The Missionary Rallies of Guilford district at Hines Chapel, Mrs. John R. Foster, Supt., and the Alamance district at Burlington, Mrs. C. C. Fonville, Supt., were largely attended, were gloriously entertained by the local societies, and the two days were filled with information and inspiration. These Rallies were held on March 31st and April 1st, respectively. THE SUN's editor regretted that he could not also attend the ones at Pleasant Ridge and Sanford, April 2nd and 3rd. Miss Olive Green, returned missionary from Turkey, reports a warm welcome at each and also a large congregation and cordial greeting at Big Oak, near Eagle Springs, N. C., Saturday evening, with good congregations and a delightful day at Monticello, 11:00 A. M., Sunday, the 5th, and at Palm St., Greensboro, 7:30 P. M. Miss Green has spent, and is being spent, unsparingly and cheerfully in her effort to live and reveal the true missionary spirit—that of sharing with others the light, and love of her Lord.

Rev. J. S. Johnson, cur pastor at Niagara, N. C., says: "The work seems to be fairly encouraging I think. Church interest in the community has been and still is at the lower end of the thermometer. But I estimate that the feebler the spiritual vitality, the stronger the appeal to the warmth of the Christian motive. I have been doing some work with the young people and generally they seem willing and responsive. True, their lack of training and their comprehension of Christian implications, is pathetic, but they are a fine lot nevertheless. So we have a job. Our Congregational-Christian Church is the only one in this community of something like a population of one hundred, so we feel a sense of relevancy mingled with our sense of insufficiency."

"WE ARE HIS WITNESSES."

Before the proud Sanhedrin they Led John and Peter. "And Why now dare you disobey
Our law and strict command?"

"Whether it be right," they cry,
"To heed you or God, judge ye;
To a risen Christ we testify,
His witnesses are we!"

Then marveled much each haughty Jew
At these unlearned men,
And fast the sure conviction grew—
With Jesus they had been.

Ah, then, like those apostles bold,
Dear Master, may I be,
In words of fire and deeds of gold,
A witness true for Thee!

We greatly sympathize with Greensboro and especially many of our own members in that stricken city, who suffered so much from the tornado, Thursday evening, April 2nd. So far 13 deaths and 144 injured have been reported, with an estimated loss in property of not less than $1,250,000. The weather-men say this was the first calamity of this kind—tornado or cyclone—to visit this section so far as history and records reveal. No community and no people can tell when calamity will fall and distress and suffering come. In the wisdom and province of God, exercised through what we often designate as "the laws of nature," upheavals and catastrophe may come at any time. "Watch and pray ye, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of our Reidsville congregation, reports 427 present in Sunday school April 29th and overflow classes in the present rooms of his church. His church is going forward as rapidly as possible in greatly enlarging both the main auditorium and the Sunday school rooms. They are proceeding on the basis of paying as they go, and just now the work is at a standstill from the lack of funds. The additions being made will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000, and they, at present, have gone half way in their building program. If there are friends of this congregation among SUN readers who can make a donation, it will inspire this congregation and will certainly be a wise and permanent investment not only in the church at Reidsville but in the kingdom of righteousness.

Sharing our personal gifts for the food and shelter of the body is good and Christ-like, but it is not enough. Our Lord Himself said: "The poor ye have always with you, but me ye have not always." Thus, with the presence of His blessed spirit as we celebrate His glorious resurrection, how fitting it is we bring a love-offering to Him that His joy may be made full and that our joy in Him may be made complete. Our offering on Easter, let us bear in mind, is not for our praise or glory, but for the praise and glory of our Lord, whose resurrection we wish could be proclaimed throughout the whole wide world. Through our Mission offering and effort, we are seeking to bring all men and women everywhere into the joy and gladness of Easter and of all the privileges and victories that the resurrection of our Lord has to offer.

Heartiest congratulations are due Rev. M. T. Sorrell and his Danville congregation for their achievement in rebuilding, and in fact very greatly improving, their entire church plant and in paying for the same as they built, so soon after the fire that destroyed and damaged so much of their building several weeks ago. And look once more and add further felicitations! While this has been going on, Brother Sorrell seems to have been busy gathering another congregation and laying the foundation of another church some miles from Danville. We wish him well in organizing his Sunday school and the prospective congregation. One can but wonder why more pastors do not see opportunities beyond their immediate vicinity of opening up other work and embracing opportunities within their reach for planting other Sunday schools and congregations.

The address of Dr. W. M. Jay is 707 Gales Ave., Winston-Salem, N. C. The United Church Messenger of March 29th says: "Palm Sunday Services, with a big welcome for Dr. William M. Jay, the new Pastor. Let's have a good crowd for Sunday school, and for morning and evening worship services. Dr. Jay will preach at the morning and evening services. Come, meet, and greet him. Palm Crosses will be furnished everyone present for the services next Sunday. This symbol was used last year and it made Palm Sunday a crowning experience for many. Come and share the day with us in worship. We welcome you. Holy Week Service: Thursday night, April 9th, at 7:30 o'clock, Candle Lighting Service, Reception of Members, and The Lord's Supper. Those who would be interested in becoming members of the Church are invited to discuss it with Mr. Scott or Dr. Jay."

Our Burlington Church, Rev. Jas. H. Lightbourne, D. D., pastor, always hospitable and ready to serve, is making preparation for the Southern Convention which convenes in regular biennial session April 28th—May 1st, inclusive. The Woman's Convention, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, President, is to convene at 10:00 A. M., Tuesday, the 28th, and plans to finish its sessions that day and, if possible by the time the General Convention is to assemble in the afternoon. A large delegation is anticipated. If THE SUN's editor could, without being officious, whisper a word to the wise, it would be to the effect that those of us who live at a convenient distance will use our automobiles rather than crowd the hospitality of our generous hosts, who will no doubt be sufficiently supplied with guests from a distance, who cannot easily come and go for the sessions without great inconvenience and great travel.

RENEWAL OF LIFE IN THE CHURCHES.

More than 20,000 boys and girls will be received into the membership of Congregational and Christian churches this Easter-tide. These young people, together with the older people who will be received by letter from other churches or upon confession of faith, will help to continue in the life of the churches the faith and joy expressed in commemoration of the resurrection. Easter is a special time not only for gladness and rejoicing but also for the renewal of the struggle of the individual believer and of the Church.

In the fourth and concluding Lenten Letter sent this year by the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life to pastors, the "building of new members into the fabric of church life," is emphasized as a task to which particular attention should be given after Easter. The viewpoint is taken that evangelism and education are twin aspects of the process of "growing in grace." To help churches in their "after-Easter program of education and conservation" there is enclosed with the Lenten Letter an article on "Evangelism Through Education" by Dr. Herbert W. Gates of Boston, Mass., general secretary of the Education Society.

BASIC PRINCIPLES OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

"The aim of religious education," Dr. Gates states, "is to help those who engage therein to enter into religious experience. Religious experience is the experience of knowing God and having fellowship with Him. Religious education seeks to help a person in ever-increasing measure to know God and to live and act in all the varied relationships and contacts of life as one who honestly wants to see God's purpose fulfilled and who tries to do his best to help bring this to pass. The religiously educated person will do his utmost to help in building the Kingdom of God on earth. A consciousness of God and fellowship with Him are therefore central aims in the curriculum of religious education."

Study, worship and action are named as three elements which should be united or "blended" in the curriculum.

"The younger the pupil, the less marked will be the dividing line between the different elements. The central purpose of religious education is to help the growing person to live intelligently, happily and usefully in a social order that consciously includes God, which is equivalent to the other term, the Kingdom of God.

"Every person lives his life and finds himself in various social groupings and institutions. These are his immediate contact with the larger world and his first concern. Through Christian living in the home, at school, in the church, and in other social institutions, the building of the Kingdom moves forward.

"This fact has immediate and significant bearing upon the building of a curriculum and upon its administration. The Church is second to none unless it be the home, among these various social institutions. Any program of religious education that is to be at all effective must provide for the pupil a growing experience of interest, participation and fellowship in the life and work of the church. At no point has the administration of the average church and Sunday school failed more significantly. Thousands of children attend Sunday school for years without acquiring any sense of relationship to the church itself and yet it is the church about which more than any other institution, religious loyalties develop.

"The Church must take its educational responsibilities far more seriously. It is not enough to recognize the Church school by giving it that name, provide for it in the general budget and exercise a certain supervisory control over its work. There must be developed a unified program by means of which the pupil from childhood up may acquire an ever-widening and deepening experience of participation in the life and work of the church.

"The guiding principle in the building of a curriculum of religious education is to formulate as clearly as possible the main objective and to keep this constantly in view; then, to determine which this means in the life and experience of the pupil at each successive stage of growth; and, finally, to select those materials and activities that will help him most surely to realize this aim."

A FLOOD PRECEDES COUNCIL MEETING.

The worst flood in the history of the Connecticut valley came last month and scores of churches whose interests were being centered upon the coming of the General Council meeting to their vicinity in June suddenly found themselves in the midst of a great regional disaster. Roaring down from the streams rising in the White Mountains of New Hampshire and the Green Mountains of Vermont, the waters of the Connecticut reached unprecedented heights at Holyoke, overflowed the business district of Springfield and then rushed onward to overspread streets and flood stores at Hartford.

Happily, the important dams held. Sixty years ago a dam near Holyoke gave way, causing a large loss of life.

There have been no reports of great damage to Congregational church buildings but families have been driven from their homes and business losses have been tremendous. The Roman Catholic church building in South Hadley Falls was ruined and its congregation was offered the use of both the Congregational and Methodist Episcopal buildings. Grace Congregational church in Holyoke, for two Sundays, besides having its own services, also housed Lutheran services. Following the flood, Dr. Robinson of Grace Church had two funerals, one of a man who had thrown himself into the swirling waters and another of a man who dropped dead with grief as his home was flooded.

The flood came just as the students of Mt Holyoke College at South Hadley Center were expect-

THE ELON DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

Throughout the five conferences of the Southern Convention, an organization of fine-spirited men and women, ministers and laymen, is rapidly taking shape for the Elon College Development Program, undertaken to solve the remaining financial difficulties of our college, a task that has already been two-thirds completed without cost to the church constituency.

So enthusiastic has been the cooperation among all persons affiliated with the church that by the end of the first week's effort in the field, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, convention president and general chairman of the $250,000 campaign, was able to announce that the central framework for the program had been set up in two of the conferences and a substantial part of the campaign structure erected in the other three.

In the North Carolina and Virginia Conference W. H. Elder, Durham business man who is now superintendent of the Sunday school of the Durham church and active in many other religious affairs, has accepted the chairmanship. His associates are Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor of the Berea-Bethlehem charge and vice-president of the conference, and Miss Margaret Rowland, of Greensboro, a teacher in the White Oak schools and a member of the Elon Alumni Association executive committee.

The chairman for the Virginia Valley Central Conference is Roy Hosaflook, of Linville, Va., who conducts a hardware business at Harrisonburg and is a leader in Linville church activities. Associate chairman for the conference are Roy A. Larrick, of Winchester, a leader in young people's work in the conference and state, and Miss Thelma Morris of Dyke, a school teacher and alumna of Elon.

In addition to the conference committees, organizations for groups of churches and for individual churches are being formed, so that the call to serve in helping to build our college into a still more valuable and more useful institution will be extended to hundreds of men and women of the constituency.

All the leaders and workers in this great movement will meet for an informative and inspirational rally at the college on Wednesday, April 29th, during the week the biennial session of the Southern Convention is being held in the Burlington Church.

Chairman Harrell expressed deep gratification at the response shown by pastors and laymen throughout the convention area in enlisting for the task of carrying the campaign to success.

"The people of the Southern Convention," he said, "are showing that they realize what it will mean to have a debt-free, thriving college to serve our constituency and that they are willing to work hard to make that objective a reality.

"The thing that encourages us most in this task is the knowledge of what has already been done to end Elon's financial troubles. A few years ago the plight of the college seemed hopeless under the crushing burden of a debt of more than $700,000. Through almost single-handed efforts on the part of the present administration, this staggering debt has been reduced to the comparatively small figure of $160,700. Since so much has already been done without the help of the church, we should certainly be willing to do our utmost to raise the $250,000 which is being sought in the present appeal to pay off the remainder of the obligations and provide for other necessary expenditures at the college."

All believers receive of Christ's fullness; the greatest saints cannot live without Him; the weakest saint may live by Him.—Rev. Henry.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EASTER BEGINS AND CONTINUES.

(Mark 16:9-20.)

Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils,

And she wept and told them that had been with Him, as they mourned and wept,

And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

And they went out and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God.

And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following.      Amen.

EASTER.

Our English word, "Easter" (from the Anglo-Saxon, "Eastre," a Teutonic goddess to whom sacrifice was offered in April) does not properly occur in Scripture except where the authorized version has it once (Acts 12:4), in which the word signifies "passover," and is so translated in the revised version. However, the event of Easter, which we celebrate, is written all over our New Testament as the grand climax, and supreme event, of that Book, and of Christian experience. This event is none other than the resurrection of our Lord and, as Paul says: "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins," and "if in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." This is indeed the supreme event of this superlative life.

In the act of resurrection, Christ crowned and sealed, with absolute security, all that He had done and promised while in the flesh. In His resurrection He reached the climax, as well as the consummation, both of His life, of His crucifixion, and His death. The simple fact is, we celebrate the resurrection of every Sunday when we worship and honor the Name of our Lord; and we have come to celebrate the annual event that we may the more and the better emphasize all that we have sought and done through Him during the whole year. On the Annual Easter Day we rejoice in the gladness that thrilled the hearts of the early disciples as they learned, with unmistakable and visible evidence, that their Lord and our Lord had not only conquered Pontius Pilate and the worst that sin could do, but He had conquered death also and had laid aside the graveclothes, and had come into such newness of life, such vigor and power of life, that all the powers of darkness could not lay hold on Him any more.

There is nothing else in history like this. Some had been raised from the dead by the intervening prayers or help of others, but none had ever had in themselves the power to come forth from the grave clothed with immortality—invested with a power that neither sin nor death could hurt or hinder. And so we rejoice at this Easter time because the light shines through the darkness, and while the darkness comprehended it not, or was not overcome by it, it is being driven away, even the darkness of death and the dread consequences of sin, by the ever-increasing light that beams from the face of our risen Lord. Here, truly, is the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world, and they that believe in that Light and seek by the grace of God to walk in that Light, have the sweet assurance that they shall live with Him and reign with Him forever.

Thus, at Easter time, we consecrate ourselves anew to that life which asserted its power on the morning and in the event of the resurrection, and, in doing so, we have the assurance from Him that "I am the resurrection and the life. Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Thus eternal life is a continuous event—begun here on earth in Him and, as such, to be uninterrupted or interfered with even by death itself. If death is the last and the greatest enemy of man, then the risen Christ is the highest and greatest hope of man, "for we are saved by hope." (Rom. 8:24.) And thus with the Apostle Peter our souls may, on this Easter Day, join with assurance in the acclaim:

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away."      J. O. A.

WILL THIS WIN?

There has recently appeared on the editorial pages of THE SUN "the testimony" of a man who has been instrumental in investing a considerable sum of money ($300,000 to be specific) in the work of personal evangelism, with the results reported to him of some 55,000 converts won to Christ in this way. It is a thrilling experience which need not be re-told here, but a further line seems highly in order. The friend who graciously gave this "personal testimony" and who has enjoyed this experience has read what THE SUN'S editor published, and in that publicity he has only one concern. Would SUN readers like to know further of what the one concern of our friend is? We will take this line, entirely personal to the editor, from a letter of April 2nd. He says:

"The whole matter to me is this: Will this publicity win souls to Christ? I am doubtful. There is so much written. So much said. All of which reads and sounds good and is good, but is non-creative of action. For instance, in your editorial, you say, 'What think ye?' I would have said, 'What will ye do about it?' I surmise that the first reaction to nine out of ten readers to the 'Testimony' will be: 'Oh, that is too great for me. It is good for others, but I can't do that,' and so they drop it out of their thought. In other words, it doesn't hit them. They see the cumulative result and not the twenty-five years of service behind it. Evangelism is something different, and every Christian reader can do this if he is willing. By the grace of God, any and every Christian 'with an experience of Christ' can, under the guidance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit, take up this service of 'Personal witnessing for Christ by word to individuals.' You will recall, Atkinson, that in our conversations I gave you the information about the results of the twenty-five years of Evangelism in foreign fields solely as a background for my deep conviction that the one vital service needful (in addition to all other church work now carried on) is 'Personal witnessing for Christ by word to individuals' on the part of ministers and members. I further added in our conversations, that insofar as you are able to get your churches to work along this line, will your publicity of this plan of evangelism be successful. To seek and to save the lost, Christ came into this world, and if we follow Him, as we are called to do, I believe a great spiritual awakening will be the result among all who participate, and great numbers will be added to the kingdom and to the church. Thus you see that it is not publicity I am concerned in, but results in the personal witnessing by word of mouth to individuals about their own experience in accepting Jesus Christ as their Saviour."

Thus, my friend of eighty good years, cares nothing about his own name or fame going abroad, but how very, very much he does care to find and encourage in the church of our day those who are willing to be personal evangelists, personal witnesses by word of mouth, not to groups or congregations only, but to individuals, one by one, here, there and everywhere. In this act this friend believes the church will find and enjoy a spiritual awakening. We need the spiritual awakening. Are we willing, have we individually the Christian courage to pay the price? In the words of our friend, What are we going to do about it?

J. O. A.

It cost more to redeem than to create us. In the creation there was but "speaking a word," in redeeming us there was "shedding of blood."

—Rev. Thomas Watson.

GOD NEEDS US.

By MRS. C. C. FONVILLE.

(Superintendent's Message to the Alamance District Missionary Rally at Burlington, April 1st, and published by vote of that body.)

We are all conscious of our need of God, for without Him we would be helpless, but with Him we can do what seems the impossible. Today God needs us very much to help Him.

In any business it is necessary that an inventory be taken of the work done and what can be done in the future. The salesman must know the goods which he sells, believe in them and also his territory. So it is with a Christian; he must know, believe and be informed of his field. When Jesus was twelve years of age and found in the temple attending to His Father's business He knew the situation and the need of the time.

In this, our land of the United States which God has made so beautiful, as we travel from Maine to California, we marvel at the lovely scenery and abundant resources. We are reminded of how wonderful God is. But with all its loveliness man has mixed sin such as selfishness, greed, oppression of the poor, injustice, hatred, until sometimes it seems a dreary world to the best of us. There was a time we thought we were a Christian nation and how proud we were; but today our hearts are sad because we know that it is only in name. The majority of our people do not belong to any church. Put the Jews, Catholics and Protestants together and you have only fifty millions. Seventy millions of our people do not belong to any church. Then we might ask the question how many of those church members are true followers of Christ? It has been said by a man who lives very close to God that he thought a large percentage are not true followers of Christ. God must be very much grieved and lonely.

To the northeast of us across the Atlantic ocean among the countries of Europe we hear they have some of our problems and those who have traveled those countries tell us that the devil has gotten a little further ahead than in our country. Another world war is being predicted, if not within the next few months it will be within the near future. Across the Pacific to the west of us there are found some of our problems again but maybe a little bit worse. The nations, to find some means of solving their problems, are trying Communism, Socialism, Nazism, Fascism, dictatorships, monarchies, and autocracies. Many of these nations apparently have left God out of the picture and are relying only upon material force to solve their perplexing problems. The path of civilization is strewn by shattered empires who persecuted Christians, who have driven out the Jews only to be faced by the stark reality that no nation can survive which forgets God.

Probably some think this is a very dark picture and with so much to be done the task seems impossible; but it is not so with the Christian. We have faith that these forces of evil can be conquered. Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth, and the light." A real Christian looks for a hard job. Study the characters in the Bible and those that contributed to Christianity endured hardships—Jesus endured the Cross. He was rich but He became poor that we might be rich. Columbus had no easy job when he discovered America and all through the ages the men and women who have contributed the most to the world endured most suffering. The world today needs more men like Kagawa. If the world is to be saved for Jesus, the Christian has no time to waste. Our Father is begging everyone of us to do a little work for Him. If we could transform all the energy that is going into preparation for war into Christian activity we would be making a great contribution to His work. There is a passage taken from Walt Whitman's poems which should express our desire for America:

"This moment, yearning and thoughtful, sitting alone,

It seems to me I can look over and behold them in Germany,

Italy, France, Spain—or far, far away talking other dialects:

And it seems to me if I could hear those men I should become attached to them

As I do to men in our lands,

Oh, I know we should be brethren and lovers

I know I should be happy with them."

I am convinced that God's message to us is that we let His Light shine through us. Some may have more riches, more education, more leadership, more personality, but whatever we have, no matter how small, if it is dedicated to His work, the scale of Justice will balance some day and the weight of our work in Him and for Him will count.

A BALLAD OF EASTER.

By THEODOSIA GARRISON.

I heard two soldiers talking
As they came down the hill—
The somber hill of Calvary,
Bleak and black and still.
And one said, "The night is late;
These thieves take long to die."
And one said, "I am sore afraid,
And yet I know not why."

I heard two women weeping
As down the hill they came,
And one was like a broken rose,
One was like a flame.
And one said, "Now men shall rue
This deed their hands have done."
And one said only thru her tears:
"My Son! My son! My son!"

I heard two angels singing
Ere yet the dawn was bright,
And they were clad in shining robes,
Robes and crowns of light.
And one sang, "Death is vanquished,"
And one in golden voice Sang, "Love hath conquered, conquered all;
O heaven and earth rejoice!"

THE SPIRIT THAT LIVES.

At this season of the year we think of life, not death. Hope and courage exhilarate us. With head held high, with elastic step, we press with new vigor toward the mark of our high calling in Christ.

It is Easter. We forget the dark and dismal past. We forget decreasing receipts, drastic cuts. We forget withdrawals of noble missionaries.

We do not dwell on the lethargy of the Church or the paganism of our times. Instead, we revel in the great out-of-doors—in God's infinite love, His omnipotent grace and resurrecting power. Christ is not dead; He lives and reigns!

And Missions are not dead. How can they be, so long as we have the Grenfells and the Schweitzers to give themselves to the underprivileged in America and Africa?

How can they be dead so long as we have missionaries who rather than leave their fields are ready to try to support themselves? Or so long as we have young people who, like the Hartford Fellowship, are truly eager to go and live in the most needy places on earth? Or so long as many can be found here at home ready to deny themselves that Christ may reign in our own land and other lands?

Missions cannot be dead when the Christian leaders of India send an evangelistic mission to England; when men like Sun and Koo of China and Bhaskarao Hivale of India go up and down America with their life-giving message to our own people; when the great Japanese missionary to America, Toyohiko Kagawa, comes and spends months with us in an effort to share his experiences in human relations, but most of all his experience of God—a missionary willing to die for us daily—the very incarnation of the living Spirit of Missions.

Moreover, Missions cannot be dead when a man like Kagawa pleads for more missionaries for Japan. As recently was the case when asked if missionaries were needed in his country, he replied with vehemence:

"What, do you ask me that, with millions of people in my country who have never even heard of Christ and know nothing about living? How can you ask such a question? I say to you: many missionaries, all kinds of missionaries, more and more missionaries."

Missions are dead only as we are dead; no more, no less. Missions are alive as the risen Christ is alive today and at work in the heart and life of humanity.

So at this season we feel new life in our great mission of world redemption. A new hope is instilled into us. And an assurance that the Spirit of Missions will go marching on.—Editorial in Missionary Herald.

EASTERN VIRGINIA EVANGELISM.

Several churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference are planning to receive new members into their fellowship on Easter Sunday. Much of the work for this reception of members will be done by pastor and individuals seeing persons who should unite with the church in their homes, or about their places of business. Individual and personal efforts are very effective. Those doing such work get a lasting joy out of it, and those approached appreciate greatly the interest shown them. Many of the followers of Jesus were won by him wherever he found them in their homes, at their work, and about their business. One's religion is not something apart, but is rather a part of everything one is and does. The call to Christ is as near as breathing and as constant as conscience.

Dr. I. W. Johnson will hold a meeting in his Berea (Nansemond) Church the week before Easter. He has made a survey of his church community and found just who are not connected with any church in the community, and is setting for his people the task of going out after them. It is after the manner of putting business in to the church. It counts. Dr. Johnson made this same sort of survey of his Oakland Church community last summer prior to his Evangelistic meeting there and he was amply rewarded for his work. Members of the congregation helped him with the details of carrying out the canvas.

Rev. Carl R. Key, Dr. N. G. Newman, and Rev. R. E. Corbitt (Holland Baptist Church) will make a complete survey of Holland, Holy Neck and community soon getting ready for the Evangelistic meeting this summer. All other departments of a church show improvement in ratio with a church's effort to win others to Christ. It is Christian faith expressed in personal efforts at home, and in personal gifts abroad. A church dares not overlook its soul-winning program either at home or on the mission fields.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

During the Easter Period the Christian people of the world are turning to a fresh study of the last week of our Lord's ministry. It is a great opportunity to meditate upon various phases of those great spiritual experiences. The events and experiences of those days are rich in suggestion and stimulating to open minds. One who reads the Gospels and Pauline Epistles concerning the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ will be rewarded by an increasing faith in the Son of God and a more intimate knowledge of the Way of Life.

One does not have to be blindfolded to accept the teachings of Jesus Christ. Anyone may approach Jesus with open eyes and alert mind. Jesus said: "I am the Light of the world." And this declaration suggests that He is surrounded by a light that expels the surrounding darkness. As one comes nearer to Christ and the Cross, the Light reveals Him as Lord and Saviour. Certain indisputable facts have been established by the Word of God. Jesus lived. He preached the words of eternal life. Men were transformed by His ministry. He died upon the cross. He arose from the dead. He liveth.

Job said: "I know that my Redeemer liveth." Paul said: "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." (2 Tim. 1:12.) Open the Bible Concordance and note the words: "believe," "faith," "hope," and "know." There is so much emphasis laid upon "faith" in our teaching and preaching, one might expect to find that word more frequently than the word "know." But the word "know," in some form, occurs in the Bible nearly four times more than the word "faith." Of course the word "know" should be defined and its use should be intelligently understood. It is a great word. It is a neglected word. A great experience is open to all who will enter the door of faith and rest in the knowledge of Jesus Christ as personal Saviour.

In the light of Easter glory it is the privilege of the followers of Jesus to go on a crusade with the Master. One has the opportunity of accepting a spiritual challenge on the field of conquest. One may seek to say with Paul, "that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death." (Phil. 3:10.) Paul spent much time in prison, bound with chains about his wrists. But his spirit was not chained by any narrow interpretation of his religious experience. He was always striving to attain unto a greater knowledge of Jesus Christ.

Sometime ago I saw a cow tied in a pasture. One end of a chain about thirty feet long was fastened to her head, and the other end was fastened to a stake which was driven in the ground. In a circle of which the chain was a radius, she had eaten the grass within her reach. Beyond this circle the grass was green and the clover was inviting. But she could not reach it. She was waiting to be "staked out" in another place. Many people live in little circles. They are tied to a stake. They cannot move out into the green pastures without the assistance of others. Sometimes they do not care to move. They do not wish to be disturbed. They know too little about the pastures—the spiritual food—of the kingdom of God. They do not know the Good Shepherd. He does not tie them to a stake. He leads them into green pastures. Under His guidance they make wider their horizon as they follow in His steps. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." You may know Jesus by living with Him.

COLLEGE DEBTS.

It costs money to build educational institutions. Grounds, buildings, and equipment necessary for the conducting of institutions of learning are expensive. Millions of dollars are invested in such equipment throughout this country. Accepted standards for individuals who would teach in our colleges are rather arbitrary. Long years of application and years of research are necessary if one is to be thoroughly prepared to give instruction in his particular field. Naturally compensation adequate to cover the cost of his training and experience is demanded. Money for equipment and professional services must be provided. Benefactors in the past have in different ways assisted in the building of our centers of higher education. By donations and bequests beneficent financiers have created great endowments, the earnings of which go for the upkeep and improvement of buildings and grounds and for faculty salaries. Every institution of higher learning today of any consequence has its equipment and endowment.

Rarely, if ever, have student fees of any kind assisted either in equipment or endowment. These have been provided through benefactions. When a high school graduate begins to cast about for a college where he wishes to go for advanced training, buildings, equipment, and faculty necessarily enter in. Charges for tuition, fees, and the like never take into consideration investments already made but are calculated on the basis of current needs. And even here the student is not required to pay the entire cost but is asked to pay in proportion to the failure of income from invested funds to meet the cost of current operations. It has been estimated and quite authoritatively that the student in college today when he meets all of his bills promptly and completely pays only about fifty per cent of the actual cost of his training. Bruce Barton says:

"From Washington and Lee University a friend of mine received a printed notice with the semi-annual bill for his son's tuition. I take the liberty of quoting the following sentences:

"You will be interested in knowing that the student who pays full tuition charges at Washington and Lee has really met only about half of the cost of his education. The other funds for his training come not from taxes or organized religious groups but from individual donors who through the years have selected this institution as the channel of their faith in youth.

"The boy who spends four years here, for example, receives about $15 from George Washington, about $75 from the benefactions of Cyrus H. McCormick, approximately the same amount from the gift of George Peabody, and varying contributions from other unselfish spirits who left trust funds for the university."

"That opens up an interesting line of thought. Suppose that any one of us should begin tracing back the sources of his education, his hospital care, or the services rendered him by library, museums, and the like, where would his research land? Right in the lap of the financially fortunate men and women of the past. Harold Ickes got his schooling at the University of Chicago, with thanks (which he does not give) to John D. Rockefeller, Rex Tugwell paid only a part of the cost of his education at Pennsylvania, as did Mrs. Perkins at Mount Holyoke, and Harry Hopkins at Grinnell; the balance was supplied by incomes from the gifts of railroad builders, steel makers, industrialists, bankers, brokers, public utility operators, and what not. Without the rich there would have been no Groton or Harvard, and without Groton and Harvard no F. D. R."

What is true at the above institution is true to a certain extent in the average endowed school today.

Of course a person's debt to his college includes something other than money. A campus of a college should be a character-building institution. Contributions are made to mind and heart that cannot be appraised in the terms of dollars and cents. As we think of our college, the institution where we received instruction and training for life, we are reminded of the ideals, friendships, and associations of fellow students and the spiritual, as well as the intellectual, impact of faculty members, whose worth cannot be properly evaluated, upon our lives. These associations and friendships have become so much a part of us that it is practically impossible for us to sever ourselves completely from the college of our training. When you hear a graduate of a college contend that he does not owe his alma mater anything, stating that he paid his bills, perhaps that alumnus has not carefully considered the contribution of others who made it possible for him to have a college to attend, and evidently it has not occurred to him that the college offered much of which he received generously that could never be purchased with money. When we pay every dollar that is required for our education in most instances we have paid only fifty per cent of the actual cost of training and have made no attempt to reimburse our alma mater for the priceless contributions that she made during our stay.

The trends in economic conditions today do not hold much hope for the building of great fortunes as in years past. Many will hail these trends with great delight and take the same as prophetic of a day of economic justice. With the disappearing of great fortunes goes the possibility of large gifts to educational institutions, recreational centers, and clinical equipment for treating disease and relief of suffering. It is to be hoped instead that poverty may vanish from society and that the level of living may be elevated. The final results will tell the story. Without large gifts for education the rank and file of society will be required to make nominal gifts that facilities and advantages necessary for mental training and moral development may be provided. We are coming to a day when citizens of small means will be required to divide their living that advantages that make for real advancement in human life and living may be given to ambitious hearts and minds. As the opportunity comes to salvage our church institutions of higher learning, may no one withhold his gift however small or large that gift may be.

DANVILLE CHURCH.

Many SUN readers have been inquiring as to how we are getting along with our re-building program here. We have about completed the building as a cost of nearly four thousand dollars with all bills paid. The plant has been gone over and rebuilt and refinished until we hardly recognize the old building ourselves. We have enlarged our auditorium until we can now accommodate more than seven hundred people. For the past two Sunday nights we have had the building filled to capacity. We are still planning on greater things and are installing loud speakers to see if we cannot use adjoining rooms. The Sunday School is showing a good increase over last year at the same time. The interest is good and somehow we feel that we have the best prospect for the greatest summer's work we have had during our stay here.

Next Sunday we are opening up a new church at Blair's Virginia, some seven or eight miles from here on the Lynchburg Highway. The Sunday School there will probably be started with one hundred and fifty members. The work here is untouched by any near church and indicates the possibility of one of our strong country churches in the next few years. At present we are renting a building that will seat about two hundred and will have services twice each month, with Sunday School every Sunday.

Beginning the fifth of April and continuing for fifteen days, we will have the privilege of having Rev. Trueblood of Hertford, N. C. We are anticipating a great meeting and covet your prayers.

M. T. SORRELL.

REV. WM. T. SCOTT CLOSING HIS PASTORATE AT WINSON-SALEM.

A large congregation heard Rev. William T. Scott, retiring pastor of the United Congregational and Christian Church, Sunday morning in his final message. Fifty members of the local Lions Club, of which Mr. Scott is a member, attended the services in a body, honoring the retiring pastor who on April 1st becomes pastor-at-large of the Congregational-Christian Churches of the Southeast, with special duties in Florida and Georgia.

The Lions Club quartet rendered special music. Reginald Marshall, tenor, also sang, rendering "Thanks Be to God" (Dickson).

Using as his subject, "The Place of Loyalty in Religion," Mr. Scott declared that the spirit of loyalty is fundamental in the highest Christian conception of religion.

"The Christianity of Jesus is built upon the basis of loyalty to a cause—a cause which Jesus declared to be God's cause. Such a foundation seemed futile, in a hostile world of 2,000 years ago, but out of that sense of personal loyalty to Jesus Christ and His message has grown the Church of Jesus Christ. Today the coarse-minded will sneer at the claims of loyalty; selfish men will resent it; conceited men will despise it, but the sincere man and woman will make it a test of character."

Continuing, the speaker said that Christ's chief appeal was to the loyalists of men. "Maybe we have forgotten Jesus' method and have become so concerned with external organization that we have forgotten the heart of the Christian message, 'Lord, I will follow Thee . . . but,' (a Christian with reservations has no place in the company of Jesus."

Mr. Scott said that the religion of Jesus Christ is not founded upon a vague and indefinite loyalty but upon a personal loyalty. "Other founders of religions point to 'another,' Jesus is audacious enough to say of himself, 'I am the way—walk in it; I am the truth—believe it with all your heart; I am the life—live it.'"

"Finally," Mr. Scott said, challenging the members of his congregation, "the measure in which I have, as pastor, been able to stir up your loyalties to Jesus Christ, in that measure I have been a faithful minister here. I appreciate the personal loyalties which you have manifested toward me as your pastor, but if those loyalties are not founded in a deeper loyalty to Jesus Christ and His eternal purposes, then I have labored in vain. Your lives in the coming days, loyalties to the continued purposes of Christ through this church—these will tell the story."

"In conclusion, my family and I want to say that we are grateful for Winston-Salem. For four and a half years we have had the joy of leading the people of this church in a real spiritual adventure. You have been a lovable, leadable and responsive people. While today marks the final Sunday of our official relationship, yet there is a friendship which is wound closer. While in the coming days our ways may not cross quite so often, yet the love in our hearts will be constant. Our interest in you shall abide in our hearts always. You are ours! and we shall always claim you for our church!

"If we have made any contribution to your lives we are glad, and if we could ask you for one compensation which would fully repay us for any anxiety and struggle, it would be, 'Carry on!' Never let that lag which you with us have begun. Carry on with our successors in the same fine way you have worked with us and your church will continue to grow and be a great blessing to your own lives and to the life of this great city.

"To our many friends in Winston-Salem and the surrounding country who have meant so much to us, we are likewise grateful for your friendship. You have helped to make the past four and a half years the most wonderful days of our lives. May the Lord richly bless you all."—From the Twin City Sentinel, Monday, March 30th.

THE EASTER VICTORY.

Christmas is the children's festival—then the race renews its youth. Peace and joy and good will fill the air. Easter brings a new sense of victory—victory over the grave—triumph over life's struggles. The one gather about the hearthstone; the other gathers about the altar. The Easter anthem resounds with the notes of victory. Are we going to send forth a new note of victory this Easter time?

For more than three months, special preparation has been in the making for the second Sunday in April. New life in the churches, larger contributions for missions and new additions to each and every church have been of special concern. With many these are busy days. In home and church school and special revival services the concern is for a big harvest on Easter. We are sure these efforts will be rewarded.

Ours is a resurrection gospel. That is the seal of His triumph, the evidence that the eternal life that was in Him has conquered death. It was this that established the authority of Christ. It was this that confounded the Jews of Jerusalem who had put Jesus to death. It was this that awakened a new life in the moribund Roman empire. We are now in an age dominated by materialism in which money is the one cure for all ills; but we cannot escape the awful fact of death. Here is the victory that overcomes the world and triumphs at the grave.

Our fine achievements this Easter time should send us on to world conquest—enabling us to make new conquests at home and larger victories to win abroad.—Exchange.

THE LORD OF LIFE.

By WALTER SPENCE.

The Lord of Life they crucified;
In bitter pain and grief He died.
They laid him in St. Joseph's tomb,
Equipped with myrrh and sweet perfume,
And sealed the door at eventide.

Him to the grave they did confide,
Him from the light they thought to hide,
Dead in the deep sepulchral gloom,
The Lord of Life.

But he the power of Death defied,
And thrust the door of the tomb aside,
And out of the subterranean room
Into the light of day did come,
Alive, triumphant, glorified,
The Lord of Life.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

WHAT IS LACKING IN THE CHURCH TODAY?

In a recent issue of THE SUN we told editorially of how a shoe manufacturer had saved $300,000 since 1910 and had, through personal testimony of those whom he employed, won in round numbers 55,000 converts to Christ. In our issue of March 5th, we gave this man's personal testimony: "What Think Ye of These Things?" The one object the SUN's editor has in printing the experience of this man is to show to our readers that the hope of the church and the one way to a real spiritual revival is that of personal witness-bearing to the saving power of our Lord. A message in public from pulpit and pew is not sufficient; the message is personal and must be carried by an individual to an individual through the word of testimony. Our friend, Mr. Chas. S. Bates, is most deeply concerned in the salvation of souls and the progress of the church. What he says is worth more than reading. It is worth acting upon. To the question, "What is lacking in the Church today?" he answers:

"Men, Christian young men, strong, virile, active, who have given their hearts to Christ and are walking in Jesus' way of life.

"Boys in our Sunday School. Since eighty per cent of the Church members come out of the Sunday School, we need boys in the Sunday School if we are to have men in the churches of the future.

"Preachers, who are evangelistic in sermon and service and are preaching under the conscious guidance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Our records show a year in which one-third of all our churches in the United States had no members unite on confession. I can't imagine what they were doing, but results show what they were not doing—they were not bringing any souls into the Kingdom of God.

"An earnest loyal Christian membership in both men and women. Members who are truly saved, who have had an experience of Christ, who read their Bibles, believe in prayer, attend prayer meetings, go to Sunday School; whose works witness to a live, active Christian faith."

And then he asks:

"What can we do about it?" What are we doing about it? Have we convictions enough to cause us to act as witnesses of Christ in a personal way, after meditation and prayer under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, by going to others individually, sharing our vision with them, and asking them, yes, pleading with them to turn from the darkness of unbelief to the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in Jesus Christ? Can there be any question of our being able to do this, with Jesus holding all power in heaven and earth and being with us always?

"What can we do about it? We can go back to our churches and take that promise of Jesus (Matt. 18:19) "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." If, after meditation and prayer on this promise you believe Jesus means it, find others in your church, even one, who believe it and will act on it with you; then meet and select a person with whom you are acquainted, who is not a Christian, and pray for guidance that you may go to him in the power of the Spirit. In a heart-to-heart interview try to show him Jesus and try to persuade him to change his way of living and enter Jesus' way of life; help him to see the value of his soul. Go to him together or separately or both ways, but go until you win him over, not in your strength but in the power of the spirit through your prayers and humble sympathetic service and Christian love. Let us not take much for granted about the non-Christian's knowledge of the "mystery of Godliness." Even we Christians generally know but little about it. How can our non-Christian acquaintances, who hardly ever read the Bible or go to Church, know scarcely anything about it?

"It's to be the work of the Holy Spirit through living witnesses for the salvation of those for whom Christ died. The report of the Flying Clipper (San Francisco to Honolulu) said that though for hundreds of miles they were sandwiched between enormous cloud strata, they always knew exactly where they were, for they followed an invisible but certain force, radio waves. As we go out on this mission to individuals we may enter clouds of doubt, unbelief, and worldly-mindedness, but we shall have in the Holy Spirit an invisible but certain guiding force—omnipresent, omnipotent, the source of wisdom and miraculous power. We will trust Him all the way and in Him will be our strength and success."

MISS OLIVE GREEN.

(Missionary to Turkey.)

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Because she is an artist with a love of beauty and the ability to see beneath externals, Miss Olive Green, American educator from Izmir, Turkey, can give an authentic and sympathetic picture of Turkey today. Miss Green will speak at Sanford, N. C., April 3rd and Sunday, April 5th; at Pleasant Union (Harnett Co., N. C.) April 7th; at Hebron (Mecklenburg Co., Va.) April 8th and at Henderson, N. C., April 9th.

Since 1912 Miss Green has worked under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in Turkey, teaching on the staff of the American Collegiate Institute, a school of over 100 pupils, and she declares out of her experience there that "girls are girls the world around."

Born in Brunswick, N. Y., but brought up in Utah, Miss Green took her B. A. at Wellesley College and her M. A. at Radcliffe. She traveled two years in Europe. When the war prevented her going back to Turkey immediately after a furlough in America she studied Turkish and other subjects at the Kennedy School of Missions and taught for a year and a half at Wellesley College, returning to Smyrna, Turkey, in 1919.

Varied and wearying experiences followed the opening of a Turkish branch of the school. After that came the burning of Smyrna, the war and refugee work in Athens. In 1923, however, she was called back to Smyrna and has been on the staff of the American Collegiate Institute since that time. Izmir is the Turkish name for Smyrna.

At the last Annual Meeting of the American Board in Grand Rapids there was a special exhibit of Miss Green's beautiful paintings, showing scenes near Izmir. This pointing, hiking for wild flowers, philosophy and the study of Greek ruins in the mountains, are Miss Green's hobbies.

Because she has lived in Turkey through various periods of its development and when history was really being made, Miss Green gives a particularly well-balanced picture of Turkey today and the present trends, especially as they affect the womanhood of that wide-awake little republic.

LET'S MAKE IT PLUS.

Our people, our churches and our boards are all part of a common fellowship. For five years the declining income of our people has compelled the churches and the boards to reduce their budgets. Every missionary enterprise has had the closest scrutiny. Those which have been continued have both proven their present worth and demonstrated their ability to live on little. Our present giving covers the actual cost of a going work, stripped of inessentials, reduced to the most stringent economy, and with no chance of advance.

But cutting budgets does not reduce needs. Our present "subsistence basis" is the price of survival in an emergency; it cannot be continued except at the cost of diminishing efficiency and by shutting our eyes to growing opportunities for Christian service.

Four conditions call for something more than "carrying on" in the present inadequate fashion. We should lighten the altogether impossible burdens which reduced appropriations have placed upon some of our workers. Normal growth produces new responsibilities. Recent surveys of missions at home and abroad have called for the new lines of effort. A changing world offers ever fresh opportunities for the re-creating gospel of Christ and calls for adaption of our work to the new day.

We are indicating some specific situations about which we believe our churches should know. But in asking for the means with which to meet these serious conditions we must not place in jeopardy the present enterprises which have survived the cuts of recent years. No single item in this list can be adopted at the expense of existing obligations or to the exclusion of other items presented.

In Our Work Abroad.

1. The salaries of the missionaries on the field have been so cut as to work almost disastrous hardship. The devaluation of the American dollar proved a calamity to many families. One missionary's wife, herself independent because of a small personal income, writes to a friend not on the Board staff in about these words: "At present my colleagues are not getting enough to live on decently. Nerves are fraying under the strain. This added to the reduction of the staff is proving the one unbearable straw."

2. The number of missionaries has been cut to the place where the load on the survivors, whether national or missionary is too heavy. Certain of those withdrawn ought to be returned to service as soon as possible. As a first step, we would hope for the immediate return of at least twelve people to work in China, India, and Japan.

3. Only four full-time missionaries have been sent to the field in the past five years, as against a former annual increase of from five to ten times that number. Already the morale of the existing personnel is much lowered for lack of young blood. "We are getting old," writes one "forty-year older." "Send us out someone who can give us that infusion of youth and take our places in the future."

4. The national churches of China, Japan, India, and Africa, have been valiantly assuming a large measure of self-support in this time, often at great sacrifice. The process has gone, however, beyond what realism would dictate and in some cases has crippled the whole church. Some relief should be given at once.

5. Leadership Training may be called our biggest service in any field. In the Madura Mission, for example, according to the suggestions from the Laymen's Inquiry, a program has been offered to the Board in which we should immediately participate. A very modest sum has been suggested for this purpose in most fields. We are told that here is the hope of the future, yet we are but marking time in it.

6. Through the National Christian Councils of the various countries indigenous leadership will be developed along the lines of family education, religion in the home, student work and activities, public health, and inter-denominational unity. The cuts in appropriations to these organizations should be restored and provision made for a much needed advance.

In Our Service at Home.

1. Through the youth movement in our churches we are helping to create the future ideals of America. In the summer conferences, week-end gatherings and year around discussion groups a growing multitude of young people are seeking to apply the mind of Christ to the problems of the day. The Education Society has guided and strengthened this movement by the preparation of program materials, the development of methods and by personal counseling. In the face of a rising tide of interest, cuts in the budget have necessitated reducing the issues of the Young Peoples Bulletin from four to one or two a year together with a similar curtailment of the service of the Young Peoples Department by the elimination of all field secretaries. The Education Society plans to enlarge its service to the youth of our churches as soon as funds permit.

2. The home missionary grants which they receive from the Church Extension Boards have been almost the sole cash income of a host of pastors in the drouth-ridden and otherwise afflicted states of the West. These men have kept at their tasks with rare devotion in the face of an emergency, but they cannot be expected to live indefinitely on salaries which allow little for their families and nothing at all for their own mental and spiritual nurture. Already it is difficult to find ministers to man the churches in some states. If we are to be just to the home missionary and if we are to maintain an adequate ministry in many a needy area for which we are responsible, our home missionary grants must be increased.

3. The American Missionary Association abolished 119 teaching positions in its schools and colleges between 1932 and 1935. As funds permit it plans to build up its faculties again, seeking particularly teachers trained in the more social outlook who can relate the work of the schools to the life of the surrounding communities in an intimate way. Among the positions contemplated is that of an institutional and public health nurse at Lincoln Academy, King's Mountain, N. C., who will both look after the health of the students and introduce better methods of hygiene into the homes of the people.

4. From 70 to 80 college and seminary young people are commissioned each year by the Church Extension Boards for Student Summer Service among home mission churches. They preach in many remote places, conduct a host of Daily Vacation Bible Schools, and stimulate the young life of the communities where they work in a variety of ways. The inspiration of a summer self-forgetting service has led many of the students to invest their lives in the Christian callings. In order to meet the needs of the small churches in sparsely settled sections of the country the Church Extension Boards desire to send out twenty additional students next summer.

In Our Own State.

The superintendent and board of directors of your own conference have before them at this very time other projects of necessary increase in your state. There is the pastor of an aided church, for example, whose grant has been cut to the place where worry takes away from his efficiency, and where he has no money to improve his mind or body. This can be done for a certain number of years, but there comes a day when it is neither possible or decent, and when it certainly does not make for growth in spiritual leadership.

There are churches whose vision has been hampered by the grinding necessities laid upon them by poverty, but where there is a real opportunity for service to the community. The grants removed by the cut budgets of the conferences need, in some cases, to be returned.

Your state conference office can furnish you this detailed picture to put with that of the nationwide and world-wide work of your church.

But How?

Certain signs on the horizon give us courage for a new day. By studying reports of a few states and churches, we find many who have met their apportionment each year throughout the period of depression at great sacrifice. Is yours one? Then could you increase your gift just a bit this year?

In three large states, we find 346 churches which made increases in 1934 over the year before, the average increase being 20 per cent. In each state, we find some churches like this. Was yours one? If not, could it be one this next year?

A large number of churches reporting indicate that though they could not meet their accepted apportionment, they have maintained a steady level of giving for three years. Is yours one? If so, could you now come a bit nearer your goal?

Any lift in the total giving will make it possible to do some of these things. We must remember, however, that it will not be possible to do any of them unless the present work is kept up. Only as the churches turn the minus sign into a plus sign in our statements of comparative receipts, can our missionary work be brought forward.—Published in behalf of the Congregational and Christian Churches by the Commission on Missions.

THE WORLD IS A KINDLY PLACE.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

On April 20th, little three-year-old Kelvin Rodgers will sail from Melbourne on a 10,000-mile trip, his destination being Philadelphia.

This little boy's age, his name, the 10,000-mile trip, and the destination are not important. It is important, however, to know why he is making the trip.

Little Kelvin has a nail in his right lung. Australian specialists have had the boy under their care for more than a year but have been unable to remove the nail because of lack of special surgical equipment. Kelvin is one of four children of a motor mechanic who earns $20 a week. The father's funds have been exhausted by the long medical battle against the little son's death. The little fellow's plight was brought to the attention of the U. S. Shipping Board, and free passage has been arranged for him and his mother. Temple University Hospital in Philadelphia is surgically equipped for the required operation. The operation will be performed without charge, and also hospital care and care for the mother will be accorded gratis.

Sympathy and heart language know no bounds, no distance, no barriers. So in far-off Australia human sympathy and understanding have touched an obscure family, given inspiration and hope to a father, to a mother, three children, and above all to little Kelvin who will no doubt win his battle against death.

Cynics may try to tell you otherwise, but in the face of their protestings against the goodness and the greatness of the human heart, the world is still a kindly place.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

THE MASTER DINES WITH HIS DISCIPLES.

On Thursday evening before the first Easter Jesus met in the home of John Mark to eat the Passover with His disciples. It was an ancient Jewish custom to eat unleavened bread and roast lamb at the Passover, but Jesus made this occasion more than an ancient custom. He thought of the present and future rather than the past.

Like bread, his body was being broken. Like wine, his blood was being poured out. This body and blood meant life. It was the life of the Master given for His friends. The cross would crush Him, but life would go on. His life would be lived by them.

Forget? Of course they could not! Every time they ate or drank they would remember the new covenant made by the Master. He wanted them to remember, and they did. So do we when we gather about the table of the Lord and eat and drink at the Communion. Many of His disciples will sit about the table this Thursday night and remember the Master who said: "This do in remembrance of me."

A GARDEN OF PRAYER.

Not far from the eastern gate of Jerusalem, but beyond the brook Kedron and on the Mount of Olives is a garden called the Oil-press, or Gethsemane, into which Jesus went with eleven of His disciples after the last supper. Franciscan monks have enclosed a spot close to the foot of Olivet and planted a beautiful flower garden. They say this is the very place that Jesus knelt to pray. But the Greeks say that farther up the hill is the place.

The place is never so important as the prayer. In an agony of soul Jesus prayed that Judas might not betray, that the others might not desert, and that he might not have to suffer the cross. But His prayer was not completed until he could say sincerely: "Not my will, but thine be done." Without the garden of prayer there could have been no Calvary, or Easter. It was in prayer that Jesus found the courage to die, and in dying He found life for Himself and others.

We, too, must have our garden of prayer, for we must suffer our Gethsemane and Calvary. Life is not always easy. It is often hard, and sometimes cruel. But we must find a way of triumph. The garden of prayer is the way of triumph. Ella Wheeler Wilcox has well said:

All those who journey, soon or late,
Must pass within the garden's gate;
Must kneel alone in larkness there,
And battle with some fierce despair,
God pity those who cannot say;
"Not mine, but thine"; who only pray:
"Let this cup pass," and cannot see
The purpose in Gethsemane."

CALVARY.

Friendless and faint, with martyred steps and slow,
Faint for the flesh, but for the spirit free,
Stung by the mob that came to see the show,
The Master toiled along to Calvary;
We gibed him as he went with houndish glee,
Till his dim eyes for us did overflow;
We cursed His vengeless hands thrice wretchedly
And this was nineteen hundred years ago.

But after nineteen hundred years the shame
Still clings, and we have not made good the loss
That outraged faith has entered in his name.
Ah, when shall come love's courage to be strong!
Tell me, O Lord—tell me, O Lord, how long
Are we to keep Christ writhing on the cross?

—Edwin Arlington Robinson.

THERE IS A MAN ON THE CROSS.

Whenever there is silence around me
By day or by night—
I am startled by a cry.
It came down from the cross—
The first time I heard it.
I went out and searched—
And found a man in the throes of crucifixion,
And I said, "I will take you down,"
And I tried to take the nails out of His feet.
But he said, "Let them be
For I cannot be taken down
Until every man, every woman and every child
Come together to take me down."
And I said, "But I cannot hear you cry,
What can I do?"
And he said, "Go about the world—
Tell everyone that you meet—
There is a man on the cross."

—Elizabeth Cheney.

AS IT BEGAN TO DAWN.

The friends of Jesus buried their hope on Friday afternoon and spent Saturday in quiet and seclusion, but on Sunday morning some women took sweet spices to anoint the body of Jesus and went to the tomb "as it began to dawn." They saw the light breaking across the eastern mountains but were not yet aware of that divine light that was soon to dawn within their own hearts. The empty tomb was another disappointment, but the message of the angels sent them away with eagerness even though they could not understand. Mary lingered by the tomb until she met the Master himself and heard him call her by name. She went to tell the others that Jesus was alive and would meet them again in Galilee. A new day had dawned, for the Master was alive and would always be alive. Deserting disciples turned again to follow in His footsteps, and out of the east arose the day star which has illuminated the earth from then until now.

We call this anniversary of the resurrection of Jesus Easter. It is the opening of new life; it is the springtime of the soul; it is the hope of immortality made sure because Jesus arose from the grave. In this hope everyone can rejoice and be exceeding glad, for the grave could not hold Jesus of Nazareth and it cannot hold those who love Him.

In song and story and sermon, in work and worship everyone who knows of this story of the first Easter day should make known the glad tidings that in Christ there is new life. Easter is no time for display; it is the time for devotion, for worship, humility, rejoicing; it is the time when the soul should go up to God in thanksgiving, for it is God's revelation of His divine love and His divine life.

"It is Christ that turns us to a new life and gives us power to live it. We are alive with Him and through Him."

METHODS OF GROWTH IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR APRIL 19, 1936.

Scripture: 2 Peter 1:1-9.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Study the word. Ps. 1:1-6.

Tues.—Be doers of the word. Jas. 1:22-27.

Wed.—Stir up your gifts. I Tim. 4:12-16.

Thur.—Growing into Christ-likeness. Eph. 4:14-16.

Fri.—Growth through activity. I Thess. 1:1-10.

Sat.—Growth by imitating Jesus. John 13:12-17.

During the Easter season churches everywhere make a special effort to draw into the church those who are outside the Kingdom of God. But we not only want the people to "join the church," they will need to "advance in favor with God and man." After they have made a public confession of their Lord they will need to know the method of growth in the Christian life. Those who are already in the church will have their hearts so uplifted by the stories of Christ during the Easter season that they will have the desire to become a more faithful follower of Him who gave His all for them.

Methods of Growth.

1. Study the Bible.—For it contains words of eternal life. It will inspire us to a nobler, higher life—keep us from yielding to temptation. In it can be found the message of the prophets and the words of Christ that are an adequate guide for faith and living.

2. Worship—Public and Private.—Prayer is one of the strongest ways of growing. Jesus Christ, the Son of God, needed to pray; we also need to go to our Father in prayer for guidance, knowledge, strength and comfort. We must learn to utter prayers of thanksgiving for the many blessings He bestows upon us. What could be a better way to start a new day than to spend at least fifteen minutes of the early morn in communion and meditation with God? Talk to Him, and listen for His voice as He speaks to you.

"Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air,
His watchword at the gates of death;
He enters heaven with prayer."

Certainly attending public worship should be a factor in religious growth. The church service of worship provides a growth in the Christian way of living that cannot be found in any other way. The spirit of Christian fellowship received at church, and the message of the minister gives us inspiration as we go about our daily tasks during the coming week.

3. Service.—Service for Christ and the Church. As our religious life grows we will find that real pleasure comes from service for others. Service has a certain way of giving strength to Christian character. In the church can be found a place for every worth-while talent.

If we study the Bible, spend a portion of our time in worship and give of ourselves in service, we will find that our life will grow richer day by day. We can say with Paul, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." We can truly climb the upward road with Christ as our Guide and Companion.

"I heard Him call,
'Come follow,' that was all.
My gold grew dim,
My heart went after Him.
I rose and followed—that was all.
Who would not follow
If they heard Him call?"

JESUS TRIUMPHS OVER DEATH.

(Easter Lesson.)

LESSON II—APRIL 12, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Because I live, ye shall live also."—John 14:19.

LESSONS Luke 24:1-35; Printed Text: Luke 24:1-12.

"But on the first day of the week, at early dawn, they came unto the tomb bringing the spices which they had prepared." On the first day of the week—every recurring Sunday or Lord's Day is a reminder of the fact that Jesus Christ rose from the dead. The Christian Church Universal Celebrates not the old Jewish Sabbath, but the seventh day of the week, but Sunday, the first day of the week. Just as the date on the calendar bears witness to the birth of Jesus—A. D. 1936—1936 years since Jesus was born—so the Lord's Day bears witness to His coming again from the dead.

They came at early dawn. They could hardly wait to perform their service of love to their Lord. Womanhood has ever been quick to perform the tender acts of love. Would that all of Christ's disciples had the same eager desire to do things for Him that these women had.

"Bringing the spices which they had prepared." They were bringing materials to embalm a dead body. It never occurred to them that Jesus was alive. One of the most convincing proofs of the resurrection is the disbelief and the doubt that the risen Christ had to overcome on the part of His own disciples and most intimate friends.

"And they found the stone rolled away from the tomb." Difficulties seen in prospect often disappear or find an easy solution when we come up to them. The women were debating who should roll the heavy stone; when they reached the grave the stone had already been rolled away. As an old woman once said, "Most of the things that had troubled her most were the things that had never happened." Be not anxious for tomorrow. Do today's duties and rest patiently in the Lord for grace to do tomorrow's duties.

"And they entered in and found not the body of the Lord Jesus." The glory of Christianity is a rugged Cross, and an empty tomb. That empty tomb is irrefutable evidence of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. If the friends of Jesus had found his body they would never have given their lives for what they knew was a lie. Furthermore they would not have believed Jesus for He had told them that He would rise from the dead. And certainly the enemies of Jesus would have made a master stroke if they had taken the body and later produced it, giving the lie to the preaching of the apostles. There is only one explanation for that empty tomb—Jesus Christ came out of it alive. That empty tomb is just as much a historic fact, however, as any other attested historic fact. It is a stubborn fact which critics and unbelievers cannot get around.

"Why seek ye the living among the dead?" A cemetery is a city of the dead, not of the living. We say that a person is buried in such and such a cemetery but we know that he is not buried there at all. You cannot put a man's spirit in a coffin or in a grave. We bury only the house in which a man lives while on earth. The man himself lives on. Death does not touch the man himself. It is well and beautiful that we decorate the graves of loved ones and friends, but we are not to seek the living among the dead.

"He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee. . . and the third day rise again." Jesus had made every effort to convince His disciples that He would rise again, but they had not understood the meaning of His words. It is significant however that he told them beforehand. When the disciples and the women thought over the matter, it all came back to them." And they remembered His words. If we can trust Jesus here, if He could keep His word here, we may be sure that He can keep it anywhere and everywhere. Paul said, "declared to be the Son of God with power according to His resurrection from the dead." The glorious truth of Easter is that Jesus Christ is alive forevermore. And because He lives, we too shall live.—He himself said so. (Golden Text.)

"And returned from the tomb, and told all these things to the eleven, and to all the rest, and these words appeared in their sight as idle talk; and they disbelieved them." As has been said, the disciples did not expect anything else but to find the body of their dead Master. It never entered their minds that they would see Him alive again after He died on the Cross. And when they heard that He was alive they dismissed at first the whole thing as idle talk, as the crazy tale of some hysterical women—by the way, there is significance in the fact that there were several women in the party; it was not a case of one woman having a trance. The disciples at first simply refused to believe that anybody, even Jesus himself, could rise from the dead. The resurrection of Jesus Christ had to overcome not only the skepticism of a hostile and unbelieving world; it had to overcome the skepticism and unbelief of the disciples themselves. There is only one explanation of Christianity—the disciples of Jesus Christ became convinced that He was alive. Jesus demonstrated that fact in a convincing way. It was that fact that changed them from crestfallen, defeated, despairing disciples into courageous crusaders. There may be some questions as to the how of the resurrection; there is absolutely no question as to the fact of the resurrection.

"But Peter rose and ran unto the tomb; and stooping and looking in, he seeth the linen clothes by themselves; and he departed to his home, wondering at that which was come to pass." Peter couldn't believe it but he wanted to. With John he ran to the tomb, and while John stopped outside, Peter went inside (this is according to John's account, John 20:6) and looked around. He saw the linen cloths lying by themselves—they were not in disarray as if the body had been stolen hurriedly. He did not know what it all meant—he went back home wondering at that which had come to pass. What thoughts must have surged through his mind that day!

