 years and three months. He was a son of the late Elvy and Mrs. Mary Byrd. He and Miss Rosa Langston were married December 17, 1891. He is survived by his wife, two sons, Cecil L. Byrd of Corpus Christi, Texas, Wilbur Byrd of Portsmouth, Va., three daughters, Mrs. Blanche Virginia Barrett of Norfolk, Va., Mrs. Mary Byrd Shreve of Washington, D. C. and Mrs. Elizabeth Rountree of Suffolk, Va., nine grandchildren, one brother, Deacon I. T. Byrd of Holland, Va., and one sister, Mrs. Goulie Austin of Nansemond County, Va.

Deacon Byrd united with Liberty Spring Christian Church August 14, 1896 and was elected deacon June 2, 1906. As a member of the church he was faithful and consistent, enjoying the confidence of his fellow members and neighbors. As a deacon he was careful and wise, executing the duties of that high office with credit to himself and with satisfaction to the church.

He became ill about three weeks ago and gradually grew worse until the end came. He reached the ripe age of three score years and ten, honored and respected for his integrity of character. He was quiet and unassuming in his manner, never seeking for public recognition or honor, but willing to take a humble place as a follower of other leaders. He was a devoted Christian and enjoyed the fellowship of spiritual worship. He was a good man. He spoke kindly of others and refrained from harsh and stinging criticism. His religious convictions were deep and abiding, but he did not announce his creed nor publish his good works from the housetop. He lived according to his convictions and his foundation of faith and practice was the word of God. He believed the Bible and sought to shape his own life and character by its teachings and truth.

The funeral was conducted at Liberty Spring Christian Church, January 8, 1935, by the pastor, assisted by Dr. John G. Truitt. Burial was in the church cemetery.

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver or gold." (Prov. 22:1.) This good name is a possession more to be desired than all the houses and lands. A good name does not come by accident. It rests upon something more durable than outward show. Somehow the people who walk with God and follow the Jesus way of life are different from unbelievers. Spiritual values are linked with high thinking and noble living. The path of the just shines with glory. "Blessed are they who die in the Lord." Blessed are the living who live in him. Happy people need Him. People who mourn find comfort and peace in His blessed Gospel of everlasting life.

PROPOSED HENDERSON MEETING.

For a number of years Elon College has been handicapped by an enormous debt. The present administration has endeavored to steer the institution through the perilous days of the depression. We have weathered the storm, but with many burdens. For the past three years definite efforts have been made to adjust the financial conditions of the college. With a debt totaling more than one-half million dollars, interest accumulations become terrific. The total debt of Elon College as of June 1, 1935, including all interest allowable, amounted to $704,170.84.

Through conferences and counter propositions a plan for the settlement of the debts of Elon College was agreed upon. The Virginia Trust Company, of Richmond, Virginia, has very generously consented to lend the college sufficient funds to pay the debts of the college on the compromised basis agreed upon. The total debt is technically still against the college. A committee appointed by the Board of Trustees to adjust the debts of the college, on personal responsibility, with the resources of the college supporting, has reduced the total indebtedness of the college to the reasonable figure of $162,000. That is to say, with the payment of the amount the college would be free of debt, the endowment funds and other securities belonging to the college would be returned to the institution without liens.

The one great task now confronting the authorities of the college, the church alumni, and friends of the institution, is the payment of the remaining debts of the college. With more than one-half million dollars accounted for, it ought to be a welcomed responsibility to discharge the remainder. The writer feels that all who are interested in the college will be glad for this opportunity. In all probability we are agreed that the debts should be paid and we strive toward this end. Our immediate responsibility is to decide the means to the end and here there will be different opinions. It is necessary, however, that we reach accord as nearly as is possible. This can be done by a common meeting where in counsel we exchange ideas and eventually find a common ground of agreement.

All ministers of the Congregational and Christian Churches within the Southern Convention, the superintendents of all Sunday schools, representatives of the alumni and other representatives of the church have been asked to meet with the Board of Trustees in the First Christian Church of Henderson, North Carolina, Thursday, January 23rd, at ten o'clock, for the purpose of deciding the next step to take toward the cancellation of all debts against the college. If you have received one of these invitations by mail, I trust that you will realize the importance of the meeting and begin to plan to come. If you have not received one of these invitations and are interested in Elon College and its future, you are earnestly invited to attend the meeting and to bring anyone with whom you know is interested in the college. Your presence is desired and needed. Elon College belongs to the church. It is the church's business to direct its affairs either in conference or by delegated authority. This is an appeal to all ministers, church officials, laymen, alumni, and friends to dedicate Thursday, January 23rd, to the interest of Elon College.

The agenda for the Henderson meeting is as follows:

1. Call to order.
2. Prayer.
3. Purpose of meeting.
4. The Christian Church then and now.
5. The present status of Elon College.
6. Shall we make a campaign?
7. For how much shall the campaign be made?
8. How shall the campaign be conducted?
9. Who shall conduct the campaign?

Read it carefully and be ready to express yourself on these or any other points that may occur to you to be helpful.

THE ELDER MONUMENT FUND.

A little more than three years ago, the old Georgia and Alabama Christian Conference decided to erect a monument at the graves of Rev. H. W. Elder and his beloved wife.

The Conference contributed for the purpose the value of "Randal's Crossing Christian Church Building, which was sold to the highest bidder. The purchase price was turned into the Conference treasury for this purpose, the amount being $80.00. The pastor of Lagrange United Church borrowed this money from the treasury to pay on the indebtedness of the church, promising to refund at any time when needed. All of this money has not been returned. A balance of $17.00 remains unpaid. The Committee seems to have failed to get this amount; they have, however, collected a nice sum for this purpose but they need and must have, $27.00 to finish paying for the monument which has been bought and is ready for delivery. It is the sincere desire of the committee to erect this monument at an early date. So here is our appeal: Let every man in Georgia and Alabama who appreciated the life and labors of Rev. Elder, send to the chairman of this committee $1.00; and every woman who loved and appreciated the labor and sacrifice of Sister Elder send 50c to the committee chairman.

Now brothers and sisters, if you cannot send the above mentioned amounts just send what you can. We must have the above amount before we can proceed further. It will be tragical to fail now and by the Grace of God we will not fail.

It is the purpose of the committee to have an unveiling service when the monument is placed, at which service every friend of Bro. Elder and his good wife will be a welcomed guest.

In justice to ourselves and to those who have already contributed to the fund we make this statement and also issue this appeal, and we pray that it may not fall on "deaf ears."

We need and must have $27.00 to complete the job. Send your contribution to any of the following:

Mrs. D. S. Hogg, Richland, Ga., Chmn.

Tom Holland, Ambrose, Ga.

Rev. C. W. Hanson, Lagrange, Ga.

Rev. G. D. Hunt, Roanoke, Ala.

God bless every one who feels impressed to give.

Yours truly,
Mrs. D. S. Hogg.

Richland, Ga.

Elon Alumni

By M. L. PATRICK, Secretary,
Elon College Alumni Association,
High Point, N. C.

Not long ago I made a public statement about Elon graduates that drew a challenge from a very prominent alumnus of the college. My statement, based on a survey of paid-up members of the Elon College Alumni Association during the past eight years, was that the older graduates, say those winning diplomas before 1920, are more loyal to Alma Mater than are more recent holders of degrees.

Obviously, a study of association memberships for nearly a decade would not be proof conclusive of my declaration, and I hasten to explain that I made the statement in no cocksure, dogmatic manner. Still, I found the most consistent members of the association were those who graduated several years ago, and I naturally concluded that interest in and connection with the organization set up by the alumni is an indication of loyalty to Elon. Beyond that, meeting the old grads at commencement and at other college gatherings has further persuaded me that interest in our college is not as strong among the more recent graduates.

This conclusion leads me to speculate whether the same condition exists among the alumni and alumnae of other institutions. Does a university or college nowadays fail to make the proper impression on students? Are our institutions of higher learning failing to exert the same influence as formerly? I have always felt that a part of the education of any person is the extent to which that person identifies himself with the real and paramount purpose of his institution.

If, then, there is a growing lack of interest among the more recent graduates of colleges and universities, someone will likely advance the contention that either the institutions of higher learning are failing to reach the lives of the students, or the students themselves are becoming more mercenary about their education. Only recently a graduate of Elon told me that he felt that he owed the institution nothing. Hadn't he paid his bills there? Wasn't that all to be expected of him? He went on more at length, and I listened without offending him by reminding him that his education cost more than he paid in tuition fees.

My space here will not permit me to go into the arguments advanced by my friend—and he has good ones—that love and appreciation for Alma Mater is just as strong among the younger graduates as among the older ones. I do say, however, that I shall have more to say next time concerning this topic. No doubt, you, the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, will both attack and approve my position. That will be exactly what I would like for you to do.

Another thing I would welcome from former Elon students, graduates, and friends, would be comment about the college, alumni, activities of the former students, or, if will not suit you, anything you want to say. This column will depend on your contribution, on your reaction, from time to time. In case you don't respond, you'll have no other alternative than to listen to me.

THE TRAIL OF LIQUOR.

From California comes a story which, for sheer heartbreaking tragedy, is not easily surpassed, as told by a correspondent to the Christian Science Monitor. When Leo Dwight Murphy was hanged in San Quentin Penitentiary on December 7, 1934, alcohol scored on another victim. Murphy, while drunk, had murdered his wife; then he had escaped from the state and remarried. Later he returned to California, was arrested and tried for murder. The defense argued that since he was drunk when he committed the crime he could not be held fully accountable for his deed. The court, however, found the prisoner guilty of first-degree murder and sentenced him to hang. Concerning the part of liquor in the crime, the judge said, quoting from a decision of record:

"It is a well-settled rule of law that drunkenness is no excuse for the commission of a crime. Insanity, produced by intoxication, does not destroy responsibility, when a party, when sane and responsible, made himself voluntarily intoxicated; and drunkenness forms no defense whatever to the fact of guilt, for when a crime is committed by a party while in a fit of intoxication, the law will not allow him to avail himself of his own gross vice and misconduct to shelter himself from the legal consequences of such crime."

Another comes from the national capital:

A prisoner in the District of Columbia jail, serving ninety days after conviction for driving while intoxicated and leaving, after colliding, was interviewed in a WJSV broadcast in connection with the safety campaign being conducted by the Evening Star, of Washington.

Prisoner No. 21007 is forty-eight years old, worked for a large department store, and cared for three children, seven, five and three, since the death of his wife, last February. He drove a taxicab some nights and on his days off to make some extra money. One Sunday morning at eight o'clock there was an accident. He had been at a party.

Reporter: "Had you been drinking?"

Prisoner: "Only beer. I haven't touched a drop of hard liquor in fifteen years . . . I had gotten somewhat 'heeled' on the beer I had been drinking. . . . I jumped in my cab and drove off. . . . A police scout car stopped me near Eighth and I Streets . . . They put me in a cell with three or four drunks. They acted like crazy men. One of them kept wanting to choke me. . . . I was tried, found guilty and sentenced to serve ninety days—sixty days for driving while drunk and thirty days for leaving after colliding."

Reporter: "How about your job. Do you think you will be able to get it back when you get out?"

Prisoner: "No. The place where I worked is rather straight-laced. I don't think they would want a man working for them who had been in jail . . . That's what you try to think about when you are sitting around here with nothing to do. What will you do? What will you do?"

Reporter: "Where are they tonight [the prisoner's children]?"

Prisoner: "They are being kept at an orphanage . . . I don't want them to know where I am . . . I hope they never find Prisoner No. 21007."

And this one from Texas:

"Police made up a pot Tuesday to buy food and fuel for five motherless children with a sick father whose condition was discovered when a fourteen-year-old girl, eldest of the flock, asked that officers look for her younger brothers who had gone bare-footed into the cold to trade some old iron for wood to burn. There was a little money left over after the food was purchased, and officers gave the cash to the father. Officers were bitter Wednesday night when, answering a disturbance call, they found the father in a cafe, brawling drunk, boasting, spending their money for drinks. They put him in a cell."—Dallas Morning News.

From Baltimore, Md.:

"A local paper of three weeks ago carried a perfectly terrible story of a murder and suicide. A husband killed his wife with a shotgun, undertook to kill a step-son, but while the lad was running to a neighbor's to spread the alarm the murderer turned the gun on himself and took his own life. The stepfather had returned to his home about 2:30 A. M., drunk and quarrelsome.

"The paper which had this gruesome story on its front page carried 538 inches of liquor and beer advertisements."—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Case I.—The club women of Virginia are aroused over the case of a young woman sentenced to twenty-five years in the penitentiary, convicted by a jury of mountaineers whose "eye for an eye" sense of justice is well known. The young teacher had been away and returned late; her father, in a drunken rage, attempted to punish her when she, in desperation, snatched off her shoe and struck in the dark. The father died from the effects of the blow. A new trial has been asked.

Case II.—A sixteen-year-old boy was drinking from a quart bottle. His mother protested that she had rather see him dead than to be a drunkard. The lad found a gun and taunted his mother with lacking nerve to shoot him. The only witness to the tragedy says he heard a shot, found the lad on the floor and his mother crying, "I've shot my son," while he moaned, "It was an accident." Accident or not, liquor played its part in the tragedy.

Case III.—Little Frances saved her pennies in the bank furnished by the school. Christmas was coming, and she would have enough money to buy presents for all the family. But father came home drunk and fighting mad, chased all the family into the neighbor's house, and finally was carted away to jail by the police. The next day it took all the money the whole family could raise, including the pennies in the savings bank of little Frances, to pay the father's fine and get him out of jail. —Nashville Christian Advocate.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE PASSING OF CHINA'S FRIEND.

By Miss D. P. CUSHING, Editor.

To hundreds of Chinese, the death of Dr. Luella Miner in Tsinan, China, on December 2nd, comes as a personal loss, for scattered all over that great country are former students of this American educator who gave 48 years of her life to the land of her deepest affection, and among them are many who held positions of responsibility and leadership.

"I have service in the blood," Dr. Miner once said. And her career offers abundant proof of the truth of this assertion. She was born in Oberlin, Ohio, in 1861 just before her father enlisted for service in the Civil War. So she began her life in the atmosphere of conflict. In China she passed through the stirring days of the Boxer uprising and the riots at Peiping (then Peking) as well as the period of the Chinese Revolution in 1911.

During her years in North China she watched the rise and fall of the tides of civil war, the efforts of the Communists to get into the saddle and the steady encroachment of Japan. She died as she was born, when war clouds hang dark. After the Civil War, Dr. Miner's parents threw in their lot with the cause of reconstruction in the South and her father taught one of the earliest schools established for colored people. He had been, also, a missionary to the Chippewa Indians.

Thus reared in an atmosphere for freedom and justice it is not strange that when Luella Miner graduated from Oberlin College in 1884, she enlisted under the American Missionary Association for three years and then in 1887 answered the call of that land far over the seas and went to China under the Woman's Board of Missions of the Interior affiliated with the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, under which she has served with distinction ever since.

Although Luella Miner did other things in missionary work her greatest gift was undeniably as a teacher and, closely allied with that, a leader in just causes. For fifteen years she taught Chinese boys and men in the Luho Academy and College at Tungchow. For more than a quarter of a century she has been the champion of education for girls and women in China and identified closely with the movement for freeing Chinese women from ancient intellectual slavery. It was for her efforts along these lines that her Alma Mater conferred on her in 1914 the degree of Doctor of Literature. At this time President King characterized her as "teacher, author, administrator; a leader in the intellectual and spiritual emancipation of Chinese women."

Among the Chinese Luella Miner was looked upon for years as "the best informed foreigner" in their country. They trusted her interpretation of social, political and educational events. Her judgments have seemed to them safe, sane and reliable. Miss Miner was chosen to go as a delegate from China to the Jerusalem Conference.

Of beautiful significance is the fact that in accordance with an old Chinese custom, Dr. H. H. Kung, Minister of Finance under the Nanking Government and one of Miss Miner's "boys" paid her funeral expenses. He it was about whom she wrote in her book, "Two Heroes of Cathay" which demonstrated her ability as an author. Others of her former students, always her loyal friends, hold positions of leadership and when she celebrated her 70th birthday in 1931, they came to pay their respects or sent her messages and gifts, Miss Miner also wrote "China's Book of Martyrs" and many textbooks in both Chinese and English. Even after her retirement she continued her translation work and some teaching.

The quiet routine of teaching was rudely interrupted in 1900 when for six nerve-racking weeks Miss Miner lived with a group of pupils huddled within the walls of the British Legation where often bullets and shells fell about them. The work of reconstruction which followed gave ample scope for Dr. Miner's administrative abilities.

She it was who mothered the idea of a college for Chinese women and when North China Union Women's College was founded she became its head. Later this college affiliated with Yenching University as Yenching College for Women and Dr. Miner asked to be relieved of executive responsibility so as to devote her time to literary work. But she was in too much demand to be left free and under insistent pressure became Dean of Women at Cheeloo University (Shantung Christian University), Tsinan, retaining it only until she had secured a competent Chinese successor. When a few years ago a new dormitory was named at Cheeloo in honor of Dr. Miner they used her Chinese name "Beautiful Virtue." With characteristic humor Dr. Miner explained that "it doesn't sound as bad as that in Chinese."

This versatile American woman who went to China and learned a complicated language so well that she prepared textbooks in it, who purchased coal and cabbages or administered a college with equal aplomb, who taught classes in international law, botany, geology, Christian principles, Bible and trigonometry, who did preventive work against epidemics of scarlet fever and mumps—still faced her life's work humbly and said on her last furlough when she knew that there remained only a few more years of active service, "Each one of the few years that remain seem like a precious bead on my rosary of the years and I cannot bear the thought of taking out one of them when so little of that which I would like to give China has been given."

Her rare gifts as a teacher produced keen minds among both boy and girl students and gave rise to many interesting incidents similar to that told of a Columbia University professor of International Law who visited Yenching and was asked to speak to the girl students on International Law. "Chinese girls? International law?" he asked in amazement. Following his talk he was asked questions and the pedagogue from Gotham left limp and mopping his brow. Said he: "I didn't know there were girls anywhere who could ask such questions."

During her active years—it seems inconsistent to call any of Luella Miner's years other than active—she was the representative of the Plymouth Congregational Church in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and the loved and respected missionary of the women in the former Wisconsin Branch of the W. B. M. I. She had planned after retirement to make her home in the State of Washington with her sisters, Mrs. H. C. Flagg of Olympia and Mrs. Frank C. DuBois of Tacoma, but she was unable to tear herself away from her beloved China.

HISTORY OF THE SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

[Read at the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary Celebration of the Church, Sunday, November 17th, by W. E. McClenny, Historian.]

In order that we may get a clear view of the religious conditions in our city it will be necessary for us to look backward to see the beginnings of the Churches in it. We, the Christians, are indebted to many people for what we are today. The Established Church brought to us, the open Bible, the thirty-nine Articles of Religion, the Prayer Book and the Protestant system of religion. They came with the first settlers in the early years of the 17th century, about 1630. The Friends brought their quietness and plainness, and meditative spirit about 1656. The Baptists brought us the first idea of a separate church and state about 1773, and constituted their first church in the county in 1779. The Methodists came in this section about the same time and gave us a practical and an experimental religion. The Presbyterians entered the town in 1876, the Roman Catholic in 1909, and the Jewish Congregation in 1914.

Out of the Methodist Episcopal Church was born the Christian Church in this section. The early leader, Rev. James O'Kelly, who led the revolt in Baltimore in 1792, had been the presiding elder in this section in 1789, 1790 and 1792, and was known in the country. Soon he gathered Christian Congregations at Cypress Chapel, where he and Bishop Asbury met in 1780, and one at Holy Neck. These were the only two Christian Churches in the county in 1846 when Dr. Wm. B. Wellons came to Nansemond from Southampton. The other neighboring Christian Church was at Antioch in Isle of Wight County. These were then very weak, but under his able ministrations they were at once revived and soon grew to be strong churches. Dr. Wellons settled in the town of Suffolk in 1850 and at once began to plan to build a Christian Church in his adopted town, but owing to the press of other duties the plan was not put in execution until 1859, when the friends of the Christian Church in this section decided to erect a House of Worship in Suffolk and organized a church. In the meantime Dr. Wellons had organized Bethlehem Christian Church in 1847 on the Holland Highway and many of the members of the Christian Church who were residing in Suffolk were members of that church as it was near.

At that date there was much religious prejudice existing in the whole county, and there were some people who did not want to see a Christian Church established in the town. A lot for the purpose could not be purchased according to Deacon Wm. H. Gay, and when the present lot was secured it had first to be deeded to an individual. Dr. Wellons had a Board of Trustees named as follows: Rev. W. B. Wellons, Rev. W. H. Boykin, Thomas J. Kilby, R. C. Wells, Willis S. Riddick, Richard L. Brewer, Robert B. Brinkley, James A. Parker and Robert M. Darden. W. B. Wellons was chosen President and Treasurer of the Board. For a few seconds let us look at his board: Dr. Wellons was the greatest leader the Christian Church in the South has ever produced. Rev. Wm. H. Boykin was a man of vision, Hon. Thomas J. Kilby had been in the Virginia Legislature and had been President of the Conference several times. Willis S. Riddick later became the first President of the Farmers Bank of Nansemond. Richard L. Brewer was then a prominent man, an educator and was first Superintendent of the Nansemond County's Public School system when it went into effect in 1870. Robert B. Brinkley was Captain of the Cypress Sharp Shooters, Company "I" 41st Virginia Infantry, C. S. Army and was killed in May, 1864, at Hanover Junction leading his men. James A. Parker and R. C. Wells were prominent citizens and Robert M. Darden was a merchant who lived on the White Marsh Road at the mouth of the Washington ditch, and was instrumental in procuring salt for the entire section during the last years of the war. In the year 1860, we will not say what month, but think it was October, Dr. Wellons called a meeting of the members of the Christian Church living in Suffolk at his house on what is now West Washington Street where Col. J. E. West lives. The original house has been moved but is still in use and is known as the Robert W. Baker home on Wellons Street.

The charter members who attended that meeting were: Wm. B. Wellons, Sarah L. Wellons, Rives Chapel Wells, Julia A. S. Wells, James A. Parker, Lucy Ann Parker, Robert B. Brinkley, James Pugh, Mary A. Higgins, Sarah E. Norfleet, James A. Turrentine, Thomas J. Kilby, Ann U. Kilby, Willis S. Riddick, Mary Ann Riddick, James A. Norfleet, Emma Norfleet, Caroline V. Riddick, Thomas S. Kilby, Annie E. Cutchin, Louise Norfleet, Wm. T. Duke, Louisiana Turrentine and Elizabeth Ward.

At the first meeting of the church, Rev. Wm. B. Wellons was elected pastor, Thomas J. Kilby and Rives C. Wells Deacons, Robert B. Brinkley, Sec., Willis S. Riddick Collector and Treasurer, Josiah Smith Sexton. The Five Cardinal Principles of the Christian Church were adopted.

The Church was received into the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference at Cypress Chapel in October-November, 1850, Thomas J. Kilby and Willis S. Riddick being the first delegates.

A subscription was opened and in a few months a sufficient had been pledged to warrant the trustees in advertising for proposals to erect a brick house of worship. Rev. Wm. B. Wellons, Thomas J. Kilby and Jesse B. Brewer were appointed a building committee.

In January, 1860, a contract was entered into with Thomas J. Kilby to erect a brick house of worship on North Main Street in the town of Suffolk on a lot of land owned by Rev. Wm. B. Wellons and known as the "DeFord Lot." Mr. Kilby expected it to be a long drawn out affair and would not start the construction of the house until the pine stage poles had been skinned. While the house was under construction, Rev. Wm. B. Wellons at one time became very much discouraged, and his brother, Rev. James W. Wellons, who happened to be in Suffolk, made a trip to the Antioch community and its members and secured the necessary funds to press the work on to completion. The house of worship was completed March 1, 1861, and was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God on the second Sunday in March, 1861, which was March 11th. The sermon on the occasion was by Rev. Wm. B. Wellons, the pastor, from I Chronicles, 29th chapter and a part of the 5th verse: "And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord."

In April 1861, a Sunday school was planned for and Capt. Robert B. Brinkley and James A. Turrentine were elected as Superintendents; but both of them were called to the colors at once as the War between the States had just begun; hence the Sunday school did not operate until after the war.

From March, 1861 to May 11, 1862, services were regularly held, but at that time Norfolk, Portsmouth and Suffolk were evacuated by the Confederate forces and on the 12th the town was occupied by the Federal troops. The pastor, Rev. Wm. B. Wellons, who was then editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, published here, was a thorough southerner and States rights man, and had so expressed himself in his paper in no uncertain terms, and in a few days, or on June 17, 1862, he had to make arrangements to leave his home and family and go in the Confederate lines for safety. His brother, Rev. James W. Wellons, who was assisting him that year remained with the church as pastor until November of that year when he too had to flee for safety within the Confederate lines beyond Blackwater River. The church then had 31 members, more than half of whom followed the pastor either in the army or as refugees in the Confederate lines. The church was then used by the Federal Chaplains for some time and later as a hospital. After the Federal evacuation of Suffolk, on July 3, 1863, the doors were closed and remained so until after Appomattox. The spider built his web from corner to corner, and the healthy weeds grew up to the very church door. In reading the accounts of the Union soldiers' stay in Suffolk, one of the historians remarked that his regiment came over to the town and held services in one of the churches and a wag painted on a board and put it up at the door "seats free." From his description it was the Christian Church.

In May, 1865, after many harrowing experiences, the pastor, Rev. Wm. B. Wellons, returned to Suffolk and to what had been his home and church to find his home in ruins and the members of the church scattered and disheartened. He at once set about to make his home livable and to try to get the church together. He preached for his former parishoners in the country, and in August he held a great revival meeting in the church here for 19 days and nights and 77 persons were converted and he took in 25 members. He was employed to preach for the congregation again for $100.00 per year. He continued as pastor from 1865 until October 24, 1876, when he resigned on account of failing health, and upon his resignation and personal request, Rev. Jesse T. Whitley was chosen as pastor and continued until February 28, 1879. During the pastorate of Dr. Wellons he did a great work, became a leading advocate of temperance, and through THE CHRISTIAN SUN introduced the cultivation of the peanut as a farm crop. He was a great preacher, a great leader, a great editor, a great reformer and became a national figure in the field of temperance.

Rev. Jesse T. Whitley was succeeded by Rev. William T. Walker of North Carolina, who served until November, 1882. Wm. T. Walker was a direct descendant of Rev. James O'Kelly. He was followed by Rev. William Wesley Staley, who served from November, 1882, to September, 1923, when he was elected pastor emeritus for life with salary and parsonage. At that time Rev. Howard S. Harcastle became pastor and remained until September, 1933. He was succeeded September 1, 1933, by Rev. John G. Truitt, who is still serving the church.

We might notice some of the things that have happened during the past 75 years. May 12, 1866, the Church Conference passed a vote of thanks to the Christian Church in Boston, Mass., for 50 copies of The New Christian Harp. Perhaps this was done by some men from the 6th Massachusetts Regiment who were here in 1862-63, and from the diary of one of the men which we have, they were more religious than most soldiers. I have recently met a son of one of those men and taken him to where his father was camped and where he missed death by only a hair's breadth. In 1866, the total budget of the church was $148.-70. The heavenly fare was not so high in those days. On July 31, 1868, the church had a debt of $1,350.00, and there was a commercial enterprise started to help pay off the debts.

May 19, 1867, the first session of Sunday school was held in the church. Three officers, six teachers and twenty-two pupils were present. Mr. Virginius Kilby was the Superintendent, Hon. Thos. J. Kilby was the Assistant Superintendent, and Jesse T. Whitley, Secretary and Librarian and

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

SYMPATHY.

A host of young people will sympathize with Miss Edna Fulcher in the loss of her father on Friday morning of last week. For two years Miss Fulcher has worked in the office of the Board of Christian Education, and for the three months past was responsible for editing this page. During these years she has made many friends among our young people.

Mr. Fulcher was a deacon of First Christian Church of Norfolk, Virginia. For several years he was superintendent of the Sunday school. Many floral tributes and a very large attendance at the church funeral Sunday afternoon, January 12th, spoke eloquently concerning the high place Mr. Fulcher and his family held in the esteem of the community. He was ill only a few days, and his death came as a distinct shock to his friends.

APPRECIATION.

When the Southeast Youth Fellowship met in Raleigh, North Carolina, in May of last year, Miss Irene Cotten of Dendron, Virginia, was persuaded to become secretary. When the Christmas Conference met in Winter Park, Florida, Miss Cotten offered her resignation because her health would not permit her to carry on the work as she wished to do. The accomplishments during her brief time in office were more than could have been expected and attest her worth as a worker.

Her report to the Board of Christian Education shows that during the seven months that she served, she sent out 272 personal letters, 339 mimeographed letters, 54 cards, and two issues of the Southeast Fellowship News Bulletin. Her expense account included postage, office equipment, and 600 miles of travel, and amounted to $47.10 in all. To her, more than to anyone else, was due the success of the Christmas Conference. The following from resolutions adopted by the Fellowship and sent to Miss Cotten, shows how the young people felt about her and her work:

"The Southeast Youth Fellowship wishes to extend to you their appreciation for your untiring efforts and sacrificial service rendered this organization. We feel that the things that have been accomplished are due largely to your keen interest and unusual ability.

"We regret deeply that you cannot be with us in our Holiday Conference, but know that your heart is with us and your prayers are following us through every minute of the program.

"It is with exceeding regret that we accept your resignation. . . .

"We pray that God will restore your health and that you may continue serving Him in your beautiful and unselfish way."

ITEMS IN MINUTES OF HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

A. Lanson Granger, Jr., president of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, presided at most of the sessions and gave the opening address. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill led in the social moments when business was laid aside and good fellowship was the order. She also made a charming impromptu speech on the closing night.

Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, pastor of the entertaining church, led the devotional services at the close of each day's sessions and on Saturday morning. He also preached Sunday morning. He and his people were charming hosts and were given a vote of appreciation by the Conference.

Mrs. W. B. Williams led the Sunday Sunrise Service by the shores of Lake Virginia on Rollins College Campus.

Mrs. C. Fred Ward of the host church and teacher in Rollins College used the Sunday school hour to present the poetry of the Bible to the young people, and did it in a charming way.

Greetings were received and sent to the Holiday Conference at Defiance, Ohio.

The "Statement of Purpose" as adopted by the Pilgrim Fellowship, the national organization of young people in Congregational and Christian Churches was adopted.

Professor Malcolm White of Wadley, Alabama, was elected to be Devotional Life Superintendent to fill the vacancy made when Miss Dorothy French moved away from this section. The Executive Committee was authorized to secure a secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Irene Cotten, whose health would not permit her to continue the work. Miss Emily Carleton of Winter Park, Florida, accepted this responsibility temporarily.

Delegates to the Interdenominational and International Conference of Young People to be held at Lakeview, Ohio, next June are A. L. Granger, Jr., Miss Emily Carleton, Miss Dorothy Truitt, and Chandler Adams.

Discussion group reports were adopted, ordered edited by a special committee appointed for that purpose, and will be published in pamphlet form to be distributed to Youth Fellowship officers and such others as may desire them. (Most, if not all, of them will appear on this page.)

Those attending the Conference represented state Conferences as follows: Alabama 7, Florida 24, Georgia 5, Kentucky 1, Tennessee 2, Eastern North Carolina 1, Western North Carolina 1, North Carolina and Virginia 8, Valley Virginia Central 1, and Eastern Virginia 12. Total of 62, with every Conference represented.

It was agreed that the Holiday Conference has real value and should be continued. The exact dates and the place of meeting are to be decided by the executive committee. Alabama and Tennessee were bidding for the next session.

The "findings" from discussion groups are not supposed to be the final word on the subject but are intended to be suggestive. In each group someone was selected to make a report on what was said. This report was discussed and voted upon by the entire group, and is recorded as "findings," or the opinions and suggestions made by the group of young people in the Holiday Conference.

PERSONAL RELIGIOUS LIVING.

This group was led by Miss Moncrief of Knoxville, Georgia, and was reported by A. A. Dofflemyer of Elkton, Virginia, as follows:

Religion is a force that grows or spreads by personal contact. Thus every person must develop a program of religious living that coincides with his everyday life. Each will vary widely, but these steps will be included:

I. Build a definite "Philosophy of Life."

A. Definite faith in God and Jesus Christ.

II. Live creatively.

A. Budget time, for order is key to creative living.

- B. Get under the load of human need and lift.
- C. Prepare for life work—1. Find personal interest. 2. Look for field of service.
- D. Spend part of each day in silent meditation.
- E. Participate in cooperative worship.
- F. Destroy selfishness by stewardship.
- G. Seek God in the simple things about you.
- H. Pitch friendship on high level.
- I. Realize that Christ is perfect example.

BASIC PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JAN. 26, 1936.

(Beginning Christian Endeavor Week—Denominational Day.)

Scripture: Eph. 2:19-22.

Daily Bible Readings.

- Mon.—A teaching ministry. I Cor. 12:27-31.
- Tues.—A diversified ministry. I Cor. 12:17-31.
- Wed.—Efficient organization. I Peter 5:1-5.
- Thurs.—Effective discipline. Matt. 18:15-20.
- Fri.—Flexible organization. Acts 6:1-8.
- Sat.—A unified church. Eph. 1:27-30.

Today is the beginning of Christian Endeavor Week, celebrating the fifty-fifth birthday of the movement. Since the motto of Christian Endeavor is "For Christ and the Church" it is only fitting that we set aside the first day of Christian Endeavor Week to make a study of our own denomination.

When Dr. Francis E. Clark called his group of young people together in the parsonage of the Williston Congregational Church, Portland, Me., on February 2, 1881, his idea was to organize his young people into a group that would accomplish worth-while things "For Christ and the Church." Other pastors soon saw the effect of Christian Endeavor on the Williston Church and wanted such an organization for their own church. Down through these fifty-five years Christian Endeavor has continued to serve the Church. Our pledge emphasizes loyalty to our church and one of the basic principles of Christian Endeavor is "loyalty to Christ's Church."

On Denominational Day members of the Congregational-Christian Church should become more familiar with the basic principles and the historical background of our church. The following concise information is taken from "The Handbook for 1935."

Congregational churches were first organized in England in the Sixteenth Century, in revolt against state control of religious worship, in the demand for personal Christian experience, and in an effort to reproduce New Testament simplicity and democracy. Congregationalism sailed to our America in the Mayflower as the church of the Pilgrim Fathers. The Congregational churches have been the pioneer Protestant churches of our nation in the promotion of education, missions, evangelism, and in most movements of Christian union, religious progress, and moral reform.

The Christian Church was founded in the South in 1794 by Rev. James O'Kelly. The Christian Church has five principles:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS PREPARES FOR HIS WORK.

LESSON III—JANUARY 19, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."—Lk. 4:8.

LESSON—Luke 3:1—4:15.

Back of the life and ministry of Jesus there were years of preparation. There is no record of many of these years—eighteen of them—except one verse in the gospel of Luke. But that verse is significant. "And Jesus increased (or advanced) in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." Luke 2:52. The word translated increased or advanced is not the same word as grew. It denotes the idea of "strenuous activity." Back of it is the picture of pioneers cutting down trees in the pathway of an advancing army. It indicates that Jesus achieved character by effort. God did not give him strength or wisdom or goodness outright. "Jesus had to hack his way through life," as Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says. We know that he was a carpenter (Mark 6:3) and by his play and by his work, by clean living and wholesome exercise, by the discipline of his powers and the restraint of his appetites and his passions, he developed a strong, healthy, clean body. Jesus must have been an inspiring example of manhood at its best, not so much in the sense of a symmetrical, well-rounded, well-developed body.

And Jesus also had to acquire by effort his education. He had to observe, to study, to think, to commit to memory. God did not give him wisdom: Jesus achieved wisdom. By diligent application of his mind he grew in wisdom.

The same principle applied to his advancement or increase in "favor with God and with man." We may be sure that he mastered the social graces of his day, that he was a gentleman in the finest sense of the word. He was obedient in the home. He was friendly in the street. He has a respect for the personality of others. Jesus Christ was the world's finest gentleman. And He had to win his knowledge of God. We may be sure he studied the sacred writings of the Jewish people. He evidently learned early in life to pray. He thought much about God, and undoubtedly spent time alone with God, before His public ministry. Jesus had to achieve His knowledge of God. This is no disparagement of Him, but it is encouragement for us.

The point in all this is that back of the public ministry of Jesus there lie thirty years of preparation. That period of preparation was determinative of His life. How significant it is that He spent so long a time for so comparatively brief a ministry. It was all a part of the plan of God. And it was all a part of the redemptive plan. By the obedience of one man, by the obedience of Christ throughout his life, as well as by His death, have we been made righteous.

John the Baptist was another factor in the preparation for the work and ministry of Jesus. He heralded His coming, and in a way that could not be mistaken, asserted that Jesus was indeed the One-Who-Should-Come. No more majestic, and unselfish figure sweeps across the pages of the Bible than this fearless and faithful prophet, the messenger, the forerunner of Christ himself. John helped to quicken within the nation the spirit of expectancy which prepares in a vital way for the work of Jesus when He began his public ministry.

The Baptism of Jesus was also a factor in the preparation of Jesus. It need not be said that Jesus was not baptized for the remission of sins.

He knew no sin. But at the Baptism he openly took upon himself His ministry, and received the Father's public acknowledgment that He was acceptable to Him, and had the recognition on the part of Jesus of John's work, and a tribute to Jesus' appreciation of what John had done.

And then came the Temptation. High privilege always involves great responsibility. Great spiritual experiences are followed by times of testing. Immediately after the Baptism, while Jesus was full of the Holy Spirit, there came the Temptation.

The Temptation, in brief, represents the experience in the life of Jesus, when he faced and forever settled the principles which should guide Him in His public ministry. Should He, as the Son of God, claim special privilege, should He use His power for selfish ends, should He resort to the miraculous in His own behalf—this in essence is the subtle appeal of the first temptation: "If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread." Jesus settled once and for all the fact that He would cast His lot in with the common man, that He would not claim special privilege as the Son of God, that He would not use His power for selfish ends. Follow Him thru the New Testament and see how faithfully he held fast to this ideal.

Should He keep God first in His life, should he work on the principle that the end justifies the means, should He compromise with the forces of evil in order ultimately to get what He wanted?—this in essence is the second temptation. (Matthew reverses the order here.) There was the intimation, too, that if He did this, He might evade the suffering and shame involved in His Messiahship in the divine plan. Again Jesus announces the principle which shall govern Him through His ministry—He will give God first and only allegiance. He will not take any "short cuts." He will walk in the way of the Cross.

Once more: Should He presume upon God; should He resort to the sensational and the miraculous in order to establish His claim to be the Messiah, should He depend upon "signs" in order to get a hearing and a following?—this in essence was the subtle appeal of the third temptation. "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence." And once again Jesus charted His course and stuck to it. To be sure he performed miracles. To be sure he gave. But never to get a following, never for display, never for purposes of appealing to the crowd. Indeed Jesus again and again refused to be classed as a mere "wonder-worker." Again and again, after He had healed someone or performed some miracle, he charged those who had been benefitted that they tell no man. He was willing to have His character and His common life and His teaching be the final evidence of His divine character and mission. Jesus did not perform miracles in order to establish the fact that He was the Christ. Because He was the Christ He could perform miracles.

This interpretation of the Temptation does not go into many details which are important and interesting. For instance Jesus meets the Tempter always with Scripture. Jesus did not dally with temptation. Jesus came from the temptation with new power. All of these and many more important teaching points are here. But beyond all these, the main point for us in this lesson which concerns Jesus' preparation for His work is the fact that in the Temptation, Jesus decided once and for all His ideals or His working principles for His ministry.

Capital which overreaches for profits; labor which overreaches for wages, or a public which overreaches for bargains will all destroy each other. There is no salvation for us on that road.

—Owen D. Young.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"THE LAW OF COMPENSATION."

"Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over. . . ."

"For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Lk. 6:38.

The Atlantic Monthly brings to us from the pen of Mr. Beatrice Blankenship the following true comment:

"The law of compensation holds good if you but give it time to operate. No matter what is taken from you—sight, hearing, the person whom you most love—something will be given you in its place, and though it may not be the thing you would have chosen, it will still piece out the pattern of life. For if there is one thing merciful about life it is that things change. If joy goes and sorrow comes, sorrow will go and peace will come,—and peace is sweeter, more lasting than joy.

"Lonely as one's individual grief must be, it still brings one into kinship with those who have lived and suffered before and those who will live and suffer after. This feeling of beauty and this close kinship with humanity are mine as long as I choose to keep the vision of them. And while I have them I can say: 'There's night and day, brother, both sweet things; there's likewise a wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother. Who would wish to die?'"

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, whatever our lot, brings us into the kinship with humanity, and with beauty, and life, and with Thee. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"BUOYANT DOUBT."

"Reach hither thy finger, and see my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and put in into my side; and be not faithless, but believing."—Jno. 20:27.

There are many doubts in life. Often life seems meaningless. We do not understand the very things we use. We try to look into things spiritual and eternal and wonder without an assuring answer. But in doubtings there is a buoyant hope which drives one to press on for the goals he hopes for. Our text teaches us to reach hither thy search for truth and know.

Louis Untermeyer has written a prayer which reminds us of Newman's "Lead Kindly Light, Amid Encircling Gloom." It is as follows:

"God, though this life is but a wraith,
Although we know not what we use
Although we grope with little faith,
Give me the heart to fight and lose.

"Ever insurgent let me be,
Make me daring than devout;
From sleek contentment keep me free,
And fill me with a bouyant doubt.

"Open my eyes to visions girt,
With beauty, and with wonder lit,
But let me always see the dirt,
And all that spawn that die in it.

"Open my ears to music; let Me thrill with springs first-flutes and drums
But never dare forget
The bitter ballads of the slums

"From compromise and things half done,
Keep me with stern and stubborn pride.
And when, at last, the fight is won,
God, keep me still unsatisfied.

"God, though this life is but a wraith,
Although we know not what we use,
Although we grope with little faith,
Give me the heart to fight and lose."

WEDNESDAY.

"I BELIEVE GOD."

"I believe God."—Acts 27:25.

All hands had given up to die. There was no voice but the wind, the boom of the waves crashing against the ship, the creaking of its mighty hull and the wail of their cries waiting for death. They laid their ill luck at the feet of Paul and they would have thrown him overboard, but he cried unto them and said, "Be of good cheer, I believe God." This acknowledgment of God in the storm did something for them. They all "turned to" again and were saved.

Midst the strains and stresses of life, where things are dark and you don't know which way to go, believe in God. He still lives, and will reign till He hath put all enemies under his feet. Everything is founded on this belief. All life begins there. All life is operated there and all life ends there.

Prayer—"O Lord, give us faith to live from day to day, with tranquil hearts; to do our simple part."—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"HIDDEN SAINTS."

"Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud."—Ps. 149:5.

Someone has said:

"Hid are the saints of God, uncertified by high angelic sign." These words are true of a vast multitude of hidden, unknown good people, men and women who in their own time and way reflect the goodness of God. Their simple lives are revelations of God. They prove by the example of their lives and by the work which they accomplish, the capacity of our common nature to exhibit the attributes of the Almighty.

Prayer—Let Thy light shine on our hearts day by day, our Father, and make our lives Thy light along each day's way that others also may see the way and find God.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE THING TO GET."

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom."—Prov. 4:1-9.

Men try to get the principal thing; their only mistake is in picking it out. They try for fame, or money, or power, or ease, or pleasure. What they try for they regard as the principal thing, or they would not try for it. What they need is the correct label, and this the Bible gives them.

What blunders, what stupid and tragic blunders we all recognize in the next life, when it is too late! And the worst of all will be the waste of life in the pursuit of worthless goals!

There is but one goal worth the attention of an immortal being, and that is divine wisdom, since that is the only thing we can carry out of this life with us into the next life. Being rich in wisdom, we are rich indeed. Being strong in wisdom, we have power indeed. Rejoicing in wisdom, we have happiness indeed.

Prayer—May we be wise in time. May we make the wise choice before it is too late. In Christ's name.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SATURDAY.

"RAYS OF DIVINITY."

"Let your light so shine before men that they, seeing your good works may glorify the Father which is in heaven."

Human lives are created by God to set forth "rays of divinity," not only that, but each life, if it will, may show some grace which none other could before it and which none other will show after it. Before us stands the Divine Son of God, Jesus himself, in whom is revealed in human form the perfection of all Divine attributes in their fulness. It is this revelation that makes possible the light of our life.

Prayer—Our Father, we are greatly lacking in the Divine attributes of our Lord. Grant unto us thy spirit that we may be filled with Him. Forbid that selfishness and sin shall be-cloud our way, but may we walk in the light as He is in the light. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"THE TRISAGION."

"And one cried unto another, and said, holy, holy, holy, is Jehovah of hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory."—Isa. 6:1-5.

The "trisagion," the three holies, of the seraphim of Isaiah's wonderful vision have always impressed God's people, as they impressed the prophet. Three is the symbol of perfection: God is perfectly holy. No flaw mars the beauty of His character. No trace of sin ever comes nigh Him. In that He is immaculate we stand in awe of Him and reverence Him.

All the more do we reverence the second person of the Trinity, the blessed Son, who, though He knew no sin, was made Sin for us. All the more do we perceive the infinite sacrifice He made for us. That sin should touch us is horrible enough; that it should touch Him is dreadful beyond language to express.

By His atonement He mad the trisagion possible for us. By His assumption of our guilt He made possible our assumption of His guiltlessness. Where can our gratitude begin and end?

Prayed—As Isaiah saw Jehovah, "high and lifted up," so, our blessed Saviour, are Thou high and lifted up in the love and thanksgiving of countless mortals whom Thou hast redeemed.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

"CHATS AROUND THE FIRESIDE."

The Congregational-Christian Church at Winchester is featuring a series of Sunday evening programs, under the above title, beginning on January 26th. That evening, at 7:30, there will be presented a dramatic sketch: "Parents on Trial." On February 9th, the theme will be "Chats around the Fireside with a 'G' Man." This sketch will feature Mr. W. H. Drane Lester, who is one of John Edgar Hoover's main assistants. On February 23rd, there will be "Chats around the Fireside—on Everyday Religious Problems." This will be a question and answer meeting. The final meeting of the series is scheduled for march 8th, with "Chats around the Fireside with Our Youth." That evening a sketch entitled "Margy and Her Boy Friends" will be presented.

Rives C. Wells, Treasurer. Bro. Virginius Kilby was out of town and Thos. J. Kilby, Assistant Superintendent, opened the school. The weather was fair. The superintendent was to teach the Bible class and Mrs. G. P. Cotte had three little girls in her class, and they are, Mrs. G. Etta Bartlett Nurney, Mrs. Lizzie Smith Norment and Mrs. S. Kate Brothers, all living this day. Moral: If you wish to live to a ripe old age, attend Sunday school from your youth up. The treasurer did not have any duties to perform until July 21, when the first penny collection was taken up, amounting to 46 cents. "Despise not the day of small things," as we know what that has led to in this same church.

In 1871 the church gave $15.00 for the education of two young men who were preparing for the ministry. It was November 29, 1872, before the church had preaching every Sunday. November 8, 1873, the church pledged $20.00 for ministerial education. As early as 1875 the church had an organist, Prof. Williams, and he had served the previous year. November 3, 1883 the church paid $2.18 for Convention fund for the years 1882, 1883; Home Missions, $12.50, and on October 28, 1883, a special collection was taken and $5.23 was received. From the church minutes in 1884, Dr. Staley was a little discouraged on account of his and his family's health in Suffolk.

At the July conference, 1890, the August vacation began.

October 26, 1894, a committee was appointed to remove Willow Hill Cemetery to Cedar Hill, and it took 29 years to complete the task.

July 3, 1895, the pastor was allowed the months of September, October and November to visit the Holy Land and the pulpit was supplied by Rev. Wm. J. Laine during his absence.

February 22, 1899, the church parsonage was provided for.

October 23, 1907, Dr. W. W. Staley, on the completion of his 25th year as pastor, was given a bag with 500 silver dollars in it, Col. E. E. Holland making the presentation speech.

Many individual and union revivals have been held in the church. We have mentioned the first one in August, 1865, by the pastor, Rev. Wm. B. Wellons, with 77 converts. In 1888, Dr. C. J. Jones held one with the pastor, Dr. Staley, when some of the most substantial members were taken into the church. In 1907, Rev. John E. Brown and his singer, Rev. Mr. Curry, held one of the greatest revivals ever held in the town. The religious life of the whole town was revived and the church gained 183 members. Rev. Peter Culpeper held a revival some years ago and many people united with the church. The last two were union revivals, and then there have been quite a few revivals held by the church alone.

On Sunday, October 8, 1916, a life-sized portrait of Rev. W. B. Wellons, D. D., the founder of the church was unveiled and presented to the church as a gift from Mr. John T. Griffin, a banker of Portsmouth, Va., and a great admirer of Dr. Wellons. The portrait was painted by Mr. Mac Robbins Long, son of Judge B. F. Long of Statesville, N. C. Pictures of Capt. Robert B. Brinkley, Mr. James A. Turrentine and Deacon Wm. H. Gay have been presented to the Sunday school by their families and are now in the ladies' parlor of the church. Dr. Staley's picture is in the Junior Philathea room and Mr. Hersey Woodward's, Sr., is in the Baraca room, he having organized the Baraca Class here.

In 1884 the addition of a Sunday school room 30 x 30 feet, and a pastor's study 21 x 13 feet, was erected in the rear of the church, a connection being made so that the main church and the Sunday school room could be used as one, and the church was renovated, a new organ placed in the gallery, and a new pavement and iron fence on the front at a cost of $2,075.40.

In 1892-93, the whole church was torn down and a new church erected at a cost of $40,000.00 and seating capacity of 800, and a new Jardine pipe organ was installed at a cost of $3,500.00. This church was dedicated on January 28, 1894, Rev. C. J. Jones of Memorial Temple, Norfolk, officiating and preaching the sermon. It was a great occasion, a great congregation and a great service. One of the programs is still extant. Dr. Staley's mother and sister were present for the service.

The addition of three Sunday school rooms and rest rooms were initiated October 27, 1905, and reported by C. A. Shoop, chairman of the committee on July 30, 1913, as completed and paid for.

In 1926-28 a third addition was made to the church of fifty-two rooms at a cost of $10,255.25. The total number of rooms is now sixty and the cost about $200,000.00. As a church and departmental Sunday school it has no superior, though others have cost more money.

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

On the afternoon of December 21st, the hearts of the entire orphanage family were made sad when it was announced from the Johnston Hall at the Christian Orphanage that little Ellena Morgan of seven summers had just fallen on sleep to never awaken again in this life. She had been in the best of health for nearly a year and retired the night before as well and happy as usual. She was in a Christmas program the matron and the children were getting up for Christmas at the Johnston Hall and took her part before going to her room and singing her solo as usual. On the following morning she was taken with a convulsion and had one attack after another through the day until she breathed her last. Ellena came to the orphanage January 2, 1932. A beautiful little child with pretty light hair and beautiful blue eyes and her sweet disposition endeared her to every member of the orphanage family. She had a beautiful voice for a little child and she was a member of our singing class in 1934 and will be remembered by a number of our churches in North Carolina and Virginia as being the smallest child in the class and sang a solo entitled, "I Want to Be A Little Helper." Ellena has gone to live with the angels. Her place is vacant here, our hearts are sad. She left the imprint of her life which made us all better by her sweet influence.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

UNFINISHED AMERICA.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Thirty-five years ago a multimillionaire living in Washington, D. C., decided to build a residence in the Nation's Capital that would excel any mansion there. To his own satisfaction he accomplished his purpose. Only the best and most modern of everything, not cost, was given first consideration. Only the socially prominent had opportunity to inspect the 30-room palace when completed. Crowned heads and presidents were among the chosen few to enjoy the owner's hospitality. A magnificent pipe organ and a private theatre were only two of the many luxuries for those whose footsteps were privileged to cross the threshold of this crowning achievement in architectural beauty.

Today this mansion of another era is occupied by a division of one of the emergency agencies of the Federal Government. The plumbing and lighting fixtures are out of date, heating system outmoded, for the windows, no weather stripping, no transoms. Such fixtures found in a moderately priced residence of recent construction would greatly excel in every way. The once modern elevator is an antique. Only the wonderful wood carvings and beautiful paintings attract.

America was not finished 35 years ago, and that it why this great mansion of that period is not even suitable for a modern office building today.

Just so long as men think, this land will still be in an unfinished state. The "iron horse" of 1830 was supplanted by more modern and faster trains. The airplanes of today will be museum pieces in another age. The evolution of the automobile has been so rapid that no longer do we attempt to keep apace of its changes—changes that have circulated billions of dollars and provided employment for millions.

Great and good men in every era have decided that the genius of man had reached its peak. Men with purpose sincere have told us, and will continue to tell us, that there are no more trails to blaze, no heights to climb, no more achievements to crown our efforts. They always prove to be apostles of despair.

Progress never precedes thinking, for thinking is the mother of progress. During the depression years men have been thinking—thinking long, long thoughts. Once their plans as a result of this thinking gets into action we shall see that the greatest period of prosperity experienced in many a generation will follow.

America will remain unfinished so long as men continue to think—think constructively. Our destiny as a people is not tied to our ships of commerce, bound by our traditions, sold to the money gods, or shaped by our politicians. Our destiny lies wholly and solely in the imaginative brain of the common man. That destiny is sure, it is safe.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Some of the dominant ideals of our church are: democratic life and organization, simplicity and vitality of faith, intellectual freedom, educational efficiency, evangelistic purpose, missionary zeal, social passion, unsectarian fellowship, unselfish devotion to the extension of the Kingdom.

The Hand Book shows that in the United States there are 6,379 Congregational and Christian Churches, with a membership of 1,040,119.

The Church of Jesus Christ is larger and greater than any one denomination. We note from our scripture lesson that Jesus Christ is the Cornerstone of the Church. The spiritual fellowship of those who are surrendered to Christ as Lord and Saviour is known as the Church of Christ.

HISTORY OF SUFFOLK CHURCH.

ference to answer the charges, and from some of the reports it resembled a regular court. There was one thing that those stern rules of the church developed and that was character, which we fear is lacking today.

The music of the church has advanced with the times. At first from what we can gather, a leader with his tuning fork was present to lead the music. Later an organ was installed with an organist, then came the choir director. Several people who had the leadership of the music have been from Oberlin Conservatory, and the music of the church has compared favorably with any in this section. We mention a few of these leaders: Prof. Willie Williams, the first organist that we have found, Miss Florence Harvey, Miss Mary Castler, Prof. Miller, Miss Jennie Ballard now Mrs. Wirkler, Mrs. A. D. Bowen, Prof. Wilbur, Mrs. Bradford Kilby and Mrs. C. R. Wallace, the present organist. Among the singers, Mrs. Lizzie Carr Brinkley, Mrs. Telza Miller, Mr. W. W. Ballard and Mrs. Vernon Holland, the present choir leader. For some years we have had two choirs. The Junior choir was vested some years ago, and on November 10th this year the senior choir appeared vested.

We have tried in a feeble way to bring out some of the things regarding our church on this, the 75th anniversary, and may this only be a milestone in the life of a great institution. May her influence continue to increase with the coming years, and may she be a light unto the community pointing people to the higher things of life on earth and to life eternal through the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

OBITUARIES

CARTER.

Mrs. John Henry Carter, nee Zola May Rountree, died December 14, 1935, aged 26 years. Mrs. Carter leaves a husband, John Henry Carter, four small children: Mildred Ann, John Henry, Jr., Dean Mitchell and Glenn Ronald, a father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Sol Rountree, of Nansemond County, Va., and a grandfather, Sam Smith, Gatesville, N. C.; five brothers, Denny Rountree, Chicago, Otho Rountree of Suffolk, Jamie Pressley and Charlie Rountree of Nansemond County and four sisters: Mrs. T. M. Brown of Atlanta, Ga., Miss Leora Rountree of Suffolk and Misses Gladys and Minnie Rountree of Nansemond County.

Mrs. Carter had been a member of Holy Neck Christian Church since her childhood. Her beautiful life as a girl in her home and as a faithful and devoted wife and mother, will ever remain a precious memory. "Her sun is gone down while it was yet day." (Jer. 15:9.) "While she blessed them she was parted from them." (Luke 24:51.)

The funeral services were conducted at Holy Neck Church by the writer, assisted by Revs. Carl R. Key and W. H. Corbett. The burial was in Holland Cemetery.

N. G. NEWMAN.

NEWMAN.

W. A. Newman died Nov. 10, 1935.

Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to call from our midst, one of our faithful members.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the 1st Christian Church of Henderson, N. C., feel keenly the loss of a faithful co-worker. He gave generously of his time and means, often giving expression of his desire that the gospel might be carried to those who knew not Christ.

Therefore be it resolved: That in the passing of Mr. Newman, the Society has lost a valuable member, a loyal friend and a good man.

To his dear companion, loved ones and friends, we extend our heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things.

That a copy of this tribute be placed on the records of the Woman's Missionary Society, a copy sent to his family, and one to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

This is the Educational Number of THE SUN, and is dedicated to Elon College and the cause of Christian Education. Herein will be found most interesting and informative articles from the pens of Convention and Conference officials, as well as from members of the Elon faculty.

This personal note from our Ocean View Church is worth passing on: "You will rejoice to know that our church and Sunday School are both growing. Our pastor, Brother French, is surely one of God's finest men. He is working awfully hard and his work is bearing fruit."

A good pastor writes: "It is true that we don't have money as we once had, but we have as great opportunity and responsibility, and the same God of love and power that we always had, and I cannot see why we as His representatives are unwilling to 'launch out into the deep,' knowing His promises are true and that He is able to fulfill every one of them."

Rev. G. H. Veazey, writing of the work at Southern Union College, says: "The temporary college kitchen-dining hall is completed and school work resumed last Monday with fine prospects for the remainder of the school term. I just wish you could visit the campus and feel the spirit of the fine group of girls and boys as they go about their work and play."

Our Elon College community was saddened on January 15th, when there passed from us, to that better and happier home, Mrs. Lessie S. Brunk, in her eighty-second year. Hers indeed was a serene and beautiful life, and her going away was as tranquil and composed as the life she had lived. She was the step-mother (as devoted and considerate always as a real mother could be) of Mrs. L. E. Smith, in whose home for years she made her home. President and Mrs. Smith and family have our sympathy. The funeral was conducted from the College Chapel by Dr. W. C. Wicker, a former pastor, assisted by Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C., writing of his annual church meeting says: "We hope to carry our part of the load and have our full share of the privileges in the united church. The Annual Meeting of the Church last Thursday night revealed substantial progress. There has been a net gain of nine in membership. The apportionment for benevolences has been raised, and spent, for home expenses exceeded that of last year. All the reports were encouraging."

The following from our beloved friend and former pastor, Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, 1103 Mississippi Ave., Chattanooga, Tenn., January 16, 1936, explains and brings sad intelligence to many of our SUN readers: "Just a line to inform you that my father, Rev. A. P. Hurst, passed away yesterday afternoon at 2:30. He was living here with us in Chattanooga. Mother, Mrs. Velie and I are leaving today with the body for Holton, Kansas, for interment. I believe father had many dear friends at Elon, Burlington, Portsmouth and elsewhere in the Southern Convention who would appreciate reading this information in THE SUN and be glad to know of his unwavering faith to the very end. He was 83 years of age last June." Our venerable Brother Hurst lived with his son, Rev. A. W. Hurst while the later was pastor at Elon College and by his exemplary Christian life, and close walk with his Lord made many friends who will learn with sorrow that he has passed on. His was indeed a sublime and beautiful faith in God and love for his fellowman.

Rev. J. L. Neese and his good people of our Reidsville church are making most commendable and sacrificial efforts to add considerably to the equipment and efficiency of their present building. Several rooms for Christian Education work and an addition to the main auditorium became necessary. Under date of January 15th, pastor Neese writes: "Our prospects for this year look the best of any in the history of the church. We are getting along hopefully in our building program, but regret so much that we have had to stop our work, a work so much needed at the present time, for the lack of funds. A few more dollars would put our building in shape so that we could use a part of it now. We have set aside the first Sunday in February as "Dollar Day," asking that each member of the church and Sunday school bring a dollar on that day. We are paying as we go and do not want to borrow any money or go in debt." This is the right method, surely, and in order to achieve this end and go forward with the work, Pastor Neese and his deserving people will appreciate the cooperation of friends and any contribution that friends may see fit to make at this time. It is, indeed, a worthy cause and undertaking.

LET'S MEET OUR COLLEGE APPORTIONMENT IN 1936.

The churches of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference were asked by the Southern Convention to contribute $3,200 in 1935 for the advance of the Kingdom through Elon College. It is regrettable that we fell short in meeting this responsibility. We gave a total of $2,345.54, or $854.46 less than the amount needed from our churches for the adequate support of our college which has and is making such valuable contributions to our denomination and the great Kingdom interests.

It is not my purpose to censure any one of our churches but it is my hope that this article may stimulate some of our churches to make a greater effort to raise their college apportionment in 1936. Let us give 1935 credit to whom credit is due.

Of the forty churches (now forty-one with the addition of Asheville) of the Conference, sixteen paid their 1935 quotas in full to Elon and three others almost reached their goals. These nineteen churches contributed $1,933.76 of the total amount of $2,345.54, given to the college from our Conference. Of the remaining twenty-one churches, one gave $136.67, sixteen gave a total of only $274.80 (an average of a little over $17 per church) and four gave nothing at all.

The churches which gave nothing could at least have done something, and most of the remaining seventeen churches which gave something might by careful planning have come nearer reaching their goals. No church can meet its obligations without careful planning and working everlastingly in carrying out those plans.

But 1935 is gone, the college is short the amount which should have come from our churches. Now let's turn our faces and plans toward reaching 1936 goals in full. The college period is January and February. It is highly desirable that we raise our college apportionment during that period, for if we wait until November to pay our portion, the college will be short the amount we fail to pay, and must provide funds from other sources for operating through the larger part of the year. If our churches will in January and February take seriously their responsibility to Elon, presenting effectively the cause of Christian education to the people during this period, it can be reasonably expected that the college apportionment will be met. If, on the other hand, we wait until the end of the Conference year to make any attempt to raise our college quota, the chances are that we shall again have to go to Conference and face the fact of failure to meet our apportionment.

For years some of our people have asked for a consolidated budget for Convention and Conference institutions and causes. Leaders have said, "Include all items in our Conference Apportionment, putting our church finances on a business-like basis, and we will raise our quotas in full." In answer to this plea, the last session of the Southern Convention made such a consolidated budget, passing on to our Conference its share of the responsibility. Our Conference accepted its share of responsibility and allotment. It should be said that we did very well last year, which was our first year under the new plan, but pastors and churches should be ashamed to face the 1936 session of Conference with unpaid apportionments when it is possible for every church to meet its assignment in full if the problem is faced with a Christian sense of Stewardship.

The college offers you every cooperation in assisting you to raise your quota for Elon. Last year, your gifts through the Fifth Sunday offerings, through the church, through the dollar-a-month memberships, and through the Conference apportionment payments were credited on your total Conference apportionment. By raising your college apportionment during January and February you will get that much of your Conference apportionment paid early in the year, and you will find this a great comfort as the time of the Annual Conference approaches.

Ministers and laymen, let us set our determination and best consecration toward Kingdom building through Elon College by meeting our local church's full share of financial, moral, and personal responsibility this year. President Smith deserves and has the right to expect such support from us. Elon's continuous contribution to our church life merits this.

Located in the heart of our Conference, Elon has largely produced our ministers, and many of our best laymen have received their inspiration and educational equipment in the classrooms of Elon. This is an old story, I know, but the truth is never old if its power and implications are accepted. Let us make the power of Elon extend further into the life of our denomination and the growing Kingdom by ample support of her in 1936. It is indeed difficult to think of the success of our churches apart from Elon's contributions. It is just as difficult to think of Elon's success apart from the contributions of our churches. Let's Meet Our College Apportionment in 1936!

WILLIAM T. SCOTT,
President N. C. & Va. Conference.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dr. Hubert Herring of New York City will be at Suffolk Christian Church for an all-day session to teach the mission book, "That Other America," on Tuesday, February 18th.

Dr. Herring is director of the Council for Social Action and is recommended highly by Dr. Palmer. The public is most cordially invited to attend.

Bring a box lunch with you.

Thanking you,
MRS. HERBERT HARRELL,
Secretary.

Rev. Carl R. Key, pastor of Holland Church, began a series of sermons last Sunday night on "The Great Thoughts in the Lord's Prayer."

COMING RETIREMENTS.

The Rev. Milo J. Sweet of Elon College, N. C., the Rev. Herman Obenhaus of Chicago, Ill., and the Rev. Charles H. Harrison of Portland, Ore., having reached the age of 68, will retire on March 31st from active duty under the Church Extension Boards.

At the Mid-Winter Meetings in Evanston, Ill., next week, formal recognition will be accorded their consecrated and sacrificial labors under the Extension Boards and during their earlier ministry.

Mr. Sweet is pastor-at-large for Georgia and the Carolinas. Dr. Obenhaus is director of foreign-speaking work among German, Armenian, Bulgarian, Finish, Scandinavian and Slavic peoples. Dr. Harrison is superintendent of the Missionary Conference of Oregon.

Mr. Sweet became pastor-at-large for the Carolinas and Georgia and superintendent of the Congregational Conferences of those states in 1930. His previous pastoral career had been uniformly characterized by remarkable success. His charges had included the First Congregational Church in Tampa, Fla., the Highland Park Church, Detroit, Mich., and the First Congregational Church in Pontiac, Mich. His birthplace was on a farm near Detroit. His academic education was secured at Michigan State Normal School, the University of Michigan, Chicago Theological Seminary and the Hartford Theological Seminary, graduating from the last in the some class with Dr. C. Arthur Lincoln of Tryon, N. C., and Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, Executive Vice President of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Active membership on civic welfare committees in Tampa, Fla., and Pontiac, Mich., was rendered by Mr. Sweet. He has served as moderator of the Michigan and of the Florida Confederacy. He is a Knight Templar Mason, a member of the American Legion and has been the chaplain of American Legion posts in four cities. The Legion Post in Tampa gave him a citation for "Meritorious Service" in connection with rescue work after the hurricane in and near Palm Beach, 1928. In his attitude toward war he says: "I am neither a militarist nor a pacifist but vote for No. 3 in the plebiscite."

RETIRED BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.

Six hundred ministers, all annuitants of the Annuity Fund for Ministers wrote letters of congratulation and appreciation to Dr. Charles S. Mills of Hartford, Conn., for his seventy-fifth birthday. Dr. Mills retired as general secretary of the Ministerial Boards which include the Annuity Fund in 1928.

The letters were bound in three volumes and presented together with an engrossed testimonial to Dr. Mills at a dinner in the Union League Club, New York City on Friday evening, January 17th. The dinner was attended by thirty-five, most of whom were old associates of his in denominational work. Among those present were Dr. James L. Barton, secretary emeritus of the American Board, formerly moderator of the International Congregational Council and founder and formerly chaplain of the Near East Relief; Dr. William Horace Day, pastor of the United church, Bridgeport, Conn., president of the National Home Boards and formerly moderator of the General Council. Dr. Jay T. Stocking, pastor of the First Church in Newton, Newton Centre, Mass., and moderator of the General Council, was unable to attend, but sent a letter in which he said: "All the honor we can pay Dr. Mills is inadequate to express our debt to him. His contribution to our churches is second to that of no man living."

For more than thirty years, Dr. Mills has been a leader in the national affairs of the Congregational churches. During this period the mission boards have changed from an independent to a representative relationship to the churches through the National or General Council. Dr. Mills in 1904 was a member of a committee which planned the reorganization of the Congregational Home Missionary Society which is now included in the Church Extension Boards. He was president of the society from 1905 to 1910. Then he served three years on the polity committee which directed the major steps in the transition of the mission boards from independent to representative relationship to the churches. In 1917 he became chairman of the national commission which raised the Pilgrim Memorial Fund. From 1928 until he retired in 1928 he was general secretary of the Ministerial Boards.

Dr. Mills' ancestry through his father and his maternal grandmother goes back to fourteen of the one hundred passengers on the first voyage of the Mayflower to Plymouth, Mass., in the fall of 1620; included are John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, famed in Longfellow's poem, "Myles Standish." His maternal grandfather was Peter Smith of Scotch birth, a pioneer in New England textile manufacturing and a founder of the Smith and Dove Company, Andover, Mass.

After pastorates at Springfield, Vt., and North Brookfield, Mass., he became the pastor in succession of three of the largest Congregational churches in the country: Pilgrim Church, Cleveland, Ohio, 1891-1905; Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, Mo., 1905 to 1912; First Church, Montclair, N. J., 1912-1920. He led each in the erection of a new edifice, the three now standing among the finest church buildings in the United States. After his retirement he served two years, 1928 to 1930, as acting pastor of the First Church, Hartford, Conn. He has continued as a member of the administrative committee of the Ministerial Boards.

RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary of the Church Extension Boards, last week was re-elected president of the Home Missions Council of the United States and Canada in which twenty-three denominations are represented. The annual meeting was held in Washington, D. C., jointly with the Council of Women for Home Missions. The program was devoted mainly to a national conference on the rural church.

THE RURAL CHURCH MUST FLOURISH.

Dr. Malcolm Dana, director of the Town and Country Department of the Church Extension Boards addressed the Home Missions Council on a national plan for the rural church. He strongly emphasized the necessity of inter-denominational cooperation for the future well-being of the rural church. He proposed a rural commission in which should participate the Federal Council of Churches, the Home Missions Council and the International Council of Religious Education.

This commission would be a nucleus for creating interest in county, regional and national rural church life.

Dr. Dana spoke from the experience of a personal ministry which has been devoted to the rural church. Since 1919 he has been director of the Town and Country Department and since 1930 he has also been on the faculties of both the Yale Divinity School and Hartford Theological Seminary, as professor of rural church work.

ELON AND HER ATHLETIC PROGRAM.

For twenty-five years, the program of athletics at Elon has gradually expanded. Now we can look back over those years with a feeling of pride in the accomplishment of her teams. These teams were perhaps not all we would have liked them to have been, but when we consider the material at hand and the handicaps under which they labored, the record was most commendable.

The most noticeable advance in this branch of college activities was attained with the selection of Coach "Pea Head" Walker as director of athletics. He has been a tireless and skillful mentor. His record as coach speaks for itself. For the past three years Elon has won nine conference championships. This record is something for every alumnus and friend of Elon to always remember—an achievement about which we can all rhapsodize.

Elon has not only excelled in athletic games with smaller colleges but now her teams are playing a very commendable showing. It makes us all feel good to pick up the morning paper and read where Elon has won an athletic contest. We will never get so old that our brows will not light up with memories of these achievements.

In addition to football, baseball, and basketball, a new branch of inter-mural sports has been added—boxing and wrestling. This department is in charge of Coach Eddie Fysal, who is also assistant football coach. We now have a very able coaching staff—in fact, as good as any of the smaller colleges. We are looking forward with great anticipation to the approaching season.

We would like for each of you, friends and alumni, of the college, who know of a good student who is an athlete, to encourage him to come to Elon. You can use your influence in this direction. Won't you do it? Elon is making wonderful strides in every way. She needs your cooperation and support. Let's continue to advance. We must not retreat. We must hold what we have so arduously achieved and press on to greater accomplishments.

Class of 1910.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE CHURCH.

No person pays for his education. Every educated person more than pays for his education. That is not contradiction; it is a paradox. The State, Church and benevolent individuals learned that a long time ago. And they did well in so learning. If the individual had to pay for his education few indeed would be the educated. Only the rich could afford it. Tuition and other charges would have to be so high that only those blessed (or burdened) with great incomes could meet the demands.

On the other hand, when an individual is educated he becomes an invaluable asset to society, state, church, and community. The worth, the real value, of a truly educated person cannot be estimated in dollars. The late, lamented Dr. W. W. Staley could not have gone to college and received a diploma if he had had to pay the actual cost of his keep and teaching while in college. Educated and out in the world, the value of such a man, with trained intellect and broad wisdom cannot be held in terms of human values. He helped to uplift the Church, the community and the wide world of which he was a part.

One might as well try to tell, in terms of dollars, the worth of sunshine, the value of showers, the price of growing things, as to try to estimate the value of an education—to John Wesley, say, the founder and father of the Methodist Church.

The church long since recognized this fact as did the state, and thus both began to make their contribution and appropriations of thousands and tens of thousands, that the individual who could not pay might have a chance, knowing full well that one with such a chance would more than pay back not only full cost and interest but a hundred fold, not to an individual, but to society.

The State makes its contribution to the cost of higher education from taxes; the Church from voluntary, free-will offerings.

The Christians of the South recognized a long time ago that her youth could not pay for their education, but if their youth were educated they would pay back to the Church that had educated them, some ten fold, others a hundred fold, yea, even some others a thousand fold. The history of our convention since the founding of the college, and the history of our college since it was founded, have more than justified the faith of our fathers. This is so obvious that it needs no proof or comment. Our pulpits, our churches, our Sunday schools, our homes reflect and verify these facts. Elon College has more than proven its worth to the Church, and paid back over and over again, in culture, in progress and achievement all that the college has ever cost—and more.

And now the Church is called upon to clear our college of indebtedness, and not only give it a new lease on life, but a new impetus and redoubled energy in the work of leading us on to higher, holier and better things. We shall not turn a deaf ear to this call, knowing full well that every dollar invested by the church in Elon College will not only pay dividends in cash, but in character, enlarged life, and in greater power, prestige and progress throughout the church.

KAGAWA.

Not only the churches, but the people generally of America, are having the privilege of hearing and reading about Kagawa, possibly the world's greatest evangelist and reformer. Here's a man who has found himself by giving himself. Born a prince with princely income, he has given it all away that in giving he might get the one pearl of great price. The Methodist Church is paying him $100.00 a day on this tour of the United States in which he is preaching three times a day to audiences limited only by the capacity of the buildings in which he speaks. This money given for his services is immediately turned over by him to the cause of evangelism and building up the kingdom of God in his native Japan, whose need for the Christ seems so urgent and pressing. Possibly the reader would like to know of this man's conversion. Here is his own testimony taken from his own book, "Christ and Japan."

"As a child I was thrilled by the Shinto teaching that when men die they become miniature gods. But what a long period of waiting! No possibility of becoming a son of God until after death! And when I contemplated the tragic world these men-become-gods had left behind them, my soul was filled with unutterable sadness."

"An urge to study English led me to join Dr. Myer's Bible class. In this study I came upon Luke 12:27 (Consider the lilies . . .). Through this verse I made the momentous discovery that the love of God enfolds this universe. It filled me with joy. Now I awoke to the tremendous truth that instead of becoming a little god after death I was here and now a son of the God of all the earth, the Creator and Ruler of this vast universe. And this God is my Father, the God of love who wipes away my tears, saves me from sorrow, and from the sins hidden in my soul. The fact that Christ revealed the love of God, by the example of his life, completely captured me. With high and holy resolve I dedicated myself to translating his cross-revealing love into present day life."

When Kagawa has gone as far as he can in his evangelistic work he turns aside and writes a book and sells the manuscript for money with which to carry on his evangelistic work and supply the necessities for his very humble manner of living. Surely here is a man of God, who is worth more to the world, if such matters could be rated in dollars, than all that missionary work in Japan has cost from its beginning till now.

THE MESSAGE FOR SATAN.

Parson Bost for the Sunday Congregation of the Greensboro Daily News, thinks that there are to be many devils this year, very busy ones and that they will have to be dealt with by all and sundry of us. Always devils, and they are very busy but they seek and reap large harvests in an election year. There is just one message that a devil can understand and even a candidate for office can understand it also, declares Parson Bost. No writer in all literature has given better voice and clearer expression to that message than Luke, writer of the Third Gospel. Hear him: "Get thee behind me, Satan." The sum of the whole matter is this, to every candidate who comes to you promising more government for less money, more relief on less taxes, more education on less equipment, say just this one thing: "Get thee behind me, Satan." Even a candidate for office can understand that.

Fact is the devils have always been legion and their promises with no prospect or guarantee of fulfillment. They still lure and deceive even the very elect and storm the battlements of glory to gain recruits. It was the devil, Jesus said so, who promised the Son of God that if He would fall down and worship him all the kingdoms of the world should be His. Now Satan well knew that he didn't have one inch of the earth's surface as his own to give to anyone. He was seeking to deceive, as he has ever done, with false promises.

He deceives with the first little act of dishonesty, promising that by being dishonest one will acquire great gain; by telling a "harmless" falsehood as if any falsehood were harmless; by luring with the first drink promising that in the field of alcoholic indulgence one will reap harvests or a kingdom of gladness and glory. Satan has no kingdom to give, save the kingdom of wreckage and ruin. And the only hope, the only message for anyone who would escape and remain free of his Satanic devices is that chosen by the Son of Man: "Get thee behind me Satan."

THE EVER-PRESENT TASK.

There is one ever-present, primary, and fundamental task of the Church, and that task is evangelism. Jesus founded the church upon the evangelistic note and declaration, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." And Peter, having that vital revelation made to him, the reply came quick from His Lord, "Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church." The church from the time of its beginning till now has depended for its life and growth, progress and power, upon its willingness and activity in giving testimony to the fact that Jesus Christ is the Son of the Living God.

Jesus, Himself, confirmed this according to Acts 1:8, when he was speaking to the incipient church. "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

And John on Patmos foreseeing future conquest over Satan and sin declared that: "They drove him out by the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony." Now, evangelism is the first and ever-pressing need of the church.

We agree most heartily with these editorial words of our neighbor, the North Carolina Christian Advocate in writing to and about his Methodist brethren:

"Without evangelism our church cannot survive and it ought not to survive. A Christian who refuses to share his experience of Christ with a needy soul near him has never known Christ or understood his gospel. We must not betray our generation which needs God supremely and has a right to expect us to lead the way to find him.

"We all agree with this, but what are we going to do about it? Again I ask, what? Just drift along until summer and plan some meetings and ask a brother to come over when watermelons are ripe or the fishing is good and "hold a meeting for me." If that's your idea of facing a desperate situation I am sorry for you and for your community.

"Now here is the time to be making your plans, definite and large. Here's a chance to use your statesmanship, to cast away old worn-out methods in which you yourself have lost confidence and try a new method of approach to this whole matter. If you need suggestions turn over to your Manual of Work, page 38-49. Get some literature, talk it over with your best leaders, begin to pray about it, find out the actual conditions in your community, set some goals to guide you, remember that this is your main business and if you don't do this effectively, the rest of it can never atone for your shortcoming at this most strategic point. We have set our hands and our hearts to this grand enterprise as our chief objective for the conference year. In season and out of season let us be about our Master's business."

These are indeed salient and pressing truths both pulpit, pastor and people should take to heart.

INDIA—LAND OF CONTRASTS.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Charm, color, courtesy, mysticism—all describe India, writes Mrs. Louise Gliem Fisher of Washington, D. C., who went out last year to Satara, India, as an associate missionary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. But also in India she has found dire poverty, sickness and pitiful ignorance.

Mrs. Fisher, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Gliem, 510 South Riverside Avenue, St. Clair, Michigan, and the sister of Mrs. R. G. Hayward, 4261 Sturtevant Avenue, Detroit, served overseas as a nurse with the United States Army during the war and later was superintendent of nurses at the University Hospital, Ann Arbor, Michigan, and dean of the School of Nursing at Battle Creek, Michigan.

Flowering trees of indescribable beauty are found in abundance in India, says Mrs. Fisher, who is doing special work among the villages and at the Friendship Center in Satara. Near her residence is a laburnum tree, heavy with golden blossoms and a gul mohur full of coral colored flowers. The roadways are lined with banyans centuries old.

Most of India walks or rides in bullock carts and on donkeys. Only a comparative few use tongas, (two wheeled cart). Satara district is about the size of Connecticut and Rhode Island put together. There are 105 villages with a radius of five miles.

"In these villages there is dire poverty, sickness, and disease the like of which we never see in our American slums. India has so many loathsome diseases because little or nothing has been done about them in the villages."

On of the first village Infant Welfare Centers in all India was opened by Mrs. Fisher and Miss Picken last March. The house is built of mud and stone with a mud floor. In less than three weeks over 13 mothers and babies were coming regularly for treatment and advice.

"My professional friends would be astounded at the primitive equipment for infant welfare," comments Mrs. Fisher. "Our cupboards are made from the wood of our packing boxes. The tin which lines them to keep out rats, comes from kerosene cans. We use very ordinary brown soap, boiled soft. As I see these Indian mothers so happy to have any soap at all I often think of the careful selection of the purest castile for our babies at home."

When these babies are first brought to the clinic they are poor, diseased, and often filthy, but a few weeks at bathing, milk daily, cod liver oil and calcium, bring gratifying results. Almost every mother feeds her baby opium daily to keep it quiet and sometimes the infant never wakes again.

"Recently we had a tragic case of a baby boy with pneumonia who had been fed opium for 15 days before he was brought to the doctor. His death was a tragic lesson to the village from which he had come and the incident gave Mrs. Fisher a splendid opportunity to teach the evils of opium to that village. At Satara, Brahmins, Jains, Christians, Mohammedans and many castes have united with the Municipality, the District Local Board, the Lady Duffren Fund, the Mission, the Bombay Infant Welfare Association and the government to form the Satara Health Association and pool their resources in the interest of health and child welfare in Satara. This is almost a miraculous thing in caste-ridden India.

Mrs. Fisher is the cousin of Miss Margaret Richter of 5666 Porter Street, Detroit, Michigan.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Pastors and churches face many tasks in promoting the work of the Kingdom of God. The various Departments of the Conferences and Convention undertake to promote their respective work in the period assigned for special emphasis. At this time the churches should be interested in the opportunities offered for a study of the importance of Christian Education. In the Southern Convention Elon College is the center of interest as an exponent of this essential Department of our work.

In the past too much emphasis has been laid upon the personal element in the local church and in the institutions representing denominational activities. In the local church many people will give financial support if they like the preacher or pastor. If they do not agree with his methods or enjoy his friendship and fellowship they do not support the church. That condition arises, in basic support of Christian Education. Officials come and go but the institution goes on. The workers die but the work continues.

There is a need and a place for Elon College and its work in the bounds of the Southern Convention. This institution must have money to carry on the work of Christian Education. One of the sources of support is the Conference Apportionment suggested for every local church in the Convention. The Apportionment Committees of the various Conferences attempted to suggest a fair and equitable Apportionment for the local churches. It is possible for a large number of churches to raise these Apportionments in full. There are possible exceptions, of course. But every pastor and every church should faithfully try to reach the Apportionment as a minimum contribution to Elon College. It is not an easy task. Somehow, many people cannot understand why a of the Convention are to make contributions for the college. The Convention has also designated the amount to be given.

The college holds two notes given by the Convention, one for $112,500 and the other for $100,000, making a total of $212,500. These notes are not intended to be paid but they are intended to bear legal rate of interest. These notes constitute a part of the college's endowment and have always been regarded as binding upon the Convention to the extent of interest.

The churches are asked to contribute a total of $12,600 annually. While not stated in the Convention's action it has always been understood that this amount is to take care of accumulated interest on the Convention's notes. The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools inquires specifically as to the amounts contributed by the churches on account of these notes. Aside from being a moral and religious obligation, this responsibility becomes a legal one. The amount asked for is a modest sum in comparison with the strength of the church, the needs of the college, and the service the college renders to the church constantly.

part, because the church has emphasized raising money to pay the parson. Perhaps the church has arrived at a point where it is time to abandon that erroneous idea and approach that part of its responsibility by emphasizing the financial privilege of supporting the work of preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ. That approach gives a different viewpoint to the whole matter of church support. No church should cultivate the idea that church members should support the minister on the basis of personal likes or dislikes. Think of the unchristian standard of the people who say: "I don't like our pastor and I am not going to pay anything on his salary." Church support should rest upon a higher standard than that.

The financial support of all the Departments of the church, as represented by the various boards and institutions, should be raised to a standard which eliminates the personality of the individuals as the basis of appeal. For example, during the Educational Period churches and individuals will be requested and urged to give money for the support of Elon College. Dr. L. E. Smith is President of this Institution. The Faculty is composed of a number of men and women. The personal needs of these officials and their popularity or unpopularity should not enter into the College cannot meet its own expenses when it has a capacity of students in attendance.

Elon College has been the center of much personal bitterness in the past. It has had its share of antagonism and criticism. This has been due in large part to the conflict of individual personalities. That situation has been much improved. Personality should be dedicated to the work of the kingdom of God and personal ambition and importance should be submerged in that act of dedication. An institution such as a Church College, should not be a lengthening shadow of any man, but it should bring every personality connected with it under its own shadow. For this reason and many others the church is invited and urged to give its most liberal support to this great enterprise of the kingdom. See that your church raises its apportionment in full for every Department and Institution of the Convention, especially for Elon College.

I. W. JOHNSON.

OFFERING FOR THE COLLEGE.

The Southern Convention of the Congregational and Christian Churches has designated January and February as the period in which the churches

In designating the total amount to be given the Convention allocated specific amounts to the different Conferences:

The Valley Virginia Central	.....$ 800.00
Western North Carolina	..... 1,800.00
Eastern Virginia	..... 5,000.00
Eastern North Carolina	..... 1,800.00
North Carolina and Virginia	..... 3,200.00

The Valley of Virginia and Western North Carolina Conferences declined to accept the Convention's action but preferred to continue to operate under the old budget. Under the old budget each church is asked for a specific amount to be sent to the conference. The conference in turn is requested after deducting expenses to send the same to the Convention and the Convention pays a proportionate part direct to the college. The other three conferences adopted the Convention's budget and each church is assigned a definite amount to raise for the college. These amounts have already been sent direct to the churches. They are also published in the Annual.

The college period is slipping away. This is an earnest appeal to every local church to secure the amount for the college during this period. The college is greatly in need and will appreciate the cooperation of every pastor and every church.

The question will arise as to the relation of this offering and the campaign which is to be made to clear the college of its debts. The two are entirely separate of course. The amount asked for by the Convention is a part of the conference budget and is to take care of a specific Convention obligation. At present all the endowment that the college has is in the hands of its creditor, not endangering hypothecating the principal of the endowment in any way, but the income has been assigned to the creditor to help discharge the college's debts. The money contributed by churches is the college's only source of income in addition to tuition and fees. I wish that I could appeal to the churches with such earnestness that I could secure full and complete cooperation that the college may go through this Spring without financial embarrassment. We have been able to balance our budget so far but of course this will be impossible during the spring months unless the churches come to our assistance in a most generous way. If the entire amount of the Convention's asking ($12,600) could be received by the college we would then be able to meet all requirements up to Commencement. This would leave the summer months to be cared for. I hope that the pastors, churches and friends of the college will see clearly the distinction between the amounts asked for from the churches and the amount required for the cancellation of the debt and that everyone will cooperate to the fullest extent of his ability that the fine record that the college has made so far this year may not be marred in the least but may be more intensified. We did pretty well last year but we can do much better and will by the generosity and cooperation on the part of everyone.

L. E. SMITH.

DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC.

The department of music is realizing its year of greatest activity for some time. Due to the rapid expansion of the department, it was found necessary to add another teacher in piano and organ. Mr. Fletcher Moore of Burlington, N. C., was chosen for this position. Mr. Moore was a member of Elon College's class of 1934; since graduation he has earned his Master of Arts degree from Columbia Teachers College, and has done further work in Juillard Graduate School of Music in New York City. The enlarged student body has given the music department a record enrollment both in the college and at the branch studio in Burlington.

Another new member of the music faculty takes her position at the beginning of the second semester. Miss Susan A. Webb, for a number of years teacher at Salem College, begins her duties here as teacher of violin. She succeeds Mrs. Kay Rickert Dofenbacher, recently resigned.

In the extra-curricular activities of the music department, increased activity should be noted. The college choir, known as the Elon Singers, has a present active membership of fifty voices, the largest enrollment of its history. Under the direction of Dwight Steere, assisted by Miss Helen Chamblee, teacher of voice, with Fletcher Moore at the organ, it enriches the services of the Elon College Community Church Sunday after Sunday. The choir is now preparing for its annual tour.

In the instrumental field there is also evidence of growth. Under the direction of Landon Walker, the band has grown from a minimum group of a dozen players which served the school last season, to an active and effective group of twenty-five players. Mr. Walker has also organized the college orchestra, which will make itself increasingly useful at college functions in the future.

There is a good reason to believe that music is playing an increasingly important part in the student life of Elon College. Larger groups are attending the monthly Vesper Recitals and more interest is being constantly shown in the musical aspect of the cultured life.

THE COLLEGE BAND.

DEPARTMENT OF SPEECH.

The department of speech at Elon College offers a four-year course leading to a diploma. The student receives training in voice production, diction, bodily expression, literary and dramatic interpretation, and the selection and preparation of material suitable for public reading. In the senior year the student presents a three-act play in recital. A certificate is granted upon the completion of three years' work and the presentation of a recital of miscellaneous readings.

Many students who do not plan to work toward a diploma or certificate in speech find expression lessons extremely helpful in developing poise and self confidence and overcoming incorrect habits of speech.

A course in public speaking is offered and is open to all members of the student body. Elon trains many young men for the ministry and these students find this course invaluable.

The Elon College Players offer speech students and others interested in dramatics, opportunity for experience in acting and various phases of play production. During the school year this club presents three programs—a three-act play in the fall, a group of one-act plays in the early spring, and a three-act play as a part of the commencement program.

The Players are proud of the production this fall of Henrik Isben's famous play, "A Doll's House." The difficult roles were capably handled by the young actors and actresses. Much of the success of the production was due to the effective costumes designed and made by members of the home economics department. A setting, correct as to period and in keeping with the spirit of the play, was designed and constructed by the students. The Players are now planning for a group of one-act plays to be presented in March.

FLOYD CHILDS,

Head of Department of Speech.

HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT.

The department of home economics is planned to meet the needs of two distinct groups, those who wish to take the work as a major and those who wish to take courses as electives. Students who major in home economics may take education as a minor and receive a "Grade A" high school certificate. By adding a course in geography and a course in methods of teaching general science, a student may receive also an "A" certificate in general science.

If one does not wish to teach home economics, but to go into some other field such as dietetics or designing, she may take related subjects instead of education.

Those who wish to take courses in home economics as electives may take a foundation course in food, which is planned to teach the composition selection, care, methods of cooking and serving "every-day" foods. Or she may take a foundation course in clothing which aims to teach economics of textiles, pattern selection and alteration, and the construction of simple garments.

If she elects she may take a course in house planning and furnishing.

LAURA HOWARD,

Head of Home Economics Dept.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE CONVENTION BUDGET.

We are now in the midst of the period designated by the Southern Convention as the "College Period." There is a two-fold purpose in allotting a definite period in the church calendar to church institutions of higher learning. The first is to emphasize the importance of education as it relates to church work, which in our case means the relation of Elon College to the churches of the Southern Convention. The second is to allot a definite time in which to raise that portion of the Convention budget which goes to Elon College.

By this time every church within the Convention ought to be familiar with the financial plan adopted at the last session of the Convention. Under that plan each constituent Conference was apportioned a definite amount for Elon College, with the request that each Conference in turn determine and apportion to each church such an amount as the Conference should feel that that church should be able to raise for Elon College. From the Conferences and churches that have really tried to follow this plan, have come reports that were enthusiastic in its praise. It offers the possibility of every institution of the Convention receiving its proportionate part of financial support. And at the same time it offers to the local church the opportunity to provide adequate support for the various institutions of the Convention in the easiest possible way.

THE ROTUNDA OF THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

The most serious difficulty in the way of Elon College receiving the support that it so richly deserves from our churches has been the fact that we have not recognized a definite time to make our offerings for the college. When the most of our churches think of Thanksgiving they think of the Orphanage offering. When a great many of our churches think of Easter they think of the special offering to be taken at that time for missions. That is exactly as it should be. This has not only meant more adequate support for the Orphanage and missions; but it has made for the spiritual enrichment of the churches that have entered into the plan.

What we have done for the Orphanage and missions we should likewise do for Elon College. Even though there is no great event of religious importance which we celebrate within the College Period, that does not mean that we may not make it a period of rich spiritual significance in our churches. When we think of the contribution which Elon College has made in the individual lives of so many of us, and the contribution which it has made to all of our churches, we have every occasion to make the College Period one of rich significance.

If we honestly face the facts we would have to admit that most of us have regarded the support that we have given to Elon College as one of the burdens that must be borne. There are indications that many churches regard all calls that come to them to support enterprises outside their immediate environs as burdens that must be borne. But in the Conference of which this writer is a member there were some churches that gave the impression when they reported that they had raised in full the askings for Elon College, that the raising of those funds had really been a joyous experience.

There is always a sense of satisfaction in the doing well of a worthy task. That satisfaction is always greater when the task has been done freely and promptly. One never derives the full measure of spiritual benefit from any task that is done from a spirit of necessity. As we face the opportunities and challenge of the College Period, let's all of us resolve to try to meet the apportionment for Elon College within the period allotted to the end that the College may receive that which it needs and so richly deserves, and do it in such a way that we may all be happier in the doing.

STANLEY C. HARRELL.

President Southern Convention

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

A call for help from our conference comes to our churches, our leaders, and our entire constituency for our college. If you will read the front page of our church paper of January 16th, and the letter from the President of the college in the same institutions and convention enterprises; secondly, to follow the calendar set up by the convention in raising contributions for the college during the college period; viz, January and February. During this period all money raised for the college will be credited to the apportionments requested from the several churches. The management of the college thinks that such a course will not only help the college financially, but will be of great spiritual and educational value to the younger people in developing love and loyalty to the local church when credit is given the church through the conference.

Ministers are the key men of the situation. When they promote, support, advocate and defend the work of the college, they not only help the institution, but they are more appreciated by the progressive people of their congregations. When they fail to support the institutions and enterprises set up and supported by the Convention, they fail to show that loyalty which they solemnly promised when they were ordained leaders of the church. We appeal in the name of Christ and the Church to all those who love His cause to come to the support of the college now and assist in financing the college and liquidating the balance of the outstanding debt so that the college may appeal successfully to Educational Foundations for further endowment to meet our current needs and carry forward our educational service to the young people of the entire church.

We have been delighted to see a changed attitude of the ministers and leaders of our conference. At our last session of conference, there was evidence of enthusiastic and loyal appreciation for the college. This grew out of the information and understanding of what great service and sacrifice that our president made and is making with an unselfish spirit to save the college when all others seemed to despair of its restoration, salvation, and rejuvenation from the heavy burden of debt in the face of the depression through which we were going.

We call as president of the conference upon the entire conference to rally as never before to the needs of the college in this special undertaking to liquidate the college debt. There are many in our conference that by Christian sacrifice can through united effort do a large part in helping to realize the dream of our college free from debt.

W. C. WICKER.

AN ALUMNUS BY PROXY.

I attended Elon just as Mark Twain said he climbed the Matterhorn—by proxy. Perhaps it was so intended, for the college was thereby enabled to make a profit on my attendance. I paid five dollars as a reservation fee for a room. This, of course, was not to be refunded. Now, had I attended I would have been a burden to the college, for no student's tuition actually pays for his instruction. Moreover, no institution has ever boarded me and succeeded in realizing a profit.

Having some first-hand knowledge of the strategic place of the college in the program of other denominations, I realize all the more keenly the importance of Elon to our denomination. I am, therefore, anxious to offer my word of testimony.

Elon is good advertisement for every Christian church. And yet the amount contributed by the average church to this character-building and soul-saving institution is doubtless less than that invested by business houses of similar strength in advertising. The church may well beware of too much commercial advertising. Nevertheless, if the church is to grow, it must have publicity. We have been slow to realize this. Why not capitalize the location, the architecture, the program of the local church to give it wider publicity? Now Elon, through its wide influence and far-reaching contacts, offers a type of legitimate advertisement issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, you will see the nature of the call and the urgent reason for a united response at this time as never before. When Dr. L. E. Smith became president of the college in 1932, we had only 231 students enrolled, now we have 461. At that time there was a debt on the college of $704,170.84, now the debt is $162,000. Through the untiring efforts of our president and the sacrificial spirit of those who had faith in him and the future of the institution, $542,170.84 of the debt has been liquidated. The lost confidence in the future of the college has been restored with our constituency and the business world. The loyalty and support of our ministers who received their education at the college at great sacrifice of loyal teachers when they were barely able to eke out an existence on their meager salaries, has not only been restored but in view of what they received, out of their gratitude, they are ready to rally to the college with all their influence and leadership among their people.

In this call for help we appeal to all the people of our conference, all ministers and pastors, all alumni of the college, all church leaders and officials, all organizations—Sunday Schools, Endeavor Societies—all men, women and children, to cooperate; first, in promoting the spirit of our churches to greater loyalty, greater service to all the worthy calls of the conference from our public which is an asset to every church of our denomination. It is building up dividends of interest, sympathy and leadership which will surely accrue to your church and mine during the coming years. So our offering to Elon is not a gift, it is an investment!

to Elon. By so doing we maintain our intellectual self-respect and cast a financial ballot for an educated ministry, and intelligent laity, and an emancipated church.

ROBERT LEE HOUSE, President,

are desirous of cooperating with those of the other conferences in promoting the kingdom interests.

Just at this time Elon College holds first place in our thinking, in our prayers and in our giving, as January and February are set apart in our Convention calendar as college months.

ONE OF THE ATTRACTIVE WALKS ON THE ELON CAMPUS.

We like to flatter ourselves that we have been pioneers in education. There is an element of truth here. But if such has been our reputation, we must admit that we have not always deserved it. Too often we have been willing to make our bid for followers by entering through the back door of mere emotional appeal rather than by walking boldly up to the front door of intellectual inquiry. There is yet a great need of better trained leaders in the pulpit and the pew. We used to repent of our sins and make a substantial offering

AN ARDENT APPEAL FOR THE COLLEGE.

This note is addressed to the members of the various churches of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational Christian Conference. As you remember, at the last session of Conference, it was thought best at that time not to concur in the larger budget of the Convention. This action, I am sure, was not taken because of lack of loyalty to the Convention or lack of interest in the enterprises sponsored by the Convention. I am persuaded that the members of our Valley churches

The appeal that comes to us for Elon College is a two-fold one. First, the need. This goes without saying that the need is tremendous. So we emphasize this point just to say that if we all pull together and do what we can the success of the college and its continuance are assured.

Second, the college merits our best endeavors. Its glorious purpose, its past achievement, its present attainments and its future promise to emphasize the fact that our college is worthy of our

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

HELPING OTHERS TO BE CHRISTIAN.

This group at the Winter Park Christmas Conference was led by Earl G. Ward of Winter Park, Fla., and reported by Mary Armfield of Greensboro, N. C.

Christianity is not merely a part of life, but is life itself. Therefore, those who have found the true "life" want others to know about it. The following are suggestions for sharing with others.

I. Put the ideals of Christianity into practice in everyday life, for actions speak louder than words to other young people. Welcome challenge to show Christianity in deeds, for this will result in Christian character. Thus Christianity will overshadow ideals of material success or militarism in minds of other young people.

II. Make Christianity attractive to the young people. Make it affirmative rather than negative. Prove by actions that this is the happiest way of life.

III. Definite Methods include (a) personal talks, (b) young people's groups, (c) summer training schools, (d) definite share in work of young people's organizations.

Summary:

"I'd rather see a sermon
Than hear one any day.
I'd rather one would walk with me
Than merely point the way.
The eye is a better pupil
And more willing than the ear,
Fine counsel is confusing,
But example's always clear.
The best of all the preachers
Are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good put in action
Is what everybody needs."

—Edgar A. Guest.

WORKING TO HELP SOLVE THE LIQUOR PROBLEM.

Discussion led by A. Lanson Granger, Jr., of Norfolk, Va., and reported by Alice Goodhue of Wadley, Ala., and Carl Ekblad of Demorest, Ga.

I. Education is an important method of solving the liquor problem. The church, school, home, press, and radio should be used to spread abroad facts concerning the effects of liquor upon a person and the menace the drinker becomes to society. Make known objection to press and radio being used and subsidized for liquor advertisements. Send personal letters to any paper or radio using such advertisement. Concentrate group objections on national broadcasting companies.

II. Plan church programs of such nature as to interest young people far more than do the objectionable forms of amusement.

III. Conduct liquor plebiscite among young people of Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southeast. Material for study and a questionnaire asking the individual's viewpoint about the use of liquor and ways in which the problem can be handled, to be prepared and furnished by a committee composed of Rev. L. A. Gedcke of St. Petersburg, Fla., A. Lanson Granger, Jr., now of Elon College, N. C., Miss Edna Fulcher of Norfolk, Va., Prof. Malcolm White of Wadley, Ala., and Carl Ekblad of Demorest, Ga.

HELPING BUILD A CHRISTIAN ECONOMIC ORDER.

The leader of this group was Professor Malcolm White of Southern Union College, Wadley, Ala., and the report was made by William Davenport of Daisy, Tenn.

It was decided to assume that the purpose of the discussion was for us as Christians to pass judgment on our present economic order. The following is submitted as findings of the group:

I. Friendship diplomacy should be used instead of dollar diplomacy in dealing with other nations. Respect rights of each nation. American business men should be fair in their dealings in foreign nations.

II. Army and navy be only large enough for protection of the United States and its possessions. The more nations prepare for war, the more danger there is of war. Protection of American business in foreign countries is sometimes dangerous.

III. Tenant conditions, especially, in agricultural areas of the south, should be improved by Christians. Aid in securing ownership of land, introduce better methods of farming and new food products to be grown.

IV. Christians should take a pacific attitude in industrial disputes, entering into strikes only after every possible means of arbitration has failed, and then be sure to be on the side of justice but have the courage to fight for right.

V. Government control of munitions and some forms of utilities seems to be wise.

VI. Present economic order cannot be corrected by moral pressure only, but young people should be encouraged to enter politics as such and to assume responsibilities as citizens.

BEING CHRISTIAN WITH OTHER RACIAL AND CULTURAL GROUPS.

This discussion was led by Miss Priscilla Chase of Elon College, N. C., and the report presented by Miss Edna Fulcher of Norfolk, Va., and Charles Gant of Sanford, Florida.

I. Recognize that every race has made an indispensable contribution to civilization.

II. Local groups should discuss race difficulties, using facts as a basis and under capable leadership.

III. Hold inter-racial group meetings.

IV. Think of all people as being essentially alike.

V. Build appreciation and understanding of other races through (a) special programs, (b) study classes, and (c) by presenting their racial and national contributions along the lines of art, music, literature, science, and religion.

VI. Eliminate from speech terms of derogation such as "Jap," "Nigger," "Dago," and "Wop."

PREPARING FOR MARRIAGE AND HOME LIFE.

Miss Annie Campbell of Roberta, Ga., led this group and the report was made by Misses Joy Grigsby of Elon College, N. C., Lillie Horne of Burlington, N. C., and Louise Avery of St. Petersburg, Fla.

I. Discussion Groups in local churches. Topic interesting to young people. Leader should be informed but not dictatorial. History of family makes good beginning for study. Conduct in scientific manner, use facts. Divide group as to sexes or ages for discussion of certain problems.

II. Consider in discussion:

A. Period of courtship.

B. Choice of life-mate.

1. Should complement or supplement each other.

2. Church affiliations agreed upon.

3. Mental capacities.

a. Insanity tendency to be avoided.

b. Education should be similar.

4. Physical condition.

a. Examination before marriage important.

C. Period of engagement—not too long.

D. Economic conditions today

1. Position of women?

2. Man capable of supporting family?

3. Marriage is being postponed on account of lack of money.

Brief Outline of Christian Endeavor.

The Christian endeavor Society is a world-wide movement engaged in recruiting, developing and training young people in service "For Christ and the Church." Through fifty-five years Christian Endeavor has served the youth of the church. When Francis E. Clark organized the first Christian Endeavor Society in the Williston Congregational Church, Portland Maine, February 2, 1881, he never dreamed that he was giving to youth a world-wide movement. Today Christian Endeavor is international, interdenominational, and inter-racial. It is found in nearly 100 denominations; having a total of 80,000 societies with more than four million active members. They speak hundreds of languages and dialects, but the single aim in which they are united is to live better lives and do better service for Christ and the Church.

Christian Endeavor has four basic principles, namely: Confession of Christ; Service for Christ;

JESUS DECLARES HIS PURPOSE.

LESSON VI—JANUARY 26, 1936

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, Because he anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor; He hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives, And recovering of sight to the blind, To proclaim the acceptance year of the Lord."—Luke 4:18, 19.

LESSON TEXT: Luke 4:16-44.

In the lesson for last Sunday Jesus declared the principles that were to guide him in his ministry. In today's lesson He declares the purpose or spirit of that ministry. He makes this declaration in Nazareth, his home town. And thereby hangs a tale, an interesting tale.

Jesus in His Home Town.

Jesus had already done some teaching in other parts of Galilee. (Luke 4:15.) And He had had remarkable success, for Luke says He had been glorified of all. News of His success had reached Nazareth, where He had been brought up, and when he returned to Nazareth, everybody was on tip-toe. A great crowd had gathered in the synagogue, and there must have been an atmosphere of expectancy when the young man stood up for to read. It is always a great moment when the "home-town" boy returns home after he has gained recognition out in the world.

The attendants gave the roll to him, that is, a copy of a book of the Bible, in this case the book of the prophet Isaiah. Jesus was perfectly at home in this book. He did not have to fumble around to find what He wanted, and He did not have to pick at random the first thing He hit upon. He "found the place where it was written"—He knew His Bible. And He selected a few verses from the book of Isaiah which had been a prophecy of His ministry, and which He made the platform and purpose of His ministry.

The Spirit and Purpose of Jesus' Ministry.

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me . . ." God sent Christ into the world for a specific purpose. He anointed Him to fulfil a specific ministry. And anyone who reads the words and works of Jesus knows that the Spirit of God worked through Jesus. The things that Jesus did and the things He said are what we would expect God to do and say.

"To preach the gospel to the poor"—the poor in this world's goods, and the poor in spirit,—to the one as to the other the words of Jesus have come as the "good news" which is what the word "gospel" really means. Of course Jesus' ministry was to all people. But in its insistence on the sanctity of every personality, in its emphasis upon the worth of the common and the commonest man, in its assurance of salvation to the lowliest, the gospel of Jesus has always been good news to the poor.

"To heal the broken hearted"—thanks be unto God for the comfort wherewith He comforts and heals the broken in heart. Men and women thru the centuries have found that there is healing in His touch, healing to the broken heart and the wounded spirit. Christ is the Great Heart Specialist. His speciality is the human spirit.

"To preach deliverance to the captives," literally and figuratively. Christ sets men free from bondage. The old hymn touches the heart of His ministry when it says: "He breaks the power of reigning sin, he sets the prisoner free." Christ is the Great Emancipator.

"And recovering of sight to the blind." Here again there was a literal fulfilment, for there are several references or records of Christ giving physical sight to the physical blind. But in a far larger way Christ gives sight to those who are spiritually blind. He had the clearest view of life, and he helps men to see things clearly. At His touch men see things in their true perspective. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned.

"To set at liberty them that are bruised." This seems to be a free translation of Isaiah 58:6: "to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke." the word "bruised" means to shatter, to break in pieces, to break in pieces by calamity. Against the dark background of the impoverishing, blinding, binding, bruising power of sin is seen the life-giving, redemptive, healing ministry of Jesus. Christ is the Great Physician.

"To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." Behold now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation. Salvation belongs not only to the future; it pertains also to the present.

Here in brief, and in pictorial, and yet practical language is the self-accepted purpose of Jesus' ministry. It has both a personal and a social application. I am under the impression that it is what E. Stanley Jones would define as Christ's Alternative to Communism.

Unwelcome Truth.

This young teacher, this "home-town boy" started off well. There were ohs! and ahs! from the congregation as they wondered at the "gracious words" that proceeded out of His mouth. They were surprised that Joseph's son could speak so well, but they were delighted with his gracious message. That is, until He began to bring the truth out of the realm of the general and the vague down into the realm of the practical and the personal. This young fellow had the audacity to say that God cared as much for foreigners, for the Sidonites and the Syrians, as He cared for the Jews. That was too much. "They were filled with wrath." They were so angry that if they could have done it, they would have thrown Jesus over the high hill at the edge of the city. But there was a look and a bearing about the young fellow that made them afraid to do what they desired to do.

Well, folks have not changed much. They still like to hear the truth so long as it is vague and general, so long as it hits others. But let a preacher bring that truth home, let a preacher today in many places preach that God loves the Negro as much as he loves the white man, that the Jew is as precious in His sight as a Nazi German, that money is intimately related to a man's spiritual life, that a man's loyalty is to God and not to a political party, that the liquor traffic is a denial of everything for which the kingdom of God stands, that religion touches every phase of a man's life—let him preach these and other truths, even though he preach them in love, and folks will become angry, one is almost tempted to say "get mad." And yet after all that is what folks need, and what they really want. Deep in their hearts folks do not want to be lulled; they want to be challenged.

AN ARDENT APPEAL.

most earnest prayers and our most sacrificial giving.

So, brethren and sisters of the Valley churches, let's unite our efforts to make glad the heart of President Smith, who has laid his life on the altar for the college and help make the dreams come true of those who have sacrificed for the college in the past. Above all that our Lord may be glorified and His cause strengthened and extended.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"PRAYER A CHARM."

"And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive it."

Chaplain Sidney K. Evans, U. S. N., now retired, in a recent sermon said:

"Prayer is not a charm to be used as a substitute by the physically, mentally or spiritually indolent. God will bless us in our prayers only when we use our common sense, our God-given power of judgment, initiative, and industry in the desired sphere of action."

How true that is! However, there is a charm in prayer. When one prays in faith "nothing wavering," when one can pray as knowing God, when one prays with plastic resignation, the peace of soul that comes, the contentment of mind, the opening of doors, the gifts that are bestowed, the understanding of spiritual life that lights the way, the open manifestations of God to the soul, the light of love that seeks to be and to do all that God expects his beseeching child to do, all are luring charms as one walks in that field. It is the Kingdom of God not yet revealed to those who never entered it.

Prayer—O Lord, teach us to pray, and teach us to say the prayer once taught the disciples, to say, "Our Father—(say the Lord's Prayer and ponder its every word).—Amen."

TUESDAY.

"WORK—BUSY GATHERING."

"He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth."—Matt. 12:30.

"Arise, my soul! nor dream the hours
Of life away;
Arise! and do thy being's work
While yet 'tis day.

"The doer, not the dreamer, breaks
The baleful spell,
Which binds with iron bands the earth
On which we dwell.

"Up, soul! or war, with fiery feet,
Will tread down men;
Up! or his bloody hands will reap
The earth again.

"O dreamer, wake! your brother man
Is still a slave;
And thousands go heart-crushed this morn
Unto the grave.

"The brow of wrong is laurel-crowned,
Not girt with shame;
And love and truth and right as yet
Are but a name.

"From out time's urn your golden hours
Flow fast away:
Then dreamer, up! and do life's work
While yet 'tis day."

—G. T. B.

Prayer—Our Father, give us the will, the spirit and the power to be, and the power to believe with all our hearts, to work with all our mights, to be useful in the interest of the world, to possess the mind of Christ and to express that mind in our every day duties.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"WORK."

"I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day."—John 4:9.

From The Prophet, by Kahlil Gibran.

"You work that you may keep pace with the earth and the soul of the earth.

"For to be idle is to become a stranger unto the seasons, and to step out of life's procession, that marches in majesty and proud submission towards the infinite.

"When you work you are a flute through whose heart the whispering of the hours turns to music.

"Which of you would be a reed, dumb and silent, when all else sings together in unison?"

"Always you have been told that work is a curse and labour a misfortune.

"But I say to you that when you work you fulfill a part of earth's furthest dream, assigned to you when that dream was born.

"And in keeping yourself with labour you are in truth loving life.

"And to love life through labour is to be intimate with life's inmost secret.

"But if you in your pain call birth an affliction and the support of the flesh a curse written upon your brow, then I answer that naught but the sweat of your brow shall wash away that which is written."

Prayer—Our Father, if true work is after Thy plan, may ours tend to that end, that in us and in the world there may be the completion of Thy temple where Thou dost reveal Thyself in fulness forever.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"MAN'S BEST FRIEND."

"For the Lord is good; His mercy endureth forever."—Ps. 100:5.

God is good notwithstanding misfortune, poverty and suffering. From Alexander Wythe, by Newman the following is quoted: "I cannot hear, God bless you," was Newman's message to his old friend Mr. Gladstone in November, 1888. Newman's delight in men, in books and in affairs had all his life been intense, and he had a strong desire that his life might be prolonged to its utmost possible span, if it was the will of god. "For myself, now, at the end of a long life," he wrote, "I say from a full heart that God has never failed me, has never disappointed me, has ever turned evil into good for me; when I was young I used to say (and it was not presumptuous to say it) that our Lord ever answers my prayers."

Prayer—O Lord, give us thy help, guidance and support in all life's way. As Thou dost provide for the world which Thou hast made provide Thou for us, and may it be so that we shall be continually in touch with Thy spirit and always confide and trust in Thee as our closest friend.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"UNWAVERING FAITH."

"But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering, for he that wavereth is like the waves of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord."—Jas. 1:6, 7.)

"When the anchors faith has cast are dragging in the gale,

I am quietly holding fast to the things that cannot fail.

I know that right is right, that it is not good to lie;

That love is better than spite, and a neighbor than a spy;

In the darkest night of the year, when the stars have all gone out,

That courage is better than fear, and faith is better than doubt;

And fierce though the fiends may fight, and long though the angels hide,

I know that truth and right have the universe on their side,

And that somewhere beyond the stars is a love that is better than fate;

When the night unlocks her doors I shall see Him, and I can wait."—Anonymous.

Prayer—Dear Father, grant unto us the great truths which should guide our judgment. Give us power to judge between good and evil and write Thou them upon our consciences in characters which nothing can efface. Grasping the elements of good we shall be able to look accurately at things and faith will be the power. In Christ's name.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"RESTORATION."

"Thou shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them; thou shalt surely bring them again unto thy brother." Read Deut. 22:1-4.

It is easy to appropriate lost articles. "Findings keeping's," says the old proverb. But Moses did not think that finding was keepings; he thought that what was found should be brought back, if its owner could be found.

Our Lord came to seek and to save what was lost. "Lost" plays a large part in His teachings. The lost coin, the lost sheep, the lost son—these are among the sweetest of His parables. With Him it was not merely a matter of restoring what was lost if it was accidentally encountered, but of going after it until it was found.

Blessed is the work of the restorers—restorers of lost reputations, of lost children, of happiness, of lost health, of lost fortunes, of anything that is lost! Blessed above all others are the restorers of lost souls!

Prayer—Give us, dear Saviour, Thy searching spirit. Help us to help the seekers. And grant that we may realize that those who seek in Thy name are sure to find.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"HOPE UPHELD."

"I hope in the Lord Jesus to send Timothy shortly unto you." Read Phil. 2:10-30.

That is a remarkable sentence of Paul's, "I hope in the Lord Jesus." Why did he not simply say, "I hope"? Because he felt that none of his hopes were substantial unless they had the Lord's will beneath them. Because he did not want to cherish any hope, however dear to his human soul, that was not also the hope of his heavenly Friend.

We make far too many plans on our own account. The good old phrase, "Deo Volente" (D. V.), "God willing," has gone out of fashion. It sounds hypocritical, rather superstitious, to our silly modern ears. Rather, it is the soundest of common sense.

For what is our will, apart from God's? What right have we to cherish a hope or form a purpose that has not the divine signature upon it?

Prayer—Place Thy approval, O Christ, on all our living. So hoping in the Lord Jesus, we shall not hope in vain.—Amen.

THE BOW IN THE CLOUDS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth."—Gen. 9:13.

"Behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne . . . and there was a rainbow about the throne."—Rev. 4:2, 3.

My friend used to catch either end of the hickory rod he was sand-papering down for a fishing-rod, and say, "Do you see how supple it is," as he began to pull down with each hand bending it more and more until it formed a complete circle by finally touching each end together. I suspected it would break. But it didn't. It went from a straight rod to a bow, and from a bow to a circle.

The Bible is a wonderful revelation of God. In so many ways we see its uniqueness. For instance here in the first Book, Genesis, we read of the rainbow, then turning to the last Book, Revelation, again we read of the rainbow,—making, as it were, a bow in itself. Then God seems to take each end of the bow in his hands, and pulling them together we see the complete circle around the throne! It is heaven's reminder of earth's need. It is the heavenly shining which gives a softness to earth's clouds! It is a guarantee that God who sits upon the throne will never forget the needs, the problems, the sorrows, of the earth, his footstool.

What a beautiful sign!

"My heart leaps up when I behold

A rainbow in the sky:

So was it when life began

So is it now I am a man

So be it when I shall grow old,

Or let me die!

The Child is father of the Man;

And I could wish my days to be Bound each to each by natural piety."

So says William Wordsworth, who was one of England's good men: uncle of a minister, brother of a minister, and father of a minister of the anglican church. Do our hearts leap up when we behold a rainbow in the sky? Or have we become so sophisticated that we cannot see the signature of God to more of his most glorious and beautiful covenants with all creatures upon the earth? There are five observations I wish to make about the bow in the clouds:

I.

God's bow is a bow of beauty! Beauty is one of the trinity of goodness, beauty, and truth. As God loves goodness, and as God loves truth, so also God loves beauty. I wish I were able to express what I feel about God's love for the beautiful. Our love of the beautiful is but a reflex of God's love for the beautiful. On every hand we see beauty. There are those, it is true, who cannot seem to appreciate the beautiful. They hold to honesty and let beauty go, nor can they see any connection between goodness and beauty, but honesty is beautiful, and truth is beautiful, and the handiwork of God is beautiful. No we dare not leave out of our scheme of things. God has not.

II.

God's bow is a portion of God's circle! There it is in the clouds. How beautiful! But we can never see all of it. It is only a bow, an arc, a portion of the whole circle. We can never know all the meaning of God's providences. He is beyond our finding out. We may understand. But nevertheless the bow is there, and God is there! God looks on our life as a whole. He does not desire us to see the ending from the beginning. It is not best. And the same thing about the progress of the race. We may fret and worry today about everything having "gone all to the dogs" as is too often the cry, but let us remember that the whole pattern is not yet finished, and let us take courage and join with God in bringing things out as they ought to be.

III.

But that is not all, God's bow is a bow of mercy! How majestic are the words of that covenant! "And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you; and with every living creature that is with you." This is not only a covenant with man, but with every living creature on earth. "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? And one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father," says Jesus; and he adds the very comforting words, "Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows."

God's mercy is one of the most beautiful themes in the whole Bible. And we shall never fully appreciate the meaning of it until we have learned the meaning of the Cross. It is as though God should say that one of the ways of getting rid of a sinful world is to wipe it away, and was on one's hands of the whole affair, but no more shall that plan be contemplated. Man and the creatures of earth are God's, and he will save them, and redeem them, at least man who is created in God's image. And he sets about doing that merciful act through the Cross. On the Cross is the love and mercy of God fully expressed.

No wonder Wordsworth should say:

"My heart leaps up when I behold

A rainbow in the sky."

It means something to see that bow in the clouds. It is the signature of God signed in all the gorgeous colors refracted by his light, and a guarantee of his mercy and love.

IV.

It would seem that this is enough, but for the students of God's Word we find still more: God's bow reminds us of God's eternal throne. "Behold a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne . . . and there was a rainbow about the throne." Sometimes it would seem men think the throne of God is vacated. That the throne is no longer there. That there is no more a respect for authority, discipline, government, order, and the laws of a moral universe. How mistaken they are! There is still a throne of God in the heavens. The rainbow reminds us of it. When Jesus gave his special Revelation to John on the Isle of Patmos, he showed him the throne, and "One sat upon it." That, too, is something it would seem at times some people have forgotten, namely, that One sits upon that throne. That God is still there. So fierce is the struggle, so dark sometimes is the outlook, individually, nationally, and internationally that there is in the minds of some doubt as to the final outcome. But there is a rainbow around the throne of God! Earth's clouds have a glory in heaven! God has not forgot. You and I should work, serve, watch, pray, for "inasmuch as we do it unto the least of these my brethren ye do it unto me." We can work with God. A cup of cold water given in the name of a disciple! Suppose, my friends, that for one day the world of people would work with God! That everyone would say only kind things, think on noble things, do the little gracious acts of kindness,—that for one day of twenty-four hours there should be declared by absolutely every individual on earth a moratorium on evil acting, thinking, speaking. Some fellow says it would be the crack of doom. No, my brother, it would be the dawn of the day for which Jesus humbly taught his disciples to pray: "Thy Kingdom come."

V.

And further: "I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud: and a rainbow was upon his head." God's mighty messengers shall carry the rainbow as a sign of God's merciful promises to every living creature. They may be clothed with the failings of earth. Even upon Jesus the sins of the world may be laid. They may press down upon his head a crown of thorns, but for those who know him and love him they will see the cirlet of gorgeous beauty about his head, and know that it signifies God's redemption on earth perfected by the eternal throne of God in the heavens. Yes, heaven is concerned with earth, and there may be the cloud, but remember God says, "I do set my bow in the cloud."

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The year 1935 has had its day and has passed on. It brought many happy days to those who live in The Christian Orphanage and many blessings, too.

The health of the children was excellent. We had no sickness from the first of February until December. A number of children were accepted as members of our family and a number reached the age limit and went forth to fight the battles of life on their own resources alone. We are happy to say they are making good in the work they undertook to do.

The year also brought its misfortunes too. (The bitter with the sweet.) We had the misfortune to have two fires during the year. A residence known as the Boone house, in which our assistant lived was burned the last of January. Then the last of June our modern barn was destroyed by fire. We carried partial insurance on both. The barn has been built back a duplicate of the one that was destroyed. We purchased the nice little cottage known as the Peele house with four acres of land which was located on the other side of the street from us and which is a good asset to our plant.

But the most heart-breaking thing that happened was the death of little Ellena Morgan, one of our little girls in the Johnston Hall, just a few days before Christmas. She was such a lovely child and won her way into every heart. Her death was the third death in nineteen years in this institution.

But the year 1935 is in the past. The year 1936 is here. Every day will bring new duties to perform and new opportunities to grasp. The Christian Orphanage wants to do a larger work this year. It wants to assist more little helpless children than it was able to do in 1935. The Congregational-Christian denomination, united, should do a larger work in this line of service.

We have the equipment. We are willing to bear the heavier burdens if the Congregational-Christian Churches will be more liberal in the support of the work here.

Twenty thousand dollars for our goal for 1936. A ladder with 20 one-thousand-dollar rungs in it. Let every church and Sunday School and friends stand by us and see how fast we can climb toward the top rung.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

UNION AND LONG'S CHAPEL.

The pageant, "The Holy Child," was given by the Ella Fleming and the Young Men's Bible classes of Union Christian Church Sunday School on December 28th. The setting was beautiful, the rendition was excellent and the music was inspiring.

The pastor preached at the morning hour from Isaiah 9:6, using as his subject, "The Christ Child." A Christmas offering was taken for the aged ministers and their widows.

At the close of the morning services, the above named classes known as the Hustler's Class, when they unite in study, in work and recreation, presented to the pastor a beautiful and useful gift for his study.

A Christmas tree and treat with appropriate services were given by the Sunday school of Long's Chapel Christian church on the evening of December 22nd. It was a joyous occasion for both old and young because of the happiness and joy of the children.

The pastor expresses sincere thanks for kindness shown and remembrances of him by friends and those he serves.

P. H. FLEMING,
Pastor.

DAMASCUS, EURE, OAK GROVE.

We are now located at Sunbury, N. C. and it is beginning to feel like home. I am connected with Damascus, Eure's and Oak Grove and find it a field of interest and inspiration.

The people of these churches extended a hearty welcome and have shown us every kindness.

When we arrived we found a goodly number to aid in the unloading and not only this but there was wood in the wood house ready for our use.

We attended the Missionary Society at Damascus the other day, and received a pleasant surprise. After the services we found a nice pounding that was greatly appreciated.

May God bless these churches, the communities and our work in their midst.

H. C. HILLIARD,
Pastor.

ADULT EDUCATION.

By FREDERICK L. FACLEY, D. D.

Adult education is not a new method of teaching, but a process by which adults continue to learn. There are many things that people must be taught by someone who knows—technics, skills, facts. This sort of teaching is generally done by those institutions of society that are particularly fitted for this work: the family, schools, colleges, and other agencies, of which there are many.

While some of the learning which adults must acquire to meet their own needs may supplement a too meager schooling, much education must be in fields not reached by the schools. Life moves faster than the schools. Too frequently, the educational course lags behind the progress of life.

It has been said that this lag approximates thirty years, but to whatever extent this is true, it is widely evident that if adults are to live up to the possibilities of life, learning must be a continuous process, lasting as long as life endures.

Perhaps the largest task of the educational process lies outside the schools and colleges. The understanding of truth gained in school is only the beginning of wisdom. If the issues of life, individual and social, are to be comprehended, if individuals are to be fitted to live a richer life and to work more effectively to make the social order a suitable environment for this better life for all men, adults must continue the process of education. The problems—social, economic, cultural, and religious—that need solving are of individuals but groups must grapple with them.

It should be understood, however, that adult learning is genuinely adult. The need is not so much for the kind of schooling missed in earlier years as for a method of procedure and a choice of topics that appeal to the adult mind and interest.

Usually adult study is planned for groups which should help individuals to learn cooperatively what is necessary to an understanding of and a worthy participation in life; that is to pool the results of their study of carefully selected books, their experience, their interests, their individual or social needs, and thus help each other to meet more successfully the situations and problems of everyday life. These small groups of aspiring adults who have a desire to keep their minds fresh and vigorous; who begin to learn by confronting pertinent situations; who dig down into the reservoirs of their experience before resorting to texts and secondary facts; who are led in the discussion by teachers who are also searchers after wisdom and not oracles; constitute the setting for adult education, the modern quest for life's meaning.

Those interested in organizing classes or discussion groups are invited to write the Adult Department of the Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, for a copy of the Little Handbook on Adult Education, which outlines the purpose, plan, method, and materials for life-long learning; and also for a booklet listing the educational and religious materials available for group use and for individuals who wish guidance along the various lines of adult interest.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Loyalty to Christ's Church; and Fellowship with all of Christ's people.

Today we join the young people around the world in celebrating a birthday. It is not the birthday of a person but of an idea, a program for youth, that has been put into effective action in all the world through many groups of young people; and the center of this celebration is Jesus Christ, whom we honor and whom we seek to serve.

Sentence Prayers.
Special Music.

Purposes of our Society.

Worthy objectives should be an incentive to every society. There is no better way to insure progress than by charting some definite objectives. The training of a more efficient leadership is a worthy objective. There is always the danger of giving one person or one committee too much to do. But a reasonable amount of work should be done promptly and intelligently. Endeavorers have many opportunities for training. The society itself is a laboratory for experiments in Christian service. Through Christian Endeavor the young people of today may be trained to serve as the mature leaders of tomorrow.

Certainly the purposes of our society should include those who do not yet belong to any society. Many a society has never made an honest concerted effort to increase its membership. There are those in every community who need the redemptive influence of Christian Endeavor and the Church. They must be interested now, or, perhaps, never. Youth is easily reached by youth. It should be our sincere purpose to increase the membership of our society and thereby increase our usefulness. (These two objectives will start the discussion. Ask the Endeavorers to tell what they think is the purpose of their society, and have someone list them on the blackboard.)

Consecration Service.

Cut the C. E. monogram from red cardboard, and stand it upright on a table at the front of the room. In front of the C. E. Place a large candle. This is the candle of "service." Small candles should be given each member as they enter the room. Ask each member to come forward and light their candle; thus signifying their willingness to serve Christ. Form a semi-circle around the table and after all candles are lighted repeat the Christian Endeavor pledge. Close the service with the song "We Choose Christ" and the Mizpah Benediction.

MRS. W. B. W.

We preachers, in our efforts to be popular, try to catch the public ear, but too often we do not do much to change the public conscience.—Dr. Ralph W. Sockman.

MARRIAGE

LOFTIS—TUCK.

Mr. Graham Watkins Loftis and Miss Elizabeth Coe Tuck were married by me in my study at the Christian Church, Virgilina, Va., on the evening of December 27, 1935. The ring ceremony was used.

Mr. Loftis is the son of H. Wise Loftis, County Commissioner of Halifax and is engaged in farming. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Ira Tuck, an insurance man of Virgilina, Va. She is a graduate of High School and a former pupil of Campbell College. Mrs. Loftis has been Superintendent of the Junior Society of Christian Endeavor since its organization in 1934. She is a most competent leader in young people's work. Their host of friends wish for this splendid young couple prosperity and happiness.

May they be blessed with years of usefulness.

C. E. NEWMAN.

HUMPHREYS—WHITLOW.