Peter is not the only man who has wondered at what came to pass on Easter Sunday. No man in his right mind can cease to stand in awe and wonder at that event. But beyond the sense of wonder and awe there is a deep sense of certainty and joy. Men instinctively feel that life is victor over death, that love is stronger than hate, that because Christ lives they too shall live. And because of this fact they are steadfast, unmovable, abounding in the Lord for they know that God is able to keep their loved ones whom they have committed unto Him until that day, and that they too shall find life eternal through Him Who is the Resurrection and the Life.

"Up from the grave he arose
With a mighty triumph o'er his foes:
He arose a victor from the dark domain,
And he lives forever with his saints to reign.
He arose! Hallelujah, Christ arose!"

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"EASTER REFLECTION."

"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."—Matt. 6:28, 29.

"In every leaf that crowns the plain,
In every violet 'neath the hill,
In every yellow daffodil
I see the risen Lord again!
In each arbutus flower I see
A faith that lived through frost and snow,
And in the birds that northward go,
A guiding hand's revealed to me.
Lo! Winter from some dark abyss
Came forth to kill all growing things;
'Twas vain, spring rose on emerald wings,
Mothlike from her dead chrysalis.

"Each germ within the tiny seed
Throws off the husk that to it clings
And towards the sun it upward brings
New life to blossom to its need.
Ye hearts that mourn rise up and sing!
Death has no power to hold its prey.
The grave is only where we lay."

—John Richard Moreland.

Prayer—Thy love, O Christ, embraceth all the world. In Thy tender care none are forgotten. Thy home is the home of the lost soul as well as that of little children. Thou dost protect the weak and the strong alike. And even as the flower is immortal so do we trust the immortality of our souls. Thou art our Saviour now and forever.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"AN EASTER PRAYER."

By FRANK DEARING.

"Lord, now that spring is in the world,
And every tulip is a cup
Filled with the wine of Thy great love,
Lift Thou me up.

"Raise Thou my heart as flowers arise
To greet the glory of Thy day,
With soul as clean as lillies are,
And white as they.

"Let me not fear the darkness now,
Since life and light break thru Thy tomb;
Teach me that doubts no more oppress,
No more consume.

"Show me that Thou art April, Lord,
And Thou the flowers and the grass;
Then, when awake the soft spring winds,
I'll hear Thee pass."

—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE HOPE OF IMMORTALITY."

"To them that by patience in well doing seek glory and honor and incorruption, eternal life."—Rom. 2:7.

Among the many beautiful things Henry Van Dyke wrote during his lifetime is the following: "Is not the best of all our hopes—the hope of immortality—always before us? How can we be dull and heavy while we have that new experience to look forward to? It will bring to us our best acquaintances and friendships. But there is only one way to get ready for immortality, and that is to love this life and live it as bravely and cheerfully and faithfully as we can."

Prayer—Our Father, let this be the message of the risen Lord to us; That Thy tender compassion never fails and that Thy abundant mercies endure forever. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"NOT DEAD."

"To them that sat in death, light is sprung up."—Matt. 4:16.

"It shall come to pass that at evening time it shall be light."—Zech. 14:7.

"Good night, sleep well, we say to those we love,
And watch dear faces glimmer on the stair,
And hear faint footfalls in the room above
Sound on the quiet air,
Yet feel no fear, though lonely they must go
The road of slumber's strange oblivion:
Dark always wears to dawn,
Sleep is so gentle, and so well we know,
Wherever they have gone,
They will be safe until the morning's light,
Good night! Good night!

"Good night, sleep well beloved, when the last
Slow dust has fallen, and your steps no more
Make music on the empty upper floor,
And day is fully past,
We who so lightly let you go alone,
Evening by evening from our trustful sight
Into the mystery of sleep's unknown—
We need not fear, tonight,
Death is so gentle—dark will break to dawn—
Love will be safe until the morning light.
Sleep well. Good night!

—Nancy Byrd Turner.

Prayer—O Spirit of God, sent to make men holy and to do all things well now and forever to them that love God. Shed Thy grace abundantly upon these hearts of ours, that we may be brought to hate sin, love goodness and find serenity and hope through all the troubles of life and through the shadows at the end until we shall come forth into the new dawning.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"EMANCIPATION."

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."—Matt. 11:28.

"Why be afraid of death, as though your life were breath?
Death but annoys your eyes with clay,
O glad surprise!
Why should you be forlorn? Death only husks the corn.
Why should you fear to meet the thresher of the wheat?
Is sleep a thing to dread? Yet sleeping you are dead
'Till you awake and rise, here, or beyond the skies.

"Why should it be a wrench to leave your wooden bench?
Why not, with happy shout, run home when school is out?
The dear ones left behind? O foolish one and blind?
A day you will meet—a night, and you will greet.

"This is the death of death, to breathe away a breath
And know the end of strife, and taste
the deathless life,
And joy without a fear, and smile
without a tear;
And work, nor care to rest, and find the last the best."

—M. D. Babcock.

Prayer—O God, guard our souls from the sin of trusting to the temporal things of this life. Make us always to see in Thee what the world never sees; Thy love and goodness, Thy patience and mercy, and Thy eternal rest.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"PEACE."

"My peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled."—Jno. 14:27.

"There is a peace that cometh after sorrow,
Of hope surrendered, not of hope fulfilled;
A peace that looketh not upon tomorrow,
But calmly on a tempest that is stilled.
A peace which lives not now in joy's excesses,
Nor in the happy life of love secure,
But in the unerring strength the hearts possesses,
Of conflicts won, while learning to endure.
A peace there is, in sacrifice secluded,
A life subdued, from will and passion free;
'Tis not the peace that o'er Eden brooded,
But that which triumphed in Gethsemane."

—Anonymous.

Prayer—Mighty Sufferer of Calvary, give us Thy peace so that when we pass through the waters, they may not overflow us, or when burdens and troubles come we may be able to endure and never complain, and find that peace that "passeth understanding."—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"JUST BEYOND."

"But now they desire a better country, that is, heavenly, wherefore God is not ashamed of them, to be called their God; for He hath prepared for them a city."—Heb. 11:16.

"It seemeth such a little way to me Across to that strange country, 'the beyond,'
And yet not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am most fond.
They make seem familiar and most dear
As journeying friends bring distant countries near."

—Author Unknown.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, make clear our way both in this world and that to come! May we see the meaning of life, the cross, death, and the glory beyond. Help us to bow daily before Thy truth. May we receive Thy love and bear it abroad to others, and in the end find but one step across the way to Thee and all gone before.—Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

HELPING THE CHURCH MAKE GOOD.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Take heed therefore unto yourselves . . . to feed the church."—Acts 20:28.

In the words of this text everyone of you are being called upon to help your church make good. If you accept this challenge with the largest possible interpretation of the same, what holier, finer business could you set your heart and hand to, may I ask, than that? In helping the church make good you join with God in the great work of redeeming the race. God speaks of the church in the Old Testament as "my sanctuary," "House of the Lord," "House of prayer," and he speaks of the people thereof as "the congregation." A study of the Word of God will show that God made the sanctuary and the congregation a matter of the very greatest concern to himself. "Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary; I am the Lord." (Lev. 19:30.) "I have hallowed this House, which thou hast built, and put my name there forever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually." (I Kings 9:3.

What a beautiful promise? May we make it the prayer of our hearts that it shall be true in this our House of God, "Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised Thee." We have here a holy and beautiful house where our fathers praised God. Let us see this House as a symbol of the unity, beauty and strength of our entire membership, and let us join with God in putting our eyes and our hearts here perpetually! One cannot hear God saying "Thou shalt reverence my sanctuary" and have a great and worthy conception of God, and at the same time feel lightly, or indifferently toward His Church. One cannot hear Him saying, "I have put my name there forever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually," and not realize that the eternal powers that be work with the church of the living God. When you seek to help the church make good you join with God in your efforts. You are on God's side, and the blessings of heaven are with you!

In the New Testament the veiled language of the Old Testament comes out into the noon-day brightness when Jesus says, "I will build my church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." We see at once that the church was the great concern of Jesus when we read the words, "Christ loved the church and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." Can we take lightly the church when we hear him saying, "I lay down my life for the sheep?" Can we take the church lightly when we see him dying on the cross to carry out his promise: "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it?" No, when we seek to help the church make good we join with Jesus in the great concern of His soul. We stand with him. And where the very jaws of death cannot prevail!

One does not join the church to save his soul, but to serve his God and fellowmen. It is taking divine and sacred things all too lightly when one joins the church and then forgets all about it. This business of uniting with the church claims a first place in your hearts. It claims a first place in your plans. It claims a first place in your possessions,—a recognition of a partnership with God. One cannot hope to have Christian happiness and go half-heartedly with Christ. He must have the first place in our hearts. All other things assume a better place and are seen in their proper perspective when we "love the Lord with our whole heart."

What may hinder one from helping the church make good? I think I can safely put first: Sin. I do not have to pause to define sin, nor to try to explain what I mean by sin. We are not yet too sophisticated to understand the plain word sin. The person who is professing one thing in his church and doing another in his life outside the church is not going to be able to help his church succeed. I knew a man once who held an officially prominent place in his local church, but I did not expect that he would do much real work for his church because I knew that he was not living a good and true life. He finally left off his church entirely. If this church had depended upon him it would have failed utterly. Sin of whatever kind hinders one in working for one's church. If we really desire to help our church make good one of the first things to do is to be sure that the life within and without is right with God.

Neglect is deadly so far as helping one's church to make good is concerned. You simply cannot build up your church if you neglect it. You have to cultivate your devotion to your church, and in the meantime cultivate your church's devotion to you. Sometimes I hear a person who is neglectful of their church say: "I wish our church could do so and so," when they themselves have failed to attend its services, failed to speak a good word for its program, fail to contribute toward its upkeep, and neglected it in every way. To such our text would cry out, "Take heed to yourselves . . . feed your church." Not impoverish it. Not neglect it. Feed it.

But let us leave now the negative side of this question, and think a bit on the positive side. We who are here today, and many of our members who are unavoidably kept from our services, who are willing to obey this text,—to do something about it. One of the very finest ways in which we may help our church make good is to do the very simple and practical thing of attending it. Do you wish to help your church make good? Attend it! Your presence is a blessing. A blessing first and always to yourself, a blessing to your neighbors and friends, and a great blessing to your church. One of the surest ways to kill a church is to leave it alone. One of the surest ways to become interested in your church is to attend it. It will not take long of regularly attending your church until you learn of its hopes, desires and prayers. You will find yourself desiring to help make them come true. You will begin to see work you can do, gifts you can make, words you can say, and prayers you can pray. And the church will repay you well.

Yes, the church will repay you well, for it will put you in tune with God. It will give you that joy within which delights itself to do Christian service. You will find yourself thinking about your church during the week. Uttering a prayer for its services,—both those done by the public on Sunday and also those services done by the individual throughout the others days of the week.

You come to know that your church is a seven-days-per-week institution. And you will pray daily for it. You will pray for better attendance, a larger devotion on the part of all its members, and an ever-increasing program of righteousness. You will remember its pastor in your prayers, its teachers, leaders, and workers. Do you wish to help your church make good? Pray for it.

Finally, if you wish to help your church make good, advertise it. No, I do not necessarily mean pay large prices for newspaper advertising, but by being yourself a good product of it. Advertise your church by being an everyday, day by day, in the dark as in the light, Christian. One

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

In former years we have generally had some warm days in March and the birds would sing around the buildings and the frogs along the branch would begin to croak and every little boy's feet would get so hot in his shoes that he would ask many times when he could go barefooted. He just could not wear his shoes and be comfortable. We have always said to the little fellows, "When you bring me some dogwood blossoms I will let you take off your shoes." The cold rainy weather this spring has held on so long that not a single boy has wanted to go barefooted. We have not had a single request. The dogwood is not blooming either.

We had two new boys to come in last week. Two fine little fellows and one of them came to me and said he could not go to school because he had no shoes. He was so humble about it that it was really pathetic and heart touching. We happened to have a pair in hand that fitted him and he went on his way with a smile on his face.

In this work one has many little things to touch the tender place in one's heart and often makes a silent tear fill the eye; but it is always a joy to minister to those in need and make life's pathway a little brighter for those who are left homeless.

If the members of the Congregational-Christian Churches would visit the Orphanage and see the children who live here and the possibilities of sending out fine young women and men by just investing money in giving them a chance, I believe you would be more interested in this line of work of our united church. The Congregational-Christian church, to measure up with other denominations in North Carolina, should care for at least 150 children. We have the plant and equipment, why not the children?

AN EASTER SONG.

By M. O. EVERETT.

"He is risen as He said"
Christ will raise your sleeping dead.
Praise Him in the Easter dawn!
He will give you joy who mourn.

Praise Him by a stainless life,
All your days with good deeds rife;
Praise him still with tongue and pen,
Sing His praises o'er again.

Tell it to the poor and meek,
How He came their peace to seek;
How He lived here poor and lowly—Tho' our Lord so great and holy!

Tell the cost to ruined ones—
He for their sins still atones;
How He died, their souls to save,
How He triumphed o'er the grave.

"Praise Him Fire and Hail and Snow"
All His creatures here below!
Praise Him all ye sons of men
He will come for you again!

There is more of power to sanctify, elevate, strengthen and cheer in the word "Jesus" than in all the utterances of man since the world began.

ing to leave for their Easter vacation. President Mary E. Woolley returned from a speaking engagement to find 1,000 marooned and despondent girls, some on the verge of tears. She called them together for a "sing" and revived their spirits. The next day the Evening Transcript of Holyoke, the daughter of whose managing editor is a senior at the college, aroused the citizens to provide autos which took the students around the flood-stricken area to towns which still had train or bus service.

SOME OF THE ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE COUNCIL.

The making of arrangements for the General Council meeting, although halted for a time, have been resumed and preparations will be fully completed when the moderator, Judge John V. Sees, of Huntington, Ind., calls the delegates to order at two o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, June the 16th.

For those who come by auto, a well-equipped auto park is being provided for parking or camping with lights, rest rooms and cooking facilities. Persons who have not been elected voting delegates by their Conferences or Associations will be welcome as associate members. The fee for associate members is one dollar each and provides for a badge of admission, reduced railroad rates under the certificate plan if granted; advance reports, the printed minutes and other printed matter; the assistance of the hospitality committee in finding lodgings; the rights of the floor at seminars and as otherwise announced. Laymen are urged to attend the General Council meeting even though not elected as delegates. There will be luncheons each noon in the First Congregational Church, South Hadley, for laymen only. Suggestions from laymen for topics to be discussed will be gladly received by Donald A. Adams, 152 Temple Street, New Haven, Conn., chairman of the National Laymen's Advisory Committee.

All delegates, officials and associate members will be on the same basis at Mt. Holyoke College as regards entertainment. Rooms completely furnished in the college dormitories with meals in the college dining rooms will be provided for at the rate of $2.75 per person per day to the limit of accommodations. Names of all delegates and associate members will be sent to the college office at South Hadley, Mass., as rapidly as they are received at the General Office in New York.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The writer of this column is grateful to the managing editor for adding the note last week about the manual, "Rules and Government of the Christian Church." As an authorized manual, adopted by the Convention soon after its organization, it antedated by nearly forty years the first manual to have any official denominational approval among the Congregational churches.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

is not helping his church make good if he takes the name of Christ, and drags it in the dust. If we take the name Christian we must be Christ-like. Pray that you will be led, as a Christian, in Christ-like ways. Pray that the words of the psalmist may be true for yourself: "He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake." God will help you be a Christian if you honestly take that name and seek to wear it aright. He will more than make good for us if we strive to make good for him.

THE LOOK FROM CALVARY.

I saw One hanging on the tree
In agonies and blood;
Who fixed his languid eyes on me,
As near the Cross I stood.

A second look He gave which said,
"I freely all forgive;
My blood was for thy ransom paid,
I die, that thou mayst live."

AYSCUE.

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom, on June 23, 1935, removed from our midst one of our beloved life members and last charter member of our church, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Ayscue,

We, the members of the J. O. Atkinson Woman's Missionary Society of Liberty (Vance) Congregational-Christian Church, wish to express to her family our appreciation of her unflinching loyalty and life of service to her church and community.

Therefore be it resolved:

First: We are grateful for Mrs. Ayscue's long and useful life to her church and community.

Second: Wherever and whenever her church called she always gave her very best in service. Truly she hath done what she could.

Third: That we call upon the entire church membership to emulate all the noble characteristics found in our deceased friend's life. It is our hope that by our daily actions we may influence the lives of others as our friend has influenced our lives.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be inscribed on the minutes of our Missionary Society and a copy sent to The Christian Sun.

Respectfully submitted,
MARGARET ALSTON,
MRS. G. W. MACON,
MRS. W. S. AYSUCE,

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

World's Largest Parish.—

What is supposed to be the largest church parish in the world is in Australia. It covers an area approximating a million and a quarter square miles, and it is estimated that it would take the supervising clergyman not less than three years to cover his field.

Chemurgy.—

What is Chemurgy? The newest dictionary available does not tell us. Yet it is destined to play an important part in the economic program of the future. Making paint, varnish and plastics from soy beans; making artificial wool from the casein extracted from dried milk; making shoe buckles, fountain pens and safety glass from cotton; making motor fuel from molasses or what not; converting the products of the farm to many yet untold uses—that is Chemurgy. Mr. Farmer, it looks as if the future has a rosy lining after all.

Public Enemy Number One.—

Beverage alcohol undermines the moral, mental and physical strength of multiplying millions and thus cripples the foundations of democracy, self-government, and progress. It imperils liberty because liberty is the power to choose the right and to take advantage of opportunity. An article whose consumption impairs this power through the corruption of the springs of thought and energy, of health and will, as does this liquid poison, is a destroyer of liberty, and its tolerance is not an emblem of freedom. It is public enemy Number One, and the only way to handle it is to destroy it.—Senator Morris Sheppard.

Smallest Book Sold at London Auction.—

What is said to be the world's smallest book was recently sold at public auction in London, England. It is a leather bound volume, only a quarter of an inch in length and three-sixteenths of an inch wide. It weighs only one and a quarter grains. This tiny book contains selections from the "Rubiayat" of Omar Khayyam, which appear as dark stains on the paper and, of course, a very powerful magnifying glass is necessary to read the verses. The selling price of this volume was $100. During its printing, which was done in Worcester, Massachusetts, in 1932, it was found that the vibration from a passing automobile was sufficient to blur the type.

Mexico and the Catholic Situation.—

A more conciliatory attitude on the part of the Mexican government toward the Roman Catholic Church gives hope to many Catholics of a possible relaxation of Federal and State religious laws. The optimism was based on the reopening in twelve States of churches which had been closed for more than a year, although there were no immediate official indications that any further changes were contemplated. About 4,000 of the country's 5,000 churches, which were closed by State officials, are now being permitted to reopen. Except in a very few cases, however, no religious services may be held in the reopened churches, State laws limiting the number of priests allowed to officiate in the entire country to 197, or one for every 80,000 Catholics. President Cardenas has promised that his government will refrain from provoking religious controversies or "subordinating the more important phases of the revolutionary program" to the Church-State dispute. He hopes by showing a more conciliatory attitude toward the Church to remove Catholic opposition to his socialistic education program.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Can the U. S. Afford a War?—

The Literary Digest thinks not. It says: "Peacemakers will argue that war must be outlawed because it is dishonorable. Scientists will tell you that war is intolerable because it destroys the flower of mankind. Pacifists will swear that another war is impossible because modern warfare is too horrible. But Congress and the veterans of the last war have proved, that, for America, at least, another war is impossible because too expensive." In turn condensing from an article by Roger Burlingame in Scribners, it estimates that by 1945, the United States will have spent the total cost of its part in the war over again. There were 4,000,000 Americans in uniform, but there were only approximately 350,000 casualties, killed, wounded and diseased. Since the end of the war these casualties have cost almost $17,000 apiece, not counting the bonus which went to disabled and healthy alike. Imagine, then, another war such as the last, with America in on the ground floor. Imagine 8,000,000 men under arms and 3,500,000 casualties. Seventeen years later the cost of caring for these would have mounted to $60,000,000,000, and another bonus would have added $8,000,000,000 more. No wonder the question is raised, Can the United States afford another war?

Off on a Fishing Trip.—

About a week ago President Roosevelt, after some delay, sailed on the new Presidential yacht, Potomac, to the land of salt-water fishing, and temporarily at least, the White House was transferred to Florida Waters. Mr. Roosevelt's favorite sport is deep-sea fishing. Other presidents had other ways of passing their vacations. Mr. Hoover liked to retire to his camp on the Rapidan River, and without doubt must have enjoyed the fresh-water fishing which the retreat nestling high up in the Virginia mountains afforded. Calvin Coolidge was also a fisherman. Most of his vacations were spent at Swampscott, Massachusetts; but he also visited the Adirondacks. His furthest holiday journey was to the Black Hills, in 1927, the year he "did not choose to run" again for the Presidency. Mr. Harding cared little for sports, we are told, but shot a passable game of golf. Messers Wilson and Taft also played golf, but rather badly. Theodore Roosevelt cared nothing at all for fishing, but attained the distinction of being a big-game hunter both with the "big stick" and with his rifle. President McKinley must have had his hobby, but we do not know what it was. Grover Cleveland was an angler of merit. Where the fish were, there he was. While he was said not to be too high-hat to use the lowly worm for bait, he fished the deep seas as well.

Seeing the Unseen.—

At the World's Fair in Chicago there was quite an interesting exhibit that in some ways almost approached the supernatural. In this house of magic one learned that it was possible to see sound and conversely to hear color. Then, too, one learned that it was possible, with the aid of science to see colors that the natural eye could never see unassisted. This phenomenon was caused by the use of what is known among scientists as fluorescent substances. Now there has been announced that due to this same research carried with fluorescence, there is promise of even greater improvement in the electric light bulb. A contemporary magazine explains: "Within a lamp bulb are placed a trace of mercury and a trifle of argon—plus a pinch of powder that has the power to fluoresce. When the current is turned on, the argon conducts it, the mercury gives off ultra-violet rays, and the powder fluoresces." In other words it absorbs these powerful invisible rays, and in turn gives off an intense visible radiation that is from fifty to 200 times as bright as that from an ordinary colored electric bulb. There is also another new and remarkable source of illumination. It is called a "capillary" lamp. Instead of the ordinary glass bulb, a small glass tube is used, with an opening the size of a rather fine needle. Into this small opening a gas is forced under very high pressure. It is stated that one of these "lamps" an eighth of an inch in diameter and only one inch long will give as much light as twenty of the ordinary 50-watt bulbs now in common use. There is one serious drawback to this powerful little lamp, that is its failure to emit red rays. But it has been found that by placing one of the "capillary" lamps within one of the fluorescent type, a tremendous amount of light approximating daylight can be produced on a very small current consumption.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Revs. F. C. Lester and R. Lee House were in Richmond during the past week and stopped for a short while at THE SUN's office. We were glad to have them.

If the Easter offering for Missions was not taken on Easter Sunday in your church, surely pastors and those interested will see to it that it is taken on the earliest Sunday possible.

Dr. Leon E. Smith thought he was a busy man before the campaign for raising $250,000 for Elon College started. Now he knows that he is a busy man. If you will do your part it will take a load of work and responsibility off his shoulders. Think it over.

Mrs. J. H. Farmer of Elon College, who has been in poor health for some years, peacefully and quietly fell on sleep at her home here Friday evening, April 10th. The funeral and burial were at the home church and cemetery, Pleasant Grove, Halifax County, Virginia. A faithful husband, Joe H. Farmer, and a devoted daughter, Miss Josephine, survive her. Mrs. Farmer was the genuine type of a true and loyal Christian. The bereaved have our sympathy.

We felicitate and congratulate our healthy and youthful neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Apple of Elon College, N. C., who on March 28th celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary. They are the parents of Rev. J. F. Apple, one of our popular and esteemed pastors. Brother Apple was for many years a member of our Apple's Chapel Church in Guilford County, near which he was reared, and is a former mayor of our village and has served as postmaster here and is now superintendent of grounds and buildings at Elon College, where he is known and held in high esteem by the students that come and go. Fifty years of wedded life seem to have given great happiness as well as health and the promise of many more years of youthful service to this fortunate pair.

RECEIVED ON SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The list below includes remittances on SUN subscriptions since our last report, up to and including April 6th. We greatly appreciate the remittances that have been sent in and would be grateful if you, too, could make your remittance at this time.

A COPY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON'S PRAYER FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in Thy holy protection, that Thou wilt incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to government; and entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow-citizens of the United States at large. And finally, that Thou wilt be most graciously pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the Divine Author of our blessed religion, and without an humble imitation of whose example in these things, we can never hope to be a happy nation.

Grant our supplication, we beseech Thee, thru Jesus Christ, Our Lord.—Amen.

CAMPAIGN RALLY AT ELON.

Moving toward the great rally which will be held on the campus of the college on Wednesday, April 29th, work of organizing the Southern Convention area of the Congregational-Christian Church for the Elon College Development Program is gaining momentum daily with additional enlistments from the ranks of clerical and lay friends of Christian education.

At the rally a body of 500 or more men and women, united in a common cause, will be prepared for their part in the $250,000 campaign which is to begin shortly afterward. The rally will take place during the week of the biennial session of the Southern Convention, which will be held in the Burlington Church, only a few miles from the campus.

In addition to the members of the church organization, alumni leaders from many places and other friends of the college who have volunteered to help make its program a success will be present to hear messages of inspiration, learn details of the plan of procedure and talk over the task they are undertaking.

Under present plans the rally will open at 1:30 o'clock, following a picnic luncheon on the campus, and will end in time for a college baseball game at 4 o'clock. An interesting program is being worked out by Chairman Stanley C. Harrell, President L. E. Smith and other leaders of the campaign.

In the meantime organization work throughout the five conferences is being rapidly advanced. In the Eastern North Carolina Conference, Rev. S. E. Madren, of Henderson, has accepted the conference chairmanship. His associates are the Rev. E. M. Carter, of Youngsville, and Mrs. Ben Holden, of Louisburg.

The chairmanship of the Western North Carolina Conference has been taken by W. H. Freeman, of Ether, who is in business at Starr. Rev. M. A. Pollard, of Liberty, is serving as an associate chairman.

In the Virginia Valley Central Conference, Rev. M. L. Weekly, of Harrisonburg, has been secured as an additional associate for Chairman R. Roy Hosaflook.

Conference chairmen are now busy selecting the remaining chairmen and associates for the various churches and groups of churches.

Excellent progress also is reported in preparations for the Alamance County campaign, which will have a separate citizen's organization. R. Homer Andrews, Burlington postmaster, business man and a leader in community activities, has accepted the county chairmanship.

SPECIAL NOTICE—FLORIDA CONGREGATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Each church is entitled to be represented by the pastor and two delegates, who will be voting delegates; but each church is urged to send as large a delegation as possible.

The Program Committee this year has planned a program of special interest to laymen. There is a laymen's session and laymen are speakers in the regular sessions. It is hoped that each church will be represented by one or more laymen.

Arrangements have been made for rooms at certain tourist homes and hotels at $1.00 per person per night. Meals may be obtained at near-by restaurants at the rate of 35c per and up. The Fellowship Supper will be served at the Woman's Club Building for 50c per person. Please consult registrar at the Church on your arrival or send reservations to

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

"SANCTUARY SUNDAY."

"Sanctuary Sunday" is proposed for observance in all denominations on May 31st by the Home Missions Council of the United States and Canada. This action was taken at its annual meeting in January with the hope that from a beginning this year the idea of the Sunday will appeal and its observance grow.

On behalf of the Church Building Department of the Extension Boards, Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, general secretary of the Boards and president of the Home Missions Council, recommends that Congregational and Christian pastors carefully consider whether the establishment of "Sanctuary Sunday" does not give a desired occasion for calling the attention of congregations to the aid which a well-adapted edifice may render in worship and for inculcating an appreciation and proper use of the building.

"Sanctuary Sunday" may be said to symbolize that it is a part of the work of a church to provide a helpful place as well as a program for worship. Because of the close association which exists between corporate worship and a church building, it is considered that it is fitting there should be designated a particular day when there should be given a place in the sermon, in prayer and in the selection of responsive readings and music to mention of the regular care of the structure, to its repair and renovation and also to its re-modeling or to additions or to an entirely new building.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS BUT ONE-ROOM CHURCHES.

The observance of "Sanctuary Sunday" was inaugurated last year by the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Collections were taken on it for a national fund to save edifices threatened by foreclosure.

The larger observance of the Sunday, it was believed at the meeting of the Home Missions Council, should help to bring about a movement for better church buildings. Churches are lagging in the adoption of improved standards for their buildings, the Rev. Elbert M. Conover, director of the Council's Bureau of Architecture, holds. There are many counties, he says, where all the rural schools are consolidated in modern buildings and all the rural churches have one-room buildings. The Census Bureau reports 211,060 buildings in the United States estimates that half of these have only a single room each and are uninspiring for worship. They are not adapted for use in religious education or for social purposes.

DR. CADY RETIRES.

Dr. and Mrs. George Luther Cady were the guests of honor Tuesday at a luncheon of the administration committee of the American Missionary Association in the George Washington Hotel, New York City. The luncheon was held in connection with the committee's last meeting when Dr. Cady will participate as executive secretary and forty-two years in the ministry.

Dr. Cady will represent the Home Boards as a speaker at the Sunday night session of the General Council on June 21st at Mt. Holyoke college. He has selected for his subject: "The Abiding Democracy."

Dr. Cady began his ministry as a home missionary in Idaho when that state was still "frontier." In the town to which he was sent in the extreme northwest corner of the state, there was, as he describes the situation, "a saloon on every corner and a brothel over almost every saloon."

"Every Saturday night," he says, "the town was full of thrills when the cowboys came in on their cayuses and put their feet on the brass rail and their good money on the bar. Big, virile, over-full of life, with no movies, no libraries, no society—nothing but Saturday night bar rooms to change the monotony of their lonely life out on the sage brush ranges. A hand grasp and a laugh for a real 'he-man' and derision for the tenderfoot who could not stick to the back of a bucking bronco. The mission church, poor as it was, was the only center for moral and inspirational life for miles and miles around."

COMMITTEE MEMBERS CONCLUDE SERVICE.

The meeting was also the last for three members of the administrative committee who retire under the rule which now limits continuous service to eight years. The retiring members are Dr. Ferdinand Q. Blanchard, pastor of Euclid Avenue church, Cleveland, Ohio, and chairman of the committee; Mrs. Lucius R. Eastman of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Mrs. Harry P. Wilcox of

of the American Missionary Association.

Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Dr. Blanchard has been a member of the committee for twenty-eight years, the longest period of service rendered by any living director of our missionary boards. Mrs. Eastman who retires after thirteen years was the first woman to be a member of the administrative and for three years, until Mrs. Wilcox joined her, she tried as she whimsically remarked, "to be a man among them." Under the rule of "one-third women" now in effect, at least five of the fifteen members of the administrative committee must be women. Those with unexpired terms are: Mrs. Athella M. Howsare, Dayton, O.; Mrs. Leslie R. Rounds, Mahwah, N. J.; Miss Marion V. Cuthbert of the staff of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A.'s.

THE 1936-1937 A. M. A. BUDGET.

A budget calling for expenditures of $1,032,000 in the work of the Association during 1936-1937 was adopted by the administrative committee on Tuesday. The appropriations of the Association were $581,500 an increase of $13,000 over the present year. The five colleges conducted under the auspices of the Association are expected to raise additionally $287,000; the twelve secondary schools, $112,600; and the two hospitals, $50,900.

TRANSFER OF SCHOOL AT FLORENCE, ALA.

The Rev. Fred Leslie Brownlee who has been co-secretary with Dr. Cady will continue as executive secretary, and Mr. George N. White who was elected last year will be associate secretary.

Mr. White reported the plan which is under way for the transfer of the Burrell Normal School, Florence, Ala., on the Tennessee River in the Muscle Shoals District, to the public school board. The school was placed this year under the management of a private inter-racial board consisting of Mayor Lee Glenn of Florence; Dr. W. N. Hollisworth, pastor of the First Presbyterian church and a member of the public school board; and three Negroes, L. W. Simpson, G. W. Pruitt and F. E. DeCosta, a former principal of Burrell. The Association is contributing $1,700 this year toward a $5,000 budget, the remainder being raised locally.

Florence has built near Burrell a twelve-room elementary building in which this year are held classes for grades 1 to 7. The 8th grade, Burrell's lowest class, will be transferred next year, and the 9th grade the following year. It is planned then to deed the Burrell property to the city of Florence for a senior high school.

Burrell gave elementary work until 1928; since it has given only junior and senior high school work.

Mr. White began his work for the Association as a teacher at Burrell in 1904 and was principal from 1905 to 1925. Miss Cuthbert, a member of the administrative committee of the Association was a teacher and then principal there after Mr. White for two years.

RADIO SINGER FROM FLORENCE, ALA.

An interlude was taken in the meeting of the committee for a solo by Homer Smith, a student at Burrell under Mr. White, and later a graduate of Wilberforce College, Xenia, Ohio. He is the manager and high tenor of the quartette which sings "Southern Airs" over N. B. C., Sundays, 10 A. M. It is the oldest sustaining program of the chain, being started in 1929. The quartette also sings Thursday night in the Maxwell House Showboat hour. Hesang "Pilgrims' Journey," a spirituelle learned in the cotton fields near Florence, Ala.

AN UNMATCHED DISTINCTION.

Dr. Mary E. Branch, president of Tillotson college, Austin, Texas, recounted to the administrative committee the measures taken to bring Tillotson a class "A" senior college rating from the Texas state department of education.

This year Tillotson which had been a women's college, became co-educational and admitted fifty-four men, mostly to the freshman class. The resident enrollment at the present time is 262. Extension classes and the summer session will bring the total number of students for the year to over 500.

Miss Branch has the distinction now of being the only woman, white or colored, to be president of a standard co-educational college. She is a graduate of Virginia State College for Negroes, the University of Chicago and Columbia university and in addition has taken graduate studies at the Universities of Pennsylvania and of Kansas. She was professor of English at Virginia State College and dean of women at Vashon high school, St. Louis, Mo., before going to Tillotson.

The preacher whose nerves are not a-tingle and whose soul is not ardent as he faces the spiritual dearth of the nation would do well to try out afresh his call to be a prophet of God. We have made much of recovery and prosperity; still our people are less spiritual and more worldly. Our hearts must burn until the church is aflame—until soul meets soul.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LOW EBB IN RELIGION.

Our belief is that SUN readers, generally, who are acquainted with world movements, will readily agree with Dr. Julius Richter in the last book from his fertile pen, who tells us "that our era is a period of low ebb in religion the world over. The Russian Orthodox Church has collapsed; Pan Islam also, and is disestablished in Turkey; so with Confucianism in China. The animistic religion of primitive peoples the world over is disintegrating irresistibly. The spiritual wasting away of the church of Christendom is an open fact—its forms changing into spiritualism and superstition or into secularism, agnosticism or atheism."

One of several reasons assigned for this low ebb in religion throughout the world is the fatal loss of prestige of Christianity due to the brutality of the war psychosis. Another reason assigned by Dr. Richter is the alienation of the younger generation from the Christian background and missionary impulse. Soviet Russia is seeking, nationally and individually, to destroy all thought of and belief in God. The ruler of Turkey will no longer allow even the religion of Mohammedanism or any other religion to be taught in the schools of Turkey. Japan is largely atheistic or communistic, and China has largely repudiated its own religion. Our United States is not escaping. The "Association of the Godless" is prosecuting a heartless warfare to establish in our country a belief that there is no God, and worse than this, Humanism is entering the churches and persuading society with godless belief that has destroyed the church in Russia and that is prevailing to such extent in Mexico to the effect that human beings are the most important parts of creation, and if we are human, if we help our fellowman, if we seek merely to share our own lot with that of our fellowman, we can leave out all thought of God and all devotion to a higher power than man, or as an agnostic awhile ago said to THE SUN's editor: "I don't have to have any God to help me to be kind and considerate to my fellowman, and if I help my helpless neighbors, I have sufficient satisfaction and will have nothing of worship nor higher power interfering with me or call upon any higher power which I do not believe to help me, since I am sufficiently human and strong to do that myself."

We are in a period of low ebb in religion, and the Church of the Living God needs to proclaim today as never before the unsearchable riches of the power of our Lord and of salvation through Jesus Christ, and that Jesus Christ is an All-Sufficient Redeemer and the world's only Saviour.

GOLD OR GOD.

Historians tell us that the reason why the Spaniards did not establish a permanent government in America, and thus become the founders of our government is, that they came to America seeking gold and based their proceedings in all their activities to colonize America on the basis of the search for gold and riches. And the reason why the English did establish a government here and colonize America was because they came seeking God and a place to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience. It is well for us to bear this historical fact in mind in these days when crass materialism seems to have the high hand in the life of the people. The real fact is that the quest for gold has never made a people prominent or rich. The real mud-sill of civilization, a civilization that endures, is agriculture—the pursuit of that increase which God gives to the tiller of the soil and those who, working together with God, produce from the earth food and clothing for the body of man and in the broad open commune with God and learn the mystery, the might and majesty of God. A distinguished authority gave the striking statement to the public recently, that the aggregate value of the products of the farm for one year was approximately $5,000,000,000 and that "all of the gold mines of the entire world have not produced since Columbus discovered America a greater value in gold than the farms of this country have produced in wealth in two years; one year's products is over six times the amount of the capital stock of all national banks. It is twice the sum of our exports and imports for a year. It is two and one-half times the gross earnings from the operation of the railways. It is three and one-half times the value of all minerals produced in this country including coal, iron, gold, silver and quarried stone."

It is well enough to bear these facts in mind as we discuss the riches of gold and the minerals of the earth, and all the other assets to man and civilization. Those who live in close proximity to God, feeling constantly their dependence on Him and looking to Him as a loving Father and a beneficent Provider are the ones who constitute the very foundation and mud-sills of our and of every enduring civilization.

HEADED FOR A FALL.

Merciless and soulless persecution may go on for a season, but a just God will not permit it to go on forever. The universe itself is founded on the basis of justice, fairness and equity, and when an individual or a nation goes counter to universal principles, that individual or nation is headed for a fall sooner or later. The North Carolina Christian Advocate reminds us that:

"Jesus was born of a Jewish mother, reared in a Jewish home, educated in a Jewish school, worshipped in a Jewish synagogue and always showed unflinching loyalty to his people. What a travesty is it for pagan Germany to call itself Christian with its outrageous persecution of the Jews! Oh, land of Luther, how art thou fallen!"

The dictator and pagan Hitler may rule Germany for a season, but he should bear in mind that the Jews from ancient time till now have stood by the tomb of all their persecutors and witnessed the folly of man's inhumanity to man.

What is said of Hitler applies equally to Mussolini and his cohorts. The wide world knows that Mussolini's armies, without provocation, are simply murdering, heartlessly and wickedly, slaying, in cold blood, helpless Ethiopians by the thousands. Mussolini can do this for a time because he has the stronger army and can govern by force, but there comes a day of reckoning when the very blood of murdered and innocent Ethiopians will cry unto him from the ground. Rome ruled by force of arms in the days of her world-wide strength and power, but the humble Galilean, Jesus of Nazareth, with His teaching of love, survived and grew stronger until the Roman Emperor cried out in the wreck of his own Empire, "O pale Galilean, thou hast conquered." Right and justice ultimately triumph—for there is a God in heaven Who created and rules this universe.

GLORIFYING CRIME.

It seems a strange mental and moral twist in our time that we have learned to glorify crime by lionizing the criminal. Recently the most noted criminal in the United States, convicted by the verdict of twelve of his peers in the jury-box and held as a criminal by the courts of his State for the most heinous and spectacular crime of his day, was popularized by hundreds who sent him checks for $1.00 in order that they might secure for keep his signature written in his own hand. And the public press played up incessantly the deeds of this criminal till every hamlet and home in the whole land had made his name a household word.

And just recently a criminal of note from another state, who, by his high-handed and illegal manipulations of a great bank, wrecked the institution and destroyed the savings of hundreds, if not thousands, of people, after serving only a minor part of the term for which he was sent to the penitentiary in North Carolina, was received with great acclaim and a banquet in his honor on his return home from a prison cell. Here was triumphal procession, with band-playing, and hearty hand-shaking, and dining and wining, in honor of a man whom all the courts from the lowest to the highest, had decreed was a criminal. The only source of comfort in such silly and sentimental exhibits is that such names soon fade from memory and the tide of time covers the tracks and obliterates the name or holds in contempt the record of the erring and the criminal.

DR. KING'S NEW BOOK.

Our friend and contributing editor, Dr. Elisha A. King, has issued another little book in the Personal Help Library Series. The title of this book is "The Lord's Prayer Today." The subtitle says: "Devotional Talks for the Quiet Hour During Lent." The foreword says that the seven talks were first given in the Community Church at Miami Beach and then were condensed for Dr. King's regular Sunday afternoon radio broadcast over station WIOD. Dr. King has been minister of the Community Church at Miami Beach since 1921 and Radio Preacher since 1926. This book of seven short addresses is a fine interpretation of the Lord's Prayer and is devotionally most helpful. They make us feel the eternal value of the Lord's Prayer and its continual resource for all ages and for all experiences. E. C. G.

A NEW PASTOR AT COLLEGESIDE CHURCH.

Rev. Wm. A. Keith recently began his pastorate with the Collegese Church in Nashville, Tennessee. Mr. Keith came to this church from the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Batavia, Illinois, where he had served for five years and closed a successful and happy pastorate to accept the call to the Collegese Church. Mr. Keith was a graduate of Chicago Theological Seminary, and before becoming pastor at Batavia, while a student, served as assistant to Dr. A. W. Palmer when he was pastor at Oak Park, Illinois. Collegese Church was organized a few years ago by a group of broad-minded business and professional men and women who desired a church with no creedal or ceremonial requirements. The church possesses a valuable property known as Collegese house, in which the broken continuance of their wedlock so long as 'both shall live.' The institution of marriage finds its primary justification in the establishment and maintenance of the Christian home, in which children shall be born and nurtured in the Christian faith. As viewed from the point of civil government, Christians recognize marriage as a legal contract involving the moral obligations of Christian citizenship; the authorities of human government also recognize this contract as binding for certain relations and obligations. A Christian home cannot ignore the two phases of the marriage institution—the divine side and the legal side. A failure to understand the marriage institution wrecks many homes and blights the fair prospects of many lives.

Much of the teaching of the New Testament is presented from the viewpoint of the home; even the teachings of Jesus often center around the family. The value of a Christian character is estimated from its relation to the family. It matters not how many may be in the group, neither does it matter how closely associated the members of the group may be, the family life is needed for the full and harmonious development of character. Jesus carried the family idea out when he presented God as a Father, himself as a brother, and all of his disciples as brothers and sisters.

foundations on which houses are built. He understood the necessity of figuring carefully the cost of building before undertaking the job. He knew the cost of sparrows, sold as cheap food in the market place, and in the home he had seen his mother mend garments and knew that no new patches could be put on old garments. He felt the sympathy that should go toward widows, those who had the home ties broken; he condemned with indignation the hypocritical practices of robbing widows' houses. He pictured helplessness crying persistently for relief by describing a widow who besought a judge for mercy. All of these are based upon his conception of the home.

A Christian home is one where all of the members of the family who are old enough are members of the body of Christ. It is a home that is regulated by the principles of the Christian religion. It is a home where the members of the family are imbued with the spirit of Christ. It is a home where character is developed after the similitude of Christ. A Christian home is one from which an influence for God and righteousness go out and bless others. It is a home which is a model for other families and is an emblem of heaven/itself. In it there is no place for partiality, jealousy, strife, and bickering. There is loyalty to the Christian ideals in a Christian home. Each member cooperates with others in striving to attain to the high degree of perfection that these ideals set forth. This implies that the husband and wife are faithful and loyal to each other, not only in the fleshly relations that they sustain, but also to the spiritual ties in Christ Jesus. The husband and father is not a tyrant; he is not domineering; not merely a provider, but a guide and a sympathetic co-worker with all the other members of the family. The wife and mother is not concerned about the human theory of "woman's rights," nor the champion "bridge player," nor is she ambitious for leadership in the petty politics of the community. She adorns the home with the virtues of Christian motherhood, with gentleness, kindness, and simplicity. She is an example to her children. Her husband honors her, loves her "even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself up for it"; she loves her husband and is in subjection to him, as Paul taught the Ephesian church: "But as the church is subject to Christ, so let the wives also be to their husbands in everything."

In the Christian home the father is revered by the children and honored by his wife. The very life that he lives and the monumental character which he has established make him, not simply the progenitor, or the provider, or the disciplinarian of the home, but it makes him the benefactor of every member of the family. All the natural bonds of parenthood are fulfilled in him, and the principles of friendship and love are exemplified in him. He cooperates with his wife in such a way as to promote the spirit of Christ and the development of his children into strong men and women in the Lord. The children of the home of such parents are usually worthy sons and daughters. The sons are not dissipated and cursed with base conceptions of life; the daughters are not frivolous, silly, and striving to imitate some fashion plate. As they grow to the age of accountability, they become members of the church. They are loyal to the church and cooperate with father and mother in maintaining the high standards of Christian living. They are not of that class who are ashamed of piety and prayer, humility and devotion; they feel their responsibility to father and mother in maintaining the ideals of a Christian home and their responsibility to God, who has blessed the home. A Christian home and family are God's ideal unit of human society.—H. Leo Boles in Gospel Advocate.

Rev. W. A. Keith, Pastor Collegese Church and Collegese House, Nashville, Tennessee.

pastor lives and it is used for classes, clubs and general church activities. The services of the church are held in the Peabody Demonstration School Auditorium across the street. The church is very happy in the coming of Mr. and Mrs. Keith. Mrs. Keith is a highly educated and delightful young woman who ably shares her husband's enthusiasm in the church work.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME.

It is a fundamental law that the "whole" partakes of the nature of its "parts"—and that the "whole" is composed of all its "parts." The family is the unit of society, and society partakes of the same nature. Society in the mass cannot be better than the units which compose it. If society is ever better, the homes which compose society must improve. It is a truism that our homes constitute the bulwark of our society. The principles of Christianity propose to regulate the home.

The marriage question always enters into the discussion of the home. It takes the union of two in marriage to start a home. It is well to understand the meaning of marriage in studying 'The Christian Home.' Some one has very aptly said that "marriage is an institution ordained of God for the honor and happiness of mankind, in which one man and one woman enter into a bodily and spiritual union, pledging each to the other mutual love, honor, fidelity, forbearance, and comradeship, such as should assure an un-

His teaching presents the whole human race as a family with one Father. When we think of the family idea which lies back of the love of Jesus for men, there is implied a "home." If it is not portrayed in the groups of disciples commonly called "churches," it is beautifully represented as "the home in heaven."

The beautiful sentiments of friendship and love spring from the idea of the home. Jesus emphasized friendship from this point of view. He said to his disciples: "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you." His friendship partook of this high quality of doing the will of God; all who do the will of the Father are brought into the covenant of friendship with Jesus. All the members of the family are brought into such a high and holy covenant relationship with each other. The home or family becomes the group into which every member is brought together in such close association that they become part-takers of each other's very nature. The character of each member of the family which is regulated by the spirit and teachings of Jesus becomes like Jesus, and, therefore, the members are like each other.

Jesus was reared in the humble home of Nazareth and knew the ties of family relationship. He knew the love that should bind the hearts together. He knew the blessings which flow from such relationship. Jesus worked and helped to maintain the home where he lived. He was reared among poor, plain people. His teachings reflect the image of the home life. He notes the kind of

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Many of the churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference held Pre-Easter services, or observed the day with special services on Easter Sunday. Dr. W. W. Staley was a pioneer, in this Conference, in planning a special service for the children and young people. The Suffolk Christian Church adheres to this type of service, and a large congregation assembles to hear the children recite and sing, and to unite in praising God for the resurrection of Jesus. Nothing is more appropriate for Easter than the children, the singing birds and the beautiful flowers.

Services were conducted in Holland and Berea churches during the Holy Week. This writer is not informed as to the other churches—but the services in these churches were well attended, and were conducted by the pastors of the churches. A candle-light communion service was conducted at Berea, Nansmond, Thursday night. The pastor requested the parents to bring their children, and many responded to this request. Thirteen candles were lighted—one long candle and twelve shorted ones, representing Jesus and the disciples. It was a most impressive service. The congregation was reverent and quiet. There was a deep silence—tense with spiritual emotion—as the deacons served the congregation. When the pastor put out the light of the candle representing Judas and removed it from the table, the small children, as well as the older people, were deeply moved. That service will be long remembered by that congregation. It was good to be there. It is a helpful service. But the officiating minister needs to make special spiritual preparation before conducting such a service.

Easter—the day of the resurrection—was a new beginning for the followers of Jesus. The birth of Jesus was the signal for a new hope for the Kingdom of God. The death of Jesus was the signal for a new hope for the kingdom of God. The death of Jesus disappointed His most ardent followers. The disciples did not understand Him. His death was a shock to their faith. But when the announcement "He is risen" was made, it brought a renewed hope, and a new day dawned for the world. A new note was added to the Gospel preached by the disciples. He won the supreme victory over death, and thus sustained His claim to be the Son of God.

The legalism and moral platitudes of the Jewish Dispensation were supplanted by the power of His resurrection. The first century of the Christian era witnessed the preaching of the resurrection as the central doctrine. But the Apostles and other evangelists did not limit their preaching to the proclamation of this fundamental doctrine. To them this doctrine gave unquestioned authority to the command of Jesus to "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Or, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Paul staked everything upon the resurrection of Jesus. Jesus was more than one of the good and great men of the world. He was the best and greatest man of history. But He was more than all that. He was the Son of God. He has proven this claim by His resurrection. Now He has authority and Divine power. His word is law. His command is supreme. When He speaks the church should listen. His commission should be respected and obeyed. Every Christian should be a soul winner. Every church member should cultivate the missionary spirit and seek to carry the Gospel message to the nations and people of the earth.

After Easter the missionary spirit of the churches should be cultivated. Spiritual life should be deepened and broadened. It should be the time for winning converts and members in our local churches. Do not close this appeal with the passing of Easter. Begin anew. Be a flaming evangel. Preach the Gospel of a Risen Lord.

MY RESPONSIBILITY.

Nearly fifty years ago the membership of my church united its efforts, amassed its contributions and erected Elon College. My church has felt the responsibility for the college through the years. It has given its endorsement and support to the college. Young men and young women of the homes of my church have found at Elon College advantages of higher education and consistent training for the responsibilities of life. Sunday school teachers, young people's workers, laymen, and ministers of my church have received inspiration and guidance on Elon College's campus. My church has not been as faithful to the college as it should. The college is the child of my church. It cannot grow successfully separate and apart from my church. The college has gone through days of need and nights of disappointment. The future looks a little brighter now. The light of hope is beginning to shine more brightly.

I learned from the CHRISTIAN SUN, my church paper, and from many of my friends that another great effort has already begun in behalf of my college, the institution of my church. Somebody is beginning this effort but whoever is beginning it cannot do it alone, nor can it be done with a few of the friends and alumni of the college. If this campaign now under way is to succeed I know that it will take the best efforts on the part of everyone connected with the college in any way and that includes me. Yes, I personally have a responsibility in the heroic effort that my church is making in the interest of my college. And as I sit down and think about the program as announced and the goal that is set I know that these plans and this goal will make definite demands upon me. It will require my best thoughts. It will be necessary for me to think seriously about the whole undertaking. My church is undertaking this task not to fail but to succeed. I must go along with it. And before I go I must think the thing through, think about what will be the effect should the campaign fail, what will be the effect should it succeed. The failure to do my part may mean failure for the whole plan. My faithfulness in doing my part completely may mean success.

Well, it looks like it is going to take some of my time. I am busy. I have my own responsibilities. Nobody will look after my affairs if I do not but I cannot afford to let this effort of my church be made by others and I give my time to what I call my own business. This would be selfish and I do not like to be put in that light. I heard a man say today, who is not a member of my church, nor an alumnus of my college, "I am so tremendously interested in the success of this campaign that if necessary I had rather close my business for sixty days than to see this campaign for Elon College fail." If an outsider feels so deeply for the success of the Development Campaign for Elon College, surely I can afford to give a bit of my time. Then I know that if the goal of $250,000 is reached and it must be reached, that every individual member of my church and every alumnus of the college will have to give to the extent of his ability, not beyond what he is able to give but every cent that he should and that includes me. I must make my contribution, and as I face this matter of giving money I am reminded of my debts. I cannot forget them—my creditors will not let me forget them. Then, too, I am reminded of my losses. I have lost a lot of money but perhaps more serious than all my income has been reduced and I see no chance of building it up to the point it once was. To make the contribution the size I would like to make will require sacrifices. Others of my church are sacrificing and why shouldn't I?

I prefer to make a sacrifice rather than see this campaign fail. This is an effort on the part of my church. My church has been good enough to include me in its fold and I shall be good enough to go with my church in this heroic effort. This seems then, to be the demand:

- First, I shall bring my thought, my ability;
- Second, I shall give my time, whatever may be necessary;
- Third, I shall divide my living. I will bring my share according to my possessions, whether this share be much or little.

I am glad to make this acknowledgment of my responsibility and make these declarations of my intentions to do the fullest measure of my ability hoping that every other member of my church and every other alumnus of the college may join with me in these resolves.

A MEMBER OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH AND AN ALUMNUS OF

THE CHURCH AND ITS FINANCIAL PROGRAM.

By REV. R. A. WHITTEN.

(Prepared for Eastern Virginia Ministers' Ass'n.)

The financial part of the church program is as essential as that which has to do with service or prayer. Therefore, the church should make no compromise or apologize for asking for money to supply its needs, but the church which either operates solely for the sake of its financial program or creates that impression in the minds of those within and without will forever be engaged in a difficult task.

The Church of Christ will ever need a financial program varying according to the scope of its work if she is to glorify her Saviour and make Him known to a sadly discontented and sinful world, but the raising of the funds will be only an incident or by-product of her task.

The financial obligation and how to meet it has been and continues to be a question of serious importance. It has affected both rural and city churches and is a hindrance to the progress and development of Spiritual life. The trouble is not about money, but because we have not yet actually discovered that money is related to life. Jesus had more to say about a man's attitude toward his money than about any other one thing as shown in sixteen of his thirty-eight parables. He teaches that money-giving is a way to and an expression of the consecration of life.

The church that does not respect its financial obligations soon loses the respect of its members and friends. The burden of debt has likely kept large numbers of people from becoming members of the church because they are unwilling to assume obligations incurred by others. This, when thoughtfully understood, is but an excuse rendered as a reason for the failure to discharge a duty.

Our church, so far as I have become acquainted with it, has neglected to instruct its members in the matter of its financial program as some of our sister communions have done and we are suffering for our sin and limiting our service. This unpardonable error might easily be traceable to the ministers, who too long have felt that they had no right to speak out on the subject. To fail to remind people of their obligation to God regarding their money is as sinful as to neglect any other portion of the teaching of the Scriptures. The church of today will not be remembered in the years to come by the money she raises, but by the good she accomplishes, and the good she accomplishes will be measured largely by the money she invests for her expansion.

I believe that methods of other days are often obsolete. There was a time when a package of envelopes could be placed in the home and a card signed and the results obtained. The appeal that will reach thoughtful people today is not the time-worn appeal for duty's sake, which prompted thousands to give in the past because the church was an institution of prime importance and respected largely through traditionalism. The appeal must be that which will reach human hearts and enlist them for a noble purpose. One could hardly expect an intelligent man to invest his means in speculative stock which assured no immediate dividends or to increase his holdings in a business that had not been able to manage its financial affairs so as to keep its obligations square with the world.

If the church is to meet the challenge of her Lord, she must challenge those who come within her reach to become faithful stewards of a sacred task. A task large enough, noble enough, interesting enough, and sufficiently worthy to engage all the powers of mind, body and strength, which will include possessions.

The ideal solution for our present financial difficulty will be discovered and realized when we, as ministers, declare the whole counsel of God, teaching our people what the Bible teaches us regarding what we owe and how we should pay it. When this becomes our passion and our purpose, the right program will be found, the spiritual thermometer will rise and a note of triumphant joy will be dominant in the hearts of our people. Horace Bushnell is quoted as having said, "One more revival is needed; the revival of Christian stewardship, the consecration of money power to God. When that revival comes, the Kingdom of God will come in a day." Until the vision comes to our eyes of dull vision, we will continue to give grudgingly and toil laboriously, devising many schemes to meet our financial needs.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

SHARING.

We may not experience God's love and realize its depths in our own experience, but we may share that love with others. Now the wonderful, in fact the mysterious, thing is that as we share this love with others, the more of it we have in our own souls. The very heart of Missions is the word, "Sharing", sharing God's love, God's goodness, God's mercy with others. Not our love, mind you, but His love; not our name or fame, or glory or joy, but His love and Name, and fame and joy. Well did Nehemiah, the great re-builder, declare: "The joy of the Lord is your strength." This, indeed accounts for the strength, the patience, the fortitude of the faithful heralds of the cross everywhere, and especially of the missionary who has resigned himself or herself wholly to the will of the Lord.

There is speaking in many of our churches now Miss Olive Greene, one of our missionaries on furlough from Turkey. One marvels at the patience and the persistence, the resignation, and yet the courage and hope, with which she goes at her work and carries it on in the Girls' School of which she is a part. Under the present government in Turkey, no school, whether missionary or native, is allowed to teach religion of any kind. If she were to read the Bible before her school or win a convert to Christianity in her school, that school would be closed up. And the same is true with regard to the Turkish schools that are State-supported. If they were to read the Koran—their Bible—or propagate their religion (Mohammedan) in one of their own schools, that school would be closed up or the teacher possibly imprisoned.

Under such handicaps and difficulties, one wonders how the missionary has the fortitude and the patience to carry on. There is no explanation, except in the fact that the joy of their Lord is their strength. They work on conscientiously, seeking to be faithful teachers of the subjects assigned them in the schools, and thus help to produce character that is substantial and strong and beautiful, hoping and believing that the day will come when the Turk will be more favorable to religion and especially to Christianity. These missionaries in Turkey are having to show the same sort of fortitude and faith that the early missionaries showed in China, India and Africa, who, in the threat of death and imprisonment, preached, taught, labored six or even seven years without winning a convert. However, they went on sharing the love of their Lord with these who would not acknowledge even the source of that love and would not accept the Name who was the inspiration and dynamic of that love.

Is it worthwhile? Was it worthwhile? Can it be worthwhile? This writer has long since learned that the most needy people on this earth, those to whom help means most, are not those who are begging to be helped, or holding out a hand to receive, but the people who do not care for help and resent the help offered. The hardest to help are the ones who need help most. Unless our Lord's love is strong enough to help those most needing that help, then we cannot boast of that love as All-Sufficient, and so the spirit of Missions is the spirit of sharing—sharing not a love for which we will get praise and thanks and the applause of man, but for which we get the approval of conscience and the sweet assurance of God's approval—the sharing not of our human but of His divine and infinite love. We cheapen our love when we satisfy ourselves with helping those who are close by and easy to help and when we confine our love to those who will applaud us for manifesting it. "The joy of Jehovah is our strength." And the sharing of His love is that spirit that our Saviour had in mind when He commissioned His disciples to share their message of salvation in all directions and far away as well as close by.

MRS C. H. STEPHENSON, Treas.

Raleigh, N. C.

THE PURPOSE OF WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

The women's organization should help to make the church a House of Prayer to all people; an ennobling factor in the life of the parish and community. It should provide a friendly atmosphere where every available woman is welcome; where women of all temperaments and ages may realize the richness of sharing life as members of a group unified in a common purpose. It should cooperate with the religious education committee and the minister in building a unified program for the church. It can be serviceable in the outreach of the denomination into the places where the church can supply the want of human lives. They can encourage the development of appropriate new fields of thought. A substantial part of the purpose must be the cultivation of power to grow in spirit and so intensify the motives and desires of personal lives for high Christian character, for which there is no substitute and from whence springs the will to promote the women's work.

While the women represent the living stones builded into the temple of the Most High, the organization is only the tool. More thought should be given to adapting the organization to the needs of the group. One of the secretaries says, "Begin with what you have, where you are." . . . study the group, its history, its interests, its needs, its possibilities. Every woman can be put intelligently to work. Make the purpose of the organization express the need of the group.

The purpose of any woman's organization will live and grow only in so far as the officers of that organization make it their responsibility to know that purpose and from time to time make it their business to look back at a year's achievement and evaluate it by the standards which have been adopted. Changes will necessarily follow to suit new needs and conditions; creative planning can make more fruitful and inspirational the whole service of women's organization.

"Do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for power equal to your tasks. Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle. But you shall be a miracle. Every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness of life which has come to you by the grace of God."—Phillips Brooks.

THE SON OF A SLAVE GIVES $1,000.

He is the son of slave parents. He was a few years old at the time of the emancipation. His father died when he was a mere infant, and his mother had gone by the time he was nine years old.

His only schooling was for a few weeks in the little Storr's School conducted by the American Missionary Association in Atlanta during the years immediately following the close of the Civil War.

Somehow that school, its teachers and the American Missionary Association became a symbol to him of all that is fine and noble in Christian brotherhood.

He never mastered a skilled trade, and of course never fitted himself in any sense for a profession. He was industrious, thrifty and honest, however, all the years, and the school of experience has done a lot for him that regular schools so often fail to do for many people.

"I always made it a rule never to spend as much as I earned and therefore was able to accumulate some property and save a little money," he said to me.

He is a very quiet and unassuming man. Since childhood he has been a member of a Congregational Church and for many years a faithful deacon.