Mr. William Thomas Humphreys and Miss Lottie Lee Whitlow were married at my home on December 26, 1935. The groom is the son of E. L. Humphreys of Person County, N. C., and is engaged in farming. The bride is the daughter of Henry Thomas Whitlow of Virgilina, Va.

There were a number of friends to witness the ceremony and extend congratulations and good wishes to this popular young couple.

May they be blessed with a long life of happy usefulness.

C. E. NEWMAN.

BLAND—BUTLER.

In the afternoon of January 2, 1936, at the home of the officiating minister, W. D. Harward, Deudron, Va., Mr. J. B. Bland and Mrs. Mamie Pierce Butler, both of Isle of Wight County, Va., were united in marriage. They are both loyal and faithful members of the Christian Church, Mr. Bland serving as deacon at Mt. Carmel and Mrs. Bland holding her membership at Antioch. Mr. Bland is a successful and prosperous farmer, living near Walters, Va., where they will make their future home. They have the good wishes of their many friends.

May the Lord in all His goodness, smile upon this happy couple and bless them with the material and spiritual necessities for happiness.

W. D. HARWARD.

Use of Platinum Increases.—

The world consumption of platinum rose from 200,000 ounces in 1934, to 275,000 ounces last year. Much of the increase was for the jewelry trade, the demand for platinum jewelry growing much faster than that for white gold or the cheaper white metals. Canada and Russia get the benefit of this demand.

Congregational-Christian Moderator Dies.—

Many hearts are sadder for the passing away on last Monday of Dr. Jay Thomas Stocking at the age of 65 years. Dr. Stocking was elected Moderator of the United Church at the Council held in Oberlin, Ohio, and he has filled most ably that position. Since becoming moderator, he had greatly increased his already large host of friends. The church suffers a severe loss in his going. At this writing details received have been meagre, but we know that Dr. Stocking's death was the result of pneumonia, and though it occurred at the Newton, Massachusetts, hospital, came unexpectedly. Dr. Stocking was to have been at the mid-year executive meeting of the Council officials which was held this week in Chicago.

No Cocktails for Airplane Passengers.—

When passengers on the American Airlines' planes asked for cocktails, stewardesses replied courteously that no alcoholic drinks were served aloft. But the managers wondered: Do the majority of air passengers want liquor as they fly? Through an advertisement the officials asked. The results, recently tabulated, showed 2,000 votes for cocktails, 15,000 against. The officials, who promised to abide by the decision of passengers and potential passengers, are pleased. They have never allowed an intoxicated person to board one of their planes, and they do not want the responsibility for deciding how many cocktails he should be allowed once he got in. Now it is clear that people who fly do not want intoxicated persons as flying companions.—New York Christian Advocate.

Railroad Service Broadened.—

By authorizing Western and Southwestern railroads to establish a pick-up and delivery service, in twenty-three states, the Interstate Commerce Commission has broadened greatly the service which these roads may render to the public. There can hardly be raised a question as to the merits of the commission's order in this instance, although there is apt to be some opposition to it by carriers of other types. It is quite logical, though, that one agency should take over the entire job of delivering a given piece of merchandise. Already trucks often do this, and the railroads should enjoy the same opportunity. On the other hand, the stocks and bonds of the various railroads are held, possibly indirectly, by thousands of citizens, and if their investments are not to be impaired, the railroads must be allowed to make the fullest use of their capacities.

Christmas Savings Clubs.—

On January 8, 1936, William T. Esender, a retired machinist of the Navy Yard, Washington, D. C., was the victim of a street car accident which proved fatal. Esender was known only in his immediate community and by his former working associates. In the city of Washington generally he was virtually unknown, though more than 50,000 people in that city and hundreds of thousands in other cities throughout the country were last Christmas, and many Christmases before, the beneficiaries of an idea conceived by this humble man. It was in 1906 that Esender asked the cashier of his community bank for the privilege of depositing two or three dollars each week out of his earnings with the privilege of withdrawing all the sum before Christmas of that year. The privilege was granted, and out of the incident came the Christmas Savings Club.—Subscriber.

Digest Poll Completed.—

As usual the recent poll in the Literary Digest has been followed by many with interest. The final results of the poll show that there was a total vote of 1,907,681, of which 1,195,313, or 62.66 per cent were recorded against "the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date," and 712,368 votes, or 37.34 per cent were in favor of them. There were 36 states which voted against the New Deal, while 12 states, 11 of which were either border or Southern states, voted to sustain the President. If the present poll is as accurate in its forecast as other Digest polls have been, it means that there will be quite a formidable array against Mr. Roosevelt if he is re-nominated to succeed himself in 1937. On the other hand, the President's personal popularity will have to be considered, and there are many people who would vote for him, though they disapprove his policies.

Increase in Church Membership.—

Church membership in the United States increased during 1934 by nearly a million and a quarter souls. The reported gain was 1,223,064, making the total membership 62,035,688. During the fiscal year the population of the United States was estimated to have gained 732,000, giving the churches a percentage gain of .69. For the same year the number of churches was given as 268,482, their pulpits being supplied by 253,922 ministers. The Catholics still lead any other denomination by more than two to one, with over twenty million communicants. The eighteen Baptist bodies come next with ten millions, while nineteen Methodist bodies and seventeen Lutheran groups take third and fourth places respectively. Six major groups show no gain for the year. On another page of this issue is given a detailed statement of the membership of various denominations.

—but They Passed It Over His Veto.—

After the House had over-ridden Mr. Roosevelt's veto of the Bonus Bill by the smashing vote of 324 to 61 last week, the Senate, with its large Democratic majority, passed the bill again by a vote of 76 to 19. Immediately after Congress had made payment of the bonus law, the President issued orders to the Treasury Department and the Veterans' Administration to provide for payment "as expeditiously as accuracy will permit." The law as passed authorizes an appropriation of $2,237,000,000, but only makes available for payment $254,000,000. The balance will have to be appropriated later in some regular supply bill. As is to be expected, the press is hopelessly divided as to the merits of the bill. Personal opinion is probably also divided, but on one thing all can agree: none can help but admire the courageousness of the President in vetoing the bill, and also that of the 80 members of Congress who withstood the pressure brought upon them and voted to sustain his veto.

Mr. Gandhi Objects.—

Mr. Gandhi objects to the conversion of Hindus to Christianity, and attempts to dictate to Christian missionaries as to the limits of their activities in his country and among his people. Following the conversion of a whole village of depressed class Hindus, he made this statement: "It is a conviction daily growing upon me that the great and rich Christian missions will render true service to India if they can persuade themselves to confine their activities to humanitarian service without the ulterior motives of converting India, or at least her unsophisticated villagers, to Christianity and destroying their social superstructure, which, notwithstanding its many defects, has stood now from time immemorial the onslaughts upon it from within and without." He says further: "What is true in the Hindu faith will abide; and what is untrue will fall to pieces." But the Christian missionaries have done much to help destroy that which is untrue. Says an exchange: "Christianity has already awakened the conscience of the people of India to the evils of untouchability, caste, polygamy and child marriage. . . Only Mr. Gandhi does not see Christian missions as an ally in the great movement of reform and reconstruction which is on foot in this land." If he did, he would not accuse them of having an "ulterior motive" in bringing the message of salvation in Christ.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. H. L. Snuggs, of the Chair of English in Elon College brings out at an early date an article dealing with Elizabethan drama entitled "Fynes Moryson and Jonson's Puntarvols," in an early number of Modern Language Notes, a journal published at Johns Hopkins University. Congratulations to Dr. Snuggs and the English Department of the College.

In the recent Plebiscite vote among the churches on the question of war, 200,000 Christians cast their vote. The percentages as recorded are: 48% would not support war unless the United States had been invaded; 57% are opposed to further increases in our army, navy or air force; 60% are in favor of the enactment of strict neutrality legislation; 64% are opposed to compulsory military training in the schools; 90% favor government control of the munitions industry.

Rev. C. E. Newman, Virgilina, Va., writes personally: "Sorry you could not be in Henderson yesterday (Jan. 23rd). It was a great meeting and one that means much for the future of our church." The universal verdict of those who attended the Henderson meeting seems to be to the same effect. Evidently the friends of the college and the faithful of the church are fully pledged to the desire and determination that Elon's indebtedness shall be wiped out and that our good institution shall be put upon secure foundation.

THE SUN's editor must commend our good friends, The Central Publishing Company, Jno. T. Kernodle, Mgr., Richmond, for the excellent showing the cuts of Elon College made in THE SUN last week, and the superb mechanical make up, with the printer's art and skill, of our "Elon College Number." If the College and its campaign period has not gotten off to a good start it is not for lack of energy, taste and effort on the part of our Richmond Office. And if any reader missed THE SUN last week, send for a copy.

Rev. R. T. Grissom, Fancy Gap, Virginia, writes January 21st and says: "With the exception of one Sunday, our attendance has been small since Christmas. This was due to the severe weather we have had. We had more than a hundred at services Sunday, January 12th. Our people are showing a decided interest in the work at Rocky Ford, and are doing very well at Elk Spur. I have not had a chance to be in service at Ivy Hill since Christmas. I was in the community during the week, and there was an interest and desire for the work to continue."

Her many friends who know her as a faithful worker and assistant in THE SUN's Editorial office, and in the office of the Mission Secretary, will learn with sorrow and sympathy for Mrs. Anna Shepherd, that her mother, Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Murray, died at their home early Thursday morning, Glen Raven, N. C. The funeral was held Friday P. M. from West End Methodist Church, Burlington, N. C., of which Mrs. Murray was a member. She was a devout Christian and was nearing her 82nd birthday. To Mrs. Shepherd and the other members of her bereaved family, we extend sympathy.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill will attend the Mid-winter meeting at Evanston and will be a speaker for the Home Mission Society at the platform meeting at the First Church, Evanston. She will speak on the subject, "Dixie on the March." After the Mid-winter meeting, Miss Coghill is to spend two weeks speaking in the churches of Illinois on missionary work in the southeast. She is doing this under an assignment of the Cooperative Council and under the management of the Speakers' Bureau of the Illinois Conference. All her friends in this area are pleased to have her thus honored and pleased to have her speak for our southern fellowship.

Our Methodist brethren (and sisters) of the South are grooming for mighty measures, heroic warfare and desperate conflicts during this year of grace, 1936. Their three days' Missionary Council in Washington, D. C., beginning January 7th, attracted the attention of our nation, with its program of national and international figures to inform and inspire and with its missionary zeal and enthusiasm for giving the Gospel to a needy world. And now throughout North Carolina and we presume all other states south of Washington, great regional Missionary Conferences of one or two days each are being held, to reach all sections and areas of their church with the missionary message—the message of Christ's redeeming and saving life and love.

The editor records with sorrow and sympathy for the bereaved the sudden death of our friend and brother, C. W. York, which sad event occurred at his home, 519 Arlington Street, Greensboro, N. C., Friday night, January 24th. Brother York was the very efficient and for a long time Treasurer of our First Church, Greensboro, Sunday school and leaves a wife and daughter to lament his going. The funeral services were conducted at the First Church by the pastor, Rev. W. E. Wiseman, Sunday, the 25th, and the interment was at Parks Cross Roads, Randolph County. Brother York was not only a faithful and devoted member of church and Sunday school but a friend and citizen held in high esteem and admiration by all who knew him.

Dr. Charles H. Beale has resigned as pastor of the church at St. Petersburg, Florida, his resignation to take effect after Easter. Dr. Beale will complete his fourth season as pastor of the church. He has been serving during the six months' winter season each year, Rev. Lawrence A. Gedke assisting him and serving as the responsible pastor during the other six months. Dr. Beale is one of our most venerable and beloved ministers. He resigned some years ago after a long pastorate at the Grand Avenue Church, Milwaukee, and since has served a number of churches as interim minister. He went to St. Petersburg in that capacity but was called to the pastorate on the above arrangement. Dr. Beale is eighty-one years of age, vigorous, alert, with a keen mind and a kindly heart. During his ministry at St. Petersburg his services have been attended by large congregations usually filling the great auditorium which seats over two thousand. His resignation is regretted by the church and its visitors, as well as by his many friends in the Florida fellowship.

It is significant and reassuring to learn that every Wednesday morning at 8:45 o'clock our missionary staff and group of friends gather in a room at missionary headquarters, 14 Beacon St., Boston, for united prayer. As Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, Executive Secretary says, "this is the heart of the American Board Fellowship of Those Who Care and Share." Adding to this our Executive Secretary, whose heart carries the burden of our world-wide work in large degree adds, "We invite all who can to join with us in prayer at that hour and place regularly, but we are aware of a widening circle of Fellowship friends who neither at that place nor at that hour find it possible to give themselves to prayer. Spirit, purpose, a sense of need of God, a passion to bring God as a reality into the lives of others, world horizons, the mind of Christ—these things are essential. Time and place are not essential. Other groups of similar minds may meet elsewhere at other times. Individuals unable to meet with groups for prayer may share in the united prayer of our Fellowship."

ELON COLLEGE ALUMNI CLUB BANQUET OF EASTERN VIRGINIA.

The Elon College Alumni Club Banquet of Eastern Virginia will be held in the Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church on Friday night, February 28th, at 7 P. M. The Executive Committee met on Monday and a program is being planned.

A VOTE OF THANKS.

In the enthusiasm in the meeting at Henderson and the rush to get started home before late in the afternoon, we failed to express to our pastor and the good people of the Henderson church, our appreciation for the wide open doors, the warm reception, and the generous hospitality on the part of pastor and people. As president of the college and convener of the meeting, I wish hereby to express to Reverend Madren, to the ones who saw that the building was comfortable, and to the hospitable ladies of the church who provided for us such a delicious meal, our grateful appreciation of these and all other courtesies shown and further to seek pardon on the part of the group for our apparent neglect in failing to express our appreciation in person.

THE LIGHT THAT SPEAKS.

Men are discovering new and amazing powers in light. The Philadelphia Electric Company recently sent its patrons an account of a startling achievement: "A great throng stands attentively in an open space at a dedication ceremony, listening. In the distance—seven miles away—atop a mountain 5,000 feet high—is the speaker. Nothing connects him with his audience but a bright beam of light. Yet they hear the words of the speaker perfectly. A new moment has come in the history of the electric industry. The seemingly impossible feat of sending sound over a light ray has been achieved (in the Adirondacks of New York, when the Whiteface Memorial Highway was opened) . . . Just over the horizon awaits television. And beyond that, who can say?" Who indeed! For light in the natural world is but a God-given intimation of the spiritual and eternal light which is God himself. Of the Word, the Son of God, who is God and by whom all things were made, we read: "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." (John 1:4.) This same Son of God, the only Saviour of men, said: "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12.) Perhaps God has permitted men to discover how to use a beam of light to carry the words of a speaker from a mountain top to a great audience miles away, as a parable of the fact that by his Son who is the light, and by him alone, can God's words of life be carried to a world who without him would be in eternal darkness.—Sunday School Times.

If a man's curve of efficiency is ascending at 45, and keeps on ascending just after that period, it may well move upward for his whole life; but if there is a turn downward at 45 he will never recover.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

DEATH OF THE MODERATOR.

The news of the sudden death of the Rev. Dr. Jay T. Stocking from pneumonia on Monday, January 27th, was received at the Mid-Winter Meetings in Evanston, Ill., just when his arrival was expected. Last year he delivered the key-note address. The two previous years he was chairman of the Commission on Missions. Before that as a member of the Board of Ministerial Relief and on other national boards he had for years been a guiding spirit whose exceptional sagacity and charity was recognized by all at the national January executive gatherings.

At the time of the funeral Wednesday morning in Newton Centre, Mass., a memorial service was held at Evanston.

The death of Dr. Stocking places the duties of the moderatorship of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States upon Judge John V. Sees of Huntington, Ind., the first assistant moderator. Judge Sees is president of the continuing organization of the General Convention of the Christian Churches and last year was elected to fill the ad interim vacancy in the executive committee of the General Council left by the death of Mr. Hermon Eldredge of the Christian Publishing Assn., Dayton, Ohio.

Dr. Stocking was also the moderator of the continuing organization of the National Congregational Council and this place will be filled by the first vice-moderator, the Rev. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford, Conn., the dean of Hartford Theological Seminary and president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

When word of Dr. Stocking's death reached Evanston, the Council of State Superintendents was in session. It adopted a resolution which was also adopted later at the general fellowship dinner of the Mid-Winter Meetings Monday night. The resolution concluded:

"He brought into our national work the same fine courtesy, consideration and deep friendliness which were such a power in his pastoral relationships. Having filled with distinction the highest position in our denomination, he has now been promoted to the activities of the Church Triumphant."

THE KEY-NOTE ADDRESS.

The key-note address at the Mid-Winter Meetings was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Raymond B. Walker of the First Congregational Church, Portland, Ore., at the Fellowship Dinner on Monday night. He said:

"We should be working for the greatest religious renaissance in history. The mad scramble for advantage at the expense of others, is the contrary spirit to that which the country needs. Most pathetic is the philosophy that national prosperity will be brought by the strong winning out over the weak or that world recovery will come with each nation for itself."

The payment of the bonus, Dr. Walker held was a set-back for social progress and he linked it in policy with "junking the gold standard and repudiating debts."

"What we ought to want," he said, "is not California's utopia, nor Washington's commonwealth builders, nor Dr. Townsend's pension crusaders, nor Huey Long's share-the-wealth movement, nor Father Coughlin's league, but a spiritual re-birth of the average man with new powers evoked not from the outside but from within."

MINISTERS AND MARRIAGES.

It would be hard to find a minister who does not champion the sacredness of wedlock, holding in abhorrence any light-minded conception which regards marriage as an arrangement from which the persons can withdraw if they find its responsibilities irksome. In view of this fact it would not at first seem fair to say that ministers have contributed indirectly to a widespread sense of casualness of marriage, yet this is a possibility which should be examined.

In the first place, most ministers fail to do anything specific about the preparation of brides and grooms for the great new responsibilities of homemaking. How many ministers does one know who gives time and attention to this task in proportion to its importance?

Whether he himself prepares young people for the sacred unity of marriage or arranges to have pre-marital instruction give by someone else, it is at any rate the responsibility of the minister to see that young people united by binding ties understand the nature of those ties, and given the benefit of the experience of those who have traveled the way before them. While the church is not the only agency responsible for the success of marriages, its leaders have a special responsibility and a function which cannot so well be performed by anyone else.

Secondly, in addition to serious neglect of preparation, ministers have tolerated the casual fashion in which so many marriages are carried out. A couple can go to a clergyman who has never seen them before and can be married and gone in a few minutes, never to be seen by him again.

If the minister is to continue to say with good grace that he believes in the sacredness of marriage, he must give it the attention which it deserves. To all observers, and eventually to the minister himself, and to those whom he unites, the sacredness of marriage will be emphasized or minimized by the way he acts about the solemnization of it.

Repetition of marriage vows does not make a marriage holy in the complete sense, apart from well-grounded purpose in the hearts of those who enter into this relationship. To assume that every marriage is sacred because sacred vows have been used by the officiating clergyman is unfortunate. The pastor should take pains to find out whether the persons joined by him have really come to the ceremony reverently, discreetly and in the fear of God. To do less than this is to take a most serious step with adequate consideration. While the chief responsibility for the ultimate success of marriages must rest mainly with those who enter into them, the pastor is bound by the nature of his position as a man of God to treat each marriage as a matter of the utmost importance. He can hardly claim to have done this unless he interviews his couples carefully and wisely.

As a civil official, temporarily, acting with the power of the state, the minister brings the couple into a union which is legally binding, but it is much more in accord with the genius of his function as a religious leader that he should help them enter into a marriage that is spiritually vital. To the extent that ministers neglect this, the civil function in marriage has come to overshadow the spiritual. It can hardly be denied that those who unite couples in marriage without knowing anything about the probable adequacy of the persons for its responsibilities, are not making a good use of the sacred office.

(The above is from a statement by "the Committee on Marriage and the Home" of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. It is a part of a "Report" spoken of editorially in this week's SUN.—J. O. A.)

REV. CARL HERMANN VOSS.

Mr. Voss, a native of Pittsburgh, Penn., is substituting in Raleigh, N. C., for the United Church pastor, Dr. J. Edward Kirby, who is on a year's leave of absence for work with the resettlement administration in Washington.

After graduation from the University of Pittsburgh in 1931, Mr. Voss studied at the International People's College in Elsinore, Denmark, and at the University of Geneva, Switzerland. He returned to this country and attended the Chicago Theological Seminary at the University of Chicago in 1931-32 and the Union Seminary in New York City in 1933-35. Last summer he conducted a party of tourists on a visit to seven European countries.

In 1933-34 he was Assistant Pastor and Director of Religious Education of the First Congregational Church of Hackensack, New Jersey. In 1934-35 he had a student charge when he was minister of the Church of Good Tidings (Universalist) in Brooklyn, New York.

Mr. Voss' father, the Rev. Dr. Carl August Voss, is pastor of the oldest church in Pittsburgh, the German Evangelical Protestant Church founded in 1782, where he has just completed his 30th year as pastor.

DR. STAFFORD TO BE IN PORTSMOUTH.

Dr. Russell Henry Stafford, pastor of "Old South Church in Boston," Boston, Mass., has accepted an invitation, and will conduct the Inspirational Meetings held annually in Portsmouth, Va., sponsored by the Portsmouth Ministerial Union and the Protestant churches of the city.

The first meeting will be held at 3 P. M., Sunday, February 16th, and services each day at 10:30 A. M. and 7:45 P. M. through February 21st.

On February 17th, Dr. Stafford will speak at a joint meeting of the Portsmouth Ministerial Union, Tidewater Ministerial Union, Suffolk and Nansemond Ministerial Association and the Peninsular Ministerial Association. This meeting of the ministers is to be a luncheon engagement occasioned by Dr. Stafford's visit and will be held in Monumental Methodist Church.

On February 20th, Thursday, Dr. Stafford will address the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association at a lunch to be served in First Congregational Church, Portsmouth.

The inspirational meetings which have been held annually for 12 years, is this year sponsored by our Congregational-Christian denomination. Rev. R. A. Whitten is the chairman of the 1936 series.

TWELFTH WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The outstanding event in 1936 for religious education workers around the world will be the Twelfth World's Sunday School Convention to be held in Oslo, Norway, July 6 to 12, 1936. This Convention promises to be of great significance as it is held in Europe in the present crisis. Never before has it been so apparent that the movement in behalf of Christian education in all lands has a vital contribution to make to the peace and good will of the world.

Official credentials for all delegates irrespective of the source of their nomination are issued only in the office of the World's Sunday School Association. Folders announcing the official routes of travel and the rates together with arrangements for Convention tours will be sent promptly upon request.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL OF CHURCHES.

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C., president of the Southern Christian Convention and Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Duke University, Durham, N. C., with some others of our North Carolina ministers, have been and are very much interested in the movement to bring together representatives of the various communions in North Carolina into a Council of Churches so that there might be concert of action and cooperation on the part of the various denominations in the State for the moral and spiritual betterment of the people and the churches. Those who have been so interested in this movement must have felt very much gratified on January 20th, when such a large number of churches through their representatives came together to perfect the organization of The Council in the State. Dr. H. Shelton Smith acted as chairman of previous meetings, two or three of which have been held prior to the Greensboro meeting. Now let the Daily News of Greensboro tell the remainder of the story which seems to mean the making of real history:

"Dr. Walter L. Lingle, president of Davidson College, was elected president of the North Carolina Council of Churches for the ensuing year at a meeting of the council Monday at the First Presbyterian church, an assemblage at which a permanent organization was effected. Other officers were elected as follows: :

"Dr. W. W. Peele, pastor of First Methodist church, Charlotte, first vice president; Rev. Walter H. Allen, pastor of the Moravian church at Kernersville, second vice president; Rev. J. A. Vache, rector of Saint Andrew's episcopal church, Greensboro, secretary-treasurer.

"The executive committee is composed of the officers of the council and Bishop J. Kenneth Pfohl, of Winston-Salem, of the Southern province of the Moravian church; Bishop Thomas C. Darst, of Wilmington, of the East Carolina diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church; Bishop Paul B. Kern of Greensboro, of the 10th Episcopal area (the two Carolinas) of the Methodist Episcopal church, south; Dr. H. Shelton Smith, of Durham, of the faculty of Duke University; Dr. David E. Faust of Salisbury, of the faculty of Catawba college, who is identified with the Evangelical and Reformed church; Dr. W. C. Jackson, of Greensboro, dean of administration at Woman's college, who is connected with the Baptist church.

"Retiring officers of the council are Dr. H. Shelton Smith, of Durham, president; Dr. W. A. Stanbury, pastor of West Market Street Methodist church, Greensboro, first vice president; Dr. P. H. Gwynn, Jr., of the faculty of Davidson college, second vice president and Dr. Trela D. Collins, pastor of Temple Baptist church, Durham, secretary. They were chosen when a temporary organization was effected at a meeting of the council, a state-wide body, at Guilford College Friends church, October 14th, last. The movement had its inception at a meeting of members of a number of denominations from all sections of the state at the First Presbyterian church here January 22, 1935.

Purpose of Council.

"The purpose of the North Carolina Council of Churches as defined in its constitution is as follows:

"(1) To promote fellowship and mutual understanding among the followers of Christ constituting the several communions of North Carolina; (2) to serve as a medium of interchurch advice and counsel on matters affecting the progress of Christianity in the state; (3) to associate the communions in such joint service as may achieve more effectively the objectives of the Christian religion."

"Two sessions of the council, morning and afternoon, were held here Monday, with Dr. H. Shelton Smith, the retiring president, presiding. The devotional service was conducted by Bishop Edwin a Penick, of Raleigh, of the North Carolina diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, and Dr. M. T. Plyler of Greensboro and Durham, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, official organ of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, in this state. Dr. Smith reviewed the progress of the movement during the past year, steadily increasing interest, culminating in the establishment of a permanent organization Monday, having been observed. The council officially recorded its appreciation of the effective leadership of Dr. Smith.

"Reports of committees on World Peace and the observance of the 400th anniversary of the printing of the Bible in English, were submitted. Dr. W. A. Stanbury showed that there was considerable organized activity on the part of the council in behalf of world peace. Dr. P. H. Gwynn, Jr., reported that the anniversary of the printing of the English Bible was properly observed throughout the state.

Suggestions by Dr. Newbold.

"Dr. N. C. Newbold, of Raleigh, head of the division of negro schools of the state department of public instruction, discussed interracial relationships and suggested the appointment of a co-operating committee to represent the council in that connection. The committee as named is composed of Dr. E. McNeill Poteat, pastor of Pullen Memorial Baptist Church, Raleigh; Mrs. H. A. White of High Point of the Friends church; Rev. Leland Cook, pastor of the Church of the Disciples of Christ, Kinston; Bishop J. Kenneth Pfohl and Dr. W. A. Stanbury.

"The council adopted a resolution embracing the suggestion that in so far as possible Easter services be conducted during the days immediately preceding Easter in the various communities in the state."

In attendance at the meeting were ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church, Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist Protestant, Protestant Episcopal, Disciples of Christ, Congregational-Christian, Evangelical and Reformed, Moravian, and the Friends."

This seems to the SUN's editor to be a council long needed in this, as in other states, and it can but happen in the course of time that the churches of every creed in the Commonwealth will feel the beneficial effects of this "brotherhood of believers." All strength, long life and ever-expanding usefulness to the now permanently organized and already stalwart "North Carolina Council of Churches.

WE ARE ABLE.

In every crisis of peoples, and institutions, there have been those who were timorous and rebellious from fear. Also, thank God, there have been those, frequently in a minority, whose courage put aside fear, and whose faith brought victory. No more striking example of this course of history is to be found than that of Israel and the followers of Moses, even after sacrifices had been made and a large part of the journey covered from Egypt into the "Promised Land" (Canaan). Before facing the foes and difficulties awaiting them, Moses sent twelve men to spy out the land. These spies returned and then there was consternation, also great lamentation and weeping for a whole night. Ten out of the number declared that there was no hope, no prospect, no possibility of taking the land, therefore, said they, "Let us make a captain and let us return into Egypt." Then two out of the twelve gave their report in these immortal words: "The land, which we passed through to spy it out, is an exceeding good land. If Jehovah delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it unto us; a land which floweth with milk and honey. Only rebel not against Jehovah, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are bread for us; their defense is removed from over them, and Jehovah is with us: fear them not." Thus the courage of two, and more, the fearless faith of two, saved the day and struck iron into the blood of the trembling Israelites, who arose and went conquering and to conquer.

THE SUN's editor knows full well that Elon College faces a crisis, and even now halts on the threshold to spy out the land and seek to discover what is ahead. Full well he also knows that in the face of difficulties there will be those who declare that there are giants who will swallow us up and that we are as grasshoppers in their sight. However, on the other hand, there are some with courage and faith who can and will say: "We are well able. If Jehovah delight in us then he will bring us into this land." We face the problem of clearing Elon of its indebtedness. It is a task. There must be courage and there must be more than courage, namely, a fearless faith. In the light of this faith we must go forward to conquer. We need not expect men of great means to pay off our debt for us. We, who have little, are well able. If all will do their part in faith and courage, doubting nothing, we shall conquer in this conflict. Let no man say we are too few and too poor. If each and all, those of least as well as those of most means, will do their part, the victory is assured.

The meeting at Henderson last Thursday was an earnest of what we may expect. Those who attended that meeting, because of the faith of some, went away inspired with hope, desire and determination. Let us take counsel of our courage and strength from our faith, and God will give us the victory.

KING GEORGE V.

Americans have vied with Britishers, Jews with Gentiles, Protestants with Catholics, the poor with the rich in lauding the life and lamenting the death of King George V. For grace and graciousness, can the following editorial in Catholic Review be surpassed?

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave Await alike the inevitable hour—
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

"Kings and Queens have been crowned, have lived and have died since Thomas Gray wrote his 'Elegy in a Country Churchyard.'

"Some have been good kings and some have been bad. There have been monarchs whose private lives were a defiance of God and of public decency. Two of the present monarchs of Europe have been divorced from their wives. One of the two is an example of what no decent man should be.

"But no reproach has ever been made against the private life of King George V. He was a good man, a religious man, a devoted husband and a loving father. When death came for him a few minutes before midnight Monday at Sandringham, Queen Mary lost one who was greater than any earthly king—a husband who had loved her and made every day of her life a happy one.

"His sons and daughter lost in George V a father whom they will remember with affection and pride.

"George V was a kingly man, not because of the crown he wore but because he wore the white 'flower' of a noble life. Not all men can be kings but all men can be kingly if they will do what God wishes them to do. George V, with the human frailties which all men have, tried to serve his God humbly and always. He died with prayers echoing in his ears as life departed.

"King Edward VIII valued the love of his father far more than the crown that one day will be placed upon his head. He would give up that crown willingly if he could call his father back.

"The paths of glory inevitably led George V to his tomb. Let us offer a prayer that the paths which he followed in life have brought him to Everlasting Happiness."

SAFEGUARDING MARRIAGES.

We are presenting elsewhere in THE SUN this week an item on "Ministers and Marriages," which we think some of us ministers may well ponder over. The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has for sometime had a Department of Social Service on "Marriage and the Home." It is from this committee's report that we have the article in THE SUN this week, the report itself being "Safeguarding Marriages." This is a booklet of 40 pages in addition to the cover, and is evidently the result of some very painstaking and conscientious work of the committee. The array of names on this committee, in the light of the distinguished service they have rendered in the religious field, guarantees a pronouncement worth considering. The pronouncement is in no sense radical or revolutionary, but with its array of facts it is exceedingly interesting and thought provoking. The object of this committee is to show how ministers, generally, and many of the rest of us, may be of real service in safeguarding the rites of marriage. For instance in Los Angeles County, California, there is a legal provision of a delay of three days between applying for the marriage license, and the granting of same. In this county in the course of one year 20,000 couples put in their applications for marriage license but 1,200 of the number did not come on the third day to obtain them. Obviously, says the committee "their minds had not been firmly made up and probably their plans had been unwise, since their plan to marry did not last the three days required by law." The committee's conclusion is that while many ministers are quite ready to decry divorce or deplore the increasing numbers of divorces they do very little beforehand, even the little they might otherwise do, to give instruction that would help to prevent many marriages, from the beginning headed for the divorce court. It is certainly worth while to read the committee's report which we presume may be had by addressing the request to the Federal Council, Department of the Church and Social Service, 105 E. 22nd St., New York.

THE MIND OF CHRIST.

Internationalism is a big, long word. Well it means so much that it just has to be a long and large word. Dr. Fred Field Goodsell of our American Board insists that the chief distinction between the mind of Christ and the mind of most of us is just that—He had the international mind and we don't. Kagawa thinks the same, for he preaches the evangel of the Christ and his power, he says that "the first need of the people of Japan is the international mind. That is what evangelism means to me." One wonders if this is what Christ means, and what the international mind means to many of us. If we get that into our thinking we shall regard a man in the light of his worth and need whatever his nationality or creed. Dr. Goodsell thinks that Kagawa does well in identifying evangelism and internationalism for says he: "Christ looks at a man as he really is in his heart. He does not attach any importance to the color of his skin, or to the sound of his language, or to the style of his clothes. He sees the man as he really is and as he may become when fully responsive to the Spirit of God. Christ also sees a man in relation to his fellowman. It is striking to ponder how much of Jesus' teaching had to do with the simple art of living in happy relationship with other people." Thus if we would have the mind of Christ we must of necessity consider the worth, value, relationship and possibility of every man, be he Jew or Gentile, Chinese or European, black or white.

"Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus."

A CHALLENGE TO THE BEST.

There are things that interest us, others that concern us, and still others that challenge us. Elon College is a ringing challenge to every loyal soul of the Christian Church and to every alumni of the institution. The college has always been a concern to us. We have felt our responsibility for her welfare. We have done our best to bear the full measure of that responsibility. It would seem that somewhere along the line we have failed, miserably failed, failed to such an extent that the college came near a disastrous collapse. Debts, debts mounted up until we were stunned. The amount was enormous. How could it ever be paid? The task was so forbidding that we were tempted to stand before it and publicly acknowledge our defeat.

Today, however, things have changed a bit. The burden is lighter. The future is brighter. Already the light is beginning to shine through the darkness and hope is on the crest. Through the adjustment program which has been completed, the settling of the debts of Elon College by her natural constituency is entirely possible. We owe at present $160,700. This hardly seems possible since only six months ago it was more than four times that much. This reduction has been brought about through the generous cooperation of our creditors. If those whom we owed were willing to contribute more than one-half million dollars toward the bringing about of a better financial condition for the college, it certainly seems that the ones of us who had no part in making this adjustment a reality would be glad for the opportunity of contributing for the complete cancellation of the present indebtedness. All creditors have been paid. Our present obligation is to the Virginia Trust Company of Richmond, Virginia. This banking concern has been most considerate and most generous in its efforts to assist us in our dilemma. Due appreciations are herewith expressed and recorded.

Conditions at present are uncertain, material values are in the balance, no one knows what the financial condition even of the country will be six months hence. However, the college is here, it is our institution. It is in need. It calls for our loyalty, our sacrifice and our support. The present condition of the college constitutes an inescapable challenge, a challenge to our faith our cooperation, and our material ability. God has given to us our college, our church institution, and it is now calling for support. We are not called upon to answer this call beyond the measure of our ability, but we are called upon to answer that call to the full extent of our ability. A universal and generous response to the call will insure success.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

It was a privilege to attend the National Conference of Rural Churches, held in Washington, D. C., January 14-17, 1936. Rev. R. E. Brittle, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. B. D. Crocker, and the writer, represented the Eastern Virginia group. Others of the Congregational-Christian Churches of North Carolina were also present.

The conference sessions were held in the Calvary Baptist Church. General meetings were held for inspirational and informative addresses, and smaller groups were called to meet for informal discussion of the problems and tasks of the country churches of the United States. The conference was well attended by representatives from many denominations, and every section of our country was represented.

One cannot give a comprehensive survey of such a conference in one column of this paper. Dr. Malcolm Dana was one of the leading spirits in the conference. He has studied the problems and possibilities of the Rural Church from many angles and in every section of the United States. He is well informed, practical in his plans and progressive in his attitude. Other speakers and conference leaders inspired the audiences in a like manner. Such topics as: "The Rural Church of Today," "The Rural Church of Tomorrow" and "Planning and Strategy in Rural Church Advance on a National Basis" were considered during the sessions of the conference.

For many years Home Missionary Boards of the various denominations have laid a major emphasis upon the importance of establishing churches in the larger towns and cities. Prominent Church leaders during the past twenty years have discouraged the idea of spending money to establish new churches in rural sections or to improve old buildings in the more promising sections of the country. Rural churches have been asked to give money for Home Mission work and send their young people to the towns and cities to find work and become members of the larger and influential churches. In a way the rural churches have been expected to take care of themselves. If they need a new or up to date building they should build it out of their own resources. If some minister had a vision of modern church equipment for Religious education and worship it meant a struggle and sacrifice to create an interest in realizing his dream.

But a new era has dawned. Consolidated High Schools have brought an educational opportunity to the rural young people and they are preparing themselves for a more intelligent service and a larger social, intellectual and religious outlook. Raising the educational standard of the rural people compels the rural church to raise its educational qualifications for the rural minister. A generation ago an uneducated minister could render acceptable service in many of the best rural churches. But, today, the minister should be a college graduate and able to take a leading place in the community if he expects to hold his place and render efficient service. Today the uneducated country preacher can measure his days of leadership. And the country church is doomed if it does not demand a trained man to serve as pastor. The country preacher, today, must be equal to the city pastor in every way to give a promise of successful work. Of course there is a difference in the work, but the work of the country church and the task and importance of the country preacher is equal, relatively, to the work of the city pastorate. Where did we get the idea that people make a great advance in their mental ability or spiritual importance by living in a city? Or, why should any person have to apologize for living in the country?

The rural church should have better buildings and equipment in the future. Every church does not need the same type of building. Church Extension Boards will give free advice on the matter of building needs. But the church must face the opportunity of providing an inspirational and progressive program for rural people. A part of that program will include the type of building. Our Congregational-Christian Churches must face this program in the future.

THE HENDERSON MEETING.

Some of us approached the proposed Henderson meeting with misgivings, wondering what the response would be and what the results of the meeting would be. The severe weather intensified these misgivings. However, trustees, ministers, and laymen, responded surprisingly well in the face of such unfavorable weather. The church building was comfortable. The group gathered and was called to order by the writer. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, President of the Convention, was asked to preside. Rev. Wm. T. Scott, the pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Winston-Salem, served as secretary. The agenda which appeared in THE CHRISTIAN SUN the previous week was used as the order of the day. It was made plain that this was in no sense an official meeting, but simply a gathering of ministers, laymen and officials of the college and the church in the interest of Elon College. Everyone was urged to take part or to offer any suggestions that might occur to be wise or helpful.

The writer reported that the plan for the adjustment of the debts of Elon College, authorized by the Board of Trustees, had been practically completed, that the total outstanding bond issue against the college had been acquired by the committee, that all balances owing teachers and unsecured creditors had been settled by the committee with the exception of unsecured accounts that were out of date and that whenever these creditors replied their accounts would be settled on the basis of the plan authorized. It is a source of great satisfaction that all these adjustments have been accomplished without any kind of legal procedure, or even unpleasantness of any kind. The total debt of the college now stands at $160,700, of which $15,200 is owing the current funds advanced to obtain the last block of the bonds.

After thorough discussion by the group, it was voted to launch the campaign for $250,000, this amount to be required to reimburse the current funds for the amount advanced to secure the last bonds, to pay the cost of the campaign, to pay the indebtedness of the college, and to provide the amounts needed to supplement the natural income of the college from the students and conference apportionments in order to balance the budget during the campaign and the time required for the collection of pledges. We want to obviate the necessity of incurring additional debts in current accounts until the current funds of the college can be sufficiently augmented by income from an increased endowment. It seemed to be the opinion of the majority that this amount would be required. The group was also reminded that the Convention had previously authorized a campaign for one million dollars for Elon College, and that perhaps it would be the part of wisdom to simply act upon this authorization of the Convention and to begin in earnest to raise the million dollars previously authorized and to designate this $250,000 as a part of the million dollar campaign.

Next, the question as to how the campaign should be conducted was discussed; that is to say, whether the campaign should be made on a purely voluntary basis on the part of the church and the alumni, or by trained leadership. This part of the program occasioned considerable discussion. Dr. J. E. Rawles, trustee of the college, whose loyalty no one questions, said that this was purely a business proposition and that if we wished to succeed we would have to put business into it, that we had been trying voluntary methods and had been failing, that in his judgment it was time for us to put on a campaign from a business standpoint with systematic organization and definite ends in view. He seemed to express the prevailing sentiment. When the vote was taken, the group decided that in its judgment it was the part of wisdom to employ expert leadership, not to put on the campaign, but in cooperation and counsel to teach us how to do the job successfully both by instruction and example. The Board of Trustees was requested to officially employ such leadership. Immediately following the adjournment of the mass meeting, the trustees were called to order, and by vote authorized the president of the college to sign the contract offered by the

George W. Williams Company of Labanon, Pennsylvania, thus inviting this company to conduct the campaign for us.

We know now exactly what it will cost to put Elon College in the clear, financially. There is no question about the amount. The writer has always felt that if this could be done and the amount was within the realm of possibility, that the entire church and alumni would rally and come to its support. If we will count our blessings and not our failures, if we will be guided by the future and not prejudiced by the past, if we will give larger amounts than we are able to give, nothing short of success will crown our efforts. I am hopeful and optimistic. I believe in the loyalty of our church and I bespeak for Elon College the hearty enthusiasm and sacrifice of the church, the alumni, and her friends.

DANVILLE.

Quite a few of our friends have written us about our fire at Third Avenue. We have been so busy trying to get started back, arranging for a place of worship and getting an adjustment on insurance that we have not had time to give a line to the readers of THE SUN.

On December 29th, about one-thirty, the fire was discovered in the Young Peoples Department, originating most likely, from some of the wiring. The pastor being out for dinner did not learn of the fire until the fire department had been laboring for some time and the building was falling in when we arrived. It truly was a sad time to look over the labors of the past nine years and see them go up in smoke. Not only was the Young Peoples Department destroyed but the fire spread into the boys' department, and going into the main auditorium of the church, burned the roof so badly that it has to be replaced, floors badly damaged besides the damage done to other parts of the building, the total loss being given by the insurance company as around three thousand dollars. This as you will understand does not cover the loss, since depreciation had to come upon this, which does not help us in the replacement of the building. We all were excited and worried, but now we had a good place for Romans 8:28. What are we going to do tonight? I said to our associate pastor, "Tell the folks to meet us here in the auditorium of the beginner's department, which was not damaged by the fire." No lights came the reply. "Get up some candles and kerosene lights." They did, and the building was packed with broken hearts and truly the Lord was in our midst. By the following Sunday we had secured a nearby school building, where on the next Sunday, 335 persons met for Sunday school and two packed houses awaited the pastor at the worship services. We will continue here until we get back in the church.

Board meetings are called frequently for the next few days and plans are ready for our new building program, which will cost us between thirty-five hundred and four thousand dollars. You are wondering no doubt by this time what our plans are. We are enlarging the main auditorium so it will take care of about 200 more people, since we have not been able to accommodate the people coming to the church on Sunday nights for the past six months. We are building five additional classrooms that will take care of about one hundred and fifty pupils. The auditorium is to be reworked and several changes made that will make it much more attractive.

How are we going to finance and build it? The pastor has been released from visitation for the next six weeks, Miss Bessie Bitchell taking this part of the work and we are going to be on the grounds until the work is finished. Mr. A. W. Haraway, one of our members, is taking over the responsibility of buying, etc. Just how we are to pay for the building is a matter with God. We will get about twenty-eight hundred dollars from the insurance companies. The other thousand we believe the friends of Christ, along with our membership, will have ready when we need it.

We are not going to solicit anyone. If you think God is leading in our work and He lays it upon your heart to send us a donation it will be greatly appreciated. It has been wonderful how God's people have responded already. Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Wood of Norfolk Christian Temple, learning of our loss, sent us $25.00. Rev. and Mrs. Garsh, La Mase, Cal., (McPherson Church) learning of our loss sent us five dollars. Dr. L. E. Smith, five dollars and many donations have come in from friends here in Danville. One of the most remarkable incidents we have had, has been in the Lutheran Church which has just built a nice building on W. Main St., soliciting all their members, coming to our rescue. We could not believe that the little church beside the road had so many friends. We just thank God and praise His Holy Name for the many friends we have found in this time of need.

Friends in THE SUN land are invited to write us or drop by if you are in Danville. Your presence or words of encouragement will be appreciated. We may be cast down for a season but not discouraged. We are going to build back, for we have learned: "A winner never quits and a quitter never wins." Then with Paul, Phil. 4:13.

M. T. SORRELL, Pastor.

CHARLOTTESVILLE LETTER.

It was the writer's privilege and pleasure to hold a service for Rev. A. W. Andes at Mt. Olivet (R) on the first Sunday evening. I served this church during the early part of my ministry in the Valley. The congregation then worshipped in the old building. Some years ago it was decided to build a new house of worship. The present building is situated on The Spottswood Trail, an important and much-traveled highway. The church has a commodious auditorium, with well-heated Sunday school rooms in the rear. The members of the church and community may well have a pardonable pride in this community center of spiritual life and service. A large and attentive congregation greeted me, though there were very few familiar faces.

During Brother Andes' enforced rest, I understand that his people whom he has served so faithfully, are taking good care of his physical needs. At least some of his churches, I am told, perhaps all, continue his salary. Some have also brought "loads" of provisions.

This calls forth the thought that, generally speaking, churches treat their pastors well. Of course churches do not pay as large salaries as do business institutions, but I am sure that most of the pastors will agree that church people are the best folks in the world to work with and for. In all my experience as pastor of city and country churches, I do not recall a single instance of a decrease in the payment of salary on account of the few services missed because of weather or sickness.

We are sure that our brotherhood unites in praying for the continued improvement in Bro. Andes' health, and that he may soon be returned to the work in which he is so much interested, and to the people who miss him so much.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

VIRGINIA LETTER.

It was a delight to announce to the congregation of Union Church on the second Sunday in December that the last note against the church had been paid. A few years ago the members purchased a new site and erected a more modern building. Cost of land, building and furnishings was thirteen thousand dollars. An indebtedness of thirty-five hundred was on the church when the depression set in. This was reduced to about thirty-two hundred and fifty dollars. A little over a year ago Bro. W. W. Tuck was made chairman of the finance committee and began to raise the money to liquidate the debt with the results as stated in the above lines.

Much is truthfully said about the pastor as the key man. My experience as a pastor for thirty-three years convinces me that the key man must have one or more lay men to lead in every worth while undertaking to put things over.

The Christmas holidays passed quietly and pleasantly for me and my family. The two boys were here from Elon. One married daughter and two children were with us also. It was to Mrs. Newman and me like living over the past to have stockings hanging on the mantel and a Christmas tree in the company room for our grandsons.

We were made happy on Christmas Eve by a nice pounding from the people here gotten up by Mrs. A. Hayes and Mrs. Arthur Tuck. We greatly appreciate the same. We were remembered by individuals from other churches of the charge. To all we are thankful. Not only to these people, but to the entire brotherhood we offer our best wishes and prayers that 1936 may be a year of blessings material and spiritual and a year of real achievement for the Church.

MISSIONS
 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

ALL THIS FOR A PENNY.

By HARRY R. MILES.

A little girl dropped a penny into the Cent-a-Meal box on the dinner table and was disappointed not to have another to put in.

"No, there isn't any more," said her father.

"Daddy, do we get all this for a penny?" asked the child, glancing around the table loaded with good things, then looking her father straight in the eye. A penny seemed to her a very small thing to share with those whose tables were bare.

Many will feel that only dollars are any fitting measure of their share in the work of the church for others. They live in a different world from that of the deacon of a country church who announced weekly in the Sunday school:

"Now we will take up the penny collection."

We have larger plans for meeting the budget of the local church and the apportionment. Thank God for the thousands who give dollars, in tens and in hundreds.

Yet, with the large givers and the weekly gifts in dollars from those in moderate circumstances there is still a place for gifts in pennies, and when one sees what pennies multiplied grow into and the things they make possible, he shares the child's wonder, "all this for a penny?"

What does a penny grow into? Given each meal, it becomes in a year five times what the average Congregational-Christian church member gave in 1934 for all our state and missionary work. Systematic giving is that much more effective than impulsive giving.

The man who puts five dollars in the annual missionary collection feels he has done a handsome thing. But he fools himself. He thinks that a plan of penny giving demeans the work of the church, and yet his five-dollar bill is less than half what the penny-a-meal giver contributes annually.

The joint meeting of the Mid-West Regional Conference and the American Board, held in Grand Rapids, reviewed the present situation of our state work and our missionary boards, and reported that their undertakings have been cut, the upkeep of their properties deferred, to a point where further reduction would eat into the vitals of necessary activities. To maintain present work and go forward, it is imperative that the boards should receive in 1936 a 20 per cent increase in apportionment giving.

New money is needed, and one way to find it is through the Cent-a-Meal boxes. They have brought new money this year. Churches that have not for years done anything for missions have given many thousands. Money has come from new givers. Men and women who feared to pledge themselves a year ahead have given as they could, day by day. Children have carried boxes home from Sunday school and their families have become interested.

"This plan has put giving within the reach of every one of us. It has taught the value of systematic giving," writes one minister.

In churches where there is no every member canvass for benevolences the boxes have worked a revolution. One church that had given thirty dollars gave one hundred and thirty through the boxes this year. Others that gave nothing formerly have given fifty or more.

Where the every member canvass is followed, use of the boxes through Lent or through the Fall, if not during the whole year, has made a significant addition to yearly pledges. One added $165 through the boxes, another $330, another $352.

Will you be one of a multitude to help add 20 per cent to receipts of state conference and missionary boards by small gifts through the boxes? The pennies will do all this.—Missionary Herald.

HOME MISSIONS.

In spirit we are as a people missionary. It is to the credit of the American people that we are benevolent, willing to help others to a better standard of social and moral conduct. This spirit is best exemplified through activities of our numerous organizations, especially through our churches. Churches place great emphasis on missionary activities, the greater emphasis seeming to be on the foreign missionary phase.

It is commendable that churches, regardless of their creeds, have wrought mighty and wondrous things in lands where the population knows not God—among peoples who know not the higher standards of living.

While it is true that if we confined our missionary efforts to home lands until all parts of our own nation were brought within the light of better things, and all communities given an introduction to Christ, millions in darkened parts of the world would never know the light, the love and the liberty of the gospel as taught by the Master and His disciples.

Yet, when we know, read of and see large communities almost within the shadow of our temples of worship and education living in the most primitive ways, it is sufficient to cause us to ponder and make diligent inquiry if we have given sufficient thought to home fields that are "ripe unto harvest."

When we behold communities shut off from other localities because of geographic conditions and transportation facilities—communities that are virtually isolated from the civilized world—there must come home to all of us that sense of responsibility that we have gone afar off to light a candle of hope when tens of thousands in our own midst grope in literal darkness. There are sections in many of our States, especially the mountainous sections of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, where families eke out an existence and live by social and moral standards comparable to localities in foreign lands where we send missionaries and large sums of money.

Developing a civilized and socialized people has been, and will continue to be for many decades, one of our major problems. Leavening the lump has not been completed within our own borders; and while we should not deprecate the missionary spirit to leaven the lump beyond the briny waters of the deep, we should double our efforts to extend mankind's standards of conduct and living into the remote localities that are within our borders.

DOSHISHA CELEBRATES.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

On October 29th, Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan, founded in 1875 by Joseph Hardy Neesima, in cooperation with the missionaries of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, celebrated its 60th anniversary and received many other congratulatory messages a letter from Dr. Rockwell H. Potter of Hartford, Conn., President of the American Board and Dean of Hartford Theological Seminary.

Addressing his communication to President Hachiro Yuasa, Dr. Potter said:

"The Prudential Committee of the American Board has learned with profound thanksgiving of the forthcoming anniversary of the Doshisha. The fulfilment of this cycle of sixty years of service of an institution set for the enlightenment, enrichment and guidance of the leadership of a nation is a matter for congratulation and gratitude and a source of inspiration in any land, among any people. In this observance of your anniversary, the American Board joins with especial joy and confidence.

"In the beginnings and throughout its development the work of the Doshisha has been closely knit to the central purpose of the Board. Devoted and gifted missionaries of the Board have shared with far-sighted men and women of your own people in the problems and tasks of these sixty years from the days when Dr. Jerome D. Davis joined Joseph Hardy Neesima in making appeal to the constituency of the Board at the annual meeting in Rutland in 1874 to the present time. I venture to think that the actual accomplishments of the years have been beyond even the dreams of those men of sixty years ago in the number that have been served directly and indirectly by the institution and in the notable quality of intellectual and moral leadership that has been contributed to the nation's life and the life of the world through the Doshisha.

"The Prudential Committee of the American Board by its action at the last meeting gives me the privilege and the honor of expressing to you the joy of the Board, its staff (its field force and its constituency in the churches of our order, in the great record of spiritual and intellectual accomplishment which you are now recounting and celebrating. We rejoice in what the fathers did. We have confidence in what their sons are doing and are going to do. May the Spirit of Him who said: 'I am the truth,' give success in your work of teaching and research, of Him who said, 'I am the way' guide you in the solution of your problems, of Him who said, 'I am the life' inspire you with faith and hope and love as you enter upon another cycle of still larger and more far-reaching achievement."

The Doshisha is considered one of the outstanding Christian Universities in the Orient and has a total enrollment of nearly 5,000 students in its various departments. It was the first Christian university accredited by the Japanese government. Its position in the educational life of Japan is recognized not only in Christian circles but by secular educators and governmental officials. The Doshisha will remain a great monument of Christian friendship between America and Japan," said the late Dr. Gintare Gaikubara, former president of the Doshisha.

DR. HERRING COMING TO ELON.

Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, President of the North Carolina Women's Conference, is much interested in the coming to Elon College on February 17th, of Dr. Hubert C. Herring, Director of the Council for Social Action as well as a life worker in our mission enterprises. Mrs. L. E. Smith of Elon has been instrumental, with Mrs. Harrell, in securing the services of this distinguished churchman. Mrs. Harrell has invited the wives of all the ministers of Durham, N. C., to come to Elon to hear Dr. Herring, and has also written to all the Missionary Societies in our Carolina Conference inviting them and making in connection therewith, an announcement in these lines:

"Dear Friends:

On Monday, February 17, 1936, at 10:30 Dr. Hubert C. Herring will be at Elon College to meet our people of the North Carolina Missionary Conference for a day's study of Mexico. Mrs. L. E. Smith, who has been untiring in her efforts to secure just the right person for this day, says: 'Dr. Albert Palmer, (who was with us last year), especially commends him, adding, "He knows more about Latin America than any other man in the United States." Dr. Herring is Director of the Council for Social Action and a life worker in our mission enterprises.

It is earnestly hoped that every church in our field will be represented. Every person takes just enough lunch for him or her self. The Elon ladies very kindly provide hot drinks. This arrangement permits us to invite any of our interested friends to accompany us. We hope that every Society president brings a delegation from her church and invites some friend from a neighbor church.

May I also announce the dates and places for the Spring Rallies?

- March 31st—Guilford—Hines' Chapel.
- April 1st—Alamance—Burlington.
- April 2nd—Randolph—Pleasant Ridge, Ramseur
- April 3rd—Chatham—Lee—Moore—(Open)
- April 7th—Wake—Durham—Pleasant Union
- April 8th—Halifax—Hebron.
- April 9th—Vance—Warren—Henderson.

Our National and State Mission Offices have very graciously provided as a speaker for these meetings, Miss Olive Green, one of the finest missionaries of the American Board and whose work has been in our Girls' School in Smyrna, Turkey. Let us begin now to make our Rallies the best we have ever had.

Hoping to see you at Elon, February 17th, and praying God's blessings upon our work, I am,

Very Sincerely yours,
MRS. STANLEY C. HARRELL,
President.

STEWARDSHIP.

Resolutions passed by the United Stewardship Council, Washington, D. C., December 6, 1935.

RESOLVED: In view of the prevalence of methods of raising money for Christian church purposes, methods which are doubtful and even pagan and substitutes for giving as worship, we urge a study and a facing of the whole range of Christian and individual giving, that which has no expectation of return in kind, the Christian and scriptural method of financing the work of the churches at home and abroad. We urge all churches of the Lord Jesus Christ, in all their financing plans and methods to use only worship-giving and not to depend upon fairs, card parties, sales or lotteries of any description as methods of raising church finances.

RESOLVED: It is a matter of Christian principle as well as common sense that no individual can receive something worth while for nothing without a crucial damage to character, both moral and spiritual. We, therefore, draw attention to the danger in any "get-something-for-nothing" schemes or proposals which lend themselves to political or economic manipulation. The churches need to become aware of their function to develop fellowship tasks, such as the care of the aged, the needy and those temporarily embarrassed who are victims of an unchristian order or condition. It is our duty to emphasize the fact that to receive or expect to receive money without a proper self-investment in labor is to endanger the nation, the church and the individual.

RESOLVED: We urge on the churches the teaching of the enduring values of thrift, in times of prosperity as well as in times of adversity in order that resources may always be available for times of stress. This involves, in our judgment, a proper recognition and acknowledgment of God's ownership and our trusteeship of possessions, calling for the budgeting of each individual's resources, the separation of a first portion for God's purposes and work, and the use of the remainder for the maintenance of a wisely ordered life and the protection of the future.

CARROLL COUNTY.

The extremely cold weather was not cold enough to keep our mountain people from attending the Christmas programs. They came one and all.

To those SUN readers who were generous in spreading Christmas cheer through the mountains, we speak the sentiment here when we say our people sincerely appreciate each remembrance you sent at Christmas time.

Our Burlington and Raleigh churches were especially generous in their contributions.

Also our A. & P. Co. was generous in their contribution of 120 pounds of candy. Many others were kind to us.

Our people were made happy. May the Master make each of you happy this good year, 1936.

REV. AND MRS. R. T. GRISSOM.

FIRST PLEDGE.

The first pledge made to Elon College after it was definitely decided to launch the campaign to clear the college of its debts was made at Henderson, North Carolina, immediately on adjournment of the mass meeting held in the First Christian Church of Henderson last Thursday. Doctor W. H. Boone, President of the Board of Trustees, called the trustees together and stated that one friend present had said to him that the expense of the campaign should be underwritten immediately and that he would give $1,000 in cash immediately. Doctor Boone further stated that this friend was a member of the Elon College faculty and was none other than Dr. W. C. Wicker, Head of the Mathematics Department. This added further to the enthusiasm and optimism of the meeting. Dr. Wicker is to be commended and congratulated. There are others who can give more than this, and others who are not able to give as much, but I am sure that we all together will be willing to do all we can for the safety and security of our college.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

THE CHURCH AND EDUCATION.

The ancient Jews believed in education. Jesus set his approval on this ideal and was known as the Great Teacher. When He commissioned His disciples He told them that part of their work would be to teach.

The Christian Church as we know it was born on the day of Pentecost when the disciples began to teach that which the Master had taught them. Down through the centuries the Church has kept alive the ideal of education.

It is true that sections of the Church have opposed certain types of information, but even through the Dark Ages the Church kept alive the desire for learning and ran its own schools.

Today the Church carries on a program of education in the local community. The school is part of that program. Young people's organizations, missionary societies, and the worship services are also included. Conversations among church folks concerning the Church and the things they believe is one of the finest ways of educating the community.

Churches have also found that it is important to aid in public education and to conduct their own colleges. At the present time there is a rapidly growing movement to put religious education in the public schools. Virginia has accomplished much within the last two years. And other states are doing similar work.

ELON COLLEGE.

When Elon College began turning out graduates the Christian denomination was a hundred years old. During the hundred years there had developed 159 churches with 79 pastors who received as salary $14,796. The churches gave $2,585 for benevolences and had church property worth $162,180. There were 14,793 church members and 7,716 Sunday school members.

Thirty-five years later the Christian Church in the South had increased the number of churches 43%, the number of pastors 40%, and pastor's salaries had increased 607%. Gifts to benevolences had increased $68,258 or a percentage of 2640%. Church property had increased $2,115,220 or a gain of 1303%. Membership in the churches had made 117% gain, and Sunday school membership had increased 202% with a total enrollment of 32,117 church members and 23,308 Sunday school members.

So far as I know the reason for this increased growth was mainly Elon College. In my opinion this indicates that Elon is worth more to the Church than it has cost and will continue to be so. For this reason I believe it is important for the churches of the Southern Convention to contribute largely to the College in the time that the College needs it greatly—now!

KAGAWA.

It was my privilege to hear Kagawa speak in Richmond recently. About 9,000 other people heard him also. Many of us were disappointed concerning his oratory but no one seemed to be disappointed concerning the eloquence of the life of the man.

Any man who will give away his fortune and live among the outcasts, who can start and carry on forty-one institutions as a leader of people who live in the slums, and who can pay the salaries of two hundred workers I say any man who can do that deserves a hearing and will get it.

Kagawa believes in the fundamental principles taught and lived by Jesus and is endeavoring to get them in operation in world affairs. The Kingdom of God movement in Japan is simply a part of the world-wide program to put Christ in business and all phases of life.

Young people like to hear him because he himself is comparatively young and is doing what every worthwhile person would like to do.

DEVELOPING A CHRISTIAN TYPE OF EDUCATION.

This discussion at the Florida Holiday Conference, was led by Carl Ekblad of Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia, and reported by Alfred Dofflemeyer of Elkton, Va., and Dorothy Truitt of Greensboro, N. C.

I. Force severely condemned as method of settling disputes.

A. Recommend Christ's way of dealing with aggressors.

1. Always interposing to help in some way.
2. Occasionally by force, as in the temple.

B. "Tie enemy's hands" and not kill. This will bring to realization of wrong, as in case of sanctions against Italy.

II. Steps in developing this type of patriotism.

A. As a group (1) interchange students of different nations, (2) improve local conditions (a) in politics, (b) in racial distinctions, and cultivate higher moral standards.

B. As individuals (1) use Christian judgment in voting, (2) endorse and practice Christian activities, and (3) observe a strict policy of honesty.

III. Final Conclusions.

A. Retaliating wrong with force is not the Christian way of achieving our goal.

B. By improving local conditions, it eventually follows that national and international conditions will improve.

PROVIDING A CONSTRUCTIVE USE OF LEISURE TIME.

Discussion led by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill of Jacksonville, Florida, and reported by Eugenia Tuttle of St. Petersburg, Florida.

I. Every person should have leisure time. Lack of it may be due to trying to do too big a job, improper budgeting of time, work assuming too important a place.

II. Leisure time activities should contrast with regular work, have balance between indoor and outdoor activities, have balance between physical and mental activities.

III. Suggested leisure time activities include visiting, movies, handwork, social service, reading, correspondence, games, special study (art), travel, music, radio, meditation, resting, lectures, attending conferences, outdoor activities (hiking, fishing, swimming, tennis, horseback riding, auto-mobiling, etc.).

IV. Responsibility of church and leisure time—help young people develop proper attitude regarding it, provide constructive activities.

STONING THE PROPHETS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEB. 9, 1936.

Scripture: Matt. 23:29-30.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—The first martyr. Gen. 4:1-8.

Tues.—True till death. II Chron. 24:17-21.

Wed.—Hunted and persecuted. I Kings 19:1-3.

Thurs.—First Christian martyr. Acts 6:9-15.

Fri.—What to expect. John 16:1-4.

Sat.—Victory of the victims. Rev. 7:9-17.

The word "stone" in today's topic is used as a symbol of opposition and persecution in their various forms. In the Old Testament we read where people were literally stoned to death for certain crimes which they committed. This method of punishment continued through the early part of the Christian centuries. Saul was one of those who consented to the stoning of Stephen.

The Old Testament method of showing disapproval or satisfying hatred by literally stoning to death has gone out of date with the passing of the years. But it is human nature for one to resist changes, or resent criticism, or to have their way of living pointed out as wrong; so while the rocks are not actually thrown, still the pages of history are stained with the blood of the prophets of today—blood that is shed by those whom the prophets attempted to save from their own self-destruction. We have prophets in the church of today. Our pastors are prophets. All good ministers of the Gospel have the welfare of their group at heart and they try to analyze their lives and base their sermons on subjects that meet the needs of their particular group, they try to make them realize that they should change certain ways which they have—should try to live in a more Christlike way. Then, too, we have our consecrated Sunday School teachers and other leaders who try to help us live more after the pattern of the Man of Galilee. And though these prophets are striving to help us, and praying for us; and even though we know they are right, still we go on in our same old way—thereby, through indifference, stoning those who want to help us.

Let us consider the missionaries on the foreign field. They serve as prophets. Still it is not unusual to read in the paper where one has been killed by bandits or savages. Very often our missionaries on the home and foreign field die from overwork—thus signifying the need on the field is great, and we have not been generous enough with our support to give them proper assistance. We are indifferent to their need, not realizing that these missionaries were stoned to death because of their faith in the teaching of Jesus Christ.

Jesus of Nazareth was the greatest prophet of all centuries. In what ways is He being "stoned" today?

MRS. W. B. W.

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, there were twenty persons lynched in 1935. This is five more than the number fifteen for 1934; eight less than the number twenty-eight for 1933, and twelve more than the number eight for 1932. Thirteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; five were taken from jails, six from officers of the law outside of jails, and two were shot to death in a jail.

There were fifty-three instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Nine of these were in Northern and Western states and forty-four in Southern states. Of the twenty persons lynched, two were white and eighteen were Negro.—N. Y. Times, Jan. 1, 1936.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS ENLISTS HELPERS.

LESSON V.—FEBRUARY 2, 1936.

PRINTED TEXT: Luke 5:1-11, 27, 28.

The title of this lesson is suggestive—Jesus Enlists Helpers. In the great enterprise which He called the kingdom of God or the kingdom of heaven he put a premium upon human cooperation. Men, ordinary men, were to be workers together with God. God was to work through them and they were to work with God. It makes us workers together with God. I say it reverently, God depends upon men to help him bring in the Kingdom of God. There are some things that God cannot do unless He can find men through whom He can do them. Unless men think and pray and work and give, God cannot accomplish His purpose. This is at once one of the most inspiring and the most sobering truths in the Scriptures. What are you doing to help God to bring in His Kingdom? Can He depend upon you to do your part in this great cooperative enterprise? Do you think of yourself as a worker together, as a partner with God?

Eager to Hear the Word of God.

"The people pressed upon him to hear the word of God." These words come with somewhat strange sound to modern church goers. There is not much evidence in the average community of a great eagerness on the part of people to crowd into the churches to hear the word of God. Indeed the average minister is hard pressed to get people to come to the services of worship, especially the evening service. One wonders why. Is it because the people have itching ears, eager to hear only the unusual, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, surfeited with material things, with minds and hearts dulled by the things of this world? Or is it because ministers do not "preach the word," because the pulpit has lost that vitality and that sense of reality in its message? Or do both factors enter into the situation?

Teaching the People.

"And He sat down and taught the people out of the ship." Quite informal to say the least—a ship for his pulpit, and seated at that. But the common people heard Him gladly. He talked in terms that they could understand, there was a note of freshness and authority in His teaching, they knew that He had a genuine concern for them, He put religion in terms of practical things. We call Him Master or Teacher, and we do well, for so He was.

Launching Into the Deep.

"Launch out into the deep." It was a practical suggestion for the fishermen. They had been fishing too close to the shore. They had not caught anything because they had not been fishing in the right place. Jesus evidently knew something about fishing, and He suggested that the disciples go out into deep water where they might expect to catch some fish.

There is a practical suggestion for the church too. Too often and too long the church has been piddling around in shallow waters, devoting its time and energy to trivial things, while all the time it should have been launching out into the deep. It has been spending so much of its energy to discussing theological matters of little importance, to emphasizing a negative life, to spending so much money on equipment and so much energy on programs, and to putting so much emphasis upon getting people ready for the next world, while all the time there were weightier matters—the great economic and social and industrial areas of life, vital programs of evangelism, cooperative effort, the outlawry of war, and so on. Alas that so many of us spend so much time and energy, even in religious things, on things that do not matter much.

Our Judgment, and the Word of Jesus.

"Master, we have toiled all night and have taken nothing; nevertheless at thy word we will let down the net." God's ways are not our ways. His thoughts are above our thoughts. When we stop doing what we want to do, and what we think is the best way, and sincerely and diligently try to do what God commands, we get somewhere. The trouble with so many of us is that we are trying to do something for God instead of allowing God to do something with us. And there is a vital difference here. If we obey Christ's commands we shall find that He knows best.

"I Am A Sinful Man, O Lord."

Like many another man, when he got into a tight place, Peter turned to Jesus. When the boat began to sink he said, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." But his words have a deeper significance than that. Our vaunted self-righteousness fails us when we stand beside Jesus. Our sinful nature stands out against His matchless purity. The modern man needs a sense of sin. Indeed the sense of sin seems to have been lost from modern life to a great and to a serious degree. It is a difficult thing to get the average man to say in all sincerity and in deep contrition, "I am a sinful man." And thereby many a man misses the experience of the forgiveness of God and the ministry of the grace of the Holy Spirit.

Fishers—Fishers of Men.

"Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men." Jesus exalts everything He touches. They were fishers. They were to become fishers of men. Indeed, Jesus goes further. He says that they shall catch men. They were to devote the skill and energy which they had been devoting to catching fish to catching men. Life was to be lived for higher ends. The material has its place, but it is a means to an end. The ultimate purpose and meaning of life is spiritual.

The people with Jesus that day saw only the tax collector, a man regarded as a renegade and traitor, one no better than a dog, a man generally mated. But Jesus saw more than that. He saw the man that was to be. He saw that this man, engaged in a wicked and nefarious business had fine possibilities in Him. He was one of the men He needed as His helper in His great mission. "Follow me," He said. And Matthew, for Levi and Matthew were one and the same man, rose up and followed Him. And Matthew became immortal. And he gave to the world one of its immortal books. This man Jesus, how He believes in us!

Dr. Alfred Grant Walton said, "A world of conflict is now going on between Christianity and paganism, between a living faith and a philosophy of despair. A clear-cut issue is before the nations of the world: it is God or godlessness! There are some that would let dictators replace deity, force replace faith, and radicalism replace religion. Men cannot live without God. If America yields to this modern apostasy her fate is doomed as surely as that of Ninevah and Tyre. Every Christian minister, every churchman, every loyal citizen must unite to reassert that faith in God on which this country was founded, and which has made our nation great."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"A GLANCE AT GOD'S GOODNESS."

"Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? And one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear ye not, therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows."—Matt. 10: 29-31.

"Doubt will rise if God hath kept His promise to men," said a great soul. He meant this, that midst the angry and striving world whose visions are limited by selfish motives Jesus Christ was calm and free from care and out of that calm He saw the Providences of God in everything. He saw the Providence of God in a wayside flower, in the feeding of the birds, in the fall of a sparrow, and he knew that He who clothes the grass of the field will much more provide for the needs of the children of men. Because he saw God in these things it calmed Him.

Likewise is God the all-controlling power in the march of events and the progress of time, and if we dwell in Him and He in us we too shall see these things, we shall be calmed, we shall be content like Him, and at last say like Him when He came to die, "Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit."

Prayer—Our Father, we covet the spirit of Christ to abide in us that we may see things as He did, that we may pattern our lives after Him, and arise at last in glory.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE SUPREME TEST."

"Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink."—Rom. 12:20.

Jesus, among his first utterances in the Sermon on the Mount, set forth the test of a Christian as being of far-reaching experience (Matt. 5:44) when he said, "Love your enemies."

This principle is given as a part of the "Magna Charter" of the Kingdom, and as such it is fundamental; we can no more set it aside as something we cannot do (and therefore impossible) than we can set aside some other requisite.

To love an enemy is life's hardest lesson, but it is believed that this lesson seems hard to so many people because of an amount of selfishness or egotism which they retain in themselves, because of a false conception of life and because of a misconception of the purpose of life, yea, there are many considerations that make "loving one's enemy" impossible.

Christ would say, "your enemy is your brother, treat him as a brother." This does not mean to have toward him the feeling of warmth and emotion that one has toward a brother, but it does mean to fulfil toward him the plain duties of life without trace of false speech, false dealing, or the cherishment of hate. To love is to comprehend the great good possible to anyone and to bestow upon that one all kindness and good will, at least a charitable disposition. In this, Jesus has not left us without example and it is manifested in the spirit of being same toward all the just and the unjust alike. His life also teaches us that He never addressed himself to man's emotions or feelings, but to man's will, his reason and his common sense.

Therefore when tempted by enemies or things grievous we must consider ourselves children of the Lord, use our common sense and call upon Him for the same spirit that we may be as nearly like Him as possible.

Prayer—Our Father, so fill us with Thy spirit that we may never efface ourselves. As evil, hate or malice is of the Devil, make our souls strong bulwarks of the Lord against these adversaries and at all times cause us to show forth Thy goodness.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"GOD'S GREATEST CARE."

"These things write I unto you that ye sin not."—I John 2:1.

"Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not."—I John 3:6.

"Let not sin reign in your mortal body."—Rom. 6:12.

"As he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation."—I Peter 1: 15.

To free him from sin and put God in man's life and keep him from sin was the chief concern of Jesus. But if one must remain free from sin he must not only receive Christ but he must use Him in all his actions. One can possess something and still it be useless to him. One can have property and not enjoy it. One may inherit wealth and never use it. We have long had the facts and certainties of Christ, but have we made use of them?

Let us forget the things that are behind, our resolves, experiences and achievements, and let us go forward in trusting God and his promises. In that trust lies all the liberty that belongs to the children of God.

"A suffering human life entangled lay

Among the tightening coils of its own past;
The gardener came, the fetters fell away,
It unfolded to the sun at last."

—W. B. Allen.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, as the flower strives to uncoil itself from the binding petals, so struggle we to be lifted up into Thy presence. As a gardener may loosen the bud from the meshes of the stem, so free Thou our souls for Thy use.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE ABUNDANT LIFE."

"Now unto him that is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be the glory."—Amen.—Eph. 3:20, 21.

God expects his children to love strongly. He would have them respond vigorously to the tremendous truths of faith. Everything about Christianity is large, intense and powerful. The effulgent wonder of life for which Christ died, the love which led Him to the cross, the shame from which He saves His children, the joys to which He lifts them, all are on a vast scale. Therefore, our response should be correspondingly, strong, vigorous and all comprehensive,—thrust forward into an action that induces the greatest harmony.

Our joys in God, our faith in Him, our grief at sin, our struggle for the mastery in achieving goodness, should be commensurate with the Gospel, at least in spirit and endeavor.

Prayer—Our Father, we all are weak and have come short of Thy glory. We thank Thee for the inspiration that comes to us this morning that in Jesus we can be strong. We pray for that strength today that we may be well pleasing in Thy sight.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"A HIGHER DUTY."

"Whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the midst of the sea."—Matt. 18: 6. Read to the eleventh verse.

To be able to love one's enemy is a high Christian achievement, but here is higher duty yet. This duty is found in the spirit and teachings of Jesus when his heart was stirred to indignation by the social wrongs that men commit. It was when he was moved by such indignation that he uttered the words of our text today. This indignation of our Saviour's found expression also in His denunciation of the "Pharisees and hypocrites who devour widows' houses," and he called them "offspring of vipers."

In the organization of the church, the apostle Paul injected this same higher duty in charging believers that they must not do anything "whereby a brother stumbleth," and that "no man must put a stumbling block in his brother's way." St. John also pronounced blessing upon those in whom "there is no occasion of stumbling."

A true Christian heart is one who believes, prays for and dedicates his every day life in shaping that life after the divine pattern.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray that we may be delivered from all thought of selfish interest and undue personal esteem. We seek to know Thy will for us, and we would devote ourselves as ready children to serve others for Thy sake. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"MAGNIFICENT MURDER."

"Put to death therefore your members which are upon the earth."—Col. 3:1-11.

It is impossible to live for two worlds at once. We cannot serve God and mammon. If we try to ride at the same time the horse of self-seeking and the horse of divine love, we shall fall down between them, for they go different ways.

But we are bound to earth by a hundred thousand ties. How can we live in and for the upper life? Only by cutting with splendid courage the lower bonds. We must murder what Paul calls "the old man," if we would put on what Paul calls "the new man."

Put to death the demons within you! For selfishness and all his brood are demoniac. Make room determinedly for the angels! Worldliness is trying to slaughter you; do you slaughter worldliness.

Prayer—Give us the sword of the Spirit, our Father. Strengthen us for the combat, for it is no easy fray. And grant us the glorious victory for Thy Son's sake.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"THE NEW COMMANDMENT."

"A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."—John 13:31-38.

The Decalogue had no such commandment as this; it was indeed a new commandment. Our statute books contain no such law; it is indeed a heavenly and not an earthly law. All the more is it a law to be heeded and obeyed.

But can we love another because we are commanded? Must not love spring from feeling and not from obedience? Yes; and therefore this commandment orders feeling, and takes for granted that we ought to feel we can feel.

We have our Lord's example. Even while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. He loved the unlovely. He loved the hateful. He prayed on the cross for His murderers.

Prayer—What Thou couldst do, we, O Saviour, through Thy Holy Spirit, can do also. Help us to do it, in Thy name and by Thy strength.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUIT, D. D., Pastor.

THE CHRISTIAN'S REVENGE.

By REV. EVERETT B. LESHNER.

Pastor Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Florida.

Jesus was no ordinary person! The more one reads and re-reads the gospel narratives, surely the more impressed one must be that he was so genuinely extra-ordinary. His life was the story, not of the common, but of the uncommon, not of action in the comparative degree but of action in the superlative. Jesus was no ordinary person! His life was a miracle!

From the beginning to the end, he was involved in a continuous fight against the forces of evil which sought to destroy the power of good. Personal enemies dogged his footsteps that they might ensnare him. Early in the gospel pages they appear,—evil, sinister, plotting, intent on unjustly offending, perpetually surrounding him as the darkness closes about the ending day. And Jesus taught forgiveness! That is the miracle! He had a word to do, a message to deliver, and if anyone hindered that work or rejected that message or slighted or insulted the messenger, lo, he forgave them. Nobody ever took sin more seriously; nobody ever hated it so for what it did to people, and yet, he taught forgiveness.

Perhaps it was because Peter had become so over-awed by Jesus' magnanimous treatment of his foes that he was prompted to ask, "Lord, how often shall I forgive my brother when he sins against me? Seven times? Ah, that smacked of generosity! It might have been that Peter expected the hearty endorsement of Jesus, for seven times seemed generous indeed. Imagine his surprise, however, when the words came back to this effect: "Peter, to forgive seven times is not truly generous. Even seventy times seven sets narrow limits to the grace of forgiveness. For when one has the disposition to count times of forgiveness, he has no real notion of the forgiving spirit which does not reckon towards a time when repeated forgiveness has exhausted obligation. Why, Peter, the spirit of forgiveness knows no limit; it can never be exhausted."

That Jesus should speak such words, in effect, when surrounded by so many enemies! How extraordinary! But Jesus was no ordinary person. Morning after morning he awoke conscious that someone was lying in wait to trap him in his talk, to thwart his plans, to persuade the populace, if possible, to ridicule and persecute him. One day they succeeded in bringing about his ruin, and he was led away to die. But even then, from his cross, when his foes had done their worst, he cried, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." That was the miracle of his life.—that he had taught forgiveness, that he forgave, that he practiced it so marvelously that no poor human wreck was beyond the reach of its benedictions, not even the crucified felon by his side. To avenge repeated offenses with continual forgiveness was an extraordinary thing to do. So unusual, in fact, that it must have seemed incredible to his friends and utterly contradictory to plainest reason. A forgiveness that never exhausts itself, that knows no limit,—what folly, they must have thought.

But the passing of nineteen centuries has vindicated the Master's method of treating one's foes. Today the world reserves its highest praise for those who are magnanimous toward the persons who have wronged them, who treat their offenders as Jesus treated his or as the heroine in Gertrude Atherton's, "The Mansion," treated her husband after he had betrayed her love and confidence. His soul is filled with bitter remorse as he returns home to confess his disloyalty to her. He realizes his own unworthiness and expects his wife to offer only a piercing rebuke and to order him from her presence. For a moment after he had laid bare his guilty soul, she is hushed in a tearful silence. Then, with a broken heart, she looks into his tragic eyes and says: "I do not see yet how it will be best to do it, but you and I must work this out together."

Under high heaven, there is nothing more beautiful than that,—to go right on loving and blessing and praying for the one who has wronged you, even when hatred and anger cry out for revenge. There is nothing on earth that manifests more of divinity than that spirit of heartfelt pardon which gives up the motive of revenge, however deserving the revenge may be, that foregoes resentment against a person, however rightful resentment may be according to the dictates of human nature, and that finally seeks to restore the delinquent to the old relationship of confidence and joy. When an individual treats his foes in that manner, you can be sure that in his soul he is speaking the language that God speaks.

Now, my friends, surely it is a pity that the language of God should be so foreign to most of us. Generally, I believe, we speak the language of the world which is the language of resentment and of vengeance which is its accompaniment. When we have been wronged, we are prone to unfurl the flag of battle, unleash our tongues and, with heart and soul, lay into that person who offends until we are satisfied that there is no mistaking how perfectly outraged we feel about it. It may be only a bit of gossip or it may be only a mean little dig which Mrs. A had no business to say to Mrs. B. At any rate, we fuss and we fume, give vent to our bad tempers, until we have put Mrs. A in her place, or think we have. Sometimes when we are confronted by trying situations we find ourselves forced into a kind of forgiveness. We say to the culprit, "Yes, I'll forgive you, but I don't want anything more to do with you." Or like the old Scotchman, "who, fearing that he was on his death-bed, sent for an acquaintance with whom he had fallen out years before and made overtures of peace. They shook hands in amity. But as the other left the room, the sick man roused himself to say, 'Remember, if I get over this, the old quarrel stands.'"

But that is no forgiveness! That is something which is forced from without, something of the lips, and that amounts to nothing. True forgiveness is of the heart. It is an inward attitude and change which makes possible a restoration of the wrong-doer to the old basis of trust and confidence. That is not to say that forgiveness takes away from sin its penalty. True forgiveness can never do that! A mother may forgive her child for playing with fire but the burn cannot be taken away. A father may forgive his son's wrongdoing, but the scar will always remain. Nor does forgiveness take away the fact of sin,—the condemned harlot had still committed adultery. Nor does forgiveness take away the memory of sin,—the Prodigal in Jesus' parable will never forget his life in the far country. But forgiveness does one thing. Being of the heart, it looks to the future and seeks to reconcile the wrong-doer to a better life. It gives the assurance that the future can live down the past. It is "the readiness to start with the offender in a new beginning."

Consider the parable of the Prodigal Son. Forgiveness is there even though it is not mentioned. Day after day the father watched for the return of his young son and when, finally, he caught sight of the boy plodding up the road, a guilty soul, he ran out to meet him. The boy started to talk about the past, but the father's eyes were on the future.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Some years in the past when we had no bus or truck at the orphanage, our children would often get wet going to and coming from school and consequently would take cold and often have pneumonia or very deep colds. Since we have a bus for the singing class and a milk truck, we now take them to and from school, and keep them out of the rain. We only live a short distance from the school and we can start the bus and truck a little ahead of time and by making several trips it does not take long to convey all the children to the school. We find that since we have adopted this method of transportation we have very few colds and when we find one developing a cold, we run for Vick's Va-tro-nol and break it up before it gets very far. The Vick Chemical Co., made us a donation of Va-tro-nol and Vapo-rub for which we are very grateful.

We have reached and passed our first rung in our financial ladder for this year. Nineteen more to reach. How much help are you going to give to help push up to the top rung?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

A QUESTION ASKED AND ANSWERED.

(A SUN subscriber sent in the question which we passed on to Dr. Walton, who replies.—Ed.)
"My Dear Dr. Atkinson:

"I understand that one of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has written asking for an explanation of the passage in my recent book 'This I Can Believe' (Harper Bros.) which you quoted in the issue of January 2, 1936, and which relates to the question of the possibility of 'salvation after death.'

"It is my firm conviction that the love of God as manifested in Christ is eternal, and I cannot conceive of a loving God making heaven possible for us until the time of death, and then withdrawing the opportunity forever. I believe that just as we may turn to Him in this life and by penitence and contrition find deliverance from our sins, so will it be possible in the future life for one to make the great decision then, if it has not been done before. There are many people now living who have not had opportunity fully to understand the significance of the Gospel, but I believe that God will continue to love them here and hereafter until He claims them as his own. In this position I differ from the Universalists only in the belief that man will always have the power of free

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

Immediately he restored his son to the old place of love and confidence in his heart. That was forgiveness, a heartfelt pardon that made restoration possible.

On the other hand, there was the elder brother. He said in effect: "Yes, I'll forgive you but from now on stay away from me and ask no more favors. I'll have you understand that we'll let bygones be bygones, but I want there to be no doubt left in your mind that I'm through with you, through!" That was not forgiveness. It was a declaration of the lips, something forced from without.

Or consider the man whom Douglas Horton refers to in one of his sermons. This man was made to suffer unjustly because of the wrong-doing of a friend. He goes to that friend and says: "Bill, I don't think you did right. You cut me to the quick. You'll never know how I felt it. But I want you to know one thing. I don't hold it against you. Doubtless you have been punished for it in nameless ways, for this is a just world, in its larger aspects. But so far as I am concerned, our friendship is just as green as it ever was. On the ground of it, anything good can grow up. Let's plant some new seeds." That is forgiveness, the readiness to go with the offender into the future where "anything good may grow up."

But, you say, easily said but not so easily done. My friend, if you say that there is hope in your soul, for you to have some conception of what true forgiveness involves. It is difficult,—about the most difficult requirement that has ever been imposed on a human being. It is difficult to forgive when you take sin seriously. It is easy to condone sin, to take it lightly and say that it doesn't matter much anyway. But it is hard to forgive when sin is taken seriously. It is said of F. W. Robertson, the English Divine, that he walked down the street in Brighton one day in a perfect fit of anger. It seemed that only a short while before word had come to him that a man was conspiring to violate a fine girl whom he knew. Robertson took sin seriously, he loathed it, and hated it, and it was not easy to forgive. It is hard to forgive when you love people. Jesus loved people, and seeing what the satanic methods of the rulers and pharisees did to those whom he loved,—how the widows were swindled and the little children damned,—it was hard to forgive.

Yes, it cost hours of pain and misery to keep love in the heart when you have been wronged and to incarnate the sacred words, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." And if the culprit himself takes his sin indifferently and refuses to worry about it, then someone else at some time must do the worrying, for the worrying has got to be endured. If you hold love uppermost in your heart, then it is you who must worry over human folly, as Jesus did, as David Copperfield worried over the moral carelessness of Mr. Micawber. Then you will begin to understand the meaning of Calvary as being the price God paid to forgive the sins of an indifferent world,—what "it costs love to be injured and yet go on loving." It was and is not easy even for God to forgive. As Dr. Fosdick has written in his book, "The Secret of Victorious Living": "It cost just what it always costs when men forgive: love putting itself in our place, bearing on its innocence the burden of our guilt. For whether a mother forgives a son or God forgives us, a cross is always at the center of it, and it is not easy."

But, you say, surely you do not mean that it is possible to forgive all things! Why, there are some things that I simply can't and won't forgive!

My friend, listen! A long time ago, a young man who loved life was murdered. Great nails were driven through his hands and feet, a crown of thorns was pressed mercilessly upon his brow. He was lifted between two thieves as men spat upon his face and ridiculed him. A spear was thrust into his side, and he was left to die. But it was not possible for death to hold him. After a few days he came again to his little band of followers to speak the final word. "Go yet into all the world," he said, "and preach the Gospel."

I can imagine Peter said, "But Lord, do you really mean that we are to go back to Jerusalem and preach the gospel to the very men who murdered you?" "Yes," said Jesus. "Go hunt up that man who spat in my face and tell him he may have a seat in my kingdom yet. Yes, Peter, go find that man who made the cruel crown of thorns and placed it on my brow and tell him I will have a crown ready for him when he comes into my kingdom there will be no thorns in it. Hunt up the man who drove the spear into my side and tell him there is a nearer way to my heart than that. Tell him I forgive him freely."

My friend, you who have been wronged and feel that the wrong is so great that you cannot possibly forgive the wrongdoer, remember that story. If you have been made to suffer unjustly remember that Matchless One who could say even when at the point of death, "Father, forgive them . . ." Ponder that scene, for in it we have a revelation of God. In God's sight no human being is beyond the reach of his forgiveness. He freely forgives. Ah, but at a terrible price! Still, in spite of the cost, he turns away from no one. And because he freely forgives, you, too, must forgive those who have wronged you.

To forgive,—that is the Christian's method of retaliation, that the Christian's revenge. And so long as you continue the practice of forgiving those who offend you, so long shall your own life be a miracle and so long shall the Kingdom of Heaven be built up in your soul, 'till all your life and all life about you will be filled with beauty and glory and joy.

OBITUARIES

HOWELL.

Mrs. Nancy E. Howell, daughter of Jacob and Emiline Austin and widow of Seth E. Howell, died at her home, R. 3, Franklin, Va., January 18, 1936, aged sixty-eight years.

She leaves three daughters, Mrs. H. G. Gardner, Gates, N. C., Mrs. Frank Goodman, Franklin, and Mrs. Paul J. Fowler, Portsmouth; three sons, Clyde E. and Carroll R. Howell, Franklin and Dewy H. Howell, Suffolk; eleven grandchildren; and three sisters and three brothers, W. J., Hollis C., and Chas. Austin. She also leaves innumerable relatives and friends to mourn.

Mrs. Howell had been a member of Holy Neck Christian Church since early life.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. H. Corbitt and Dr. John G. Truitt.

She entered into rest after long affliction. May God comfort her loved ones.

N. G. NEWMAN.

WHITTEN.

On November 12th, 1935, our Father in Heaven called from among us our beloved sister, Mrs. Susie L. Whitten.

Her life was spent in the service of the Master and His will was always her desire. To know her was to know the kindness and love for all humanity. In her presence was always the sunshine of good cheer.

Her memory reflects one dominant echo in our lives: she was "steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

Therefore, we, the Ladies Aid Society of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., have resolved as follows:

First—To remind the bereaved ones that the love of God passeth all understanding, and He alone can heal the wound inflicted by the Angel of Death.

Second—that remembrance of the life of the deceased should be a comfort to the bereaved in their assurance that she is safe in the arms of her Saviour, where there is neither sorrow nor suffering.

Third—That her life should be the impetus of better work by this society in striving to do the work she would have done.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions shall be sent to the family, one spread on the minutes of the Ladies Aid Society, and one sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

No New Blues Till Now.—

It is interesting to know for more than a century, there has not been found a new blue pigment, that is, until the past year. But only recently there was discovered in England such a pigment that is said to be both light and heat fast, to resist acids and alkalis, to be chemically inert, and to possess a very high brilliance.

The World's Richest Man.—

No, he isn't Henry Ford, nor is he even an American. The man who is reputed to own more than any other of the world's goods is the Nizam of Hyderabad, with a personal fortune estimated at two and one-quarter billions of dollars. The Nizam rules over 14,000,000 Indian subjects, and he recently celebrated his fiftieth birthday. On this occasion he ordered that a thousand oxen and ten thousand sheep be slaughtered, that the poor of his realm might be fed.

Worst Plane Crash.—

What is the worst plane crash on record in this country was that of the giant Douglas monoplane, the Southerner, which was wrecked on the route from Memphis, Tennessee, to Little Rock, Arkansas, the last week in January. The only other wreck at all comparable, was that occurring at Santa Monica, California, in 1930. Officials declared that this accident was the first in more than eighteen months, during which the American Airlines had carried more than 240,000 passengers for a total of 186,000,000 passenger miles.

Moslems in America.—

According to a Moslem publication, the Moslem World, there are approximately 25,000 Moslems in the United States. Ten thousand of this number are in Detroit, Michigan, while 5,000 of the remainder are to be found in greater New York. Cleveland, Ohio, accounts for 3,000 more and Pittsburgh, Penn., for 2,000. Of the remaining 5,000, 2,000 are said to be in the State of Massachusetts, while the other are more widely scattered. Notwithstanding their great number in several of these cities, Brooklyn is the only place which boasts a Moslem mosque.

Rudyard Kipling.—

The noted writer and poet, Rudyard Kipling, died in Middlesex Hospital, in England, after an emergency operation, on January 18th. He preceded in death King George by two days, and was the same age—70 years. Kipling was born in Bombay, India, December 30, 1865, being the son of John Lockwood Kipling, a professor of architectural sculpture in the British School of art in Bombay. He was sent to England for his education, but returned to India in 1882 and spent seven years in newspaper work. Eight years, from 1889 and 1897, he spent in the United States, and what was perhaps his greatest work, his "Recessional," was produced during the last year of this period. All of his poems and stories were written in a most vigorous and graphic style that was entirely his own.

"Safety Tips."—

This is the name of a little paper that comes to our desk from time to time through the courtesy of C. J. Strickland—a North Carolina boy, whom many SUN readers know, of Columbus, O. Strickland is giving his time and efforts in trying to make the highways a safer place to ride, and in the present issue he is driving for compulsory automobile inspections such, possibly, as those required in Virginia. He tells us that the question of improper lighting has quite a bearing on accidents: "For instance, in the State of Mississippi, the second most dangerous state in the Union, a check on a main highway disclosed the fact that seventy-six per cent of the automobiles did not have 'all three' lights burning." According to figures given there was one person killed for each 342 passenger automobiles registered. But, "in Pennsylvania we found seven per cent of the cars without lights and one person killed for each 706 cars registered." Mr. Strickland does not guarantee the accuracy of these figures, but they should be near enough correct to make you examine your lights without delay, and see that they are burning brightly. Certainly poor lights are not the only cause of accidents, but with Mr. Strickland, we believe them a major factor.

Methodist Jurisdictional Conferences.—

The Cincinnati Christian Advocate recently printed a map showing the proposed jurisdictional conferences of the (proposed) Methodist Church. This map shows five regional conferences: The Northeastern Conference, including New England, south to Virginia and west to Ohio; the Southeastern, of which Virginia and Kentucky are the northernmost states and the Mississippi River the western boundary; the North Central, which takes in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa and the Dakotas; the South Central, which includes Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Texas; and the Western, which takes in territory west of the states already given. The largest conference, numerically, is the Southeastern, with 1,922,762 communicants, while the smallest numerically, though the largest in area, has 357,773 communicants. It includes also Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands. Cuba, with 6,292 members, is included in the Southeastern jurisdiction, but Porto Rico, with its 2,436 members, comes under the authority of the Northeast. The membership of the proposed United Church in the United States and territories is 7,213,837, made up as follows: Methodist Protestant, 191,595; Methodist Episcopal, South, 2,725,954, and Methodist Episcopal, 4,296,288. Their world membership is something over 8,000,000 and they have a constituency of approximately 30,000,000. The Sunday School enrollment of the combined churches is given as 6,437,000.

Dr. John Dorr, Diplomat.—

Jahn Van Nostrand Dorr, Doctor of Science and one-time co-worker with Thomas A. Edison, has more than 1,200 American patents, to say nothing of foreign, bearing his name. These patents cover a variety of machines. There are those for recovering gold from low-grade ores—ores that could not before be profitably worked; sewage-disposal plants, almost wholly-automatic, and so clean and odorless that a banquet might be spread in the plant, yet so efficient that the gases captured can be used to generate light and power; and there are water-clarifying and -purifying plants that help to prevent communicable diseases. Indeed, the largest water-purifying plant in the country, that at Imperial Dam, near Yuma, Arizona, is a monument to his inventive ability. But this is primarily a story of John Dorr, diplomat. Dr. Dorr is a great traveler, too. Even now he is en route to South Africa. But before this he was in Japan, and here's the story as told by Forbes: "There this diplomat was invited to roam through the plants of one of Japan's greatest industries. Therein he observed a faithful imitation of one of his own machines, even to the plug filling a slight imperfection in its cast-iron base, a thing of utterly no consequence to the working of the machine. When further inspection revealed a whole battery of such machines, all imitated so faithfully as to carry such plugs, he was perturbed to say the least. He was, in fact, indignant. But, being a diplomat and being advised that resentment in a big six-foot body would avail quite as little as resort to law, he caused himself to be invited to a reception given by the head of this great Japanese industry. There quite casually and graciously he stated the case to him, adding that it gave him so much pleasure to see his inventions imitated that he desired to give this great company a license to use these machines, free! The next day, as perhaps he anticipated, he was besought to have tea with the head of this great industry, who bowed from the hips and said that it simply was not seemly for the great Doctor Dorr to provide a license, free, to this great Japanese industry. Therefore, would the great Doctor Dorr accept a check, herewith, of these $10,000. Reluctantly, of course, the great Doctor Dorr also bowed from the hips and submitted that he would!"

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Many will remember that the World's Day of Prayer has been designated for February 28th, the first Friday of Lent. It is hoped that the day will be universally observed.

THE SUN'S Editor left recently for Orlando, Florida, where he will spend some time basking in the balmy southern sunlight. We are sure that none envies the good doctor his stay there, but many of us might well wish that we could join him for a few days.

"Custodians of the Pilgrim Spirit" was the subject of what was probably Dr. J. T. Stocking's last article written for publication. It appeared in the February issue of Advance. If you have a copy of that paper and have not read the article, we suggest that you do so.

At the meeting held last week in Evanston, Ill., Rev. William T. Scott was selected to succeed Rev. Milo J. Sweet as superintendent of the Georgia Conference. We know that our Winston-Salem church will regret to lose his services but as such they will join with other SUN readers in wishing him Godspeed in this larger work which he undertakes.

The strategy of the liquor interests and their friends today is exceedingly clever. Moderation in its proper sense is intended to apply to virtues, and wholesome pleasures and exercise, not to be grafted onto vices. The use of the word in an effort to create the atmosphere of virtue or harmlessness about one vice or one anti-social act is no more reasonable, consistent, or justifiable, than the application of the term to other vices or other anti-social acts.—Ernest H. Cherrington.

Rev. Elisha Bradshaw, Walters, Va., has our regrets and sympathy in the loss by fire, which, in a recent letter, he says: "On December 23rd, I had a fire which burned my office with all the religious books and helps I had. Also all of my business stationery, also desk, typewriter and all office fixtures. If anyone has any books they have used that are good books and not of any service to them, this kindness would be very much appreciated."

We are presenting in THE SUN this week two poems of merit, "Book of Books" and "A Prayer." These poems are by Dr. Alfred Grant Walton, Pastor of Tompkins Ave. Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York. The editor has just completed reading a book by this distinguished divine titled, "This I Can Believe," and whether one agrees with the belief that Dr. Walton holds to or not is compelled to be moved by his admiration for and veneration of the Bible. We are reviewing Dr. Walton's book in this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Elsewhere in the columns of THE SUN we carry a very earnest appeal from J. O. Atkinson, Jr., President of the Elon College Alumni Association, urging all alumni to attend the mid-year meeting of the Alumni Association. This most important session will be held on February 15th at two o'clock at Elon College. Attending alumni will be invited to remain for dinner and afterwards to witness a basketball game between Elon and Atlantic Christian College. Further data can be had by referring to the "Elon Alumni Column" in this issue.

THE 1936 FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER.

For eighteen years the Protestant churches of America have been using the Fellowship of Prayer during the Lenten period. Last year over 750,000 copies of this valuable devotional booklet were used throughout America.

The author this year is Raymond C. Brooks, of Pomona College, Claremont, California. The theme is, "Building a Christian World." The series of daily devotions begins on February 26th, the first day of Lent and continues until Easter Sunday, April 12th.

Orders may be sent to the Department of Evangelism, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, 105 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y. Price 3c per copy; $2.00 per 100.

A PASTORAL PRAYER.

Eternal Spirit, high over all, yet in all and through all, graciously look upon us as a family now seeking to realize Thy presence. Because all things are Thine, the blessing of this holy day must come from Thee. In the hush of our silent waiting, grant to us the bread of life that cometh down from Heaven.

May the piercing power of Thy unspeakable grace enter into this world to still the noisome tumults and the arrogance of those who know not God. May the light of its purity shine upon every false idol enshrined in the human heart, putting them to shame. May it cleanse the mind of every oppression, giving faith to the faithless, hope to the hopeless, strength to the weak and comfort to the sorrowful.

Father of all, in whom rests the destinies of men, increase the number of those who are pure in heart. Entrust Thy Word to the lips of faithful men and women that a knowledge of Thee may spread to the uttermost parts of the earth. Graciously watch over Thy messengers who face the unknown perils of strange lands that they might keep and increase the light of Thy Word. Prosper their endeavors with a demonstration of Thy loving Spirit as Thou didst in the upper room so long ago. So may Thy Kingdom come on earth as it is in heaven.

As we would pray for our absent friends, so would we pray for one another. Bless the old and the young. Draw near to those who are full of care, and may the benediction of Thy love be the portion of all those whose days are troubled and uncertain. Look with favor upon all our successes, and grant that every failure may teach us of our faults and weaknesses. Through this new week which we are privileged to enter, we pray that Thou wilt go with the children to their school, with the men to their business, and may those who work at home feel themselves in Thy ever-available Presence. Humbly we ask these things in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

EVERETT B. LESHER.

DR. JAY T. STOCKING DIES.

The whole church laments the sudden and untimely passing of the Moderator of our General Council of Congregational-Christian Churches. Of his death the New York Times of January 28, 1936, says:

"Dr. Jay Thomas Stocking, moderator of the National General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, died today of pneumonia. He was 65 years old.

"Dr. Stocking had been president of the board of trustees of the Congregational Conference of Missouri, trustee of the Congregational Annuity Fund and trustee of Drury and Oberlin Colleges and Iberia Academy. He also had been a member of the executive commission of the Federation of Churches, chairman of the Congregational Commission of Missions, member of the Board of Ministerial Relief, member of the Commission on International Justice and Good-Will of the Federal Council of Churches and director of the American Peace Society.

"Surviving are his widow and four daughters, Mrs. James P. Wilson of St. Louis, Mrs. Philip Bishop of London and Josephine and Alice Porter Stocking of this city.

Long a Leader in Church.

"Long an important figure in Congregational Church circles, Dr. Stocking was elected national moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christians of the United States on June 26, 1934, at Oberlin, Ohio. Before that he had served as chairman of the commission on missions of the council, which has national headquarters at 287 Fourth Avenue.

"Dr. Stocking had been pastor of the First Congregational Church of Newton Centre, Mass., since May 5, 1935, having come there from St. Louis, where he had been pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church since 1927.

"Born in Lisbon, N. Y., he was graduated from Amherst College in 1895, in the same class with Calvin Coolidge. He received a Doctor of Divinity degree from the same college in 1913. He taught English at the Lawrenceville (N. J.) School from 1895 to 1898 and then entered Yale Divinity School, receiving his Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1901.

"Ordained the same year, Dr. Stocking served as assistant pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, New Haven, Conn., until 1903. He was married on Oct. 21, 1903, to Grace Cordelia Porter of New Haven.

"He twice prepared the meditations for "The Fellowship of Prayer," a series of daily interdenominational Lenten devotions sponsored by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and having an annual circulation of more than 5,000,000.

"He was the author of several books on religious subjects, among them, "The Dearest Spot On Earth," "The City that Never Was Reached," "The Golden Goblet," and "The Child in the Congregation."

"It was announced at the council's headquarters here that the funeral would be held tomorrow at Dr. Stocking's church in Newton Centre."

BOOK OF BOOKS.

Thou art a lamp whose flickering light is old,
Yet in the darkened hours of earth's new day
It shines anew, to mark the certain way
To joy and peace and glories still untold.

Thou art a flame, which purifies the gold
Of man's true self, and burns the dross away.
Misshapen by the forms of baser clay,
Tomorrow's life must find thy nobler mould.

Thou art a blazing sun, whose warming light
Still dries the dew of penitential tears,
Gives life to all the world, makes clear to sight
The power of Truth, the love that conquers fears.

O Book of Books, our Lamp, our Flame, our Sun, Reveal! Refine! Inspire!—till Heaven is won.

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

NEW NATIONAL WOMEN'S PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Roy L. Rogers of Glen Ellyn, Ill., was elected the new national president and Mrs. Lansing of New Haven, Conn., national vice president of Congregational and Christian church women by the Council of state presidents on Monday.

Mrs. Rogers was newly elected state president for Illinois in October. Formerly she was state chairman for box work. Following her election as national president, she commented upon the enlarging field of the activities of church women.

"This is due," she said, "in part to the fact that religion is no longer looked upon as a narrowly circumscribed area but as a permeating spirit whose influence should prevail throughout all human life, and partly due to the fact that modern women have become accustomed to responsibilities in business, in politics and in all spheres of usefulness."

DR. W. FREDERICK BOHN

Chairman of the Commission on Missions.

The report of the Commission on Missions upon the giving for missionary benevolences during the year 1935 showed a decrease of $38,829 from 1934, the total being $1,345,016. While the fifth successive year in which a decrease has been reported, the shrinkage was less than in any of the preceding four years. The total drop in the five years has been from $3,101,619 in 1930.

The only region making a gain in 1935 was the Mid-West which contributed $374,552, an increase of $1,873 over 1934.

The Southeast region contributed $19,038, a decrease of $737. The New England region contributed $644,168, a decrease of $28,025. The Middle Atlantic region contributed $181,267, a decrease of $12,688. The Pacific Slope region contributed $105,652, a decrease of $2,196.

FROM PRIZE RING TO CHRISTIAN SERVICE.

From an orphans' home to prize-fighting fame, then through a saving knowledge of Christ to enrollment as a student at the Moody Bible Institute, is a synopsis of a thrilling story. The lad had lived in back alleys, slept in box cars and vacant buildings, had known starvation and stealing to appease hunger, the clutch of policemen, and finally two years imprisonment.

Some persons might think him "finished" or "washed up" and merely seeking a new occupation when he entered upon the new life. Not so. He was at that time a box-office attraction, sought by many fight promoters. He never disappointed a crowd, but gave them the thrills they were after. Never in his fighting history was he knocked out, though he once continued four rounds with a broken jaw. His background had taught him that the world was cruel, and that his hardest battle was to keep the fickle audience thoroughly entertained.

He was one night at a club where a young man once associated with fight promotion approached him. He knew that the man had gone in for some kind of religion, a "new racket" perhaps. Naturally, he was not much interested in meeting him, but a conversation took place just the same. His soul's salvation was mentioned; he laughed it off and tried to forget it. The fighter remained under conviction for some time and after training at his mountain camp and engaging in another bout, he decided to look up his Christian friend which he did.

One night the two went to a church service. The pastor knew the meaning of salvation and presented a vital message. He seemed to sense the need of the burly fighter, and when he gave the invitation pointed directly at him and said, "Why don't you come?" With deep conviction and penitence he came and gave his heart to Christ.

Sometime later he received a telegram offering him the most outstanding fight of his career. He could meet the foremost man of his division. As a Christian he questioned the offer, so he returned to the pastor who led him to Christ and placed the question before him.

"I need money, and here is a chance to clean up in a big way; what shall I do?"

"Your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost," the minister replied, "and you would not have it knocked around, would you?"

Victoriously, the once proud fighter tore up the telegram and turned to go.

"Just a moment," continued the minister, "why don't you put in some of that fighting spirit serving the Lord and winning souls?"

"How, and where?" came the quick response.

"I know of no better place for training than the Moody Bible Institute."

Out of the glamor of worldly life, newspaper headlines, jostling crowds, gigantic floodlights and easy money, came this new servant of the Lord to enroll as a student at the school in Chicago that D. L. Moody founded.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Florida Sanitarium,
Orlando, Fla., Feb. 1, 1936.

This is not a Sanatorium to which I come, but a Sanitarium. There is a difference with a distinction. A sanatorium is a place, where, because of climate, or some salubrious condition, specific diseases are treated to restore health that is gone, or greatly impaired. A sanitarium is a retreat of a prophylactic type—that is to say, prophetic, prophesying what you will have if you don't stop and face about; change your diet, your habits of haste and worry and nervous waste, and learn to relax, rest, sleep—and let nature get hold on you and bring you back to what you were or should be. So the sunshine-cure, the broad open, long quiet nights of rest and sleep, and above all, a balanced ration is required. In brief, your dietitian is your chief physician with a real doctor to see to it that you take the broad open plenty, observe hours designated, and eat what your dietitian prescribes. After all, nature is the great restorer, as well as the preserver of health. We defy nature and upset her orderly and wisely ordained procedure. And then nature proceeds to retaliate and require readjustment. And so we go to a sanitarium where folks who are in sympathy with nature, and make a specialty of studying nature's laws and secrets, will advise or persuade you to check up on your wayward, or wasting habits, and let Mother Nature have right-of-way with you until you regain and are restored.

In such a place one meets interesting and quite often unique people. I have been here two full days and have met two, to me, quite interesting gentlemen. One is three-score and ten years, has lived in Florida all his life—except when in his youth—he went away to college. He is a merchant, lives in a Florida city and has amassed a competence, but has broken his health at last with keeping on at his business when his energy was waning—and tried to whip it back with coffee, politics and alcohol. So here he is, getting his shattered nerves restored and getting a new hold on himself. Now this Floridian tells me some history. He has been in the hardware business over half a century and back in his early days of trade, "powder and shot" were comparatively scarce and high priced. So the native "cracker" only used "ammunition" to kill game and had none to spare to kill snakes or alligators. Then the rattlers heard you coming and would hiss and give you warning at a distance of several yards. Then you let them alone, or killed them with a stick. But with cheap and plentiful ammunition, any and everybody shot rattlesnakes and alligators. Then these humble creatures of dust and water began to learn. Today you are almost on a rattler before he warns you. He did not want to be shot. So, if you are not careful he will find you—far more so than in the old days before man waged a war on him with shot and powder! And the large alligator that used to have his own fresh water—spring or well—at a distance from the stale and stagnated water, is no longer there. Now if you find a large alligator at all, you will find him in, or close by, the deep water of the lake—and Mr. Wise-man's cattle must take chances with the big lake, having by man's wisdom, lost the aid of the good alligator in always having springs or wells of fresh water ready for the thirsty kine. This man declares that nature retaliates and never forgets. So he has abandoned alcohol forever, he says, and will henceforth seek to abide by Dame Nature's kindly and intelligent laws. Nature has much wisdom which she constantly teaches us, if we would only learn—in time.

My other gentleman was born a Jew in Austria and came to this good United States some thirty or more years ago, and now lives in Jersey, with most of his business in N. Y. With the business acumen of his Hebrew background, he observed that we Americans like, want and must have milk and then more milk. Over twenty years ago he went into the dairy and milk business on a limited scale and with precious little capital. He bought some milk, bottled it nicely and sold it. He is doing the same today—buying milk from eight to ten thousand farmers who keep cows and produce milk for market. All this is collected, pasteurized, bottled, sealed and sold mostly to dealers; fifty thousand gallons of it a day, a staff of three hundred or more, employed in collecting and distributing and an office force that collects and books and banks a million and a half dollars a year—and then some. Think of a hundred milk wagons that cost a hundred dollars a week to maintain, a milk business that keeps a veterinarian employed all the time and on good salary to examine all herds from which milk is purchased, maintains a laboratory with its well-paid chemists, that by breakage and "lossage" and misplacement, requires $15,000 a year to replace milk bottles, that requires for general management and oversight a Cornell graduate in the field of dairy products—and you must admire my Austrian-Jew friend for his skill, business intelligence, and insight into our American desires and needs. The United States is good enough for him, and with a plenty of pure milk the health of her children is safeguarded, and her adults can be nourished without having to resort to all sorts, kinds and conditions of bottled beverages and near beverages. My friend has talked milk to me till I can relish the three bottles of it, half cream, that I find on my diet here each day, with real zest.

It was indeed good to get here out of the snow, ice and shivering atmosphere, to see the roses blooming on the lawn, hear the mocking birds making merry, the cardinals caroling and even the blue-jays jabbering and jumping. A blessed and favored country indeed is this of our United States and if one can't find health and happiness in it one is absolutely hopeless. I am grateful beyond all words to be living in such a land and in such a blessed and good and glorious time.

"THIS I CAN BELIEVE."

Many of us would like to have something that we can believe. Most of us, one presumes, do have some things that we believe—in a measure, or somehow. But as touching the larger issues of life and religion, just what is it that one of us can say positively, pointedly and definitely, "This I can believe." To be able to say that gets us somewhere, or it at least places us on solid footing that we may go somewhere. In a book of more than 250 pages, Dr. Alfred Grant Walton sets himself to the stupendous task of telling the whole wide world just what it is that he can believe. The SUN's Editor has a notion, after reading this volume, that a great many SUN readers would not be able to believe just as Dr. Walton does. This may be said, however, for the author; his readers will be able when reading this book either to join Dr. Walton in saying, "This I can believe" or in saying to him, "This I cannot believe." In other words our author lets his readers know what he is saying, and thinking, and leaves no doubt as to his own attitude and position. This volume is what it sets out to be, an outline of "essentials of the Christian faith," and there are so many essentials, and so many of us who hold our own beliefs as "essentials," that we could hardly be expected to agree. Think for a moment of an author putting this question to his readers, "What shall we believe about the Bible?" And then the author undertakes to tell what he believes, at any rate, and tells it in such straightforward manner, that one is compelled to admire if not to give assent, to the answer, "Is There a Personal God?" or another, "Is God Three Persons in One?" Or again, "What Is Sin and How Do We Get Rid of It?" These are tremendous and momentous questions, and Dr. Walton faces them squarely and concludes each chapter with answers that are conclusive to him, if not to his readers.

I found this volume, every page of it, readable, straight forward, frank and forceful. There is a vast storehouse of information, in the book, and such information as every one should have, and face, now and then, at least. The finest contribution from our point of view, that our author makes is in his chapter on, "What Shall We Believe About the Bible?" If the average man, college teacher, the professional man, and the minister, will read this chapter carefully there need be no doubt any longer about the inspiration, wisdom, power and the merit of the Book of books. Take this paragraph. "Many college trained men and women have turned from the Bible because it has been presented to them in a way that is completely at variance with their historical and scientific studies. But one can accept every contribution of science and every advanced conception of philosophy and still find in the Bible that wisdom and truth from God which the soul craves in its search for spiritual reality. We may believe in this Book. It is deserving of veneration above all others, and if anyone will take its sublime religious truths and make them a part of his life, he will find his soul moving along that straight and narrow highway that leads to the throne of God." Dr. Walton certainly exalts the Book. Possibly most readers would find less satisfaction in his chapter on, "What we believe about miracles," than any other. When this chapter is read, one still wonders just what Dr. Walton does believe about miracles, if indeed he leaves a real place for them in his belief. His own faith in miracles seems somewhat overcast and so he concludes this chapter with these words: "Meanwhile, it is not reasonable to believe that God is indifferent toward any of His children simply because they find their faith in miracles overcast by a cloud of uncertainty."

If one wishes to think straight, clearly and concisely on the major topics of religion and life we advise one to secure a copy of Dr. Walton's book. It is published by Harper and Brothers, N. Y., and is very attractive in print and binding. It is a volume worth having and worth reading twice over again—and then some more. We, all of us, need to think more than we do on, "What I Can Believe."

DOORS TO HEALTH.

The editor seriously doubts if even CHRISTIAN SUN readers, well-informed as they are, have any adequate idea of what our Congregational-Christian churches are doing, particularly here in the South, in the matter of hospitals and the ministry of healing. This is no fault of SUN readers, but is in large measure, the fault of THE SUN'S Editor in not laying before his readers from time to time very salient facts which we have very largely fallen heir to in merging our Congregational-Christian churches. The amazing fact is that we of the former Christian churches have contented ourselves with promoting educational institutions, our Orphanage, and in a limited measure, our ministerial relief, missions and publications.

Now, for a moment, let's acquaint ourselves, just a little at any rate, with what we have fallen heir to and what we are unitedly doing.

All right, now as all know, we have built two churches and two schools, three preaching and Sunday school places in Carroll County, Va. But did we all know that, just across the line, in Tennessee, our Congregational fellowship had gone us a long way better in their work in the mountains and have in addition to their church and school at Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, built a Sanatorium, and "Now it is almost impossible to judge which is of more value at Pleasant Hill, the academy, the community church or the Sanatorium. Together they supply the essential elements of a well-rounded rural welfare program.

The Sanatorium is incorporated, owns its own property and is responsible directly to its Board of Trustees. There is no other hospital for miles in the mountainous area around Pleasant Hill.

"Over one hundred mountain boys and girls of high school age live at the Academy and receive medical instruction and medical care through Dr. Wharton and Miss Adshead, head nurse."

Now take another look. Through the years we Christians contented ourselves with sending some missionaries to Puerto Rico who had to confine their efforts to preaching the Gospel, planning churches and Sunday schools. Now get a glimpse of how our former Congregational fellows went us one better.

"Dr. M. A. Schurter, medical missionary, began a clinic on his own in Humacao over twenty years ago. The late Dr. Charles J. Ryder, a Secretary of the American Missionary Association, took keen interest in this and around Dr. Schurter grew the Ryder Memorial Hospital.

Like most missionary hospitals Ryder has had to 'evolute from one doctor and one nurse until today there are four doctors and two nurses from the States; a corps of Puerto Rican dietitian, a Puerto Rican technician, and a Puerto Rican book-keeper. The original residence clinic has grown to be a three-wing hospital with fifty beds, the usual equipment and two residences.

From a few thousand dollars the budget has grown to almost forty thousand, with practically half of the money coming from the miserably poor patients. The other half must be provided by The American Missionary Association."

And what shall we say of our own neglect in the matter of caring for the health, in any benevolent manner, of our Negro constituency and population. Let's take a look at what we Congregational-Christians are now doing under the initiative and leadership of those who went on ahead of us. "Flint Goodridge Hospital, founded by the Methodist Board, is the hospital unit of Dillard University in New Orleans. Dillard is successor to Straight College, founded and supported by The American Missionary Association for sixty-six years and the New Orleans University, also a college for Negro youth, founded and supported for almost as long by the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Dillard University is incorporated and functions under its own charter. Of the seventeen trustees six must always be elected by The American Missionary Association and six by the Methodist Board. A special committee of the trustees is responsible for Flint Goodridge. The hospital staff, including the medical staff, are Negroes. Leading white physicians function in an advisory capacity. Instructional courses are given at the hospital for Negro physicians to the end that in the near future there will be thoroughly qualified specialists as chiefs of staff in each medical department.

The plant, occupying a city block, consists of a hundred-bed hospital, nurses' home and training school and laundry. The hospital has been rated by the American Hospital Association, has entertained national medical conventions, has a progressive social service follow-up program and is in every sense an efficient urban health center."

Or again let's look at another project in the ministry of healing among the Negroes. "Over sixty years ago The American Missionary Association founded Brewer School in Greenwood, S. C. Brewer furnishes the only hospital facilities in a radius of many miles where Negroes may receive proper and efficient service. Soon after the World War the Rev. H. A. Beadle, then principal of Brewer School, began to advocate hospitalization and adequate medical care of the Negroes of Greenwood County.

In response to Mr. Beadle's appeal The American Missionary Association promised $15,000 toward a $30,000 hospital, provided $15,000 was raised by the white and colored citizens of Greenwood. This they did and early in the nineteen twenties Brewer was built. The Association also provided $7,000 for equipment and for several years was practically the sole support of Brewer Hospital. Gradually fees were increased, town and county aid were secured and the hospital qualified for participation in the income of the Duke Endowment Fund."

And then another for the Negroes. "Talladega and Tougaloo Colleges have well-equipped separate infirmary buildings. Goodnow Hospital at Talladega, Ala., has a resident physician as well as a registered nurse; Sarah A. Dickey Memorial Hospital at Tougaloo, Miss., has only the latter. Home nursing courses taken by all girls help to carry this health program back into the students' homes and the isolated communities from which they come."

Now to the whites and Indians in New Mexico and Nebraska. "Grants, New Mexico, is now the hospital center of the Congregational-Christian medical work in the Mt. Taylor area. Here we have a nine-room hospital with city water, telephone, railroad, main highway and an interested Anglo group, none of which we had at Cubero, our former location.

Parents come from San Mateo, Seboyeta, and other points sometimes fifty miles distant. Those unable to travel are visited by doctor or nurse, or both. A Tuberculosis Fund administered by the Church Extension Boards Administrative Committee aids worthy cases in Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

Collbran, Colorado, a little town tucked away on the "Western Slope" of the Rocky Mountains, is many miles from a railroad. Here we have an excellent church plant, consisting of a house of worship, community hall, gymnasium and parsonage; also a small but efficient community hospital in which the church is vitally interested, and which may be regarded as, in practice, a part of the community equipment.

Then in addition to these. Santee Normal Training School for Indians, Santee, Neb., Lincoln Normal School, Marion, Ala., and Blanche Kellogg Institute in Puerto Rico employ registered nurses who are responsible for their health programs.

We are indebted for these facts to our Commission on Missions, who has recently issued an illustrated large eight-page folder entitled "Doors to Health, A Medical Missionary for America." This interesting contribution to our free literature (copy of which may be had by addressing the Missions Secretary, Elon College, N. C.) reveals facts which make us very happy to be a part, even if a very small part, of so great a work in building on earth the Kingdom of our Lord.

MR. SCOTT TO BE PASTOR-AT-LARGE.

The Board of Directors of the Home Boards of the Congregational-Christian churches, meeting at Evanston last week, elected Rev. William T. Scott of Winston-Salem, N. C., as Pastor-at-Large for the Southeast to succeed Rev. Milo J. Sweet, who retires April 1st. Mr. Scott will assume his duties April 1st. As the Congregational churches in the Carolinas are now members of the Conferences of the Southern Convention, Mr. Scott's special responsibility will be in Georgia and assisting in the work of Florida, and it is expected that in the early summer he will move to Jacksonville, where he will make his headquarters.

It is felt that Mr. Scott is admirably equipped by his background, education and experience for this work. He was born in North Carolina, educated at Elon College and Yale Divinity School, taking some summer courses also at Union Theological Seminary. During his Junior and Senior years at Elon he was student pastor for four rural churches. He was also a leader in many campus activities especially winning three orator's medals and being a college debater. He was ordained to the ministry in 1923 by the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference. In 1924-25 he was director of Religious Education for the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., where Dr. Leon E. Smith was the pastor. During his years as a theological student he spent three summers in Student Summer Service work in Oklahoma under the Extension Boards. In 1928 he became pastor of Walnut Hills Christian Church, Dayton, Ohio. Later he became pastor at the United Church, Salisbury, North Carolina, which he served while organizing the United Church at Winston-Salem. Since 1932 he has given his full time to the new enterprise which has made marked progress. There is now there a growing church with a fine building-site and an attractive parish house and chapel. Mr. and Mrs. Scott are greatly beloved by the

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The "dish-rag" is commonplace. The name is not elegant. "Dish-cloth" sounds better in conversation and looks better in print. But the name "dish-rag" sticks. It is the best description of this kitchen accessory. It may be "cloth" when it is selected for washing dishes, but it soon becomes "rag" if put into active service. There is nothing poetic in the name or its use. It is prosaic. Poets have overlooked singing its praise and historians have not recorded its deeds of valor. Artists have failed to paint its colors upon canvas, and sculptors have neglected to carve its form in marble. Someone should speak a word of commendation in its behalf.

It stays in its place. This piece of fabric now used as a "dish-rag" has possibly been chosen for a more illustrious use in its former days. The drawing room, the parlor or some other part of the home has been honored in other days by its presence. But it has come to the last mile of the way. And here it will stay until it is discarded for another. Its place is the kitchen. The health and life of the family may depend upon the faithful service of this unsightly piece of goods. It is not a place of great honor. But it is a thing of great importance. Many people never find their place in life. Others are unwilling to stay in their place when they have found it. So many people are dissatisfied with their station and lot in life. Preachers do not like their pastoral charge. It is not large enough. Stay with it and make it larger. Laymen like to move around. They vary their vocations. It pays to stay in your place.

It renders valuable service for others. Human hands, soap and water and a good "dish-rag" make a valuable cleaning quartette in the kitchen. In the average home dishwashing must be done three times every day. It takes almost as much time to wash dishes as to prepare a meal. At any rate, it takes a good deal of time. Pots and pans and silver and china and many other things must be washed. The "dish-rag" is essential to efficiency in this work. Look at the kitchen table when all the plates, cups and saucers, knives and forks and spoons and other things are piled up after the meal is over. They are unsightly. They are unfit for use again in their present state. But the "dish-rag" is plunged into a pan of hot water and soap. It is rubbed and squeezed and away it goes at its task until they are all clean. When this part of the dishwashing is done—the poor old "rag" must be washed and rubbed and hung out to dry. It wears itself out in this dishwashing game. But it hangs between a pile of unclean dishes and a closet filled with bright and shining tableware, while the housekeeper knows its supreme value in her daily task of keeping things clean. For this work it receives nothing—not even a word of praise. It gives itself for other things—and for humanity. That is more than some people do with their talents and life.

It cooperates in the task of keeping things clean for mankind. Cleanliness and service are closely related in human life. Man cannot live his best physical life in the midst of the unclean. Good health is related to clean food. The "dish-rag" does its part in this field. What a pity man cannot be as useful in trying to make the world a better place in which to live. Man needs clean thinking and clean speech to help him grow into the best of moral character. Every man should be a "moral dish-rag" if nothing more, to be used in cleaning up the place where he lives and works. Too many add to the filth of society instead of trying to clean up the community. They are a poison to other people. They should allow themselves to be used in every clean-up campaign. When the work is well done they will be cleaner for having helped others into a cleaner way of living. After all it is not so bad to be a "dish-rag" is it? Certainly not, if in the hands of the living God, and at the disposal of the Church of the ever-living Christ.

MID-YEAR MEETINGS.

On February 15th at two o'clock the Alumni Association of Elon College is called to meet in mid-year session. By vote of the Association at its annual meeting last commencement the mid-year meeting of the Association was duly and properly authorized, also voted the authority to transact business officially in the interest of the Association. This is an important meeting. Many questions of interest to the alumni and the college will be discussed. There has been an agitation that the alumni have some voice in selecting a limited number of trustees for the college. This matter will probably be discussed and disposed of. Final preparations for alumni day and other commencement features, also the Association's share in the pending campaign to clear Elon College of its debts will be decided. Other matters may claim the Association's attention. It is highly important that all sections of the church and alumni be represented in this meeting. This is an invitation to any and all who are attending the Association meeting to remain for dinner at the college and to attend the basketball game between Elon and Atlantic Christian College. The price of dinner and admission will be only seventy-five cents.

On Tuesday, February 18th, the Board of Trustees will meet in annual session. All members are urged to attend. This is preeminently a business session of the Board. Reports from the President, Business Manager, and the Deans of the college will be received. Committees will be appointed where necessary to report at the annual meeting held in connection with commencement. In addition to these routine items, the question of the intensive campaign to clear the college of its debts will be presented and discussed from every possible angle. Entire cooperation from every member of the Board will be required. To think of Elon College's being out of debt is almost too good to be hopeful of realization. A united effort beginning with the Board reaching the faculty, students, the town of Elon College, the surrounding community, the alumni, the church, and the friends of the college will insure success. We have been hoping for someone else to take care of our financial burden and relieve us of the responsibility too long. This is our institution, our responsibility, and our opportunity. We are able to do what it requires. It only requires willingness and cooperation on the part of every one and the task will be done completely. When we shall have shown a sacrificing interest in our own affairs we may then with confidence hope for the interest of others. The writer feels that the natural constituency will welcome the opportunity to demonstrate its interest and loyalty. I trust that the entire church and alumni will be interested in these mid-year meetings of the alumni and trustees, two organizations vitally interested in the welfare of Elon College and tremendously concerned for its future success.

USE WHAT YOU HAVE.

By REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Every faithful follower of Jesus wishes to be useful. He wants his life to tell in the world. Jesus sent His disciples out to serve. The Spirit of God in one leads him into countless ministries. The "one good deed a day" of the Scouts becomes a habit in the scouts and in all sincere Christians.

But obstacles loom that seem to hinder one from effective service. "I have only one talent," says one, "had I five or even two talents, I could give effective help to others." Moses answered Jehovah that he was not eloquent and therefore was not the one to face Pharaoh. "I haven't an education," says another, but Dwight L. Moody is proof that there is an education that comes from a familiarity with the Scriptures and a passionate love for others. Use what you have and your life will be a blessing to others and your deeds will help build the kingdom.

"There are strange ways of serving God;
You sweep a room or turn a sod,
And suddenly to your surprise,
You hear the whirr of seraphim,
And find you're under God's own eyes
And building palaces for Him."

Moses had a rod and in using it to carry out the mission God laid upon him it became a symbol of power. It made Pharaoh tremble before him. Mary broke the ointment upon the feet of Jesus. The Disciples complained at the waste, but Jesus rebuked them and said, "This she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her." The widow had only two mites but she gave her all and the Master declared that she gave more than those that flung larger sums into the treasury.