Imagine if you can how Mr. Barnwell, secretary of Southern Negro church work, must have felt on the Monday following a Sunday when he spoke in an Atlanta church on the Missionary Association and Missions in general, to have this son of a former slave come to his office and hand him a check for $1,000 payable to the American Missionary Association.

Mr. Barnwell asked him how he would like the money used, and he said, "The American Missionary Association can decide that."

It seemed a sacrilege to spend so much of this good man's savings for current expenses during one year or to apply it to the Association's accumulated debt.

It was therefore suggested that his gift might be added to the Beard Endowment Fund, the income of which goes to promising Negro students who cannot afford to attend school or college, or to some other permanent fund which might perpetuate his beneficence.

"Well, now, that would be very selfish for me to decide," the donor replied. "I saved for a long time until I had a thousand dollars to give the American Missionary Association, and I want the American Missionary Association to decide how best to spend it."

"I might have given it to you a little sooner, but then, I've always had a sort of inferiority feeling in approaching important people."

"I long wanted to do this as my testimony of appreciation to the American Missionary Association, and now I want the American Missionary Association to know that I trust it to spend the money where it will do the most good."

I never felt more humble in my life than after listening to that. I finally turned to him.

"I must tell this story to others. May I do so?"

"You may do so if you don't use my name, at least not until after I am dead." (He is somewhere in the neighborhood of seventy-five years.) "When I die the American Missionary Association will find that I have left it a little property." —Adapted from an article by Fred L. Brownlee in The Missionary Herald.

The trouble with the man of one talent is that he loses the sense of obligation. That is why he was discouraged. Stewardship emphasizes obligation.—Anonymous.

A Story for the Children

UNCLE DAN AND THE CRABS.

"Earle, Pearl, where are you?" called a booming voice outside a little white cottage one summer morning.

The Blake twins raced to the front door and opened it wide.

"Come in, Uncle Dan," they cried happily.

"Come out," said Uncle Dan Drake with a broad, beaming smile.

"Are we going to the beach now?" asked Pearl as she skipped along beside her uncle.

"Are you going to tell a story?" asked Earle eagerly.

"Yes, and yes," said Uncle Dan, bobbing his head at each twin.

"Oh, look!" cried Pearl excitedly a few minutes later. She pointed to the wet sands ahead of them. "What is that on the beach? It's moving!"

"That is an army," said Uncle Dan.

"An army! It looks like a lot of crabs," said Earle.

"Right!" said Uncle Dan, stopping a little way from the curious objects. "You are right and I am right. What you see is an army of soldier crabs. That is why I hurried you both down here now. At low tide so many of these tiny crabs come together that they look like an army and that is why they are called soldier crabs."

"Where do they live?" asked Pearl wonderingly.

"They dig their way down into the sand," explained Uncle Dan. "When a soldier crab wants to make a home, he starts digging with his own legs. First he uses the legs on one side of his body and then he turns around and uses the legs on his other side. He keeps turning around and around that way, just like a corkscrew, until he has made a little tunnel way down into the sand where he wants to live. When the tide begins to come in all the soldier crabs will start digging, and they work so quickly that the whole army will disappear in a few seconds."

"Are there other kinds of crabs?" asked Earle, stretching out on the sand.

"Do they make their own homes?" asked Pearl, curling up comfortably against her uncle.

"Yes, and yes," said Uncle Dan, bobbing his head and smiling at each twin.

"Please tell us about them," said Earle quickly.

"There are tiny crabs, or shrimps, as they are sometimes called, who dig their homes in a rock," began Uncle Dan. "You would not think they would be strong enough, but they can bore their way right into a rock and live there comfortably. Many of these crabs bore into the same rock together and the rock is their apartment house. Other tiny crabs bore into a wooden wharf or a harbor building until the wood looks as if it were full of holes. Sometimes three hundred of these tiny crabs live in one square inch of wood."

"Do all the crabs dig their homes?" asked Pearl, who had been trying to make a tunnel in the sand with her fingers.

"There is one kind of a crab who sews his house together with his feet," replied Uncle Dan.

"I didn't know crabs could sew," exclaimed Earle.

"That is because you are too young to know everything," said Pearl, trying to look grown-up. "I mean, you are not as old and wise as Uncle Dan," she added hastily, as her brother started toward her.

"Of course, crabs do all their house-building with their claws and legs," said Uncle Dan, putting an arm around each twin. "They usually lie on their backs while they are at work. The crab who sews makes his house out of seaweed. There is a kind of seaweed where he lives that looks like a thick mat with a thread running through its furrows or grooves. The crab lies on his back in one of the grooves of his seaweed and uses his smaller legs to pull the edges of the groove together above him. He begins work by pushing one of his legs through one edge of the seaweed mat as if it were a needle, and he catches the thread from the opposite edges. Then he pulls the thread back through the first edge. His first stitches are long like bastings, just to hold the seaweed together. He goes over his work again and sews the seaweed more tightly together with short stitches until he has made a tube for his home."

"It must take him a long time," said Earle.

"No, for he works so fast that he can make a tube four inches long in about ten minutes," said Uncle Dan.

"Do other crabs do queer things?" asked Pearl.

"They may seem queer to us," said Uncle Dan, "but natural to them. We would think it queer to spin our houses out of our own bodies, but it is the only way one kind of crab knows how to make his home. He spins a little tube from some sticky substance in himself. At first it looks like glass and can be seen through, but it soon becomes dark because bits of seaweed stick to it. The crab can move around in this tube as he pleases, and if anything disturbs him he looks out of first one end of it and then the other. When he wants to move he pushes his house around with him."

"Wouldn't we look funny to take our houses around with us?" said Earle, with a laugh.

"Yes, and we should feel queer if we tried to live in a lamp chimney," said Uncle Dan. He smiled at the twins' astonished expressions. "Some of the hermit crabs will use almost anything for a home. They have been found living in half a coconut shell, in pieces of bamboo, and even in broken lamp chimneys."

"Other crabs grow with their hind legs turned up over their backs so they may hold up their houses. These crabs carry their homes around with them wherever they go, for the houses become part of them. One kind of crab begins when he is very young to make his house by tearing off a piece of sponge and putting it on his back. As he grows in size the sponge grows too, until it covers him and hides him completely when he does not wish to be seen."

"The spider crab has some little hooked hairs on his back which catch seaweed, sponges, and other things that grow in the ocean, until he looks like a moving garden. This garden makes a good disguise for him when he is hunting for food, and it is great protection from any enemies that might be hunting for him. And that reminds me that your mother will be hunting for you, as it is time for lunch," said Uncle Dan, looking at his watch.

"Oh, Uncle Dan, I didn't know crabs were so different and interesting," said Pearl. "I thought crabs were—were just crabs."

"Everything is interesting if you know about it," said Uncle Dan wisely, "and I think fishes and crabs and pebbles and shells and seaweed are especially interesting."—Lydia Lyon Roberts in Zion's Herald.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

OUR EASTER SERVICES.

Reports from several of our churches in Eastern Virginia indicate that Easter Sunday proved to be a good day for the Church. Several of our pastors were out and gone Monday morning before this office began to call over the telephone. Perhaps they were very happy and went out to rejoice all through this bright and beautiful day.

South Norfolk reports the best attendance at Sunday School and church for years. Rosemont received four members and christened three babies. Christian Temple had a big crowd and a good service but I have not received the number of admissions to the church. First Church, Norfolk, held a sunrise service at 6 o'clock in addition to the other two services. Ten were received into membership, and four babies were christened. Five were baptized.

The weather man worked in favor of all the churches yesterday. It was a bright, beautiful morning up to church time, rained in the early afternoon, and was clear again at the evening. Spring clothing and beautiful flowers added to the attractiveness of the audience (but made one wonder how Christian a church group is that spends more for flowers than it gives for Missions.) The newspapers report good attendance, excellent services, and large gatherings of members in the churches of our city.

It leads one to believe that the Church is not dead and that the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus still have their drawing power. So long as His story is told and people flock to the churches to hear it there is hope for the world.

IF I HAD BEEN A SOLDIER.

If I had been a soldier
Who watched beside the tomb,
Who paced in Joseph's garden
In Palestine's soft gloom;
If I had seen the angel,
If I had lain as dead,
Would Easter be more real to me?

If I had been a woman
Who came with spices rare
To weep beside a body
Which was no longer there;
If I had seen the angel
And borne his message true,
Would I rejoice at Easter
More greatly than I do?

If I had been with Thomas
To see His wounded side,
To touch His risen body
And with His friends abide,
Could I love Easter better
Or closer to Christ cleave
Than when I claim His blessing
Who see not, but believe.

—Shirley Sweetnam Still.

YOUTH SHARING IN THE PROGRAM OF MISSIONS.

Led by Miss Carolina Gort.

We, as Christians, should be interested in Missions, the proclamation of the Good News of the Kingdom of Christ, where it is news. (1) Because we, who are to exemplify the spirit of Christ, cannot get away from His command—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." (2) Because the spirit of helpfulness and sharing with others is predominate in the spirit of Christ. (3) Because of the natural impulse to tell others of blessings which we ourselves have experienced.

We, as young people, should be missionary-minded, because the call of Christ was the call of youth to youth. The missionary program presents a challenge calling for energy, enthusiasm, and hope. Youth can meet this challenge.

Young people are not interested in missions as they should be.

Regarding the supervision of the older group, it was suggested that there be closer cooperation and more of an exchange of ideas and methods.

In regard to missionary study classes for the younger group, the thought was expressed that better results could be obtained if the teaching of the text books and presentation of other material was done by several members, rather than being the responsibility of one person.

The young people favor the raising of all missionary apportionments by free-will offerings rather than by other methods.

The importance of prayer in the missionary program of the church was stressed.

LOUISE BAKER, Secy.

YOUTH SHARING IN THE PROGRAM OF WORSHIP.

Led by Rev. R. L. House.

How young people can share in the program of worship:

I. By cultivating our own devotional life. This can be done through prayer, by devotional reading, and meditation.

II. Music.—By having a young people's choir which might do pageants, pantomimes, responses, processions and recessionals and cantatas, offertory and preludes. Young people can sponsor a Junior choir. Any instrument can be used quite effectively in worship services.

III. Improving the equipment of the church. Memorials lend an air of worshipfulness, also memorial tablets, windows, and Bible markers. Communion sets and collection plates are a help. Harmony of colors in the paint tend to make one more worshipful. Flowers and vases, song books and pews play a large part.

IV. Art.—The use of pictures, stereopticon machinery and books on the Gospel in art are incentives to worship.

V. By conducting worship services in Christian Endeavor, Sunday School, prayer meetings, at the church service.

YOUTH SHARING IN THE PROGRAM OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

Led by Miss Lottie May Cross.

We believe every person having the responsibility of teaching a class in a church school should prepare themselves to teach that class, a preparation which would compare favorably with the preparation of a public school teacher.

We believe there shall be held within the reach of every present and prospective Sunday school teacher or leader in our conference a standard training school or class in as nearly every church as possible and that each church should send at least two young people to the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training.

Every Sunday School should provide leadership training books and literature which should be accessible to the teachers.

We believe that every Sunday school in the conference should cooperate with the Board of Christian Education by seeking assistance from the Board for the promotion of leadership training and by contributing financially to the Board.

MARY JONES, Secy.

HOW TO CONQUER OUR FEARS.

Hymn: "Take the Name of Jesus With You."
Prayer.

Hymn: "Yield Not to Temptation."

Announcement of topic—Scripture.

Leader's Introductory Talk.

Points for Talks—

There are two kinds of fear. One is terror, fright, the dread of evil to befall one. The Bible tells us, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." This is another kind of fear. It implies respect for God and awe and reverence.

Many of our fears are groundless, and highly exaggerated. There are people who waste a good portion of their time worrying about something that may happen—to them or to someone else—and ninety-nine times out of a hundred it does not happen. If, when these fears come into our minds, we find some work that will take our attention we will not have time for these foolish fears.

It is usually sin that brings the real fears into life. People who do not live a clean, wholesome life have a cause to be afraid. Those who disobey God an d treat His commandments lightly should truly stand in fear.

But faith and love are the opposite of fear. God and treat His commandments lightly should If one loves God, obeys His will, and trusts Him, there will be no cause for fear. Let each of us bring our lives into harmony with God, and we will gain a new sense of power and security.

Period of directed prayer—(Play softly "I Need Thee Every Hour.")

1. Ask God to give us the mind to remove from our lives those things that are harmful to us.

2. Ask God to give us the mind to remove from our lives those things that cause us to fear Him.

3. Thank God for the faith that gives us our strength and courage.

(Sing the second verse: "I Need Thee, etc.")

Special Music: "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

Leader:

"Fear not, I am with thee

O be not dismayed

For I am thy God,

I will still give thee aid,

I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand

Upheld by my gracious omnipotent hand."

Hymn: "Just When I Need Him Most."

Benediction.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARBCASTLE.

GOD, THE FORGIVING FATHER.

LESSON III—APRIL 19, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Like as a father pitieth his children, So the Lord pitieth them that fear Him."—Psalm 103:13.

LESSON: Luke 15. Printed Text, Luke 15:11-24.

The parable of the Prodigal Son is perhaps the best known story of Jesus. It has a universal and timeless appeal. It embodies, as Dean Brown says, practically all the fundamental teachings of theology—the Divine Fatherhood, our filial standing in God's family, our dependence upon God and the unescapable responsibility which springs from it, sin, retribution, conviction of sin, faith, repentance, forgiveness, confession of sin, consecration, the witness of the Spirit, reconciliation, atonement—they are all here set forth in simple but sublime ways. They are clothed in flesh and blood and made to speak in language that we can understand.

The parable might better be called the Parable of the Father, however, rather than the Parable of the Prodigal Son—it should not take its name from the least worthy figure which moves across its pages. Jesus told this immortal story to show the love of God, its inescapableness, its yearning, its welcome to the wandering child of God. And He told it with that definite point in view. The setting of the three parables in Luke 15, clearly show that. "Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him. And the Pharisees and scribes murmured saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them. And He spake this parable unto them saying . . ." Strange as it may seem, these religious leaders, rather than being glad that publicans and sinners were eager to hear the word, and gave evidence of feeling an impulse to a better life, these religious leaders murmured, complained, criticised. They acted very ugly in the matter, and Jesus straightway set them right. He made it plain in this parable that the Father's heart went out to His wayward children, that their sins broke His heart, that He expectantly awaited the least evidence that they were turning to Him, that He would accord them a gracious welcome and a generous response when they returned to His house. The parable which is called the parable of the Prodigal Son is rather a life-sized portrait of God, the Forgiving Father.

The Prodigal Son.

Practically everyone is familiar with the story of this young man. Unmindful of his blessings, eager to see "life" and to be on his own, chafing under discipline, self-sufficient, he asked for and received his portion of the goods that would have come to him eventually, and went into a far country where he soon wasted his substance, aided and abetted by a crowd of false friends. In want and in desperation he finally was sent into the fields to feed swine—the last straw. He came to himself—he realized that he had been a fool. He faced about, and resolutely set out to go back to his father's house, not as a son, but as a servant. His dominant mood had changed from "Father, give me" to "Father, make me." He plodded every step of the way back home, and as far as he was allowed to do so, made his confession.

It is a human interest story of folly, of self-indulgent, of moral deterioration, of waste, of retribution, of remorse, of despair. The far country is not primarily a matter of miles; it is a matter of attitudes and ideals.

The Forgiving Father.

"But while he was yet afar off, his father saw him, and was moved with compassion, and ran, and fell upon his neck and kissed him." Read these words slowly, ponder over them, let their meaning sing into your heart, and you will see that they are the heart of the parable. Jesus would have underscored them if he had been writing them. That father had been watching for that boy, his heart was breaking for that boy, he had already forgiven that boy, he simply awaited the boy's coming and evidence of the boy's penitence to grant his forgiveness. The father ran—he could not wait until the boy got all the way back home. It is a picture of the heart of God, grieving for His children, yearning for their return, moved with compassion for them, granting them forgiveness when they turn from their evil ways and confess their sins, bestowing upon them the kiss of reconciliation, and bringing forth for them blessings in abundance. The best is none too good for the penitent sinner. If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

"There's a wideness to God's mercy like the wideness of the sea;
There's a kindness in his justice that is more than liberty.
For the love of God is broader than the measure of man's mind,
And the heart of the Eternal is most wonderfully kind." Faber.

The Despicable Brother.

He is just that, despicable, mean, contemptible. In spite of the fact that he had served his father all those years, that he had not transgressed his father's commandments, that he had worked hard, he was impossible. If the writer had to choose between living with the younger son and the older son, he would not hesitate a minute in making his choice—he would choose the younger brother. Sins of the flesh, the sins of hot-headed and hot-blooded youth are bad, but deliver us from the lovelessness, the ingratitude, the self-righteousness of the elder brother. This man was ungrateful, jealous, proud, self-righteous, petty, mean, selfish. There is no more unhappy picture in the Bible than this sulky, surly son, stubbornly staying outside, refusing to go in and to welcome back his brother who as it were had come back from the dead.

And just as Jesus would have underscored the words which told of the Father's welcome to the erring boy, so would he have underscored the words which sum up the elder brother's attitude. He was a picture of the scribes and Pharisees, who murmured when the publicans and sinners drew near for to hear him. Lovelessness, for Jesus, was the great sin. That is the unpardonable sin.

For blessings of the fruitful season,
For work and rest, for friends and home,
For the great gifts of thought and reason,—
To praise and bless Thee, Lord, we come.
Yes, and for weeping and for wailing,
For bitter hail and blighting frost,
For high hopes on the low earth trailing,
For sweet joys missed, for pure aims crossed.
—E. Scudder.

MONDAY.

"A PRAYER."

"Lord, make me an instrument of Thy peace. Where there is hate, may I bring love; where offense, may I bring pardon; may I bring union in place of discord; truth replacing error; faith where there was doubt; hope for despair; light where there was darkness; joy to replace sadness. Make me not to so crave being loved as to love. It is in giving that one receives; in forgetting self that one finds and awakens to eternal life."—From an ancient French book of prayers, as quoted in Springfield Republican.

"THE ART OF BEING KIND."

"And be ye kind to one another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Eph. 4:32.

"It is so easy to smile and to be agreeable and even to do the small kindly things, that I'm puzzled a little that it isn't a more common habit. One reason, I suppose, is that courtesy requires a two-way street. I find I have a definite weakness for the policeman I saw lugging the basket of an old Jewish woman through the traffic of Canal street and the busy man who writes a long and courteous letter to the utter stranger in quest of information and the cigar or drug clerk who leaves his counter to instruct a non-paying visitor in the use of a dial telephone. I think life would be easier if more of us liked people, all kinds of people, under all kinds of conditions and handicaps. I think our heaviest burdens would be lighter and our important problems less worrisome, if we didn't have to carry so many little loads of thoughtlessness, and have our minds and hearts troubled by so many trifling rules. It is really quite easy to write a kind letter. It is still easier to say a kind word. Few of the things we have the opportunity of doing for other people really involve any very painful self-sacrifice, and the things of this sort we don't do sterilize our own souls, and harden our own paths. More than anything else in our journey through life, they rate us as first-class, second-class or steerage."—Channing Pollock as quoted from Boston Herald.

Prayer—How hard, O God, to keep the spirit of brotherly love. May we remember Thy love real and true towards us, and may we strive to be Christlike unto others. For His sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"I'D RATHER LIVE IN HEARTS."

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33.

"If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, Time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal souls, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of fellow men, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten all eternity."
—By Daniel Webster.

Prayer—O Lord deliver us from sin and give us Thy plan. Despite life's sorrows, pains and hardships, may we be faithful, shout Thy praise, and go forward each day to carry Thy kingdom to the hearts of men.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"BROTHERHOOD."

"Ye ought to help the weak and remembering the words of the Lord Jesus, that He himself said, it is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35.

"In every patch of timber you
Will always find a tree or two
That would have fallen long ago,
Borne down by wind or snow,
Had not another neighbor tree
Held out its arms in sympathy
And caught the tree the storm had hurled
To earth. So, brothers, is the world.

"God grant that men are alike to these,
And brothers, brotherly as trees."

—From "Canadian Lumberman."

Prayer—

"This is my prayer to Thee, my Lord—strike, strike at the root of penury in my heart.

Give me the strength to make my love fruitful in service.

Give me the strength never to disown
the poor."

—Rabindranath Tagore.

FRIDAY.

"BECAUSE OF THY GREAT BOUNTY."

"Freely ye have received, freely give."—Matt. 10:8.

"Because I have been given much,
I too, shall give;
Because of Thy great bounty, Lord,
each day I live,
I shall divide my gifts from Thee with every brother that I see
Who has the need of help from me.

"Because I have been sheltered, fed by Thy good care,
I cannot see another's lack and I not share
My glowing fire, my loaf of bread,
my roof's shelter overhead,
That he, too, may be comforted.

"Because love has been lavished so upon me, Lord.
A wealth I know that was not meant for me to hoard.
I shall give love to those in need, the cold and hungry clothe and feed.
Thus shall I show my thanks indeed."
—Grace Noll Crowell.

Prayer—Our Father, doing good reveals Thee, and revealing Thee is to know Thee. Grant to us the sacrifice of love and that patience with which Jesus has dealt with us. Let our hearts be one among many to cry aloud for the good of man.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"PURIFIED GATES."

"They purified the people, and the gates, and the wall."—Neh. 12:27-43.

After Nehemiah, rebellder of the walls of Jerusalem, had completed his strenuous, great undertaking, he consecrated it. His purifying of the people, the gates, and the wall itself was a dedication of his work to God.

It was also a recognition of the fact that only through the grace of Jehovah had the people been restored to their land, only through the loving favor of the Lord had it been possible to restore the walls in the face of the foe.

Our work is often spoiled at the close by our conceit of it. Humility becomes one who has accomplished any worthy task. Humility becomes any nation and any city that has taken honorable rank among men. Very likely our own private fortunes would be far more extended if we had the wisdom to purify our gates and our walls.

Prayer—All is of Thee, our Father. Work Thou in us and through us, and may we know that the work is of Thee. In Jesus' name.—Amen.

"A STRAIGHT COURSE."

"He walked in the ways of David his father, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left."—II Chron. 34:1-7.

Young Josiah was a king after God's own heart, a descendant of which David might well have been proud. God could bless him, for he sought with all his heart to serve God; and therefore God did bless him.

Especially do the readers of Josiah's history rejoice in the straightness of his noble course: he did not turn from it to the right hand or to the left.

It is so easy for us to make minor deflections from the true life: a little carelessness here, a little hypocrisy there; now a white lie and now a lie that is almost black; now an unkindness and again a discourtesy or a bit of gossip or slander. And soon we find ourselves out of the right way altogether.

Prayer—Dear Lord, help us to be true to Thee, in things both small and great, day after day, all through our lives. May we not depart from Thy ways, to the right hand or to the left. For the Master's sake.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

A PRAYER.

(Matthew 7:8.)

The Bible nowhere attempts to define prayer. As a matter of fact, the Bible is not a book of definitions, anyway. God's statements of truth are so clear that no definitions are necessary.

Yet the message God seeks to convey to us is a sealed book to the man who is yet laboring under the mist and fog of the carnal mind. It is with the spirit's eye and ear that we are enabled to see God's plans and hear intelligently His message. No man can be taught to pray except by the Holy Spirit. John said "Lord, teach us to pray."

The words, "Ask," "Seek," and "Knock," mean about the same to the man endeavoring to learn to pray, that the constant calling of words means to the child learning to read. We learn to read by reading and by continuing to read. We must first want to know how to read better. We must first want to know how to pray, how to reach and how to commune with God. Each asking increases our desire to know better how to pray. So the more we ask and seek and knock, the more we learn about how to pray.

The scripture verse suggests that prayer is not telling God about what we are or are not.

Prayer is not telling God our needs. It is rather asking Him to show us our needs. We do not know our needs, except as God reveals them to us. The command is "Ask." Prayer is the Christian's vital breath; there is no other way by which we can reach God. We cannot enjoy God's love, peace, joy and benefits until we reach Him. Then prayer is a great privilege. If you feel in your heart that you need a certain blessing, pray for it: keep asking until you get it or until God shows you that you do not need it. May we always say: "Thy will be done."

HELPING JESUS.

"Follow me and I will make you fishers of men."—Matt. 4:19.

Two things are upon my heart as I worship with you tonight: The preparing of this great church to win others to Christ in our city; and the preparing of this great church to win others abroad. It is a double mission, but they go hand in hand, and I believe they go best when they do go hand in hand. We ought to win one hundred persons to Christ here, and have them unite with this fine fellowship here. And we ought to have a very fine share, with our prayers and purses, in winning others to Christ through our Missions field abroad. It is my prayer that it may be so. And it is also the prayer of scores of you.

Let us look at the following Scripture lesson with that double purpose in mind. "Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel." Now as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew, his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men. And straightway they forsook their nets and followed him. And when he had gone a little further thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John, his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets. And straightway he called them: and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him."

A new day had dawned. Jesus expressed it: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand." Kingdom of God! Just think of the best that your Christian thinking has ever placed in your mind, the best fathers and mothers, the best boys and girls, the best young people and multiply it until it covers the earth as the waters cover the seas and you may get a conception of the kingdom of God. It was as though Jesus was saying: The good has been growing, now the best is begun! Workers are needed. Workers who have had a change of mind, and a change of heart, and a change of hope within. The change of mind was commanded in: Repent! And the change of hope was encroached in: Believe the Gospel! Turn away from evil, evil thinking, acting, speaking. Be sorry to have your soul soiled with sin. Become humble, teachable, unprejudiced as a little child. The best has begun. A new day has dawned. A new order of things is here. Get a new mental attitude so that you may be ready to believe this Good News!

They were astonished at his doctrine!

But, my friends, there were hearts ready for the challenge which lay in his teachings. There were heroic hearts. Just as there are today. Their hearts yearned for the best, just as yours do. They did not have as much precedent as you and I have but they had Jesus, face to face, and they could believe his message, and obey his call.

He called Simon and Andrew, "and straightway they forsook their nets and followed him." And the long train of the followers of the Christ had begun their trek. Are you and I worthy to follow in their trail? There was a meaning to their following Jesus. They were not to follow for the loaves and fishes, but they were to follow him to be made fishers of men. They were to help him. Just that, they were to help him. The day of the best had begun. They were to help him usher it in. They were to win others to the kingdom of God and Jesus had promised them that if they followed him he would make them fishers of men. It came true. After all, what countless thousands have been won to him since the day that this selfsame Simon preached to representatives of many nations on Pentecost and saw three thousand of them come into the fellowship of the followers of Christ on a single day.

Now how about you and me. We are not to be "loaves-and-fishes" followers of Jesus. True we have the benefits that the Christian religion offers. We cannot escape it. Blessed is every nation that accepts the Christian teachings and ideals as their own. Blessed is our community for building on the basis of the best. But is it right that we should have all these things as ours and not be willing to share with the Christ in preaching this gospel to others? It is right for us to enjoy the privileges of the Christian religion without seeking to pass it on to others? Or I ask you one more question: Is it possible to keep up this Christian idealism, and all the blessings thereof, if we fail to propagate the good news of the Kingdom of God?

There was a phrase that ran its course in our religious circles some twenty-five years ago; it became trite, but it is nevertheless true: Saved to serve! I am sure there is a yearning in each of our hearts to serve the Lord Jesus in this finest business in the world, namely, helping to win others. We who have tasted the joy that results from that kind of work hunger for it. And I believe it is in store for us here in our church. These increasing morning and evening congregations indicate a hunger for the joy of winning others, for that has been our theme recently.

This then is my double proposition: Let us help win others to Christ right here in our own church and our own city, and then at the same time let us raise a great offering for Foreign Missions in order that we may help win others to the Christ in the far corners of the wide earth. One of the joys of my own poor life is to look back across these brief years and sort of figure up how much the Lord has led me out of comparatively small earnings to invest in preaching the gospel to people I never hope to see this side of the blessed throne of God. It is nothing, and yet out of many years of struggle, hardship, and privation a portion was always put into the Mission treasury of our Lord Jesus Christ. I do not mention this to boast, for God forbid that I should boast save in the cross of Christ, but because I wish here and now to challenge many of the fine, cultured, capable young people in this service tonight to begin the business of working with the Christ in winning others at home and abroad. While we can work here we can send out those trained and trusted to the work into fields afar to work for us there.

I believe God wants our work at home and our work abroad to go hand in hand. Ere long we are hoping to see dozens of our people stand at this altar and say yes to the question: Do you believe in Jesus Christ as the Saviour of the world, and as your own personal Saviour? Our heart will be strangely warm as they answer in a way to glorify the Lord we love. But how much happier, how much happier, indeed, will we be if we have all laid upon this selfsame altar the price of real service in the Foreign Field. We desire God's blessings here, and he has promised to be with us there: Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, and lo, I am with you always."

"Follow me," and what sweet fellowship will be ours. My friends, nothing can surpass the friendship of Jesus, nothing is beyond that fellowship. If our religion means anything to us we surely wish that fellowship:

"In the hour of trial, Jesus plead for me,
Lest by base denial I depart from Thee;
When Thou seest me waver, with a look recall,
Nor for fear, or favor, suffer me to fall."

Yes, let us do all we can to keep unbroken that sweet, protecting, divine fellowship. But let us (Continued on page 15.)

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Do we have the right idea? Many people who contribute to help support the Christian Orphanage think, perhaps, that the money is given away. That it is just charity and nothing more, but is that true? In making contributions to the orphanage there is more than giving food and drink for the time being. It is more than that. Is it not giving boys and girls without a chance in life a chance to be trained into useful citizens? It is an investment in youth—youth left stranded in life. Youth in their young and tender years without home or means of support. Youth without a chance but crying to you and me for a chance—just a chance to make good. Is the investment worthwhile?

Let me tell you the story of three little girls.

Some years ago we admitted in this institution three little girls from the State of Virginia. They were reared here. The older one graduated in high school and took a one-year commercial course at Elon College for two years now she holds a position as a stenographer in one of the large knitting mills in North Carolina. The second girl graduated in High School and she, too, took one year in the Commercial Course at Elon College and for nearly a year she has been holding a position as stenographer for a large manufacturing concern in North Carolina. The youngest of the three sisters graduated in High School and accepted a position with a manufacturing plant in North Carolina and is making good. The writer is informed that neither of these three girls makes less than $75.00 per month. They came to the orphanage without a chance. The orphanage gave them a chance. They now hold splendid positions, all made possible by your help and your cooperation.

Was the money spent on giving these three girls a chance in life charity money or was it a real investment in youth? The writer could tell you many stories of girls and boys who have gone out from this institution that reflect credit on the institution that mothered them when they were in need, but space will not permit. I think this one story will prove the point I was trying to make.

Much is being made just now of evangelism. Are we going to exalt that which is the head and front, the heart and soul, of the Christian message? Glorious good news is the thrilling gospel announcement. As Luccock says: "It is front page stuff—stop the press news." It came in through the news column and not on the editorial page. Much of our preaching is the empty echo of a dying refrain rather than joyful good news. "I love to tell the story" is sung after the fashion of "Hark from the tomb a doleful sound." Most of our evangelistic efforts need to be born from above.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

WINCHESTER, VA., AND THE SMITHS.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Dear Editor:

May I ask you to print this letter in THE SUN of April the 9th? I want to sincerely thank you for your splendid spirit of cooperation since the Smiths have been in Winchester. Since we came to you good people some time ago we have been accorded the best of friendly treatment and you and the Winchester and Timber Ridge people have all taken us so warmly into your hearts! May God bless all of you. Also we bid Godspeed to all you loyal workers, and to Dr. Smith of Elon College and wish Elon success in the campaign.

It is not easy to leave such loyal, devoted folks as we have worked with here in Winchester and on the Ridge these past fifteen months. Everyone has been most courageously loyal and willing to cooperate. We have nothing but kind thoughts and dear, tender memories of Winchester and its fine people. May God continue to bless our two churches here.

The feeling and spirit have been so wonderful here that the Smiths hesitate to say goodbye. I care not where we go, we will never find a more loyal and devoted people and that comes from the bottom of my heart. It was a privilege to teach during the Elon Leadership Training School last summer. The friendships made there are of a lasting and permanent character. We hope to be there again sometime.

May God richly bless all of you dear people and especially all of our good friends in Winchester and at Timber Ridge. It has been an enriching Christian experience to have served you as pastor and friend. Will you please send my SUN to my new address: 119 W. Decatur Street, Eaton, Ohio. The Smiths prayer for all of you is that God in His infinite wisdom may bring us together again.

Sincerely and thoughtfully,
MOTHER SMITH,
REV. AND MRS. IVAN R. SMITH.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

also bear constantly in mind that that fellowship makes a very specific and definite demand upon us: We are to be fishers of men! We are to win others. Now, listen, my poor efforts may fail me here. I may not say just the right word, nor meet with just the right response, but the gift that I lay in the hand of the Lord can never fail! Out yonder it will teach forsaken little boys and girls, poor, sick, benighted waifs that they may be to sing:

"I wish that his hands had been placed on my head,
That his arm had been thrown around me,
And that I might have seen his kind look when he said,
'Let the little ones come unto me.'"

And as they sing it something is going to happen to them so great and so beautiful that only God himself can measure its meaning. Let us have a real share in helping the Lord Jesus out there where the need is so great, and where our motives may be clearly seen to be completely unselfish. We may not see the result here in our own lifetime but by such service and such song across the nations of the earth, done in the name of Jesus, and for his sake the day of the best, which is begun, is to come fully in. Up there, as we say, we shall begin to realize something of the magnitude of our efforts and the joy of having a real share in the redemption of the world.

Make the little envelope which has been placed in the hands of every man, woman, and child in our Sunday School and congregation count. Do not be content to overlook it. And may your gift be blessed of him whose hands broke the few loaves and fishes, and whose words spake good news to the needy. May your gift speak something of your devotion to him, and your appreciation of what he has done for you and yours. And God crown your efforts to win others here, while your gifts go into lands beyond our borders to bless as God himself shall choose to have them bless!

OBITUARIES

CANNON.

Curtis Parker Cannon, Jr., 14-year-old son of Curtis Parker and Addie Whitehurst Cannon, died at Great Bridge, February 24th. The funeral was held at Berea Christian Church in the afternoon of February 26th, with the Rev. J. F. Morgan, the Rev. O. D. Poythress and the pastor officiating. The large attendance and the many floral offerings indicated the high esteem in which Curtis was held by his friends. It was his request that he be buried by the side of his grandfather, S. C. Whitehurst in Berea cemetery, who died only a few months ago, and his request was granted.

Curtis' beautiful experience of Jesus Christ and the testimony and prayer of his mother at the open grave, will always be a beautiful memory to his large company of friends.

JOE FRENCH.

BALLARD.

Mrs. Mrs. Fanuy A. Ballard, aged 72 years and 12 days, a resident of Buckhorn, Va., and a member of Holland Church since 1880, passed from this life on March 16th, 1936.

Her death was a great shock and loss to her family and a great loss to her church.

She was known and loved by a host of friends and relatives. While her husband lived she made him a splendid wife and until her death she was a living example of a Christian woman. The funeral services were conducted in the Church at Holland and burial was made in the Holland Cemetery. CARL R. KEY.

Great Britain Has Government Surplus.—

The Chancellor of the Exchequer in his report, recently issued shows that Great Britain closed the past fiscal year with a surplus. This is the fourth successive year that British governmental income has exceeded expenditures, following depression deficits. It would seem that what Great Britain can do, we, with our far vaster resources, might also accomplish.

Congregational-Christian Convention to Meet.—

Beginning on April 28th and running through May 1st, the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches will meet in biennial session at Burlington, North Carolina. There are several weighty questions to come before this body, but possibly none of more importance than the drive now being launched by Elon College to wipe out that institution's indebtedness. There will be present at this convention speakers and representatives of the National Council.

George Washington and the Constitution.—

Not so much has been heard recently about circumventing the Constitution, but once in a while there creeps up a trend which bears watching. Our forefathers builded wisely when they planned our form of government, and so far it has withstood attacks from all sources. We cannot do better than listen to George Washington, as he says: "If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way in which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed."

Tornadoes Hit Dixie.—

Of all forces of nature which prove man's impotency, it is probable that the tornado stands first. Fiercer in its attack than fire and more rapid than flood, its narrow path carries certain destruction in its wake. During the past few weeks, tornadoes have swept throughout the Southern States east of the Mississippi, and the death toll has been unusually large. Hundreds were killed, additional hundreds maimed, and thousands made homeless. The property damage will probably run into the millions. Tornadoes and hurricanes are sometimes confused. A hurricane, however is an ocean storm, while the tornado originates on dry land. Again, the hurricane has a diameter of between twenty-five and thirty miles, and its rotation speed at the center is usually from 75 to 100 miles an hour. The tornado is much smaller, its diameter seldom being over a few hundred feet, but the velocity of the wind at its center reaches as high as 200 miles an hour.

It is this enormous speed that makes tornadoes possibly the most dreaded of all forces of nature.

Per Capita Contribution of Protestants.—

The average member in the Protestant churches gave $12.10 during the past statistical year for all church purposes or 23¼ cents a week which is one-quarter cent better than the preceding year. In some denominations this per capita gift is more than twice this amount and in others it runs far below. Of this amount $9.98 goes for congregational purposes such as minister's or rector's salary, coal, singers and the like. The remainder is divided $2.02 for denominational benevolences, $1.60 for budget benevolences, 47 cents for non-budget benevolences and 21 cents for non-denominational and interdenominational benevolences. These figures, included in a report just issued by the United Stewardship Council, cover 25 large Protestant denominations. The contributions show an increase of $5,275,718 over the preceding year. It is the first increase recorded for any year since 1928. The Council reports that these 250 large denominations have 25,174,855 members who contributed a total of $304,692,499 last year. The membership has grown about a million.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

How Safe Is Air Travel?—

Recent accidents have raised many questions as to the safety of air travel. How safe it is, and what is the cause of accidents? The record of safety has been constantly climbing during the past eight years. In 1928, there were 47,840 passengers carried by commercial planes, with a loss in killed of 14; in 1929 more than three times as many passengers were carried, with a decrease in deaths of one. In 1930 374,935 passengers were carried, and the loss by death was 24. The relative safety continued to increase until 1933, when nearly a half million travelled by air with a loss of only 12. 1934 dropped back some, but 1935, showed a safety ratio that was the highest of all: with 746,946 passengers, flying a total of 313,905,508 passenger miles, there were only 19 passengers lost. Then came 1936, with 14 passengers and a crew of three killed in January and in April another crash when 12 passengers and another crew of three are lost—and again people get jittery as regards air travel. Of course no consideration is given in these figures of private planes, nor those flown by the government. But air travel will continue to become more safe until the airways, like the roadways, become congested.

A New League of Nations.—

It looks as though the League of Nations is due to go up in smoke, unless a miracle happens in the next few days. Either Italy must be made to yield—and it looks as if this will require force—or the influence of the league has gone, and and with it the league. But a New League looms on the American horizon. Before the end of May plans for a league of the 21 nations in the Pan-American Union, will attract world attention. Plans are being prepared, and while only America will participate, there will be nothing in the plans that will conflict with the spirit of the Geneva League. The first meeting will be held at Buenos Aires, and any nation in the Pan-American group will be at liberty to make proposals to the league. Chile has already suggested that its program include economic problems, while there are expected proposals of mutual aid in case of attack by non-American powers. Only Paraguay has not accepted the invitation to the conference, and it is expected that she will be represented when the conference begins. While it is expected that economic problems will be secondary in the discussions at this first meeting, it seems that the Roosevelt good-neighbor-policy in Latin America is destined to bear fruit.

Production and Employment.—

There has been an effort from some sources to throw the blame for continued unemployment upon industry. The claim has been made that production is increasing faster than either employment or purchasing power. Commenting upon these claims, a recent issue of the New York Times says that "official indexes do not appear to bear out this contention." It picks one of the country's largest corporations as an example, and continues thus: "If we compare the production of the United States Steel Corporation with the number of its employees, we find that not only as compared with last year, but as compared with the low point of 1932, production has increased in a greater percentage than employment. If we compare the result with that in 1929, we get a far different result. Though tonnage in 1935 had fallen 52 per cent compared with 1929, the number of employees had fallen only 13 per cent." Further, it adds: "Corporation net income can and does often dive below zero, while pay-rolls are relatively stable. Consequently, it is only natural that in years of recovery earnings should show higher percentage increases." In 1929, this corporation paid to its employees approximately four times the amount that its stockholders received; but in 1935, thirty-five times as much went to labor as to stockholders. The Times explains the reason for the faster increase in production is due to the fact "that the corporation kept on as many men as possible in the depth of the depression." What happened with this giant industry happened on down the line. Industry carried employees through the years just past when it had no use for many of them. Now, when these men are beginning to produce, industry gets blamed for not taking on others.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor, First Church, Greensboro, reports a very happy Easter service, culminating in the addition of twenty accessions to the church.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor of the Richmond Church, has been confined to his bed for the past week. While he has been quite sick, he was reported much improved at the time THE SUN went to press.

The thirty-second biennial session of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian churches is to be guest from Tuesday, April 28th, to and including Friday, May 1st, of our Burlington church and the good friends there.

Rev. S. M. Penn, of our Sophia Parish, reports very happy pre-Easter services of a week's duration with our High Point Church, in which the church manifested a very wholesome interest, and four accessions to the church membership on Easter Sunday.

The editor of THE SUN gladly acknowledges an invitation which pastors and interested persons within the Conference will find of interest: "The Pastor, Officers and Members of the United Congregational-Christian Church of Winston-Salem, N. C., hereby extend to you a cordial invitation to be present at the Installation Service, to be held in the church building at three o'clock in the afternoon of April 26th, 1936, at which time the new pastor, Dr. W. M. Jay, D. D., will be formally installed as pastor. A large representation of the ministers of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, and the Southeastern Conference, including several noted speakers are expected to be present and participate in this service."

LANETT CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Easter morning was a glorious event in the Christian Church. The Lanett High School Glee Club, under the leadership of Mrs. Posey Sorrell, its directress, contributed inspiring music to the worship service. This Glee Club is one in which Lanett takes pride, in which the churches are quite interested and to which they extend a welcome at all times.

It was also inspirational to have the altar beautified with Easter lilies. And a great deal of significance was added by Mr. Johnnie Godwin uniting with the church along with the pastor, and several making special gifts with which to add attraction to the building.

FELLOWSHIP BANQUET.

On Tuesday evening of the Convention a Fellowship Banquet will be held at 6:00 o'clock. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle has been asked to serve as toastmaster. At the evening service following the Banquet, Mr. Fred B. Smith will be the speaker. Fred B. Smith is one of the world's foremost platform speakers on religious themes. It is a rare privilege to hear Mr. Smith on any occasion, or on any theme. Those who are planning to attend the Convention should be on hand for the first day, attend the Woman's Convention, and get immediately into the spirit of the Convention which promises to be one of the most significant ever held.

Cordially yours,
STANLEY C. HARRELL.

CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATION ADVANCES.

The walls of Elon College next Wednesday afternoon, April 29th, will look down upon a host of men and women assembled in the inspired and inspiring cause of Christian education. While their immediate purpose is to serve Elon as the field forces in its Development Program, their wider concern is to build for the benefit of the whole Southern Convention area of the Congregational-Christian Church.

At this rally, the chairmen and committee members for the various units in the campaign organization for the five conferences will receive the message of the Development Program, an urgent message dealing with the mental and spiritual needs of our young people. They will also be acquainted with the details of procedure for the great effort which will be launched next month to raise the $250,000 needed to equip Elon for the increased measure of service it is undertaking.

The rally will begin at 1:30 o'clock, following a picnic luncheon on the campus, and will adjourn at 3:30. It will fit in with the program of the Southern Convention meeting in Burlington.

In the meantime, preparations to carry the Development Program appeal to church members, alumni and other friends of the college in the five conferences through organizations in the 165 churches are being advanced rapidly. In several of the conferences organization work is nearly completed. The complete set-up of chairmen and associates secured up to the end of last week was announced by General Chairman Stanley C. Harrell, as follows:

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Chairman: W. H. Elder, Durham; associates: Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Burlington, N. C., R. 2, and Miss Margaret Rowland, Greensboro, N. C.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

Chairman: Rev. S. E. Madren, Henderson, R. D. 1; associates: Rev. E. M. Carter, Youngsville, and Mrs. Ben Holden, Louisburg.

Group 2 chairman: J. F. Hilliard, Cary.

Group 3 chairman, O. W. Mann; associates: Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Fuquay Springs, and Mrs. M. E. Wilder, Lillington, R. D. Section 2, chairman: Frank Watson, Sanford; associate, Rev. F. E. Hyde, Sanford.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Chairman: Rev. R. L. House, Newport News, Va.; associates: Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Norfolk, and Mrs. R. T. Bradford, Suffolk.

Group 1 chairman: F. M. Brewer, Norfolk; associate, Rev. R. A. Whitten, Portsmouth.

Church chairmen in Group 1: Berea, F. N. Hall, Hickory; Ocean View, Mrs. J. Harris, Norfolk; Rosemont, H. R. Morrison, Norfolk.

Group 2 chairman: Julian Daughtry, Suffolk; associate, Rev. Carl R. Key, Holland.

Chairman of Suffolk Church: J. D. McClenny, Suffolk.

VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL CONFERENCE.

Chairman: R. Roy Hosaflook, Linville; associates: Roy A. Larrick, Winchester; Rev. M. L. Weekly, Harrisonburg, and Miss Thelma Morris, Dykes.

The citizens' organization that will conduct a separate campaign in Burlington and Alamance County is setting the pace for the whole enterprise. Virtually all committees are completed, the selection of team workers well advanced and actual solicitation started by the special gifts committee.

WINCHESTER.

As a fitting prelude to Holy Week, the Congregational-Christian Church of Winchester presented authentic pictures from the 1930 Passion Play of Oberramergau, at their service on Sunday evening, April 5th. This play deals with the last days of the life of Christ. In addition to scenes from the Passion Play, there were pictures of the village, the streets, the church and the auditorium where the Passion Play is presented, with the beautiful Kofel Mountain as a natural background.

At the close of the pictures, Mr. Robert J. McNally, Jr., by special request, most effectively rendered "Lamentation Over Jerusalem," taken from "Olivet to Calvary."

As a climax to the service, two scenes were presented on a platform erected in one corner of the church. The first represented Mary, the mother of Christ, kneeling alone, with the three crosses as a background. In the second scene Mary sang original words, written by Rev. Smith to two verses of "There Is a Green Hill Far Away" which expressed the agony and bewilderment of her mother heart at the crucifixion of her Son. Mary was answered by the sweet voices of two of her friends, singing words of comfort. The part of Mary was taken by Miss Elsie Mathews and the part of her two friends by Miss Margaret Richards and Mrs. Robert J. McNally, Jr. The instrumental music throughout the evening was rendered by Miss Charlotte DeHart at the piano and Mrs. Orville Hoover at the organ.

This service marked the close of Rev. Ivan R. Smith's ministry at the Congregational-Christian Church of Winchester, as he is leaving early this week for Eaton, Ohio, where he will be pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church. In spite of the inclement weather, at this, the last service of Rev. Smith, a large crowd was present, including the Rouss Fire Company of which Rev. Smith was recently elected chaplain.

The congregation of this church and the many outside friends of Rev. Smith, while very sorry to see him leave Winchester, know that he will continue his good work in his new field in Ohio.

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

THIS MAY DAY AT OUR NEW YORK OFFICES.

In three ways is May day observed in the United States: with baskets of flowers and Maypole dances according to the old traditions of rural England; with communist rallies according to the new custom at Moscow; and by housecleaning and moving in apartments and offices.

Friday, next week, when members of the communist party and its affiliated labor organizations will march in a long procession down Fourth Avenue to Union Square for peaceful assemblage and speech-making under the watchful eyes of the police, will also officially mark the beginning of a periodic housecleaning and moving in the Congregational and Christian offices at 287 Fourth Avenue. Leases have been renewed, with some shifts in the quarters occupied by the different agencies. Walls and floors are to be re-painted by the building management.

THE FIRST OFFICES.

The history of the New York offices of the Congregational and Christian churches dates back to 1826 when the American Home Missionary Society was organized. It was formed as a national organization in which many regional societies united as auxiliaries. Its backing was chiefly in Congregational, Presbyterian and Dutch Reformed churches. Its office was successively at four different places in lower New York: on Nassau Street near Wall Street until 1853 when it was moved northward into the then new Bible House at Astor Place where Fourth Avenue has its southern terminus.

In 1846 was formed the American Missionary Association. It had its office at different addresses in lower New York until 1890 when it, too, moved into the Bible House. It was strongly supported originally by many Presbyterians as well as Congregational churches.

In 1853 a national Congregational society was formed, the American Congregational Union. Its office was at different places in lower New York until 1865, when it moved into Room 49 at the Bible House, moving in 1872 to Room 69, and then in 1881 to Room 59.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions moved its New York District office into the Bible House sometime before the eighties.

In 1897 the offices of the four societies were moved from the Bible House to the United Charities building at Fourth Avenue and 22nd Street, all taking quarters on the eighth floor.

The names of the first and third organizations had by this time been changed to the Congregational Home Missionary Society and the Congregational Church Building Society. The Building Society for a time used the address 105 East 22nd Street, the Home Missionary Society the address Fourth Avenue and 22nd Street, and the American Missionary Society the address 287 Fourth Avenue. Eventually this last address came to prevail uniformly for all the organizations.

OFFICES OPENED SINCE 1900.

In 1903 the Committee on Ministerial Relief of the National Council, whose office had been in the secretary's home at New Haven, Conn., opened an office on the fifth floor of the United Charities building.

In 1913 the District office of the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society, established two years previously in the secretary's home in Brooklyn, was moved to the fifth floor of the United Charities building. In 1917 this became the District Office of the Congregational Education Society and the same year the Congregational Sunday Extension Society was incorporated and its office grouped with the Home Missionary and Church Building Societies under the name of the Extension Boards. The same year an office was taken in the building by the Congregational Women's Home Missionary Federation.

In 1919 the office of the National Council was moved from Boston to the United Charities building and in 1921 the Congregational World Movement opened an office which was continued by the Commission on Missions. These were on the fifth floor as were also the offices of the New York State Congregational Conference and the New York City Congregational Church Association.

MR. FRANK F. MOORE

Chairman of the House Committee of the New York Offices and Assistant Treasurer of the Extension Boards.

Upon the missionary reorganization of 1926, the District office of the Education Society and the office of the Women's Home Mission Federation were closed and the District office of the American Board was taken over by the Commission on Missions.

In the meantime the work of the Committee on Ministerial Relief had expanded into that of the Board of Ministerial Relief and the Annuity Fund. They became located in larger quarters at 441 Lexington Avenue.

In 1930 the Department of Social Relations of the Education Society opened a New York office. For a short while it was at 287 Fourth Avenue and then moved to larger quarters at 112 East 19th Street.

In 1931 when the New York School of Social Work on the ninth floor of the United Charities building moved to a new building erected by the Russell Sage Foundation, it became possible to bring all the Congregational and Christian offices together in adjacent quarters on the eighth and ninth floors. Leases were taken for a period of five years, all the agencies except the Social Relations Department joining in the arrangement. In 1934 this Department was taken over by the new Council for Social Action and adjustments were made to enable the latter to have its quarters at 287 Fourth Avenue.

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE.

With the groupings of all the offices together on the eighth and ninth floors, a house committee was formed upon which all agencies have representatives. The chairman of the house committee is Mr. Frank F. Moore, assistant treasurer of the department for apportionment receipts of the Home Boards.

The house committee in addition to caring for joint matters of office management arranges each year for noon Lenten service, for a Christmas party or carol sing and for a supper and social to which everybody in all the offices is invited. This last is held at Broadway Tabernacle where removed from office responsibilities, unexpected abilities for fun and banter are revealed. The master of ceremonies has been Mr. Moore with Miss Helen Frances Smith, project secretary of the Home Boards and Mr. A. M. Floyd, accountant of the Pension Boards, as his chief aides.

ORIGIN OF THE CHARITIES BUILDING.

The United Charities building in its origin and management has some special associations for our churches. It was erected in 1893 as a center for social and religious organizations by John Stewart Kennedy, banker and philanthropist and brother-in-law of Dr. A. F. Schauflier, superintendent of the New York City Mission Society. Dr. Schauflier was the son of a noted early American Board missionary in Turkey and a brother of the founder of Schauflier School in Cleveland, Ohio. The president now of the United Charities Corporation which holds title to the building is the Rev. Wm. R. Jelliffe, the present superintendent of the New York City Mission Society and at one time assistant pastor of Central Congregational Church of Boston, Massachusetts.

OTHER CHURCH AND INTER-CHURCH OFFICES.

In the United Charities building on the sixth floor are the offices of the Federal Council of Churches and its departments, and of the Home Missions Council and the Council of Women for Home Missions. These use the address 105 East 22nd Street. Across the street is the Mission House of the Protestant Episcopal Church where are its national offices. A half block west are the headquarters of the Reformed Church in America. Within a few blocks are the Methodist Building at 150 Fifth Avenue and the Presbyterian Building at 156 Fifth Avenue; the Northern Baptist offices divided between 152 Madison Avenue and a building on Madison Square; not far away are the National Lutheran offices and the offices of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America and associated organizations.

The National offices of the Y. M. C. A., of the Y. W. C. A., of the New York City Federation of Churches and of the new Bible House, a building just purchased at Park Avenue and 57th Street, are more distant.

The vision of a united Protestant building where all these offices could be housed together and where conferences in the working out of the Christian program for America would be facilitated, has often been broached in recent years. In 1929 plans were drawn for such a building at Union Square and 15th Street, which, by chance, was just opposite Tammany Hall.

Two years ago it seemed for awhile possible that such a building could be included in the group at Rockefeller Center.

The idea of such a building is more than a dream. If the building was erected and offices available at no financial disadvantage over present quarters, a great big moving day would take place at once among Protestant church organizations in New York City.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION.

The Southern Convention, meeting in its thirty-second biennial session with our Burlington, N. C., Church next week, April 28th-May 1st inclusive, is itself a corporation, owning and controlling much property, in addition to having the direction of the various Conferences and enterprises of the Congregational-Christian Churches within its territory. In this corporation, and subsidiary to it, are other corporations, whose officials and directorates are determined through and, for the most part, selected by the Convention itself. These corporations are the Board of Trustees of Elon College, the Mission Board, Inc., the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage, the Board of Christian Education; also property interests unincorporated include the ownership of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, etc. The five Conferences, constituting the Convention, are themselves incorporated bodies. This will indicate something of the business obligations devolving upon the Convention. The weightier obligation, however, is that of so counselling, planning and directing the affairs of the kingdom of righteousness, as they pertain to our fellowship, in such a way as to establish or maintain such high standards of morality and religion as will appeal to and elicit the best and the holiest of which we, as a communion, are capable of doing.

The Southern Convention is not a large body either in the scope of its work or in the number of its delegates, since it is only an integral part of the great National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, but being an integral part it behooves the Convention not only to maintain its integrity but to so conduct its affairs as to be a healthy, growing and vigorous part of the national and world-wide body.

The above will indicate something of the stupendous task to which the delegates will set themselves in Convention assembled next week and will indicate something of the wisdom necessary for the efficient outcome of their deliberations. It is useless to say that the church should be much in prayer for the Convention and that the delegates and visitors who attend should seek divine guidance and wisdom for every session and decision of the Convention.

THE DAY.

The good God who created this universe, out of infinite wisdom and strength, wrought into it, and into us who are a part of it, certain fundamental laws and principles. Just so sure as God made the day and the night and laws that govern their courses, so He made and established certain divine institutions with laws and principles upon which they are based and by which they are governed. Among these divine institutions are the family, the Church, the Sabbath Day. These, we repeat, are among the basic, moral and divine institutions upon which God Himself governs this universe, and rules the world of moral beings. This sentence recently arrested the eye of the writer:

"Powerful commercial amusement interests have been at work breaking down our Sabbath laws. Most of all, the Church, whose very life is at stake in maintaining the Sabbath, has done little to meet the situation. She seems unaware of the danger and has failed to challenge the opposing forces. Nor has she given herself to instilling into the hearts of the people true ideals of Sabbath keeping and an appreciation of the values of the day."

It is not so much the breaking of the Sabbath laws that this writer is concerned in as he is in the disposition and desire or the lack of both, on the part of the church and the public generally, to observe the Sabbath Day and to keep it holy and sacred. There is a smash-up, or a catastrophe, in the material world when there is a conflict between the forces of nature. Witness the tornado and the cyclone when there is a head-on collision—a clash between two opposing air currents. Likewise, upheavals and catastrophes are bound to follow in the wake of the violation of moral laws and the attacks upon divine institutions. Just as divorce is a menace and a constant threat to the divine law of the family, so the open violation of God's holy Sabbath day is a constant menace and threat, not only to the Church, but to the moral and spiritual life of those who seek security and salvation through the teaching and preaching of the Church.

In the Old Testament we are commanded again and again to "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." Dr. R. H. Martin, in his "Manual on the Christian Sabbath," clearly points out that the Sabbath is "a civil as well as an ecclesiastical institution, contributing to the strength and happiness of the nation," and that "wherever revered and properly observed it protects, strengthens and ennobles family life. Its origin dates back to the dawn of human history. It was here before either church or state and as early as that primitive institution of society, the family. In the thought and plan of God, it is co-extensive with mankind. "The Sabbath," further declares Dr. Martin, "in the Hebrew means 'rest' and is an institution of religion. The rest of the Sabbath is not idleness. On this day secular activities give place to the activities that have to do with the culture of the soul. The rest day is the holy day, the day preempted for religious uses. The Sabbath has its deepest roots in religion. On this account, the ultimate basis for Sabbath observance is found in the very nature of God. "We cannot do violence to the Holy Sabbath with security to ourselves and our families, with security to the State and the Church. While the Sabbath was not made by man, it was made for man. And just as six days, (six periods) were necessary for his material and mental and moral security, so the seventh day, (period) is necessary for his spiritual and soul security. In the Old Testament we have the picture of God resting on and blessing the seventh day of the week, thus signifying His sanction to the completion of His creative act. In the New Testament we have the sanction for observing the first day of the week,—that day on which Christ arose from the dead and thus completed His redemptive act. And since redemption is more essential and sacred to the individual than creation itself, so should the individual observe with more solemnity and reverence the completion of that sacred and mysterious act whereby the plan for his redemption through the resurrection of our Lord was completed. May be the world would have gone on much as it is even if I had not been created. But, having been created, it makes all the difference in the world as to whether I have been redeemed by and thru the grace and mercy of a loving heavenly Father—a Father who so loved His world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but should have everlasting life."

RE-THINKING THEMSELVES.

The Disciples of Christ (known in many sections as the Christian Church) have appointed a Commission to restudy themselves and to seek to give to the world "a body of material which will make it possible for people to understand and appreciate what our movement is really trying to accomplish." We applaud this movement and wish the Commission all success in its task, since every church fellowship is being challenged, both by other communions and by the world, as to what "it is all about."

Although the above Commission has not gone far in its work, "one thing," declares their national spokesman, The Christian-Evangelist,—"has clearly emerged thus far," namely: "That the Disciples are perhaps the greatest champions of both unity and sectarianism to be found in Christendom. They will advocate Christian union in one breath, and at the same time will manifest a tendency to break up into small groups which will not fellowship each other or with anybody else; this to an extent not found in any other religious movement." The reader will observe that the above is a quotation from our Disciples spokesman and not an accusation that one "without the gate" is bringing against them. "An honest confession is good for the soul." The indictment that our Disciples brethren bring against themselves is one often made by others, and a source of wonder and bewilderment to many, especially of those who applaud and appreciate their plea for Christian unity.

May not other communions, or denominations, do well in an honest endeavor to appraise themselves and tell to the world what it is all about? Have we, of our Congregational-Christian constituency, a definite and specific objective that we are trying to reach and divinely appoint a task, that we, as a communion, are trying to accomplish? If so, what is that objective, what is that task, that justifies our raison d'etre (excuse for existing)? THE SUN's editor has a very decided opinion and a definite conviction that there is a valid excuse for our existence, and a task that our fellowship has definitely set itself to achieve.

But to what extent is his opinion and conviction shared by the others of our fellowship, and to what extent are we keeping that definite objective and great purpose before us as we meet in our Conventions and Conferences, as we preach from our pulpits and practice in our daily walk and work? Would we not do well to have a Commission of our own to restudy ourselves and to thus secure "a dispassionate, accurate and broad-minded view of our entire constituency" as to our undertaking and carrying on in the world? Should we not know just what we are trying, as a united fellowship, to achieve in the world, and just the work that differentiates us from the other communions about us?

UNREST AND UNCERTAINTY.

The threatening and unsettled conditions in Europe, and also in the Far East, are overt and patent expressions of what is transpiring in the whole wide world. War threatens between the nations in Europe, and more recently by the Turks, especially in their latest and defiant move upon the Dardanelles; while Italy goes forward in defiance of all protests of humanity and civilization in open war and slaughter of the helpless Ethiopians. Japan is in a militant and threatening mood, and China is distraught with ill omens of upheavals and unrest. The League of Nations frantically carries on and continues to deliberate, seemingly, with little results in checking the spirit of nationalism and the tearing up and destruction of treaties and international agreements. These facts are heralded far and wide through the daily press and are obvious to all who look and listen.

But there are other ill omens and disquieting facts and events here at home. Chaos and doubt, hesitancy and bewilderment seem to cloud our thinking and to be reflected in our conduct. What is the slogan of our day? What is the standard of excellence about which we, as a people, can or do rally and follow? What is there that is clear and definite in the minds and hearts of the people of our community, our State, our nation? What moral standards are secure and remain intact and revered? What sacred institution, or observance, have we as a legacy or as a cherished ideal? What is the Church of the living God offering to the world other than that which the world about us is offering? What do we of the Church more than these not of the Church?