What We Have.

We have LOVE. "The love of Christ constraineth us." Paul and Drummond were right, "Love is the greatest thing in the world." The second Mrs. Lyman Beecher had a difficult task when she took upon herself the responsibility of rearing the motherless children. Her heart was full of Christian love for them. Note the results: Edward, the scholar; Charles, the educator; Thos., the original pastor; Harriet, the writer of hymns and "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and Henry Ward, the preacher and patriot.

We have PRAYER. It awakens our faculties. It deepens our power. It strengthens and steadies our hands. It breathes courage through us. Tenyson had learned that

"More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of."

But we must trust God when we pray. All true prayers are answered, for all true prayers include "Not my will but thine be done." If we ask amiss, we are willing to accept his denial. We must be patient in praying. Hartley Coleridge, youth though he was, was far-sighted, for he saw that it takes a long time for God to answer our prayers for justice and peace on earth.

"Far is the time, remote from human sight,
When war and discord on the earth shall cease;
Yet every prayer for universal peace
Awaits the blessed time to expedite.
Whate'er is good to wish, ask that of heaven."

We have HOPE. There is no waste in God's Universe. Even "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church." Probably, all the Disciples, except one, died the death of a martyr, but the love which filled their hearts has entered millions of hearts since, the Kingdom which they preached is now lived by millions and preached in every church and the justice and peace of their hopes are now the hope of preachers and laymen everywhere.

Who trusts in God, in patience works,
No mountain fears, no duty shirks,
But speaks his word and strikes his blow—
Before such faith all mountains go.

WORTHWHILE WAYS OF READING THE BIBLE.

The Bible is, all in all, mankind's greatest treasure. A few men may have crowns, and a few may have fortunes; fewer still can enjoy either. But, everyone may have the Bible, and everyone who will may enjoy it with a great happiness.

But, of course, no one can enjoy it if it stands on the shelf or dusted on the living-room table! It must be read! That is not only the first thing to do; it is almost the only essential thing to do. Read it!

To be sure, men have read it idly, and suddenly their spirits have been "stabbed broad awake," as they have found it speaking right straight to them. But that is no reason for reading it idly. Read it with attention.

Nevertheless, you need not make hard work of reading it. If you come to it as a task, it will likely be a task. Come to it with the spirit of Mary, who sat at Jesus' feet and drank in his words; not in the spirit of Martha, who felt that a piece of work just had to be done. Read as if you were listening to the deep melodies of a great organ, and after a bit you will find your own heart singing a nobler tune. Read it as if you were looking at a great landscape of hills and valleys and plains, of mountains and snow-capped summits, with the great luminous sky over all. Soon you will begin to see the landscape of human life and destiny in truer perspective, and know what hills you must climb, and into what valleys you must descend, before reaching the heights.

Reading for the First Time.

If the Bible is new to you, or if you have read it only casually, there are many places at which to start. Probably the best is the Gospel of St. Luke and the Book of the Acts. Here are the events and the Person that mark the turning point of human history. Throughout all generations since then they have set countless men and women and youth free from fear and shame and sin, and brought them to a radiant and abundant life. To the light from these chapters the rest of the Bible contributes, and in their light it and all life are illumined. Whatever ground you traverse, this will be the peak from which you will get your bearings.

Follow with the other Gospels and some of the shorter letters of St. Paul. Then extend your acquaintance—search out the riches of the Psalms, read the early chapters of Genesis, the story of David, the pithy wisdom of Proverbs, some of the ringing messages of the Prophets, and more of the New Testament. By this time you can find your way about in this library of sixty-six books. But do not try too soon to master the whole of it; in reading the Bible, you are not cramming for an examination, but living with friends.

The Best Open to All.

As you read, imagine as well as you can the scene or the setting. Re-reading will often bring this out. The Bible is a book of life; we best understand it when we enter into the living experiences it records.

Do not be disturbed if there are passages that you do not understand. You live on God's glorious earth, but He doesn't expect you to know every valley of the Himalayas or every port in the seven seas. There is nothing in the Bible essential to life's deepest joys and greatest growth, that is not open to a true and earnest heart. Some to your reading with an open mind and give the Bible its chance to speak to you. It is not simply a record; it is a message.

Ways of Reading.

When you have thus gotten the lay of the land and some insight into what the Bible is about, you will find different ways of reading rewarding. Here are some among many:

(1) Take one book, or one group of chapters, and read and re-read it scores of times. "By repeated re-readings in the face of our practical problems, a book begins to live in the mind like a magnetic current. To get the benefit of the Bible, one needs not a snapshot, but a time exposure." Creative power comes, not from collecting every new idea, but from being laid hold on by great vital and enduring truths.

(2) Read it, especially the Gospels and from the Psalms and Epistles, for light on personal problems—purpose in life, friendships, anxiety over loved ones, financial perplexities, the guilt of sin, when tempted to do wrong. It can be marvelously helpful.

(3) Read it to find the person most like yourself, and study his experience with God and life. A brilliant woman who became acquainted with Christ only in her mature years, compared her experience with the like experiences of men and women in the New Testament.

(4) Read the Gospels and the Acts, and, as you study each scene, think where you—caring for the things you care for—would have been in that scene, had you lived then.

(5) Read to understand thoroughly a single character—what his motive and his hope, what his ambitions, what battles he lost and won. The Bible holds life before us so that you can see into it.

(6) Take a great word or phrase—"faith," "patience," "grace," "the glory of God"—and trace its meaning through the Bible. Or take some great theme—the creative power of God, what God expects of us, what help God gives us, the meaning of courage, prayer. Perchance prayer, that may seem "unreal" to you now, will become alive.

(7) Read the Bible for light on some one of the problems of the world's life—individual rights and freedom, and law, the duties of nations, the qualities of public leaders, the foundations of peace.

(8) Sometime you will want to read the Bible all the way through—for what it will do to you, not for the sake of having done it. One of the busiest editors of a metropolitan newspaper remarked lately that he was reading it all the way through for the fifth time, a few verses each day. It will enrich your life as it has his.

Some Guideposts.

When is there time to read it? Ay,—there's the rub! Many find an early morning half hour best; others, the quiet of the evening. The most productive reading requires a definite, regular time. But every day there are intervals which can be seized: on the trolley or train to or from work, in a bit of rest from household chores, waiting for a delayed appointment. A handy copy of a single Gospel or of other separate books, or a small Testament in the purse or pocket, can pack many spare moments with satisfaction.

For not a little of the Bible, commentaries, Bible dictionaries and other "helps" are of value in explaining the background. But do not let them get between you and the Bible. Use them as you would a dictionary. Note also that chapter and verse divisions, which were not part of the original text, sometimes separate what should be united.

Store up the fruits of your reading. A record of it by date and passage, perhaps with comment, will prove worth making. Summarize what you discover. Memorize great passages that help you. Why keep in the storehouse of your mind only the Ten Commandments, the Beatitudes, the 23rd Psalm, learned perhaps when you were only six or eight? Add Job 39, Psalms 19, 24, 46, 91, 103 and 104, I Corinthians 13, the Parables of the Lost Sheep, the Last Judgment, the Good Samaritan and the Prodigal Son, and St. John's Gospel, chapters 14, 18, 19, 20. There are no finer riches for the mind.

Read the Bible surely by yourself; but also seek companionship in reading. In the family, with a friend or a group of friends, in a class, new discoveries will be made that only such reading can bring. The richest experiences of life must be shared.

When you are in sorrow, in anxiety, in fear, go to the Bible. It can bring marvelous help in life's emergencies. But it is daily food for daily needs. So used it will help all the more when emergencies come, and will deepen everyone of life's joys.

For, in God's providence, this is your book. Men have labored incessant hours, spent all they had, gone footsore and weary to an exile's rest, died in agony a martyr's death, that you might have it.

You will understand why when you have made it your own.

Read it! Share it!—From Pamphlet published by National Commemoration Committee.

The person who faces temptation with strength and endurance will get the crown of life promised by God when he is approved. The way out of temptation is the way of love. The man who loves God and his neighbor has in that love the secret of effective resistance to temptation. The withstanding of temptation is the key of love.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

AMONG THE ZULUS.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

A whiff from the piles of lumber on the shore of Durban Bay in far away South Africa brought poignant memories of childhood in Michigan to Mrs. Eleanor Swanson Reuling of Adams, Natal, South Africa, who writes with a touch of nostalgia. "Durban imports most of its building timber from Norway but I wondered if by chance some of it might not have come from Menominee down the Great Lakes to finally end its journey in far off Africa as I did mine."

"We are surrounded by sugar cane here at the school so there are many snakes. We had two big dogs killed by a puff adder that showed fight. They were dead in five minutes so you don't catch us being disrespectful to puff adders unless we have a gun handy. People do not get killed by snakes here because they watch for a movement in the paths or in trees and shoot them when they come near the house. A worse beast is the monkey who is a cheeky little beggar, and who comes in bands of fifty or more for a raid on the garden. If we happen to be absent when they come there is nothing left in the garden. An old monkey is always on guard in a tall tree."

Mr. Reuling is dean of men at Adams College, Adams, South Africa, a fine school for Zulu young men and finds time with all his other duties to be district Pathfindermaster, (similar to our Boy Scouts here). Mrs. Reuling, in addition to helping him wherever possible keeps in close contact with the folks in the villages and the women come to her often for advice about their babies, their cooking and other problems. She teaches in the Student Christian Association, leads village women's meetings and superintends her own home.

For several years Mrs. Reuling had a little Zulu school girl living with her who helped her about the house. Her name was Florence and she had run away from her uncle several times because if she fell asleep while herding the cattle he would cut her with a knife and rub salt in the wounds.

"She still has many scars on her arms and back," Mrs. Reuling writes. "We took her in and warned the uncle to keep away. Whenever he met her he would threaten her with hanging and other punishments but he never dared to touch her. We put her in school and from the very beginning she showed great diligence. She learned to do many things about the house by easy stages and became unusually efficient.

"At first she thought she was an orphan but about three years ago she heard that her mother was remarried and living on the south coast many miles from her. Very soon after that she heard that the mother was dead. While we were home on furlough, Florence saw her sister for the first time and learned that she had been stolen from her mother when she was two years old. Since the uncle who took her was head of the family according to Zulu custom the mother could do nothing about it and was too poor to visit the child and not able to write."

Right now the advantages which Florence has received together with her training in the Christian faith are being devoted to caring for a sick sister whose husband had left her to go to work in a distant section of the country and who was living with a cruel mother-in-law. The sister was driven away from the home by the mother-in-law.

"So Florence had our permission to go back and stay in her brother-in-law's house until he comes back from work," writes Mrs. Reuling.

"If she is there she can take care of the sick sister, protect the little one who is chased away and altogether be the good Samaritan for the unfortunate household. She feels that when she is there her singing hymns and reading the Bible has a chastening effect on the old lady. I hope she will be able to change her attitude toward the young ones. In the meantime it is a big responsibility for a 17-year-old who regrets losing her opportunity for a schooling."

This in brief is the thumb-nail sketch of only one Zulu child whose life has been made happy and useful through her contact with this American woman. The Bantu people are taking an increasing interest in their church work and not only supporting their own little churches out of pitifully meager incomes but sending out their own missionaries to less fortunate districts. Mrs. Reuling points out that they are eager for an education and that this young girl about whom she speaks has taken with her all her textbooks so that she can teach as many of those about her as possible what she herself has learned.

"The Bantu people are absolutely wild about music," Mrs. Reuling adds. "I have been teaching a few boys and girls throughout the years. After they have a grasp of the fundamentals of reading music they get along beautifully. The choirs are a joy. The school has five choirs now that take turns in giving the Sunday music. Mr. Reuling found some fifes very cheap and now the Pathfinders have a fife band."

AN INDIAN EDUCATOR IN AMERICA.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Dr. Bhaskarao P. Hivale, Indian educator from Bombay is now in America and speaking extensively in Congregational and Christian Churches.

Dr. Hivale, whose parents and grandparents were Christians, is a graduate of American Mission Schools in the Marathi area and of Wilson College, Bombay University, where he now is a Professor in the Department of Philosophy. He holds his M. A. and Ph. D. from Harvard University, Department of Philosophy and Psychology, and is a graduate of Andover Theological Seminary.

When Dr. Hivale was in America studying at Harvard he supported himself, his wife and family through his lecture work. His great charm of personality and keenness of wit as well as an understanding of his subject makes his platform work highly successful. He thus brings today to the United States information of special interest to American audiences because it is based on his own intimate knowledge of both countries.

Dr. Hivale was for a time Marathi Editor of "Dnyanadoya," the second oldest Anglo-Marathi paper in India. He is now Vice President of All-India Christian Association. This spring he planned and carried through a most successful Bible Institute at Mahableshwar and is still at work on a translation of the Bible. Dr. Hivale has great influence not only among the Christian students of Wilson College but among the non-Christian students, leading them along both spiritual and intellectual lines.

Dr. Hivale's thesis was written upon "The Idea of God in Contemporary Occidental Philosophy." Time and time again at Harvard this brilliant Indian was called upon to defend the idea of a personal God to his class mates and professors.

There are some things in life for which we feel continually thankful," said Dr. Hivale. "The knowledge of God given by Jesus has been the greatest of these to me. Since this came to me and my family through the American Congregationalists I have always felt indebted to them. My life could not have had such rich opportunities if I had not come under the influence of missionaries in India and the Christian friends of America." On Dr. Hivale's letterheads appears the famous statement of Abraham Lincoln, "With malice toward none, with charity toward all, with firm faith in the right as God gives us to see right."

In India Dr. Hivale is often spoken of as "an Indian-American" and his affection for this country is sincere and deep. Interviewed by the press he declared that Gandhi, however much people may feel that he is out of the picture, is still the most powerful figure in India, but he is not mixing up much in the political movements.

"Twenty years ago," he says, "India was asleep with her people clinging to the old things. If you suggested to a farmer that he use an American plow, telling him that in this way he could do in half a day what under the old method took two and one-half days his response to the suggestion would be, 'But what would we do with the two days?' Today he would seize the opportunity."

Bus lines are tying the villages together and in every way modern civilization is knitting the scattered groups into one unit. There is a great increase too, says Dr. Hivale in the publication of newspapers in the vernacular. In the hands of the Indian women lies the real destiny of the nation, Dr. Hivale feels. In Wilson College there are 190 women students from the ages of 18 to 21 who, when they graduate, will hold the equivalent of a Harvard B. A. In spite of the general idea that women have occupied a place wholly innocuous in Indian life, Dr. Hivale declares that this is not true. She is of great influence in the family life and if she is conservative and refuses to follow in the new ways she can make it almost impossible for her husband or son to do so.

One of the things coming from America that is not helping India is the flood of questionable movie films and cheap magazines. From these the average Indian gets his idea of the average American and Dr. Hivale finds it necessary to spend a great deal of time in the rather hopeless effort of telling the people that America is not really as pictured on the silver sheet in the cheap magazines and newspapers.

Gratitude is one of the celestial plants that grows only in the soil of meditation.

A Story for the Children

PICNICKING IN THE SNOW.

"A picnic in the wintertime! I never heard of such a thing!" Marjie Mack opened her eyes wide and looked from one to another of her cousins.

"Oh, we have them often. We carry hot milk or soup in a thermos bottle and take sandwiches and cookies. Hannah made a whole batch for us to take today. Come on Marjie; we'll put on our rubber boots, for the snow may be deep in places."

"Oh, what fun!" cried Marjie, as she ran upstairs to get ready.

Henry carried a basket and Marjie and Lou pulled the hand-sled, "just for fun," said Marjie.

Under the trees in the woods they found the snow marked all over with tiny footmarks.

"Oh! Oh!" cried Marjie, "what made these marks? Was it squirrels?"

"Yes, and rabbits," said Henry. "There goes Admiral. He lives up in that old tree. I've seen his nest. When he comes out we might get a chance to peep in, but he must not catch us at it, or he might be frightened and move away."

"Last winter," said Lou, "a squirrel had his nest in that tree, right in that crotch over our heads."

"Why, I did not know that squirrels built nests like birds," said Margie.

"They do, and they sometimes take possession of an old bird's nest, making it a little bigger to suit themselves," said Lou.

"Let's picnic right here," said Henry. "Then Marjie can watch the Admiral. Maybe he will come over for crumbs; he is quite tame."

So they brushed off a fallen log, spread the shawl they had brought and sat down to watch. They had not been waiting long when two little rabbits scampered over the snow and disappeared among the bushes. Marjie was delighted.

As the children ate they threw crumbs to the birds and counted how many kinds came. There were only five or six, but Lou said she had often counted as many as eight or nine kinds in one afternoon.

Then Admiral came near. Marjie had a cup of soup in her hand and got so excited as he came near her that she almost spilled it.

Henry spoke quietly to her: "Do not make a noise, Marjie. Just stoop down, and he will come to your hand."

Marjie trembled with excitement. The little bright eyes watched her, and he darted so quickly from crumb to crumb. Then she held out a crust and the brave Admiral actually came and took it out of her hand and sat up, nibbling it as if he was one of the picnic party.

"We are quite used to them," said Lou. "Sometimes one runs up on Henry's shoulders when we sit very quietly under the trees in the summer time."

"We must take something home on the sleigh," said Henry. "Let's pretend we are poor wood-gatherers, and take a big bundle of sticks."

The girls agreed. So they ran about picking up sticks until they had a great pile, as much as the sleigh would hold. They had no rope to bind the sticks in place, so they piled them up as high as they could. Before they got well started the pile tumbled over.

"I know what to do," cried Margie. "I'll sit on top of the sticks and keep them in place."

Henry and Lou laughed and helped their cousin onto the pile; then they started off again. Marjie thought she was having the best of it, when over she went into a snowdrift.

They shouted with glee, brushed the snow off, and Lou took a turn. She held on tight and watched carefully, but mischievous Marjie gave a jerk on the rope and back fell Lou, sticks on top of her.

"Oh," said Henry, "you girls don't know how to balance the thing. When you feel it going to one side you must lean to the other side, don't you see?"

"Very well; you ride, Henry, and we will pull," said Marjie with a twinkle in her eye.

Picking up the sticks again, Henry took his place cross-legged on the top of the pile. For a while everything went smoothly.

"You see, that's the way to do it," said vain-glorious Henry, and, with the words, over went the rider into the softest snowdrift they could find. Henry was good-natured about it; he suspected mischief."

Then they did the sensible thing. Henry pulled the sled and the girls walked, one on each side, with a hand on the sticks to steady them.

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY RELIGION?

Every once in a while we hear someone say that the thing which people need is religion, and that if we could get people to embrace the old time religion our problems would all be solved. Now, if we mean by religion the right relationship between man and God, and between man and man, then we agree that religion would solve our problem. But the truth of the matter is that the kind of religion which people have had in the past did not solve all of the problems which the world has had. We hear a great deal about the "good old days of the past," but we sometimes forget that during those "good old days" a great many of the best people owned human slaves, and that not all of these slave owners were as kind as they might have been. Also, in those days, we are told that even the best church members partook of strong drink and did things which we think they ought not to have done. But the gospel of Christ was not at fault. The development of a perfect Christian character is a big job and there are many things to be considered. In some things one man is strong and another weak, whereas in still other things the reverse is true. People need a great deal of religion, and this religion must express itself in many kind of activities. Our Lord emphasized the fact that we must not only love the Lord our God with all of our heart, but we must love our neighbor also. Religion, whether the old kind or the new kind, that does not have in it both of these qualities of heart could hardly claim to have attained unto the best. Since religion is so broad and so deep and so comprehensive, it behooves each of us to be patient in dealing with our fellow men. Along with our religion we shall need a great deal of instruction to help us put into practice the profession of our faith. While God gives us religion he does not always keep us from erring in judgment. There are many things that must be developed after we have entered the kingdom.—M. P. Herald Editorial.

In this troubled world of ours our Saviour lived, and here, in the thick of life, he made God real and near, lifting drab days into associations divine. He saw why men fail of the truth most worth knowing. He saw through the self-deceivings with which we dope ourselves, and the evasions by which we shirk what we know to be right and true. He saw why we give up prayer, and what eats away our peace, and what keeps us away from God. . . . He told us that we must get back to God and that this is home.

Elon Alumni

By M. L. PATRICK, Secretary,
Elon College Alumni Association,
High Point, N. C.

Thursday of this week, J. O. Atkinson, Jr., president of the Alumni Association, mailed me an open letter to the alumni, and I am quoting it, in part, here:

Dear Alumni:

The mid-year meeting of the Alumni Association will be held for the third time this year on February 15th at two o'clock at Elon College. At the commencement last spring the association vested the mid-year meeting with the same power as the regular commencement gathering.

There are a number of important questions to come up, such as the campaign of the college, employing a full-time secretary of the Association, and your presence is earnestly requested.

It is the wish of the general association that all local units have at least five delegates. However, all alumni present will be entitled to participate in the discussions and in the voting.

A program is being prepared which I believe will be of interest to all of you . . . . After the dinner the meeting alumni will have the opportunity of witnessing a basketball game between Alma Mater and the Atlantic Christian College.

I not only want to urge but to plead that you be present on this occasion.

J. O. ATKINSON, JR., President,
Elon College Alumni Association.

While the above speaks abundantly for itself, I want to add my lusty "amen" to his plea for attendance. The meeting already held during the month of February has meant much to the Association. Your presence will mean much. Plan to attend, Saturday, February 15th, at two o'clock, at Elon.

* * *

This week I am mailing out the first installment of letters to the alumni for the annual membership association dues of one dollar. Many complaints have been lodged in the past that dues are not asked for until two or three weeks before commencement and that, made then, they serve to prevent many attending commencement.

The main objective for the request at this time, however, is to enlist as many members as possible. The fee was placed at one dollar in the belief that more members could be enrolled. So far that plan has worked very well. Still, not enough paid-up members have enrolled in any single year to give any assurance that the association is strong enough to place a full-time secretary in the field.

Five hundred is the minimum number of memberships the association desires now, and the Executive Committee, the President of the Association, and your secretary hope that we may be able to collect a sufficient number before February 15th, in order that the discussion relative to a secretary may have some workable basis.

Will you not, as individuals, write a few of your friends about the Elon meeting and about the membership fee?

I think I would want to blow the lid off if my children had to go hungry. Some of my friends marvel at the spread of radicalism. I wonder that there is so little of it.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

OUR COLLEGE.

It was difficult for me as a high school student to know that I had a share in a college. It is probably equally as difficult for young people in the Christian and Congregational churches to feel that way now but really we can say "Our college" in a very real sense when we refer to Elon.

This institution was founded in order that the young people of the Church might have a chance at college education. It has been conducted for more than forty years for the benefit of the church people. It is owned and controlled by the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. Its building and equipment belongs to us, and its faculty represent us. Elon's success is our success and her failure would fail directly upon the Church.

Elon calls to the young people for two things. In the first place she invites those who want a college education to come and get it at a nominal cost. She helps make it possible for those who have but little money to get a college education. Her doors stand open for any of those who wish to enter the field of knowledge.

Elon's second call to the church people is for the kind of loyalty that speaks a good word for the College and backs it up with a cash donation. With the greatly reduced indebtedness and the rapidly increasing enrollment the college now offers a real challenge to the church people to give liberally for its support.

EASTER PROGRAMS.

It is now time to begin planning the programs for the Easter season. Some churches will want to present plays or pageants; others will want to enrich the worship services or hold a sunrise service. Still others will have a membership campaign leading up to Easter. Pastors may be interested in a training class for children who are of age for church membership. Those who are responsible for these Easter programs should be busy now gathering material and making plans. There will be no great ingathering of members and no missionary offering equal to the needs unless plans are developed early. The Board of Christian Education has on hand a fairly good list of materials which are available. There will appear on this page shortly a list of some suggested materials, but those who are eager in beginning at once are invited to write to the Board of Christian Education at 505 South Main Street Norfolk, Virginia, making known their request.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN."

Several young people have received free copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN recently. It is the hope of the managing editor (and the other editors) that they have enjoyed reading the paper. In fact, it is the hope that they have enjoyed it enough to want to subscribe and continue to read it.

Which reminds me that all young people can do a service for the Church by securing subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The present subscription list is far too small for the support of the paper. The College, Orphanage, Mission Board and Board of Christian Education have to pay part of their money for the support of this religious newspaper which is so badly needed among our Church people. Many of us believe that if the young people will take the matter seriously they can increase the subscription list to the point that THE CHRISTIAN SUN will pay for itself. This would be a great advance step in the work of our Church in the southeast. If you are interested in it just go ahead and get somebody to subscribe and send the money to THE CHRISTIAN SUN at Richmond, Virginia.

STATE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP OFFICERS.

This discussion at the Florida Holiday Conference was led by Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Va., and reported by Earle Ward of Winter Park, Fla.

Following a brief history and explanation of the organization of the Pilgrim Fellowship in general and the Southeast Youth Fellowship in particular given by the leader, the following points were discussed:

I. Duties of Counselors: Advise officers, plan for work in particular fellowship.

II. Duties of Key-Workers in local groups: Receive information and plans and present to group they represent; send reports of group to executive committee.

III. Methods of securing and contacting Key-Workers: Through suggestions of pastors and Sunday school superintendents, and through election by local group.

IV. Functioning of local groups improved by visitation of other groups and through teams.

V. Methods of financing Fellowships: Eastern Virginia organizations pay $1.00 per year; Board of Christian Education provides funds in some fellowships; Florida-state church organization grants $25.00 for expenses, no pledges from local groups. Southeast Youth Fellowship should receive 10 per cent of receipts of state fellowship groups.

VI. Contribution of Youth Fellowship work to local church: Stimulate present organizations; organize new groups when necessary; suggest materials to use; suggest cooperative plans; and develop a sense of unity with the larger young people's groups.

VII. Plans of Fellowships represented in this discussion: North Carolina and Virginia—Held conference using as their theme "Peace;" established key-workers; promoted Peace Plebiscite; planning local church visitation; plan week-end conference. Eastern North Carolina—Establishing key-workers; have annual rallies; share in programs of Annual conference and Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention. Eastern Virginia—plan to have seventy-five attend Elon Summer School; plan vacation Bible schools; volunteer subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN (50); promoted Peace Plebiscite. Western North Carolina—held all day meeting. Florida—Promoted Peace Plebiscite; publish paper; selected key-workers; held week-end conference and all-day conference; chosen as their home mission project the West Tampa Mission.

SOUTHEAST YOUTH FELLOWSHIP OFFICERS.

This discussion was led by Lanson Granger of Norfolk, Virginia.

Due to the number of departmental superintendents who wanted to know fully just what they were to do their work was taken up first.

Devotional Life—Literature furnished each person emphasizing worship (personal and group).

Observe Lenten Season, using available literature. Contact societies through Youth Fellowship page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Evangelistic development (sermons, social development, interviewing persons.)

Service—World Fellowship (Information, special field projects, special information and emphasis, seek information in order to help others, definite projects). Social (best information). Liquor problems (support or non-support of such concerns.)

HOW FAR SHOULD AUTHORITY BE RESPECTED.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEB. 16, 1936.

Scripture: Romans 13:1-8.

Daily Bible Readings.

Monday—Rebekah should have been disobeyed. Gen. 27:1-14.

Tuesday—Respect for Authority. Tit. 3:1-8.

Wednesday—Freedom of conscience. Acts 4:18-20.

Thursday—Submission, not servility. I Peter 2:11-17.

Friday—Elijah defies Ahab. I Kings 18:17-20.

Saturday—Submission in the church. I Peter 5:1-7.

The success or failure of one's life may be determined by the manner in which he accepts the laws of our government, the laws of business, social laws, laws of nature, and God's laws.

We all recognize the fact that government laws are essential to orderly and sane national life, and to that end we elect men to study the life of our nation and to draft laws by which we are to abide. Yes, we elect the lawmakers and while, no doubt, some of the laws do not seem to us as being justified or needed they are necessary to the majority of the citizens. We have one law in particular which it seems is respected by only a very few people. That is the speed law. Almost by popular demand we hear "there should not be any speed law." And yet the disregard for the speed laws that exists today, the disregard for all laws of safe and sane driving, have written into the history of this nation during the year 1935 the most appalling story—written in the blood of the dying, the crippled and maimed; and until we realize and respect the authority that demands that we drive within the speed limit and drive carefully can we hope for any better results. The disregard for the laws of kidnapping have placed a heavy responsibility on all law-enforcing agencies in this country, and have forced some of our citizens to go to other countries to find safety for themselves and their families. We must raise the standard of respect for our laws of government if we hope to live safely and happily.

The business of some concerns is conducted in such a manner that it makes us ashamed that such conditions are allowed to exist. But, we, as young people, by starting today can raise the standard of business by carrying the teachings of Christ into our business affairs and demand of all business concerns fair and honest dealings.

In our country today some clubs, organizations and social groups seem to think that they live only to themselves, that they can do as they please and no one has a right to criticize them. Of course they are mistaken, as no one lives unto himself, but is dependent to a large degree on others. To change this absurd impression of these social groups, instead of respecting the standard they are holding up we should refuse to abide by them and hold up before them the teachings of Christianity as a law and standard by which to pattern their social life.

If we disregard the laws of nature as concerning our physical bodies we are punished through ill health. If we respect these laws of nature we may be assured of a healthy life. Most of us

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS INSISTS ON RIGHTEOUSNESS.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 9, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"—Luke 6: 39-49.

In these days of "mass production," let us not forget that some of the most effective work is done with individuals and in small groups. Jesus spake often to the multitudes, but his most effective work was done with the individual and the Twelve. He invested so much of His time and His energy to teaching and training them, and it was through them, and not through the multitudes that he started the work of the Kingdom. Today's lesson tells how he called the Twelve to Him, plain, every-day, unschooled men of varied temperaments and outlooks, but men who because they came under the spell of His personality and yielded themselves to His will, went out and "turned the world upside down."

Blind Leading the Blind.

There is a note of humor as well as of tragedy in the query of Jesus, "Can the blind lead the blind?" How can one who cannot see lead others? How can one who does not know the truth teach others? How can one who has no religious experience share vital religion with another? The remark was directed not only to the Pharisees and scribes, blind to the truths of vital religion and the moral beauty of Jesus, but to all of us who attempt to lead others into an experience which we have not had ourselves. Ministers and Sunday school teachers and Christian workers first must find and possess Christ before they can share him with others.

Motes and Beams.

Here again is an intriguing sense of humor. It is the picture of a man with a big stick in his own eye trying to find a tiny splinter in the eye of another man. Thus does Jesus put in unforgettable form the all too common tendency for all of us to see the faults of others while being blind to our own faults, the tendency to clean up our neighbor's back-yard while all the time we refuse to clean up our own back-yard. Then, as now, people were willing that others be reformed, but they were not willing to be reformed themselves.

By Their Fruits.

Jesus was what philosophers might call "a pragmatist"; he applied a practical test to religion and life. Men were to be judged not in terms of what they believed in their heads, but in terms of what came out of their hearts. By their fruits we shall know them, insisted Jesus again and again. It was the spirit of the inner life that determined the character of the external conduct of the man. A man with a clean heart will bring forth good fruit. A man with an unclean heart will bring forth corrupt fruit. Jesus is saying that creeds are no substitute for character, that creeds must find expression in conduct.

Profession Without Practice.

"Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I command you, or the things I say." These words bring us face to face with the exacting demands of discipleship. Jesus would have no lip-service. He demands obedience. He cares not for mere profession; He demands practice in righteousness. How the Master pierces our sham and our shallowness and goes right to the heart of the thing. How easily it is to call him Lord, but how difficult it is to make Him actually Lord of our lives. But He brooks no divided loyalty. He will be Lord of all or Lord of none.

Builders.

All of us are builders—builders of life and character. We can build but once. Every man therefore should take heed how he builds. In a graphic way Jesus emphasizes the importance of good foundations. Here is one man who built a fine house, and with foresight and sagacity he built it upon a rock—it had substantial foundations. When the storms came with all their fury the house stood. Another man built a house just as fine. But he built his house upon the "earth" or as Jesus says in Matthew "upon the sands" and when the storm came, alas, the house toppled over into ruin. The houses were the same; the difference was in the foundation. Jesus did not have to add a moral to that story. It is self-evident. Life is like that. Men are like that. They do not give heed to the foundation of life and character. The test of life is not what a man knows, not what he has, not what he can do, but what kind of man is he—what is his character, what is his foundation? The point in this story is that the storms come alike to all. The good man as well as the bad man must face storms. But the life that is built upon the foundation, other than which no man can lay, Jesus Christ, that man has inner resources which stand in the time of stress and storm.

He that heareth and doeth—that is the point of the story. Hearing and doing—how vitally they are related to each other. There is no impression without expression is one side of a great educational principle. Noble impressions must have expression is the other side of a great religious truth. He that doeth the truth cometh to the light said Jesus. Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge. Let every man take heed how he build. Let every man see to it that his life is based on the fundamental virtues of the good life. Let every man make Jesus Christ the foundation of his character.

NEW BATTLE LINES OF DEATH.

The battle front has ever been counted the line of slaughter and death, but now the American highways have become the line of death. Last year 40,000 died, to say nothing of the thousands maimed and broken. Everyone knows that the drunk and drinking drivers are largely responsible for this record.

In North Carolina since November more than 1,000 have had their drivers' licenses revoked for driving while drunk. At this rate the year's total will reach 4,000. Everyone knows that many of the drunk drivers are not brought into court—the wet sections show fewer arrests. Then, too, it is known that the drinking driver—the man who is not tried in court—is more dangerous than the drunk driver. We need not wonder that our highways have become long lines of slaughter.

Dr. Morris Fishburn, editor of Journal of the American Medical Association, says: "Almost 40,000 people killed and nearly a million injured every year! That is the toll of motor accidents in the United States of today. The greatest menace in this reign of slaughter is the drinking driver—not the drunk, mind you, according to one high authority—as extensive experiments conclusively show."

Then this high authority goes on at length showing why this is true.

This slaughter continues, liquor advertising and places of sale encourage drinking and the papers tell of the big profits that accrue, as death infests the highways. What fools these Americans be! In this present safety campaign, why not hit the source of wreck and ruin?—N. C. Christian Advocate.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"AWARENESS."

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psalms 46:10.

"Commune with your heart and be still."—Ps. 4:4.

Bishop Kern says, in his book, "The Basic Beliefs of Jesus," that "We are so busy carrying our petty and inconsequential schemes that there is little standing room left in our crowded lives where God might rise and speak. The dust of our hurrying feet clouds His face and our babel cries stifle the still small whisper of His presence."

Says a poet, anonymously—

"No one could tell me where my soul might be;
I searched for God and He eluded me;
I sought my brother out, and found all three."

How well we all know that life's daily run and rush, fatigue, dissipation, and prostrations have shut God out of our lives. And yet, God is, and he who orders his life aright finds time to meditate and pray, and hear His voice.

Prayer—Our Father, grant that our devotions to Thee that spiritual realities, and Jesus Christ may be an integral part of life's everyday picture.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"DOES WISDOM SAVE?"

"Hath God made foolish the wisdom of the world?"—I Cor. 1:20.

Says a writer: "There can be no peace for the human soul, no respite from the weariness of all transitory and evanescent pursuits except through faith in some one thing fixed and steadfast, some one thing utterly unconcerned with the flowing tides of change."

The stabilizing force of soul is not wisdom. All the wisdom of "brain trusts" cannot make successful farming in Alaska.

Strength and security of soul lie in thoughts that are God's thoughts end in ways that are God's ways. We must discover the thought of God and the ways of God, then, whether rich or poor, wise or ignorant, success and happiness follows.

"A mighty fortress is our God,
A bulwark never failing."

Prayer—Our Father of Mercy and Greatness, be Thou our light, our guide, our preserver. Today we give ourselves to Thee.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"LIVING IN HEARTS."

"The laborer is worthy of his hire."—Luke 10:27.

"Your father knoweth what things ye have need of before you ask him."—Matt. 6:8.

"Wherefore if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you?"

"Therefore take no thought saying what shall we eat? Or what shall we drink? Or wherewithall shall we be clothed?"

"For your heavenly father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:30-33.

Jesus took no anxious thought about material things and He would have us take no anxious thought about them.

Jesus believed that to make the righteousness of the Father's Kingdom first carried with it the fulfillment of all life's needs, and He would have us believe that it has always been true, and that it is certain to be true forever.

'Tis true that one may come to want, or may suffer, or may have no place to lay his head, but there is something better than these comforts. Jesus had an hundred shelters in the hearts of his friends and today He is an unseen guest and lends radiance to a million Christian homes and hearts.

All of which is a way of saying that Jesus refused to subordinate the spiritual power of goodness to material comforts or gains. Can we be like Jesus?

Prayer—Our Father, teach us the truth of life. If the abundance of life consisteth not in things, but in hearts, we pray for that power to write life's values in the lives of our fellowman. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"A BLIND MAN SPEAKING."

"When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy father which is in secret; and thy father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."—Matt. 6:6.

"The world ends at my fingertips:
Now I must pray
Devoutly, lest all beauty slip
Out of my way.

"There must not be one selfish tear
To grieve this loss,
Did not our common Saviour bear
A heavier cross?"

"The world ends at my fingertips,
And yet I may Find Beauty, If unwilling lips
Can learn to pray."

—Marvin E. Cruse.

FRIDAY.

"WHERE GOD IS."

"Ye will not come to me that ye may have life."—Jno. 5:40.

"If any man thirst let him come to me."—Jno. 7:37.

A poet has said:

"When days are full of discord
And every moment brings
Its share of strife and worry,
I think of quiet things—
Quiet things and calm things—
Lovely things like these:
Dim woods at nightfall,
Snow on hemlock trees,
A cherry tree in blossom,
Cobwebs hung with dew,
Yellow leaves drifting down
With sunlight slanting shining thru;
Behind closed lids I seek them —
Again and yet again—
Curling wisps of wood smoke,
Violets in the rain."

And another says:

"I sought him where my logic led.
This friend is always sure and right,
His lantern is sufficient light—
'I need no star,' he said.

"I sought him in the city square.
Logic and I went up and down
The market place of many a town,
And he was never there.

"I tracked him to the Mind's far rim,
The valiant intellect went forth
To east and west, and south and north,
And found no trace of Him!

"We walked the world from sun to sun,
Logic and I, with little faith,
But never came to Nazareth,
Or found the Holy One.

"I sought in vain, and finally
Back to the heart's small house I crept,
And fell upon my knees and wept,
And lo—He came to me!"

—Sarah Henderson Hay.

Prayer—Drink, friends, of the Life-giving stream.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"A PRAYER FOR FAITH."

"Lord give me faith;—to live from day to day
With tranquil heart; to do my simple part.
And with my hand in Thine, just go Thy way.

"Lord give me faith;—to trust if not to know;
With quiet mind in all things
Thee to find;
And child-like go where thou wouldst have me go.

"Lord give me faith;—to leave it all to Thee.
The future is Thy gift, I would not lift
The veil Thy love has hung twixt it and me." Amen.

—John Oxenham.

SUNDAY.

"SOUL GROWTH."

"Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory now and forever."

"Rebellious heart, in the grasp of fate,
Have patience, wait!
Calm you, and hark to the great wind's blowing,
Bearing winged seeds to your heart for sowing;
Drive deep the plow of sorrow and pain,
Turn up rich soil for the golden grain.
Spare not the tears, they are needed as rain;
Too long, too long has the field lain fallow,
Now well prepared and no longer shallow.
Please God, a soul is growing!"

—Annerika Fries.

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, we believe, help Thou our unbelief. In Thee we live, and more, have our being. We pray Thee to give us the sense to cultivate in Christ and come every day closer to him, and grow more like Him.—Amen.

Would the world ever have made the noteworthy progress already made toward an ideal social order had it not been for the patient labor of the church down through the years in constantly relaying in new-born generations the spirit of brotherhood, out of which springs all sincere effort for human welfare?—James E. Clarke.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends, ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you."—John 15:13, 14.

These are the words of Jesus. Words at the end of the way. Words tested by the weeks, months, years. Final words, fitting a great friendship. The disciples had followed him. A lasting friendship had been formed. It had been tested. Jesus was content with the results. He is making them a final speech. An unforgettable talk, in which he binds them with the bonds of friendship, to one another and to himself. "Ye are my friends".

Heretofore they have been followers, disciples, servants. Heretofore they have been led, served, taught. They have improved. They have grown. They are not, as Kagawa would say, fully awake yet, but they have been under the powerful influence of Jesus. The power of that influence is beyond the expression of words. How many therefore, can he now call friends? Friends! How sweet the word! How many obstacles it has to overcome! How much patience it must represent! Some people are not big enough for the title: Friend! They cannot pay the price of patience, love, endurance, forgiveness, understanding, and over and over again love! Some of the humblest people on earth have made the staunchest friends. Some of the poorest in this world's goods have been most blessed by friendship! In the animal world it is set forth well in the friendship of the dog. Jesus took cognizance of that,—even poor Lazarus had the friendship of the dogs. They did not turn him down. Now Jesus is saying to his disciples "Ye are my friends". Will they stick by him? When he is broken, beaten, cursed, accused, killed: "Ye are my friends". When his cause is persecuted beyond the resurrection, and his followers are persecuted to the death: "Ye are my friends". The ties of friendship, they must hold!

In this text he is saying: I am going to do two things for you, and you are going to do one thing, in turn, for me. I am going to love you more than anybody else on earth: "Greater love hath no man than this." Friendships are made of 'greater love.' There is a sickening, softening sort of sentimentalism called love that can never reach the realm of friendship. Jesus did not offer James and John and the rest that sort. He offered them, as He offers you, 'greater love.'

I have often heard Dr. J. O. Atkinson in his great addresses and sermons speak in terms of wonderment at the miracle achieved by the disciples in turning the world upside down as they did for Christ. Why? How did they do it? What strength did they possess? They had been loved by Jesus! First hand they had felt His friendship! They had heard him say, and they knew he meant it, "Ye are my friends. None shall ever love you more than I do!" That is the answer to the miracle of their achievement! Pity we cannot realize more of the love of Jesus for us! Pity we do not practice his presence more, and feel more his friendship.

If we did would we have to be begged to give to Missions, to Education, to Benevolences as we are? Would we have to be begged to transfer our membership to the church in our community, and to give service and support to its program? "Ye are my friends!" Ah! what sort of friends?

He gathered these disciples very close to him, and with all the tenderness of his simon pure heart he told them of his love. Are we worthy to be inside that circle? Let us consider our ways, and humbly seek to be worthy. Let us truthfully say to him:

"My Jesus I love thee, I know thou art mine,
For thee all the follies of sin I resign;
My gracious redeemer, my Saviour art thou;
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus 'tis now.

"I love thee because thou hast first loved me,
And purchased my pardon on Calvary's tree;
I love thee for wearing the thorns on thy brow;
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now."

II.

In this text Jesus is telling his disciples a second thing he is going to do for them. "That a man lay down his life for his friends, ye are my friends." Tomorrow through blinding tears they were to see the fulfillment of this saying. For them he was going to die! Why for them? Why, because they needs must die? Why should they die? "The wages of sin is death." We do not like this doctrine. It is a stumbling block to many. It is as though we realize that in this moral universe our sins should condemn us; that we have no right to sin against God and live; and that we have all sinned and come short of the glory of God,—for we have been made in his image, and we are his offspring, the sheep of his pasture. But we have all sinned and gone astray. Now how much that means we are not likely to fully understand until we stand in the presence of God. The disciples were by this time close enough to Jesus to see something of its awfulness. To admit our failure to see awfulness of our sins is to admit our distance from the goodness and purity of God. We are not close enough to appreciate the contrast. If close enough we shall see as the Scriptures clearly indicate that the "soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ezekiel 18:4); "The wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6:23.); "They are all under sin; as it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one." (Rom. 3:9); "And so death passed upon all men, for all have sinned." (Rom. 5:12.); and "All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned everyone to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on his the iniquity of us all." (Isa. 53:6).

One of their own number, Peter, later said: "But (ye were redeemed) with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish, and without spot." (I Peter 1:19).

"What a friend we have in Jesus,
All our sins and griefs to bear;
What a privilege to carry
Everything to God in prayer."

So in the after years these disciples were going to be able to say: "We are living because Jesus, our Friend, died in our stead,—he died for us." Another one of the selfsame disciples, reflecting on this said: "The love of God toward us was manifested, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." (I John 4:8-10). Jesus is here telling them then that he is going to suffer the death that they should die,—that he is going to lay down his life for them, and this they are never to forget. It would make the workaday religion of our daily lives a very different thing if we, too, should grasp that truth, and act accordingly.

III.

And act accordingly. That is just what Jesus in his text was telling his friends, the disciples, that they should do for him. "Ye are my friends if." That "if!" The Upper Room had had its tragedy! Judas had walked out! One of the

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Faithful boys live at the Christian orphanage. Since sometime before Christmas the weather has been very cold. We had snow during Christmas week and very cold weather. Before the ground was entirely clear of snow another snow fell and in a few days more snow fell. For the last ten days of January we have had real winter weather. The ground covered with snow and the thermometer standing some mornings on zero or a few degrees above and remaining at a low degree all day.

Through all this weather, as cold as it is, the boys have the cows to milk and feed. The milk had to be delivered, the mules to water and feed. Hogs to feed and in extremely cold weather the feed has to be mixed with warm water, a lot of trouble too. Three furnaces to fire. Roads thru the snow to clear out. Sidewalks to clean off. Lots of work in the bitter cold, but through it all the writer has not heard a single boy complain or grumble because of his work.

Each one has his job and he sticks to it and does it with a will. Even the little boys who carry in kindling wood and coal for the stoves did pretty well, for a little boy dreads to carry in coal in bitter cold weather. We feel proud of our boys.

Our Durham church and Elon church got on the honor roll as banner churches for being on the $100.00 or more class list. The offerings did not get in before we closed our books for the year 1935, but due credit will be given in the Thanksgiving offerings list. We are grateful indeed.

SHE BEGAN THE DAY WITH THE NEW TESTAMENT.

J. M. Barrie wrote of his mother as follows: "She begins the day by the fireside with the New Testament in her hands—an old volume with its loose pages beautifully refixed and its covers sewn and re-sewn by her, so that you would say it can never fall to pieces. Other books she reads in the ordinary manner, but this one differently, her lips moving with each word as if she were reading aloud and her face very solemn. The Testament lies open on her lap long after she has ceased to read, and the expression of her face has not changed."

This is certainly a beautiful description of an old fashioned mother in an old fashioned home with the Holy Book in her lap. This was to her a book different from all other books as it really is and should be to one and all of us.

It was this book and this sort of mother that made Scotland great. And in the words of Odell Shepherd: "For these three centuries the grand harmonies of the English Bible have sounded in the ears of all true Americans, dignifying their speech, raising their thought, shaping their conduct, and filling their minds with vivid images of moral grandeur or depravity. Under all the uproar and amid all the haste and excitement of our vast pioneering adventure, this great and solemn and beautiful voice has been rolling on and on."—N. C. Christian Advocate.

learn early in life to have a deep respect for the laws of nature.

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." This means that we must render unto our government the respect that is due its laws, and as citizens to live in peace and harmony assured that our rights are protected under these laws. "Unto God the things that are God's" means that in all things, be it business or social life, do all things to the glory of God, and to the question of right and wrong we must always apply the laws of God, for only through the respect and obedience to the laws of God can we hope to enjoy a happy, consecrated life and render a worthy service to all mankind.

friends had proven false! "Ye are my friend, if"—if ye do not prove false; if you do not weaken; if you do not allow the world to overcome you; if you do not yield to fear; "if ye do whatsoever I commend you." Jesus is saying, "I want to trust you. I love you, and I want you to measure up to that love." They did! Let it be written for them in the heart of humanity: They did! That little society of friends proved themselves worthy of that friendship.

You and I are among those on whom Jesus is counting today, for a like fidelity, and devotion. We have been honored with his love, with his Gospel, with his friendship. Will we prove to be worthy? The call is clear, and unmistakable. Let us be his friend, as he is our Friend. And let us gladly, willingly, do our part as best we know how, to increase the Society of Friends of Jesus across the whole earth!

Winston-Salem church people and they have also been active in Winston-Salem life. He is a member of the Lion's Club.

Mr. Scott has been active in working out the merger of the Congregational and Christian bodies in the Southern Convention, is Past-moderator of the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas, and was re-elected President of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Congregational-Christian churches last fall. He is also President of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Conference. He has been active in Summer Conferences at Elon and Blue Ridge. For the past three years Mr. Scott has been a member of the Survey Committee of the Commission on Missions, which is one of the most important committees of the Commission. This has brought him in contact with denominational leaders and officials and enabled him to acquire a great deal of information with regard to denominational organization and methods.

Mrs. Scott has been an ideal helpmate in his work. They were classmates at Elon, where she received her diplomas in voice and piano, in addition to her literary accomplishments. She has been active in the woman's work of the Conference of the Carolinas and of the Southern Convention. They have three children, Billy, age six, Jimmie, age four and little Miss Lois Cotten Scott, age fifteen months.

MISS COGHILL ON NORTHERN TOUR.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was principal speaker for the Home Missionary Society at the Platform Meeting in connection with the Mid-winter Meeting at Evanston and so captivated everyone that there was a demand for her as a speaker following her two weeks tour of churches in the vicinity of Chicago. As a result, Miss Coghill is to go to Connecticut for a two weeks' speaking tour, there, also filling a few engagements in the vicinity of New York. In all, Miss Coghill will be gone about one month.

CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY.

On February 1st, Mrs. Sue A. Williams celebrated the tenth anniversary of the beginning of her service as office secretary in the Jacksonville office. Her ten years of loyal, gracious and efficient service have been appreciated not only by Superintendent Gillette and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and the other workers in the office, but by all in our Florida and southeastern fellowship who have had occasion to appreciate her devoted service.

A PRAYER.

These things, I ask, O God:

A body that is well and strong,
A heart that sings a merry song,
For day, a chance to earn my keep,
For night, the rest of honest sleep.

And grant me for my need

A simple faith, a spirit kind,
A friendly heart, an open mind,
A hope that knows no prison bars
And noble thoughts that reach the stars.

Deliver me, O God,

From shallow fears, from bitter hate,
From sullen mood, rebellion's state,
From hardness of the cynic's ways
And creed that wins the bigot's praise.

So shall I ever be

A true disciple of the One
Whose life is man's great paragon,
A pilgrim, whose uplifted eyes
Look toward the gates of Paradise.

Amen.

—ALFRED GRANT WALTON.

WHEN I GET TO THE END OF MY WAY.

The sands have been washed in the footprints
Of the stranger on Galilee's shore,
And the voice that subdued the rough billows,
Will be heard in Judea no more.
But the path of that lone Galilean
With joy I will follow today;
And the toils of the road will seem nothing,
When I get to the end of the way.

There are so many hills to climb upward,
I often am longing for rest,
But He who appoints me my pathway
Knows just what is needful and best.
I know in His Word He hath promised
That my strength, it shall be as my day;
And the toils of the road will seem nothing,
When I get to the end of the way.

When the last feeble step has been taken,
And the gates of that city appear,
And the beautiful songs of the angels
Float out on my listening ear;
When all that now seems so mysterious
Will be bright and as clear as the day;
Then the toils of the road will seem nothing,
When I get to the end of the way.

THE PRICE OF WAR.

Now that Congress has decreed that the bonus to the soldiers of the World War be paid, it is not good Americanship or good sportsmanship to argue further over the question. The contracted debt must and will be paid. Such is the record of the country.

According to the 1936 World's Almanac, we have 838,937 pensioners on the government pay roll, disbursements to whom amounted to $374,407,169 in 1935. This is an increase of 693,527 pensioners since 1880, and an increase of $317,717,940 in annual payments in 56 years.

After all it is only a small fraction of our price of war. The price of peace is cheaper and to this end let every loyal American exert all effort.

OBITUARIES

HOLLAND.

Miss Berle Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Holland, died at her home in Virgilina, January 2, 1936, at the age of 39 years. Besides her father and mother she is survived by one sister, Mrs. R. B. Whitmore and one brother, Ray Holland of Virgilina, Va. There are also four nieces and one nephew.

Miss Berle had always lived with her parents. No daughter was ever more devoted and kind to parents in their declining years than she. Months ago she consulted a specialist about her health but only to be informed that the dreaded disease, cancer, had advanced beyond the skill of surgery. She received the information calmly, continued her duties as long as possible and then with calm resignation that was marvelous to all, she quietly awaited the summons to the glory land.

The funeral was conducted by the writer and Rev. E. R. Harris.

CLIBORN.

Lillie Mae Cliborn, daughter of Johnny and Nannie Glasscock, was born January 3, 1901 in Halifax County, Va., and died at her home in Virgilina, Va., January 2, 1936. In December, 1921, she married Henry Cliborn, who survives her with three children: Mac Donald, Oscar and Gladis. She is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Berry Glasscock and Mrs. Jas. Bowen of Virgilina and three brothers, Joseph of Goldsboro, N. C., Henry of LaCrosse, Va., and George of Virgilina.

For years she was a faithful member of Union church. The funeral was conducted from the home by the writer and Rev. E. R. Harris. A large number attended. She was faithful in her home, a kind neighbor and loved by all.

C. E. NEWMAN.

MCCORMICK.

Jas. Henry McCormick was born in Randolph Co., Ala., Sept. 21, 1865. He died at Wadley, Dec. 11, 1935. He was married to Anna Carter, Aug. 31, 1890. To this union were born four boys and one girl.

His wife, four children, eight grandchildren, two brothers and a host of friends mourn their loss. He united with New Harmony church Sept. 21, 1890 and remained there till death. His pastor, Rev. J. D. Dollar, with Rev. A. R. VanCleave and the writer conducted the funeral.

A Nonagenarian Mayor.—

The City of Danville has, in the person of Harry Wooding, probably the oldest mayor in Virginia, if not in the United States. Mayor Wooding is nearing his 92nd birthday. When asked recently whether he would be a candidate to succeed himself, he replied that he expected he would, and added that he felt in good physical condition and mentally alert. The Mayor has held his office for 44 years—in itself quite a record.

A Measure of Regret.—

If the unopposed advancement of the racetrack bill to engrossment presages its uncontested passage, then Virginia legislators most surely have a very mistaken idea of what this bill will do. It will not greatly promote horse-breeding in Virginia. Neither will it assure the permanent inclusion of any Virginia track in the grand circuit. In all probability, the most tangible result will be the construction of one or two courses where second-rate horses will race before crowds that will contain many undesirable outsiders and professional gamblers and fixers. The reality of pari-mutuel racing is very, very different from the theory of the thing. Nothing would follow the enactment of this measure so surely as regret would! —Editorial in Richmond News Leader.

Are Unions Gaining in America?—

Leo Wollman of Columbia University, who was chosen by organized labor as its first chairman of the National Labor Advisory Board finds many employees to be opposed to unionization, on the basis of an official count. In a recent address Mr. Wollman gave the following results of elections held in the automobile industry: "Altogether nine boards held elections. The number of valid votes cast in all elections came to 400,000. Classifying the votes into those cast for a trade union and those cast against a trade union, 191,000, or 46.9 per cent, voted union, and 216,447, or 53.1 per cent, voted non-union." We are told that the 46.9 per cent included all forms of unions, and that less than 15 per cent favored affiliating with the American Federation of Labor. Are the results in this industry typical of other industries? We wonder.

Are Employees Encouraged to Save?—

The question of whether employers encouraged their workers to save, caused a nation-wide survey by the National Industrial Conference Board. The result is a tabulation covering 2,452 establishments, engaged in manufacturing, mining, transportation, etc., and employing approximately 4,500,000 workers. Of these 387 companies deduct a regular amount each week, with the worker's consent, from his pay-envelope and deposit it to his credit in a savings bank. To encourage home-owning, 96 companies operate building and loan associations and 88 others maintain home-purchasing plans of some other kind. Another 172 encourage employees to purchase stock in the companies for which they work, and 278 companies encourage credit unions, which are associations of employees providing limited loans to members. It was noted that the "plans for stimulating thrift" were found more often in the larger companies than in small ones.

And Now a New Safety Glass.—

No it is not "Safety glass" in the sense that it will not splinter or crash when hit by something, but it is "safety glass" because it will prevent glare. The first demonstration of this peculiar glass was given only about two weeks ago, and the show put on was said to justify the hopes that industry has for its development. Its inventors call it Polaroid, but Business Week thinks a better name still, would be "Magic Glass," and it gives its reasons for thinking so. It says that high powered automobile lights which were blinding and accident-provoking when viewed with the naked eye, "showed as non-glaring violet-hued areas when faced from behind Polaroid eye-glasses or windshield. Clear and distinct vision of the approaching car, its radiator, license plates, etc., was evident, showing that drivers of Polaroid-equipped cars will have the fullest benefit of the brilliance produced by their own headlights." Another use for Polaroid, is the realization of the movie cameraman's dream of three-dimensional movie films. And there are other uses for this new glass already planned, including glass meters for color matching, surgical instruments, etc. Quoting further: "Simply explained, Polaroid is a light-polarizing glass. Scientists tell us that light from the sun or a lamp is really a scrambled mass of waves that vibrate in all possible directions and as such is unpolarized. A polarizing medium literally combs out and untangles the light-waves and will transmit only those vibrations that are parallel with it."

Is War in the Offing?—

News from Washington is to the effect that plans are under way for modernizing fourteen of the American Navy's fifteen battleships. There appears before the Naval affairs Committee representatives of the Navy requesting the improvement of the battleships and the building of two new aircraft carriers. It was also urged that provision be made for the construction of 221,000 tons of auxiliary vessels. At the same time the House Military Committee is asking that the Army's air strength be brought up to 4,000 planes by not later than 1938, and there is before the house the largest army appropriation bill ever requested in peacetime and for an expenditure of $500,000,000 during the fiscal year 1937. Reports from England are to the effect that the country means "to replace her old battleships, increase her cruiser force, strengthen her air-fleet and speed up the mechanization of her army." The armament program is said to be the largest ever known in peace time in Great Britain, and the Baltimore Sun thinks that "Only one conclusion can be drawn: Britain sees the war danger increasing and not declining in the near future. The steadiest, most isolated of the European Powers, and the one most eager to preserve peace, has determined to arm, that is, to prepare for war in real earnest." No longer in the Naval Conference, Japan says little, but there are indications that she is prepared to "embark on unlimited construction." France and Italy are each building two new battle ships of approximately 35,000 gross tons. Germany is busy laying keels, and several of the smaller nations have announced programs that are modest yet effective.

The Beginning of an Industry.—

Do you know who Charles Martin Hall was? His life is linked with the beginning of one of the world's greatest industries, and here is the story. It was fifty years ago—to be exact, February 23, 1886, and the scene was laid in his father's woodshed, in Oberlin, Ohio. Hall had been a student in Oberlin College, and had heard one of his professors observe that the man who could invent a process for making aluminum on a commercial scale would not only make for himself a great fortune, but would become a benefactor of the entire world. Fired by this statement, Hall's search for such a process became an obsession. Nearly all of his spare time after school hours was spent in experimenting, but all the chemical knowledge at his command was of no avail. Eight months after he had graduated, the flash of inspiration came. Might not electricity hold the hidden answer? He invested his meagre savings in a small clay crucible, borrowed battery jars and plates from the school laboratory, and making the other crude apparatus that he needed, set up his woodshed laboratory. When everything was ready and his aluminum ore in the crucible, he switched on his batteries, but there was no aluminum. He pondered his problem. Could impurities in the clay crucible affect the result? To eliminate that possibility, he lined it with carbon, and tried again. The result—success. There in the crucible were tiny shining pellets! But Hall's troubles were not at an end. It was over two years before he was able to find those who would back his process. Thus was aluminum taken from the category of semi-precious metals to become the base of one of the world's largest industries.—Gleaned from an Advertisement.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

No tomb was ever made so strong that it could imprison a righteous cause.—The late William Jennings Bryan.

Rev. Albert A. Trembert of Daytona Beach, formerly pastor of the Congregational church at Flint, Michigan, has been invited to be interim minister at the church at Daytona Beach for the balance of this season.

The annual Convocation of Congregational, Christian ministers of Georgia will be held at Central Church, Atlanta, on Friday, February 14. Among those attending will be Rev. Milo J. Sweet; Rev. William T. Scott, and Superintendent Gillette.

A recent issue of THE SUN had an account of the World Sunday School Convention at Oslo, Sweden, and told of tourist arrangements. We would like to call attention to the fact Dr. Elisha A. King of Miami Beach expects to attend and is forming a party. Any one interested should get in touch with him.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor of the Richmond, Virginia Church, was called to Chapel Hill, N. C. on Wednesday of this week because of the death of Annie Lee McCauley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. McCauley of Chapel Hill. Annie Lee was twenty years of age and was a senior at the State University. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved.

It is not at all likely that any one ever had a totally original idea. He may put together old ideas into a new combination, but the elements which made up the new combination were mostly acquired from other people. Without many borrowed ideas there would be no inventions, new movements or anything else that is classed as new.—Dr. George Grier.

Various religious groups throughout the entire country, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, will observe "Brotherhood Day" on February 22nd and 23rd. It is stated that it is not the idea of the sponsors of these meetings to ignore the differences in these groups nor to minimize their importance, nor suggest any lessening of loyalty. Their purpose is rather to emphasize those interests and aims common to all groups which will tend to foster understanding, friendliness and cooperation among them.

The Eastern Virginia Elon Alumni Association will hold its annual meeting in the Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church on the evening of Friday, February 28th, at 7 o'clock. All former students of Elon should make a special effort to be present at this meeting. These occasions have always proved most enjoyable, and there is no reason for the coming meeting being an exception. If you can go, we would suggest that you notify Mr. Annie Staley Calhoun of Suffolk, who is secretary of this association.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Due to illness of Dr. Herring who was scheduled to come to Suffolk on February 18th for an all-day Mission Conference at the Suffolk Christian Church, the Conference has been cancelled.

MRS. HUBERT HARRELL, Secretary.

TRAINING SCHOOL AT NEWPORT NEWS.

The Annual Interdenominational Standard Training School for Church and Sunday School workers was held in Newport News the week of February 2nd-7th. Eight courses were offered. The average attendance was four hundred. The Congregational-Christian Church was well represented. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle represented our Board of Christian Education on the faculty. This is the third year Mr. Hardcastle has been with us in the School. Our local church had 31 in attendance and 21 received credit.

ROBERT LEE HOUSE, Pastor.

THE FORTY-EIGHTH STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

To the Leaders of Christian Education and the Sunday School Workers in North Carolina, Greeting:

In the name of the North Carolina Sunday School Association, we, the officers, invite leaders of Christian Education and Sunday School workers from all parts of the State to attend the State Convention, to be held in Winston-Salem from the 17th to the 19th of February, 1936.

The theme chosen for the Winston-Salem Convention this month is, "Forward through Cooperation." Surely no more appropriate theme could be found in these days of powerful disruptive forces when the great need is for world unity and cooperation in winning the world for Christ by teaching the child to be like Christ.

The Sunday School must have a distinct share in making the State more Christ-like, for it is seeking to win, teach, and train the oncoming generation for the Kingdom of God.

To visualize afresh our great task, and gain new inspiration for its pursuit, we bid you welcome to the 1936 State Convention in Winston-Salem, and assure you of the cordial warmth of Winston-Salem hospitality.

We confidently claim the continued intercessions of all who are interested in the work of Christian Education throughout the State on behalf of those on whom shall rest the responsibility of preparing for the Convention, that they may be divinely guided in all their ways, so that all that is planned and achieved may be to the greater glory of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

You cannot afford to miss the joy and inspiration. You will gain by seeing the great pageant under the direction of Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston. You will want to hear the Convention sermon at 3:00 o'clock Monday afternoon by Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder of Washington, D. C. Do not miss Dr. Harry Munro of Chicago. Miss Hazel Louis of St. Louis, Bishop Wm. F. McDowell of Washington, D. C., Dr. Lawrence Little of Western-Maryland College and others.

DR. P. E. LINDLEY, State President,
High Point, N. C.

REV. SHUFORD PEELER, Secretary,
Salisbury, N. C.

"LIFE CHANGERS" AROUND THE WORLD.

Multitudes in all lands are looking for the panacea for human weakness and the cure for all evil. At many and divers times and in divers places men and women have claimed to have found the remedy. Each of the great ethnic religions began as a reformation and produced corrective philosophies and better rules of conduct. They accomplished something and leaders have come forward—like Zoroaster, Confucius, Buddha, Mohammed and Gandhi—leaders with many noble characteristics, but they and their religions have failed to transform men and women into Godlike characters. A "new birth" is required for such a transformation, the impartation of a new life by the Spirit of God if men are to become children of God. Such transformations have been going on for nearly two thousand years, from the days of Paul to the present, in every land and among all races. The secret of such transformations is living contact with Christ.

Missionaries of the Evangel of Christ are the greatest "life changers" of history—witness Samuel Crowther, the slave boy who became a bishop; Africaner the Hottentot Terror, who became a Christian chief; Narayan Sheshadri, the Brahman who became a Christian preacher; Pastor Hsi, the Chinese opium smoker who became an evangelist; J. H. Neesima, the Japanese Shinto worshiper who founded the Doshisha Christian University, and Dr. Sa'eed Khan, the Kurdish Moslem who became an honored Christian physician and evangelist. The list might be increased by hundreds of thousands, known and unknown disciples.

Today the "Oxford Groups," so-called from their activities in Oxford, England, have taken the name of "Life Changers," and have extended their activities not only in the United States and Canada but in the British Isles and on the continent of Europe, in Egypt and South Africa, in India, China, Japan and other mission fields. They emphasize the need of every one for full surrender to Christ, and for the guidance of the Holy Spirit. They call for "absolute purity" of life and of thought; "absolute honesty" in dealing with God and self and other men; "absolute and unselfish love" as the ruling principle of life. The characteristics of members of the Oxford Groups are almost as varied as those found in members of Evangelical churches. There are among them the well-informed and the ignorant, the wise and the unwise, the weak and the strong. But the leaders testify to their faith in Christ as the Son of God and Saviour from sin; they urge the study of the Bible as the Word of God to lighten our path; they believe in prayer—in the "Morning Watch"—and in seeking and following the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Some leaders may not sufficiently emphasize the atonement of Christ for sin, and other Bible teachings, but none of them have been charged with denying these Christian truths.

One of the chief peculiarities of the Oxford Groups is their ability to reach the "up and outs," more than the "down and outs." They seem to have a faculty for bringing the challenge and the transforming power of Christ into the lives of worldly leaders in society, professors and students, stockbrokers and statesmen. They occasionally reach also the depressed and degraded. They have changed the order of "to the poor the Gospel is preached." Word has come from many missionaries testifying to the new spiritual life, new earnestness in evangelism and new power that has come to missionaries and national Christians as a result of contact with Christ through the Oxford Groups. These testimonies come, not from active leaders in the movement, but from fellow Christians who note and rejoice in the changes wrought. The Burma Gospel Team furnishes one example.

In some of the countries of Europe the beneficial effect has been felt in Church and State, in labor and capital. While the movement begins with changing lives of individuals it is now attempting to change society, business, governments, the world. A headquarters has recently been established at Geneva, the court of the League of Nations. Christians believe that the only hope of success, individually or collectively, is in whole-hearted acceptance of Christ, the giver of new life through His death on the Cross, and in dependence on God for guidance and power to do His will.—Exchange.

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

RECENT ELECTIONS.

The Reverend William Tate Scott, pastor of the United Church, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, was elected pastor-at-large for the Southeast District of the Church Extension Boards at the annual meeting of the Home Board held last month during the Mid-Winter Meetings in Evanston, Ill. Mr. Scott will succeed the Rev. Milo J. Sweet, who retires on March 31st.

The Reverend Frank E. Carlson of Pocatello, Idaho, was elected by the Home Board to be superintendent for Oregon, a missionary conference. He succeeds the Rev. Dr. Charles Harrison, who retires. Oregon has the oldest Congregational church west of the Rockies, that at Oregon City, organized in 1844. Mr. Carlson went to Pocatello in 1932 when the life of the church there was threatened by a building debt which is now materially reduced. He came to Pocatello from the federated Congregational-Presbyterian church of the capital of Washington, Olympia. He was pastor of the Waverly Heights Church, Portland, Oregon, at the time of the first Pacific Slope Congregational Congress or Regional Meeting. It was held at that city in 1928 and he was in charge of local arrangements. It is probable that the Congress next year will be held again at Portland.

Adjustments looking eventually to the complete administration of the foreign-language mission churches by the state conferences led the Home Board not to elect a successor to Dr. Herman Obenhaus, of Chicago, Ill., director of foreign-speaking work of the Church Extension Boards, who retires March 31st.

Dr. Fred Field Goodsell of Boston, Mass., executive vice-president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, was elected chairman of the Cooperative Council of the Commission on Missions at Evanston. In this position he will serve virtually as the ad interim secretary of the Commission.

Dr. Goodsell succeeds as chairman Dr. William F. Frazier, superintendent for Connecticut, who is now vice-chairman.

Immediately after the Mid-Winter Meetings, Dr. Goodsell left on a previously arranged two-months' itinerary west of the Mississippi.

PRE-LENTEN STUDY CONFERENCE.

The second annual pre-Lenten study conference for pastors in New England, New York and New Jersey, was held Monday and Tuesday, February 10th and 11th, in the First Church, Springfield, Mass. The attendance, between 400 and 500 equalled that of last year although weather conditions were very adverse.

An inter-seminary faculty from five graduate theological schools directed seminar discussion groups. The faculty members were:

Prof. Henry Hallam Tweedy of Yale Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Dean Vaughan Dabney of Andover-Newton Theological School, Newton, Mass.; Prof. Eugene W. Lyman of Union Theological Seminary, Columbia University, New York City; Prof. Gaius Glenn Atkins of Auburn Theological Seminary, Auburn, N. Y.; and Prof. Marion J. Bradshaw of Bangor Theological Seminary, Bangor, Me.

Addresses were given by three pastors: Dr. Boynton Merrill, Second Church of West Newton, Mass.; the Rev. John C. Shroeder of State Street Church, Portland, Me., and Dr. Raymond Calkins of First Church, Cambridge, Mass.

The study conference was under the auspices of the General Council's Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life with administrative arrangements directed by the Council's associate secretary, Dr. Frederick L. Fagley.

The recovery of "spirituality" was held by Dr. Calkins who gave the final address, to be what Protestantism today needs more than anything else.

"Protestantism," Dr. Calkins said, "needs to recover the mood of wonder, of awe and adoration for Something Given. It needs to offer to its adherents the spiritual counterpart of what the Roman Catholic Church presents in the mystery of the mass. Unless this Reality can be understood by the Protestant conscience, incorporated in its preaching, included in its cultus, accepted by its believers, Protestantism will cease to be a church in the Apostolic sense and will become a congeries of human groups having a philosophy, an ethical program and social interests but without spiritual authority and a divine dignity.

"We are hearing repeatedly the call, 'Christians, unite!' But the unity which alone can invest Protestantism with fresh dignity and power is not that of ecclesiastical solidarity but a united spiritual apprehension of Christ as the Word made flesh: the enthronement of the Incarnation as its central idea."

Of various alleged evidences which are being proffered to show that Protestantism is declining, only evidence which indicates a loss of spirituality should cause great concern, according to Dr. Calkins. He said: "What reasons are being advanced for proof of the decay of a religious movement which for four hundred years has powerfully influenced the life of the western world? First is cited a decline of church interest and church attendance; secondly is cited sectarianism and competitive denominationalism; thirdly is the asserted failure to face realistically the urgent problems of our modern world; fourthly is pointed out the traditional affinity of the Protestant church with an economic order which is out-moded; fifthly is named the collapse of modernism and the absence of an authentic spiritual message adequate to the total needs of the human soul.

"Of these five assigned causes for the disintegration of Protestantism only the last is critical and decisive. For although all other defects existed and yet the Protestant church uttered a message vital and adequate to human need, its witness would remain indispensable, while conversely, though all its other defects were removed and there were still no authentic voice speaking to the soul, its work would be ended.

"Readers of the Book of Acts are in too great haste to get to the acts. Behind the acts there is the eternal Christ, faith in whom alone made the acts possible. There would have been no acts but for the faith in a risen, ascended and eternal Christ. This was the source and the secret of the abounding vitality and triumphant power of the early Apostolic church.

"Protestantism has been concerning itself with the historic Jesus. It has busied itself with His ethics. It has substituted a human Teacher for an eternal principle in the Godhead manifested in human flesh for the salvation of man. It has urged social action without the background which alone girds it with power and glorifies it with hope. It has rationalized where it should have declared. It has over-looked the Revelation which is in Christ and which is the divine secret of inspiration to victorious human living."

Who, then, shall ever dare to say, "God has done all he can?"—George Macdonald.

WINCHESTER CHURCH STARTS NEW SERIES OF EVENING SERVICES.

A most impressive service was held in the Congregational-Christian Church in Winchester Sunday evening, January 26. This was the opening of the new series of evening services entitled "Chats Around the Fireside." The front of the church was arranged to represent a court room and a play was given entitled "Parents on Trial." The parts of the Judge and the Attorney for defense, were taken by prominent local attorneys, M. M. Lynch and W. E. Edwards, while the part of the Prosecuting Attorney was taken by the pastor, Rev. Ivan R. Smith. The parts of the clerk of the court, the bailiff and the witnesses were taken by members of the church and the jury of five was selected from the congregation that evening. The whole thought of the play was that parents should cooperate with the church by bringing their children to Sunday School and Church instead of sending them. No verdict was returned by the jury but the climax of the play came when the Judge arose and addressed the jury and the court, asking that everyone present return a sealed verdict to the Court of Conscience on the next Sunday morning by taking their children with them to Sunday School and Church, to whatever church they might belong.

At the close of the play the Congregation was surprised by the new dramatic feature being introduced at this series of services entitled "Down the Corridors of Time." Two platforms have been erected, one on each side at the front of the church. On one platform is built a large rock and brick fireplace adequate enough in space for people to stand in. This fireplace stage is lighted from the warm fire-glow of a smaller white fireplace within this larger one, and is used to supplement the scenes reproduced on the other platform. On the other platform is the feature "Down the Corridors of Time." This consists of a huge old fashioned Grandfather clock which stands about ten feet high and which has dates on its face instead of hours. On either side of the clock stands a sand hour-glass seven feet high, representing the primitive method of telling time.

When the curtains in front of these platforms were drawn back at the end of the play, a quartet on the fireplace stage sang quietly "Home, Sweet Home" while a scene of a home, with grandmother and grandfather, mother and father and children grouped around a baby's bed, was reproduced on the other platform.

Special numbers during the evening included the processional and recessional by the choir led by six candle bearers in white carrying lighted candles, a violin solo, a solo by a little six-year-old girl and a number by the junior choir.

The second service in this series will be held on Sunday evening, February 9. This will be "Chats Around the Fireplace with a G-Man" and inspector W. H. Drane Lester of the Department of Justice, Washington, D. C., will take part in that service.

I hope to see the day when the Church will present to her youth a faith that will stand the test of intellectual fire, the universities in an honest manner will present religion as one of the great dynamic forces for good in human experience, and the two together will labor to build a social order where justice, righteousness and peace will be more than words.—Rev. Harold F. Stoddard.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SPRING COMES.(An Editorial Correspondence.)*

Florida Sanitarium, Feb. 8, 1936.

My gnarled, crooked, crippled, hunch-backed plum tree is beginning to drape herself in spring attire. Her frail and delicate green veil is already spread and now the blushing white dots, first pure white tokens of approaching spring, are bursting into blossom. The daily press and weather forecasts are filled with winter yet. But the plum tree is a sure and truthful harbinger, and we need have no doubts or fears. Spring is coming. Listen attentively and look closely and you will discern her approaching footfall. It may be that my plum tree is ashamed of being so drab and dull, and tired of being snubbed for its awkward and ungainly appearance and wants to assert its persuasiveness and personality. But we know her mission and her message and cannot mistake either. Spring is coming—almost here; you may just trust my plum tree as a sure and true prophesy of that. All the trees, like all the people, have their place, and purpose in the world. There is this difference: you may depend upon the trees. They will not deceive nor mislead you as to their purpose, place and precision. Man's noblest friend and closest ally in the plant kingdom is the tree. And man certainly has no teacher, preacher, poet or philosopher more dependable and trustworthy than the tree.

No wonder everybody comes to Florida, or tries to. A morning paper here states that on one highway of the East coast—people are pouring in to this favored region at the rate of 7,000 cars a day, and that even in "boom" days, Florida never had the tourists it is receiving this season. Florida's greatest asset is her climate, and her greatest harvest is her tourists, who, they say, are spending five million dollars a day in the state. The extreme cold in Eastern, Western and even in Southern states is driving them here, and once here, the beaming and blissful sun, the springtime, while winter lasts, and the broad open with its birds and blossoms, do the rest, and bring new life.

But nature and climate give one no greater change or variety than the people one meets here. Peoples of all parties and no parties, varied creeds and no creeds, pagan and Christian, Jew and Gentile, meet in frequent and friendly conversation—and exchange such views, faiths and beliefs as each may care to dispense and champion. What a varied and cosmopolitan world indeed this is in which we live and have our being.

The papers do not herald the virtues, as they do the vices, of this cosmopolitan population. From the front pages one might decide that only the currents of evil doth come hither. Not so! If one wishes to meet and hear the great lights and leaders of education, politics and religion, one may hear them in a winter here. Streams and troops of the greatest lecturers, artists, ministers and missionaries, may be heard here, and thus one may keep one's balance and be thankful that the best over-steps the worst in this land of leisure and health seeking.

This writer came hither to get fresh air, sunshine and the great out-of-doors, and he is grateful beyond expression that he can get them here and daily drink in the inspiring messages of the trees, birds, flowers and interesting people.

AT THE MID-YEAR MEETING.

The Mid-winter meeting at Evanston, Illinois was attended by the following from the Southeast. President Leon E. Smith, member of the Administrative Committee of the Board of Ministerial Relief; Dr. H. Shelton Smith, member of the Administrative Committee of the Education Society, also Vice-president of the Home Boards; Rev. F. C. Lester, member of the Nominating Committee of the General Council; Rev. Wm. T. Scott, member of the Survey Committee of the General Council; Rev. C. S. Ledbetter, member of the Administrative Committee of the A. M. A.; President Buell G. Gallagher of Taladega, member of the Council for Social Action; Superintendent and Mrs. Fred P. Ensminger of Birmingham, Alabama; President Wm. J. Campbell of the Southern Seminary Foundation; Mrs. A. R. Rucks of Nashville; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Superintendent Gillette of Jacksonville, Florida. There were also present and sharing the fellowship of the delegates from the southeast, Superintendent W. P. Minton of Pennsylvania and Miss Lucy T. Eldredge of the Education Society. Miss Eldredge met with members of the committee of the Elon Summer School, helping in making plans for the school this summer.

YOUTH AND A CHANGED WORLD.

To be young in a day like this is a challenge. The world of today is undergoing a change. Just what kind of a change the world is undergoing few of us know. Just what the world will be like, socially, politically and religiously when the change is completed no one understands. But what we do know is that this is our Father's world, that this is our abiding place so long as we are in the flesh, that different and differing personalities with conflicting and moving convictions asserting themselves in civilized society are fomenting revolutions, that these revolutions quietly and otherwise are working the change and that the youth of today will be compelled to pilot this changed world in which he arbitrarily finds himself.

No one is sufficiently in apprehension I think as to fancy that man and man alone is responsible for this change in the world and in world affairs. Man did not make the world nor does he change the world independent of its maker. There is a supreme and supernatural force operating in human society for the ultimate good of mankind.

The type of citizen needed in this changed world is a citizen with broad understandings and large sympathies, free from prejudices and void of vengeance. He must know something about man. He must know something about God. This citizen of the changed world will be largely the product of his training. His training will come largely from two sources—from his contact with society and from his contact with the classroom in secondary school, college and university. His training in the classroom will ultimately mould his thinking and direct his living; it will become the master of his personality and the guiding force in his achievements. It is, therefore, highly important that this classroom training be all-inclusive. It must include religion. Whether we like it or not religion has always played a dominant part in human development and in sound achievement. It is destined to become an even greater factor in the society of the changed world. Religion, the Christian religion, would take its stand on love and from this vantage ground provide comfort, equality, plenty and security for all. What more could one want? What more could one use?

I am giving my endorsement to the church college. To the college that is free to teach truth wherever it is found whether that truth be in science or religion. The college that excludes from its classroom instruction in the sciences is narrow and incapable of training the youth of today for efficient and effective citizenship in the changed world of tomorrow. Likewise the college or the university that excludes from its classroom the teaching of religion—the Christian religion—is narrow and incapable of training the youth of today for fullest and most effective life in the changed world of tomorrow.

Man is a composite being. In him the physical, the mental, and the spiritual find lodging. They may at times disagree, they may war within him, nevertheless all three are essential to his personality. For the achievement of the greatest good and greatest satisfaction in life all three should be equally developed. You can't lift two sides of a triangle without tilting the whole. You can't train and develop two sides of a man's personality disregarding the third without upsetting his equilibrium, distorting his judgment and imparting his service to society.

The church college stands for a whole system of education for the whole life that that life may make its maximum contribution to society.

L. E. SMITH.

While we are a long way from accepting the Continental doctrine that the individual exists for the State, we are well on the road that leads to the doctrine that all industry, commerce and finance are definitely essential functions of the social order, not solely mater for private exploitation, and that motives of ruthless private gain cannot be allowed to jeopardize the welfare of the whole.—President Angell of Yale University, in an address to students of New York University.

CUSTODIANS OF THE PILGRIM SPIRIT.

By JAY T. STOCKING

We need not to preserve the achievements of the Pilgrims. History is the custodian of their deeds.

If history is the custodian of their deeds, time is the custodian of their ideas. Some of these ideas time has kept and cherished. Some she has discarded. Some, which time has laid aside in recent years as outmoded, she is now bringing out again to meet the needs of men and to express plain facts, newly discovered. Some of these are that sin is real, by whatever name we call it; that there are forces of evil within us that lead to ruin, whether we call them protons, complexes, urges, glands, or what not; that there are laws of personal and social being which, if flouted, will avenge themselves. As George Bernard Shaw has recently written, "Do not think you have got rid of the idea of a judgment to which all human lives must finally come and without which life has no meaning."

But, the spirit of the Pilgrims neither history nor time can preserve. Living men must be its custodians.

Dispatches from Simla last summer announced that the people of Thibet were still searching for a successor to the Dalai Lama, who died nearly two years ago. It is believed that when the Dalai Lama dies his spirit passes directly into the body of a new-born child. The task is then to find the child. Eventually several children will be assembled and the holy one will be identified by certain marks upon his body, and by his ability to handle various personal intimate belongings of the late Dalai Lama, such as his rosary and bell.

Whether we may be called successors of the Pilgrims depends upon whether we can handle the august values and relationships of life as they handled them.

1. First of all there is Conscience. The Pilgrims handled conscience by putting it on the throne and by giving it their courageous obedience. The Puritan conscience was the solidest in New England in that day of flux and whirl. The self-reliance of the Puritan is nowhere better seen than in his sense of spiritual competence. He needed no one to help him to find the truth; he could find it for himself. He needed no one to tell him what it was right for him to do; he could discover that for himself, and when he had discovered it he could do it.

New Issues for Puritans.

The Pilgrims were extreme Puritans, representing a transitory phase of Puritanism. Doctrine was a mighty matter in those days. We are citizens of another world. No courage is required today to maintain or voice any opinion, in theology, or polity, or any other matter in the field of religion.

For us the loyalty to conscience that requires courage is to be displayed in other fields. It is in the areas of economic and political opinion that heresy is scented. One's attitude toward war, for example, may bring one into direct conflict with the State. It requires no little valor today and would require immensely more, if war were here or imminent, to follow conscience if it should forbid a man to support war.

The question of the divine right of government to compel men to conform would have results not unlike those imposed by Archbishop Laud upon those who questioned the divine right of government to compel conformity in religious matters.

Men who desire to preserve the rights of conscience find a field here in which to labor. We have little right to glory in the deeds of the Pilgrims in the name of a free conscience in matters of worship, unless we are ready to match them with efforts in the name of a free conscience in the matter of war.

An incident which occurred in a camp in which I was a humble worker during the war, burned itself into my mind to remain there forever as a scar. A group of young men who had conscientious scruples against war were put on exhibition one night as examples of mental and moral perversion. As I saw those lads moisten their lips and stand their ground quietly, while the most contemptuous remarks were made about them, I could not think that they were undesirable and unwholesome citizens. I felt rather, that in their enthronement of conscience and willingness to suffer for it, exiled by public opinion if necessary, I saw again the spirit of the Pilgrims. If we are to keep conscience enthroned in this country, we must give men the right of enthroning their own consciences. This will mean freedom of speech and teaching.

Has New England Changed?

For twenty-two years I have been living outside of New England, the last eight years in a section of the country where many people speak of the effete and crusted East.

I have been proclaiming that the closed mind of the East is a weird legend and saying that New England is the freest and most open-minded of regions. It is a bit disconcerting, on my return to New England, to find that there has been such nervousness concerning freedom of thought that the State of Massachusetts has seen fit to require of all teachers that they take the oath of allegiance. If this legislation means anything beyond an emotional spree and a gesture on the part of the General Court, a hysterical spasm of emotional patriotism, it is a means designed to limit freedom and to discourage thought that might not fit in with established patterns. The next logical step would then be to provide for inquisitors who would be on the watch for unorthodox teaching. It would also seem logical to make a list of ideas that are constitutional. The implication in this legislation against which lovers of untrammelled thought protest is that teachers should first of all be accountable to the State. The Pilgrim spirit, running through the years, has been that in the realm of truth there is a higher authority than the State. This measure has the mark of being "made in Germany" but unfortunately it is not copyrighted there.

To any argument that the State may make in supporting its claim to the control of the human mind and spirit, the answer is found in the dissenting opinion of Chief Justice Hughes in the Mackintosh case, "One cannot speak of religious liberty with proper appreciation of its essential and historical significance without assuming the acceptance of a belief in supreme allegiance to the Will of God." Here is a voice in our day of the spirit in which the Pilgrims handled conscience.

2. Closely associated with the way in which they handled conscience was the way in which they handled Tradition. They handled it by taking an independent attitude toward it. The Puritans "waited hourly," says John Buchan, "on a new revelation." We do not always perceive the full import of the famous words of John Robinson to the Pilgrims on the eve of their departure from Holland, "The Lord has more truth yet to bring forth out of His Holy Word. . . . I beseech you to remember it. . . . That you be ready to receive whatever truth shall be made known to you."

We are more familiar with the first part of this exhortation than with the second part, but the second part is the more important one. For to be "ready to receive" the truth, as it should be made known, meant dedication to it in advance. To follow truth that is familiar to us is a far less significant thing than to pledge ourselves to some new truth that would most certainly mean change in our ways.

These forefathers, despite much that today seems to us the intolerance of their times, caught a vision of something new and dedicated themselves to it. They were radical men. They established a new church. Their Compact was a new form of government, in which it was proved that fustian weavers and ribbon makers could rule. Against the opinion "No Bishop, no King" they were a people with no bishop, and they were establishing a nation in which there was soon to be no king. It is passing strange that certain patriotic societies seem often to think that they are preserving the spirit of these radical ancestors when they condemn as enemies of the Republic those who feel that truth calls upon them to break with some traditions, express some new thoughts and embark upon some new ways.

Our economic system has long served us well. It is a eulogy of man's ability to make his way in the world. Changes have been made in it. But can any reflective person, however conservative, who has lived through the last five years, doubt that there must be yet new ways cultivated if the American dream is to have substance, to say nothing about the Christian dream?

Economic Unity and Security.

We have done far better in establishing political unity and security in this country than we have done in establishing economic unity and security.

At the Oberlin Council certain resolutions were passed with which I do not find myself in agreement. When I returned from that Council, I was met, as I have been met frequently since, by protesting men who hold what they call our wild young ministers responsible for them. The reply I have made is that whether they were right or wrong, we ought to be grateful that we have young men who are thinking for themselves and in terms of the social meaning of Christianity.

At a dinner given me when I was elected Moderator, a deacon of my church in St. Louis said that he did not like very well the word "Moderator." It suggested putting on the brakes. For one, he said, he thought that we needed accelerating, as much as moderating. If the German pastors had thought earlier about the social implications of Christianity, we should probably not have had the phenomenon of a Hitler today.

Democracy today is everywhere in peril. One by one the lights of liberalism in Europe have been going out. The last stronghold is the United States. Its endurance here depends largely upon how we handle the economic problem. Professor L. P. Jacks says: "The essential doctrine of democracy is that each man as a free human soul lives of his own free will in the service of the whole people." This means mutuality of regard and concern. Recently I read remarks purported to have been made by the president of a great business corporation to the effect that all owners of industry, including owners of stocks and bonds, and holders of insurance policies, should "gang up" in the interest of legislation favorable to their property. In other words, property should organize to further its own interests. From the point of view of preserving democracy, with its guarantees, could any counsel be more insane? Has this man never read of Louis XVI? Has he never pondered on the old words: "A house divided against itself cannot stand"? Better counsel is given by Mr. Gerald Heard, that liberal and conservative must learn to think and feel together, that we may avoid any test of strength as a result of which we should have the rule of one class or of another, and should lose the values that both cherish.

Breaking Bonds of Prejudice.

In doing reverence to our forefathers we must keep in mind that they were men who conceived

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Christianity has come to a place where the seas meet. Conflicting tides, variable winds and turbulent currents disturb the peace of the passengers on the ship of Zion. The church has advanced in the past by fighting its way upon its knees. Under persecution the fires burn more brightly upon the altar. Sometimes it must wage an offensive battle; it must always be on the defensive in its struggle for life and growth.

At the present time, in the United States, the church is called upon to defend the Lord's Day-Sunday. The great Labor Unions and their leaders have been working for years for shorter hours per week for labor. The demand has been for more time for recreation and pleasure. Now there is a growing demand for more amusements on the Sabbath. The hours per week for amusement are not sufficient, we are told, unless Sunday can be used for any kind of pleasure and recreation desired. Many of the cities are now permitting Sunday Ball games for profit and the movie theatres are open for patrons. Saturday is pay day for the working people and Sunday is a good harvest day for the movies and other places of amusement. No one can tell the results of this liberal movement for an open Sunday. Ultimately the managers of stores will join the demand for business as well as pleasure on Sunday. Why cannot a grocery store have the same privilege as a movie or a baseball team? Why not open it for profit?

The editors of some of the daily newspapers are joining with the people of the street in saying to State Legislatures: "The people are taking the day for amusement anyway, why not legalize all Sunday pleasures?" In answer to that one might say: "Why not legalize stealing, murder, drunkenness, bootlegging, etc?" A strong lobby is seeking to induce the legislature of Virginia to legalize betting on horseracing. Some people are saying: "They are going to bet anyway, why not make it legal and get some profit out of the sport?" Many people are deceived by this fallacious argument, and give their consent to make it possible for Virginia to become a gambling den for those who follow horse-racing.

The same line of argument is advanced for the legalized liquor traffic. People favor the establishment of the A. B. C. stores as a means of fighting the illegal sale of liquor. One would think that the newspaper writers who regularly and frequently pour out their wrath upon the bootleggers are deeply concerned in blotting out the sale and use of liquor. As a matter of fact they attack the bootlegger in one article and encourage the regular, systematic (temperate) drinking of alcoholic liquors in another. They seem to regard it a great crime to sell liquor illegally, but a virtue to sell it legally. In their position it is a sin to drink liquor made or bought illegally, but a commonplace thing to buy from the A. B. C. stores and drink at your will and pleasure. The liquor forces are seeking to emphasize the crime of illegal liquor, and they wish to establish themselves as superior champions of a new high moral movement which has for its objective the teaching of our people the supreme advantages of drinking liquor. They are trying to make it respectable and honorable to make, sell and drink intoxicating beverages. They resist all efforts to restrain the traffic or the use.

The church stands in the midst of this situation which challenges its past and seeks to destroy its future. If the political and industrial forces can destroy the Christian Sabbath and dictate the moral platform of our youth, what will the future have for our civilization? There is only one safe course for the Christian forces of America—a firm insistence upon a reverence for the Bible as a foundation for our faith and our social standards. The Bible must remain, the Christian Sunday must remain—or America will go the way of all ancient civilizations who have forgotten God and lived for lust, profit and pleasure.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CHURCH'S PROGRAM OF EDUCATION.

In the beginning of this country, the church was the dominant force in education. It was the one unit of society that was concerned with the training of youth. Beginning with religious instruction from the pulpit, secular instruction was provided for in private schools and in colleges. The first educational units outside the church but created by the church were for the specific task of training for the professions, particularly for medicine and the ministry. Trained men in these two fields met the more immediate and more necessary needs of the community. Then came the almost universal demand for separation of church and state and the state entered definitely the field of education and began what we know today as our public school system supported by taxation. The state system of education is inclusive extending from the kindergarten to the highly specialized university. At present only in very few instances is the church engaged directly in secondary education. This field has been left to the state almost entirely with the exception of the Catholic church that continues to support and control its entire system of education. The Catholic church refuses to turn its youth over to the state for any part of its training. It is interested in maintaining the church's traditions, rituals, and doctrines, and therefore guaranteeing its solidarity for all time.

The church, however, and I mean the Protestant church, has not abandoned the training of its youth entirely to the state but is still greatly concerned with the religious training and spiritual development of its youth and in seeing that the religious emphasis is not omitted from instruction in the field of higher education. The church's system of education then begins or should begin in the home where the child is taught the beginning of faith and trust and the fundamental necessity of honesty, integrity, and cooperation in society. Simultaneously with instruction in the home the church's program of education is promoted by the Sunday School. On the Sabbath classes for religious instruction for all ages are maintained in our churches. Efforts are made to see that all children of the church and community where possible and adults as well are brought under the influence of this type of instruction. These schools are highly specialized with organization and specialized instructors in all departments extending from the cradle roll to the organized adult Bible class. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on this part of the church's program and certainly it should be improved from year to year.

The next unit of instruction in the church's program is the church college or the church-related college, which expresses the church's conviction that the religious emphasis should not be eliminated from any part of our system of education. In the field of higher education the church not only provides for an inclusive curriculum but insists that Christian men and Christian women should constitute our faculties for instruction in all departments of learning. Elon College is our unit in the field of higher education. We maintain a strong department of Christian education. In this department efforts are made to acquaint the individual student with the text of the English Bible without critical analyses or theological doctrines. We also train in the field of Christian philosophy, Christian ethics, the original languages of the Scriptures, and in certain sociological problems. The purpose of this department is to train for definite religious work looking toward the ministry and the field of Christian education in the local church. This does not mean that other departments are not Christian but that we do undertake to give all instruction in the spirit of Christianity. One standard for our faculty is that the individual must be a professed Christian and a member of some evangelical church. In addition to this every member is expected to make a definite contribution to the religious life of the campus. It is the purpose of Elon College not only to train its students in the sciences, in the art of thinking, and in religion, but to build up within them a conviction of individual responsibility to man and God. It is our belief that the gospel continues to be the leaven for human society and that if properly lodged in the hearts of individuals that eventually the whole of society will be leavened.

There is still room in the field of education for the church's program which begins with a child in its infancy and remains a part of the entire system until the diploma is received from her institutions of higher learning. The fruits of the church college in religious activity and in statesmanship have been effectively demonstrated in lives of eminent leaders in both church and state throughout our history as a nation.

L. E. SMITH.

ROANOKE, ALABAMA.

It has been a long time since I sent a line to THE SUN, but I am still a reader of and a believer in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

We are having lots of winter down here in Alabama—a very unusual one indeed. Our church activities have been slowed down considerably. I have been back at home now since I left Lanett three years ago. I stayed at Lanett five years and was there through the entire time of the depression. The last three years of my stay there the people had not much money and could not and did not pay my salary by several hundred dollars, so you see I left in a financial strait and have had a hard time trying to pay some obligations and live but I sincerely thank God for my health and for the health of my family.

We are still having a hard time, but we are happy to be back at home and to be associated with the good people at Rock Stand, where we lived twenty-nine years ago when I made my first effort to preach, and where I had my first call as pastor. This was at the organization of the church in July, 1908. I have served this church seventeen years. Our attendance and interest are good. I am here on first Sunday.

I am at Forest Home on the second Sunday. Our church here has a small membership, but it is a very pleasant group to work with. This is about nine years with them. I go to New Harmony on the third Sunday. Our work here seems to start off splendidly. Rev. G. H. Veazey has been the efficient pastor for several years. We go to Noon Day on the fourth Sunday. Noon Day is one of our earliest churches in Alabama. This is fourteen years for us with this good people and our work goes well and we are happy.

Remember us in your prayers and may the Lord help us to be what He would have us.

Elon Alumni

By M. L. PATRICK, Secretary,
Elon College Alumni Association,
High Point, N. C.

Activity of Elon College alumni for the week will be climaxed with the mid-year meeting of the General Association at Elon on Saturday of this week. At two o'clock the general business session will be held, with J. O. Atkinson, Jr., presiding. In addition to the business items to be taken care of, the following program has been arranged:

Program.

1. Call to Order, J. O. Atkinson, Jr., President.
2. Prayer, Prof. A. L. Hook.
3. Reading of Minutes, M. L. Patrick, Secy.
4. Unfinished business.
5. New Business:
  - a. What voice, if any, should the alumni have in selecting nominees for the board of trustees?—W. T. Scott.
  - b. Program for Alumni Day—Miss Margaret Rowland.
6. Report of Secretary, M. L. Patrick
7. Campaign for Elon College, Dr. L. E. Smith.
8. The alumni's part in the Campaign for Elon—D. R. Fonville.
9. Approach to World War Veterans—W. G. Stoner.
10. Should the alumni work with or apart from the church in the college campaign?—W. F. Warren.

Dinner for alumni will be served at 6 o'clock in the college dining hall. A basketball game will be played at 8 o'clock.

* * *

The rapid growth of the mid-year meeting during the past two years speaks well for the need for such a gathering. It precedes the meeting of the board of trustees, which follows on Tuesday, February 18th. Indications are that this meeting will be well attended. Some important items will be up for discussion and disposal. The mid-year meeting has the same authority to transact business as does the association meeting at commencement.

* * *

Other activity during the past week include the very successful meeting of the Winston-Salem alumni chapter there on Friday night, February 7th. The meeting was held in the Nissen building, with Dr. Fred K. Garvey presiding. Dr. L. E. Smith was the principal speaker. Important committees were set up. John Ingle was named as the new president. The Winston-Salem chapter is generally regarded as one of the liveliest in the General Association.

* * *

A group of enthusiastic alumni gathered with Dr. Smith at the McAlphin Hotel in New York on the evening of February 4th. This initial gathering formulated plans for a larger meeting in New York some time in the spring.

* * *

On Tuesday of this week the Burlington chapter was scheduled to hold its annual meeting, with M. Z. Rhodes, President, presiding. Dr. J. H. Lightbourne was principal speaker. The Burlington group is an active and vibrant unit, and the organization is gaining strength.

In my first number in this column I threatened to do all the talking, unless the many, many loyal alumni and alumnae of Elon—readers of the SUN—should come to the fore with expressions of their own. Of course, Elonites are waiting to see whether I'll say anything provocative—something that will bring on more talk. Remember, this column is not for me, but for you! and you! and you! Let me have any information, suggestion, or proposal you have about Elon people or the association in general. Would it do any good for me to say, "Please"?

* * *

I hope soon to run a list of the paid-up members to the association. If you haven't received your notice, don't wait. Mail it to me now, and save the treasury the stationery and the postage. Would it be in order for me—in advance—to say, "Thank you"?

* * *

If there is any faithful Elon alumnus, T. W. Trogdon is he multiplied by two, even though he is a single man! He rooted for Elcn's basketeers in the High Point College gymnasium last Saturday night when Elon lost! You see, right in his own home town!

PLYMOUTH PEACE PLAY CONTEST.

sponsored by
THE COUNCIL FOR SOCIAL ACTION
of the
WANTED! ! !

A one-act play on the general theme of peace. The scene of the play may be located in any place, at any time, depicting any situation, but obviously the play should have implications pertinent to the present world need. The theme may be developed from the international, interracial, economic, or religious aspect of peace.

There is no limit to the number of characters, but the play is for amateur performance and should be written with that fact in mind. It may be any length, preferably under one hour's playing time.

The judges of the contest will be:
Whitford Lane, actor and producer, New York City,
Rebert Morss Lovett, University of Chicago and Hull House, Louise Leonard Wright, Former President of the National League of Women Voters and yearly visitor at Geneva.
Walter H. Baker Company, Boston, who are specializing in distinctive peace plays, will pay to the playwright of the winning play one hundred dollars and will make publishing arrangements with the authors of such other of the plays submitted as meet their needs. The winning play will be published without royalty fee. It is expected that the prize play will have its premiere showing at the General Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches at Holyoke, Mass., in June, 1936.

The cost of production and promotion will be borne by the Young People's Organization of Plymouth Congregational Church, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The contest closes April 20, 1936.
Address all plays:

PLYMOUTH PEACE PLAY CONTEST,
5757 University Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION.

Everybody knows the legend about the little Dutch boy who stuck his arm in the hole in the dike. Old as that legend is, it can be applied very pertinently to some things that are happening today.

Because of Supreme Court decisions that laws are unconstitutional, some persons want to restrict the powers of the courts. Others advocate Constitutional amendments that would wipe out state lines and give dictatorial control to a bureaucratic federal regime.

These individuals, fortunately in the minority, should remember that even their ideas might be different if the federal government were in the hands of some other group. The same powers of dictatorship could be applied by any group under such a Constitutional amendment, for it would be the permanent law of the land.

Aside from that, let's take a look at the AAA case. The law was in effect two years, seven months and twenty-four days. Hundreds of millions of dollars were collected and disbursed. Some of it may be returned; most of it won't, all of it was paid illegally.

Now take a look at the little Dutch boy. He didn't try to rebuild the dike. Nor did he try to make the water run back over it—uphill. Nor did he stand idly by, shaking his head while the hole got bigger and bigger and the flood wiped away his home. He stopped up the hole.

There's a hole we can stop up by concerning ourselves with the making of laws, by forcing our legislators to be on guard against illegal acts. The American people already are taking a much more active interest in government. Surely they won't stop when the job is only half done.

The reorganization of industry is certainly no easy task, but it is a task which America must carry through.—Edward A. Filene.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE LIGHT THAT DOES NOT FAIL.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Just as in the U. S. A. where many a brilliant electric American motor car sign flashes into the night, so in Istanbul, Turkey, an American woman watches one of these shine across the Bosphorus to the Asiatic shore, and remembers not only modern America but the apples that grew in her garden at home when she was a girl in Michigan.

"On the banks of the Bosphorus still stands the barracks where Florence Nightingale devoted herself to caring for sick soldiers during the Crimean War and amidst ridicule and indifference laid the foundation of our modern nursing profession," writes Mrs. Elvesta T. Leslie of Istanbul, Turkey.

"The Ford illuminated sign shines out with a thousand times the power of Miss Nightingale's flickering candle, but I wonder whether our economic organization of today will, in the long run, throw its light as far as the dim lamp backed by Florence Nightingale's devotion and love of mankind?" says Mrs. Leslie.

"Turkey has some beautiful scenery," she writes, "but I can always close my eyes and see again the white birches, the fir trees, the bluffs of Lake Michigan, beautiful Glen Lake and the sandy beaches of Grand Travers Bay." Swimming for girls was frowned upon then but now, in Turkey, as well as around the world, it is a favorite sport.

"We enjoy here the warm waters of the Sea of Marmora and the swift flowing, equally salt water, of the Bosphorus coming down from the Black Sea basin which is fed by the Danube and Volga and even the shows of Ararat," she explains.

Turkey today—what a change from when she first went there. The Bosphorus ferry daily teems with hundreds of Turkish boys and girls going to school. These girls, twenty years ago, would have been at home, not venturing out except under the seclusion of a veil and a voluminous charshaf (street wrap) while the boys would have been sitting stolidly in the mosque schools droning away their endless memorizing.

"Today alert, bright and mischievous, they are getting a modern scientific education, boys and girls alike, with an opportunity ahead of them to help in the continued development of their country out of ancient and outworn practices and thought, into new and scientific methods and individual freedom," Mrs. Leslie says.

Mrs. Leslie is a graduate of Olivet where her daughter, Elizabeth, is now a junior. In recalling her college days when winter snows blockaded trains and stage coaches, she adds that Turkey does not have much snow although there is occasionally a good blizzard. Instead there seems to be much sticky red mud. During her years there she has had her share of adventurous traveling. At the time of the Great War she went from Aintab, west of the Euphrates, to Ourfa, 100 miles east of the Big River crossing in a shallow boat loaded with horses, covered wagons, sheep and cattle.

"There are many beams of light shining today from land to land," writes Mrs. Leslie. "Everything that breathes the spirit of friendship, good will, understanding and the hope of the people builds up the kingdom of God. So our American schools and hospitals in Turkey are manifestations of our interest in the New Turkey and our desire to cooperate with it and to interpret the finer things of the spirit."

Turkey's rapid progress is well known to Americans but Mrs. Leslie mentions particularly the women who now have equal suffrage with the men. "The 12th Congress of the International Women's Suffrage Alliance was recently held here in Istanbul, as the guest of the Women's Union of Turkey," she reports. "A special issue of postage stamps was put out depicting women in various activities of life and especially honoring women of outstanding achievements in other countries, such as Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Jane Addams, Selma Lagerlof, Sigrid Unset and others."

Mrs. Leslie is designated in her work as "Mission Treasurer's assistant," but this is a humdrum title to tell what she really does. All kinds of financial matters come to her hand as well as the giving of help in travel and vacation plans and the purchasing of things for other workers in the Near East Mission who cannot get to larger cities. Her ingenuity is often strained by some such request as this which reaches her in the mail: "Please buy a hat for Jenny, age 7."

FINDINGS OF A MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

[These columns spoke recently of the great missionary council held under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Washington, D. C., that attracted nation-wide attention. The "findings" of the Council are thus summarized by the Nashville Christian Advocate.]

1. The need of the non-Christian world has lost none of its urgent appeal. The varied forms of this need are ignorance, poverty, disease, superstition, and sin. The gospel of Christ, experienced and applied, will heal the ills of our world.

2. The sharing of spiritual values is the inescapable obligation of the Christian. The worst features of our Western civilization are being shared with non-Christian nations. Shall we share our worst and withhold our best?

3. The contribution of missions has been of inestimable value. The work of evangelization, of education, and of medical missions has each supplemented and strengthened the other.

4. The forces opposed to Christian missions have never been so organized and aggressive. An atheistic communism with a sense of a universal mission recognizes in the Christian faith its strongest foe.

5. The urgent demand is the unifying of the Christian forces. The divided hosts of Christianity cannot expect to meet successfully the opposing forces, which present a united front. We are not pleading for one huge ecclesiastical organization, but the Christian churches should at least submerge their differences which have to do with things that are incidental and come together in a Christian and cooperative spirit, without which the Church cannot win in the conflict.

6. The lordship of Jesus Christ must be held without concession or compromise. No wholesale condemnation should be made of non-Christian religious systems, but the elements of truth and value in these systems should be freely and gladly recognized. This supremacy of Jesus wins its way wherever he is proclaimed and understood. By him all standards of thought and life are being tested. The ideas and ideals of Christ have far outrun the progress of what may be termed organized Christianity. Far greater than tabulated statistics is the change of the moral and spiritual atmosphere which he has produced even among the peoples of the East who are not enrolled in the membership of the Church.

7. The pastor and preacher is the mediator of the universal mission of Jesus to his congregation. He has the privilege of receiving information and inspiration from books and conferences, which very few of his members have. He must give this fact full recognition. He should never become impatient and abusive because of the slowness and what may appear to be the stubbornness of some of his members. He will not accomplish the best results by constantly reminding them of their ignorance and narrowness, but by imparting to them information as to what our mission work has already accomplished, and impressing upon them the mind and spirit of Christ.

8. The hindrances in the way of the Christian gospel would be utterly discouraging if we looked upon them apart from faith in the power of the gospel.

ONE-DAY SCHOOL OF MISSIONS CANCELED.

Dr. Hubert Herring of New York City wires that on account of ill health and physicians orders he is compelled to cancel all engagements. This announcement brings disappointment and regret to the missionary groups especially who had hoped to have the privilege of hearing Dr. Herring discuss Latin America, the subject of our mission study this year, either at Elon College, N. C., February the 17th, or at Suffolk, Va., February the 18th. Dr. Herring is an authority on Latin America, having traveled extensively in that section and held annual seminars in Mexico for several years. At this late hour we felt it better to cancel these dates as it seemed difficult to find a suitable substitute.

A BIBLE SELLER IN THE HANDS OF BANDITS.

A Faithful Chinese Colporter Captured by one Group of Bandits Falls into the Hands of a Larger Band Along with His Captors.

By CHAS. A. LEONARD, SR.

At an early morning prayer meeting of our annual Bible Conference, an opportunity was given for special request for prayer. During the night one of the evangelists attending the Conference had received a letter telling of the taking by bandits of our good friend and brother, Colporter Tsung Shao-Yu. We were all distressed to hear of this trying experience in the life of a faithful servant of the Lord and representative of the Bible Society.

Mr. Tsung (the surname comes first in China) was out on a trip in the extreme eastern part of Manchuria, near the Siberian border. He was on his way to Tungninghsien a frontier town between Manchuria and Russia. We have traveled that region several time and are acquainted with the dangers there. Bro. Tsung and three other Chinese were taken by a half dozen bandits, and were carried into the wild mountains. Later this small band of outlaws was captured by a larger group of bandits, and the whole ten were held for ransom. Two letters were written by someone for Mr. Tsung stating that the larger band of robbers refused to believe that he had been kidnapped and that they were insisting that he was a bandit himself and might be shot by those who had taken him along with the six bandits. These small groups of bandits are not supposed to operate without permission of the more established bands.

The writer returned to Harbin immediately from the out station where the Bible conference was being held to see the Japanese military authorities here in Harbin and request them to do something toward rescuing Mr. Tsung. We were told, however, that it would probably be impossible for the Japanese or Manchukuo soldiers to do anything because the mountains in that region are wooded and the bandits very hard to apprehend. Although the new government is making an effort to rid the country of bandits, and are improving living conditions and personal safety in some places, the region under consideration is still very unpeaceful. The bands of robbers move from place to place, when the regular troops go after them. The group which now has Mr. Tsung calls itself the "Great Army for Peace," but, alas, they do not bring peace, but distress and suffering.

This is not the first time Mr. Tsung has come in touch with bandits. On three other occasions they have wanted to take him, but he persuaded them that his ransom was not worth their trouble. He dresses much as a poor beggar in order that he may better avoid danger. His faithful work as a colporter has taken him into many dangerous places. The whole region in which he works is notorious for the numbers and severity of its bandits, but he has gone on with his work, his sales measuring above the average. He has now been in the hands of those bandits two months. All we can do for him is pray to a merciful God to deliver him, and prayer is being made daily for him. We are sure he is bearing witness to the Lord wherever he is. He had gospel portions and Bibles with him when taken by the outlaws, so we are sure he is making use of these, if there are those among the bandits who can read.

The supporters of Mr. Tsung and other such faithful workers are using their money well for the Lord and the saving of souls, for many read the Word and come to know of the Way of salvation who otherwise would not know of Him.

If Mr. Tsung never returns, another man will be chosen to take his place. The work will go on, and God's Word will not return void.

LESS READING—MORE WORK.

As an evidence of the passing of the depression, library officials in many of the large cities have reported a decided decline in the number of persons using the reading rooms during the day. Library officials likewise reported three years ago the largest number of people were using library facilities ever known, the principal cause being persons not employed having more time for reading during the day.

A Story for the Children

BETTY AND THE LADYBUG.

By FRANCES ANN FISKE

Dinner was over. Betty helped mother carry the dishes out to the kitchen. Then, very carefully, she brushed the crumbs from the tablecloth. She liked this tablecloth best of all. The center was white. It was the yellow border that made it so attractive to Betty.

"It looked like yellow sunshine and daffodils, and the yellow stripes on my kitten," she said to mother.

Mother smiled. "You and your kitten may go out into the sunshine for a while," she said. "I will frost the cakes before I wash the dishes. When I am ready I will call you and you may wipe the knives and forks and spoons for me again."

So Betty and the kitten went out on the lawn. Betty tied a small stick to a string. This she drew across the ground and the kitten ran after her, trying to catch it, until they were both tired. Then Betty sat down under the apple tree and laughed at the kitten's surprise to find the stick had disappeared. Then she tossed the string to the kitten and because she was warm and sleepy, she stretched her arm out on the smooth grass and laid her head upon it.

It was restful to lie there in the shade of the tree and listen to a pair of young birds chirping to each other in a nearby tree.

Presently a ladybug flew on to Betty's hand. She was a pretty ladybug, too. She wore a red robe with black dots on it. Betty sang softly:

"Ladybug, ladybug,
Fly away home,
Your house is on fire,
Your children are gone."

Betty did not wish to frighten the ladybug away, so she kept very still and watched it crawl about on her hand. It tickled her some and she laughed, trying not to mind it. Probably the ladybug would fly away soon to look for its children. The warm sun made Betty feel very sleepy.

Next thing Betty knew, she was in front of her mother's rose-bush.

The ladybug was on the rose-bush, but Betty did not brush it away. She looked at it more closely than she had ever done before. She saw that it had two shiny black eyes. Between the eyes two feelers grew. She counted the dots on its back. There were just seven. She counted its legs. There were just six. There were dots on the legs, too.

"Look," said the ladybug, in a tiny, proud voice, and she waved one of her six legs.

Betty looked closely. There on the rose-bush lay twenty queer little balls all stuck together.

"What are those, Ladybug?" Betty asked.

"Why," replied Ladybug, "those are my eggs. You sang to me that my children were all gone, which reminded me that I did not have any, anyway, so I thought I would do something about it."

"But what have those queer things to do with children?" Betty wanted to know.

"Gracious!" laughed Ladybug, "don't you even know that my eggs will soon turn to grub, and that after a month each grub will turn into a chrysalis?"

"What's a chrysalis?" questioned Betty.

"Oh, a chrysalis looks something like a caterpillar," explained Ladybug patiently, and, deciding that Betty did not seem to know much about ladybugs anyway, she continued, "After a while my children will have wings and look like me. Perhaps then they will fly away, but before they get ready to do that they will feed on the little green insects that would destroy your mother's roses if left on the bush."

"W-h-y!" exclaimed Betty, "how do they do that, Ladybug?"

"Easy enough," said Ladybug proudly. "Just use them for food to grow big and strong on, just as you use potatoes and carrots and oranges and milk."

"Oh!" Betty clapped her hands eagerly. "Now I know who you are. You are one of the helpful bugs that mother read to me about, the other day. I hope you have a great big family, so that there won't be a single naughty green insect left to spoil mother's lovely roses."

"I hope so, too," said Ladybug.

Betty heard someone calling. She tried to run. Then she woke up. She had fallen to sleep under the apple tree.

When Betty told her mother what had happened, her mother smiled.

"In your sleep you remembered what I read to you about the helpful bugs, didn't you, dear?"

"Yes," agreed Betty. "And it seemed so real that now I shall always remember to protect the helpful little ladybugs."—Zion's Herald.

YOUTH ON THE MARCH.

The most significant fact about Christian young people's work during the last two years, is that it has become a movement. We Congregational-Christians are not merely 190,000 persons who meet in 5,000 or 6,000 groups but we are a fellowship of those committed to high purposes. A survey of the situation in the states shows that south, north, west and east, the Pilgrim Fellowship is a reality. Goals are set by associations and states, and young and older leaders are accomplishing what they have set out to do.

But we do not want to be a sectarian organization. One of our purposes is to join with the denominations in achieving a united Christian youth movement. We are nearer that objective than many imagine. "Christian Youth Building A New World" has caught the interest of young people of all denominations, and some remarkable things have resulted in recent months.

This interdenominational fellowship will hold the most significant youth meeting ever gathered in America, at Lakeside, Ohio, June 23rd-28th. About 1800 delegates will attend, representing practically every agency and denomination engaged in young people's and student work in the United States and Canada. The Pilgrim Fellowship is asked to send eighty and the states are responding enthusiastically to the invitation to be represented. From Florida to Maine to California official representatives of our denomination will go to Lakeside.

Every person attending must be designated the official delegate of his church. To gather chosen youth delegates from twenty or more denominations and from forty states for a five-day working conference is a project which has untold possibilities for the future of the church and of civilization in America. These young people will not try to scrap their denominations at the Ohio meeting, but they will seek to unite them in a common program of personal and social Christian action.

Not until the last days of the conference will delegates meet by denominations. At that time we shall have the first session of the Council of the National Pilgrim Fellowship. The Congregational and Christian delegates who attend constitute that Council. The national program of the Pilgrim Fellowship for the next two years will be projected at that time, by young people from all parts of the United States in cooperation with their adult leaders. Youth is on the march!

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

A HOUSE WITHOUT WINDOWS.

By a little inland lake in North Carolina stands a deserted little house that has no windows. I am not surprised that it is deserted for it has no light inside. Here in Norfolk, Virginia, hard by the beautiful Berkley Bridge that spans the Elizabeth river is another house with but few windows. The building is some seven stories in height and there are no windows above the first floor. This house is used for cold storage. It may be good for that, but it certainly is not suited for a place to live.

Most houses have windows in them. Windows let in light and air. They make the place inhabitable for human beings. Now building blocks are being made of glass. Soon we can live in houses that let in light from every direction.

Life is like a house. The soul should have windows as well as a house. Unless the soul has windows open to heaven there is little chance for divine light to enter. Unless there are windows, the breath of God cannot move upon the soul of man. And without the presence of God, the human soul is worthless. A house without windows may be used for cold-storage but is not a fit place to live.

Open the windows and let in the light of truth, the radiance of beauty, the fragrance of goodness, and the redemptive force of love. Art, music, literature, and human comradeship may be rays that enter the windows of your soul and make it a place worthy to dwell.

DO THOU LIKEWISE.

The officers and teachers of First Christian Church in a certain city were in session on Wednesday of last week. Some young teachers were in the group. One of them said, "I wish we could start a teacher training class, for I want to learn to teach better than I am doing." Others joined in the same sentiment. All present voted in favor of asking the minister to teach such a course each week beginning at once. Now that minister is collecting materials and getting ready for his new job, and he is a happy man. Why not make your minister happy in like manner? He will be delighted to help his teachers with their work, or I miss my guess. Try him and see.

IF I WERE IN COLLEGE.

If I were in college, what would I do that is different? The Alumni meeting to be held at Elon on the fifteenth and the Eastern Virginia Alumni Club meeting to be held in Suffolk on the twenty-eighth remind me that once I was enrolled at Elon. It has been a long time since then. Times have changed—or people have—and the college has changed. I often wonder if the students realize their advantages and use them.

If I were in college today I would want to learn everything possible about the world in which we live, learn of science and philosophy as taught by the ancients and practiced by the moderns; learn of literature, art and music; learn of industry and agriculture, of politics and statecraft; and learn of religion as it becomes a force in modern living. Yes, I do believe that I would want to read books, experiment in the laboratories, listen to lectures and concerts, learn from the radio, and find out something of life from actually living with various groups of people.

And all of this knowledge I would want to translate into Christian service on the campus and off. Sometimes I would take pen in hand and write a line for publication and send it to the editor of the Young People's page in my church paper. Yes, I think I would write for publication for my own sake and for the good of those who may read.

Now I wonder if some young person in college may feel the same way and if this editor may receive articles for publication? He hopes so. So may it be!

PREPARING FOR EASTER.

The Church keeps Easter sacred to the memory and resurrection of Jesus. Easter is therefore the most holy season of the year. It is then that the Church reaches its height in religious fervor and devoted service.

There is an abundance of material to aid those responsible for the Easter services. The Christian Publishing Association at Dayton, Ohio; The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Massachusetts; The Meigs Publishing Company, 41. W. Washington St., Indianapolis, Indiana; Stockton Press, 416 Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.; The International Council of Religious Education, 203 N. Wabash St., Chicago, Ill., and many other denominational and other publishing companies will be glad to furnish suggestions and materials to aid with the Easter program. The Commission on Evangelism of our own Church located at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City has quite a lot of devotional materials and aids for pastors, many of which can be had free of charge and all at a minimum cost.

Among the materials in the hands of the Board of Christian Education at 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va., which may be borrowed by any who so desire are the following:

"The Light of Life," a dramatic worship service for Easter; "Into Thy Kingdom," an Easter play in one act; "Gethsemane," a communion meditation with musical accompaniment; "He Is the Son of God," a play for Holy Week showing the effect of the personality and deeds of Jesus upon a Jewish woman of Orthodox training; "The Triumph of Love," an Easter pageant by Fred W. Wolff; "Youth's Easter," a morality play; "The Easter Story" (in pantomime); "Dead and Risen"; "The Gate Beautiful," a pageant of the Resurrection; and "The Rock," a play in three acts showing the character development of Simon Peter.

The Guild of Inspirational Drama at 404 Auditorium Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio, makes the following suggestions concerning dramas and pageants:

"The Alabaster Box," by Harnwell and Meaker. Passion week and Easter morning as reflected in the family at Bethany. 3 acts. One setting. 5m. 2w. Inquire about royalty.

"The Half of My Goods," by Claggett. A story of Zaccheus and the reflection of his avaricious character in his son, Thaddeus. 3 acts. 4m. 2w.

We believe in God and the Bible.—To each of us is given a life. Along with life we are given talents, and the right to live and develop our lives, at least to a large degree, according to our own satisfaction. But we should not overlook the fact that life and talents are given to us as a sacred gift from God. We are born into a world where we have the opportunity for educating our-

JESUS HELPS A DOUBTER.

LESSON VII—FEBRUARY 16, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I believe; help thou mine unbelief."—Mark 9:24.

LESSON: Luke 7. Printed Text: Luke 7:19-28.

"He went about doing good"—thus speaks Peter in a brief biography of Jesus (Acts 10:38). This seventh chapter of Luke throws light on those words and gives them rich meaning. Jesus begins the day with addressing the people. Then in response to a faith the like of which he had not found among the Jews, a faith which caused Jesus to "marvel," he healed the servant of the centurion. The next day he restored life to the only son of a widow. Then he meets the delegation from John and sends them back with a message to that troubled and honest doubter, and incidentally pays a high tribute to John. And at the close of a busy day he goes to dine with a haughty Pharisee, and out of this experience there comes one of the most beautiful incidents in the life of Jesus, the anointing by the woman of the street. How many-sided the Master's nature was! How he responded to human need in its many forms? How he knew what was in man!

These Notes, however, must deal only with the story of the way in which Jesus dealt with John's doubt, and with his appraisal of John's character and ministry.

The Faith of Honest Doubt.

There are various kinds, or different stages of doubt. A great deal of doubt has a moral basis—there are those who hide their unwillingness to follow Christ, their refusal to yield their lives to Him, behind intellectual doubt. There is a doubt born of mere intellectual pride. There is a doubt born of the spirit of youth emerging into manhood—most young people pass through period of doubt. But there is a doubt born out of an honest faith—there are good people who have problems and doubts which baffle and hurt.

John's was such a doubt. He had come to the point where he wondered if Jesus really was the One-Who-Should-Come, the Messiah. It seems almost inconceivable to us, for John had at one time been so sure of the ministry of Jesus. He himself had prepared the way for the coming of Jesus. He had presented Him as the One-Who-Should-Come. And yet here he was honestly doubting whether Jesus was that One. How account for this strange turn of affairs?

Well, several factors entered into the situation. In the first place John had been imprisoned for nearly a year, imprisoned because he had dared to rebuke the king to his face for his sin. Accustomed as he was to freedom and to activity, it was only natural that John should feel the physical reaction involved in close confinement in a dungeon. He was looking at life through dark blue glasses. His physical condition undoubtedly entered into his doubt, as it often enters into our spiritual outlook on life.

Then, too, John had looked for One who should baptize with fire. The Messiah was to be stern, uncompromising, laying the axe to the root of the tree, purifying by fire. But here was Jesus quietly going about, teaching, preaching, healing, performing a ministry of love. Somehow it did not fit into the picture which John had painted. Could it be that he, John, could have been mistaken?

And it may have been that John could not understand why Jesus would allow him to remain a prisoner when He had apparently such unlimited power. Why did not his kinsman and his friend do something about the situation? Why did He not come in person and set him free? This may have been another factor in John's doubt.

Let it be said that there is no sin in honest doubt. There is a place for the inquiring mind in religion.

Using Common Sense in Doubt.

John had doubts, but he was no fool. He knew that men cannot live by doubts. He did a very sensible thing—he took his doubts directly to Jesus. He could not go in person, of course, but he did the next best thing—he sent some of his disciples to Jesus, and he minced no words. "Art thou he that should come or look we for another?" He had some doubts about the mission of Jesus but he did not have any doubts about his character. He believed this man would tell him the truth. He took his doubts directly to Jesus.

There is a moral here for us. It is perhaps inevitable that doubts should come. But before we give way to doubt, or before we take them to others, we ought to take them to Christ himself. There is really no other to whom we can go in the final analysis. He has the words of eternal life. Be sensible. Be sincere. Take your doubts to Him. Tell Him frankly about them. Ask Him to help you with them.

Answering Doubts With Facts.

Jesus did not rebuke John. He did not condemn him. With that sympathy which was so characteristic of Him, he dealt gently with the troubled and doubting prophet. He did not go into any extended argument. He did not resort to any appeal to miracle. He simply told the disciples to go back and tell John what they had seen—to tell him how they had seen the gracious ministry of Jesus in its practical results, in the things they had seen, but also in the things that they had heard.

"Come and see"—Jesus was always willing to be put to the test. He does not demand blind and arbitrary obedience. He does not depend upon the unnatural or the extraordinary to validate his claim. Look around you in life, see the results of His gracious ministry in human life, listen to the testimony of those who have found Him precious to their souls, call the roll of those who have gladly forsaken all and have followed Him to the ends of the earth. Let any man look steadily at Jesus and if he is sincere his doubts will be dissolved in Christ. Let every man use such faith as he has. Let him say "I believe; help thou mine unbelief." He that doeth the truth will come to the light. Let any man set himself to do what he believes Christ would have him do and he shall know that Christ is what He claims to be.

In 1929 we had an honest and cynical restlessness never seen before. Discontent grew and spread and burst through the bonds of law and order and decency. Jesus said to abandon financial-mindedness, but we want to smuggle in our prosperous world under the fence, like a bad boy at a ball game.

Money-mindedness is almost the worst thing that can happen to a human being, and it has happened to our Western world. The financially-minded person who thinks profit is our guiding star is the worst enemy of the State. Life does not consist of things which man possesses.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"A SUPERIOR MANIFESTATION."

"Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 18:3.

A human life is the Supreme Manifestation of God. The things we see about us represent Him. In a child's face there is a "little bit of heaven." Bishop Kern says every child is original humanity before man spoiled it—and he who obstructs or defames a child is a transgressor against God." Another has said that no man has a right to give a child anything less than the finest example. Jesus believes this and warned against despising one of these little ones. Furthermore, He said that unless we become like little children we shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven, for there is love, trust, dependence, innocence, and beauty. In all these we hear the whispers of God.

Prayer—Dear Father, our Lord, we thank Thee for all Thy blessings. We pray Thee for forgiveness for all our sins. Grant unto us the new life as it is in Jesus. Fill us with Thy love and make its power in us supercede all emotions of ourselves and all human relationships.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"A HISTORY OF COMPASSION."

"The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms."—Deut. 33:27.

"I have loved you with an everlasting love."—Jer. 31:3.

The history of man in his relation to God is a moving recital of God's compassion upon man; and from Adam and Eve to the present, God's purpose only in terms of His compassion. It matters not what man does; it matters not how far away from God he gets; it matters not how low he descends into iniquity; it matters not how ungrateful he becomes; there is the hopeful glad refrain of the ages singing for every soul, "The eternal God is thy refuge," "I have loved you with an everlasting love."

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee, we praise Thee, we would glorify Thee in our lives today, that Thou art near and ready to bless us. Take us to Thy bosom and make us know what it means to be safe in Thy fold. Supported and upheld by Thee. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"KILLING SIN."

"Neither do I condemn Thee; Go, and sin no more."—John 8:11.

The two major problems of our personal lives are sin and suffering. No one escapes these difficulties. When we confront them what do we do about it? There is one and only one way to accept these difficulties in our lives and that is the way Jesus accepted them. Take sin for example. Jesus broke the power of sin over men and women, not by inflicting penalties, however just they might be, nor by demanding that a man should pay every farthing for his trespasses, nor did he hold them over burning pits to force them to repent, but he loved them, and in the presence of that love, hearts melted into penitence and then and there a desire to be worthy of such love sprang into their hearts.

God kills sin by loving the sinner.

Prayer—O Lord, we come into Thy presence battered by sin and error and wholly unworthy of Thy sweet name. Do Lord, forgive us of our sins and adopt us into Thy family.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE IMPORTANCE OF FRIENDSHIP."

"A friend loveth at all times."—Prov. 17:17.

"A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly."—Prov. 18:24.

"It makes no difference, in looking back five years, how you dieted or dressed; whether you have been lodged in the first floor or the attic; whether you have had gardens and baths, good cattle and horses, have been carried in a neat equipage or in a ridiculous truck; these things are forgotten so quickly, and leave no effect. But it counts whether we had good companions at that time."—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Prayer—Our Father who art in heaven, we pray for friendship and may the power of heaven bless us to be friendly to man, all the way. In the name of Christ we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"FAME AND FRIENDSHIPS."

"The Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends, also the Lord gave Job thrice as much as he had before."—Job 42:10.

"Fame is a food that dead men eat—
I have no stomach for such meat.
In little light and narrow room,
They eat it in the silent tomb,
With no kind voice of comrade
Near to bid the feaster be of cheer.

"But friendship is a nobler thing.—
Of friendship it is good to sing.
For truly, when a man shall end,
He lives in memory of his friend,
Who doth his better part recall
And of his fault make funeral."

—Austin Dobson.

"The social, friendly, honest man,
Whate'er he be,
'Tis he fulfills great Nature's plan,
And none but he."

—Robert Burns.

"Hand grasp hand, eye lights eye,
in good friendship,
And great hearts expand
And grow one in the sense of this world's life."

—Robert Browning.

Prayer—Our Father, a new day has dawned upon us. Its way is uncharted. Many people may cross our path or join us in the way. Grant us to pray for them and be a friend to all.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"YOUR OWN CISTERN."

"Drink waters out of thine own cistern."—Prov. 5:15.

Self-sufficient lives, self-complacent and conceited lives, are justly condemned; but self-sufficient lives are towers of strength to all around them. Live to yourself, and then you can live helpfully with others.

One should have within his own soul a reservoir of faith and courage so full, so overflowing, that all around it will be refreshed and stimulated by it. We should not need to go to another for our hope and strength and cheer. Only by being self-sufficing in these things can we aid those who are not self-sufficing.

Yet, of course, no one can create within himself such a spiritual reservoir, but the Holy Spirit can and will form it for us. As we are born again, we ask of Christ and He will be in us a well of living water, springing up unto eternal life.

Prayer—Lord Jesus, evermore give us this living water that we thirst no more, and that others may come to us as they came to Jacob's well.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"GREAT SLAVES."

"Whosoever would become great among you, shall be your minister."—Mark 10:35-45.

Our Lord said that whoever would become great among His disciples must become their slaves, which is what "minister" meant in those days. The best commentary on the saying is Christ's exquisite action in washing the travel-stained feet of that little company when no one of the quarreling twelve, each desirous of preferment in the kingdom, would perform that necessary and loving task. But He, the King of heaven and earth, would gladly perform it.

So is it still. The mightiest of all is the Lord of heaven, who is ceaselessly doing the least and humblest kindnesses for the least of His children, kindnesses which they are too proud to do for one another.

When will we learn that the path to true greatness is lowly service? When will nations learn it, as well as men?

Prayer—Give us, O Gentle Saviour, the grace and the wisdom to be great. We ask it in Thy beloved name.—Amen.

REVIEW.

By MISS DORA BYRONS.

The days are marching by my door
In a row,
Like the tramp of many feet
Hurrying down a city street,
I hear them go.

I hear a shuffling, weary step
Plodding by,
A discouraged day filled with tears,
A day that passes through the years
With a sigh.

And then there sounds a click of heels,
Quick and gay,
Heels that twinkle joy and light,
And laugh away the gathering night,
—A merry day.

Above them all I hear the tread,
Firm and true,
Of working days that one by one
Tell of work that's never done,
Never through.

The days are marching by my door
In a row,
Passing with a whispered beat,
Leaving echoes sad and sweet,
I hear them go.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

ETERNAL TREASURES.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury."—Mark 12:41.

"Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven."—Matt. 6:20.

"... and thou shalt have treasure in heaven."—Matt. 19:21.

Jesus must have liked the treasury of the great temple. It was in this section of the temple that he taught. It was probably on the dirt floor of this treasury that he wrote when the poor sinner woman was dragged before him. It was just after he had forgiven the poor woman that he spoke to those about him the beautiful words: "I am the light of the world." And John tells us (8:20): "These words spake Jesus in the treasury, as he taught in the temple."

Speaking of the temple, here is a bit of revealing information: Women could not go into all parts of the temple. There was a special women's court. Into this court both men and women could go. In that section which could be frequented by the women they built the treasury! Women have frequented the treasuries of the church from that day to this. Two of the most touching and beautiful scenes in the life of Jesus are connected with women in that treasury room. "And Jesus said unto her, neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more." And the other time is in the case of Jesus beholding the poor widow casting in all her living.

The only time Jesus is described as sitting in the temple it is in the treasury room. Perhaps the embolden money-changers had taken this favorite place of Jesus' for their brazen business of cheating poor women and men as they came to buy an animal for an offering. Twice Jesus drove them out, and cleaned up the place. It was the treasury in his Father's House! "And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury."

In time, my friends, I have spoken to you about Jesus being born in Bethlehem, "house of bread," and have indicated the appropriateness of it inasmuch as Jesus was "the true bread come down from heaven." Here, today, we learn that the treasury was a favorite resting-place, teaching-place, forgiving-place, examining-place, judging-place of Jesus. And how appropriate for he is the world's true treasure,—the pearl of great price! Again how appropriately did Jesus select such a place for these so many things, for the treasury is a very true test,—the 'acid test,'—for "where a man's treasure is there will his heart be also."

Is it not remarkable seeing how much the treasury-room meant to the Lord that he should have let Judas bear the treasury of his little band of disciples! In other words, Jesus gave Judas a very choice place in his band. Pity that Judas should have betrayed so sacred a trust!

In the light of these remarks let us look to the text of the hour: "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven." Jesus goes from the Old Jerusalem to the New! He goes from the treasury in the temple to the treasury in heaven. He is there beholding how we cast in! One of Jesus' favorite phrases was "treasures in heaven." In the sermon on the mount he told his hearers to "lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where moth and rust doth not corrupt, nor thieves break thru nor steal; for where your treasure is there will your heart be also." In other words, have a savings account in the eternal treasuries of heaven! Many of us are thinking about savings accounts in the banks of earth. And against that I would not utter one word. I believe in it. But how many of us are consciously laying up amounts large and small in the vaults of the eternities? I know a young fellow who several years ago, with nothing scarcely on earth to show for his earnings figured up what he had given to the church and it amounted to more than four thousand dollars. It was a large sum considering how small amount he had earned up to that time.

But you say, that is all too materialistic. Not at all. It is no more materialistic than the words of Jesus to the rich young ruler. Why did Jesus talk to him in terms of dollars and cents? Why did not he just go ahead and wink at those things, pass them up unnoticed, and tell the young man to come on and follow him? He knew that money was the acid test! He knew also that religion was never intended to be outside the realm of one's actual life. He expected Christians to carry religion into their banks and their businesses. He expected the church to have a treasury. In his Father's House in Jerusalem that was the room he loved, used and taught in. It was there, as I have said, he sat and watched those who worshipped make their offerings. Did the words and the wallets go with the worship? Did they show where their hearts were by their gifts? They could register their actual willingness to sacrifice, serve, and send the gospel to others by the way they made their offerings in the treasury-room. They would have treasure in heaven! Every time they dropped, in the right spirit of consecration and devotion, a penny or a dollar into one of the thirteen chests in the treasury-room it rang the register in heaven.

To some this will sound almost irreverent. That is because we have clothed Jesus with our own fictions,—separated him from all business, in church or home, or state. We have taken him out of the temple's treasury-room. We are willing to allow him to go into the Holy Place, or even into the Holy of Holies, and to shroud him with the smoke of sentimental emotionalism, but we have overlooked his visits to the treasury-room. We have forgotten that it was there, on ground floor that he wrote the only words we have any records of his writings; we have forgotten that it was there he forgave the sinner-woman; we have forgotten it was there he observed the great gifts of the rich, and the greater gift of the poor widow; we have forgotten it was there that he taught, when he taught in the temple; we have forgotten it was there that he encountered the robbing money-changers, and that it was that portion of the temple which he cleansed, and in that portion of the temple he talked about the house of prayer for all nations! We have forgotten his talk on the talents,—dollars and cents in the language of the day. We have forgotten his story of the rich farmer, and his recital of what happened to Dives another man of selfish attitude toward a stewardship of wealth which had been entrusted to him. The fiercest words of Jesus, and the most graphic parables and lessons are largely group around money, or what was its equivalent in that day. And yet today, in the most materialistic age of the world, when more Christian altars are established than ever before, many ministers yield to the damning cry that you "cannot mix business and religion"; that you dare not speak of "money in the pulpit"; that you must preach the Gospel, meaning that you must preach the world's gospel of sentimental selfishness, and the strict avoidance of anything that touches the pocket-book! The most unlearned Christian would know that is not right. The old colored preacher told his congregation

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage has always been very proud of its girls. It has reared girls here that have become graduate nurses, stenographers, office girls, home makers, clerks and workers in manufacturing plants. The writer was visiting some business men some weeks ago and in four offices we visited that day we found one of our girls as a stenographer in each—all of them making good. We have four girls working in one manufacturing plant that reached the age limit last year and they, too, are making good.

We have a girl working for the State of North Carolina and is holding a very important position. We feel proud of them all.

We have intelligent girls in the orphanage now who are just as ambitious as they. If you could visit the orphanage and spend the day and go in the kitchen when they are preparing the meals and see how nicely they do their work you would want to stay and eat some of their cooking.

Then you could look at the girls who are the housekeepers and see how well they do their work, or watch the girls as they iron the clothes after the washed clothes are brought in, or see the girls as they sew and patch in the sewing room, I believe you would remark "what smart girls you have at the Christian Orphanage." They have their job and they know how it ought to be done. The Christian Orphanage is just a great big family and we do our best to run it on the home life idea. We want each child to feel that it is his or her home and feel responsibility in keeping the home nice and in good order.

We have one little boy in the orphanage that has made the honor roll every month during this school term. The first month he made 5 A's, 2 B's. The second month, 5 A's, 2 B's. The third month, 6 A's, 1 B. Fourth month, 6 A's, 1 B.

We feel proud of our one big family. The continuous cold since the middle of December has ruined our coal supply and it is getting low.

selves and to train ourselves in service. Naturally, our life is based more or less on our environment and from early life we begin to think and make decisions for ourselves, and in this day and time when everything is doubted and questioned there may arise in the minds of some a possible doubt of God.

But we have only to look around us to see the miracles which God works in our community each day and any doubt which we have is wiped away. We have only to open our Bibles and begin to read and any doubts which we may have will pass instantly away, for we are reading the Book which has stood the test of time and debates of time—the Book and the only Book where we can find peace, rest and soul satisfaction. And so we begin to form our own opinions, and we come to believe in God as the Creator of the world, a just and fair Master who not only created the world but maintains it; and created us in a like image to Himself—and we bow down and worship before the Supreme Authority, and stand for the things that He would have us stand.

For Discussion—"Things for Which We Stand"

1. We stand for Jesus Christ.—We believe in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, the Saviour of the world, who was sent to this earth that man may have the more abundant life. We believe that He was nailed to the cross, was laid in the tomb, and then arose on the third day even as He said He would. We believe that He is the Light of the World and those who seek Him will not walk in darkness.

2. We stand for the church.—We believe in the Church as the Divine Institution of God. We believe in the Church as a place for worship—a place for fellowship with those who love the Lord.

3. We stand for prayer.—We believe that prayer is a holy privilege of all mankind and that if we go to the Father in prayer He will comfort us and show us the way, the truth and the light.

4. We stand for a Warless World.—We believe in a warless world. Where will we find a group of young people who will kill, cripple or maim young people of other nations just for the love of fighting? Youth today not only believes in a warless world, but they are striving to make this a reality.

5. We stand for a life of service.—We believe in a life of service for Christ and the Church; and we not only believe in this to the fullest extent, but many youth of today are dedicating their lives to full-time service for Christ—many are showing their love by getting to the mission field to tell others of a Father who so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. We believe in God and His Son, and as believers in His Holy Word we stand for a life of consecrated service for Him.

CUSTODIANS OF THE PILGRIM SPIRIT.

something new in the history of the world, and that their successors must be sufficiently free from bondage to prejudice and tradition to do the same, if truth and humanity require.

3. To turn to a different realm the spirit of the Pilgrims is seen in the way in which they handled the matter of Parental Responsibility. They handled it by accepting it. The foundations of the American home were laid in Plymouth. The unit was not the individual but the family.

The home was built around the child. One of the reasons that led the Pilgrims to America was the spiritual welfare of their children. The religious instruction in their home was not in content and method in accord with modern thought. But the spirit of the Pilgrims must not be confused with their methods or ideas. This pertinent question for us is whether, in departing from their ideas, we have lost their concern.

The weakest spot in our American home life today is the degree to which parents abdicate in the moral and religious education of their children. At just this hour, when children have been granted a burden of freedom such as those of their age never before carried, a multitude of parents are falling down on the help that they should give. A girl in her early teens asked me a while ago what fathers and mothers prayed about. I answered that they often prayed about their children, to which she responded quickly: "The poor kids, they need it." Much of the apparent self-confidence of youth is not so sturdy as it appears. To neglect the religious education of a child is to rob him of his birth-right. If the religious traditions that have characterized this country are to continue, there must be a fuller acceptance of the Pilgrim sense of parental responsibility.

4. This leads to one other matter, the handling of One's Soul. The Pilgrims handled it by cultivating it. Their greatest conflicts were within the walls of the inner life. If they were sometimes morbidly concerned about it, we have swung to the opposite extreme, and life has grown thin thereby. Our prevailing interest in religion recently has not been to know God, but to know about God. We have been so busy in our churches in adjusting our thinking about God to modern knowledge, that we have nearly lost the main things. What doth it profit us if we gain a theology and lose religion? What doth it profit us if we learn about God and lose the sense of God? What doth it profit us if we learn what worship means and find a place for prayer and then cease to worship and to pray?

An American preacher at a denominational gathering not long ago said: "We must find something that corresponds to what used to be called the Grace of God." Walter Lippmann writes that we need something that corresponds to the sense of obligation to God. There is only one thing that corresponds to the Grace of God and that is the Grace of God. There is only one thing that can take the place of a past sense of obligation to God, and that is a present sense of obligation to God.

The finest thing about contemporary religion is its growing ethical passion. But that passion lacks the drive that comes from the sense of the Will of God and a desire to do it. Our democracy is in peril through the decay of the sense of inner authority, which gives men self-control. Mr. Christopher Dawson finds one cause of the rise of the communistic and fascist states to be the decay of the sense of the religious foundations of society. Men demand authority and discipline, and if they are not found within they will seek them from without.

The old frontier which the Pilgrim knew has retreated. But a new frontier has sprung up—none the less real and bleak that it is in the realm of the mind and the spirit. It is studded with the growth of materialistic faiths and swept by the arid breath of secularism and the chill winds of denial. There is no God on this frontier except the gods of paganism. And men are lonely and bewildered without God. They are filled with cynicism and the sense of the futility of living. If peace is to come again and the old sweetness of life that the fathers knew in the midst of their struggles, it will be because we recover the sense of God which makes the spirit competent.

Paul Engle in his American Song has said something like this in a letter addressed "To An Elder Generation":

Something heroic passed when you were born,
Some mighty thing that the earth will lack
And men be craven, and their living prideless,
Until we give our lives to get it back.

That we are custodians of the Pilgrim polity has been our boast. To be custodians of the Pilgrim spirit would be our glory.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

that it took three books to run a church: "Bredem, de Good Book, de hymn-book, and de pocket-book." Jesus is there! He sees what we send in! He is "over against the treasury" beholding how we cast in, whether it be much or little. He sees even a cup of cold water! He sees the little lift for a poor, needy one here, and the humble help for another rendered there. He sees the sacrificial gifts to his great causes on earth: the Church, Education, Missions, Benevolence. He knows when we claim we have given well, and have not, but have held back a portion of that which belongs to the Lord! He knows when we have given joyously, cheerfully, not counting any credit therefor, and the "Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

One of the chief joys of life is to know and work with so many persons who do love to render unto God that which is due Him. They give gladly and again and again. They and the like of them are the hope of the church. Whether they have much or little they thankfully recognize their stewardship, and they honor God and their lives with their gifts. They are increasing their accounts in the eternal treasures!

OBITUARIES

RIDDICK.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit on December 29, 1935, to remove from our midst Mrs. Mary C. Riddick, who had lived to the ripe age of 95 years.

Whereas, we feel keenly the influence her life had on us, be it resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to His will;

Second, that we seek to emulate her worthy example in all walks of life.

Third, that the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church has lost a faithful member though she could not meet with us these last years.

Fourth, that we extend our love and sympathy to her family.

Fifth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be placed on the records of our Society.

MRS. T. A. BARBEE,
MRS. W. H. YATES,

WELLBORN.

Thursday morning, Nov. 13, Mrs. Chas. H. Wellborn left this "earthly tabernacle" to enter "the Building of God." She was for year a faithful member of Ramseur Christian Church and affiliated with all its organizations. She will be missed in the church, community and in the home where the hearts of her husband and children so beautifully trusted in her.

To her loved ones we offer our deepest sympathy and assure them that "to live in the hearts we leave behind is not to die." Committee.

TERRELL.

On March 10th, God, in His providence, saw fit to remove from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nancy Susan Terrell. We, the members of Concord Christian Church offer the following resolutions:

First, in the death of Sister Terrell, our church has lost a faithful and much beloved member, her family a devoted wife and loving mother, her community a kind neighbor.

Second, we extend our deepest sympathy to all hearts made sad by her going.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy be placed on the church record and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

.. THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ..

Liquor Production Increases. —

The Treasury reports that American production of liquor increased sharply in 1935. The output of distilled spirits amounted to 90,618,171 taxable gallons, which was an increase of 31 per cent over the 62,469,688 gallons of 1934. Federal taxes were paid on 45,207,080 barrels of beer during the year, representing a gain of 11 per cent over the 39,864,997 barrels produced in 1934. There was, of course, a corresponding increase in consumption.—Exchange.

Covering too Much Territory. —

Ambassador Saito of Japan is trying to take in too much territory when he makes speeches in the United States applauding European dictators. Diplomatic usage allows him a free hand in explaining and defending the policies of his own government, however bellicose and dangerous they may be. When he goes beyond that and tries to convert Americans to an admiration for the men who have gained power in Europe by gangster methods and are preparing a second and even more disastrous world war, which may engulf the United States, he should be advised that he is overstepping.—Business Week.

Pacifism and War. —

There is good reason to believe that Mussolini figured on the popular dread of England and America for another war, and also on the rapid rise of pledged pacifism, especially in the colleges. The votes in both countries had produced rather startling totals of those opposed to war and of those who would refuse to fight in any war. The sudden revision of feeling in England against the Government's plan of giving Italy a big slice of Ethiopia was a big surprise to all and has upset Italy's interpretation of the votes. The English wanted peace, but evidently not at any price. It looks to us as though the wily Mussolini thought the pacifists would keep the two big nations out of the war, and so he waded into his adventure. If so, pacifism really did not prevent war, but made it possible.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Neutrality Bill Extended. —

The House of Representatives, by a vote of 353 to 27, passed a resolution the first of the week extending the Neutrality bill from February 29, 1936, to May 1, 1937. The senate concurred in the action the following day. As finally approved the resolution amended the existing law, which provided a ban on shipments of arms either to warring nations or to neutrals for reshipment, to prohibit all loans and credits to belligerents beyond short-term credits for normal commercial transactions. The bill amplified the Monroe Doctrine, by exempting Latin-American republics from the ban should they be attacked by a non-American power. They were included, however, if they should join in non-American hostilities. The resolution did not affect the permanent provisions of the law passed last year, which gave the President discretionary authority to allow Americans to travel on vessels of belligerents only at their own risk.

A Key to Our Alphabet. —

Dr. George Lamsa and other Smithsonian Institute scientists claim to have found the key of the English alphabet in the Aramic tongue used in Babylon and after the captivity by the Jews, according to an exchange. The alphabet almost as known today, consisted of letters which were pictures of familiar objects. For example, A was the face of the alpo or ox worshipped as a god by the early Babylonians. B outlined a house of the period. C stood for the camel's hump. D stood for a triangle, supposedly taken from the delta at the mouth of great rivers. H was hawta, a trap used in catching foxes. I was aena, the human eye. T was tara, the door of a tent. Y was the human hand, fingers spread out. Thus men began to spell in the things they could see, which makes the formation of the alphabet and the beginning of reading a very simple thing. But it did not long remain so simple.—M. P.-R.

How San Diego Stands. —

The Department of Commerce survey of typical cities in the United States has just completed its work in San Diego, California, its seventh city. The survey shows what the families of San Diego earn, what they buy, how they ride, and where they live. The figures are for the year 1933. It shows that the largest number of families fall within the income group of $1,000 to $1,499—in fact nearly two-thirds fall in this group, while 82 per cent run under $2,000. Nearly 85 per cent of the families live in single-family homes, which in three-fourths of the cases are built of wood. The next largest number are of stucco, and the rent paid ranges from around $17 to $60 per month. The mild climate makes heating comparatively unimportant. Stoves serve about 80 per cent, while only about 5 per cent have central heating plants. Fireplaces probably take care of the others. Gas, wood and kerosene furnish the fuel for heating, but gas practically has a monopoly on the business of cooking, furnishing fuel for 99 out of every hundred. They like bath tubs in San Diego, 97 per cent of the families having them, while 4 per cent have two or more tubs. Nearly seven families in ten have automobiles, one in twenty having two or more, but strange to say, mechanical refrigeration is only used by a comparatively small group, there being 84 families out of every hundred who still use less modern methods. Taking the entire census into consideration, San Diego is said to stand at the head of the list of seven cities surveyed.

Supreme Court Upholds TVA Power Sales. —

By a vote of eight to one, the Supreme Court upheld the right of the Government to dispose of "surplus power" produced at the Wilson Dam by the Tennessee Valley Authority. The majority opinion held that: "The Wilson dam and its power plant must be taken to have been constructed in the exercise of the constitutional functions of the federal government," as a project for national defense, and because the Tennessee River may be susceptible of development as an important waterway." It stated that the "power of falling water was an inevitable incident of the construction of the dam," and that the electrical energy generated constitutes "property belonging to the United States." Also that authority to dispose of property constitutionally acquired by the United States was expressly granted by the Constitution. Justice McReynolds, who alone cast a dissenting vote, stated that he thought the trial court which had decided against the TVA had been correct. He said: "If under the thin mask of disposing of property the United States can enter the business of generating, transmitting and selling power as, and when and wherever some board may specify, with the definite design to accomplish ends wholly beyond the sphere marked out for them by the Constitution, an easy way has been found for breaking down the limitations heretofore supposed to guarantee protection against aggression." Under the Court's ruling it would seem that the United States could not legally erect dams for the primary purpose of generating electricity. But there is small comfort to private business in that, when it will be possible for the government to claim the navigability of almost any rivulet in the country and a necessity for the construction of dams to control its waters. Certainly the decision is a lucky break for the inhabitants of the Tennessee Valley, but it is necessarily a blow at the private capital invested in the development of this almost infant industry. Regardless of the Supreme Court's decision, the government has a more momentous one to make. It must stay out of the power business or it must take it over in its entirety. The State of Virginia is probably a typical state. The people of Virginia are just beginning to learn to use electricity. Only about 7 per cent of the farms in the state are lighted by electricity, in some counties the percentage is as low as two per cent. The field is vast and will require an extraordinary amount of capital. But private capital is not going to enter the field unless it can receive a reasonable return and a guarantee of safety. Will the State of Virginia willingly let the national government enter it in competition with private companies, from which it derives a large part of its revenues in taxes? These and other questions are well worth pondering.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Col. J. E. West, president of the Mission Board, has been confined to his home for a week or more. It is hoped that he will soon be able to be out and at his post again.

On page three, this week, we present Miss Pattie Coghill. We know that her many friends throughout the territory covered by THE SUN will be glad to see her.

Dr. H. K. Eversull, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was the speaker at the College, Sunday, at 11:00 o'clock. Dr. Eversull's visits and messages are always greatly appreciated.

Rev. Mr. Woolworth, missionary on furlough, from Turkey and an employee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, spent several days at the College, spoke at the chapel service and to different student groups.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College met in mid-year session, Tuesday, February 18, at 10:00 A. M. The more important matters discussed were the approaching campaign for $250,000.00 to clear the College of its debts and the organization for the campaign.

A note from Dr. Atkinson states that he is enjoying the Florida sunshine and improving daily. Dr. Atkinson is recuperating at the Orlando Sanitarium, Orlando, Florida. During Dr. Atkinson's stay in Florida, Mrs. J. P. Barrett is staying with Mrs. Atkinson in the home here.

A letter from Rev. A. W. Andes states that he is improving gradually. It will be remembered that Brother Andes underwent a very serious operation some weeks ago and was critically ill for a number of days. His friends will be glad for his improvement.

At the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Suffolk, Virginia, Chamber of Commerce, Colonel J. E. West and Dr. J. E. Rawles were elected vice-presidents of that organization. We congratulate that body on having available two such able officers.

The Annual will be completed this week and will be in the hands of the church clerks shortly. Practically all of the material has been in type for several weeks, but it was not possible to get it out sooner because of delay in receiving some of the tables that necessarily had to be included.

The General Alumni Association of Elon College met in mid-year session at the College, Saturday, February 15th, at 2:00 P. M. Hon. J. O. Atkinson, Jr., is president of the Association. The Eastern Virginia Alumni Association will hold its annual meeting and banquet at Suffolk, Va., February 28th, at 7:00 P. M. All of the alumni in Eastern Virginia are urged to attend.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is now facing a financial crisis. If the families of the church that should have THE CHRISTIAN SUN would subscribe and pay their subscription, this crisis could be easily met. If all who are in arrears with their subscriptions would pay up, this would help. Can't we have a united church-wide effort in the interest of our church paper so necessary to the work of the Kingdom?

Rev. Ivan R. Smith of our Winchester, Virginia, Church is putting on what is reported to be a quite interesting series of Sunday evening services. Entitled "Chats Around the Fireside," this series takes up various phases of home and community life and studies them from different viewpoints. Certainly the programs are unique, and other pastors who are finding their evening crowds rather small might do well to communicate with our Winchester pastor and learn morn of these programs.

A belated notice reaches us that Esther Carol, lovely baby of Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Slater, of Albemarle, N. C., died on November 29th, and brought sorrow to the hearts of these proud parents that only time and the mercy of our Lord can remove. They have our sympathy, even if so late in being extended. Bro. Slater is the esteemed and faithful pastor of our Albemarle church. His church has voted to adopt, and raise the apportionment asked by the recent session of the Conference of which it became a member last Fall.

OAK LEVEL CHURCH.

This is one of the old churches and marks the place of Christian fellowship for generations of the past. It is the quiet training place where Christian men and women are developed into usefulness. It is the church house of loyal and faithful Christians. I have known of the good people here for more than fifty years. I served them as pastor more than fifty years ago. I am now serving them as pastor again.

The weather has been cold, the snow deep, but every preaching service finds them present. I really feel that there are many homes in this church community where Christian happiness always abides. The membership and visitors are a happy people to come with in Christian service. The first Sunday in February, after preaching, the pastor's attention was called to a pile of packages which these good folks had brought as gifts for the pastor to help make comfortable and happy in good eats for himself and family. In this lot was salt, syrup, sausage, side meat, sugar, coffee, canned peas and butterbeans, cash, soap and socks. The pastor and family are very grateful for each gift and wish for everyone in this fellowship happiness and prosperity.

Gratefully,

"MORE ABOUT JESUS WOULD I KNOW."

We sing the song, "More About Jesus," and we sing it well, but do we try to think it through? Do we try to trace it to its last analysis to find what its logical conclusion really is? I wish to commend the song and commend those who sing it "with the understanding," for I am persuaded that they will "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of" the truth. Well, first of all, Jesus never wrote a book—never so much as wrote an article for any "church paper." The fact is that he never wrote a paragraph or a line unless he did it "with his finger [when he] wrote on the ground." To my mind there is no question but what he joined in the song at the last Supper, but we do not have it in so many words that he ever sang a song, painted a picture, built a tower, planned a bridge, told a joke, or commanded an army. There are so many nice things that nice folks do today that Jesus never did. But we must remember that many other signs (and many things not signs) that are not recorded Jesus did. He possibly sang and wrote and read and taught and prayed at times and places when the Holy Spirit did not will to make a record. Evidently, Jesus never said anything that would not be worth repeating nor did anything that would not be worth doing again. However, it appears that all he said and did in some way related to salvation. "These are written, that ye might believe, . . . and that believing, ye might have life through his name."

"Went About Doing Good."

Any estimate of Jesus would be too low that did not place him above the greatest thinker of the world; yet he handed out his theories concerning life very sparingly. It is true that no other thinker or teacher has given the world philosophies of life so profound and faultless, but Jesus seemed to have been content to live and love in a most humble kind of way. He did not boast nor publish that he was going to build a life, but he simply went to work and built a life. And such a life men had never known before and have never known since. He grew a character that has challenged the admiration of the world. Thus without bragging, parading, or announcing to the public, he exerted an influence that so impressed the just judgment of mankind that righteous men all agree that no one else has ever lived whose words have been so wise or whose life has been so perfect as that of him who "went about doing good." I would not say that the words of Jesus were not new, attractive, and astonishing; but I would say that men were attracted to him and loved him for what he was and what he did fully as much as what he taught. And may we not conclude that if we, the professed followers of the blessed Lord, would live as he lived, it would not be necessary for most of us to talk so much? Selah!

"Work While It Is Day."

Jesus was a busy man—he did things and in the best possible way; he was a worker, and every day was full of deeds. Seemingly he had no time for day dreams; if he dreamed at all, he quickly translated his dreams into the activities of life. He never gave anyone the chance to speak of him as negatively or passively good, and for the simple reason that he was actively and aggressively good. It is one thing to "never do any harm," but another and quite a different thing to be "always doing good as sincerely as you should." If our heart is right; if our motives are pure; if our mind is clean; if our spiritual senses are keen and our conscience trained, we are prepared to be aggressively and positively good. It is good not to lie and not to steal and not gamble and not drink and not revel and not murder and not do any other thing that is wrong. But a religion that simply assumes a "hands-off" policy and that consists in a bundle of "nots" falls far short of the religion taught by our Lord Jesus Christ. Bluster and storm and bombast had no place either in his vocabulary or his life. He was the most gentle gentleman that ever lived. When a thing needed to be said, he always knew what to say and how to say it to strike conviction to the soul. We read where he wept without speaking and looked without rebuking. He knew how to use a tear and a look when such would be more effective than a word.

"From the Abundance of the Heart."

Jesus talked right out of his heart. He did not stop to think, because he could think without stopping. Nothing seems to have been premeditated nor thought up nor planned nor outlined. He knew right on the spot. He had always known. He did not have to learn as we think of learning, for he always knew all things from the beginning. He loved God, he loved men and he loved the truth, for he knew that only the truth could make men free. No wonder we read: "Behold, the man!" We have noticed that he went

of the

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

WASHINGTON'S COUNSEL.

The counsel of George Washington that the support of religion is an indispensable duty of patriotism is cited in a manual on church attendance being prepared for the biennial meeting of the General Council in June at Mt. Holyoke College.

The manual will be issued by the Commission on Church Attendance of which Roger W. Babson is chairman. Each member of the Commission is preparing a chapter. The editor-in-chief is the Rev. Clement F. Hahn of Worcester, Mass.

The advice of Washington is quoted from his "Farewell Address to the People of the United States":

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness—these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connection with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, where is the security for property, for reputation and for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the paths, which are the instruments of investigation in the courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition, that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles."

CHURCH ATTENDANCE QUESTIONS.

A referendum will be taken throughout the denomination this spring upon the principle phases of the general theme for the biennial meeting, "The Effective Church." The first phase scheduled on the program to be discussed at Mt. Holyoke is the Sunday service of worship. The problem of church attendance will be introduced on the printed program with the statement: "Whatever the service contains it is valueless if the people are not there."

Questions regarding church attendance to be submitted in the referendum are:

"1. Do you feel justified in constraining men to attend your church?"

"2. How important is it that people should be constant in church attendance?"

"3. What plans have you for securing the attendance of new people?—for securing regularity in attendance?"

"4. How can the church reach the unchurched?—in apartments and hotels of the city?—in the remote homes of the country?"

"5. What can be done for seasonal residents?—for people at summer resorts and at winter resorts?—for people at tourist camps?—for tourists en route?—for both passengers and crew on ship board?"

AN EXHAUSTIVE STUDY.

Invaluable in the consideration of methods for increasing church attendance will be Mr. Babson's analysis of statistics which have been collected by the Commission. This analysis will be the concluding chapter in the manual. Reliable records have been secured from some churches for more than twenty-five years. Following the establishment of the commission in 1929, it secured attendance reports regularly for four years from a group of 1,000 churches. Beginning with 1934 attendance reports from over 3,000 churches have been collected by the General Council for the denominational Year-Book. The Congregational and Christian churches are the first denomination to collect and study church attendance records.

Mr. Babson is staying this winter on his Florida estate at Lake Wales.

SWEDEN, NORWAY AND DENMARK.

Hubert C. Herring of New York City, director of the Council for Social Action, and Frank W. McCulloch, who is in charge of the Chicago office of the council and is director of its department of industrial relations, sailed February 12th to study cooperative movements in the Scandinavian countries. Mr. McCulloch will also visit England. They will be gone two or three months. On account of his health and upon his physician's orders, Mr. Herring cancelled previous engagements and left on the trip earlier than originally planned.

MISS PATTIE LEE COGHILL

Florida Extension Worker.

MISS COGHILL SPEAKS IN THE EAST.

Pattie Lee Coghill of Jacksonville, Fla., extension service worker in Florida, and Rev. Abram Nightingale of Crossville, Cumberland, County, Tenn., just concluded a series of speaking engagements for the Extension Boards among churches in Illinois.

Miss Coghill spoke at the Home Societies evening platform meeting at Evanston, during the Mid-Winter Meetings. She was a decided "hit" and requests were immediately made by persons from the east that she be "booked" for engagements there before returning home. She speaks this week at Gloversville and Albany, N. Y., and at Newark, N. J. She will speak Sunday at the morning service in the United Church, Bridgeport, Conn., of which Dr. William Horace Day, president of the Home Societies, is pastor. Grace L. West, pastor's assistant at the United Church, was a classmate of Miss Coghill at Elon College. Later Connecticut appointments include Centre Church, New Haven.

Miss Coghill was born at Henderson, North Carolina. She is a graduate of Boston University as well as of Elon. Formerly she was director of religious education for the Southern Christian Convention. She took her present position in 1929 and was the first person to have an appointment in united Congregational-Christian work.

WHY NOT REMOVE THE CAUSES?

There are about six principle causes for the disagreeable financial atmosphere found in many churches. Knowing the causes, we may remove them and lift church and missionary monies to their rightful, normal, spiritual place in our local churches.

- (1) We have neglected to introduce definite, clear-cut stewardship programs into our churches for all departments and ages in the church through sermons, study classes, group discussions, dramatization, essays, reading lists, etc.
- (2) We have taught, or allowed to go unchallenged, the common idea that life is in two areas secular and spiritual. We have not corrected the long accepted idea that our personality and possessions do not stand in the same relationship to Christ. When one gives himself to God, his possessions, little or much, must go with him.
- (3) We have failed to teach giving primarily as worship rather than as a matter of paying bills. Giving is to God and the institution of giving is God's divine plan to help make people like Himself. We have allowed paying of bills, paying apportionment, paying per capita to overshadow giving as worship. We have not lifted our giving to a stewardship basis.
- (4) We have not dignified the Department of Finance in our churches. It has always been compelled to have an inferiority complex. It has been an unwanted child. The finance work has had to hide its face from our congregations.
- (5) Frequently our church budgets have not been made democratically and have been worded in cold, secular terms instead of in warm, churchly language. Many departments and interested activities in the churches do not feel that they have any say in the budget making. The language used is often commercial instead of spiritual.
- (6) Too often we have conducted the E. M. C. primarily as a method to raise a budget rather than to develop the spiritual life of the givers. We have sought for substitutes rather than find the spiritual content of this finest agency. It takes thorough preparation, but is worth over and over. There is nothing like it when rightly prepared.

CONVENTION NOTICE.

The next session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will be held with the Burlington Christian Church, Burlington, N. C. The date is April 28th-May 1st. The request was made that the Burlington Church consider the possibility of entertaining the next session of the Convention, and the good people of Burlington most graciously decided to undertake it, which means that the Convention will be taken care of in the best possible way.

Dr. I. W. Johnson, Rev. F. C. Lester, Dr. J. H. Lightbourne and Dr. L. E. Smith have been asked to serve with the President of the Convention as a Committee on Program. If there are those who have suggestions relative to the program, any member of the Committee will be glad to receive them.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

BELIEFS—AND PEOPLE.(Editorial Correspondence)*

Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla.,
February 15, 1936.

What a week of varied interests, peoples and professions one encounters, and enjoys, in places where, like this, the cross currents of population and ideas are swift and incessant. Comes first, at the early dawn, of this past week, Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, Boston, Mass., world-traveler, one of the Secretaries of our American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. He dropped in on us to shake hands, to have a game of golf in Florida sunshine, to talk to Rollins College students and give a stereopticon lecture Sunday night on Russia. He had a full house in our spacious Winter Park Congregational Church, and his pictures, with his own camera, taken in Russia, and his report from his recent visit, with his brother, Dr. Sherwood Eddy, were exceedingly vivid, realistic and thrilling. Russia, declares Dr. Eddy, is moving forward in a striking and hazardous economic and social adventure. For years, decades, centuries, the Russians were ground into the very dust of peasantry and poverty, and their plight was pitiful indeed. In their ignorance, oppression, and squalor, in a land of infinite resources, they arose in might and madness, and with one fell swoop, murdered their oppressors—and themselves took a hand in government. And now no individual in Russia owns land, house, store, farm or factory in his own right. The State owns it all, gives all employment, feeds, clothes and houses all; doctors and nurses all who get sick—and carries on. Some experiment; some task!

And with the destruction of higher-up authority in State went also the destruction of all "higher-up" authority in religion. Russia is godless, one hundred per cent Atheistic—and now constitutes the greatest challenge to Christianity that our century, or any other century, has confronted. Russia's belief in the supernatural, in any power higher than man, in a God who created and rules, is gone.

Comes then into our colony of sojourners for a time here are two "blue-stocking" Presbyterians of Wichita, Kansas. The man is a merchant and is trying to pull together his shattered nerves from the incessant strain of big business. The wife prefers her Ladies' Auxiliary and Church Guild to bridge clubs, and social teas: but they can't understand why the church service has become so cold, and its general atmosphere so frigid and unattractive. They were paying their pastor $10,000.00 a year, and he was eloquent enough, his scholarship and versatility beyond question. So when he got a call to a twelve-thousand-dollars-a-year salary, he accepted and left them. But their church is not growing; the services don't seem to grip and hold, and few members are received on confession of faith. What is the matter with that church?

And then I fall into conversation with a layman of several winters coming here. He is a modest man, retiring in attitude and habits—but little by little I learn he is a prince in Israel and has been a power for God and good in his day. He is nearing 80 now and though retired from active business he is still very much concerned for the church and the salvation of souls. He is an ardent Congregationalist, was formerly on our American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions—and in those active days practiced tithing in an inverted way, namely, gave nine-tenths of his income to the Church and missions and only kept one-tenth for himself and family. He supported out of his earnings a whole station of evangelists in China whose one business was evangelism, bearing witness of Jesus Christ and His power to redeem. A few years ago the converts in China, won to Christ by this man's labor, out of gratitude to him signed their names on a great scroll and sent it to him—a scroll which when unfolded, well covered the wall of a whole living room. But you would never have learned this from the man himself, his modesty and humility would not allow. A member of the Board came along and told me or I would have never known. This man tells me in his modest way that the trouble with the Church today is its coldness, its spiritual impotences, its failure to grow lies in the fact that we church members are not personal witnesses for Christ. He calls my attention to the fact that of our more than 6,000 Congregational-Christian churches, 2,000 of them did not add a single member last year on confession of faith. Think of it—practically one-third of the Churches of a far-reaching fellowship not adding one member in a whole year. This, my modest friend declares, is due to the fact that we no longer hear personal testimony of the saving, redeeming power of our Lord. The joy of his life, and he believes the joy of any Christian's life, is in hearing individual, personal testimony to another individual who is unsaved that Jesus the Christ can, will and does save all who will accept Him and believe in Him as Saviour and Redeemer.

Another visitor here this week I was very happy to meet and greet and shake hands with was Dr. Ray Stannard Baker, to me better known and loved as "David Grayson." Here is a man who has become famous in many tongues and languages under two names. As official author of the Woodrow Wilson biography and several volumes of his State Papers, also once editor of American Magazine and Associate editor of McClure's, he won a prominent and permanent place in the minds of millions with his interpretation of men and measures in public life. And then, by accident, and as a side-line, he came into world prominence as "David Grayson," a name he assumed as writer of books on "Adventure"—in Contentment, Friendship—The Friendly Road and many others. He did not write those books for publication, certainly not the first one, with any thought of ever publishing such "notes, meditations and musings, and experiences put down on paper for his own pleasure and pastime." Well, his publishers begged him into allowing them to print—and here, I think he excels and has made a contribution to real life, letters and literature that will live even when his more serious attempts on Statecraft and politics have been forgotten. I found this famous man a very modest, unassuming, kindly person, and one that loves people, and loves to talk, as well as write, about the commonplace—and in doing so makes the common most uncommonly interesting.

THE NEED FOR PROFITS.

Why is America the world's greatest nation? Because it guarantees to each individual the right to accumulate.

Americans, in their desire to accumulate, surpassed the rest of the world in developing the science of efficient business management. They were able to attract money from the rest of the world, for investment here, before there was enough in the United States to really count.

The one thing that made possible the attraction of that foreign money was profit. The profit naturally was reinvested to make more profit, and the cycle gave the United States, with only 7 per cent of the world's population, 58 per cent of the telephone and telegraph facilities, 76 per cent of the automobiles, 44 per cent of the radios, and so on and on.

Let S. M. Bayard Colgate, president of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, tell the story as he knows it:

"My great-great-grandfather, William Colgate, started in business as a poor boy. He had no capital but he had an idea that if you gave people better soap they would pay a small service charge on each transaction, which was your profit. He plowed most of his profits back into the business, because he knew his boss, the consumer, would expect something better each year at an even lower cost. If he had paid out all his profits in wages or taxes, or taken them all for himself, our business would never have reached its ranking position in the world today."

The company founded by William Colgate has been functioning 130 years. It employs 8,000 workers—gives 8,000 people a chance to accumulate for their old age and children. That sounds to us like a pretty logical reason for the service charge of profit.—I. P. S.

THE TAIL WAGGING THE DOG.

A recent flaring headline in the Daily Worker, official publication of the Communist Party in the United States, said:

"Sweep away the autocratic power of the U. S. Supreme Court. A call of the Communist Party U. S. A.

Little more need be said. The Communist Party stands for the overthrow of the American government by revolution. Intentionally or unintentionally, those who would undermine the highest tribunal and the Constitution are playing into the hands of the enemies of organized government.—I. P. S.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH CHINA.

By HUGH VERNON WHITE.

It is astonishing how much one does not know about China in spite of the reading of many books about the country. There are so many simple and superficial things that are of interest to one who lives here for a few weeks which either are not mentioned by people who write books about China or which are not noticed by the reader when they are mentioned. For example, the graves. That is a good place to begin about China, both because there are so many of them and also because they are of such importance. We have all heard that much land is kept out of production because of the space taken by the graves, but that hardly prepares the newcomer for the sight of literally hundreds of cone-shaped mounds scattered at random over the fields as far as the eye can reach. Once a year they are cleaned off, they say, and food left upon them. At this season, however, they are just jiles of dirt with grass and weeds growing on them.

The graves vary in kind. In Fukien there is a most interesting type, the horseshoe grave located on a hillside and built of stone or concrete to provide for the bodies of various members of the family. The architecture of these horseshoe burying places is sometimes quite elaborate, and we have seen more than once the flat platform in front of it used as a threshing and drying floor for the rice crop. Wealthy families develop the type to imposing proportions, as, for example, has been done by Admiral Yang on the slopes of Kusan near the city of Foochow.

In this connection, let me ask the gentle reader if he has ever heard of the "widow's arches" of Fukien. This is a three-part structure with a high center arch and a lower one on each side, the whole forming one unit of stone. It is a memorial to a widow who has shown rare devotion to her dead spouse either by dying of grief shortly after his demise or by rejecting every opportunity to re-marry, and living out the days of her widowhood to the end. One is thus reminded, even in China, that this is a man-made world! In Fukien, however, the men confess that the women are superior in physical strength and can do work that men cannot do. The other day I persuaded a village woman to put down the load she was carrying on her shoulders—a thick bamboo stick with a great basket of sweet potato rice at each end—and let me get under it. She said deprecatingly that it was only so many catties. It was all I wanted to stand up under, but she tripped easily down the rocky hillside with the balanced load.

That is the way most of the transportation is done in this province; burdens are carried on poles. Of course there is much water transportation, but on land the human back and legs move the food and fuel, the furniture and building materials and everything else. Just outside the window, as I write, excavation is going on for the foundation of the new Union Hospital in Foochow; the dirt is being taken away in baskets on the end of bamboo poles. (Incidentally from this excavation are coming pieces of pottery two thousand years old.) It is only two months ago that the first wheels were introduced into Diengloh, a city which, under the old empire, sent more scholars to court than any other in the province. Now there are a dozen rickshaws, several bicycles and even three ancient automobiles. Of course, in North China, the wheelbarrow, the camel, the cart and other means have been long used, and for many years wheels have borne modern vehicles in increasing number, one of the most common being the rickshaw, of which there are 48,000 in Peiping alone. In Shanghai one of the main labor problems is that of the rickshaw coolie, or, as the new spelling is, ricsha. The progressive municipal government has created a special board to protect the interests of these coolies. That board has unearthed a most interesting kind of racket by which people who never pulled a ricsha or even owned one can live in luxury off the earnings of those who do.

This part of the story has to be told first, before any account of the rapid development of railroads and highways, because one reading of the latter too easily gets the impression that China is already practically modernized. Well, she is not, but the progress of the past few years is striking. The main railroads of China are efficiently managed, rolling stock is good and passenger trains run on time. We have ridden on second and third-class coaches and found them fairly clean and comfortable. Even second-class sleeping-car accommodations are acceptable for one-night trips. And for a touch of oriental courtesy the porter presents you with a cup of tea when you come aboard and when you get up in the morning. Chinese do not let anything prevent them from drinking tea, or offering it to others! There is an increasing amount of bus travel as better roads are built, but the American must not think of China in terms of level highways and the luxurious coaches that whisk one from New York to Los Angeles. The rigors of travel are not removed by the introduction of Ford and Chevrolet buses. As for water transportation, with all the thousands of sampans, houseboats, sailboats, junks and steamers plying the rivers and the coasts of China, only a faint beginning has been made of modern convenience in water travel. But one of the most interesting sights that we have seen is the river traffic on the Min below and in the city of Foochow. A fleet of sailing vessels with patched canvas or cocoa fiber stils drifting up the river with the tide is a picture that makes one long for some way of preserving and passing on its beauty.

The seriousness with which the China of today is undertaking the vast enterprise of industrial and commercial development becomes apparent when one looks into the universities and colleges. Both government and missionary colleges are laying great emphasis upon economics, engineering and the sciences. The technical training of thousands of Chinese students must come before plans already projected can be carried out, and the youth of the land are throwing themselves into this training with enthusiasm. Not even politics is drawing their minds away from this basic preparation for the big tasks that beckon them.

Nevertheless, politics looms large in the mind of the Chinese today. Government office has always been the goal of the educated and ambitious and it is likely to remain so for a long time to come. For even under the Republic, government remains to a large extent the initiator of progress and exercises a paternalistic control of the affairs of the nation. Private initiative there is, but the big things that are to be done are both too big and too hazardous to be undertaken by anyone but the government. And then, there is authority needed to do many of the things that are to be done and only government has the authority. There is, of course, no popular government in China. It is representative in a sense, that is, the provincial governments are represented in the central government, but those representatives are not chosen by popular vote, and under present conditions could not be. There is a governing class which, in various ways, sense the feeling of the influential among the population, but which have no constitutional mandate to carry out the will of the people—if, indeed, the people were conscious of having any will with regard to the affairs of the nation.

If one finds in any area, as we found in and around Diengloh, especially fine public improvements, it is not due to the increased civic pride and energy of the people, but to the fact that an intelligent, progressive magistrate is in charge. In this case, as in many others, the magistrate is a returned student. Even so, he can go only so fast. There are certain customs of the people that he cannot ignore even in the interest of public economy and efficiency. But here is a useful career for the student who majors in economics and political science and who has a really patriotic desire to serve his country. The character and energy of the individual official will be, for a long time, the measure of progress of the country.

But these promising efforts of China to create a new political unity and to train men for the material development of the country are now under the shadow of a very discouraging form of foreign aggression. The Japanese military control of the country pushes down from the North and gives protection to encroachment upon the civic, economic and moral life of the nation. This can be seen first in the demand made by the Japanese in large areas of North China that officials whom they consider objectionable be removed and others that they like put in their places. This is a corruption of the political integrity of China. Second is the smuggling of silver out of China and the smuggling in of rayon and other Japanese products. We have seen this going on before our eyes, especially the carrying out of silver on a Japanese boat. This is a serious threat to the financial and economic life of the nation. The recent move of the Chinese government in withdrawing silver from circulation seems to have helped the silver situation, but still, under the protection of extraterritoriality and the Japanese military, the smuggling in of Japanese goods goes merrily on. And third is the traffic in opium. Koreans (Japanese subjects) and Japanese in North China, Formosans (Japanese subjects) and Japanese further south sell opium openly and defy the Chinese police to do anything about it. Miss Muriel Lester's open letter to the Japanese people recently has told of this shameful traffic in detail. This is a morally and socially demoralizing attack upon the Chinese people themselves.

Kagawa has said truly that there is a "heaven America" and a "hell America." There is also a "heaven Japan" and a "hell Japan" that makes itself unpleasantly conspicuous. In this peculiarly demoralizing assault upon China the Japanese do not appear to be very wise or subtle to an impartial observer. To the Japanese public the Japanese military is represented in the role of the policeman in China, keeping order there (although they continually create disorder), and as the keeper of the peace of the Far East. A distinguished liberal statesman in Japan assured me that all Japan wanted was "peace, order and prosperity" in China. As a matter of fact she is trying to compel China to grant to her political, economic and financial dominance and then to be happy and grateful about it. Any failure of the Chinese government or people to cooperate in this program is hotly branded as "insincerity" on their part. To Chinese and foreigners the constant use by the Japanese of this term "sincerity" has come to be a joke, albeit a rather grim and unsavory one.

In the face of this "national crisis" what is China doing? The Central government seems to be playing a desperate game of diplomacy, delay and preparation. China has been the prey of foreign powers for so long and is still suffering from such invasions of her sovereignty (as, e. g., extraterritoriality), that she has grown accustomed to carrying on under disabilities that would mean utter discouragement for most countries. But there is evidence that a new strength is coming. For one thing, the nation is more unified

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Church is a secure institution. It was founded upon a rock. Christianity rests its case and risks its future upon the sure promises of Jesus Christ. But church members and professing Christians may drift from the fundamentals of their faith and lose their spiritual inheritance. It is of vital importance that every follower of Jesus Christ shall hold and maintain the "faith once delivered to the saints." The forms of faith may change, but the essentials are eternal and abiding.

In the prayer of Jesus, as recorded in John 17: 15, these striking words are found: "I pray not that thou shouldst take them (disciples) out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil." Evidently Jesus did not plan to separate the church from the daily contacts with the world, but to endue His followers with a power which should be able to keep them from evil. That is the glory of the Christian religion, and it is a prophecy of personal triumph. Ardent and enthusiastic reformers go beyond the vision of Jesus when they dream of making the world a better and a safer place in which one may live. Jesus made no such claim for His Gospel. The converts to the Christian faith and Way of Life are made new creatures in Christ Jesus. To that extent they make a contribution to a better and a safer world. But it is claiming too much for the Gospel and the church when one demands that the regenerating and uplifting power of the Cross shall reform those who reject its teaching and spurn its saving grace. Jesus did not promise any help to an unbelieving world. His promises are only to those who believe.

Political reformers and social dreamers are besieging the church, today, to enlist in many movements, looking to industrial, racial, social and moral uplift. Some of these appeals may be worthy of study and serious consideration. But, in the main, they do not approach the problems of our social and moral needs from the viewpoint of Jesus and His Gospel. He went into the temple and cleansed it by driving out the money-changers and closing up the markets. He made no effort to reform these men; but He sought to reform the inner sanctuary of His Father's House. He delivered to the men a Gospel of regeneration and this indicated something more fundamental than reform. Quitting one's meanness is only a beginning. Closing up a den of vice is no promise of social regeneration. The den of vice should be closed, but that is only a small beginning. As a matter of fact, Jesus proposed to give the people, who found new life in Him, a source of spiritual power adequate to keep them true and faithful in the presence of the worst forms of evil.

Therefore, the church of the living God is called to personal examination and individual consecration. The evils of the world may turn their most deadly guns upon the Church in vicious attacks upon the Bible, the ministry and the tenets of all Christian doctrine. But these are only smoke-screens and mimic battles compared with the dangers lurking within the Church. The world has many attractive approaches to the youth of our land. Older people are spell-bound by the eloquence of unbelievers and the charm of glittering ways of self-indulgence. But these things, as charming as they may be, and as deadly as they are, in the end, do not constitute the gravest danger of the Church. Herein is the danger and the peril: the Church looks on the outward appearance, while "God looketh upon the heart"; and the Church fails to realize the importance of keeping the heart right with God. Jesus wants His Church, and the believers who follow Him, to be strong enough to live in the midst of evil and not become tainted by its foul breath and poisoned by its deadly influence.

The work of reform—of social regeneration—must begin in the personal life of believers in Jesus Christ. The world cannot be reformed by any kind of social and political program—other than the regeneration of its life. That can come only through the Gospel of the Son of God. And that can come when the Church sets its own house in order and embodies the teachings of Jesus in its own life. Jesus came to save. Salvation is more than reformation.

ELON COLLEGE CAMPAIGN.

From different quarters inquiries concerning the proposed campaign for the College are coming. Interested individuals are anxious for certain facts concerning the College and the proposed universal effort in its behalf. A campaign for the College is not new. The church is used to such undertakings. The College had its beginning with the effort extending to the limits of the Convention for funds with which to provide equipment and current expenses. Elon, like other institutions of higher learning, has not been able to secure sufficient funds from tuition and student fees to meet current financial requirements. Additional funds, either from invested funds or generous friends, have always been required and will always be necessary, and different times campaigns have been conducted throughout the church either to liquidate debts, augment current funds, increase endowments or provide additional equipment. The proposed campaign is to be a united effort to secure sufficient funds to pay off all debts of the College, to provide an additional sum for current accounts and to pay the expenses of the campaign itself. The amount to be raised is $250,000 00, which will be ample to meet the needs of the College for at least three years. George W. Williams Company, of Lebanon, Pa., has been employed to conduct the campaign for us. The Williams Co. has been in the money-raising business for about thirty years. It has a most commendable record in this field. It has conducted more campaigns and raised more money for institutions of the size and type of Elon in the South than any other company in existence. It has a reputation of succeeding in such undertakings and of increasing the loyalty of contributors to the cause for which they make their contributions. The proposed campaign for Elon College will not be a long-drawn-out campaign. The campaign is to begin the latter part of March and is to be completed within twelve weeks. This means, of course, that cooperation will be desired by all who are interested. The plan of the Williams Company is to acquaint the constituency with the campaign, with the needs of the College, and then, in a systematic, businesslike way, put the appeal fairly and squarely to individual contributors. There is every reason to feel that the campaign will meet with complete success. There are three definite groups within which the organizations will be formed:

The first and largest group, of course, is the church—Congregational and Christian Churches in North Carolina and Virginia. Definite quotas will be assigned to each local church. These quotas will be arrived at by carefully considering the membership of the church, the amount paid pastor and the amount raised for benevolences by the church, and the different organizations within the church. The quotas will not be assessments, but will be in the form of suggestions that each local church may know approximately what its share is in this commendable and glorious undertaking. No church will be asked for more than it is able to contribute.

2nd.—The Alumni. Elon College has graduated more than 1,000 different individuals. An additional 9,000 have matriculated as students of Elon. The present addresses of many graduates and former students of Elon are unknown to the Alumni Association. However, we do know the present addresses of a large number. Where possible and practical, organizations will be formed as Alumni units. The details of approaching alumni, who are not members of the church, have not as yet been worked out. In all probability they will be approached individually where it is not possible to form an organization. Contributions by the alumni will be kept separate. Where they are members of the church, their contributions will count on the church's quotas, but duplicate records will be kept by the alumni.

3rd.—Friends of the College. Elon College has a large group of friends, many of whom are neither members of the church nor of the Alumni Association, but they do have an abiding interest in Elon College and have always supported the institution. In an effort to put the College on a sure foundation the number of her friends will be greatly increased. The Administration is greatly encouraged by the number of inquiries that are being made, the evident interest that is being manifested in the campaign and the increasing optimism that prevails in general.

"G" MAN AT WINCHESTER.

Inspector W. H. Drane Lester of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, U. S. Department of Justice, made a most interesting talk to a large audience at the Congregational-Christian Church on Sunday evening, February 9th. This was the second service in the series "Chats Around the Fireside," this particular service being called "Chats Around the Fireside With A 'G' Man."

The front of the church was arranged to represent the living room of a home, with the pastor, Rev. Ivan R. Smith and his wife acting as host and hostess. Guests who called at the home were Mrs. R. E. Griffith, Mr. Robert J. McNally, Jr., and Inspector W. H. Drane Lester. The following questions were asked Inspector Lester by the Smiths and their guests:

1. Inspector Lester, I wonder if you could outline the general work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and tell us how you select and train your "G" Man.
2. Perhaps you would be willing to talk a little while about fingerprints and give us one or two interesting fingerprint cases.
3. I understand that the Federal Bureau of Investigation compiles crime statistics and I would like to have you say something about juvenile crime in this country.
4. I wonder if you could tell us something about the Bureau's criminological laboratory activities and possibly mention one or two interesting cases it has helped to solve?

Inspector Lester gave most interesting and informative answers to these questions. In answering question No. 3, he stated that the danger age for boys and girls seemed to be the age of nineteen, as a large percentage of criminals in the last few years had been nineteen years of age. He stated that his Bureau considered it of vital

By M. L. PATRICK, Secretary,
Elon College Alumni Association,
High Point, N. C.

The mid-year meeting of the Alumni Association held last Saturday at Elon was generally acclaimed by the good attendance the best ever called together. Not only was there a goodly number present, but those there entered into the general business and discussion sessions with enthusiasm.

The general plans and arrangements for the coming financial campaign for Elon were heard with interest. Dr. L. E. Smith reported that the debt of the college has been reduced over a half million dollars, through the plans consummated for the liquidation program. Elon faces a wonderful opportunity to throw off its weight of debts and emerge one of the leading colleges of the South, and the alumni have every right to be expectant, to be enthusiastic over the prospects.

Other speakers included D. R. Fonville, of Burlington, who spoke on the part alumni should play in financing their Alma Mater, and he presented that matter in one of the most interesting and convincing styles it has been the fortune of your secretary to hear. I don't know how his address will read, but to hear Mr. Fonville deliver it was a joy supreme.

* * *

Rev. W. T. Scott led a discussion on the part the alumni should take in nominating alumni-members to the Board of Trustees of Elon College. Miss Margaret Rowland, of Greensboro, outlined general plans for Alumni day at the coming commencement. Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Duke University, was nominated for speaker for the morning session at commencement. W. G. (Bill) Stoner, of Greensboro, also spoke relative to financing the campaign.

There were several others who spoke briefly. One of these was W. L. Kinney, Class of 1916, of Winston-Salem. There is a man who has his Alma Mater at heart.

* * *

If the managing editor will allow me space next time, I shall run a list of those alumnae and alumni who have sent in their membership fees. Within forty-eight hours after I mailed the letter, the postman handed me an even dozen letters containing exactly $13, and was that unlucky? Since then several have come in. By Saturday the drive for a minimum of 500 had run up to fifty. I'm serving notice now, on the strength of the good showing, that we want a thousand members. It can be done, and I confidently expect it to go there.

* * *

A rose by another name might smell as sweet, but I wonder whether a man by the name of Smith with any other cognomen would be as handsome in the mind of another man with the same name? R. O. Smith, Class of '22, stopped me on the street the other day, button-holed me and descanted at large about our college president. Said he, "That man looks like a United States senator, a million dollars." Before he had said much, however, I gathered that he marveled that another Smith could be as handsome.

* * *

Of course, I was not unaware of this man Smith, this ex-plowboy from Georgia. The next time I was in his presence I observed more closely and while I agree heartily, I was somewhat saddened by the sprinkle of grey around his temples. Four and a half years ago no microscopic examination would show any of those signs of wear and tear. They are beginning to be noticeable now, and anyone at all acquainted with the heroic and untiring efforts he is putting forth to restore Elon will have no trouble understanding why.

THE FACE STEADFASTLY SET.

As Easter has approached each year we have found one text ever coming into our mind: "And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem." Luke 9:51. We should set our faces with his and sharing his devotion, his courage and his singleness of purpose, go on with him in service to arrive at the victory which came to him after he endured the Passion of the Holy Week.

Looking over the programs which have been handed to the church with suggestions for the pre-Easter meditations we see in every suggested theme Christ facing life. The Federal Council Program of Evangelism invites us to study Jesus facing persons, going to the homes of the people, to youth, to individuals, to laymen, to crowds and giving to all his best and drawing the best from each. We must go to men and meet them face to face, in friendship, in desire to serve them, with confidence that what we have in him is what they need for their lives, if we would give them any help in their personal and social difficulties. We must steadfastly face men with him.

The list of themes presented by the Committee on Evangelism of the Maryland Conference shows us that Christ faced the tough situations in life. He met and mastered ignorance, temptation, prejudice, indifference, discouragement, unpopularity and death. He was tested in all points like as we are and is able to succor us in the heavy tests of duty. He faced the nameless multitudes who were loaded with the kind of common difficulties that are too ordinary to name. The helpless, the outcast, the uncontrolled and the enslaved, the unseeing and all that throng who are engulfed in the mass of human woe, misfortune and social sin. However enmeshed in weakness and wickedness he found them he gave to each the needed strength. There was in him a sense of obligation. The phrase, "I must," was ever on his lips as he felt himself driven by a divine imperative. In his incarnation God enslaved himself and was obedient unto death. He had steadfastly set his face to a given path as though his feet were chained to the way.

Seeing him set in the path of duty let us set our faces to learn of him and set our feet in the way he went. Facing life with him we may find the way to victory through him.

Let us steadfastly face our tasks. The pre-Easter evangelism ought to be a time when every church should face its responsibility for every person who should be won to Christ through the ministry of that church. There should be in every church a survey of its field, a counting of those in the fold to see if there are only ninety-and-nine or less when there should be an hundred. The shepherd who goes to sleep without counting the sheep is not following the master shepherd in studying his flock. This is a time when we should go out to seek and save the lost even as our Saviour who came to give his life a ransom for many.

The loveliness of the Easter worship ought to make every church most zealous that the preaching and teaching of these weeks should give the largest testimony to the truth of Christ and that in every service of the temple of our Lord the beauty of holiness be truly revealed. This will not be easy, nor will it come without thought and labor, but it will be a shame if we enjoy all the beauty of springtime and render to the giver of all good gifts only that which is the poor fruit of carelessness and indolence.

The call of those who have not heard of the risen Christ will come with renewed insistence with the opportunity of Easter offerings. As he went to Jerusalem to give his life so ought we in following him there give our substance. No great gifts will come to the church on this day unless the leaders of the church lay a pressure upon the hearts of the people to give as it has been given to them. We have not yet sacrificed unto blood as he did and an Easter gift that is less than a sacrifice seems too cheap to fit the sacred season.

We face Easter with its tasks, its experiences, its sense of triumph. Shall we steadfastly set our faces with him to move on toward the days which have become to the church and the world The Holy Week? Can we hope to know him and the power of his resurrection unless we have a fellowship in his suffering, in his service and in his sacrifice?

Lent will be upon us in another week. Let us join with the churches of Christendom, with the increasing number of Christians who keep holy days, and enter these weeks that lie before Easter with steadfastness of faith, with devotion to duty, with a passion for souls, with constant prayer so that we may experience the blessed resurgence of hope which is the Easter gift of Christ. Dare we expect that we, without walking in the path in which he set his face and sharing in his service and sacrifice, may find the mystic joy and happy harvest which it is his hope to give unto us and to all who are steadfast in his way?—Editorial in M. P.-Recorder.

REPLY TRAGIC.

When the mayor of Peiping, North China, resigned he was asked to give his reasons. Succinctly His Honor replied: "The less said, the better." But rumor has it that he was forced out of office because he tried to suppress the awful traffic in drugs for which Miss Muriel Lester, England's great Christian social leader, and Dr. Sherwood Eddy, tell us Japan is largely responsible. From many sections come stories of demoralization following this introduction of drugs. One country Chinese Christian when approached as a possible "agent" was urged to "cash in quickly," the main idea seeming to be that things were rapidly going to the dogs anyway and so why not get your share while the getting was good?

JOY EXPERIENCED IN DIFFICULT CHRISTIAN WORK.

The Story of a Chinese Christian Worker Who Finds that Attacks by Bandits and Financial Reverses Have Their Rewards.

Recently when on furlough in the United States, at the close of an address to a large gathering of young people a young man came up and exclaimed: "You must get a lot of 'kick' out of your work over there in Manchuria!" If by 'kick' he meant joy and interest, then he was right. I had been telling of some experiences we have with bandits, cold, inconveniences of travel, difficulty of sleeping on hot brick beds, etc., etc. This kind of life probably appealed to some of the young people and it does have a certain amount of fascination for a while, but the novelty soon wears off. But if variety is the spice of life, and if one can maintain a real sense of humor, one can get along in this part of the world.

Those Chinese who work as evangelists and colporters in much of China and here in Manchuria must be willing to take things much as they come without complaint. They must have a lot of faith in God, and also faith in conditions as working for the good of those who love Him. I am thinking now especially of a splendid Chinese Christian man, Mr. Tang Teh-Yuen, who worked as colporter for the British and Foreign Bible Society under the writer's direction, and is now serving as an evangelist. This man was a merchant, but after he became a Christian he wanted to do something for the Lord and for the saving of his people, so we suggested that he become a colporter.

On one of his first trips he was shot in the thigh by a bunch of bandits who attacked an old auto-bus on the plains north of Harbin. When we saw him after the accident his first remark was: "I praise the Lord that no bones were broken, that I was able to make my way to the nearest village and did not freeze or bleed to death." He also rejoiced that the bullet, which is still in his leg, gives him no trouble. On another occasion he was shot again and this time the bullet went thru his wrist and clear of the two bones, not even cutting a leader. While with him on a preaching trip we were impressed with his fine spirit and humility. While preaching he expressed his unworthiness, thus having been wounded twice yet no bones broken, as when his Lord suffered for him.

This man is one of our choicest Christians. He was supposed to give his full time to selling scriptures, but he had one failing (if a failing); he seemed more interested in preaching and exhorting than in selling scriptures. When explaining the merits of his Gospels he became so interested in their message that he frequently preached a sermon before the people were given a chance to make a purchase. Both witness-bearing and sales of the scriptures go hand-in-hand. He did not fail to get the message either into the hearts, or into the hands, of those to whom he was speaking. Being filled with the Holy Spirit, he witnesses with power and is held in high esteem by all who know him. He has now been made a full-fledged evangelist and is giving his full time to preaching.

With a smile and with rejoicing he was telling us recently of an experience in his life which verified to him the truth of the Bible that "All things work together for good to those who love God." Until two years ago he possessed almost one hundred thousand Chinese dollars. The interest on this brought in a neat little sum to supplement the small amount received as a colporter. Realizing that there was no great need of his earning anything for the family the oldest son of Mr. Tang—the surname comes first in China—lived an idle life. It was impossible for the father to get him interested in his studies in school or in learning a trade. But when the world depression came on, the family lost the thousand dollars. The son realized that he would have to get busy and help support the family and the fine little Christian woman whom he was soon to take as his wife. He accordingly buckled down to work in school, renewed his interest in the work of the Church and developed in a wonderful way. The son has since graduated from school and is now teaching. He has developed into a dutiful son, is a faithful husband and a proud father. His father is consoled to his financial loss—a great one for the average person in this part of the world—for, he says, it has meant the saving of his son and the bringing of more joy and happiness to the family than money could have ever done.

A COUNTRY DOCTOR'S WIFE.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

There are no nervous breakdowns in Merzifon, Turkey—at least none caused from honking autos, roar of traffic and whirl of humanity, so declares Mrs. Charles E. Clark, wife of medical missionary, Dr. Charles E. Clark in Merzifon.

"No rush to catch the daily train," writes Mrs. Clark. "Autos? Yes, but not so many that your life is menaced and not enough to frighten the nightingales away from our garden. There is work for a doctor here that meets a great human need without too much competition for his clientele is made up of poor village folks who often travel many weary miles for medical care.

"As I compare our lives out here with what they would have been had we settled down as a doctor's family at home, I do not regret the long step we made from Michigan to Turkey," says Mrs. Clark who was born in Michigan. "We are convinced that if all the folks in America could come to Turkey and get acquainted with our neighbors, they would love them as they do their neighbors at home in the States, and it would help in the great cause of world friendship."

As for Turkey, that progressive little Republic under the leadership of Kamal Ataturk (formerly known as Mustapha Kemal Pasha) has forged ahead in a manner bordering on the miraculous. "We have watched the changes in this country as it has passed from the autocratic rule of the Sultans to the democracy of the present day," Mrs. Clark says. "We have seen it grow from a land with practically no real schools to one with an ideal similar to that of our own country of an education for every boy and girl. The fulfilment of that ideal takes time, but every year we see great strides.

"Two years ago, at the time of the ten-year anniversary of the Republic, you probably read of the many changes which have taken place within that time; of the building of railroads as a network across the country in place of the single railroad from Constantinople, (Istanbul) to Angore (Ankara) when we came new to the country; of the change in dress of the people that they might not feel themselves different from the rest of the world; of the new value given to womanhood; in fact, the change of Turkey from the sick man of Europe, to a member of other civilized nations."

One of the most dramatic of the public works now under way in Turkey is the draining of the marshes at the outlet of the Meander River, called "Execution Lake." During the past 200 years 11 towns and villages in that region have been wiped out by tropical malaria directly traceable to this infected area. Today the long necks of 17 great excavating machines have risen above the marshland and in a few months Execution Lake will be called "Health Plain" and become a rich and populated region.

THEY SWING A "WICKED WORD."

When it comes to a debate you must watch your step if you come up against the boys at Adams College, Adams, South Africa. Recently they walked off with the judge's decision and all the laurels when they met a team of white students from Natal University College. These European boys had never before come in contact with educated "natives." They had known their black contemporaries as "house boys." One of the native teachers at Adams, holding a B. A., told them that he used to sell white students peanuts when he was a boy! "I don't think," adds Miss Lavinia Scott, "that they will forget quickly again that 'Jim' in their kitchens may be using his small wares to put a young brother through school."

NEESIMA SAINTED.

The statue of Joseph Hardy Neesima, founder of Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan, today is standing in Washington Cathedral, Washington, D. C. In his hands he holds a Bible. He is one of those symbolic figures of the Ter Sanctus Reredos and among his silent companions are St. Timothy, St. Basil, St. Alban, John Crysotom, Reginald Heber, and Bishop Whipple. And another Japanese "saint," Toyohiko Kagawa, in America today, sings: "I fain would be a sculptor of the soul. . . Yet the sculptor cannot carve . . . an image nobler than he sees within his own stout soul. . . There is a Guide for me, who in His living flesh, has given me the perfect image that I seek of God!"

You say, my son, it can't be done?
Your statement isn't true.
You mean, my son, it can be done,
But can't be done by you. —Anon.

A Story for the Children

A PRESENT FOR SOLOMON.

By ETTA W. SCHLINCHTER.

"Mother, mother! I think Solomon ought to be killed." Bennie was greatly excited and so was Minnie Lou.

"Mother," she called, with tears running down her cheeks, "is Solomon going to be killed?"

"Solomon!" exclaimed mother. "Our wise old cat! I should think not. Who would ever dream of killing Solomon?"

"Well, mother," said Bennie, "my robins are building a nest in the cherry tree, and that old cat just sits underneath and watches them."

"Solomon won't catch the robins, Bennie. He's too lazy to go after them, and they are too smart to let themselves be caught, anyhow."

"Yes, but, mother, the mother bird is going to lay her eggs in the nest, and pretty soon there'll be little birds, and they won't be too smart for Solomon. I know he'll go right up that tree and get them."

"Solomon is my kitty," said Minnie Lou, "and I don't want him killed."

"Solomon is quite safe, dearest," said mother, "but we must protect the robins, too. Let's talk it over with daddy when he comes home at noon."

"Kill Solomon!" said daddy, when the children told him all about it. "Our nice old tabby cat! I should think not. We couldn't get along without Solomon." And daddy stooped down to stroke Solomon's back, for he had come to meet daddy, too. "But, see here, you old rascal, you understand you're to let the robins alone."

"Solomon looked very wise, but he didn't promise not to touch the robins."

That evening when daddy came home he was carrying a parcel.

"Oh, Daddy," cried the children, "a present?"

"Yes," said daddy, "a present for Solomon."

He unwrapped the package and what do you suppose Solomon's present was? A sheet of very sticky fly-paper!

"Goodness!" said mother, "do you suppose we are going to have so many flies this summer that we'll need that nasty paper around?"

"That's Solomon's present," laughed Bennie. "But I don't see what he's going to do with it."

Daddy cut the paper lengthwise through the middle. Sticky fly-paper is really two sheets stuck together. Daddy pulled the strips apart so there were four of them, which he fastened together in a long strip.

Then he took some very small tacks that would not hurt the cherry tree and fastened the fly-paper around the trunk just below the lowest bough, too high for anyone to run against, and three feet below the robin's nest.

"The tree has a very sticky belt on," laughed Minnie Lou, though she still could not see how it was a present for Solomon.

"You watch and you'll see," said daddy.

Solomon lay on the grass under the tree seeming to pay no attention to the birds. The children had a glimpse of the four pretty blue eggs. Then after a while, the little birds were hatched, and how busy the parents were kept feeding them! The children almost forgot the tree's sticky belt.

Then one morning, when the little birds were big enough to stretch their heads above the edge of the nest and twitter, Solomon looked up from his bed under the tree. He suddenly made up his mind to have a young robin. He started up the tree, and the children who had been watching at the upper window, ran screaming downstairs.

"Solomon! Solomon! Solomon's going to catch the baby robins."

And then what do you think they saw? Solomon ran right up the tree and put his front paw on the sticky fly-paper. He was greatly surprised and pulled it off. He sniffed at the paper to see what was the matter, then tried to jump across it, and his hind paws stuck.

"Miaou!" he cried, and his cry was quite angry. He ran down the tree and looked up at the baby robins. Then he started up again, and both his front paws stuck fast to the fly-paper.

This frightened him very much, so he jumped to the ground and began to wash his paws.

But they were so very sticky that it took him hours to get them clean. He would wash and wash them, then go to sleep, and wake up and wash them again.

Solomon was as wise as he should have been with such a name, so he did not forget his lesson.

The baby birds grew up and flew away. Solomon never tried again to climb the cherry tree.—The Congregationalists and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

MARY MARGARET LEARNS HOW TO HELP.

Mary Margaret sat on the front steps kicking her heels, a naughty frown on her sweet little face. She was very cross, and for no other reason than that she had to help her mother wash and dry the lunch dishes. Now, if there was one thing in the world that Mary Margaret disliked more than another it was to dry dishes, and since that happened to be one of the duties about the house that fell to her share, she frowned quite frequently.

Mary Margaret lived with her mother and father in a pretty white cottage in a town where her father was a professor in a college. She was "going on seven," and her mother thought it about time for her to begin to learn just how to keep house.

The sun shone brightly on the front steps. After awhile, Mary Margaret tired of kicking her heels; so she got up and slowly walked down over the lawn to a small tree at the side of the house. This was her own particular tree, and she spent many happy hours playing beneath it.

But now she did not feel like playing. She was still thinking about those dishes and feeling more hurt and upset every minute because she had to help.

As she sat there she noticed a number of ants running around in a pile of dirt.

"I wonder why they are doing that," thought Mary Margaret, as she watched them curiously. Then she saw what was the trouble. When she had crossed the lawn she stepped on an ant house, knocking the sand in all directions.

All the ants were helping to build that house again. They had left their own work, and were carrying sand to rebuild the house.

Mary Margaret was so interested in the ants that she was quite startled when several birds began to chatter on the other side of the tree. She looked around cautiously. There she saw a bird with a broken wing, trying to fly. The poor little thing could hardly raise itself from the ground, although several birds fluttered about, trying to help.

After Mary Margaret had watched them for some minutes she suddenly spoke out loud.

"Why, even the birds and the ants are helping one another. Oh, I am so sorry that I was cross to my mother when she wanted me to help this morning."

And as Mary Margaret ran across the lawn again she made up her mind that she could be as kind as birds and ants. Never again would she be naughty when her mother asked her to do anything for her.—Bertha Albayer in The Sunbeam.

CLERGY VOTE AGAINST NEW DEAL POLICIES.

The clergy are more opposed to the New Deal than the country at large according to the findings of a special Literary Digest poll of the nation's clergy of all denominations which has been conducted since the recent 10,000,000-ballot referendum of the magazine on the Administration's policies.

A total of 21,606 clergy returned voted ballots of which 70.22 per cent were tallied "no" and 29.78 per cent "yes" in answer to the question: "Do you now approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt 'New Deal' to date?"

The final returns of The Literary Digest main poll to the general voters, which was published five weeks ago, showed 62.66 per cent of the participants against the New Deal.

A poll on the same subject conducted among the clergy in the early summer of 1934 indicated that 55 per cent of the clergy were in favor of the Administration's policies then.

Only in three States, Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina, are the clergy shown voting in favor of the New Deal in the current tabulation which is published in this week's issue of The Literary Digest. These three States evidence approximately 3 to 2 majorities for Roosevelt's acts and policies.

The clergy of Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and Utah are recorded as disapproving the policies of Roosevelt in the present poll while in the recent nationwide poll the general voters in these States were shown supporting the New Deal substantially.

In forty-five States the tally of the clergy referendum indicates a majority opposed to the Administration's acts and policies with the vote almost even in Utah.

The anti-Administration majority from clergymen in New England is considerably less than it was in the recent main poll when the northeast section of the country balloted nearly 4 to 1 against the New Deal.

Maryland and Delaware show the heaviest clergy vote, of 4 to 1, against the New Deal.

The clergy in West Virginia, Washington, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Florida indicate approximate majorities of 3 to 1 against the New Deal while those in the other thirty-five States register less pronounced oppositions.

"Of the 21,606 who responded to the poll, 15,172 vote 'no' and 6,434 vote 'yes,'" the magazine states in its current issue.

"The negative percentage—70.22—is almost 8 per cent higher than that of the main poll. Only 29.78 per cent of the clergymen vote 'yes,' whereas in the 10,000,000-ballot poll the favorable percentage was 37.06.

"Another way of showing the results is to point out that more than seven clergymen out of ten are opposed to New Deal policies today.

"In The Literary Digest Poll of 1934, on the same subject, 13,513 churchmen approved the New Deal, while a minority of 11,346 opposed it.

"Analysis of the figures by States shows only Alabama, Mississippi, and South Carolina clergymen giving a majority for New Deal policies. In the 10,000,000-ballot poll twelve States are favorable."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training is scheduled for Monday afternoon, June 29th to Sunday noon, July 5, 1936. Please mark this date on your calendar and try to keep it free from other things that would hinder you from attending. Attention of pastors is particularly desired, for when they schedule revival meetings that overlap the summer school it makes it impossible for the pastors to attend Elon and difficult for young people to go.

Plans are in the making for courses that will interest ministers, superintendents, teachers, missionary workers, Youth Fellowship leaders, adult leaders, children's workers, young people, musicians, and vacation Bible school workers.

Suggestions concerning courses, teachers, methods of procedure, and anything connected with the school will be appreciated. Dr. Edwin C. Gillette of 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Florida, is the general chairman, and F. C. Lester, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, will act as dean. Other officials, courses and teachers will be announced later.

The cost for the entire week will be $10.00, but $1.00 can be saved by registering before June 15. Churches that are sending their young people, and young people who are expecting to attend should begin making plans now to be at Elon June 29th to July 5th.

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP SPRING RALLY.

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship it was decided to hold a spring rally at Suffolk Christian Church on the afternoon and evening of March 28, 1936. A fine program is being prepared and the young people and pastors of that conference will surely be eager to attend the session.

These young people decided last year to raise $250.00 for missions in churches that do not have a young people's missionary society. The superintendent of service, Miss Alice Yates of Suffolk, is busy at work on this project, and it is sincerely hoped that the young people in every church of the conference, where there is not a missionary society will make some contribution to this missionary project.

THE HUMAN SIDE OF BOARDS AND INSTITUTIONS.

To many of us the boards and institutions of our Church are formal and far away things. They seem to be distant, impersonal, cold. This has certainly been true in my experience until recently when I have had the opportunity to know many of them more intimately. Now they have become human, friendly, interesting.

For instance, a letter has just come to me from the president of Elon College saying that faculty salaries cannot be paid for February unless the churches send in money with which to pay. If Elon College is simply an institution far removed and impersonal, why should I be bothered about it? I am not. But when I think of Dr. Newman, the man who has taught at Elon since the founding of the college, the man who taught me the Bible, when I think of him not receiving his pay at the end of the month it becomes a personal matter. And I am interested.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions has interested me through the years because it is the oldest foreign mission board in this country. But, honestly, it has seemed very foreign to me. Since sitting in council with the Prudential Committee and hearing discussions on whether to use the money received from the sale of chapels in China for repairing other churches or for the registering of deeds, this mission board has become more intimate and personal. It is one thing to know that Dr. R. H. Potter of Hartford, Connecticut, is president of the Foreign Mission Board and quite another to know that he is the elderly man who wears socks over his pants legs to keep out the snow when he goes to the board meetings.

The more we know about our church boards and institutions the more human, personal, likable they become. After all, those who constitute the boards and institutions are our friends who are trying to share with us in doing a cooperative work which we could not do alone. They are very human, they have their personal problems, and they give themselves freely to the work of the Church.

OUR BROTHER'S KEEPER.

"Who is our brother, Created in the image of God?"
The children of each race reply,
"My brother, it is I."

"Where is our brother?"
We ask the Fatherly Spirit.
"Lo, He is here, there, everywhere,
From Him you can't repair."

"What hast thou done to him?"
Voices around the world ask us.
"Children, thou hast left him wandering Forlorn, Faithless, hopeless."

We, our brother's keeper,
May pour him the fuel of love
And watch the flickering life-light
Draw him from every height.

—Carl R. Key.

Call to Worship:

"O day of rest! How beautiful, how fair,
How welcome to the weary and the old.
Day of the Lord. And truce to earthly cares.
Day of the Lord, as all our days should be."

Hymn: "Safely Through Another Week."
Prayer.

Announcement of topic.—Scripture.

Hymn: "O Day of Rest and Gladness."

Suggested points for leader's introductory talk—

Sunday is the Lord's Day, a holy day, yet many have made of it a "holiday." Many people think of Sunday as a time to "catch up" on their work or their sleep. Sports, Sunday movies, picnics and excursions, late Saturday night dates, the lure of the highway, are all doing their part to close the door of opportunity for the church to reach thousands of people. Tonight we shall try to discover the proper use of Sunday.

Suggested points for short talks—

1. There are some very definite differences between Jewish Sabbath and the Christian Lord's Day. One is that the Jewish Sabbath came at the end of the week. The Christian Lord's Day is at the beginning of the week. The Jewish Sabbath was a day of rejoicing and thanksgiving for the blessings of the past six days. The Christian Lord's Day is indeed a day of worship and praise after the past six days of work—but Christ arose from the grave on the first day of the week, so it means that this day is a day of rejoicing and triumph in memory of Christ's victory over death. And, coming at the beginning of the week, it is a means of preparation for the coming week's work. When Sunday is rightly observed it will strengthen us for our coming tasks.

2. Luke 4:16 tells us that it was the custom of Jesus to go into the synagogue on the Sabbath. The synagogue was a place of instruction as well as worship—it was a place where God's Word was read and explained. We should follow the example of Jesus by going to church on Sunday and making a study of the will of God that we find revealed in His Word.

3. When Jesus was rebuked for healing on the Sabbath he taught men that doing good was a way to keep the Sabbath rather than to break it. Sunday is a day of rest and worship, but if this was the only use of Sunday it would be a selfish day. Jesus taught us that it was also a day to help those who were in need.

4. We live in a world that is made of speed and activity so we need Sunday more than any other generation. We need Sunday for a day of quiet, a day of meditation, a day with God. God has many things to teach us if we only have time to listen for His voice. Go out into the woods, or by a lake, or on a hill away from people and commune with God—He will speak to you in a wonderful way.

For Discussion—

1. Is it anybody's business what you do on Sunday? Suppose you are a leader in the Church, what kind of an example can you set?

2. Is it right to do anything you want to Sunday afternoon just so you go to Church in the morning and at night?

3. Why is Monday "blue Monday" to so many people?

4. If Jesus was living in the world today what do you think He would do on Sunday?

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

PEOPLE BEFORE PROPERTY.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 23, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon."
—Luke 16:13.

"People before property"—to the degree that we believe that we bear witness to the influence of Jesus. For when Jesus came "property before people" was the law of society. And more—"People were property." It was the common thing to hold slaves. And today, after nineteen hundred years of Christianity, the issue of the relation of property to people and people to property is one of the "hot spots" of our modern world. Today, as in Jesus' day, men are prone to put profits above persons, property before people, money before men, gain and gold before goodness and godliness. The ideals of Jesus find one of their boldest challenges at this very point. Today as never before, Christianity has come to grips with this pressing and perilous problem. Leaders in the church frankly recognize that unless the ideals and the spirit of Jesus can be applied to economic and industrial life, there is not much hope for the future. Unless the modern world can put people before property, nothing else will matter much.

The encouraging thing is not so much the actual accomplishments in the matter. Christianity has not nearly achieved its end. The encouraging thing is the fact that modern men are finally and actually recognizing the problem, and attempting to solve it. Our modern "property world" is gradually developing a conscience in this matter. Somehow or other the ideals of Jesus condemn and haunt its standards. Vested interests are becoming concerned. Uneasy lies the head today that puts property before people.

Russia; of course, believes that the way out is force. Communism not only denounces capitalism; it would exterminate it by force. But Christianity is much slower—but much more sure—because it depends upon moral persuasion, upon education, upon legislation, upon the development of a social conscience. But as the tiny rootlets of the young tree find a place in what seems to be a solid rock, and eventually, by the silent but irresistible force of the growing life within, burst the rock asunder, just so is Christianity silently but surely, breaking up the world order in which property is put before, or above, people. In the world that is in the making, the supreme worth of persons will be the determining principle of every human institution.

Today's lesson presents in a dramatic form the principle we have been discussing. Here was a man, possessed by evil spirits or devils as the record states. He was homeless—he lived in caves and dens in a wild section of the country. He was in bondage to forces over which he had no control. Naked, he roved about, and when one of his spells overtook him, he would cut himself and mutilate himself. When men attempted to bind him, seeing in him a menace, he would easily break the fetters and rush "into the wilderness." Luke has drawn the picture in lines that one cannot easily forget.

And then one day Jesus comes to this section. The man somehow recognized Jesus. There was in the presence of Jesus that which aroused all the devils within him, and there seemed to be legions of them. The record of that event is rather difficult to understand. It seems that Jesus gave the evil spirit permission to depart from the man and to go among some swine feeding nearby. It is possible that the frenzy of the man, a sudden "fit" frightened the swine, and as swine will do, they set out, running pell-mell. They ran down the steep incline, rushed over the cliff, and were drowned in the water of the lake. The poor man, released and relieved, in his right mind, came and sat at Jesus' feet. It was, or should have been a time of great rejoicing. Here was a man, reclaimed as it were from the dead. Let people rejoice and be glad.

But, alas, there were those in that day, as there are those in this day, who put a greater value on pigs than they put on persons. They put property above people. They besought Jesus to depart out of their coasts. It did not matter much what happened to a man in the community, but it did matter a great deal what happened to their pigs.

It is the old, old story of vested interests withstanding every effort to put people before profits. One would think that men would think more of saving manhood than they would of saving money. But let one look around him and see how modern the picture is. It is the picture of modern industry in many forms of application. It lies at the heart of the liquor traffic, legal or illegal. It stands in the way of disarmament—witness the activity of the munition makers against peace proposals, it is the breeding-place of modern wars, it lies at the roots of commercialized prostitution, alas, it seeps subtly into so many areas of life that everyone of us needs to be on his guard against the danger of putting property above people. The love of money is the root of all evil. It is also the main obstacle to the coming of the Kingdom in modern economic life.

about doing good, but have you noticed how he went about it? He did not wait for an opportunity, but he simply went forth into the highways and byways—into the streets and lanes of the cities—and the opportunities met him on the right hand and on the left. Speaking in a figure, we may say that opportunities seemed glad to meet him, for he met them and welcomed them as channels of blessings through which he could render helpful, uplifting service. Truly he lived "in a house by the side of the road," for he was a friend to man—to all men. He hated sin with a great and bitter hatred, but he loved sinners and proved it by the "old rugged cross."

Jesus Was Very Happy.

How very, very often do we find such expressions as, "It makes a man happier to give than to receive"? No man ever approached Jesus as a giver; thus measured by his own yardstick, we know he was happy. And then again: "Let not your heart be troubled." It is simply unthinkable that Jesus would exhort others to live and to be one way while he lived and was another way. But once more: "That my joy may be in you, and that your joy may be made full." To be sure, Jesus was at times "grieved in his spirit"—"My soul is exceedingly sorrowful"—but in the main he must have been a very happy man, for he had everything to make him happy. The happiness of his soul was fed by eternal fountains so deep and strong, so sparkling and pure, so divine and life-giving, that they could not be dimmed by the surface disturbances "of this present time." If a strong, clean, pure, beautiful, perfect life can make one happy, surely Jesus was absolutely happy. Now let us all join in that song and sing it as never before, "More about Jesus would I know." Sing it, folks, sing it!—By H. H. Adanson in Gospel Advocate.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"RUNNING THE RACE."

"Let us run with patience the race that is set before us."—Heb. 12:1.

Arthur Brisbane reminds us that the "International News Service sports department shows that out of about 1,800,000,000 human beings on earth only 11 are known that can run a mile at really high speed; of these not more than four would have any chance of beating an individual named Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas.

"You would think that the billion unknown, uncouneted among the so-called "backward races," many with native energy, free of civilization's handicaps, could easily be trained to beat the eleven fast ones, but it is improbable.

"Running on two legs one mile in a fraction over four minutes, eight seconds, is an achievement of brain and will power primarily. To make yourself run more than 20 feet in every second and keep that up for a mile is a mental process."

We understand that Paul had been a marathan runner. We gather from his teaching that it takes the same technique to be a winner in Christian experience as it does to be a winner in athletics. That technique is to subordinate everything to the objective. "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ." Paul persistently pursues his course that he may excel. He says, "I follow after if I may apprehend."

Paul trains. He says that he "resists unto blood" the things that hinder him. He disciplines his body. "I keep under and bring my body into subjection." He studies and keeps his mind on his training and his goal. "Let this mind be in you." "Endure—lest ye be weary and faint in your minds."

Paul takes Jesus as his objective. "Looking unto Jesus." In Him he found the completion of his faith. In Him he found the right concept of God. In Him he found the power to resist evil and practice religion. And in Him and in Him only was he able to pray and find his soul lifted up to God.

Prayer—Our Father, in all life's races, give us the faith, the spirit and the courage to subordinate everything else to the one achievement in Christ.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"OTHERWISE MINDED."

"If in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you."—Phil. 3:15.

"Actions speak louder than words," and the mind is a "give-away." "As he thinketh in his heart so is he." (Prov. 23:7.) One may be able to control his facial expressions to represent what the heart does not feel; yes, he may have his face "lifted" to look different from that by which he is known thereby hiding a criminal heart. But we are told that there is one thing no one has ever yet been able to control and that is his blood pressure. When one lies, his blood pressure goes up. Therefore, the "Lie Detector" applied to a witness registers the truth or the lie as the case may be.

To say that God will reveal wrong is but another way of saying "ye shall reap what ye sow," or "be sure your sins will find you out."

Prayer—Our Father help us to walk by the rules of faith this day and let us mind the things that be of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE HEALING WAY."

"And great multitudes followed him; and he healed them."—Matt. 19:2.

The way of the Lord is the most satisfying way that the world has ever known.

Though there are cases of the Lord's healing diseases in modern times it is not understood that He heals the disease of everyone who calls upon Him, for even in disease His will may be done. But according to the Scriptures (Ps. 103:1-5) there are iniquities forgiven; these are destructions from which we are to be delivered; there are "crowns of loving kindness and tender mercies" which are given us along the way; there are satisfactions that come out of good things; there is a renewing buoyant spirit which keeps up our courage and keeps us from fainting along the way. In the presence of all these, mere disease pales away, or at least is borne with a fortitude that is irresistible.

There is a happier thought still. Sin makes disease, and God is so related to the sinner that He not only forgives sin, but He also so deals with the results of sin that he removes every trace of it. Then—let us not think about this work of God in terms of our own personal ailments, but let us think about it in a bigger way. For instance, Florence Nightingale was the founder of modern nursing and we have come to see that the creation of nursing as a trained profession has contributed as much in healing diseases and saving lives as has the use of chloroform or antiseptic surgery.

Surely this is the work of God and it may be termed one way in which it is said, "God Marches On!"

Prayer—O Lord, our Father, preserve our lives from the many dangers along life's way that we may come into Thy presence at least well approved in His sight. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE RICH AND THE POOR IN SPIRIT."

"Blessed are the poor in spirit."—Matt. 5:3.

In saying "Blessed are the poor in spirit," Jesus is saying, "Blessed are the unworldly; blessed are they who, though in the world, are not of the world." The world says, get all you can and keep all you get. Jesus says blessed are they who in will and heart have nothing. He does not say to everyone, "Sell all that thou hast, and give to the poor." That is a perfection beyond the reach of the average man. But Christ does say to us all, "do not cling to your possessions as though they were your own by an inalienable right. The curse is upon not the rich but upon that trust in riches."

Therefore, we learn that we must be ready to resign our riches freely and cheerfully, if need be. We must be ready to use them in His service and for the good of our fellowmen. If you can do all this, you are poor in spirit, and the blessing is yours.

Prayer—O God, the Giver of all power, help us to embrace that poverty of spirit that is like our Saviour's, who spared not himself in all His wealth of heaven, but took upon himself the likeness of man, and lived like man that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish but have everlasting life.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"RICHES WE MAY EXPECT."

"The same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him."—Rom. 10:12.

God intends that His child shall be so rich in nature that he will burst with a wealth of kindliness and goodness in his conduct. Such an one finds himself undertaking to create in the things around him that which reflects and satisfies the inner man. To be rich within and without is indeed an infinite wealth.

When we would show visitors the glory of our country we have taken them, in our ignorant way, to the iron-clad ships of war, but when the Psalmist would show the majesty of God's Kingdom he takes us to the hills, the valleys, the cornfields and to righteous glory, and there he saith: "He openeth His hand, and satisfieth the desire of every living thing." Rich in well-being, rich in the honor of God's joys, rich in a friendly spirit, rich in the happiness which is the "essence of divine perfection," rich in love. In these things the tides of life ebb and flow with a rhythm of eternal joy.

Prayer—O Lord, we are adoringly thankful and joyous in Thy blessings. Make us luminous lives in those blessings that others may too walk in the way of the Lord and be happy.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"GOD'S ABSENCE."

"A man planted a vineyard . . . and let it out to husbandmen, and went into another country."—Mark 12:1-9.

That "man" was God; but can the omnipresent God ever be absent? Can God "go into another country?"

Indeed He can and does. It is, indeed, best for His creatures that they be left occasionally alone—alone, at least, so far as their consciousness of God's presence and aid are concerned, because that is the only way to make us strong and reliant.

When we learn to swim, the teacher pushes us into the water, and our terrified splashing becomes an efficient instructor. When we would learn a foreign language, we leave our native land and our books and plunge ourselves into a babel of unintelligible sounds. God will throw us, similarly, upon our own resources. Never fear but He will come to our rescue when we need Him.

Prayer—Our Father, though we cannot see Thee, we know Thou art close at hand. We do not hear Thee, but Thou art always ready with words for our heart. We bless Thee for Thy wise absences as for Thy loving presences.—Amen.

"THE WINEPRESS."

"And the angel cast his sickle into the earth, and gathereth the vintage of the earth, and cast it into the winepress . . . of the wrath of God."—Rev. 14:14-20.

In olden days men thought much about the wrath of God. Today we talk much about the love of God, and say little or nothing about His wrath.

True, God is love; but God is also hate. By so much as He loves goodness, He hates wickedness. By so much as He blesses the saints, He curses those who persecute them.

The thought of the divine wrath is a comforting thought. Anger is weak and absurd in a weak and absurd man, but anger in the Omnipotent is strong and strengthening. It is glorious to know that force and authority are behind us, but supremely glorious to know that the supreme power and authority are backing us up, ready to punish all our foes.

Prayer—Dear Lord, turn away Thy wrath from our sins. Dear Lord, give, undeserved as it is, Thy love. Through Jesus Christ.—Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

OUR CHILDREN OUR CHALLENGE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. . . . Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones."—Matt. 18:1-3, 10.

With his arm about the little fellow that stood by his side Jesus gave the charter members of his church a very direct command: "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones." I would like to talk to you about that today.

In the first place it is an ennobling picture, is it not? The friendship of teacher and taught had warmed into that beautiful stage of confidence wherein the disciples felt free to bring their profoundest questions to Jesus. They had learned that it would be great to be in the kingdom of heaven. They now have no doubt about it. They have walked with Jesus, and he has talked with them, until they know that to be within the kingdom of heaven will be one of life's greatest boons, the greatest. But who will be greatest in the kingdom of heaven? What will be the standards of measurement? Who will tower above the others? Their ideals are beginning to leap forward under the tutelage and life of Jesus. Do not blame them too harshly for their dreams. Jesus did not. He answered them. Patiently, and very understandingly, and fully he answered them.

He called a little child unto him, and placed him in the midst of them. What a beautiful picture that is. Jesus in perfect friendship with the little folks who ever found a place in his heart. He calls the little fellow to him. One wonders what words he used. What little bit of explanation he made to the child as he came forward. What, maybe, the child replied to him. And how the disciples must have looked on. Anyhow, Jesus picked his answer from life. He made it so Matthew would not have any trouble remembering it so as to write it down later in these memoirs, called the Gospel. There are some very interesting things about what Jesus said: He told them there were two things to do before one could even so much as get inside the kingdom of heaven: (1) Set their own minds in tune with the mind of God,—“change of mind,” so as to become like a heavenly mind should be, “be converted,” turned around and headed toward God, and goodness, and unselfishness; and (2) become as little children, that is with a child-like trust, and purity of faith. Then he looked at the little fellow in their midst, who had humbly obeyed his command to come, and had stood humbly in their midst while his elders talked about children, looking at him, his little, humble helper, and obedient servant, docile and ready to obey, he added a third thing, that (3) all may be greatest, whosoever shall humble himself as this little child had done, obey the divine voice as this little child had done, fill his place as this little fellow is filling his, the same shall be greatest. It is a paradox, yes, but there will be no quarrel over that in the kingdom of heaven!

It was a great sermon. A great answer to their question. It told how to get into the kingdom in the first place, and then how to be the most useful, and happy in that kingdom. It would seem that “greatest” for the sake of being “greatest” did not get, after much response from Jesus! It was not his way of looking at things! Usefulness, service to others, helpfulness, humility, docility, obedience brought happiness, or joy; and they were the things to be sought after.

We know he hit the nail on the head, do we not? We see it in our daily life all about us. We are still, in this city, reaching forward to an ideal of unselfish service, and thoughtfulness of others, lived out for fifty years in our midst, so that we are duly convinced that to be beloved in a magnanimous way one need only to serve humbly and obediently as the Spirit of God directs. Who is greatest? “Servant of all.” As one approaches that, one approaches greatness. In other words, as one draws near in loving service, unselfishly rendered to his fellowmen, he draws near to God. “And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me.”

And in the second place, it is not only an ennobling picture with an inspiring sermon, but we have here a very special command by the Founder of the Church. “Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones.” Make it a special care of yours that you despise not one of the little fellows! By this the past shall be tied to the future, and all inseparably bound to God. The whole family in heaven on earth shall be bound together by the tie of the tiny child! “Whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me (children surely have a great way of believing in God. In my experience I have never found one that did not), it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he be drowned in the depth of the sea.” “Offend” is the opposite of “defend.” Let us not treat the word “offend” too lightly. It does not mean that which may make a petted child pout, rather it may more nearly mean that which may permit the child to become petted, or pouting. “Offend” here rather means to rob a child of his birthright,—to dispossess the little one of what is rightly his, or hers.

And, also, I was going to say a word or two about the word “despise” used in this text: That word I heard literally used the other day by an old colored woman while talking to a young upstart. “I’m giving you no mind.” In Greek, “kataphronasete” from “kataphroneo” may be used in two ways, namely, “to think in disparagement of,” or “to disregard,” “give no mind to.” It is really a compound word, which as I say, may be almost literally translated in “giving no mind to.” Heb. 12:2. “Jesus . . . enduring the cross, despising the shame . . .,” namely, “overlooking,” “giving no heed to” the shame. Not the common use of the word as when we say, “I despise that person.” That can, naturally, be one of the meanings of the word in this text: “Take heed that ye despise not one of the little ones”; but what I am seeking to show you is that the text can also be translated: “Take heed that ye do not overlook the ‘giving of your attention to’ one of these little ones,”—that ye do not ‘overlook,’ or ‘be unmindful of’ one single one of them!

Well, there is the Church’s mandate. Disobey and die. Heed it and live. Heed it and make a new world of equity, justice and peace. Heed, it and be like Christ whose name you take. Heed it, and rear as the next generation of legislators, economists, judges, teachers, preachers, and citizens a people who have caught the mind of Christ. A new day, then let us begin with the children. But, even that is not where Christ said begin: He said begin with ourselves, in that we first become ourselves like little children, and then begin with them. Too many adults do not expect obedience and respect from their children. For example: Adults teach their children to watch at street intersections for automobiles and to a very great extent they do obey that teaching; but it is a scientific and attested fact that the adults do not do it. Children’s fatalities at street crossings have greatly decreased in the last five years, since adults have been teaching them to be careful; but in the same time adult fatalities have greatly increased. Adults have set an example exactly opposite from their teaching. Their actions speak louder than words. And yet, we talk about the disobedience of children and youth! “It were better that a millstone were hanged about his neck.” It is literally true!

Let the adult in all matters learn child-likeness and become “great” in the kingdom of heaven!

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The bitter cold weather, which we have had since back in December, with the ground covered with snow and frozen hard, has made it hard for bird life and small animal life. We have always had a very tender feeling for the little birds during long, continued snows when they have no chance to get to the ground to find food. During the bitter cold weather our thoughts have often drifted to the little birds and we have often wondered whether or not they would exist until the snow would melt away. We have seen people shoot little birds, not because they were of any value for food, but because they made a fine target to try out one's marksmanship. A cardinal and its mate have been coming to the shrubbery at my office window and we are happy to have them come. They are so pretty and seem to be so happy in their free life. They always have a warm welcome and we like to watch them as they fly from branch to branch.

The writer has always from a little boy, loved children. He likes to be with children and to work with children. That is the reason orphanage work has appealed to him for the last twenty years. They are more precious than the little birds. We always like to see people considerate of the birds and kind to the children.

Then we like to see people kind to dumb animals. They, too, have feelings and their feelings can be hurt. The writer was visiting in a home sometime ago. The children in that home had had a pet dog for several years and he was very fond of the two little girls who had played with him and loved him. But the father of the little girls had bought another dog, young and playful, and the little girls, of course, had turned their attention to the new pet. It was really pitiful to see the older pet so humiliated because he was no longer getting the attention and petting he once received. He would come and sit by the writer and look up in the writer's face with a sad expression as if to say, "They don't love me any more." It is well to love the little birds and protect them. It is a fine thing to be good and kind to dumb animals and treat them with kindness. It is Christ-like to be kind to children.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH CHINA.

than it has been since the revolution. General Feng Yu Hsiang has come from his retreat (or exile) on Taishan and is living in Chiang Kai Shek's home in Nanking. The Canton government has shown its confidence in and support of the Nanking regime. From north and south we have heard expressions of confidence in General Chiang. That shrewd leader seems to be building up the military strength and the morale of the nation, and it is rather significant that he is developing his bases far to the interior in Szechuan where a Japanese gunboat or a landing party of marines could hardly penetrate, and where even a Japanese army would find it difficult to go—and return. Most Chinese leaders seem to feel that the Nanking government, while anxious to avoid war, will fight if that is the only way finally to maintain the essential independence of China. And there I must leave this matter, about which there are endless speculations and rumors in all parts of China today. There are too many confused questions involved in it; not alone, What will China do? but also, What is national sovereignty and when does it cease? and, When does fighting become war? etc. Anyone who wants to study such questions will find plenty of material in the present strained and complicated state of China today.

There is, however, something about the whole situation that causes one to feel that China is going to move on out of these present difficulties. The attempt of Japan to control her big neighbor seems to have in it far more danger for the future of Japan than for that of China. The best course for both countries lies not in enmity, nor in the subjection of the one to the other, but in a kind of co-operation that will maintain the independence and self-respect of both. True friends of China and Japan hope for such an outcome but so many factors operate to determine national conduct that we dare not be too hopeful of such an essentially reasonable issue. Certainly there is little in the present trend to give promise of it.—Advance.

importance that the Church and Civic Organizations should endeavor to keep boys and girls interested in the worthwhile things of life during the adolescent period.

Special musical numbers were rendered during the evening. A quartet composed of Ed Moten, James Laws, Walker Moten and Charles Reed sang two old Southern Melodies, Miss Mary Cather gave a piano solo, Mrs. R. E. Griffith sang "A New Commandment" taken from "Olivet to Calvary," accompanied by Miss Mary Cather, and Mr. Robert J. McNally, Jr., and Mr. Orville Hoover gave their own interpretation of "The Trumpeter," Mr. McNally singing the solo and Mr. Hoover accompanying him on the cornet.

The third service in this series will be on Sunday night, February 23rd, when Mr. J. B. Kincer, Chief of the Climate and Crop Division of the United States Weather Bureau will take part in the dramatic sketch.

OBITUARIES

JOHNSON.

On the morning of January 18, 1936, Mrs. Cora Anne Johnson, wife of J. G. Johnson, passed from this life to her eternal reward. She was 54 years of age. Besides her husband, she is survived by seven children, Miss Martha Johnson of Windsor, Mrs. Reginald Payne of Waverly, Clyde G., of Capron, Rev. Hugh H., of Moorman's River, J. Fenton of Montross, J. Sherman of Walters and Frank H. of Zuni; seven grandchildren, two sisters and a host of relatives and friends.

She was a loyal member of Mt. Carmel Christian Church. Funeral services were conducted at Mt. Carmel by the writer, her pastor, assisted by the Rev. J. S. Cobb and Rev. C. E. Gerringer. Her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

BYRD.

Mrs. Ola Maie Byrd was born November 15, 1888, and died January 27, 1936, aged 47 years, 2 months and 12 days. Sister Byrd was a great sufferer, found great comfort in the Scriptures, feasted on the solace and peace in prayer and rejoiced in the fellowship of her friends. She is survived by her husband, Lizzie Byrd, four sisters, Mrs. Barnes Ellis and Mrs. S. P. Whitfield of Holland, Va.; Mrs. J. C. Finch of Lawrenceville, Va., and Mrs. Elise Moody of Portsmouth, Va.; and two brothers, Messers Eley F. Holland and Jessie L. Holland of Holland, Va. She has been a member of this church for thirty-five years.

Funeral services were held at the church on January 29, 1936 and the body laid to rest in the family burial ground near here.

CARL R. KEY.

FOSTER.

Mrs. Beulah Foster, aged 64 years, died December 16th, after an illness of practically two years. She had been bed-ridden since September, 1930.

In the presence of her loved ones and friends she passed into her reward in the afternoon of December 16th.

She was the wife of J. E. Foster and the mother of 6 children, 4 of whom are living. They, with their father, were constantly attentive to their mother.

Sister Foster was a faithful member of Pleasant Grove Christian Church for 50 years. She was greatly loved by her neighbors and was a noble example of submission in affliction.

The funeral was conducted by the writer. God bless the bereaved.

G. D. HUNT.

BURNETTE.

Mrs. Bessie Viola Burnette died December 23, 1935, at her home near Lynchburg, at the age of 34 years, 7 months and 20 days.

Mrs. Burnette was the younger of the two daughters of our beloved Brother and Sister A. S. Dunn. She was a patient sufferer during an illness which lasted many months, yet she was always cheerful and greeted everyone with a smile. She seemed perfectly reconciled to her afflictions, which was evidence of her faith and trust in the Saviour she professed to follow.

Mrs. Burnette is survived by her husband and six children, also parents, five brothers and one sister. She was a member of the Congregational-Christian Church of Lynchburg.

The funeral was conducted in the church on December 24th, by the pastor, assisted by Rev. H. D. Brown, Jr., of the Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Our sympathy and prayers go out to the bereaved family and loved ones.

B. H. WATKINS.

OSBORN.

Our entire community was saddened by the tragic death of Wilton Osborn, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Osborn, Rt. 1, Henderson, N. C. Corporal James Osborn was stationed on the U. S. S. Manley at Balboa. On Dec. 6, 1935, he was escorting three sailors back to their ships, and they, for some reason, attacked him. He was killed almost instantly.

His Captain had this to say: "I found James to be of the highest type, popular with his shipmates and extremely efficient. A competent officer in line to go to the top in Marine service. Always reliable, sober and dependable, he was a boy that seemed to have almost every quality required for Christian character."

James was 21 years of age and had been a member of Liberty Christian church for a number of years.

On Dec. 28th the funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. S. E. Madren and the class and close friends. The large beautiful floral offering showed the high esteem in which he was held.

He left to mourn their loss, his parents, two sisters, five brothers and a host of friends. May God's grace sustain them.

Corporal Rosier accompanied his body home as a guard of honor. The pall-bearers were selected from his Sunday school

SAWYER.

Mrs. Huldah Susan Sawyer was born Feb. 24, 1874, and departed this life Jan. 9, 1936, at the age of 61 years, 11 months and 15 days at her home in High Point, N. C.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. J. C. Regan, Mrs. A. L. Allred, four sons, Clarence, Alton, Felix and Robert Sawyer, three brothers F. S., A. Y., and J. B. Miles, who lament their loss with a number of relatives and many friends.

In her youth, Mrs. Sawyer professed faith in Christ as her personal Saviour. She joined Bethel Christian Church, where she has been a loyal and faithful member.

A good neighbor, upright woman and a loving mother has gone to her reward.

A preliminary service was conducted at the home in High Point, N. C. by Rev. S. M. Needham, pastor of the Methodist church and final funeral services were conducted at Concord Church, Caswell County, N. C. by Rev. J. F. Apple and the writer. May the Lord comfort all who weep.

AUTRY.

Mr. John Autry was born in Cumberland County, N. C. and departed this life for the Spirit Land on Feb. 1, 1936 at the age of 90 years plus. In 1871, November 30th, he was married to Miss L. J. Porter. To this marriage were born 11 children: 3 daughters and 8 sons. Surviving to lament their loss is a loving wife, one daughter Mrs. Bert Cole, three sons, J. K., D. A. and D. B.

Autry, thirteen grandchildren, other relatives and a host of friends. Brother Autry professed Christ as his personal Savior in early manhood and joined Mt. Pleasant Christian Church as a Charter Member in 1886. Soon he was ordained a deacon of the new church organization, to which profession and office he has attained such a remarkable record in interest and fidelity. He has seen the church flourish and then drag along for a few years. Mr. Autry was an upright person exemplifying a clean character, a strong supporter and advocate of temperance and prohibition. He was a highly respected citizen, a good neighbor and Christian gentleman. He will be greatly missed in his community and his presence and council at church. May the Lord perpetuate his memory in his 50 years record of service. Our prayer for the bereaved that the Lord will supply grace for their need. Funeral service was conducted by his pastor at his home church and interment of his body was made in the church cemetery with a large congregation in attendance as the snow blanketed mother earth. Sweet Peace and soul joy be his forever.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Depressions Plagued Babylon, Too!—

So says Dr. John Albert Wilson, famous archeologist. After the Persians had conquered the country, they levied heavy taxes on the land. The prices kited and inflation ensued, followed by a depression. Economically, at least, there's nothing new under the sun.

A Strategic Error.—

Regardless of right or wrong, someone has made a strategic error. On last Monday Major-General Johnson Hagood was relieved of his command of the Eighth Corps Area at San Antonio, Texas, and ordered to proceed to his home and "await orders." While no explanation was offered as to his removal from command, it is supposed that it is the result of testimony offered before a House appropriations sub-committee, regarding WPA. In his testimony the general urged that $150,000,000 be used for army housing. Said he: "At the present time there is a vast flow of silver—I won't say gold—spreading out all over the country like mud. It will soon dry up without anything permanent to show for it. I shall not be accused of profanity when I say, 'for God's sake, put some of it into stone and steel.'" He testified that it was harder to get five cents to buy a needed pencil than one thousand dollars to teach hobbies to CCC boys. While the general's testimony might be stretched into subordination against his commander-in-chief, there is grave danger if an employee of the government is to be penalized because he testifies by request before a government committee. Representative Blanton, Democrat of Texas, a member of the sub-committee before which Hagood testified, when he heard of the order, is quoted as saying that Secretary Dern and General Malin should be impeached. He said: "If God lets me live long enough, I shall see to it that the war department does not get away with its arrogant attempt to perpetrate this damnable outrage upon one of the ablest, most efficient, keenest-minded, most courageous major-generals we have in the whole United States army. They shall not punish General Hagood for giving congress his honest, conscientious opinion about appropriations."

Chemistry's Miraculous Colloids.—

There are some thirty-two minerals and metals, with possible traces of several more, that are found in the composition of the human body. Colloidal chemistry is the science which converts these elements into particles minute enough that they may be utilized by living cells. Nature, of course, supplies these various elements in colloidal form, but science has now learned to produce them in the laboratory. And where nature has fallen down on the job, it is now possible to add the needed mineral and metal so necessary to the life cell. As an example, an orchid which has become faded, and apparently 'dead, has been restored to life, its petals fresh and crisp, its colors vivid, by the addition of copper in colloidal form to the water in which it was placed. Dr. Steinmetz, the wizard of electricity, is said to have devised a method of utilizing colloids in the treatment of sinus trouble. Colloidal iodine added to a city water supply has freed that city from the scourge of goitre. An institution for the treatment of alcoholism is experimenting with a colloidal solution which they expect to not only overcome the effects of excessive drinking, but to remove even the desire for drink. Kenneth Andrews, writing in Rockefeller Center Weekly, says that the effects of colloids is due to electric action. The sick or dead cells are attracted to the colloids by electro-magnetic force, as iron filings are attracted by magnet, and are carried into the blood stream and eliminated. The system meanwhile, adapts the colloids it may need. Elements which in their free form are deadly poisons, are not only harmless, but actually beneficial in colloidal form. While colloidal chemistry was evolved by David Graham, a British chemist, 50 years ago, it has only recently been realized by scientists how great can be its influence on medicine, agriculture and industry.

Japanese Military Extremists Seek Control.—

As a result of a coup d'etat on the part of military extremists, three high government officials, including Premier Keisuke Okada, were killed and several wounded. It is too early to know just what the results will be. Meantime the government, fearful of another outbreak, is making efforts to bring the extremist revolt to a close without further bloodshed. The emperor himself is said to have considered the conditions serious enough to warrant his taking personal charge, and a virtual martial law has been declared in Tokyo. Warships have been called in from their ocean stations and ordered to strategic points as a matter of precaution. The rebellious troops seized government buildings at the beginning of the outbreak, but were said to have retired before superior forces of the regular government. Meantime, since the assassination of the premier and the overthrow of his cabinet, there has been an unsuccessful attempt to form a new cabinet. It has been stated that the upheaval is entirely a domestic matter, but it is likely to attract foreign affairs unless curbed. An even more aggressive Asiatic policy would certainly be the result of the revolt if successful, and it might go so far as to precipitate war between Japan and the Soviet Government. Announcement was made immediately by Hiroshi Saito, ambassador at Washington, that the situation would "affect in no way Japanese relations with the United States." Senator Nye, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee, is one of the few not too timorous to express an opinion, and he sees in the outbreak "the beginning of the end of the Japanese military." Said he in commenting on the situation: "The military was badly beaten in the elections of three days ago, and yesterday's coup will hardly be considered by the Japanese people as anything other than the military retaliation."

Back to the Farm.—

A release by the Bureau of the Census of the preliminary reports of the 1935 Agricultural Census, indicates a relatively great increase in the number of farms listed in 1935 over those listed in 1930. The 1935 figures show that there were at the time of the census 6,812,049 farms in the United States, or an increase over the five-year period of 523,401 farms. Not only is there an increase in the number of farms, but there is a large increase in the farm population. This increase is far-reaching in its implications, says the University of Virginia Monthly News Letter, for within the past five years, the century-long trek toward the city has been so materially reduced that the farm population has reached the highest point in the history of the nation. This does not mean that there are actually more people leaving the city for the country than leave the country for the city. What has happened is this: the average movement from the farm to the city for the ten years preceding 1930, was approximately 600,000 a year. But during 1933 and 1934, for example, the net rural-urban migration was only about 200,000. Consequently, because of the large excess of births over death in the rural areas, the farm population continues to increase. What, then, will be the result of this increase in farms and farm population? What effect will it have upon the farm population as an entirety? Lewis M. Walker, one of the editors of the Bulletin above referred to thinks that "Probably these trends mean, first, that there will be a stationary, and, later, a declining commercial demand and an increasing non-commercial consumption of farm products. Secondly, there will probably be an increase in the number of farms and a decrease in the acreage per farm and in agricultural production per worker. Thirdly, there will possibly be a lower standard of living for many farmers." One can hardly agree with Mr. Walker entirely, in all three of the conclusions that he draws. He is possibly right in that the farmer may be compelled to rely less on so-called money crops, and more upon garden crops; his acreage may also be reduced; but improved machinery, electricity, and other conveniences which are becoming more and more available for the farmer, will enable him to reach a standard of living in the future which the past has never offered.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

About this time last year, Dr. C. H. Rowland was a patient at the Florida Sanitarium. Last week he returned as a visitor, receiving a warm welcome by the staff and former associates.

We are informed that Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith have been vacationing for a few days in the Florida sunshine which the editor of THE SUN has been describing so vividly for the past few weeks. However, something tells us that it was not the pleasant weather alone that drew the good president and his wife to sunny climes, but matters of business concerning the college, at which he has labored so untiringly.

Rev. Milo T. Fisk and Mrs. Fisk, of the Tioga River Christian Conference, are as usual, spending the winter at Treasure Village, St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. Geo. Roden, Mrs. Lottie Roden and sister, Mrs. Smith, also Mr. and Mrs. William True, all of the Amesbury, Massachusetts, Christian Church, are at Lake Mary. All of these would be glad to meet any Christian Church people who are wintering there. Miss Ruth Roden, who had charge of the Young People's work in Rockingham Conference spent some time at Lake Mary.

"THIS IS A GOOD COUNTRY."

Sometimes the malcontents make so much noise we forget about the people who are the thinking, frugal, working backbone of the country. Then something happens to wake us up, like this letter we just got from a Utah farmer:

"We are living in a very interesting time. I have never seen so much unrest. Anything goes at this time just so a certain element can get something for nothing. We are ruled by a class that don't know a hoe from a shovel. All they knew is the school room. As long back as I can remember, I have heard the old story that the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer.

"I have visited eleven nations and was born in a foreign country. I do know this is the best country in the world. Anyone who will work and save can climb the ladder to success.

"It will be 73 years next April that with my mother we sailed from Denmark for the United States. We came from Omaha to Utah with an ox team. I walked all the way. With no education and as poor as anyone could be, I have made my way up the ladder to the $150,000 mark, but it has taken hard work and some foresight. I have never had a dollar given to me, but have given thousands away. It makes me tired to hear a lot of pinheads get together and plot against the man who has the nerve to get out and do things.

"In my early manhood, 15 of us young men located on a stream in Utah. All any of us had was our teams. I bought some of my neighbors out through foresight. I worked hard. Today I own more land, more water, more horses, cattle and sheep than the 12 who are left all combined. Under the plan of some I should divide up. No. This is a good country for all who are on the square.

"If I had the power, I could cure this evil that is so prevalent through the land. I would send all the discontented to Europe, give them fifty dollars to start on, and tell them 'Now root, hog, or die.' Give them three years abroad. They would then be willing to come back and be good Indians."—Selected.

APATHY? NO, JUST WRONG SLANT.

By BERT H. DAVIS.

Author of "Youth Faces the Liquor Problem."

"The dissolution of the Council for Moderation completes the disillusionment of a good many people who thought that you could be against liquor most effectively by conceding that a little of it does small harm."

For a press interview some few days ago, on the demise of the much advertised Council for Moderation, Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, chairman of the Allied Youth administration committee and Executive Secretary W. Roy Bregg concocted this comment and others of similar note.

The opportunity for newspaper mention of Allied Youth came a few hours after the New York Herald Tribune printed the statement of Mr. Everett Colby, president of the Council for Moderation, that the four-months-old movement realized that the plan had not caught on with the public, had secured funds from only a limited number of persons, had found the American people apathetic toward "temperance education."

Apathy? No, say Allied Youth Leaders—both on the occasion of the Council's announcement and with the perspective of meetings, activities and comments accumulated in the next few days.

The Council merely had the wrong slant.

As Allied Youth leaders told the press: "The Council's leaders first determined on a stand that indicated moderate drinking would not be harmful, individually or socially. Condemning excess, like any sensible person, they did not define where moderation stopped and where excess began, and health authorities tell us that such a definition is impracticable if not wholly impossible. Taking the stand, the Council then sought scientists who would agree and supply facts to prove their agreement.

"But science did not arrive at that point.

"The Council would have been well advised to start as Allied Youth did, prepared to follow the facts of the best known authorities and to prove the claims at whatever point is possible. But so beginning its program, the Council would not have become a Council for Moderation at all, for scientists, however much they avoid extreme statements, build a strong case against alcohol for modern men and women."

Alcohol Education Advances.

Mr. Colby, we are glad to tell you of the progress of the same four months in Allied Youth, a national movement devoted to effective alcohol education of a character that arouses youth interest and ministers to the body and its recreation while it serves the mind with facts.

In that period, hosts of teachers and superintendents all over the country received a package that introduced them to Allied Youth as an aid in public education and character building. Thus continued a trend that has been constant in all the recent months. Allied Youth has caught on with the schools.

In the four months, Allied Youth won feature space as good news and as progressive education in periodicals as diverse as Christian Herald and a leading fraternity organ and numerous daily newspapers (to indicate a few of scores of the periodicals that aid our public relations.)

In the month's since the Council's initial announcement made first-page space, Allied Youth found the time ripe for a new and needed service to school and organization people, leaders of young people, editors, clergymen, and parents and turned its best thought to creating Affiliate Service, which further presents us as a staff of specialists in alcohol education.

The months that the Council found marked by apathy and a spirit of postponement formed a period of Allied Youth's largest floods of mail inquiries, and repeated orders for Allied Youth's new bulletins and well-known books and pamphlets and improvement in THE ALLIED YOUTH both editorially and in circulation. During these "poor" months, Allied Youth found the contributions, large and small, often sacrificial, from a host of interested friends enough to pay its own way. (Our way of advance requires, however, that surpluses should be created for unusual seasonal demands and for additional needed field work in answer to scores of requests for help in organizing Posts and expanding their possibilities.)

No Gloating, Please.

We do not gloat because the Council has turned the key in its office door, to write "Failed" across its four-months' record. The experiment was not without its values. If it proves one thing, it is that the American people, whether committed to dry ways or to a path well moistened with alcohol, will not remain suspended between the two. We agree with Mr. Colby that the very name of the organization was a weakness. Then, go beyond that, and try to write a set of convincing slogans for a program that would not forbid a little drinking but frowned upon the continued and heavy drinking that, narcotic appetite considered, was fairly likely to follow the permitted potions!

Whether or not an organization stands before us presently as the defender of moderation, we may be sure that a large number of our fellows will believe moderation is possible and proper, will commend it by their conduct, will even promote it as a possibility by their own fortunate ability to stop after a drink or two. So the need to pursue the dry ways as youth's ways for modern living is not lessened, while among groups speaking out against excess one voice less is raised against the Niagaran roar of liquor advertising. Allied Youth needs new life and vigor, a new punch, not because of the apathy existing toward temperance but because of the energy with which hard and frequent drinking advances.—Allied Youth.

SUMMER THEOLOGICAL SCHOOL.

The Administration of Winona Lake School of Theology, which conducts annual summer sessions at Winona Lake, Indiana, has just announced its exceptional offerings for the summer of 1936.

Beginning July 9th, and closing August 12th, there will be two semesters of Theological courses of fifteen days each. The courses will be intensive and inspirational and are applicable toward the regular theological degrees. Work may be pursued in one or both semesters.

The Faculty announced for the season includes the following: Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, Dr. Howard Kuist, Dr. Leslie Ray Marston, Prof. Geo. H. Bost, Prof. Mabel McQueen Weir, and the Dean, Dr. J. A. Huffman. The faculty has been carefully chosen, and each member is a specialist in his field.

The courses offered include: The History of Religion, the Pentateuch, Psychology and Religion, The Gospels, the Study of the Holy Spirit, Pauline Epistles, Greek New Testament, Beginners' Greek. There will also be daily popular lectures, given by members of the Faculty and visiting educators, to which the public is invited.

A twelve-page Prospectus, giving full information has been prepared, and a copy may be had by requesting the same from the Dean. Address: Dr. J. A. Huffman, Dean, Marion, Indiana.

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

LENTEN OBSERVATIONS.

In a series of Lenter letters to pastors throughout the country, prepared on behalf of the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, Dr. Frederick L. Fagley, associate secretary of the General Council, has set forth some impressions which have been emphasized in his own thinking as he has been meeting with many groups of ministers during the winter.

"In the first place," he says, "we are deeply concerned by the apparent indifference of people to religion. I believe that this indifference is more apparent than real. There is indifference to dogmas, creeds, ordinances and authority but not to a vital religion. In this sophisticated age people know the world but they seek its meaning. People are in the mood to accept the leadership of a man of vital religion who has something so worthwhile that he is willing to stand for it at all costs.

"In the second place, we are disappointed by the lack of attendance at church. I think that we should hold in mind the fact that people no longer attend church to acquire a badge of respectability but only those go who have a real interest in what goes on there. These people will not be satisfied with a re-telling of a message. There must be advance thought and thought which leads to action. People know when they are growing and they crave growth. They respond to the arresting quality of new thinking and they long for this experience. There is a high satisfaction in facing a challenge.

"In the third place we are distressed that our preaching has not brought more change in the world. We must be doers of the word. Our glory has been an intellectual freedom and an evangelistic zeal. These ideals must be maintained. But we must be prepared to apply the gospel as well as to preach it. There is not a line of division between individual righteousness and social living. Christianity stands for social salvation and is the only power which can insure a better day. The working Christian is the true social engineer, who works towards the fulfillment of the eternal ideal. The shifting of the social pattern is but a vain working in the dark unless there be the guidance of the Spirit of God towards the ideals of His Kingdom. Society must be recast in the pattern of the Kingdom of God. To make this pattern clear is the duty of the Church.

"Above all else this age needs God. Everything that is done in every church should be controlled and directed by a deep sense of this need. This is true evangelism. There is an urgent call for a more powerful and a more effective Christian witness. Therefore for this Lenten season, it is urged that all leaders and workers in our churches review their personal lives and accept their responsibility for the spiritual needs of the church and the community.