The most hopeful sign that this writer is able to discern is that the church is at least asking itself such questions as the above, and that the church is earnestly solicitous about standards that it wishes to establish and about an Evangel that it wishes to proclaim and to reveal. Whatever else may be said in this chaotic time, this one thing may be truthfully asserted, that the Church, at any rate, is awakening to and is, in a measure, at least taking note of conditions as they obtain, and the evils of society that are obvious and threatening. The Church we believe, at any rate, is seeking with some zeal to discover its own task in a world of doubt and to find the way out to light and victory.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Dr. James H. Lightbourne of Burlington, N. C., is assisting Dr. John G. Truitt in a revival meeting at the Suffolk Christian Church. Dr. Lightbourne is a popular minister in the Eastern Virginia Conference, where he formerly served as pastor of Memorial Temple, Norfolk, and the Holland Christian church. Large congregations are attending all of the services. He is a splendid preacher, and a successful pastor. His sermons are clear, constructive and spiritually uplifting.

Easter Sunday was a banner day for the Berea, Nansmond, Sunday School. One hundred and twenty-two were present for the Sunday school session. This was the largest attendance on record for that church. At 11:30 A. M. the children and the young people presented the following program: Opening Chorus: "Tis Joyous Easter"; Invocation by pastor; Response: Chorus; Song: "I Love Him," by group of children; Chorus: "At Easter Time"; Scripture Lesson; Solo: "Easter Flowers Are Blooming," by Jennie Lee Bradford; Prayer by pastor; Solo: "Lilies of Long Ago," by Martha Edwards; Song: "Let the Air Resound," by group of girls; Address: "Why Young People Should Unite With the Church," by pastor; Offering; Solo: "Welcome Easter," by Jewel Francis; Closing Chorus: "Christ Is Risen"; Benediction.

Five new members were received into the church during this service. The program was well rendered and the large congregation was very appreciative of the excellent and helpful service. Children should have a larger part in the worship and preaching services of the church. It requires time, patience and effort to train them for such a service. But this time is well spent. Any church may increase attendance by having children's services occasionally. The announcement of such a service inspires people to come. Children add much to inspire adults. Parents are always interested when their children are on the program. They are sometimes over-anxious for them to render their parts well. The children enjoy it. It is the beginning of their normal work in the church. When they are old they will not depart from it, if they are trained in the way they should go. Mothers are urged by this writer to bring their children to the regular church services. It is a joy to see them in the congregation. All the services cannot be planned to come within the range of their minds, but they are impressed in a wonderful way by any spiritually uplifting service of worship. Children catch the spirit of any occasion. And sometimes that is all that older people get out of the service. Who is able to understand all the great doctrines of the Bible? Who can measure the extent of spiritual power? Where is the minister who understands all the mysteries of his own preaching and experience?

The Berea Church recently presented to this writer and his wife a new Crosley radio. This gift came as a great surprise. We are enjoying this radio very much and we appreciate the generous spirit of the church in making such a contribution to us. A radio is a wonderful instrument. Turn on the current and in a moment one may pick up a program from any part of the earth. The air is full of music and speaking every night. Broadcasting studios in every civilized nation send the voices of their artists to your home, to entertain, to instruct and help you. The owner of a radio can get in touch with the nations of the earth by tuning in at the proper time. Surely man has increased his power and multiplied his opportunity by such an instrument. And there is a spiritual fellowship, and a spiritual power within reach of every person who will tarry in the upper room and pray unto the Father for the gift of His Holy Spirit. In every home there may be a closet where every one may pray. There, in that quiet place, one may "tune in" and hear the voices of praise and power. Heaven is not far away to the people who know how to pray. God is very near. Let us lift up our eyes unto the hills from whence cometh our help.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON'S FUTURE.

Elon College has never been without its financial problems. It had its beginning in a rich experience but with but little money with which to express that experience in a concrete way. The membership of the church was consecrated but seriously lacking in financial ability. It is surprising how far a few dollars went in the first efforts to build an institution of higher learning for the denomination. Many people made sacrifices for the college. These sacrifices were blessed. Others followed their example and a campus with buildings was the result. The church has steadily grown in numbers, in wealth, and in prestige since the founding of the college. Ministers and laymen have been trained for leadership in the pulpit and in the pew. A trained leadership always results in development and growth. With no endowment even though the natural constituency of the college increased, the institution was inevitably to face financial problems even more serious.

The Standardization Drive in behalf of the college was by far the most successful financial effort in the interest of the college. Members of the church, alumni, and friends of the college responded generously to the appeal. Between $250,000 and $300,000 was subscribed and paid in. This was a successful campaign. The amount received was gratifying but by no means sufficient to meet the needs of the college and make it secure from a financial standpoint.

The disastrous fire that destroyed the administration building and the various departments of the college housed therein was a calamity. Again the church, alumni, and friends of the college gave, and gave generously, that the present beautiful equipment might be prepared for the convenience and help of the college. The gifts, however generous, were not sufficient to meet the demands. Through the years the administration was hindered and the whole program of the college was handicapped for the lack of funds. A large debt and increased demands in the midst of a great financial depression put the college in a distressing and disappointing position. It was utterly unable to meet its obligations in full. In January, 1932, the principal creditors of the college granted to the college a two-year moratorium. At the expiration of this moratorium definite plans were presented calling for a series of adjustments and payments whereby the college might be able to free itself of debt and provide for future demands. At this time the debts of the college, including interest allowable, amounted to $704,170.84. The plans offered for the adjustment of the financial affairs of the college have been put into effect. Our present indebtedness is $160,700. This amount is owing to the Virginia Trust Company and the current funds of the college. This is an achievement.

A few months ago many who love the college most and were most interested in its future felt that the debts of the college presented a hopeless situation. Today the picture is entirely different and the future is not only hopeful but is extremely probable. We are now faced with the task of raising a sufficient amount to cancel the debts of the college and provide for other immediate needs. We are now beginning an intensive campaign for the purpose of securing funds necessary to make the college secure. The goal for the campaign has been set at $250,000, $160,700 to pay the debts of the college, the remainder for repairs, furnishings and current accounts. With these items cared for, the campus with its buildings and the endowment will be free from liens. The book value of the college's grounds, buildings, and equipment is $1,193,650.36. Our producing endowment is $226,558.72. Contributions from the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian churches represent income from an additional $250,000, making a total of $476,558.72, producing endowment.

With our debts paid and a supplement for our current accounts, the college will then be in a position to make its appeal for worthwhile contributions to the trust funds of the college to corporations, foundations, and financiers interested in Christian education. When an institution such as ours stages such an unusual comeback its appeal will not be without force and will be effective. The first step in this development program is to reach the financial goal set for the campaign now in progress. Necessarily we look to the members of the church, the alumni, and friends of the college. When this is done, the next step—that of increasing the endowment substantially—will be in order.

Success inspires success. Confidence creates confidence. Money attracts money. The first step may seem difficult but, my friend, be reminded that no one, not even you, is expected to do the whole thing. There are many thousands of us who are interested in this undertaking and interest is mounting up and up every day. If everyone will do his part—no less and no more—there will be no question as to the results. Your failure to do your part might mean the failure of the whole plan. You cannot afford to assume such a responsibility. To do your part to the full may mean complete success. You cannot afford to deny your institution the blessing nor yourself the joy. Together we will do the job.

L. E. SMITH.

THE GREATEST NEED TODAY.

We are living in a world distressed and distraught. It is old, cold, weary and worn in the sin of selfish and bloody wars. It is blindly wandering on in the deep, dark night, crying for light and leadership. The regrets of yesterday, the fears of today and the doubts of tomorrow haunt the way.

There has never been a greater need of leadership and spiritual guidance than now. We have heard of the present crisis until it has become a nauseating morsel. That there is a crisis is evident; and having found the malady, let us find the cure and apply the remedy.

The present crisis is age-old in its cause and the remedy is as old as the cause. Sin is the cause and grace is the remedy. Repentance toward God and faith in Jesus Christ and obedience to Him will solve the world's problems, bring peace and give rest. There is but one remedy and that is Jesus Christ.

The pulpit needs to preach the simple gospel of Jesus Christ; to call sinful men to repentance, faith, hope and love; tell him how Jesus came

A Story for the Children

CATHERINE'S MEDICINE.

Catherine was very cross indeed. She cried when she was being dressed because mother put on a pink dress when she wanted blue. Then she cried because she could not go out until mother was ready to go with her, until Uncle Harry Doctor looked over the edge of his newspaper, and said to mother, "Send her into my office after breakfast. I see she needs some medicine."

Then Catherine cried harder than ever, but Uncle Harry Doctor took her hand and led her into his office where he saw his patients.

"Dear me," he said as he looked at her and saw the marks of tears all over her face. "This is very bad. What was the matter with the pink dress?"

"I like the blue better," sobbed Catherine. "I am tired of the pink one."

"Mmmmmmm," said Uncle Harry Doctor. "I think you need something to do. Why don't you play with Blinky and Pinky?"

"I don't want to play with them," pouted Catherine. "I want black kittens, not gray ones."

"Why don't you play with your dolls, then?" asked Uncle Harry Doctor.

"I haven't any nice ones to play with," answered Catherine. "Dorothy Rose has brown eyes and I want them blue, and Margaret has a finger broken off, and Daisy needs a new wig."

"And I don't want to read any old books, either," she added before Uncle Doctor could speak. "I have read them all until I am tired of them."

"I see I shall have to give you some medicine," said Uncle Harry Doctor gravely, "and although, like some of my patients, you may not find it pleasant, I know it will make you well."

Then he took her by the hand and led her to mother.

"I find this little patient," he said soberly, "is suffering from a very common disease among families where there is only one little girl. She is suffering from 'surfeititis!' Put on her wraps, and we will collect the things that make trouble and take them away."

"For good?" asked Catherine, a little bit frightened.

"Yes, for good," said Uncle Harry Doctor firmly.

Then he picked up the dolls.

"Oh, Uncle Harry Doctor!" cried Catherine, "not Dorothy Rose! I love her, really I do. Why I couldn't let her go!"

"But her eyes are brown," said Uncle Doctor.

"I love them brown, really," pleaded Catherine. "If you will only let her stay, I will never, never wish them blue again."

"We will see," said Uncle Harry Doctor. "Perhaps she may come back, but we must put her in now. Here are the books, too."

Then, last of all, he picked up Blinky and Pinky.

"Oh, no, no, no," pleaded Catherine, gathering them in her arms. "Please leave them."

"Well," said Uncle Harry Doctor, reluctantly, "we will leave them today and see how the other medicine works. Now hop into the car, and away we go."

Usually Catherine was happy to ride with him, but today she didn't know just what was going to happen, so she sat very still until he stopped before the door of a poor little house, in a narrow street, and lifted out Catherine and the package that held the pink dress.

"Good morning," he called cheerfully. "Rose, this is a very sick little girl I have here with me.

We have to cure her, however, and so she is bringing you this little package."

Rose opened it. "Oh, see, mother," she cried, "now I can go to school when I am well!"

Catherine would have liked to stay longer but Uncle Harry Doctor whisked her away. There were so many places to visit. There was a sick little boy who lay all day in a bed with braces on, but who was made happy with a pile of books. Then there were two little girls who were very glad indeed to get Margaret and Daisy, and did not seem to think they needed new fingers and wigs.

Last of all, Uncle Harry Doctor stopped before the door of a large building. "Catherine," he said, "the little boys and girls who live here have no fathers or mothers, and when they are sick there is no one to love and pet them. They have to stay in a ward by themselves, and sometimes they do not have any toys."

He led the way into a room where a little girl with big blue eyes and long golden curls sat in a chair by a window.

"This is Ruth," he said; "she has been very ill but she is better now and can look out of the window, but I think she is lonesome. Will you not lend her Dorothy Rose?"

Catherine looked at little Ruth. "How dreadful," she thought, "not to have any father or mother, and to be ill in such a dreadfully bare room."

"Uncle Harry Doctor," she whispered, softly, "I think I would like to give her Dorothy Rose. You see," she added, bravely choking back a little sob at the idea of parting with her, "I love Dorothy Rose dearly, but I have father and mother and you."

Then Uncle Harry Doctor left the two little girls together while he went to make more calls, and the two played happily together until he returned.

"I am all cured now," Catherine said, as she cuddled down in the seat of the car beside him. "May I come and play with Ruth again?"

"Yes, indeed," said Uncle Doctor. "I am glad you are all well. Now the only medicine you need is the kind that keeps you well."

The next morning was Catherine's birthday. There were lots of presents—new books she had never read, all kinds of toys, even a new doll that looked like Dorothy Rose, only she had blue eyes.

"I shall call her Dorothy May," said Catherine.

"Now," said Uncle Harry Doctor, smiling, "mother, father and I have decided that yesterday you were sick with such a dangerous disease that we must not let it get you again, so we are going to give you some medicine that will keep you well all the time."

Going into the den he brought out little Ruth with Dorothy Rose in her arms.

"You see," he said, "it is almost impossible for one little girl to escape having 'surfeititis,' so the best way is to have two little girls always, so little Ruth is coming to live here and be my little girl, and a little playmate for you."

"Oh," cried Catherine, "this is the very nicest present of all. She can wear my clothes and play with my playthings, and we can play games together. Yes," she added after a moment, "and she can have either Pinky or Blinky for her kitten, too."

"There," laughed Uncle Harry Doctor, "now, I know my medicine was a success."—By Leslie Blake in Advance.

The beautiful and brave words of Helen Keller give a truer philosophy of life than all the Schopenhauers and hypochondriacs who have whined and complained since the world began: "Most people measure their happiness in terms of physical pleasure and possession. If happiness is to be so measured, I who cannot hear or see have every reason to sit in a corner with folded hands and weep. As sinners stand up in meeting and testify to the goodness of God, so one who is called afflicted may rise up in gladness of conviction and testify to the goodness of life. The struggle which evil necessitates is one of the greatest blessings. It makes us strong, patient, helpful men and women. It lets all into the soul of things and teaches us that, although the world is full of suffering, it is full also of the overcoming of it." The lumbermen in Italy tell us that the logs in the lowlands are coarse-grained, and that the logs which grow on the crags and hill-tops, that have faced the elements and wrestled with the winds are finer-grained.—Exchange.

"Your own place in this difficult but thrilling march of progress will be determined largely by your capacity to see some heavenly vision and act promptly upon the call of opportunity and duty."

WORSHIP PROGRAM.

By MRS. J. C. ELLIS.

(South Norfolk, Va., Missionary Rally April 14.)

Scripture Lesson: Luke 14:16-23.

As we view this scene, in imagination, we may well conclude that this "certain man" was also a great man, with a goodly quantity of worldly possessions; he prepared a "great feast," inviting people in large numbers, indicating a household of great proportion. We might very easily assume that he was also, not only a great man, but that he was a king, omnipotent and omniscient; loving, gentle, kind and patient; a king interested in the welfare and comfort of his subjects. In his all-seeing and all-knowing wisdom, as he views the country under his reign, he sees the devastation and ruin of the country; he knows the hunger and misery of this people; he knows their heartache and discontent. As a loving king his heart is pained, and in his desire to alleviate the suffering of those about him he prepares a "great feast." This feast is magnificent in its preparation, glorious in its appointments, impressive and imposing in its magnitude. "Who is this King of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle. Who is this King of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory." (Psalm 24:8-10.)

But a feast without guests is worthless; preparation without someone to partake is a waste of effort and time; of what value is food unless someone is nourished and benefitted? Lo, the King declares—Behold, I will send my messengers, and he shall prepare the way before me—"Go ye." (Malachi 3:1.) Someone designated to go on a great mission, carrying an invitation to the people of an entire nation, and to the world. Carrying salvation to hungry hearts and souls; rest to weary hearts, and peace to the sad and restless. One to go as the representative of the great king of glory, taking the news of a great feast which has been prepared. But the messengers are not commissioned to go just to the close friends of whom we may expect return, nor to those who we love best; not just to those who have a little more of the world's goods than some others; not just to those close to the palace walls; for the proclamation and the commission is, "Go out—into the streets and lanes of the city, into the highways and hedges" (Luke 14:23), yea, throughout the King's Highway." Go wherever there is walking space, or even just standing space; into the finished streets and through the rough lanes; on the broad highways and into the thorny, disused hedges; going to those with great possessions, and those without; those living moral lives and those living in immorality; the corruptible and the incorruptible; those whose lives might well be seen by the world, and those who must live, fearfully, in hiding; to those close to the king's palace, and those at a great distance—"even into all the world" (Mark 16:15). But, as the messengers go out, they find those who make excuses; some are buying and proving worldly goods, and consider them of more importance than the king's feast; some may feel that they can provide their own feast; some will say that they do not care to get in the push of a great multitude; and some will determine that there are those in the gathering with whom they prefer not to associate. Yes, some will refuse to come even to the King's feast. But there are those who will come, and come gladly. Among them we will find the "poor in spirit, those mourning and seeking, the meek, those hungering and thirsting after righteousness, the merciful, the pure in heart, the peacemakers, those persecuted for righteousness' sake; there will be those who, seeking not high places, prefer to be doorkeepers in the House of the Lord. We will find, also, those who feel unworthy to come, but who are willing to make the effort to become worthy. But of those who hesitate to come, the king says, "Go quickly," and "compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." (Mark 16:23.) They may hesitate, and perhaps it is well that they should. They may feel unworthy and unprepared—not ready to attend so great an affair; they may feel that the messenger is mistaken and that the invitation is not for them; they may doubt the reality of the preparation, not believing that such a feast would be really and actually a fact; they may doubt the sincerity of the messengers and think that the invitation is only a myth. But still the king says, "Go and compel," "Be not weary in well-doing, for in due season, we shall reap, if we faint not." (Gal. 6:9.)

And to whom is this invitation to go? Here we find every degree of perfection and imperfection; the poor, the maimed, the halt and the blind. Those poor as a result of spiritual starvation, hungry because they have not partaken of the "Bread of Life" or drunk of that "water which springeth up into everlasting life"; we find those maimed and crippled in mind and spirit because of sin and shame; those halt with the hesitation of doubt, unbelief and lack of faith; those blinded by indifference and selfish desire, so that they see not the feast which has been made ready.

But, again we hear the call, "Come, for all things are now ready." All things are now ready—and the king must not be kept waiting. The king is on his throne, the table is prepared, everything possible for the comfort of the guests has been considered; and still the king waits.

Yes—the Feast is ready. The Lamb of God has been slain, and His blood has been shed, that we might be cleansed from our unrighteousness; His body has been pierced with sword and nails; upon His head has been placed the crown of thorns, from which the blood drops have trickled down; from His lips has come the cry for our purification and redemption: "Father, forgive them"; His eyes have been closed that ours may be opened in life everlasting; His lips have been sealed that ours may sing a song of joy;—the feast is ready, and the King says, "Come."

But, why is not the feast hall filling—why does the King continue to wait? Can it be that the guests do not want to come; can it be that there are not enough inhabitants of this country to fill the king's palace? Can it be that they still hesitate about accepting so great a salvation? Ah, no! Look and behold! The messengers are delaying the transmission of the message! They are still standing in the market places, on the street corners, within the shadow of the king's palace, lagging along indifferently and slothfully. They, too, are making excuse. Listen—do you not hear them as they say, "I have not enough for myself and others, I have no time nor inclination to go into the odd places, I can't afford to be seen carrying even the king's invitation into such a neighborhood." They have gone on the highways, but not into the hedges; on the streets, but not into the lanes; next door, but not into the world; they, too, are buying and proving worldly goods; taking unto themselves the bride of worldly pleasure, and claiming their year of consolation; they are giving the invitation half-heartedly, and without compelling force. They it is who are responsible for the lack of guests in the king's feast hall; they it is to whom the king says, "Oh ye of little faith."

It is to us that the great commission has been given to go saying, "Come for all things are now ready"; to us the command, "Be not weary"; to us the promise, "I will be with thee even unto the end." Have we carried out the king's command, or have we been "anxious about many things" and neglected that "good part which shall not be taken away?" As the King calls us to account will He say unto us, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord?" (Matt. 25:21.)

"Go ye, quickly, throughout the King's Highway, saying, Come, for all things are now ready!"

HALIFAX MISSIONARY RALLY.

The 1936 Missionary Rally of the Halifax, Va., District, met Thursday, April 11th, at Hebron. The following societies are in this district: Lynchburg, Liberty, Ingram, Pleasant Grove, Union, Danville and Hebron. Each one had a good report and delegates were present from all except Lynchburg and Liberty. Our leader, Mrs. C. E. Newman, gave an inspiring talk on the Theme, "The Great Light."

We were deeply disappointed that our missionary from Turkey, Miss Olive Greene, was ill and could not be present to speak for us. We missed our conference president, Mrs. S. C. Harrell and our Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Dr. Atkinson sent an interesting message, "The Great Mystery," which was read by Mrs. Chandler.

The address by Rev. C. E. Newman was enjoyed by all present. We were glad to have Rev. H. E. Crutchfield of Ingram with us. The missionary spirit prevailed throughout the meeting and each one present seemed to have been inspired with a greater determination to help carry out our Lord's command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Mrs. Newman, because of ill health, gave up the leadership and Mrs. T. W. Chandler was elected to fill her place.

The generous hospitality of the Hebron Church was enjoyed and appreciated by all.

Next year we will meet with the Danville Church.

MRS. J. H. DODD, Sec'y.

Danville, Va.

CONVENTION NOTICE.

The Twelfth Biennial Session of Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Christian Convention, Congregational-Christian Churches, will be held in the First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., Tuesday, April 28th, beginning at 10 o'clock A. M. An interesting program is being prepared and a large attendance is desired.

All delegates who wish entertainment and who propose to be present for the Fellowship Banquet Tuesday night, April 28th, will please notify Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, 401 Church St., Burlington, N. C.

MRS. W. R. SELLARS, Pres.

Burlington, N. C.

TITHING BULLETINS OFFERED AT A SAVING.

At least $5.00 a week can be saved by any church that customarily uses a four-page bulletin each week. The Layman Company, 730 Rush Street, Chicago, offers this saving when using their four-page bulletin. Two pages are printed with a Stewardship Message, and two pages are left blank for local announcements. The company suggests that churches conduct a five-weeks' or ten-weeks' course of tithe education by using its bulletins, which are offered at a nominal sum. It offers a sample set containing 32 different tithing bulletins at 20 cents. Please mention the CHRISTIAN SUN and also give your denomination.

The missionary changes things if he stays long enough. Tribes that practice cruelty give it up. Fiji islanders, cannibals, become decent and honest citizens. Missionaries work such miracles.—Anonymous.

Missions is a drive against localism, which is clean against the spirit of Christianity. The greatness of the missionary task will force the church to close its ranks and seek divine power.—John R. Mott.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

YOUTH BANQUET AT BURLINGTON.

On Wednesday evening of next week the young people of the Southern Convention will hold a banquet at Burlington Christian Church in connection with the biennial meeting of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches. It was in this same church, six years ago, that the young people secured admission into the Southeast Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches as a department to be known as Youth Fellowship. Since then the work has grown rapidly and is now fairly well organized throughout the southeast.

There is a Youth Fellowship in each of the five Conferences which constitute the Southern Convention, but there is no Southern Convention Youth Fellowship. Lanson Granger, a young minister in school at Elon College, is president of the Southeast Youth Fellowship which includes the Southern Convention and all the other Conferences in the southeast.

Lanson will preside at the banquet next Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock. There will be music, of course, entertaining skits, and a brief address.

All young people who can do so are urged to attend this banquet and the evening program to follow. Representatives of the Youth Fellowship will report on the work being done in their Conferences at the evening service at which time the Board of Christian Education will make its report, and there will be an address on "Educating for Today and Tomorrow" by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.

FINANCING RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

It is easier to criticize than to correct, but even so it is well to call attention to conditions that need to be changed. In the opinion of this writer, the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches needs to give serious consideration to the needs of religious education.

In these days of rapidly increasing knowledge on the part of the masses, caused largely by the radio, it is exceedingly important that the Church "step up" its educational program to meet the advance in knowledge in other lines. Unless we do so, there is no chance of succeeding in directing the thought of this generation or the one to come.

For several years it has been impossible for the Board of Christian Education to have even one full time worker busy in the Southern Convention because there were no funds available to do so. It would be utterly impossible for even one person to do the work that needs to be done. At present we have two part-time workers, the chairman of the Board who is also pastor of a church, and an office secretary. This arrangement has been made necessary because there was not enough money to do any more.

The Board receives funds from the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions, may call for a special offering annually from the Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, and receives a small percentage from the Conference Apportionments. The Conventions give all they have except enough for necessary expenses. The Sunday schools do not believe they should be called on for an extra offering when they give once a month to the Orphanage and to Missions, once a quarter to the College, and special offerings to these causes annually. The amount received from Conference Apportionment is smaller than that for any other single item in the Convention budget, and is not sufficient to aid greatly. Anyone interested in religious education, who reads the Apportionment Charts in The Christian Annual, will be humiliated.

This article is being written with the sincere hope that those interested in the subject of religious education will attend the Southern Convention meeting in Burlington, North Carolina, next week and help to correct what seems to this writer to be a great mistake. The Board is doing the best it can with the funds that are available and is glad to serve in every possible way, but it cannot put on an effective program unless there is sufficient funds available to pay the expense. If you are interested in this matter, please either attend the Convention yourself or discuss the matter with the delegates from your church.

ELON COLLEGE.

The history of the Southern Christian Church gives adequate proof that Elon College has been of real worth to the Church. The present plant, faculty and program are sufficient argument for the values of the College today. No argument is necessary in order to convince those who know the Church that Elon College is a necessity.

The present campaign to raise a quarter of a million dollars is a challenge to the Church to save its Institution, not only for today but for years to come. This campaign is being thoroughly planned but cannot succeed without the hearty cooperation of the pastors and people in all of our churches. The College needs the help of the churches, but the churches need Elon even more.

THE EASTER OFFERING.

The Annual Easter Offering for Missions properly comes at Easter, for Easter is a reminder of the sacrificial Christ who not only brought new life but sent His disciples into the world to make known that which they had experienced themselves.

This offering should not be received simply to please the Missions Board nor to meet the requirements of Conference but rather as an outgrowth of the deepening religious experience of those who love the resurrected Christ.

If your church has not received the offering, or if all of the people in your church have not shared in it, please do not be content until everyone is given a chance. In seeing to it that you and others contribute to this worthy cause makes it possible for you to obey the command of the Master to carry the Gospel into all the world.

OUR ORPHANAGE.

Superintendent Johnston was quite right last week in saying that money contributed to the Orphanage is an investment in human life and is more than simply a contribution to feed the hungry. Children in the Orphanage are under the direct care, influence and guidance of Christian men and women who help to shape the minds and souls of the boys and girls who are the children of the Church. There is no better way to influence life than to bring it into constant contact with those who are consciously seeking to influence it. This is what happens in the Orphanage.

The success of our Orphanage is measured by the type of person who has gone out from the Orphanage. Some of them have made money, but better than that most, if not all of them, have lived happily and well because of the influence which came to them at the Orphanage. An investment in this institution is an investment in life.

Suggestions for Leader's Talk—

Phillips Brooks said: "The ideal life is in our blood and never will be still. Sad will be the day for any man when he becomes contented with the thoughts he is thinking and the deeds he is doing,—where there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger, which he knows that he was meant and made to do."

Each of us has but one life to live. Everything is staked on that single chance. When that one life on earth comes to an end it is all over so far as our earthly work is concerned; if we do anything to help God or man we must be at it soon.

There comes the time when we all say "What shall I do for a living?" "What life-work shall I follow?" There are many ways to "make a living" but we must remember that "making a living" is secondary to "making a life." When we decide on a vocation, let us decide on one that leads to a useful life. Let's not be so intent on money, power and fame, that we care not what work we do, just so it gives prestige. Jesus led a useful life, although He made no money; He even performed a miracle to furnish tribute money for Himself and Peter.

There are many people who live a life of selfishness. Jesus taught His disciples that one becomes great through service to others. He taught them to live a life of service and as those who call themselves Christians today are His-disciples He wants them to serve also. So, in selecting a calling let us not consider that which will bring us most gain from a material standpoint, but that which will bring most gain to mankind.

Let the prayer of each of us be that God will guide us in the choice of a life-work. God has need of Christian workers in every vocation. Whatever vocation we choose, whatever purpose we have in life, let us be sure that it is Christian. Those who work with God invariably succeed. His work may seem sometimes to fail, but that is because men do not see the great results.

JESUS LOOKS AT POVERTY AND WEALTH.

LESSON IV—APRIL 26, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The rich and the poor meet together; the Lord is the Maker of them all."—Proverbs 22:2.

LESSON: Luke 16; Lesson Text Printed, Luke 16:19-31.

The story of Dives and Lazarus must not be misunderstood. Jesus is not saying that Dives went to Hades because he was rich, or that Lazarus went to Abraham's bosom because he was poor. The story rather teaches the dangers and temptations of wealth, and the destiny determined by one's use of wealth. It was aimed at the Pharisees who were lovers of money, and to all who are like the Pharisees in this respect.

A Certain Rich Man—A Certain Beggar.

In every civilization and in every nation there are the rich and the poor. One needs not be classed as a pessimist if he states that there always will be these two classes. If the wealth of the world were equally divided, it would not stay divided very long. Men are not created equal in their capacity to earn and to conserve wealth. Jesus intimated that we would have the poor with us always. John 12:8. But that did not mean that the rich have no obligations to the poor or that the poor have no claim upon the rich.

At His Door or Gate.

Wealth and poverty side by side. Within a stone's throw of the homes of the rich and the business interests of the rich, there are often hovels and wretched poverty. In our nation, even while there are large numbers of millionaires, there are larger numbers of people on charity and living even below the line of necessities. There certainly is something wrong with a society in which this situation exists. And as in the case of Lazarus, the poor people would be glad to be fed with the crumbs that fell from the tables of the rich. Many a man could support his whole family on what some men of wealth squander on luxuries and self-indulgence.

The Beggar Died—And the Rich Man Also Died.

Death is no respecter of persons. It invades the mansion of the wealthy and the hovel of the poor. And all stand on an equal footing before the Grim Reaper. It is appointed unto all men once to die, and after that the judgment. Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God.

In Hades.

In Jesus' time this word meant the abode of the dead, or the place where the spirits of those who had departed this earthly life were at rest. There was a place for the righteous and a place for the wicked, Paradise and Tartarus. Every man goeth to his appointed place, but it is a self-appointed place. Men determine their destiny here.

Being in Torments.

One does not have to believe in literal fires, in physical punishment to believe in hell. This story makes clear that in the world to come there will be continued, conscious, personal existence. Remorse can be worse than physical burning with fire. "I am in anguish in this flame"—these words are not to be taken lightly, coming as they do from the story which the Master told.

A Great Gulf Fixed.

"And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed, and they that would pass from hence to you may not be able, and that none may cross over from thence to us." These are solemn and serious words. They are words of warning. Why argue over the chance of repentance in the world to come when we can pass from death unto life through repentance in this world. There is such a thing it would seem as fixity of character. Men can say "No" to God until they cannot say "Yes." Today if ye hear His voice, harden not your hearts.

I Have Five Brethren.

The fellow had at least some humaneness about him, even if it was not evidenced in his attitude toward Lazarus. At least he did not want his brethren to follow him to the place of torment. He cannot do anything for himself, but when it is too late he would try to do something for his kinsmen. Let us be concerned about others before it is too late.

If One should Rise from the Dead.

Dives thought that if one should go back from the dead, his brethren would repent. Abraham very frankly told him that those who live on the earth have a witness. God has not left them without witness. His word, His witnesses, His Spirit, His Nature—in a hundred ways it is written so that all who run may read, that the way of the transgressor is hard, that whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap, that except we likewise repent we shall all perish.

It is all a story of misused and abused privileges and possessions. As in the case of so many other men, Dives' wealth had blinded his eyes and hardened his heart. It had made him less humane and less human. It had begotten selfishness and sordidness. He had gained much of the world but he had lost his own soul.

"GOD'S KINGDOM."

By ELMER L. DAUGHTREY.

[The poem given below was sent in by "Reporter" from our Holland, Virginia, Church, with the following comment: "Few churches can boast a deacon and a poet all in one. But we have such a person in our fellowship. We are not sure that he would be classed as an amateur, as he has a page in the 1935 volume of 'American Lyric Poetry' and will have two pages in the 1936 volume by the same title. He is one of the sons of Elon College and a successful Nansemond Co. farmer.]

"God's kingdom means the present hour
When joy and faith and hope attend
To free us from undue alarm,
To keep us from rash ways of harm,
To fill our lives with gracious charm,—
While a master hand is blending.

"God's kingdom means the pure in heart
Have grace and power from the King
To calm a fretful state of mind,
To ease a breaking daily grind,
To, in His world, real beauty find,—
While a master hand is blending.

"God's kingdom means a way of life
When faith and hope and love attend
To banish all vain doubts and fears,
To dry deep sorrow's burning tears,
To bring sweet peace to passing years,—
While a master hand is blending.

"God's kingdom means His way of life
Brings gracious power from the King,
To free us from the bonds of sin,
To make and keep us pure within,
To give real love a chance to win,—
While a master hand is blending.

"God's kingdom means the coming day
When mortal pain and death shall end,
When all our night shall turn to day,
And all our grief shall pass away,
When light and love shall have full sway
In realms of the Master's blending."

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"THE PERMANENT CHRIST."

From "What Did Jesus Think?"—Brown-Ser-man and Prichard.

"Go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and behold he goeth before you—There ye shall see him."—Matt. 28:7.

Out of the shadows of Calvary and the glories of Easter morn rises the light of Christian faith. No one can tell what would be our faith, or what we would be worshipping today if this had not taken place. But the fact that Christ was crucified and rose again is well attested so that the most skeptical must admit that the evidences are convincing.

From that time till now the living strength of Jesus has moulded the conduct of the world. In every age and at all times there have been great spiritual souls both among ministers and laymen before whom Jesus is present constantly almost in tangible shape and their lives have been guided by His living personality. Is this not true of all thoroughly consecrated people?

The power of Christian living lies in the fact that "Jesus lives." Jesus came to Paul in person, and that person went before him in all his ministry. The same Jesus goes before us to prepare us and to "prepare a place for us." Does this answer our questionings? If not, ask thyself, "What did Jesus think of Himself?" Answer. In life He taught that he would live again and return. The "last supper" was the final symbol of that perpetuation. Then, after the resurrection, the ascension was a practical expression of the fact of the spirit of God transcending the limitations of time and space. Such glories met the expectations of Jesus.

Jesus lived, and lives today, to draw men into a personal relationship with God, and His method is the same as of old; personal intimate fellowship with Himself. Jesus purposes that this fellowship shall be published by us throughout time until His will is done on earth as in heaven. It is through the medium of all His children that it shall be done in all the world. Wherever right is opposed to wrong, wherever the will of the moment becomes the will of God, wherever the power of the devil is turned to the power of God, His eternal mission is accomplished. He knew that whatever changes might come in life this life of God, mediated to man by Him would never fail.

After all, Christ's mission was not His Gospel, but was himself, and to have Him a living Christ for all time is necessary, or the Gospel would mean nothing, "And," says our author, "so He stands before us, not merely as a Saviour of men, but as an example to the minds of men.—If—the world ever comes to a realization of the mind of Christ it will solve the riddle of existence. For in that mind was perfect clarity, perfect understanding and perfect sympathy."

Prayer—We thank Thee, everlasting Father, for the assurance of the ever-living Christ, and that nothing can change that fact. In this day and every day that comes may we not miss Him. By faith may we enter into His life and abide with Him forever.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"A PRAYER."

"When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."—Matt. 6:6.

Our Father:

"Help us to be kind;
Help us to learn
To put ourselves in others' places;
Help us to do as we would be done by;
To carry the burden for tired ones,
To remember those that are in bonds
as bound with them,
To speak for them who cannot speak for themselves,
And never to find in another's pain
our sport.
Help us to be like thine own self
Who art all love, kindness and tender mercies."

—C. W. Wentz.

WEDNESDAY.

"THAT HUMAN TOUCH."

"They helped every one his neighbor; and every one said to his brother, Be of good courage."—Isa. 41:6.

"Tis the human touch in this world that counts,
The touch of your hand and mine,
Which means far more to the fainting heart
Than shelter and bread and wine.

"The shelter is gone when the night is o'er,
And bread lasts only a day,
But the touch of the hand and the sound of the voice
Sing on in the soul away."

—By Spencer Free.

Prayer—We thank Thee, Lord Jesus, for that hand of love always outstretched to help, and that it is extended to all; no price is too great for Thy love. Help us to pay with our lives to Thy cause. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE BETTER PRAYER."

"I thank Thee, Lord, for strength of arm
To win my bread,
And that beyond my need is meat
For friend unfed,
I thank Thee much for bread to live
I thank Thee more for bread to give.

"I thank Thee Lord, for snug thatched roof
In cold and storm
And that beyond my need is room
For friend forlorn.
I thank Thee much for place to rest,
But more for shelter for my guest.

I thank Thee, Lord, for lavish love
On me bestowed,
Enough to share with loveless folk
To ease their load.
Thy love to me I ill could spare
Yet dearer is Thy love I share."

FRIDAY.

"THE REAL MAN."

"He that is greatest among you shall be your servant."—Matt. 23:11.

The real man is not the man who eats and sleeps, rises and works, or turns to play, nor is he the creature who wears fine clothes and thinks he is heard for his eloquent utterances. The real man is a man who dreams and sees visions, and goes forth with heroic endeavor to make those dreams and visions come true. He is a man who loves righteousness and answers God's calls to bring that righteousness to mankind. Paul is a better man in prison than Agrippa was, as judge of the Supreme Court.

If we understand our text, it means that true greatness lies in feeling, in some degree; that our lives belong to others, and that what God gives us he gives us for mankind.

Tolstoi is quoted as saying:

"Life is a place of service, and in that service one has to suffer a great deal that is hard to bear, but more often to experience a great deal of joy. But that joy can be real only if people look upon their life as a service, and have a definite object in life outside themselves and their personal happiness."

Prayer—Dear Father, in days of depression and spiritual dryness and it seems that Thou art far away. Show us Thyself in a special nearness that we may know Thee then as ever. Thy love and grace is abundant. Help us to draw from it. We cannot see but make Thy heart to shine and we shall. Warm our cold hearts to Thy soul. Make us servants of Thine.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"SAY 'FATHER.'"

"When ye pray, say, Father."—Luke 11:1-4.

Why, yes, how gladly will we say "Father" when we pray! What else might we say? "Almighty?" "Avenger?" "Punisher?" "The Terrible One?" "The Great One?" "The Jealous One?" All of these, and many more terms like them, have men used of their God for centuries and ages.

But we will say Father. As our Saviour, God's dearly beloved Son, has taught us, we will say, Father. We will know Him as the God of love and not of fear, as the God of mercy and not of terror. We will not flee from Him but run toward Him. We will not deprecate His wrath but look for His blessing.

Yes, in all things we will say Father. The storm clouds may lower, but we will look upward and say Father. Disasters may come, but in the direful midst of them we will say Father. Sickness, disappointment, failure, poverty, all may oppress us, but none the less we will say Father.

Prayer—For Thou, O God, didst create human fatherhood, and therefore Thou art greater than it, more tender than it, more lasting than it—our Father who art in heaven!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"TRIED AND PROVED."

"The word of Jehovah is tried."—Ps. 18:25:30.

We feel no confidence in a ship till it has been inspected, has made its trial voyage, has proved itself seaworthy. We prefer the old receipts that have been used with pleasing results in many kitchens. We do not use a new remedy until the doctors have put it to practical tests and found that it cures.

And because we rest so securely on what has been tried and proved, we rejoice evermore in the Word of Jehovah. Ages upon ages have used it and tested it and proved it. Generation after generation has tried its promises and found that they hold good. Countless millions have walked in its ways and found that they lead to all blessings.

Other words have proved false, but never the word of Jehovah. Other words have disappointed, but the word of Jehovah has always made good its claims, and more.

Prayer—Lord Jesus, Thou art the Word of God. Because we trust in Thee, the living Word, we trust in Thy written word. May we be, thru all our lives, men of the Book.—Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE HAPPY CHRISTIAN.

By REV. ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

"May my joy be within you and your joy complete."—John 15:11. (Words of Jesus.)

Six years ago I prepared a radio sermon on "The Joyous Christ" (as a Palm Sunday theme) and later discovered that the message was received somewhere in the North by a sad Christian who had never heard anyone say that Jesus was a joyous man. It started me to thinking and since then I have taken pains to propagate the idea that Jesus was a man of joy. Once each year, on Palm Sunday, at least, one can emphasize this fact.

Jesus tells His disciples that He hopes that His joy may be their joy and that their joy may be complete, and yet very few artists have painted Jesus with a smile. Jesus' brief public ministry ended in so great a tragedy that His sufferings and death on the cross riveted the eyes of the world! Humanity has struggled for so long with the problem of sin and salvation that the religion of Christ has become a serious matter. It has been a profound and solemn theme for theological systems and sometimes a rather gloomy experience. At least one thoughtful man has said that when he came to see the state of mankind in this present world he never laughed again! We can understand that Jesus, being what He was, looked upon the world with an understanding heart and had for it a profound and deep sympathy. He had every reason to be sad and depressed.

The record of His life, however, reveals a charming personality, magnetic, wholesome and joyous. His hands, though the hands of a working-man, were possessed of a healing and soothing quality. Women of noble character loved Him with a high and holy devotion. Little children were drawn to Him and His peace and calm influenced all about Him. He was possessed of an inward joy that shown outwardly in beauty of character. When He began His first great sermon He said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." The word "blessed" means happy. But the happiness referred to runs deep, wide and strong with underground springs of sweet and refreshing water directly from the ocean of love. Here is an inner condition superior to an external situation. The spiritual side of life is the richest and most satisfying side after all. Jesus could not have begun and kept up His joyous ministry unless He Himself were a center of true joy.

Now it is an easy transition of our thought to say that Christians ought to be happy. They are blessed anyway! People who live in a Christian country, especially these days, ought to be happy. (Perhaps there are some who will say that this is not a Christian country, and in some senses it is not, but we still enjoy freedom to worship God as we please, freedom to think and express our thoughts, and much else that is due primarily to the influence of Christianity.) In any case we have inherited much from the past and from our fathers in the faith.

From purely religious point of view a Christian is a saved person. The expression means different things to different persons. In the 27th Psalm we have the expression, "The Lord is my light and my salvation." Doubtless the poet meant by "salvation" that he was saved, kept and preserved by the kindness and care of God.

The Psalmist had probably been saved from some great catastrophe by what he believed to be the Providence of God. If a man or woman literally believes that by accepting Christ as a Saviour they are saved from future retribution that ought to be a source of very great spiritual joy.

A Christian is supposed to be growing in richness of character, learning to be unselfish, engaged in good deeds and delightful helpfulness. Inspired by a growing consciousness of immortality a Christian has the right to expect a completely satisfying conclusion of this earthly life. A conscientious Christian ought to be able to sing with Browning

"Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made;
Our times are in His hand
Who saith, 'A whole I planned,
Youth shows but half; trust God: see all, nor be afraid.'"

A Christian does not live under the condemnation of a righteous God. First of all he is a forgiven person. The Psalmist sings with great joy the familiar words:

"Happy is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Happy is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guilt."

Nothing finer has ever been written about the source of Christian joy, from this point of view, than what St. Paul told the Romans. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death." He continues with two remarkable passages, viz: "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," and "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." There seems to be in every Christian life a germ, call it what you please, that goes on growing and unfolding unto the perfect day. The Christian life needs no explanation, no defense or excuses. It reveals itself by its beauty of devotion, and its essence is a deep flowing current of conscious joy.

Again let me say that a Christian ought to be happy! But I will follow that remark by affirming that Christians have not always been happy people, at least as we ordinarily count happiness. During the period when the new psychology was blossoming into New Thought and a new emphasis was being placed on optimism and radiant joy a leader of this new movement was riding in an electric car in an Eastern city and noticed a very trim and sedate woman (rather solemn and glum as the traveler described her) and she said, "I think she must be a Christian!" It was a cruel thing to think and a very unkind remark to make, but in conversation she found the woman to be a Christian. But let it be said that Christianity should not be judged entirely by people's dispositions, or by indigestion or by environment. Mental moods depend too much on our physical condition. At the same time, however, the will has much to do with it. It is possible to overcome the obstacles and will to be happy!

When we say that a person can WILL to do anything we mean that he can determine to take a hopeful attitude and keep affirming that he will master his feelings. It is just the opposite of giving way and giving up. It is setting the will in a conquering attitude. The will to be well is a case in point.

Happiness means different things to different people. For some it may mean any condition in which the aggregate amount of pleasure exceeds that of pain. There is in it a sense of comfort, security and pleasure. The ancient philosophers said that inward correctness was its source. Warwick Deeping says, poetically, that it is a bird that cannot be caged. We set traps for it, but never catch it. One might add, I suppose, that happiness is a by-product of something else. In the case of the bird it enters no traps, but comes singing its songs free-flying and without special (Continued on page 15.)

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The Junior-Senior Banquet of the Elon public school was given Friday evening, April 17th. Eleven of the Christian Orphanage boys and girls were in it.

This is always a very happy occasion for the youngsters and they look forward to it from year to year. They always have a most interesting program. And this year was no exception. The writer was an invited guest and attended with a great deal of pleasure.

The girls all dressed up in evening dresses. It changed their appearance so much we hardly knew our own children.

They enjoy the occasion immensely and why not? They have been diligent in their school work all these years and have been looking forward to this occasion that comes to them but once in their high school life. They ought to have a good time because they have earned it and deserve it. The writer always considers it a very high honor to get an invitation to attend and all other engagements are cancelled so we can be present and enjoy the occasion.

It is a credit to any boy or girl to graduate from High School; but it is a real pity that so large a number never go any further in their school life.

So many opportunities open up for boys and girls who are willing to pay the price and prepare themselves to take advantage of these opportunities. Every line of work is calling for trained men and women and it is the ones who are prepared who get the best jobs.

THE GREATEST NEED TODAY.

to seek and to save the lost; go out into the highways and hedges and tell the travellers and lodgers there the wondrous story of the Cross; go down where there is sin, sorrow, suffering and fallen ones and tell them of Christ's love and power to save.

The heart of man is strangely hungry for the simple gospel that tells of sin, calls to repentance and holy living. A heart seeking truth, light, forgiveness, comfort and strength, goes not to the sanctuary of the living God to be amused, entertained, lectured; but to worship, to be warned, instructed, steadied, strengthened, encouraged, comforted, edified and helped as a follower of Jesus Christ.

Give not such hearts a stone when they cry for bread; but give to them the Bread of Life. Give to them Jesus who is "the Way, the Truth, and the Life."

"Thus sayeth the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." The old paths are paths of repentance and righteousness. Those who walk therein in faith, hope and love walk with God. They are the paths that saints of all ages have walked and the paths which all saints are walking today. The way is good, safe, direct and its destination rest—heaven. P. H. FLEMING.

invitation. The same writer does say, however, that happiness is beauty and health, beauty in doing and feeling and thinking. It is in the breathing and in the heart-beat, in the strength of our accomplishments, and in the richness of our own thoughts. Happiness is there when the "I" works well and thinks well and loves well. It cannot be caged because it is emotion and spirit. Seek it selfishly and it is not there. When possessed it commands joy.

The Bible teaches that happiness is a sense of God's approval. "Whoso trusteth in God, happy is he," is an ancient proverb. Essentially, happiness rests on character. A person who has the consciousness of being right with God, whose sins are forgiven, whose life is safe with God alive or dead, one who lives freely in a world such as ours is, certainly has a right to be happy. Now add to this the spiritual companionship of Christ, the Friend and Saviour, and loving relations of family, neighbors and friends and associates; what more could one ask for? Even adverse circumstances in physical, financial, and social relations could not keep such a person in perpetual eclipse! There is something in the soul of man that buoys him up in time of trouble and God has promised to help him in such a time of need.

Religion is becoming a more joyous experience in the lives of men and women today than ever before. In the early days of Christianity Christians were credited with possessing a radiance that distinguished them from the sad and hopeless pagans about them. Some of that radiance has been lost, but the coming of a larger knowledge of mental law has added much to the joy of life. It has been found that what a man thinks actually does affect his body and by affirming that which is good, beautiful and true adds much to the joy of living.

A few years ago an American was visiting a Christian college in India. The students were all natives and followers of various religions and sects. Meeting a Hindu student on the campus he entered into conversation with him. He asked if there were many Christian students there and he answered "Yes, there are some." "Is there any special way you can tell a Christian student here?" the visitor asked. "Yes," said the Hindu, "you can tell them by their faces. They have a happy, radiant look."

SPRINGTIME—PLANTING TIME.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Spring—that season when a million blossoms attest the glory and grandeur of nature—is here to remind us that winter's fierceness has been subdued, that her cruel fingers are released for a season.

Spring—that season for planting, if reaping is to be had, and it is a new spring, too; for while she repeats in season she brings not the old, but the new, the lovely refreshing violets. Like last year's, it is true, but to us they are ever new. In our appreciation and wonderment, we repeat from last year's vocabulary, but words come free and fresh from hearts that follow the season's fruitage like the birds that wing their way to climates of their intuitive choosing.

Springtime—and that spells planting time—is here to welcome, to greet, to beckon, to bid, that we sow and care and cultivate if the golden harvest is to lavish on us from its plenteous hand.

Springtime—plant roses for Indian Summer's glow; plant gardens for beauty, for food, for health, for happiness.

Springtime—what a season of hope for the gardener, the farmer! Despite their past disappointments, "hope springs eternal in the human breast" and so the planters, the sowers, go forth with a newness and a freshness of heart like that of the morning sun, believing the day of harvest will not disappoint, but bring a rich and happy reward. And it will for those who work and wait and hope.

Springtime—welcome it with a buoyant, glad heart. Cooperate with nature, for she welcomes the gentle hands of honest toilers, and into those hands will place emblems of a rich reward.

OBITUARIES

FARMER.

Mrs. Nannie Thomas Farmer was born Nannie Thomas Wilson in Yanceyville, N. C., and 42 years ago, March 28th, was united in marriage to Jos. H. Farmer of Halifax County, Va., and to them was born one child, Miss Josephine Farmer. Early in her married life she removed her membership from the Baptist Church to Pleasant Grove Christian Church, and to the end of her life remained a loyal and devoted member of that church. Twenty-three years ago the family moved to Elon College and became associate members of Elon Church. On Friday night, April 10th, after years of patient and uncomplaining suffering, this good woman quietly passed from the circle of neighbors and friends, who had learned to esteem and love her devotedly, to that higher circle of friends where there is no suffering and no separation, and where love rules and reigns.

After a very brief service in the home, the funeral was conducted at Pleasant Grove Church at 2 P. M., and burial in the church cemetery, the services being in charge of the pastor, Dr. W. C. Wicker, assisted by The Sun's editor, J. O. Atkinson. Thus passed from labor to her reward a quiet, refined Christian woman. She died as she had lived, with resignation, fortitude, faith and courage and, like the sun in the effulgence of its glory as it sinks into the evening and night, so she passed quietly from us, the light of her life shining in its going.

America's Gambling Bill.—

American Business says that last year Americans spent over $6,000,000,000 in cash on gambling. A half-billion went to so-called "legal race track betting," while three times that amount went to book-makers in violation of the law. Another billion went abroad for sweepstakes tickets, of which a few "paltry hundred thousand" came back in return for the millions spent. Other forms of gambling took the rest.

Toscanini Delivers Farewell Program.—

Arturo Toscanini, on last Sunday afternoon, directed the last regular concert of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, and what was probably his last broadcast before returning to Europe. On this program were selections from the works of Mozart, Beethoven and Schubert. Toscanini has proved one of the most popular symphony directors of modern times, and his leaving for Europe will be a source of regret to many music lovers.

Intelligence in Men Rated First.—

If the girls of the Florida State College for Women can be taken as an index, the first requirement of the "Ideal Man" is intelligence. They want honesty, ambition, a sense of humor, good health and personality. They think thoughtfulness, neatness, courtesy, dependability and kindness, essential. They want a man with an education, and he should be religious. "Good looks" are a consideration, but the handsome man without intelligence holds only twentieth place in their rating.

Britain Uses More Liquor.—

For the first time in fifteen years, the drink bill of Great Britain shows an increase over the previous twelve months. It is also to be noted that convictions for drunkenness have increased in the same ratio as the increase in the drink bill. Angus Watson draws the following conclusions. He says: "The steady continuance of liquor-trade advertising, the increase in the potency of the beer supplied, and the reduced price to the public as the result of reduced liquor taxation are all explanations, as is also the slight improvement in trade prosperity."

Sales Up in Fifth District.—

According to the reports issued for the Fifth Federal Reserve District, retail sales showed a decided increase in March of this year over the same month in 1935. Washington, D. C., led the district with an increase of 11.8 per cent. The average for the entire district was 8.2 per cent. The increase for the first three months of the year was also led by Washington with a percentage of 13.9, while the entire district showed a gain of 10.4. Wholesale trade figures for March showed gains of 8.8 per cent for groceries, 21.3 per cent for dry goods, 2 for shoes, 16.9 for hardware, and 13.2 for drugs, over the same month in 1935.

Claims 400 M. P. H. Plane.—

Last September, Howard Hughes, 31-year-old millionaire flyer, and motion picture producer, established a new speed record when he drove his plane at the rate of 352 miles per hour. He is now having constructed a new engine, with which he expects to attain speeds far in excess of any so far flown. He is quoted as saying that he expected it to give his racer a speed of not less than 400 miles per hour at an altitude of 20,000 feet. The engine is so designed as to deliver its top horsepower at high altitudes. The plane, itself, he says is the most efficient ever built from the standpoint of aerodynamics, having the lowest "drag" of any ship in the air.

Crime in the United States.—

Speaking before assembled Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington last week, Edgar J. Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, gave some figures on crime that would make one's hair stand on end. He stated that there are at present 150,000 uncaught murderers in the United States. Furthermore, he predicted, 300,000 now living are doomed to be killed violently. The murder rate in the United States is more than two and a half times England's, and about seven times that of Continental Europe. Our percentage of convictions for all crimes is lower than that of Europe. New England has the lowest homicide rate, and Vermont stands lowest in New England. Florida has the dubious honor of ranking first, followed by four other Southern states: Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Louisiana. He adds, however, that when other crimes are considered, the order of States changes. One of the most distressing facts regarding crimes is the increasing youthfulness of the criminal.

"Freedom" for Puerto Rico.—

Senator Tydings of Maryland stirred up a hornets' nest when he introduced a bill in the Senate calling for the freeing of Puerto Rico. The bill has the backing of the Administration. There has been, on the part of the Liberal Party on the island, a demand for freedom, but it now seems that the bill is not the right kind of a bill. Senator Luis Munoz-Marin, spokesman for the Liberal Party, says that the islanders will welcome independence "under any condition." He adds, however, that "the conditions imposed by the Tydings bill appear to have been made with the intention of making the people of Puerto Rico choose between independence with ruin and starvation, or a continuation of the present unacceptable colonial status." The former governor of Puerto Rico, E. M. Reily, thinks the Tydings bill outrageous, saying that it threatens to "undo thirty-eight years of Americanism." He added that Puerto Rico would be "much happier" but for congress. He said that if the bill should pass the American Senate, he would himself return to the island and take the stump against independence, stating that an independent Puerto Rico would "be another Cuba, with misrule and violence." The news of the introduction of the bill into the Senate, says a report from San Juan "Astounded most islanders today and caused sudden adjournment of the insular legislature." The president of the island Senate, Rafael Martinez Nadal, asked "Is Puerto Rico to be cast adrift to economic ruin in four years because a fanatic group killed one American official?" It is believed in the island that the move puts many insular politicians on the spot, especially those seeking independence.

Presbyterians to Hold 75th Anniversary.—

On May 21st, Presbyterians will gather at the Old First Church of Augusta, Ga., in General Assembly, and to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee Anniversary of the organization of the Southern Presbyterian Church, in December, 1861. Among other features, there will be a pageant enacting the stirring scenes of seventy-five years ago. The Jubilee celebrations, however, are not to be ended with the closing of the assembly, but will culminate in local programs in the various churches in the assembly's territory next December. The church itself is of historic interest. The old pulpit and side galleries of the church have been removed, but the moderator's chair which was used in the first meeting has been preserved, and there has been little other change made in the architecture of the church. It was in this church that Woodrow Wilson, as a lad of five, sat each Sunday and listened to the discourses of his learned father, the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Wilson. A bronze tablet marks his pew.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

This week the Convention is in session at our Burlington church, and we trust is making real history as it seeks to lay plans to build up the kingdom of righteousness in the world.

Dr. P. H. Fleming, County Welfare Officer for Alamance, and pastor of our Union and Long's Chapel Churches, has been very ill the past week at his home in Burlington, N. C. The last reports are that he is improved. Many hearts are anxious that this good and well beloved man be fully restored to strength and health.

Reports come that Rev. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., the beloved and faithful pastor of a large parish, a member of our Mission Board and one interested in all the affairs of the kingdom, is still ill at his home and unable to meet his appointments or to attend the Convention at Burlington this week. Many prayers, indeed, are being offered that this servant of God shall be spared and restored. He and his family have our deep sympathy and concern in this time of their affliction.

Rev. W. J. Andes, a graduate from Elon College last year, and a post graduate student in Duke University this year is forced to resign the pastorate of the several churches he was serving in the Eastern Conference to return the first of June to take charge of the churches in the Valley of Virginia Conference which his father's illness has left pastorless for several months. Young Bro. Andes had full work which he was enjoying immensely and his congregations were greatly appreciating his consecrated and efficient service.

Dr. A. D. Woodworth, Merom, Ind., writes that "Union Christian College will go by a new name hereafter, viz: 'The Merom Institute.' It is expected that four groups of young people will have sessions here this summer. The buildings are to be thoroughly prepared and made ready. Rev. Clarence Bennett has been chosen director of the new venture which is sponsored by the State Conference of Indiana and Illinois and by the Chicago Theological Seminary. We are hoping that in the future the influence of the new institution will be even greater than it has been in the past."

Rev. W. M. Stevens, pastor of our Happy Home Church, reports that more than half of the entire apportionment for the church for the year has been raised and is in the hands of the treasurer to be reported to the church meeting Saturday of this week. This is not half the story. The pastor's salary has been met in full to date, and this, in spite of two facts: First, the church has had a building program and is now housed in the new building, though the Sunday school rooms are not complete, and that all payments made as far as the building has gone. Second, that it is the first time in the history of the church that half of the Conference apportionments and pastor's salary, in addition to the building program, have been paid this early in the year. This is one of our rural churches that realizes that it has a task and an opportunity and is setting itself devotedly to its task and, with zeal, is meeting these obligations. Moreover, this is one of our rural congregations no wealthier than dozens of others which has gone from once a month preaching to every Sunday preaching. Happy Home is thus revealing to our other rural churches that every Sunday preaching achieves far more for itself and for the kingdom than the church with preaching once a month and without any particular program. This all may be, in a measure, contributed to the devoted and consecrated leadership of the pastor, who finds in Happy Home Church that which many other pastors may find in their churches if they will seek diligently loyal souls and liberal who are willing to enter into a program of progress and activity for the Lord.

Dr. W. M. Jay was formally installed as pastor of our United Church in Winston-Salem at 3:00 P. M., Sunday, April 26th. It was, indeed, an impressive and an auspicious occasion. Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, secretary of our Extension Boards, from New York, preached an impressive and helpful installation sermon. Dr. C. H. Rowland, of our Greensboro Church, gave the charge to the new pastor. Rev. Wm. T. Scott, retiring pastor, gave the charge to the church, and very cordial words of welcome were spoken, on behalf of the Ministerial Association of Winston, by Rev. R. A. Smith, pastor of Centenary Methodist Church of the city, by Brother May of the congregation of United Church and Mr. Luther Martin, city alderman on behalf of the city of Winston-Salem. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield gave the invocation, Rev. D. M. Spence the prayer for the service and Dr. W. C. Wicker the prayer of consecration. Many other ministers present were Rev. B. J. Earp, of our Palm St. and Hines Chapel Churches and Rev. Carl Hermann Voss, United Church, Raleigh, and possibly others. At the conclusion of the very fitting and highly appropriate service, the new pastor responded in an appreciative and happy vein and pronounced the benediction. Several special numbers were rendered by the large choir, and the entire congregation entered into the service with reverential attention and evidence of deep concern. Our work in Winston-Salem thus far is not large as numbers go, but it is an intelligent group of wide-awake and progressive men and women, deeply interested in the kingdom, faithful and loyal to the church and are working in the spirit of cooperation and delightful fellowship in the work of building a real church of our communion in this large and growing city.

DR. L. E. SMITH ADDRESSES RALLY.

Elon College will be made safe for the present and for the future through success of the Development Program which has been undertaken thruout the Southern Convention area.

This was the thought left with the several hundred men and women who are giving their services in the $250,000 campaign at an inspiring rally at the college Wednesday afternoon, April 29th.

Members of the campaign force from the five conferences of the convention, from alumni centers and from Alamance County heard from the leaders of the Development Program the encouraging account of how Elon has been brought the greater part of the way out of a desperate financial situation, how its student and faculty strength has been built up and how the present undertaking will equip it for still greater service in the field of Christian education.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of the college, asserted, "the church has done a magnificent thing in deepening the college, going in the face of disaster and discouragement." It did this, he said, because "it was convinced of the need of Christian education. It realized as it did when it founded Elon half a century ago that its hope was in a trained leadership, and that the possibility of a trained leadership rested entirely upon the continuation of the college."

Today, he said, "the skies are brighter and the future is more hopeful. Practically $550,000 of the college's debts have already been accounted for. We are now undertaking the heroic task of raising sufficient funds to retire the remaining indebtedness of $160,700 against the college, to provide for necessary improvements, and to insure the security of the college in the future. When we consider the fact that more than three-fourths of the debt has been taken care of before we, the constituency of the college, are asked to make our contributions to retire the remaining one-fourth, no one is willing to question the responsibility that is ours or what the results should be."

To accomplish the part of the task still ahead, Dr. Smith said, "entire and complete cooperation upon the part of all is required. No one man is asked to do it all but every one is asked to take his share.

"The value of the $250,000 we are seeking will be multiplied many times. Think for a moment what it will do: First, clear Elon of all indebtedness; second, provide for immediate needs; third, secure a plant and endowment totaling practically $1,500,000; fourth, make Elon College, the interest of our church, safe for today and for tomorrow; fifth, guarantee that the Christian Church, our church, will do its share in training the leaders of church and state under Christian influence. Your contributions to Elon College will be worthwhile investments that are safe and that will bear dividends in life, character and leadership in all time to come."

Discussing the physical condition of the college, Dr. Smith said, "Through the vision and wise planning of my predecessor, Dr. W. A. Harper, Elon boasts of an equipment that is ideal for a church school and is second to none in institutions of its class in this country. Enrollment has increased from 231 students in 1932 to 483 in 1935-36. The faculty has kept pace with that of other institutions and will meet the educational test of accrediting agencies."

The rally was opened with an address by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, president of the Southern Convention and general chairman of the Development Program. The part which the different divisions of the campaign forces are taking was discussed by Dr. Harrell, for the church, by J. O. Atkinson, Jr., of Greensboro, alumni chairman, for the alumni, and R. Homer Andrews, chairman of the Alamance County section, for the county and the city of Burlington.

Additional members of the campaign organization for the church conferences, announced by General Chairman Harrell up to the end of last week, follow:

North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

Group 1. Chairman of Durham Church, Dr. Waldo Boone, Durham; associate, J. L. Crumpton.

Group 2. Chairman, Rev. W. E. Wisseman, Greensboro; associates, Mrs. B. J. Earp, Greensboro and Miss Frankye Marshall, Walnut Cove.

Church chairmen in Group 2. Palm Street (Greensboro), A. H. Hinshaw, Greensboro; Hines Chapel, R. W. Isley, McLeansville, N. C.; Belew Creek, T. R. Preston, Belew Creek, N. C.; Pleasant Ridge, Mrs. L. C. Huffines, Guilford College; Salem Chapel, Mrs. A. F. Marshall, Walnut Cove, N. C.; Greensboro (First), Mrs. O. H. Paris, Greensboro; Kallam Grove, Mrs. N. G. CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

GETTING MORE LAYMEN INTO THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

At the General Council meeting of 1934 in Oberlin there were about fifty laymen among the 764 voting delegates. That such a small proportion of laymen was to be regretted, found expression in a resolution adopted by the Council:

"That the Executive Committee of the General Council be requested to draft a plan and secure the proposal of that plan by some State Conference as an amendment to the Constitution of the General Council, to make mandatory a suitable proportion of unordained men, as it now does of women, in the voting membership of the General Council."

The Executive Committee in acting upon this resolution also thought it well to take into account other inconsistencies in the provisions for the membership in the General Council. For example, one State Conference of 180 church members, all told, is entitled to three delegates at the General Council; another of 310, another of 791 church members, each entitled to three delegates. There are nine State Conferences with an aggregate of 7,688 members, entitled to twenty-eight delegates.

In working out a new plan, it was thought desirable not to increase the total number of delegates materially; also it would seem as though some elasticity was desirable but with a substantial guarantee that a respectable block of seats should be occupied by unordained men, with a fair probability that an even more substantial block of seats would be occupied by them. Then, too, the present language of the Constitution on membership is in part outmoded due to the completion of the merger. It seemed essential also that the wording of the Constitution on membership should be so clear as to require no explanation.

The amendment to the Constitution of the General Council, as drafted by the Executive Committee, has been formally proposed by the New York State Conference and will be presented for consideration and adoption, if approved, at the Mt. Holyoke College meeting of the Council this June.

The changes involved are:

Recommended: That "III. Membership, 1. Voting Members," first paragraph which now reads as follows:

"1. Voting Members. (a) Pending possible mergers among themselves, the larger units (i. e., the five Regional and the Afro-Christian Conventions, the Congregational 'State' Conferences), and after merger the united bodies shall severally be represented in the General Council by two delegates each, one of whom shall be a woman, and each such Convention or Conference having churches whose aggregate membership is more than ten thousand shall be entitled to elect two additional delegates for each additional ten thousand members or major fraction thereof, one-half of whom shall be women.

be amended to read as follows:

"1. Voting Members: (a) Each state or regional conference or convention recognized by the Council shall be entitled to be represented in the General Council by one clergyman, one layman and one lay woman for each 15,000 members or major fraction thereof in the churches within its bounds, and a like representation for each additional 15,000 members or major fraction thereof. Conferences or conventions having 7,500 members or a major fraction thereof shall be entitled to representation by one clerical and one lay delegate; conferences or conventions having 3,750 members or a major fraction thereof shall be entitled to representation by one delegate, lay or clerical, with the assumption that appointments will alternate between clerical and lay delegates; conferences with fewer than 1,876 members shall be represented only by delegates elected by the associations within their bounds, or if there be no association, then such conference or convention may elect on the same basis as an association."

That "III., 1." second paragraph reading as follows:

"Pending merger, local units (i. e., Christian conferences and Congregational district associations), and after merger the united bodies shall be represented in the General Council on the basis of one delegate for every ten churches or major fraction thereof."

be amended to read as follows:

"(b) Each association or local conference recognized by a state or regional conference or convention shall be entitled to representation in the General Council by one clerical and one lay delegate for every twenty churches or major fraction thereof; associations or local conferences with a smaller number of churches, but not less than six, shall be entitled to representation by one delegate, clerical or lay, with the assumption that the appointments will alternate between clerical and lay delegates."

That "III. 1." third paragraph, reading as follows,

"A state having a state organization but no district organizations, or a state having district organizations but no state organizations may send delegates on the dual basis of one for every ten churches and two for every ten thousand members, as above set forth."

be amended to read as follows:

"(c) A state or regional organization having no district organizations may send delegates on the dual basis as above set forth under (a) and (b)." (Note that there has been omitted the provision for dual representation of states having district organizations, but no state or regional organizations.)

That "III. 1." (b) reading as follows,

"(b) Delegates shall be divided, as nearly equally as practicable, between ministers and laymen."

That "III. 1." (c) which reads

"(c) Any delegate who shall remove his residence from the geographical bounds of the conference or association by which he has been elected to the Council shall be deemed by the fact of that removal to have resigned his membership in the Council, and the conference or association may proceed to fill the unexpired term by election."

be changed to read as follows:

"(b) Any delegate who shall remove his residence from the geographical bounds of the body by which he has been elected to the Council shall be deemed by the fact of that removal to have resigned his membership in the Council and the electing body may proceed to fill the unexpired term by election."

That under III. 1. "(d)" be changed to "(c)".

That III., 5. be amended by adding after the word "alternates" in the first line the words "of the same class as the principals."

That III., 7. be amended by adding at the end of the first paragraph the words "and provided that each substitute shall be chosen from the same class as his principal; that is, a minister, woman or unordained man."

In answer to the question, just what will the amendment do, Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, secretary of the Council, says:

"On the basis of the membership at the time of the Oberlin meeting there would be guaranteed 68 ministers, 68 women and 68 men who are not ordained; further there would be guaranteed a few more than 300 unordained persons, either men or women. Presumably the major portion of these would be elected from unordained men. I should say therefore that the probable set-up would be 384 ministers, 226 unordained men and 226 women, a few of whom would be ordained. If all seats were filled this would mean more unordained people than ordained. Probably, however, it would give up about fifty-fifty. There were 764 voting delegates at Oberlin.

"Two things may be feared: first, that it does not guarantee enough unordained men; and second, that it looks as though it might squeeze out too many ministers. I am inclined to think, however, that it is about as near as what is wanted as we can get."

THE RESURRECTION.

The members of Happy Home Church and those of the community and of other churches present witnessed a most impressive service, the pageant, "The Resurrection," given on the choir loft of the church on Easter Sunday night. They saw the picture of the crucified Lord as He hung on Calvary's Cross where he died for the sins of those who would believe on His Name. To me this was one of the crudest acts of all times but we realize that this dark hour must come before the blessed light of the resurrection which was later portrayed by members of the Young People's class. The angels sat at the door of the tomb and asked the women who had come to pay their last tribute of love to their beloved Master, why they had come to seek the living among the dead.

With this picture still before the people all believers in Christ were asked to take part in a candle-lighting and communion service. I think every Christian who was present feels closer to the Master and will, as a result of the love shown in that service submit their lives as a living sacrifice for Christ.

I, with every member of the church, wish to thank God for a man who can walk so close to his Master that he can write and portray to his people that picture of the death and resurrection of the Christ. I refer to our pastor, Rev. Millard Stevens, who wrote and directed this service with the help of some of his co-workers at Elon College.

We thank God for the wonderful progress in the building of our new church and the blessings that we receive daily through our church and its services.

MRS. LONNIE RICHMOND.

In this troubled world of ours our Saviour lived, and here, in the thick of life, He made God real and near to us, lifting drab days into associations divine. He saw why men fail of the truth most worth knowing. He saw through the self-deceivings with which we dope ourselves, and the evasions by which we shirk what we know to be right and true. He saw why we give up prayer, and what eats away our peace, and what keeps us away from God . . . He told us that we must get back to God and that this is home.—Rev. Thomas Yates.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE ELON CAMPAIGN.

Every reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and all friends of the church and Elon should be uncommonly interested and very deeply concerned for the campaign now on to clear the college of its indebtedness and set it free for even a larger work in the kingdom than it has been able to do through the years thus far. Elon has been a burden, financially, but it has been a goodly burden to bear and, as such, has brought blessings to its burden-bearers, and to the church, such as can never be estimated or appraised.

To the institution, THE SUN's editor recalls, some of the most valiant and saintly souls of our fellowship, through the years, gave the best that they had of consecration and contribution, that the college might be planted and might live thru the years and come to this good hour. If there is an institution on earth made sacred by the memory of souls now sainted and enriched by the donations of real self-denial in our Lord's name, Elon College is that institution. Out of loving respect to our sainted dead, we should embrace this hour of need and of opportunity and see to it that these saints did not bestow their love and their gifts in vain. The very highest contribution of praise and devotion we can pay to the souls who have wrought so nobly, given so liberally and prayed so earnestly, for Elon, is for us to come together now and make secure all that they have done for the college. This, it is entitled to and merits by the contribution it has made to the church and to the Kingdom of God. Prayers have been offered for Elon College and money has been given to support the institution, money that could ill be spared from other needs, and yet no one questions today the indisputable fact that the college has given and is giving back to the church far more, in enriched character and efficient service, than was ever contributed to the college.

President Smith and his co-workers are laboring with a zeal that is worthy of all admiration in order that this campaign may be a success, and they challenge the friends of the college to rise up and do their utmost in this crucial hour, not only to save the college but to make it even a better and a greater servant of the church than it has ever been. The organization, being worked out with so much diligence and efficiency, hopes to complete its campaign for funds between the middle of May and the second of June, and, in so doing, show to the world that Elon College will not and cannot fail in the great mission for which it was brought into the world and for which it has lived through the years, viz: That of training youth in Christian character and conduct and in making the church, whose it is and for whom it exists, a more potent factor in building up the kingdom of God on earth. One and all of us together to do our best, and this campaign will be such a success as to make us rejoice that we have lived to see such a day.

THE FEAR OF GOD.

Psychologists, many teachers in the schools, and some parents in the home, insist on abolishing fear. They tell us that it is a dangerous element in the make-up of character and conduct. Meanwhile, there are some who still believe in the Book of books and that its counsels are very wise, quite worthwhile and abiding. And those acquainted with the Good Book will recall that the fear of God is an outstanding and fundamental teaching from God through His patriarchs, prophets and priests to men and the children of men. We cannot forget that, again and again,—

- (1) Fear is enjoined, and that repeatedly, in both the Old and New Testaments;
- (2) That the advantages of fear are pointed out and emphasized repeatedly in the Old and New Testaments;
- (3) That fear is commanded repeatedly all the way through, from Leviticus, the Book of Laws, to and including the Book of Revelation.

No one has ever doubted that the Psalmist David was a man of courage, of undaunted faith, and most devout in reverence and worship, and it was he who sang, "In thy fear will I worship toward thy holy Temple." And again he sang, "The fear of the Lord is clean," and it was the wisest of men who declared, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Somehow, fear is necessary in the beginning of things. It is foundational. Until the child learns to fear the fire, it is in danger of being burned, and unless the mother tears poison there is no security for the child. They were very direct and forceful words our Saviour employed in talking not only to His disciples but to a great mixed multitude when He said: "Fear him, which, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, fear Him."

God is love, and perfect love casteth out fear, but no one has ever yet come to perfect love, trustful, and abundant love, who has not learned, first of all, to fear.

We may leave out many things in our reckoning these days, but we cannot, with impunity to ourselves and our generation, leave out that which God Himself has made and established beyond all the reach or strength of man. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom" and on that foundation wisdom erects her temples and crowns her heroes.

THE SCHOOLS AND THE BIBLE.

Bishop Edwin Mouzon has been taking some statistics in the commonwealth of Virginia. The good Bishop finds that of 18,434 Virginia High School students, who were put to the test, 16,000 of them could not name three Old Testament prophets, 12,000 could not name the four gospels and 10,000 could not name even three of Christ's disciples.

Now the figures of the good Bishop are no more surprising than is the fact that the high schools are faulted for these facts. The facts are salient enough and deplorable aplenty, but we certainly do live in a time when we seek to shift responsibility. To what extent are the public schools of Virginia or North Carolina, or the other states, charged with the responsibility of teaching their pupils about the Prophets, the Gospels and the Disciples of Christ? Since when did parents shift this responsibility from their own shoulders and look to the schools to do what they themselves were too busy with other things to do? And since when did the Sunday schools quit teaching these salient facts and leave these important lessons for other things less abiding, fundamental and important? We commend and pass on to the consideration of our readers the following two paragraphs from our neighbor, the Greensboro Daily News, who also wonders with us as to just why the public schools are faulted in the matter:

"There was a time, not long since, when Sunday schools dealt primarily with the teaching of Old Testament and New. But that was before the day of cutting out paper dolls and playing in sandpiles, before there was a kindergarten department and children were sent to the church primarily to get them out from underfoot. It was, too, previous to the substitution of pep speeches, deputation teams and the like for reading together and questioning concerning the lesson each Sunday. We are confident that through memorizing the golden text—which was decidedly prevalent when we folks in and tending toward the forties and fifties came along—there was more knowledge of the scriptures gained than there is now by attendance on classes provided with perfunctory lecturers who know little about the Bible to begin with and do not take the time to add to their stock of information."

Why do the Sunday schools, like many of the week-day schools, try to teach a smattering of very many things while leaving off the more weighty matters of the law? Ought not the child in the Sunday school and in the home be given a chance not only to get a job or manipulate a machine, but to know God and God's Word, to learn about the men of God, and especially the Son of God, Whose teachings and conduct while on earth have given to us and the world the best that we and the world have and the best that heaven has to offer?

STEALING THE CHURCH OFFERING.

By way of Greensboro Daily News comes the information that thieves stole the $500.00 Easter offering of a church in Atlanta. This may be news from our southern metropolis, but not from some other parts of the country. THE SUN's editor was informed awhile ago by a pastor of a large church in Chicago that holding up the church treasurers by gangsters and stealing the Sunday offering had become so prevalent that armored trucks were employed to come to the church door immediately after the offering on Sunday and guarantee to deliver the same to some nearby bank or vault. The regular price, if special trips were made on Sunday for this service, was $10.00 for a church. If, however, the church joined other churches in a cooperative way and kept their offerings until Monday A. M., trucks would call for the offering and deliver at the banks for $5.00 from each church. All of which emphasizes the fact that we are living in the day of gunmen and gangsters, and there is absolutely no field or sphere of life too sacred or secure for their ravages. The boldness and the recklessness with which crimes are now committed and thefts are made are appalling, indeed, and make us wonder to what extent our moral standards have been shot to pieces. We have put gold above God and money above morality, and the lust for material possessions above the longings for spiritual achievements.

THE FLORIDA CONGREGATIONAL CONFERENCE.

The Fifty-third annual meeting of the Florida Conference was held last week at Melbourne. One important action taken by the Conference was to change the name from the Florida Congregational Conference to The Florida Congregational-Christian Conference. The meeting of the Conference was largely attended and the spirit and fellowship were fine. One pastor, new to the Conference, spoke of the fine optimism shown, and the freedom from anything savoring of the "blue."

One interesting feature of the Conference was the introduction of Rev. William T. Scott, new Pastor-at-Large for the Southeast. Mr. Scott was introduced at the Fellowship Supper and spoke in a friendly vein and was welcomed heartily by all. It was the universal feeling that he was the man for the task, and his friendliness won for him the friendship of all.

One of the outstanding features of the Conference was the address by Mr. Roger Babson, the noted statistician. Mr. Babson demonstrated that the rise and fall of business prosperity in the country over a period of approximately seventy-five years was paralleled by the rise and fall of the accessions to the churches upon confession of faith. In other words, with the higher tone of spiritual life there was paralleled a betterment of living conditions. He prophesied improvement in business conditions in the future, but stated that for a permanent solution of problems America must choose between Christ and chaos.

Another vivid and intense moment in the Conference was the address by Rev. Walter Metcalf upon the tragic conditions connected with the notorious floggings and death in Tampa. Mr. Metcalf has been the man inspiring the conscience of the city, a noble stand, and his burning passionate prophetic words held the Conference enthralled.

Miss Marguerite Davison, Extension worker in Alabama, and Tennessee, spoke interestingly, especially of the Student Summer Service and other young people's work in those states under the topic "Stars Shine in Alabama." Miss Pattie Lee Coghill spoke of the "Youth Fellowship Movement" in the southeast and Florida; and Miss Emily Carleton of Winter Park, Secretary of the "Youth Fellowship" spoke concerning the coming summer conference at DeLeon Springs, outlining its unusually strong program.

The Conference sermon was preached by Rev. Leslie J. Barnette of Coral Gables. The Key-note address of the Conference was delivered by Dr. Kerrison Juniper of Miami on "The High Purpose of the Church." The closing message was by Rev. Everett B. Leshner of Jacksonville, who also conducted the communion service. Mr. W. J. von Behren of West Palm Beach was the Moderator and all felt the high quality of his leadership and his fine genial spirit.

One session of the Conference was devoted to three group meetings. There was the meeting of the Woman's Federation under leadership of Mrs. R. G. Williams of Lake Worth. The Laymen's meeting was under the leadership of Robert G. Williams, and the ministers' meeting was led by Rev. O. T. Anderson of Fort Myers. All of these conferences discussed phases of the general theme of the Conference, which was "The Effective Church."

The officers elected for next year were: Moderator, Rev. James E. Parker, pastor at Palm City, but pastor-elect for New Port Richey; Rev. R. E. Newton of Juniper was elected scribe.

Rev. E. A. King, of Miami Beach, was elected president of the board of directors. Directors elected were the Rev. E. B. Leshner, Jacksonville; the Rev. J. B. Root, Sanford; Mrs. H. A. James, Orange City; Mrs. Victor Chicoine, Winter Park; Mrs. Robert Williams, Lake Worth.

The Rev. O. T. Anderson of Fort Myers was named preacher of the conference sermon. Delegates to the general council were named as follows: Rev. Frank Atkinson, West Palm Beach; the Rev. Walter Metcalf, Tampa; the Rev. E. B. Leshner, Jacksonville. Alternates, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Jacksonville; the Rev. H. J. Conduit, Orange City; the Rev. J. E. Parker, New Port Richey.

A laymen's movement of the conference was organized with the following elected members of the executive committee: Robert G. Williams, Lake Worth; F. W. Shockley, Avon Park; S. S. Searle, St. Petersburg; W. J. van Behren, West Palm Beach and L. A. Wood, Daytona Beach.

The Woman's Federation elected Mrs. Robert Williams, president; Mrs. H. A. James of Orange City, secretary, and Mrs. H. J. Feeny, Tampa, treasurer.

The Conference voted to meet next year in Jacksonville.

THE WAY TO PROGRESS.

Dr. Alexis Carrel, Rockefeller Institute scientist who won a Nobel prize in medicine more than 20 years ago, and whose recent penetrating book on the things of the spirit, Man the Unknown, has aroused wide discussion, spoke pessimistically last week at the University of California on the advances of science. He urged "a new type of scientist whose exclusive function would be to think about the great human problems." "It seems," he went on, "that our great institutions of learning should give to a few individuals the possibility of retiring temporarily in solitude, of meditating about basic problems or elaborating the knowledge indispensable to the constitution of a better world."

Behind Dr. Carrel's desire for new light on our "basic problems" appears the same sense of need which agitates everyone who meditates upon our world and who observes, as he honestly must, that the progress of mankind during the past century has been almost exclusively in the realms of the technological and the physical—not in the realm of character, of morality, nor of the spiritual.

A middle-aged individual has less chance to reach the age of 80 than his grandparents had. It appears that our resistance to fatigue, to sorrows, to worries, has decreased. Modern men need much sleep, good food, good houses. Their nervous system is delicate. They do not endure the worries of business, the responsibilities and the sufferings of life. They easily break down. . . . Mental diseases by themselves are more numerous than all other diseases put together.

There is small reason to ask whether this analysis of the problems of twentieth-century man is accurate. The evidence of our daily living decides the issue all too definitely. We have immensely increased, for several generations, the amount of money and energy spent in education. We have believed that giving schooling to "all children of all the people" would make them more intelligent, better prepared to lift the standards of our civilization, men and women of greater kindness, generosity, altruism, idealism, and character. Yet the end has not established the truth of theory. Intelligence and morality do not appear to have increased as we expected. There is small indication that university graduates of today are less selfish, more tolerant, more devoted to the common weal, higher in their attitudes of citizenship and in living the good life than the eighth grade graduate of 50 years ago. It is an awful confession of failure, yet it is true that our hopes for a new world, lifted toward higher standards by the processes of education, have reached the point of frustration.

Men and women, by and large, still permit themselves to be stultified by the same hates and greeds and antagonisms which possessed their grandparents. Nations still prepare, in their fear and their ambition, to war upon other nations. Men are still separated into oppressors and oppressed, into white and black, into Jew and Gentile, into barbarians and Greeks, into haves and have-nots. The chief result of the progress in science and invention which has characterized the past century is a vast increase in our capacity to destroy each other. Accompanying this progress there has been no comparable improvement in our ethical, moral, and spiritual capacity to live together as civilized human beings.

If this seems a gloomy picture—and it is—we think there are still some evidences that we can hope for future progress. But we are afraid that the hope must rest in something other than Dr. Carrel's retirement of some scientists to meditate in solitude upon life's "basic problems." That procedure smacks too much of the ivory tower, where philosophers debate the verities but have no contacts with the sweat and stresses of daily living for the masses. If there is to be a solution of the problems of our mechanized civilization—both the personal and the social problems created by the rise of science—it must be a solution which meets the needs of the ordinary man.

To meet these needs there is no other method than the method of the Christian religion. Only religion is adequate to give rational and satisfying answers to the eternal questions of Whence and Whither and Why; only religion can create the faith which enables the soul to commune with the Eternal and thus to find the inner strength and serenity which saves it from dissolution before the shocks of existence. It is not your Christian whose nervous system breaks under the tensions of business, family and social cares: it is your civilized barbarian, your splendid pagan, who has been so scornful of naive belief that he has never found an anchor for his spirit. The consciousness of God, the mystical contact with a personal Father, mirrored and exemplified by Christ, is the consciousness which saves the unity of the soul.—Editorial in Christian-Evangelist.

"The Acts of the Apostles are still being recorded, and the immediate present is furnishing its share of social, industrial, and religious pioneers—scientists, teachers, statesmen, ministers of the gospel, engineers, doctors. I covet for you a place in this company. You may have it if you can say through the years, 'I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.'"—From the Baccalaureate Sermon, 1934, of President Arlo Ayres Brown of Drew University, Madison, N. J.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Can you show me the way out?" That question is in the mind of many people today. Around the family fireside situations arise which make this question timely and important. Families face problems they cannot solve. Food, clothing, and shelter must be provided, if possible, in the face of conditions which are not always favorable. Sickness comes. Financial disaster reduces the wealthy from prosperity to adversity, and luxury is exchanged for actual necessity. The son becomes a prodigal. The daughter loses her self-respect. In such an experience one asks: "What shall I do?" And that experience is multiplied as one moves out into the larger areas of human life, and the heart of the peoples of the world hungers for a satisfying answer.

The world is confused by its financial outlook. The crowded ways of the market places reveal a confusion of tongues more baffling than the clamoring voices of the builders of the tower of Babel. Advisors can be found on every hand, but are they trustworthy? Legislators in state and national assemblies are besieged by armies of specialists, idealists, official and self-appointed lobbyists who offer their counsel and appeal to be heard. They present many conflicting theories of government and social reform. Socialism, Communism and all the other "isms" are ready with their propaganda. Radical and drastic steps are taken by governments to correct existing evils. New methods are introduced. The depression does not end. Prosperity has not come. Industrial leaders are living in constant dread of the future. Labor organizations are unwilling to accept the mandates of the employer. What is the final answer to the problems of the people who are trying to find their way out?

There is confusion in the field of education and mental culture. Methods and objectives in education are changing more rapidly than in the field of finance. The courses of study and the methods of teaching in high school, college and university are rapidly changing. The standards of yesterday are discarded as the old is replaced by the new. Those who advocate a liberal view of education are finding that when the mind is broadened it is not always deepened. The discussions of the public forum cannot be substituted for the mental drill of intensive study, without weakening the thinking processes. Faulty thinking leads to mental confusion. There is no mental confusion in discovering truth. Deep breathing is good for the health. Deep thinking and sound reasoning would relieve many mental ills of this age.

Confusion abounds in the moral and spiritual areas of life. Loose thinking produces a low brand of moral character. In the church, people may be found on both sides of almost any moral and spiritual issue. Some oppose—others favor. These differences obtain in matters of doctrine, administration, church polity and run all the way to the personal rights and privileges of the individual. Taking the situation in a broader survey one finds the Bible accepted and rejected, the Lord's Day observed and desecrated, and moral standards held up and torn down, while humanity is suffering between these battle lines. In the meantime, the forces of evil are united in their attack, and sin abounds in the cottage of the poor and the palace of the rich. Great wealth and extreme poverty cannot be eradicated by legislation. Organized crime and personal sin cannot be crushed by the strong arm of the law. What is the way out?

Jesus is the Way. He is the Way out. He is more than that: He is the Way in. When He becomes the Head of the home, and the family lives under His guidance, it will be a greater joy to spend the evenings around the fireside with a family altar as a source of spiritual renewal and power. When young and old find time to think of Him, and hide His Word in their hearts, loose thinking will have no place in the mind. And His moral and spiritual leaven will bring the world into a new birth of eternal life.

THE LOCAL CHURCH'S SHARE.

The highest body in our church organization is the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. This body meets biennially. The purpose of this organization is to plan comprehensively for the whole church, to receive reports resulting from the plans proposed, and to make further plans for the future activities of the church. The Convention as such has no authority over the local conferences nor the local church other than to suggest and persuade. As a rule, however, the local conference is governed by the actions of the conference as binding. It is the custom of the Convention to adopt a financial budget for the conferences and the local church through the conferences. This budget is to provide for the financial needs of the various departments of the Convention. The budget adopted by the Convention is allocated on a pro rata basis to the local conferences. The local conference in turn allocates its budget to the local churches. In this way the local church knows its share in the financial requirements of the denomination.

The conference budget attempts only to provide for the regular requirements of the various departments of the denomination. Whenever an emergency arises special provisions are required. The college, one of the more important institutions of the church, is now facing such an emergency. Through circumstances over which no one seemed to have control the college finds itself seriously handicapped for the lack of funds. It is necessary to secure funds in addition to the regular contributions if the college is ever to be set free and given an opportunity to render the service required without hindrance or embarrassment.

Upon the authority of the Convention and the vote of the Board of Trustees a campaign to raise $250,000 for the college is now under way. This amount is being allocated to the several conferences and to the local churches through the conferences on an equitable basis. By the time the campaign gets under way every conference and every church will know its share in this great undertaking. It is perfectly natural for some to feel that the amount asked for is beyond their ability and it may be. There may be some who can and will give more than the amount asked. These amounts represent the best judgment of the ones conducting the campaign and the local church is asked to accept its allocation and do its best. In order to help in securing this amount a complete and efficient organization is being set up. The organization is three-fold—one for the Convention, one for the Conference, and one for the Church. These organizations include laymen, ministers, and alumni. The combined organization will include something like 1200 different individuals. If this number of the friends of Elon College will take the task seriously and dedicate their best to the undertaking when the campaign comes to a close on June 6th, we will have reached our goal completely.

This is an earnest appeal to every one to lay aside differences, doubts and fears and cooperate whole-heartedly and enthusiastically in this undertaking which will make a lasting contribution to our church and to Christian education through Elon College.

HARDEEVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA.

On a recent trip to southern Georgia it was my privilege to stop at Hardeeville, South Carolina, for a few hours. Elon College has some very staunch friends at Hardeeville. It was a great pleasure to meet Mr. and Mrs. Horace Phillips. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips were formerly of Suffolk, Virginia. Mrs. Phillips is the daughter of Mr. Will Jones, deceased. They have lived in Hardeeville for the last twenty years. Mr. Phillips is a lumberman of wide influence. Mrs. Phillips has been greatly interested in the public schools of Hardeeville and of South Carolina. She is a member of the school board and has been instrumental in the adoption of plans for consolidated schools in her section of the state. This plan offers to the children of poor parents in the rural sections first-class advantages in the grades and high school. Time alone will tell the value of the efforts of Mrs. Phillips in this connection. The genial hospitality of their home cannot be surpassed. It was indeed a pleasure to form the acquaintance of these friends.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH, AMBROSE, GEORGIA.

Some years ago Reverend H. W. Elder, deceased, reported to the writer concerning a visit that he had made to Southern Georgia on the invitation of Mr. T. J. Holland. Mr. Elder had made a visit to Ambrose, Georgia, where he met a number of enthusiastic people. At that time there was not a church in this South Georgia town. A church was organized and a beautiful and convenient church building was erected and paid for. For a number of years Mr. Elder served as pastor of this church. The membership increased and much good was accomplished. The people of Ambrose cherish the memory of Reverend H. W. Elder and speak of him affectionately to this day. Reverend C. E. Carpenter is the present pastor of the church.

On the invitation of Brother T. J. Holland, one of the leading members of this church, the writer visited the Ambrose church Sunday, April 19th. It was indeed a pleasure to worship with these good people. Large congregations were present for both services. The spirit of freedom and devotion characteristic of this organization was most refreshing. Brother Carpenter is doing a good work in the midst of these people. I was entertained in the home of Brother Holland. He and his good wife were most cordial and hospitable. No guest could have been shown greater consideration than was extended by these friends. I wish for the Ambrose Church and the people of the town continued success in these material blessings according as they may grow in the things of the Spirit.

The depravity of any age is its indifference to sin. Today we may speak of social maladjustment all we like but just let us talk about sin, the most damnable of all things and we are immediately deemed old-fashioned.—Prof. R. A. Montgomery.

THE CHURCH AS EDUCATOR.

By DEAN J. D. MESSICK, PH. D.

Of growing significance is the enlarging conception of the church as a builder of manhood and womanhood. There are many students of life and its problems who would hold that the church in modern society has a function of cooperation with all other organizations in building a new world peopled by a new type of citizenship—a citizenship possessed of a faith in the eternal verities—a faith in God, and a belief that the Gospel of peace and brotherhood must be extended to all mankind.

The difficulty has been and is that we fail to grasp fully the significance that inheres in a cooperative and coordinated endeavor on the part of churches and schools to build character and to do so with a common understanding of the objectives to be attained and the joint as well as separate functions of the schools and the churches in the attainment of these objectives.

The church can at least go this far: It can stimulate a fine idealism in the lives and conduct of our teachers. It can utilize all its forces for safeguarding the best interests of the schools and encourage a community in its endeavors to get better schools. Certainly, the schools can do better the work they are expected to do when the citizenship of the community strives to emulate in all of its efforts the idea that saving souls is infinitely more important than saving dollars. Let the church arouse the teachers, inspire the parents, and wake up our citizenship to truer conceptions of civic responsibility.

Religious Education for June, 1917, states: "The goal of religious education for society is the reorganization of institutions and enterprises in such a way as to provide for all individuals the stimulus of the religious heritage of the race, and equal opportunities for health, education, work, play and worship—in a word—world brotherhood."

The process of religious education takes place as the individual lives among people, comes into touch with the highest type of spiritual life in the present and in the past, and responds to this life and this ideal by developing the habits, attitudes and purposes that serve to give range and direction to the constructive social tendencies and to hold in check or direct or convert such tendencies as are destructive of the social good.

Cooperation between the church and the school has been advanced by the introduction of Religious Day Schools, summer vacation Bible schools and summer assemblies. Let us not forget that 75 per cent of our teachers in the most churchless of our counties are church members. They have a right to demand our cooperation.

Social values to be gained from such programs:

1. The group standard is a factor in determining individual conduct. Morals are fundamentally group habits. We do what the group expects of us.
2. Developing group loyalty through recreational activities. The church should provide a whole-life program for boys and girls of its constituency. Churches that farm out their youth to other agencies for all their week-day recreation need not expect from them the same amount of loyalty. Youth does not develop loyalties to several agencies.
3. Playing and working cooperatively. Adults, as well as young people, are benefited by a well-planned and supervised program. Friendliness, loyalty, courtesy, trustworthiness and team spirit among its members help to make a church an irresistible force for righteousness.

Pres. John E. Calfee in his book, "What Next?", says: "The Church might well return to the use of the Scripture for useful teaching, reproof, correcting faults, training in uprightness and keeping parents constantly reminded that the son does the things he sees his father do."

Games involve cooperation. They present complex social relationship and conflicts and thus may be of value when complex relationships and conflicts are met in other social situations.

4. Educational fellowship.

Training in Christian living is most effective when its activities include the present showing of pleasures, that is, present Christian living. Good fellowship in the church is itself a process of Christian Education.

5. Training for Citizenship.

Directed play ought to be a valuable means for laying the foundation for the understanding of law.

(a) Pupil self-government.

Our plea for public playgrounds is a plea for justice of the boy.

6. Boy and girl friendships.

They should be brought together under normal conditions.

A Suggested Plan for a Recreational Program of the Church.

All churches, in order to carry on a worthwhile recreational program, should have a leadership training course for at least one group, so that trained workers may organize and supervise the indoor and outdoor activities of the church. The program can be made more interesting by working games and contests with other recreational organizations.

I. Recreations of the out-of-doors.

A. A church park, consisting of

1. Playground equipment that isn't too dangerous.
2. Tennis Courts.
3. Volleyball courts.
4. Baseball diamond.
5. Furnace for cooking out-of-doors.

6. Place for relay races, social games, etc.

B. Hikes.

1. Historical hikes, as to Mt. Vernon.
2. Industrial hikes, as to manufacturing plants.
3. Educational hikes, as to museums, etc.
4. Literary hikes, as to libraries and to authors.
5. Special hikes, as to a cave, waterfall, etc.
6. Nature hikes.
7. Endurance hikes.

C. Camping trips.

D. Treasure hunts.

E. Church gardens.

F. Trips to points of interest.

G. Church and Sunday school picnics.

1. Union picnics with all churches in the neighborhood.
2. Separate class picnics.

II. Recreation Indoors.

A. Story-telling hour once a week.

B. Socials.

1. Monthly church socials.
2. Class and department socials.
3. Socials to honor winners of competitive class contests, new members of church, classes, etc.
4. Father and son, mother and daughter banquets.

C. Daily Vacation Bible Schools.

D. Programs on certain holidays.

E. Music.

1. Annual music festivals.
2. Junior choir.
3. Folk games of different nations.

F. Stunt Nights.

G. Puppet shows.

H. Basketball and volley ball leagues.

Putting the case with lay bluntness, I believe that there is only one mood in which it is worth while to go into conference upon Christian unity. It is the mood of being ready to sacrifice what we have thought of as principles for the sake of being united in His name to save the world for which He died. Until we are in that mood we had better not let the world overhear our debates.—E. H. Jeffs.

 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

GEORGIA MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

Dear Women's Missionary Society Members:

Let's get busy and put on a "Home Coming Program" in every church this year, and report to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Let us make an attempt to get as many of the "Home Members" take part in this program as possible. How old is your church?

First: Appoint a committee to get a brief history of the church to be read at this "Home Coming Service."

Second: Appoint a program committee.

Each church and community knows its problems and can best arrange its own program. Let's get in touch with each individual living that has ever had their name on this church roll and insist on their presence that day and then take pains to give each of them a warm welcome and friendly handshake. Some may have moved away and even lost interest and by this means might be drawn back.

Some may have joined other churches but this friendship would be accepted. Write all the former pastors possible and preachers who have ever assisted in any of our revival meetings. When they come, have words of appreciation for something they have done or said that has helped us.

Insist that each former Sunday school superintendent and teacher attend and take part.

Now, how many pastors approve a service of this kind? Please let us hear from you, even if it is only a card to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. How many Women's Missionary Societies approve? Will you drop us a card to let us know who and where you are.

Some churches already have these "Home Coming Services." Why not you? If you have a member who has once been active but is not now, be sure to let him know he is welcome and wanted. It may be that they have a heavy burden. They may feel that their effort in taking an active part was so unimportant that they were a failure.

Let's not overlook a single one, even though it be their fault that they do not attend. What is a church for if it does not render an individual service to mankind?

MRS. WILLIE HAND.

WHEN THE MILLWHEELS TURNED AGAIN.

Tucked away in a pleasant valley is a church of good, consecrated folks who have made a practice of giving of their worldly wealth for the cause of Christ.

When the depression descended, the mill closed down, people commuting to adjacent towns lost their jobs and the giving habits of the church people lapsed.

One happy day found the mill wheels once more turning and the church people, remembering their lost practice. "Here are the new Cent-a-Meal Boxes," said the pastor of the flock. "Surely these will help to establish once again the habits of gratitude and love."

So the Cent-a-Meal Boxes found their way into the homes of the church families.

Four months later, on Consecration Sunday, the boxes were brought to the church and deposited before the altar. Their contents yielded $81.00! More money than this church had ever been able to give for others in a four months' period in their best times! Eagerly they took the boxes into their homes again.

The Fall of the year was a busy time. At the end of the second four months the boxes were not collected.

January first the State Office sent out the last call to the churches for the year. The church in the valley was reported quite behind in its missionary giving. Where could they find the money?

Hurriedly the Cent-a-Meal Boxes were called in and hurriedly they were opened.

The results? $69.00, and the good consecrated folk from the pleasant valley found they had contributed $150 to the missionary funds, exactly $30.00 more than they had ever given in a single year before. Courage prevails and plans are being made for a better year of sharing in 1936.

The best of this story is, it's true!

Now, the moral of this tale is not to forget your box but to try for three times $81 in 1936.—Missionary Herald.

NEWS FROM NANKING.

The University of Nanking is one of thirteen universities and colleges of Christian origin in the principal areas of China. To each there still goes some support from American missionary boards and from individuals. In spite of currency difficulties and the depression, Chinese governmental and individual sources make available a growing amount of income to the institutions. Thus they represent a true international enterprise, in which East and West join for the preparation of trained leadership for China.

Nanking and ten other institutions of higher learning pool their American financial and promotional matters in the Associated Boards for Christian Colleges in China, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

In college courses in the present term, the University of Nanking enrolls 665 students. In special graduate courses, in the rural leaders' and nurses' training schools and in a middle school (high school) an additional student body of 1,182 is represented. The university comprises colleges of arts, of science, and of agriculture.

Among projects going forward at Nanking this year, with the support and cooperation of government authorities, are wool-weaving and the improving of the grades of wheat and rice. Staff members assist the government in conducting civil service examinations. The cooperative movement is strong in the Nanking area, and the university is aided by the government in maintaining twenty agricultural and experiment stations—important units in assisting rural families and neighborhoods to engage in practical cooperation.

Educational motion pictures are being developed by the college of science. These will be used not only in Nanking's middle school, but in a number of government institutions.

Millions of dollars can be saved to the industries of China if the University of Nanking experiments in chemistry are moderately successful. For China has in raw form many of the necessary drugs and dyestuffs. The laboratory shelves at Nanking are being loaded down with bottle after bottle of dye specimens, forming the important foundation for the production of dyes in China in commercial quantities and at low cost.

As if to remind Nanking's forward-looking men and women of the rich background of Chinese art and culture, there will be shortly placed in proper settings at the university the priceless collection of Dr. John C. Ferguson, one of the founders of the institution. Now in the care of the Chinese national authorities and on exhibition in a palace, the thousand or more objects of art, bronzes, paintings, and porcelains are due to be moved to the campus in the present year, to come under the protection and control of the University of Nanking. One bronze of the collection is four thousand years old.—Exchange.

GOD NEEDS JAPAN.

Twenty-four hours after the moment of most acute strain during the recent military upheaval in Tokyo, every radio listener in that country was hearing the whole 40-minute worship service of St. Agnes Church. As the words of the 1st Psalm rang out many a hearer must have been linking them to the events just past, writes a missionary. Though there was no direct reference, the sermon of Dean Hayakaya on "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden," could not fail to make thousands of non-Christians, whose hearts were burdened with shame for the past and anxiety for the future, consider whether for them and their country, Christ had not the remedy.

WHAT SUMMER SCHOOL AT MEROM HAS MEANT TO ME.

Have you ever had an experience that has meant so much to you that it is just indescribable? One that is painted so vividly in your memory that to forget it would be impossible? There are so many phases of Summer School—it is so nearly perfect in all ways—that I hardly know just where to begin to give a glimpse of some of the many things it has really meant to me.

I have spent four weeks at summer school—two of these have been at Merom. If I were told that I could live one week from each of the last four years over again, I would without a doubt or thought choose those four that I have spent at summer school.

Let me give just at random some of the pictures that I retain most clearly from Merom.

Picture in your mind a beautiful late July evening. There are a few clouds in the west tinted in beautiful colors by the sun, which is just now above the horizon. A group of probably fifty or sixty young people are entering a field which overlooks the Wabash Valley. They are very quiet; there is scarcely a word spoken as they seat themselves near the edge of the bluff. The sun is shining on the river below making it sparkle. The fields of grain and tall waving corn below are a beautiful green. You can hazily see a distant city. You take your eyes from the lovely scenes of God's handiwork and glance at the sun. It is gradually sinking. You can see just half of the great glowing crimson ball—the other half showing faintly behind the trees. Everything is very still. In the distance a bird gives its call. All about you radiates the presence of God. You can see Him in everything. The very air is filled with His presence. Then one of our splendid Summer School leaders conducts a vesper service. Oftentimes the young people have a part. When sentence prayers are suggested nearly all respond. When the service has ended the sun is out of sight leaving only the radiantly beautiful sky as a testimonial of its departure. The young people quietly return to the campus feeling that they have walked in the inner circles and have been in His Sacred Nearness. They sing softly as they leave the spot which has become holy in their minds by those vesper services.

Another picture which holds an equal place in my memory of those perfect weeks is that of the last evening. On this evening those who have completed the four years are given their diplomas. At the close of the service held in their honor, small candles are given out. After the candles are lit, the entire school marches out of the chapel in double file. When they are outside, they find they must guard the little flame from the wind to keep it from being extinguished. Can't you see this beautiful picture—the long line of young students marching out—the flame of their little candles flickering in the darkness—they themselves shielding them as best they can from the wind? Those little candles mean so much to these young people. They symbolize to them their lives. The flames themselves are the presence of God in their lives. That is why they are guarded so zealously from the wind—the worldliness—which threatens to extinguish God's presence from our lives. How very bare, how lifeless, how extinct of all beauty the candle becomes when the flame has gone! So is our life without God, and, realizing this more than ever by that week of fellowship with Him, the lighted candle means a great deal to those young people. Then follows the candle-lighting service that forms the peak of the week. With candles still lit, the young people are seated in a selected spot for the service. The service itself varies. The students tell what the week has meant to them—if you remember a song you would like to sing, it is sung—oftentimes some student starts a season of prayer—sometimes some of the leaders give a short talk—there is no set form—but every word spoken sinks deeply in your memory making its place in that week's book of dear memories. The candles have usually burned down very low by the end of the service but they are still carried. The young people go directly from this service to their individual group meetings which calls another picture to my mind.

Every night at the close of the evening program, group devotional meetings were held. Since each group consisted of only ten or twelve, it was much easier to express ourselves and make known our thoughts of the day. Each group was in charge of a capable leader who helped us solve the problems with which we were confronted. The meeting was always closed by the friendship circle and sentence prayers. One evening the groups met in spots far distant from each other on the campus. Each group was given a song to sing. They were so arranged as to be connected in thought. Then one by one the five groups sang their songs from their spot on the campus. It was so beautiful and impressive I don't believe I shall ever forget it.

At the beginning of the week, each student was given a Morning Watch Guide. These little booklets contain bible references and an opening thought for the day. After breakfast each morning, each student took his little guide and bible to some spot on the campus alone. This short period of devotion was ended by music calling them to the chapel. Thus each day was both begun and ended by devotion.

These weeks at Summer School give us a new outlook on life. We are able to renew our acquaintance with God—to get nearer to Him in this ideal atmosphere created by Summer School than in any other place that I have ever known. And Merom is the ideal for such a school. Its scenic beauty forms a perfect background for the splendid things we learn there. The friendships we form at Summer School are splendid. They are all fine young people attending the School in order to have a better understanding of life's true purpose. The week of fellowship with these seem to set us apart from the world. One just has to attend it to appreciate it and to know how its leaders are helping young people live the four-fold life—growing in wisdom, stature and in favor with God and man.

WHEN IS A "DRUNKEN DRIVER" DRUNK?

By C. J. STRICKLAND,

President Automobile Safety League of America, Inc., General Headquarters, Columbus, O.

Since the repeal of the 18th Amendment a great deal has been said about intoxicated drivers and the increase in drunkenness in general. The purpose of this item is not to argue the advantages or disadvantages of legal whiskey, but to remind us of some of the findings of people who have made a study of automobile accidents and the causes. There is no question but that drunken driver accidents have increased a great deal and will continue to increase as long as intoxicating drinks may be purchased on each and every block, as well as at every roadhouse and sandwich joint along the highway, whether they be legal or otherwise.

It is the opinion of the writer that of the many accident reports that come to us as compiled by State Highway or Police Department, Insurance Companies and others who make investigations of automobile accidents, the figures regarding intoxicated drivers are further from being correct than any other set of figures in these reports.

If we accept the investigators' reports on intoxication we will find that less than five per cent of the total number of accidents are caused by "drunken driving," but when is a driver drunk? This is a question that is always argued and especially if the case goes into court. Just the other day I heard a court trial in which several witnesses swore that the driver who caused an accident was so drunk that he could hardly walk, but the attorney for the defendant spent several minutes trying to prove that these witnesses did not see the driver until after the accident happened and, therefore, could not definitely swear that he was drunk "at the time he was driving," even though they could swear that he was drunk a few seconds after the accident happened and even before he could get out of the car. It was proved (so far as the court was concerned) that the driver was in an intoxicated condition a few seconds after the accident but it was not proved that he was intoxicated before the accident or that he was ever driving while in an intoxicated condition. Therefore, this drunken driver accident was probably not credited to the "Drunken Driver" list, as far as reporting was concerned.

Since several states now have laws whereby drivers found guilty of driving a motor vehicle while in an intoxicated condition must spend a short time in jail or prison or forfeit their driving privilege for a certain period, and sometimes both, it is sometimes pretty hard to prove a driver was drunk and especially when judges are inclined to be lenient, as many seem to be. Therefore, the "Drunken Driver" accident reports figure only a small percentage of the total. In most cases, if a person can walk he is not drunk, if we can depend upon reports. We do not want to overlook the fact that legal intoxicants are supposed to be tax raisers and states and cities who collect those taxes also pay the salaries of judges.

If it were possible to have a complete report of every accident in which the driver had been drinking at all, the percentage would perhaps be even higher than many of us think. Unfortunately, no such figures are available. In the same court mentioned above, the writer heard a man who was accused of being drunk while causing an accident try to prove that he "only had a glass of beer" (the usual story). He claimed that from ten o'clock at night until five the next morning, he was in a stag party with six other fellows where they divided ONE BOTTLE OF BEER. In other words, seven drinkers spent the whole night with one bottle of beer.

So far as automobile accidents are concerned, the man who has had "one drink" is just as drunk as the man who has had so much that he cannot walk. He is just as dangerous and many times more so, for he will take all kinds of chances at all kinds of speeds and in all kinds of ways.

If we can take the opinion of medical authorities only one teaspoon full of alcohol will "deaden" a man's thinking capacities and slow down his reaction to whatever emergencies that might arise before him. Therefore, since many of us "think" too slowly to be safe drivers when we are in our right minds, surely we cannot be safer drivers when our senses are deadened by alcohol. be safer drivers when our senses are deadened by alcohol.

To put it bluntly, let me say that, in my opinion, any person who has little enough sense to drink in the first place, cannot have sense enough to be a safe driver after taking "one drink."

No tomb was ever made so strong that it could imprison a righteous cause.—Wm. J. Bryan.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

LIFE IS FUNNY LIKE THAT.

Strange things happen to one, so strange indeed that it sometimes seems that there is some invisible power shaping ones destiny, that one is caught in the cogs of a machine from which he cannot loose himself. It is not always easy to believe in freedom of will, and it certainly is not when one is part of a democratic organization. (Perhaps it is more difficult in an autocracy.) I am not yet willing to give up the idea that a person is free to choose his life's work, the things he shall do, but it is very true there are facts which seem to indicate the contrary.

For instance, it was my hope as a boy that I might continue to be a farmer, but somehow the idea came that I ought to be a minister instead. As a student in college and university, I had hopes of being a missionary and majored in Missions. But that was another dream as yet unfulfilled, for the first major task given me by my denomination was in the field of religious education and not in Missions.

In 1928 I was elected to the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention, and from that time until this have sought to aid our churches with their religious educational program. Life is funny like that. As good a man as St. Paul once said: "The things I want to do I do not, and the things I do not want to do, those are the things I do."

A LABOR OF LOVE.

Being chairman of the Board of Christian Education for eight years has been a labor of love for me. It has given me an opportunity to know our churches and our Church leadership. Young people and older ones have become my friends throughout the southeast. Day and night I have sought to discover ways in which to help churches and people, both young and older, with the tasks which were theirs to do.

During the depression years it has been impossible for us to have a full time worker, and as a pastor I have tried to do what I could in this Board with an office secretary. Summer schools in our colleges, training schools in our churches, Vacation Bible schools and Youth Fellowships have been promoted. Thousands of letters have gone to pastors, superintendents, teachers, and young people telling them of available literature, plans and programs, and giving suggestions concerning the solving of their personal problems.

Six years ago the Convention challenged the Board to organize the young people. Four years ago the young people sought admission into the Southeast Convention. At the Convention in Burlington this week there will be representative young people from all of the conferences in the Convention, and they will tell of the active work now being carried on by the Youth Fellowships. Last Christmas there were representatives from all of the states in the southeast meeting together at Winter Park to consider their united program of work. It has been a supreme joy to have a share in organizing and aiding these young people.

In another sense still it has been a labor of love. When there was no fuel to heat the office, I paid the bill myself; when we could not hire a secretary, I gave my time; if trips were to be made, I furnished my car for actual expense of the trip.

In recent months I have received a small salary, but perhaps not as much as it has cost me to serve. Doing so much outside work has made it impossible for me to do necessary pastoral service, and therefore receive only part-time pastor's salary.

In my judgment, this sort of arrangement should not be continued, and I am sincerely hoping that the Convention in session this week will make some different arrangement so that another more capable can give more time and thought to a very important phase of our Church work which for eight years has been to me a labor of love.

MOTHER'S DAY.

The second Sunday in May is annually designated as Mother's Day. There is barely time to make the necessary preparation now in order that there may be the kind of program which we all wish to have in honor of the most loved person—Mother.

We have just received at this office some materials which may be helpful and will gladly pass them on to any church desiring them. Among these materials are the following:

"Honor to Motherhood." A playlet which exalts the high mission of a true mother. Standard Publishing Company.

"The Ideal Home." A service for Mother's Day by Rev. Louis Randall. The Stockton Press.

"White Blossoms." A collection of songs, recitations and exercises for Mother's Day, by Ira B. Wilson. Lorenz.

"Tribute to Mother." A Mother's Day service mostly of music. Lorenz.

"A Mother's Devotion." A pageant for Mother's Day by Bethel Cooke. Stockton.

"A Mother's Tribute." A dramatization for Mother's Day by Mattie B. Shannon. Stockton.

"Mother's Day Book No. 2." Containing a playlet "Mother, Queen of Our Hearts" and a variety of recitations, playlets, songs and worship services. Standard Publishing Co.

"The Uncrowned Queen." A Mother's Day pageant by Miriam Morris. Lorenz.

"Mother Pictures." A pageant for Mother's Day by Ethel Patterson. Meigs Publishing Co.

"Memories." A Mother's Day service by Myrtle Sanborn. Stockton Press.

"The Reddest Rose." A Mother's Day play in one act. The Don Merrell Publishing Co.

We have on hand several other pieces of materials that may be helpful. Our own denominational offices and all other denominational offices can supply an abundance of materials at reasonable cost. The International Council of Religious Education, 203 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago; The Golden Rule Foundation, Lincoln Building, 60 E. 42nd Street, New York; Hall-Mack Company, 21st and Art Streets, Philadelphia; Lorenz Publishing Company, 218 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago; The Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio. The Stockton Press, Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., and many other companies will be glad to furnish materials.

The purpose of Mother's Day is not to release an abundance of sentimentalism, but to give honor to those who richly deserve it and to strengthen our belief in a divine institution which we call home. All program builders should bear this in mind.

Some churches have their largest attendance during the year on Mother's Day. This is a fine indication of real interest, and is also an indication that these churches spend time and thought in planning their programs and in getting the mothers to attend the services on this day. Best wishes to you as you seek to make all the mothers in your community happy on the day set apart for their honor.

YOUTH SHARING IN THE FINANCIAL PROGRAM OF THE CHURCH.

Led By Rev. R. A. Whitten.

Is a financial program necessary? The following question was given as the answer, "Without finances would there be a place for worship, etc.?"

Young people can share by tithing, by conducting an every-member canvass among young people in which young people are made to feel they have a certain responsibility and a part in the financial program. A definite goal should be set for this canvass.

Prayer is very effective.

By myself being an example to others through my loyal attendance to church service, by word of commendation and solicitation among others who might become interested in attendance in the church service, I would be with other young people and in this way share in the financial program of the church.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS, HUMILITY, AND GRATITUDE.

LESSON V—MAY 3, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you."—Eph. 4:32.

LESSON: Luke 17: Printed Text: Luke 17: 1-19.

Warning—Danger!

No man liveth unto himself, therefore no man sinneth unto himself. That is the reason why Jesus uttered such a solemn warning against causing others to stumble. It were better that a man were dead, than that he cause "one of these little ones to stumble." It is bad enough to leave something in the way that causes people to stumble. But deliberately to put something in the way to cause another to stumble, deliberately to tempt another, to seek to lead another astray, to cause one to fall—that is serious business. Let every man take heed how he lives, lest another following his example should miss the way of life.

Forgiveness.

"If thy brother sin, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him." We ought not to allow our brother's sin to go unrebuked. But as Paul says, it is to be done in a spiritual and sympathetic way—we that are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted.

"And if he repent, forgive him," . . . seven times, unto seventy times seven. If he repent—forgiveness is grounded on repentance. To forgive when there is no evidence of penitence cheapens the holy gift, demoralizes society, and de-thrones the holiness of God, according to J. M. E. Ross. God himself cannot forgive us unless we have the spirit of penitence. But if a man repents we are to forgive him, no matter what he has done or how often he has done it. And unless we forgive others when they repent, God will not because He cannot forgive us. The willingness to forgive others is one of the basic conditions of being forgiven. It takes grace to do it—only the Spirit of God enables a man to practice this hard saying.

It might be added that Jesus not only taught this principle; He practiced it. Even when His enemies nailed Him to the Cross he said, "Father, forgive them." He is our example—forgiving one another even as God also in Christ forgave you.

It was too much for the disciples. They said, "Lord increase our faith." Jesus replied that if they had even the least of faith, vital faith, they could do the seemingly impossible. The germ of faith is mighty. There is practically no limit to those who have a reasonable faith. The word reasonable needs to be emphasized. Faith is not believing something one feels is not true. Faith is not something contrary to reason. Faith goes beyond reason.

Humility.

"For I am meek and lowly in heart"—in these words Jesus calls attention to His humility. It is the only instance where He does call attention to His virtues. He never says that He is courageous, or unselfish, or pure. He does say He is humble. This does not mean that he was cringing, that he debased himself, that he was groveling. It meant that he felt his dependence on God, that he was willing to give up his rights, that he was willing to be among his people as their servant. And the story which he tells of the master coming from the field is designed to teach this spirit of humility. Let a man do all that he can do and if he has the right spirit he will feel that he has done only that which was his duty. His sense of what he has received will take from him all sense of merit. In the light of what God has done, in the light of the relationship between Jesus as our Master and us as His disciples, there will be only a sense of humility and meekness.

Gratitude.

Jesus emphasizes the sense of gratitude in a dramatic way. He had healed ten men of leprosy, a dread and incurable disease from the standpoint of man. Nine of them had heedlessly gone on their way, overlooking the simple courtesy of returning to give Jesus thanks for what He had done for them. But one of them—and he was a Samaritan—turned back, fell at His feet, and glorified God, giving him thanks. The incident touched Jesus and seems to have surprised Him as well. "Were there not ten cleansed? But where are the nine? Were there none found that returned to give glory to God save this stranger?" One wonders if this is the proportion of gratitude that God finds in the world. Can it be possible that only one out of ten persons is grateful? In any event there is a great deal of ingratitude in the hearts of men, even in the hearts of those who have received great blessings from God. Something fine goes out of life when ingratitude comes into life. It is not only a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord; it is a very necessary thing if the human heart is to be kept tender and responsive and appreciative.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

children at her side; attitude of reading the Bible. Have someone sing: "My Mother's Bible.")

Suggestions for leader's closing talk:

"There is music in the word 'Home.' To the old it brings a bewitching strain from the harp of memory, to the young it is a reminder of all that is near and dear to them. Among the many songs we are wont to listen to, there is not one more cherished than the touching melody of 'Home, Sweet Home.'"

Jesus Christ is the heart of any true home. In the home that His presence graces, there the Golden Rule is practiced—where He abides, there we find love, harmony and peace. In the ideal home each member is taught that Christ is the head of the home—He is to be supreme in their lives. Through the family altar the children discover the true meaning of worship. Without the reading of the Bible and prayer in the home, worship is often taken for granted. Children who share the joy of the family altar seldom stray from the path their Father would have them follow.

"It has been said that the sweetest words in our language are 'Mother,' 'Home,' and 'Heaven,' and one might almost say the word 'Home' included them all, for who can think of home without remembering the gentle Mother who sanctified it by her presence? And is not 'home' the dearest name for Heaven? We think of that better land as a home where brightness will never end in night." Then, in our homes on earth may we find the Golden Rule; and our home be the center of all our joys.

"Happy the home where prayer is heard,
And praise is wont to rise;
Where parents love the sacred word,
And live but for the skies."

Closing Hymn: "My Jesus, I Love Thee."
Benediction.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"THE ACCESSIBLE GOD."

"He shall call upon me, and I will answer him; I will be with him in trouble."—Ps. 91:15.

If we believe in God, He is "an ever-present help." Thus, by faith we have access to Him at all times.

This communion then lies in the very nature of our own hearts. How can God give himself to one who shrinks from Him, and who could not use His grace were it given him? When the heart is closed God cannot enter, and He does not enter until it has been opened to Him. Faith is the condition of receiving.

Prayer—O Lord, give us the will to believe and the will to do Thy bidding lest we perish. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THROUGH CHRIST."

"Being therefore justified by faith, let us have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; through whom also we have had our access by faith into this grace wherein we stand; and let us rejoice in hope of the glory of God."—Rom. 5:1, 2.

Have we ever asked what part Christ plays in our access to God? First, Christ represents God, and it is in Him and through Him that we know God. This faith is more than mere belief about Him; it is a vital and spiritual union with Him by which we share His righteousness and His work for the world.

This text makes it plain that it is not by merit that we come into His grace, but it is by belief in Him and by virtue of our relationship with Him, that we are saved. Or, as the matter has been uniquely stated, "our faith causes God to see us, not as we are, but as we are in Christ."

Prayer—O Lord Jesus our Saviour, come into our hearts and secure us entry into the fulness of Thy Kingdom and into the presence of our Father at last. We give ourselves to Thee this day.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"FLYING DESIRE."

"What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them and ye shall."—Mark 11:24.