"May we have courage equal to the opportunity of these times. Let us seek a fuller consecration and enlist old and young in the great adventure of making a better world."

* * *

A SEASON OF INGATHERING FOR THE CHURCH.

Dr. Fagley brings the series of Lenten letters to a conclusion with a reminder that this is a time of opportunity for enlisting new members of the church. His closing words are:

"The Church's great mission is to bring men into conscious relationship to God. Man is a spiritual being, however much he may listen to the alluring voice of the 'Green Earth' saying, 'You are only a part of me; you are born, you die.' The pervading sense of immortality in the soil will not let one remain undisturbed. We are driven to find some deeper meaning to human life, with its futilities, its tragedies, its uncertainties. We must find some sure beacon beyond the grave. We must feel the Presence that will go with us through the Valley of the Shadow. The church triumphantly proclaims the truth that Christ does bring men to God and binds them to Him forever.

"The Church of Christ can do these things for men if we are faithful and sure. Into the fellowship of the Church we can invite all men with assurance that the Spirit of God, far mightier than we, works with us to bring salvation to men everywhere."

THE BOARDS AND MISSIONARY PROMOTION.

The election of the Rev. John R. Scotford at the Mid-Winter Meetings in January to be a full-time associate secretary of the Home Boards gives these Boards a completely unified promotional department with a staff of four. The others are: Mrs. Mary D. White, associate secretary; Miss Helen Frances Smith, project secretary; the Rev. Herbert D. Rugg, editorial secretary. Mr. Scotford had been serving as joint editorial secretary of the Commission on Missions and the Home Boards and as associate editor of The Missionary Herald. He continues his connection with the Herald. The promotional department of the Home Boards functions under the direction of the secretarial cabinet; the members of the promotional staff are directly responsible to the chairman of the cabinet, Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, general secretary of the Church Extension Boards.

Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, executive vice-president of the American Board, who was elected chairman of the Cooperative Council of the Commission on Missions with the understanding that he would assume the ad interim responsibilities of the office of the executive secretary of the Commission which is now vacant. Dr. Goodsell will arrive from a western trip on March 27th at New York, where he will have an office.

The Home Boards and the American Board are putting themselves in readiness to carry on under the plan of joint promotion which the Strategy Committee has outlined for proposal in its report to the General Council.

THE GENERAL COUNCIL AND SPRINGFIELD'S TERCENTENARY.

The tercentenary of the founding of Springfield, Mass., and the important part which the city has had for 300 years in the history of the Congregational churches of America, will be observed by the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States with a special session Sunday afternoon, June 21st, in the Springfield Municipal Auditorium.

Plans for the Springfield tercentenary meeting have been announced by the Rev. Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, general secretary of the Council. The principal address will be given by James Grover McDonald, former League of Nations' high commissioner for refugees from Germany and honorary chairman of the Foreign Policy Association.

The session at Springfield will be held in connection with the biennial meeting of the Council at Mt. Holyoke College, Mass., June 16th to 23rd. The attendance will include 825 voting members and 2,000 associate and fraternal delegates from all parts of this country and abroad.

William Pyncheon, founder of Springfield in 1636 was also founder of its first church in the following year, 1637. Its fourth meeting house, built in 1819, is located on Court square across the street from the Municipal Auditorium.

The Springfield church was the first in Massachusetts not in a sea-coast town. It was preceded only by the churches along the Atlantic ocean border in Plymouth, Salem, Boston, Dorchester, Woburn, Roxbury, Duxbury, Charleston, Marshfield, Cambridge, Scituate, Hingham, Newbury, Weymouth, Concord, Quincy and Taunton.

The church in Springfield had its inception in the first of fifteen articles of agreement drawn up and signed by Pyncheon and his associates, May 14, 1636. Their compact began:

"We intend by God's grace, as soon as we can with convenient speed, to procure some godly and faithful minister, with whom we purpose to join in church covenant to walk in all the ways of Christ." The actual organization of the church waited until the coming of pastor George Moxon, Pyncheon's friend, the following year. Pyncheon was a prominent person in the colony. He had been a magistrate in England; he was a patentee of the Massachusetts Bay Company in 1627 and came to Boston with Winthrop in 1630. Prospering in the fur trade, he established Springfield in what was then the far west. It was first called "Agawam," but the name was soon changed to Springfield after Pyncheon's English home. Today it is the largest as well as oldest of the twenty-four Springfields in the United States.

In his vision of the future for the young settlements in New England, Pyncheon was far-seeing. That he even dared dream of their political independence is evident in his words "as yet" when writing to Winthrop in 1646, he commented that "we cannot as yet subsist without England."

Like many other Puritan laymen, Pyncheon was a theologian of sorts. He wrote a book, "The Meritorious Price of Our Redemption, Justification, Etc.," which he published in England while there on a visit in 1650. Copies reached Boston before he returned and he arrived to find himself accused of heresy. The first of three specified errors was his assertion "that Christ did not suffer for us the torments of hell." His defense availed not; his book was publicly burned and in disgust he went to England to stay. Pastor Moxon accompanied him. His son John, however, remained and like his father before him, became Springfield's leading citizen, "the worshipful Mr. Pyncheon."

RESOLUTIONS.

February 23, 1936.

Whereas, the American Christian Convention has merged with the Congregational Church, and

Whereas, the Southern Christian Convention has amended its charter to read "The Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches," and

Whereas, the conferences of the Congregational churches of the southeast have changed their name to meet the requirements of the Congregational-Christian Church,

Therefore, be it resolved,

First, that the Sanford Christian Church shall henceforth be known as the Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford;

Second, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and to the local papers for publication.

Signed,

M. A. WICKER,

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Florida Sanitarium, Feb. 23, 1936,
Orlando, Florida.

One can only be amazed at the work, growth and achievements of Seventh Day Adventists as one becomes acquainted with them and notes their statistic tables. This writer, wholly unable to subscribe to their creed or church polity, can but admire, and applaud their spirit of self-denial, their efforts to relieve human suffering, and their zeal in giving to all the nations the Gospel as they preach and practice it. There is no communion, fellowship or denomination of professed Christian believers on earth that even approach, much less equal, them in giving, both men, women and children and money to benevolence, charity and missions. In the years of "depression" other church-treasuries and missionary support ran low and suffered shrinkage and decrease. Not theirs. To look at the following figures, and facts, is to wonder. In 1872, there were in all the world only 4,801 members of 205 Adventist Churches, and all these were confined to two languages. It was practically the year of their beginning. (It was not until 1874 that they sent out their first foreign missionary.) They had not begun to build sanitariums, and little if any organized effort had been put forth to relieve suffering. Now look. In the year 1892 they had 33,778 members in 1,102 churches and missions in 15 languages. In 1912 they had 98,044 members in 2,874 churches and missions in 75 languages. In 1932 they had 362,101 members in 7,322 churches and missions in 485 languages. By this time they had built and equipped 58 sanitariums and 68 publishing houses. Now, in 1934, the last year for which I have official statistics, they had 404,509 members in 7,818 churches throughout the world, in 539 languages, with 69 sanitariums that reach around the world in their ministry of healing. But—they have paid the price, they do pay the price. For giving of their means there is no parallel. In 1933, with only 384,151 members in the world they gave here in North America only $1,692,774.76 to foreign missions—only—$11.76 per member. They support their home churches and institutions with their tithe, which all members are required to pay, and their public offerings go to foreign missions. Is it any wonder that they now preach and work in 325 countries and islands and in 539 languages. Growing? In the past six years they have added 119,216 members. Missions and relief of human suffering are the lines of their chief activities. In 1866 they established their first sanitariums. Today they have 69 sanitariums and hospitals, besides many private institutions doing a similar work. The assets of their institutions are eight and a half millions of dollars, employing 4,163 nurses, 903 physicians who treated in 1934, 451,549 patients, and gave charity about $400,000.

It is not the object, certainly not the intent, of these lines to magnify or advertise in these columns the achievement, growth or influence of these kindly and generous people, but to show to our readers that God gives growth, power, prestige, achievement to those who serve unselfishly, believe devoutly, and then pay for their faith with their earnings and their self-denial. God will and does forgive a people for many weaknesses and failures, but He will not forgive a people who do not cultivate and develop the missionary spirit.

It has been difficult indeed to realize here that it has been so cold, snowy, freezing in Carolina, Virginia and further North, while here the sun has been shining in all its glad glory, the oranges bursting into beautiful and fragrant blossom, the plum trees draping themselves in white and green while the bees hum in their busy occupation.

Among the visitors of welcome and note here for the past week-end were Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith of Elon and Dr. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro. Dr. Rowland remained a week to renew acquaintances of a year ago, scores of guests and employees here giving him glad welcome. Dr. and Mrs. Smith only tarried long enough to look us over and give first-hand news from home. This fresh air and good sunshine are priceless especially to one who loves and lives on the life and vigor of the good, broad wide-open. More and more we thank God for His rich provision for the eye, appetite, ear, health and soul of man. This indeed is a beautiful world which our Creator has invited us, His children, to help make better and more beautiful.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM—THREE LETTERS.

A friend of THE SUN's editor says that some churches in our day are growing both in numbers and in spiritual power; but that in every instance they are churches whose pastors believe in and practice personal evangelism. This friend has made a study of these churches and has written many of these pastors to tell him their plan and methods. Three of these letters this friend let me have and they are given herewith:

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Our Personal Worker's organization has been working some 12 years. There is rarely a Sunday when they have not brought one or more before the session for church membership. There are about twenty members, all male. Sometimes we refer a prospect to a group of ladies for prayer and friendly visiting. We seek to bring the unchurched into the church and the lazy and lukewarm to renew their vows and become active. These surely enjoy the work, and the group is our most valued organization.

"Sincerely yours,

"JAMES I. VANCE, Pastor,
First Presbyterian Church,
Nashville, Tenn."

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"I am in receipt of your inquiry concerning the method of Personal Evangelism employed in our Church. It is very simple and can be stated in a few sentences.

"For a number of years we have designated Tuesday evening as calling night. A group of laymen meet at the Church and under my direction are sent out in teams of two to call in homes. We have a layman who heads up this work and he does the telephoning and organizing necessary in getting these men out.

"Sometimes we may have only two men and sometimes we have as many as twenty. Each team is given three or four calls. The objective of this calling is to deepen the interest of families with whom our Church has a contact and to make new friends for the Church. Most of this calling simply consists of a friendly visit, and when the time is ripe, I myself approach these persons concerning a decision for Christ and church membership.

"In addition, our women are organized into four circles. One of the main objectives is that of personal calling and they make as high as from five hundred to one thousand calls each month.

"I do not think I need make any further statement except that such procedure is productive of results and if emphasized it can be done effectively in any church.

"Sincerely yours,

"W. H. MURPHY, JR., Pastor,
Second Presbyterian Church,
Tulsa, Okla."

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"I have your inquiry concerning the Visitation Work of the laymen.

"Our men have been doing this work for many years. Each Tuesday night, for a period of eight months, they go out by two's, making calls upon members of the church and prospective members; in every way, supplementing and augmenting the work of the ministers through personal contact. The number of men going out varies anywhere between eight to more than twenty. During the Lenten period we have a larger number engaged in this work with a view to assisting in our Easter evangelism.

"It is a very profitable kind of work from every point of view. The men who do the work grow in interest, in their ability as personal evangelists, and in every way become more valuable assets to the church. They are also very effectual in conserving the results of our evangelism, as well as in our efforts to win new recruits to our membership.

"We have no organization, no committees, but aim to keep this phase of work as simple and personal as possible. On Tuesday evening the men report at the church office, receive their assignments and go forth. They report the results to headquarters and the minister is governed accordingly.

"The men who are beginners in the work are always paired off with experienced men. As a rule, I try to give each man his introduction to this type of work by having him accompany me a few evenings.

"The men who do this work are very happy about it and I think derive more benefit from it than almost anyone else. We use no women in this particular work. Of course our women are doing much more personal work thru their respective organizations than our men.

"Hoping that you will take up this work, if you have not already done so, and wishing you every success, I am,

"Most sincerely yours,

"J. H. GOLDNER, Pastor,
Euclid Ave. Christian Church,
Cleveland, Ohio."

MISS MODERATION IS NOT A LADY!

Three High Lights on the "Art" of Drinking.

"Go out and learn to drink, my child, but do it moderately," would be words from every mother's mouth, were some of the "friends of temperance" to have their way.

Said a mother to me the other day, "My Mabel knows when to stop. That is the thing, to know when to stop."

"When is it?" I asked innocently.

"Why, when she feels that another glass of anything would be too much," she explained. This was undoubtedly logic, but to my poor brain it didn't exactly contain a rule to go by, since Mabel might not think she would have too much until long after I might think she had. If she were driving a car, it might not occur to her until after she had run down an old lady, or until she had done some other things that might be awkward, so I asked for further elucidation.

"What symptoms tell Mabel that another glass of anything would be too much?"

This seemed easy to answer from the glibness of Mabel's mother. "Oh, just the regular symptoms. Like feeling pretty lively, or dizzy or something."

I congratulated her upon Mabel's ability to stop when she felt like this, and withal, did it sincerely, since at least that was something, but nevertheless hoped Mabel would never cross my path driving a car when she was feeling these symptoms. I also hoped for Mabel's sake she wouldn't do too many of the little awkward things likely to be done at this stage—things that can spoil a girl's life.

Since the commencement of time, those who wished to learn secrets from others have plied them with liquor. If one wishes to learn the private lives of one's convivial neighbors, dine with them. They will tell you they are moderate drinkers. Let them do the drinking! After a glass of wine even with a meal, the average person grows livelier. After two he grows confidential in a low voice. After three, he becomes noisily confidential. After four, he often becomes irritable.

You say, "Four glasses of wine? Why, that is not moderation!" Oh, yes it is, if you are to believe those who take it.

A formal dinner, at which wine is served at all, has at least three, sherry, claret and champagne, and these are offered and usually indulged in several times. In addition, there usually have been cocktails before. There will be whisky and soda and liquors afterward. So if you are mean enough to wish to know your drinking neighbor at his worst, dine with him. He will tell you why his son was expelled from college, and how his wife nags, and why that business deal did not go thru.

He is apt to scream unpleasant jokes he has heard downtown and talk broadly of subjects he would never mention otherwise; and finally, if he is of the irritable type, as so many drinkers are, he will grow grumpy if interrupted, and angry if anyone differs with him.

If you like your neighbor at his best, this will nauseate you, of course, and make you a bit sad; but if it pleases you to find out unpleasant things about him, a jolly time will be had by all until the next day when said neighbor perhaps remembers unfortunate matters discussed, or loses a deal because he talked too much.

Europeans, long accustomed to their alcohol, interested perhaps in the wine and liquor industries of their countries, love to state proudly that they all drink in moderation. Of course, many drink very little. Many, in fact, do not drink at all, but what most of them consider moderation endangers mind and health, not to mention business.

If European nations had not been aware long ago of the dangers from the consumption of alcoholic beverages, there would not today be the decrease in drinking which has been noted since the last century and the early part of our own. There is a decrease, brought about largely through education; and there, as well as here, along every inch of the way, those who have fought against drinking have been hampered and harassed.

Never have young girls in Europe been drinkers and in general, women there do not drink as much as they do here. This is because the single standard for men and women is not so general there. I think, on the other hand, that European men consume more alcohol than they do in this country, altho I have no statistics to go on. Sunday nights, one doesn't like to motor anywhere in Europe, nor yet Sunday afternoons because of the noisy and alcoholic crowds in the villages and cities. And sitting through an eight course dinner in Europe where wine is served is no more amusing than here. Oh, yes, that sort of thing occurs in Europe quite as much as here. I have seen it. And they call it moderation, there, too. It is also true in Europe as in America, that an increasing number of thoughtful persons are advocating programs of education regarding alcohol's effects.

Miss Moderation, sober and respectable in her cloak of temperance, sounds very proper and prim, but she is a boisterous, unseemly lass before the evening's done, for all that!—Jean R. Patterson in Allied Youth.

MAKING RELIGION ATTRACTIVE.

By REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

In the necessary emphasis in these days upon social love and public welfare, we must not forget the qualities of personality that make the followers of Jesus effective. The beautiful influence that has gone out from the home and every member of it of Philemon has strengthened many a life and many a home.

What One Is.

They used to say of Ralph Waldo Emerson that he could not be long in a company before they felt the nobility of his purpose. "What you are speaks so loudly that I cannot hear what you say." It is not the rocks that surround the spring but the water that gushes out of the ledge that cleanses and refreshes men. The thing that makes the sun a blessing to every living person and plant is the quiet energy that lights and warms everything everywhere.

It is the real experience of God in one and the love of Christ in the heart of a person even more than his words that refresh other lives. It is this heart-experience that makes one's words and deeds messengers of life and comfort. When steel has in it the force which we call magnetism, it draws other metals to itself; when one has in himself a true devotion to God and loyalty to Jesus and His teachings, he becomes a spiritual magnet. Take love out of a mother and her ministries are mechanical—motherhood is gone. Take love out of a follower of Jesus and he is bereft of power.

Cheerfulness.

But earnest persons are often too intense, too determined, too insistent. We take ourselves too seriously. In standing insistently for the right, we need to keep a kindly spirit. One can denounce wrong without doing it in a profane spirit. Earnest persons who are cheerful have usually a winsome and winning personality. A fault-finding Christian's religion is not attractive. Fault-finding can easily become a habit. An Englishman who had criticised everything in the United States was taken to Niagara Falls. Certainly, he would approve this natural wonder. He looked, and declared, "It is a little overdrawn!" A middle aged woman was enumerating her ills, hard work and care to a caller. She turned to her aged aunt and asked, "How are you feeling?" The old lady gave her this fine rebuke, "Well, I ain't a'dyin' all the time that I'm a'livin'."

Cheerfulness makes one a good companion, comforts others in their sorrows and trails, and helps oneself to meet the tests of life triumphantly. Jesus, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despised the shame.

Browning had found this gladness of heart:

"I find the earth not gray but rosy,
Heaven not grim but fair of hue.
Do I stoop? I pluck a posy.
Do I stand and start? All's blue."

Helpfulness.

A follower of Jesus whose own life is "hid with Christ in God" and who has a cheerful spirit is an effective messenger and servant of God. He wants others to share God's redeeming life and the joys of faith and to give themselves, as he is trying to do, to help others and to establish the Kingdom of God on earth. Others feel the approaches of such a life. Children are won to Christ by it in the home and the school. Neighbors at least respect religion because of such near-by lives. Denunciations of public wrongs have twice the force when given by a loving and cheerful and unselfish person. Jesus' scorching arraignment of the Scribes and Pharisees made them tremble and keeps its force today, because it came from One who was constructive in his spirit and thought and always kindly.

Creed.

One must be faithful to what he thinks is the truth, but he must ever keep in mind that love is more than creed. Creeds too often have separated groups of Christians on mere opinions, who were equally loyal to Christ in purpose. Many barriers are broken down but some remain. To refuse to commune with those whose love and faithfulness and good works you recognize and with whom you associate in prayer and many lines of ministry, to say that the ministry of many of the groups of churches has no authority to give baptism and to preside at the Communion table, to declare that the assurances of salvation are only for those in a certain visible organization, makes an opinion more important than a true life and an all-inclusive love.

These and other divisions keep many from accepting the faith and uniting in the fellowship and work of a church. Creeds are a help when they are held and applied by a true Christian love.

I built a house which I called "My Creed,"
And bolted the door inside;
Love drew the bolt with a noble deed,
And the door was opened wide.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

As a matter of general interest and information the list of Standing Committees of the Southern Convention is herewith submitted:

Temperance—Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, Col. J. E. West, Rev. S. M. Penn, Mr. L. E. Carlton and Dr. J. W. Manning.

Social Relations—Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Dr. P. H. Fleming, Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, Rev. Geo. N. Edwards and Prof. L. L. Vaughan.

Evangelism—Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Rev. O. D. Poythress, Rev. H. C. Caviness, Rev. A. W. Andes, Mr. W. B. Truitt and Rev. W. T. Scott.

Revising Principles and Government—Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Dr. P. H. Fleming, Dr. I. W. Johnson and Dr. L. E. Smith.

Memoirs—Dr. N. G. Newman, Dr. John G. Truitt, Rev. M. J. Sweet, Dr. W. C. Wicker and Dr. L. E. Smith.

Seminary Foundation—Drs. L. E. Smith, E. C. Gillette, J. O. Atkinson, J. G. Truitt, H. Shelton Smith and Dr. S. C. Harrell.

Inasmuch as the Convention Boards were elected and have been repeatedly notified by their regular calls for service, it is unnecessary to give the list of names at this time. The President of the Convention will notify the Chairman of each Board and Committee and request their co-operation in preparing the program and otherwise providing for the business of the Convention session.

The approaching session of the Convention to be held at Burlington, N. C., April 28th-May 1, 1936, will be of great importance to the work of the churches and institutions within its bounds. The plans for paying off the balance of the indebtedness of Elon College will require the best judgment and loyal support of the Convention, if success is to be attained. That is one of the major interests of the Convention. But that is not the end of our endeavor nor the final solution of our problems. When our debts are paid we have only begun our work. It is the point of another beginning. New demands, larger opportunities and higher aims will challenge the church and its institutions to greater sacrifice and deeper consecration.

What is said of Education may also apply to Missions, Superannuation, Publications, Orphanage, Evangelism, Social Relations and all the other great interests of the church. Members of a Convention should be wise enough to study the whole field of church activities, and broad enough to deal fairly with all. Every Department of the Convention, the Conferences and the local churches should be regarded as of major importance by all the people of the various churches. For we are members of one body. All members have not the same office, but they should cooperate as vital parts of the body of Christ, the Head of the Church.

This writer is a veteran in the matter of serving on Conference and Convention Program Committees. Out of this experience some general observations could be made. Usually every Committee and Board desires the most favorable time and place on the Program. The first or second day is the preference. No one wants to make a report on the last day of the session. Why should anyone take that attitude? Is it because one or two departments have been given preference by common consent? Or is it because delegates have a habit of attending Conferences and Conventions for one or two days, selecting their day and parts of the Program? Is it because many ministers and laymen will not stay through until the closing session, and if they are reached the appeal must be made on the first or second day?

Every session of the Convention is important. Every minister and lay-delegate should plan to attend the entire session. If all the delegates would be present for the opening session and remain until adjournment there would be no occasion for any complaint as to choice of time or place of assignment on the Program. Let every delegate plan to attend for the entire session, and pray that some way be discovered to appeal to our entire fellowship for united effort in helping our local churches grow during the next biennium. Why not make church growth a major emphasis and effort?

I. W. JOHNSON.

VALLEY LETTER.

At this writing I am still at home trying to get well and strong enough to get into my work again. I think I am making some progress in that direction, but it seems to be very slow. I get around right well in the house now, but have not done much going out.

During my illness my churches have been very kind and considerate. They have excused me from all responsibility until such time as I may be able to take up the work again. They make their own arrangements about services or do without them. Most of them are doing without. I hear from them now and then with a contribution on salary even though I am giving them no service now, and have given none since the first of December. This is certainly appreciated at this time when income is small and expenses naturally large.

Leaksville and Newport also turned out in grand style with an old-fashioned pounding. I do not think I have ever had so much good food of all kinds laid down at my door as was done by these two churches some time ago. This calls for a unanimous vote of appreciation on the part of the whole Andes family. We cannot thank each one personally, but hereby thank all most heartily. Others of my churches have also joined in scattered fashion and have kept the good work going on. How fine it is to have good friends especially in time of sickness! Who can appreciate the worth of good true Christian friends? How they help us in the dark days of life, and how even in our best days we must look to them again and again.

A. W. ANDES.

ROANOKE, ALABAMA.

Our church work has been greatly retarded during the winter, but our missionary and Christian Endeavor workers of the Lowell Christian Church have purchased and installed new curtains for the rostrum and otherwise beautified the interior of the building. This is much appreciated by the whole church.

The C. E. Society put on a missionary pageant Sunday evening in connection with their program. It was a very impressive service.

The Christian Endeavor program would have done credit to a much larger society and richer church. Mrs. C. C. Hodges had charge of the play and everyone rendered their part in a fine way. We have some of the most devoted and attentive young people here that I have worked with anywhere. They are planning to otherwise improve the church building when the weather gets better.

We have been very kindly remembered by the friends in Lowell during the severe weather and specially by the manufacturing company who has so generously replenished our coal supply. God bless them all and may He help us to be more Christ-like and do better service for the King. God bless the SUN and all its working force.

A VAIN QUEST.

There have always been men who have tried to find a substitute for religion. This undertaking has been a vain quest. The atheist is, in his way, the greatest optimist in the world. He continues the age-old determination to eradicate the belief in God. He craves the honor of making such an announcement to what he calls a credulous world.

What advantage would there be in such a discovery? What harm has come to the race for believing in God and in a place where sickness, sorrow and death will be unknown? We know as much about an immortal life as we do concerning some other objects which are acknowledged without question. Has anyone ever discovered what electricity is? And yet no one is foolish enough to refuse to use it until a detailed definition is furnished. Does anyone decline to use the letters of the alphabet because we do not happen to know in whose mind they originated? Is there more superstition manifest in religion than is seen in men who take other things for granted?

To the skeptic it is rank superstition to grant religion a place in one's life, but to him it is the essence of wisdom to make a place in our thoughts for all the theories of scientific inquiry. Speculations about religion are no more numerous than the speculations of philosophy and science. It is especially important to remember this when we are endeavoring to balance the variant ideas of men who represent the multitudinous interests of life. Religion cannot be appreciated when it is studied independent of other subjects which attract the thoughts of men. The same course should be pursued in all our relations to science.

In the nature of the case, mysterious elements will always be present in all our discussions of religion and its inseparable relation to the beliefs and desires of men. This is evident because of the distinctions which mark the infinite and the finite. Man gropes no more for light in the realm of religion than is true of him in his meanderings in the fields of science.

The distinctive mission of religion is the moral improvement and the spiritual security of all its devotees. This is not, however, the exclusive aim of all the representatives of science. It is too often true that a few scientists use their profession to discredit the claims of religion. That this object has not been attained in any pronounced form is attributable to the willingness of mankind as a whole to dispense with everything but their religious convictions.

There is room for conflict between some forms of religion and some so-called scientific deductions, but there is no place for enmity between Christians and those who represent the ideals of factual science.

When we center our confidence in the contributions that have been made in the name of divine revelation, we are justified in believing that men will increasingly assert themselves in demanding a place for religion in all the departments of human progress. Were it not for the cultural influences of religion as they are revealed in the edu-

THE CHRISTIAN TASK TODAY.

By HON. FRANCIS B. SAYRE, Asst. Secy. of State.
(Part of an address before the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.)

We are experiencing today a period of discouragement and of growing pessimism. We seem to be slipping backwards in the long march of progress. Human liberty, democracy, parliamentary government, freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, tolerance, faith—these in important parts of the world have ceased to exist. Today the tide is running strong for autocracy and dictatorship, for censored speech and writing, for riotous intolerance, for crass materialism.

During the past hundred years we have been living through an age of unprecedented material development and progress. New and hitherto undreamed-of power was generated by creative inventions and ideas of the nineteenth century. We have made ourselves masters of the material world but we have lost the spiritual values which alone give to life its satisfying rewards.

The results speak for themselves. We have brought about a cataclysmic war which has all but drenched the world in blood. We have generated an economic catastrophe without parallel in history. It is not honest thinking to regard these as visitations of God which we were powerless to prevent. They are clearly of our own making—the result of a social and economic order which we ourselves have built up, founded on acquisitive instincts and making for social injustice and economic insecurity. On top of all this we are building up armaments to a point never before touched in history.

But we have not found the way to win and make secure the enduring and really precious values of life. We have become essentially a materialistic civilization. We have sought happiness through acquisitive instincts and making for social injustice and economic insecurity. On top of all this we are building up armaments to a point never before touched in history.

But we have not found the way to win and make secure the enduring and really precious values of life. We have become essentially a materialistic civilization. We have sought happiness through acquisition. We have placed our ultimate reliance for security upon material force. We have largely ceased to utilize the matchless power and strength that come through religion. We have failed to advance in our comprehension and understanding of spiritual realities. We are losing our faith, and with it our sense of spiritual direction. We have acquired prodigious material power without a corresponding spiritual understanding and restraint.

The world today is recoiling from the disastrous effects of the gross materialism which has followed our loss of faith. Humanity is yearning now, as seldom before, for surer foundations on which to build. There is only one way. From widely shifting beliefs and differing faiths we must sit out life's fundamental values. We must get back to the eternal verities of human experience—for instance, that self-seeking and self-indulgence, unrestrained, ultimately lead to suffering; that dishonesty, whatever the apparent gain of today, inevitably undermines confidence and saps the possibility of rewarding relationships tomorrow; that force and violence, however tempting to gain quick results, destroy the very foundations of social security and thus ultimately delay the march of human progress; that understanding and love have more potency to achieve lasting results than material force.

Humanity is not now athirst for more inventions and scientific discoveries and improved methods of manufacture. These things will not stop heartaches or broken lives or suicides. What men and women are yearning and groping for today are spiritual values, such as inner happiness unconquerable by outward circumstances, joy in daily work and satisfaction even in commonplace labor, the affection of a chosen few and the respect of all, some objectives of existence which colors all life with beauty. Values such as these cannot be built upon material foundations.

Every great civilization of the past has had its rise, its noon-time brilliance and its gradual decline into the sunset. We can scarcely expect our own to prove an exception. We are beset today with dangers to our civilization of the gravest sort. The time is at hand when either we must commence a new chapter of forward progress or watch a slow decline. The outcome depends not upon blind forces outside of our control, but upon ourselves.

Further progress demands building anew upon spiritual foundations. The one solution that I can see, the only solution that seems really practical, lies along the teachings of Jesus Christ. He sensed, as no one else before or since, the heights and depths of human nature, knew how to satisfy its fundamental needs. He understood the secret of power. His life at the time was looked upon as a failure and He died a felon's death. And yet, through His life and through His death, He generated a power which has fundamentally changed human history.

I do not mean more ritualism. I do not mean more ecclesiasticism. I do not mean more dogmatic theology. I mean that if our civilization cannot be brought to understand more clearly and to believe more strongly in the fundamental teachings of Jesus Christ and the principles upon which He staked His life, our civilization cannot survive. I mean that men must of their own consciousness come to perceive the utter folly of trying to build a civilization on materialism and brute force, and come to realize, perhaps through suffering, that the enduring values that humanity will always crave grow out of understanding and love and self-sacrifice.

There is only one way to make men realize that. We must go back to the living Christ—to the audacious, thrilling, winsome figure that actually lived. Unless men learn to love Him, they will not follow Him. Neither will they come to understand how to master life.

That is the mission of Christianity to the present world, as I see it. As one catches the vision of all that hangs upon the outcome, the call of Christ becomes the most exciting challenge in the world today.—In Federal Council Bulletin.

LENTEN FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER.

When Lent begins on February 26th several hundreds of thousands of Christians of the major communions—unless all signs fail—will be using the Fellowship of Prayer. This year's edition, containing a devotional study for each day of the Lenten season, concluding with Easter on April 12th, has been written by Rev. Raymond C. Brooks, head of the Department of Religion at Pomona College, Claremont, Calif. It bears the suggestive title, "Building a Christian World," and each day's meditation is centered around some aspect of this theme.

This is the eighteenth year since the Fellowship of Prayer was inaugurated. It was initiated by the Congregational-Christian Commission on Evangelism and the Devotional Life. Through the Federal Council's Department of Evangelism it is promoted on an interdenominational scale. Last year over 750,000 copies were distributed.

Being printed in an almost unprecedented quantity due to its interdenominational use, and being offered at cost, this attractive 32-page booklet is available at the surprisingly low price of three cents a copy. In quantities of 100 or more, it is sold for $2.00 per 100. Many churches have adopted the custom of securing sufficient copies to be placed in the hands of every church member, or at least every family, on the Sunday before Lent begins. Orders may be sent to the Federal Council of Churches, 105 East 22nd Street, New York.—Federal Council Bulletin.

"HIS WONDERS TO PERFORM."

Autumn brought to Hsiao-I, the county seat of Fenchow, market time, and, presumably, the usual expensive theatricals. But this year the city pocket-book was as flat as the proverbial pancake. "What to do!" said the gentry. "Let's invite the Evangelistic band from over in Fenchow to give their religious plays in place of the other theatricals," suggested a business man. They did. They paid all expenses, and literally thousands crowded around the big outdoor platform to witness the plays. The presentations included: "The Prodigal Son," "Lazareth and the Rich Man," "The Selling of Joseph," "Reform and Christianization of the Home," a Chinese play to combat superstition and a Chinese Morality play.

LOOKING TOWARD THE NEW DAY.

"I face the future with hope and fortitude certain that God never abandons a people who ever follow His unerring and guiding hand." So said President Manuel Quezon of the new Commonwealth of the Philippines in his inaugural address. "Goodwill toward all nations shall be the golden rule of my administration," he added. The Philippines' Number One man also declared that, "Maintenance of peace and public order is the joint obligation of the Government and the citizens. Reverence for law as the expression of popular will is the starting point of democracy."

A Story for the Children

THE FAIRY BROOK.

When the children came to Grandfather's for the summer, little starry-eyed Elizabeth chose the tiny southern chamber for her own, because she could look out the window, across the meadow, and see Fairy Brook.

"Why did they call it 'Fairy Brook,' Grandmother?" she asked. "Do you really suppose someone saw really, truly fairies there some time, playing in the water?"

"Perhaps," laughed Grandmother, as she hurried back and forth in the sunny kitchen; "suppose you and Lester go and see."

The children played all the morning by the brook. "We are going to call it our playground," said Elizabeth, "and play there all summer."

What fun they did have there! They watched the little minnows that swam by and threw them cracker crumbs to eat. They planted forget-me-nots and water-cress by the borders of the brook, and made friends with a turtle who took his sun bath every day on a big flat rock right in the middle of it.

But try as they would they could never see the fairies that they were sure must be there. "Grandfather says it is only called 'Fairy Brook' because it is so pretty," said Elizabeth, "but Lester, I almost just know that lots of things are there we can't see. I wish the turtle could talk and tell us of what goes on when we are not here."

Lester pushed his hair from his eyes and smiled at Elizabeth. "We'll get up before the day is here," he said. "Maybe we can surprise the fairies then."

"Oh, no, Lester," said Elizabeth. "Don't you know the fairies always go before the day comes? We must come by moonlight."

Two nights after that, Elizabeth woke. The moonlight made everything seem as bright as day. She jumped out of bed and dressed hurriedly and called Lester. "Let's go to Fairy Brook," she said, "and perhaps we will see the fairies in the moonlight."

They stole softly down the stairs and out of the door, just as the big clock in the kitchen struck two. "How strange it is to be out here awake when all the world is asleep!" whispered Elizabeth.

But all the world was not asleep. As they came nearer to Fairy Brook there was a rustle and a crash as a mother doe and her two baby fawns leaped out of the brook and rushed back to the forest. Elizabeth and Lester looked at each other with eyes big with wonder.

"The dear things," whispered Elizabeth. "We will leave some salt on the old stump tomorrow night. Grandfather says deer like salt as much as we like candy. Oh, Lester! think of having deer for pets! Isn't it just wonderful!"

Mother Deer and her little fawns found the salt, the apples, and the other good things that Elizabeth and Lester left for them. At first they came only at night, but one day when the children had been very still watching the minnows for some time, Elizabeth caught sight of a pair of bright eyes watching them from a bush. "Oh," she said, "look, Lester, but keep very still."

After that they put things on the stump in the daytime, and if they kept very still, Mother Deer would come and take them, but it was a long time before she would let the babies come, too. At last they grew so friendly that they came every morning for the breakfast the children always had ready for them, and Mother Deer would let gentle Elizabeth lay her head against her soft, furry side, and the baby fawns would lick Lester's hand with their slender pink tongues.

When it was time to go home in the fall, Grandfather promised to see they had their breakfast all winter. "When you come again next summer," he said, "if they are fed all through the winter and spring, they will be waiting for you."

"After all," said Elizabeth, "it was a Fairy Brook. I don't believe things like that happen at most brooks."

"No," laughed Grandfather, "I don't believe they do."—Anne Altha Singleton in Advance.

WE ARE EAGLES.

The two Miller boys had gone over to Holland Dean's work-shop where, with Mr. Dean's help, the boys were working on an airplane model.

"Let's call it the Eagle," Jack Miller suggested. "That makes me think of a story," Mr. Dean said, "that I read the other day, of a great good Christian man in Africa."

"Is it a boy's story?" Hal asked, interested, for he liked above all the stories of boys his father could tell.

"It's a story Dr. Aggrey told some boys about an eagle. How a man caught a young eagle and put it among his fowls, giving it chicken food to eat. One day a naturalist passed by and said, 'That bird is not a chicken, it is an eagle.'"

"Not now," said the owner, "for I have trained it to be a chicken."

"But the naturalist persisted that it was an eagle still, because it had the heart of an eagle, and promised that he would make it soar high up in the heavens.

"It will never fly," declared the owner, "because it has become a chicken."

"They agreed to a test. The naturalist held the bird high and said, 'Eagle, thou art an eagle; thou dost belong to the sky and not the earth; stretch forth thy wings and fly!' But the eagle looked down at the chickens picking at their food and flew to them.

"The owner smiled, 'I told you it was a chicken.'

"No," persisted the naturalist firmly, 'It is an eagle, give it another chance.' The next morning the naturalist carried the bird to the foot of a mountain. It was early dawn and the sun was just rising. 'Eagle,' he said again, 'thou art an eagle; thou dost belong to the sky and not this earth. Stretch forth thy wings and fly!' He held it high, but the bird only looked around and trembled and did not try to fly. Then, knowing the ways of birds, he turned it until it faced the sun, and suddenly, with a wild scream of joy, it stretched its wings and mounted higher and higher—never to return."

The boys had forgotten their work, they were so interested in the story.

"I think the Eagle will be a fine name," Hal agreed.

"It will, indeed," Mr. Dean assured them, "for Dr. Aggrey made use of the story to impress on the people that we are created in the image of God, but that men have made us think we are chickens and not capable of improvement.

"We are eagles," he told them, "your home is in heaven. Stretch forth your wings by the power of God, and fly! Don't be content with chicken feed!"—S. W. Middleton in The Sentinel.

Would we codify the laws that should reign in households, and whose daily transgressions annoys and mortifies us, and degrades our household life—we must learn to adorn every day with sacrifices. Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices. Temperance, courage, love, are made up of the same jewels.—R. W. Emerson.

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The weather still greets us with beautiful snow. On February 20th, we had another light snow. On the 21st we had more snow, making the eighth snow this winter. The morning of the 22nd of February greeted us with delightful sunshine and a moderated temperature. The birds are chirping and are very active in the trees. It make us think that the worst part of winter is behind us and that the beautiful spring days with their balmy breezes mingled with the songs of the birds are just around the corner.

I know that the warm weather will receive a warm welcome by the entire orphanage family. To keep 100 children in the house from the middle of December to the last of February with hardly a single day for them to play out of doors is hard on the children and the matrons, too. But such has been the case since early in December. Most of our children are making good grades in school. They stand shoulder to shoulder with the other children in the consolidated public school. The basketball team is made up of orphanage boys except one. They have played quite a number of schools this season and have lost only one game. They played a team a few nights ago that had not been defeated this entire season and won with flying colors.

The Orphanage feels proud of its basketball players.

We have one case of chicken pox in our big family. It is about time for measles and other children's diseases to appear on the scene.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

WHY PERISH IN THE MIDST OF PLENTY?

When the Prodigal Son, in the story told by Jesus, sat down by the feeding hogs and thought of himself, he soon decided that it was foolish to starve while there was plenty of food in his father's house. He could continue to eat with the hogs, or he could go back home where he belonged. He went home. And received clothes and food and love.

Millions today suffer for necessities, but there is no shortage of food, shelter or clothes. There is plenty for all, but not all get their share.

The fault sometimes lies with the individuals. They spend their substance for things that do not satisfy. Many had rather smoke or drink than to eat regularly and have a good home. That is their fault, and there is little that a good world can do for them until they have come to their right minds and are eager for things that are important. Others are not willing to work for their share of the world's goods. They wait for their friends, or a benevolent government, to supply their needs. Recent extravagant relief, and I say this with appreciation for those who have administered relief for I have worked with them, has undoubtedly taken away the initiative of many individuals. According to the story that Jesus told, God will let his children starve unless they bestir themselves and go in search of food. This law is written in nature. It is the way God works. Why shouldn't the government do the same?

But many suffer who are victims of circumstance. They either cannot work, cannot find a job, or that which they deserve is taken by the greedy hand of another. In such cases it is the business of Christians and government to help. The aged and the sick must be cared for. It is important to get jobs for those who want to work. And the greedy hand should be deterred. A living wage is the right of all who work.

Some are worth more to the world than others, but certainly there is not a fair divide right now. Any American family can live comfortably on less than $25,000 annually. Then why should some receive a million while others get none? That is neither right nor Christian. It is the business of Christians, and especially Christian business men, and government to see to it that incomes on labor and investments are divided so that all who are able and willing to work can have a share and those who are unable to work can be cared for also.

The story of the Prodigal has its spiritual application. The real difficulty with our world today is spiritual. We feed our souls on husks that should be fed to swine. Comic strips for Sunday breakfast will not grow great souls. Movies and cheap magazines will not develop great minds. Major Bowes' programs are no substitute for the worship of God. It takes real food to develop a body, mind or spirit. Those who feed on husks will never grow fat, but may take on the character of the hogs and have to live with them rather than in the Father's house.

Selfishness and greed kill the souls of people and wreck business. Gambling is no substitute for honest toil, but rather is the way to spend what one has without supplying his needs. But the loss of money is only the smallest loss. The loss of desire for honest profits is far worse. "Get something for nothing" is a motto that destroys individuals and business. It leaves people hungry and cold and hopeless in the midst of plenty.

The way to correct our difficulties is to renounce the old way of life, to leave the ways of the swine, and go back to God. There is an abundance of good, of comfort, of peace, of joy, of love in the Father's house. We can get it when we return, but not so long as we neglect the weighty matters of the soul and live for selfish enjoyment. The path to God is the way to plenty in things both temporal and spiritual. If we have followed the Prodigal away, will we follow him back?

RELIGION AND THE WEATHER.

Cold weather in the South has been playing havoc with schools and churches. We were not prepared for such weather. The old horse and buggy are gone and we do not want to walk any more. When the auto can't go we are stuck.

But what of our religion? Is it snowed under waiting for springtime, or is it frozen out entirely? Let's hope that it is neither. Robins and red birds are on their way back north already and their music fills frozen air. If the birds can "take it" and come through with a song, why can't we?

Many are aged and sick and cannot attend the church services. They need the services just as much as ever. Why can't the young people take it to them? You can sing, and read and pray. This weather brings new opportunities to serve.

Some are in need of food, fuel, or clothes. They may not tell it, but the need is widespread. Why does God give us more than we need except that we may share it? Rough weather is a test of the thoughtfulness and generosity of the Church.

The expenses go on whether many can attend or not. It may even cost more to heat an empty house than one well filled. The paid workers need food and fuel and warm clothing. Don't forget them because the weather is cold.

Shut-in days and long winter evenings are good times for constructive reading and making plans for the future. A lower animal may be willing to hibernate (sleep) through the long, cold winter, but not so the Christian. Like the flowers and the trees, this is our preparation for growth.

Let your religion live and shine and sing and serve and give. Then springtime will be the harbinger of happy harvest in hearts and homes and churches.

PROTESTANT LOYALTY.

Why are members of the Roman Catholic Churches more loyal than Protestants? Perhaps they are not but it seems so. Dr. Russel H. Stafford, minister of the Old South Church in Boston, sought to answer that question in speaking to Tidewater (Virginia) ministers at Portsmouth last week. He said the answer is worship.

Worship is the center of the Catholic service. The ceremonies contain the materials of worship as taught by the centuries. Pageantry and drama have their part. Music, prayer, and responses are mingled in the personal approach to God. The altar is the sacred place where God is. People want to find God, and they find him in worship. That is why Catholics are loyal—they find God in their worship.

A little shoe-shine boy said to me: "Naw, I don't go to a Protestant church, for there a man just gets up and talks. I go to St. Mary's. There we have mass." There was reverence in that last word.

Recently a Catholic girl told me with pride of being in the three-mile parade in Chicago that included all Catholic schools carrying banners asking for decent movies. She seemed to be happy, also, to have shared in a youth conference that had as its motto: "We Dare to Be Different." "Spiritual" was a word that she used often in conversation with a stranger.

Yes, I believe that we Protestants can learn something from our Catholic friends. That lesson may be worship of God that leads to loyalty.

WHY BE RELIGIOUS ANYWAY?

Call to Worship:

"Take time to be holy,
The world rushes on;
Spend much time in secret
With Jesus alone—
By looking to Jesus,
Like Him thou shalt be;
Thy friends in thy conduct
His likeness shall see."

Hymn: "Living for Jesus."

Prayer.

Hymn: "It Pays to Serve Jesus."

Announcement of topic—Scripture.

Points for Suggested Talks—

Why be religious anyway? Obviously not to escape heaven or hell. Obviously not because we are afraid not to be. I would not be religious thinking that thereby I would avoid misfortune or hardship.

1. For one to eliminate religion would be to eliminate Christ. Not to be religious would be to automatically exclude from one's life the power of the world's greatest influence. So I would be religious in the sense that I include Christ in the circle of my companionship. His teachings offer wisdom and guidance I cannot afford to ignore. His example is so unique and His influence is so far-reaching that His friendship is essential to my highest development. Certainly it is the height of wisdom to be religious.

2. An irreligious person is one who make no conscious effort to order his life after the Divine Pattern, one who eliminates God from his philosophy of life. I would be religious in the sense that I seek to know God's will as it is progressively revealed to us. I would like to consult the Architect of this universe in the planning of my own life.

3. An incentive for one to be religious comes with striking force in the accumulated testimony of Christian people. All people who claim to be religious are not a credit to Christianity. Yet it remains preeminently true that the creative personalities of history have been, with rare exception, decidedly religious. I would not hesitate to cast my lot with those "who through faith, subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises . . ."

VISION AND SERVICE.

LESSON IX—MARCH 1, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit."—John 15:16.

LESSON: Luke 9. Printed text: Luke 9:28-43a.

The Christ of God.

"Peter answering said, The Christ of God," or as Matthew records it, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." The historic Jesus was the promised Messiah. He was Christ the Anointed One of God. He fulfilled the ancient prophecies about the Messiah, and He himself here privately admits that what He later publicly proclaims on Palm Sunday. We have no need to look for another. No other Christ. This Jesus of history is the eternal Christ.

It is significant, however, that as soon as Peter made his confession that Jesus was the Christ of God, Jesus immediately began to set the disciples right about the essential nature of His Messiahship. "The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and chief priests and scribes, and be slain, and raised the third day"—these are the words of Jesus himself. He was the Suffering Servant of Jehovah so dramatically portrayed in Isaiah. He was to give His life a ransom for many. He was to conquer by love and love alone. The cross was to be the central fact of His ministry. Indeed what happened on the Cross was simply an expression in time of the essential spirit of His life. He saved others because He gave himself for them.

And Jesus said that the law of the Cross was to be the law of discipleship. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his Cross and follow me." Self-denial, the renunciation of self, the surrender of self to Christ—this is the condition of true discipleship.

The Mount of Vision.

"About eight days after these sayings"—after He had told them of the law of the Cross, and while the shadow of His own cross began to fall across His path, "He took Peter and James and John"—the inner circle, those who were spiritually prepared to enter best into his experience, "and went up into a mountain to pray"—the Master prayed. He did not pray for forgiveness of sins, He did not pray for things. He prayed as a means of renewing His inner life, as a means of deepening his fellowship with God, as a means of understanding God's will, as a means of getting strength for the ordeal that lay ahead of him. One thing is certain: if Jesus prayed, we need to pray.

"And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered." It would seem that he was transformed by a light that was not of this world. The beauty of his character and the whiteness of his purity stood forth in dazzling white.

"There talked with Him two men, which were Moses and Elias." Here were the representatives of the law and the prophets. He had fulfilled the one as he had fulfilled the other. They spoke about his decease—the word means his exodus—which he was about to make. Events were going on in time which concerned eternity. The things which we do in the flesh are the concern of those who are in the spirit.

"While he thus spake, there came a cloud and overshadowed them, and they feared as they entered into the cloud." Quite naturally so—it was all so strange, so unusual. Then, too, a cloud was the symbol of the divine presence, or an accompaniment of that presence. Would that we, as worshippers, had more of the sense of wonder and awe in the presence of God.

"And there came a voice out of the cloud"—some certainty in all the mystery, some light in darkness. God hath not left himself without witness. If we follow the light we have we shall have more light. If we obey the voice we hear we shall know more of his will and his truth.

"And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone." He stood out preeminently. Law and prophecy faded into the background in the presence of his majesty. In him is the glory of the Father seen.

The Valley of Service.

It would have been good to remain there—Peter frankly said so. But moments of vision, and experiences of exaltation are not ends in themselves; they are means to ends. They are not to be kept; they are to be shared. God gives that we may share. We have visions on the mountain that we may be inspired to, and prepared for, service in the valley.

At the foot of the mountain there was a troubled, a distracted father. He had only one son, and, alas, he was an epileptic. It was a stubborn case, and the father was heart-broken, all the more heart-broken for it seemed that those from whom he had a right to expect help could do nothing about the matter. Alas, when people look to us for spiritual help when we have nothing to give them.

But hope revived when Jesus came. As Jesus moves amid human need He awakens and quickens hope. The sick and the sinful instinctively turn to Him in their extremity. And He does not fail them. With authority he rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child and delivered him again to his father.

What a scene that must have been! Think how that father must have felt when he realized that he and his only son, who a few minutes before had been a helpless and hopeless epileptic—he would perhaps have preferred to have him dead than to see him thus—to have this son restored whole again to him.

It is a parable of life. Jesus is always restoring boys and girls to heart-broken parents. He is still the Potter who can make again lives that have been marred. There is no lack to His power or his willingness. The only thing that can hinder him is the inpenitent spirit and the disobedient will.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Period of Directed Prayer—

(Play softly—"More Like the Master.")

1. Thank God for the transforming power of Christ.

2. Thank God for the privilege of being a Christian.

3. Ask God to help us to "live" the Christian life.

(Sing the last verse—"More Like the Master.")

Special Music.

Have each member tell—"What Religion Means To Me."

Closing Hymn—"Give Me Thy Heart."

Benediction.

"THE APPOINTED WAY."

"Love the Lord your God and walk in all His ways, and keep His Commandments."—Josh. 22: 5.

There is one way for thee; but one, inform Thyself of it; one way each Soul hath by which the Infinite in reach Lieth before him; seek and ye shall find: To each the way is plain; that way the wind Points all the trees along; that way run down Loud singing streams; that way pour on and on A thousand headlands with their cataracts Or toppling flowers; that way the sun enacts His travel, and the moon and all the stars Soar; and the tides move towards it; nothing bars A man who goes the way that he should go; That which comes soonest is the thing to do. Thousand light-shadows in the rippling sand Joy the true soul; the waves along the strand Whiten beyond his eyes, the trees tossed back Show him the sky; or, heaped upon his track In a black wave, wind heaped, point onward still His way, one way. O joy, joy, joy, to fill The day with leagues!

Go thy way, all things say,
Thou hast thy way to go, thou hast thy day
To live; thou hast thy need of thee to make
In the hearts of others; do thy thing; yes, slake
The world's great thirst for yet another man!
And be thou sure of this; no other can Do for thee that appointed thee of God;
Not any light shall shine upon thy road
For other eyes;

Thee, the angel calls,
As he calls others; and thy life to thee
Is precious as the greatest's life can be
To him; so live thy life and go thy way.

Prayer—Our dear Father, grant unto us thy light and thy love and the desire to walk according to the light that is in us. We would follow thee in un murmuring obedience as we would follow a fuller light along our path. Make us patient, never forgetting that "They also serve who only stand and wait." Forbid that we shall consider consequences when duty is clear. O God, we would follow Thee.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE INFALLIBLE TEACHER."

"I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go; I will guide thee with mine eye."—Psalm 32:8.

The following explanation of this text is so forcefully put by Hastings that I quote:

"It was the end of a long and bitter trial that this promise was given to the Psalmist. It was by passing through doubt, perplexity, and despair that he was taught at last to find his way by the light of God. He had tried long and desperately to be his own guide, to trace out a path for himself through life, and it was after many wanderings, and many shameful falls, and much misery, that he was forced to confess that it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps, and that his only way of safety is to give himself up to One who will guide him better than he can guide himself. Feeling his ignorance, and perplexed at times by uncertainty as to his duty, he besought the Lord to teach and to guide him; and the Lord heard him and answered him, bringing strength to his weakness, light into his darkness, and showing him the way in which he should walk."

A further explanation is given which says, "I will counsel thee with mine eye upon thee," which being interpreted means "that with a Divine word of counsel in the ear, and the eye of providences watching from above, the traveller in the pathway of life will be safe."

Prayer—Our Father, we confess our great need of Thy guidance, lest we be found rejecting Thee. We pray Thee to check our waywardness. Rule Thou over our hearts. However dark our surroundings, give us Thy light and make us luminous, lighting the way of both ourselves and all others whom we meet.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"I HAVE A WAY."

"Remember the way."—Deut. 8:2.

"I have a life with Christ to live,
But, ere I live it, must I wait
Till learning can clear answer give
Of this and that book's date?

"I have a life in Christ to live,
I have a death in Christ to die;—
And must I wait, till science give
All doubts a full reply?

"Nay rather, while the sea of doubt
Is raging wildly round about,
Questioning of life and death and sin,
Let me but creep within Thy fold, O Christ, and at Thy feet
Take but the lowest seat,
And hear Thine awful voice repeat
In gentlest accents, heavenly sweet,
Come unto Me, and rest:
Believe Me, and be blest.

—John Campbell Shairp.

Prayer—Our Father, give us the full knowledge of Thy way as we meet it today, and as we go on, when we are in position to benefit by more grant that light sufficient to show us the way on to our home. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE BOW IN THE CLOUDS."

"I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth."—Gen. 9:13.

Nature everywhere bears the touch of God. There are hours when one feels that there is not a wind that blows that is not music, and not a color in the sky that is not a promise. But it is a more beautiful thought that God has given us one thing to look at in order to keep our faith steady and our courage strong.

It matters nothing regarding how the bow comes to be, scientifically. Upon seeking it, if everyone would remember the sweet meaning of it, God's love, and God's never-failing oversight and guidance, it would move his soul to the higher ecstasies where he would regard it as sacred as a revelation from heaven.

Cultivate the spirit of God's promise in the rainbow. We are sure it will keep away the flood that comes often like a mighty sea.

Prayer—Our Father, and our God, give us eyes to see the beauties of Thy earth, but most of all, give us the eye of faith to see that every pang assuaged by human agency, every kind word that is spoken, every thought given to the despairing spirit, every deed of charity, every grasp of a friend's hand, every ray of light that falls upon life, is a manifestation of Thy mercy. Give us faith to know that every virtue of man is a blessing as truly as God's angels are. Thy bow is in the sky; thy promise is in the hearts. We pray that Thy life may be ours always.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"TRUE LIBERTY."

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free."—Gal. 5:1.

What is the liberty and the freedom Christ gives us? John said, "The truth shall make you free," and "If the Son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed." The Psalmist said, "I will walk at liberty: For I seek Thy precepts." And Paul said, "Now the Lord is that spirit: and where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith the Christ hath made you free."

What is this liberty? It is liberty in law. It is liberty in law because it is surrender and obedience to law. No law affects a righteous man. It respects that which is above us and over us.

It is a liberty of conscience. Only a guilty conscience lives in bonds.

It is the liberty of responsibility that challenges the best in man. It is the liberty that is the power not to do as we please but to do as we ought to do.

Doctor Charles Jefferson once said:

"A dead leaf falling from the bough of a tree has the power to do what it pleases, because it is dead. But the earth travels around the sun and is very careful not to get outside its appointed path, for if it should the smallest iota, it would upset all the life of its surfaces. The earth is far freer than the autumn leaf.

"Being immortal souls, we are created in God's image. We have a mighty work to do and our liberty, service and happiness consists in keeping the orbit which our Lord has traced."

Prayer—

My Lord, my God, the only prayer
That moves my lips for me
Is 'leave the heart that now I bear,
And give me liberty!'

Yes, as my swift days near their goal,
'Tis all that I implore
In life and death, a Christlike soul
With courage to endure.

—Emile Bronte.

SATURDAY.

"THE FOLLY OF PREEMINENCE."

"Whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me; God accepteth not man's person."—Gal. 2:1-10.

Even when he met the holy and revered apostles in Jerusalem, Paul would not allow himself to be overpowered. It was not John whom he was serving, or Peter, nor was it James the Just, great Christian leaders though they were. He was serving the Lord Christ, and Him alone.

A soul is a soul to God. One soul is superior to another in service, but a father does not allow himself to have favorites among his children. There are no Celebrated Personalities in the court of heaven. All will there be so lowly, when compared with the King of kings and Lord of lords, that there will be no kings and no lords.

And so we shall honor manhood in all men, and respect all men as they do their best with their manhood, but we shall not consider that any God-fearing man is more honored than another by Jehovah.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

OUR SOUL-WINNING PROGRAM.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock." —Rev. 3:20.

You who gather at this mid-week service of praise, and meditation are deeply interested in the soul winning program of your church. You want your church to have a program of soul winning, and you wish it to work at that program. You would not like to feel that your church goes thru a single week without consciously seeking during that week to win someone to Christ. You love the Christ yourselves, and you see something of what it means in your lives to be a Christian and therefore you are anxious that others, and an ever-increasing number of them, may know something of that inner peace, and power. You like to feel that you help continue the call of Christ to "Come follow Me." You like to feel that through your own selves, and your very own church, you are still, for Christ, saying: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." In other words you do not like to feel that Jesus has no one in your homes, church, and community, and day, knocking at the door of the soul for room for the Savior of men.

Furthermore, you understand that Christ has directly commanded you and me as Christians to go win others to Him. Jesus commanded it. Our Gospels record it. The church has taught it. And our own consciences as Christians demand it. Boys and girls, and men and women, as little as they themselves may think about it just now, will demand of us a reason why we did not do our Christian duty to seek their lives for the Christ, and His Kingdom, if we fail them. Christ will call us to account if we, as Christian followers of Him, fail Him in winning others to the Way. So, I believe, you will be interested, and I trust edified, in this heart to heart message tonight.

Is there a program of evangelism for your church? Yes, there is, a very intensive one, and you may enter into it heartily. A seasonal, intensive effort to win others will be emphasized from now until the fourth Sunday in April. This special effort will begin in a public way the first Sunday in March. That is to say, from March 1st, to May 3rd, our church is to emphasize along with other things soul-winning. I wish we could have someone publicly profess their faith in Jesus Christ and unite with our church every Sunday during that nine-Sunday period. By the close of that time I hope we may have many who have decided to live a Christian life, and have publicly professed their faith in Jesus as their Redeemer and Lord. What a worthy goal that is! What a noble thing to win someone to do! It is your challenge and mine.

Already I have made a list of prospects, more than one hundred twenty-five of them, whom we should win in that time,—some who are members of the church elsewhere, to membership with us where they do now attend; and others to a public profession of faith in Christ, and membership in our church. By your thought, and efforts, this list could be brought up to more than two hundred. Would it be placing our goal too high to place it at one hundred new members for our church by April 26th? We want real Christians, and we wish to realize that the winning of them will add responsibility to our church to keep them, and to care adequately for their soul's enrichment in Christ Jesus. But on the other hand shall we content ourselves to leave off this business of winning others to Christ because we know it will add to our responsibility as Christians and as a church? Or shall we say it is futile to take in a large number because so many of them may not be Christians, or that we shall never hear of them again? Excuses and alibis do alter Christ's command to go out for Him to seek and save the lost. You and I will gladly do it, and become better Christians ourselves in the doing of it.

In that, by the way, lies one of the great and good principles of Missions: It is a direct and definite effort to obey Jesus in winning others to Him abroad while we are at work at it at home. It is as logical as the love of God and we are as liable to the Gospel that preaches it as we are to the Gospel of salvation for our own souls. There is no escaping that. It has been the glory of the church and its salvation all down through the centuries that it has undertaken to save souls abroad while it put forth effort to build up a strong home base. The two go hand in hand. And therefore, as your pastor, I am asking you to help greatly in this business of winning souls in our own city, and at the same time to give liberally of your money and your prayers in an effort to win others in other lands than our own.

Beginning with our large class of men, and throughout all the classes in our Sunday School, an effort will be made to secure renewed interest, and increased attendance both in Sunday School and in church. Large attendance begets lively enthusiasm and interest, and makes a larger area for the operation of the Spirit of God, upon Whom we must depend, in this business of winning others to Christ. Besides this special effort at increased attendance all along the line there will be a Pastor's Class for boys and girls in our Sunday School who have not as yet professed their faith in Jesus publicly and been received into church. And during the two weeks following Easter we plan to have a series of services daily in our church in an intensified effort to win others to Him. You will be called upon to pray daily for the success of this program, and that God through His Holy Spirit may alter, or amend, or perfect it in whatever way He chooses.

We hope and pray for a tide of His power to sweep through our own hearts on its mission of cleansing and consecration, and on through the hearts of many others, until it shall be as natural for souls to be born into the Kingdom of God as it is for flowers to burst into beauty in His blessed sunlight. It is that season of the year. Let us hope for it, long for it, earnestly pray for it, and then get out and definitely work for it.

In order to quicken our interest in this very vital matter I am asking you to attend carefully and prayerfully to your devotional daily reading of the Bible, and to daily pray for yourself, your pastor, and your church. I wish it were possible for many of you to read some of the books I have in my study on Evangelistic work. I shall be glad to lend them to you. Reading on a subject helps create interest in it. Some of the books I could offer you are: "Parish Evangelism", by Dr. Frederick L. Fagley; "Visitation Evangelism, Its Methods and Results", by Karl Kernahan; "Pastoral and Personal Evangelism", by Dr. Charles L. Goodell; "Motives and Methods in Modern Evangelism", by Dr. Goodell; "Enlisting for Christ and the Church", by Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston; "Every Church Its Own Evangelist," by Rev. Loren M. Edwards; "What It Means to Be A Christian", by Dr. Edward Increase Bosworth; "You and Your Church", by Dr. Fagley; "The Modern Church", by Dr. Philip A. Nordell; "The Evangelistic Cyclopaedia", by Dr. G. B. F. Hallock; "Handbook for Inquirers and Converts", by Rev. C. L. Jackson; "Conversations Circles on Winning Others to Christ", by Theodore S. Henderson; "Personal Evangelist, the Greatest Work in the World," by Sherwood Eddy; "Experiences in Witnessing for Christ", by George Irving; and "Finding A Religion to Live By", by Dr. Chas. E. Burton. There is nothing better than reading the Gospels with the idea of personal evangelism in mind.

“TRANSITORY TRADE.”

“Let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn.”—Ezekiel 7:10-13.

Buying and selling make up a large part of life. It is a useful part, a necessary part. The goods that are made must be distributed to the users. The produce that is grown must be transported to the eaters. Even the works of the imagination must go from their originators to those whom they will inspire and cheer.

But buying and selling add nothing to the intrinsic value of what is bought and sold. A bushel of wheat may be doubled in cost as it passes from the grainfield to the grocer's counter, but the bushel of wheat is still no larger; indeed, it is less.

Fair exchange is the fundamental rule of trade. Therefore, in all our buying and selling let us be as solicitous to pay a just price as to receive honest goods. Whether we are buying or selling, let us make sure that both buyer and seller are content.

Prayer—Free us, O God, from the iniquitous spirit of greed. Help us to buy and sell as Christians. In the Master's name.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

I would like to suggest that each of us set for ourselves the goal of winning one or more persons to Christ during this period, and that you place two or three persons on your daily prayer list with that end in view. It is a great joy to win someone to Christ. The other day while standing by an open grave I saw a man in middle life acting as a pall-bearer. He had come from another city. I recognized him as someone I had known, but I had quite forgotten his name. Coming up to me after the service was over he asked if I remembered him and told me that he remembered me all right. Then he told me how I had made several trips to see him trying to win him to Christ and how I had finally succeeded, and he added that that was his start upward, and that now he never missed a Sunday in church, and that his whole family loved and worked in the church. It was a joy. Your word rightly spoken, your interest and prayers properly shown, your invitation earnestly made will bring someone to a knowledge of Jesus Christ as his Saviour and Friend, and there is no finer thing that you could do.

All along the way our church has had a normal, fine increase. The record of your work back across the years is a very fine one. This church has averaged a new member every week for the past 10 years, and perhaps for a longer period that that, for I only looked up the record for the past ten years: 1926 added 151; 1927 added 10; 1928 added 14; 1929 added 121; 1930 added 24; 1931 added 33; 1932 added 27; 1933 added 51; 1934 added 65; and 1935 added 34. For the present year we have added already 13. I wish we could bring it to 100. In some of the books I have listed above you will be told that a normal increase for a church is ten per cent of its present membership.

It is not amiss for us to recognize that we are a part of a larger program in our Eastern Virginia Christian Conference. There is a Conference Committee on Evangelism which is keeping our pastors posted as to the number of new members received in each field, each month; having a special part of each meeting of the ministers set aside for reporting and discussing of evangelism in each pastorate; and setting aside a whole afternoon of the March meeting for the discussion of definite plans of winning others to Christ in all the churches of our Conference. The three pastors whose work reported the largest increase last Conference were all country pastors: Rev. R. E. Brittle, 53 new members; Dr. I. W. Johnson, 36 new members; and Dr. N. G. Newman, 35 new members. Be it said for Dr. Johnson, second up in this list, that he is doing his 38th year in his field, and is still going strong. Dr. Johnson is not offering his people any fads or furbelows, either,—simply the unadulterated Christian faith, more precious than all the passing vanities of earth! Dr. Newman manages to get the reputation of being the oldest regular pastor in the Conference, and yet, he, too, is right up in the front of the running. Hats off to these two great pastors, long may they serve! Brother Brittle, who leads the list, led it year before last with a still greater margin, in which year he received 74 new members. Brittle knows what the roads are for in Nansemond County, and he knows who lives at the end of the lane in full many a home. May God speed him, too! With the first half of this present year about finished, a city preacher has the lead up to the present. Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk has received 41 new members since last Conference. There are twenty-four active pastors in this Conference, serving 44 churches. I wish we could add on the average, 24 members to each church, which would make a goal of over 1,000 for the Conference. It is not too much. Let us earnestly and honestly do our part here in Suffolk to win those God is placing right at our door, and thus help inspire others to go and do likewise.

Numbers do not count, you say. But Christ does! Numbers may not always count, but work does! Numbers may not count, but prayer does,—an interest in another, friendship, fellowship, and faith! When Christ was on earth he knocked at the heart-door. How? With love, kindness, a good work, a stirring invitation, help, and healing,—a forgetfulness of self and a desire to do good to others that made Him unique. His Church, may it still knock at the heart-door for Him! “He that winneth souls is wise.”

A VAIN QUEST.

cational and social movements of modern civilization, the unbelievers would lack the ability to exert any noticeable influence in the realm of adverse comment. But even now the popularity of the atheistic version of life is confined to those whose lives never become factors in conserving a high moral tone of their generation.

The Christian religion is the inspiration of human desire, the authority for man's loftiest hope, and the bed-rock of universal belief in the immortality of the soul. If anything better were needed for the permanent uplift of the race it would have been announced by the Christ who said, when speaking of his mission among men: “I came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.”—By Rev. F. C. Viele, D. D., in Exchange.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

I am planning, if it should be the will of the Lord, to spend quite a bit of time during this year in evangelistic service among the weaker churches of our State. If any should desire my services and dates and plans can be arranged, it will be a pleasure to me and I trust a glory to God. G. D. HUNT.

LUCKHART.

James Henry Luckhart, son of William and Susan Luckhart, died at his home near Semora, N. C., Wednesday morning, Dec. 11, 1935 at the age of sixty-three. On November 29, 1906, he married Miss Anna Clark, who survives him, together with their five children as follows: Otis, Samuel, Harry, Wilson and Clara.

The deceased was a man of a friendly disposition, a pleasant conversationalist and took a keen delight in entertaining his friends and neighbors in his home. Evidence was given of his great number of friends by the crowd attending his funeral which began by the writer with a brief service at the home, followed by the funeral at Lebanon and interment in the church cemetery. There were many expressions of the esteem in which he was held and a feeling of a personal loss at his going both by word and in the quantity of beautiful flowers banked about his grave.

Bro. Luckhart did not unite with the church, but in no home was the minister more welcome and I never heard him pass criticism on the church. He expressed a belief in the Saviour and the Christian religion and those who know him best tell me they believe he was a Christian.

May an abiding faith in the Saviour and his promises comfort the surviving ones.

MILES.

We, the members of Concord Christian Church wish to pay tribute to our departed friend, Miss Martha Miles, who for many years worshipped with us.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. We humbly bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father, knowing that He doeth all things well.

2. That we cherish the memory of her purity of purpose, her mild and gentle manner, her unselfish spirit, and her loving, tender and wholehearted service to her friends and loved ones. "Who can find a virtuous woman? For her price is far above rubies."

"Favor is deceitful and beauty is vain but a woman that feareth the Lord shall be praised."

3. That we extend our sympathy to her loved ones and commend them to God, the Great Healer of broken hearts.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be spread upon the church record and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

NEWMAN.

Whereas, the Death Angel visited our community and took from our midst a faithful and loyal member and supporter of Henderson Christian Church, Mr. W. A. Newman, who departed this life on November 10, 1935.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First: That we thank God for such a life of usefulness, one that delighted in the cause of the Church and supported it both in attendance and contribution.

Second: That we seek to bear the task of the Church with greater determination to make it a stronghold for God.

Third: That we extend the family our deepest sympathy, realizing that the family has lost a faithful father and husband.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun, a copy sent to the family and a copy spread on the minutes of the church Board of Deacons.

Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

SIMPSON.

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church wish to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved member, Mrs. Myrtle (Kernodle) Simpson, who died June 30, 1935.

Her going has brought us great sorrow. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Simpson, we have lost a faithful member and loyal friend.

2. That we extend to her family our sincere sympathy and pray that God will bless and comfort them.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the records of our Society, a copy sent to the Christian Sun for publication and to the family of the deceased.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. C. L. SIMPSON,
MRS. GEO. SOMERS,
MRS. ROY KERNODLE,
Committee.

OFFERELL.

Bereavement entered our community Saturday, November 9, 1935, when a beloved brother, Mr. John William Offerell was called by our Maker to his reward.

Brother Offerell had been a member of Hines' Chapel for the past few years and we thank our Heavenly Father for his stay with us and for his loyal service to our church and community.

We wish to express our gratitude for his tireless efforts in behalf of the Kingdom. We shall miss his pleasant words and sunny smiles but we strive to meet in that Great Beyond, where there are no tears, pain, sickness or death.

We extend to his grief-stricken father and loved ones our greatest love and sympathy in this sad hour, commending them to the greatest of all Comforters, who said, "Let not your heart be troubled."

H. S. LOWE,
R. W. ISELEY,
Committee.

"WE HAVE THE CHOICE."

At every downward step we encounter immense opposition. We are fashioned in the image of God. There is an inner compulsion of the soul that directs us upward. When we rise, we are acting according to the real constitution of our being. His law is within our hearts. Our deepest nature is with us in the upward flight. We cannot escape resistance. It is either to resist the evil or to resist the good. We shall overcome the evil or we shall overcome the good. It is a struggle either way. We have the choice.—Christian Advocate.

Ability wins us the esteem of the true men luck, that of the people.—La Rochefoucauld.

Alabama Wins.—

In Alabama, half the Confederate pensions will be paid with federal funds. The state has included the veterans and their widows among the beneficiaries of its new old-age pension and the federal government will pay half the cost, under the terms of the Social Security Act. Other Southern states will probably follow this happy example. Northern states can't save any money by a similar method, because Union veterans are pensioned directly by the United States.—Exchange.

Youth Bans Arms Profits in Ballot.—

In a recent ballot conducted by the "American Institute of Public Opinion," the question was asked: "Should the manufacture and sale of war munitions for private profit be prohibited?" The vote was in favor of such prohibition among those who have become of voting age since the last presidential election, the percentage being 84 to 16. There is a growing sentiment among the youth of America in opposition to war and if this spirit can be communicated to the young people of other lands, much will have been accomplished toward its final outlawment.

A Messiah Fails.—

Last August, Mr. William Aberhart was elected premier of Alberta province, Canada, on a promise to pay a "social dividend" of $25 a month to everybody in Alberta. He told the voters not to worry about where the money was coming from; just leave that to him. Now the Alberta legislature is in session. It finds that no $25 dividends have been paid; none are in sight. The provincial government already has boosted its taxes to the limit and its credit is so bad it can't borrow. So Mr. Aberhart is on a sizzling political platter. Is it possible that some would-be American Messiahs would be in the same frying pan if they were confronted with the hard reality of having to make good rather than just promising so as to be elected?—Exchange.

A Labor Shortage.—

Paradoxical as it may seem, with millions still unemployed, there is an acute labor shortage in many of the more skilled and specialized classes. One example is that of the airplane business. Airplane manufacturing companies are doing a rushing business, due to government orders, and they claim that there is great need for good mechanics. The automobile industry is another in which there is a demand for the right kind of workmen. This shortage is due, probably, to the neglect of apprentice-training programs during the depression. Various companies are trying different methods for overcoming the existing conditions. There is an opportunity for someone with a practical idea to do some good.

No Longer a Box of Secrets.—

William S. McCormick, autogyro pilot who went with Admiral Byrd on his recent Antarctic expedition to Little America, says: "Old Man Weather has his box of secrets in the Antarctic region, and sooner or later science will break open this Pandora box, with the result that air and ocean travel will be made much surer and much safer. This Antarctic region is larger than the United States and Mexico combined, and as yet only 75 per cent of it has been explored. From the standpoint of all branches of science the region is full of research possibilities that eventually will be of incalculable value to the world, and in time may change the whole trend of the human race." Commenting upon the above, and evidently having in mind the strenuous winter just passed (?), the Methodist Protestant-Recorder, says: "It looks like somebody has opened a Pandora box already," and no one can well doubt it.

Counterfeiters in San Quentin.—

The federal prison of San Quentin, perched on the rocky cliffs of Sibley Point in San Francisco Bay, is supposed to be one of the "safest" prisons in the United States. Communication with the outside world by the inmates is extremely difficult. Yet, only recently, it was found that San Quentin was by no means communication-proof. On the western coast United States Secret Service operatives have been seeking the source of numerous counterfeit ten-dollar bills circulating there. Backtracking, the trail led through the gates of San Quentin prison and into its printing plant. There the walls were decorated with the pictures of cinema stars, but behind these were found more of the bogus bills, and the dies for making these bills were found concealed in the room's ceiling. Four prisoners finally confessed to their counterfeit operations, acknowledging shipping them to four confederates on the outside.

Is There a Revival in Home Life?—

Author Hirose, writing in the mid-February issue of Advertising and Selling, thinks so. He says that though this revival was born of the depression, that it will not end with it. There is "every indication that people once again are liking home life. It isn't a question of men and women staying home because they have no money to go elsewhere. They're staying home and spending money . . . More homes are now wired for electricity than at any time in the history of America. . . More clothes-washing machines were sold last year than in any other year. . . The sales of automatic refrigerators was larger. . . More people bought electric ranges. . . More homes installed ironing machines, automatic oil-burners, and radios . . ." Certainly there is more real pleasure in spending to improve the home than can be found in purely temporary pastimes. If Mr. Hirose is right, and depression has brought about a genuine and lasting restoration of the home, it may be a cheap depression at any cost.

High Taxes and Educational Endowments.—

President J. R. Angell of Yale, sees in the campaign to "soak the rich" grave danger for privately endowed schools and colleges. Speaking recently in New York City, he said: "Institutions resting on endowments are threatened fundamentally by the type of movement sweeping the political life of the country. If the process goes much further, I can see nothing except the ultimate ruin of these institutions." Another thing that will hurt probably as bad as the loss of sources of endowment, will be the inability of parents of students to pay their proportionate part of the current expenses of these same schools, because of additional taxation. The government has been on a spending spree. Not the rich, but the little business man, the farmer and the laboring man will ultimately pay its bills. Senator Walsh, Democrat of Massachusetts, says: "One thing is certain. The spending program of the government will mean increased taxes . . . If we are to have increased taxes they will have to be obtained through lower income tax exemptions . . . [which] will hit the persons with smaller incomes." Money that is spent for taxes cannot be spent for education. The schools stand to lose at both ends.

Frosting Cakes with Tree Bark.—

It is not just a possibility, but an accomplished fact, if one can believe Charles E. Hewitt, Jr., writing in a recent issue of Popular Mechanics. Not only will the people of Germany be able to frost their cakes with tree bark, but, says he, "will henceforth be able to . . . fatten their pigs on succulent meals of sawdust, pour resin on their salads, and fill their gas-tanks with old twigs and branches." The dream of Dr. Frederick Bergius, pioneer in the industry of synthetic products, has been to make Germany independent of other nations for the necessities and luxuries as well. Most of his experiments have been with wood and coal, and the results obtained would make good reading in a fairy story. His process for making gasoline from coal and heavy oil is being extensively used both in Germany and England. Dr. Bergius recently announced the successful manufacture of motor fuel from waste wood. Almost at the same time it was announced that scientists had perfected a synthetic rubber, manufactured from coke and lime. Other coal products placed on the market this year, were cups and saucers, radio cases, beads, magnifying glasses and shatter-proof glass for cars. So "not only is Germany preparing to breakfast, lunch, and dine on her forests, but she actually has begun to use her coal for jewelry and windows."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Soul-winning at home and abroad—this is the missionary message and spirit that our church must emphasize above all else if it is to grow and glow and go.

Nothing should interfere with the privilege and opportunity of stressing missions in all our churches, Sunday schools and societies during this, our Mission Period—March, April, May and June.

March, April, May, June—Mission Period in all our churches. We feel sure our pastors will not lose this opportunity to emphasize missions—the Cause for which Christ founded the church.

Rev. Ivan R. Smith, pastor of our Winchester, Va., church delivered the address at the Sixteenth Annual Banquet of the Men's Bible Class of Grace Lutheran Church, Winchester, Va., Thursday evening, February 20th.

If any SUN reader missed the great sermon on evangelism and missions by Rev. J. G. Truitt, D. D., in last week's issue we counsel such an one to get again the paper and read it. It was to the point and carried facts worth knowing and thinking over.

The church is more than a benevolent society, or a fraternal order, or a civic club; it is a power house for soul-winning, and for directing the minds and hearts of men and women, boys and girls, to the Saviour of the world Who alone can save this world from sin. In this, our mission period, the church is considering its spiritual task, growth and needs.

In the SUN elsewhere we give news of real interest from two mission points our Board is aiding—Ocean View, Rev. Joe French, pastor, and our mountain work, Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom, pastor and worker. Real work for Christ and soul-winning has been done and is being done at both places with results that count in building the church and the Kingdom.

We now have two good, substantial church buildings, Rocky Ford and Elk Spur, with a comfortable parsonage at the latter and 19 acres of land, all paid for, at a total cost of approximately $10,000.00. Both of these churches now have a substantial membership, and active Sunday school. In addition, a new point, Ivy Hill, some four or five miles from Elk Spur, was opened last summer and will re-open at an early date. Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom in charge of this home mission work write interestingly of it in this week's SUN.

If CHRISTIAN SUN readers pass up everything else printed in this week's CHRISTIAN SUN, we sincerely trust everyone will read what is said under title, "Know Our Winston-Salem Work." We presume that the God of Heaven never began a work on this earth that in its early beginning and days did not have doubters and critics. Possibly His glorious and timely work through our church in Winston-Salem is no exception; but if there be doubters and critics, read what Pastor Scott says—and then repent and rejoice and praise God for W. T. Scott and our loyal co-workers in Winston-Salem.

OUR OCEAN VIEW CHURCH.

There has not been a revolution nor a mushroom growth in the Ocean View Church during the last two years, but there has been an evolution. In every phase of the church work there has been improvement.

The attendance at both church and Sunday school has been encouraging. During the last six months the Sunday school attendance has doubled and church attendance has shown a healthy increase. By a recent arrangement the pastor is able to be at Sunday school for the worship service in which he either has a story or a sermonette. In this way all the Sunday school pupils are reached by the pastor every Sunday.

Our officers and teachers have been preparing themselves for their work. During the last two years twenty-one standard training credits have been issued to our workers in the schools at Christian Temple, First Portsmouth, Suffolk and Elon College. Our corps of teachers are able, efficient and faithful. Plans are being made to have a local training class for our workers. We need more space for our Sunday school. Our present building is so crowded that it is beyond reason to expect the best achievement from our teachers.

Our greatest need now is pews and furniture for the church. Our worship services, the atmosphere for worship, the appearance of the church, the impressiveness and meaning of the church will be greatly improved when we have church furniture. We cannot hope to appeal to the people of this community in an effective way until our church is made into a worshipful place. Our church has $100.00 in a fund for this purpose and $70.00 already pledged. We must improve our church. Several times recently we have not had sufficient seating for our attendance.

The minister has made a constant effort to improve the worship service of both the church and Sunday school in content and execution and the people have responded readily. Thus a spirit of reverence, appreciation and participation has been developed. The use of bulletins has aided us in our worship service.

The church has been reaching out into the homes of the community. The pastor goes regularly into all the homes for friendly visits. The pastor sends birthday cards to all the boys and girls in the community and to most of the adults. Letters are sent at regular intervals to all the members and friends of the church. Visiting teams from the church membership also make calls in the homes in the interest of the church. The minister has had two pastor's classes in which the children have been taught the meaning of the Christian life and church membership. With these methods and others many people are being brought into the Sunday school and church.

Our most recent interest is in reaching the adults and young people of the community. For these two groups we have secured two men of experience and ability as teachers. The groups are growing in activity, interest and size. The Young People's group has not had less than 15, and up to 30, in attendance in quite a while.

Two years ago our church was almost hopelessly in debt. Bills and interest had accumulated to the amount of $1,500.00. We have made a determined effort to reduce our debts. Our present debt is $325.00. While reducing our debt we have kept our current expenses paid and paid $75.00 for a roof for the church.

The outlook and prospect for the church is brighter than it has ever been. We are contacting and serving more people than ever before. People outside the church are expressing their interest in various ways. From all indications, it looks as if we are on the verge of a period of growth and progress in the Ocean View Church. Pray for us.

JOE FRENCH, Pastor.

THE COLLEGE OFFERING.

With the month of February the period set apart for the churches to make their contributions to the college came to a close. I presume it has been many years since January and February offered such unfavorable weather for church attendance and general church activities. It would seem unfortunate that such unfavorable weather came during the college period. The weather has been such as not only to hinder activities in rural churches but in city churches as well.

The program of the college has been such as to require every dollar that could be had to put the affairs of the college in favorable condition for the approaching campaign. We are utterly depending upon the churches of the Convention for funds for current expenses during the months of March and April. You will be reminded that to secure the Catholic bonds sacrifices were required. The additional 25 per cent which they demanded could not be borrowed. There was but one alternative and that was to use what we had on hand and trust to the church and generous friends to supply our needs. I trust that the churches of the Convention will appreciate this fact and will forward their contributions as early as possible. Of course, every church will want to do its part. To date we have received remittances from very few churches, less than a half dozen.

Brother pastors, won't you please help us to bring our income up to the requirements of our expenses? Any offering will be appreciated.

MODERATE DRINKING.

Every drinker is a moderate drinker at the start. So the effort to induce people to drink moderately, a thing that we have heard a good deal about of late, is only an invitation to start to drink, for it cannot apply to the man or woman who is already a hard drinker. The brewers, distillers, bootleggers and all other dealers in liquor are perfectly willing to exhort people to drink moderately, for these make their best customers.

Nobody desires to ride a train with a moderate drinking engineer. Nobody wants to board an airplane in charge of a moderate drinking pilot. A moderate drinking man at the wheel of an automobile is a potential murderer. There is but one remedy for the evils of liquor and that is to destroy the whole business root and branch.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

PREPARE OURSELVES.

Somecne has said that a preacher or a church worker should always smile no matter what happens. When, however, one toils until there is no hope apparent and sees no results, no harvest whatsoever, then there is a feeling of apprehension that instills doubt in one's mind. We then should be reminded of what Jesus has told us: "Have faith in God." We may walk in the path that leads us onward and upward to the City of God.

God has given to us the laws we will have to obey if we enter that city of love and joy.

"Will there be a smile on my face,
In the happy land above?
Where the faithful shall be gathered
Thru my Redeemer's saving love.
As around God's throne they sing;
Hal-le-lu-jah to my King?"

LENT IN EVANGELICAL CHURCHES.

The observance of Lent as a special season for deepening the spiritual life has become well established in evangelical churches in many sections of the country during the last twenty years. The observance has grown with the more systematic planning of evangelistic activities in the individual church on the basis of a year's program.

The culmination period in a year-round program of evangelism comes naturally at the Easter-tide. This is the time when interest in devotions is most easily renewed and when the thoughts of young people and of adults who are not church members most readily turn to the matter of making a public confession of Christian faith.

If other times of the year are used for emphasis upon such evangelistic activities as listing unchurched families, in parish visitation, in promoting church attendance and in religious education, it helps to make Easter a more fruitful occasion in all ways for the church.

* * *

"THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER."

In the present-day evangelical observance of Easter, a unique contribution is made by the Congregational and Christian Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life. This Commission prepares and publishes the daily devotions of "The Fellowship of Prayer." Now in their eighteenth year, these daily devotions are now used in churches of all denominations. Even many churches with such liturgical forms of worship as those of the Protestant Episcopal and the Lutheran have for years distributed copies of "The Fellowship of Prayer" to their members. "The Fellowship of Prayer" is officially sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches, by the National Council of the Y. M. C. A.'s, and other interdenominational organizations. Some denominations use an interdenominational edition issued by the Federal Council while others have special editions under their own imprint.

Each year the entirely new material is used in the devotions. A new theme chosen, new Scripture passages selected, new meditations written and new prayers suggested. A special committee appointed by the conference of national denominational superintendents of evangelism collaborates with the Congregational and Christian Commission in the supervision of the preparation of the manuscript.

The author of "The Fellowship of Prayer" for this Lenten season is Dr. Raymond C. Brooks, head of the department of religion, Pomona College, Claremont, California; Whitman College, Walla Walla, Washington; Tabor College, Iowa, and the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, California. His pastorates have all been on the Pacific coast at Eugene, Ore., Oakland, Calif., and Berkeley, Calif. Dr. Brooks studied at Tabor and Oberlin Colleges and Yale Divinity School.

* * *

"BUILDING A CHRISTIAN WORLD."

The theme taken by Dr. Brooks for "The Fellowship of Prayer" this year is "Building A Christian World."

In explanation of the theme he has written:

"It is now clear that since the beginning of the century we have been moving swiftly into a new world. A storm of unusual violence has swept over our western world and nothing remains as it was. Empires which had endured for centuries have been swept away by its violence. Political democracy, the proudest achievement of the 19th Century, has been equally disturbed. An economic order slowly maturing through four centuries has been so undermined that conservative experts tell us it cannot be rebuilt upon the old foundations. Social disciplines which seemed as firm as Gibraltar have been set aside as readily as last year's fashions. Moral ideals and religious convictions which have been a part of our civilization for nearly two thousand years have been questioned with a severity never before known.

"It is not surprising that great numbers of thoughtful people are asking, 'Can the old religion survive in this new world?' 'If so, under what conditions and to what ends?' I propose, therefore, that in this Lenten period we examine the nature of this new world into which we are moving, that we seek for the foundations upon which we can build securely, that we recognize the contribution Jesus has made and that we discover the price we must pay if we are to build a world wherein dwelleth Righteousness and Peace."

SAYS "DEPRESSION" IS OVER—FOR ASYLUMS OF STATE.

Editor The News Leader:

Sir,—To my mind, the bill offered by Haskins Hobson, of Richmond, to establish a home or institution for the care and treatment of alcoholic addicts should be given earnest consideration. Virginia does have an obligation to provide decent and proper treatment for inebriates—especially since repeal. We know that every promise made those advocating repeal has been violated since whiskey can now be gotten from two sources instead of one—the bootlegger and ABC. We were told that repeal would help end the depression—it has ended the depression for asylums, jails, hospitals, undertakers and cemeteries. All of these are doing a big business. Wives and children during prohibition enjoyed food, clothes, education and happiness. Now what is their condition where fathers drink?

A young man of gentle rearing, of fine personality and principles becomes addicted to liquor, so that he does nothing but drink. He is arrested, thrown into jail, there to associate with the lowest criminal element for just long enough for him to have an even greater thirst than before for the stuff. It is as I have said, either jail or the Western State Hospital. There they are not wanted and no cure is given nor any special study of their needs.

Surely parents who suffer and know will agree with me and beg that our legislators will give our petition a hearing before the session is over.

A DISTRESSED MOTHER.

(Letter in Richmond News Leader Forum.)

NOTICE.

The Mid-Year Session of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Conference will be held on Saturday, March 28th. The Conference will open at 10 A. M. Churches are requested to send the same number of delegates as to the Annual Conference.

R. L. WILLIAMSON, President.

A man cannot directly choose his circumstances, but he can choose his thoughts, and so indirectly, yet surely shape his circumstances.—James Lane Allen.

It is true that honesty is the best policy, but the man who is honest for that reason alone is not an honest man.—Archbishop Whalley.

Elon Alumni

By M. L. PATRICK, Secretary,
Elon College Alumni Association,
High Point, N. C.

A happy time it was at the annual meeting of the Eastern Virginia Alumni Association Friday evening, February 27th. For years I have heard of the alumni meeting in Suffolk as being all one could ask for in the way of fellowship, but this was the first I had been able to attend. I confess I had been inclined to doubt the enthusiastic reports coming away from the meeting every year. Now, however, I am convinced, and I fail to see how one could reasonably exaggerate the good times and enjoyment of the occasion.

* * *

In the first place, my hat is off to the very efficient manner in which the banquet, held in the First Christian Church, was carried out. Dr. Darden Jones, President, had arranged for a broadcast-effect, and it resembled the real thing so well that all enjoyed it thoroughly. You'll have to hand it to those Virginians—they haven't forgot what Southern hospitality is or how to extend it abundantly.

* * *

A good program was arranged, with readings, singing, and, of course, the inescapable speech-making. Yours truly was asked by one high in authority there to say as little, or rather as briefly as possible. Such a limitation didn't take anything away from the program. Others on the program who had no such restrictions were Dr. L. E. Smith and Rev. Mr. Watt, Episcopalian minister. Dr. J. E. Rawles spoke briefly, introducing Dr. Smith, and Mrs. R. T. Bradford responded to the able and genteel word of welcome given by Dr. Jones.

* * *

One thing I especially like about such a meeting is the renewing of friendships. I like to make new ones, too. It might not be as much a secret as I think; so I might as well say that there was a young lady (married now) present with whom I almost fell in love while she was at Elon. I never told her, and, of course, it was too late last Friday night, about fourteen years later! Her husband was present, and that's another reason. There were others there whom I love as brothers. Verily, it was a feast.

* * *

Such meetings as the Suffolk gathering are significant. In the first place, it would not have been possible without former days of happiness and growth at Elon. That speaks for the past. The Friday evening affair indicates that the Elon spirit lives in the present. It seems to me that the future is guaranteed by those big-hearted, hospitable Eastern Virginians.

* * *

I have a letter from W. L. Kinney, Winston-Salem, Class of '16, asking what can be done for class reunions at the coming commencement. He says R. T. Bradford is the permanent head of his class, and he would like very much to have something done about his class in June. That leads me to invite letters from anyone who will volunteer to help with his class for commencement. Final plans are yet to come, and your help is invited. Why not write today and tell me what you can do toward having your class represented at Elon? Could we offer some kind of stimulation for the class having the best attendance? It's time we were at work on the plans. Let's have your suggestions!

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Florida Sanitarium, March 2, 1936,
Orlando, Florida.

The older this writer gets, (by no means old yet, far from it) the more interesting does this world become. From any viewpoint it is a wonderful world—with new wonders every day to him who will keep his eyes open and look about, or his ears open and listen. Two persons in particular fired my imagination and stirred my wonder and amazement the past week. One was about physical, the other about spiritual experiences and achievements. The doctor of physic came in from Canada and has been going up and down America telling folks how to get well and stay well. All his youth and until he was 50, he was an invalid, being told at 54 that he did not have more than four months to live—a heart and rheumatic trouble was nearing its fatal end with him. Then he took himself in charge, began to study what to eat and how to exercise. Now in his 79th year, he challenges any youth of 30 to equal him in feats of physical strength and agility. He resides, so he told us, seven miles from him office and after exercising awhile, walks and runs this seven miles every morning before eating an early breakfast of fruit and milk only, but all he wants of both. Then after a noon meal and an evening meal of a salad of raw vegetables, fruits, nuts, raisins and one cooked cereal, and a plenty of milk and ten to twelve hours work, he walks and runs again the journey of seven miles home. Fourteen miles a day on foot, besides other exercise of the body muscles would tire some of us who are far below 79. He declares he never wears an overcoat, or underwear, has not for years, neither has he had a cold or the first ailment of body or sign of physical weakness or deterioration, being much stronger and more active at 79 than he was at 65. He may have exaggerated, but he looked the picture and peak of perfect health and went through some exercises of frame and body with the agility of a cat. His theme is that our Creator is a perfect Being, and having made us in His image could not and would not have made us imperfect beings. We have brought about our physical ailments and imperfections by disobeying God's laws, our chief sins against the body being that we feed it with all sorts of food mixtures God never intended for the stomach of man.

But by far the most interesting man I have talked with or who has talked with me the past week was a man I have been seeing here for three years. He has allowed me to tell something of his life under the title "A Personal Experience" in this week's SUN. Read it—and then wonder with me. He is a New Englander and true to type, calm, cool, calculating, composed, non-committal. Think of a motherless boy of four years, finding and confessing Christ in his youth, believing that in Him is the only sure and safe foundation for a man in personal experience and business dealing, going about in his quiet, modest way to win others to Christ, and for the past twenty-five years of his life, in addition to his own personal efforts, has kept employed in China, India and Africa scores of evangelists, paid out of his own earnings and savings, to give their time in their native tongue to telling others about Jesus and His promise to save. In these twenty-five years, he has given about $300,000 to evangelists only—with a single exception in one instance of about $8,000—and these evangelists have reported over 53,000 converts during this time. This is not fiction, but fact. I saw and read some of these annual reports from some of our well-known missionaries of the American Board through whom this man employs and pays the native evangelists. And though nearly 80, he, too, looks hale and hearty, and while his business—the manufacturing of shoes—is now managed by his two sons-in-law, he still manages his evangelistic work with the same diligence and acumen that he employed as a business man. In fact winning souls to Christ is his business now—the chief occupation of his thought and time. He believes that the church is cold and static today because the men and women in the pew are not going out and bearing the word of testimony to individuals. It is not enough just to say that my life is a living testimony to Christ, or get up in prayer meeting or Sunday school and testify, but the individual who is saved must seek individuals who are not saved, and sit down and calmly talk about the power of Jesus the Christ to forgive sin and save the soul. Well, what a record indeed this quiet, cultured, refined, modest Christian gentleman has made—and is making. For he hopes to give away many more thousands of his money to the single, simple work of soul-saving, for he says that while he has lost money in business in the last five years, he knows he has not lost that which he gave to winning souls from sin to righteousness through Christ.

And then today a friend came and called me out of bed at 2:30 P. M. for a ride. I went. And what I saw must be indeed a foregleam of heaven. I can't describe it. On either side of the scenic drive for miles were beds and banks of every shade and color of wide-open, full-blossomed petunias—a riot and revelry of color, and when the eye had feasted on all this richness of indescribable and breath-taking beauty, into the perfectly glorious and gorgeous azalia park we drove. Now the azalea is a flower so rich and colorful that it obscures leaves, stems, branches and bushes on which it grows—and you can stand, or sit amazed before mounds of deepest, richest, rarest color. Our God is great and gracious and has indeed created a wonder-world for his children to enjoy. Praise to his holy name forever.

A PERSONAL TESTIMONY—WHAT THINK YE OF THESE THINGS?

[Some three years ago the writer met incidentally, and then happily cultivated the acquaintance, now, we trust, grown into lasting friendship, of the Christian gentleman, if he ever met one, who gives us the following thrilling and altogether remarkable facts of his own experience. He is a modest man, now nearing eighty, and gives us these facts now with only the desire and hope that they may help others. He cares nothing about my keeping or divulging his name since he "is too old and fixed in his ways and convictions to have his head turned or his aspirations diverted. THE SUN's editor, though associating considerably with the man two years, knew nothing whatever of this work of his 'til another told me. I then inquired. Thus, this Christian man, never a rich man, but a hard-working business man from early years, being himself won to Christ by personal evangelism, has given hours, days, months of his time and hundreds of thousands of his money, to personal evangelism, believes now with all his heart that through bearing personal witness by word of mouth to individuals, can this sinful world be reached and saved from sin. Now read the all too brief sketch of this man's Christian work.—J. O. A.]

Something over a dozen years after my mother's death, which occurred on the day I was four years and four months old, a very dear cousin of hers, returning to her girlhood home during vacation, bore her Saviour's message to me. It changed my life's direction, a direction which I followed until I found forgiveness, soul rest and peace in Christ, my Lord and Saviour.

In November (1935), it will have been twenty-five years since I made my first gift to the American Board, that gift to be used solely for the support of native evangelists in witnessing to the saving power of Jesus, my Saviour. The first gift went to Fenchow, to be used under the supervision of Watts O. Pye. During the years since then, other gifts have followed—to that mission and many others in China, Japan, India and Africa, through the American Board to be used to support native evangelists, the gifts being used under the supervision of our own Board missionaries on those fields. It has been, and is, a joy to have such supervisors and correspondents,—Watts O. Pye, Robert E. Chandler, Louis Hodous, Ed Smith, Charles Storrs, Murray Frame, Elmer Galt, Mr. and Mrs. William Stelle, Philip Dutton, Paul Reynolds, Miss Isabelle Phelps, Hugh Hubbard and H. S. Matthews in China; Alden Clark, Henry Fairbank, L. G. Gates, Robert A. Hume, F. E. Jeffery, Clarence Wolsted, Edward Nolting, C. S. Vaughan and A. A. Martin in India; F. B. Bridgman, W. T. Lawrence, C. H. Maxwell, Henry A. Neipp, H. B. Catlin, C. C. Fuller, Daniel Hastings, Ivy Craig, Henry C. McDowell, and James D. Taylor, in Africa, all "princes indeed in Israel." Many of these have gone to their final reward.

These, and others not named here, up to January 1, 1935, have reported to me as one of the results of their labor and that of the native evangelists, the conversion of 53,800 souls.

I have given through the American Board for this work of evangelism a total of $293,044 and my friend, John G. Talcott, who joined me in 1930, has given since then, a total of $35,735—making a total of $328,779 from us, all for the support of native evangelists only, with the following exceptions: Memorial Printing Press, Dondi, Africa; Memorial Chapel, Ahmednagar, India; Purchase of Barsie Plant in India, and gifts for special education under John J. Banninga, all of which total less than $8,799, leaving over $320,000 for the purpose of "making Christ known" in foreign lands, with the definite result of 53,800 converts, and possibly from one to two million souls have heard the Gospel message through these evangelists. That is a guess, for no one knows definitely how many have heard even if at the time they did not heed the message.

I have given these facts out of my life, that you may know how deeply I am interested in the work of the American Board, and why I rejoice that emphasis on Evangelism is taking place in the Board and the churches. I am not unmindful that this may seem too personal, but even at the risk of my motive being misunderstood, I want to witness to the truth in the last verse of James—that, "He which converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death." Because of that knowledge, obtained by experience, when I was able to do so I took on the support of native evangelists which has been the joy and solace of my life. I am taking little credit to myself, however, for the support I have given. All the glory is the Lord's, and His work has been done under the guidance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit by the native evangelists and the fine body of missionaries who have helped administer the gifts I sent over. I have done little work myself—just keeping in touch through correspondence and prayer. I have never seen the face, heard the voice, or clasped the hand of even one of the redeemed. It is sufficient for me to know they have accepted Jesus Christ as Saviour and Redeemer.

Concerning the problems on the foreign field, I have nothing to offer as I have never been there.

And now may I say a word about personal evangelism here in our churches. In our Year Book, I note 6,282 Congregational and Christian churches, with 1,029,002 members. An average of 87 per cent of the churches reported over a five-year period, 1930 to 1934 inclusive. Of that 87 per cent reporting, 36 per cent reported no addition to membership on confession of faith. Conditions do not vary very much from year to year. 1934 showed 85 1/3 per cent reporting—5360 churches, of which 1971 reported no admission on confession. In 1934, out of the total number of churches (6282) with a membership of 1,029,002, the additions on confession of faith were 33,332—an average of 6 1/5 converts to a church. This averages one new member to each group of 31 members in one year's time.

All sermons, in pulpits, by radio, in books and religious papers by over 6,000 ministers; all Sunday School teaching; Christian Endeavor meetings; Prayer meetings; Ladies' Aids; Sewing Circles; Social gatherings, and witnessing for Christ of over a million church members, during one whole year, have resulted in one new member for each group of 31 members. And in 1971 churches, not even one new member on confession of faith. To me, this is almost unbelievable—amazing. What can ministers of such churches be doing? There may be extenuating circumstances in some instances. I hope there are such. To me, as a layman, six-plus converts to each church looks far from satisfactory. Probably those were brought in for the most part by the clergy. What can our laymen be doing in witnessing for our Saviour?

Evangelism—seeking the conversion of sinners—sharing one's experience of Christ—personal witnessing for Christ by word and deed—the Son of Man coming to seek and to save that which is lost?

I am fully persuaded that the personal witnessing for Christ by word, to individuals, is the most vital and important duty of the Christian laity, as well as the clergy. And this duty discharged becomes a privilege and a glory. I believe the duty and privilege of making Christ known to individuals rests upon all church members. I wonder why most of the six thousand clergy largely try to do all this themselves, when they have a laity of over a million members upon whom they can call for assistance? Preaching the Gospel may be, and doubtless is, the highest service, but it does not reach those millions of people who do not go to church. The most wonderful sermon does not touch those who do not hear it. Jesus came to "seek and to save" the lost. We have a laity of over a million and nearly all have friends and acquaintances, and many have members in their own families who are not saved, and if not saved, they are lost. There are millions of these lost souls—all around us—for whom Christ died, and 6,000 clergy cannot reach very many of them. But we, the millions of laity, can reach great numbers of them if we will. The clergy are the leaders of the Christian forces, and as such could lead, teach, instruct and persuade those forces to do the work of evangelists who could personally witness by word, for Christ, to individuals. A very few ministers are doing this. Why are not all of our ministers doing this?

As one of the million members of our churches, I want to say to you leaders of our membership—come and lead and use us in this work of seeking and saving the lost through personal witnessing for Christ—by word to individuals.

Evangelism reminds me of electricity, which is heat, light and power to the world. Personal evangelism has within it the warmth of deep spiritual interest in others; the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ; the power of God unto Salvation, to those who believe.

I believe that if we—both clergy and laity—will add personal evangelism to all the other means of Grace we are now using in the various church organizations, we could in one year so add to our membership as to overcome the spiritual inertia of the churches, and solve the financial problems of the churches and the American Board. This can be done by Christ, through us, if we believe He meant us when He said: "Ye shall be my witnesses," and "go ye," and said all power in heaven and earth had been given Him, and that He would be with us always.

Can we question His power to do this, if we will obey, and trust, and work with Him, as His witnesses? It means for us consecration, self-sacrifice, faith, devotion, real service and love, and may mean an experience for some of us what the Apostle Paul meant by "fellowship of Christ's suffering and power of His resurrection."

The whole world is in great tribulation, perhaps on the verge of another war, with great nations rejecting God and denying freedom of speech or of person to their citizens. I can see only one underlying cause for it all, and that is Sin. I know of but one cure for Sin—"Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Our country had a Protestant Christian church membership in 1926 of 30,135,565. I hope it is no less today. Suppose, for instance, that each member during the next two years brought two members into the church. Is it doing so very much, for a servant of Christ, accompanied by His abiding Presence and strengthened by His power, to lead two souls to Him in two years?

What results would follow? Sin would almost cease. The Righteousness of God, which is faith in Christ, would dominate the nation's life, would exalt the nation in the sight of God and man. "The work of Righteousness shall be peace and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance forever." Under the guidance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit, this witnessing for Christ can be done by most of the members of His church. There is little time or reason for delay. The work is direct, personal, vital, and the people are in desperate need of the knowledge of Christ, which only His witnesses can give. And we, His followers, are His witnesses.

Sunset and Evening Star
And one clear call for me;
And may there be
No mourning of the Bar
When I put out to Sea.

But such a tide
As moving seems asleep
Too full for sound or foam
As that which comes
From out the boundless deep,
Turns again home.

When that clear call comes to us, and we look back over life's journey I hope, breaking through the shadows above our regrets and sorrows, will shine that greatest and priceless act—our acceptance of Jesus Christ as our Lord and Saviour, through the grace, mercy and love of God. And these are the days of our witnessing of these eternal realities to others.—JUST A FRIEND WHO KNOWS THAT OUR SAVIOUR IS ALL SUFFICIENT.

TRUE TO THE SOUTH'S BEST TRADITION.

Southerners who have a sense of human obligation to our 10,000,000 Negro citizens are sometimes thought of as disloyal to the South's traditions. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The best people of the "Old South" had just such a sense of obligation, and discharged it, under great difficulties, with a faithfulness that their descendants may well emulate.

We learn, for example, that multitudes of slave owners, caught in a system for which they were not responsible and which they did not approve, sought long and earnestly for some practical means of ending it. Many of them voluntarily freed their slaves, so that by 1860 there were in America no fewer than 400,000 free Negroes. Others poured out millions of dollars in colonization and repatriation projects. Had the politicians and partisans, North and South, been wise enough and patient enough to follow the lead of men like these, a peaceable solution of the problem would have been found, and the greatest tragedy in our national history would have been averted.

In the early 1800's most of the states passed laws making it a crime even to teach a Negro to read and write. Yet, in spite of these laws, the wives of these same slaveholders gathered their slaves about their feet and gave them the rudiments of education, because they recognized these slaves as human beings, with inalienable rights to a measure of human opportunity.

Recently I visited the lovely old First Presbyterian Church of Lexington, Va., the church of Stonewall Jackson. There they showed me with pride the pew where every Sunday for years Stonewall Jackson taught a class of Negro slaves, because he really believed that God was no respecter of persons, and that these humble black men also were God's children.

In the same little town, in the years following the war, that matchless Virginia gentleman, Robert E. Lee, then President of Washington and Lee University, twice came down to the courthouse square and dispersed excited mobs bent on lynching suspected offenders against the law.

In the light of traditions like these, no Southerner need apologize for taking seriously the South's obligation to its Negro citizens. Here through no fault of their own, and largely dependent for their chance in life upon the white man's justice and humanity, their presence is a challenge no fair-minded man can ignore.—Editorial in Nashville Christian Advocate.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Heaven is a neglected theme in the church. The world is not interested in discussing this topic. Old volumes of sermons reveal many references to the place of the redeemed and the spiritual joys of that happy state. But the human mind delights in change. The point of emphasis was moved from heaven to earth. Ministers became earthly minded. Religion was revealed for the benefit of humanity and the place of interest should be the dwelling-place of man. The mystical was displaced by the practical in this transfer of interest and meditation.

Man has lost something by this change of emphasis. Heaven lies in the field of future spiritual exploration. It cannot be attained on earth. The blessings of this spiritual attainment may be shared, in part, by those who walk the "narrow way" on the earth. These are foretastes of heaven in this material world. But the full revelation of heaven, and the full enjoyment of its blessings are reserved for life beyond the grave. That lies in the future. The time may not be near, the date of entrance is uncertain. This age—the utilitarian age—does not like to wait. The practical philosopher accepts life as it is each day and seeks to enjoy the passing opportunity for indulgence and pleasure.

This desire to seize the present has affected the acquisition and use of money and all forms of wealth. Many people are not willing to forego their present wishes and appetites in order that they may lay up in store for the future. A check for a week's wages or a month's salary is an invitation to go out on a spending spree. Man lives today—and does not think of the needs of tomorrow and its cares. The attitude causes him to jeopardize his health by excesses and undue exposure. One may not live tomorrow—take today while one may—and the tragedy of life begins. The highways of the nation—and of human life—are strewn with the bodies of people who are living too fast in an age of increased speed. Disregard of the future life—on earth or in heaven—will cultivate the spirit of fast living. Impatience cannot wait—time is fleeting and life must be thrilled while the opportunity is here.

But the people who look unto the hills—the spiritual heights, will live differently. They know there will be a tomorrow for them. The present life is limited in vision and spiritual knowledge—but our spiritual sense of things gives a bright hope and a steadfast faith in the future. The spiritual future, which attempts to express its goal in the word heaven, must be recognized in our daily living. "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven" is as fresh in significance and as far-reaching in suggestion as when it fell from the lips of Jesus on the mountain heights. A material-minded people need such counsel and advice. No material reward is equal to the eternal values of the kingdom of heaven. Jesus believed that this ideal of life was worth more than the kingdoms of this world. He could have had great material wealth, but He deliberately chose poverty having nowhere to lay His head—as a babe—or as a conquering Lord on the way to the cross. He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem—not that He might go to heaven after His death, but that He might reach the heights of heavenly character and bring heaven within the reach of others who might follow him in bearing the cross.

The church should think more about heaven. The right perspective would make Christians more interested in the earth and the earthly life. Jesus was more interested in earth than any person who ever lived. He lived the heavenly life—and sought to give Himself that others might live such a life on earth. Heaven should begin here. It is time for the church to return to a refreshing meditation upon the significance of heaven and its relation to our life on earth. We should be interested in the call of the other world. By this call we should find many new duties on earth.

THE CAMPAIGN.

In keeping with the sentiment expressed in the Henderson meeting and actions of the official board a campaign to clear Elon College of its debts and to provide funds for current demands begins this month, the month of March. We hope to make this campaign and this month a memorial for Elon College.

It is our hope that this will be the beginning of the end of Elon's indebtedness. With more than one-half million dollars of our indebtedness already accounted for, it would seem reasonable to feel that the church, alumni, and friends of the college would be glad to assume the responsibility of taking care of the remaining indebtedness of $160,700 and to provide a modest sum for current accounts. The George W. Williams Company of Lebanon, Pennsylvania, has been employed to conduct the campaign for us. Mr. Lovett, advance man for the Company, will arrive at the college Monday, March 9th. Preliminary work for the campaign will begin on that date. Other members of the company will arrive as the campaign progresses.

The George W. Williams Company has been engaged in the business of raising money for colleges, hospitals, and other enterprises for thirty years. This company has conducted numerous campaigns in the South similar to the one proposed for Elon College. It is now completing a campaign for Furman University and David Lipscomb College. Simultaneously with the Elon campaign the Williams Company will conduct a campaign for Richmond University, Richmond, Virginia, for $500,000. This Company enjoys the reputation of not having had a failure in such undertakings. They have a few times failed to reach the entire amount but even then their campaigns have been pronounced a success. The Company is diligent, aggressive, cooperative, and sympathetic in all of its efforts.

The writer is aware of opposition to such campaigns but he is also aware of the imperative need of Elon College and the interest that the constituency of the college has in its growth and advancement. By far the greater majority of those consulted favor the employment of an agency or persons who are experts in organizing and soliciting contributions. Personally I feel that we have made a wise move and if everyone will unite his interest, his efforts, and his means there will be no question whatsoever as to the final results. Our tasks for the college are so imperative and appealing that it is hardly necessary to suggest that we lay aside all differences. Let the past be with the past, put the total of our forces and influence back of the move to free the college of its financial handicaps and provide modestly for its future.

Certainly all who are interested in the college will be willing to submerge their differences and join in the heroic effort to place the institution on a firm and substantial foundation. With increased interest, increased enrollment, and improved conditions at the college and efficiency to its whole program. Presently officials and members of the church will be called upon to help form an organization for the campaign that every individual may be given information and an opportunity to make an intelligent contribution. I trust that when such an appeal is made that there will be sufficient volunteers to form the organization and when the appeal for funds is made that everyone will do his share and do it gladly. For the past few years no one has been unduly pressed for funds for the college. No one will be unduly pressed now but everyone will be given an opportunity to prove his devotion by his generosity. We are hoping and praying for a successful campaign.

SPIRITUAL NEEDS OF YOUTH.

By HARRY THOMAS STOCK.

When, within memory, has the need for spiritual stability been so universal and acute? Everything is in flux; humanity is fatigued and on edge; we are dissatisfied with the present and fearful of the future. The inner tensions of adolescence are increased. The economic collapse has intensified a situation already desperate.

Mr. Babson is probably wrong in fearing that "the CCC camps are becoming hotbeds of radicalism, and if these young men are not soon absorbed into legitimate industry they will become a revolutionary army." But would it be a surprise if the spirits of frustrated youth were to break? A federal department reports that twelve million have reached the employable age and that at least half have not found steady jobs. How many who work have tasks from which they gain deep satisfaction? An extension of the CCC idea is now being put into effect. Two million young people will be engaged in work-education-recreation projects in their own communities, but at a remuneration not to exceed twenty dollars a month. This wise temporary measure solves no basic problem. Must young men and women forego the normal experiences of young adulthood? Is there to be no work for them to do in the world? Are they to be denied the joys of marriage and home life?

We may be impatient with Heywood Broun, who said, several years ago, that one of the saddest facts of this social tragedy is that we take it lying down. We may admire those CCC boys who hung a sign at the entrance of their camp, at the foot of the Olympics, "We can take it." But neither hot rebellion nor tolerant acquiescence represents youth at its best. Their souls are seared, their spirits are cowed or confused. Hosts of youth, lazing or fretting at home, scores of thousands hoboing across the land—what spiritual satisfactions do they have?

Some trained for professions eye cynically their sheepskins and Phi Beta Kappa keys, and occasionally one shows enough spirit to protest as did the wag who wrote on an alumni questionnaire:

"I've always sung the praises
Of M. A.'s and Ph. D.'s,
But in pursuit of Pallas
We are starving by degrees."

When college seniors ask advice on vocational possibilities shall we answer glibly that there is always room at the top for ambitious young people? What can we do for these youth? Within them burns the perennial desire to succeed. They fall in love, depression or no depression. Physiological hungers surge through them. Marriage, already too long postponed, seems a permanently forlorn hope.

Seven suggestions for helping to achieve spiritual stability are offered in the hope that pastors and church school leaders, in the quiet of summer vacations, may plan a fall program that comes to grips with the inner tensions of young people.

The first is that church and community must provide significant activities which will strengthen the fast ebbing morale. It is pathetic, and yet hopeful, that many educated young people grasp eagerly at any creative opportunity, regardless of remuneration. It is encouraging that many of the churches are beginning to deal with this situation. In a conference of ministers in Philadelphia half a dozen men arose, almost at the same time, to tell of what is being done: game rooms set up under the auspices of unemployed, dramatic tournaments arranged, adult forums organized, work on the church property provided, a systematic effort made to bring employers and potential employees together. This leisure time situation will not be over in two years. The churches and Christian associations must get together to survey the local need and to project both emergency and long-time measures.

The church must also provide pastoral counsel on a specific level. It is tragic that at a time when young people need leadership most, competent directors of religious education are being discharged. What is our new idea of economy? As never before, religious education must now become a personal matter. Those who seek to aid young men and women must know them personally and must understand both human nature and the basic findings of adolescent psychology. Individual needs must be diagnosed and a reliable prescription must be offered. Everything sinks into insignificance compared with this opportunity of giving friendly and informed counsel.

A third need is to help them formulate a controlling philosophy of life. Have we a theology which will either justify or explain this troubled world? We are, after all, repeating experiences out of which the Psalms were written.

"Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy waterfalls.

All thy waves and billows are gone over me. . .
Why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy? . . .

Why art thou cast down, my soul?
And why art thou disquieted within me?
Hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him
Who is the help of my countenance, and my God."

The poets and dramatists may help us more than the theologians. Who will forget that high point in The Green Pastures when it becomes crystal clear that even God must suffer continuously? Those educators who scoffed at the need of a theology or a philosophy of life had poor perspective. If we have any satisfying spiritual beliefs, now is the time to reveal them to a baffled generation.

Closely akin to this is experience in "the practice of the presence of God." Professor Powell has written a book, in which he points out (with some exaggeration and with scant attention to the social responsibilities of religion) that the primary task of religious education is to achieve fellowship with God. Is this merely an escape from reality? Is it sheer pious patter? Or is it the profound verdict of human experience in every century? Hosts of thoughtful young people long for a technique of worship, of self-discipline and self-direction. If youth "gets nothing out of the church service," is it not in part due to the fact that we have not taught them what to expect or how to appropriate its values? In summer conferences young people really find God—and often for the first time. They frequently lose him when they go home. Certainly a distinctive task of the church is to enable the growing generation to have those experiences of genuine worship which gave adamant courage to persecuted prophets and unshakable faith to suffering Psalmists.

Our religion is a religion of person, and not of a code or creed. Yet, youth knows little of the inner and social struggles of Jesus. We have obscured Jesus in printer's ink. The experience at an eastern college is typical: only one of the dozen girls at a dinner table gave evidence of knowing the two great commandments. Much less did they know the agony of soul through which Jesus passed in meeting the daily situations of life. If the church is to engage in social action it must make the way of Jesus its constant frame of reference. Else we shall but repeat the follies of the past. It seems strange to say that Sunday school young people need to be told the story of Jesus. But that is the tragic truth.

The fact is that students are more challenged by social need than they are by Jesus. The social situation is real to them; Jesus often is not. It is a startling revelation when they discover that Jesus was as much concerned about social action as the communists are. The sixth task, then, is to engage them in enterprises of social significance in their own community and to enlist them in a Christian crusade for social reconstruction. Life becomes worth while when they work for a cause. All of the secular movements of economic reconstruction are divisive and partisan. Into every worthy movement there must be injected the all-embracing goodwill of Jesus. From every phase of social action there must be subtracted the spirit of vengeance and domination. They will find spiritual stability as they are lost in the Christian cause.

And, finally, is our church just an organization or meeting place, or is it a fellowship of kindred spirits—all confused, each gaining strength and courage from all others? As we feel again the urgency of the first century disciples we shall be bound together with cords of goodwill and suffering. Perhaps it is because our churches concern themselves too much with secondary matters instead of attempting great, basic tasks, that there is too much time for bitter recrimination between the generations. Young people need to be a part of a fellowship of kindred spirits, who find the love and power of God increasingly revealed in the companionship of suffering, yearning, struggling souls.

Hope, poise, faith, self-possession which is not seriously shaken by the vicissitudes of life, a sensitivity of soul nourished by beauty and silence and friendship, an awareness of God and a realization of his sufficiency for every need, a sense of significance through participation in a cause which has wide and lasting social value—millions hunger for this "more excellent way," but know not how to find it.

LAUGH!

When the way is long and dreary,
Hard to climb, our feet grow weary,
Stop a minute! Take a deep breath!
Laugh old weariness to quick death:
Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha!—

When the profits are not coming,
And depression is a-humming,
Stop a minute! Take a deep breath!
Laugh depression to a quick death:
Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha!—

When enemies lie and flout you,
And some friends begin to doubt you,
Stop a minute! Take a deep breath!
Laugh, laugh the falsehoods to quick death:
Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha!—

When the years begin to sap you,
And you know old age will get you,
Trust in God and take a deep breath!
Laugh the gloomy thoughts to quick death:
Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha!—

Laughter lets the mind unbend,
Is a never-failing, sure friend,
God's good gift! So take a deep breath!
It will drive dark fears to quick death:
Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha!—

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

MISSION PERIOD.

Our Convention, some years since, designated March, April, May, June as the months when Missions should be emphasized in all our churches. Of this program all the Conferences of the Convention have approved, and, as far as we know, the churches have also approved and accepted the same as a fitting and timely custom. It covers the time of Spring, and of Easter, and the resurgence, as well as the resurrection of life. Missions being the object for which the church was founded, and is being built, by our Lord, constitutes the life, strength and power of the Church. It is the work of Missions, at home and afar, to exalt the Name of our Lord, and to win souls to and through Him. Jesus Christ and Him crucified is, and must ever remain, the supreme message, as well as the all-sufficient Power that is to save the church and the world. The missionary message, the message of the Christ as an all-sufficient Saviour and Redeemer—that is the message that should ring out in no uncertain tones from all our pulpits and pews especially for these four reviving months. This done, and done with zeal and consecration, we will have the time and the heart in remaining months to talk about benevolence, food and raiment for the body, culture and knowledge for the mind, and other virtues that grow out of missionary seed sowing. Let us in our churches seek now the mind of Christ and His passionate desire to be made known to all the world. The churches can do no better thing these four months than to put missions first in all their preaching, teaching and practice—exalting above man the Name that is above every name—the one and all-sufficient Saviour.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK AS WE SEE IT.

The past four years of growth in our mission work, Carroll County, Virginia, has many encouraging features. The people are slowly, but surely, realizing the joy of living Christian lives. We have come through the extremely cold winter season together. The Master has seen fit to take none of our Christian group. We are extremely thankful for this.

For the first time, since becoming an organized church, our people of Rocky Ford and Elk Spur are paying one hundred and twenty dollars on the expense of the work this year. This amount may seem small to you, but to those of us without an income, it is a considerable sum. Thus in a financial way, we are gradually growing.

There is a sad picture to the intellectual side of our mountain life. The people are having educational advantages that they never had before, and many of them are taking advantage of their opportunities. But the sad picture is: as soon as they receive their high school training, and a few their college training, they leave the mountains. This causes us to continue to be handicapped in securing a stable leadership. Of course, the fact that the boys and girls that are going out to meet the world are better prepared is a result of the work done here by our Board. I think this explains the fact of a very slow growth that is visible in our work here.

There is a decided improvement here, in the physical conditions. The people have seen a reason for taking care of their bodies. Mrs. Grissom has been working on this phase of the work, and the results are encouraging.

The winter months are severe here. The work has to progress slowly, but as spring approaches, we hope to do great things here for our Master. We have had regular services at two of our churches this winter. But the new location, Ivy Hill, had to be closed through the winter months because of impassable roads. We hope to do considerable work in this section this spring. Ivy Hill is a promising location for our church. After starting the work there in July, we had one hundred and eleven enrolled during the summer. And most of this number came regularly. The interest was good, and the people appreciative.

Some have asked me this question, and I answer it as I see it. "Will the work in Carroll County ever become self-supporting?" I do not believe it will for many years unless there can be other points located and churches established. If four churches could be located there, in different communities, and the once per month services, as many country churches have, I believe the people could support a pastor.

If some of our church people will come to the mountains in groups this summer and see for themselves, we feel sure they will receive inspiration from the work. And the people here will be greatly enriched by their contact with them. If you can give us some of your ideas and ideals, we will be glad. Frankly, I think you of the closer locations have missed a treat by not coming to see what is going on in your Home Mission Field. Make your plans to come, spend a day or two with us this summer, and see for yourselves. Then will you appreciate more the things we are trying to do for the Master here.

Your servants in the home field,

REV. AND MRS. R. T. GRISSOM.

KNOW OUR WINSTON-SALEM WORK.

A Report of Four and a Half Years' Work
By WM. T. SCOTT, Pastor.

It is with a great deal of personal satisfaction that I look back upon the past four and a half years, for they have been filled with the thrill of our new work in Winston-Salem. I thank God that I was called upon by my denomination to champion the starting of our church in Winston-Salem, one of our best Southern cities, for I believe lasting good will come from this growing field.

For many years Dr. Atkinson and others of our leaders have realized the need of a work in Winston-Salem, where a host of Christian and Congregational people have gone to make their homes. Many of our better churches are within fifty miles of this city, and we are near a number of our strong rural churches, whose members have moved by the hundreds into this industrial center. Many of these people have been lost to our church because we did not have a work here. Some of the city's leading citizens today were born and reared in Christian and Congregational churches, but upon coming to the city have become substantial supporters of other denominations. They would have backed our own work had we come here years ago. That these people have been able to take their places as Christian citizens, rising above denominationalism, we should rejoice. This is one contribution that our denomination has made and will continue to make. But does our denomination still have a distinct message? I, for one, believe it does. If its message is distinct and unique, then its influence must be continued. However much the decrease in the number of denominations may be desired, the time has not fully come when it may be realized. To this end I believe that our Congregational-Christian Church has and will show the way.

History repeats itself in Christian work as well as in secular life and the future will bring other hundreds of Congregational-Christian people to Winston-Salem. They have a right to expect that the church of their choice should be here, so long as it believes it has a distinctive message. For the first time, our Church is here to minister to these and other people of this city.

I, therefore, make no apology to any man for coming to Winston-Salem. We have not increased prejudices but have lent our voice and program that non-essentials may fade away. A leading Baptist layman, an influential citizen of Winston-Salem, said recently to me, "I rejoice that your Church came to this city, for I believe there is a place for the message of the Congregational-Christian Church. It is different, and most of our churches have yet to catch up with you, in that its record of achievement shows that Christian union is not only an ideal to be preached but also a program which can be put into practice." Further, he said, "Your Church stands for those things upon which families coming from the Baptist or Episcopal fellowship on one hand may join with those of Quaker or Calvinistic background on the other without the feeling of surrender of any essential of Christian faith and practice. I don't know of any other Church in our city which can and does do that." Now, those words came unsolicited and I have every reason to value them for they came from a sensible man.

"But what has the Winston-Salem Church done along the line as above suggested?" some may ask. Well, meet the Superintendent of our Sunday School, a young man holding a responsible position in the office of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. He came from strong Virginia Episcopal background. His wife was a member of the Disciples of Christ. They have two lovely children. Though personally devoted, this fine family was divided in their church relationship when we came to Winston-Salem. The result was that their talents were unused, for they were not active in their respective churches, and their children were being reared without the impact of a church-home upon the family. Neither the husband nor the wife felt the other's denomination would meet their individual needs. They visited our church and after a frank facing of facts united with us, without either surrendering one single thing which seemed essential to them. Both husband and wife are devoted members. The wife is a teacher in our Sunday school and heads the Ladies' Aid division of our women's work. Our Church met a need in the life of this family which had remained unmet by any other church in this city.

Meet our Treasurer, the district manager of one of the leading life insurance companies of the Southern states, who with his wife united with the Christian Temple in Norfolk, Virginia. When they moved to this city seven years ago they were disappointed that they did not find the church which they chose in Norfolk. We met them soon after we came here and they became charter members of our work. The wife is a leader in the church life and the husband renders a business judgment which has made for our steady advance.

Meet the Chairman of our Board, the manager of one of the city's leading department stores. He was of Methodist background, while his wife was reared a Baptist. They have found a congenial church-home for themselves and their three fine children, and they have taken places of leadership in our church. Their son is the leader of our Young People's work. Now, no other church in the city had interested them before.

Here is our Pianist, a woman of high character and is very capable. She was of Baptist background, while her husband had remained a member of one of our rural churches for reasons which are justifiable. They, with their fine son, have taken places in our church as leaders. No church can boast of a more loyal, capable, devoted family.

Here is one of our oldest members. She came from a strong Christian background. While she worked in other churches in this city, she retained her membership in her family's church till our church was organized. She became a charter member, and if my readers could know as I do what our little church means to this dear woman, whose years have passed three score and ten, they would rejoice that we have come to Winston-Salem.

Then there is one of our Deacons, the son of a venerable minister of our denomination who gave himself unselfishly to it as long as he lived. This son, with his two motherless children, came as a charter member of our church.

Now, meet our New Jersey friends who came south to make their home. They were attracted to our church because the "Congregational Church suggested friends." The wife is not only a teacher in our Sunday school but is a brilliant and capable leader in our Women's work. She could take her place in any of our best churches, and her husband is filling the place of a devoted, efficient trustee.

Meet the manager of one of our city's shoe stores. He came from New York and married a Winston-Salem girl some years ago. They came into our church, the first church which had interested him since boyhood. Their three children were christened at our church altar.

Here are a number of members who came from communities of our rural churches nearby. They found their places as leaders in our work as a natural consequence. Then here are a group of Elon College alumni who steadily recognize the Church's contribution to their lives and have taken up their places in the church.

I might go on and mention various other equally important individuals in the life of our church, whose lives have been lifted and used because our church came to Winston-Salem, but I must mention the fact that besides the former church members who have found joy in active service through our church, half of our 64 members have come into our church upon Confession of Faith. No other church has ever won them to an acknowledgement of Jesus Christ. Our church did this much for them and has thus not only ministered as a church-home for them but has effectively preached Jesus Christ to those heretofore unreached. I should say that that service alone has made our investment here worthwhile, wouldn't you? That is, if we attach any significance to Jesus' value of souls.