This verse is a summary of all our Lord's teachings on prayer. How remiss we are! What realities and promises slip away from us because life takes us on, and we forget to enter into His heart! Do we not know that we shall obtain our request?

A missionary has given us a very apt illustration, an illustration which has helped him to make clear to his Chinese people how to believe in prayer. He says briefly: "Any boat can drift with the stream, but it takes sail and wind and skill to take the boat against the current." He asks them: "Does setting up sails answer everything?" And they answer: "Everybody knows it does. See us go ahead." "Then," said the man of God, "everybody knows God, and he who puts up the sails of his heart prays,—and he knows quite as surely that there is an answer."

Our prayers catch hold of the unseen power of God, like the sails set to a fair wind; and however much the world flows on downward we need not be drifters. Let us set sails of the soul to God and move upward proudly toward Him.

Prayer—O Lord, forgive us. To Thee whom we have so often forgotten, we turn. In the darkness of our doubts and faithlessness we breathe a prayer, and there may we feel the power of our flying desires lifting us up to the land of pure delight in Thee. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE INFINITE PITY."

"He will have pity on the poor and needy."—Psalm 72:1-15.

Man may be pitiless, is pitiless sadly often, but never is God pitiless. The divine compassion broods over all God's children. He knows our frame, He remembers that we are dust, He pities us as a father pities his weeping child.

Sorrow and destruction enter the world as pity leaves the hearts of men. Then comes war. Then comes injustice. Then comes poverty and tyranny and selfishness and hatred. All evil springs from all lack of pity for the weak and sorrowing.

What infinite pity was Christ's! How the Son of God illustrated and proved the divine compassion! That was why He came to earth, that He might show us how the Father knows our sin and misery and is endlessly sorry.

Prayer—Soften our hard hearts, our Saviour. May no least sorrow of our brothers go unhealed, unnoted. Let us weep all the days for the wretchedness of men, until God's tears and ours have washed it away.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

FRIDAY.

"A SAD REFRAIN."

"O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt."—Matt. 14:31.

These words of our Lord were spoken to the faltering disciples. Let us make them personal. Why do we not conquer sin any better than we do? Why do we make so little progress in practical obedience? Why do we have such a succession of failures and do not improve more than we do? We believe that the answer is in all cases alike, "Little Faith." The back-sliders are careless, ungodly and sinful, because of the lack of faith and the will to prosecute that faith. The worldly are swept on the tide of the times and forget God because they let go their faith. Even the faithful have grown cold and lukewarm because they slackened away on the lines of faith, and thus are set adrift.

We believe in what Jesus did for us; and we believe in what He is ready to do for us, and that His help is available right now if we seek Him. But, as one has stated, "we do not believe in what He has done in us,—the new birth, the recreation of our individual natures." One of the most outstanding beliefs that we should have is that in Him we are "dead to sin." If we are not conscious of this act of our Lord's in us, we tread on sinking sand, or we try to walk on water that will not hold us. We perish in doubt. Let us reckon by faith that in Christ Jesus we are both dead to sin and alive to God.

Prayer—Our Father, in the name of Jesus we pray like Paul, may we crucify our souls in Him, we would be dead with Him and buried with Him, that we may live with Him. O Lord, take our old unregenerate natures which sin has so defaced and defiled and make us new in Christ Thy Son. So shall we be Thine forever.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"LOOKING TO CHRIST."

"Look unto me and be saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God and there is none else."—Isa. 45:22.

Belief and trust in Jesus is no arbitrary condition. To be saved is no mere external gift that just shuts out Hell and opens the door to heaven, but it is a state of heart and mind, of relation to God; for the only way salvation can come into a man's heart is through the flow of the Christ life in the heart. This means looking to and longing for Jesus. It means holding the whole life up to His ideals. Yea, more, it means that in so looking we shall see His answering look upon us. It is in this sense that Paul speaks of the eyes of the heart.

Prayer—O Lord, increase our faith that more and more we may know that Jesus is the Son of God, and that believing on and trusting in Him we have life everlasting.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"OUR COMING REST."

"There remaineth therefore, a Sabbath rest for the people of God."—Hebrews 4:1-11.

Mankind is tired. There is so much weariness in our mortal life, the struggle with sin and poverty and sickness and fear is so dishearteningly prolonged, that we go to bed every night worn out with toil, worn body and soul with the struggle of living.

But we wake refreshed in the morning! Bless God for sleep! Bless God for our daily Sabbaths of the night, Sabbaths eight hours long, baths of strength and peace and new joy and endurance!

And bless God for the weekly rests of twenty-four hours, for the whole Sabbaths that renew us utterly where the nights have renewed us partially! How wisely has God contrived our days and nights, our months and circling years!

Prayer—And if these little Sabbaths are so blessed, how joyful and strengthening beyond our imagination must be the great Sabbath of eternity! We anticipate it, our Father, with ever-increasing delight and hope. What it will do for us we can only guess from what these lesser Sabbaths do for us, but we are sure that it will transform us into all power and glory.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

"ANYWHERE, SO IT IS FORWARD."

"Anywhere, so it is forward," became David Livingstone's motto after he got his vision of duty when Robert Moffatt, his father-in-law, took him to a hilltop in Africa and showed him the smoke curling from a thousand villages in not one of which the gospel had ever been preached. And as it was with Livingstone, so it is with every conscientious man when he gets a vision of the needs of the world and is willing to pay the price. And to such ministers and martyrs are we indebted for the progress that the cause of Jesus Christ has made through the long eventful centuries. At the end of ten centuries the Christians numbered 10,000,000, at the end of the fifteenth century 100,000,000, and there are now, the statisticians tell us, 700,000,000 nominal Christians in the world which gives the Christian religion numerical leadership among the great religions of the world. The non-Christian world numbers according to recent estimates approximately one million souls. God be praised for such men as David Livingstone who have carried the cross of Christ to every land and every language.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

TAKING A STAND WITH JESUS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"By faith ye stand."—II Cor. 1:24.

John was preaching by the Jordan. He was baptizing in its waters. The old valley was filled with people. A new voice was heard. A new note was struck. A new day was dawning. A needy old world hugging a new hope. A depressed people had the promise—age-old promise of a Messiah. Its messiahs had failed. Its kingdom was overthrown. Its people were enslaved. And with the enslavement of the political situation there had come about a far deeper enslavement in the spiritual realm. They were mentally, and physically hungry. They were spiritually dead and dying.

The songs of David were unfulfilled. Their prophecies of Isaiah, and the other prophets were believed but terribly belated. The king on their throne was only a wicked puppet, and not a great prince at all. They were not ruled by the hand of a great king, nor nurtured by the affections of a great ruler. The best they had they could not claim for their own, and their happiest were heart-broken. Their wall of defense was a wall of wailing, and their prayer of praise was a plea to God for deliverance. Sin filled their land, and possessed their lives. Sickness, blindness, leprosy abetted by starvation and aided by persecution played havoc with their pride, and made them wonder when the Lord would be their shepherd, and lead them by still waters, and cause them to lie down in green pastures.

In the fullness of time John preached in the Jordan valley. He was a strange prophet, a weird preacher, but there was hope in his message and there was riddance from sin in its clear call to repentance. In such an hour as that Jesus stood in their midst! They did not know him, but he was there. And John, the prophet, fore-runner of the Christ, became John, the preacher of the presence of Jesus! "There standeth One among you . . . the lachet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose . . . I indeed have baptized you with water, but He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost."

And today, as in that day, we need Jesus! We too, are sick of body and of soul. Instead of being a day of Christ it is a day of crisis! It is a day of crisis in every Christian land on earth! Italy, Germany, England, France, and lesser European nations that name the name of our Lord are all in a day of crisis. We do not have to recount the imperfections of our own country save to profess our sins, for we are all quite conscious that that shaking of Europe is but little worse than the shaking of America! We shall never find our way to leadership among the nations until we awake to the presence amongst us of the Lord Jesus Christ!

But I believe the world is more and more ready for that new note of hope,—“there standeth One among you!” Jesus stood in their midst that day. He stands in our midst today. In that day there came among men the world's greatest Light. Oh! if only today there could be realized in a very new fashion the world's greatest fraternity, or love! Out of that day came the sermon on the mount, oh! if only today that sermon could be mounted in the hearts of all who profess His name to know.

Jesus took his stand among the people then, even as he does today. If they were sick he healed their sickness, blind he gave them sight, lost he gave them salvation, laden he lifted their load. He stood by them. He did not forsake them. Having loved his own he loved them until the very end. He taught plainly by word of mouth that the good shepherd would not flee when the sheep were in danger, and his actions spoke for louder than his unforgettable words. He simply took his eternal stand by the needy. He was offered the swords of the earth, and the crowns of the nations if he would but leave the poor, fallen, needy folk, but in spite of all that he took his unshaken stand by them,—by you and by me. Often they did not know it, and oftener they did not appreciate it, but the fact that he still stood by is itself proof of his divine love, and being.

That brings me to the further word of the Gospel writer, “Jesus stood before the governor.” They would eventually land him there. He knew that. The cross was always before him. Outside Jerusalem awaited Calvary, yet he set his face like a flint toward Jerusalem. All theories of the atonement pale into insignificance beside the fact that Jesus' love for the needy,—and let that word be as large as you will,—led him to take his stand before the cross. Jesus knew that his stand before the cross, ready to be crucified thereon, was a stand beside every sinner beneath the stars! When I should die he steps up by my side! When the load is too heavy to bear he steps up by my side! When the temptation is too great he provides a way of escape. When the sorrow is too much he weeps with me. When I come with nothing in my hands he loads them with the little kindnesses long-since forgotten, and gives me a kingdom for them! What love he has! What a Saviour He is! What a stand he takes!

Not only did Jesus stand in the midst of the needy people at the Jordan, and before the governor in Jerusalem, but there were those who stood by him as he hanged on the cross, and, yea, one hanging by his side “stood” by him in that he defended him. He saw in the dying Jesus the living Lord coming soon into his kingdom! And to him he lifted his prayer. The Gospel writer says, “There stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene . . . and the disciple standing by, whom he loved.” There were thousands standing around, spectators at the world's greatest tragedy, but there was a faithful few standing by. They took their stand by him who had taken his stand by the needy of all the world. Which group do you belong in today? The many that stood around, or the few that stood by? It was a dangerous thing to take a stand by Jesus as he hung upon the cross. They forgot the danger. It is often a very unpopular thing to stand for Jesus today, but Paul says in Romans 14:10, “We shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ.” Jesus says in Matthew 10:32, 33, “Whosoever shall confess me (stand by me) before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven; but whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.” Let us today, and every day take our stand by Jesus. He takes his stand by us. Let us not be ashamed to stand by him!

“Beneath the cross of Jesus
I fain would take my stand,
The shadow of a mighty rock
Within a weary land;
A home within the wilderness,

A rest upon the way,
From the burning of the noontide heat,
And the burning of the day.”

Take time to ask yourself the question: Is my heart full of a great and steadfast faith in God's love? If this is not the case, do not begin to pray at once! Faith does not come of itself. Take some text of Scripture in which God's power and dfaithfulness and love are revealed. Appropriate the words, and say: “Yes, Lord, I will pray in firm faith in Thee and in Thy great love!”

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Since the weather has cleared up and the ground has gotten in workable condition the activities at the Orphanage have been early and late.

Two mule teams and two tractors have not had much rest. The season is late to break land in this section, but the rains held on so long that we could not work the land.

The next two weeks will be busy too. The bean crop to get in the ground and our corn to plant. It looks like a mountain of work just ahead of us but if we can have open weather and nothing happens we will work it all out in due time.

The orphanage has 100 acres in wheat and oats. It has 18 acres of the prettiest wheat in this section. If nothing happens we ought to make a bumper crop of oats this season.

Farm work is interesting. We like to see things grow. The spring of the year is one of the most beautiful seasons on the farm. The fields of wheat and oats and the clover look so green and beautiful and so full of life. The trees in the forest putting on their new coat of green and all the flowering shrubs with the dogwood in full bloom makes this old world a gorgeous place in which to live. It really looks as though everybody ought to be happy.

It certainly is a great relief to the helpers in the orphanage when the children can get out of doors and go barefooted. The cold weather has held up so long this season that the children have had to wear their shoes longer than usual. We agreed sometime ago to let them go without shoes when the dogwood gets in full bloom and on April 27th, we made all the little fellows happy by giving permission to go without shoes.

Our public school will close in May. We have four in the graduating class. Three girls and one boy. Two girls and one boy are children from Virginia and one girl from North Carolina. They will soon be entering the wilderness of life. We trust that success and happiness will be their portion.

NO BETTER DIAGNOSIS.

No better diagnosis of the state of the church during the past decade or two has appeared than this: that we have been so preoccupied with the fruits of the Christian life that we have given too little attention to the roots. Humanitarian service, a passion for a warless world, and devotion to other great causes of human welfare—these are the rightful fruits of faith in God and an understanding of his will as made known to us in Christ. But we have tended to forget that we cannot harvest abundant fruits unless we patiently and wisely nourish the roots. No one who understands either the Christian gospel or the world in which we live could desire to see the churches give less attention to social and international problems. We must however, ask ourselves whether we are likely to get much farther in making society Christian until we have gone much deeper in cultivating personal relationship with God and personal insight into the meaning of the Christian gospel.

EASTERN VIRGINIA EVANGELISM.

The Easter season brought an ingathering of new recruits for the Christ in our Eastern Virginia Conference. Pastors attending our ministers meeting brought in the following report for the Easter season. Some of the pastors were unable to be at the meeting and therefore it is impossible to indicate how many they received, but those reporting received the following: Revs. Joe French 2, C. E. Gerring 2, H. S. Hardcastle 28, H. C. Hilliard 5, I. W. Johnson 5, E. W. Jones 7, Carl R. Key 5, F. C. Lester 10, T. N. Lowe 3, J. F. Morgan 4, N. G. Newman 2, G. A. Pearce 2, O. D. Poythress 8, C. E. Shelton 2, John G. Truitt 38, and R. A. Whitten 5. This makes a total of 128, or a grand total of 197 since October 1, 1935.

The committee on Evangelism of the Eastern Virginia Conference is anxious that every pastor in the Conference will have additional members to report each month in the year. We are far from that goal as yet, but we are making strides toward it. We have five months yet within this church year in our Conference. And the period from Easter to Pentecost is now on. Let us each one see how many we can win within that period. Many of our churches will hold revival meetings during the summer months, and we are praying that the results of those meetings may be most gratifying. May it be said of no church in the Eastern Virginia Conference that pastor and people went for a whole year without receiving a new member into its fellowship.

MOTHER

By ANNA BENADE CORNUELLE

MOTHER of mine, with heart of gold,
Whose selfless love could naught withhold:
Mother of mine, we think of you—
How you toiled for us the long years through.
We love the things you've done for us,
The way you've thought and won for us,
The things you've planned and begun for us;
As you've hoped and worked and lived.

Mother of mine, with heart so true,
Our loving prayers go out to you.
Mother of mine, a guiding light,
You have helped others to live aright.
Sweetness has sung her song to you.
Tenderest thoughts belong to you.
There are no thoughts of wrong to you,
My mother of joyous creed.

Mother of mine, your heart has been sore,
With the weight of sorrows and burdens you bore;
Mother of mine, your life was made sweet,
By the suffering borne in life's stress and heat;
But when suffering was a goad to you,
And when sorrow showed the road to you,
Then Christ came and carried the load for you,
And brightened your life's highway.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

It was great and good to have Dr. Fred B. Smith, New York, Ex-Moderator of the General Council and World Traveler for Peace, address the Convention on Tuesday afternoon. His message made a profound impression.

Lieutenant M. J. W. White, M. D., is now in the U. S. Army Health Service at Christianstead, St. Crux, Virgin Islands, U. S. A. He and his wife and three children sailed from New York on April 15th, 1935 for their present station in the Virgin Islands.

One of the outstanding features of the Convention in Burlington last week was the mid-day devotional services conducted by Dr. John G. Truitt of Suffolk. After busy hours each morning and discussing "problems" it was indeed a joy and a relief to be led through a quiet, inspiring devotional period to look at and consider Jesus as our all-sufficient Saviour. The spiritual note was the note of the Convention.

No real members of that Convention could have been more interested, than were our guests, Dr. E. M. Halliday and Dr. Lewis T. Reed of our New York office of the General Council and Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, of our Jacksonville, Fla., office of the Southeast. Their addresses and suggestions were practical and timely, and Dr. Gillette was with the Convention from the first fall of the president's gavel until adjournment, a real yoke-fellow in the pulling.

MOTHER.

Among all the gifts of our Father above,
Mother is greatest of all;
She bears her burdens with patience and love,
And answers her child's tender call.
My mother to me an Angel has been,
Protecting and shielding from harm;
I cannot repay her for what she has done,
She suffered but made no alarm.

She made impressions that last all through life,
No matter wh'er I may roam;
I'll trust in her Saviour and follow His train,
And honor my "Mother and Home."
Her hair is now silver. Her face not so bright
As it was when I played on her knee;
Her beauty remains, though furrows appear,
As nature designed it should be.

My mother has labored these many long years
That her children a blessing might be;
We don't have much wealth, but we do have good health,
And pleasures on plainly can see.
No one was neglected if mother could go
And render her service, though small;
She was faithful to duty at home and at church,
And was ready for Christ's final call.

If we follow Jesus as mother has done,
And keep the commandments of God;
We'll share in this life rich blessings indeed,
Before we are laid 'neath the sod.
Then on that Great Day when Jesus shall come
And gather His Jewels so rare,
We'll meet our dear mother and part nevermore.
Heaven's glories with Jesus we'll share.

G. H. VEAZEY.

CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS NEAR COMPLETION.

From the inspiring rally held April 29th in the college auditorium, the forces of men and women engaged in the Elon College Development Program returned to the work of organizing their conference, group or church with an enthusiasm that showed sweeping results during the last week.

After examining reports from all parts of the five conferences in the Southern Convention, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, general chairman for the campaign, was able to announce that virtually every one of the 165 churches in the convention area now has a chairman and that the church committees are rapidly being completed.

The special gifts committees have started their work already and every other phase of the church campaign is moving toward the opening on May 26th.

The church organization is greatly encouraged by the progress that has been made by the citizens' group which has undertaken to raise $110,000 in Alamance County. Approximately 200 men and women have volunteered their services in the county organization headed by R. Homer Andrews, Burlington postmaster. An intensive campaign will be conducted from May 18th to May 27th by three divisions of six teams each in Burlington and by committees in ten Alamance County districts outside the city.

Additional church chairmen were announced by Dr. Harrell as follows:

Eastern North Carolina Conference.

A Story for the Children

A MOTHER'S DAY STORY.

On the Friday before Mother's Day, ten-year-old Jean was sitting on the porch steps amusing her little sister Mary by making silk dresses for two tiny dolls. Without the slightest noise, Elsie, their little playmate, slipped up and covered Jean's eyes with her hands. "Guess who it is," she urged in a strange, high whisper.

"It's Elsie," Jean spoke without hesitation, "and I'm glad you've come so we can talk about what to give for Mother's Day."

"I already know what I'll give my mother," said Elsie. "Daddy gave me enough money to buy a lovely box of candy and some pink ribbon. I'll tie the candy up with pink ribbon and put it beside Mom's plate on Sunday."

"Well, I haven't any money to buy candy with," murmured Jean softly. "I can't think what I'll do about it."

"Some people give flowers," suggested Elsie. "Why don't you do that?"

"I'll do that," Mary chimed in. "I'll give Mother a rose by her plate. She always loves a rose beside her plate."

"That's a good idea for you, Mary, honey," said Jean, "but what'll I do?"

"You could make her a nice cake if you knew how. Marjie is going to make one for her mother and write 'For Mother' on the top with frosting." Elsie had many plans, but they didn't seem to be the kind Jean could carry out.

"The trouble is, I can't make a cake," answered Jean, rather dolefully. "Besides, I'm playing with Mary so Mother can make her own cake for tomorrow. I'll have to think of something else."

"Why don't you buy her a lovely handkerchief? She likes them, doesn't she? My mother just loves pretty handkerchiefs. Or, do like Betty Jean. Her grandmother stamped a scarf in cross stitch and Betty Joan has finished that for her mother. Her grandmother helped her."

"I haven't any grandmother to help me like that, and there are only two days left. But speaking of grandmothers reminds me that Grandpa and Uncle Henry will be here for dinner on Sunday, and now I know what I'll give Mother. She will have her surprise and I'll give it to her and it won't cost a cent but just some hard work."

Jean jumped up and ran quickly into the house. "Mother," she sang, "will it be a Mother's Day gift if I give it to you tomorrow morning?"

"Surely it will," said Mother, "but whatever will it be that won't keep until Sunday?"

"It's like this. I haven't any money to buy you a box of candy, nor any way to bake you a cake like Marjie. Mary has decided on something nice to give you. I could buy a handkerchief, but you have some pretty ones and I haven't enough money." Jean rushed on with her plan. "What I thought is that with company coming Sunday, and you wanting all the silver polished, maybe Saturday morning I could shine it up very extra bright and then the knives and forks and spoons on Mother's Day would be like a gift."

"That would be a special kind of gift," Mother said, kissing Jean happily. "I can't think of a thing in the world which would please me more. It makes me glad all over to have such a thoughtful little daughter."

"That's agreed, then," said Jean, as she ran back to tell Elsie what her Mother's Day gift would be.—Gladys Wade in Christian-Evangelist.

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

OHIO CONFERENCE AT HUNTINGTON, WEST VIRGINIA.

The seventh annual meeting of the Ohio Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches will be held at the First Congregational Church of Huntington, West Virginia, Friday to Sunday, May 15th to 17th. The Ohio Conference was the first in which the Congregational and Christian merger was completed. A constitution was adopted without the word "and" in the name.

In the Ohio Conference are three West Virginia churches. Two were Congregational: at Huntington, organized 1872, and at Ceredo, near Huntington, organized 1874. The third is the Mounspeakers on missions, will address the Ohio Conference and show motion pictures. In May, 1930, they attended the meeting at the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church, Cleveland, O., when the Ohio merger was consummated.

About fifteen years ago Mr. and Mrs. Warner discovered that for themselves there was no travelling so interesting as that which took them to mission work both in this country and abroad. They also discovered that audiences were eager to hear the non-professional lay reports they could make on the places they had visited. They had pictures which they had taken made into stereopticon slides and then they started to take movies. With Christian missions foremost in their minds, they have travelled abroad extensively and around the world. In this country they have likewise travelled much, visiting missionary undertakings of all kinds and speaking.

For some years their trips in this country were made in a Packard roadster equipped for travelling. Some trips were very long, one being 10-gymnasium was given by the Warner family.

Mr. Warner is also trustee of Madura College of the American Board in India and was trustee of Talladega College of the American Missionary Association in Alabama. He was formerly treasurer of the National Congregational Council and of its Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life.

Mrs. Warner has been vice-president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions since 1926 when the separate Women's Foreign Mission Boards of the Congregational churches were united with the American Board. She had been president of the Eastern Women's Board.

Mrs. Warner was born in California and the home of the couple is now at Claremont, Calif., adjoining Pilgrim Place, a non-profit subdivision of bungalows for retired ministers and missionaries. One of the bungalows was presented by the Warners.

Mr. Warner is a son of the late Lucien C. Warner, M. D., LL. D., a graduate of Oberlin College, whose many benefactions included the Warner Conservatory of Music and the Warner Gymnasium at Oberlin and a large gift to the Pilgrim Memorial Fund.

THE BIBLE.

By REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

What Is the Bible?

It is a library, consisting of sixty-six books—thirty-nine in the Old Testament and twenty-seven in the New Testament. During the Middle Ages it was called "Bibliotheca," and some writers prefixed the word "Divina." In the Old Testament and Apocraphy the name is "The Books." In the New Testament in Greek the term is "Ai Graphai" which is translated "The Writings." The early Christians called these books "The Scriptures." The Books are of great variety—The Law, History, Prophecy, Poetry, Biography, and the Letters.

Its Birth.

The Books of the Old Testament were written during centuries of time. The writers quoted from earlier writers. The Books of the New Testament were written by their Authors with no thought of their becoming a collection of writings, but to meet the needs of the time and surroundings. Matthew was written to convince the Hebrews that Jesus is the Messiah; Mark, to summon the Romans to follow Jesus, the King of kings and the Lord of lords; Luke, to persuade the Greeks that Jesus is the Perfect Man, the Divine Saviour and Master; and John, to all Christians to tell them of "the Word made flesh," and His divine mission; Paul's and Peter's letters, to meet the needs of the churches of that day. These Books were in use several generations before they were gathered into one Book. Gradually because of what these Books are, they became known and were finally affirmed by a council of Christian leaders and scholars as the Books worthy to stand out alone in the world's life.

Why Many Translations?

The knowledge of the customs of those early days, and of the Hebrew and Greek languages, grows the same as the knowledge of the earth, sea and sky. The meaning of words changes. Even in the King James Version a Greek word is given a different English word in different parts of the Book. Damnation, condemnation and judgment were from the same Greek word. Punctuations and paragraphs have been corrected. Obsolete words have been dropped. Mistakes in translation have been corrected. The King James Version is perfect English and should be the familiar

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION.

The Southern Convention was in its 32nd biennial session at our Burlington Church, April 28-May 1. The attendance was not as large as it had been at some sessions, but the interest was intense, the reports and addresses were fraught with facts for our united fellowship and for all the interests and enterprises of the church. An editorial cannot reveal the work that was done in the Convention, neither can the printed reports. Those who attended the Convention got much of helpfulness for their work and their Christian living in days to come. In every report and address there was apparent, and very obvious, always the desire that we go forward and that the only way of going forward was by going deeper. Again and again the spiritual note was sounded and the plea from every speaker was for individual salvation and for a proper relationship of the saved individual to the community and the area in which we live. The church has many problems, many needs and great difficulties, but the most hopeful feature of the whole situation is that there are those who care that the ministry is not asleep on the job, that they are awake to the spiritual needs and demands of their time, and that the church has work it can and must do, and which, under the leadership of our Lord, it shall do.

J. O. A.

We are giving the space in THE SUN this week to important committee reports rather than a detailed account of the Convention. This will be written by the editor and others for our next issue. The committee reports constitute the ground work of the Convention, and from these reports the Convention did its great work.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The founders of the Christian church were men of vision. They saw the need of constructive leadership if the kingdom of righteousness were to be established in the earth. They had a passion for the lost and compassion for the needy. Under the ministry of the early leaders of our church men were won to Christ by the hundreds. Indifferent to organization much of the fruits of their labors were lost. They became concerned for the conservation of the good accomplished. Churches were organized, conferences were formed and later the forerunner of this Convention was authorized. The Convention representing the united consciousness of the church and feeling the responsibility of leadership among the churches organized certain departments to care for the different interests of the church. More and more the need of a thoroughly trained ministry was evident.

In an effort to meet this need Elon College was founded in 1889. Since the founding of the college our church has been conscious of the need of Christian education, of Christian principles and of Christian instruction in all branches of higher learning. That is to say all education training should be given by Christian men and Christian women under Christian influence.

The world of higher education, about two decades ago, was tempted to turn from church institutions for the training of leadership in state and political affairs. There was a serious effort to divorce the church from the field of higher education. In these later days, however, the sentiment has faced about and today men of affairs are beginning to realize that the fruits of the church school are most likely to express themselves in safe and sane leadership in all fields of human endeavor. The church school has done more to save this country from destructive materialistic domination than this age has yet realized. A quarter of a century ago the principles of Christ applied to government and industry seemed revolutionary. Today they are hailed with delight and are considered the only basis for true democracy and true progress.

Elon College, an institution of higher learning of the Congregational and Christian churches in the South, is proud to be recognized as an institution of the church and gladly dedicates itself to the task of training in constructive leadership for today and the days that are to come. Through the vision and wise planning of my predecessor, Dr. W. A. Harper, Elon College boasts of an equipment that is ideal for a church school and that is second to none in institutions of its class in this country. During the past four years the enrollment of the college has increased remarkably. In 1932 there were 231 students, in 1935-1936 there are 483 students. Notable advancement has been made in the personnel of the college faculty. We have always had some choice men and women on our faculty, teachers who have done unusually good work, but as the standards for institutions of higher learning have been advanced we have been compelled to keep pace with other institutions. The greater majority of our present faculty hold their doctor's degrees from the leading universities of this country or have completed all resident requirements for their advanced degrees. Elon faculty will meet the educational test of accrediting agencies.

If you will read the reports of the Board of Education to this Convention in biennial session for the past forty years you will find that at every session we have deplored the serious lack of funds for the college, have proposed plans, and issued appeals that the college might be able to meet her obligations and do her work without embarrassment. This report is no exception in this particular. However, the financial condition of Elon College is far more favorable today than it has been for years. At our meeting two years ago the college seemed to be hopelessly in debt. Debts mounted up, interest accumulated until we owed the staggering amount of $704,170.84. Through a process of adjustments, cooperation of creditors, and by a most generous bequest of the late P. J. Carlton, a great benefactor of the college, this enormous debt has been reduced to $160,700. The one great task confronting the college, this Convention, the friends and alumni of the college is to pay this debt, set the college free and bid it God's speed in its high mission.

In keeping with the authorization of this Convention in a previous session, the college is inaugurating a church-wide campaign to raise $250,000 for the college, $160,700 to provide for the cancellation of the debts of the college, the remainder to meet the expenses of the campaign, the cost of necessary repairs, and to supplement our current budget that the college may go without deficit for a period during which time it will have the opportunity of increasing its endowment and in other ways increasing its income. This is a great undertaking but it can be done. We are, therefore, calling on every member of the church, every friend and alumnus, and every alumna of the college to give to the extent of his ability of thought, of time, and of money. If all will be generous to this extent there will be no question as to the final results.

In 1924 this Convention authorized the issuing to the college, bonds in the amount of $500,000; $400,000 to be known as Elon College bonds and $100,000 to be known as Bethlehem College bonds. Later the Bethlehem bonds were returned to the Convention and were subsequently turned over to Elon College as a part of its endowment. Previously the Convention had given its note in the amount of $112,500, the same to bear 6 per cent interest and to constitute a part of the college's endowment. In as much as the college has effected a plan for the settlement of its debts and is now conducting a general campaign to take care of its remaining indebtedness and in as much as these bonds are without value, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That these bonds authorized and issued by this Convention for the college be cancelled and destroyed.
2. That the college be requested to surrender the Convention's note for $12,500 and the $100,000 in bonds held as part of the endowment to the Convention.
3. That in lieu of the above the Convention give its note in the amount of $250,000 to the college, the principal of which shall be non-payable, but that the Convention assume the responsibility and bind itself to pay 4 per cent interest annually on said note. This interest is to be paid through apportionments to the churches by the Convention and is credited on the local church's conference apportionment. This note for the $250,000 is to be a part of the endowment fund of the college.
4. That the college be requested to call upon all who are indebted to the educational loan fund of the Convention to make payments as rapidly as possible that other needy ministerial students may have privileges such as they enjoyed when they were in need of an education.
5. That we endorse and express our appreciation of the recent accomplishment of the college in adjusting its debts and that we pledge ourselves unitedly to assist to the extent of our ability in the full accomplishment of the goal set for the present campaign for the college.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

The Committee on Finance met in Suffolk, Va., Thursday, April 23rd, 1936, and spent almost a full day in carefully considering the financial needs of the various enterprises of the Convention. The Departments of the Convention were represented on the Committee, and a full, free and frank discussion of the problems was granted every representative. As a result of this meeting the recommendations are submitted for your consideration:

1. That the Convention re-affirm its approval of setting up definite Apportionments to be raised by the several Conferences for the various Funds hereinafter named; with a recommendation that the Conferences likewise set up definite Apportionments to be raised by the churches for these same causes.

2. That the President and Treasurer of the Convention be authorized to recall and destroy the following outstanding obligations of the Convention: (a) The Southern Christian Convention Incorporated Bonds in the face value of $500,000, with coupons attached, issued by order of the Convention, May 1, 1924; and (b) a note for $115,000 given to the Trustees of Elon College, with interest at 6 per cent, to be held as endowment.

3. That upon the execution of the above order, the President and Secretary of the Convention be hereby authorized, in the name of and for the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches Incorporated, to execute a note to the Board of Trustees of Elon College for Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($250,000), the principal of which shall not be collectible, with interest at 4 per cent per annum, payable annually, said interest to be paid from receipts collected on the "Elon College Fund" raised by the churches and paid to the Convention, or direct to Elon College.

4. That for each year, for the next biennium, the Convention will need $44,000, to be appropriated as follows:

Convention Fund .....	$ 5,000
Convention (Home Missions) .....	5,000
Foreign Missions .....	5,000
Elon College Fund .....	12,500
Superannuated Fund .....	2,500
Christian Education .....	1,500
Christian Orphanage .....	12,500
Total .....	$44,000

The above mentioned Funds to be raised by the several Conferences comprising the Convention as follows:

Convention Fund: E. Va., $2,000; Val. Va. C., $300; E. N. C., $710; N. C. & Va., $1,280; W. N. C., $710.

Convention Missions: E. Va., $2,000; Val. Va. C., $300; E. N. C., $710; N. C. & Va., $1,280; W. N. C., $710.

Foreign Missions: E. Va., $2,000; Val. Va. C., $300; E. N. C., $710; N. C. & Va., $1,280; W. N. C., $710.

Elon College Fund: E. Va., $5,000; Val. Va. C., $700; E. N. C., $1,800; N. C. & Va., $3,200; W. N. C., $1,800.

Superannuated Fund: E. Va., $1,000; Val. Va. C., $250; E. N. C., $215; N. C. & Va., $320; W. N. C., $355.

Christian Education: E. Va., $500; Val. Va. C., $250; E. N. C., $215; N. C. & Va., $320; W. N. C., $215.

Orphanage: E. Va., $3,500; Val. Va. C., $750; E. N. C., $1,750; N. C. & Va., $3,500; W. N. C., $3,000.

5. That to assist in raising the above mentioned Funds, a Special Offering at Easter for the Orphanage; a Special Christmas offering for the Superannuated Fund; a Special Offering for Elon College in the Elon College Period. These Offerings to be the only Special Offerings for these purposes; and said offerings shall be credited by the local churches on their respective Conference Apportionments.

6. That to provide for the support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for each year, there shall be paid by the Orphanage, by Elon College and the Mission Board the sum of $500 each and the Board of Religious Education the sum of $250; and $2,500 from the Convention Fund, making a total of $4,000, all of which payments shall be made upon the basis of the contract made for publishing THE SUN, and upon the order of the President of the Convention.

7. That the present plan of monthly offerings for Missions and the Orphanage, and the Fifth Sunday Offering for Elon College to be taken by the Sunday Schools, be continued; said funds collected to be paid to the designated agencies and credited on the respective Conference Apportionment.

8. That the Orphanage, the Mission Board and Elon College shall be authorized to make appeals for support to individuals, each during the period herein designated as follows: Elon College, January, February, July, August, September, (and Commencement); Missions: March, April, May, June; the Orphanage: October, November, December; The Board of Religious Education: Offering from the Sunday Schools: July, August. All these contributions to be credited on the respective Conference Apportionments of the local church. The Board of Religious Education may make request of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions for funds, as heretofore, to assist in promoting the work of said Board.

9. That all funds contributed to designated agencies, including individual contributions, shall be paid to the Treasurer of said agency, and a report made by such agency to the Treasurer of the Convention, and also to the Secretaries of the various churches within the bounds of the Convention thirty days before the meeting of the annual Conference of which the church may be a member to make it possible for due credits to appear in the Conference records.

10. That all monies raised by churches, missionary societies, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor Societies and all other Societies of the several churches of the several Conferences for any of the above mentioned agencies of the church, shall be included in the annual reports of the churches to their respective Conferences, and tabulated by the Secretary of each Conference for record in the Statistical Table.

11. That all Convention Funds raised by the churches or the several Conferences for Convention purposes, shall be forwarded to the Treasurer of the Convention, and paid out by checks drawn by the Treasurer, upon the order of the President.

12. That in making remittances to the Treasurer of the Convention, the amount contributed, the Fund for which it is designated, and the name of the Church or Conference to be credited, shall be clearly stated.

13. That two-fifths of the Convention Fund shall be forwarded to the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches.

14. That some steps be taken to pay the deficit in the account of printing THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

AS A NATION THINKETH SO IT IS.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

In times of peril people turn to safer anchors. One example of this is the tendency during the past four years to turn from light literature to more serious thoughts. From 1925 to the latter part of 1931 magazines were filled with light fiction, fantastic stories—the things that appeal to us in our moments of gaiety and leisure. Books followed the same trend. Scenes have shifted, for today important history may be found in the most unsuspected periodicals. Because of a popular demand, many new historical books are on the market and rank among the "best sellers." Several authors have brought forth interesting and illuminating new volumes on Lincoln and other notable characters who figured in the building and reconstruction of the nation. Movies have given us in recent months some of the finest portrayals of history, and in every instance large crowds have been attracted. Into our vocabularies we have re-adopted such words as "constitution," "pioneering," "hardships," "endurance," "heroism," "rehabilitate," "digging-in," and other expressions that remind us of the hardships of our forefathers and their struggles in a young republic. We have turned from the fancy to fervor, from risk to reason, and from insecurity to security. We may yet learn that it is our thoughts that turn the tides of civilization, and that commercial activities are only products of our thinking—for such is the case.

SECRETARY ROPER SPEAKS AS A PROPHET.

Mr. D. C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce in the Cabinet of the President, is a Methodist layman, and a man who is devoted to the Church. Dr. H. E. Woolever of the Methodist Press of Washington reports the following interview with the Secretary:

"What do you think of the present outlook, nationally, Mr. Secretary?"

"The conditions are serious. I am not as fatalistic as some you know in this capital city, but I am convinced there is no political power on earth that can save this nation. New spiritual revelation must be vouchsafed us in order to save us."

"Do you mean, Mr. Secretary, a spiritual revival?"

"Yes, I mean that and more. I used the term religion for want of a better term. It must be spiritually born. Father Ryan was in the other day and I asked him what he thought would save the country. He said we need an educational program. 'But that,' I replied, 'would require fifty years. We would be gone, and I fear the nation would, too.' No, sir, what we need is an old-fashioned revival of spiritual living. Property and things and politics, are not going to save the people and the nation."

"Mr. Secretary, just this week I told your Cabinet colleague, Postmaster General Farley, that among the obstacles he must face in his efforts to re-elect President Roosevelt are these two. One is the fact that the chief advisers of the President are not his Cabinet members, but a circle of atheists, agnostics, and Jewish unbelievers. Another is the President's utter abandonment of this country to the exploitation of the liquor crowd."

The Secretary shook his head with grave assent and replied, "Doctor, I am as much interested in fighting the liquor menace now as I was forty years ago, when I introduced in my State of South Carolina the first anti-liquor law. I have studied this problem all my life and I know we must overcome this social menace or it will overcome us. It is one of the great social and economic issues facing America."—Richmond Christian Advocate.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The recent session of the Southern Convention held at Burlington, N. C., was the smallest in attendance for many years. The late spring was probably a contributing cause of the absence of a number of laymen. It seems to this writer that election as a delegate to the Convention should be regarded as an honor and should be taken seriously as an opportunity for invaluable service to the church. However, many people do not seem to regard it in this light, and for various reasons fail to attend.

Special mention should be made of those who are present for the opening session and remain for the final benediction. It is a fact that many delegates wait until the second day to attend, and leave before the last day. Quite a number cannot be persuaded to remain in the church during the sessions. Ministers as well as laymen, in some cases, loiter around the building during the business session. Of course it is trying upon one's nerves to sit through all the sessions of a four-day Convention. But think of the officers who have no relief from this strain, and are compelled to sit up till past midnight to work out the perplexing problems of the various departments.

Now with this indirect criticism disposed of it is in order to suggest an appraisal of the Convention. The weather was ideal, the city of Burlington opened its doors with delightful hospitality, the Pastor, Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, and his congregation, gave themselves with unstinted effort to the task of making our stay in their midst pleasant. The problems of the various Departments of the Convention were approached with serious consideration. Under the present system of organization there is a tendency towards competition between the various Boards and Departments. Up to the present time there has been no danger of any surplus of money in any of the Departments. But the Committees and Boards who were charged with the duty of planning the financial policy of the Convention have found it difficult to evolve a system which is satisfactory to all concerned. The financial system has been under revision for two years or more. It is believed that the system adopted at the last session, which was defective in several respects, approaches a fairer adjustment elsewhere in the SUN, is based upon the plan adopted at the last session, with some clarification and additions. The Orphanage is now included in the Conference Apportionments with the other Convention enterprises. The money raised by the Sunday Schools and the Thanksgiving Offerings will be credited on the Apportionments as in the case of Missions and Elon College. The amount apportioned to the various Conferences is based upon the present support of that institution. The Executive Committees of the various Conferences should work out apportionments for the various churches and this apportionment can be included and credited in the reports to the 1936 sessions of the Conferences. This is not a new burden upon the churches, but a definite method of crediting the work done by the local churches.

It is important that the ministers and laymen of our churches study the Convention Reports as they appear in THE SUN, and make an earnest effort to cooperate in the plan to coordinate the work of the various church enterprises. The financial plans suggest a large sum annually but it is not too large for the work undertaken. Every department is important, and there should be united effort to develop the work in a spirit of hearty cooperation. The Convention is in a position to promote the work of the local churches as well as to support the general enterprises, if the Conferences and churches will seriously undertake to cooperate in carrying out the plans adopted by the recent session. When the debt of Elon College is finally paid, as anticipated, the other departments of the church will profit by this forward-looking step.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ONE DOLLAR.

A few days ago a good woman interested in the church and all of its enterprises said to the writer, "I love the college and I am anxious to see this campaign succeed. I am willing to do all that I can do but what I can do is very little. It seems now that I can only give one dollar. I suppose that would not help." I replied, "If one dollar represents your ability, if that represents all that you can give, it will mean much."

In matters religious and this campaign for Elon College is a religious undertaking one's gift is not measured by the amount of the gift but by the amount that the giver has after the gift has been made. The story of the widow's mite has doubtless been the means of small giving on the part of many and I fear has been a snare for those who would have others believe that they had given to the extent of their ability.

You will recall the scene pictured in the Gospel of Mark when Jesus sat over against the treasury and beheld how people cast money into the treasury. All classes were represented in those who gave, the rich, the well-to-do, the poor, and the poverty stricken. Among those who gave came a widow who threw in two mites. A mite is one-eighth of a cent. Two mites would make a quarter of one cent. However, as the Master observed the givers and the gifts he commended the poor widow, not for the amount of her gift but for the fact that she had nothing left after she had given. Her gift was not only an expression of devotion but an expression of faith. So often we remark that we can give the widow's mite. How many would be willing to give the widow's mite? The widow's mite expresses sacrifice, the sacrifice of material things comparable to the sacrifice of our Lord when he gave himself.

It is not necessary for one to give literally all that he has. God has not asked for this nor does he expect such sacrifice but he has asked a due portion of what he has lent. Those who are his own on the earth, who love him with all their minds, with all their hearts, with all their souls, and with all their strength will not withhold that part of material assistance which justly belongs to Him for the support of His church and the enterprises necessary for the complete program of His church. In our Christian activities a multitude of appeals are constantly coming. We cannot answer all of these appeals as generously as we are asked nor as generously as we would like, in fact, there may be some appeals that we cannot answer at all. It becomes necessary for us to practice discretionary giving, selecting the causes and enterprises which we deem most necessary and most essential. It is essential, however, to our spiritual well-being that we share what we have for the cause of Christ in the earth. Our standard of giving if we be Christian is determined by two things—first, by what we receive. We are commanded to give and we will give according as the Lord has prospered us, not according to what we may have after we have paid for purchases made and made additional purchases but by what we have before we meet individual needs. Religion never puts self first. God always comes first, our neighbor second, and we, if we be Christian, come third. This may seem to be a cruel philosophy, nevertheless, it is the philosophy of the Christian religion and those who practice it have been enriched materially and spiritually. Often times we think we are rich but in reality we are poor. Second, our standard of giving is determined by the need of the cause which makes its demand upon our holdings and our earnings.

According to the teachings of the Old Testament the title of all of one's possessions was required at the hands of the true servants of God. Christ in His teachings discarded many of the requirements of the Mosaic laws but not on a single occasion did He discard the law of the tithe. Freely acknowledging that the tithe was exacted, He declared in effect that these you ought to have done but that the weightier matters should also be accomplished. Many conscientious Christians have not stopped with giving the tithe but have continued to give simply because the cause was worthy and demanded larger gifts.

The campaign now being made by Elon College is for the purpose of raising $250,000. This is a lot of money for the natural constituency of Elon College to contribute. However, the cause justifies the amount. If this amount is raised and it must be done, some of us will be compelled to step up in the high plain of sacrifice. Sacrifice may seem hard when it is made but the fruit of sacrifice is glorious when it is fully realized.

Some years ago a man of fairly large holdings gave $50,000 for a dormitory to be erected on the campus of Emory University. Subsequently, reverses overtook the donor and his fortune was swept away. Practically penniless he walked across the campus at Emory and a friend who knew the man then in the evening shadows of life and without funds said, "Mr. —, if you had the money now that you put in that building you would be well fixed today." The old man replied, "No, what I kept, I lost. What I gave I saved. If I had my life to go over again, I would make the same gift that I made years ago."

Conscientious giving enlarges the vision and enriches the soul. Consistent saving, without giving narrows one's vision and impoverishes one's soul. "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over," if you have given of your share as generously as you have been shared with.

HOLLAND CHRISTIAN CHURCH— REMINISCENCES.

Lent has come and gone. Easter has come and gone. Their passing does not lessen one whit the spiritual experiences that have been ours during that season. Like a host of other churches we sought to "practice the presence of God" during "the springtime of the soul," "the springtime of religion." It was our aim to cultivate a deeper sense of reverence and fellowship in the local community. We feel that we have been amply repaid for our efforts. We, further, agree that it would be a fine thing if more churches would develop a special program each Lenten season.

We began our studies, worship and experiences with a study of outstanding Psalms at our Mid-Week Services. The first Sunday in Lent we began a series of sermons on the Twenty-Third Psalm, the Shepherd's Psalm or Song. The topics ran as follows: "My Shepherd"; "My Leader"; "My Comforter"; "My Host"; and "My Companion."

One feature of our program of parish evangelism is the pastor's class held each Friday eve-

WAR AND CHRISTIANITY.

From the Viewpoint of an Army Chaplain.

By CHAPLAIN H. E. SNYDER.

War is not much understood by the average man. About all that impresses him is; soldiers get hurt, and some of them even killed. Most thinking never gets beyond that.

As to Christianity, the average Church member knows little and cares less, as to its influence in the world. The few do the thinking for the many.

We claim that we are Christian. We believe that there is a God. We believe that that God has spoken through his only begotten Son, Jesus Christ. What was said and done in preparation for the coming of that Son into the world, and what he said and taught after his advent, we call the Word of God, Holy Scriptures, or The Bible.

We have little use for the professional reformer and radical in any line, particularly in religion.

One of the basic causes of our present national and individual trouble is so-called liberalism. It is great to be broad-minded and liberal. That sounds big.

But remember this, young people. You do believe something. You will follow a leader. Liberalism leads inevitably into atheism. There is no God. God has not spoken. So we worship Lenin. We do what he tells us to do. If we once get rid of God, then we can do in morals as we please. Lying, stealing, robbing, murder, divorce, are no longer crimes that we need to shrink from. That is where our God-less universities and colleges have brought us. Complete recovery will not take place in our generation.

We rigidly hold that God has revealed his Holy will in His Word and by the mouth of His Son. We interpret scripture by scripture. We study so that out of the Word we may gain understanding. Radicals and fanatics have a preconceived notion that they hope to prove correct by forcing scriptures to agree with them. That is doing violence to the Holy Word and common sense.

Before and during the World War many prominent denominational leaders said and did things that no true Man of God will do—not even in war time. They are all recorded in books. These same people now probably are conscience-stricken, and are running to the other extreme of pacifism. Passing foolish resolutions that they will not support their government in any war. Guilt usually works that way in people.

These same people do not realize that subversive hidden influences are utilizing this feeling in so-called youth movements and youth conventions. The paid propagandists keep themselves well under cover. The ultimate purpose is to break up constructive thinking, and finally overthrow the United States Government. When people are bewildered it is easy enough to maneuver them into treasonable utterances. This is happening every day in our fair land.

Jesus said: "They that take the sword shall perish with the sword." That is quoted often enough. We seldom hear that other passage quoted: "There shall be wars and rumors of wars until the end of time." Jesus said that also.

Universal peace is a fine ideal. Every man worthy of the name should strive to that end. No man who knows what war means has a desire for it. But there are many conditions which must be altered before "the lion and the kid can lie down in peace together."

During twenty centuries of preaching and teaching, the Christian Church has failed to abolish war, bank robbing, whether by a John Dillinger, or a board of directors, divorce, adultery, murder and many other heinous crimes.

Jesus did not passively resist evil. If I understand His word and life He was a good fighter for right. He did not hesitate to drive out the money changers with force.

If every man, woman and child on earth were Christians we might have good hope of establishing universal peace. Approximately one-third of the human race is Christian. Two-thirds have not heard of the high morality of his Gospel of good will to all. They do not live by that standard. The nation in which they live makes no pretense of conducting its affairs by that standard. Even so-called Christian nations do not employ Christian standards in international relations.

This one-third of the human mass called Christian, can be further reduced, because not one-half of Christendom lives up to the standards set by Jesus Christ. So we see a world which has for every five Christians, twenty who think and act differently. How utterly fatal then for such a minority to expect the big brutal majority to deal justly, when they have no means to defend that which they hold sacred and right. A man who will not fight to protect his family and his country, is not even Christian.

What does a Mohammedan or a heathen care about the fine ethical ideals of the Christian, when he has wealth that he covets?

When we foolishly pulled out the chestnuts for our dear allies, and the danger was over, half of the enormous debt was written from the books. When we modestly reminded them that there was a balance still due, they said in effect: "Try and get it." Where do you find common honesty in such dealing? If nations can default why not banks, trust companies and all crooks?

Look at our public education. Our schools of economics and business. Do they teach the fine idealism of Christ? They do not. Their theory is: out-smart the other fellow. Let him create wealth and then take it away from him by clever tricks. Have you heard much about the honor of labor in recent times? You have not.

If the proposition is true that war is immoral and can never be justified in the light of Christian teaching, then how about our American Revolution and the other wars that have preserved us as a nation? The fact that we are a nation then, is immoral.

How did England get all the lands of the earth over which she claims control? By force of arms in every instance. After the World War when she gobbled up the German Colonies and there was no more land to be had anywhere she called a great convention. The United States obediently agreeing. Hereafter it is wrong for any nation to acquire any land by force of arms. Now is that not a clever trick?

So long as lust and covetousness are controlling forces in the souls of men, whether Christian or non-Christian, so long do we have the seeds that produce war.

Here is a point that we must never overlook nor permit to be obscured by eloquent words.

All Law is based on physical force back of it. A law would be a mere pious resolution without physical force to back it up. Who would respect a city ordinance without a police force?

Thus it is that an Army and Navy are a necessity for national protection. Without such physical armed force there could be no national security.

I often hear the question: "How long will War last?"

War will continue as long as sin and greed are in the human soul. Until the Holy Spirit thru word and sacrament cleanses the soul of men from greed, lust and murder.

War will not be eliminated by youth conventions and the passing of flowery resolutions.

The seeds of war are present as long as we have the fellow who demands everything and gives nothing.

So long as our schools remain God-less. So long as a small minority can prevent the teaching of Christian morality along with grammar and spelling to our children in schools, so long will we be encouraging the things that eventuate in war.

So long as we have on the statute books laws declaring universal suffrage to all men and then prevent by violence the black man from coming near the voting place. Race prejudice is a fertile breeder of war.

So long as we permit bankers and so-called best minds to loot the widow and the helpless from their livelihood and then make a big show as being the leading social lights in the community. The seeds of rebellion are present.

In my opinion there is no better guide anywhere than that given in the 16th Article of the Augsburg Confession:

"Of civil affairs they teach that lawful civil ordinances are good works of God, and that it is right for Christians to bear civil office, to sit as judges, to determine matters by the imperial court, to engage in just wars, to serve as soldiers, to make legal contracts, to hold property, to make oath when required by the magistrate, to marry and to be given in marriage."

A Christian is in duty bound to support his government. The early Christians for more than three centuries did not rebel against the Roman Empire which persecuted them unto death.

The Constitution is the Law of the land. To pass any resolution then that sets aside that basic instrument is plain treason.—The Army Chaplain.

YENCHING'S COLLEGE OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

The departments of economics, sociology, and political science at Yenching University, Peiping, China, are organized as a College of Public Affairs. Under this heading, Yenching University is creating courses in rural cooperatives, county government, and social organization.

The college cooperates closely with the Research Institute of Nankai University, a government institution, and the Mass Education Movement, of which Doctor Y. C. James Yen is leader. Graduate students will spend a year in field work at Ting Hsien, Doctor Yen's center, before taking up their own work in rural reconstruction.

Closely allied to this phase of modern college studies are the courses given at Yenching in ceramics and tanning. Journalism is attracting other Chinese students.

The interdenominational merger in higher education from which Yenching University grew to a present enrollment of more than 800 students using a modern educational plant specialized in training teachers for the schools of China. This phase of work is still important, yet more than half of Yenching's more recent graduates are at work outside the schools, in a variety of professions and vocations that indicate the scope of Chinese progress. Yenching is well known for its pre-medical courses preparing for Peiping Union Medical College.

"Our graduates are not often among the unemployed," reports President John Leighton Sturare, who adds that in some phases of work the university cannot supply the calls that come to it.

Yenching is one of eleven institutions of higher learning in China represented in the United States by the Associated Boards for Christian Colleges in China, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City.—News Bulletin.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

THEY CAME.

Until a few years ago the young people in our churches had little or no interest in attending the Southern Convention meetings. The Convention was an adult affair. But that situation has been changed.

A call was issued for representative young people from each of the conferences in the Convention to be in Burlington last week, and every conference was represented. Two of the five presidents were present; another, a young business man, sent a written report which was read by a young woman from the same conference. The other two, school teachers, could not come but were represented by other young people. Each conference had two or more representatives present. The president of the Southeast Youth Fellowship presided at the banquet, and the representatives from each Youth Fellowship within the Convention spoke at the evening session of the Convention.

The willingness to cooperate on the part of the young people and the eagerness with which they enter into the work of the Church brings courage and hope to those who are responsible for church activities. If these young people can be guided aright and given sufficient encouragement there is no doubt but what a new day will dawn within our Church.

SPRINGTIME PLANNING.

Now is the time to plan for spring and summer activities. Next Sunday is Mother's Day, and there certainly should be a special program for that in all of the church organizations. Then comes Memorial Day the last of May, Children's Day in June, the Sunday School Conventions in June or July, perhaps revival meetings in the summer, and, of course, that picnic or outing for groups of various kinds during the summertime. Definite attempt should be made to increase attendance during the summer season rather than let it decrease. If some of the people must needs go visiting perhaps others will come to the community who could visit in your church. Effort should be made to secure these visitors and thus raise the attendance.

In the springtime the farmer plans and plants with the hope of harvest. So should the Church.

TO MOTHER.

On Mother's Day we forget other things, even the fine blessings which are ours, and think again and only of your love, sacrifice and devotion. No, we will not cry, and we do not want you to shed tears, unless they are tears of joy. We are not being sentimental: we are simply taking time to say "thank you" in our feeble way for all that you have meant and do mean to us.

The little flower, red and rosy with life if you are still with us, white and pure and fragrant if you have slipped away to the eternal home, is but a reminder of what you mean to us, and is worn with pleasure because we love you. If there is also a little present of some kind it is simply a small token of the affection which is daily within our hearts. If we invite you to share with us the worship in the Church, it is because we believe that here in the worship both you and we reach the highest point of our soul development and in this worship we can best express our appreciation for each other.

We are conscious of our unworthiness of your sacrificial love. Perhaps we shall always be children to you—we hope so. But deep in our hearts is a great yearning to be that which you want us to be. Please believe it, trust us, and love us in spite of all our unworthiness, for in so doing you fulfill our ideal of what a mother should be and of what God is.

A MOTHER UNDERSTANDS.

When mother sits beside my bed
At night, and strokes and smooths my head,
And kisses me, I think, some way,
How naughty I have been all day;
Of how I waded in the brook,
And of the cookies that I took,
And how I smashed a window light
A-rassling—me and Bobby White—
And tore my pants, and told a lie;
It almost makes me want to cry
When mother pats and kisses me:
I'm just as sorry as can be,
But I don't tell her so—no, sir,
She knows it all; you can't fool her.

—Anonymous.

AMONG THE NAMES.

Among the names to mortals given
There's none like mother, home, and heaven;
For home's no home without her care;
And heaven, we know she will be there;
Then let us, while we love each other,
Remember and be kind to mother.

—E. L. Cassauria.

MY MOTHER'S VOICE.

My mother's voice, how often creeps
Its cadence on my lonely hours!
Like healing sent on wings of sleep,
Or dew to unconscious flowers.
I can forget her melting prayer
When leaping pulses madly fly,
But in the still, unbroken air
Her gentle tone comes stealing by,
And years, and sin, and manhood flee,
And leave me at my Mother's knee.

—Nathaniel P. Willis.

HER WORDS AND PRAYERS.

She led me first to God;
Her words and prayers were my young spirit's dew—
For when she us'd to leave
The fireside every eve,
I knew it was for prayer that she withdrew.
How often has the thought
Of my mourn'd mother brought Peace to my troubled spirit and new power
The tempter to repel!
Mother, thou knowest well
That thou hast bless'd me since my natal hour.

—John Pierpont.

NATIONALISM AND INTERNATIONAL GOOD WILL.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 17, 1936.

Scripture: Phil. 2:4, 5; Acts 17:26.

A recent writer has pointed out that the critical conflict today is not primarily Christianity versus Buddhism, or Christianity versus Mohammedanism, but Christianity versus nationalism. The unwritten creed of nationalism is that each nation is a sovereign unit acknowledging no control save its own independent will, and that within its own borders each sovereign unit may exercise an almost absolute authority over the lives of its citizens. We must be ready to sacrifice to the nation our lives, our fortunes, our sons and daughters, and even our consciences. Nationalism becomes dangerous when it is accepted as a philosophy of the universe, and therefore becomes a religion.

Nationalism forgets that there is one God over all, not a separate God for each tribe or nation. Nationalism is dividing men in a world where they desperately need to be united. It is setting men against one another at a time when they greatly need to cooperate with one another in some intelligent attempt to create a decent and enduring civilization. Ernest Fremont Tittle reminds us: "Nationalism means egoism. It means selfishness. It means fear and distrust. It means barriers artificially constructed and forcibly maintained. It means tariff walls. It means armaments. It means war."

The Kingdom of God is not French, or English, or German, or American. The glory of Christ's Kingdom is its planet-wideness as contrasted with national exclusiveness. "And they shall come from the East and West, and from the North and South, and shall sit down in the Kingdom of God."

Real Christianity is the key to international good will. International good will can be achieved only through the principles and ideals as revealed by Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace. His way never fails. He taught that there is only one God and Father of mankind; and that all men, regardless of race or nation, are brothers. He taught that we must love our neighbors. He taught that we must do good to those who hate us.

Nations can conquer hate only after the individuals who are a part of that nation conquer their hate. Individuals can conquer hate. So can nations. If we would look forward to international good will, first we must let the power of Christ permeate our lives and bring peace to our own minds. Surely, until we have peace within our own minds we cannot look forward to international peace and good will.

"In Christ there is no East or West,
In Him no South or North;
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth."

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

EFFECTUAL PRAYER.

LESSON VI—MAY 10, 1935.

GOLDEN TEXT: "God, be merciful to me a sinner."—Luke 18:13.

LESSON: Luke 18. Printed Text: Luke 18:1-14.

To know how to pray effectively, to know how to discover and to utilize the unseen but real, and tremendously powerful spiritual forces involved in prayer—that is the supreme need of the individual and of the Church today.

In this lesson Jesus emphasizes prayer from two angles: importunity or persistence in prayer, and humility in prayer.

Importunity or Persistence in Prayer.

"And he spake a parable (he told a story) unto them to the end that they ought always to pray, and not to faint." The story was told to encourage them to persistence in prayer, to emphasize the fact that perseverance, persistence, patience were primary prerequisites to effective praying.

All this is put in the story of the widow who had been wronged and who appealed to the judge, a hard-hearted, hard-boiled, hard-headed, fellow who neither feared God nor had any regard for the rights of men.

Humility in Prayer.

Jesus stressed the importance of humility in prayer in another unforgettable picture or story. With deft strokes he paints the pictures of two men in the temple at prayer.

stood in the temple at prayer. He had no sense of need, no consciousness of sin, no sympathy for others. He reminded the Lord that he was not as other men, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, and that he was especially thankful that he was not as the publican who happened to be in the temple at the time.

The other man was a publican, an outcaste, what we would call a sinner. He too had come into the temple, at least into the outer edge of the temple—he stood afar off. He did not even lift up his eyes unto the heaven, but with averted look, he humbled himself, beating upon his breast, and saying in broken tones, "God be Thou merciful to me a sinner."

THE FALSE ATTITUDE TOWARD SUFFERING.

A passive surrender to grief is all too common. Tennyson speaks of this kind of sorrow when he says:

"Ring out the grief that saps the mind, For those that here we see no more."

There are those who shut themselves up with their griefs and nurse their sorrows. There is a selfishness of suffering as selfish as the selfishness of sin. An excessive grief for the dead neglects the living.