I must mention another class of people who are touched by our church and who attend our services. They are potentially ours as prospective members and those to whom we must minister. Our Sunday School has an enrollment of more than a hundred, with an average attendance of seventy.

There are about 85,000 people in Winston-Salem and the residential section of the city in which we are located has about 10,000 folks in it. We have a debt to pay to these numbers.

Last year our membership averaged fifty cents per member per week in their total gifts. That record will hardly be matched by any other church in our Convention. Since our organization we have regularly supported our Congregational and Christian Mission Boards and Institutes, and we have paid our Conference apportionments in full except the first year, when we fell a few dollars short. Our women have been active in the mission work of the local church and Conference. Such records in the years of beginning certainly indicate possibilities, don't you think?

Four and a half years ago we started with nothing but a few loyal and earnest followers. With the aid of our Mission Board through Dr. Atkinson, the Extension Boards through Dr. Bloom and Mr. Sweet, we began our work at the Y. W. C. A. (Sept. 13, 1931). Soon we secured a vacant church building downtown and started full time services. In six months we had organized our church and purchased a large corner lot for our church building site in the lovely Ardmore residential section. In another eight months we were in our beautiful little brick Parish House and Chapel erected on a part of our building site, of which none of my readers would be ashamed. Today we have property valued at $12,000.00, with a debt of $2,700.00 against our building. Constantly, in cooperation with our Mission Boards, we have tried to keep our building and program on a high spiritual and social plane, and I believe any of my readers would be happy to be a member of our little church. We don't boast the biggest church in the city, but concede to no church of the city that there is a more loyal, consecrated membership, or a program of higher caliber. And so far as the economy of our program during the past four and a half years, we can say that today our building, though adapted well to our present purposes with its auditorium seating capacity of 250 and its Sunday school classrooms upstairs and in the basement, is so constructed that it might be converted into a modern residence and sold for $3,000.00 more than we put in it. Our corner building lots could be sold for far more than we have invested in them. One thing I can proudly say is that the money of the Mission Boards has not been wasted, but rather, every cent has been conserved. Again, come and see!

Usually your neighbors will judge you more nearly correctly than anyone else. I knew we had a lot of friends in Winston-Salem but I never realized it quite so much as I have since my resignation was announced. Without any desire to boast my own standing, for that is secondary to my church, I have every reason to know that our church has a highly respected place in the city, and I know of no pastor here with whom I would change places. No pastor ever had a more loyal and devoted people. If there are any doubts in the minds of our supporters in the Convention they are hereby invited to come and see for themselves.

I rejoice in the future before our church in Winston-Salem. Foundations are laid for a strong church. God is surely with us, for He has wonderfully blessed and led us, and under the leadership of the right man the work will grow into one of our most effective churches. I ask your continued support of this promising work.

A BORE OR A BLESSING.

Some look upon the Cent-a-Meal boxes as a petty nuisance, others as an opportunity. It all depends on whether one sees beyond the boxes what the money accomplishes.

An able young doctor asked an appointment in the Ryder Memorial Hospital in Porto Rico at a salary of $1,275. He said, "I long to practice medicine free from the fetters of antiquity, mediocrity and avarice." He found his chance in this hospital which treated in a year over 17,000 clinic patients, 1,300 resident patients and had 350 operations performed,—and all for people who had nowhere else to go for treatment.

The Cent-a-Meal boxes help that doctor to carry on, at the bare cost of living, in his post of remarkable service.

A retired minister and his wife who have a pension of $280 from our Board of Ministerial Relief replied to the question as to what income he had beside this, "A garden, a goat and a dozen chickens."

One of our church papers asked recently: "Are we grateful beyond words for our daily bread? Would we prove that we mean it when we say grace at the table? Then the Cent-a-Meal box is a blessing and not a bore, a joy and not a disturbance."

One Cent-a-Meal for a year meets the expense of eleven treatments in the Ryder Hospital. It would more than buy the live stock which goes far toward feeding this old minister and his wife. To fill the box that works things like these is not a disturbance. Every coin is dropped into it with joy. We must not underestimate the significance of what ten dollars work, because when given in small amounts they come so easily.

IT CAUSES A LUMP TO RISE.

A horn sounds in the distance. With a grunt the native carriers swing their hammock from one shoulder to the other and slip back into the rhythm of the jungle trot. They know a village is near—and rest. An archway of trees—and behind it the Christian elder, his wife and choir, all singing a welcome to Mary Thomas, R. N., from Dondi, West Africa. Stiff little bouquets and stiff little bows complete the greeting, bows so stiff as to be almost funny—but, "There is something about it all that causes a catch in the throat and a feeling that tears might be near at hand," says Miss Thomas. "Their lives seem so barren—a book or two, a house of clay or sticks plastered with mud, a few personal possessions—yet their cheer and courage make us feel ashamed." The chief, though not a Christian, allows his children to attend church and Sunday School. These are the future leaders—even he realizes this—who will break up the old indifference and strive for a larger life.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Young people, do you have a Young People's organization in your church? Are you in any way serving as young missionaries of Christ in home or foreign fields? Young people all over the world are making countless adjustments and going into independent pursuits. They are not satisfied with leaving the whole responsibility of missionary activity of their church upon their mothers' shoulders. But instead they are being fired with the enthusiasm revealed in the lives of such men as Grenfell, Livingston, Carey and Kagawa. They are becoming interested in stories and literature which introduce them to new people, strange lands, and exciting situations. A week night, once a month or oftener, may provide just the right kind of missionary program. It may be emphasized in the Church School class, but extra time will be needed to explore this tremendous field of World Friendship and get at your own responsibilities in the world in which you live. If no such group exists in your church, you really need one.

Call a meeting and begin your investigation and study. Talk to your pastor about it and decide with him what young people should be included.

After you have organized, decide upon a special service enterprise. With some, Christmas baskets constitute the total effort. The various interests of classes, departments, societies, and individuals should be considered, and plans outlined for the entire year. Young people's work in each church should include some service enterprise near at home and some interests beyond the reach of community and nation.

Interesting literature should be secured from the state mission office, or from the denominational board offices at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, and 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., and presented to the group. Leaders of missionary groups have the opportunity of acquainting our young people with the lives of our great missionaries. This will not only be a great inspiration to them, but will also be a means of developing them in Christian life and service.

JOY GRIGSBY, Supt. Service,
Southeast Youth Fellowship.

GETTING STARTED TO WORK.

One of the greatest difficulties with any task is the getting started. It was fairly easy to get airplanes to fly after one did it. An automobile stuck in the mud will usually climb out, if you can get it started. A church organization will likely do the thing suggested, if the group can get started. Officers in any organization are fine, after they get started. It is the starting that is difficult.

In a letter accompanying the above article by Miss Joy Grigsby, who is superintendent of service for the Southeast Youth Fellowship, she tells me of how she had to search for information with which to work before she could get started on her task. She wanted to work, but getting started was difficult. I feel sure that the going will be easier from now on. She has written to Dr. H. T. Stock of Boston, and others, and has secured information with which to work. There are two paragraphs in that letter which I want to quote here because they have information that may be helpful to others. Here they are:

"For 1936 the Foreign Young People's Project is entitled 'Congregational-Christian Centers in Mexico.' The four World Service programs by Miss Mary D. Uline entitled 'Getting Acquainted with Mexico' relate to our work in that country. Those who use these programs may thus contribute to a cause about which they are studying. The suggestion is made that a special offering be made by each young people's group, or that a contribution be made in some other way according to local custom. Youth groups who contribute to this Young People's Project do so thru their regular church channels and thus their gifts count on the local church apportionment.

"The current Young People's Project in Home Missions is spoken of as 'Youth's Gift to Home Missions,' in appreciation for all that the Church and Christian leaders are giving to enrich the life of American youth. The program material that is being used in this connection is 'Christian Youth Building a New America' by Miss Lucy M. Eldredge. A copy of these programs may be obtained from the department of World Fellowship, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. Of course a local Youth Fellowship goal for some piece of work within our own area may be included with the two projects mentioned above."

Now that Miss Grigsby has so well started on her new job, we may well expect further accomplishments. Those interested in the help which she can give should write her at Elon College, North Carolina. But even better than to write will be to do the things which she has suggested. That is one way for YOU to get started.

SPECIAL EMPHASIS UNTIL EASTER.

Now is the time when all Christians are thinking of the last days of the earthly life of Jesus on earth. Soon will come the anniversary of his death and resurrection. This is the season when we try to learn the better way to live; how to become more like the Master. Emphasis is placed on personal religious living.

There is much material available to aid one in the search for the Jesus-Way of life. Among these are "Spiritual Resources for Youth" ($.05), "Personal Religious Living" ($.15), "The Fellowship of Prayer" ($.05), "A Daily Devotional for Three Months" ($.05), and numerous other publications which may be secured for a small fee from our New York or Boston offices and other publishing houses. The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, will be glad to send helps to those interested.

This is the season for winning others to the Christian way of living. If Christianity means anything to us, then we should pass along that joy to our friends and those about us. This is usually called evangelism, but the name is not important. It is the work that counts. Why not really try to win at least one person to Christ by Easter, the time we keep sacred to the memory of His resurrection? That will be fine. Let's get started now.

"JUST ANOTHER MEETING."

A ministerial Methodist friend of mine gave me the above phrase. He had just attended a get-together in one of their churches and told me that it was "just another meeting." Many of us have attended such. Some of us have been guilty of planning and conducting such—may the good Lord forgive us!

This week I am to share in planning a program for the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches which is to meet at Burlington, N. C., the last of April and first of May. I wonder if that will be "just another meeting." If it is to be, I am a busy man and haven't time to go. Perhaps I had rather join a certain politician who threatens "to take a walk" on election day.

But this Convention gathering can really mean much for the Church. It will be attended by leaders from our churches in the Carolinas and Virginia. The fellowship should be of the highest order, and probably will be. But there is business to be transacted for the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. The King's business not only demands haste but careful consideration and definite planning. The hundred orphan children in our institution, the college that trains our youth, the paper that represents us and tells our story, the boards that administer our funds and promote our work, all of these need our consideration and serious judgment as well as our words of comfort and good will.

Has the time come in the Southern Convention when there should be a united program of promotion? Is our present method of education concerning the enterprises of the church and our methods of securing funds the kind that bring the greatest harvest in the growth of the church and its institutions? Our recent loss in gifts, members, and churches make some of us wonder if we have been following the right course. As Chairman of one of the important, although poorly financed and promoted, Boards of the Convention, I should like to hear what many of you think should be done. Frankly, I am not satisfied with my part. I believe the time has come for change. What do you think?

PUTTING CHRISTIAN PURPOSE INTO LIFE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MARCH 15, '36.

Scripture: Romans 12:1, 2.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—God's purpose for Paul. Acts 9:10-18.

Tues.—When pride purposes. Gen. 11:1-9.

Wed.—Purposes without God. Jas. 4:13-17.

Thurs.—A purpose for all. Matt. 6:31-34.

Fri.—A purpose completed. John 17:1-4.

Sat.—Purpose to follow Christ. Luke 9:57-62.

Christian purposes are essential. Purposes are abundant—there are selfish purposes, dangerous purposes, flimsy purposes. The drunkard, racketeer, unscrupulous business man, and the thug all have purposes. Amid this bedlam of conflicting, un-Christian purposes, we should be fortified by the saving salt of Christian purposes. Purposes are arbitrarily placed on one. The opportunity and responsibility of choosing the purposes to dominate our lives is ours. As ever, the "set of the soul determines the goal."

God had a purpose for Paul, and there is a purpose for us if we will but find it and not shift aimlessly through life. As you mingle with your friends and acquaintances it is easy for you to distinguish between the ones who have a Christian purpose in living their life, and the ones who have an un-Christian purpose. Let each of us ask ourselves the question, "Where am I planning to invest my life? Is my purpose Christian?" If it is not Christian let us seek the guidance of the Master in making it Christian.

A Christian purpose involves the choice of a vocation. There are many people of higher education. (Continued on page 14.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS TEACHES NEIGHBORLINESS.

LESSON X—MARCH 8, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind and thy neighbor as thyself."—Luke 10:27.

LESSON: Luke 10. Lesson Text: Luke 10:25-37.

The word neighbor means a "nigh-dweller" or more literally, "one who is near." It used to be applied to those who lived next door to us, or near to us. A man would refer to the man who lived in the house next to him, or on the same street with him, or on an adjoining farm, as his neighbor. But modern inventions, modern transportation, modern means of communication have given a new content to the word "neighbor," and neighborhood. A man can eat breakfast in New York and eat dinner in Los Angeles. He can sit in his home in China and hear Big Ben strike in London. The whole world is increasingly becoming a neighborhood. And as someone has said, because the world is becoming a neighborhood we must learn how to make it a brotherhood, to live as neighbors. Someone was asked if it were true that all the people in the world could live in the state of Texas and he replied that they could, if they were friends.

Jesus took this word "neighbor" and gave it a universal meaning. All men are neighbors. And the spirit of neighborliness, the spirit of friendliness, the spirit of helpfulness is the essential spirit in human relationships. The man who is in need is our neighbor, no matter where he lives. The man who helps is our neighbor no matter where he lives or who he is. And the presence or the absence of this spirit of neighborliness determines the character and the destiny of men. This is the ultimate and acid test of man. This is the point of the story of the Good Samaritan.

Several things may be said by way of introduction to this immortal story. For one thing it might be said that when men start out to "tempt" or to "test" or to "make trial of Jesus" they end up by revealing themselves. The lawyer stood up "to make trial of him." He ended up by revealing his poverty of inner life. Again when Jesus wanted to meet life's problems he appealed to the Word of God. "What is written in the law? how readest thou?" Jesus did not resort to isolated proof texts. But again and again He insisted that the Word of God had the answer to the problems of life, to all the problems of life. "What saith the Scriptures"—in their spirit rather than in their letter was the key to life's questions. And finally Jesus insisted that religion must be brought down out of the abstract and be applied to the concrete. "And who is my neighbor?" said the lawyer. Jesus told him the story, and then asked him the question: "Which now of these three thinkest thou was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves?" When the lawyer replied, Jesus said, "Go thou and do likewise." Profession must find expression in service. Creed must issue in deed.

There is a distinctly human and hence modern timeless touch in Luke's record. When the lawyer told Jesus what he read in the law, Jesus said: "Thou hast answered right; this do and thou shalt live. Then we have these words—"But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Him, And who is my neighbor?" Willing to justify himself —how natural it is. How often and how persistently we try to do this, not only before our fellowman, but before God. We can always make some explanation for our failure to perform our duty, or some excuse for our wrong-doing. Alas, how few of us are willing to put the blame just where it belongs. How few of us are willing to say: "I have sinned" or "It is my fault." We know better than we do. We know we are guilty but we try to justify ourselves.

It must have been rather disturbing to this pious (?) Jew to hear a story in which the central character and the hero was a despised Samaritan, one whom the Jews would call a "dog." And the villains were the priests and the Levites, the so-called religious folks of that day. This does not mean, of course, that Jesus was condemning religion. Nor does it mean that Jesus was interpreting religion simply in terms of good works. It does mean that Jesus would insist that it is by their fruits that men shall know them. A friendly and humane and helpful spirit is more important than mere formal acceptance of creeds and correct performance of ceremony and ritual. And Jesus would have us know that often in those who make no claim to being religious according to man-made standards, there is the essential spirit of religion, the spirit of friendliness and helpfulness and sacrificial service. Even in the so-called heathen lands there are those who have the spirit of Christ although they do not know Him by name.

In this brief story there are presented in dramatic way three types of people on the highways of life. There are the robbers, those who beat up, those whose theory of life is "What is yours is mine if I can get it." This spirit does not always express itself in the high-handed way of gangsters and thugs—it expresses itself sometimes in more subtle ways, and to a more or less extent in all of our lives. There are hosts of people who are in life for what they can get out of it.

Then there are those who pass up. They would not deliberately set upon another to rob him. But their philosophy of life is "What is mine is mine and I am going to keep it." In every community and in every nation there are those who are content to bear only their own burdens, who refuse to take upon themselves any responsibility for others. They are good, but they are good for nothing. Their favorite indoor and outdoor, all-year-round sport is "passing the buck" and "letting George do it."

And finally there are those represented by the good Samaritan—those who lift up. They have as their philosophy of life "What is mine is yours also." They believe that to have means that they must share. They bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ. And often like their Master, they go the "second mile." And by a strange paradox of life in giving they become richer. In losing they find. In denying themselves they develop themselves.

"Go thou and do likewise"—walk in the light you have. Put into practice what you do know. Live by the highest and the best.

Christ's triumph is not wholly individual. In his rising from the dead he thought of his true followers and came to minister to their needs. He identifies himself with them, he works in their behalf. The Easter promise is that we shall move through our experience of self-sacrifice, sharing a little of the experiences of Christ's passion, to attain the overcoming which will make us one in joy with him. In the fulfilment of his triumphant purpose Christ is the first fruits. We are a part of the harvest.

MONDAY.

"THE PRAYER LIFE OF JESUS."

"And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."—Matt. 21:22.

The fact that Jesus was often at prayer and always in a spirit of talking with the Father is deeply imbedded in the Gospel story and it is so conspicuous that it is an integral part of the picture of Christ. To him prayer was an inevitable consequence of his attitude to God and his fellowman. Bishop Kern says "He did not steal away into the mountain before day in order to impress the disciples with his piety but because he felt the need of the strengthening inflow of divine power." To him it was a recharging of the batteries that had run down from the daily tasks. It was the opening of a window to heaven in order to catch a glimpse of the eternal purpose of the Father. And at last, in the throes of death on the cross he fought the issue through with God and won the victory "on the battle field of prayer."

Bishop Kern asks, Have you ever contemplated what would be the picture if we expurgated from the gospel all the accounts of Jesus' prayer life?

But Jesus felt the need of Prayer, and Jesus prayed. Like-wise He teaches us that prayer is an essential and dependable law of spiritual life. Take it out of our lives, and says the religious Philosophizer, "it is as if you had torn asunder the hand that binds humanity to God and had struck dumb the tongue of the child in the presence of its father."

Prayer—Our Father, the Father of Love and Mercy, we pray for Thy strength to know the meaning of and the efficacy of prayer. Forbid that we shall lose it out of our lives. Give unto us the Saviour's spirit of prayer and instill in us the highest incentive to obey that law."—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"CHRIST TEACHES FROM A BOAT"

"He taught the people out of a ship."—Luke 5:1-3.

The fame of Jesus Christ had spread so rapidly and His teachings had attracted so much attention, so many people were being benefitted by his healings, that great multitudes followed Him. On this occasion he taught from a boat while the people crowded to the shore line to hear Him.

What Jesus said on this occasion is not recorded but what He did immediately afterwards gives us an inkling of what He may have talked about. What did He do? He performed the miracle of the draught of fishes, teaching obedience and faithfulness and the reality of God who answers prayers.

He healed a man "full of Leprosy," teaching the forgiveness of his sins, the healing power of God, that a full surrender of soul is necessary, and a faith that knows no denial in the asking—that to ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you."

He went to a banquet with Levi, where there were "publicans and sinners," and there he revealed how one may be in the world but not of the world. "I came to seek and to save the lost." "I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance."

(Read the whole chapter, the fifth chapter of Luke.)

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, Thine we are and Thine we would be. Help us to walk with Jesus as our companion today, and our feet shall not slide or err.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"IS JUSTICE POSSIBLE?"

"Let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream."—Amos 5:24.

The laws of the ages impose upon us the duty of justice to our neighbor. The desire for justice is such an integral part of everybody's life that we must believe it to be an instinct of human nature. Even the most unjust demand justice.

But apparently a great many people have, by no means, a clear idea of the exact nature of justice and they have a still less clear conception of the conditions which must be fulfilled in order to obtain it. To be just we must possess a knowledge of the attributes of manhood. Mere kindness and goodness are insufficient. We must be able to put ourselves in the shoes of the other fellow. To be able to do this, say the teachers of religion, "is the purpose and the object of the whole course of Divine revelation." Ruskin's comment on this sort of justice was, "the one divine work of life and the one ordered sacrifice is to do justice to your brother (you can do that whether you love him or not) and you will come to love him. But do justice to him because you don't love him, and you will come to hate him."

Therefore we pray in the words of the text, O Lord, let justice roll down as waters and righteousness as a mighty stream.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE LARGER LIFE."

"Not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others."—Phil. 2:4.

In a conversation we have been reminded that we must not draw the line at justice. We must sympathize with our fellowman and exercise respect, appreciation, mercy and forbearance with him.

We are told that Napoleon once climbing a steep with his companions met a peasant bearing a heavy burden. The aide signalled to the peasant to step aside. But Napoleon rebuked the officer and said "respect the burden. Respect the burden!" Napoleon had been a peasant himself and justice is voiced in his heart, a justice that steps over the line and has mercy.

Prayer—Our Father, thou hast made us neighbors to hundreds about us, yea, thousands, the rich and the poor, the strong and the weak, the firm and the diseased. Thousands of these suffer, there are lives spoiled by accidents, or menaced by internal disorder, or blighted by misfortune. Some have nothing to look forward to but to die. Our neighbors! Oh! if we were in their place! We would want all the care and comfort and kindness that others could give. O God, make life sacred to us, make its opportunities precious and direct our hearts and lives to enlarging and extending these opportunities and blessings upon all whom we touch. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD."

"Oil and perfume rejoice the heart; so doth the sweetness of a man's friend that cometh of hearty counsel."—Prov. 27:9.

"There are hermit souls that live withdrawn
In the peace of their self-content,
There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart,
In a fellowless firmament;
There are pioneer souls that blaze the paths
Where highways never ran—
But let me live by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

"Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by—
The men who are good, and the men who are bad,
As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the corner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban—
Let me live in a house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man."

—Sam Walter Foss.

Prayer—O Lord my Lord, grant unto our hearts the kindest of gifts, true friendship, and thus represent Christ in all our walks—"I love you."

SATURDAY.

"WISE FEAR."

"Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom."—Job 28:20-28.

He is a wise man who knows in what real wisdom consists. He is indeed a sage who does not get his sagacity from books, though he does not neglect them, but from the spiritual Author of all wise books.

True wisdom is to fear the Lord. Not to fall in terror before Him as at the throne of a tyrant, but to know His almightiness, to realize His un-failing justice, to feel His insistence on purity, and to walk in His way as a faithful son walks in the ways of a noble father.

We do not half fear sin. We do not half dread Satan. We walk with amazing confidence in the treacherous paths of worldliness. We are most unwise in what we do not fear. Let us become wise and assured in what we fear.

Prayer—Thou art our tender Father, O our God, and Thou art also our omnipotent Sovereign. May we know how to love Thee, and may we also know wisely how to fear. In Christ's name.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"THE WEALTH OF INDEPENDENCE."

"I will not take a thread nor a shoe-latchet nor ought that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich."—Gen. 14:17-24.

Abram would place others under obligation to him, if they were in need, but he would not be under obligation to others. He would be a giver and not a receiver.

That is the manly attitude—not because there is anything unmanly in being paid for kindness and heroism, but because heroism is so much more heroic, kindness so much kinder, when they are not paid for.

There are many things which are so far above dollars and cents that to receive dollars and cents for them is inevitably to cheapen them. Such is love. Such is patriotism. Such are religious devotion and service. Let us, like Abram, keep our good deeds free from the taint of commercialism.

Prayer—Lord of all generous action, how freely dost Thou lavish Thyself upon Thy creatures! Enable us as Thou alone can do, to imitate Thee in this. In the spirit of Jesus Christ.—Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

REMEMBERED WORDS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"And they remembered his words."—Luke 24:8.

The Church should revivify the words of Jesus, and so keep them alive and remembered that they live, and bring forth their fruit today. This is the great responsibility of the church, and every Christian shares this responsibility. The church is the great depository of the words of Christ. And by that I do not mean that on its pulpit lies the word of God, or in the study in some sequestered place in the church-building is kept the Bible and many books about it. When I say the church is the great depository of the words of Christ I mean that in the members of the church should live and thrive the words of Jesus, that the church should teach them to its members, and that its members should keep them alive in their lives by doing them!

No Dead Christ.

The women in the lesson from which our text is taken were expecting to find the body of Jesus in the tomb. Who would roll back the stone that they might get to his body to give it its belated preparation for burial. But when they arrived there they found no dead Christ. They went to render Jesus a memorial service. They did not realize that instead they would receive from him their marching orders! Are not too many of our worship services more in the nature of a memorial to Jesus, a sort of a sublimated funeral, instead of a companionship with a living, breathing, guiding Saviour and Lord? Our services are not presented in order that we may memorialize the crucified body of Jesus, but rather to memorize the mighty messages of life which he wishes us to have for ourselves, and to bear to others.

Enthronement, Not Entombment.

The service which these most excellent women sought to render would have been most appropriate for a dead hero, but Jesus is not a dead hero, and an unknown soldier, but alas! too often he is an unknown Saviour, and enthronement not entombment was the proper thing for him! These fine women would be the very first to see that. They would see it faster than their much-trained fellow disciples. Love was prompting them to do something, and that love was amply rewarded. Instead of finding the dead body of Jesus they found his angelic messengers. And they said, "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" Leave these tombs and go out on the pulsating paths, the roads of life, and there you will find your Lord. Go out "telling," "go tell," and you will find him right along with you,—"lo! . . . always."

Ointment Exchanged for Orders.

"He is not here; he is risen." And when they heard that, and saw the empty tomb, "they remembered his words!" They heard, they saw, they remembered. They exchanged their ointment,—I have often wondered what they did with it,—they exchanged their ointment for orders: "Remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee." Do the services I attend at church direct me to do his will? As a minister I ask myself the question: Will they who attend church catch again the words of Christ and carry them out into daily living, and daily serving? Or will they simply lay their flowers gently on his tomb, and reverently steal away? How burdened I am that my poor words may blaze, that they may find lodgment in life, that some men and women, boys and girls, may find them implemented with his message and go out and live them and do them! In other words, that they may "remember his words" and leave their ointment of lip-service, and take their orders for living-service in him.

Remembered, Returned, Retold.

When they remembered the words of Jesus they returned from the sepulchre and re-told the words he had spoken to them back yonder in Galilee. They told these things to the disciples, and to them they seemed "as idle tales." But, mark you, their words were not dropped as "idle tales." There is great encouragement in that. Words of the Christ honestly, and lovingly spoken, will not be dropped in vain. Their words set those disciples going. Some went toward the sepulchre, some toward Emmaus. Those who traveled the road found themselves walking with the Christ. "Jesus drew near and went with them, but their eyes were holden that they should know him." He told them all the things the Scriptures had to say concerning Jesus, and when they eventually sat down together to eat, there was that old way of breaking and blessing the bread that caused them to recognize him! Then, they, too, remembered, returned, and re-told his words. They remembered his words, returned from the grave of an entombed Jesus, and re-told his living message.

Our Mission in Missions.

Our mission in Missions is to remember Jesus, remember his words and his works, recount his cross and his Calvary, to cease seeking him in the sepulchre, and to re-tell his story! Why is that so hard? Why do our Christian people shirk it? It may be our cross, but if it is, let us take it up daily and bear it. Our cross shall be our crown as a church, and our suffering shall be our salvation. If we always keep going to church, loying our little gifts on the altar for our own selves, our own building, our own preaching, our own Sunday School,—yeo, our own selves, and by ourselves and for ourselves,—even though it does honor the Christ, or seek so to do, will it not eventually become like bringing our ointment to an empty tomb? But, my friends, if we hear his orders and carry them out our gifts will be like the glorious gift of Mary of Bethany, and like hers will have his perpetual praise and appreciation.

Giving to a Living Saviour.

His memorial is not a memorial to his sepulchre but of his serving. When he established his memorial he had girded the towel of a servant about himself, and had served most menially his followers, and had especially taught them that they should thus serve others. Christ has never been found in the tomb! They found him in the temple, in the mart, on the sea, in city streets, along the roads of Palestine, on the roads of life, even atop the mount of Calvary. He is "the living" and he could not be found among the dead. If we do not wish to be dying members in dead churches let us give our cooperation to a living Christ in re-telling and re-living the Gospel story.

Remembered Words for a Needy World.

The remembered words of Jesus lifted the hopes of his followers, wiped the tears from their eyes, sent them out to tell the disciples, and "all the rest." Luke 24:9. Did you know that phrase was in the Gospel story? Are we helping tell

"all the rest!" Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James told the apostles, and they began telling "all the rest." "All the rest!" China, India, Japan, Africa, isles of the seven seas, areas of the so-called Christian nations; "All the rest." Well, they did their part. We are Christians. Let us do ours!

You're building each moment,
In architect's role,
A character dwelling—
A home for the soul.
So while you are building,
Don't potter and slack;
Just build a fine mansion,
Not merely a shack.

A Story for the Children

GRETCHEN EARNS HER TITLE.

Gretchen was one of the most popular girls in the school. She was not particularly pretty nor brilliantly clever.

"It's just that she's always such a good sport," her friends always said warmly. And Gretchen's friends numbered almost the whole school.

Gretchen heard them say it and always smiled the embarrassed little smile that was part of her charm, and then changed the subject hastily. But she told herself quite frankly and honestly that it was true. She won a good many things, but she lost things, too, especially tennis games, and she was always just as gay and pleasant about her defeats as she was about her victories.

And it really cost her something to be gay about her tennis defeats. Without any particular skill she had worked her game up above the average by dint of sheer perseverance and determination.

"If I could only be good enough to win just one tournament!" she thought over and over to herself as she practiced backhand drives all alone against the gymnasium wall, or heroically passed the cookies, without taking any, according to Miss Vanser's very definite ideas of training.

This year, her very last in junior high school, it looked as if she might accomplish her ambition. She came through the preliminaries with a safe margin. She worked steadily up to the semifinals and won, with a close score. But she knew that her last battle would be her hardest.

"It will take a better game than I generally play to beat Jane Farraday," she confessed frankly to a group of her special friends one afternoon.

"Maybe Jane'll have to default," said one of them casually. You know how Miss Vanser is about training, and how Jane's always eating candy, anyway. If she gets caught she'll be disqualified, and the game's still a week away."

Gretchen reflected upon this remark at intervals all through the week. It was true that Jane paid scant attention to training or practice. She didn't have to; she was a naturally brilliant player.

She'll have a million chances to win championship," Gretchen thought to herself. "And this is probably my only one. If only—" But she always cut off this ugly thought as soon as she caught herself thinking it.

One day—the day before the match—Miss Vanser stopped Gretchen as she went to lunch.

"I have a new Helen Wills book I think you might like," she said. She often lent Gretchen tennis-books. "Will you come up to the cloak-room with me while I get it?"

As they started up the stairs another teacher caught sight of Miss Vanser and signalled wildly to her.

Miss Vanser smothered a sigh. "It's Miss Smith, dear," she said. "I'll go and see what she wants. You run on up, and I'll be there in a minute."

Gretchen ran obediently up-stairs. The door of the cloak-room was ajar, but she could see that there was someone there, and she was timid about entering; it was a teacher's sanctuary, where pupils were not invited. As she hovered timidly at the door, trying to see who was there, she caught a glimpse of a swinging shoe, strangely scuffed and small. Why—why, it was Jane! The teachers were generally all in the lunch-room at this hour, and Jane, with characteristic audacity, and coolness of judgment had considered this the very safest retreat. For Jane, as she read her magazine (no tennis magazine, but a very breezy one of the fiction variety), was eating candy, a large and unmistakable bar of candy.

Gretchen slid to the side of the door and stood there exulting. She would still be there, quite innocent and shy, when Miss Vanser came, and then they would go in—and Jane would be disqualified and Gretchen would win the championship! Everyone would be so proud of her; she could hear them saying how glad they were. "You're always such a good sport, anyway," they would say.

Such a good sport. The little phrase stayed in her mind, spread, and grew, and blotted out everything else. She, who was supposed to be a good sport, had entertained such an idea! She felt ashamed and surprised at herself.

Gretchen looked around the edge of the door. "Better ditch it, Jane," she said huskily, "here comes Miss Vanser."

The next day Jane won the match. Gretchen shook hands with her so cordially after it that more than half the applause was for her. As she threaded her way through the throng of her school-mates, she heard eddying away admiringly on all sides the familiar phrase:

"Isn't Gretchen the best sport! You just can't help liking her!"

But this time her little embarrassed smile was humble as well. She thought to herself, "Beginning to be a good sport, maybe!"

What's the difference between being a good sport with an audience and when no one else knows about it?—Eleanor Creannell Means in Young People's Leader.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

education in the world today who have not chosen their vocation because of a Christian purpose. Many of them live for selfish gain. Among them—the chemist who gives out the formula for intoxicating liquors; the brilliant lawyer who works with the criminal "gang"; the scientist whose inventions work for the destruction of mankind; the unscrupulous business man who is not fair to his employees. A school teacher who was provoked with her class said, "Why do you think I am here trying to teach you? Do you think it is because I love you? No, it is because I get a hundred dollars a month for it." She had chosen a vocation simply to make a living and had no Christian purpose in view.

To aspire toward an education may well be a worthy Christian purpose. We need an education to equip ourselves for service—service in a life that has a Christian purpose—whether it be a life spent among our fellow countrymen or on the foreign field spreading the gospel among men. We should utilize some of our leisure time for the purpose of self-improvement.

To engage in some form of unselfish project or activity would have a Christian purpose. Also, sharing at least a part of our income with the church and with those who are less fortunate than we are.

Let each of us purpose in our heart to live for God and His Kingdom. "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable and perfect will of God." Let us exemplify the spirit of Christ in our own particular walk of life.

Christian purposes are redemptive in their influence on the individual as well as on society. Definite Christian purposes lead to the concentration of efforts and the conservation of energy. No life can be properly orientated without the discipline of well-defined aims. One, having "set his face steadfastly" toward some worthy achievement, eliminates lost motion and avoids misdirected efforts. MRS. W. B. W.

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

It is always interesting to read the children's grade cards at the end of the month. These cards give a pretty good index as to the grade of work the child is doing.

One striking thing about the children in the Christian Orphanage is that so many of them make "A" on department. In reading the cards this week, it was interesting to look at a card with "A" on department clear across as far as they have gone this school year.

Billy Parks, in the seventh grade, deserves special mention. He got "A" on every subject and "A" on department. His grade card showed "A's" from bottom to top.

Laura Maye Howard also deserves special mention. She has ten subjects and got seven "A's" and "A" on department.

Little William Leshar, in the first grade, made the honor roll again. He made all "A's" but two.

Little Robert Petty deserves mention because he did well in his work, too.

A Scout troop for girls has been organized here in town and one for boys. Quite a number of our boys and girls have joined.

We are always glad for our boys and girls to become members because the principles taught are excellent.

We are wondering if the good women will make and send us Easter dresses for the larger girls this coming Easter. It has been a custom for a number of years and it has been a wonderful help to us in this work.

OBITUARIES

MOORE.

Mrs. Medic Ann Moore was born January 6, 1874 and died December 5, 1935, aged 61 years, 10 months and 29 days.

She was twice married; the first time to Silas N. Gay and to this union were born 7 children, 4 sons and 3 daughters.

Her husband having died, she was united in marriage to Jesse T. Moore.

Mrs. Moore is survived by her four sons, Messrs C. L. Gay, Zuni, Va.; L. R., and W. A. Gay, Norfolk, Va.; C. H. Gay, Windsor, Va.; three daughters, Mesdames W. E. Ricketts, T. O. Blanchard, Portsmouth, Va.; E. Taylor, Norfolk, Va., and one half-sister.

The funeral was conducted by the writer from Antioch Christian Church on December 8th, assisted by Rev. J. S. Cobb and interment was in the Church cemetery.

Mrs. Gay had so lived that she left her impress upon the hearts of her many friends who attended her funeral.

C. E. GERRINGER.

BRADSHAW.

Jacob E. Bradshaw, son of the late Wm. and Elizabeth Bradshaw, was born May 9, 1868 and died January 18, 1936 after a lingering illness. Aged 67 years, 8 months and 9 days.

On December 30, 1891, he was married to Miss Ada Stephenson. To this union were born three sons. His wife having preceded him in death, he was married to Mrs. Annie Green Harris on April 26, 1925. He is survived by his widow and three sons: Messrs Howard and Raleigh Bradshaw of Windsor and Mr. Delaware Bradshaw of Baltimore, Md., 9 grandchildren, 3 brothers and 3 sisters.

Early in life he united with the Isle of Wight Christian Church and remained a member until the end.

The funeral was conducted by the writer from the Windsor Christian Church, assisted by Dr. I. W. Johnson, Rev. J. S.

Cobb and Rev. W. N. Harris and interment was in the Windsor cemetery.

May God comfort and lead the bereaved.

Needed!—a Boom!—

Business Week has calculated that if the tax rate of today could be applied to an income of 1929, the result would be taxes amounting to $9,000,000,000, greater by $2,305,451,611 than the actual historical peak of 1920. Furthermore, if the revenues of the present fiscal year were as big, a deficit of $3,200,000,000 would be replaced by a surplus of $1,400,000,000. All the United States needs to balance the national budget is a business boom.

Prison Goods Under Arrest.—

The Supreme Court last week sustained the Hawes-Cooper act. What this means is that prison-manufactured goods is definitely deprived of interstate commerce protection and therefore of its ability to compete with free industry. The act prevents any state from selling prison-made merchandise in any other state which may have laws preventing such sales. The particular action involved in the decision was one in which Ohio won a decision which made it illegal to sell shirts manufactured in an Alabama prison in competition with those made by a regular shirt manufacturer.

Weather Cycles.—

Weather seems to run in cycles covering long periods of years. While there may be years that are exceptions to the general rule, the trend is supposed to be in a definite direction. Following the unusual weather of the now passing winter, comes the prediction that the country has just gotten a taste of what is to come. Joseph Burton Kincer, climatologist of the United States Weather Bureau in Washington, says "These up-and-down trends usually cover many years. . . An exhaustive study of past records give climatologists reasons to believe that the warm and dry trends have reached their natural limits, so that we may reasonably expect a reversal of conditions, with a general run of colder and wetter weather in prospect for a good many years to come."

Pictures in the Papers!—

One of the most notable developments in American journalism was the introduction of a wire-transmitted photograph. Up to the present time the machinery required for such transmission has been both expensive and complicated, but only last week the New York Times—World Wide photo service announced the advent of a light weight portable transmitting unit which can send photographs over regular telephone wires and from any local telephone in the country. Other organizations have since made similar announcements. This means that, according to Business Week, "a steady stream of news pictures, less than a half hour old, will march across the news desks of leading newspapers from coast to coast." The time element which has confined the use of action photographs in daily papers almost exclusively to local pictures will at last be eliminated.

Hitler Goose-steps into the Rhine Area.—

Events are happening in Europe too fast for any statement to be up to date unless made public by radio or telegraph. When the Germans marched into the Rhine sector a few days ago, there was history in the making. This action was possibly not unexpected by those who had their ears to the ground, but it was hoped by them that such action would be postponed until what might be called, for the former allied powers, more auspicious times. Regardless of opinions as to who might be right, it seems that it would have been impossible to expect a continuation of the recent status along the Rhine. Certainly a demilitarized zone would have been possible, and it would have been a powerful factor in the promotion of peace in Europe, just as is the lack of boundary fortifications between this country and Canada. But the status was that of half fish and half fowl, or rather of one-half mole and no mole at all. Along that frontier, since the conclusion of the World War, the French have spent $250,000,000 in fortifications. Today there are 150,000 French troops living in underground passages like so many moles. This underground fort is said to be the most elaborate military feat ever accomplished. It is 125 miles in length, extending along the Franco-German frontier from Belfort, where France, Belgium and Germany meet, all the way to the Swiss Alps. It extends into the earth a depth of 325 feet at places, being as much as seven stories in depth. In these underground labyrinths are stored provisions, ammunition and hospital supplies. There are electrical devices for keeping pure the air, providing water, etc., and there is telephonic communication with the outside world. The entrances to this series of underground fortifications are practically impregnable. Knowing the existence of such war-like preparations has been a constant grievance to the German people, and the consequences may yet be dire. England may have the whip hand, and by steering to the middle of the road may prevail upon France to accept the German occupation of the "demilitarized" sector. Hitler, it would seem, now that he has accomplished his purpose, may yield enough to save the "face" of France. What is to happen may have happened before these lines reach the reader. Events are happening too fast to make predictions.

The President's New Tax Plan.—

A bombshell was thrown into the ranks of congress the past week, when the Administration announced its new tax program, with its startling proposal to relieve corporations of federal taxes on income, profits and capital stock, and to substitute therefor a tax on surpluses which, if harsh enough, would force them to distribute all of their earnings annually. The President believes that there would be a large increase in revenue derived from the change and that, further, there would be a forced circulation of money that would be for the general well-being of the country at large. Certainly some of the results of his proposal would be good, but there are many dangers that would inevitably ensue. Then there is another thing that makes the proposal unexpected: the Administration has gone farther to bring about a planned economy than has any previous one, and such a tax plan would seem to throw these plans to the winds. The central idea of planned economy, after all, is that business and government be held under restraint in boom times, or times of unusual prosperity, and that their surpluses be hoarded against times of depression, so that financial mountains and valleys may be levelled out into one vast plain over the years. The proposed change in corporation taxes penalizes if it does not destroy such planning. During the present depression (or should we say the one just passed) the government has spent probably $6,000,000,000 in an effort to stem its tide. During the same period business has spent approximately $27,000,000,000 from its accumulated surpluses. What would have been the result had the proposed legislation been in effect in 1928. Certainly other millions who have continued to receive dividends, either on stocks owned, or wages for their labor, might have become dependents. It would seem that it would be another instance when the cake cannot be eaten and kept too. No reference is made by the president to banks and insurance companies in his message, and it might be inferred that they would be exceptions to the general run of corporations. Certainly they, if no others, should be allowed reserves to protect the interests of their depositors and their policy holders. The president is reported as being highly pleased with his "solution" of the tax problem, and to like the social and economic "reforms" involved almost as much as he likes the prospect of additional revenue. The opinion of business generally, as so far expressed, seems to be that this proposed tax will not bring in the revenue which the Administration expects—but will operate as did the excess profits of war times—when corporations spent their money for replacing old equipment and bringing their plants up to date, rather than pay it to the government in the shape of taxes. While the proposed tax is radical in its departure from those to which the country is now accustomed, there is certainly a modicum of good in the plan, provided there can be safeguards erected against its dangers.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. W. M. Jay, D. D., supplied for the pastor, Rev. Jno. G. Truitt, D. D., in our Suffolk pulpit Sunday, March 1st and 8th. For four Sundays Dr. Truitt has been forced to be absent from his pulpit because of illness from the "flu." He is improved and here is hoping for his speedy and complete recovery.

The Church can only grow as it is missionary in spirit and in giving. For this one Cause our Lord founded and is building His Church—that through preaching His Gospel He may reach and save this world from sin. March, April, May, June,—missionary months, seed-sowing and cultivation in the field of our Lord that rich harvests may be reaped in due season.

We are informed that Chaplain H. E. Rountree, now serving on board the U. S. S. Whitney, San Diego California, has completed his three-year period at sea and has received orders transferring him to the Rigel, Destroyer Base, San Diego, California. Chaplain Rountree expects to take up his duties at his new station the latter part of April. His tour of duty at this station is two years. His present address is 4980 Marlborough Drive, San Diego, California.

Rev. W. M. Jay, D. D., accepts the pastorate of our Winston-Salem church and is to begin his work there April 1st. We congratulate our Winston-Salem people in their wise choice, and Dr. Jay in accepting this opportunity to build himself and his Christ into a promising and permanent work. We predict growth and continued development of our Winston-Salem work, so well begun and brought thus far under the consecrated and energetic pastorate of Rev. W. T. Scott.

"People gave themselves to the Lord while I was preaching the first division of my sermon." No, that is not a quotation from one of our best-known pastors in one of our city churches, but from one of our Zulu pastors in South Africa. But look at what preceded that sermon. I quote: "Yesterday I had a great day. It took me six days to prepare my sermon for this day. It was not I that preached but the power of God. People gave themselves to the Lord while I was preaching the first division of my sermon." From that Zulu pastor some of us home folks may learn a lesson if we will.

"It pays to advertise." This is an unchallenged truth in the world of business; likewise it is a truth which all of our churches would do well to recognize. To awaken interest in religion and church activities, the public must be informed intelligently and often as to what the various church groups are accomplishing in the way of meeting the needs of this modern age. Miss Elsie Mathews is reporter for our progressive Winchester Church and one of her articles appears elsewhere in the columns of THE SUN this week. In a personal letter to the Managing Editor, Miss Mathews said in part: "We are all very proud of our pastor and his family and the wonderful work they have done in our church. It is no exaggeration to say that our church is full to capacity at our special Sunday night services." The columns of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are always open for news from the churches.

The editor's good friend who gave in last week's SUN his "Personal Testimony" and whom the Lord has used during the last 25 years in employing from his own purse, some years as many as one hundred native evangelists to witness for Christ and through whose witness over 55,000 souls have enrolled themselves as converts to Jesus Christ—this modest layman celebrated his eightieth birthday March 4th and was happiest above all that the dear Lord had spared him through the years and blessed him so that he could give to the service of evangelism in foreign lands very generously in addition to his own personal testimony for his Lord here at home. If anyone wishes his name and address and will request it of THE SUN's editor, he will send it. If all Congregationalists and Christians had the vision, faith and consecration of this man the Church would not be long in taking this work for Christ and righteousness. We congratulate our friend and brother and, as he seems youthful and happy at 80, we trust that God will give him many more years of spiritual service to his fellow-man.

LITTLE THINGS.

REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh, in her fascinating book, "North to the Orient," tells the reader that when she was a little child, someone brought her a doll from Japan and she adds, that the polished box, the bright-colored paper in which it was wrapped and the string with which it was tied seemed to her as beautiful and almost as precious as the dolly inside. In the few days which she and her famous husband spent in Japan on their historic flight, she was impressed with the attention which the Japanese give to the little things of life. "In every Japanese there was an artist." I would change the "was" to is.

The Natural World.

Science has shown us that little things are the essentials in the material universe. It has discovered that the earth itself, its mountains, its giant trees, everything is made up of atoms and the atoms, invisible as they are, are in turn made up of electrons in whirling systems in every atom. Drop by drop the water falls and makes up our springs; brooks, rivers, lakes and oceans, and now science tells us that in every drop of water are forces of power and that if a cup of water should explode, i. e., express its energies at once, it would tear down the largest building.

Creation of Life.

In the early days, creation was limited to six days of twenty-four hours each, but a further study of the Hebrew word for day, "Yom," and of the structure of the earth has taught us that "yom" is a long stretch of time, and the earth and man's growth in qualities and attributes of personality affirm this fact. Not by one feat did the Creator make the earth and man, but through small beginnings and up to the present day has God's creative life brought the earth and man along the way of development.

The Universe Sustained.

A lad asked me, "What holds the stars and moon and sun in the sky?" A strange force, called gravitation, which no telescope or microscope reveals, holds the earth and that or some other power, makes this an orderly universe. God does not hold these bodies in order by throwing about them a great net, but by his power working from electron to electron until the mass and the universe is held in safety.

Man Redeemed.

God saves the race of men in the same way. One individual, redeemed by faith in Jesus Christ, leads another individual into the same life. Andrew leads Peter to Jesus, and Peter influences 3,000 men at one time and 5,000 men at another time to accept the Master, and who knows how many thousands have been saved through the lives and words of these 8,000 persons through the centuries? The Spirit flashes the Light into Luther's mind and the Reformation came with its transformation of many nations. The mighty sweeping Amazon is formed from many brooks and rivers; the Stream of Life, which is cleansing and giving new life to many and an ever-increasing number, comes from God's redeeming grace in individual hearts and minds and wills.

Society Civilized.

How shall the social world be won to love and justice and cooperation? Primarily, by winning the individuals composing society to love God with all their might, mind and strength and their neighbors as themselves, and to give them a clear understanding of the spirit and teachings of Jesus in the relationships of life. Professor James wrote, "As for me my bed is made. I am done with great things, and big things, great organizations and big successes. I am for the tiny, invisible, molecular, moral forces which work from individual to individual, creeping in through the crannies of the world like so many soft rootlets, or like the capillary oozing of water, but which, if you give them time, will rend the hardest monuments of man's pride."

The Church's Task.

Here comes the work of the Church and of a church, to lead the citizens of the nation to a personal loyalty to Jesus and to apply his social principles in all the contacts of national life. Other organizations may help, but a church must lead in every community. Thus an endless chain is formed. It creates through its Sunday Schools, Scouts, and all groups, and its preaching, a spirit of service, and holds up Christ's appealing ideals of a righteous and cooperative society.

Daily Contacts.

It is the little things in life that make our lives rich to ourselves and cheering to others.

I thank God for the little things—
Joyous bird that sings and sings,
Mountain brook that runs along
With its rippling, jolly song,
For the busy honey bee,
Storing honey up for me,
For the chipmunk in the wood,
Gathering beechnuts for his food,
For the light that ray by ray
Lights for men the night and day,
For the drops of falling rain
Which refresh the flowers again,
And the flowers in hidden nook
Well repay me if I look,
Friend, the kind word which you spoke
Strengthened me to bears life's yoke,
And the smile you gave to me
My faint heart from fears set free—
'Tis the little things that make,
Given for the Master's sake,
Our lives happy, strong and sweet,
And bring joy to those we meet.

Miami, Fla.

FROM RULE OF LIFE.

If thou wouldst live unruffled by care,
Let not the past torment thee e'er;
If any loss thou hast to rue,
Act as though thou wert born anew;
Inquire the meaning of each day;
What each day means itself will say.

—Matthew Arnold.

General News
of the
CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES
By HERBERT D. RUGG.

A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT.

The announcement that the Pilgrim Memorial Fund had reached its original goal of $5,000,000 was officially made at the annual meeting of the members of the Annuity Fund for Ministers in Jersey City, N. J., March 3rd. The goal has long been in sight; last year the fund was reported as only $2,057 short of it. This year is passed the mark by $4,665. In addition there is a profit reserve of $355,458, but the official figure is the book value of the net collections.

The raising of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund was a significant event into which went long and careful planning before the five months of intensive campaign from October 1, 1919, to March 1, 1920. After the campaign came years of attentive work in the collection of pledges and their safe investment. The average pledge was made payable in five annual installments. Deferred payments, special gifts and legacies have kept adding to the principal of the Fund after the bulk of the payments were made.

Steps leading to the inauguration of the Fund included the incorporation of the Annuity Fund in 1914, the adoption later of the Expanded Plan for annuities and then the appointment of a Commission by the National Congregational Council in 1917 to raise the Pilgrim Memorial Fund as a permanent endowment for a scientific pension scheme under the Expanded Plan. The Fund was raised as a memorial for the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers. The idea of a tercentenary memorial was proposed as early as 1907 at a National Council meeting, the definite form for the memorial being arrived at later.

Dr. Charles S. Mills, now president of the Annuity Fund, was chairman of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund Commission on which numbered 100 which had an executive committee of nine. At that time Dr. Mills was pastor of the First Church, Montclair, N. J.

The director of the campaign and the executive secretary of the Commission was Dr. Herman F. Swartz, formerly a secretary of the Home Missionary Society. He resigned in December, 1919, after the campaign was well launched to become executive secretary for the Congregational World Movement. For the last fifteen years he has been president of the Pacific School of Religion at Berkeley, California.

Dr. Lewis T. Reed succeeded Dr. Swartz as director of the campaign and secretary of the Commission, serving until October, 1920, then returning to his pastorate at Flatbush Church, Brooklyn. He was followed by Dr. Mills, who continued the work as general secretary of the Ministerial Boards until he retired in 1928 when Dr. Reed again took up the executive responsibilities for the pension system.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund was raised by the united efforts of pastors throughout the country, hundreds of lay workers, denominational officers everywhere and the enrollment of over 107,000 subscribers.

HIGH HOPES REALIZED.

Another new high figure in round numbers was announced at the annual meeting of the Annuity Fund when it was reported that the membership for the first time had passed the 3,000 mark, being now 3,108.

Today the Annuity Fund is accomplishing in very large measure what those who labored to underwrite it with the Pilgrim Memorial Fund hoped. The statistics of payments reported for last year stand in eloquent contrast with those of the time when the Pilgrim Memorial Fund was being raised. In 1920, Dr. Mills stated in his first report as secretary of the Annuity Fund, there were thirty annuitants; twelve were ministers of whom two were receiving disability annuities and eighteen were widows. The amount paid in annuities during 1920 was $2,509. On December 31, 1935, the number of annuitants was 968 of whom 672 were ministers and 296 were widows or orphans. The annuity payments during 1935 amounted to $364,806, practically $1,000 for each day of the year.

ABIDING RESULTS.

The personal devotion of those who have labored in missionary colleges has borne perhaps the largest fruit of any form of Christian service. Only those who have been teachers or students in such institutions can know how lives have been molded. It can well be doubted if great universities ever hold a loyalty in the memory of their students equal to that held by schools whose greatness was only in the genuineness of the personal relationships and not in buildings, endowments or research.

Franklinton College lives again in a song, written by D. E. Mallard, which finds its place in this column through Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, general secretary of the Extension Boards to whom it was handed by Mrs. Nellie Poste of Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., last December when he was the guest preacher in its pulpit.

FRANKLINTON COLLEGE SONG.

By D. E. MILLARD.

Tune: Maryland, My Maryland.

Dear College home, we sing of thee,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
We love thy halls—to us so free,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
Go where we may, our thoughts will dwell
Amid the scenes we love so well,
And of thy worth we'll gladly tell,
Franklinton, our Franklinton.

God gave for thee bright, charming skies,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
A landscape fair, to please these eyes,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
Sweet birds to sing 'mid shady bowers,
In wealth of beauty, fragrant flowers,
These all remind of happy hours—
Franklinton, our Franklinton.

Let others sing of ancient fame,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
Of storied halls, and honored names,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
We feel thou art of nobler worth,
Tho' like our race, of humble birth,
Thy fame shall spread throughout the earth,
Franklinton, our Franklinton.

Herein is taught God's sacred truth;
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
A College-home for age and youth,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
Here modern books and ancient lore,
Are studied, daily, o'er and o'er,
But Christ's own words are valued more,
Franklinton, our Franklinton.

Forth from these halls shall go each year,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
Those who thine honored name shall wear,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;

To spread—with knowledge, joy and peace,
Among our own beloved race,
And make our land a better place,
Franklinton, our Franklinton.

To mem'ry will those friends be dear,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
Who placed the Tree of Knowledge here,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
And all who taste its fruits shall tell;
Thy noble builders builded well;
Thy fame and theirs will onward swell,
Franklinton, our Franklinton.

Let us sing now, with right good cheer,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
Our closing words, with voices clear,
Franklinton, our Franklinton;
When centuries of Time has pass'd;
Still, o'er the earth rich blessings cast,
And may thy glory time outlast,
Franklinton, our Franklinton.

DOCTOR JAY AT WINSTON-SALEM.

Doctor William M. Jay, former pastor of our church at Holland, Virginia, and now of Suffolk, Virginia, has been called to the pastorate at Winston-Salem, North Carolina, and has accepted the call. Doctor Jay will enter upon his duties as pastor of the Winston church on or about April 1st. The Winston-Salem church is a new undertaking. The church was organized by Reverend William T. Scott. It has in its membership an exceptionally good type of citizen for a new church. Dr. Jay is man of varied experience in Christian work. In addition to serving in the pastorate, he has given some time to Young Men's Christian Associations' work and for a number of years was a member of the Elon College faculty as head of the English Department. There is a great opportunity at Winston and it would seem that the church is fortunate in securing the services of Doctor Jay. It is the hope and expectation of all that this relation of pastor and people may be pleasant and may prove a blessing to all concerned.

L. E. SMITH.

PRAYER FOR COURAGE.

Why should I long for what I know
Can never be revealed to me?
I only pray that I may grow
As surely and bravely as a tree.

I do not ask why tireless grief
Remains, or why all beauty flies;
I only crave the blind relief
Of branches groping toward the skies.

Let me bring every seed to fruit,
Sharing, whatever comes to pass,
The strong persistence of the root,
The patient courage of the grass.

Hastened by every source of mirth,
I shall not mind the wounds and scars,
Feeling the solid strength of earth,
The bright conviction of the stars.

—Louis Untermeyer.

WAS THE TRIAL SORE?

Temptation sharp? Thank God a second time!
Why comes temptation but for man to meet
And master and make crouch beneath his foot.
And so be pedestalled in triumph? Pray
"Lead us into no such temptation, Lord!"
Yea, but, O Thou whose servants are the bold,
Lead such temptations by the head and hair,
Reluctant dragons, up to who dares fight,
That so he may do in battle and have praise!

—Robert Browning.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Florida Sanitarium, March 7, 1936,
Orlando, Florida.

The Editor wonders if many CHRISTIAN SUN readers have even seen or heard a Theremin. It is a musical instrument without keys, strings, reeds or pipes and the performer "plays" the tunes without touching the instrument, even any part of it. It is the invention, the visiting artist told us "patients," of a Russian scientist by the name of Theremin and as far as this artist knew, there were only six of the instruments, and six people who play them in the United States. It is a beautiful cabinet built on the order of a radio and is charged with electricity with a projecting upright rod to the performer's right, and an arm-shaped rod protruding from the instrument to the left of the performer. The performer holds her hands near to these rods and with movements of hands and fingers the performer and the instrument unite in playing whatever tune the performer wishes, or has in mind. It is a strange, quite an uncanny and weird combination of mind and electricity so blending as to produce melody, harmony, sweet music of such tunes as are desired by the performer and the audience.

It is an offspring, of course, of the wireless and the radio, but the only instance this writer has ever witnessed in which the mind and body of a person so blends with an instrument as to produce melody and music without any contact between the performer and the instrument, accompanied by no voice or utterance of the performer. The music is that of the Theremin, but it gives out such music only as at the time is in the mind and will of the performer.

Thus it is demonstrated again that science neither clears up nor explains away the mysteries of this marvelous universe, but only brings those mysteries into service and fellowship for and with mankind. Electricity is a far greater mystery today than it was to the curious mind of the youthful Benjamin Franklin who tradition tells us climbed high trees in times of thunder and lightning to see if he could peep over the clouds and see how lightning was produced or where it came from. And then making his kite to send into the cloudy and hidden home of lightning to see if it could be brought to earth with safety furthered his enquiry and led to the telegraph and telephone and Edison—and Marconi—but none of these wizards of light and power have ever defined electricity or told us its origin or explained its might and mystery.

In the book of Ephesians Paul takes "mystery" as his theme. And in the brief compass of six short chapters Paul soars and climbs and penetrates the heights and lofty peaks of the ever-increasing mystery, might, and majesty of God's infinite secrets of love and mercy and goodness for all mankind—his one claim being that we, God's creatures, may share the fellowship, but not know or realize what these mysteries contain for us.

God wants the church, Paul declares, "to know the manifold wisdom of God" even as it is known by the principalities and powers in heavenly places; but this the church can and will know only as it seeks to make known to the whole world, Gentile and Jew, Greek and barbarian, the Gospel of the Son of God and in so doing come into the fellowship of God's own secret purpose and plans for His creatures. God is ready to sound out through our bodies and from our minds, to the world, His infinite melody and harmony whenever we are a-tune with Him and His will to save from sin all men and women everywhere.

Florida has now come to its most radiant and colorful and fragrant season of the whole year. All flowers are in fullest and freshest bloom, the mocking birds, cardinals and quail are at their best in field and forest—and fresh, fragrant air fills the lungs, while sweetest carols of rich-throated birds keep the ear atune.

This open air and friendly sunshine have nurtured and coaxed my body back to health and strength and with gratitude to Florida and the good God who made it, I turn my face homeward and to the blessed labors and generous tasks God is calling me now to take up and perform as best I may in His Name and for His glory.

GREATEST MISSIONARY BOOK AND TEXTS.

If THE SUN's editor was asked to name the three greatest missionary books of the Old Testament his emphatic reply would be, Ruth, Daniel, and Jonah. All three of these Books are wholly "foreign missionary"—and have little or no particular significance apart from their distinctly missionary message.

Ruth comes first and in keeping with history and experience, shows how a woman went into a hated heathen land and there won, by her life and teaching, a convert to her God—and this heathen convert to God became the ancestress of King David and our Lord also.

Daniel is significant in that all his preaching was among and to the heathen in that far-away land of his day. Daniel's practice, as well as his preaching, was with and among a heathen people that he might show them the goodness, greatness, and power of the true and living God—superior in every way to the idols they worshipped.

And all of the book of Jonah hinges around the fact that Jonah was called of God to go out to a heathen people and there preach the gospel of Jehovah—and the consequences of his refusal to obey the missionary call.

If I had to choose the greatest single missionary text and incident of the New Testament I think I would select Matt. 26:6-13, or Mark 14:3-9, inclusive—both being the same and in almost identical language. When one person was found on earth who put the love of her God above the love of her fellow-man—then Christ saw the possibilities of a world-wide gospel—and began immediately to say so—and paid to this woman in that Bethany house the highest tribute of honor and praise He ever paid anyone while on earth. Here Christ makes the distinction between mere benevolence—caring for bodily needs—and Missions. In summing up the commandments, putting them all into two, He put the love of God first and made that fundamental. This is the soul and spirit of Missions. In our missionary preaching, teaching and giving, we are not trying to win the praise and approval of men, but to exalt the name of our Lord and put Him first.

And then that missionary gem of all time: "After that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem—and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

DEATH ON WHEELS.

I had just gotten to sleep after a hard day when the telephone recalled me to consciousness. It was bad news again. Sixty miles distant on a main highway there had been a crash of cars. One man was dead; his companion seriously injured. "Go at once!" my orders were.

I was not as surprised or shocked as you would have been, because as an investigator of accidents for casualty companies it is my job to reach the spot preceding the coroner's inquest and before the wrecked cars are removed.

In the middle of the night I reached the spot. The truck which my company insured, a ten-ton semi-trailer, was deep in the ditch. Scattered along the highway were the torn pieces of what had been a light coupe. It was now so many pieces of disjointed, twisted metal.

Here is the story as the truck driver told it to me, and later at the coroner's inquest:

"I was driving at a moderate speed when I saw three automobiles approaching. I watched the rear car pass the middle car. Its driver was trying to get around the first car, but the distance between it and the truck was closing up. I got as far off the highway as I possibly could, but the car came squarely at me, crashing head-on into the side of the truck as I swerved into the ditch." The driver of the coupe was rushed to the hospital. His passenger was already dead.

Two months later, when the driver was in condition to be interviewed, he gave me a signed statement that he at no time saw the truck. An investigation of hospital and undertaker's records showed that the two men had been drinking. Was that the reason?

That is one experience of many that I have had in the past four years.

Here is another, which shows that the drinking driver is not the only menace along the highway:

Just after dusk one evening last August another truck driver was leaving St. Louis on a four-lane super highway. Suddenly into the circle of his headlights staggered two men, their arms around each other, a few feet from the truck. The driver did an excellent job of swerving, but the men staggered into the side of the truck.

It fell to my lot to tell the widow of one of these men just how her husband met death.

"SINGLE EMPHASIS MINISTERS."

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.

Minister People's Church, Dover Delaware.

We have all frequently met people who had "a single track mind,"—people who are unable to direct their thoughts along different lines or people who, when doing one thing are oblivious to everything else. While trying to observe social amenities, they forget about the more important social responsibilities and vice versa. While thinking of righteousness, they neglect the ways of right living which alone constitute true righteousness. While concerning themselves with the ugly aspects of the social order, they neglect their personal appearance. While promoting the peace of the world, they make no room for peace in their own lives, and fail to promote the interests of peace in their own homes and communities. While appealing for racial justice they forget their many injustices to members of their own race. While looking for something to criticize, they overlook what fairness demands they should commend. While engaged in eating, they are unable to engage in conversation. While driving a car, they drive by much that is beautiful without even seeing it. While thinking of their own interests, they overlook the interests of others, etc., etc., etc., ad infinitum. While trying to think about one thing, they forget the many other things they ought to keep in mind. For some, the "single track mind" is an indication of approaching senility. But it is not so in every instance. It is often characteristic of young people as well as of those in advanced years. It is a tendency against which every person, both young and old, should constantly be on his guard. The "single track mind" is a lamentable handicap to any life, and "single track minds" are a liability to society as a whole.

The "single emphasis attitude," however, is an entirely different problem. It is pardonable in some. It is unpardonable in others. It is pardonable for the person whose field of effort requires "a single emphasis." It is unpardonable for the person whose field of effort calls for varied emphases. It is pardonable and even most desirable for those engaged in other realms of endeavor. The single emphasis attitude is essential in the field of science. It is dangerous in the field of religion. Even in religious work, however, the "single emphasis" seems quite fitting for the Secretary of a Department. But it is entirely out of place in the life of a pastor or in the life of anyone who serves the general interests of the Kingdom. Even with a Department Secretary, "the single emphasis" attitude may limit his usefulness in the general enterprise of the church. Men who can see the Christian problem in its wholeness instead of seeing only one factor of the problem are better qualified to know and present whichever factor of the problem it is that engages their special attention.

It is deplorably tragic how "single emphasis men" have retarded the progress of the church! Men who see one phase of the church life but fail to recognize and appreciate the other phases which are equally important weaken their own usefulness in supporting the particular phase which they have championed.

We all appreciate the fact that this is a day of specialization. Medical Science offers a vivid illustration of this fact. The general practitioner treats all the ills of the human anatomy. The specialist treats only the eye, the nose, the ear, the skin, the feet, the heart, etc. The limits to which specialization has gone in medical science is illustrated in the question put by a business man to a young medical student who said he was "specializing on the eye." The business man asked him "which part?"

But in medical science, the successful specialist must first know what the general practitioner knows. He travels along with him in his studies of the whole human anatomy. And then he takes one part and gives special study on that. He knows what the general practitioner knows, plus. He appreciates the importance of the relation to the whole body of the particular part of the body on which he specializes. The eye specialist does not think that the eye is independent of the rest of the body. He does not think it is more important than the other parts. But because of the importance he attaches to the whole body, he specializes on the eye.

How much the church has suffered from the lack of this scientific but common-sense attitude on the part of those who minister to its life and well-being.

Those who recognize the devotional needs of the church so often fail to consider its many other needs. And so with those who recognize the missionary responsibility of the church, the social responsibility, the educational responsibility, the evangelistic responsibility, etc., etc. The church has suffered from having "single emphasis leaders" who failed to appreciate the other emphases that were essential to the life and growth of the church. Not only do some "single emphasis" religious leaders fail to appreciate the other emphases of the church, but they in some instances actually discount those emphases and discredit the intelligence or the religious sincerity of those who champion them.

But the churches have suffered most from "single emphasis pastors." A pastor attends some great convention where single emphasis men are usually most in evidence, and is inspired by the address of some "single emphasis leader." He at once concludes that the millennium will be ushered in by that one emphasis. So he proceeds to be "a single emphasis man" himself, to his own loss and to that of the church to which he ministers. No man can render his largest service to the Kingdom by "a single emphasis" attitude. No church can serve its day and generation in following a single emphasis leadership. Every pastor, for his own sake and for the sake of his church and the Kingdom, should recognize that his must be "a many emphases" ministry." A successful pastor cannot be "a specialist." He must of necessity, by reason of the nature of his work, be "a general practitioner." No matter how worthy any emphasis may be, no single emphasis will suffice in the work of the Christian ministry.

The evangelistic emphasis, the personal religious experience emphasis, the social justice emphasis, the international peace emphasis, the temperance emphasis, the youth emphasis, the racial question emphasis, the religious education emphasis, the missionary emphasis, etc., etc., etc.—each extremely vital to the life of the church—yet no one of these alone is sufficient to maintain the life of the church or to enable the church to fulfill its mission in society. It is a great day in the life of a minister when he recognizes the peril of having only "a single emphasis" in his ministry and when he enthusiastically accepts his "many emphases" responsibility. Churches have died by the hundreds from the ministry of "single emphasis men." And thousands of other churches today are "sick unto death" because of "a single emphasis leadership."

The Kingdom of God on earth tarries because of "single emphasis leaders," and "single emphasis programs." God only knows what progress the church would experience if all religious workers would "see the problem whole"! If "the evangelistic-minded folks" would also become "social-minded," and if "the social-minded folks" would also become "evangelistic-minded"; if "the religious education-minded folks" would also become "personal religious experience-minded," and if "the personal religious experience-minded folks" would also become "religious education-minded"; if "the spiritual-minded folks" would also become "practical minded," and if "the practical-minded wha a day,—wha a day—i would be for he tttt folks" would also become "spiritual-minded,"—what a day—what a day—it would be for the church of Jesus Christ!

As followers of Jesus, we are supposed to be "Christ-minded," and "Christ-mindedness" includes all these and the many other interests of Christian thought and life.

The day has come when the church should vigorously denounce any "single emphasis" which disregards, discounts, or discredits the other Christian emphases. Moreover, the Church of Christ should be done with the "either—or" method of accepting ways and means for advance, and adopt universally the "both—and" procedure. For instance, the life of the church and the salvation of human society does not depend upon "either personal religious experience or social action," but upon "both personal religious experience and social action. No Christian philosophy, no Christian program, no Christian life is complete without both personal religious experience and social action. Areligious experience without a social passion is an abortive experience. A social passion without a religious experience is a gleam without a sustaining light.

Similarly the future of the church does not depend upon "either an adequate program of religious education or a rational but whole-hearted program of evangelism—it depends upon both an adequate program of religious education and a rational but whole-hearted program of evangelism." The same is true of all the other items of Christian thought and life in the respective relationships.

The story of the four travelers coming upon the gigantic triangular prism illustrates the point in consideration. One traveler stood on one side of the triangular prism and said, "It's a red prism." "No," said the second traveler, looking at the prism from another angle, "you are wrong, it's a green prism." The third traveler looking at the prism from still another angle emphatically declared that both the other travelers were wrong, for he said, "It's a blue prism." Each declared the other to be color blind. Each ridiculed the stupidity of the other two. Each knew he alone was right. The fourth traveler, wiser than the rest, walked clear around the prism, and commented that they were all three right, for said he: "The prism is red, it is green, and it is blue." "But," said he, "you are also all three wrong, for the prism is not all red, or all green, or all blue. It is red, green and blue."

The Church of Christ has many sides to its prism of responsibility. Each side contributes equally to the whole. As followers of Jesus, we will not foolishly declare that "one side" of the prism constitutes the whole. Instead, we will follow him clear around the prism and learn the responsibility of the church is not evangelism alone, not personal religious experience alone, not worship alone, not religious education alone, not social action alone, not political reform alone, not church administration alone, not international peace alone, not the present life alone, not the future life alone, but that the responsibility of the church includes them all. And as disciples of Jesus, we will include them all in our thoughts, prayers and service.

Here is the blessed order—the Lord ever first, I following Him, His goodness and mercy following me.—Mark Guy Pearse.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Why do people suffer? That question has puzzled the minds of many good people. The first answer assumes that suffering is the natural punishment of sin. The scientists tell us that nature punishes every violator of her laws. "Whatever a man soweth that shall he also reap." This argument and explanation was used by Job's friends when they sought to comfort him in his suffering. It is the universal answer, for it is a natural explanation.

But when this is said the question has not been fully answered, and the explanation is not entirely satisfactory. For "in all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." (Job 1:22.) Sin always brings suffering. "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." (James 1:15.) But all suffering is not a direct punishment of sin. Jesus did not sin, yet He suffered. Some other explanation must be found to account for the suffering of Jesus, and other reasons may be found to explain much of the suffering of humanity.

Suffering is a part of human education. Education is more than theory. It is theory and practice; philosophy and experience. Books alone cannot educate the human mind. A "book-worm" is only half educated. The theory of music does not make a master musician; theory must be expressed in practice-musical experience. An artist is more than a color expert. A Christian is more than a theologian. Faith is more than belief. Faith and works are inseparable twins in the Christian life.

Man cannot understand the penalty of sin by theory and logic. Goodness cannot be defined intelligently in terms of human speech. The doctrines of goodness and evil are incomprehensible when separated from human experience. God cannot be understood apart from the revelation of Jesus Christ the only begotten Son. When suffering becomes an experience one begins to understand its meanings and significance. Cobb's book, "Speaking of Operations," gives a vivid idea of a surgical operation, for he was writing out of an experience. There is much suffering in this world. In part, suffering may be traced to sin. But good people may also suffer that they may know the painful experience through which others are compelled to pass. It is a part of our education in spiritual things. Fire means more to one who has been warmed by its cheerful glow, or burned by its intense heat. Death takes on a different meaning, when the dying one is a precious member of your family. A funeral has more significance when the casket is taken from your home. Human suffering, as an experience, is a part of our spiritual education.

Suffering is a test of character. It is one of the greatest tests to which one is exposed. It is a painful test, but it is essential to the steadfastness of faith and the perseverance of the saints. Jesus made a Gospel of victory and triumph. He dared to make disciples and expose them to temptation and suffering, with a confident faith in their ability to be faithful unto the end—even unto death. The fires of persecution swept about them, and the peril and suffering of the cross awaited them. But nothing daunted them. The final battle brought victory to their faith. They learned that Jesus was able to keep them from falling. This is a lesson worth learning. Others may be inspired to commit themselves unto a Saviour who stands by to help in a time of need and despair. Through Jesus Christ the believer may be assured that he is able to win the crown of life. Suffering has a legitimate place in Christian living. It develops faith and trust in God. It teaches one to pray. It brings out the gold and sweeps away the dross. It makes one sympathetic. It broadens one's vision. It reveals the presence of the Master.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END.

Elon College is both the pride and responsibility of the Congregational-Christian Church in the South. Nearly a half century ago the great souls of the church with high hopes and consecrated determination arose and founded Elon College. The college was built at great cost considering the numerical and financial strength of the denomination at that time. Occasionally you hear some of the loyal souls among us tell of those days—how out of their meagre holdings they gave generously that the church might have a training school for her youth. I presume that few institutions have accomplished as much good for constituency and for the country at large with as little financial backing as has Elon College. From the beginning to this day the college has been compelled to restrict its programs and has been hindered in carrying out its restricted programs because of the lack of funds. Our people have been loyal and sacrificing but they seem not to have been blessed with large holdings. The past five years have perhaps been the most difficult. During this period a comparatively few generous souls have endeavored to shoulder the responsibilities and carry the burdens. These loyal souls have been wondering when the tides would change, when the load would be shared by others, when an end to these inconveniences and annoyances would come. For the past few months groups of ministers, laymen, and officials have been meeting endeavoring to lay plans by which the college might find a more generous and a more adequate support.

Growing out of these gatherings and in a combined wisdom, definite plans have been laid for a thorough and aggressive campaign in behalf of the college. The George W. Williams Company of Lebanon, Pennsylvania, has been employed to direct the campaign and to work earnestly with the college in attaining the proposed ends. Today, Monday, Mr. Lovett of the George W. Williams Company reached the college which marks definitely the beginning of our campaign. It is the purpose of the campaign, those who are planning it and those who are conducting it, to place the actual facts concerning the college before the church, the alumni, and the friends of the college and to give every individual connected with the college in any way an opportunity to express his interest in the college by a contribution to the campaign fund.

Perhaps you are wondering about the organization. The organization of course will consist of a general committee and various subcommittees. The organization will be so formulated as to reach every individual member in every local church. Of course such an organization will require generous cooperation on the part of the members of the local church. In fact, the organization must be formed out of our own members. There will be plenty of responsibility and plenty of work for everyone who is willing to be used. Let no one have the idea that the Williams Company is to put on this campaign by itself and that the company is to do all the work. The company's specific part in the campaign is to organize us and give to us intelligent and effective instruction so as to secure the results desired. So when the appeal is made to the local church I trust that there may be a ready and a unanimous response. When once the organization is completed the success of the undertaking will, in a measure, be assured.

The amount to be raised, $250,000, is a lot of money but not more than the present needs of the college require. Let no one feel that the goal was set for $250,000 with the idea that anything less than that will be sufficient. This represents the needs of the college and we enter the campaign with the determination to secure this amount. There must be no misgivings at this point. With the campaign beginning today means the beginning of an effort that will put an end to the immediate needs of Elon College. With an experienced company guiding in the campaign, with a loyal and generous constituency anxious to see this matter of putting an end to Elon College's debts successfully brought to a close, there can scarcely be a failure in such an undertaking. In fact, we turn aside quickly from the thought of failure and are determined on success, and complete success, and if the writer expresses the attitude and determination of all related to the college and interested in its future, nothing short of the above will be the results of our united efforts.

May I appeal to the ministers and to the laity to make the campaign a matter of interest and of earnest prayer. If all will join hearts and hands and purses there can be no question as to results.

"WEATHER MAN" VISITS WINCHESTER CHURCH.

Mr. J. Burton Kincer, meteorologist and chief of the Division of Climate and Crop weather, U. S. Weather Bureau, told about his work in a most interesting way to a large congregation at the Congregational-Christian Church on Sunday evening, February 23rd. This was the third service in the series "Chats Around the Fireside."

The service was divided into three parts. Part No. 1 consisted of the devotional service, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Ivan R. Smith, assisted by a ladies' quartet. In Part No. 2 a dramatic sketch, written by the pastor, entitled "Weather—Whether Or Nor" was presented, featuring J. Burton Kincer. The scene was arranged to represent the U. S. Weather Bureau Office in Washington, D. C. Several members of the church represented callers at the Bureau seeking information about the weather. It turned out that each one was particularly interested in some phase of the weather, and as the sketch progressed, these visitors to Mr. Kincer's office asked him various questions around which his talk of the evening centered. Mr. Kincer gave an instructive talk concerning various kinds of weather formation, how weather forecasts are made, and also presented the scientific work of the Weather Bureau—illustrating his lecture with slides. In Part 3, the dramatic feature "Down the Corridors of Time," which has been used during this series, presented two scenes from the life of George Washington, one representing George Washington visiting the home of Betsy Ross.

Four numbers rendered by an orchestra were very much enjoyed.

The last service in this series, "Chats Around the Fireside" will be presented on Sunday night, March 2nd, and will consist of a play which will bring out the problems connected with young people's lives of today.

A LOOK AT THE OTHER SIDE.

Much has been said of late about the budget and the pledge-card system of handling finances. It is to be hoped that the study or discussion was prompted by the purest of motives and has been read without prejudice, and we should read with a desire to get some thought or suggestion that will help us to become more and more what our Lord wants us to be.

Some fear has been expressed that the pledge card endangers cheerful giving. It is not my purpose to discuss here whether it does or not. There is a greater danger of which I wish to write, which did not come up for discussion and which I trust will be helpful to some soul who is seeking to know the whole truth on the question of giving.

The One Who Does Not Give At All, Or Fails To Give As He Has Been Prospered.

It has been suggested that if one does not give willingly and cheerfully he had as well not give at all. I am just wondering about this. Is that disciple who gives when there is a lack of cheerfulness in the giving in as bad condition as the one who does not give at all?

Just here I recall a little of David Lipscomb's experience that he often related to his Bible classes when this subject came up. He spoke of the battle he had with himself to give liberally and at the same time do it with cheerfulness. He said that when the thought would come to his heart that he should give a dollar, five dollars, or some other amount to the church, an excuse would present itself somewhat like this: "Here is Brother Brown or Brother Smith, who are more able to give than I am, and they do not give this much; hence, I will not." And he would reduce his offering from the amount that first suggested itself. He said that he grew tired of having to fight these excuses, and decided that whenever he purposed to give a certain amount, if an excuse suggested itself to reduce it, he would at once double the amount purposed and give it quickly. He said that he had not practiced this very long until such excuses failed to present themselves. I presume this is one way of resisting the devil and making him flee from us as commanded in James 4:7.

I am sure that every one of us who has made a faithful effort to overcome the carnal nature that is in us and bring the body under has often had to fight just such battles as Brother Lipscomb fought. I would hardly advise anyone not to give just because there is an element of unwillingness to give. In Col. 3:5 we have the command: "Put to death therefore your members which are upon the earth: fornication, uncleanness, passion, evil desire, and covetousness, which is idolatry." If we discover a desire not to give as we know we should, we should whip ourselves into line. The flesh would spend all upon itself for fine clothes, something good to eat, a fine car or a fine home, and forget wholly our duty to give to extend the cause of Christ among men.

Idolatry.

In the Scripture quoted above from Paul he plainly declares that covetousness is idolatry. We know that an idolater cannot be saved unless converted from such. What is the nature of covetousness? "Inordinately eager to acquire and possess" is one of the definitions of the word—to so desire something that belongs to another that you violate God's law to obtain it. People who are considered most excellent church members are not conscious of the fact that they are guilty of idolatry in their craving and inordinate desire to save and lay up treasures here on earth.

God's Part.

That the Bible teaches as clear as day that a certain part of our increase or earnings belongs to God goes without argument. In Prov. 3:9, we have the command: "Honor Jehovah with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase." This makes the first of all our increase God's. What if we use it upon our own pleasures and lust or store it away in the bank? If we have not appropriated something that belongs to another, how far have we missed so doing?

We will come now to the New Testament. "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper." (I Cor. 16:1, 2.) In 2 Cor. 8:11, 12; 9:6, 7, we are commanded to "complete the doing"—that is, not merely to purpose, but to execute or do what we have purposed, and to do it all willfully and cheerfully.

But here is a member of the church who does not give at all. You cannot even get him to purpose to give. Is he not flagrantly trampling underfoot the command to lay by in store? and when he keeps that which he is duty bound to give to the Lord, uses it upon his own pleasures or puts it into the bank, is he not using for himself that which belongs to God? Is this not covetousness in actual practice? Can such a church member be saved? Or let us take the church member who purposes to give, but he does not make his purpose according to the way he has been prospered. He does not give the amount that God knows he is able to give. Hence, he keeps back a part of that which belongs to God and uses it for himself? Is this not covetousness, which is idolatry?

Robbing God.

Robbing God is a thing the Jews did, and for which they were severely rebuked. Study Mal. 3:8-10. Those Jews robbed God in withholding the tithe or not bringing the whole tithe and placing it into his treasury. His command to them was: "Bring ye the whole tithe into the store-house that there may be food in my house and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." But he gave them to understand that so long as they failed to bring their tithes they were robbing him. Can it be less so today when we fail to give as we have been prospered? Here, it seems to me, is our greatest danger. (See 2 Cor. 9:8 for promises to Christians.)

A Suggestion.

I suggest that every elder, preacher, and teacher see to it that the whole congregation is taught its duty on giving. Elders fall far short of the Bible demands who fail to let the members know that we dare not take money that is due our Lord for our own selfish plans and purposes.

One of the best plans that I have known to keep the congregation with a conscience on the money question is to give each member of the church at the close of the year a sheet containing all the Bible teaches on this question. Suggest that each member read all the Scriptures cited, and prayerfully purpose to give so much each Lord's day. Of course, any month, week, or day in the year is in order for such study. But often I have advised the members, in a quiet way, to let the treasurer know what his and her purpose was after this study, and the budget for the following year was made out accordingly. As a rule, the weekly collections for the year ran about as these expressed purposes indicated. When emergencies arose, special collections were taken to meet them.—S. H. Hall in Gospel Advocate.

We preachers, in our efforts to be popular, try to catch the public ear, but too often we do not do much to change the public conscience.—Dr. Ralph W. Sockman.

DEATH ON WHEELS.

I learned that he and his companion lived in a small town about thirty miles from St. Louis. They were on their way home, visiting almost every drinking place along the way.

Sometimes our cases are exceedingly puzzling. A middle-aged man was recently killed under one of the trucks which we insure. The only eye witness told me that as the truck was started, after stopping on the lot of a filling station for gas and oil, the man walked along beside it, got down on his hands and knees, and deliberately placed his head under the rear wheel. It was obviously suicide, but why?

The man was a heavy drinker, and trouble had started at home over that weakness. He had been estranged from his wife for several days, nor had she known his whereabouts. What prompted this horrible form of suicide, no one will ever know—but the effect that alcohol has in warping one's judgment gives a clue.

Last summer two truck drivers stopped at the top of a hill to talk things over. Governed by the rules of their company, they parked the trucks on a filling station lot, one behind the other, and both from eight to ten feet off the pavement. Into their conversation crashed an automobile, gasoline in its tank and alcohol in its driver. He had failed to negotiate the curve ahead, and driven directly into one truck. The front bumper of his car severed both legs of one of the truck drivers, who was standing by his cab eight feet off the highway. Bravely he clasped one leg to stop the flow of blood, while the filling station attendant held the other. On the way to the hospital he died.

And what of the driver? Unharmful, he tried to escape through the woods and came up to a nearby tavern where he tried to put in a long-distance call. In the booth he "passed out," and was discovered. He claimed that he went to sleep as he rounded the curve, but it was sleep produced by a narcotic drug. Today he faces a penitentiary sentence for manslaughter.

Here is a last case, happening on a straight stretch of four-way road in the early morning. A sedan, at high speed, crashed into the left side of the trailer of one of our trucks. The truck driver saw the car coming erratically toward him, blew his horn, and ran his truck off the road into an embankment to avoid a collision. The sedan driver died without regaining consciousness.

My assignment was to find out what the driver had been doing during the hours that preceded his death that so robbed him of his faculties. The trail led to a saloon where he had had beer and a sandwich. From the bartender I learned that he had left very early in the morning to visit another saloon. There, the man's companion had begged him, about an hour before the accident, to go to a hotel for the night—or what remained of it. But he "knew he was all right."

Accidents are horrible things, and seeing mangled bodies day after day doesn't harden me to them.

Those of us who check up on accidents realize that they are invariably avoidable. Education of the automobile driver in the rules of safety is an important part of the program of insurance companies throughout the country.

But education is scant help to the drinking driver. Certainly he has no place behind the wheel of an automobile.—Wallace L. Oliver in Allied Youth.

The Federal Census Bureau records show that there are living in the United States 4,110 persons who are one hundred years of age or older.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

"GO YE INTO ALL THE WORLD."

The American Board is a going organization. Organized in 1810, it is the oldest foreign missionary society in America. During its century and a quarter, more than 4,500 missionaries have given of their lives in mission lands under the Commission of the Board.

Today 494 missionaries continue in this great adventure. They are colleagues of national leaders in a growing world Christian movement. The number of national ministers, teachers, physicians, nurses, and other workers seeking to win their fellowmen to Christ, far exceeds the total number of missionaries who have served during the life of the Board.

Most of the support of the 6,033 national workers is raised on the mission fields. In many instances, work pioneered by the Board is now not only self-supporting, but is multiplied in effectiveness by the leadership of educator nationals.

Social progress on the foreign field can best be measured by appreciating the influence of educated national Christians who are devoting their energies in political, civic, and commercial walks of life. They are bringing into these arenas of national thought new concepts of man's relationship to his brother-man and his relationship to God.

Fifty-one per cent of the college graduates in the Who's Who of China are products of Mission Schools and Colleges. A leader of the Government in China recently remarked: "I became a Christian by watching these men. They are different. They call themselves Christians. They are the hope of China. I decided to identify myself with them."

An investment of life and money with the American Board today offers far greater possibilities than ever before.

As rapidly as work can be supported in a local area, we are freed to pioneer into spheres of work that have long waited for help. The Board never had so many opportunities for service. Appeals for help and needs unanswered are cause for serious concern to every Christian. They await your own response and that of your Church.

OUR CONTINUING PURPOSE.

To permeate the life of the world in all its areas with the spirit of Jesus.

To proclaim the unparalleled significance of Jesus and His Spirit as the supreme factor in spiritual growth, both individual and social.

To hold a persistent desire to find, to understand and to strengthen those elements in the life of an individual or a nation which are in harmony with Jesus' thought of God and of life. Jesus came not to destroy but to fulfill the spiritual inheritance of every individual and of every race.

To be effective, ideals and faith must have implements through which to find expression. Our implements are churches, schools, colleges, theological seminaries, hospitals, dispensaries, agricultural extension, mass education, reading rooms, summer camps, cooperative enterprises with all who share our purpose.

Many have dedicated their lives to this great cause.

Others, with equal devotion, dedicate a portion of their time or possessions through the medium of money.

Thus the Missionaries of the Cross are able to bear witness of His Life and Message at the crossroads of the world.

The American Board has weathered the past five difficult years because of sacrificial giving and drastic reductions.

Behind us is a panorama of remarkable achievements bearing witness of the transforming power of the Love of God as in Jesus Christ. What first was an adventure of faith is today both sustained by our faith and corroborated by our experience.

Ahead of us is a world with millions who have no knowledge of God as their Father, multitudes who grope for light. The Christ is their Truth, their Way, their Life, but they do not know Him!

There are three things you can do:

1. Join the Fellowship of Those Who Care, and daily pray for this work.
2. Support with your gifts the apportionment of your local church.
3. Make a personal gift directly for the work of Missions. This can be sent through your Secretary of Missions, Elon College, N. C.

J. O. ATKINSON, Secretary.

THE YOUNGER CHURCHES ARE GROWING STRONGER.

What is the Christian Church?

The Christian Church can hardly be defined but it may be described. It is "a community of persons living in a new kind of life, which has its source in God, a life of mutual forbearance and mutual helpfulness, of forgiveness of injuries, of righteousness and love. . . It is a community of ordinary men and women manifesting the fruits of the spirit and pursuing their ordinary tasks and fulfilling their ordinary human responsibilities in the power of a new life, in the strength of a great hope and in the inspiration of a living fellowship." These are the words of Dr. J. H. Oldham of the International Missionary Council. They summon all of us to a noble ideal of the Christian Church.

Our Sister Churches.

A missionary recently asked a significant question of one of the officers of the American Board.

"When will the Congregational and Christian churches of America recognize churches in Asia, Africa and elsewhere as sister churches?" Think what lies behind that question. Christianity has become a world movement. There is scarcely any nation in which evangelical Christianity has not put down its roots. New churches have come into existence across the world in every decade of the last century. These indigenous churches are in various stages of development, to be sure, some weak and some strong, but they are all beginning to sense their responsibilities under Christ as they face their total environment. That marks a great advance. But they need constant and understanding fellowship. They want genuine co-operation. They want to be recognized as and treated as sister churches. If we honestly gave them that status, our conception and practice of foreign missions would be revolutionized. Missions would be lifted from philanthropy to churchmanship and it would be churchmanship through fellowship.

International Congregationalism.

Congregationalists are not ardent denominationalists and never have been, but we live in a much divided denominational world.

Congregationalists are not ardent statisticians and never have been, but we live in a world that makes much of figures and yardsticks.

Hence, as a matter of information, pure and simple (at least we hope it is so), the following recently compiled and published figures are given to indicate the range of our immediate international fellowship. We are not forgetting the Christian churches in the United States with whom we are merged. Nor are we forgetting that, all told, we are but a small unit in the world movement of Christianity.

Special attention is called to the fact that the figures for Africa, Bulgaria, China, Czechoslovakia, India and Ceylon, Japan, Mexico, Micronesia, the Philippines, Spain, and the Near East refer to "sister churches" that have come into being through the work of the American Board.

"Jesus Captivating the Indian Heart."

We quote from Dnyanodaya, Sept. 12, 1935, a weekly paper published in Poona, India: "One of the most amazing things in the present Indian religious situation is the astonishing way in which Jesus Christ is triumphing in so many parts of India over the influence of our imperfect lives and over the defects of our presentation of His message. When King George ascended the throne (1910) there were a little over three and one-half million Christians in India, but in 1931, the official census showed over six and one-quarter millions. . . Nor are all these increased numbers from outcaste or low-caste people. In the Telugu-speaking area alone it is estimated that baptized caste people up to date in the South India Caste Movement are about 30,000. . . The most encouraging aspect of this Caste Movement towards Christ is that it is largely through the witness of the transformed lives of outcastes who have become Christians."

AMERICAN BOARD FACTS.

- 494 Missionaries in active service.
- 6,033 National Christian workers.
- 14 Missions, 84 Stations, 2,167 Outstations.
- 765 Churches, 104,162 Members (new members added, 1934, 6,058; net increase 879).
- 1,303 Sunday Schools, 90,563 Membership (net increase in 1934, 9,651).
- 9 Colleges, 30 Theological and Training Schools, 1,003 Lower Schools.
- 84,911 Students under instruction.
- 25 Hospitals, 45 Dispensaries:
  - 381,844 In-Patient Days.
  - 641,648 Out-Patient Treatments.
- $7,000,000 invested in Lands and Buildings.
- *$702,696 raised on Mission Fields in 1934 for support of work:
  - $224,482 for support of Churches and Christian work.
  - $478,214 fees paid in Schools and Hospitals.
- $1,098,836.43 expenditures supported from U. S. for year ending August 31, 1935.
- 4,144 of the 6,282 Congregational and Christian Churches listed in the Year Book shared in this work last year.
- 2,991 Friends of the Board sent individual gifts. (*Because of low cost of living in countries in which the Board works, these figures represent an amount of support many times greater than the actual amount shown here.)

THE WAY OF LOVE.

To love is to risk. To love greatly is to risk greatly. To love infinitely is to risk infinitely. To love is to throw down the shield and bare one's heart for the possible thrust of the knife. What one feels in the presence of physical tragedy must be slight in comparison with God's thought in the presence of the moral tragedy of his children. We are so little sensitive to moral tragedy because we are so little like God. Love, the self-giving of the Divine, is fundamental in the Christian thought of creation. To make a race of beings endowed with a measure of freedom, that they might become like God, was a plan of love, but from the beginning it was fraught with the risk of moral tragedy and divine suffering. A God who suffers because of the moral disorder within his universe is the revelation of the Cross. "The Cross," writes Prof. G. A. Johnston Ross, "is a projection upon the plane of time of an eternal state of things in the heart of God." It is desperate business to walk the way of love in a world where bigotry, narrowness and selfishness are found. Conflict will come. The Day of the crucifixion marked the supreme struggle with these forces. Sin unrelenting met Love unbounded; took it in its teeth, and shook the life out of it. At the end of that day there was a broken, bleeding form!—Joseph B. Matthews.

A Story for the Children

A LITTLE GIRL AND THE LIONS.

True Incident as Related by Rev. E. H. Richards.

She lives in Africa, not far from Pakule, a lovely little paradise close to the spot where the Tropic of Capricorn dives into the Indian Ocean on the east coast. Her full name is Xidedevara Mtimasano (she-day-vay-lah M-tee-mah-sah-nah, which in English is Miss Watercress Littleblack.

She was about ten years old when this story begins, delightfully black and full of energy as a buzzing bumblebee.

A few miles from her home a native Christian convert named Angilazi (glass) and his wife, Mabumbi (ear of corn), had opened a station where they were teaching "everything that the white man knew" so far as they understood it, and that was clear into the Kingdom of Heaven in one direction.

The children on this station went out by twos—in real Bible fashion—calling on all the people within five miles of the meeting house, and one day came to the kraal where our small friend Xidedevara lived.

She was wide awake to all they had to tell and went home with them at once to see and hear more of what was doing. She saw that each of the station girls had a good denim gown, while she still wore only a suit of peanut oil and sunshine, but what impressed her most was the singing, praying and all the lovely life of the mission school.

The music touched her so deeply that tears ran down her shining cheeks. The story of Daniel in the lions' den was just the thing for her, for she knew where the lions were, and still worse, they knew where she was. She was glad to learn that there was One who could make even the roaring lions behave themselves.

When she went home she told her mother that she was going to be a Christian and begin right away. But this announcement did not make the mother happy. If her little girl were a Christian she would never grind corn to make beer nor tend the still where strong drink was made; nor would she join the dance any more, nor be but the "one wife" of any man. And was it not the glory of women to distill rum from plantains and whiskey from corn? Could she ever be anything if not chief dancer in the national game? And to be the first or only wife meant poverty for her whole family, where she would have all the work to do and her husband be known as "a man of less than grasshopper size."

Now the mother of Xidedevara, whose name as nearly as we can recall it was Mrs. Ignora Muss, believed all these things and was desperately in earnest to save her child from the "medicine" of the missionary. This foreign witch-doctor might be well enough for his own tribe and country, but not for Africa.

Meanwhile the little girl returned to the mission and finally ran away and lived there. This aroused her mother, who went after her, brought her home and whipped her enough to drive out any sort of new spirits, she thought.

But as soon as chance offered, away went the brave child to the mission again; and again the mother brought her home—this time calling in the witch doctor, who whipped her well but in vain, as she would not consent to leave the station.

Then he tied her feet to the limb of a tree with her head hanging down, hoping that her religion might ooze from her mouth, but hers was not the oozing-out sort.

Following this he gave her dreadful doses of medicine calculated to destroy the "religious germ" but all in vain. Xidedevara lived, and by eating corn meal mush seasoned with peanut gravy and thickened with powered caterpillar, etc., she gained strength to make a safe rush to the mission station again.

She did not report the dreadful treatment of the witch doctor, nor her mother's unkindness until some time after her final tribulation, which she must now endure, for her mother determined on one last terrible resort to save her child from heathendom.

She appeared again at the station and took the little daughter home with her. Toward evening she prepared some bark rope, took Xidedevara to the forest, where with her own hands, she bound the little arms behind her and then tied her to a tamarind tree, hoping that lions would come and either frighten the religion out of her or, if the worst must come, that they would eat her up. Was it not better so than to have her lost to everything in the home, the tribe and the nation.

No one knows what occurred in the dark dismal forest that night, but one can believe that the little black martyr bound to a tree was not left alone.

In the early morning a small boy went out to pray, as is the usual custom on all the stations in these parts, and as he began his petition, Xidedevara heard him and knowing that it was the voice of a Christian at prayer, though she did not know who it was, she called to him. He heard her, came and untied the bark rope which bound her, and brought her to the station.

The teacher says that lion tracks were within fifteen feet of where the child was bound. Lions had lain down, sat down, stood and walked about till they had meditated their toothsome morsel at every point, with never a nearer scent than their fifteen feet of solid distance permitted.

Instead of scaring the religion out, the dark night had proved to be the greatest help to its rapid growth.

When questioned later as to her sensations within this den of lions, she remarked with all the confidence of a modern Daniel, "You taught that the Great God made the lions and that He also made me; and He would never have let us eat each other up."

Who can think calmly of enduring such an ordeal? Let the philosopher try to explain if he will, but we prefer to believe that angel who "shut the lions' mouths" in old Babylon was very near to Xidedevara that night in the African forest.—South African Missionary Advocate.

IN THE HOUR OF TRIAL.

When you say, "Lead us not into temptation," you must in good earnest mean to avoid in your daily conduct those temptations which you have already suffered from. When you say, "Deliver us from evil," you must mean to struggle against the evil in your hearts, which you are conscious of, and which you pray to be forgiven. To watch and pray are surely in our power, and by these means we are certain of getting strength. You feel your weakness; you fear to be overcome by temptation; then keep out of the way of it. This is watching. Avoid society which is likely to mislead you; flee from the very shadow of evil; you cannot be too careful; better be a little too strict than a little too easy,—it is the safer side. Abstain from reading books which are dangerous to you. Turn from bad thoughts when they arise.

—J. H. Newman.

It is astonishing how soon the whole conscience begins to unravel, if a single stitch drops; one little sin indulged makes a hole you could put your head through.—Charles Buxton.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

THINGS THEY ARE DOING.

A recent letter from Miss Emily Carleton, secretary of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, was sent to leaders of young people's groups in the Southeast. Her personal letter and the inclosures both had in them things which may be helpful to others, and I am taking the liberty to pass them along to those who read this page. The letter said:

"The Lenten Season is here. Have you and the group of young people whom you represent already planned a comprehensive program leading up to Easter?"

"The officers of the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship asked Mr. Leshner, the Congregational minister in Jacksonville, to give us some Lenten suggestions which we could have mimeographed and sent to our societies throughout the state. . . I hope that you will be able to use some of these suggestions in helping young people in your various local groups in your section of the Southeast Youth Fellowship plan programs for the Lenten Season."

The following article gives the information which Miss Carleton sent to Southeast Youth Fellowship workers, and it is being used among Florida young people.

LENTEN SUGGESTIONS.

Lent begins on Ash Wednesday, February 26th. The six-week period of Lent preceding Easter should be a time for discovering and satisfying our personal religious needs. Special Lenten services should be planned especially for the strengthening of our inner lives where the issues of life are determined. The nature of these services will naturally vary according to the materials and facilities of each church. The following suggestions, therefore, are general enough to include the small church with limited facilities as well as the large church.

1. One service might well be devoted to a study of Lent with special emphasis given to the meaning and story of Holy Week. In plain words, how many of the young people know what it is all about? Why is Ash Wednesday called "Ash" and "Maunday Thursday," "Maunday," and Holy Week, "Holy?" You will find The Story of Holy Week, furnished by the Commission on Evangelism, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, for five cents, a very helpful one. You might assign the seven days of Holy Week to seven young people, requesting that they come prepared to tell the story of each day.

2. A very fine booklet upon which to build a series of discussion meetings is What it Means to Be A Christian, by Edward Bosworth, available for 25c at the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston. If you want material for such questions as "Is there a God?" or "Who is Jesus Christ," or "Can we pray?" or "Is death the end?", this little booklet will serve you well.

3. All meetings of whatever nature should provide for a period of meaningful worship. A very helpful worship guide with devotional material, prepared especially for young people, is the booklet Follow Me, published by the Westminster Press, 150 Fourth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tennessee, for 10 cents. This may also be used as a daily devotional guide.

4. If your group wishes to study one particular subject throughout the Lenten period, you might follow the course How To Plan the Personal De- volutions of Young People, published by the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 740 Rush Street, Chicago, for fifteen cents.

5. One young people's group endeavored to look ahead in their united effort to reach the unchurched young people in town. On the afternoon of this day, a community religious census was undertaken in cooperation with other young people's groups of the town. In the evening, results of the census were presented and the discussion centered on the next steps in reaching the unchurched.

6. A play reading on Good Friday or Palm Sunday evening would be inspiring and challenging. The Terrible Meek (35c per copy) or Dust of the Road (50c per copy) are both fine, and they may be obtained from Walter H. Baker Company, 175 Tremont Street, Boston.

7. Why not have a young people's communion service either on Maunday Thursday evening or Palm Sunday? This might well take the form of a candlelight consecration service led by your minister. Young people who have attended such a service invariably feel that it is the "high point" of the year.

Those who would like information concerning religious films, either 16mm or 35mm, for use during Lent, may have that information by writing Rev. Everett B. Leshner, Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Florida.

BIBLES FOR CHILDREN.

Attention of Sunday School teachers and church workers is called to the fact that the Board of Christian Education still wishes to send New Testaments or Bibles to all boys and girls in our Sunday School as they reach their tenth birthday.

It is possible now for us to furnish such books for needy cases other than for ten-year-old children. We are eager to supply them wherever they may be needed. Please send your request to the Board of Christian Education at 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

CONSEQUENCES OF GREAT DECISIONS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAR. 22, 1936.

Scripture: Josh. 24:14, 15.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Abraham's decision. Gen. 12:1-5.

Tues.—Lot's sad decision. Gen. 13:1-13.

Wed.—Peter's decision. Matt. 4:18-22.

Thurs.—"I appeal to Caesar." Acts 25:11.

Fri.—The people's decision. Matt. 27:17-25.

Sat.—Almost decided. Acts 25:22-27.

Every day young people must face decisions. Sometimes it may not be an important question, but it will be something you must decide for yourself.

After high school days are over one must decide the path they will choose—whether they will seek college and a higher education or if the high school has prepared them for their life work. This is an important decision that must be made, the results of which will effect the entire life of a person.

One must also decide as to their choice of a life work. There will surely be definite consequences to this decision—whether one chooses a business career, professional vocation or joins those in the laboring ranks. To every girl comes the time to make her choice between the business world and the home.

To every person comes the time for the greatest decision of their life—to decide for or against Christ. This decision is fundamental because it involves every other important decision that is made. Even as Joshua of old said to his people, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve" the people of today are confronted with the same situation. In Matthew 27:17-25 we read that the people decided for Barabbas and turned against Christ. They decided to crucify their Lord!

Today we cannot actually nail Jesus to a cross, but by the decisions some people make they are still crucifying him. Our Heavenly Father leaves man free to make his own decisions. He who would be wise will decide in favor of Christ and the consequences will be that they will live the abundant life and dwell eternally with the Master.

After a person decides for Christ and joins His church there will be many things in his life that will become habitual. He will not have to decide if he is going to church on Sunday—the church will be a part of his life; when he passes by the beer tavern he will not have to decide if he will go in, he will not have to decide whether or not he will attend the party that he knows will be questionable—these things will have no place in his life.

There was once a young man who lived in the land of Palestine who had to make decisions. He spent forty days in the wilderness facing temptations. The temptations he faced were even stronger in their appeal than those that confront youth today. He turned away from them all and decided to set His face steadfastly toward building the Kingdom of God on earth. We know the consequences of this decision. It led Jesus to the Cross, but it gave to the world a Saviour.

Paul made a great decision. He was on his way to Damascus to persecute the Christians when a voice spoke to him, and right then he made the greatest decision of his life—to follow Christ! David Livingstone made a great decision when he decided to carry the light to dark Africa.

The decisions that are made in our youth usually stay with us through life. These are the decisions that make the deepest impression on a person. Let your decision for Christ be one that is made in your youth, and say with Paul, ". . . This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

"IN HIS STEPS."

"The road is rough," I said. "Dear Lord, There are stones that hurt me so." And He said: "Dear child, I understand; I walked it long ago."

"But there's a cool, green path," I said. "Let me walk there for a time." "No, child," He gently answered me, "The green road does not climb."

"My burden," I said, "is far too great; How can I bear it so?" "My child," said He, "I remember its weight—I carried my cross, you know."

"But," I said, "I with there were friends with me, Who would make my way their own." "Ah yes," He said, "Gethsemane Was hard to face alone."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS TEACHES HIS DISCIPLES TO PRAY.

LESSON XI—MARCH 15, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us."—I John 5:14.

LESSON: Luke 11. Lesson Text Printed—Luke 11:1-13.

"As He Was Praying."

The Master prayed. That is a stubborn and challenging fact. It cannot be lightly dismissed. It would seem that if any man could have gotten along without prayer, it would have been Jesus. But no man ever prayed more earnestly, more constantly, more vitally than the Master. It was the life of His life. Through prayer He understood what the will of God was for His life, and found power to do it. Through prayer He kept in intimate communion and fellowship with the Father. Through prayer He lived at His best and highest. One cannot account for the life of Jesus Christ apart from prayer. He that hath ears to hear, let Him hear what the Master has to say about prayer.

"Teach Us to Pray."

There was something so vital, so impressive, so impelling about the praying of Jesus that when His disciples saw and heard him, they instinctively said, "Lord, teach us how to pray." Alas for us that we do not want to enroll in the School of Prayer with Jesus as our Teacher. Alas for those of us who are teachers and ministers that we are not teaching our people how to pray. Even John the Baptist taught his disciples to pray.

"When Ye Pray, Say . . ."

What we call the Lord's Prayer, but which might perhaps better be called the Model Prayer, contains in essence the fundamental principles of prayer. It is a tribute to the literary and spiritual genius of Jesus. In these few words, most of which are one-syllable words, the Master gives His disciples the form and the spirit of prayer.

When ye pray, say, Father. Prayer is a conversation between the Heavenly Father and His children. Because of this fact it should be unaffected, simple, intimate, warm, personal.

When ye pray, say "Our Father." He is not simply my Father, and the Father of a select little group or of a favored nation—He is the Father of all men. Prayer involves brotherhood for it is rooted in Fatherhood. Prayer must be social, not selfish. "Give us," "our daily bread," "forgive us our sins," "lead us not into temptation" "deliver us from evil." We are to bear one another's burdens in prayer, and so fulfil the law of Christ.

When ye pray, say "Hallowed be Thy name." God is our heavenly Father. We are to be reverent in His presence and in the use of His name. There can be familiarity but not flippancy. We are to come humbly, even if confidently. We must never forget that we are in the presence of the King himself, God our Father.

When ye pray say "Thy kingdom come." Prayer in the final analysis has as its object the consummation of the Kingdom. The desire to see the coming of the kingdom must be the central passion of our lives and the object of our labors.

When ye pray say "Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth." The kingdom is to be established here on earth, in the realm of human relationships. It is to be established in the heart of the individual and in the life of society. We should pray for that great objective.

When ye pray say "Give us day by day our daily bread." Be not anxious about tomorrow; sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Do not unfit yourself for today's duties by worrying about tomorrow's experiences. Godliness with contentment is great gain. Do not let the material things of life crowd out the higher interests of the soul. This day, our daily bread—let a man seek first the kingdom and he shall have these things.

When ye pray say "Forgive us our sins." We need to say that for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Alas for the man who feels no sense of sin, no sense of "having missed the mark," no consciousness of his need of divine mercy. Confession of sin has a necessary place in prayer. And confession of sin makes possible the forgiveness of sin. Provided, provided, provided we forgive others who have sinned against us. For Jesus says:

When ye pray say "For we also forgive every one that is indebted to us." Our claim to forgiveness is the fact that we already have the spirit of forgiveness in our hearts toward others, toward everybody—that is exactly what Jesus says. In another place Jesus says that unless we forgive others their trespasses against us, God cannot forgive us our trespasses against Him. One had better leave out that part of the Model Prayer unless he means it. Indeed one had better not pray until he can say that part and mean it. He is simply wasting time and mocking God unless he does.

When ye pray say "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." In another place Jesus says "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." Pray that we be not led into those situations or places in which we shall be tempted. But pray that if in the experiences of life temptations do come, we may have inner resources not to succumb to temptation. Flee temptation when you can. Fight it when you must.

"According to His Will."

Prayer is not a magical formula for getting anything we want. Jesus said we must ask in His name. John said we must ask according to his will. And even then John does not say that we shall have everything we ask for. He says: "If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." But no sincere prayer is unheard or unanswered. The answer is sometimes delayed, the answer sometimes comes in another way, but the answer eventually and always comes in one way or another.

"How Much More Shall Your Heavenly Father Give?"

Fatherhood, even in its limited wisdom and goodness, desires and tries to give children good things. "How much more," says Jesus will our "Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him." The supreme answer to prayer on the part of God is the giving of himself. Prayer at its best is not getting things; it is finding God. Man ought always to pray, and not to faint.

And so I climbed the stony path,
Content at last to know,
That where my Master had not gone,
I would not need to go.

And strangely then I found new friends;
The burden grew less sore
As, I remembered, long ago
He went that way before.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"MY NEIGHBOR."

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—
Lev. 19:18.

"Who is my neighbor?" It is a question still propelling itself down the annals of time and presents itself to millions for a right reply.

It seems to be a matter of little consequence, in these days of congested areas and rushing life, who my neighbors are. We occupy dwellings by the side of one another for years in ignorance of the name of the family next door.

We are told that in China it is different. Say they, if a crime takes place the neighbors are held guilty of something connected with it, in that they knew of the criminal intention and did not report it. And it is said, that it is in vain to plead, "I did not know." "You are a neighbor and therefore you must have known." And it is fairly reasonable.

It is undeniably true that responsibility rises with us, in some way or other, with regard to everyone with whom we are brought in contact. This responsibility is moral and spiritual and it has to do with our influence on them however slight it may be. To laugh at the evil or profane joke, to speak a thoughtless, foolish, or angry word, or to be silent, maybe, when one should speak, all has some influence over others.

What marvelous opportunities come to us every day. How are we using these opportunities? Have we used them at all?

Prayer—Our Father, help us to discover in the secret of our own soul the sympathies that are knit with mankind. Help us to discover those untried existences in each of us that rescues from and raises all above sinning. In Christ's name.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"JESUS AND THE CHILDREN."

"Suffer little children and forbid them not, to come unto me."—Matt. 19:14.

"Jesus was a great lover of children. Their affections were like a healing balm to His troubled soul. Children possess a keen sense amounting almost to intuition in distinguishing the friendly from the unfriendly, and so they approached the Saviour unafraid. They loved Him then and they love Him now when they are brought to Him.

"Suffer the little children and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." He also said, "Except ye become as little children ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." This he said to the disciples who often thought him too tired to be bothered with children." (Taken from the scripture text calendar.)

Prayer—"We love thy Kingdom, Lord." Lead us, Father, in the thought, the love and in the way we should go. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE LIFE-GIVING GOD."

"I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger."—Jno. 6:35.

These words of our Lord were spoken to the individual and they may still be spoken to us. We may go to church but have no communion; we written in the "Lamb's book of life:" we may be a son but not a member of the family: we may say prayers but never pray: we may bow (and we observe that most worshippers do not these days) and never make a sacrifice: we may not condone sin but never resist unto blood. Spiritually we are just corpses.

Jesus told the young man to keep the commandments and he would live. Reproving the Jews he told them that they that hear his voice shall live. The message is "Look and live."

Folks, there is nothing more certain to the soul in Christ than when the breath of God and the life of Jesus touches the life, the dead becomes alive and lives to the glory of God. If all professed Christians were filled with spiritual endowment of Christ a new chapter would be added to the Gospels.

Prayer—O Thou, God of us all, who didst breathe in the nostrils of first man the breath of life, breathe Thou into our souls, and make our dead, hopeless, sapless selves alive and of some use to the world and Thee.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"A GOOD MAN."

"He was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 11:24.

That verse would make a good epitaph. What sort of epitaph are you writing for your tomb and for the memory of you when you shall have passed on?

Prayer—O Lord, God,

We need it every hour—
A conscience clear,
That shall be as a Tower
Of strength and cheer.

We need it every hour—
A true pure life,
Which failure cannot sour
Or turn to strife.

—J. F. Hogg.

FRIDAY.

"THE WAY OF CERTAINTY."

"If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love."—Jno. 15:10.

If God is such an one as we are obliged to believe Him to be He will surely take care of us. Paul the apostle frequently said "I know." But Paul came to that certainty through faith and an inner persuasion in truth that carried him clear through to certainty.

Man lacks the witness for God today because there is too much doubt, too little of conviction and certitude. Most Christians lack the private assurance which with St. Paul was equivalent to knowledge, and this is a great defeat in current religious experience.

Our text is one of the many which tells us how to arrive at that certainty. It reflects the following, "If there is a personal God, who loves rectitude, purity, and goodness, then it follows that they also who love these things shall be at one with Him." God cannot ignore in us the qualities which constitute his own essence and glory.

Lovers of the Lord cannot explain to themselves or to others how this is, they only know and it speaks in their lives. Neither can the one on the outside understand a Christian's certainty. But the fact is there just the same. He cannot deny it.

"Love God and keep His commandments and Thou shalt know."

Prayer—Our Father, we would know Thee in the greatest certainty. Walk Thou with us this day and every day and reveal Thyself unto us as Thou dost not to the World. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"GOD'S PLUMB-LINE."

"Then said the Lord, Behold, I will set a plumb-line in the midst of my people Israel."—
Amos 7:7-9.

The plumb-line that Amos saw in the hand of Jehovah, with which He was testing a wall, is a symbol of the righteousness of the Lord. Nothing must be awry in the lives of the Lord's people. Everything must be straight, and true, with no deviation from strict rectitude.

We are so likely to say, "It is only a little out of plumb. Nothing to make a fuss about." But a little out of plumb today means much out of plumb next year and utter downfall before many years. In Boston they are now taking down stone by stone, with much labor and at great cost, the tallest stone church steeple in the city, because, though only a little out of plumb at first, it got several feet out of perpendicular, and became a serious menace. Now it must be entirely rebuilt.

Let us measure ourselves constantly alongside the plumb-line of the All-just. Let us admit no least deflection from truth and right and purity. For small beginnings of wrong are sure to end in ruin.

Prayer—Test us day by day, O God. Keep our consciences firm. May we see eye-to-eye with Thee.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"DIVINE WEAPONS."

"Jehovah saveth not with sword and spear."—
I Sam. 17:41-50.

Those who rely on earthly and temporal weapons win only earthly and transitory victories. Generals save with sword and spear, but the Lord of Hosts has infinitely better means of salvation. Men save with money and houses, food and clothes, but the salvation that is from above saves with the gold of heaven, the eternal habitations, the bread of life and the wedding garment of the endless feast.

We are all in need of salvation, but some seek salvation from bodily disease and others will have relief from anguish and decay of the spirit. A man may be known by the things from which he wants to be saved.

Look upward, my soul, to the armies of heaven! See the shining multitudes of angels speeding to your aid. See the King of Glory directing the army of rescue. There is nothing from which you need to be saved but you may be saved from it.

Prayer—August and revered Commander of all powers, we rest in Thee. Thy sword never breaks and Thy spear never bends. Seek out our real foes, the crafty soldiers of Satan, and put them all to flight. For Jesus' sake.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

IMPRESSIONS.

Be careful of passing judgment upon others on little acquaintance. It is related of Thomas Aquinas, the master theologian of the middle ages, that he was despised by his fellow students and called "bos mutus"; but after he opened his mouth in an academic discussion, his teacher, Albertus Magnus, exclaimed: "We called him the mute ox, but his voice will soon be heard throughout the world." This same prophecy was fulfilled. Unpromising members often prove jewels in disguise. The wonder of God's presence in a human life is the mystery of the ages. Thanks be to His Holy name.

"MY BROTHER'S KEEPER."

By REV. CARL R. KEY.

"And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel, thy brother? And he said, I know not; Am I my brother's keeper?"—Gen. 4:9.

We are "our brother's keeper." We want to be watchful lest we rise up and slay him, not openly and quickly, but secretly in our modern manner of killing men slowly but surely. If we have a true picture, vision of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man, operating on the principle of love we will not slay our brothers mercilessly. We will not cultivate a selfish disposition. We will not allow this desire to poison our minds and hearts and lead us to contemplate open, cold-blooded murder. The love, the vision, the idealism of the Son of God will inspire us to practice the power of love as we associate with our fellowmen around the earth. We will come to sense the true meaning of that hymn of Universal Brotherhood penned by John Oxenham:

"In Christ there is no East nor West,
In him no South nor North;
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth.

"In him shall true hearts everywhere
Their high communion find;
His service is the golden cord
Close-binding all mankind.

"Join hands then, brothers of the faith,
Whate'er your race may be.
Who serves my Father as a son
Is surely kin to me.

"In Christ now meet both East and West,
In him meet South and North;
All Christly souls are one in him
Throughout the whole wide earth."

This same spirit, so beautifully expressed by John Oxenham, was an inherent possession of "the forgotten man," Abraham Lincoln. But this moral hero and Christian idealist could not curb it in his own "self," "soul." It was so deep and abiding with him that it overflowed like a cool, refreshing spring in the hills, and spread like peaceful waters in the path of his brother man. His idealism, his vision grew out of the profound and elemental convictions so admirably portrayed in word pictures by William E. Gilroy, editor of the Advance, in the February issue. They are named as follows:

"1. Deep and elemental in Lincoln was his conviction concerning the judgments of God."

"2. Equally deep and elemental was Lincoln's faith in the common man."

"3. Lincoln had a profound trust in the reality and integrity of what men in general have regarded as the higher and nobler emotions."

"4. Lincoln had a fundamental faith in the right of the citizen to rebel even against his government."

"5. Lincoln had a deep faith in law and civil rights as the essential foundation of order in a democracy."

We also turn to Lincoln's memorable Gettysburg address for an outpouring of this spirit from the lips of Lincoln the man as he viewed the battlefield and the dead. (As we quote his words we must be mindful of the fact that they rank in English literature with the most notable works of Shakespeare.) We see in his words the unfinished task for those craving racial brotherhood. (As yet this heart-felt desire has not been fulfilled.) "In the year 1863, a great American stood on the battlefield of Gettysburg and, referring to the thousands of men who there yielded up their lives, said this: 'It is for us, the living, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.'"

If we keep faith with our Father, God; if we keep faith with our Saviour, Jesus Christ; if we keep faith with our moral hero and Christian idealist, Abraham Lincoln and especially if we keep faith with that illustrious figure and Southern hero, Robert E. Lee, we must "run with patience the race that is set before us." We must say to those advocating the spirit of Cain of old and the Modern Cains, "Get thee behind me, Satan." When the Father asks "Where is thy brother?" we will not jest with Him. When the blood of our brothers of the past cry out we will answer to what we have done. We will shout from the mountain peak that "I am my brother's keeper"; "My brother is my keeper."

This conviction, surely was given us as a Reality by the deliverers of the men we have previously presented. We are still attempting to find the cold facts. We would make them flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone. In following this hunger for truth we would endeavor to answer some such questions as these: "Who is thy brother?" "Where is thy brother?" "What hast thou done to him?" "Am I my brother's keeper?"

First, Who is my brother? To Cain of the Scripture he was only a blood brother. To modern Cains he is practically the same. To Jesus of Nazareth it was any man who could "love a neighbor as he loved himself." John Oxenham made this clear. To him it was "true hearts everywhere," "brothers of the faith," "all Christly souls." We have Scriptural evidence of a brother as being any friend, one in the same office, one of similar character, disciples or of the same faith. As illustrated by the Book of Jonah, a brother is both Jew and Ninevite, both native-born and foreign-born. To men in this age he is both white man and yellow man, both brown man and black man, both American and Canadian, both Englishman and Frenchman, both German and Russian, both Italian and Ethiopian, both Japanese and Chinese. Their love for each other should be just as deep and lasting. Ernest Fremont Tittle dared an apt, piercing thought. "The love of God is broader than the measure of prejudiced people's minds." Only the fellowship of one another in the spirit of love can keep us from killing, from denying that we are our brother's keeper and reveal clearly and plainly who he is.

Secondly, "Where is thy brother?" Dare we jest with our fellowman in an hour of crisis? Dare we, like Cain, jest with God? In the words of Oxenham he is "throughout the whole wide earth," "everywhere," "east and west," "north and south," "throughout the whole wide earth." In the philosophy of Lincoln he is wherever the "common man" dwells, the nation, the people. Allow me to say it is he to whom we extend our fellowship, friendship and love in any form in the valleys or on the mountains, from pole to pole.

Thirdly, "What hast thou done to him?" This cannot be so easily answered as the former. We cannot say we have kept our brothers well. We have not. We can draw sufficient indictment against ourselves. Some of the things we have done to our brothers of other races smells to high heaven. If it were possible for us to imagine God as being angry today he certainly would display his wrath.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The weather has cleared up and the days are warm and pleasant. We have caught the garden fever. We have planted our garden peas, mustard and onions.

Last Saturday while the moon was right we planted our crop of Irish potatoes. The land was in excellent condition. The seed potatoes were certified and the moon was right so we are looking for a splendid crop.

The "flu" has struck our large family. We have had a number of cases in each building. The Johnston Hall and the old building seems to have suffered most. Both of our matrons in the old building have been confined to their rooms and it made it necessary for us to call in extra help to take charge until they get better. I believe this is the first time in our work here that this has happened.

We had very little sickness last year during the entire year and for months at a time we did not call a doctor and our report on days of sickness last year was very small.

We have not had a single case of pneumonia yet during all of the "flu" epidemic we have had for the last two weeks. The cases of "flu" has been of a medium grade and none of the children have been very ill.

Sheets and dresses for the larger girls are needed.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

A few individuals have caught the vision of world brotherhood and given their lives for it. This has served to keep alive the ideal which was imbedded in the minds of the followers of the Christ.

Collectively we have done nothing, so to speak, which will lift our brothers out of the social and economic debacle in which we find ourselves. Economic and commercial bondage has held our brothers long enough. Human prejudice and selfishness has kept him in chains. Racial superiority and greed has ground him down but he still struggles for freedom. Economic and political nationalism has led us into the valley of the shadow of racial stupidity, servitude, exploitation, grabbing, greed, imperialism and piracy. With the keenness of a two-edged sword, Ernest Fremont Tittle stabs the lethargic heart and the latent mind into action by this declaration: "To be a pirate is bad enough, but to be a smug international brigand in the name of God is blasphemy."

Our beloved, visionist and idealist and practical Christian, Bishop Paul Kern, speaks of the bearing of the principle of unity upon our treatment of the weaker races in a concise, but self-revealing manner. "The power of the Christian religion in America is going to be tested not by the increase of our numerical strength or the rising chart of our Church-controlled wealth. We shall stand or fall as a Christian force by the manner in which we deal with the weaker races that are among us. Here God has led us into our valley of decision. By this shall all men know that we are Christ's disciples, because we have love for all men, regardless of color or condition of servitude. To our shame, we have too often looked upon the Mexican and the Japanese merely as a 'labor problem'; too often we have used the Negro as a means to an end but not as a worthy end in himself. There must be something beyond 'a square deal for the Negro.' If God the Father dealt with us on the low level of the square deal, we should all be without hope. We must treat the Mexican, the Slav, the Pole, the Negro, as a brother in the family of God. He must have his chance to make, unhindered and with welcome appreciation, his contribution to our united life. To despise another man because of his background is different from ours and his skin is a shade off-color, is not only blind stupidity but practical atheism. In a Southern College several years ago Dr. T. R. Glover was speaking on 'Jesus in the Experience of Men.' There followed a discussion of race relationship. Dr. Glover was silent throughout the discussion. But when he closed his final lecture on Jesus Christ he made this significant utterance: 'You may have race prejudice if you want it; or you may have Jesus if you want him; but you cannot have both.'

Lastly in the words of the Cains of today, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Some of us may admit that we are his keeper. We might add that we have not kept him as well as we might but we are determined, God helping us, to keep him better in the future. Others cannot answer because their lips bear the marks of blackest guilt. We cannot keep our brother safely, securely, unless our sins have been removed by the forgiving Christ, God. We must call upon him while he is near. We cannot be his keeper in the fullest sense until we are so "possessed" with the attitude, spirit, character, personality and love of Christ that we can share it with him. Our brothers are crying "Give us Christ or we perish."

Again, Bishop Kerns pours out his soul to us. "Jesus talked of a world peopled with exalted personalities, each a son of one Father, all blood brothers in the bonds of fraternity that overleaps artificial barriers, breaks down nationalistic conceits, exalts separate cultures for the good of all, and makes every man his brother's keeper. Before the church can exercise authority over men, she must get right with God. Along this road of racial adjustment that leads to the Christian conception of world unity there lies a cross. We are not today worthy to bear that cross. Only as judgment begins at the house of God shall we, chastened and humbled, life from his shoulders in his continuing Calvary this symbol which is not only our indictment but our hope, the magnet which alone can draw all men into the one world-wide fellowship for which he prayed."

In conclusion may we remember one significant thing that Jesus was not a white man but of a different race. Yet He is acclaimed and enthroned as the Saviour of the world, the keeper of his brother man. Likewise, we are keepers of our brothers. All men created in the image of God and breathing the breath of his life are our brothers. He dwells "throughout the whole wide earth." We shamefully admit that we have not treated him as a brother heretofore. From henceforth we join hands with him. We walk with him arm in arm. We are his keeper and he is ours. We face the future together. We march forth to battle, bearing the cross of Christ as our standard.

"Forward through the ages, in unbroken line,
Move the faithful spirits at the call divine,
Gifts in differing measure, hearts of one accord,
Manifold the service, one the sure reward.

"Wider grows the kingdom, reign of love and light;
For it we must labor, till our faith is sight.
Prophets have proclaimed it, martyrs testified,
Poets sung its glory, heroes for it died.

"Not alone we conquer, not alone we fall;
In each loss or triumph lose or triumph all.
Bound in God's far purpose in one living whole, Move we on together to the shining goal."

"A LENTEN CRUSADE."

Rev. Ivan R. Smith, pastor of our Winchester Church, has put on "A Lenten Crusade" from March 1st—April 12th, inclusive. In this "Crusade," he endeavored to enlist all his members on March 1st to agree to: (1) Attend all Church services beginning Sunday, March 1st and ending Easter Sunday, April 12th (insofar as is humanly possible); (2) "Come and See." Philip was "magnificently obsessed" with the real spirit of Jesus. Philip went to Nathaniel and said: "Come and see." Whom? Jesus. This Crusade will be of no value at all unless you become filled with Christ's spirit and bring others to Him, and His Church. No teams are going out to get people to sign. You are the team! If you love Christ and your Church "Take it Upon Yourself" to invite others, speak to others in your home, Sunday School class, neighborhood and get them to Enlist For Christ. Then tell your pastor.

OBITUARIES

SMITH.

We mourn the loss of a beloved brother, Mr. H. B. Smith, who departed this life January 1, 1936, to join his Heavenly Father, whom he had served for the greatest part of his life. He had been a loyal and beloved member of Hine's Chapel Christian Church for the past fifty years.

Mr. Smith was highly respected by his fellowmen, and one who will be missed, both in the community and church. He leaves a loving wife, three sons, five daughters, his aged mother, four brothers and two sisters, also a host of friends.

These children were very much attached to their father and they will miss him in their lives, but God will comfort these dear ones. "Trust in God and he will bring you to the Great Reunion Over There."

Even though we shall miss his encouragements here in this world, we would not call him back, for he dwells in that City not built with hands, where he will never grow old.

We extend to his loved ones and friends our sympathy and love. May the peace and love of the Holy Spirit abide with you and yours.