No one has a sickness quite like ours, nor an operation so severe. No one else is up against such heavy odds and has been treated with such ingratitude. There are people who condemn themselves to feebleness with self-pity and are never happier than when they can feel sorry for themselves.

Take the shock of bereavement. It is no good turning away from it and burying the matter in the mind if you bury resentment and bitterness with it. The thing to do is to face the whole situation resolutely, and cut out self-pity, that most disintegrating of all emotions; to be relentlessly honest with one's self, not attempting to be more sorry than one really feels, to realize that the one who has passed need not be grieved over, since he is in the Father's hands, and that to over-grieve one's self is a debilitating kind of self-love.

MONDAY.

"INFINITE CAPACITY TO LOVE."

"The Lord is of long-suffering and of great mercy."—Num. 14:18.

How striking that such a thought as this follows our last week's thoughts on the accessibility of Christ through faith! After dwelling upon the definiteness and ease of obtaining love, joy and peace, which come by faith and consecration, and after realizing how weak we are and unworthy of such blessings, it is almost startling to be encouraged by the sober grace and forbearance of God.

This long-suffering of our Father's is described in the terms of a capacity of love that is the same "Yesterday, today and forever." This outgoing love of God is for us today, tomorrow, and morrow after morrow in spite of anything and everything. He bears with His irritating children without becoming irritated. He continues tolerant with the intolerant.

Thus Jesus is, before us, and is the power to "hope all things," "is not easily provoked," "bearth all things," "endureth all things," and "never faileth." And these are the traits of character which He imparts to all, that we too may manifest His likeness in us.

Prayer—Our Father, midst the injustices, wrong treatment, harshness, rudeness and unkindness, from those whom we often meet, it is hard to keep our hearts sweet and loving all the while. It is easier for us to do as the world does—harden ourselves against our fellowman and grow sour.

We would pray to Thee for Thy transforming power that makes us Christ-like. We would keep our lamps trimmed and burning, or else they will grow dim and flicker out. O God, in the light of Jesus and through Him, save us from this death.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WE HAVE TO CHOOSE."

"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."—Matt. 20:26.

There is not an hour, not an act, not a thought that does not present the necessity for choosing or rejecting Christ. This cannot be avoided. For weal or woe, whatever walls we may raise against Him, Christ passes through them all and gets to us.

This is not all. There are deeds which we did a long time ago that continually rise up and meet us and even now we feel the pale of a stricken conscience about them. There are experiences of goodness and exquisite happiness back in the past; they, too, rise up and their memory is like music. We cannot shut out the opportunities of choice and we cannot shut out what we have done. The changing years do not erase them.

So is the presence and beauty of the Lord Jesus Christ. We talk of "Christian atmosphere," but it is more than Christian, it is Christ. Some close the door against Christ, and yet, as He stood before the apostles in the upper room, He comes through and stands in their midst.

"What will you do with Jesus,
Neutral you cannot be,
Some day your heart will be asking,
"What will He do with me?"

Prayer—O Christ, the "Captain of our Salvation," who art ever with us, grant unto us the power of Thy inspiration. We would forsake sin and open our souls to Thee. Forgive us and help us not to bar our souls against Thy blessings. Grant this, O Lord, in the name of Jesus.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE HOUND OF HEAVEN."

by Francis Thompson.

"Though I descend into the depth of Hell, Thou art there."

Hastings quotes Francis Thompson who has with marvelous beauty of imagery and breadth of expression, given us a story of the pursuit of the soul through all its manifold experiences by "the Hound of Heaven." Says he:

"I fled Him down the nights and down the days;
I fled Him down the arches of the years;
I fled Him down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind; and in the midst of tears
I hid from Him, and under running laughter,
From those strong feet that followed, that followed after.

But with unburrying chase
And unperturbed pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
They beat, and a voice beat
More instant than the feet—
'Lo, all things fly thee, for thou fliest Me.'

A foolish soul may persevere in its flight from its Saviour, but on and on comes the mighty spirit of Jesus that will not be denied.

Prayer—Our Father, we try to hide from Thee in strange places. Forgive us and help us to reform and to open our souls to Thee. Ring on in our souls and draw us to Thee.

We thank Thee for Thy lavishing love upon us. Make our souls loving, tender and beautiful, till our lives here are ended and we shall be with Thee forever.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"HEAVEN'S POWER IS OF THEE."

"And Jesus spoke saying, all power is given unto me in heaven and earth."—Matt. 28:18.

When we come to this belief and are willing to trust in it, our rise to visions and realities in Christian experiences will not be difficult.

Men are powerful and are able to do wonderful things: but all their power is delegated. The power of men comes by Divine impulse and it is intermittent; but the power of Jesus is inherent and absolute.

The Father who besought Christ to heal his stricken child, made his prayer doubtful. He said, "If Thou canst do anything." Christ gives him back his doubt by saying, "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." This places the man on his mettle, as if to say, "it is for Thee rather than for me to decide whether this thing can be done or not; it can be if thou believest."

It appears that it was the power of Christ that had drawn the man to Him to seek this blessing. He had not thought that the power lay within himself. But the master's words strike him like a blow on steel. The sparks of faith fly, they light his soul, and the clouds of doubt are turned into flowing confidence, and he cries, "Lord, I believe. Help Thou my unbelief!"

Oft has it been said that "faith is the principle of power." The possibility of that power lies within us, and to realize it is like throwing in the master switch that cuts on the lighting system of the city. It has been thrown into the dynamo.

FRIDAY.

"HOW EASY IT IS."

"Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another."—Eph. 4:32.

We cannot think along the line of the above text without feeling the warmth of love toward others, nor without an increasing desire and purpose to be kind and forbearing to all.

We cannot think of our contact with people every day without thinking of how frequent opportunities for kindness present themselves. There is reflected also with what ease one may be kind and may emulate our Lord in His light and love for others.

A friend tells us how he had been interrupted by the visit of a lady of his congregation, who told him of the delight and the tears of gratitude which she had witnessed in a poor girl to whom, in passing, he had given a kind look on going out of church one Sunday.

How cheaply happiness is given! How simply and easy it is to rise to an angel's work! A mere look of sympathy giving sunshine to a life; a mere word of encouragement lightening the load of a human heart.

Prayer—Our Father, that is what we want to be in this world. We lift our souls to Thee for the vision and the power. Grant this, Lord, in the name of Him who suffered, bled and died that we might be His.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"GIFTS TO THE RICH."

"Whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that which he hath."—Matt. 13:10-16.

In a soul's increase there is a glorious increase. Learn something and you shall learn something more. Obtain a skill, and you shall obtain another skill more easily. Power breeds power and love creates more love.

It is the dull and stagnant life that grows duller and more stagnant with each gloomy passing day. Arouse yourself! Come out into the open! Take one step forward, and you can then take two steps forward. For progress is progressive, self-multiplying, self-expanding.

That is why it is the first step that counts, as it is the first step that costs. That is why beginnings of the Christian life are infinitely important and blessed. That is why a single seed means a harvest.

Prayer—Give us Thyself, blessed Spirit of the living God, in whatever measure, and we shall soon have full measure. What happiness to start out with Thee!—Amen.

"THINGS INEXPEDIENT."

"All things are lawful for me; but not all things are expedient."—I Cor. 6:12-20.

Whoever is certain of God's indwelling has entered into perfect liberty. He can go anywhere, for God can go anywhere; or do or say anything, for God is not bound. All the freedoms of the universe are happily his, for they are his Lord's.

But no more than they are his Lord's. It is fallacious to say that God is not bound. He is (Continued on page 15.)

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

PERMANENT RESULTS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Philip findeth Nathanael."—John 1:45.

That was after the meeting was over! That was a result of the meeting. John had been preaching in the Jordan valley, and making followers. Jesus had been meeting smaller groups and making finders, fishers! From all about Jerusalem, and around the Jordan they had come in vast multitudes to hear John, and they had become followers for they were baptized of him in the Jordan. His meetings were a great success. Many were added to the rolls of the church, so to speak. And it must have created considerable excitement in the cities the number that John received into the fellowship. And we still need followers. We still need and plead for folks who will hear the message of repentance and join up with the Church movement. Indeed that is one of the primary needs of the hour,—followers.

And there is so much to offer in the following. Such a leader, Jesus, to follow! What greater blessing can be offered than that of having Jesus as a Friend and Companion along life's way? It is the chief good. There is nothing so satisfying, so inspiring, so helpful. I know it has made our hearts rejoice to see more than half a hundred boys and girls, and men and women step out from the world and into the church in this series of meetings. They have done a most noble thing, and as a result of the meeting that in itself must be very gratifying to us all. May we sincerely pray that it may be one of its first and foremost permanent results. In this closing service many more should take that same step,—namely, the step of following Jesus. Also this meeting should make us all better followers of Jesus. That, too, should and will be a permanent result.

Another result of Jesus' meetings was that of making finders. "Philip findeth Nathanael." Andrew findeth his brother Simon Peter. The woman at the well findeth a full-size city and bringeth it to Jesus! These were results of meetings with Jesus. Philip was blessed by meeting Jesus. A new light never yet seen on land or sea glowed in his face. A supreme joy came in his soul. He has a friend, and he goes out to find him for Jesus. "Philip findeth Nathanael." So also was it with Andrew. How his soul must have been stirred by the all-day session he and others had with Jesus in answer to their question: "Master where dwellest Thou?" That meeting that day with Jesus sent Andrew out looking for his own brother Simon, and the record is: "He brought him to Jesus." What a day's work that was. Andrew will rejoice all through eternity that he brought Peter to Jesus.

I am praying that one of the permanent results of this series of meetings may be a number of folks who will become finders! "Come follow me," said Jesus, "and I will make you fishers of men." Finding them and catching them. What an intriguing business that is! Here are Dr. Johnson and I pushing his boat off from the landing into the smooth blue waters of Lake Prince. The morning is new, sun just rising over the horizon, the water is still. Poles are unwrapped, hooks baited, but where are the fish? We may not just drop our hooks over anywhere and catch them. About we go, here and there, in this nook and on to that next one, until, ah! our corks sink! We have found them! Finding fish comes before catching them. "Philip findeth Nathanael." "Andrew findeth his own brother Simon, and bringeth him to Jesus."

Many of you have had the joy of going out for the Christ and looking for those who should be won for him. How happy you have been when you have found them! That is a great secret,—finding them! It is more than knowing their address, knocking on their door, telling them what your business is. It is far more than that. Reaching some sympathetic note in their lives, touching some hunger in their hearts, breaking a light of God's love upon them. That is real Christian sportsmanship! And it is in just that sphere that we may truly be co-workers together with God. For there we may have the help of the Holy Spirit. There we may feel our own inability, our weakness, but there will God bless us, and when we are weak then are we strong.

Again it is hoped that there shall be as a permanent result of this past series of meetings a deeper understanding of our obligations to give constant care for the spiritual well-being of many who need our help as a church. I am thinking just now of a family of children just entering into the teen-age, whose mother was called by death a little more than a year ago. Their father is not interested personally in the church as a member or professed follower. Their mother was a very fine Christian woman. What is to be the fate of these fine children? May this church of God rise up and serve them as it should with care, sympathy, understanding, and may it seek by its very best powers to win to the Christ that father. We dare not leave such a responsibility to someone else. We shall not be able to say at the judgment that was the minister's job, or the deacon's task, but, my friend, God may call you to help by your contact, your persuasion, your understanding visit and counsel, to lead that broken, yet beloved family of a sainted mother to Him. "Philip findeth Nathanael." He was not one aboard! He was not under human authority, or suggestion. Fine as these things are, he was under a compulsion of his own soul, and went at the call of the eternal God.

We shall ask you from time to time to contact certain individuals in order that you may seek them for Christ. But there are hundreds of you, and the multitude of duties upon your pastor makes it absolutely impossible for him to assign each of you with a particular task. Your own religion must count for something. Your own heart-hunger to please God, and to win others must count for something. I hope this meeting shall have so stirred your soul that you shall not feel it necessary to wait for an assignment for your minister, but rather that you will be seeking for yourself an assignment from your Lord and Master. Go in His strength. Go from his presence as Philip did, and lo! He goes with you always.

Again I trust that we shall, those who have united with our church as a result of this meeting, and those already members of the church, get a still finer conception of just what it is to make regular contributions of our means to the church of the living God. May we look upon our regular giving as an act of loving devotion to our Lord. May it be to us a very real part of our worship. And may we everyone, both new members and others, feel it a duty and a privilege to contribute regularly of our means as the heart prompts and as the Lord prospers. For your contributions make it possible for your church to continue its services of real spiritual help to the hundreds looking to it for succor. You have a share when you do not realize it. You lay your dollar upon the altar, and while you work at making your living and living your life that dollar is out somewhere reading the Word of God to someone needing comfort, or uttering a word of prayer for someone in need of a blessing. By so much you serve others, even when you yourself may not be conscious of it.

Under God, your Church seeks to carry out the command of our Christ to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. So while

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The writer always regrets to see the feelings of a little child hurt. In our work, all these years at the orphanage, we have always had regard for a child's feelings, and while we have had to correct and sometimes punish a child for some wrong, we have always tried to show the child that the punishment was for its good and not to satisfy any grudge on my part.

The writer has two little boys of his own. He bought them, last Christmas, a beautiful little Spaniel puppy for a Christmas present. They had lost their mother a little more than a year before and were lonesome and both being fond of pets. They had cared for it as tenderly as if it had been a little child. It was as black as a crow, very playful and they loved it very much indeed.

Last Sunday the smaller boy had it out on the lawn playing with it and it ran across the street and a boy came along in a car and ran over it and killed it instantly. The little boys were heartbroken of course; and wept as if their hearts would break.

On Monday morning they dug a little grave on the rear of our lot and tenderly wrapped it in a little blanket it had always slept on and placed it in a box and laid it in the little grave they had dug, and built a little mound over it. Sad and heartbroken because the little pet they loved so tenderly had been taken from them and they were sad and broken over their loss. As the writer stood and looked on he felt that if the young man who had so carelessly deprived them of their little friend could have been present and seen how he had hurt their feelings and broken their little innocent hearts, that he, too, would have shed a silent tear. As long as they live they will never forget. It was their little pet. They loved it. It had been unnecessarily taken from them.

The thought the writer is trying to convey is: Be careful to never hurt a child's feelings.

We want to say in conclusion that the United Congregational-Christian Church has an opportunity to do a much larger service with its united strength in ministering to the orphan children within its borders than the orphanage has been able to do with its limited amount of support in the past. To measure up with other institutions of like kind in North Carolina, the Christian Orphanage ought to care for at least 150 children.

book of the services of a church, but the American Revised Edition should be used in every study. The more recent translations such as Moffat's and others are illuminating to the modern mind.

The Bible's Authority.

It is the authority which all truth has. God's Spirit lives in and makes effective all truth, whether in the books of nature, experience and the Scriptures.

God's presence in the lives of the writers of the Bible make the Books authoritative.

The Bible is the record of beginnings—of creation, the family, sin, society, and the redemption of men from sin, this gives it a unique place of influence.

It is the record of the life and teachings of Jesus, the greatest personality in history—his life and teachings have changed millions of men and women from sin and selfishness to goodness and helpfulness.

It has brought about great changes in the social world. This influence is as lively now as at the beginning. Christ's love and teachings are inspiring directly or indirectly all movements for goodness, justice, peace and cooperation. God's Spirit works through Jesus and his principles and through the character and deeds and words of his followers. This is its inspiration.

Will the Bible Remain the Book of Books?

Its sales indicate that it will. The number of copies sold and given away increases every year. More persons are studying it every year, in the Sunday Schools, Church Services, Training School sessions, Summer Camps, Vacation Bible Schools, Colleges and Theological Schools, and through Correspondence Schools. The lives and truths recorded in it will make it ever the Book of books.

Walter Scott, dying, said, "Hand me the Book." Those at his bedside thought he meant one of the books he had written.

"Which one of your books?"

"There is but one Book!"
The Bible is the ONE Book for life and the ONE Book for death.

it goes about its business at home helping, seeking, serving, it also goes out of its treasury which you have helped to fill, and sends a portion to preach, and serve in corners beyond our own boundaries, and in ways and places we may not even know about. God blesses the giving, the giver, and the receiver, and all are prospered by Him. There is a strange economy of heaven that makes little gifts sometimes bigger than big gifts. It is when the little gifts are given largely as was the widow's mite. Such a gift as that is greatly multiplied in its power to bless.

calmly and sweetly bound by His own laws. He does not choose to transgress them. He does not choose to do any injustice. He never chooses hate but always love. If He should transgress even the least of the laws He has made for Himself, the universe would fall into chaos again. He is God by virtue of the laws He has made and keeps.

We also, His creatures, will be governed as He is governed. Self-governed, which is the only government consistent with liberty. Self-ruled, which is the only rule for a freedman.

Prayer—Teach us the majesty of law, Thou infinite Keeper of Laws! Make us to know how empty and evil is the doing of everything that we may do! May the perfect law of liberty be always ours.—Amen.

OBITUARIES

JOHNSON.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Mt. Carmel Christian Church wish to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved member, Mrs. Cora Johnson, who died January 18, 1936.

Her going has brought us great sorrow. Therefore be it resolved:

That, first, we know that our heavenly Father doeth all things according to His love and mercy. Even though we cannot understand, we bow in submission to his will.

Second, we hold in loving remembrance her service and her meek and quiet personality.

Third, we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her companion and children and commend them to God whose grace is sufficient for them.

Fourth, a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our Society, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. ELISHA BRADSHAW,
MRS. LIZZIE BRADSHAW,
MRS. E. W. BEALE,

STRADER.

Matt M. Strader, age 42 years, passed away on Feb. 24, 1936, in Winston-Salem after an illness of 7 months. His widow, 2 sisters, 3 brothers and his step-mother survive him. The funeral was conducted from Salem Chapel Church, where Bro. Strader was a member. Burial was made in the Salem Chapel Cemetery. The writer with Revs. D. M. Spence, L. P. Smith and Mitchell conducted the services.

THE WAY

By ELIZABETH H. DEWART.

I KNOW a Way that windeth slowly
 Toward the West;
 A pathway high and safe and sure,
 'Tho sometimes sun is there, and sometimes rain.
 If I but keep my feet upon this Way
 It matters not what brings the day;
 Comes joy or grief or toil or pain,
 It is the best.
 Sometimes I think that this high path is
 All my own;
 That few there be who find this Way,
 For all seem bent on other quests than mine.
 Yet often, welcome to my gladdened eyes,
 A comrade hails me with surprise;
 One way for all who dare to find
 God on His throne.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

A recent letter from our beloved brother, Rev. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., expresses the hope and prospect of his steady improvement.

Rev. J. F. Morgan of South Norfolk is this week assisting Rev. B. J. Earp in a series of meetings at Palm St. Church, Greensboro, N. C.

Rev. Elisha A. King, Miami, Fla., will go as official representative of our churches to the world Sunday school convention at Oslo this summer. We wonder if others of our number are going to be fortunate enough to attend this world-wide assembly.

The Afro-Christian Convention is to meet in regular biennial session May 30th—June 5th, with the Christian Church, Graham, N. C. Rev. J. D. Farrar, Newport News, Va., is president of the Convention and a session of great interest and importance is anticipated.

THE SUN's editor forgot every trouble he ever had, forgave every debtor to him, idly dreamed of Utopia and reveled in the sheer joy of living for a few hours on May 5, 1936. He went with Dr. I. W. Johnson fishing. Nothing else need be said.

Our Franklinton College for Negroes is to be opened July 6-12 inclusive for Leadership Training School for Religious workers. Rev. F. C. Lester and his associates, who are preparing the program for our Elon Leadership Training School for the previous week, June 28-July 5, inclusive, are working out a very promising program.

Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., Burlington, N. C., who has been critically ill for some weeks is reported much improved, though by no means able to resume his work with his churches. The Mission Secretary preached at Union, (Alamance), in his stead, and to a large congregation at 11 o'clock last Sunday. Dr. J. H. Lightbourne was the preacher for the afternoon service.

Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Virginia, spent Tuesday of this week in Washington, D. C., attending a meeting of the Nominating Committee of the General Council, of which he is secretary. He spent Tuesday night and part of Wednesday, visiting with the present managing editor, whose duties with those of editor he is slated to assume on July 1st.

The following from the Newport News Times-Herald, April 29th, is of interest to many SUN readers and immediately congratulations and best wishes are in order: "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Godwin Hyatte of the East End announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss June Joy Hyatte, to the Rev. Robert Lee House, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Macon House of Franklinton, N. C. Mr. House is pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church."

The following news item will be of interest to the many friends of our Ocean View, (Va.), pastor: "Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Taylor, of Crossville, Tenn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anna Mae Taylor, to the Rev. Joseph A. French, pastor of the Ocean View Congregational-Christian Church. The wedding will take place in Nashville, Tenn., this summer. The bride-elect is a deaconess in the Methodist-Episcopal Church, South, and is a member of the staff at the Vashti School, Thomasville, Ga.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Congregational and Christian Church of Eastern Virginia is to be held in Newport News July 21, 1936.

Our aim is to have the best Convention ever. We can do it. The program is almost complete. We are to have some of the best speakers of our own denomination on the program. We are to have some of the best talent of the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches to give us information and inspiration.

We are asking the pastors and officers of the local churches to comply with the following:

1. Begin now to study the workers' guide for 1935 and 1936 prepared by the convention officials last fall.

2. Get every preacher, officer of the Church, Sunday school any young people's organization, teacher in the Sunday school and delegates to study the guide book and attend the convention.

3. Leave home in time to get to Newport News by ten o'clock and stay until after the night service. One of the best parts of the program will be at night. We will close in time for you to get home before late.

4. See that your Sunday School and Christian Endeavor sends in the report and dues.

5. Come prepared to give your best suggestions for improvements of the work. An opportunity will be given for them.

6. Pray daily for the Christian work as a whole and especially for this particular phase of it. If you will do that I am sure that we will measure up to our expectations.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY, President.

COMMENCEMENT ORATIONS.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Time is now at hand for the annual closing of our schools, for commencements, for graduation. Orators in other days followed the usual line of "inspiration" and led their young hearers upon a mountain top to let them view a land of promise flowing with milk and honey—power, greatness and wealth. It was a crowning day of inspiration for these young people. But what of today? Where are the positions these young men and women can fill? Where may be found the golden opportunity once held up before them by those who had achieved greatness and fortune? Where are the outlets for ambitions that have been mothered in the breasts of our offspring? How shall we answer their questions on these subjects?

For generations we have been preaching the doctrine of utilitarian education. We have pointed out the road to financial success but have not called sufficient attention to the real purpose of education—good citizenship, stronger character, higher altruistic motives, and the building of a happier and more contented society. All too long education has meant the dollar sign, for long have we made the basis of education a means to personal and commercial achievements. It is for this very reason that millions have said: "I am not going to do so and so in life, so why bother with an education?"

Speakers on approaching commencement occasions have their greatest opportunity of stressing education's primary purpose. They have no apologies to make the graduates they face. If speakers measure up to the opportunity afforded them, commencement will have its full significance correctly and rightly portrayed.

CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATION BEGINS TO FUNCTION.

A task to which several hundred men and women of the Southern Christian Church, together with about an equal number of allies in other fields of interest, dedicated themselves in the last two months, is now at the stage where it is beginning to bear tangible, gratifying results. The money is beginning to come in to the $250,000 Development Program fund being raised to put Elon College upon a solid financial footing so that it may continue its splendid record of service to this constituency.

What has been received so far is in the form of advance gifts from the more able contributors, who are being asked to do their part before the campaign proper begins. It will not be long, however, before the whole far-flung campaign organization, embracing the five conferences of the Southern Convention, the alumni centers and the citizens of Alamance County, will be in full action. The Burlington and Alamance County forces, which have undertaken to raise $110,000 of the fund, will be the first to go to work, opening their ten-day effort with a dinner in the First Christian Church in Burlington on Monday evening, May 18th. Before this part of the campaign is over, the drive among the 165 churches, the alumni and others who believe in the type of Christian education which Elon represents, will open on May 26th, continuing until June 2nd.

If the rest of the organization needs a challenge to put forth its best efforts to make the Development Program a success, it surely has it in the Alamance County section. Here persons of all faiths, with institutions of their own to support, are giving their time, effort and money to this cause. The county chairman, R. Homer Andrews, is a Baptist; other prominent places are being taken by a Methodist, a Presbyterian and a Jew. Among the other leaders and workers in the army of approximately 125 members are represented all shades of belief. These people have entered this undertaking because they believe in the work of a college that was founded by the Christian Church.

The Development Program message will be carried to the people of the different Protestant faiths in Burlington in an "Elon Sunday" observance in the churches on May 17th, when it is planned to have speakers present briefly the value of Christian education and the relation which the Development Program bears to it. A similar observance for all the churches of the Southern Convention is being prepared for Sunday, May 24th.

Virtually all gaps in the campaign organization have been filled, Chairman Stanley C. Harrell announces. In the Eastern Virginia Conference Rev. William Redd Turner, of Portsmouth, has been secured as alumni associate chairman for Group 1. Church chairmen added in the Virginia Valley Central Conference are as follows: Palmyra, Clem Mayland, Edinburg; Dry Run, A. C. Boyce, Seven Fountains; Winchester, L. Russell Cather, Winchester. A. L. Hatcher, of Garner, has accepted the chairmanship of Hayes Chapel, in Group 1 of the Eastern North Carolina Conference. Additional church chairmen in Group 2 of this conference are: Catawba Springs, John Murray, Raleigh, R. 3; Bethel, E. C. Smith, New Hill, R. 1; Piney Plains, R. H. Harton, Apex; Pleasant Union, Mrs. M. E. Wilder, Lillington; Wake Chapel, Miss Lora Johnson, Willow Springs; Wentworth, B. L. Brown, Raleigh, R. 3; Christian Light, E. M. Blanchard, Fuquay Springs, R. D. In Group 2, Western North Carolina Conference, the following additional church chairmen were announced: Brown's Chapel, H. B. Sanders, Eagle Springs; Needham's Grove, Henry Scott, Steeds; Seagrove, O. D. Lawrence, Seagrove; Spoon's Chapel, J. L. Hethcock, Asheboro.

SIX THOUSAND HALF-TONES.

An inventory of the cuts of the Home Boards discloses they number approximately 6,000. The filing of these cuts is no small task. Office space must be provided and the inventory was made in connection with the re-arrangement of offices incidental to the renewal of the five-year leases at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

The largest group of cuts is that of church buildings, numbering 1,725. The next largest is that of individuals, numbering 1,400. The American Missionary Association cuts, not including the most recent, number 1,350. The remainder include pictures of colleges, miscellaneous scenes, religious art pictures, special cuts used in the weekly church Calendar Service, cuts of the Commission on Missions, of the National Council and the General Council and cuts from the offices of the Christian Boards at Dayton, O.

EARLY CHURCH CUTS.

The modern development of the use of illustrations in printing has been largely the result of the invention of photo-engraving and the half-tone about 1880 but it was sometime before it came into widespread use. Before that such illustrations as were used by mission boards and other church agencies were limited to zinc or copper line etchings from drawings or steel etchings. Wood cuts or lithographs were used seldom if at all.

The first illustration used in the printing of the agencies which came to be united in the Congregational Church Extension Boards was probably in the first Congregational Year Book published in 1854 by the American Congregational Union (now the Church Building Society). The frontispiece of this Book was a line cut of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y. The Book also had a picture of Plymouth Church, Rochester, N. Y., and of the Seventh Street Church, Cincinnati, O.

It may be surmised that the selection of the Church of the Pilgrims for the frontispiece of the book was not apart from the well-known and sometimes even bitter rivalry which existed between it and Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, both located within a few blocks of each other. Dr. Richard S. Storrs, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, was a member of the central or continuing committee of the Albany Convention, 1852, which brought about the organization of the American Congregational Union.

Also it could hardly have been a mere "happencence" that in the Year Book's list of churches from which had come $60,000 in response to the initial appeal of the Union, the Church of the Pilgrims should appear as the largest contributor with $2,702 and Plymouth Church next with $2,700. Dr. Henry Ward Beecher of Plymouth Church was not on the central committee.

In the early Year Books and their immediate successor, The Congregational Quarterly, line cuts of churches and ministers became generously used.

In The Home Missionary, the monthly magazine of the American (later Congregational) Home Missionary Society, previous to 1893 very rarely was a picture used. In the May number of that year, (No. 1, Vol. LXVI), was an announcement about that magazine's "entire new suit of clothes,"—more highly calendared paper, new cover, new type faces and its first half-tone illustrations. The first half-tone was of the Mormon Temple, Salt Lake City, Utah, which with three other half-tones went with an article on missionary work in Utah. The next issue had an article with half-tones on California. Line cuts were also used. The number of illustrations after a few issues, however, dropped and for a time almost ceased. But by 1900 pictures had reappeared in increased numbers and continued plentifully thereafter until The Home Missionary was merged with The American Missionary.

BETTER PICTORIAL QUALITY.

If comparison is made in the pictorial quality of the magazine by five-year periods, a steady advance is to be noted. The types of pictures and their reproductions as now used in The Missionary Herald with which The American Missionary was merged in 1934 are easily seen to be superior to those of 1930 and 1925, while with the pictures of earlier half-decades the differences are so great that comparisons become only contrasts.

Of the 6,000 cuts now in the file of the Home Boards, only a very few are old line etchings and probably none back of 1897 when the various Congregational New York offices, or "rooms" as they were often called, were moved from the Bible House at Astor Place to their present location in the United Charities Building at 287 Fourth Avenue.

Few if any of the half-tones now filed date back of 1907 when the Church Building Society adopted a system of numbering, cataloguing and filing that continued until 1926. The majority of the cuts are since 1920 when the Congregational World Movement in connection with the Inter-church World Movement brought about a "boom" in the use of illustrations by church agencies.

IMPERISHABLE RECORDS.

The consolidating of the Home Boards cuts in a single filing system has been in progress over a period of three years. Old cuts have not been rashly discarded. The first thought has been to get the cuts assembled and classified together in order that they may be surveyed as a whole before attempting to establish a policy for appraising the historical value which should be the basis for permanent preservation after the immediate timeliness of the picture had passed.

An important reason for carefully considering the disposal of these copper and zinc plates is that in an era of ephemeral materials they constitute an imperishable record. It is said that today we are leaving no records for future ages as enduring as the monuments and papyri of Egypt. Certainly if the future is to recover one of our autos it will not be from an auto "graveyard" where rust is the complete victor in a few months. But leaving aside the interests of future ages, most of our present calendared paper and machine-finished paper as well as news print from sulphite wood pulp will crumble within the time of this generation. While the linen rag paper of the century-old bound volumes of annual reports of the American Home Missionary Society seem as strong today as when first printed. Most of the books, magazines and reports being printed today will not exist a few years hence.

With the pictorial records of the half-tones it will be different. In some respects, too, the pictorial record is more revealing than the printed word. Processes of printing may be expected to change and half-tones as we know them may become outmoded. But nevertheless they will continue to hold a permanent record as imperishable and enduring as any whereby the history of mankind has been preserved. After the stone-carved mountains on which our American history is being emblazoned have disintegrated, the tiny dots of the half-tone whose etching is measured by instruments of precision in thousandths of an inch, will be discovered to reveal in original freshness the lights and shadows, the lines and modeling of landscapes, buildings and people. Because of the unique permanent character of the cuts as compared with all other forms of current records, the determination of the basis for permanent Home Boards filing has been reserved until it should be felt that judgment on the matter has matured.

Dr. Storrs was pastor of the Church of the Pilgrim, Brooklyn, N. Y., from 1846 to 1889. He died in 1900. He was one of the founders of The Independent in 1848, which for many years was a prominent religious weekly. The last editor was Dr. Hamilton Holt, now president of Rollins College, Florida. The Independent became merged with The New Outlook under the editorship of Alfred E. Smith. The Church of the Pilgrims, organized 1844, was the first and "mother" Congregational church in Brooklyn.

During Dr. Storrs' pastorate practically all the other Congregational churches of the Borough became organized as its daughters, grand-daughters and great grand-daughters. In 1934 it united with its oldest daughter, Plymouth Church, organized 1847, to form "The Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims," of which Dr. Stanley Durkee is the pastor.

We have reached in the United States a point in our history like that in the story of Robinson Crusoe when he discovered a footprint on the sand. Those who can lift their eyes from their own profit-making long enough to discover anything, have discovered, not the footprint of one man, but the footprint of 120,000,000 people. The social experience of our present decade has made it painfully and tragically clear that a social and economic order adequate to furnish national security must be one based on the welfare of the 120,000,000.—Halford E. Luccock.

The church is the brotherhood divine of every race and creed who love the Father.—Cadman.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE LOCAL CHURCH.

There is a local church. And that local church has its problems. The most pitiable plight that a pastor, or a church, can be in is that of not seeing or realizing a problem. There is nothing quite as dangerous as the foe that is unseen, the danger that is not discerned.

The city church has its problems and the rural church has its problems; and the pastor that is indifferent or unconcerned about these problems is dangerous and hurtful.

In our recent Convention at Burlington, time and again it was declared that there was a rural church problem and that the local church needed the attention of the Convention. That is outstanding truth.

It so happens that the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, as a body, recognizes this fact and is seeking to emphasize it and to bring it out in the open and to do something about it. I quote a recent letter from the Secretary of the Council telling of a national preaching mission which is to be conducted for three months next Fall, beginning in mid-September, the object being to reach every church of every denomination in the United States and bring to the consciousness of the pastor and the church both the needs and the problems that confront them. The secretary of the Council says:

"One of the major outcomes was the decision to promote the holding of a simultaneous eight-day preaching mission—from Sunday to Sunday—in local parishes of all denominations throughout the country in November. Each of the twenty-five cities to which the National Mission goes is also urged to develop a state-wide preaching mission covering other important cities. In these ways it is hoped that two important results will be achieved: first, the influence of the Preaching Mission will be nation-wide instead of being confined to the larger centers of population; second, the values of the Mission will be conserved by being rooted in the work of the local church."

The question arises as to what we, of our churches, will do about this. Shall we be indifferent and unconcerned? Or shall some steps be taken unitedly to consider the problems, to bring home to the attention of our churches that difficulties that confront them, and the issues at stake in their very life and existence? We are told, and truthfully that church life is running at low ebb; that pews are empty, and amusements are crowded, on the Sabbath; that moral standards have been torn down, and that soul-winning for Christ is at a discount.

Indeed a moral and spiritual awakening is essential and desperately needed. What will the local church, pastor, leaders and laymen do about it?

J.O.A.

UNITED PROTESTANT CHURCH.

The three branches of Methodism—Methodist Episcopal (North), Methodist Episcopal, South, and Methodist Protestants—are making an heroic effort to unite in their General Conference now in session at Columbus, Ohio. Whatever this General Conference may do will have to be ratified in the Conferences of the three bodies before the same becomes effective. The process and the plan seem to be working toward results, though not without some division of opinion and opposition. It so happens that Rev. Ivan Lee Holt of St. Louis is president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and is himself a Methodist. His plea for the unification of Methodism seems to have been quite logical, very forceful and generously approved and applauded. Dr. Holt feels that the unification, which the Methodists are discussing, is "only the beginning of a process." He is hopeful of results far beyond the decision of his own church. His words and plea are so significant and sound—so very much like arguments we heard when our Congregational-Christian merger was being advocated, that we cannot forego giving some excerpts from his appeal to his General Conference at Columbus:

"Some of the leaders see in the distance one great Protestant church, such as was formed in Canada," he said. "Even beyond the united Protestantism may come a united Christianity, a union of all Protestant faiths with the great Catholic churches."

Mr. Holt said that with unification of the Methodist churches approved the "dream we have all had of one great Protestant church comes closer to realization."

I rejoice in the action you took with reference to unification, but I hope there is not a person in the conference who thinks that is an end in itself," he said. "It is merely the beginning of a process, and I am hoping that when that uniting conference comes together (to form the United Methodist church) one of the things done will be the creation of a commission to work on plans for a still larger Protestant union."

"We can never be satisfied, and we can certainly never meet the evils of our contemporary life as long as we are separated after the present manner."

The federation president said "we have come to a time when the evils in this world are too great for any sort of a divided church."

"If you want an illustration of what a united church can do just remember when you, like other denominations, preached against the evils of motion pictures and got nowhere," he said. "But, when the Roman Catholic church decided it was time for reformation the reformation in motion pictures came."

Mr. Holt told the conference five international groups were already at work with final union of all Christian groups as their goal.

This may be a dream of Dr. Holt's, but many will say of this as his brethren said of Joseph: "And we shall see what will become of his dreams." (Genesis 37:20.)

SEEKING GOD.

We must not forget that ours is a seeking Saviour. "For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." Throughout the gospels we are commanded to seek Him and are taught that He is seeking us. This in truth is the essential difference between our sacred Book, the Bible, and the so-called sacred books of pagan peoples. Our Book reveals God seeking man; other and pagan books reveal man seeking God. It is not the natural and uppermost desire of man to know God. This for the reason that man is by nature and inclination sinful, and sin makes man turn from God and strive to hide himself from his Creator. We agree with this statement from the Sunday School Times:

"It is only a pleasant fiction to say that the whole world is hungering after God. Would God that it were so! Men like to ring the changes on this, and even Christian teachers tell us that in every man there is an 'upward urge' after God. A Christian magazine has published the statement: 'The signs are thickening fast that the world, disappointed with its grand policies and enfeebled with its philosophies, is beginning to long for something like this,—that is, for the heavenly Father. But God tells us something very different. When Adam and Eve had sinned, they hid themselves from the presence of their Lord God,—he was the last person they wanted to see.'"

Man has ever been ashamed of God when he has sinned.

How can men be seeking God who are desecrating His Holy Sabbath pleasure seeking? How can men be seeking God when they pack the gambling dens and resorts? The great God of heaven is not found in such places. How can men be seeking God when the temples of worship—houses of God—are vacant and pews are empty on the Holy Sabbath? If God is to find us, we must be willing to be found of Him and to seek Him where He seeks us, viz:—On bended knee before Him confessing our sins and pleading for His presence and forgiveness and for mercy. Yea, verily, God is seeking, but we, too, must seek if we must find Him and seek Him where He can be found.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR DUKE SUMMER SCHOOLS.

There will be available for the Duke Summer Rural Church School ten scholarships of $10.00 each from a fund furnished by the Church Extension Boards, and distributed through Dr. Malcolm Dana, Secretary of the Town and Country Department of the Extension Boards. These scholarships are supposed to be for pastors of rural or village churches and are to enable such pastors to attend who otherwise might not be able to do so. Those who are interested in the matter can communicate either with Dr. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, or with Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke School of Religion. E. C. GILLETTE.

REPORT OF EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN SUN.(To Southern Convention April 30, 1936.)*

The Convention two years ago elected as editor of THE SUN, J. O. Atkinson; associate editor, Dr. E. C. Gillette; contributing editors: Dr. I. W. Johnson and Dr. Elisha A. King. In addition to this list, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Norfolk, Va., has supplied each week the "Sunday School Lesson"; Rev. F. C. Lester, Norfolk, Va., the "Youth Fellowship" page; Chaplain H. E. Rountree, U. S. N., the "Family Altar" page; Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., Suffolk, Va., "The Sun's Pulpit," and Supt. Chas. D. Johnston, the "Christian Orphanage" column. These associates have shown the utmost spirit of cooperation in the work of supplying copy for THE SUN, and the results have been gratifying and constructive to our fellowship. It has been a real pleasure to be associated with this staff. We have sought, through the efforts of these associates and through those who have contributed to THE SUN, to keep our readers advised of the work of the institutions and churches within the bounds, not only of the Southern Convention but of the Convention of the Southwest, and more recently to the entire fellowship through the contributions weekly of Mr. Herbert D. Rugg, publicity secretary of our General Council.

The Central Publishing Company, John T. Kernodle, Manager, has certainly been faithful in bringing the paper out on time each week for 51 weeks of the year and has given a paper which, in mechanical make-up and appearance, is most highly commendable.

Some weeks since your editor notified the Committee on Nominations that he would not be subject to re-election as editor, expressing the hope as well as the conviction that the time had come for another and a more capable hand to take up this work. Your present editor has served in this capacity in all a period of 28 years. He was elected editor at the Franklin, Va., Convention in 1900 and began his work in this capacity on May 15th of that year. He served continuously for a period of 16 years, resigning at the Convention which met in Burlington, May 2, 1916. During this period of 16 years he carried the editorship and the publication of THE SUN without cost to the Convention or charges on the Convention for his services. On the death of former editor, Dr. J. P. Barrett, viz: May, 1924, he was elected as editor without salary and has served for twelve consecutive years without cost or charges to the Convention. And now I know no words more fitting than those I gave to the Convention, assembled here in Burlington in 1916, and so I quote from the words accompanying my resignation at that time:

"In conclusion I cannot now refrain from adding a personal word. For eight consecutive terms, a period of sixteen years (and now I can add six more consecutive terms, a period of twelve years, and now I again quote) you have graciously favored and highly honored me in re-electing me as your editor. This continued mark of confidence and esteem on your part is appreciated beyond all measure, and I am grateful beyond words, though I have all the while been sensible of the fact that I neither merited nor was worthy of such high approval and brotherly love. My sense of gratitude is the more marked on this account. I thank you, my brethren and beloved, for your constant generosity to me, during all the years of my service as editor." (That ends the quotation.)

I assure you that my successor, whoever he is, shall have my heartiest cooperation and continued loyalty, and while I am blessed with health, it will be a privilege, as well as a joy, to make such contribution to the columns of THE SUN as may be within my power. While I have not been rewarded financially for the services rendered, since none was promised, desired or expected, the rewards of a wide acquaintance and a deep fellowship and the consciousness of duty done for my church and the kingdom have sufficiently compensated and more than rewarded me for any or all efforts I have put forth as your editor.

Respectfully submitted,
J. O. ATKINSON, Editor.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON REVISION.(To Southern Convention April 30, 1936.)*

The General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, in its biennial session two years ago, recommended a revision of the Manual for Congregational-Christian Churches throughout the United States and our fellowship generally. Your Committee on revising the "Principles and Government" in use by our Southern Convention has, through its chairman, worked with Dr. Charles E. Burton, secretary of the General Council, who is charged with the work of revising the Manual for the General Council, and furnished Dr. Burton for his use a copy of our Manual and such other information and suggestions as seemed feasible. The Manual for the Congregational-Christian Churches is now in proof form and is undergoing corrections in the proof for printing of the volume at an early date. This Manual will be a book of 281 pages and will, in all probability, be sold at a price not less than $1.25, possibly $2.00 a volume. The chairman of your committee has recently read with interest the proof of this book and, in addition to making suggestions as to some minor changes, finds that the general Manual will be quite adaptable to our united fellowship and will not seriously conflict with the prevailing customs, principles and government of our churches and Conferences in the Southern Convention.

In the light of the above facts, your committee recommends:

1st. That our "Principles and Government," as revised and printed in 1922, be printed and offered for sale at a cost not to exceed 50c the copy. However, this re-print should have only certain technical changes, mainly in terminology, especially as the book will relate itself now to our united fellowship in the Convention—the book now bearing the name of "Principles and Government of the Christian Church" to bear the title of "Principles and Government of Congregational-Christian Churches," with official forms and ceremonies for the churches of the Conference composing the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches.

2nd. That we follow the customs and principles as stated in this book in our local affairs, in so far as they do not legally, or otherwise, conflict with the larger and more general manual; these customs to obtain as at present, as, for instance, the licensure and ordination of ministers by the local Conferences, since these customs seem to work well and be approved by our fellowship generally or changed as may be desired by any church or Conference.

3rd. That the right to print such a book be given to the publishers of The Christian Sun, or to a person or publishing company, approved by your Committee on Publications, the same to be printed without charges to this Convention—the person or company printing the book to have the privileges of sale in order to repay the cost of printing and distributing.

The opinion of your committee is that such a book will pay for itself and will be widely used, since it is much in demand and very many will use this book at 50c the copy who will not buy the larger Manual, which, because of its size, must of necessity be sold at a greater price than the smaller book.

We suggest that an outline in such detail as may seem helpful of the constitution for the local church be added and that such constitution be respectfully recommended to all our pastors and churches.

Respectfully submitted,
J. O. ATKINSON, Chairman.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Through an oversight the Secretary of the Convention failed to send the last page of the Report of the Committee on Finance to be printed in THE SUN last week. As a matter of information and great importance items No. 14 to No. 18 inclusive are herewith printed as follows:

"14. That the Executive Board be authorized to borrow a sufficient sum, not exceeding $2,000, to cover the present overdraft of $466.39 in the Convention Fund, and to pay any balance due from the Convention Fund to The Central Publishing Company, on the contract for printing THE CHRISTIAN SUN to July 1, 1936, pledging a prior claim on the 1936 Conference payments to the Convention Fund as collateral for a note on this account to be executed by the President and Treasurer of the Convention."

"15. That hereafter no overdrafts be made on any of the Funds of the Convention in the hands of the Treasurer."

"16. That the words 'for each year' in item No. 3, page 26 of the Committee on Finance, adopted by the 1934 session of the Convention, be understood as applying to the contract period July 1st, 1934 to July 1st, 1936."

"17. That item No. 2, page 34 (addenda) 1934 session be understood to apply to the plan of making and distributing the Conference Apportionments for the year 1934."

"18. That the goals of The Christian Orphanage and The Women's Missionary Convention be recognized by the churches as a part of the Convention goals on the basis of their respective apportionments to the Conferences and to the churches, and that they be carried in the Statistical Tables of the Conferences and included in the total missionary and benevolent giving of the Convention."

Item "16" is intended to clarify the section referred to in the 1934 session. Anyone who has had any experience in preparing reports dealing with financial plans will understand the difficulty of expressing a plan in words which cannot be misunderstood. The Convention year runs from May 1st to May 1st; the Conference year runs in most cases from October to October; the contract for printing THE SUN runs from July 1st to July 1st. This section, as now interpreted, makes it clear that the Convention action of 1934 anticipated two payments (or a payment each year) during the biennium 1934-1936—by The Convention, The Orphanage, The Mission Board, the Board of Religious Education, and Elon College on the 1934-1936 contract for printing THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The question has been often asked: "Why do these departments and institutions pay a part of the contract for printing THE SUN?" Here is the answer to that question. For a number of years the minimum deficit has been $4,000 per year. The Convention cannot issue THE SUN without paying this deficit. The Convention Fund, or a Publication fund could be apportioned to the Conferences and churches to care for this deficit. This would require a minimum apportionment of $7,500 for this purpose if it is included in the Convention Fund. The churches will not pay this amount through the Convention Fund. Last year the Apportionment was $5,000, and the Conferences only paid in $3,886.19 after much insistence that this Fund be paid in full by the churches. By vote of the Convention $1,554 of this should have been sent to the General Council. The Convention current expenses will average about $300 per year. This would leave about $2,000 to pay on THE SUN contract from the Convention Fund. Up to date the churches have been unwilling to pay the Convention Fund in full each year. Under such conditions the Convention turned in other directions for sufficient funds to continue the publication of THE SUN. The Departments of the Convention and the Institutions owned by the Convention cannot continue to function without a church paper. If the constituency of the Convention would subscribe for THE SUN and give the paper their prompt financial support, it would not be necessary for any Department to contribute to an annual deficit of large proportions.

In passing it should be said that the Convention ordered that hereafter no subscriber be carried on the mailing list if in arrears more than twelve months on the subscription. More about the Convention later. I. W. JOHNSON.

COMMENCEMENT, 1936.

Elon College always opens its Fall Term the first week in September, one to three weeks earlier than the average college. Opening earlier means we close earlier. The approaching commencement begins Friday night, May 22nd, with the Smith Oratorical Contest and closes Wednesday, May 27th, with the graduation exercises. Commencement is always an interesting occasion at Elon. There are many attractive features on our commencement program. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered Sunday, May 24th, at eleven-thirty. Dr. Charles F. Myers, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Greensboro, North Carolina, will deliver the sermon. Dr. Myers is one of the most popular ministers in the State of North Carolina. He will have a great audience to greet him on Sunday morning.

The baccalaureate address will be delivered by the President Sunday evening at eight o'clock. The topic will be "The New Citizen for the New World."

Class Day exercises, exhibits of various kinds, musical programs will feature the entire commencement.

Alumni Day, a new feature of commencement at Elon College, will be observed Tuesday. Hon. J. O. Atkinson of Greensboro is president of the Association and will preside at the business meeting, the alumni assembly and at the banquet. In order to provide lunch for all who attend a barbecue dinner will be served on the campus free to all alumni and friends of the college. At eleven o'clock Dr. H. Shelton Smith, an alumnus of the college now head of the Department of Religion at Duke, will speak. At seven-thirty Dean P. E. Lindley of High Point College will deliver the regular alumni address. Following Dean Lindley's address the alumni march will be participated in by all alumni ending at the banquet hall in West Dormitory. If the weather permits the entire campus will be lighted with Japanese lanterns as of last year. The lanterns present a most colorful and attractive picture.

The Board of Trustees will meet in annual session Wednesday, May 27th, at nine-thirty, at which time degrees will be awarded to graduates. The graduating class numbers 38. This class represents the class entering in 1932, which was the smallest enrollment of the college for years. The literary address will be delivered by Honorable Cameron Morrison of Charlotte, North Carolina. Mr. Morrison is ex-governor of North Carolina and ex-United States senator. He is known throughout the country and will bring an inspiring address on this occasion.

The classes of '96, '06, '16 and '26 are urged to hold their class reunions as a part of the commencement program. It is hoped that every member of the above classes will make a special effort to be present. Rooms in Alamance Hall will be assigned for reunion exercises and will be designated as class rooms throughout commencement.

This commencement is of particular interest to all Elon graduates and former students. We will be in the midst of the Development Program for the purpose of freeing the college of its debts and providing for other necessary emergencies. Please be advised one and all that there will be no public solicitation of contributions for the college on any commencement occasion. Of course, it is hoped that everyone who has received benefit from the college either directly or indirectly will make a substantial contribution to the campaign but there will be no high pressure method to secure subscriptions during the commencement. This is an occasion on which we invite all who are interested in the college to come and enjoy the hospitality that we offer, take part on our program, and observe what is being accomplished on the campus. We are hoping for a large attendance.

L. E. SMITH.

SANFORD AND SHALLOW WELL.

The work in the Sanford and Shallow Well Parish goes along nicely under the leadership of their minister, Rev. F. Ervin Hyde. Since his arrival in the field last September he has been busy reorganizing the work. New interest is being shown and the work is progressing nicely.

Four new members have been received into the membership of the Shallow Well Church. The enterprises of the church are being presented at the present time. Mrs. Scott Thomas and a committee are at work to try and help Shallow Well to do its part in the Elon Development Program. Plans are also under way for the Annual Memorial Day Service to be held on May 9th. Rev. Ronald Wall, Pastor of the Baptist Church of Sanford and Rev. W. C. Wicker, Elon College will be the speakers for the day. This is always a great day for the folks of the Shallow Well Church.

Sanford's newest organization is a World Friendship Club made up of about 35 young people between the ages of 16-27. The organization was formed on March 6th. Miss Bessie Mawver, Pres., Jack McEver, Vice President and Estelle Foushee, Secretary and Treasurer, formed the Executive Committee with Rev. F. Ervin Hyde and Miss Hattie Way as counselors. Two interesting features of this new work is the fact that the organization is made up of as many boys as girls and that one-half of all the money raised by this group shall be devoted to missions. There are monthly dues in addition to certain projects for raising money. Already the group has presented the play: "When Farmer Brown Comes to Himself," a splendid play with an appeal for tithing. At the request of the Shallow Well Church the play was repeated April 26th at the evening service to a packed house. Members of this organization accepted the responsibility for raising the funds for the helper in our evangelistic meetings in March.

March 22nd to April 2nd were days of inspiration to those who attended the evening services and heard the splendid messages of song brought by Rev. Henry Lewis of Jackson, Miss. Mr. Lewis, a Divinity student at Duke University, sang his way into the hearts of the people. The

REPORT OF BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention corresponds to the departments of Leadership Training and of Young People's Work of our denomination. The past biennium has not been the best in the history of the Board, but we have sought to do faithful service under the existing conditions.

In the field of leadership training, we have conducted the Summer School at Elon, aided in promoting training schools in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Newport News. At other places our people have shared in cooperative schools with other denominations and have conducted training classes in their own local churches usually with aid from our Board. Our records indicate that more than 500 people have been in these schools and that two-thirds of them have received credit for work accomplished. The school at Elon last year was combined with the Blue Ridge Summer Conference which had been conducted by the Congregationalists. This was a happy union of our training force, and we had practically 100 more people present than were at Elon the summer before. Quite a number of people have borrowed leadership training books to read personally and have thus increased their abilities as leaders although they have received no credit for this work.

Vacation Church Schools were aided in several places through personal consultation and the loan of books and materials. It was our pleasure to send two workers last summer to aid in the vacation schools at Fancy Gap and Elk Spur.

The Young People's work has made real progress. In this church, four years ago, the young people requested admission into the Southeast Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches as a department of young people to be known as Youth Fellowship, and were admitted. There are now Youth Fellowship organizations in each of the five conferences within this Southern Convention, but there is no Southern Convention Youth Fellowship organization. Lanson Granger, one of our young ministers of this Convention, is president of the Southeast Youth Fellowship which includes all of the Fellowships in this Convention and those in Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida. Last year they met in their biennial session in connection with the Southeast Convention which was held in Raleigh, North Carolina. At the Elon Summer School they had a special class to study their work, and representatives from every conference in Elon territory were present. At Christmas time last year they hold an excellent conference at Winter Park, Florida, with representatives from every state in the Southeast Convention present. Their work now is quite well organized and is making considerable progress.

The Board of Christian Education maintains an office at 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Va., and seeks in every possible way to aid the churches in leadership training and to encourage and guide the young people in their work. Funds will not permit us to have a field worker, which is badly needed; however, the records indicate that workers for the Board have traveled considerably more than 10,000 miles during the past two years. A large number of churches call on us for aid with special programs of all kinds. We are delighted to furnish materials or to direct people to where materials can be secured. We have accumulated quite a little library on religious education. These books are always available to those who want to read at no cost to the individual except return postage. Most of our work is personal correspondence with leaders concerning their individual problems.

Five hundred and eighty-five Bibles and New Testaments, supplied to us by a young business man, have been distributed through the churches, mostly to ten-year-old children. These books are free for the asking, and we would be delighted to distribute a much larger number. We are limited in this distribution only by the number of requests which come to us.

The treasurer's report shows the amount of money we have received and how it has been spent. The Convention authorized us to receive funds from Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions, a special annual offering from the Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor societies, and a small percentage from Conference Apportionments. It has been our pleasure to aid all five of the Sunday School conventions with their programs, and in turn each convention has contributed to the Board all the money received with the exception of the necessary amount to carry on their work. You will note from the totals that the amount received by the Board is entirely inadequate for us to do effective work. We have had an office secretary who has given full time at the rate of $5.00 per week. A Church that pays such a salary can hardly say much concerning wages paid by industry. The Chairman of the Board gives half or more of his time to the work with a salary of $25.00 per month. It has been our desire to put back into the churches in service as much as possible, but oftentimes the work has been crippled because we did not have sufficient funds with which to work. The Sunday school conventions do not feel that they can raise more money, and pastors and superintendents are quite convinced that they should not be called on for offerings other than those for Missions and the Orphanage monthly and Elon College quarterly, and the annual offerings for these same purposes. As the Board sees it, this means that if we are to have sufficient funds with which to work it will be necessary for us to receive a larger percentage of Conference Apportionments.

We believe that religious education will have to be emphasized before our churches grow. Unless the Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor societies, and young people's organizations become effective; unless the churches have a program of education that will reach and inspire the people in our churches, there is little hope for us making much progress. The Board of Christian Education respectfully requests the Southern Convention to reconsider its financial program in the light of the needs of the religious education which will build up the local churches in our Convention.

If we could have vacation schools, leadership training schols and cleses, more direction for young people's work, conferences for superintendents, institutes on evangelism, and personal visitation with pastors, superintendents, and leaders in the local churches, it is easy to believe that a new day would dawn in the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. But unless there is more money available for this work it will be impossible to do more than aid a little her and there those who are most interested and leave the uninterested to go on in their discouraging way.

We are eager to serve, and the need is exceedingly great. It is within the power of this Convention to say what shall be done, and the members of the present Board are eager that those who shall be elected at this Convention may be encouraged to undertake in a larger way than we have been able to do in the past.

Respectfully submitted,

F. C. LESTER, Chairman.

AN EVENING PRAYER.

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Dear Lord, I bring this day
In prayer to Thee.
O may Thy pard'ning grace
Now fall on me.
Then shall my wayward heart
Lose every fear
In the sweet consciousness
That Thou art near.

And when tomorrow's hours
Upon me break,
May I through all the day
Live for Thy sake;
Then shall my love and strength
For others given,
Bring me at last to serve
With Thee in heaven.

Our disbursements to Foreign Missions (including Puerto Rico) through the American Board of Commissioners:

April 1, 1934 to April 1, 1935 .....	$ 5,805.93
April 1, 1935 to April 1, 1936 .....	6,567.69

In addition to the above, we have received and have now transmitted since April 1, 1936:

To Foreign Missions .....	$ 1,325.00
---------------------------	-------------

Our Foreign work is administered by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, on which we have representatives, this being the oldest Mission Board in America and now in its 125th year. This Board has suffered severely in its income and in its ability to employ and keep the work going for the past two years.

Our report two years ago showed that the Board had 622 missionaries on the field, but the report for the present year shows only 494 missionaries in active service; and, whereas, we reported two years ago 6,520 native workers, the report for this year shows 6,033 native workers. There was an increase during the past two years in the number of native churches from 740 to 765 and an increase in membership from 1,253 to 1,303, with an increase in pupils of about 10,000. The natives in our foreign fields raised the past year $927,178.00 for the support of the churches and mission work. Our missionaries were at work in India, China, Japan, Africa, Turkey, the Philippines, Bulgaria, Ceylon, Micronesia, Mexico. Our Puerto Rico work is an integral part of Home Missions.

Our Mountain Work.

During the past two years Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom have been in charge of our work in Carroll County, Va., and under their faithful and efficient leadership the work has been maintained and shows growth. We have two organized churches—Elk Spur, with 66 members, and Rocky Ford, with 64 members, each with a well-organized Sunday school, the former with 72 pupils, the latter with 116 pupils. These two churches are this year pledged to pay on the support of their pastor, $120.00 on salary. We have also opened a new preaching place and organized a Sunday school at Ivy Hill—six miles from Elk Spur. Preaching is maintained and a Sunday School conducted in a school-house, most of the pupils in this school never having attended a Sunday school before. It is a section that needs the Christian gospel and Christian Education and seems to give good promise for a permanent organization.

Meeting Obligations.

Paying obligations previously made are never as inspiring as initiating new work and opening up new fields of service. It has fallen on your Board to stand by churches that had obligations to which pledges in previous years had been made, that these churches might be kept open and going. This was as essential and as constructive as new undertakings are, but not as appealing. Your Board has sought to exercise all discretion and wisdom it could command in discharging our obligations, laboring always with the thought in view of sustaining and building up the kingdom of our Lord as the same was entrusted to us. We appreciate the loyalty which some of our Sunday schools and many of our churches, and our Woman Missionary Societies, have manifested in these trying times, for only through such loyalty and their liberality were we able to meet, even to the extent we have done, our obligations and to carry on the work entrusted to us.

Owing to conditions that no one could anticipate, appeal and necessity came to us from our Richmond Church, and it seemed absolutely essential, for this year, at least, for your Board to assist in the current expense of the church, if the church was to be kept opened and going.

A most encouraging sign in our work is that during the biennium several of our churches burdened with building debts have been able to materially reduce the same, and some of these churches to whom your Board was pledged have generously suggested compromise for the sake of immediate payments, which, in every instance, we have been glad to meet and to discharge. We have had to face difficulties and problems during the biennium, which we have earnestly sought to meet, and we feel that the church, in a measure, at least, recognizes these facts, since the actual income to the Board the past two years shows an increase of $1,337.30 over that of the previous biennium.

We realize fully that through Missions we are trying to exalt the name of our Lord and to give Him a chance at saving the lives and souls of those who are less favored with the gospel than we ourselves are.

We sincerely trust that before the present year closes we will be able to give encouragement to points that need and are calling for our help, since we believe that our united fellowship has a real mission and a real message for the world. The church lives by growing, and we grow by adding new congregations and organizations, and to these the Board looks, because from these, new assets are added to every enterprise and institution of the church. Only as the mission work can add new congregations and organizations to our roster of churches, can the various benevolent enterprises of the church have new and added fields for their appeal and service.

It may be added that our Church Extension Board, headquarters, New York, Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, Secretary, is now thoroughly identified in its work within the bounds of our Convention, and the money they appropriate to the churches comes through and is administered by our Board. In this way, and from this source, we are now helping and have on our list Asheville Church; Albemarle Church; Sophia Pastorate; Niagara Church; Winston-Salem Church; all in North Carolina, and Circular Church, Charleston, S. C. It may be added for information that all the former Congregational Churches in the Carolinas are now members and constituent parts of the Conferences of this Convention.

Respectfully submitted,

J. E. WEST, Chairman,

J. O. ATKINSON, Secretary.

TINGLING WITH EAGERNESS TO SERVE CHINA.

By EDWARD H. HUME, M. D.
of Shanghai, China.

No one who has been attending conferences of Christian educators in China could fail to realize that there was a new atmosphere about the 1936 conference at Shanghai. Many of the old faces were there and their personalities were as vivid and alluring as ever. Among the new friends was President S. T. Liu of Cheeloo University, who made many understand how eagerly he is working to bring to his university an understanding of the part it should play in the total program of higher education.