H. S. LOWE,
R. W. ISELEY,
Committee.

SOMERS.

Recently the Death Angel visited the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church and claimed one of our faithful members, Mrs. Ada (Cooke) Somers.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That her going from us was the will of God, who doeth all things well.

2. That we bow our heads in humble submission to His Will, for we believe all things work together for the good of those who love the Lord.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our records, a copy be presented to her family and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. B. M. FAUCETTE,
MRS. LAURA GILLIAM,
MRS. ROY KERNODLE,

Might well be merged in one;
And nest and perch and hearth and church
Repeat: "Thy will be done."

Arrests for Drunken Driving Increase.—

Recently available statistics show that arrests for driving while under the influence of liquor are on the increase in Virginia cities. Richmond showed an increase of nearly 10 per cent in 1935 over the previous year. Figures from 23 of the 24 Virginia cities showed an average increase of something over 8 per cent.

In the Sport World.—

It is generally supposed that football has the sports world cornered, but according to figures given by the All Sports Record Book, this is a mistaken idea. Throughout the entire country, New England excepted, basketball is the country's most popular collegiate winter sport, and the number of collegiate basketball teams is three times as large as the combined total of football, hockey, and baseball teams. It is the only college sport, with the exception of football, that shows a consistent profit. There was reported for the three major sports during 1935 a combined paid attendance of 170,000,000; basketball leading with 80,000,000, followed by baseball with 50,000,000. Football came third with 40,000,000.

A Terrible Explosion.—

It occurred 7,000,000 years ago, and at quite a distance from the earth, if we are to believe astronomers gathered at Mt. Wilson Observatory, Pasadena, California. Indeed, the explosion was 42,000,000,000,000,000 miles from here. That is the reason our friends, the astronomers, are just seeing it—it has taken all that time for the light rays from this star that exploded to reach our little earth. And it takes a telescope to see it, though it is as brilliant as 20,000,000 suns would be if put together. The explosion, however, is travelling at the rate of 4,000 miles a second and it soon may be only "a darkened mass of neutrons." So much for astronomy. One can but wonder if Mr. Ripley would guarantee to prove this.

Passenger Bus Traffic Increases.—

Passenger bus traffic increased last year more than 75 per cent, they carrying 378,200,000 pay passengers in 1934 on inter-city lines, and 651,000,000 in 1935. During the same period there was a falling off in the number of people who rode the trains, from 449,907,000 to 445,995,000. Intercity revenues increased in 1935 over 1934 from $171,000,000 to $239,950,000, but was still somewhat less than the passenger revenue derived by the railroads, which despite the falling off in number of fares increased by nearly $12,000,000 to $357,480,974. Reasons for the larger amount being received by the railroads were probably two: the higher fare and the longer distance travelled by the average passenger. City bus lines increased their total passengers from 1,809,300,000 in 1934 to 2,084,052,000 for last year; possibly some of this was at the expense of the electric lines. Sight seeing buses did not fare so well as did the others, their traffic falling from 15,000,000 to slightly less than 2,500,000.

Words and the Bible.—

What are the most commonly used words in the Bible and how often are they used? The Bible was written for "people," and that word is used over 2,000 times. It is concerned with "giving" certainly, for this most important word is found no less than 1,479 times. "Jesus" appears 709 times, but the name "Jesus Christ" is found only 197 times. "Heaven" is important enough to be used 554 times, but there is quite a bit less said of "hell" than one might suppose, that word occurring but 53 times. "Woman" is mentioned 432 times, but we are informed that the word "girl" can be found only twice in the entire Bible. It might be interesting to count the number of times the word "love" occurs. The Bible is an interesting book anyway. Have you not found it so?

Washing the Air.—

At Radio City in New York, there is a delicate machine which washes the air. New York City air, filled with dirt and dust, must first be washed to insure perfect broadcasting. How fine if there might be a machine to wash out the slang and profanity which breaks on the air. In England, where all broadcasting is controlled by the government, stringent regulations free all broadcasting from unworthy mention of religion, public personalities, immorality and physical infirmities. . . . America seems to be in the grip of a growing tendency to spread smuttiness and use profanity. Both the moral degeneracy following the war and the return of liquor aided in bringing this about. But this does not excuse the Christian. He should watch his conversation carefully not only, but aid in the movement for clean thoughts and purified conversation.—Religious Digest.

The Driving Force Behind Hitler's Drama.—

Last week Hitler was on the front pages of the newspapers because he had spectacularly torn up the Locarno treaty; but back in the financial pages, scarcely noticed, was the hard economic fact that had driven Hitler to his histrionics—the fact that the gold reserves of the Reichsbank had fallen to a new low record. They amounted to 77,000,000 marks. The decrease since last July was 26 per cent. The Reichsbank lost gold because Hitler had to send it abroad to buy food. There is a severe food shortage in Germany. There is increasing unrest, as any casual observer—not a casual tourist—can soon find out. It was this unrest that drove Hitler to make his newest appeal to public opinion in Germany by openly sending troops into the Rhineland. This is a step towards war. The next step on the western front is the erection of great fortifications in the Rhineland. Whether France will fight when Hitler does that remains to be seen. He would prefer to postpone the war a year or two while the army gets ready. Meanwhile he has torn up not only the Versailles treaty, which was forced on Germany, but the Locarno treaty, which she accepted gladly and voluntarily in 1925, when Stresemann was leading his country ably and gradually out of the depths. Now the Stresemanns have given way to Hitlers; the statesmen to fanatic nationalists, openly intent on converting their country into a warrior tribe like the semi-mythological Teutons of antiquity. Fascinated by this strange dream, the Nazis steadily lead their country into a war that will embroil most of Europe and Asia.—Business Week.

Surpluses in Industry.—

The discussion of the advantages of surpluses in industry, both to the employer and employee, has been brought about by the suggested tax on corporation surpluses. Discussing the uses of surpluses created by industry the New York Times brings out some pertinent facts which are worth considering. "They are used," says the Times, "for replacement of obsolescent machinery, for the installation of new machinery, for the erection of new factories and office buildings, for the creation of new capital goods of every variety." It continues: "The creation of these new capital goods cumulatively increased the volume of consumption goods that American industry can turn out year by year for our people. It increases the productivity of the American workman, and hence his earning power. It provides endlessly new opportunities for employment. At the present time, as has been constantly emphasized, the great bulk of the existing unemployment is in the capital-goods industries. These industries depend overwhelmingly for their revival and expansion upon re-investment of corporation surpluses." A drastic tax on surplus retained for such re-investment would lead corporations, in the future, to curtail such surpluses and would evidently in turn retard recovery and reemployment. Business Week thinks that the plan submitted to Congress will go thru, if in a modified form. Yet it believes it to be fundamentally evil, and that this evil should be brought to the attention of the public. It says that "designed to compel the disbursement to stockholders of all net earnings, the plan would emasculate the capital funds of the country." When most needed there would be no funds for dividends, expansion, or even wages and current obligations. Small stock holders and employees would suffer most because of curtailment in incomes.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Headquarters for the Elon College Campaign opened in Burlington Monday in the banking room of the old North Carolina Bank and Trust Building.

Mr. J. D. Oldham of Elon College died Friday, March 13th. Mr. Oldham had lived at the College for a number of years. Sympathy is extended to the family.

Mid-year session of the Valley of Virginia Central Conference will be held, Saturday, March 21st. Rev. R. L. Williamson, Charlottesville, Va., is the president.

Rev. A. W. Andes, of Harrisonburg, Va., has been ill for a number of weeks and is reported as not being so well. Brother Andes and family will have the sympathy and prayers of the church.

Dr. J. G. Truitt, pastor of our Suffolk Church, has been ill for a number of weeks, but was able to conduct his services Sunday for the first time in four Sundays. His friends will be glad for his improvement.

Dr. W. M. Jay and family will move to Winston-Salem to take up their work in Winston on April 2nd. The entire church will wish for Dr. Jay and family gratifying successes in this undertaking.

Dr. William J. Drew, who has been seasonal minister at the church at Pomona, Florida, has been invited by the church to return again after the summer vacation, and has accepted the invitation of the church.

Religious emphasis period was observed at the College Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, pastor of our Dover Church, was the leader. Much good has been accomplished by these periods of worship and devotion.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, returns Tuesday from Orlando, Florida, where he has been resting and recuperating for the past weeks. Doctor certainly knew when to leave so as to escape severe weather. We are glad to have him back in our midst.

We are in the midst of our Mission Period. Every church in the Convention is asked to inform itself as to the needs of the Mission Board and on the mission field and, further, to secure liberal contributions from every individual member and forward the same to the Mission Office.

The Christian Life Conference of the Congregational-Christian Church in Georgia will be held with the Oak Grove Church, Chipley, Ga., March 27th-29th. A very attractive program has been arranged and a cordial invitation is extended to all who can to attend. Mr. Carl Ekblad, Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., is the president.

Included in the columns of THE SUN this week is a schedule of meetings in the Southeast for 1936. This list is very important and should be preserved by every delegate and also by interested members of the church. For the benefit of those who happen to miss it in this week's issue, it will be reprinted next week.

Are all the pastors, Sunday school Superintendents and teachers taking advantage of these days to tell congregations and schools and classes of Jesus of Nazareth, and His power to reach and save to the uttermost. The time when we celebrate His glorious resurrection draweth nigh. In how many lives, nearby and far away, will He arise anew, or even for the first time, by your efforts, prayers, deeds and gifts?

"The poor ye have always with you, but me ye have not always. Verily, I say unto you, Whosoever the gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this that this woman hath done shall be told as a monument of her." What had she done? Read Mark 14:3-9 and see the distinction between giving to the poor to relieve human want and giving to the Lord to express love and devotion to Him. This woman had made a missionary offering—and then our Lord began to talk about a world-wide gospel.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill has returned to Jacksonville, following a six weeks' speaking tour in Illinois, Wisconsin, New York and Connecticut. In Connecticut she spoke in a number of churches in important cities such as Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, New Britain and Waterbury. The reports received indicate that she was very much enjoyed wherever she visited, and there is already a call for her return some time in the future. Also, Miss Coghill reports a very delightful experience and friendly welcome everywhere. We are sure that wherever she went there is a better understanding of our southeastern fellowship and its participation in the common life of our denomination.

COLLECTIONS ON SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Following is a list of payments on subscriptions up to March 10, 1936. Payments on subscriptions received since that date will be acknowledged the second week in April. Subscription labels will be changed on or about the same date. Address labels are printed for approximately a month in advance, and it is not possible that they appear immediately after your remittance is made. Should more than six weeks elapse after you have sent in your renewal without your label being changed, we will appreciate a card from you so stating, and will see that it is given prompt attention. We wish to thank each one who has remitted since the last list was printed, and also would greatly appreciate it if those who are in arrears, but have overlooked the fact, would send at least something on account if they cannot send their entire arrearage.

Sincerely yours,

J. T. KERNODLE, Man. Editor.

CROSSING THE BAR.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell
And after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

—Tennyson.

O Lord, if only my will may remain right and firm towards Thee, do with me whatsoever it shall please Thee. For it cannot be anything but good, whatsoever Thou shalt do with me. If it be Thy will I should be in darkness, be Thou blessed; and, if it be Thy will I should be in light, be Thou again blessed. If Thou vouchsafe to comfort me, be Thou blessed; and, if Thou wilt have me afflicted, be Thou equally blessed. O Lord! for Thy sake I will cheerfully suffer whatsoever shall come on me with Thy permission.

—Thomas A. Kempis.

NEW UNDERTAKING AT MEROM CHRISTIAN COLLEGE.

An entirely new scheme in rural church work is to be tried at Merom, Indiana, where Merom Christian College which has been closed several years, was located.

Merom was a Christian college village which served as a center for about forty rural churches in southern Indiana and Illinois. The pastors of the churches have been mostly lay preachers.

It is proposed to make Merom again a center of inspiration and guidance for these churches by using the college building for institutes, young people's assemblies, rural ministers' school and for other gatherings under the direction of a pastor-at-large. The project is being undertaken in consultation with the Department of Town and Country Department of the Church Extension Boards. It was reported at the meeting of the Administrative Committee of the Boards in New York on Tuesday by Dr. Malcolm Dana, director of the Department, and by Dr. Russell Boynton, pastor of the Bryn Mawr Community Church, Chicago, Ill., and a member of the Committee.

The Rev. Clarence Bennett, formerly pastor at Huntington, Ind., and a brother of the Rev. Sion A. Burnett, superintendent of the Indiana Conference, has been called to the Merom undertaking. It is proposed to organize the work under a board of trustees for which the Indiana Conference, the Illinois Conference, the Chicago Seminary, the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology and the Extension Boards will each nominate two members.

MORTGAGES, TOO.

A "reciprocal exchange" has been arranged by the Congregationalist and Presbyterian denominations for the towns of Argyle and Warroad, Minnesota. The Presbyterian Church at Warroad has become Congregational and the Congregational Church at Argyle has become Presbyterian. The Administrative Committee of the Extension Boards on Tuesday voted to accept a new grant mortgage from the new Congregational Church at Warroad in place of an old grant mortgage held on what is now the Presbyterian Church of Argyle. Similar action will be taken by the Presbyterian Board of National Missions.

GAINS AND LOSSES.

Seven of the fifty-one Conference schedules for the annual Congregational and Christian Year-Book or "Book of Numbers" have been forwarded from the office of the secretary of the General Council, Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, in New York, to the publishers, The Christian Publishing association, Dayton, O.

These seven Conferences have 708 churches, about eleven per cent of the churches of the united denomination. This is too small a proportion to give much of a clue to the national statistical trends during 1935. The figures now in the hands of the printers, moreover, are not final and will be subject to later revision by the registrars of the Conferences.

Some of the unrevised totals of the seven Conferences and the gains or losses they show in comparison with 1934 are:

THE HALO AROUND OUR HANDICAP.

By FRANK DAVIS.

A halo is a ring of light which the artist paints around the head of a saint. We have come to speak of it as a eulogy or tribute or commendation paid to a saintly or heroic deed, both to the deed and the doer thereof. A handicap, it would appear, is a term derived from the old custom of putting one's hand in a cap (hand-in-cap, handicap) when the drawing of lots took place.

By and large, we may safely say that every person lives under a handicap—a limitation of personal powers; a lack of adequate opportunity; a problem, a perplexity, which he cannot solve, and from which he is unable to escape. He is, as we say, on the ragged edge; his reserves are not quite sufficient; he works without full preparation, he is a generation ahead of his time, and so is misunderstood; his body is not equal to the fiery tension of his spirit; he lives and labors devoid of any background of mental culture or sturdy physical stamina. He has some handicap to confront, to contend with, constantly.

Handicaps beset the great as well as the lowly. Beethoven, as the age of four, displayed very unusual musical talent. At seven he gave public concerts. But in his early thirties he began to become deaf, until later he lost his hearing completely. For years he leaned close down to the piano as he played in order to hear his own music. And this brilliant composer of symphonies exclaimed when he died, at fifty-seven: "I shall hear again in heaven." John Wesley, the English preacher, founder of the Methodist Church, was in the habit of rising at four each morning. It is said that his wife's nagging by day and by night was his handicap, and accounted for his early-rising habit. He frequently preached his first sermon at 5 A. M., preached four or five times a day, and averaged fifteen sermons a week for over fifty years.

Zola, the French novelist, lived for many years in great poverty in a Paris garret. He would place a small bird-trap outside his window to catch sparrows, and frequently his meal consisted of a sparrow, cooked on a small charcoal stove, and one cent's worth of bread.

Franklin Roosevelt was in his forties when he became the victim of infantile paralysis. But, by reason of massage and baths and an indomitable courage, he succeeded in walking again.

Such men put halos around their handicaps. But not all men shine with halos of courage, of heroism, of victorious achievement. These sing the grim lines:

We are the toilers whom God hath barred
The gifts that are good to hold;
We meant full well and we tried full hard,
And our failures are manifold.

What can we do about the handicaps which we see in others, or which we feel in ourselves? There

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WHAT THE ANNUAL SAYS.

THE ANNUAL for 1935, our year-book, reveals some facts that should interest us even if they do not stir our pride.

In the five Conferences in the Convention there are reporting (in 1935) 190 churches. (Some ten or a dozen we know failed to make any statistical report.) In these 190 churches there are 29,615 members. This is a net gain the past year of 306 members for the whole Convention. The Eastern Virginia Conference reports 44 churches with a membership of 9,858, a total gain for all these the past year being 29. The North Carolina & Virginia Conference reports 40 churches with a membership of 7,680, the gain in church membership the past year being 122. The Eastern North Carolina Conference reports 48 churches with a total membership of 5,359, the gain in church membership the past year being 69. The Western North Carolina Conference reports 37 churches with a total membership of 3,973, the gain in membership the past year in these churches being 67. The Valley of Virginia Central Conference reports 21 churches with a membership of 2,439, the gain in church membership the past year being 19. These churches raised the past year for all purposes, (including pastors' salaries and in the Sunday schools) $237,728.81. Of this amount the Eastern Virginia Conference raised $113,995.52; the North Carolina and Virginia Conference $61,636.76; the Eastern North Carolina Conference $21,493.45; the Western N. C. Conference $32,971.81; the Valley of Virginia Conference $7,631.37. Here indeed is food for thought. First, why should a total of 190 churches with a membership of 29,615 members gain in a whole year an increase of only 306 members?

And why should a people of average incomes pay only a fraction over $8.00 a year for all church services—including their pastors' salaries and work on their local churches.

And this dear church of ours will never tell a different story to the world until it is awakened with a zeal, a passion, for souls. Never till our church puts the matter of winning souls first in its program will it come to the place that God wants it to have on the earth.

J. O. A.

STOP.

One of the most difficult experiences we have to learn is "Stop." It is so easy, so agreeable, so alluring to go on. For how long during the 24 hours of each day do we actually sit down with ourselves—and our God? One wonders. We are finite, of time and sense and transient things. And yet we know full well there is the Infinite, the Real, the Imperishable, the Eternal. How much time, thought, effort, do we give to find out how close to us, or how far from us, is the Infinite, the Real, the Eternal? Again and again we are warned—Stop! Wait! Listen! There is scarcely a Book of the Old, or New Testament, in which we do not find the teaching, the injunction, the command to wait—wait for the Lord. "Wait for Jehovah," begs the Psalmist; "Be strong, and let thy heart take courage; yea, wait thou for Jehovah!" How beseechingly the prophet Hosea enjoins us "Turn thou to thy God; wait for thy God continuously!"

We rush on. We hurry. We fret. We worry. A few brief years and it is over. But here in the events of time, place and sense, God may be found by each one of us—in Him is life, real life, unending life, eternal joy and victory. "Wait thou upon the Lord and He will bring it to pass. Wait, I say, upon God!"

LEADING U. S. SLEUTH REVEALS HAZARDS OF DRINKING.

By CURTIS BILLINGS, in Allied Youth.

When I set out to get the opinion of the leading traffic officer in the United States on the much-disputed drinking-driving question, I did not go to the police department of one of our big cities. I steered my course toward Lafayette, Indiana, where Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml (on leave of absence from the Evanston, Ill., police department) is engaged in organizing The Institute of Public Safety at Purdue University, the first institute of its kind in America.

Lieutenant Kreml, as most people know, is today the most publicized policeman in the country—and justly so. His detective methods of investigating automobile accidents for the purpose of discovering and punishing the driver at fault are world famous. Twice for Evanston he has won the grand prize in the National Traffic Safety Contest conducted each year between American cities.

Wrong Start.

We sat down to talk in the living room of his home, this youthful officer and I. Intending to start the interview with an easy question, I asked:

"Isn't the drunken driver, Lieutenant, the greatest menace on the American highway today?"

"Not at all," he replied. "On the contrary the statement that the drunk behind the wheel is the greatest menace is not only wrong in fact, it is also positively vicious in its implications."

Apparently, I thought to myself, that was the wrong question! It seemed to me also that I had probably wasted two days and 300 miles of travel if I hoped to get a constructive statement for The Allied Youth. Could it be possible that this authority condoned the practice of driving while under the influence of liquor—or pooh-poohed it as of no importance? I could not believe so.

"Can you," I asked hesitantly, "can you be serious?"

"Do I look as if I am joking?"

I had to admit that he did not.

"But," I countered, "isn't the drunk the man who fails to see the defenseless pedestrian in his path? Isn't he the man who actually passes out—loses consciousness—in the driver's seat and crashes into whatever is ahead of him? Isn't he the one . . ."

I got no farther.

Cause of Accidents.

"Of course, of course," Kreml cut in. "The intoxicated driver does all of these things and a lot more, but you are too quick to jump to conclusions. Two things I want to point out and I want to make them so clear and unmistakable that any child can understand them and anybody who reads them will always remember them.

"The first is that until recently the drunken driver was the banner of the American police—which we hid behind! We did not know how to deal with the awful accident situation. We did not know who or what was causing the accidents. So we said, 'It's the drunken driver,' and let it go at that. Nobody, after all, could dispute us; and it spared us the trouble of finding out just exactly what the trouble was.

"The second is that since the repeal of the national prohibition laws we policemen have learned a lesson or two from the medical and associated sciences. One of these lessons is that a few drinks under the belt of the automobile driver are so much dynamite. The driver may be able to pass every standard sobriety test; he may be a respectable citizen; he may be chock full of good intentions; and he may be a killer!

"There are 50 to 100 or, possibly, 250 drinking drivers on the streets and highways of America tonight for each one who is obviously intoxicated. Thus, you see, the drinking driver is the greater menace because he is more numerous.

One-Drink Danger.

"But one thing more. We are all familiar with the euphoria, the over-confidence, the daring of the driver who has had just a few drinks. He thinks he is good, better than he has ever been, and so he is quite willing to take chances with his own life and with the lives of others which he would not ordinarily take. And he is far less able to get away with his chance taking.

"Now on the other hand the obviously drunken man is almost comatose. He is so stupefied by liquor, so torpid, that he feels anything but elation and overconfidence. He doesn't want to speed or take chances. He wants to curl up and go to sleep. Therefore he usually propels his car at a slower speed than his drinking but not entirely drunken brother.

"The records of at least one state show that, accident after accident, the crashes caused by the drinking driver are more severe than those caused by the drunk."

Here was a new light on the liquor question as it affects public safety—light that ought to be made to shine from every publication in America. I left Lafayette well rewarded for my visit.

All the glory and beauty of Christ are manifested within, and there He delights to dwell. His visits are frequent; His condescension amazing; His conversation sweet; His comforts refreshing; and the peace which He brings passeth all understanding.—Rev. Thomas a Kempis.

DOING LIKEWISE.

It was a tense moment in an important football game. The team had been doing well, but replacements were imperative. One effective player in particular must have a substitute.

The coach looked around at the bench.

"Stanton, go in for Brown!" he barked.

The player jumped up eagerly. "Shall I show them my best plays?" he asked.

"No," snapped the coach, "you go in there and do just what Brown was doing—and forget all the rest."

The moment had called, not for a prima donna, but for a fellow who could "go and do likewise."

I know quite a few newspaper folks. One young fellow, just out of college, was bursting with ideas. He knew startlingly new and much more efficient ways of reporting, and he seemed to have a foreknowledge of a city editor's duties and powers. The hard-bitten city editor listened with growing impatience to his appeals for a chance.

"Sure," he said, "all this is fine. You're a college graduate, you have had articles published, you have these new ideas. But can you go out and get stories the way Planski and Rollinger and Parks of my staff can? That's what I want to know?"

He wanted no mere individualists looking for a place to try out their theories. He wanted a fellow who matched his reporters and could go out and do just what they were doing.

Was not the parable of the good Samaritan told for just such a reason as this: to inspire people to go out and serve in just the way the Samaritan did? We are not given the story because it was desired to immortalize the Samaritan or to depict the dangers of the highways, or even the selfishness and heartlessness of men. The important thing is rather this: Have we people today who would act, in all the myriad relationships of life, in the spirit of that Samaritan?

We are trying to be followers of Jesus Christ. But do we not often content ourselves with praising Him rather than following Him? In the early days people crowded around Him hoping for a miracle; they forget the necessity of going out and doing likewise. He Himself said that they could do even more wonderful things, and that the power lay in their own faith, rather than in any magic of His. We today admire the great of this age and other ages—but do not try hard enough to live as they did.

The earnest Christian, it seems to me, is a repeater—he strives to repeat the acts of his Master. He strives to study his Master and do as He did.

I have often read of great scientists, artists, and others who were laboring until late in life at their work, enjoying their praise, but often lamenting that there seemed to be no one at hand to take up their work—to go out and do likewise. Upon this great principle hangs the possibility of great progress. We cannot all be creators, but we can repeat something that someone else has done in a great way.

We need today not so much conferences to discuss Christian problems, addresses to delight us in the expounding of Christian truth, but rather personal decisions to follow Him. What the world needs is not so much professing Christians as active Christians. His spirit, His faith, His love, must be embodied in our life today.

Every single one of us has had the benefit of invaluable parental instruction, the help of friends and teachers and advisers, and we have learned more from reading and daily experiences. We have benefitted from all these. Now the question comes: Are we equipping ourselves to do likewise? It is not enough to admire greatness—we must aspire to it. It is not enough for a Christian to praise Jesus—he must also follow Him. The way has been pointed out to us—will we take it?

I talked, a short time ago, to a young medical student who was very proficient in his studies. He was just chafing to get out in a remote field, equipped to take up and continue his father's work as a country doctor. His father wanted, above all, someone who would "do likewise," who would understand and carry on. As I understand it, Jesus wanted the same thing: someone to do likewise, to carry on. There is a sense in which Jesus did not found a church or a religion—but rather sought to get people to carry on, in later generations, the work He was doing.

Everyone, then, who sincerely tries to follow Christ should seek to repeat His works and to reveal the same spirit that He had. We all have to choose those whom we believe and admire and will follow. We have to look at life, examine it, and find its truth and its imperatives. Some of us sell our birthright cheaply; others turn away sorrowfully from a great opportunity.

A young pastor was once studying the life of Jesus with a group of young people. They were giving reverence to Jesus' unique Sonship, character, and spirit; they were marvelling at His works. The young pastor was very wise. He looked at them appreciatively, and said: "Do you know that He meant for us to carry on such a work and live such a life? You have praised these wonderful works of the loving spirit of Jesus. Now do them again in this day of ours. Repeat them; do them again—those are the Christian imperatives!"

If you have found something that seems to you basic and supremely worth while, as you have studied Jesus or the great characters of history, pick something out to repeat. Christian living is sometimes just a matter of modernizing and exemplifying today the spirit of Jesus—by which I mean it is the art of keeping alive, in each succeeding day and age, the type of life that Jesus lived. Is that not a fairly accurate and also helpful understanding of our Christian task?

Not long ago I was making some calls on people who were only slightly connected with or interested in my parish. In the course of the conversation I expressed to them my interest in what they were doing and my hope that they would help in our parish. They were very friendly and appreciative of my calling, and said: "Oh, yes, we know you are interested and want us to come; you always speak to us and respond to any call we make—but how about some of those members in the church?"

Now there certainly is nothing deserving or unusual in my attitude here—but simply an indication of the fact that people wanted some others to go out in the same spirit of the minister. As younger people we are going to find that not all of our service will demand that we do something new or even better; other parts will demand that we do the same great services of the past over again, but in a modern setting. Christian living can be a glorious, adequate challenge to the greatest in us if we see in it the passing on of a great spirit and the perpetuation of a great life-purpose.

Catch the spirit of Jesus, as He faced a uniquely discouraging world—and then live like Him.

You have been taught, and you have learned for yourselves, of those who have achieved much and lived richly in the service of their fellow men. Go thou, then, and do likewise. You admire those who achieved in the past; do the same in your day. Make greatness live today; make it your own possession. Jesus was the first to show us a supreme way of life. Follow Him. He did all these things Himself. Do likewise! God's fullness was in Him; by following Him let God's fullness be in us!—Rev. Richard K. Morton in M. P.-R.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The lists of delegates to the next session of the Southern Convention is printed herewith to give notice of such election by the various Conferences of the Convention, and to suggest to said delegates the following: 1. Every delegate should plan to attend the session, and if unable to do so, should notify his or her alternate. 2. Send your name to Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Burlington, N. C., and state when you will arrive; how long you will stay, and whether you wish the Entertainment Committee to provide room for you overnight. Make your requests definite and plain, and do so promptly. The entertaining church cannot know how to provide for you unless you notify the pastor or the committee in advance. Prompt attention to this matter will help the church and these matters will be attended to in a manner much more satisfactory to the delegates and visitors. 3. If you expect to attend the Conference, Hollowell, M. J. W. White, Dr. J. W. Manning, J. E. Corbitt, Miss Irene Cotten, T. A. Eure, Miss Edna Fulcher, Miss Janie Pierce, J. A. Williams, Mrs. Phillip Jones, A. L. Jolly, R. C. Norfleet, I. T. Byrd, Otis V. Joyner, O. M. Cokes, Mrs. B. H. Lowdermilk, S. M. Penn, M. A. Pollard, T. E. White. Laymen—W. R. Brown, Paul E. Coble, W. H. Freeman, Mrs. I. H. Faust, Geo. T. Gunter, Junius H. Harden, Vitus R. Holt, W. R. Rightsell, Cyrus Shoffner, W. L. Welch.

Eastern N. C. Conference—Ministers—Revs. C. Rexford Raymond, W. C. Wicker, J. Lee Johnston, E. M. Carter, R. T. Grissom, M. T. Sorrell, S. E. Madren, George N. Edwards, F. Ervin Hyde, J. A. ## THE CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATION.

The church-wide campaign in the interest of Elon College was formerly opened Monday, Mar. 9th. Mr. C. E. Lovett of the George W. Williams Company arrived on the campus Monday morning and immediately began to prepare for the opening of the campaign. Headquarters will be in Burlington, North Carolina. The banking room of the old North Carolina Bank and Trust Company in Burlington has been secured. This is an ideal location and, of course, an ideal room for the purpose. The liquidating agent for the bank was most considerate in making this space available. We are asked to pay a total of $100 for the room for the entire campaign. This is to cover lights, water, janitor hire, et cetera. We are very grateful for this consideration and are sure that the entire college constituency will likewise be appreciative.

The President's Office, Elon College. Dr. Smith at the Desk.

and do not wish the church to furnish you lodging, but desire to take your meals at the church, notify the pastor that you will desire to eat your lunch and other meals at the church, when it is convenient for the church to provide for such meals. 4. If you have been elected a delegate and cannot attend, and your alternate cannot attend the Convention, notify the pastor of the Burlington Church. 5. Visitors who expect to attend the Convention and desire entertainment by the church over-night, should also notify the pastor, stating their wishes and giving such information as may be useful to the Entertainment Committee in assigning homes.

All delegates will please send the information

The first step, of course, in a great campaign such as we propose is an adequate organization. The organization for the campaign will be made up of a general chairman, an associate chairman, alumnae chairman, chairman of the special gifts committee and associates, chairman of the speakers committee and associates, alumni chairman and associates. These and perhaps others will constitute the general organization. Practically the same plan of organization will be formed for each of the five conferences. The same plan of organization will be extended to each of the local churches. You can readily see what a tremendous organization is contemplated. When the organization is completed, there will be between twelve and fifteen hundred people required. The idea is to reach every individual contributor without any one solicitor being responsible for more than ten persons. The average man, however busy, can find time to interview as many as ten different individuals.

It is hoped that whenever an individual is asked to become a part of the organization that he

A Story for the Children

A PAIR OF GOOD SAMARITANS.

I have recently heard of two kind-hearted beings that seemed to have the same feeling toward anything in distress that the good Samaritan whom Jesus tells us about had for the poor man who fell among thieves.

One of these, strange to say, was a white dog which came out from a stoneyard in New York City one night, and ran barking to a policeman who happened to be passing, and then ran back. This he repeated two or three times, until the policeman was interested to see how the dog would give his bark and then bound back into the yard. He concluded at last to see what the dog was trying to do. He followed him into the yard, and the dog ran up to a place where a little white bundle was lying on the ground. The policeman struck a match, and by its light the little bundle proved to be a baby. The policeman picked it up, almost afraid the dog would bite him; but, instead, he wagged his tail, as much as to say: "I am glad you have got some sense; that is just what I wanted you to do." The dog trotted along by the side of the policeman until they came to the station-house. When he stopped, the dog wagged his tail and looked up into his face, and when he went into the station-house the dog followed, seemingly listened to what he said, and, when the door was opened, walked out. Evidently the little baby was a stranger to the dog. He had found it in this lonely place and had done what he could to have it cared for.

The other good Samaritan was a little newsboy in Dayton, Ohio. A reporter came along and saw him seated on a grating in the sidewalk, up through which came a little warmth from the basement kitchen below. He had something beside him covered up with a dirty, ragged old handkerchief, and as the reporter paused, he cautioned, "Look out now, don't hurt him."

"What is it?"
He lifted the handkerchief with the greatest care, and there on one of the iron bars, huddled up and half frozen, was a little brown sparrow, just able to fly.

"Where did you get him?"
"In the street out there. Got so cold he was tuckered."

"What will you do with him?"
"Get him good and warm and let him go. He is such a little fellow, he orter have a fair show."
"And he shall," said the reporter.

The man added his efforts to Jack's, and after a few minutes the bird began moving about in a lively manner and giving vent to his satisfaction in a series of chirps. Jack lifted him, gave him a toss in the air, and away he sailed for the top of a tree.

"He's all right now, Jack."
"Yes, 'cause he's had a boost. Boys kin get along most anyhow," said Jack, as he shivered in the cold blast sweeping up from the river. "But birds are such little fellers that we've got to sort o' h'ist and tote 'm round now and then. He's all right now, and we're all right, and good bye to you."

"Good bye, Jackie," the reporter said, lifting his hat as the tattered little gentleman flew around the corner.

Now the dog in the first story was just a common street dog, probably one of the kind that some boys would think it great fun to tease, or to send frightened down the street with a tin pail tied to his tail. And this little boy with the sparrow was only a poor ragged newsboy that some people might think of no importance. But both were heroes, and set a good example for the whole world to follow.

If we are on the lookout for them, we shall find a great many opportunities to speak kind words or do helpful deeds that will make the world a far better place for some who have not the strength or good things which we have. If we are on the lookout for such chances to help anybody who is having a hard time, we shall live not only very useful but very happy lives ourselves. The Bible tells us, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Amos R. Wells has a little poem on "The Lucky Four-leaved Clover," which will be good for the boys and girls to commit to memory:

"Why is the four-leaved clover more lucky than the three?"

I questioned Master Greedy, and thus he answered me:

'Tis because the four-leaved clover so crafty is and bold,

It has an extra hand, sir, to grasp the sunshine gold.'

"Why is the four-leaved clover more lucky than the three?"

I questioned Master Generous, and thus he answered me:

'Tis because the four-leaved clover so kindly is and gay,

It has an extra hand, sir, to give its gold away.'

THE CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATION.

will not try to discover reasons for not cooperating but he shall endeavor to discover many reasons why he should. With full cooperation on the part of every one there will be no difficulty and the goal will be reached completely. If your cooperation to the extent of your ability will make the college secure, I am sure that you will freely give to the extent of your ability. If all will so cooperate there can be no question as to results. This is an ardent appeal to the church at large to give careful consideration to her responsibilities in the proposed plan for the purpose of making the college secure.

There seems to be developing a spirit of optimism and a feeling that this thing can and will be done. A word of encouragement from you will accentuate these trends. We need to turn definitely on the past. Let the things of yesterday that may be disturbing remain. Our present obligation is to do our part and to use our influence that ten of our friends and acquaintances may do their part. Not many victories are ever won by marching over defeated ground. There is every reason to expect victory in our united effort. With faces to the future and determination to win, let the organization go forward as if in conquest. People are united by great responsibility and great purpose. The cause of Elon College and Christian education constitutes a definite call to loyal hearts who wish for Christianity a wider and a more effective application to human life. We of the Christian church look to Elon College for leadership in this particular. The college in turn is depending upon us and at this particular time is putting its trust in us with the hope that we shall not fail in this time of need. Let every one respond to the invitation to make up the organization. This organization is necessary if the campaign is to be intelligently and successfully pursued.

June 6th has been set as the closing date for the campaign. This means that there must be both organization and aggressiveness. The strong possibility of success is sounded on every side and by the help of ministers, laymen, friends, and alumni this possibility shall be made an unmistakable certainty.

L. E. SMITH.

All the world's joy comes from the grave of our risen Lord. It was a dark and sad earth to which Jesus came with His revealings of love. But who can write the story of blessing which began with the first Christmas? How poor the world would be today if there had never been a manger cradle at Bethlehem, and then a cross on Calvary and a broken grave.—Rev. J. R. Miller.

God in our nature—that is, Christ—the root of the new sap or eternal life in man, without which no man could have been righteous, and by the presence of which in our nature every man may be righteous.—Rev. Thomas Erskine.

ALABAMA WOMEN HOLD RALLY.

The Women's Missionary Societies of the Roanoke and Wadley Districts held a joint rally at Lowell Christian Church on the third Sunday in March. The Societies were very well represented and a fine program was rendered. Miss Vera Van Cleave of Wadley, Ala., was in charge of the program. W. Sage Woolworth, missionary from Turkey was the principal speaker. The occasion was all that could be desired.

Special music was rendered by the Lowell quartette. Mrs. O. D. Chase was chairman of the Committee on Entertainment and a real feast was spread at the noon hour. It seemed that everybody did their best in furnishing food and drink for the assembly. Everybody was lavishly served and quite a number of the aged and sick people of the community were remembered with well-filled plates.

A number of visitors were present among whom were Rev. A. R. VanCleave of Wadley, Ala., Miss Marguerite Davison of Thorsby, Ala., and Mrs. F. P. Ensminger of Birmingham, Ala.

We need a Woman's Missionary Society in all of our churches. The results would be much more satisfactory. And the church could much more easily increase its efficiency in giving the gospel to all the world—"In union there is strength." Someone should see to the organization of the missionary forces of the Kingdom, for until this is done, the progress of the Church will be slow! A church must be missionary in principle and in spirit and in practice to really enjoy the prosperity that God wants to give.

A church that is non-missionary is standing in the way of God's progress and therefore it cannot prosper while thus "marking time."

When the church has the "baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire" she will then put on her beautiful garments and sinners will be attracted to her fellowship. May we not pray for this season to come.

MATERIAL ON MEXICO.

1935-36 seems to be the year to get acquainted with our neighbors "Across the Border." Not only are our churches concentrating on the subject through the interdenominational study of Latin America but there is a wave of interest throughout the country which is expressing itself in visits to Mexico, and in many books on the Past, Present and Future of this interesting land and its people. The daily press and many current magazines contain illustrated articles on the historical, scenic and cultural side of Latin American life.

There is varied and up-to-date material available for all groups which can be secured from: The Commission on Missions or The American Board. Our general interest is in Latin America but our special emphasis is on Mexico as the American Board has no work in the other countries.

Concentrate on Mexico in the coming months, not only in groups but individually and take advantage of the many unusual opportunities to "Know Our Neighbor."

MEXICO—1936.

The Colegio El Pacifico at Mazatlan is going strong under the direction of Mrs. Meddora Williams. The reversal of the decision to close the school has so far been well justified. The enrollment shows an increase of sixty per cent over last year, and there is a fine spirit all around. The inspector of federal schools in the district is cooperating cordially and constructively in the work of the institution.

Under the leadership of Mr. Baez Camargo, camps for young people have become an important part of the religious education program. The movement has reached Guadalajara, and already several camps have been held under the auspices of the Colegio Internacional and the Social Settlement. The last one was held on an inspiring mountainside near Tlajomulco. This country offers magnificent camping sites, and Mexican youth respond eagerly to this sort of activity. During these times of ferment and confusion of ideas, the camps afford an opportunity to clarify thought and elevate ideals.

Dr. Alberto Rembao, former principal of the Colegio Internacional, and now located in New York City, where as editor of "La Nueva Democracia" and through other literary activities he has become a recognized leader of Latin American thought, returned this month for a visit to Guadalajara after an absence of over eleven years. Old students and friends gave him a royal welcome, and his five days here were packed full of lectures and interviews. His brief visit brought much needed intellectual and spiritual stimulus, and we hope he will come again for a longer stay.

The many friends of the Wrights will be grieved to learn of the death of Delight (Mrs. Hollis P. Allen), daughter of Dr. Alfred C. Wright, which occurred on November 1st, three days following the birth of a little daughter. Miss Margarita Wright has gone to Claremont, California, where she will remain with the family until January.

THE GREATEST WORK.

"He built a house; time laid it in the dust;
He wrote a book, its title now forgot;
He ruled a city, but his name is not
On any table graven, or where rust
Can gather from disuse, or marble bust.
He took a child from out a wretched cot,
Who on the state dishonor might have bro't,
And reared him to the Christian's hope and trust.

"The boy, to manhood grown, became a light
To many souls, and preached for human need
The wondrous love of the Omnipotent.
The work has multiplied like stars at night
When darkness deepens; every noble deed Lasts longer than a granite monument."

—Author Unknown.

Suppose, then, we take Jesus seriously. What would happen if we really took His ideals to the floor of the Stock Exchange? What chance has Christ's conception of personality in a system dominated by the marvels of mass production? Watch the long queues outside any Labor Exchange, and then ask yourselves what Jesus would have to say about them. There would surely be a commotion if he were to appear in one of our Economic or Disarmament Conferences—if, that is to say, he were allowed to get past the commissionaire at the door!—Dr. F. Townley Lord, in The Christian World.

O gracious Father of mankind,
Our spirit's unseen Friend,
High heaven's Lord, our heart's dear Guest,
To Thee our prayers ascend.
Thou dost not wait till human speech
Thy gifts divine implore;
Our dreams, our aims, our work, our lives,
Are prayers Thou lovest more.

THE CHURCH IS GOD'S HOUSE.

"In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." (Eph. 2:22.)

Inspiration has given to us many pictures of the church, viewing it from different viewpoints, in order that we may appreciate it all the more. The only ugly picture in the list is that of the church marred by human hands, or conduct. A few of these we hope to study with profit.

The building here mentioned is not the work of unplanned accomplishment, or the result of accidental happening. Long before the coming of Him who said, "Upon this rock I will build my church," the prophets foretold the erection of this wonderful building. The purpose for which it was built is clearly and pointedly stated in our text—"for an habitation of God." The "ye who are builded" is also clearly indicated, and are certain individuals who are in this world. It, then, is a building which is in the world, and is God's home.

As such, it must be suitable in every way for his abiding place. It is "an holy temple." It is "the house of God." The materials of which it is built are the redeemed sons and daughters of Adam's race—"ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house." And it is declared to be "the church of the living God." We, therefore, cannot be mistaken when we say the church was built for God's dwelling place on earth.

"Every house is builded by some man," and for some purpose. Houses may be built for others to use, in whom we may have no interest, except as we may profit by their use of them—"rent houses." But a "home" is built for personal use. The church, then, being God's home, is not "a rent house," notwithstanding it is oftentimes treated like one. In building his home, the church, he did not launch a development project, in which he proposed to build many "houses," whose architectural designs would be so varied that all would have houses "of their choice." He built only one, and built that one to suit himself, not the people. "There is one body," one building, one church, and he "set the members everyone of them in the body, as it hath pleased him." The only way, then, for us to have our choice in the matter is to make God's choice ours.

God's home-building program was not a colonization scheme in which the voice of the people was to control in the regulation of affairs in that home, to come and go at will—a kind of tourist-camp affair into which one may come when convenient and leave when he chooses; nor as a club house set up where one may go occasionally for recreation and pleasure, with all responsibilities ceasing when the bill is paid. It is God's home, wherein he means to dwell throughout time and to regulate and control his household by his own law. When completed, it was ample for his every requirement. It needed no additional "rooms" or "lean-to's" for growing family needs. It need never be remodeled, for it was just right in every way.

He also furnished this house with everything necessary to make it a complete home. Nothing was overlooked or left for future addition. Man often, when planning and establishing a new home because of lack of means, builds and furnishes a makeshift affair, and when more prosperous, discards the "camp" structure entirely or makes such additions as his needs may require. Some even insist that the Lord adopted this plan, that he will some day enlarge his plans and rebuild and refurnish his home, because it no longer serves present-day needs. But not so. His program was, at the beginning of this dispensation, world-wide and age-lasting.

Every piece of furniture placed in this home was selected by the Master of the home. Man was not permitted to select any of it. It was all new furniture—no secondhand furnishings. When the Lord built a temporary home on earth—the tabernacle—he selected each article of the furnishings and designated the exact spot in which to place it. Some were not satisfied with the arrangement and offered "strange fire" as a substitute; but the offering, as well as those who sought to change God's arrangement, suffered the consequences. It, then, should not be thought unusual and radical that he would do likewise in his permanent spiritual home. If he would resent human interference then (which thing he did) it should teach us that he will do no less now.

The history of man—even of God's man—is a long, checkered record of his dissatisfaction with God's arrangements, and an effort to rearrange after his own fancy. Not satisfied with God's house—its foundations, its style or architecture, its date of erection, the materials of which it is built, as well as its furnishings—men have sought to remodel it, give it another foundation, to change its design, its date of erection, and the materials used. They have reared structures all over Christendom, of every conceivable design, and in innumerable number, and have scattered God's furniture to the four winds, have ransacked every theological junk shop of earth, and have tried to fill God's home, without any thought of fitness, with secondhand furnishings till confusion reigns and God's home is practically supplanted.

God does not propose to dwell in a house like that, and declares that some day there will be a general housecleaning, at which time the despoilers will be given their just deserts. Christians compose the house of God, "if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." Lord, help us to be faithful and contented with God's house as built and furnished by Him.—M. O. Daley in Gospel Advocate.

ONE PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE TO A HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT.

By DR. ALBERT D. KAISER, Rochester, N. Y.

Bob, now a senior at high school, came into my office recently and asked me to answer a few questions pertaining to some of the social problems common to boys and girls.

Bob stated that he was representing a group of boys and girls in his school who were seeking the opinion of several physicians on the doctor's attitude to the use of alcoholic drinks as they pertained to high school students.

It was a pleasure to see and welcome my old friend Bob. I had known him from earliest childhood; I had attended him through several illnesses and for years advised his parents in safeguarding his health. So naturally I felt pleased to see such a vigorous, fine type of youth who was now facing a new hazard in life but who showed sufficient intelligence to inform himself and his friends on a great health menace that confronts the youth of our nation.

I was aware of Bob's success in high school; not only had he distinguished himself in his scholastic work, but he had actively participated in athletics, journalism and in other school functions. I knew Bob was contemplating the study of medicine so I felt sure he would be particularly interested in what I had to say.

For centuries man has combatted disease. The attack was usually made when the disease was well established. In many instances the efforts to cure disease was of no avail for the damage to the human body had already been too great for repair. The conquest of disease was not realized until scientists understood the cause of certain ailments. It was then possible to prevent the disastrous results associated with many diseases. During the last fifty years medical science has sought to recognize disease when it begins and not wait until it is well established. It has learned that the best way of controlling a disease is to prevent it and the next best way to control it is to treat it before it has made any headway. A young baby is given cod liver oil to prevent a nutritional disease called rickets that may cripple children for a lifetime. Growing children and adults are urged to take certain foods containing special chemicals termed vitamins. These useful chemicals are given to protect the baby against disease that might gradually develop and eventually produce an incurable condition. Medical science has made great progress during the last fifty years in safeguarding our bodies against the many dangers that lurk about us in the form of disease germs or poisons that do not respect our physical bodies if once they are admitted. Alcoholic drinks in any form rank with disease germs and chemical poisons as a foe of the human body. Under no circumstances is alcohol of any value to the growing boy or girl. One cannot always see these invisible disease germs, but alcohol gets into our body only when we admit it. Disease germs must reach certain organs before they create their greatest damage. The pneumonia germ is breathed in small amounts and produces real harm only when it has grown freely in the lung. Alcohol as one finds it in beer, wine and cocktails need not be present in large amounts before it may do harm. A small amount, often suspected to be harmless, can influence the individual's process of thinking clearly which often accounts for acts that otherwise would not have been committed. Alcohol is therefore not only dangerous in large amounts but in small amounts as well.

Bob understood now that good health depended upon escaping the factors that undermined it. Alcohol ranks among the leaders that undermine health. All boys and girls want to remain healthy and most of them make a real effort to avoid the dangers that can be prevented. The danger of alcoholic drinks even in the smallest amounts is greater than many disease producing germs that we all fear.

Bob sat thoughtfully in front of me, and as he got up to leave said, "Doctor, I understand how you feel. I will tell my friends you have convinced me and I will try to convince them that it is to our advantage to outlaw alcoholic drinks."—Allied Youth.

"A student on the eve of his graduation told me a bit about his spiritual struggle while in college. He had had a purely secular bringing-up, but through friendship with one of the best of our clergy he had become an ardent and eager member of the church, and confirmation had been a great event in his life. Then in college the attitude of the majority and the intellectual unsettlement seemed to wither away his faith. Deeply alone, he decided to come to his final service. It was an early holy communion service, where there were few others in the church. Across the aisle came the dean of the Columbia Graduate School, Dr. Frederick Woodbridge, according to his custom. The student watched the dean through his devotions, struck by their simplicity and earnestness, and he reasoned thus with himself, 'If an intellectual giant can be a sincere believer, it must be that I fail for lack of knowledge.' This inspired him to go on, and he is now representing Christianity in the Doshisha University in Japan, planning to spend a lifetime in Christian service."—Arthur L. Kinsolving, D. D.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP CONFERENCE.

Young people and leaders of Eastern Virginia will meet in Suffolk Christian Church on Saturday afternoon and evening, March 28th, for their Fourth Annual Spring Conference. Inspiration, information and fellowship will be combined to make the program, which is to be a fine one.

The theme "Youth Sharing in the Program of the Local Church" has been chosen for the occasion. At 2:45 the meeting will open with a worship service led by young people, after which the group will be addressed on "What Christ Expects of Christian Youth." Discussion groups will be on Youth Sharing in the Program of Worship, Evangelism, Missions, Financial Program and Leadership Training. The Daily Vacation Bible School will be the topic for another discussion.

The Fellowship Supper at 5:45 will include singing, the announcement of the Elon Summer School and an address on "Fellowship."

At the evening hour reports from discussion groups and an address "Youth Sharing in the Teaching Program of the Church" will be given. The meeting will close with an Upper Room Service.

LIVE IN THE SUNSHINE.

Live in the sunshine—don't live in the gloom;
Carry some gladness the world to illumine.

Live in the brightness, and take this to heart;
The world will be gayer, if you'll do your part.

Live on the housetop, not down in the cell;
Open-air Christians live nobly and well.

Live where the joys are, and, scorning defeat,
Have a good-morrow for all whom you meet.

Live as the victor, and triumphing, go
Through this queer world, beating down every foe.

Live in the sunshine—God meant it for you!
Live as the robins, and sing the day through.

—Margaret Sangster.

EASTER PROGRAM SUGGESTIONS.

An announcement from the Methodist Publishing House, Fifth and Grace Streets, Richmond, Virginia, gives the following helps for Easter observance:

An Easter Morning Praise Service. A simple but impressive Easter morning Sunrise Prayer Service. The author wrote and arranged this 16-page service especially for a class of young business women, so it is certain that similar age groups of young people's classes and societies will enjoy and appreciate presenting it. So arranged that many may have a part in the program, while a minimum amount of rehearsing is necessary. This inspiring service includes songs, readings, poems, Scripture and prayer. 10 cents each; $1.00 a doz.

Eureka Easter Recitations No. 2. The latest in program material. It provides recitations, dialogues, acrostics, motion exercises, and drills grouped under departments for the Beginners, Primary, and Junior children. In addition the book contains pantomimes, pageants, and special features. It is an indispensable aid to those charged with the responsibility of arranging the Easter program. 25 cents.

Easter Service No. 1. This is an Easter service with emphasis upon decision for Christ, so it may be used at any Easter time.

In the order of service there is a place for participation by pupils of each of the departments—Beginners, Primary, Junior, Intermediate, Senior, and Young People. The music is new, the poems are original. There are two plays which the superintendent may use, if desired. 8 cents each; 85 cents a dozen.

These three. A beautiful pageant for Easter or other occasions. The story portrays in three scenes the meaning of faith, hope, love. Faith is dramatized in the story of Job; Hope, in the resurrection scene before the tomb; and Love, in incidents which end with the words of Jesus: "Father, Forgive Them," and "Feed My Sheep." Here is a devotional play which challenges all Christians to loyalty and service. Requires 45 characters and 3 soloists, includes two original songs. 25 cents each; $2.50 a dozen.

Special Easter Songs. The choicest and best Easter songs from far and near. Fine solos, duets and quartets—stirring numbers for choirs, and two good special songs for the Junior singers. You've never seen anything like it.

Some of the solos and duets alone are worth the price of the book. Such as "Name of Names" by Hardy; "He Lives" by Ackley; "Alive Again" by Rader, and "He Lives on High" by McKinney. These are also most excellent for any other type of service. You need this book now—you will need it a year from now—and in between seasons as well.

The Symbol of a Cross. This one-act religious drama tells in an interesting, compelling way the story of the influence that Jesus' life, death, and resurrection had upon an Oriental carpenter and his family. To this carpenter had fallen the task of making the cross on which Jesus died. The drama requires four males and three female characters and while it is dramatic, it is not too difficult for the amateur group. The setting is a garden and the time of rendition is thirty minutes. A worship program is included so that an hour's service is provided. 30 cents a copy; $3.00 a dozen.

Life and Love Triumphant. An Easter service appropriate for the Sunday school hour, with the entire school meeting together for the morning church service or for a vesper hour.

It is suitable for use in both large and small schools. It utilizes the talent of young people as much as of the children. The rehearsals of the songs may be made a part of the worship of the several Sundays preceding Easter. $.15 each; $1.50 a dozen.

The Seven Sayings of Christ on the Cross. A candlelight pageant service for use on Good Friday afternoon or evening. Churches observing the three-hour Good Friday service will find this presentation effective. Reverently and impressively the last sayings of our Lord on the cross are presented in Scripture; poetry and song, leaving a lasting impression on the audience. The presentation closes with a Consecration service. 30 cents per copy; $3.00 a dozen.

Through Darkness to Light. This is an impressive and inspiring pageant, which brings out in startling contrast the hopelessness of life had the seal of Joseph's tomb never been broken, and the hope and joy and confidence of belief in a resurrected Christ.

The pageant is prepared with consideration of the limitation of small churches that have little equipment, and also offers comparatively unlimited dramatic possibilities for the large church. It utilizes the talent of young people and has a lasting effect upon the participants, as well as upon the audience. It requires only simple costumes and few properties for the stage setting. It is simple, dramatic, impressive, scriptural. 15 cents each; $1.50 a dozen.

HOW JESUS GAVE HIMSELF FOR US.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAR. 29, 1936.

Scripture: Isa. 53:3-5; I Peter 2:21-25.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—"Loved and gave." Gal. 2:19, 20.

Hymn: "My Jesus, I Love Thee."

Prayer.

Hymn: "In the Cross of Christ."

Announcement of topic—Scripture.

Leader's Introductory Talk.

Special Music: "'Tis Midnight; and on Olive's Brow."

Points for Talks: "How Jesus Gave Himself for Us."

1. Jesus gave Himself in unique helpfulness during his earthly life. The different names by which Jesus came to be known indicate the range of His helpfulness. His was a life that expressed itself in friendship and service. He gave Himself, that is, He gave energy and ability in such a way as to mean the most to His own and succeeding generations. There were privileges and luxuries necessary for Him to give up in order to give of Himself in the most constructive way. The example of such a life must have redemptive value so long as the memory of that life lives.

2. We can readily understand how Jesus gave Himself in His teaching. The teaching of Christ are not merely some stated facts, not mere bits of information, they are the gift of Himself. He lives in His teaching. As each succeeding generation turns to the "Words of Eternal Life" Christ gives Himself anew.

3. As Christ gave Himself in life, so He gave Himself in death. The redemptive influence of the earthly ministry of Christ was sealed by His sacrificial and vicarious death. The intensity of His devotion to truth and goodness, the unique quality of His helpfulness, and His unflinching loyalty to His Father's will as revealed on the cross, has raised Christ in our affections to the preeminence of a Saviour for all mankind.

Period of directed prayer (violin and piano play softly, "I Gave My Life for Thee.")

1. Ask God to give us minds to grasp the cost of our redemption.

2. Ask God to help us realize the cost of our redemption.

3. Pray that we may be more like the Master. (Sing third verse: "Near the Cross.")

JESUS TEACHES TRUE VALUES.

LESSON XII—MARCH 22, 1936.

Luke, chap. 12. Printed Text: Luke 12:22-34. GOLDEN TEXT: "Seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33.

In the midst of one of Jesus' great messages about God's care for his children, a selfish, sordid hearer broke in with the request that Jesus make his brother divide an inheritance with him. He is a type of that large number of people who, while seated in church, or while presumably engaged in worship, are thinking about the material things of life, and especially of what they can get for themselves. Their affections are set on earthly things. The remarks of Jesus were designed to give a true standard of values.

Take No Thought for Your Life . . . Nor for Your Body.

Did Jesus mean it literally? Of course not. He did not discount thinking, or prudence, or foresight. He did not practice asceticism nor neglect his body. The words translated "Take no thought" mean "Be not anxious," "Do not worry," "Avoid the distracted mind." When thus translated they have a practical meaning for our lives. Jesus would say that worry was not only useless; it hinders. It is an evidence of lack of trust in God. It prevents us from doing today's duties and enjoying today's pleasures, by anxiety about tomorrow's experiences. He condemns it.

And He gives good reasons for His attitude. He points to the birds, which have neither storehouses or barns, but which God feeds. How much more will God feed His children, the crown of His creation. He points to the lilies, frail and fragile flowers of the field, here today and gone tomorrow, but in beauty far more gorgeous than Solomon in all his glory. If God bestows such pains upon these temporary things, how much more can his children, creatures of eternity, depend upon Him to clothe them. The argument is unanswerable. The trustful heart is the key to life's peace and power.

The Life is More Than Meat, the Body More Than Raiment.

A man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things he possesses. It is more than material things. It cannot be measured in terms of how much a man has. It has a spiritual quality. It is to be measured in terms of character, in terms of aspirations and motives and the finer sentiments. It is not primarily a matter of eating and drinking, but of thinking great thoughts and of doing kind deeds.

And the body is more than raiment. How much time and energy and thought and money so many people give to raiment, and how little they give to the inner furnishings of life! For some people the driving impulse of life is the desire simply to be well-dressed. But clothes do not make the man. Life is too precious to be squandered simply on dressing up the body. The inner life should have first call.

How Much More!

Again and again in the lesson and elsewhere in Jesus' teachings he uses this phrase "How much more." He seems astounded that men should have such little faith in God as concerning themselves while all around them there were evidences of God's concern and care for things of only temporal value. It would seem that He were trying to shame the people of his day, and of our day, for our lack of faith, which in essence is sin, for its distrust of divine love. His message was "Have faith in God."

"Your Father Knoweth that Ye Have Need of These Things."

If He knows we need them, why tell him about our needs? Well, there is no use in telling him about some of our needs. It is a waste of time to pray for some things. But the very phrasing of our needs in prayer will help us to see our real needs. The making known of these needs will prepare our hearts to receive a Father's blessings. Some of God's gifts are dependent upon our asking.

"Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness."

Most of us have it in mind to seek the kingdom of God at some time or in some measure. Jesus insists that we shall seek it first. We must needs put its interests first, before our own personal and selfish interests. We must make its law the supreme law of our lives. We must seek its righteousness no matter what it costs us personally. The kingdom of God in its fullest aspects is the supreme value and goal of life. It has primary claim on our lives. Nothing is to come between us and it.

But the fact of the matter is that those who put the interests of the kingdom above their own interests find that they never lack for the necessities of life. If we seek the Kingdom first, we shall have "all these things," food and raiment, and what is more we shall have life in its finest sense. Call the roll of those who have given first place to the Kingdom and they will say that God has abundantly supplied, and more than supplied their needs. These words of Jesus have been the inspiration and the comfort of thousands of his followers. They have given their best thought and efforts first to the Kingdom. And God has always kept His word. A man will not get all he wants simply by seeking the kingdom, but he will get all he needs. Godliness with contentment is great gain.

"Where Your Treasure Is."

"Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." A man's heart ultimately goes where his treasure is. Let a man set his heart on material things and he organizes his life around material things. In time he will become materialistic. Let him desire pleasure and his thoughts and his energies will be devoted to getting pleasure. "A man is always determined by what he seeks, by his objects. If he set his heart upon a degrading object, he is degraded; if upon that which is noble and generous, his character is morally elevated. If, therefore, he is attracted by Christ, if he is attracted by heavenly treasures, his heart follows his treasure. And such treasures are beyond the damages or the ravages of time. He who has treasures laid up in heaven has treasures that endure.

This is the church of my dreams;
The church of the warm heart,
Of the open mind,
Of the adventurous spirit;
The church that cares,
That heals hurt lives,
That challenges youth;
A working church,
A worshipping church,
A church of courage,
A friendly church for all people,
The church of the living God.

—World Call.

"FORGIVENESS."

"Forbearing one another and forgiving one another."—Col. 3:13.

Lord, at thy feet my prostrate heart is lying,
Worn with the burden, weary of the way;
The world's proud sunshine on the hills is dying,
And morning's promise fades with parting day;
Yet in Thy light another morn is breaking,
Of fairer promise, and with pledge more true,
And in Thy life a dawn of youth is waking
Whose bounding pulses shall this heart renew.

Oh, to go back across the years long vanished,
To have the words unsaid, the deeds undone,
The errors cancelled, the deep shadows banished,
In the glad sense of a new world begun;
To be a little child, whose page of story
Is yet undimmed, unblotted by a stain,
And in the sunrise of primeval glory
To know that life has had its start again.

I may go back across the years long vanished,
I may resume my childhood, Lord, in Thee,
When in the shadow of Thy cross are banished
All other shadows that encompass me:
And o'er the road that now is dark and dreary,
This soul, made buoyant by the strength of rest,
To bear the blessing that has made it blest.
Shall walk untired, shall run and not be weary,
—George Matheson.

Prayer—Say the Lord's Prayer.

TUESDAY.

"MY FATHER'S BUSINESS."

"Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"—Luke 2:41-52.

Four weeks from today we will be facing the cross and entering the contemplation of the Resurrection. So far as we will, during these days, travel with our Lord as he turned his face toward Jerusalem knowing that he was to be betrayed, crucified, and to suffer all the agonies of death at the hands of betrayers and enemies.

When Jesus was twelve years old, in the temple, he declared that he had come into the world for a purpose. Never once did He falter or waver from that purpose. Neither the love of parents and friends nor the hatred of enemies, nor even death, ever interfered or caused him to hesitate in prosecuting that purpose. The facing of the cross was as much His Father's business as any other feature of His life and He faced it with the same sort of courage and fortitude.

Let Christ's facing of the cross be a symbol of our own way this Easter time. What are our crosses? Do we fret when we have crosses? Shall we go without crosses and He bear His cross alone?

"No there's a cross for everyone,
And there's a cross for me."

Prayer—Our Father, give us Thy spirit as it is in Jesus Christ who showed us the way. Reveal to us the Father's purpose in all our experiences and we will follow him.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"A FIRST THING."

"Create within me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."—Ps. 51:10.

In contemplation of walking with Jesus along the Galilean Highways to the cross our first duty is contrition, humility, submission to His will, and a consecration and concentration of ourselves to follow Him. The prayer of David in the words of our text has come down through the centuries as a prayer of a truly penitent soul seeking the power of Grace and the perfection of heaven in the soul, and fitting for Lenten Prayer now.

In preparation for His cross and for our crosses and with intentions to walk with Him praying for an understanding of Him, this text and prayer is our text and prayer now. Can we make it truly? If so, though we may be called upon to travel uncharted ways, God will go with us. Surely we do not dare go alone. Too many devious paths lead down the way. We certainly need the hand of the Lord on our arm.

Prayer—Dear Father, as we strive to walk with Christ down the way, walk thou with us and help us to find the ways of light from heaven to guide our feet. Every day is a new call and now is the time to start. This presence and this power we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"HELP YOURSELF TO GOD."

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Malachi 3:10.

A story comes to us of the late Dr. Benjamin M. Adams of New York, thou whom there was never a purer and nobler Christian, awoke one night and he seemed to hear a voice saying "Help yourself to God." At first he felt that such an idea was irreverent, but the words kept repeating themselves until gradually he had a sense of peace and joy for he realized that God was near in abundance of spirit.

He chose these words as his subject that night. A lady in the congregation had come to New York for a serious operation and was much worried. This message burned itself into her soul and she received great consolation. When she recovered, she is quoted as saying: "The last thing I thought of as I passed out under the influence of the anaesthetic was, 'Help yourself to God,' and I felt at peace, and that whatever happened was good."

Friends, as you join with Jesus on His road to the cross, let this message come into your souls, "Help yourself to God."

Prayer—Our Father, as we seek Christ, may we find him. Forbid that we shall falter on the way. Help us first to lay ourselves right in his hands, and with his love and forgiveness we shall be His forever. Grant this, we pray.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"SOMETHING ABOUT KNOWING."

"We know that this is indeed the Christ."—Jno. 4:42.

There is an Arabian proverb by Sainted Father frequently quoted. You have heard it, I know.

"He who knows not and knows not that he knows not, is a fool, shun him. He who knows not and knows that he knows not, is simple, teach him. He who knows and knows not that he knows is asleep, wake him. He who knows and knows that he knows, is wise, follow him."

Happy is the one who has arrived at a certainty of God. He shall be like a house built upon a rock, stable, serene and secure. He shall be strong and a source of strength to others. He shall be a light and a guide to others. He will speak knowingly, with a tone of love, consideration and certainty.

Prayer—Our Father,

"We know not where thy Islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
We only know we cannot drift
Beyond Thy love and care.

"And so beside the silent sea
We sit with muffled oar;
No harm from Thee can come to us
On ocean or on shore."

Adapted fr. Jno. Greenleaf Whittier.

SATURDAY.

"FALLEN CROWNS."

"The crown is fallen from our head; woe unto us! for we have sinned."—Lam. 5:7-18.

Every man is made for a crown. It may be the crown of some special skill, to work in wood, or soil, or words. It may be the crown of social graces, or business or political power. Always it should be the crown of a Christian character. But every head is fashioned for a crown, a single crown, a double crown, a triple crown.

Alas for us if our crown has fallen off! It falls from sloth, from conceit, from over-ambition, always it falls from sin. And the absence of the crown means degradation and misery.

Can fallen crowns be restored? They certainly can, but only the King of heaven can lift them from the mud, cleanse them, and put them back where they belong.

Prayer—O Lord of hosts, give us back our crowns! Redeem us from our degradations, thru the blood of the Lamb!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"DARE WE WISH FOR DEATH."

"It is better for me to die than to live."—Jonah 4:1-11.

Jonah's longing for death was natural enough, but how unwise! How sad for him, in the event, if it had been granted.

We often say in times of stress and trial, to ourselves if not aloud, "Would I were dead and out of it all!" But if we were dead, we should not be "out of it all." We should be in the midst of a continuing life, the conditions of which we do not know, except to be sure that there, just as here, we should be in the hands of a perfectly just and perfectly kind God.

He knows what is best for His children. When the happy time comes for our removal to the next existence, He will transfer our spirits thither. To anticipate that time, even by a wish, is the height of folly. Death and life are to be left in the hands of the All-wise.

Prayer—These are too great matters for us, our Father. We little creatures are not to be trusted with them. How glad we are to trust them with Thee!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

A hundred years ago it was the aim of the Methodist church to stamp its individual impress all over the country. There was warfare among the denominations of the church. Today much of the old exclusiveness has passed away. We realize that there is no chance of the Methodist or any church influencing the entire country. Only by standing together to uphold Christians ideals can the churches of the nation acquire lasting influence.—Bishop Francis J. McConnell.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE INSPIRED PATTERN.

By JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which was showed thee in the mount."—Ex. 26:30.

The pattern of the church is very old. Old as God's love for His children. The original pattern was showed to Moses in the mount. Nearly four milleniums have moved on since Moses, but the inspired pattern still lives.

How It Was Given.

God called Moses up into the mountain. Into the hills from whence cometh our help. And there Moses communed with God. Forty days and nights was he in the mount. And it was during that time that God gave Moses the details of the building of the tabernacle. The tabernacle was of course a pattern of our present church. The pattern has been perfected in Christ Jesus. And as in Hebrews we are told a better tabernacle has been builded. Jesus in the New Testament came to fulfill the patterns and prophecies of the Old.

Parts of the First Pattern.

What was in the tabernacle which was designed by God, and showed to Moses? The Ark of the Covenant was a central object. In it was contained the promises of God,—His Word written down. Central in our church today is the Bible. The written promises of God. Central in the Church of Jesus is the Word. "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us." There are many branches of the church today, but central in them all is the Bible. The inspired pattern still lives.

The Holy of Holies.

In so far as the minister is the priest of God the pulpit is the holy of holies. It is looked upon in our church as a very sacred place. It is held in high regard, and a man of God set apart by ordination to the sacred calling to minister the Word of God is assumed to be qualified for that holy place. Every minister should think very seriously about this. He should enter his pulpit after prayer and full preparation. He should enter his pulpit as God's servant, to speak God's message, confident that God will honor his efforts if they are thus humbly and honestly rendered.

Altar of Incense.

To us this may represent the altar of prayer. The altar from which may ascend to God the incense of our earnest supplications as an odor of sweet smell unto Him. When in our common parlance we speak of the altar we most often associate with it the idea of prayer. The pattern of this altar was found in the ancient tabernacle. It is interesting to pause to think how each of these things have been made to live in Christ Jesus. How he made God's Covenant live! How he makes the calling to the ministry of His Word a most sacred calling! And how he makes the altar of prayer a real place of intercession. In the presence of Jesus prayer has become a sweet practicality!

The Table of Shewbread.

Bread! Well, it still has a place in the modern church. Jesus is preached as the "bread of life." The messages in Scripture, and song, and sermon are still spoken of as a "feast of good things." The preacher is still enjoined to "break for us the bread of life." The symbol has become a living reality. Especially so, since Jesus took the bread in his hands and taught us that it signified His broken body, broken for us! Men, women, and children still may go to the church and feed upon the living bread, and find a food that the world has never fashioned, and a satisfaction which the vanishing things of earth can never give!

The Golden Candlestick.

Light! Seven-fold, and all fulfilling in Jesus the light of the world. Yes, God required Moses to place a candlestick, a receptacle for seven lights. May it not have been a symbolic prophecy of the perfect Light of our Lord Jesus! Jesus says: "I am the light of the world." He also says, "Ye are the light of the world." Well, the church still has its light, even as in the inspired pattern. May Christians still reflect the Light of the world in their lives!

The Laver.

Cleanliness! In the laver of pure water the priests washed, even though hitherto they had made themselves clean in preparation for their service. This washing in this God-inspired laver signified the cleansing which is from God. The church still sings, "There is a fountain filled with blood." It still preaches that though our sins be as scarlet they shall be made whiter than snow. It may be that there is some connection between the baptismal service of whatever mode, and this ancient laver. That laver was for the priests only. In the new church we read that all are "kings and priests unto God."

The Altar of Offerings.

Two altars! Too often we have overlooked this perfectly obvious fact! An altar of incense, and another altar of offerings. We have not always been as willing to participate as to pray! We have been willing to give our prayers, but not our portions. Well, the inspired pattern required both. Moses was very strictly enjoined to build the tabernacle absolutely according to the pattern showed him in the mount. No part was to be left out. The true Christian will not want to leave any part out today. And if he ponders this part of it for only a minute the very altar of offerings that we have been a bit prone to be short on, we shall want to be long on, for here is the Calvary of it. It was on this altar the slain lamb was lain. It was this altar that was outside the holy place even as Calvary was outside the gates of Jerusalem. In our gifts we may share with Jesus. In our giving we may be co-workers with Him.

These Seven.

There are seven of these objects, and all significant. Each has its place. And each of them take on a richer significance when studied in the light of the words, deeds, and life of Jesus.

Upon This Rock.

"Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." How the world needs the church today. All seven of the above aspects of it it needs. If the world is saved from catastrophe in these days it will be because of the influence of the church. It is not a man-made institution. It is inspired of God. It is from the mount,—both Sinai and Calvary. It is of an inspired pattern perfected in Christ Jesus!

I confess that I am always aware of a little annoyance when I hear Jesus described as an optimist, in the sense we commonly give to the word. It would be quite as true to say that he was a pessimist . . . The kind of optimism in which we deal—which always sees prosperity around the corner and insists that the clouds are rolling by even though the barometer is falling, that optimism is hope in spite of the facts; just as pessimism is always despair in spite of the facts. And in both cases we are fooling ourselves. If we must label Jesus, then call him a realist, one who looks at all the facts without being afraid of them—and that is what we should all be.—Dr. Richard Roberts.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Our financial report grows slowly. We had hoped to pass the third rung in the ladder before this date but such is not the case. We have just one more report to make for the month. We still hope for better offerings so we will reach and pass the third rung in the month of March.

In looking over our monthly income book for this year we find quite a number of schools in the "no offering" list this year. We are entirely dependent on the Sunday school offerings for our support.

When the offerings come in less than $100 per week it is impossible for us to cut expenses to meet the meager income. Insurance on the buildings to pay, salaries to pay, food and clothing to buy and a hundred other things to meet so it takes money just like it does in a home but on a much larger scale.

We want to appeal to the Sunday schools not now on our list to begin at once to make a monthly offering to help the Orphanage care for the little children in its care.

We trust that the good women in our church will remember, especially, our larger girls, 14, 15, 16 and 17-year-old size dresses for Easter. Then, too, we need sheets. Single bed size and some double bed-size.

This the apostle insists upon to render their faith more illustrious, and to provoke Christians to a holy jealousy and emulation; that they should not suffer themselves to be outdone in the exercise of faith by those who came so far short of them in all the helps and advantages for believing.—Matthew Henry.

THE HALO AROUND OUR HANDICAP.

are open to us three possible attitudes or courses of action:

1. We can be sympathetic in our judgment.

This ought not to be difficult in view of our own handicaps. What difficulty does arise is from the great variety of handicaps, and our inability to recognize them always for what they really are. The youth is naturally hard and critical toward the older man, whose step grows less steady, and who deliberates at length before blessing a project with his Yes, or blighting it with his No. But the years, the hard knocks, the oppositions, the limitations, will change him and soften him and make him tolerant even toward seeming failure.

God pity all the brave who go
The common road, and wear
No ribboned medal on their breast,
No laurel in their hair.

2. We may overcome our handicap.

In our Bible are tales a-plenty of human lives re-made—Jacob the Supplanter became Israel, who prevailed with God; Jeremiah's potter's clay of the marred vessel was made into another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it; Mary Magdalene the sinner was turned into the saint; the persecuting Saul became the preaching Paul. You and I possess some handicap—a swift temper; a passion hard on the bit; a harsh, unkind judgment; a proneness to be jealous; a bitter grudge in the soul. Any one, or more, of these constitutes our handicap, is a Nemesis which dogs our steps, and makes life wretched and cuts down tremendously on our agreeableness and usefulness. Shall we be fatalists, admit our handicap, and submit weakly and cowardly to it as inevitable and invincible? Some statistician avers that each of us has over a thousand ancestors back of us in the last three hundred years, each of these active in some trait or strain in our personality. Let us concede it. Yet, probably, with our inherited weaknesses and stupidities there run and contend our inherited strengths and skills. Which will predominate? The fact that we can ask the question proves that we can answer it.

3. We may live with our handicap, and work within its limitations.

A friend of mine recently visited a famous medical clinic, being herself in great distress. The first doctor startled her with his gloomy diagnosis. The second treated this diagnosis all too lightly for her satisfaction. The third, older and much more experienced, spoke to her as follows: "Mrs. So-and-so, it is not true that you are at death's door. Nor is it true that you have nothing the matter with you. You do have a definite organic weakness. But so do thousands of others, who manage to get along in spite of that fact, to do a reasonable day's work, and to round out a good average length of life. You now know your own limits. It's for you to stay within them." Now that is what living within one's handicap means, and working within the boundaries that it lays down. There are situations where acceptance is the only way of conquest. Our nearest relatives, our closest friends, do not always suspect the handicap over which we fret and fume. But God knows, and he makes full allowance.

By overcoming our handicap, or by working within its limits we may put a halo of glory around it. Courage, worthy effort, honorable achievement put the halo of the divine around the weakly and the commonplace.—Advance.

No other fame can be compared with that of Jesus. He has a place in the human heart that no one who ever lived has in any measure rivaled. No name is pronounced with a tone of such love and veneration. All other laurels wither before His. His are ever kept fresh with tears of gratitude.—W. E. Channing.

Poem—

"Into the woods my Master went,
Clean forspent, forspent.
Into the woods my Master came,
Forspent with love and shame.
But the olives they were not blind to Him;
The little gray leaves were kind to Him;
The thorn-tree had a mind to Him
When into the woods He came.

"Out of the woods my master went,
And He was well content.
Out of the woods my Master came,
Content with death and shame.
When Death and Shame would woo Him last,
From under the trees they drew Him last:
'Twas on a tree they slew Him—last
When out of the woods He came."

Hymn: "I'll Live for Him."
Benediction.

Mrs. W. B. W.

Many students come from home where the Bible, having surrendered its time-honored place on the living-room table, stays in the bookcase the year around; where the minister is thought about only when a wedding or funeral is imminent; where the family go to church only at Easter, on Baccalaureate Sunday when the children graduate, on the day the Masons or the Boy Scouts attend in a body, and perhaps one or two other times through the year. From such a background it is scarcely fair to expect a very devoted church loyalty. Many others do come from church-going homes, but roommates and fraternity brothers enter the picture, and it takes real moral stamina to be the only one of one's gang to get up and go to church on Sunday morning.—Prof. Georgia Harkness.

OBITUARIES

McGEE.

Richard D. McGee was born July 20, 1878 and died in Lakeview Hospital, January 31, 1936, aged 47 years, 6 months and 11 days.

On February 17, 1903 he was united in marriage to Miss Alice Morris and to this union were born 10 children, 7 girls and 3 boys. In 1916 he united with Barretts Christian Church and in 1927 he was elected to the office of deacon.

Mr. McGee was a prominent farmer, a splendid husband and father, a Christian gentleman and a citizen that was appreciated. He has made a large contribution to his community in the life he lived and in the lives of his splendid sons and daughters.

His death was a great shock and loss to his family and a great loss to his church and community. He is survived by his widow, 3 sons, 7 daughters, 3 grandchildren, and 1 brother, John T. McGee of Littleton, Va.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer and burial was made in Wakefield cemetery.

RIDDICK.

Mrs. Mary Catherine Riddick, 95 years of age, passed from earth to heaven on December 29, 1935.

We, the members of the Ladies' Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church, because of our love for and high esteem of the faithful service of our dear friend, wish to express ourselves as follows:

First: Our great appreciation of her life-long loyalty to her church, and all enterprises of the denomination.

Second: That we may honor her memory by striving to be as kind-hearted, and thoughtful, and as prayerful as she.

Third: That we extend sincere sympathy to members of her family, with the assurance that her beautiful life will be to them a comfort and inspiration.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one placed on our records, and one sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Italian Stock Markets Crash.—

Following the taking over by the government of all big business, the stock markets crashed with losses of from 7 to 40 points on various stocks. Il Duce has dissolved the chamber of deputies, and has established in its place a "chamber of Fascists and corporations."

Rollins College Makes the Front Page.—

Rollins College, located at Winter Park, Fla., made the front page of the nation's newspapers the past week by the simple expedient of passing to President Roosevelt an additional honorary degree. The degree conferred upon the President was that of Doctor of Literature. That his wife might not feel slighted, she was presented at the same time with the Algernon Sydney Sullivan medallion. Mr. Roosevelt, in his remarks, noted with gratification "the development of national understanding as opposed to purely individual domination," and said that it was "growing by leaps and bounds throughout the nation."

Will Ethiopia Pay?—

Whether intentionally or not, Mr. Hitler has made things hard for Ethiopia. In any alliance against Germany, Italy is important, and there will be little opposition in France to voiding the sanctions which have been imposed upon Italy providing Italy will in return support France in her controversy with Germany. It looks as though under present conditions France will approve rather than condemn a conqueror's peace in Ethiopia. The matter is not quite so simple so far as Great Britain is concerned. The expanding power of Italy around the Suez is not at all to her liking, but the Rhine is closer home, and friendship with France is worth keeping. It looks as though the sanctions will gradually be dropped, and that if Haile Selassie should reject a peace offer from Italy that will lose him half his kingdom, the great powers will probably wash their hands of the entire affair. Their only claim for justification in such a move will be that peace in Europe is of more importance than the loss of Ethiopian independence. Such a move may postpone war, but it will not prevent it. No settlement with Germany can be permanent unless it is just.

Paraguay Turns Fascist.—

The news that the smallest of the South American countries has gone Fascist, is disturbing at least. The new dictator is Col. Raphael Franco, hero of the recent Bolivian war, and he heads the first "totalitarian" state in this hemisphere. Leaders of this new government have already declared that it will be militantly nationalistic, anti-foreign and anti-church. Paraguay, with the Chaco region included, is smaller than California, and has a population of less than one million. American investments there are comparatively small, but should the taint of Fascism spread from Paraguay to surrounding countries, it would jeopardize vast holdings of the United States. It is indeed unfortunate that this should have happened at this time when the Administration in Washington is doing all possibly to create friendship between the two Americas. Paraguay was at one time comparatively progressive and prosperous, but a long period of war with neighboring Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay, reduced the country to extreme poverty. It was then that foreigners were invited to come into the country and invest their capital. The Fascist regime has already declared its intention of regaining control of such investments.

The Peace Garden.—

Men love to try their hands at what only God can do. Men are prone to think that their way is better than God's. So men's failures have strewn the centuries. An outstanding failure yet never-ending attempt of men is that of world peace without God. The brilliant young British Foreign Secretary, Captain Anthony Eden, recently proposed larger plans than ever for a successful League of Nations, which some one has jokingly called the "Garden of Eden." Since then Germany has scrapped another man-made covenant and world war looms again. But one of the latest projects to help bring peace among men is called the International Peace Garden, Incorporated. It was first sponsored by the National Association of Gardens, and it is developing a beautiful tract of land at the center of the North American continent, some 2,200 acres on the boundary between Canada and the United States, one half donated by Manitoba and one half by North Dakota. This is being made into a beautiful garden honoring the century of unbroken friendship between Canada and the United States,—for which we are proudly thankful,—as a testimonial to "a sublime human sentiment, international peace and good will." Its organizers are "inspired by the hope of an earthly brotherhood among men." While such an ideal is a worthy one, and the sincere spirit of this movement must be respected, yet we know that there is only one garden than can ever bring permanent and world-wide peace among men—the Garden of Gethsemane. Peace between men and God and thereby, eventually, between men and men, was made possible when the Son of God and Son of man prayed to the Father in the garden, "Not my will, but thine, be done." Every peace movement that leaves out Christ as Saviour, Lord and coming King, is bound to fail. "For he is our peace." (Eph. 2: 14.)—S. S. Times.

What Does It Cost a King to Live?—

There appeared in the daily press not long ago a statement that England's new King Edward

VIII had requested Parliament to provide for the "contingency of my marriage." In the next few weeks Parliament will do this, and at the same time will decide just how much it will allow Edward that he may live as the king should live. Before the depression hit England, King George received £470,000 annually from the British taxpayers, but in 1931 he voluntarily reduced this to £420,000, which at the rate of exchange at that time amounted to approximately $2,000,000. Parliament also told the king how he was expected to spend this money, which was about as follows: Their Majesties' Privy Purse, £97,800; Household salaries, £111,800; Household expenses, £171,600; Works department, £20,000; Royal bounty, £11,700; and left to his own discretion, £171,600; Works department, £20,000; Royal special revenues which increased the Privy Purse by £85,000. Then, the king is, in theory, one of the country's greatest landlords; but since before the American revolution, the revenue from his estates, now approximately $6,000,000, has been handed over to the state. So it would seem that the king really pays the government $4,000,000 for being king. During his father's reign, the Prince of Wales had a gross income of around £250,000, which through expenses such as estate benefits was reduced to approximately £66,000. This amount will revert to the crown, since there is now no Prince of Wales. Property controlled directly by the king is quite valuable. Reduced to dollars, his Buckingham Palace would, if sold, probably bring between $14,000,000 and $15,000,000. The palace gold plate is said to weigh as much as five tons and to be worth $10,000,000. The private residence at Sandringham, where King George died, is valued at nearly $5,000,000. Paintings by old masters would net another $5,000,000; and even the late King George's stamp collection would bring nearly $2,000,000 more. The king's private racing stables are also quite valuable. Yet the King of England is not, by many standards, a rich man. While his Privy Purse amounted to £97,900, Italy allows her king £782,000; and the comparatively small countries of Norway and Denmark allow their sovereigns £37,500 and £53,600 respectively. The queen of Holland receives £84,000. There are British subjects among the nobility who draw from five to ten times as much as their king. His $2,000,000 income seems still less when some of his expenses are enumerated: The royal cellars cost nearly $40,000 a year. The garage bill amounts to $25,000, and $26,000 more goes to keeping the servants in proper livery. It even costs $30,000 a year to have the royal clothes washed. Indeed, King George found that from his official income, after all necessary expenses were paid, he had a bare £2,000 a year left. Rather a close margin for a king.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The Elon Singers are to broadcast from Station WBT, Charlotte, N. C., Friday, March 27th, from 4:00 to 4:30 P. M. Prof. Dwight Steere, director, will be in charge.

Rev. Roy Helfenstein, D. D., Dover, Delaware, was preacher for the College four days of last week and brought moving messages of hope and salvation to those who heard him. Our columns elsewhere tell of the meeting and the results.

Rev. W. M. Jay, D. D., Suffolk, Va., was a visitor at Elon Saturday P. M., the 21st inst., having gone to Winston-Salem to secure a house for residence where he is to begin his pastorate as successor to Rev. Wm. T. Scott, beginning April 2nd.

One wonders what those who are indifferent to Missions will do with these words of our Lord: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

"There are those who make money a servant to be used rather than a treasure to be kept." We tell of one such in our editorial on page 4 of this week and how he saved his. Here is the direct testimony of a man who is now making money his servant, and what a servant, indeed, he is making it. Read what our editorial says about it.

We deeply regret that our beloved brother, Rev. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., has had to return to the hospital for further treatment, having, in a measure, suffered a relapse from reported improvement. Many prayers will be offered that this man of God, and faithful servant of the church shall be soon restored to health and normal strength.

The envelopes for the Easter offering for Missions were sent to all church secretaries the past week. These envelopes can be made of great help if properly and prayerfully placed. But a church secretary or an indifferent pastor can easily defeat the entire purpose and waste the expense of the envelopes by forgetting them or misplacing them, or being unconcerned about them.

During this Lenten Season, embracing the passion of our Lord, the church and all true church members should seek to put first and foremost in their mind and heart a closer approach spiritually to our Lord, the winning of others to Him through personal testimony and then to consecrate some of their means to be used to carry the blessed gospel of salvation to those who are beyond our personal reach.

During this, our Mission Period, culminating in our Easter message and offering, how much of our means shall we consecrate to our Lord to help fulfill the prophecy made in His final message while on earth?—"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

The N. C. Christian Advocate brings this: "A young preacher recounting what a busy time he had experienced during the winter visiting the sick and the poor remarked: 'I wore out two pairs of shoe soles, but I strengthened my own soul.' Only the last day when the books are opened will the result of such work be disclosed. How can any pastor get on and keep the spiritual glow who does not visit the homes of his people?"

The Missionary Rallies—"The One Day School of Missions"—held by our women in the various districts in North Carolina will begin March 31st and will give not only the good women but all who attend them the opportunity to hear and learn about the spiritual interests and progress, not only of the Missionary Societies, but of the church as well. Every CHRISTIAN SUN reader who can do so will find it worthwhile to attend one or more of these Rallies. Those in Eastern Virginia begin April 14th.

No CHRISTIAN SUN reader of this week should overlook the best that our columns carry, viz:—"Christ and Eternal Life," by Rev. H. H. Smith, of Ashland, Va. It has in it the ring of righteousness and the clear echoes of eternity. Take this one sentence: "Eternal life has no reference to time or place. It is the normal life of the true child of God, begun here upon earth, but uninterrupted by death." Those words bring home emphasis and properly interpret the words of the Lord Christ—"Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

Some business men retire after they have earned a competence and devote their wealth and leisure to bodily comfort and social indulgence. What think you of a man, who, having earned a competence and sufficient to live on, devotes his time and talent just as assiduously to spending that money to the glory of God and the cause of righteousness as he did in his days of business activity to managing his affairs and enlarging his business? We are telling of one such on our editorial page this week. It is a life and an experience worth reading and thinking over.

This is to the point and heartening from one pastor: "We have tried to place a Cent-a-Meal Box in every home of the membership of our church and Sunday school, with the request that each one observe the 'Cent-a-Meal' plan and with it join in prayer with the others for the cause of Missions and for the respiritualizing of our church." It would seem that if pastors could get their people to use the 'Cent-a-Meal' Box, as some pastors are doing, their money for Missions and other Conference calls would be easily collected and constantly accumulated without having to use high pressure methods at the end of the year.

Missions were not only born in prayer, but have through the years been sustained by prayer, and unless we can pray for Missions, for the salvation of souls through the preaching of the gospel and the reaching of souls through our missionary effort, then we should not make a missionary effort. The missionaries themselves and those who are trying to enlarge the church on earth by planting and building up new churches and by spreading the gospel, crave, most of all, the prayers of God's people, for without prayer all missionary efforts and undertakings are as sounding brass or tinkling cymbals.

The dates and places of the District Missionary Rallies in the North Carolina Conference are: Guilford, March 31st, at Hines Chapel; Alamance April 1st, at Burlington; Randolph, April 2nd, at Pleasant Ridge Church (Ramseur); Chatham-Lee-Moore, April 3rd, at Sanford; Wake-Durham, April 7th, at Pleasant Union; Halifax, April 8th, at Hebron; Vance-Warren, April 9th, at Henderson. The principal speaker at these Rallies is to be Miss Olive Green of Holyoke, Mass., a returned missionary from our Girls' School in Smyrna, Turkey. Interesting programs have been prepared and a day of good things at each Rally is anticipated.

"The Effective Church" is the topic of the meeting of the General Council at Mt. Holyoke College, June 16-23, 1936. The American Board believes that the church which is effective in its own immediate community will be a vital part of a growing Christian world movement. We seek therefore in understanding and hearty cooperation to be a sensitive, enthusiastic and resourceful ally of every pastor in his work on all frontiers. In turn, we ask that every pastor lead his church in continuous study of world affairs from a Christian standpoint and cooperate with the American Board in strengthening the Christian movement in every land and nation.

THE ELON CAMPAIGN.

With the start of preliminary work on a $250,000 campaign, the long-anticipated program of development for Elon College, designed to give the Southern Convention area of the Congregational-Christian Church a greater opportunity for education of its young people along Christian lines, is definitely under way.

The success of this campaign will make it possible to retire all the indebtedness of the college, release the endowment which is now tied up as security for obligations, provide funds for current needs and provide for expansion.

Headquarters for the campaign have been opened in the quarters formerly occupied by the North Carolina Bank and Trust Company at 406 Main Street, Burlington, N. C., and a staff of workers is engaged in laying the groundwork for the start of the active appeal in May.

Many members of the church and other friends of the college will be called upon to assist in building an effective organization, the first essential of a successful campaign, and it is largely upon the extent to which they cooperate in giving their time and influence that the outcome of this effort depends.

The campaign organization will extend throughout the five conferences embraced in the Southern Convention—the North Carolina and Virginia, the Eastern North Carolina, the Western North Carolina, the Eastern Virginia and the Virginia Valley Central conferences.

In announcing the beginning of work on the campaign, Dr. L. E. Smith, president of the college, stated:

"In Elon the Southern Convention of the Congregational-Christian Church has one of the finest and best equipped small colleges in the Country and an institution that exerts a refining and religious influence of inestimable value on this constituency.

"With 482 students registered, the school has a capacity enrollment, and the plant is in excellent condition. The progress reflected by these conditions, however, has required financial outlays.

"The Developing Program has been undertaken for the purpose of freeing the college completely of the financial peril that has for some time endangered it and equipping it for increased usefulness. To preserve what we already have in this institution and to make it a medium of still greater service, we must build up sufficient endowment to maintain standards that will meet the requirements of all accrediting agencies."

General News
of the
CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES
By HERBERT D. RUGG.

THE PASTORAL RELATIONSHIP.

Four aspects of pastoral relationship in Congregational and Christian churches are being much discussed. They are: educational standards; equalization of salaries; unemployment insurance; methods for placing a minister.

Although much discussed, these matters are even more important than the amount of consideration they are receiving. They are important because they have to do with whether the churches are to have effective leaders.

The first, that of educational standards, is a matter of major responsibility for the committees on licensure and ordination of the Associations.

* * *

SHOULD SALARIES BE EQUALIZED.

Equalization of salaries weighs heavily upon many consciences. Plans for equalization were outlined at the Superintendents' meeting at Chicago, Illinois, in January by Assistant Superintendents A. E. Parsons, of Minnesota and Percy V. Dawe of Michigan. Superintendents Theodore R. Faville of Wisconsin and Rodney W. Roundy of Maine reported that equalization funds had been quietly and voluntarily established by a few pastors in each of their states, the beneficiaries being pastors who, for some definite reason or other, were not eligible for home mission aid and whose families were in real need. A viewpoint largely held and formally expressed a few years ago in the report of a committee of the Northern California Conference is that home mission aid is a sound approach to the problems which the equalization of salaries is expected to solve and it has the merit of bringing the entire constituency of the churches to recognize and share the task. The Northern California report further stressed that the fraternal spirit of the Conference superintendent, Dr. Harley H. Gill, could be counted upon to bring the personal needs of applicants for home missionary aid adequately before the Conference directors.

FEW "UNEMPLOYED EMPLOYABLES."

Unemployment insurance was by a resolution of the General Council at Oberlin, Ohio, in 1934, made a matter of study for the ministerial boards. The results of this study in which the Conference superintendents assisted was that the number of employable ministers without charges was very small. This finding, however, does not fully answer the question whether there is need of unemployment insurance. Dr. Charles C. Merrill of Boston, Mass., Secretary of the Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply, believes that unemployment insurance may be a good thing for the sake of effective leadership in the churches even though there may not be many "unemployed employables." His view is:

"There ought to be some way by which churches would feel under no compulsion to retain inefficient men, and inefficient men would feel under no compulsion to remain in the ministry. To bring about this exceedingly desirable result seems a well-nigh impossible task. However, I believe that some constructive thinking needs to be done in this specific direction. Here is one real reason why I am interested in some real form of unemployment insurance. It seems tragic in the extreme that a church should feel compelled to retain as its minister a man who apparently is giving it no real ministerial leadership, or for a man to remain in the ministry simply because he knows no other way to support his family. Not so can the Church of Christ hope to give moral and religious leadership to a world that needs the leadership of the Church perhaps more than anything else."

* * *

THE PLACEMENT OF MINISTERS.

For the placement of ministers as pastors of churches, various plans are being continually proposed. The establishment of a Board of Pastoral Supply with an office at Chicago to serve the Mid-West states as the Board at Boston serves New England, was advocated at Oberlin in 1934. An idea now to the fore is to facilitate exchanges such as took place in January between Dr. Raymond A. McConnell of South Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Dr. Benjamin A. Wyland of First Plymouth Church, Lincoln, Nebraska. Dr. McConnell, after sixteen years in Brooklyn, now is pastor in Lincoln, and Dr. Wyland, after ten years in Lincoln is pastor in Brooklyn. An influential committee including Dr. Merrill, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, President Albert W. Palmer of Chicago Theological Seminary, Dean Emeritus Charles R. Brown of Yale Divinity School and Dr. Alfred Grant Walton of Tompkins Avenue Church, Brooklyn, sponsored the exchange.

* * *

THE ISSUES CLARIFIED.

A clarification of the issues at the present time most prominently involved in the placement of ministers under our Congregational system of church government has been recently written by Dr. Merrill whose experience in this field is second to no one else in the united denomination. After several pastorates, he followed his uncle as the State Executive for Vermont; then he became superintendent for Vermont; next for seven years as executive secretary of the Commission on Missions he had acquaintance with the pastors throughout the country; now for two years he has been secretary of the Board of Pastoral Supply which, while officially a board of the six New England Conferences, renders service to ministers and churches in all states.

He writes:

"Two sorts of impatient men come into our office, and the impatience of one quite contradicts the impatience of the other. Congregational ministers come in with adverse comments upon the way in which a man has to get another pastorate under our congregational methods. They deplore our system—or lack of system. They feel that it does not comport with a man's self-respect. They suggest that it lowers morale. They sometimes go so far as to say that they wish there was a bishop or some other official who could assign ministers to churches and assign churches to ministers.

"The other sort of impatient men who come into the office are Methodist ministers who are equally out of harmony with the Methodist system. They allege that it involves too much politics, that they are too much under the control of their officials. Some of them say that the office of district superintendent will ere long be abolished and that the whole matter of placing ministers will be put in charge of committees, as is the case in Canada.

"Summing up the situation as regards unemployed Congregational ministers and unemployed Methodist ministers, you seem to have an overdose of freedom in the first case, and an overdose of regimentation in the second case. It is plain that whichever way we go in this matter we must take pains not to jump out of the frying-pan into the fire.

"In 1894 the Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply was established. So far as I know it was the first definite attempt to introduce some order into our way of placing ministers, through an agency established by the churches for that purpose. As you read the reports that were made by the secretary of this board during those early years you note how cautiously he proceeded, how careful he was not to interfere with the independence of the local church or the freedom of the ministers. There was the utmost determination to carry on the work in accordance with traditional congregational principles, although the Board itself was certainly an innovation.

"Following the establishment of this Board, there began in the latter part of the decade ending in 1910, the organization of state Conferences with the changing of the home missionary secretary into a state secretary, or state superintendent who had recognized relationship to the self-supporting churches, including advising them with reference to pastoral supply. Not to go into any detail about this history, it may be briefly said that since the establishment of this Board in 1894 there has been an increasing effort on the part of the churches to make the placing of ministers a more orderly and systematized affair. The motivation, ostensibly at least, has been the desire to help churches with regard to securing ministers, and incidentally to help ministers with regard to securing churches. Especially has there been the attempt to provide churches with reasonably full and reliable information about ministers and to make it possible for a minister to get his record before the churches in a self-respecting way.

"A superintendent of a northern New England Conference remarked in my presence the other day that one advantage of our Board in relation to his state was that if churches were not satisfied with what he did for them they could fall back on the Board. Referring to my Illinois experience, I remember that one year there were approximately fifty changes that took place in the pastorates of the state. Forty of these apparently had come about in consultation with the state office. Ten had come about in other ways. I was inclined to point to the forty as evidence that the state Conference office was attending to its job in a way that met with a certain appreciation on the part of the churches, whereas the ten churches that had not consulted the state office were a clear indication that congregational freedom still existed."

The two facts which Dr. Merrill believes stand out most important in the present situation regarding placement are:

"First, that whatever system we have is based on freedom, and

"Second, that the church has now established certain agencies to aid churches and ministers in pastoral placement, but that these agencies must work in accordance with the principle of freedom. The setting up of these agencies does not mean regimentation. It ought to mean a great amount of real freedom."

WHAT A LITTLE SIN CAN DO.

A single sin, however apparently trifling, however hidden in some obscure corner of our consciousness,—a sin which we do not intend to renounce,—is enough to render real prayer impracticable. A course of action not wholly upright and honorable, feelings not entirely kind and loving, habits not spotlessly chaste and temperate,—any of these are impossible obstacles. If we know of a kind act which we might, but do not intend to, perform,—if we be aware that our moral health requires the abandonment of some pleasure which yet we do not intend to abandon, here is cause enough for the loss of all spiritual power.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

I KNOW.

In this changing world there are not many things that we can know. What is true of methods and modes and manners today may quickly fall into the discard. And so we often speak in measured terms and qualified measures. However, there is one thing that every sane man and woman can say with certainty. They are the words used by that ancient of writers, Job: "I know that my Redeemer liveth." This man, too, was harassed and harangued with skeptics, atheists, doubters. More than that he suffered the loss of fortune, of position, of health and even the loyalty and devotion of his family. The very ground on which he stood slipped from beneath his feet, and he saw all things around about him crumble and fall to pieces. He heard the preachers of his day, and the philosophers of his time, and the scientists of his age, speaking and arguing about the uncertainties and the futilities of life and all that the world contained. They seemed to be driving the old man from pillar to post, and, with their subtle arguments, they seemed to be undoing all that he had learned and held dear from his youth up. But finally Job took his stand, where every living mortal can, with safety and security, take his stand and say in effect: "All right, you can make me doubt the things of time and sense with your subtle arguments and persuasive eloquence and great learning, but there is one thing you cannot take away from me,—'I know that my Redeemer liveth.' Oh! that my words were now written! Oh that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever! Yea, young children despised me; I arose, and they spake against me. All my inward friends abhorred me: and they whom I loved are turned against me.

My bone cleaveth to my skin and to my flesh, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth. But this I know, and from it all the disease of my body, the persuasion of my friends, the logic of learning, cannot swerve me, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth.'" There you are. Take your stand where you can say with certainty, "I know"—and then you begin to get somewhere.

Not many days ago a layman remarked to the writer: "Why do we hear so much uncertainty and doubtful opinion and questioning from our pulpits? Why can't our preachers in this time of stress and need, hesitation, question and doubt, take their stand upon a firm ground and once more raise the cry: "Thus saith the Lord God of hosts,"—This I know that the Saviour of mankind still saves souls. This I know because of my own experience and the experience of others around about me."

The church has a living message, a vital message, and about that message there need not be uncertainty, question marks and doubtful disputations. This I know! The preacher of righteousness can yet preach with accuracy, certainty, and conviction.

LEST WE FORGET.

Shall we bear in mind that the church is not of man's making. It was born in the mind, and created by the hand of God, and, as such, is a spiritual body. In this particular it stands above all civic clubs, institutions, or enterprises, fashioned by the mind and hand of man. It is not a Society, an Order, or an Institution shaped for the civic betterment or temporal needs and conveniences of man. It is the body of our Lord Christ given to redeem mankind from sin, to reach, regenerate and save the soul of man for time and for eternity. We talk about our social movements and benevolent enterprises, and thru them easily satisfy our minds and conscience, just as fruit from a tree satisfies our physical appetite. We should bear in mind that our benevolent enterprises and institutions are not the root, nor the dynamic, nor the saving power, of our own souls and of the world, but they are fruits growing on the tree of righteousness and salvation.

We have not seen anywhere a better diagnosis of the state and condition of the church during our time than this from the Federal Council Bulletin:

"We [of the church] have been so pre-occupied with the fruits of the Christian life that we have given too little attention to the roots. Humanitarian service, a passion for social justice, enthusiasm for a warless world, and devotion to other great causes of human welfare—these are the rightful fruits of faith in God and an understanding of his will as made known to us in Christ. But have we not tended to forget that we cannot harvest abundant fruits unless we patiently and wisely nourish the roots?"

The plea is not for less attention to social betterment and benevolent enterprises and institutions, but that the Church give first and foremost consideration to the deeper needs of man; his relationship to God and his personal knowledge of Christ and His gospel. In brief the causes to which benevolent and civic clubs and societies direct attention do not of themselves furnish the moral and spiritual dynamic necessary to their support and maintenance.

The missionary dynamic is nothing more or less than Jesus, our Lord and Saviour, Who gave Himself that all men through Him might believe; and He is the only sufficient dynamic to move this world of ours up toward God and righteousness; personal testimony of the power of the gospel to reach and save man—witness-bearing for Christ, giving Him and His message to those who have not accepted Him as Saviour and Redeemer. This is the primary work of the church. This is the missionary dynamic and objective. We cannot reform the world materially until, through Christ, individuals are redeemed and regenerated spiritually. The church should bend its effort to do that for which God has given it to the world, viz: To give all men and women everywhere, young and old, the privilege and the opportunity of hearing the gospel and of learning about Jesus Christ as Saviour and Redeemer.

SAVED HIS MONEY.

THE SUN's editor was recently talking with a shoe manufacturer who had saved $300,000.00 since 1910. The figures and dates had been accurately kept by the very strictest method of double entry bookkeeping. He knew, this good business man did, exactly what he was talking about. He showed his books, and there were the figures with expenses and savings during this period of twenty-five years. This period covers the upward trend in business just before the World War, then the flush times immediately following the War and then the nose-dive period of depression when business went to pieces and many shoe dealers and manufacturers were sold out or took bankruptcy. And yet our informant declared to this writer that his books showed that there was not a year of decline in the business to which he gave most serious consideration, and that he actually saved an annual average of $12,000.00, making in round numbers a clear saving of $300,000. It was a remarkable record for a man in business who was confronted with changes in styles, methods and conditions in the business world. In spite of all this, my friend looked me in the face and said: "Brother Atkinson, I know I saved this much, which my books have shown you, and for that I am grateful to Almighty God for showing me the way and teaching me the only method of saving money beyond all the manipulations of business or the vicissitudes of fortune. I saved every dollar of that money because I invested every penny of it in bearing witness to the saving power of my Lord and Redeemer. If I had put that money in the banks or invested it in stocks and bonds, I would have lost much of it; but I invested it, every dime of it, in bearing witness to others, by word of mouth and personal testimony, of the power of my Lord to forgive sins and save souls. And these same records that I have shown you of investment, also show the quarterly and annual dividends paid me not in dollars, but in the number of souls converted to Christ through those whom I employed to give their full time to bearing personal testimony of His love and power. Here are my dividends recorded just as they were turned in to me, and the very same way I would have entered dividends from any other investment."

I looked at the totals and there they were entered scrupulously and with absolute accuracy year by year as his evangelists had faithfully reported to him. In round numbers his books showed 55,000 converts to Christ "by the word of his testimony and the blood of the Lamb." You may imagine how overwhelmed this scribe was, for he had never met before just such a man and event. Yes, he had lost a great deal of money through investments in leather and the making of shoes the past several years and the depression had made terrible inroads into his shoe business. Some years his private business showed up in the red instead of the black, and the losses were tremendous: but he had saved $300,000.00 that no power or force on this earth could reach or destroy or decrease.

Another interesting declaration this man made. Others had invested thousands, even millions in education, many had, along with benevolent orders and clubs, given food, shelter and clothing to the needy, and he rejoiced in all that they had done; and he praised all these humanitarian agencies for giving material and mental and social benefits and blessings. And so he decided, a quarter of a century ago, that he would invest what he could earn and save in seeking through personal testimony and individual witnessing, to make this a better world spiritually. Moreover, here in our own country hundreds and thousands of preachers and laymen and teachers were preaching the gospel and giving the people a chance, and so he would center his efforts where the need was greatest and the opportunity richest. He, therefore, chose a most needy and spiritually destitute district in China, one in Africa, one in India, and one in Japan, and in these districts where the worship of idols held full sway he employed natives, who, through missionaries, had been won to Christ and whose redemption through Christ was apparent and pronounced, and sent them out to win their own people from idol worship to the worship of the true and living God. This, they were to do by and through their personal testimony to the saving power of their Lord, and, when thus reached and converted, report them to the missionaries whom the American Board had sent out. This friend of ours had as many as two hundred of these native evangelists giving their full time to the work of evangelism, not merely as preachers to groups, but first and foremost of all, by sitting down with individuals, and by word of testimony seeking to win them to Christ. This had required a great deal of bookkeeping and painstaking care these twenty-five years, on the part of our friend, and so he gradually relinquished his work at the factory in making shoes, leaving that to younger and more competent hands that he had secured, until finally he turned the entire private business over to these younger men and now was giving all his time to keeping his books and accounts and records, and keeping his evangelists employed and paid, and thus in his 80th year he was enjoying life, for he was putting his money, investing his dollars, "where moth and rust doth not corrupt and where thieves do not break through, nor where banks and governments, nor high nor low, can squander, nor destroy, nor take from him." What a man! What a life! What modesty? What gratitude! And yet this man just past eighty is doing that possibly on a large scale which every CHRISTIAN SUN reader can do, at least, in a small way, viz:—Bear testimony at home or abroad in the saving power of our Lord. This is the way they drove Satan out of heaven, and it is the way we shall have to drive him out of the earth. John, the Revelator, tells us so: "And they overcame him (Satan) by the Blood of the Lamb, and by word of their testimony." (Rev. 12:11.)

THE NAVY CHAPLAIN AND HIS RELATIONSHIP TO HIS DENOMINATION.

By CHAPLAIN H. E. ROUNTREE.

(Delivered before the San Diego Ministerial Association in the M. E. Church, San Diego, California, March 2, 1936.)

Brethren, it is with considerable trepidation that I undertake to speak to you of a Navy Chaplain and his relationship to his denomination. A Navy Chaplain is one of your number. He represents both his church and the church universal; and who he is, what he is, and what his relationship is to that church, should speak for itself. But since that relationship does not always speak for itself it seems relevant to call attention to it.

First: The Navy Chaplain—Who He Is.

Casual thinking should make it unnecessary to tell a group of preachers who another preacher is. On the other hand it is casual thinking that has made it necessary. For between the church and the Navy there is a great wall of partition, not an unsurmountable wall nor an indestructible one, but one nevertheless which has so separated the brethren of the two organizations that they have become two sets of folks. The minister who joins the Navy is considered by the church as lost to the church and, organically speaking, he is. Likewise the Chaplain, the Navy Minister, through similar light thinking, takes this severance for granted and falls into thinking of himself as a lone soldier of the ministry of Christ. At least there is a strong tendency this way. This light thinking on both sides has erected this wall of partition, and it is said, "There is but little relationship."

But there is a relationship. That relationship is the same in vital senses as though the Chaplain had never joined the Navy. In order to justify this statement it seems pertinent to speak of the requirements for selection for the Navy. In addition to his academic degree, he must be an ordained minister of the church with seminary training. He must have a natural bent for leadership of young men, physically and morally as well as spiritually. He must also have pastoral experience and be recommended by his church for the job. There are a few Chaplains in the Corps who have had extended pastoral experience. One of them has served fourteen years as a pastor, and at the time of his joining the Navy, he was Teacher Training Superintendent of his Convention and State Teacher Training Superintendent of the International Sunday School Association. These facts are not mentioned to laud one's merits but to point to the range of qualifications extant in one's application for the Naval service. It also serves to indicate that the Chaplain understands the pastorate and the pastor's problems and point of view. The call to the Chaplaincy is a big opportunity to a strong man to do a strong man's work.

Second: The Navy Chaplain—What He Is.

Again we find ourselves feeling that a statement as to what a Chaplain is, or should be, unnecessary. However, in view of setting forth a vital relationship of a Chaplain with his denomination, and in view of recommending that relationship, there are some things to say about it. Essentially, that relationship is as vital to the heart of the church as a congregation is to the heart of a pastor.

From the Chaplain's Manual prepared by the Chief Chaplains of the Army and Navy in 1928, the following is quoted:

"The Chaplain is the visible personal connection between the church and men of the service; pastor to thousands of men who are separated from home, church and friends; exponent of religion in camp, field, post, battleship, definitely in charge of all religious services in Army and Navy; spiritual adviser of the men in the Army and Navy, their comforter, friend and helper when sick or in trouble; one to whom sacred confidences may be entrusted; one who serves in solving difficulties through connection with the Commanding Officer; one who may visit and minister to soldiers and sailors when under arrest; one who may represent the men under trial in courts-martial; one who meets the recruit and helps him to start right; one who helps when mustered out, to fit back in civilian life; one who stands by all the way thru; one who can be depended upon for the performance of multitudinous, extra-professional duties bringing ideals into recreational and educational programs of the Army or Navy."

In addition to being pastor to his people, he is also a minister-at-large. Through the office of his church which has fostered his mission in the Kingdom, he is not only a representative of his denomination, but he is a representative of all denominations.

The Navy personnel is almost unique in being a group composed of all denominations. They live herded together within the confines of a ship and when religious services come they are called together under the flag of the Cross to worship together with a minister of the church, an apostle of Jesus, (let us say), whose denominational affiliation may be unknown to them. He is called to lead them and as far as possible to bring them to a saving knowledge of Christ. In the performance of this duty there is not a single function, not a sacrament of the church that he is not called upon to perform.

For instance, several Chaplains have had outstanding experiences along this line. With one of them, in fourteen months, more than three hundred men professed faith in Christ, were baptized and revived into the church by him. These men were given a certificate of their profession and membership and recommended to the church of their choice. And the record is that with the exception of two churches, every one of these recommendations was accepted. This fact stands a high tribute to the relation of the church and the Navy man. Such results are hardly possible today, referring particularly to the proportions. Men of the Navy today are not only the pick of the stalwart manhood of the country, but nearly all of them come from the manhood of the churches. A recent survey of a cross section of these young men reveals not only a choice type of manhood but also that about eighty-five per cent of them are members of the churches back home, only about fifteen per cent having no church and no religious training. As these men go forth into the world, the nation's bulwark of defense, they need the sustaining influence of their church; they need that influence that gives them vision, character, courage, and endurance, to face and win the battles in their own lives. This is the office of the Chaplain. And it is heartening to realize that over a period of the past twenty years the Chaplain's influence in this direction has made its impression. Quoting a letter from President Roosevelt to the Chief Chaplain of the Army, under date of February 13, 1934, he says:

"The great Teacher said: 'I come that ye may have life and that ye may have it more abundantly.' The object of all our striving should be to realize that 'abundant life.'

The supreme values are spiritual. The hope of the world is that character, which, built upon solid rock, withstands triumphantly all the storms of life.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Communion Service is a sweet tribute to Jesus Christ. In all churches of the Christian religion the Lord's Supper will be observed in some way during the Easter season. As one reviews the life of Jesus as recorded in the New Testament, one wonders whether the full significance of our Lord's Passion has been brought out by the brief records. No writer could portray the full meaning of that simple ceremony, when Jesus took bread, and after giving thanks, gave it to the disciples, and said "take and eat, this is my body given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Likewise the cup after the supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you." (Luke 22:19-20.)

This was a new idea and a new adventure. Through the ages of recorded history many methods had been adopted to perpetuate the memory of great leaders. Monuments of the most durable material known to man were sought and erected that great names might be immortalized for the inspiration of future generations. But the greatest of all men and the sublimest Teacher of the ages proposed to twelve men that His followers should remember Him by eating a bit of bread and drinking wine, these emblems representing His body and His blood. How simple! How easy! How sublime. The common-place bread and wine raised to a high and holy place by the hands of Jesus.

Thinking of the prominent place this sacred service should have in Church one wonders why so many people fail to avail themselves of this high privilege. Is it because of Paul's warning recorded in the 11th chapter of First Corinthians? In the 29th verse of this chapter these words are found: "For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." Taken out of the context and loosely interpreted, that verse has kept many people from the Lord's table. But studied in the context and carefully interpreted, it should not bar any sincere believer from the communion. What was Paul writing about at the time? Why it is plain that he was rebuking the error of the people who made a feast out of the Lord's Supper and used it as an occasion for feeding hungry people and drinking until some were drunken. They had no regard for the Lord and they cared nothing about His suffering and death upon the cross.

"This do in remembrance of me." That brief sentence is the key to the believer's attitude in partaking of the bread and wine. To eat and drink in the spirit of a banquet feast, or as a matter of satisfying hunger and thirst, is eating "unworthily." No man is worthy to take a place at the Lord's table. No humble Christian could feel good enough to accept such an invitation. But any believer, who is sincere, may eat and drink at the Lord's table in a worthy manner, that is, reverently in the spirit of worship, in memory of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour. The prayer of an unworthy sinner who seeks salvation pleases God. But the prayer of any one who offers his petition in an unworthy manner, such as the Pharisee, displeases God. Singing "unworthily," this is, irreverently, is not acceptable to our heavenly Father. So of any and all acts of worship offered "unworthily." Sincerity should move us to remember our Lord.

A quiet reverent attitude during a communion service is impressive and uplifting. One should think of Jesus and the disciples in the upper room.

How unworthy were those disciples to eat these sacred emblems broken by His hands. Peter would deny his Lord that night. Others grew faint-hearted and gave up in despair. But they ate in a worthy manner. And that supper put something into their hearts that brought them back to sober thinking and renewed consecration in a few days. What would they have done without that sweet hour with Jesus? Come to the Lord's table, if you accept Him as Lord, and remember Him.

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS CAMPAIGN.

It has been the writer's custom throughout his pastorate at certain stated periods of the year to put forth special efforts in the interest of the devotional and religious life of his church. Having been born and reared in Georgia these special efforts were referred to as revivals. In recent years the emphasis has not been so much on what we call revivals of religion but upon a finer and more constructive program planned to deepen the religious life of the church and at the same time attract the unchurched with the insistence that those who are not connected definitely with the church identify themselves with the organization and be known as a part of the kingdom. Since coming to Elon as president of the college and pastor of the college church my plan has not changed. We do not call these efforts revival seasons. They are not in the accepted use of that term. We have called these periods at the college "A Religious Emphasis Campaign."

Throughout the regular program at the college, including Sunday and vespers, we have been trying to keep the importance of the religious life before the college and the community.

Sunday, March 15, through Wednesday, March 18, was set apart as the period for our religious emphasis campaign. Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, pastor of the People's Church, Dover, Delaware, was invited to be our leader. Dr. Helfenstein is remarkably fitted for such a campaign. He has traveled widely and has had considerable experience in dealing with college students. During his pastorate in Urbana, Illinois, he had the privilege of working in religious emphasis campaigns in the University of Illinois. Some years ago he conducted a most unusual campaign for Defiance College. Added to these opportunities, the rich experience of a successful pastorate fit him admirably for the work which needed to be done at Elon.

Beginning with the first service on Sunday the interest increased rapidly. His messages were logical, spiritual and convincing. I am sure I have not seen such a ready and almost unanimous response to a series of meetings. No one could have given himself more completely to his task than did Doctor Helfenstein. He spoke twice daily and was kept busy the greater part of the day holding private and personal conferences with students. There are only thirty-six students at Elon who are not members of some church. The majority of these made profession of faith in Christ either in private conference or in public meetings. Wednesday evening, which was the final service of the series, the response to an invitation to step forward with Christ was almost immediately and pretty nearly unanimous. It was really a high moment in the religious life of the college. The faculty and students cooperated fully with Dr. Helfenstein in the meetings. The faculty met at seven o'clock for prayers for the meeting. Practically every professing Christian in the student body and faculty gave evidence of reconsecration. There were between sixteen and twenty professions of faith. Three of the students united with the college church Sunday morning. Others will send application for membership back to their home churches. The faculty, students, and college community greatly appreciate the service of Dr. Helfenstein and wish for him continued success in the work of the kingdom.

L. E. SMITH.

TRUTH WILL OUT.

A well-known physician was once being criticised for some new discoveries which he had made in medical science, when an editor offered him the columns of his paper through which to answer his critics. "No," said the physician, "I will work while they talk and be better enabled to prove the certainty of my discovery." That he did, which was the wise thing to do. The man who works in a right cause while others go about ignorantly criticising will in the end be firmly established and justified in the part which he has played in making his record true. Of all people who need not fear criticism and opposition, it is those who work in and for right causes. We should remember that God never fails to confirm the truth in some visible way. Such has been a prevailing law of life through all time and will be to the end of the ages. A person has hit on the most valuable truth in all life when he has decided to obey that voice which whispers to his inner self rather than to be confused by the empty suggestions of those who merely look on. Probably no president of our nation was ever more severely criticised for any one single act of his administration than was Thomas Jefferson for making the Louisiana Purchase at a cost of fifteen million dollars, but time has proven the soundness of his thinking in the matter, which is now considered one of the most fruitful acts of his administration. To go about a matter only half-heartedly and laggardly does not get one anywhere but for those who have well-founded convictions, there is success if they keep on keeping on.

BUTTERFLIES.

And the dreamer dreamed a dream and when he dreamed his heart was sad. For he wandered over a large field and as I looked I saw that the field had many pitfalls and on one side was a precipice and fitting over the field I saw many butterflies and to the eye the butterflies were beautiful, for all of them had golden wings. And I saw also many people in the field and all of them were busy because they were trying to catch the butterflies. I saw a boy running with all his might. His eyes were fixed on the butterfly. His head was bare and his hat was in his hand and he did not see the precipice. I ran to help him, but I was too late. Then I remembered the words in the Book which say, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world, the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eye and the pride of life are not of the Father, but of the world and the world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

And I remembered that King Solomon chased butterflies and he had a thousand in his harem and he chased many other kinds which he calls vanity by which I suppose he meant that they could not satisfy the heart of man. But he came to a wise conclusion at last which was to fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man.

THE ELON COLLEGE 1936 RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS CAMPAIGN.

In the numerous Religious Emphasis campaigns that I have had a part in on college and university campuses in different parts of the country, I have never witnessed a finer interest and cooperation on the part of a faculty as a whole, or a more serious-minded response on the part of the student body. So many of the students at the beginning of the campaign expressed themselves that there was "something lacking" in the religious life of the campus. When asked if perhaps that which was lacking might not be "something that was lacking" in their own lives, they turned the searchlight of inquiry upon themselves, and what a result!

After four days of two public services each day, and a heavy schedule of private interviews on "Life Challenge" each morning and each afternoon, when I gave the invitation to all those who, as a result of the Religious Emphasis Campaign, had decided definitely for the Christian Way of Life and wished to accept Christ as their personal Saviour to stand to their feet, more than seventy earnest and determined looking young men and women rose without a moment's hesitation to their feet—it being the first venture in Christian living for a large number of the group. Then when I put the second challenge to the other members of the student body who wished as disciples of Christ to reconsecrate their lives to God in nobler living and worthier service nearly two hundred other students of as fine a type as can be found in any institution of learning in our nation spontaneously rose to their feet in declaration of that purpose.

The personal interviews and group discussions revealed that Elon College is blessed with a group of young men and women of unusual possibilities. The religious interests of the college and the fine spiritual emphasis continually made by President Smith and his colleagues made possible the perhaps unparalleled response to the challenge of the campaign. I have never seen a more whole-hearted response and such unanimity of desire to press forward in the spiritual quest in my twenty-five years of ministerial service. Many of the parents of students at Elon College have every reason for entertaining high hopes for their sons and daughters. And well may our churches be proud of this college which insists that an education should include a knowledge of God and His love, as well as a knowledge of things and their forces, and of men and their ways.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

SPECIAL MEETINGS AT ELON COLLEGE.

I have just returned to my room from the closing service of a five-day series of special meetings in the auditorium on the campus at Elon College, these meetings having been under the leadership of Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein of Dover, Delaware. I wish to give this personal word in a brief appraisal of these meetings.

Dr. Helfenstein began this season of special emphasis upon the gospel of Christ as the Way of Life on last Sunday at the morning church hour, and spoke twice daily until the final service at chapel hour today. During these days he has given some most searching and helpful sermons which dealt with such matters as the personal consecration of the Christian, faithfulness to one's vows to Christ and the Church, the consequences of sin, salvation through faith and surrender to Christ, and the whole-hearted dedication of life to Christian service. In his preaching, he hit straight from the shoulder in dealing with these vital matters, but always with great tenderness and most earnest appeal.

As a result of the wholesome, helpful, soul-searching preaching of this ambassador for Christ, under the blessing and guidance of the Holy Spirit, the meetings increased in interest and intensity of appeal from the first day to the closing service. It was indeed an inspiring scene to witness what transpired there this morning, when at the invitation of the preacher, sixty-five young men and women publicly signified their acceptance of Jesus Christ as their Saviour, and when a very large portion of the remainder of the student body declared anew its desire and purpose to live in allegiance to Christ as Lord and Master. That was indeed an hour and a scene not soon to be forgotten, and what has been accomplished here for good in the lives of these young people will surely bear fruit in the days that lie ahead.

President Smith has labored most faithfully with Dr. Helfenstein in these meetings, and his heart must deeply rejoice in the spiritual awakening that has come to the campus. Dr. Smith and his faculty face a great responsibility and a difficult task in seeking to direct properly these young men and women, and the prayers of the entire church should be offered continually in their behalf.

STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN.

Some years ago I used to see a sign at a railroad crossing that read like this. Is that not what the people of today need to do? Stop! take a look around about you. What is going on here anyway? Stop this mad rush through life—rushing swiftly to an early grave. Stop running wild all over the country on Sunday and staying away too late to attend your church service on Sunday night.

Look in the mirror! Take a long look at yourself and say, "Is it really me? Am I one of those people guilty of neglecting my church duty?" Look to Calvary, my friends. Jesus died there for you and me. The Blessed Lord is still on His throne; all is well with His world. He is saying to all, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Jesus is still calling you; He is knocking at your door.

Listen to that still small voice. Won't you hear Him and let Him in? Oh, my friends, you have only to come unto Him and find rest for your soul. There are people who say, "Oh well, what is the use anyway? The world is going to the dogs." Do you believe this? If you do you are not doing anything to prevent it.

My suggestion is for you to go to your pastor and say, "Here am I. Use me as best you can, for I am determined to help make this a better world to live in." And you can do this if you only try. Do not wait for your fellow-member to do it all. Get up Sunday morning and go to Sunday School. Stay for the morning worship!

Men, if you do that you will surely want to go back for the Sunday night service. Suppose your pastor would stay in bed on Sunday morning as you do. Perhaps he would like to sometime. But he must go and we should feel the same way. Go, not because you feel it your duty alone, but because it is a blessed privilege you have that everyone does not enjoy.

DISCOURAGEMENT.

When life seems dark and o'er your sky
Dark clouds arise, your hopes defy;
As parting friends bring added grief
And nothing seems to give relief;
It brings sweet comfort when we look
To One who never us forsook.

Then lift thine eyes and look above
For all around the light of love
Is dawning forth with radiant light;
The clouds to break, your heart make bright
All nature seems to smile and say
Behold a new and brighter day.

Then as we look with hearts of cheer
Upon life's sea, without one fear,
E'en though its storms upon us beat
Its boistrous waves seem sure defeat,
With courage strong, and visions clear
We're sure to win if He is near.

During our Mission Period,—March, April, May, June,—we should bear in mind that Missions is the spiritual task and challenge of the Church, the one object of which is to win souls to Christ, and to hold up Christ as Lord and Saviour. To this end we crave not only the gifts of Sunday schools and churches, but the prayers and personal witnessing of those who believe that the Church is the spiritual body of our Lord and as such is more than any society or organization of man's making.

Cordially,

J. O. ATKINSON, Secretary.

EVANGELISM IN EASTERN VIRGINIA.

May I take this method of appealing to the twenty-three pastors of the Eastern Virginia Conference, and to the members of their forty-four churches in their fields to set high goals for themselves and their churches in soul-winning. Last November, I was appointed chairman of the Conference's committee on Evangelism. And since that time I have brought the matter before the Eastern Virginia ministers at each of the monthly meetings, save one, at which I was unable to be present.

It seems to me that the very smallest goal we could set for winning to Christ by each pastor and his members would be an average of forty-four new members for each pastorate,—or 1,012 for the Conference. I know that is too small a goal, but that would be twice as many as we have been receiving, or nearly so. Many churches will have an ingathering about the Easter season. I trust every church in our Conference will strive to receive some new members between now and the close of the day Easter Sunday.

According to ministers' reports printed in the 1935 Annual, pastors now actively serving in Eastern Virginia received last year members as follows:

R. C. Brittle, 58; H. C. Hilliard, 45; I. W. Johnson, 36; N. G. Newman, 35; John G. Truitt, 35; H. S. Hardcastle, 34; W. H. Garman, 32; O. D. Poythress, 27; R. A. Whitten, 26; F. C. Lester, 24; Joe E. French, 22; Carr E. Geringer, 21; R. L. House, 21; J. F. Morgan, 12; Elisha Bradshaw, 10; Elwood W. Jones, 10; T. N. Lowe, 10; S. W. Phillips, 9; Carl R. Key, 8; T. Fred

Wright, 8; J. E. McCauley, 7; G. A. Pearce, 6; J. M. Roberts, 1. Total, 497.

Again let me appeal to the pastors and members of the Eastern Virginia Churches to increase the above figures this year. Let us win at least 1,000 new members to Christ and the Church by October 1, 1936.

JOHN G. TRUITT, Chairman,
Committee on Evangelism.

THE WORLD IS A KINDLY PLACE.

The day's work had been finished. Inside the room all was quiet save the ticking of a clock. Reflections of the day paraded through the mind. A dial was turned and the world came in—and it was a troubled world. Floods were sweeping over vast areas in many states, and the number of homeless was rapidly increasing. Devastation and death stalked the land. Man's helplessness stood out in contrast against a horizon of angry clouds and torrents of rain. Nature's mighty forces were playing havoc across a mighty stretch of the earth. Man's ingenuity and skill were of no avail. Man's kingly independence was crestfallen and assistance from the most humble was being gratefully and graciously received. Generosity had been crowned king. Rich and poor, prince and pauper, had found a common bond in their common troubles. They had discovered their own weaknesses and had cast themselves upon the mercy of circumstances. Millionaire and squatter alike prized their places of abode. "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home," each could say or sing with a mutual understanding. Rags and riches had found their level through disaster—that uncontrollable monster that drives ahead without regard to position, power, caste, or color. From one community came a cry for food, clothing, and shelter. The few remaining lines of communication were busy. Radio announcers were feverishly relaying messages calling for help and also offers of assistance. Names meant nothing; the need and the distress involved, or the assistance offered, were the only words worth remembering—and they were remembered. Neighbor was any type of humanity that needed assistance or could render succor. State lines were obliterated, while community boundaries had shrunk to embrace one household. Minutes were like hours, hours like days, but as distress calls came in helping hands multiplied, and so comfort and assistance relieved grief and distress. The helpless were not left hopeless. Ready hands and willing hearts went out everywhere—out to rescue, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, administer to the sick, and bury the dead. It was a great opportunity of that finer thing we call Christianity.

Man's humanity to man is greater than man's inhumanity to man. That undeniable, inextinguishable spark which we call the soul rallies in every hour of need; and it sparkles and grows brighter as the need becomes greater and the affliction more severe. It is never conquered but is always conquering, and that is why the world is a kindly place.

CHRIST AND ETERNAL LIFE.

An Easter Meditation.

By H. H. SMITH.

Socrates has been called the "noblest product of the highest heathen civilization." Without the Bible or any Scriptural revelation to guide him, several hundred years before the birth of Christ, this remarkable man spoke eloquently and convincingly of his belief in immortality. But when he faced death, though unafraid, there was a lack of assurance, expressed in the "ifs" he used: "If death be a removal from hence to another place; . . . If at least what is said be true."

With admiration and sympathy for those who earnestly sought after God in the twilight—as did Socrates and many others—the Christian thanks God that he has "a more sure word of prophecy." As Dr. George B. Stevens says: "The Christian man may accept and give full weight to all the arguments which speculation has developed in favor of the doctrine of immortality; but although all these are estimated at their highest value, it is chiefly the calm look of Jesus into the world of mystery and His reassuring word which carry firm conviction to his heart and in which he securely rests."

The word of Jesus with reference to eternal life is indeed reassuring. He teaches that He is the source of the true life, and to be in fellowship with Him is to possess a life that is deathless. "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life." To be in fellowship with Christ is to be in fellowship with God. "I came forth and am come from God." "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Eternal life is the more abundant life, the life of God in the soul of men, producing richness and fullness of being. It has no reference to time or place. It is the normal life of the true child of God, begun here upon earth, but uninterrupted by death. "Whosoever liveth and believeth on me, shall never die." Physical death is inevitable, but those who fully trust Jesus Christ have no anxiety as to the future life. "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day."

That there is a future life for the true child of God, the Scriptures plainly teach; but just what that life is, we are not fully informed. If we long to know more than has been revealed, we should be content with the thought that God has made known to us all that is necessary for us to know in life. Speculation as to what the future is has great attraction for many who are in danger of being too much concerned with unprofitable speculations, while the more practical matters are neglected. The all-absorbing question should be: Have I this eternal life of which Jesus speaks with so much emphasis? Is my life fully committed to God my Father and am I daily living in fellowship with Christ my Lord and Saviour? Have I the witness in my heart that I am a child of God? "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself." Unless we have eternal life now, what hope have we of eternal life beyond the grave? "He that hath not the Son hath not the life."

The entrance of Christ into the heart, bringing eternal life, produces a marvelous change in the whole life. When John Wesley "trusted in Christ, Christ alone for salvation," an assurance was given him that his sins were all taken away, and he felt his heart "strangely warmed." But this inward experience was not all. The outward expression is significant. "I began to pray with all my heart," he said, "for those who had in a more especial manner despitefully used me and persecuted me."

When the Christian comes into possession of this eternal life, as it is called, there is a great change in his attitude toward his fellow-man. What better proof of his conversion could a soldier give than that given by an English soldier who said: "We marched close to the enemy and when I saw them in their camp my heart was moved toward them in love and pity for their souls."

We live in a distressed world today. It is a testing time for those who profess to be followers of Jesus Christ. If we are unmoved by the sin and sorrow and suffering of the world today, how can we claim to be followers of Him who had compassion on the multitudes and wept over Jerusalem? To know the "fellowship of His sufferings" we must suffer with Him today for the woes and sins of mankind. If we are to have eternal life beyond the grave we must have it here and now. And to have it here and now we must live in fellowship with Christ whose love and compassion led Him to lay down His life for a lost world. A spirit of good will and sympathy and helpfulness toward our fellowman, which manifests itself in a practical way, is the surest evidence that we are abiding in Him "who brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel."

Ashland, Va.

THE NAVY CHAPLAIN.

To build this exemplary character is our great task. Without it, the abundant life cannot be realized, and the best citizens and best soldiers of a country are those who have put on the armor of righteousness.

Chaplains of the military and naval services, and clergymen everywhere who by word and life are advancing the cause of idealism and true religion, are doing a commendable work and that is absolutely essential to the life of the nation."

With these relations and conditions in view it can be more easily understood that it is really true that the office of a Chaplain is unique. He is the pastor of nearly every denomination known. And we appreciate it all the more fully when we realize that these men separated from home, and church and friends and far removed from all the restrictions of these influences are cast upon the Chaplain to keep the vision alive in their hearts. It is his duty to keep them in touch with God, not as an idea nor as a doctrine of God, but God as a fact to be realized in their lives. Like a mighty evangel he stands a proponent of faith midst the moving forces of a surging humanity. The church has committed these young men to the enterprise of faith and that enterprise must follow them. To what extent it has been done God alone can answer. One thing we must say, that while the world is crying for a united church and wondering why greater strides are not made in that direction, Chaplains have been working quietly demonstrating that men of all denominations may work unitedly in the field of religion. In this, like you, with you, of you, he needs your heartening support, and he needs to feel the pulse of your "Amen." To have it heartens his efforts and hopes, and puts iron into his resolutions.

Brethren, these facts are set forth merely to call to attention the fact that we all are brethren, working under the same banner, with singleness of purpose, to the end that the Kingdom of God may come nigh unto men. And if there is any difference between us, it lies in the conditions under which we labor. And we believe we are correct when we say that the Chaplain is not content until the religious program which sponsors receives the same generous recognition of the church as is accorded other branches of the church life.

Third: The Navy Chaplain's Relationship to His Denomination.

In view of the foregoing this discussion is almost superfluous. But one thing remains to be repeated: The Chaplain's relationship to his church is as vital as though he had not joined the Navy.

We would not absolve the Chaplain from all the blame in any barrier that exists between him and the church, for he, too, perhaps, has fallen into the habit of thinking lightly of that relationship. There may be extenuating causes. He has cut loose from his church. His field of operation is in an organization like a church lies in the hearts of those officers and men who themselves have the spirit of God in them. It is in that touch with and in the living in the realm of these hearts that the likeness of the church functions.

Again the chaplaincy is an independent job and through it the Chaplain comes to act independently. As a minister of the Gospel he is the sole director of all religious activities. This is his chief duty, and, in the performance of that duty, no one dares say "Nay." His field of operation and his spiritual work is so intangible that his church has no power to direct his efforts, or to withdraw his services. (One denomination excepted.) He is left free to administer religion and the rites of the church without obstruction or encumbrance. With the training of the church in his background, and with the recommendation of the church behind him, it is taken for granted that his ministry will truly and loyally represent them at all times, and it usually does.

While these conditions may be extenuating to an independent frame of mind, he cannot escape his church and his responsibilities to it. He is still a member of his denominations and, although he cannot participate in its activities and is not available for any of its program, he still owes his church his interest in its activities. He still owes it the duty of keeping it informed of his work and its accomplishments. He still owes them a report to the Annual Conference, and, if possible, to be present at its sessions. The Navy Department encourages this and will give orders to any one of them when his services can be spared to attend his Conference, of course at his own expense. He still owes them his contribution to the church publications. He owes it to himself never to lose sight of his church, nor to let the church lose sight of him. He must recognize the fact that he is a part of them always, and as vitally as though he had never left them.

On the other hand, the church and the ministry of the church owes him a recognition, if for nothing more than what he represents and what he is doing. If he is a strong man doing a strong man's job and that job is an arm of the church extended to far flung lines, nothing is more heartening to a Chaplain than to feel the support of his church and his brother ministers. The Chaplain is a lonely man. He does have to work single-handed in everything. His field of operation is a battleship with not the slightest atmosphere of prayer or of spiritual things. There are but few to stand by and none ever to say "Amen." He is hungry for the church, and you. He wants to do something for the church, and you. Though usually not available, there are times when he can serve and it would be his delight to do so. This is not to invite the Chaplain into your program. It is to call your attention to a void in his life, a void which you can fill.

When these responsibilities have been discharged, the wall of partition will disappear, the union of all will be accomplished, the oneness of purpose will be real, and the commission to "Go into all the world" and redeem the world will be fulfilled.

ENLISTING CHURCH MEMBERS.

Most churches have some specified time and some usual method for recruiting membership. Many of our churches have used the revival meeting as the method and the summer as the time. Quite a number are now shifting their emphasis to the Easter Season with the reception of the members on the day we keep in memory of the resurrection of Jesus. Instead of the preacher doing all the work, the emphasis is shifting to Sunday School teachers and lay leaders (including young people) doing personal work among their friends. Jesus seemed to use the personal work method more than He did mass evangelism. The disciples were sent out two by two and Jesus himself talked with individuals personally.

But whatever the method or whenever the time, each church should plan definitely to increase its membership. There should be a continuous process of growth or the church will decay. New members should be added often for the sake of increasing the fervor of those who are already members and to bring new life into the body of Christ.

DISCOVERING PROSPECTS.

A church in Eastern Virginia not long ago was thinking that its work was about finished for it was not strong enough to continue and there were no prospects for membership. The pastor became interested in the situation and got his people to make a survey of the community. To the surprise of the pastor and the astonishment of the church, it was found that there were plenty of people in the community to double the church membership.

Every church should make a survey occasionally to discover new prospects and to check up on the effectiveness of the work being accomplished. It does no good to sit down and complain about the difficulties the church has. It does do good, however, to face facts to see wherein we make mistakes, to discover new lines of endeavor, and to seek for new channels of activity. The government makes many surveys in order to understand its task. So should the Church.

RECEIVING MEMBERS.

To join the Church is a great event in the life of an individual. It signifies that the individual is turning from his own personal way of life to follow in the path of Jesus, that he is no longer a sinner but will henceforth strive to become a saint. The individual stands at a sacred altar and makes a solemn pledge to serve God. There is nothing more important in one's experience.

Churches sometimes take the matter too lightly. This should not be. Fraternal orders spend much time in initiating their candidates for membership. The Church can do it also to its own profit. The initiatory service into the Church should be solemn, beautiful and inspiring. If it means anything at all, it means that the individual is becoming a part of the bride of Christ. Both pastor and people, it seems to me, should share in this service and welcome heartily into the fellowship of the Church those who have not known the high joy of Christian fellowship.

A certificate of membership and a Bible presented to each member will indicate that the Church believes that it is an important event and that the Church is eager for the candidate to follow the way of life taught by Jesus. These certificates and Bibles may be inexpensive, and it should be remembered that they are intended to last for a lifetime and should therefore be in keeping with the importance of the occasion and the ability of the church to purchase these articles. Our own publishing house and other denominational headquarters can furnish many helpful articles of this kind at a minimum cost.

CONSERVING MEMBERSHIP.

A check-up on the twenty-three who united with my church last Easter shows that some of them began making regular contributions and attending services of the church. A few did not come back after uniting; some moved away shortly after Easter; some who started out well soon stopped giving and quit coming. But thanks be, some of them have been regular in attendance and in contributing. One little boy missed only two Sundays during the year with his contribution and made that up at a later time. Several others have a very attractive record, also.

An alert pastor should have noted what was taking place before the end of the year. Interested Sunday school teachers should have watched with interest and should have been a guiding influence in the life of those who began to lose interest. At the end of the first year, it will be practically as hard to get some of those who joined last year back into the activities of the church as it was to get them to unite a year ago. This ought not to be so.

It may be that our churches are unworthy of receiving people into the membership. Unless there is some task for them to perform, some fellowship to share, and some Christian influence for them to exert cooperatively, why should there be new people putting their names on the roll of the Church? I am wondering if this may not be the reason why several continued to lose rather than to gain in numbers. I am wondering, also, if the time hasn't come for those who are responsible leaders in the churches to see that it means something for people to unite with the Church and to make an honest effort to line up every new member with a definite Christian fellowship and program of Christian activity. The Church that can do this will be worthy of constant growth and will no doubt find itself growing.

Special Music: "Give Me Thy Heart."

Points for suggested talks—

The giving of oneself to Christ should be the conclusion of profound thought. It should not be merely a form or a ceremony. It should not be merely an emotional experience or a yielding to custom and tradition.

Perhaps someone may prefer to think of the topic in terms of "Partnership With Christ." We give ourselves to Christ when we include Him in our philosophy of life. We give ourselves to Christ when we identify ourselves with the Church. We give ourselves to Christ when we advocate and endeavor to exemplify the teachings of Christ.

We must give ourselves to some philosophy or working theory of life. We must be guided by some kind of ideas or ideals. We inevitably find a hero and follow a leader. We form friendships of one kind or another. Now when Christ gains preeminence in our estimation, when we find in Him our highest ideals and most imperious urge to noble living, when we see in Him the hope of individual and collective salvation and are willing to cast our lot with Him, we give ourselves to Christ. He is now our Friend and we have given ourselves in redemptive friendship.

Theoretically, one may "give himself to Christ." But unless it represents a real alliance with Christ, based on a proper understanding and appreciation

JESUS EXPLAINS HIS KINGDOM.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 29, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "They shall come from the east and west, and from the north and south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God."—Luke 13:29.

LESSON: Luke 13; Lesson Text Printed Luke 13:18-30.

The common people heard him gladly—they knew what He was talking about. He put the abstract things of religion in concrete terms. He likened spiritual things unto things with which they were familiar. He taught them in parables, that is in pictures. We have here two splendid examples of the Master's genius in this line.

The Kingdom of God.

The Kingdom of God was the central theme of the preaching and teaching of Jesus. He came preaching the Kingdom of God. He said that it should come on earth. But how was He to make the man in the street know what the kingdom of God was like? Unto what should he liken it?

"It is like a mustard seed which a man took and cast into his own garden; and it grew, and became a tree; and the birds of the heaven lodged in the branches thereof." The kingdom starts in a small way. It started in the heart of a humble Galilean, a carpenter. It seemed so small and insignificant in every way. But it grew and grew and grew, and it is still growing, and the end is not yet. From small beginnings it goes on and on. And this is true not only of the individual, but of society. Despise not the day of small things. There is in the kingdom life, capacity for growth.

"It is like unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, until it was all leavened." It is a silent agency. There is no flare of trumpets about the coming of the kingdom. It does not get in the headlines. It works quietly, silently, but irresistibly. It is also invisible and inward. It does not come with observation. It cannot be measured always by statistics or presented by charts. And like leaven it works by contagion. Jesus said "until the whole is leavened." Jesus was a center of contagion—He touched other lives, and they touched other lives, and so on. In essence the kingdom grows by personal contagion. The kingdom has not come as yet, but the leaven of the gospel is working. More and more every phase of life is being transformed by the spirit of the kingdom.

The Narrow Door.

The way into life that is life indeed is through the narrow door, that is by effort and discipline. Character is not a gift; it is an achievement. There must be a resolute putting forth of the will in order to enter into life that is life indeed. Many, many people are not able to enter in—Jesus himself says so.

The Closed Door.

The Master speaks a solemn and serious word here. He says that some who seek entrance into the joys of his kingdom will be shut out. "I know you not whence ye are," "depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity"—these words to those who had eaten and drunk in his presence, and those whom He had taught. But mere physical acquaintance with Jesus did not automatically give people an entrance into the Kingdom, or make them partakers of His spirit. Only through surrender to Him and obedience to Him can we enter the kingdom and enjoy his fellowship.

From the East and West and North and South.

There are no arbitrary barriers to the kingdom. Men from the four quarters of the globe, men of all races and classes have the gracious invitation to enter into its joys. There are no favored classes, no special privileges. Indeed Jesus makes the point that many of those who think of themselves as the privileged classes are going to be shut out of the Kingdom. On the other hand many who would be shut out by man-made standards will be granted an abundant entrance into that Kingdom. Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required.

The Last, First, and the First Last.

God's standards of value are not always our standards of value. Some whom we think first are last in his scale of things. And some whom we think last are going to be first. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh on the heart. Wealth, position, education, power—what great store the world puts on these things. In the kingdom, however, the child-like heart and the Christ-like character come first. Those who from all natural circumstances and external appearances would seem to have no right to the privileges of the kingdom, those who are last, might be first in the kingdom because their hearts had been yielded to Christ. Let every man take heed unto himself.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

of Christ, it will not be the greatest contribution to Christ.

The giving of oneself to Christ is no stereotyped affair. The roll of those who have made that supreme surrender includes men from every walk of life. Every gift and talent may be used in partnership with Christ. Every legitimate vocation is a field in which one may give himself to Christ.

The gift of oneself to Christ does not involve the forfeit of personality. It becomes an investment. In our friendship with Christ there is definitely more to receive than anyone could possibly give.

Period of Directed Prayer (Play softly "Take My Life and Let It Be.")

- 1. Thank God for a Christ who not only did a great deal for us in His life, but who made a complete sacrifice of death upon the cross.
2. Ask God to help us live more completely for Christ.
3. Ask God to help us to lead others to give themselves for Christ.

Consecration Service—(This service would be very effective if a cross or a picture of Christ were placed at the front of the room, and candles were used for lighting.) Ask the Endeavorers to give their lives anew to Christ. Sing as the closing hymn "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Hymnic Benediction—

"O Lord and Master of us all,
Whate'er our name or sign,
We own Thy sway, we hear Thy call,
We test our lives by Thine." Amen.

FOUR DOLLARS FOR POSTAGE STAMP.

The hollow mockery of much advertised beverage-room benefits to the community is well illustrated by the figures for Peterborough, Ontario.

That city spent $213,318 in beverage-room liquor during the past year, from which the government obtained $8,000 in taxes.

The city's share of the profits was $1,600.

For every four dollars that passed across the beverage-room counter, the city received three cents, the value of a postage stamp.—The New Outlook, Canada.

MONDAY.

"WITH CHRIST AS GUIDE."

"He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life."—Jno. 18:12.

"Heaven and earth shall pass away but my words shall not pass away."—Mark 13:31.

Have we really joined Jesus on the royal road to Gethsemane? If not, in thought and spirit, let us do that now. It is a road of the Cross, but to David it was a road on "righteousness for His name's sake," and into "Green Pastures."

There is a valley paved with tears,

Whose gates my soul must pass,

And to dim sight it yet appears

Darkly as through a glass.

But in its gloom faith sees a light

More glorious than the day;

And all its tears are rainbow bright

When Calvary crowns the way.

Jesus, my Lord, within that veil

Thy footsteps still abide;

And can my heart grow faint or fail

When I have these to guide?

Thy track is left upon the sand

To point my way to Thee;

Thine echoes wake the silent land

To strains of melody.

What though the path be all unknown?

What though the way be drear?

Its shades I traverse not alone

When steps of Thine are near.

Thy presence, ere it passed above,

Suffused its desert air;

Thy hand has lit the torch of love,

And left it burning there.

—George Matheson.

In Christ we have an All-sufficient Guide not only through the crosses to be borne but on our way through life. This is the charm and beauty of Christian living. The man who has no better guide than himself is likely to have something of a novice for a teacher.

Prayer—Thy love, O Christ, passeth knowledge. Thou art our light and our guide and the years have confirmed the glory of Thy way. We pray for an understanding of Thee that in this uncertain world we may find the certainties of the way, the truth and the life.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"A STAND OF CONFIDENCE AND COURAGE."

"Let us therefore draw near with boldness unto the throne of Grace that we may receive mercy, and may find grace to help us in time of need."—

When we contemplate walking the road of the Cross with Christ, let us think much and love more. Peter who swore he would stand by till the last, stood by all right, but he became a stranger, and Peter was a courageous man.

Christ has bidden us pray, assured us of response, and promised us help. He would have us follow Him as a child follows its father. We are sure it will take all the faith, all the love, all the virtue, all the hope of eternity to give us courage to go with Christ to the cross, and yet we must.

"Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." So long as we assume that we are quite good enough, a fall is as imminent, as was that of Peter's. Finally at last when Peter's heart was broken and he was compelled to admit that he was not as good as he thought he was, the victory came. Christ had prayed for him and Christ was still praying for him.

In the same way while bidding us follow Him, he is reaching out for our souls that our faith fail not and that we may be strong. So appropriately said "He who thinks he hath no need of Christ, hath too high a thought of himself. He who thinks Christ cannot help him hath a too low thought of Christ."

Prayer—Lord Jesus, deal patiently with us, we pray Thee, with our wayward and faltering souls in this strange day. Teach us discipline and truth, and we pray for that help which we cannot give ourselves, obedience to law and order. Make us willing, ready and eager to follow Christ that His life may bear fruit in this troubled life of mine.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"YOU DON'T COUNT."

"And they that laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest."—Matt. 26:57.

"Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of?"—Matt. 20:22.

The way which Jesus trod was beset with arrogant forces opposing his every move. His service of holiness had only served to make them hard and cruel. But it also made Jesus an unflinching example of patience, of loyalty to God, of self sacrifice in the interest of truth. So, as He rode into Jerusalem and cleansed the temple, as He moved among the people, as he assembled the disciples for solemn ceremonies, as he faced His arch enemy in betrayal, and the Sanhedrin, and Caiaphas and Pilate, he feared no man. He kept straight ahead in the Divine purpose of His life. Righteousness is a stronger fortress for a soul than arms. Are you with Him?

The enemies of Jesus are our relatives in thoughts and feelings. Their guilt falls upon us. The same evil which dominated them dominates our world today and is accomplishing similar results: unbelief, forsaking religious thought and habits, forsaking the early faith, forsaking the church, craving thrills, speed demons, crime and blood trails everywhere: "Wretched men that we are, who shall deliver us from this body of death?"

"Where cross the crowded ways of life,

Where sound the cries of race and clan,

Above the noise the selfish strife,

We hear Thy voice, O Son of Man!"

Prayer—

O Master walking by our side,

Allay our fears and soothe our pain;

Among the restless throngs abide

And tread the world's ways again;

Fill Thou our hearts with all Thy love,

We'll go, Lord, where Thy feet have trod;

We'll go with Thee till heaven above

Shall be in us the place of God.

—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"CONFIDENCE IN GOD."

"He that sent me is with me."—John 8:29.

This is always the manner of Jesus. To Jesus God was the life of the universe. God is its way, its truth and its life; He is its light and its love. Walking with Him in His care is an assurance of victory.

Through the past two thousand years during which time millions have proven Him, He is the only light to guide us safely and to give us peace instead of pain as we trudge the way with Him.

Prayer—O Thou Giver of all good and perfect gifts, in Thee would we put our trust, let us not be afraid. We seek the serene confidence of Jesus. Suffer us not to be confounded. Hear our prayer for His sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"HEAVEN'S GREAT LOVE."

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."—John. 3:16.

"The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."—Isa. 53:6.

What does this mean? It means that love by nature is vicarious. Love will give its life for the object of its affections. If this be so, the Cross is in accord with our highest thoughts of Him. When Christ marched to the Cross it was God marching there, for God was in Christ reconciling the world to him. It was not merely Christ offering Himself to the world, it was God offering His best to man. Christ's sacrifice was not a man trying to please God! It was God reconciling man and, as one said, "reconciling Himself." It was God dying for man,—lost man, hostile man, malignant and unholy man.

Prayer—O mighty God, Thou who knowest us, all our weaknesses, questionings and doubts, give unto our hearts the assurance of Thy love. Let no ignorance or faltering keep us from Thee. Let no unbelief cast us down. Teach us the meaning of the Cross, and this day we yield our lives to Thee to do Thy will. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"A LOYAL HEART."

"Renew a right spirit within me."—Ps. 51:10.

Again we must pray lest we cannot go on. So deep in our despair as we contemplate the horror of the oncoming death, our hearts faint. We hear His own cry "My God, My God, Why hast Thou forsaken me?" If in His misery He felt that God had forsaken Him, how shall we feel as we travel in the darker light of the oncoming sad hour?

It is in the realm of dark days when prayers have not availed that many tender souls have suffered anguish and pain. Yet, in reality those prayers were answered. Prayer did not take away Christ's suffering, but it lifted Him to the sublime degree of peace and satisfaction and enabled Him to say, "Father into Thy hands I commend my spirit." What a sense of faith and loyalty! Likewise out of man's darkest hours have come his most sublime blessings.

Friends, Christ prayed Himself to victory, and we too may do that. When we do, we shall be lifted to spiritual understanding and obedience to the Divine will. In this experience of our Lord's He teaches us how, in spite of pain, or death, yea, hell itself, to keep on praying finds the way home and to God.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us not to be afraid to submit our lives to Thee. May every bitterness be not only a challenge but something meaningful. Make us true to that which is deepest and best in us. In no act or thought may we repudiate Thee. Keep before us the splendor of our Saviour's courage and make us true to the truth and as loyal as the still small voice that constantly speaks within.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"PALM SUNDAY."

"GIVING HIMSELF."

"Behold, we go up to Jerusalem."—Lk. 18:31.

It is said that Jesus is going to Jerusalem not so much because He had to but because He wanted to.—(Continued on page 14.)

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

CHRISTIAN KINDNESS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Add to godliness, brotherly kindness."—
II Peter 1:7.

Simon Peter had learned something about winning others to his Lord. He had been told when he first met Jesus that he would be made to become "a fisher of men." The records indicate that that promise was amply fulfilled. He learned how to win others by following Jesus,—seeing his life, and hearing his words. You remember Peter once said to a court: "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen, and heard."

Now one of the things he saw in Jesus was "brotherly kindness." It is one of the greatest commodities on earth. It has made many names immortal. It has served in the unseen and humble walks of life to give genuine and lasting happiness. I am calling it "Christian Kindness" because I wish it to be like the kindness of Jesus. Kindness is great anywhere, anytime; but Christian kindness is divine. It has no fences to go back to and repair. It stands like the rock of Gibraltar. It passes par at any place, and it is not subject to off-years nor depressions. It sleeps better at night, works better throughout the day, and it is treasured like the sweetest of memories.

Do you know that the words "merciful," and "kind" are very close kin? If you turn to a concordance of the Scriptures, or to a lexicon of the Hebrew, and Greek languages, you will find them words so closely akin that they are interchangeably translated. As a general rule it would seem that we translate the word "mercy" when in connection with God, and "kindness" when in connection with man. "God is merciful." Psalm 103:8. "That which maketh a man to be desired is his kindness." Pro. 19:22. In both of these texts a form of the same Hebrew word, "chesed" is used. With that in mind how strangely sweet and beautiful become some of the familiar texts of Scripture! We hear Jesus saying in his sermon on the mount, "Blessed are the kind, for they shall obtain mercy," or be shown kindness! Or take that great text found in Jeremiah 33:11, "Praise the Lord of hosts; for the Lord is good; for his kindness endureth forever." Or "surely goodness and kindness shall follow me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Or take Micah's great summary (Mic. 6:8): "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God." David said, "I trust in the kindness of God forever and ever." (Psalm 52:8.)

So, no wonder Peter, after having seen, and followed, and heard, the Lord Jesus, should say in the words of our text: "Add to godliness, brotherly kindness." He had seen it in Jesus, "brotherly kindness." Jesus had placed himself in such sympathy with them, so close, and so understanding was he, that the disciples could look upon him as one that "sticketh closer than a brother." But the kindness of Jesus did not stop there! They saw it displayed on every side.

When they were trying to keep the children, and mothers out of the way of their great Teacher, he changed their excitement into wonderment when he bade the mothers and their children to come unto him! He showed kindness. When they were pressing the Lord along the way in order that he might not be hindered or disturbed by the cry of blind Bartimaeus, "Jesus stood still and commanded him to be called. . . And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight and followed Jesus."

They could never forget that sight, and so they wrote: "Add to godliness, brotherly kindness." What a different world would be ours today if we could practice more of that kindness. A kindness that had time for mothers, and little children. A kindness that had attention for poor broken pieces of humanity, and would give it light and sight, and health, and help, and healing! It was a far cry from the sweet, innocent babes taken into the arms of the Lord Jesus and blessed by him, and the poor Bartimaeus. Kindness all along the road of life might have made a very great difference. A bit of unkindness, or inattention may send a lad into the back alleys, and on the road to destruction, while a bit of kindness shown may change a despised tax-gatherer into an immortal Matthew, follower of the Lord Jesus!

What right had a Roman soldier to claim the help of Jesus for his dying son? What obligation had a busy teacher in Israel to give attention to one of the enemies thereof? Kindness! "Add to godliness, brotherly kindness!" It may not be easy to overlook the cruelties imposed upon the people of Palestine by the Roman legions, but in the end it is harder, and far more dangerous to sin against the call to kindness, which is a divine challenge to every soul. Jesus healed the son of the Roman soldier even though he said in another instance of kindness that "he was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Kindness is always appropriate, and always beautiful.

To the palsied man, conscious of his wrong-doings, and suffering from his physical ailments, Jesus said, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee. . . Arise, take up thy bed and walk." To the poor sinner dragged into his presence by a be-maddened mob he said, "Go, and sin no more." For the men who mercilessly crucified him on the cross he cried, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." No wonder Paul looked upon this record and wrote the fellow-Christians in Ephesus: "Be ye kind one to another." No wonder he said, "Love suffereth long, and is kind."

Why is it there is so much unkindness among Christians? Why is it there is jealousy among Christian leaders? envy among Christian brethren? fault-finding and ill-will among those who should be doing all in their power to "bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ?" Really, now, after all, I think in most cases we would desire to honor our own selves by being kind, and that we really desire the joy of the good we may do by showing kindness and charity to others,—all others, even to our enemies,—but we are just thoughtless in the matter, when we are unkind. We have not considered our calling, we have not taken the second thought about our Christian profession, we have acted hastily and without due composure of soul. We need Jesus' prayer: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Peter is saying in this text: "Add to godliness, brotherly kindness," that godliness is what he wants; he knows it is great to be men and women of God; to have a good profession, to take a noble stand; to stick up for the right under all circumstances,—yes, to be godly, that is the thing; be faithful to the pulpit, the church, churchly loyalty, and all that, to be sure,—and he says "add to godliness, brotherly kindness." Do we not sometimes belie our best sermons with unkindness either in word, or deed, or thought,—or in lack of some word, or deed, or thought? Do we not too often mar an otherwise beautiful profession, by an un-Christian attitude, or act? Is it not all because we do not think? We do not keep ourselves in tune with our Christ, when we are unkind.

Are not our lives made constantly happy by the little kindnesses ever shown us? The little kindnesses that are not required, but which are so thoughtful and so helpful. I like, so much, that

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Are we really thankful for the many blessings God in His tender mercy has showered upon us? God's blessings are so bountifully bestowed upon us all that we may sometimes forget to be thankful.

When we count the blessings that come to us day by day and every day and think how kind God is to us all we should be humble and have the spirit of a little child.

We read about the great floods in other sections of our country; how thousands are made homeless and homes destroyed by them, and hunger and suffering follow in their wake, and our heart goes out to every one of these unfortunate people in deepest sympathy.

We are glad we live in a section where we are not subject to great floods and seldom have a cyclone or dust storms. How thankful we should be. It ought to fill our hearts with deep gratitude and thankfulness that God is so good to us.

The winds blow, the rains come; but the sunshine always follows in all of its beauty and glory bringing health and strength to human kind.

When we enjoy good health and have no ailments we hardly know how to be thankful, but let us lose our health and suffer the pains of disease; then it is we realize what a blessing it is to have good health.

We are happy that the children in the Christian Orphanage have good health. Save for light cases of "flu" we have had no sickness in our large family. Through all the rain and snow we have trucked them to and from school and kept them from contracting colds. A big job but worth the price.

ed to. He came into the world to die upon the cross not merely to exhibit courage and bravery against outrageous attacks upon Him, but because He would not falter in His purpose to shape circumstances and guide all life according to the purpose willed by the All-wise Father. That purpose of the Father was that His son should ransom us from sin, that He would be a substitute for our sins, and this giving of himself changed the lives of the apostles and transformed the lives of multitudes of others. From that time all believers have entered into a different, a higher and a holier experience and understanding of God such as has never been accorded to the world. When Saul who did not want to be a Christian fell under this influence of Christ, he became Paul the apostle. So has every soul that believed been transformed.

Friends, we can't be a Christian by following afar off. We must be converted, "become as little children," walk with Him and learn of Him.

Prayer—Guard us, O Lord, from faltering of faith or from slacking our pace following Thee. Make us to see in Christ what eyes have not seen. Make us to know the godness that is of God. May he have love and loyalty and patience that is mightier than sin, and come to the God-given victory and the heavenly crown at last.—Amen.

A Story for the Children

SPONGING ONE'S WAY.

Professor Henry Drummond, who was a great friend of the boys and a great favorite with them, in a book written for grown-up people, called "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," has devoted two chapters to the question of parasites. He says parasites are the paupers of nature. They are little creatures which will not take the trouble to find their own food, but borrow or steal it from others who are more industrious. And, indeed, there are plants as well as animals which live this lazy kind of life.

Professor Drummond tells a very interesting story about the origin of the hermit crab. The peculiarity of the hermit crab is that he takes up his abode in the cast-off shell of some other animal, and, like old Diogenes in his tub, leads a very solitary and lonely, but often a very active life. The crab is an animal which, from the nature of its surroundings, has a somewhat rough and dangerous career. Its days and nights are spent among the jagged rocks and boulders. Dashed about by every wave, attacked on every side by monsters of the deep, the crab has to protect himself by developing a strong, serviceable coat of mail. How best to protect themselves from their enemies has been the problem to be faced by the whole crab family since the first old Adam and Eve crabs started out at housekeeping. The majority of them have developed a strong and heroic life; but the ancestors of the hermit crab hit on what seemed to them the happy device of hiding away in the homes of the mollusks which lay around them in plenty, already built, and seemingly waiting for occupation. And so for generations it has lived sponging its home off somebody else, and, as a result, some of its important vital organs have become entirely useless. By its cheap and lazy method of securing safety it has lost its power to help itself and be independent.

Now, it is because there are many such hermit crabs among young men and women today that I tell the boys and girls this story. A lazy, sponging sort of life usually begins in childhood. Boys and girls who work hard, fight shy of laziness, and never ask anybody to do for them what they can do for themselves, always grow up to be brave and self-reliant men and women; but I never knew yet a lazy boy or girl suddenly to come to be industrious after they were grown. It is with us just as it is with crabs—if we don't exercise our faculties we lose them. It is a very mean thing to do this for many reasons, but it is especially so because God has made each one of us different from anybody else, and unless we do our best to bring out all our thoughts and build ourselves into the strongest men and women we can, we are stealing from God some precious treasure which He has put in us.

I don't want you boys and girls to steal from God. He has given you your bright young natures and you must work with all your might to make the best of them.—Selected.

Do you realize that the whispered conversations are the much repeated ones? People like folks who are really, and truly, and deeply, everlastingly, and sincerely kind! Kindness will stand the test. It will live through adversity, sickness, and death, and give you a host of friends and a world of happiness!

OBITUARIES

PARKER.

Henry G. Parker, son of the late H. G. and Susan Parker was born February 24, 1876 and went to his reward September 27, 1935 at the age of 59 years, 7 months and 3 days.

Mr. Parker was a member of a family of four children, two sisters preceding him in death.

He formerly made his home in Norfolk, until he moved to Steubenville, Ohio, where the end came rather suddenly.

His body was returned to Norfolk and the funeral was conducted from Oliver's Funeral Home by the writer on September 30th, and interment was made in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Nona Roberts and one niece, Mrs. J. M. Roberts of Isle of Wight, Va.

C. E. GERRINGER.

PORTER.

Ivey Thomas Porter, daughter of the late J. C. and Kerenhappuch Gay Thomas was born November 22, 1877 and died suddenly February 10, 1936, at the age of 58 years, 2 months and 18 days. On June 21, 1898 she was united in marriage to W. F. Parker and to this union were born two children.

Upon the organization of Isle of Wight Christian Church she became a charter member and remained active until the end, her life being one of usefulness and beauty, and to know her was to appreciate her.

Mrs. Porter is survived by her husband, her daughter, Mrs. W. E. Mills, her son, James F. Porter, one brother, J. A. Thomas of Richmond, Va., one sister Mrs. J. E. Harrell, Washington, D. C., one grandson, Wm. Edward Mills, Jr.

The funeral was conducted by the Rev. J. M. Roberts, assisted by Rev. J. S. Cobb and the writer and the interment was made in Uzzel's Church Cemetery.

May the hearts of those who mourn be comforted by the grace of God.

C. E. GERRINGER.

I would fain have it go well with thee, and that thou mightest not want the holy Counselor and Adviser in any strait or difficulty which the wise and tender God orders to befall thee.—Isaac Pennington.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

* * *

UNDER authority granted by the Southern Convention of the Congregational-Christian Church, a campaign to raise $250,000 for Elon College is now being organized.

Success of this undertaking, the first phase of a $1,000,000 Program of Development for the college, will definitely stabilize the institution financially and equip it for greater service to our young people and to our church in general.

The campaign will be organized throughout the five conferences of the church embraced in the Southern Convention and among friends of the school and church elsewhere.

In this endeavor we face a task that challenges our best efforts. The first requisite is an effective campaign organization. Members of the church can serve the great cause of Christian education by helping to build such an organization and by enlisting the efforts of others.

Not the Fruits Only, But the Roots Also

NO better diagnosis of the state of the church during the last decade or two has appeared than this: that we have been so preoccupied with the fruits of the Christian life that we have given too little attention to the roots. Humanitarian service, a passion for social justice, enthusiasm for a warless world, and devotion to other great causes of human welfare—these are the rightful fruits of faith in God and an understanding of his will as made known to us in Christ. But have we not tended to forget that we cannot harvest abundant fruits unless we patiently and wisely nourish the roots?

No one who understands either the Christian Gospel or the world in which we live could desire to see the churches give less attention to social and international problems. We may, however, well ask ourselves whether we are likely to get much farther in making society Christian until we have gone much deeper in cultivating personal relationship with God and personal insight into the meaning of the Christian Gospel. We are discovering now, as Dr. Fosdick has said, that the social causes to which we are urging men to devote themselves require a moral and spiritual dynamic which the causes do not themselves supply.

Essential to any great advance in the social outreach of Christianity is a rekindling of the spiritual life of Christians. In the homely illustration used by Professor Rufus M. Jones, our situation is like that in which he found himself in connection with his Ford back in the days before self-starters. He cranked the engine furiously but it would not run. He was on the point of turning in despair to some expert in mechanics, who could find out what was wrong with the machinery, when he finally realized that he had not turned on the ignition. Likewise with our social mechanism today—the greatest lack is the “spark.”

—FEDERAL COUNCIL BULLETIN.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

President L. E. Smith of Elon College, attended the mid-winter session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference at Bethlehem Church, Rockingham County, Va., last Saturday.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Fuquay Springs, N. C., who, like many others, was shut in with the "flu" in February and had to miss several appointments at his churches, is again up and able to be in his pulpit every Sunday now.

Rev. Rexford Raymond, pastor of our Southern Pines church was a welcome visitor at Elon, Monday, the 30th. He and his people were delighted with our Elon Singers who gave a concert in the church Sunday night service, March 29th.

In the absence of the pastor, Dr. L. E. Smith, Rev. Aubrey Todd was the preacher for the Elon congregation last Sunday. The sermon was well received and was of a highly spiritual type. Bro. Todd is one of our promising young ministers, now in the Senior class at Elon.

Why not make the offering for Missions at Easter cover the entire amount of the Conference Apportionment for Missions and then there will not be need of high pressure methods to raise money at the end of the year and just before Conference convenes.

If the secretaries and pastors do not distribute the envelopes for the Easter offering but allow them to remain, covered up and forgotten at home or behind the pulpit, the fault is theirs and not ours, since the envelopes have been sent to every church, and with the envelopes a plea that they be delivered for the offering.

Among the visitors at Elon College and the editorial office the past week were Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Rev. F. C. Lester, Rev. W. T. Scott and Brother W. T. Dunn and Mrs. Dunn of our Lynchburg Church. These were on committee work pertaining to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Christian Education and the campaign for Elon College.

The most challenging opportunity to every Christian, as well as to every church, is that which President John R. Sampey of the Louisville Theological Seminary declares it to be: "The faithful pastors will always be alert to every opportunity in public and private to point lost souls to the Saviour. Soul-winning is our most challenging opportunity."

Only one more week and then Easter, the great time of all the year, when our churches are called upon to reap from the harvest of sowing through the year, to increase their membership through evangelism and to consecrate upon the altar of God a portion of their means to sharing with others the blessed gospel which our Lord gave to the world, even to the extent of giving His own body and His own blood.

Rev. Milo J. Sweet and family, who have been residents of Elon College for some years, moved last week to Chattanooga, Tenn., where Brother Sweet becomes pastor of the Union Congregational Church, his address being 3112 12th Ave., Chattanooga, Tenn. The college community regrets exceedingly to lose this consecrated family with its delightful fellowship. Brother Sweet had greatly endeared himself to the people of many of our churches whom he visited and was an incessant worker as pastor-at-large in helping to build up the weaker churches in Georgia and the Carolinas of our Congregational constituency. We wish and predict for him all success as pastor and builder of the church to which he now goes as pastor.

If pastors and churches only keep their eye on the offering that they are to make for Missions at Easter, not much will be accomplished; but if they will fasten their eyes and their mind on the Cross, with its suffering and agony, and on the salvation of souls purchased through that sacrificial offering, their own offerings will be made in sacrifice and self-denial for the glory of their Lord. It is not for the sake of suffering human beings but for the sake of a suffering, crucified and risen Lord that we make our missionary offerings. Not to the glory of man but to the glory of God do we consecrate our dimes and our dollars through Missions, for His is the life and the life, not ours, that must reach and save lost souls and an unregenerate world.

Bishop Stewart of the Episcopal Church, and a man of great repute, says that which is applicable not to the high church, but to the low also. Hear him: "A priest may be theologically irproachable, intellectually competent, socially acceptable, and morally sound and yet be a failure as a leader. All of the qualifications will not suffice if he be physically lazy and spiritually dull. A leader leads. Every priest has a difficult task. But if he is a good pastor and a consistently hard worker, he is pretty sure to succeed. Jericho's walls didn't fall at the mere blowing of trumpets on the seventh day. The victors compassed the city on the six days preceding. Evidently trudging goes before trumpets."

SILENT SERMONS—A MISSIONARY CHURCH.

By JAMES H. THAYER.

Jesus, on departing for glory, laid two apparently contradictory commands upon His disciples. One was: "Go ye into all the world." The other: "Tarry ye in Jerusalem. The tarrying of course, was in preparation for the going. And the going was only possible because of the tarrying. They had to wait for power. From these two commands came the first missionary Christian church, the church at Jerusalem. This church thought in terms of Jerusalem, Judea and Samaria, but it was a missionary church nevertheless. And it is from such local churches that the missionary impulse, and the men and money to carry that impulse into action, spring. It took a severe persecution to make the Jerusalem church add "unto the uttermost parts of the world" to its program. But its membership scattered abroad carried the Gospel to Cyprus, and initiated the first large scale work among the Gentiles at Antioch. As far as world evangelization went, the Lord apparently was through with the church at Jerusalem—at least its province was cut to the Jew. Now this Antioch church takes up the torch. It is interesting to notice that when God called the brethren at Antioch to a world mission, He had already provided in their membership the two men to obey the command, Barnabus and Saul. God never asks a local church to do anything but what He has the men and means at hand. Furthermore, the temper of this church was correct. It was a working church, busy in its own field, leading men to the Lord. It was a sacrificial church, fasting as it went about its work. Moreover, it was a praying church, asking guidance of the Lord. Such a church then was in a position to hear the word of the Holy Spirit, "Separate me Barnabus and Saul unto the work whereunto I have called them." And having heard the command of the Spirit, they forthwith obeyed. Do you wonder that such a church heard with interest and joy the report of the returning missionaries?—Biblical Recorder.

THE ELON CAMPAIGN ADVANCES.

With a number of key leaders secured, organization work for the $250,000 Elon College campaign, first phase of the institution's $1,000,000 Development Program, is well advanced.

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, of Durham, President of the Southern Convention, heads the campaign as general chairman. Dr. Harrell is pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church at Durham, secretary of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, and co-moderator of the General Council. He is also an alumnus and a trustee of Elon.

Closely cooperating with him will be the two associate general chairmen, Dr. J. E. Rawls, prominent physician and surgeon of Suffolk, Va., and J. O. Atkinson, Jr., Greensboro attorney, and president of the Elon Alumni Association.

Dr. Rawls is one of the most active laymen of the Eastern Virginia Conference. He is founder and head of the Lakeview Hospital at Suffolk, a graduate and trustee of Elon and is identified with many activities in educational and medical circles.

Lewis J. Blakey, Vice-President and Cashier of the National Bank of Burlington, will serve as treasurer of the campaign.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the college, reports that excellent progress is being made on selecting leaders for the organizations which will be set up in each of the five conferences and for the separate organization which will conduct an intensive campaign in Alamance County, N. C., in which the college is situated.

"Our efforts at present," Dr. Smith said, "are being concentrated on enlisting the highest type of leadership available in every department of the campaign. Half of our task, perhaps, is to build an effective organization.

"The response we are receiving from members of the Church, both clergy and laymen, alumni and other friends of the college is most encouraging. With leadership of the type we are securing, I feel confident that with hard work we will reach our objective.

"On every hand I find a keen appreciation of what the college means to our constituency and a whole-hearted willingness to help in the movement we have undertaken to provide for the present and future welfare of the institution."

Dr. Smith is spending much of his time at present in the various conferences on organization and other preliminary work.

DELEGATES TO SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

All delegates to the Southern Convention are requested by the entertaining church to notify the church at your very earliest convenience of your intention to attend, and whether you propose to be present for the Fellowship Banquet Tuesday night, April 28th, 6 o'clock. The Convention Secretary, Dr. I. W. Johnson, will send out return postal cards for this information and this is just a reminder to you to use them and promptly. Of course this information is desired also from the delegates to the Women's Missionary Convention. Please send your replies to:

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

AN OFFICIAL MANUAL.

For generations the Congregational and Christian churches have pioneered for freedom. Along the lines of the Separatists' church meeting developed the colonial town meeting and this latter was the anvil of experience upon which was hammered out the principles of free political institutions that in time came to be incorporated into the constitution of our nation.

The churches are still pioneering for freedom. The principles of freedom must grow, if they are to be effective, as social life and institutions enlarge. It marks progress that a large fellowship of free and independent churches has achieved such a degree of agreement in principles, polity, forms, usages and practices that these can be officially assembled in a manual. Freedom cannot maintain itself in large organizations unless there is a foundation of voluntary unity in spirit, thought and action.

The first comprehensive manual for a large body of free churches will be published in June under the authorization of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States. The manual has been compiled by the secretary of the General Council, Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, at the request of the executive committee of the Council and by vote of the Council in 1934 at Oberlin, Ohio.

The suggestion that the time had come when the churches were ready and would welcome such a manual was made to the Council by its standing Commission on Ministry. The manual both reveals the unity which now exists in the practices of six thousand independent churches with over a million members, and is intended to serve as a guide to greater mutual understanding and larger united action in the future.

In these days when the way of the dictator seems to many the road of social progress, it should be a great encouragement to see a large group of people deliberately pioneering for a larger unity in which freedom will not be sacrificed.

The manual is a compendium and is so described on the title: "A compendium of information, forms and services." The table of contents indicates there is set forth the details necessary regarding the organization and conduct of business of the local church, the association, the state conference; the General Council and the national societies; the ministry including ordination, installation and recognition; various forms including certificates and credentials; charters, constitutions and by-laws; parliamentary rules of order; orders of public service; church and ministerial services; also selected Scripture readings and prayers.

In the preface Dr. Burton lists manuals which have been used in the past by both Congregational and Christian churches, but these were all published by individuals without denominational authorization except a small manual approved by the National Congregational Council in 1898.

The forthcoming General Council manual is due to rank as an historic work because, although it makes use of previous manuals and books of service, it is based primarily upon prevailing usage in the churches today. Dr. Burton expresses his indebtedness to such sources as the existing constitutions and handbooks of churches, associations and conferences, the findings of special committees and to the present state superintendents.

In connection with matters relating to the local church, the advice of some fifty pastors was sought.

Note: Mr. Rugg has evidently overlooked the fact that the body formerly known as the Southern Christian Convention, including the southeast, authorized and had printed the "Rules and Government of the Christian Church," soon after its organization. This manual was revised and reprinted by order of the Convention meeting in Norfolk, Virginia, in 1894, and further revisions have been made since that date.—Managing Editor.

STATE MINISTERS' CONVOCATION.

The first state-wide activity of the newly organized North Carolina Council of Churches will be a Convocation of Ministers, to be held October 13th-15th. A dozen denominations of the state, representing a constituency of more than a million members, are officially cooperating through the Council to make this one of the most creative religious gatherings ever held in North Carolina.

In announcing the Convocation, the Executive Committee of the Council requested that, in so far as possible, the above date be kept free of other conferences, and thus afford ministers of all denominations opportunity of attendance.

This is the first state-wide, interdenominational ministers' convocation to be held in the Old South. On the program will appear many of America's most prominent Christian leaders, including both ministers and laymen. The deepest elements of the Gospel of God will be brought to bear upon the major issues which today try men's souls.

Inspiring morning and evening addresses will be interspersed with informal group seminars in the afternoon. And yet ample time will be reserved for informal fellowship and recreation. A place of meeting is being sought that will be easily accessible from all points of the state, and one that will encourage the spirit of mutual fraternity. In short, this is intended as a religious retreat for North Carolinians who wish to renew themselves in body, mind, and heart, for a more fruitful Christian ministry.

THE ABANDONED GRAVECLOTHES.

When our Lord arose from the dead, he arose in the body in which he had been crucified. Resurrection does not mean merely "continued spiritual existence," as Modernism would tell us. It includes body as well as soul and spirit. But, while the Lord Jesus Christ took again the body of his incarnation, he did not take the graveclothes in which that body had been wrapped. His human, earthly body was changed into a glorious resurrection body; the graveclothes were left behind, abandoned forever. Matthew Henry suggests several reasons why. "Christ had left his graveclothes behind him there; what clothes he appeared in to his disciples we are not told, but he never appeared in his graveclothes, as ghosts are supposed to do; no, he laid them aside: First, Because he arose to die no more; death was to have no more dominion over him. Lazarus came out with his graveclothes on, for he was to use them again; but Christ, rising to an immortal life, came out free from those encumbrances. Secondly, Because he was going to be clothed with the robes of glory, therefore he lays aside these rags; in the heavenly paradise there will be no more occasion for clothes than there was in the earthly. The ascending prophet dropped his mantle. Thirdly, When we arise from the death of sin to the life of righteousness, we must leave our graveclothes behind us, must put off all our corruptions." So Easter reminds us that, because we are arisen with Christ in order to "walk in newness of life," we are to "put off . . . the old man," and "put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness."—S. S. Times.

"COME DOWN FROM THE CROSS.

"The last taunt which Christ heard on the Cross is the taunt which His Church, if she is faithful to Him, will always hear: Come down from the Cross and we will believe you."—John A. Hutton.

These words of Dr. Hutton are suggestive. From the days of the crucifixion until now there have been those who condition their willingness to believe in Jesus on His coming down from the Cross. Some have not been willing to wait for Jesus to come down; they have taken Him down. Entire churches such as the Unitarians refuse to accept Jesus on the Cross; they are ready enough to tell men to make their lives conform to the life and moral teachings of the Master—of Jesus the man. They never point their hearers to the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world. Their cry is, "Ecce homo!" never "Ecce Deus."

There are other groups who preach a Christ of their own fashioning, not the Christ as revealed in the Gospels and certainly not the Dying Saviour. No faithful minister of the Word will join with them; every preacher who is well instructed will remember that Jesus Himself said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." This is the message that gets strong hold of the hearts of men. Such songs as, "Alas, and did my Saviour bleed," and "When I survey the wondrous Cross," and "Jesus, Thy dying love," are almost irresistible. This so because men need a Saviour. Accordingly, let those who tell "the story of Jesus and His love" not be deterred by the taunts of those who would take our Saviour from the Cross; rather let them say with Paul, "God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."—Editorial in Biblical Recorder.

REV. IVAN R. SMITH RESIGNS.

It is with the deepest regret that the Congregational-Christian Church of Winchester has accepted the resignation of Rev. Ivan R. Smith. Rev. Smith has resigned his position as pastor of the Congregational-Christian Church of Winchester and of the Timber Ridge Christian Church to accept a call to the First Congregational-Christian Church of Eaton, Ohio early in April. On Monday night, March 16th, Mr. Smith called a special meeting of the deacons and told them of his decision and his formal resignation was read to the congregation on Sunday morning, March 22nd. The resignation was accepted at a special meeting on Wednesday, March 25th.

The church has made wonderful progress during the fifteen months Rev. Smith has been its leader. Rev. Smith has also been interested in community affairs and while here has been Secretary of the Winchester-Frederick County Ministerial Association. He was also elected chaplain of the largest fire company in Winchester. His many friends in the church and the community will miss the inspiration of his leadership. The church will also miss Mrs. Smith and Mother Smith, who have made many friends in Winchester. Mrs. Smith is her husband's "right-hand man" and being an expert secretary, is a wonderful help to him.

Eaton, Ohio, is situated about twenty-two miles west of Dayton, Ohio and about fifteen miles east of Richmond, Indiana. The first Congregational-Christian Church there has a membership of about six hundred.

We wish Rev. Smith and his family Godspeed and much success in their new field of work in Ohio.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THROUGH PERSECUTION.

Even though the apostles and disciples had been in the presence of the Christ and knew Him personally, and though He had given command, definite and specific, as to what they were to do, they refused, absolutely refused, until persecution came. The Church was planted at Jerusalem, and at Jerusalem it remained, until persecution entered and began to destroy and to kill. The Church at Jerusalem was looking after its own, and the Apostles were holding on right there, despite all that they had heard their crucified and risen Lord declare. Never, until the hand of death fell upon their members and persecution drove them, did they go out from Jerusalem to carry the gospel to others and plant churches elsewhere. It has ever seemed the way with the Church.

It may be that we, today, are waiting till persecution comes upon us. We do not seem to have realized yet that the object of the church is to plant other churches, to carry the message beyond its own borders and to give the gospel to those who are dying without it. These persecuted disciples went as far as Antioch, and since the Church at Jerusalem would not become missionary in spirit and activity, it began to shrink, and the Church at Antioch emerges and begins to eclipse even the activities of the Apostles themselves who would not or could not leave Jerusalem. Paul was sent out by the church at Antioch, which had been built through persecution, and Paul begins, as the church at Antioch develops, to overshadow Peter and James and John, even as the church at Antioch begins to overshadow and leave in the background the church at Jerusalem. The disciples were to tarry there until the Holy Ghost had come, and then they were to be witnesses, and because they would not be witnesses far and wide as our Lord had intended and commanded, another begins to take its place in growth and prestige and power. There are many churches today just like that church at Jerusalem. They are contented. They are willing to be benevolent, kindly disposed, ready to herald the gospel within their own doors and within the reach of their own voices, but they are not willing to send out Paul and Barnabas, and Silas and John Mark, and others, whom the Lord wants to go for Him to bear the message of salvation afar. In this pre-Easter period, God in heaven is putting his churches on trial to see whether they have the faith to do what He wants them to do, and to be what He wants them to be. It may take chastisement. It may take dwindling numbers, it may take the drying up of the power of those in authority in the local church, but sooner or later God has His way, even if it has to come through persecution. O, Church of the Living God, awake; awake! Be warned of history and of fact and give yourself to spreading the gospel of our Lord not only in Jerusalem but in Samaria, where the need is so great, and to the uttermost part where souls are perishing. How can the church be satisfied with caring for bodies and minds, while souls are sinking, sinking, sinking and, in their helplessness, are crying for help.

THESE PRE-EASTER WEEKS.

The North Carolina Christian Advocate is telling the plain truth, not only for its own church, but for all churches when it says: "These pre-Easter weeks are putting us to the test. In every undertaking the old question remains, 'Am I willing to pay the price?' Missions and evangelism are most exacting terms." They are. They are so exacting that we side-step or shrink from their demands. Winning souls to Christ is no kid-glove matter, no easy thing. It requires courage and faith and the guidance of the Holy Spirit. And the same is true of Missions. Many are not willing to face the missionary issue of sharing with others the gospel of our Lord because of a lack of faith. They want to walk by sight and prefer to give benevolent aid to relieve physical need to that of giving spiritual aid to save souls through Christ. Evangelism is only the individual phase of Missions—evangelism and missions being two sides of the same question. Through evangelism we go in person—through missions we go by sending, and it requires faith and courage for both—and sacrifice. How long has it been since you, my dear reader, have testified personally to the saving power of your Lord? And how long has it been since you made a sacrificial offering to send out others to testify beyond the reach of your voice and your hand? Through Missions our Lord has seen fit to extend the reach of our voice and hand even beyond our sight, and thus, under the direction of the Holy Spirit, He is enabling us through Christ to reach even to the uttermost part and save the most needy. "Whether it be mass evangelism or personal evangelism the hard demands remains." There is no easy road to the conquest of life. Those who are not willing to be consumed, willing to burn up in the undertaking, will not win many souls. Our Easter service and these pre-Easter days are, indeed, putting us to the test, giving us an opportunity and revealing whether we are willing to pay the price for winning souls and aiding in spiritual recovery.

LIQUOR ADS IN THE NEWSPAPERS.

Our friends who read the daily papers and, through them, become convinced that the sale of liquor should be legalized may, if they will, now understand why these papers wrote so brilliantly about and advocated so vehemently, repealing the 18th Amendment. A writer of liquor advertisements in a recent article warns these newspapers against overdoing the matter and disgusting their subscribers and readers with their own effrontery. This shrewd advocate of liquor advertising calls attention to the fact that "their pages are so full of liquor ads that these flow over to pages carrying church news, and urges that this should give the publisher some concern." He declares that "many publishers are not only 'avaricious' but 'stupid' about their liquor ads," and warns these publishers that unless they show more discretion they are likely to create a reaction to advertisements of liquor and also to the legal sale of liquor. He calls attention to the fact that the American people, by the repeal of the amendment, opened to the newspapers the right to advertise liquors, and a conservative estimate of revenue brought to them through this advertising is thirty-five million annually. "At the rate liquor advertising is increasing in the newspapers," says this liquor advertiser, "it may soon reach the stage where its value to the advertiser is extremely doubtful."

There is a bill pending before the South Carolina General Assembly to prohibit advertisements of alcoholic liquors in any form in that state. An educational institute held at Spartanburg in February, composed of Methodist workers of three counties, with a church constituent of 12,500, unanimously voted approval of this bill to prohibit all liquor advertising in that state. It is feared by the liquor advertisers that other states may take up and pass such measures. Hence the warning by this liquor advertiser. At any rate, no doubt many readers of the daily papers, who swallowed bait, hook, line and sinker that which was offered editorially and otherwise through the daily press, have now learned why these papers were so enthusiastic in their appeals. One paper voluntarily contributed $50,000.00 to the campaign against repeal, and then when repeal came, its advertising columns (devoted to the sale of liquor) on the basis of its published rates for advertising, carried in one single issue over $100,000 worth of this liquor advertising. It has carried many hundred thousands of dollars worth since that time. Its paltry gift of $50,000 to aid in "educating" the people for repeal has thus come back to it many times over again.

J. O. A.

Into all our lives, in many simple, familiar, homely ways, God infuses this element of joy from the surprises of life, which unexpectedly brightens our days and fills our eyes with light. He drops this added sweetness into His children's cup, and makes it to run over. The success we were not counting on, the blessing we were not trying after, the strain of music, in the midst of drudgery, the beautiful morning picture or sunset glory thrown in as we pass to or from our daily business, the unsought word of encouragement or expression of sympathy, the sentence that meant for us more than the writer or speaker thought,—these and a hundred others that every one's experiences can supply are instances of what I mean. You may call it accident or chance—it often is; you may call it human goodness—it often is; but always, always call it God's love, for that is always in it. These are the overflowing riches of His grace, these are His free gifts.

PHILLIPS BROOKS.

By REV. H. H. SMITH.

If a list of the great preachers of the nineteenth century should be compiled, the name of Phillips Brooks would stand near the top of the list. He was born at Boston, Massachusetts, one hundred years ago—December 13, 1835. Like many other great men, he was not made in a day. "He was rich in ancestral culture, the consummate flower of nine generations of cultured Puritan stock." His mother, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Phillips, possessed a strong intellect and a fervent religious nature. Among her ancestors, beginning with Rev. George Phillips, who came to this country in 1630, there were many ministers. All the energies of this godly mother were devoted to the training of her six sons—four of whom became ministers.

Phillips Brooks inherited a fine intellect from both parents, but it was from his mother, especially, that he inherited his strong religious nature, deep feeling, and spiritual vision.

His father, William Gray Brooks, was a successful business man, intellectual and spiritual, and in the prime of life became devoted to the Church. Young Phillips was brought up in a strictly religious atmosphere. Family worship was observed in the home twice daily, and every Sunday morning the children repeated from memory some hymn they had learned during the week. When Phillips Brooks entered the seminary he could repeat from memory 200 hymns—the fruit of his early training.

For generations, education had been the rule among his ancestors, and many of them were Harvard graduates. When young Phillips was four years of age he was sent to private school, and at eleven he entered Boston Latin School. At sixteen he entered Harvard, from which he graduated four years later. As a student he was exemplary in his habits and diligent in his studies. From his youth he showed great strength of intellect, and a fondness for composition and writing.

About a year after graduating from Harvard he decided to prepare for the Christian ministry, and entered the Episcopal Seminary at Alexandria, Virginia, in the fall of 1856,—when he was not quite 21 years of age. He spent three years at the seminary, and during his last year there was appointed assistant teacher of Latin and Greek. He excelled in the languages, and found delight during his ministry in reading the Greek, Latin, French, and German classics in the original.

Upon his graduation from the seminary, he accepted a call to the Church of the Advent, (Episcopal), Philadelphia. After a successful pastorate of two years at this church, he was called to Holy Trinity Church in the same city. About this time the Church at large was beginning to discover that a man with a genius for religion and preaching had appeared. After an unusually successful pastorate of seven years at Holy Trinity Church, he received a call to Trinity Church, Boston,—the church of his childhood. Loath to leave Philadelphia, at first he declined the call; but when it was renewed even more urgently a year later, he accepted and entered upon his ministry there in 1869. He held this pastorate for 22 years,—until he was elected Bishop of Massachusetts in 1891. His ministry in Boston was eminently successful. All denominations claimed him, for he touched all whose hearts were in sympathy with the Gospel of Jesus Christ. He preached Christ without controversy, and even the Unitarians flocked to hear him. An editor of the Unitarian church paper criticised the members of that church for their disloyalty in forsaking their own church to hear Phillips Brooks at Trinity.

It is difficult to describe Phillips Brooks as a preacher. He had the rare gift of making his hearers forget the speaker and think only of the message,—and it was usually such a message as touched the conscience and the will. An observer wrote: "He made thoughtful men and women realize the power of religion in an age when the current of tendencies ran strongly against religious faith. It is all true, so he seemed to be constantly saying,—this old religion; it has a deeper, grander, larger meaning, and a diviner beauty than you knew."

He often preached with marvelous power. Principal Tulloch, of St. Andrew's University, Scotland, while traveling in America, heard Brooks preach, and writing to his wife, said: "I have just heard the most remarkable sermon I have ever heard in my life—I use the word in no American sense—from Mr. Brooks, an Episcopal clergyman here; equal to the best of Frederick Robertson's sermons, with a vigor and force of thought which he has not always. I have never heard preaching like it, and you know how slow I am to praise preachers. So much thought and so much life combined, such a reach of mind, and such a depth of insight and soul. I was electrified. I could have got up and shouted."

Dean Stanley was so impressed by a sermon Brooks preached at Westminster that he wept freely, and said he had never been so moved by a sermon before in all his life.

Dr. James Bryce said: "There was no sign of art, no touch of self-consciousness. The listeners never thought of style or manner, but only of the substance of the thoughts. They were entranced and carried out of themselves by the strength and sweetness and beauty of the aspects of religious truth and its helpfulness to weak human nature which he presented."

When Professor Bruce, author of "The Training of the Twelve," and other books, was asked to compare Brooks with the great preachers of Scotland and England, he used this homely illustration:

"It is this way: our great preachers take into the pulpit a bucket full or half full of the Word of God, and then by the force of personal mechanism they attempt to convey it to the congregation. But this man is just a great water main, attached to the everlasting reservoir of God's truth and grace and love, and streams of life, by a heavenly gravitation, pour through him to refresh every weary soul."

Dr. J. R. Day, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was impressed with the way Brooks appealed to all classes: "The scholar said, 'He is of us,' and the unlettered said, 'He is of us; the poor said, 'He is of us,' and the rich said, 'He is of us.' To the young man he was full of mirth and buoyancy; to the troubled soul he was a man deeply acquainted with grief. All men, of all classes and conditions, claimed him, because in his magnificent heart and sympathy he seemed to be all men, and to enter into their disappointments and into their successes, and to make them his own. This was rare genius. This was large capacity."

The most unusual compliment ever paid Brooks, perhaps, came from a workingman. When he was ordained Bishop, a workingman wrote him:

"I wonder if you have any sort of conception how many there are of us who are made better and try to be more useful as a result of your example. To me you reveal God as no other man does. What I mean by that is I can't think of you for ten consecutive minutes without forgetting all about you and thinking of God instead; and when I think of God and wonder how He will seem to me, it always comes round to trying to conceive of you enlarged infinitely in every way."

There are several comments on the secret of Phillips Brooks power as a preacher given by his biographer, Prof. Allen, that are interesting:

One observer says: "His power consists in his simplicity, in his earnestness and strength, exhibited in the expression of a theology free from the narrowness and technicality of those dogmatic schemes which make religion ridiculous and weigh it down." Another says: "Of course he has a fine intellect, but it is the warm, earnest heart guiding the intellect that gives him such influence over his hearers." Another comments: "He knows what is in us all. He speaks out of common experience and comes right to the heart of men." Another: "Not in his thought, or his style, or his utterance, which is too rapid and faulty, but in his evident honesty of conviction, sincerity of purpose, and earnestness of desire."

In 1877 Phillips Brooks delivered the Yale Lectures on Preaching. These well-known lectures set a high standard for the Christian ministry and have been of untold blessing to the Church. On the subject of preaching, he said: "Preaching is the communication of truth by man to men. It has two essential elements, truth and personality. Preaching is bringing of the truth through personality. Jesus chose this method of extending the knowledge of Himself through the world. However the Gospel may be capable of statement in dogmatic form, its truest statement is not in dogma but in personal life. Christianity is Christ. A truth that is of such peculiar character that a person can stand forth and say of it, 'I am the truth,' must always be best conveyed through personality."

Other quotations from his lectures are: "There must be a man behind every sermon." "To be dead in earnest is to be eloquent." "You grow so familiar with the theory of repentance that it is hard for you to know that you have not yourself repented." "Never allow yourself to feel equal to your work. If you ever find that spirit growing on you, try to preach on your most exacting theme, to show yourself how unequal to it you are."

He believed in the importance of the baptism of the Holy Spirit in preaching the Word of God, and that there is a special preaching gift. "It is the quality that kindles at the sight of men, that feels a keen joy at the meeting of truth and the human mind, and recognizes how God made them for each other. . . . It has been called the 'demon of preaching.' Something of this quality must be in every man who really preaches. He who wholly lacks it cannot be a preacher."

He lived during a day of theological reconstruction, and was a liberal in his thinking. He hated any authority that repressed freedom in the search for truth. "If you limit the search for truth and forbid men anywhere, in any way, to seek knowledge, you paralyze the vital force of truth itself. That is what makes bigotry so disastrous to the bigot." But he warned against the danger attending freedom of thought. "We ought to be afraid of any theology which tampers with the sacredness of duty and the awfulness of life. I would far rather be a believer in the most material notions of eternal penalty, and get out of that belief the hard and frightened solemnity and scrupulousness which it has to give, than to hold all the sweet, broad truth to which God is now leading us, and have it make life seem a playtime and the world a game."

Phillips Brooks was a great lover of humanity. When a man spoke of the beauty of nature as the greatest of all attractions, he walked to the window and said, "Oh, no, not nature, but this beautiful view," and pointed to the chimneys and roofs of the houses. "Give me this, for these chimney tops even, stand for life, for humanity and that is

SUFFOLK LETTER.

March is the month of transition from winter to spring. January and February were typical winter months in 1936. A long cold spell with much snow and occasional rain left the dirt roads almost impassable in many places. Church attendance in the country churches was greatly reduced by the weather conditions and much sickness. Colds and "flu" were almost epidemic and there were many cases of pneumonia. Many funerals were conducted during the severe weather when the ground was covered by several inches of snow, and frozen nearly six inches deep.

Offerings for current church expenses were greatly reduced—in some cases, almost to zero. The special offerings for Elon College could not be properly provided for, consequently it will be necessary to extend the Education Period over into the Mission Period. This works a hardship on both enterprises, but it is the best that can be done in many of our churches—both in the cities and the country. If the churches will push these enterprises with vigor and emphasis it will be possible to overcome the delay to some extent.

Weather conditions and continued sickness have made it impossible to keep up church attendance. People who cannot attend church, or who do not attend, are not easily reached by the announcements and public presentation of the various church enterprises. This makes the task more difficult when the effort is made to present an offering. A brief announcement is not sufficient public appeal for any church offering. Usually the pastor of the church finds it is necessary to make many appeals to reach the goal set by the Conference and Convention. But the pastor with much experience will discover that the most effective method is to present the matter to small groups in a simple clear-cut way. Congregations do not appreciate financial appeals made during the time for the regular preaching service. The most effective appeals should be presented to key persons in the church who will carry the message and inspiration to their families and friends.

In this transition period—when springtime is bringing out the fresh grass, and flowers are beginning to give promise of beauty and fragrance, church members should bestir themselves to greater effort to put new life in the Sunday school and other organized activities of their church. Many members and church attendants relax their efforts during the long winter and severe weather. But the winter is almost gone, and it is time for all persons interested in the advance of the Church and the progress of the Kingdom to come forth with new life and increased enthusiasm. Christianity cannot live on cold storage. It may suffer quite often from cold weather and it is evident that many people are fair and warm weather followers of Jesus. But Jesus does not like a lukewarm follower, and when the disciple is cold, his financial assets are usually "frozen," as far as the church is concerned.

The Church is not poor. It is financially able to pay its necessary expenses and provide a liberal budget for all the benevolences of the general enterprises. So many live on cold storage, or stick their faces in a refrigerator, that it is difficult to keep their spiritual temperature normal. They have chills—but no high fever. They have low blood pressure and subnormal temperature. They need more food and spiritual exercise. Liberal offerings for the local church and all the benevolences of the denomination will help the "sick" members. The liberal soul shall be made fat. And the working church member will have a warmer heart if he will get out in the sunshine and take more spiritual exercise. Let the sunshine of heaven in and warm the chilly heart during the glorious springtime.

THE FRUITS OF THE CHURCH COLLEGE.

The tree is known by the fruit it bears, the fountain is judged by the water it gives forth, the value of a life is determined by what it produces. Christ said in the Sermon on the Mount, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Someone else has declared, "By their fruits and not by their roots ye shall know them," meaning to say that individuals themselves are known by the contributions that they make in their day and not by the contributions that their ancestors made before them. It is far more significant what a man does while he lives than what his grandfather did before him. We are interested in history, in what has been accomplished, but we are more interested in initiating what should and what may be accomplished. It is good to know history but it is far more preferable to make history. This is not only true of individuals but it is equally true of institutions.

The Church of Christ has been evangelistic. Through its evangelistic efforts it has extended itself and multiplied the kingdom in the world. Its growth in the days to come will be predicated by evangelistic fervor and evangelistic effort. The church has sought to fortify and make secure the kingdom in evangelistic effort by the right kind of mental and moral training. In its educational efforts, the church college has not only striven to instruct in literature, in history, and in the sciences, but in addition it has taught emphatically in the field of religion and in morals. The church's conception of training has been and is not only to prepare men to think clearly and convincingly but to train them to live likewise and triumphantly.

The only occasion for the appearance of the church college and the only reason for its continuance is the balanced curriculum that it offers to young men and young women who are to bear the responsibility of citizenship and statecraft in the days ahead. The church in founding and supporting its colleges is not only interested in the propagation of her own doctrines and preservation of her own life but is greatly concerned for the future of the state. Thoughtful people in business and in industry are beginning to realize that the properly trained mind and heart is the type of citizen to whom the affairs of church and state may be committed with a sense of security. We are beginning to realize that it is not only necessary to understand man and man's ways, but that it is necessary to know something about God and about God's laws governing human conduct. The fruits of the church college have proven a balance wheel in these hectic days of material and social uncertainty.

It perhaps is true that the fruits of the church college reflected in human endeavor have done more to check the threatening tides of materialism in this country than anything else. There are more treacherous currents possible in the circles of this society ahead than we have yet experienced. If the ship of state is to be steered safely and the kingdom of God is to continue, the affairs of both must be manned by minds and hearts that have had the advantage of a balanced curriculum in their training, calculated to develop their spiritual lives equally with a growth and expansion of their mental capacities.

Intellect and intellect alone has never been safe. Spirit and spirit alone has brought disappointment and disaster. The physical and the physical alone has resulted in human wreckage. God gave man a body. He gave him a mind. He gave him a spirit. He cannot get along normally with any one of these alone. To reach his full stature all must be trained and developed equally. It is the purpose and the privilege of the church school to assist man in attaining for himself and for his day full and complete fruition of his own life and thereby make his contribution to his day and to the world.

The church college may not reach its ideal. All the fruit that it bears is not perfect but it does make its contribution which is decidedly significant. In consideration of the problem of training our youth, which is to us the important problem of this day, it would be well for those who have passed their day for training to dedicate their efforts to the strengthening and upbuilding of the church college. Without the church college our future as a church and as a nation would be far from hopeful.

L. E. SMITH.

EASTERN VIRGINIA EVANGELISM.

During the months of October, November and December the churches in our Conference have very few, if any, evangelistic campaigns. Personally, I believe it would be a good thing to have in our city churches an evangelistic meeting sometime about the last half of October, or the first half of November. Perhaps other times would be better for the rural churches as the farmers are busy at that season with the harvesting of their crops. Ingathering of new members in the autumn has the advantage of taking into the church membership new members when the fall, winter and spring work of the church is yet to be done, and they can be more easily woven into the work of the church than if one waits until late spring to have the ingathering. For in that case just about as soon as the new members are taken into the church city churches feel a decided slump in attendance when the summer months come on. However, there are advantages in the winter, or spring campaigns.

During the autumn months our Eastern Virginia pastors reported received into their churches members as follows: Revs. Joe French, 1; H. S. Hardcastle, 3; H. C. Hilliard, 3; R. L. House, 1; I. W. Johnson, 2; Carl R. Key, 4; J. F. Morgan, 2; S. W. Phillips, 3; O. D. Poythress, 36; John G. Truitt, 13; and R. A. Whitten, 1; making a total of 69.

I am hoping to have a still finer report for January-April. Will not each pastor in our Conference take this matter upon his heart, and help us have a good report for the first four months of this year? There are pastors' classes being taught and several special evangelistic efforts to be made during that period. But I find that it is entirely possible to receive new members into the church all along through the year. Let us be in prayer that God will awaken our great Conference to its full strength in winning others both at home and abroad.

A Story for the Children

A GIRL WITH A HEART OF GOLD.

High school was out, and the girls and boys in groups of twos and threes were chattering their way homeward. At least the girls were chattering, but most of the boys were hurrying along toward the football field.

"Hello, Fatty," called a tall, curly-haired lad who should have known better. The boys and girls all turned to look at one girl, whose face flushed pink at the greeting, but whose head was held high. Her brown eyes were lovely, but she was unmistakably fat. She waved a gay hand as the group of boys passed them.

The girls looked at her sympathetically, and Ruth said indignantly, "The next time Tom Patterson says that I shall say, 'Hello, Apollo' to him. The idea! Does he think he's perfect himself?"

Sylvia laughed with the girls at this characteristic speech of Ruth's, and Patricia said, "It is fine, Sylvia, that you don't mind their teasing remarks."

"I do mind it," answered Sylvia, "but I mustn't let the boys know it."

"I think it's a shame to call her Fatty," said Mary Ann indignantly, after Sylvia had left the group at her corner. "She is such a dear girl."

"But why doesn't she eat less?" asked Estelle impatiently.

"Oh, Estelle," answered Patricia earnestly, "Sylvia doesn't eat as much as I do, and look how skinny I am. She has been at my home and I have been there to dinner. She told me once that there is some glandular trouble that causes the extra flesh. She has tried all sorts of diets, but it doesn't do any good. She has had physical examinations, but the doctors cannot correct the trouble."

"Her father is a minister, you know," said Martha. "We attend their church and her mother told my mother that Sylvia actually cries about her weight sometimes."

"If I could debate as she can," said Patricia, "I should almost be willing to be fat. Let's all go to the debate Friday evening and give her some real applause."

Sylvia was rather nervous about the event, her first public debate. She enjoyed debating and had a clear, well-trained voice for speaking, but she felt keenly the fact that she did not make a graceful appearance on the platform. Her teachers had been anxious to have her represent Central high school in the debate with Franklin high, since there was not another student in the school who showed so much promise in the debating class as did Sylvia Santelmann. Her colleague in the debate was to be John Gordon, another good speaker, but not Sylvia's equal in clear thinking.

Sylvia's father had spent quite a lot of time helping her to get her arguments in order and listening to her presentation of her side of the question. He felt that Sylvia was well prepared to discuss the subject if she could just forget herself as she did in her rehearsals at home.

The evening of the debate came at last and the large school auditorium was filled with high school boys and girls and the friends and relatives of the debaters. Sylvia was the first speaker on the negative.

The first speaker on the affirmative was a young man who had already won several debates for his school. He spoke rapidly and convincingly. After the hearty applause had ceased, Sylvia came forward. She paused an instant, looking over the large audience. Then she began in a clear, resonant voice that carried perfectly to the back of the auditorium.

When she finished the applause was instant. The whole audience evidently agreed that Sylvia had surely won some points for her side.

The other two debaters followed in rapid succession, but the first two speakers were by far the best. The burden of the debate rested upon their shoulders. When the debaters were allowed to give the rebuttals, Patricia rested at ease, for Sylvia was especially good at rebuttal.

When Sylvia's time arrived, she came forward eagerly, but before her mouth opened for the first word a voice spoke from the gallery: "Knock 'em flat, Tubby!" There was a dead silence. Someone hissed toward the gallery. Sylvia stood there like a statue. She looked stricken for an instant. Then her eyes fell upon her father seated near the front. He appeared composed and confident. Sylvia consulted her notes, then began her rebuttal in a low voice, which gradually became confident and clear as she made one strong point after another.

The applause broke forth again when she had finished. "Oh, I do hope that Sylvia wins!" said Patricia fervently.

The debate was over and the orchestra played while the audience awaited the decision of the judges.

Patricia was indignant at the rude remark from the gallery. "It sounded just like Tom Patterson," she said, "and if it was I shall tell him what I think of him."

The orchestra stopped and the judges took their places. In the silence that followed, the chairman arose and said, "The judges have reached their decision. The negative wins the debate."

The next morning at school all the girls clustered around Sylvia, congratulating her and telling her how proud they were of her. Sylvia quietly said she was thankful that she had helped win her first debate, for she would never debate again.

"Sylvia, what do you mean by that?" exclaimed the girls. But Sylvia only smiled and took her seat as the bell rang.

Patricia met several of the girls after school and they held an indignation meeting directed toward Tom Patterson, who, they were quite sure, had insulted their friend the night of the debate. "You wait, girls, I shall see him personally if I have to go to his home," said Patricia firmly, "and if he isn't ashamed of himself when I get through with him, it will be because he is a hardened criminal."

Patricia usually carried out her plans, and this occasion was no exception. The next day she told the girls gleefully, "What do you think! Tom Patterson has asked Sylvia to ride over to the football game in his car this Saturday afternoon."

"How did you manage it? Will she go? What did you say to him? Was he the one who called her Tubby?" asked all the girls at once.

"Yes, he was the one," answered Patricia, "and he is properly ashamed of himself. I told him that he must make amends some way to help restore her self-confidence. I said it was a shame to notice anything like her weight—which she can't help—when she is way beyond all of us in brains, and besides that, she has a heart of gold."

"Did you tell him to ask her?" inquired Mary Ann.

"No, he thought of that himself," replied Patricia. "And the best part of it is that she has accepted. Probably she does not know that he is the one who called her Tubby, and we must not tell her."

So Sylvia went to the game in Tom Patterson's car and smiled across the girls.

The girls did not suspect it, but Sylvia did know that Tom was the one who called "Knock 'em flat, Tubby!" the night of the debate, and it was because she had a heart of gold that she overlooked it. Also, she told the debating teachers that she would take part in another debate right after the holidays.—Carrie Belle Boyden in the United Presbyterian.

He stays me falling; lifts me up when down;
Reclaims me wandering; guards from every foe;
Plants on my worthless brow the victor's crown
Which in return before his feet I throw,
Grieved that I cannot better grace his shrine,
Who designs to own me his, as he is mine.

While here, alas! I know but half his love,
But half discern him, and but half adore;
But when I meet him in the realms above,
I hope to love him better, praise him more,
And feel, and tell, amid the choir divine,
How fully I am his and he is mine.

WITHOUT THE SHEDDING OF BLOOD.

There is no easy road to spiritual recovery and achievement. That there is moral chaos and spiritual depression, no intelligent person can doubt. Governments, our own among the others, are making desperate efforts to attain economic recovery, and they are paying the price. Our national government, along with others, is paying out millions, even billions, of treasure for relief and "recovery." Nothing in this life is achieved without paying the price.

The greatest need of our day is spiritual recovery. And the church is the only body or institution on earth that can bring spiritual recovery. There is no other agency or organization on this earth to which we can look to bring this about. We might as well face that fact and deal with it. In solving this problem—this spiritual problem—all other problems of a social, economic and benevolent nature will be solved.

President Roosevelt, speaking on February 23, to an assembly of churchmen—Protestants, Catholics and Jews—said: "The chief trouble in America today and in the world, as for that, is not social or political but religious unbelief and lack of faith. Our religion," said the President, "is confronted with irreligion; our faiths are being challenged." And then these significant words came from our President: "No greater thing could come to our land today than a revival of the spirit of religion—a revival that would sweep through the homes of the nation and stir the hearts of men and women of all faiths to a reassertion of their belief in God and a rededication to His will for themselves and for their world. I doubt if there is any problem—social, political, or economic—that would not melt away before the first of such a spiritual awakening."

But who will pay the price? Who is willing to pay the price? A long time ago it was said, and truly, that our Lord Christ had purchased the church with His own blood (Acts 20:28). Jesus paid the price for the church through the sacrificial offering of Himself. And from that day till this the church has been sustained and carried forward by those who, through sacrificial service and devotion, are willing to pay the price. And the inspired writer of Hebrews truly says: "Without shedding of blood is no remission." We will find spiritual recovery only when we turn to real sacrificial service and, even through shedding of blood, pay the price through sacrifice, dedicate our effort and our means, and our heart's devotion, to that sacred undertaking.

FROM BENGALORE, INDIA.

Dear Friends:

I think my last letter was mailed to Boston from Singapore. Now we are in India and have been here long enough to have become somewhat Indianized, that is, our minds are filled with the things that Indians are doing and thinking about, or at least talking and writing about. One thing that looms large in this part of the world is the British Empire. From the time we landed for a three-days' stay at Singapore we have been under the British flag wherever we have been on land. We really entered the British sphere of influence when we landed at Hong Kong. But the Malay peninsula is part of the Empire and, of course Ceylon and India constitute its great domain.

It has been pleasant and interesting to be in the British Empire. For one thing the problem of language is solved for us. We have not needed an interpreter since we landed at Singapore. In Ceylon and India all educated people speak English and many of them speak it both fluently and with rapidity. In fact, aside from a certain nimbleness of tongue that greatly enriches the sound of the language but also makes it hard to understand, the speed with which they speak is the chief source of difficulty in understanding them. It was interesting to be here when the King died and to see the way India, far removed from England in distance, in race, in culture and religion, hung upon the news and gave a week to the expressions of grief which a people might show upon the death of a beloved sovereign. Of course, much of this was official and the fact that both civil and military authorities took the lead insured the proper response, but even so, it was striking to have the thought of the nation so occupied by an event so remote. We attended the memorial service in Madura where the official service was held in St. George's church followed by the "Last Post and Reveille" sounded by buglers and a squad of soldiers outside the church.

The rich variety and detail of the Indian scene defies description, but we have not yet come to take it so for granted that it does not constantly stimulate our interest and our desire to some way record it and tell others about it. I can understand the appropriateness of a book being entitled "The Christ of the Indian Road." For the people of India are on the road, and not in fast moving automobiles which make the whole scene impersonal and perilous; they are walking usually with some burden (on their heads, of course) and riding in carts drawn by bullocks or sometimes small horses or donkeys. They are bathing or washing their clothes in pools beside the road; they are gathered in groups about a rest house or a shrine. And just off the road they are working in the fields, and drawing water out of wells to be poured in large brass jars and carried away either on the heads or the hips (of women, of course). They are even lying in the dust on the edge of the road asleep in the sun with only a thin cotton cloth pulled over them. There are all degrees of clothing and color. Little children are often fully dressed when they have a string about the waist while men work with only a scanty loin cloth. But that is one extreme; there are some who have the cloth swathed about limbs, body and head until there is hardly a square inch of dusky skin showing. Some are bare from the waist up, some have the upper of the body completely covered but bare legs, and nearly all are barefoot with simple leather sandals quite common. But with the skin, from rich brown to black, they do not look naked. Compared to them we white-skinned people look peeled when we take off our clothes. No problem of modesty is involved. The habit fits the scene and the climate and one soon ceases to notice it. It does reveal, however, a great deal of undernourishment.

As to color, there is again a wide range. Many wear simple white or white with the barest touch of color on borders, but others, especially the women when they are dressed up, go in for bright colors. I had better not try to tell what the colors are but they are bright and varied and somehow always seem to blend well both with each other and with the complexion of the wearers.

The form of greeting is distinctive, too. In Japan we bowed low from the hips with hands placed upon the thigh and slipping up as one stiffly straightened. In China one clasps his hands (in proper Chinese clothing within the long sleeves) and bows low. In India we do not bow except to incline the head but put the hands together in an attitude of prayer when we meet and when we part. This full form of the salute is modified in hasty or casual greeting by putting up only one hand. But in no one of these eastern countries do we shake hands. However, when we forget ourselves and offer a right hand, they all knew what it means and give theirs.

We had four days with the Ceylon mission, staying with the Bicknells at Jaffna College. Across the street is an old church built toward the end of the seventeenth century by the Dutch. When Ceylon was ceded to the British it was stipulated that the churches should be perpetually used for Protestant churches. So when our first missionaries landed at Colombo they were sent up to the north and given the use of these large and well-constructed buildings. Jaffna College itself, has a splendid set of buildings, and, before we left Colombo, we heard that the college had "made" Jaffna and that area. We visited while there schools and hospitals in Manepay, Unuvil, Inuvil and Tellipallai. Dr. Jameson, at Manepay, showed us a new electric device for contact treatment of cancer which had recently arrived from Germany and which cures a surface cancer with a few treatments; and also an electrocardiograph which tells the story of what the heart is doing. The cancer machine is one of two in this part of the world. English friends made it possible to buy it.

Since landing on Indian soil or Ceylonese, for the people of Ceylon do not like to be called Indians, I have been revelling in philosophy and theological discussion not to say argument. It is like hearing a book talk to discuss karma, reincarnation, Brahman-Atman, and the Absolute with these Hindus. I have had, in Jaffna, Madura and here in Bangalore, splendid opportunities to talk with educated Hindus. On the way I had read Pratt's "Pilgrimage of Buddhism," Otto's "India's Doctrine of Grace and Christianity" and our present host, Max Hunter Harrison's "Hindu Monism and Pluralism." I earnestly recommend to you all the reading of all three books. Together with other books and the tutelage I had in Indian religions under George Foot Moore at Harvard, they gave me a point of departure for these discussions. I have found to my surprise, that belief in the doctrine of karma is universal among Hindus of all sects. They affirm that it is the one and only rational explanation of the problem of evil. However most of them belong either to the Vaishnavite or the Sai-vite sect of religion both of which proclaim a doctrine of salvation by grace. The most complicated point in the discussion was usually that at which they tried to explain how karma can work perfectly and yet anyone be saved by a direct act of divine grace. But then Christian theologians have had the same dilemma and have solved it in about the same way. There are different interpretations of the nature of karma, as I have discovered, but no Hindu even considers discarding it. Therefore I have been surprised to find Christians who have been converted from Hinduism affirm that they have had no difficulty in giving it up. One of the rarest minds I have encountered was a professor of philosophy in the American College in Madura. He is a Hindu, 26 years old and closely in touch with both the history of western philosophy and contemporary movements. He admitted that he was not an orthodox Hindu; in fact, I am sure that none of those with whom I have talked are orthodox; if they had been they would not have talked so genially with me. He freely admitted that the greatest need of Indian though is the critical mind. Such an inane and meaningless statement as "all truth is one" is constantly heard and read. I asked him what he meant and he said he, himself, would like to know. It is about as definitive as our American moral platitude, "I believe in doing what is right." (The foregoing paragraph can be skip-pen by all who are not interested.)

Now, to come down to plain matters again, let me tell of one or two exceptionally interesting experiences that we have had. First, our visit to the great temple in Madura. It covers 21 acres and most of that is within the actual temple walls. It is literally covered inside and out with carvings of various figures of the gods and of sacred symbols. Since in Hinduism anything and everything is God there is no limit to the diversity of the temple decoration. We went at night and wandered for an hour or more through the long corridors and in the shrines. There were hundreds of people either worshipping or moving about or sleeping on the floors. One of the commonest of the images is that of Ganesht, the elephant god who is one of the incarnations of Siva. He always has a rat crouching before him for the only way he can travel is to ride on the back of a rat. It isn't as absurd as it seems for the rat is a big one and the elephant god himself is quite small. We see many shrines with Ganesha and other gods along the roadside, and many Hindus with the smear of white ash on their foreheads to show that they have performed "puja" that morning, and the white, red or black marks to indicate the sect to which they belong. Yes, India is very religious. All discussions of social, political or economic reform are inextricably bound up with religion both in theory and because of the commercial system.

Second, our visit to the Kolar gold fields which are in Mysore state about forty miles from Bangalore. Mrs. Harrison has friends who live at the mines, Dr. Ram Prasad and his wife, both Brahmins. He is a D. Sc. from Massachusetts Tech and she is a graduate of Radcliffe. They are charming people. I think we are the first Europeans (Americans are Europeans here) to be entertained in their home and they had to do some borrowing and buying to get the things they knew we were accustomed to and thought we should have to use. He conducted Mrs. White and me down to the 4800 foot level of the biggest mine. That is as far as visitors are allowed to go, but the mine itself is more than 8000 feet deep. The descent was by elevator in a non-stop trip and there was nothing unpleasant about it. It was warm at the bottom but there is a very efficient ventilating system so we were not uncomfortable. We also were shown through the whole process of crushing the quartz and refining the gold. Everything is modern; the electric power used comes from a government plant 90 miles away and the electric equipment comes from the General Electric Company. Dr. Prasad is the government official in charge of the electric plant and he is a most enthusiastic engineer. The mines are owned by English people. The one we visited paid a dividend of 67 $\frac{1}{4}$ % last year which, as the report says, was 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ % less than the year previous. Incidentally one of the major sources of income for the government of Mysore (an Indian state) is the taxes upon these mines and the electric power they use.

I fear I am not telling much about missionary work. For one thing, let me point out that it is missionaries that have the acquaintances which make my interviews and contacts possible. I doubt if any of us can realize how deeply they enter into the life of a country or how much good they do. When we get back I shall try to convey something of the impression I am getting of the immeasurable value and importance of their work.

Very sincerely yours,

H. V. WHITE.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

MRS. W. M. JAY, News Editor.

In the first place I want to apologize to Holy Neck Juniors and Portsmouth Woman's Society for being so long in sending their items to THE SUN and my only explanation is a long drawn-out case of "flu." However, both items are good and we are glad to have them even though they were sent in long ago. I wish I could plead hard enough to get all the societies to see the necessity of sending in a report of their work to be published in THE SUN. This phase of our convention work depends on the societies to cooperate and weak societies find a great help in the workings and plans of their sister societies. Let me urge you one and all to send a write-up of your society's program and plans for the year.

My new address is 707 Gales Ave., Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Holy Neck Junior missionary society has been doing some fine work this year and has 28 lively, earnest youngsters on its roll. Two members have been added and the apportionment sent in each quarter in full. They have an average attendance of around twenty which speaks well for a society of this size. Their December meeting was an exceptional meeting in many ways, having 25 out of their 28 members present. The superintendent, Miss Allie Lee Norfleet had sent cards to each member, reminding them to be prepared to pay up all financial obligations. They had been working the "penny foot rulers" for the first quarter so when the meeting was over the offering amounted to $13.76.

The Assistant Superintendent had charge of the program for the day and a very excellent one was rendered by the children themselves. After the program a Christmas treat was enjoyed and all felt that this was a profitable and good meeting.

Mrs. F. E. Knoeller of the Waverly, Virginia, Christian Church, sends greetings and a report of her society's work thus far. They have been striving harder than ever to make their society one of mutual help and strength to all and a renewed spirit is evident and an increased enthusiasm. In December they had a delightful public program with members from the four churches of the city as guests and Rev. G. B. Harrell, pastor of the Baptist Church as speaker. They have finished the study of the first mission book and are planning the next one soon.

On Sunday, March 15th, they had a group meeting after Sunday school with members from all the various classes having parts on the program. This is a new plan they are trying so as to have missionary education in the Sunday school. A very fine idea for others to try.

On March 24th, a banquet was held in connection with the dedication of their Sunday school plant with Rev. F. C. Lester as master of ceremonies. Sickness and unfavorable weather in the month of February delayed the observance of the World's Day of Prayer so they held their service on March 27th, with an elaborate program and a large crowd.

In the near future a birthday supper will be held at which time a splendid program and a general good time is expected.

This society is proud of their cradle roll babies, fourteen in number and feel that the little, tender plants being nourished and fed will some day be the missionary foundation of Waverly church.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Hebron church, the place of meeting on April 8th for the Halifax group Mission Rally, is in sight of Highway No. 49 and seven miles east of Virgilina. Highway No. 49 connects the Durham-Lynchburg with the Danville and Norfolk highways. It begins sixteen miles north of Roxboro and nine miles south of South Boston, leading east from 501.

C. E. NEWMAN, Pastor

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Vance-Franklin and Warren District Rally will be held at the Henderson Congregational-Christian Church on April 9, 1936, beginning at 10:30 A. M.

An interesting program will be given. I hope that every church in the district will be represented whether they have a missionary society or not. I also hope that all the pastors will attend the Rally and that they will urge the people from their churches to attend. Let us make this the best Rally we have ever had. Don't forget the time and place, Henderson Church, April 9th.

MARGARET ALSTON, District Leader.

PRAYER.

Almighty God, Father Everlasting, who hast set us in the fellowship of Jesus Christ thy Son, be near to us in this time of meditation and communion. May our hearts be open to every holy affection, and ready to receive and cherish every sacred memory and serious impression. Here and now, may every selfish passion and desire be quiet that by the sorrows of repentance our souls may be purified, that by pain we may learn patience, and that by the peace of God which passeth understanding our thoughts may be kept and centered in Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.—Daily Devotions.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ANOTHER BANQUET.

Officials of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches want the young people to hold a banquet, in connection with the Southern Convention meeting, on April 29. The convention will be in session from Tuesday to Friday, but the young people's banquet and an appropriate program for the evening will be on Wednesday at 6 o'clock.

Lanson Granger, president of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, will preside, and a program is now in the making. Further announcement will be made later. The cost will be $.50 per plate. It is sincerely hoped that representatives from every Fellowship in the Carolinas and Virginia will be represented. If you can go, please write to the secretary of your Youth Fellowship so stating in order that the secretary may report to the pastor of the Burlington Church in time for the banquet to be prepared.

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

The Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship met in its Annual Spring Rally at Suffolk Christian Church on last Saturday afternoon and evening. The program, as presented on this page last week, was carried out as planned to the advantage of all who were present.

There were 99 at the fellowship supper in the lovely dining hall of the Suffolk Christian Church. Unfortunately, many of the churches were not represented and therefore cannot receive the direct benefits of the many fine features in the program. Several discussion groups were held on various phases of youth activities in the local church. Findings were brought in from these groups and adopted by the entire fellowship. They seemed to have so much value that they are being given in full on this page this week and later. These are the ideas of the young people who were present at Suffolk last week and may be a guide to church leaders everywhere.

YOUTH SHARING IN THE PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM.

Led by Rev. Joe French.

The discussion began with the question "Is Religion personal or social?" Discussion revealed that with reference to knowledge, prayer, experience, decision, salvation and living, religion is largely personal. On the other hand it was recognized that with reference to worship, work, teaching, influence and great ideals of Christianity religion is primarily social. It was pointed out that only the first two commandments and Jesus' commandment to love the Lord are largely free from social implications. The conclusion was that the social and personal aspects of religion are inseparable; hence, it is evident that evangelism is a primary concern of religion.

Organizing for Evangelism. It would be a fine thing if every church or Sunday school would have an active evangelistic committee which would hold regular meetings, make plans, keep a list of prospects, keep a prayer list and follow a plan of work throughout the year. For evangelistic campaigns this committee may well serve as a nucleus for a larger group whose work would be that of fostering an intensive campaign over a period of weeks preceding the evangelistic services. This larger group should be well organized and its program definitely planned and executed. The pastor would do well to take some time to train this group of workers.

Witnessing for Christ. Those who witness for Christ should remember that they are not representing themselves or any organization but are going in the name of Christ. In witnessing we are not going out to preach, criticize folks, argue, explain the mystery of religion, defend the church, or just ask folks to join the church. We are going very humbly with a direct message, in an honest way, expectantly, prayerfully, persistently, respectfully, sympathetically, to tell what Jesus means to us and what he may mean to them. We go in obedience to the divine command to win people for our Saviour. It is well for us to study the method of Jesus in dealing with people. His contact was always simple and beautiful with a heart full of love, sympathy and understanding.

Personal Equipment. The personal worker must be a honest follower of Christ, a learner of Christ and a growing Christian if he expects to succeed in personal work. His attitude must be a spirit of obedience, he should cultivate Christ's love for the lost, must have faith in God's power to save, be a person of prayer, never lose faith with people, and be used of God in doing the work of His Lord.

Approaching People. It is well for one to remember his own unworthiness while trying to win people to Christ, but at the same time remember the worthy Christ for whom he speaks. The need for Christ must be plain and Christ's claim upon life should be emphasized. Many will be the excuses which the personal worker must face, some of which are true, but all these must be met by pointing out the ideal as it is in Jesus Christ. Above all remember the power of God to save through Jesus Christ.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

Plans are developing for a fine Summer School of Leadership Training at Elon College, June 29th to July 5th. First announcements are going out this week telling something of what will be on the program. It is time for pastors, superintendents, and young people to begin their plans so they can attend the training school at Elon this summer.

Announcement was made sometime ago that the cost would be $10.00. This item has been cut down to $8.50 if registration is sent in by June 15th or $9.00 if no registration is sent in by June time. This is a little bit more than for the past few years but is very small in comparison with many other things. The increase is necessary in order to cover costs of the school.

There will be a wide variety of courses and several changes in the daily schedule together with quite a number of new people on the teaching staff. This school can mean a great deal to our churches, but it can do so only as the churches are represented. Here's hoping that all leaders, including those who have been at Elon previously, will act as agents in securing people to attend our Leadership Training School.

IMMORTALITY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR APRIL 12, 1936

(Easter.)

Scripture: 2 Tim. 1:8-11.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—The Christian hope. I Thess. 4:13-18.

Tues.—Paul's expectation. 2 Cor. 5:1-9.

Wed.—Peter's faith. I Peter 1:3-9.

Thurs.—Paul reasons on immortality. I Cor. 15:22-27.

Fri.—Hear Jesus. John 14:1-3.

Sat.—A vision of heaven. Rev. 22:1-5.

Instrumental Prelude (violin and piano)—"Medley of Easter Music." (To begin five minutes after the time of the service.)

Call to Worship—

"There's a glory in Christ's cross
Beyond the heart of man to know;
The glory of the Christ who died
Because He loved me so.

"There's a gladness in the tomb
Beyond man's tongue to tell
The gladness of the Christ who rose
And conquered death and hell."

—Annie Johnson Flint.

Hymn: "Christ the Lord is Risen Today."

Prayer.

Scripture.

Period of Meditation—(Play softly "I'll Live for Him.")

1. Thank God for a Saviour that death could not hold; a Saviour whose voice the cruel could not still; and whose works the wicked could not destroy.

2. Thank God for the glad message of Easter morning—there is no death for the one who opens the door of his heart to Christ.

3. Ask God to strengthen and guide us that we may bring the Kingdom of the Risen Lord closer to men; and that we shall share in the joyful message of the Easter victory.

(Sing the last verse "I'll Live for Him.")

Special Music: "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

Address—(Use one of the following subjects:—"Why We Believe We Live Forever," or "The Importance of the Resurrection of Christ to the Christian Religion.")

Hymn: "Christ Arose."

Poem—

"The world cannot bury Christ.
The earth is not deep enough for His tomb;
The clouds are not wide enough for His winding-sheet.
He ascends into the heavens,
But the heavens cannot contain Him.
He still lives in the church, which burns unconsumed with His love,
In the truth that reflects His image,
In the hearts which burn as He talks with them by the way."

Communion Service conducted by the Pastor.

Hymn: "Near the Cross."

Benediction.

(Note: Place a cross back of the Communion Table. If possible, use printed programs and candles for lighting. Many societies will have an elaborate pageant for Easter, while others will have a simple service of worship telling the Easter story in a beautiful way. The above program is adaptable to the evening program of the society, but would be more effective if used as a Sunrise Service.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS INVITES ALL PEOPLE.

LESSON I—APRIL 5, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Come; for all things are now ready."—Luke 14:17.

LESSON: Luke 14; Lesson Text Printed Luke 14:15-24.

The conversation at the dinner table had become somewhat awkward, and the situation was somewhat strained, because Jesus had been making some rather disconcerting remarks. To be sure He had not done this in a rude way, but the things that He had said had had a very plain and pertinent application to the folks who were at the dinner table, and some glib, superficial fellow, thinking to turn the conversation to other things, said "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." It was an inane remark, meaning nothing. But it suggested to Jesus a story that sets forth in a dramatic way some interesting phases of the Kingdom of God.

A Gracious Invitation.

A certain man made a great supper, and bade many." The word supper stands for the main meal of the day—the meal when hunger was satisfied, when men rested from the labors of the day, when men had fellowship together. Thus it was symbolic of the good things of the kingdom of God. The kingdom provides a feast of good things. It offers blessings. It satisfies the deepest hunger of the human heart. And God invites His children to come to this feast, to enter by repentance and faith into the kingdom and to share its blessings.

Excuses.

When all things were ready, the host sent his servants out to call the invited guests. This was a very necessary custom—to omit the second summons would be a grievous breach of etiquette, equivalent to cancelling the previous invitation. But with one consent those who had been bidden to the feast made excuse. One of the men felt that his property interests would not allow him to come to the feast. Another felt that in his case his business interests prevented him from coming. Still another frankly declared that his home ties made it undesirable for him to come. They were all good things which kept these men from attending the feast. Therein lay the danger and the tragedy. They had become so preoccupied that they had no time for the highest interests of life. How easy it is to make excuses for not attending services of worship or for assuming one's responsibility in the work of the church. It is well to keep in mind, however that there is a vast difference between excuses and reasons. The excuses we make to men will not be accepted by God.

Yet There is Room.

The kingdom of God is inclusive. There is room for all. Men of all classes and creeds, men of all colors and race, men of all stations, men of all ages—there is a place for all, provided they have the contrite heart and the humble spirit. It must have been rather disconcerting to those proud Pharisees to hear the Master say that the poor and the maimed and the blind and the halt, figuratively the underprivileged and the outcast were going to have a place in the kingdom of God. Let no man think that there is no place for him in that kingdom. God in his infinite mercy and in the bigness of his heart has room for all of us. In the Father's house there are many mansions.

Into the Highways.

Men should go to church. That is a duty as well as a privilege. But the church should also go to men. There are those who cannot go to church, invalids, shut-ins, those in institutions, migrants, the outcasts. The church should carry the gracious invitation into the highways and the hedges where there is human need.

Constrain Them to Come In.

"And constrain them to come in." The word compel is not a good translation. There is no force in the kingdom but the compulsion or constraint of love. The church will never be able to achieve its objectives by force. That is why we must be patient and undiscouraged. Love never faileth. The church must always manifest a genuine interest in and care for men and women if it is to win them. Its most effective means and message is the message of love.

Forfeited Privilege.

"None of these men that were bidden shall taste of my supper." God does not shut the door in any man's face, but men shut the door in their own faces. Failure to respond to privilege forfeits privilege. The worst sin is the sin against the light we have. The Pharisees saw others go into the kingdom of God before them. The Jewish nation saw the gospel go to the Gentiles because they forfeited their high privileges. Let every man take heed lest he sin away the day of grace, lest through his indifference and neglect, he forfeit the privileges of the kingdom of God.

PHILLIPS BROOKS.

what attracts me, and makes life worth the living." His sympathy knew no bounds,—and how simply and sincerely expressed! A mother who had lost her only child said that Phillips Brooks was the one person who seemed to enter into her grief as if he really shared it. No wonder a distinguished contemporary wrote of him after his death this significant line: "Great Bishop, Greater Preacher, Greatest Man."

He scattered good cheer and sunshine wherever he went. "It was a dark, dreary morning," said a newspaper reporter, "until Phillips Brooks walked down Newspaper Row, then all was bright and cheerful."

Many factors entered into the making of this great preacher, but one thing must never be overlooked—his Christian experience. "He was not given to speak of his religious experience," says a writer, "but in the maturity of his year and power there came to him from a young clergyman a letter asking to know the secret of his life. For once at least he lifted the veil of the most secret orisons of his soul and replied as follows: 'I am sure that you will not think I have any secret to tell.' . . . Then he spoke of his deeper knowledge and truer love of Christ, and added: 'I cannot tell you how personal this grows to me. He is here. He knows me and I know Him. It is no figure of speech. It is the realest thing in the world. And every day makes it realer. And one wonders with delight what it will grow to as the years go on. . . Less and less, I think, grows the consciousness of seeking God. Greater and greater grows the certainty that He is seeking us, and giving Himself to us to the complete measure of our present capacity. That is love—not that we loved Him, but that He loved us.'"

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"SINGING FOR SOULS."

"And they delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor."—Matt. 27:2.

We are nearing the end of the journey with Jesus as he rests in the shadow of the cross. He is resting with the disciples at Bethany and during the week he goes into Jerusalem teaching the kingdom, performing miracles, cleansing the temple and preparing his followers for the eventuality of the cross. Are you with Him?

In these days Jesus displays character that is stainless coupled with dignity that is truly God-like. Day in and day out and especially when He stands before Pilate, the governor, he faces law which is supposed to represent truth and justice. Jesus speaks on these themes, undergirding them always with the thought of God's eternal kingdom. How fleeting the days must have seemed to Him in which He was making His final strokes suing for the souls of the world and especially that hardened sinner Pilate.

In all things as was always His way, He pressed straight forward without fear or falter aiming directly at souls, and when he faced Pilate there was not a nervous twitch, not a tremor of the voice. He aimed His darts straight at Him.

Note: When Jesus faced sin or sinners, though they were His own enemies, it is apparent that he was never angry, that he never blamed anyone, that he never desired to punish anyone and that He never reflected his moral superiority, but He always showed a genuine heartache to redeem. His one purpose was to break the hold which sin had on man's will, and redeem man for God. Can we have such a purpose? If we can, we can go on.

Prayer—Many are the years, Father, since Jesus called Pilate to follow Him. But across those years we hear Thy voice. May it win our hearts and lead us on to thy Kingdom.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"HAVING COMPASSION."

"I have compassion on the multitude."—Matt. 15:32.

It has been truly said that although the heart of Jesus embraced the sweep of humanity He never forgot the individuals. So apparent was this that each individual was a problem in himself. The crowd never gets so big but what He hears the cry of the blind beggar. The law never gets so strong but what He defends the sinful woman. The rabble at the Cross did not hush His dying words, "Father, forgive them." It does not require education and culture to understand this. It was love! His last word to Judas was "friend." There is no variableness nor shadow cast by turning in His good will." How different from the ways of man who hates enemies, "the vulgar crowd," "the common herd."

Our duty: 1. At least to think what it would mean if we could inject such a spirit into the selfish life of ourselves and of the world.

2. To believe that God is in Christ and that through Christ He is loving us, and would love us to His life.

3. God is expecting us to be His messengers in this world and carry His compassion to the hearts and lives of men. A. J. Gordon said, "I used to pray, 'Lord, have compassion on a lost world.' At last He said to me, 'I have had compassion; it is now for you to have compassion—I gave my heart, give yours.'"

Prayer—Dear Lord, kind Lord, Thou hast given Thy love for us all. Draw our eyes to Thee that we may see Thee and know Thy love, and inspire us to practice Thy love as we receive it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE RABBLE ON A REST DAY."

"Take ye him and crucify him."—Jno. 19:6.

We are told that Jesus retired to Bethany today and spent it in quiet and rest. It was as if a way-worn traveler halts and rests to gather strength for trials ahead. While he rested the sound of the rumblings of conspiracy against him, though low, was exciting and saddening.

This conspiracy discloses what man is content with, and what he really strives for. If we look well, there is nothing about the rabble of that day different from the rabble today. But how it looks to us in front of the cross! We cannot picture ourselves in the gang who crucified our Lord, and yet when people feel that they do not want Him in their lives, when they look upon His goodness in the world and deny that He has anything to do with it, when they profess His name and yet in their character and conduct deny Him, they are saying, "Take ye Him and crucify Him." No wonder men do not understand the cross. I quote T. R. Glover who said, "when a man avows that he does not care for art or poetry, who would care to show him a poem or a picture? How should a person who does not care for men, understand the cross?" This leads us back to our first premise: Love is the foundation stone, and he who does not love his fellowman has no part in the Kingdom of God.

Prayer—O Lord, guard us from selfishness and self-knowledge while the things of the spirit slip away. Give us Thy spirit, give us an intense search for the right and the holy, give us the un-failing honesty and the courage that dares to be true. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE LAST SUPPER AND THE DARK NIGHT."

"This do in remembrance of me."—Luke 22:19.

It was Thursday night in the upper room where they kept the feast of the passover. It was at this supper Jesus caused His disciples to realize as never before the fate just ahead of Him. It was a dark night, and that night Judas went out into it. His spiritual vision was completely shut off and after he did his dirty work he hanged himself. It was also a dark night to Jesus, for He must submit to his crucifiers and cry "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?"

Not enough emphasis has been placed on His words, "Do this in remembrance of me." Remember what? What He said, what He did, how He lived, how he died, how He endured it all, how He rose again, what life He gives us. Only in such thoughts have "the unbroken body" and "the spilled blood," any meaning. For unless we understand these things we will still blindly ask, "how is it that the bread can be called the body and the wine His blood?"

After all, Christians are Christians really only in knowing Him in the real issues of life. All others leave Him.

Prayer—Our Father, we would ever remember Jesus, our Saviour, as He was revealed to the disciples, and always claim and hail Him as the only gift of saving grace. We would keep His supper in the experience of knowing Him and through Him knowing Thee in all the issues of life. Grant us strength to do this in a manner pleasing to Thee always.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE END AND THE BEGINNING."

"Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit."—Luke 22:46.

After the dark night of the supper and the betrayal, followed by the trial while yet night, so speedily did they "railroad Him" to His death, the dawn breaks and as the sun ascends the eastern skies, hanging upon the cross between two others whom they crucified, silhouetted against the golden horizon, was our Lord breathing heavily in anguish and pain, paling white, as death creeps over His body, He says: "Father, forgive them." "Into Thy hands I commend my spirit."

This was the end. This was the world's darkest hour. The sun, even, hid its face and the temple was rent. But this dark hour was the beginning of humanity's greatest light. That life which He had lived and which He gave, a life which humanity was to enter into and have enter into them, became the "light of the world."

In that light God is not afar off. He is not a stranger to those who bear burdens and walk in dark places. By prayer all of us may come into that light and find His love and eternal life which He gave. At the end of our way stands God with arms outstretched to receive us.

Our great ambition in Christian experience is to be able to say at last, "Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit." Dods, said, "He that followeth, not he that reads about Him, 'shall have the light of life.'"

Prayer—Strong deliverer. Thou didst maintain heaven's goodness despite the hosts of evil that beset Thee, Thou hast redeemed us with Thy blood. Through Thy love and grace there is no condemnation upon those who rest in Thee. We give Thee thanks and pray that we may be loyal and true forever.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"TOO LATE."

"And there came also Nicodemus."—Jno. 19:39.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen

The saddest are these, 'it might have been.'"

Lenski says that Nicodemus loved the Lord, but though his Lord needed a helper "when the drama of the crucifixion fell before his eyes and played itself out, he had proven himself but little more than a spectator on the sidelines. All he can do now is take care of his body." This was a nice gesture, but it makes one wonder, "O Nicodemus if you loved Him too, why did you not join Him before?"

If we love, should we wait to make it known after the object of that love has passed beyond us? Hubert Simpson said, "Any decent man admires Jesus, but, if that is all, it is only a polite nuisance." Christ wants consecration as well as appreciation, and we can hear a clarion call echoing from along the way which we have come to the cross. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Prayer—O Lord Christ, Thou didst give Thyself for us. As the hours of this quiet day run on let the remembrance of Thy sacrifice speak to our wavering and forgetful hearts. Sanctify our souls to the life that Thou didst live for us until we come to the end of our day with a loyalty our love unbroken by sin or turning. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

"THE INEVITABLE CHRIST."

By REV. R. A. WHITTEN, Pastor,
First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va.

"What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called Christ?"—Matt. 27:22.

Opportunity and necessity travel together, and at some time in life are likely to knock at the door of the heart. Both, opportunity and necessity, come in ways unexpected and in disguised forms to the individual of little discernment and pass on unobserved, retiring as unobtrusively as they have come. To the alert and watchful soul they often become stepping stones to success and happiness. The text presents a picture of how a certain Roman Governor who came face to face with a dire necessity and a glorious opportunity at the same time, but he dismissed them both with a wave of the hand as if he were bidding goodbye to an unwelcome guest. It was the big moment in his life, the moment without which his name would not have likely been known to us today, and it was that moment that caused his name to be remembered with contempt for the verdict he gave. For one brief moment Pilate stood face to face with Christ, The Inevitable Christ, but his dull brain and his selfish spirit did not permit him to realize the glorious possibility that it brought and thus he joined the long, long procession of those who likewise meet Christ on the highroad of life and pass him by.

Jesus, to Pilate, was merely a young Jewish teacher, who had provoked the envy of his own people by his persistent enthusiasm for the cause which he espoused and therefore meant nothing more than the usual offenders of the average Jew being brought constantly before this Roman judge.

We might give our verdict of acquittal to his final disposition of the prisoner before the bar were it not for bits of information coming to us from the story by which we can see more clearly his character revealed. Pilate must have been a man of fine quality of soul for it seems at one time that he will respond to the earnest appeal of his noble wife. Good women have always been instruments in God's hand to lead men to worthy deeds and Pilate is almost persuaded to do the thing we would expect him to do. We behold him as the appeal enthalls, but like other opportunities, he casts it aside to assert his own authority and power. Just inside the palace walls, where he questions the Hebrew Teacher who had been the cause of the disturbance resulting in the loss of his morning sleep, for the first time we see the man Pilate at his best. He looks into the innocent eyes of Jesus and asks with the simplicity of a little child, "What is truth?"

He may have meant nothing more than to treat the whole matter with contempt, to show his superior ability to interpret the many brands of truth presented in his day by the philosophers who made wild guesses about its reality, but whatever his motive may have been, I somehow feel that Pilate was concerned then about weightier matters than the petty annoyance presented by the disgruntled Jews. I see him as he stands upon the verge of a great decision. A decision that would determine his destiny and I believe he felt in his heart an earnest desire to know the truth that would bring peace to his soul, but he little dreamed that his calm prisoner was unavoidable and inescapable. He washed his hands in water, but neither he nor anyone can meet Christ and ever escape Him, nor will water applied to the hands remove the stain of the sin of rejection from the heart. If, like the penitent thief, he might have said, "Lord, remember me when Thou comest into thy kingdom," but, alas, he lent a listening ear to the blood-thirsty appeal from the mob outside who were clamoring for his life like some angry wild beast of the jungle in defense of her young, but who were too religious to contaminate themselves in the breaking of a law that had long since ceased to mean anything more to them than a form. It was this tumult, together with the final word from the High Priest, who said, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Caesar's friend" that persuaded Pilate to cast aside the Christ whom he knew not as one from whom he could never escape.

Christ comes to every heart by opportunity and by necessity as he came to Pilate, not to be judged in the same sense, but with the same persuasive appeal to the deeper, finer qualities of the soul and often those to whom he comes endeavor to thrust him aside or try, as Pilate did, to dispose of him in some other way. Pilate sent him to the Jewish Sanhedrin, then to Herod, later scourging him before the infuriated mob, and as a last effort to be rid of him, he offers to release either Christ or a notable prisoner called Barabas, but each time he came back the inevitable Christ who presented the most imperative question ever presented to him as a judge of the Roman Empire. Unmindful of the tragic drama in which he had so recently taken the leading part and which would be written upon the pages of Eternity, Pilate may have returned to his velvet couch to indulge himself in peaceful slumber, but Pilate was never to be the same man again, for he went with a conviction resting heavy upon his heart that he had compromised the truth which he knew and recognized.

The Cross of Jesus is a fact in human life and human experience and the pattern of his life a revelation unmistakable. His claims are simple and easily understood and demand an answer from every heart and soul that comes face to face with him. Whether one believes in the historical Christ, the record of the Gospels, the mystery of the supernatural, does not matter. If he has met the Christ he should discover that he is unavoidable. No man can ignore the Truth as found in Him for He is Truth. He is the Way, the Truth, the Life. To deal with Him honestly and in the light of whatever truth is revealed is the business of every seeking soul. One does not have to wait for a fuller revelation, but begin with the light already given and compare the honest conviction of heart in the light of eternity and the life which is to be and accept him as the only sensible thing to do, but to fail in this does not dismiss Him, but means that one day and at a less opportune time and under less favorable conditions, the soul must face Him who is Inevitable. He can never be avoided for evasion of his demands only increases the responsibility and creates danger for the procrastinating soul. He was no common prisoner before Pilate's bar to be sentenced or set free, according to the whims or wishes of a temperamental Roman judge, but the Christ who offered life for all who would accept Him on the terms of the naked truth, to which his life had borne concrete testimony and which led him to the hill of Calvary where he paid with his life the exacting demands of an evil world. He stands before us today with the same offer of life and that too may lead, and likely will for us if accepted to the crucifixion of self and selfish desires. In dealing with Christ men have only the choice of acceptance or rejection. There is no neutral ground, for as with Pilate, his failure to accept him as the truth, of necessity which followed as a natural consequence, proved to be his choice of the two and only two courses of action open before him. One may, like Pilate, believe that he is postponing the matter of choice and by his failure to accept him as Saviour and Lord, unaware become a victim of eternal tragedy.

Dear Friends:

Another school month has ended. The grade cards have come in. We are always interested in the marks the children make in their school work and in their conduct.

In looking over the grade cards we find the following got on the Honor Roll for the month:

First Grade—William Charles Lasher (has made the honor roll each month.)

Tenth Grade—Madge Thompson.

Eleventh Grade—Jewell Saunders.

Laura Maye Howard in the fifth grade and Billy Parks in the 7th grade got honorable mention.

We notice that we had 34 out of our group who made A on department. That is 68 out of our entire group that made A and B on department.

We have six in the tenth grade and five girls in the grade made A on department—one boy made B.

We have four girls in the Senior class and all of them made A on department.

Out of a group of one hundred children we, of course, have some who make poor grades—both in their studies and on department. But the greater number of our children make good averages and we feel very proud of them. We wish we could inspire those who do not make good grades to do their best and make improvement. It seems to be a hard task to get some boys and girls to realize the importance of making the very best of their time while in school and prepare themselves for their life's work.

It seems so easy for some to drift with the tide and float as the stream flows away; but the boy or girl worth while is the one that is not afraid to face the current up the stream and with all of their energy and ability paddle upstream and win in the fight. We notice that the boys and girls who made good grades wear a smile when the grades come in.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

We Americans are accused of having a disease which has been called "spectatoritis." We go as spectators to see other people have experiences. But there are realms where experience cannot be borrowd. Especially is it a tragedy to live in a world where such spiritual life is possible as Christ represents, and not to know it for ourselves—its strong faiths, its inner powers, its saving virtues—so that we can say, at least about some of it, that it is our very own.—Dr. Harry E. Fosdick.

brings,— Kind greetings, sunshine, song of birds, and flowers,

With a child's pure delight in little things.

THE FAMILY ALTAR. (Continued from page 12.) SUNDAY.

"THE NEW DAY—EASTER."

"Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—I Cor. 15:57.

The resurrection of Jesus attests His life of eternal duration. What He said, what He did, how He lived, and what He was, still is, and goes on and on without end. Life! Life without end, and the gloomy Sabbath is transformed into a joyous Sunday; the Gospel becomes a living word, and the facts become eternal, facts which no amount of unbelief can set aside. Heaven looms before us. It is God's dwelling place, and it is ours too. In this prospect, life renews itself in beauty, truth and love. The rising sun of each day becomes a daily symbol and token of this hope, and, as beautiful as it is, it is not so beautiful as His resurrected face that offers salvation full and free. That His life is before us with such a gleam and glory, and that we shall be partakers of that glory reflects the reason for living it now, for in so doing the hereafter will be all the more glorious to us.

Prayer—O Thou mighty victor over death and sin, enter Thou into our hearts this day and make us Thy children. Hasten the day when Thou shalt rule the world with Thy love and gather all unto Thee whom Thou hast redeemed. Make this day the coronation day of all Thy children and may all mankind bow before Thee. May all they who sing the songs of today find ecstasy of soul. Draw Thou into the Easter songs the praise of all mankind until Thy Kingdom shall come to the world and Thou shalt be Lord of lords, and King of kings, now and forever.—Amen.

To be holy—to be a saint—means to do What I ought to do When I ought to do it As I ought to do it Why I ought to do it.

—From Hard-Headed Holiness.

Pilate might have afterwards debated in his mind the reason for the calm spirit of his troublesome prisoner whom, having tortured unmercifully, he had sent to Golgotha's hill to die a disgraceful death upon a Roman Cross. He may have wept tears of penitence for his dead, if not, he himself, when he had washed his hands and given orders for the execution of Christ, went out into a deeper death of moral darkness and despair. He might have engaged himself with the affairs of his governorship that day, but he had forever closed the door of his own opportunity and by the necessity of his chosen course, brought condemnation upon his own head and heart.

Pilate had much to encourage him to do the right thing, the noble thing, the wise thing, but instead of yielding he refused the advice of friends and the pleading of his own soul and thus with deliberate evil design paints his own portrait for eternity. You and I have the same opportunity and dare face to face with the same necessity. We have the tragedy of Pilate to prevent us from choosing a like fate with him. We have the risen Lord who is both Lord and Christ and who lives to bless every seeking soul. When the Book of Ages is opened and the Book of Life is read, may your name be recorded as a shining example of those who wisely recognize both opportunity and necessity, by the acceptance of the Inevitable Christ, who is ever present and patiently waits the decision which will bless forever and ever.

Portsmouth, Va.

To have, each day, the thing I wish, Lord, that seems best to me; But not to have the thing I wish, Lord, that seems best to Thee. Most truly, then, Thy will is done, When mine, O Lord, is crossed; 'Tis good to see my plans o'erthrown, My ways in Thine all lost.

—H. Bonar.

MARRIAGES

JONES—SWANNER.

A marriage of unusual interest and beauty was solemnized on Saturday afternoon, March 21st, at 3 o'clock at the parsonage of the Holland Christian Church, with the writer officiating, when Miss Gladys Elmo Swanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Swanner, of Nansmond Co., became the bride of William Mason Jones, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mason Jones, Sr., of this county. A few relatives and close friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones plan to make their home in Suffolk, Va. We wish them much happiness and congratulate them in this new venture.

OBITUARIES

CARROLL.

Mrs W. H. Carroll was one of the organizers and a charter member of the Women's Missionary Society of the Burlington First Christian Church. In 1912 she was appointed one of a committee by the Southern Christian Convention to organize missionary societies within its limits and it was shortly after this appointment that the society in Burlington came into being.

Our missionary society feels a debt of gratitude for these years of service and wishes these lines to be made a part of its permanent record, as a memorial to her. The society also wishes her family of loved ones informed of this tribute, and that a copy appear on the pages of The Christian Sun.

She was endowed with many gifts—a keen mind, a gracious personality, an ability to express herself well, spiritual discernment, and an eagerness for the truth. All of these—her self—she spent in serving Christ and her fellow men.

Mrs. Carroll died on November 5, 1935. Her eager spirit has entered upon its Eternal Quest, and with us her memory will live on, a shining beacon.

"If Easter Be Not True!"

By HENRY H. BARSTOW.

IF EASTER be not true,
Then all the lilies now must lie;
The Flanders poppies fade and die;
The spring must lose her fairest bloom
For Christ were still within the tomb—
If Easter be not true.

If Easter be not true,
Then faith must mount on broken wing;
Then hope no more immortal spring;
Then hope must lose her mighty urge;
Life prove a phantom, death a dirge—
If Easter be not true.

If Easter be not true,
'Twere foolishness the cross to bear;
He died in vain who suffered there;
What matter though we laugh or cry,
Be good or evil, live or die,
If Easter be not true?

If Easter be not true—
But it is true, and Christ is risen!
And mortal spirit from its prison
Of sin and death with Him may rise!
Worth while the struggle, sure the prize,
Since Easter, aye, is true!

—From "Poems for Special Days and Occasions," Clark.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. J. L. Neese, Reidsville, N. C., is conducting evangelistic meetings, having begun April 5th, and will continue several days.

That all may express their joy, gladness, and gratitude on Easter, our pastors and churches are giving a real opportunity by taking the missionary offering.

Rev. R. Lee House, pastor of our Newport News, Va., Church, is assisting Rev. J. E. McCauley in the pre-Easter services at the Richmond Church.

A real ingathering of members into the church on Easter Sunday and a real contribution of our means dedicated to the glory and service of our Lord—this, indeed, will be our Easter joy and victory.

Rev. W. T. Scott is remaining in Winston to assist Dr. and Mrs. Jay in getting acquainted with our congregation and people, but on April 10th, Mr. Scott goes to his work in Georgia and Florida with headquarters at 117 W. Forsyth St., Jacksonville, Fla.

Amid our rejoicing on the glorious Easter Day, we should increase our strength and add to our joy by making a contribution of our substance to Missions. "The joy of the Lord is your strength." If we would really know this joy, we must share it with others.

Those pastors and churches will be the stronger and the happier, the better prepared for the remaining weeks and months of the year, who on Easter Sunday consecrate their gifts on the altar of God to be used for His service in sharing His love with some not as favored as we ourselves are.

Dr. James H. Lightbourne, pastor of our First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., will conduct a series of Evangelistic services in the Suffolk Christian Church, Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., pastor, beginning April 15th and closing April 24th. May God richly reward the efforts of these brethren and the workers in the Suffolk Church.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor of our Berea and Bethlehem congregations, of Alamance County, North Carolina, reports large congregations and continued progress in his work in spite of the unfavorable weather. His churches are united with the five churches of his district in union pre-Easter meetings, thus helping to deepen the feeling of fellowship among the several denominations represented through these churches.