Among new elements present in the conference was a new concern for China's welfare. In earlier years military training had been discussed, but this year the theme uppermost in the minds of those present has been that of aiding the student body to find expression for its patriotism in soundly constructive ways. There was a conviction that China must defend herself if need should arise and that students and faculty alike must take part in the defense that might be required. There was long discussion of ways in which emergency training might be given without delay. There was conviction in the group that self-restraint and moral courage were likely to be as much needed as military training.

Every president and every professor in attendance at the conference represented a college whose atmosphere is tingling with eagerness to serve China. Every faculty felt that it should lead the student body in preparation for service and in making that service of a richer sort. It was apparent that the delegates had come from institutions where all were discovering the meaning of human companionship.

How many times I wished that many in Europe and America could have been present, to see for themselves the responsibility for guidance of the Christian Colleges! Our Chinese friends have wise control. Their knowledge and devotion are going to fashion instruments of education and character-building that no western group could have fashioned alone. There is wisdom enough in the Christian groups in China to place new confidence in them, both as to the shaping of policy and the facing of difficulties that arise in the course of a year's work.

I felt throughout the conference and after it was over that I had been sitting with men and women of deep spiritual life.

These are educators to be sure, but they are human beings knit together in an understanding friendship, in a consciousness of their own weakness and in a desire to enter the open door of opportunity that now faces them with a new challenge.

REPORT OF BOARD OF SUPERANNUATION.

(To Southern Convention April 30, 1936.)

During the biennium, now closing, we have worked unitedly with the Board of Ministerial Relief of our Congregational-Christian Churches, Dr. Lewis T. Reed, Secretary, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York. Dr. Reed has shown every consideration in seeking to promote our work, to care for the funds forwarded him and to send checks promptly upon recommendation of your Board. We regret to note that the Christmas offering the past year fell below that of the previous year. We hardly know how to account for this, except that the weather prevented congregations and church service in many parts of our territory at the time the offering should have been taken. However, we now have ministerial relief in our Apportionment Table, as adopted by this Convention two years ago, and our hope is that this apportionment will be fully met by the Conference. May I again reiterate the fact that this is a real benevolence, and that no fund contributed to is more worthily bestowed than the grants thru benevolence to our superannuates. Our great need is for more funds that the faithful, who have spent their strength and energy on small salaries, shall be cared for in their years of feebleness and when they are unable physically to carry forward the work.

We have invited Dr. Reed to be with us in this session in order that he may bring to us a full realization of the magnanimous work our united fellowship is doing and is seeking to do through this channel of helpfulness. Our ministers need to get in line for benefits from the Annuity and the Pilgrim Fund, but this can only be done by the cooperation of the churches with the ministers. This item is to be more fully explained by Dr. Reed.

The present Board was organized June 4, 1934, since which time the following grants were voted and paid:

July 1, 1934—December 31, 1934:

Your Board meets and orders grants to be sent out July first and about December 20th of each year. Our credits in the New York office at present are $746.50. Since the grants made in December, total $970.00, and an equal amount should be on hand for the grants that should be voted July first, we heartily recommend that the practice now obtaining in some churches be adopted by all our churches, viz:—An offering for this fund on Communion Sunday, and that the same be forwarded soon thereafter as possible either to Dr. Lewis T. Reed, Secretary, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, or to the chairman to be appointed by this Convention of your Board of Superannuation. All of which is respectfully submitted.

THE PRESENT STATE OF CONVENTION ENTERPRISES.

By the President, REV. S. C. HARRELL, D. D.,
To Southern Convention.

1. The most imperative need facing the Convention at the present time, is to insure the future of Elon College by making the Campaign which is now under way a success.

2. To devise ways and means whereby the weaker churches of the Convention may be shown how to make the most of the resources and opportunities that are theirs.

3. In order to accomplish number 2 it would appear that the Convention should have a promotional secretary, whose duty should be to endeavor to make the Convention's program effective in every local church.

4. There is a woeful lack of unity among the various agencies and institutions of the Convention. It is a most difficult question to decide how this situation may be overcome, and mutual understanding and cooperation effected between the Convention's several agencies. The following suggestions are submitted for the consideration of the Convention: (a) That during the year wherein the Convention does not meet, the various boards arrange to meet simultaneously, holding one session in which all the boards shall meet together and consider jointly the problems of the individual boards and the Convention work as a whole. (b) That the Convention provide for a representative committee which shall meet annually, canvas the situation relative to the various enterprises of the Convention, advise with the various boards, and recommend Convention policies regarding the most important issues. (Referred to Committee on President's Message.)

If the day looks kinder gloomy
And your chances purty slim,
If the situation's puzzlin'
An' the prospects awful grim,
An' perplexities keep pressin',
Till all hope is nearly gone,
Jus' bristle up and grit your teeth,
An' keep on keepin' on.—Anon.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

NEWPORT NEWS.

Congratulations to Newport News on the installation of their new organ. This will make a big difference in the worship services of the church. Newport News is composed quite largely of young people, for it is a young church and is growing and active.

It was my pleasure to share in their Council of Religious Education meeting last week, and I was impressed by the fact that so many of the teachers are young people. They have a well organized group and are constantly training their leaders. A goodly group attends the Elon Summer School annually; a still larger group shares in the interdenominational training school in the city; and during the past year they have had a training class in their own church. Best of wishes to Newport News.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Many churches give a special program for children about the first of June, usually the second Sunday. It is the purpose of this special program to give emphasis to the fact that the Church is doing educational work, and it gives the children an opportunity to share in the program of the Church. Parents enjoy this Children's Day program, and every church should seriously consider the advisability and, if at all practicable, should have a Children's Day Program.

The Board of Christian Education has a limited amount of material on hand, but the Extension Boards of our Church at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, will be glad to furnish necessary materials.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

The only reason for holding a summer school of leadership training at Elon College annually is to aid the local churches in their program of education. When all pastors, superintendents, teachers, pianists and other leaders have reached a state of perfection it will be unnecessary to continue this training school, but so long as improvement is possible, it seems to be wise to have training schools.

Courses are being planned for the benefit of pastors, superintendents of Sunday schools, teachers of children, young people and their leaders, those interested in aiding and developing home life, church organists, Sunday school pianists, leaders in missionary activities, teachers of vacation church schools, and Youth Fellowship workers.

Among the leaders in the school for this year are Dr. E. C. Gillette, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Mrs. C. Fred Ward and Miss Emily Carleton of Florida; Mrs. W. B. Williams, Rev. John G. Truitt, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle and the writer from Virginia; Rev. John Chapman, Rev. W. E. Wiseman, Rev. Carl Voss, Rev. C. Rexford Raymond and Mrs. Grace E. Stewart of North Carolina; Mrs. May E. Bulloch of Ohio, and Rev. W. C. Bell, missionary to Africa. Quite a number of others will share in the program.

Every church should do its best to send leaders and prospective leaders to this training school. It may cost some money ($9.00 for the week unless registration is sent in by June 15th which will save $.50), but our churches can never do their best until the leaders are trained for their tasks.

Those interested in saving the $.50 by registering early should write Mrs. W. B. Williams, registrar, at 1253 24th Street, Newport News, Va., no later than June 15th. Early registrations will help in planning the school and will save something for spending money for the student.

All together for the biggest summer school of leadership training Elon has ever had—June 29 to July 5, 1936.

LAKESIDE YOUTH CONFERENCE.

Young people from all of the churches in the United States and Canada will meet at Lakeside, Ohio, June 24 to 28, 1936, for one of the most significant meetings to be held this year. These young people and their leaders will be seriously seeking to find the way by which Christian youth can build a new world.

The Congregational-Christian church is permitted to have eighty representatives, and they will come from all of the states of the union. Four have been elected from the Southeast Youth Fellowship and still another may be added. Those elected are Lanson Granger of Virginia, Miss Dorothy Truitt of North Carolina, Miss Emily Carleton of Florida, and Chandler Adams of Tennessee. Our young people in addition to sharing in the interdenominational conference will make definite plans for The Pilgrim Fellowship of our own church. This is an exceedingly important meeting, and it is very necessary that Southeast delegates be present.

The Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship made an offering of $7.60 to help pay our delegate's expenses, and the Southern Convention made an offering of $19.61 to aid in this work. It seems that if these young people are willing to give their time in order to promote the work of our Church those who cannot go should be willing to share in the expense. If any individual Sunday school class, society or group wishes to share, it will bring a great deal of joy to the editor of this page to receive such funds and see that the delegates have money to pay their expenses. Here's hoping the young people take this matter seriously and do something about it.

GOLDEN MEMORIES.

Suppose you lose both vision and hearing and have to live only with memory, what memories will you have? Will they be beautiful and happy, or will they be ugly, confused and sad? The time will come when physical vision and hearing will fade from all of us; earth will be a memory.

Dr. Luke tells us that "Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart." She remembered a vision of angels, a commission from God, a tiny baby, an alert, eager boy, and hopes that seemed but dreams, but she treasured these things in her heart. Jesus told the disciples what was to happen to Him, but they did not believe it. After He was resurrected they remembered what He had said. Such memories! The Gospels are the memories of those who loved the Master. Mark says he wrote down carefully the things he heard Peter preach, and Peter preached the things he remembered that Jesus had said and done.

When our vision is faded and our ears are dull to hearing, I think our memories will center about three institutions. The earliest recollections are of home—the place where we were born and reared, where we learned to walk and talk and love and live. Flowers will be mixed with the memories, and at the heart of the home will be Mother. On Mother's Day we recall her love and care and sacrifice. When we live with memory only every day will be a Mother's Day.

Other memories will center about the school. With laughter and tears young parents start their children to school, for they well know that the infant will soon become a person in its own right. Days of childhood will flee and soon this baby will be a man or a woman. You can recall instances, frivolous and serious, from the days of school, some kind word, some bit of knowledge, some friendship formed. In the twilight-time of life we will recall these fine associations and perhaps be glad in our hearts.

Other memories center about the Church. It may be a little white church by the wayside, or a little brick church on Main Street, or a magnificent temple of worship in the heart of the city, but it is the place to which you went in childhood, youth and manhood. Here you learned your stories of the Bible, enjoyed the music of worship, and learned to pray. Perhaps, if parents, you brought your children for consecration, with burdened hearts you came to pray, and with joy and gladness you turned again home. Some of the memories will certainly center about the Church.

When the twilight gathers and the vision is dimmed to the beauties of earth, and the ear can no longer distinguish the noise of the music which earth affords in abundance, when we have left only memory, let us hope that these memories will be golden. While we journey on we should gather and treasure those things which will give us golden memories rather than sad ones in the ages that lie ahead. If there needs must be clouds in your human sky, then pray that the light of God's love shall turn it to gold.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS INSPIRES HONESTY.

LESSON VII—MAY 17, 1936.

GOLDE TEXT: "Thou shalt not steal." Exodus 20:15.

LESSON: Luke 19; Printed Text: Luke 19:1-10; 45-48.

There is something about this story of Jesus and Zacchaeus that tugs at the heart strings. Here was a man, rich in this world's goods but with an unsatisfied heart-hunger. Because he was a publican, he was cordially hated by his fellow citizens and cut off from the ordinary wholesome relationships and companionships of life. Even his stature and physical appearance militated against him for he was a sawed-off and hammered-down little fellow who was probably the butt of many a pointed jest and joke. It is more than likely that because he was so generally hated he had lost something of his own self-respect. And the record would indicate that he had not been scrupulously honest in amassing his fortune. From the human standpoint, this fellow Zacchaeus was not a very lovely, or loveable figure.

And then one day Jesus came to town. As was usually the case during this part of his ministry there was a large crowd gathered to see the Master. Zacchaeus had probably heard of Jesus. He wanted to see this strange man who had been saying such strange things and doing such strange deeds. But alas when he left his place of business and went out to see Jesus he found to his dismay that he was doomed to disappointment for the crowds were so large and he was so short that he could not see Jesus at all. Nothing daunted, however, this resourceful, and courageous—for it took courage to do what he did—Jew climbed up into a sycamore tree, from whence he could see Jesus. One wonders if mere curiosity would have prompted such daring action. One suspects that there was a feeling, even a hope, that this man Jesus might have the answer to that inner unrest and dissatisfaction. In any event, there he was perched in a tree, undoubtedly a grotesque figure.

Jesus never loses sight of the individual in the crowd. Again and again we find evidences of this in the gospel. It was inevitable in this case that Jesus should see Zacchaeus. To the amazement of the crowd, and to the amazement as well as the inexpressible joy of Zacchaeus, Jesus said: "Zacchaeus, make haste and come down; for today I must abide at thy house." It was unbelievable to the one as to the other. The Teacher gone to lodge with a man that was a sinner! Unthinkable! Indeed, disgusting!

We do not know what Jesus and Zacchaeus talked about that day. We may be sure that the conversation was not about the weather, or even about business. It is quite likely that Jesus was not condemnatory at all. With penetrating insight and with kindly but firm spirit he spoke straight to the heart of this man who was small in stature and in soul. Jesus saw in this man splendid potentialities. He saw Zacchaeus not only as he was but as he might become. And he made Zacchaeus believe in the best in him. In any event, this man experienced a change of heart that bore fruit in practical action. He solemnly promised to give half of his income in the future to the poor, and he just as solemnly pledged himself to restore four-fold any amount that any man could show that he had wrongfully taken from him. There is no boast in this, no assertion that he had been wrongfully accused. "It is the new man who speaks here, and who reveals what the coming of Jesus had meant to him." Zacchaeus had been reconciled to God through the gracious ministry of Jesus, and he had been delivered from his old sin of covetousness, and made into a new creature.

"Today is salvation come to this house, forasmuch as he is also a son of Abraham." A son of Abraham—this renegade, dishonest, hard-hearted publican and sinner! Yes, just that. The One who had come to save that which was lost had found Zacchaeus, had brought him into right relation to life's highest values and to God himself, and thus had brought salvation to that house and to that heart.

The story shows the sublime faith of Jesus in folks, even in the most unpromising folks. And it shows the power of that faith when it touches the lives of others. Because Jesus made it plain to Zacchaeus that he believed in his finest possibilities, he helped Zacchaeus to believe in them himself.

The other incident in today's lesson concerns the cleansing of the temple. Here again covetousness and unscrupulousness had raised their ugly heads even within the precincts of the Temple itself. It was unthinkable to the Master that such should be the case. His righteous indignation blazed into action. He drove them out—we do not have to believe that He struck them physically, for the force of his moral character itself would have made them cowards—declaring that God's house was a house of prayer, a place where men and God had fellowship and conversation with each other. The church is primarily a place of worship. One should enter it reverently and worship in it sincerely.

"But the chief priests and the scribes and the principal men of the people sought to destroy him." When Jesus touched the purse of the special privileged class he sealed his own doom. Vested interests still resist the coming of the kingdom. Christ is still crucified in the market-place. Many "principal men" still refuse to yield their lives to His will.

The heading of the lesson is "Jesus Inspires Honesty." There is need for a revival of this old-fashioned quality of character. There is such a lack of honesty in so many areas of life. This is not so much the fault of religion as the lack of it. Jesus helps a man to be honest. Indeed that is a vain and idle religion which does not help men to be honest.

A man who was traveling in the Alps came one evening to the door of the church in a little town. He had his knapsack and his alpenstock, and not liking to take them into the church, he said to the guide, "What shall I do with these things?"

"Put them down here on the church steps." The church steps projected into the marketplace which at that time was full of all sorts of rough looking people. So the traveler laughed and said: "I would much rather not put such a temptation in the way of these people."

But the guide replied: "They are not so bad as to steal from God."

So the stranger put down his knapsack and alpenstock on the church steps. Two hours after, when he came out, he found them again, and beside them some eight or ten baskets of fruit and vegetables which the market people had put there while they went in to say their prayers. Although these things looked very tempting and were quite unguarded except by the unseen presence of God, yet they were as safe as if they had been put under lock and key.

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"A MIND TO DECIDE."

"No man can serve two masters."—Matt. 6:24.

Lenski's Lenten meditations give a very striking comment on our text for today. He says in part: That the disciples deserted Jesus in the crucial hour of the cross because they lacked initiative and courage to decide and stick. "They were not made of sacrificial stuff. They waited for others to do what they should have done."

This lack of courage gives utterance to a great weakness in human nature. We face danger and run. Theodore Roosevelt once said, that it is not danger, "It is softness of head." As it seems to us, there never was an age when people were more this way than in this age. Christian life is not a playground for vacillating souls. When we desert Christ, we are allowing His enemies to drag Him to death. That is the equivalent of shouting "Crucify Him." How often has Christ been crucified by His own friends who ought to be standing by and helping Him! L. P. Jack says, "The proofs of the existence of God are worthless unless the valour of soul is present to sustain them."

Prayer—Deliver us, O God, from the perils of vacillation, indecision and disloyalty. When the truth stands before us may we be able to stand by it at any cost, may we stick like filings to a magnet. Give us the strength that allows no surrender. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE POWER TO STAND BY."

"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6:2.

The courage to stand by the truth and right at any cost lies in forgetting one's own self and safety and consecration to helping others. So long as one is self-conscious, self-indulgent, self-loving, self-pleasing, self-righteous, self-seeking, self-willed, one shall be self-deceiving, self-destructive, and will sell the truth thinking to win the self-conquest, but in reality to lose all.

Only by a consciousness of the need of the other fellow and a desire to supply that need in the name of Christ will one forget himself and give himself to truth and right at any cost. That consciousness comes through Jesus Christ. When we make Him our light and guide instead of selfishness we live unselfishly. In Him we will examine ourselves, deny ourselves, discipline ourselves, sacrifice ourselves, and surrender ourselves for truth and right, that "Christ may be all in all." Thus "The first shall be last and the last shall be first."

Prayer—Lean and famished are our souls, O Lord, for the lack of the life which Thou alone canst give. Long has our own self-security proved but husks without fruit. Our self-will and sins are dregs cruel and bitter. At the altar of our own pride to which we often bow, we come to hate ourselves. In emptiness and weariness we come to Thee. Fill us with Thy life. Give us worthy causes to serve and joy in serving like Him, who served, bled and died for us.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"A LIGHT FROM HEAVEN."

"Jesus said to him, if Thou canst believe all things are possible to him that believeth."—Mark 9:23.

In this incident of Jesus casting out the dumb spirit through the faith of a father, the glory of heaven flashes its light on earth. Here was a hopelessly afflicted boy. No doubt the father had spent years in sorrow and disappointment, wear and tear, in the hope and effort to make the boy well. But out of flickering, fading faith with hope still aglow Jesus came in and the work was done. Could this father ever disbelieve again? We doubt it.

We make a great mistake in life to look for comforts in ourselves, for it is within ourselves whence the mists and clouds spring and hide God from us. Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." He also said, "I am the light."

In this incident of healing we see flickering faith grasping the future, the unseen, the infinite, the eternal, and finding knowledge of the invisible and the eternal world; finding power to apprehend the world and become a part of it; and finding a way to enter into the activities of that world with courage and happiness.

The measure of our belief is the measure of our blessing. The wider one opens the door the more angels will come in. "The bore of the pipe determines the amount of water that flows through it."

Prayer—Our Father, tremulous is the hand that holds out the cup for blessing. But turn us not away. Fill our cups with the wine of Thy love and heavens blessing.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"LIFE BY FAITH."

"Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?"—Matt. 8:26.

These words are the rebuke of our Lord to the disciples for their lack of faith. It took place on the occasion of the storm at sea when Jesus was asleep and their little boat was about to sink.

Life is by faith and yet we are so weak that it is hard to see beyond the material things about us. We know, however, that faith is the condition of every relation of life, and we believe that it is the condition of the highest life.

Christian faith is an attitude of the soul which wholly trusts and honors God. It takes him simply at his word and it rests upon His promises. It believes that the fact God has spoken is sufficient and it asks no questions. To the person of such faith Christ is as real as the air we breathe.

Tolstoi is quoted as saying: "I had only to know God and I lived. I had only to forget Him, not to believe in Him, and I died.—To know God and to live are one. God is life."

Prayer—Our Father, we would pray, "Lord, help Thou our unbelief." May we never lose sight of Thee. May we remember and remembering offer Thee ourselves for service. Accept and bless that service for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"JUDGMENT EVERY DAY."

"Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come."—Matt. 24:42.

Christ had foretold the destruction of the temple, and had declared the signs of the coming of the Judgment. He warned the disciples of the wisdom of watching every moment for that coming.

Although these words of our Lord seem to refer to the signs of the coming Judgment and emphasize the importance to be prepared, they gave the disciples reason to expect the coming of the Lord momentarily. Nineteen hundred years have now passed and that expectancy has not been fulfilled, except as it may have been fulfilled in His daily, yea hourly, manifestation of Himself and in judgments that have stamped the actions of men in right and wrong.

There are ways in which He comes to you and me every day. He comes in the great upward strides of humanity toward a nobler, freer and purer life. He comes in occasions when the bonds of the past are broken, and the world moves swiftly toward its Divine goal. He comes in the religious spirit moving in the hearts of men. He comes in the world life when sinners have been startled into attention and are made conscious of sins and shortcomings, and have turned from their sins to live the life of righteousness in Christ.

In regards to the Judgment, it comes every day in the same way. There is the judgment of conscience judging between right and wrong. There are the judgments of men. There are our own private judgments. And there is the judgment of "reaping what we sow."

Every day we hear the call, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his path straight." If we do not do this we shall go down. The result is loss of soul and Hell.

Prayer—(Pray as you feel.)

SATURDAY.

"GLORY DEPOSITS."

"Where will ye leave your glory?"—Isaiah 10:1-4.

If, like some men, we are eaten up with longing for worldly fame and the applause of the crowd, let us often ask ourselves Isaiah's shrewd question. Where, even if we achieved glory, could we leave it when we come to die?

It is certain that we could not carry it with us. Fame may be in the cities and fields of the upper country, but what are its conditions? They are very different, we know, from those on which the fame of this earth are based. We cannot carry our worldly crowns and laurels into the courts of the King of heaven. In what rubbish heap of earth shall we leave our glory?

Yet we can build up a glory here that can be transferred thither. It is a glory made up of little kindnesses, of Christlike sympathy, of good cheer and patience and faith and hope. It is the glory of Christ, which we may thus make our own.

Prayer—Thine is the kingdom and the glory, our Saviour, and Thine alone, and ours only as we are in Thee.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"CONQUERORS IN GOD'S POWER."

"Jehovah your God will deliver it into your hand."—Joshua 8:3-9.

Joshua conquered Canaan because he was sure that the Almighty would deliver it into his hand. Tribe after tribe fell before his victorious faith. Without that faith he would never have advanced beyond Gilgal. Indeed, without that faith he would never have crossed the Jordan.

Who knows what splendid kingdoms God is waiting to give us, if we will only claim them by faith? Innumerable Canaans lie smiling before us, and many of us lie sluggishly and cravenly in the wilderness, never getting even as far as the land of Moab.

Let us seize on the courage of true believers! Let us advance our banners every day! Let us claim the wide future as our own, and all the conquests in it!

Prayer—For Thou, our Father, dost set no bounds to the power and felicity of Thy children. There are no limits to Thy grace in Jesus Christ.—Amen.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works, not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is."—Hebrew 10:24, 25.

The convening of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian churches is certainly an assembling of "ourselves together." And it is a coming together to "consider one another." To consider the church problems of each of our boards and enterprises, and to consider the problems which confront our churches, and to consider the people beyond our borders who are entitled to our help according to the missionary command of Jesus. It is an attempt to "provoke one another unto love and good works." It helps. We are commanded not to "forsake the assembling" together, and we are warned that it is possible to neglect it.

The whole text is very illuminating, "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering: (for he is faithful that promised) and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is." What a delegation that would make! Those who could come together "with a true heart." Those who could come with "full assurance of faith." Those who had "their consciences clean," and bodies honored as the "temple of God." May we not say that that was the hope of everyone who gathered at the recent session of the Southern Convention in Burlington.

The text goes on further to say: "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering." That, too, is a great injunction. That, too, was the aim of the delegates assembled. "For he is faithful that promised." That also we gladly, thankfully realized. Special sessions of worship were held each day at noon to take hold by faith on that fact. Your pastor had the honor of leading those services. These three worship services were gathered around the following themes: (1) The disciples learning the great fundamental, namely, fellowship with God through prayer; (2) The disciples learning of the foundation of the great institution fostering this fellowship, namely the church; and (3) The disciples learning of the genius of its establishment and growth throughout the world, namely, the great command of Jesus Christ. Your speaker sought to have all "draw near with a pure heart in full assurance of faith," calling daily attention to the fact that "he is faithful that promised," namely Jesus Christ. Tonight I am going to give you a bird's eye view of the Convention.

I. Persons. A great Convention such as that one was is built up of persons, and personalities. Delegates were there representing five conferences,—184 churches,—108 ministers,—29,215 members. These Conferences were:

- Va. Valley,—21 churches,—2,458 members.
- Western N. C.,—37 churches, 4,040 members.
- Eastern N. C.,—42 churches,—5,428 members.
- N. C. & Va.,—40 churches,—7,802 members.
- Eastern Va.,—44 churches,—9,887 members.

Total,—184 churches,—29,215 members. These churches raised by voluntary contributions, without any set dues, or any sort of legal compulsion, receiving voluntary gifts only, the neat sum during the past year of $237,726. When we consider that most of the churches are very small, and many of them rural with only part time services, does it not give assurance that there is nothing else on earth that could do it, and that the church is a great institution in spite of all its critics?

It was an inspiration to see representatives of these Conferences along with many notable visitors assembled together in the beautiful Burlington Christian Church. The entertaining church was most amply prepared in every way to take care of the Convention, and they did it to perfection.

II. Programs. There were two great programs, the Woman's Convention, and the Southern Convention. The Woman's Convention was called to order at 10:00 o'clock by its president, Mrs. W. R. Sellars. A most excellent worship service including a beautiful address on God's gardens was conducted by Mrs. J. H. McEwen of the Burlington Church; committees were appointed; and the treasurer's report was received from Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle. Reports of the work of each of the Women's Conferences were made. Mrs. K. H. Sale representing the Valley Conference; Mrs. John G. Truitt representing the Eastern Virginia Conference; and Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell representing the North Carolina Conference. These reports told the story of an inspiring record of achievement. The Southern Convention is proud of the work its consecrated women are doing, and rightly it may be so, for theirs is a great work indeed.

During the session,—all-day,—the following persons delivered addresses: Dr. J. O. Atkinson, leader in Missions and lover of his church, spoke on "Missions, the Duty and Aim of the Church." This was followed by an address by Miss Olive Green, of Turkey, on our World-Wide Objective." The next address was by Mrs. D. E. Brown, of New York, on "The Women and the Effective Church"; and the concluding address was made by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, of Florida, on "Standing By One Another." Each of these addresses reached a very high note, but they were made more effective still by the "sauce" of song and sweet music interspersed among them! Their theme was "Ye shall be witnesses," Acts 1:8, and so they were! Mark that! And so they were! And so they are being yet, and will be across the coming years.

There followed, beginning at 4:00 o'clock, the convening of the Southern Convention. It is not the purpose of this talk to you tonight to give you a detailed account of that great program. Some of the names appearing on that program were: Rev. J. F. Morgan, Norfolk; Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon; President Stanley C. Harrell, Durham; Fred B. Smith, New York City; Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College; W. E. MacClenny, Suffolk; Dr. E. M. Halladay, New York City; Dr. Lewis T. Reed, New York City; John G. Truitt, Suffolk; President L. E. Smith, Elon; Rev. F. C. Lester, Norfolk; Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Norfolk; Dr. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk; Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va.; John T. Kernodle, Richmond; Supt. C. D. Johnston, Elon; J. B. Johnston, Barium Springs; Col. J. E. West, Suffolk; Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Florida; Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington; Chaplain H. E. Rountree, U. S. Navy; Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, Southern Pines; Dr.

James H. Lightbourne, Burlington; Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Duke University; and many others who had very vital parts in the work of the Convention sessions whose names do not appear on the printed program. Enough there is however to show that it was an inspiring Convention.

III. Problems. Yes indeed! But these problems are faced in the main through these seven Boards: The Mission Board, The Elon College Board of Trustees; The Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage; The Board of Christian Education; The Board of Publication; The Board of Superannuation and the Woman's Board of the Southern Convention. A resolution was adopted—

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

On January 27, 1927, a little boy by the name of Clyde Wesley Rudd came to the Christian Orphanage to make his home. He graduated in high school and left the Orphanage on June 12, 1934. He spent 7 years, 4 months and 15 days at the orphanage. While in the orphanage, Clyde was a faithful boy in doing the work that he was required to do. His conduct was good and he was an ambitious boy. He always wanted to do something worth while in life. He is now finishing his Junior year at Elon College. He was elected, some weeks ago, President of the Student Body of Elon College. The Christian Orphanage rejoices that one of its boys should receive this high honor. Clyde is willing to pay the price for his education and as soon as his college work is over he gets a job and works through the summer months and saves his money to help defray his expenses for the next year. The Christian Orphanage did not extend to him charity, but it did give him a chance and Clyde has made good. He made good use of the chance the orphanage made possible for him. The Orphanage rejoices with Clyde in this honor that has come to him from the Student Body.

ed asking these boards to meet each year simultaneously in February at Elon College for the consideration of their problems, holding one joint session in which the work might be reviewed as a whole and correlated for effectiveness of execution. The work in all these departments was ably presented, and showed that the Southern Convention was a really great institution, and doing a fine work for the Kingdom of God.

IV. Progress. Growth of the church was a central theme throughout the Convention sessions. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell in his president's address struck that note, and it held a high place in the considerations until the very closing session, which was given over to Social Service, and Evangelism. So important are these matters that it would seem an earlier presentation of them would have been well. There was evident a fine spirit of growth in the fellowship and unanimity enjoyed wherever former Congregational and Christian references came to the fore. Complete fellowship characterized the Convention,—fellowship with one another, and fellowship with the Christ. Therein is assured progress!

paster brought inspiring messages each night. While the visible results were not what we had desired, the meetings are bearing fruit. Several letters are in the process of transfer, and we are expecting several others to unite with the church soon.

During the winter months the Sanford Church held five o'clock services in the place of evening services. The vesper hours proved very successful and it was with regret that we went back to the 8 o'clock hour for the summer months.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

federal bureau received records of 343,582 persons arrested during the year. The largest number of arrests made in the male class were in the 19-year-old group; and in the female grouping the largest number of arrests were of those 23 years old. When we think of this appalling number of arrests it should stir within the breast of Christian youth a mighty zeal to begin their task of building a new world.

The home must take its share of the blame for this vast number of criminals. There are millions of homes in which no religious life at all is maintained. Parents are constantly nagging at each other and disagreeing, which leads to divorce, and the children find their home life very disagreeable which sends them seeking pleasures elsewhere. Reports from juvenile courts reveal that cent of delinquent girls, come from homes where cent of delinquent girls, comes from homes where the parents are divorced. When children have to leave home to seek pleasure it is very easy for them to drift in with some gang which they very soon discover is a breeding-place of crime. Criminals are not "just born"—many boys and girls become criminals because of their environment and companions.

But we cannot place the blame for all crime on the home for there are some boys and girls who are reared by Christian parents in a religious atmosphere, and still slip by the way and become criminals. Tonight we want to discuss some of the influences that tend to make criminals.

Series of Sentence Prayers.

Address: "Juvenile Delinquency in Our Community—How Christian Youth Can Help Remedy it."

Hymn.
For Discussion—

- 1. What types of juvenile delinquency are most prevalent in our community?
2. Where does the responsibility for juvenile delinquency begin?

- 3. Does the movie help to make criminals? In what way?
4. Has there been an increase in crime since repeal of Prohibition?
5. What part can the church play in the prevention of crime?
Hymn: "Take My Life and Let It Be."
Benediction.

SMITHWOOD CHURCH.

On Sunday, May 24, 1936, Smithwood Church will have an all-day service which will be of interest to many SUN readers. We are planning our dedication service of the present building and equipment of which the church and community are proud. The building has an auditorium with a seating capacity of five hundred, Sunday school rooms to accommodate this department for best results. It is with great pleasure that we, as pastor and people, present to the Western North Carolina Conference this building and equipment to be used for the purpose of teaching the fundamentals of religion to the youth and grown-ups of the community. In doing so, we invite all former pastors, those who have helped in special meetings and all friends of the church to be with us on this occasion.

We are planning a program of interest to all who may be with us. A number of former pastors of the church are expected to be with us, also some who have helped in meetings have consented to come. We are expecting a great day together. Special music will be a feature of the program. Remember you have a special invitation to be present. A history of the church will be read from its early beginning. "Come and let us worship the Lord together." Can we depend on you May 24, 1936 at eleven o'clock to remain for the entire program?

Yours to serve,

M. A. POLLARD, Pastor.

OBITUARIES

PHELPS.

Allen Phelps was born June 1, 1858 and died March 1, 1936—age 77 years, 8 months and twenty-nine days. He is survived by nine children, fifty-two grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. The surviving children are: Willie, Tub and Frank of Milton, N. C.; Ed of Roxboro, Floyd of Woodsdale, Mrs. J. D. Cade of Farmville, Va., Mrs. Ed Francis of Angier, N. C., Mrs. Lon Huffman of Apex, N. C., and Mrs. W. T. Sadler of Milton. There is one sister, Mrs. Jack Wiler of Milton, also.

Bro. Phelps had been a member of Lebanon Church since a young man, and was a regular attendant until a few years ago when his health failed, resulting in almost total blindness. He began life a poor boy and by industry and economy became an independent farmer. He was known as an honest man.

The funeral and burial were from Lebanon Church, conducted by the writer, his pastor for nineteen years. There was present, besides his own family, a goodly number of neighbors and friends to express their high regard for the deceased.

PORTER.

Whereas our Heavenly Father deemed it best to call to the great beyond our beloved sister, Mrs. Ivy Porter and whereas we can realize to some extent the grief of the family in the loss of such a life, therefore be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn her departure, we bow submissively to the will of God.

2. That while Isle of Wight Church, of which she was a charter member, has lost a most devoted and loyal member, we feel that our loss is her eternal gain.

3. That we pledge ourselves to nobler efforts in behalf of our church in furthering the course of Christ, feeling that by so doing we best keep alive the efforts of her who gave the church and the church work a large place in her heart. Truly be it said of her "She hath done what she could."

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our church, one sent to the bereaved family and one sent to the Christian Sun for publication.

A PRAYER FOR COURAGE

By LOUIS UNTERMAYER.

WHY should I long for what I know
Can never be revealed to me?
I only pray that I may grow
As sure and bravely as a tree.

I do not ask why tireless grief
Remains, or why all beauty flies;
I only crave the blind relief
Of branches groping toward the skies.

Let me bring every seed to fruit,
Sharing whatever comes to pass,
The strong persistence of the root,
The patient courage of the grass.

Heartened by every source of mirth,
I shall not mind the wounds and scars,
Feeling the solid strength of earth,
The bright conviction of the stars.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Beginning Friday, May 22nd, and including May 27th, the 46th Annual Commencement of Elon College will be held. This is an event, as well as an epoch, in our church life, which calls together in delightful fellowship for renewing old acquaintances and making new ones, not only many Elon graduates but friends of the church and institution from all directions. The program in full is presented elsewhere in THE SUN.

The New York Times brings the statement that at the time of his coronation as "king of kings" and ruler of Ethiopia, Haile Selassie (now dethroned and in exile from his country) presented to H. M. Jacoby, former ambassador to Ethiopia, a copy of the Bible written in Amharic one thousand years old. Mr. Jacoby has recently presented this Bible to the Friends Seminary, 226 E. 16th St., New York.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers and friends of Elon College everywhere will appreciate and heartily applaud the esteemed Mayor of Burlington, Honorable Earl B. Horner, for his official proclamation made on the 16th day of May, proclaiming the ten days, May 18th to May 27th, as Elon College Development Program Period in the City of Burlington. Our columns elsewhere carry the Mayor's proclamation as presented in the columns of the Burlington Daily-Times News.

In the Bulletin of the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, Rev. C. Rexford Raymond, pastor, the following announcement is carried: "Once a month we take an offering for the work of Christ for which we are responsible beyond the bounds of this parish. This is in obedience to our Lord's last command to go as His witnesses into all the world, to which he coupled His promise to be with His disciples always, even unto the end of the world. No Christian can refuse to obey Him."

Rev. R. T. Grissom assisted the pastor, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, in a series of evangelistic meetings at Wentworth Church, Wake County, N. C., the past week. There was much interest in the meetings and the attendance was very large, filling to capacity the church at almost every service. At the close of the meeting on Friday night, there were fourteen additions to the church. Wentworth is one of our good rural churches, awake and loyal to all that makes for building up the Kingdom of our Lord.

Dr. Elisha A. King of Miami Beach, Fla., is to go as a delegate to Oslo, Norway, to the World Sunday School Convention in July to represent our Congregational-Christian Churches in the United States. He also goes as a delegate from the Greater Miami Ministerial Association. Says an exchange: "The United Church of Miami Beach, of which Dr. King is pastor, has been filled to overflowing all during the season. On a recent Sunday 10 new members, 9 of them adults, were received. The Lenten season was observed by special meetings and the publication of a new book of sermons by the pastor on "The Lord's Prayer."

It does not seem that the repeal of the eighteenth Amendment has decreased but rather stimulated the activities and membership of the Woman's Temperance Union. Fact is, it would seem that the good women have just begun to fight. The Watchman-Examiner gives these facts: "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is now organized in fifty-two countries with a half million paid-up membership. New Members are joining by the thousand. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, world president, declared at a recent meeting in New York: 'We are working not only for outlawing the liquor traffic in the United States, but all over the world.' The next world convention will be held in Washington, D. C., from June 4-9, 1937."

Dr. M. E. Dodd, past-president of the Southern Baptist Convention and founder of Dodd College, in addressing the Convention at St. Louis, May 14th, declares: "The church has lost the spiritual content of its message by adopting a pink tea policy, taking up picnic work or doing social service work." He further said "that the church is like the modern drug store with its dry goods and hardware—you can't tell whether a drug store is a cafeteria or a saloon these days. And people who go to some churches today have a hard time finding out whether they are at a political meeting, an education society, or a theosophical discussion." The speaker recommended that all churches join in a spiritual union against such attacks. The words of this active pastor may be worth considering by others.

On Mother's Day, May 10th, Dr. John G. Truitt, of our Suffolk Church, used as his sermon theme, "The Cost to be a Mother." The responsive reading, as carried in the Bulletin for the occasion, being the following appropriate Scripture: "Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." "For God commanded saying, Honor thy father and mother; and he that curseth father or mother let him die the death." "And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." "For He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden: for, behold from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." "For He that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is His name." "And His mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation." "My son, hear the instruction of thy father." "And forsake not the law of thy mother." The subject of the evening sermon was "Jesus Proclaimed the Mother's Day," and the following announcement was made: "On April 26th, we reported 38 new members. On May 3rd, we reported 16 new members. Today we report 7 more new members, and as we said to the others, so we say to these: 'We welcome you with our whole heart, and with every hope that you may rejoice in this new church relationship.'"

CAMPAIGN INTEREST MOUNTS.

After two months of preparation, during which an organization of hundreds of men and women has been built up and a careful groundwork laid, the Elon College Development Program is now in full swing, with all divisions keyed to intensive effort.

At the campaign office building in Burlington, from which has come the organizational direction and material of an informative and inspirational nature, the mail is now moving the other way, bringing back pledge cards and cash, some in small amounts, some in large amounts. For the most part these subscriptions, whether large or small, indicate that the members of the Southern Congregational-Christian Church and the alumni of the college recognize the value of Elon as a constructive force in its constituency and that they are doing their part to the extent of their ability to make it secure. Some are making heavy sacrifices in order to contribute to the support of an institution which is serving their church and the society of which they are a part.

In Burlington and Alamance County the group of citizens that has volunteered to raise $110,000 is setting the pace for the entire campaign. Perhaps the most inspiring action in this entire movement has been the formation of the "Thousand Dollar Club," started with the idea of enrolling 100 men and women in Alamance County who will pledge $1,000 each to the Development Program Fund.

The idea was that of a Burlington business man, who, incidentally, is neither a member of the Christian Church nor an alumnus of Elon. Those who have joined the "Thousand Dollar Club" are thinking in terms beyond the quota of their county, for they realize that the more money that is raised in this campaign, the greater will be the services that Elon is capable of giving. Their action is a challenge to the people of the Christian Church and the alumni to start thinking also in larger terms than they have been about their contributions to this cause.

The Alamance County campaign was launched Monday night, May 18th, at a stirring meeting in the First Christian Church in Burlington at which approximately 125 men and women dedicated themselves to a ten-day effort to put the Elon movement "over the top." Inspiring talks were given by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, president of the Southern Convention and general chairman of the Development Program; R. Homer Andrews, general chairman for the county; Claude G. Somers, chairman of the special gifts committee; R. O. Browning, teams chairman, and Dr. L. E. Smith, president of the college. The county campaign will continue until May 27th, when the victory meeting will be held in Burlington.

At the same time the signal to go was given throughout the five conferences of the convention and to the organized alumni. Direct appeals were sent previously to alumni who are too scattered for organization. Reports will be made by the church and alumni chairmen on May 26th, May 29th and June 2nd.

The first church to reach its quota in the Elon campaign is Liberty, in Group 1, Western North Carolina Conference.

"I heartily congratulate C. L. Bray, the chairman of the Liberty Church, for his achievement," General Chairman Harrell stated. "This shows what prompt action will do. Every church in the Southern Convention can also go 'over the top' if the chairmen and committees will keep active and the members recognize their responsibility toward Elon by contributing to the best of their ability."

NEW YORK WOMEN SUPPORT EXTREME PACIFISM.

By a vote of 128 to 43 the delegated annual meeting of the Society of Congregational-Christian Church Women of the State of New York on Tuesday morning at Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, adopted two resolutions favored by the extreme pacifists. The resolutions are recommendations for action by the General Council in June:

"1. To accord to such individuals within the membership of its churches, who from high motives of Christian conscience refuse to bear arms in or otherwise support war, the assurance of moral support and sustained backing if, and when, the time of testing comes, and

"2. To petition the government of the United States to grant to members of the Congregational-Christian churches who may have conscientious objections to war, the same exemption from military service as had long been granted to members of the Society of friends and other similar religious organizations."

The Council for Social Action will be requested to present the resolutions to the General Council. They were recommended to the New York State Women's Society by its committee on Christian citizenship of which Mrs. Frances K. Chalmers, wife of Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers, pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, is chairman. Dr. Chalmers is one of the leaders in the peace activities of New York City churches and chairman of the department of religion in the nation-wide Emergency Peace Campaign which opened a two-year intensive program to help "keep the United States out of war and to achieve world peace" with a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall on April 22. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is general chairman of the committee sponsoring the campaign.

If the first resolution is passed by the General Council it will mean, according to Mrs. Chalmers, that "moral support would be given by the denominations to those taking an absolute pacifist position." Three other denominations, the Methodist Episcopal, the Disciples of Christ and the Evangelical Synod (now merged in the Evangelical and Reformed Church),—it was said, have claimed for their adherents the same immunities from military service as the Friends, using practically the same words as in the second resolution. At the same time when it was being adopted by the New York State Women, a similar resolution was being introduced at the annual meeting of the American Unitarian Association in Boston, Mass.

In order to make certain that the vote of the women at Broadway Tabernacle would be well-considered, copies of the proposed resolutions were sent in advance to each of the local societies in the 351 churches of the State Conference. The reported membership of women in the churches is 44,934.

The constitution of the New York Women's Society was amended at this meeting by adding "Christian" to the name without "and."

THE FIRST WOMAN CONFERENCE SUPERINTENDENT.

The first woman Conference superintendent has been elected, Mrs. David E. Brown, by the Middle Atlantic Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches. She succeeds the Rev. Walter Spooner who resigned last year because of a heart ailment, the immediate onset which made it necessary for him to resign being occasioned by the strain of a Lenten preaching mission which he undertook in the churches of Norfolk, Newport News and vicinity.

Mrs. Brown's first meeting as superintendent with the board of directors of the Middle Atlantic Conference this Monday came as a routine and not an unusual event as she has been acting superintendent on half-time since Mr. Spooner left.

ent is the administrator for all mission work within its bounds, the agent of missionary promotion on behalf of the national Boards, the state representative of the Boards in matters of ministerial relief and church building aid, as well as being executive director of the Conference programs in evangelism, social action, religious education and young people's work. There are specific duties but the superintendent is also related to the Conference in a more personal sense as pastor-at-large among the churches and friend and counselor of the ministers.

During the last three years Mrs. Brown has been rendering part-time service as associate secretary of the Commission on Missions, and this work she now relinquishes. She has spoken a number of times at meetings in the territory of

MRS. DAVID E. BROWN

She was field secretary of the Conference from 1931 until she became acting superintendent. Before 1931 she had been president of the Woman's Association of the Conference from the time of her recognition of the women's work and merger of the home and foreign missionary societies of the conference in 1927.

Her activity in denominational work began in 1914 when she became one of the secretaries of the Philadelphia Branch of the Women's Board of Missions (auxiliary to the American Board). The Philadelphia Branch then extended from New Jersey to Florida. The New Jersey Branch became organized in 1917 and she became treasurer serving until 1927. From 1923 to 1927 she was also chairman of the joint committee which planned the union meetings of the Branch and the New Jersey Home Missionary Union.

AN EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND FRIEND.

The office of Conference Superintendent has come to be a responsibility of foremost importance in the denomination. In a self-supporting Conference such as New Jersey, the superintend-

WHO WAS THE FIRST WOMAN MINISTER?

We now know when the first woman was elected a Conference superintendent. If President Mary E. Wooley of Mt. Holyoke College, who has been frequently mentioned as the new moderator of the General Council is nominated and elected, then we will have the date of the first General Council woman moderator. But when was the first woman ordained a minister and settled as a pastor in a Congregational or Christian church? Was there a woman minister earlier than 1852 when Antoinette Louise Brown was ordained and became pastor of the Congregational Church at South Butler in Wayne County, N. Y., between Rochester and Lake Ontario?

Probably there was no ordained woman minister with a complete college and theological education before Miss Brown who later became Mrs.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVING GOD OUT.

There are many evidences that the Orient is becoming Christianized while the Occident is becoming paganized. We, occidentals, are inclined to do things in our own right and not attribute to God any part for begetting in us a desire or a motive to serve or sacrifice. In this we have certainly forgotten, or ignored, the teaching of our Lord, and the example of the Apostle Paul is pointed out on almost every page of his writing. Jesus in Himself, as the Messiah, had power with God and man, but this power He always attributed to the Father, and either before or immediately after any special demonstration of the power, He spent hours in agonizing prayer, or in praise to His Father.

When men were willing to bow down in reverence before Paul and acclaim him as a man of divine power and attributes, he invariably insisted that it was not his power, but the power of God in him which was from above and not his own. Paul declared to his Corinthian audience: "We have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us." At every opportunity and under all circumstances, Paul brought God into the picture and made Him preminent. And this explains why and how He could make such distinctions as the following and keenly discern the difference between the divine and the human. Says Paul: (II Cor. 4:8-10) "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body." How readily, how easily we crowd out all thought of the power, both of the dying and the living Lord, and claim for ourselves the strength, the motive and desire to do good deeds in our own right.

If we relieve the needy, the distressed, the cast down, we pat ourselves on the back with a sort of sweet complacency and feel that we have done enough. This is not enough. We should realize that God is seeking to work in us and through us, and that the motives and desires back of all our good deeds come of God and are manifestations of His divine nature and power. It is not enough just to lead a life of benevolence and helpfulness to our fellowman. Even the pagan and the chiefest of sinners can do that. We need above all things to realize that we are the children of God, and that those about us are His children and it is His love and life that prompt us to help His children, our brothers; and the power to do right and to be right cometh down from above and is the gift of God in whose image we are made. The second Commandment: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" is still the second Commandment, is dependent upon and grows out of the first and great Commandment: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind." (Luke 10:27.)

In our thought, and in many of our deeds as well, we are headed toward humanism, an "ism" that teaches that the human is sufficient and supreme, and that God may be left out.

SANCTUARY DAY.

We, particularly of the Protestant faith, need to learn more vitally the sanctity of our houses of worship. It is, therefore, very fitting, we think, that the Home Missions Council of the United States and Canada has called upon the churches of the country to observe, Sunday, May 31st, as "Sanctuary Sunday." Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, the General Secretary of our Extension Boards and the President of the Council, recommends that our Congregational-Christian Churches fittingly and appropriately recognize that day to bear in mind that the house of God is set aside for worship, and that it is hallowed in a special sense by the presence of God, provided those who gather to worship are in the spirit of reverence and devotion while they worship. The resolution, we are told, for observing the day rose out of the conviction in the Council that Protestantism in America needs to keep in mind that the house of God, where the people gather to seek inspiration for Christian living and offer prayers and thanksgiving, is a sacred place and that during the hour of worship there should be reverence and a spiritual seeking after God. It is pointed out that over one hundred years ago, in 1935, the Massachusetts Missionary Society in annual report said: "No church can live and flourish without a sanctuary. A farmer might as well try to prosper without a barn or a mechanic without a work-shop."

In this connection it is emphasized that there are still thousands of one-room structures in our country, bare and unattractive, inside and out, with little suggestion, in their architecture or mechanism, that the place is a house of worship and God's dwelling-place on earth. We are not meaning to indicate even that God dwells in houses made with men's hands or that His presence can be contained within four walls. Word of King Solomon, in dedicating the temple of worship to our God, come to us now:

"Behold the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain Thee; how much less this house that I have builded? Yet have Thou respect unto the prayer of Thy servant, and to his supplication, O Lord my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which Thy servant prayeth before Thee today: that Thine eyes may be open toward this house day and night, even toward the place of which Thou hast said, My name shall be there; that Thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which Thy servant shall make towards this place. And hearken Thou to the supplication of Thy servant, and of Thy people Israel, when they shall pray towards this place: and hear Thou in heaven Thy dwelling-place; and when Thou hearest, forgive."

There is need of "Sanctuary Day."

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

We of maturer years are often amazed at some of the conduct of our young people. In many instances, they seem to have thrown restraint to the winds and to have torn down, or ignored the moral standards of previous generations. One wonders if the following facts from the Presbyterian Banner do not account in large measure for this deplorable situation:

"Between 27 and 36 million young people under the age of 21 are without any religious instruction in the United States.

"There are 13,000,000 boys and girls under 12 years of age without religious instruction of any kind in the United States.

"We are told that most young people accept Christ before the age of 16. After 16, there is only one chance in 29 of winning an individual for Christ and the Church."

Can we of maturer years and experience excuse ourselves from deplorable conditions when in our homes, in our Sunday schools, and in our communities we are doing so little to bring into the lives of our young people, when those lives are yet susceptible, eager and anxious, the life of Him whose compassion and love alone are sufficient for them and for us? The moral and spiritual standards that our Lord established cannot be ignored with impunity, and woe be unto that people who disregard His teachings and fail to transmit those teachings to childhood and to youth.

BURNING UP MONEY.

The above is the caption of an article we herewith quote from the Richmond Christian Advocate. Before the quotation is read, will our readers bear in mind that while the love of money is the root of all sorts of evil (I Timothy 6:10), it is at the same time the means of grace to many and is of divine origin and content. God made the gold and silver, the basic elements of money, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. Thus with every dollar we spend, bearing as it does the rightful inscription, "In God we Trust," we are brought either nearer to the God who gave it, or driven further from Him. Our temples of worship, our places of prayer, our ministries of service, our preachers, priests, and heralds of the Gospel, our tidings of joy to all people, are sustained and made available through money. And now read the quotation referred to and meditate a moment:

"Cigarettes in the lips of men and women are being smoked at a rate that is almost inconceivable. According to late government reports, during the year 1934 there were consumed in this country 125,611,000 cigarettes. This is a number beyond comprehension, but a better idea of it may be had when we realize that this means just about 1,000 cigarettes for each man, woman and child in this country. Though vast numbers of women are smokers, it is still true that there are more people who do not smoke than there are who do.

"Among the non-smokers of cigarettes are many of the oldest men, very few women past middle life are smokers, and then the great multitude of small children are still free from the habit. It is probable that these classes of non-smokers make up at least half of the population. This means, therefore, that those who smoke must consume double the number of the average for the whole population, or an average for the smokers of not less than 2,000 a year.

"Think for a moment of the cost of this smoking. At the low average of ten cents a package, they cost $1,256,110,000. Saving that amount and using it for necessities and beneficial comforts of life would aid very greatly in relieving the financial distress of the country."

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION.

The City of Burlington is most fortunate to have, almost within its limits, and certainly within the area of its community interests, an institution with a record of service and accomplishment as distinguished as that of Elon College.

The value of this college to Burlington and vicinity, from an educational, a cultural, a religious and a financial point of view, cannot be overestimated. It has contributed immeasurably toward making Burlington a more prosperous, more progressive, more enlightened city and a better place in which to live. It has beyond doubt made possible higher education of many young men and women of Burlington who otherwise would have been denied the advantages of such training. It has helped prepare some of Burlington's most valuable citizens for their life's work.

It is accordingly of vital interest to this community that this college should succeed in the course of greater usefulness it has set for itself under its Development Program.

I therefore proclaim the ten days from May 18th to May 27th, 1936, inclusive, as Elon College Development Program Period in the City of Burlington, and urge the citizens to give their unstinted support to this cause, which means so much to the future of our community.

Given under my hand and seal of the City of Burlington, North Carolina, this 16th day of May, 1936.

EARL B. HORNER, Mayor.

GOD'S TENTH.

A. J. GORDON.

In touching the question of giving, or paying, we touch the most vital point pertaining to the consecration and spiritual power of the church. In saying this, we speak from experience, as we certainly speak according to Scripture. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, . . . and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Mal. 3:10.) Here, plainly, the payment of tithes is made the condition not only of an abundant outpouring of the Spirit but temporal blessings are definitely promised in the succeeding verse. "And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts." Prayer, testimony, effort, self-denial—how often do we hear these duties mentioned as summing up and fulfilling the requirement of tithes! But "tithes" means money or other property of equivalent value; and the effusion of God's Spirit and material prosperity is here made contingent upon bringing in these tithes and paying up these dues to God.

A tenth of his income was required of the Jew to be set apart and sacredly devoted to God's treasury. And this was the first tenth, and not the last tenth; the first fruits, not the dregs and leavings. And while the amount is not specified in the New Testament, the same principle is carried over. "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him" (I Cor. 16:2). Here is consecrated giving—laying by in store—a certain sum set apart, and made sacred to God's use, and which thereafter one should no more think of using for himself than he would think of taking the same sum from his neighbor's pocket. And here is proportionate giving—"as God hath prospered him." Ought the proportion to be any less under the gospel than under the law? Surely not when we remember that we have as our exemplar One who, "thought He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we, through His poverty, might be rich." In the light of such high standards, who can say that at least we ought not to give one-tenth of our income to the Lord's work?

Two Surprises.

If any Christian who has never tried it will make the experiment, conscientiously following it through to the end in prosperity and in adversity, we predict for him two surprises. First, he will be astonished at the increased amount which he is enabled by this method to give to the Lord's work, and, secondly, he will be astonished at the increased spiritual and temporal prosperity which the Lord will give to him. For observe that here is an instance where the Lord actually makes a challenge to his people, and sets up a test case, saying, "Prove me now." Taking this Scripture in connection with others, we find that there are two points to be demonstrated.

1. That faithful and proportionate giving will be rewarded with super-abundant spiritual blessing. The statement does not require proof, since experience has stamped it already as an axiom. Other things being equal, that Christian who opens the broadest outlet for charity, will find the widest inlet for the Spirit. The health of a human body depends upon its exhalations as well as upon its inhalations. It is reported that a boy who was to personate a shining cherub in a play, on being covered over with a coating of gold-leaf, which entirely closed the pores of the skin, died in consequence, before relief could be afforded. Woe to the Christian who gets so gold-leafed over with his wealth that the pores of his sympathy are shut, and the outgoings of his charity restrained. He is thenceforth dead spiritually, though he may have a name to live.

2. That faithful and proportionate giving, which is another name for tithing, will be rewarded with an abundant temporal prosperity. This is a saying hard to be received, but it has the emphatic support of Scripture. "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." (Prov. 3:9, 10.) This is but one specimen of many from the Old Testament. "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom." (Luke 6:38.) Do we believe these words of our Lord? and can we question that they refer to abundant temporal returns in recompense for abundant giving?—Exchange.

TRAVELS OF AN OLD BOOK.

By MRS. EDITH HORNSBERGER.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania has recently received the Urmy bible bearing the date 1720, old records of the Urmy and Wismer families, an old colored picture of the Tree of Life, and an illuminated poem by Joseph Urmy, done in 1805. The poem is a marvel of coloring and penmanship; and was done by the great-grandfather of Rev. M. J. Honsberger. The colors were homemade. These articles are the gift of Mrs. Honsberger and were the treasured possessions of her husband. When he was a child in Markham, Ont., the grandmother, Anna Urmy, daughter of Joseph, lived in the home and the greatest treat the children could have was to look at the pictures in the old book their grandmother kept in a chest of cherry wood. It was brought to this country with a group of Mennonites who settled around Philadelphia. When the trouble with England came, they refused to fight and moved to Canada, taking up rich farmlands near Vine and that region. Five hundred miles these people went, mostly through woods, with horses, cattle and other domestic animals and fowl. The children and older people rode part of the time, but the others walked. They made short days, and by the middle of the afternoon made camp near water. They milked the cows, gathered the eggs and with game and fish procured as they traveled, feasted as they went. After peace came, some of the families returned to this country, but others remained in Canada. Twice Ann Urmy traveled back to Philadelphia to visit relatives and friends. Her daughter Fannah (Frances), married a teacher, M. J. Honsberger and he died of pneumonia a few months before the birth of his third son and namesake. Mrs. Honsberger married again and when the grandmother reached the nineties, the children begged her to give the Bible to one of them. She told them the one who committed to memory the longest portion of the New Testament could have it. Michael John memorized the book of John and won. He became a carpenter and cabinetmaker, then felt the call to the ministry. He was then a deacon in the Christian church in Markham, Ontario. He entered the Christian Biblical Institute in Standfordville, N. Y., taking with him the big tool chest he had made and the Bible. After graduating, the tool chest and Bible went with him to pastorates in Medusa, N. Y., West Mansfield, Mass., Freedom, N. H., and to Kittery Point, when he retired from active ministry.

The tool chest is now owned by James Eliot Amee and the Bible, picture and records, have returned to a resting place near their first home in America.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The following Standing Committees were appointed by the President of the Southern Convention for the Biennium 1936-38:

Committee on Temperance—Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, Col. J. E. West, Rev. S. M. Penn, Rev. S. E. Madren, Mr. L. E. Carlton, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Dr. J. W. Manning.

Committee on Social Relations—Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Dr. P. H. Fleming, Rev. Robert Lee House, Rev. George N. Edwards, Rev. W. E. Wisseman, Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell.

Committee on Evangelism—Dr. John G. Truitt, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Rev. O. D. Poythress, Rev. A. W. Andes, Mr. W. B. Truitt, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Rev. Arnold Slater.

Committee on Memoirs—Dr. W. M. Jay, Rev. T. Fred Wright, Dr. C. H. Rowland, Mr. J. A. Kimball, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Rev. C. E. Newman, Rev. R. L. Williamson.

Committee on Finance—Dr. I. W. Johnson, Col. E. E. Holland, Rev. Robert Lee House, Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Rev. John R. Chapman, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Mrs. John G. Truitt.

These committees have an opportunity to render valuable service during the present biennium. If the members of the committees named above will take their work seriously and begin to plan for active service much progress may be observed within a few months. The Committees on Temperance, Social Relations and Evangelism have a plenteous harvest field in which they may labor incessantly. The churches are compelled to face the inevitable battle with the forces seeking to establish a nation-wide liquor traffic. The young people are being enlisted by the advocates of social drinking and they are responding to this appeal. If the tide is not turned millions of men and women will be habitual drunkards ten years from this date. The church is the only organization which will stand firm in the midst of this conflict. Political leaders will change their attitude to suit the policies advocated by the daily newspapers.

The Committee on Social Relations also has a great opportunity. Conflicting economic and industrial systems are in a life and death struggle for supremacy. It is not the function of the church to become the tool of any political group or sociological school. There are those in our midst who would have the church pronounce a lift the hand of spiritual blessing and benediction upon the "New Social Order," whatever that is. If the church becomes the champion of either system, new battle lines will be formed and the church will be the victim of spiritual chaos. It is the function of the church to blaze a new trail of spiritual living and social ideals which transcend any existing political or social orders. The Committee on Social Relations should endeavor to show us the way out of our spiritual distress. Writing reports will not solve the problems. High sounding resolutions and impassioned addresses will not meet the emergency. But the Gospel of Jesus Christ has a message and a spiritual ideal adequate for every age and every problem. It is not necessary to attach any qualifying adjective to this Gospel. It is popular in some areas to call this the "Social Gospel." The word "Gospel" is sufficient. That covers the whole field. If humanity will receive the Gospel of Jesus Christ and permit it to leaven the social, economic, industrial and spiritual life of the nation, that will transform from within. Our greatest dangers, today, are within. That is the real place to begin a reformation.

This intensifies the need of Evangelism. A Convention Report on this topic is valuable and helpful. But how great is the need for a nationwide revival of religion! The church must reach the lost. It should reach the indifferent. That is our greatest challenge.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE COMMUNITY.

By DEAN J. D. MESSICK.

There are many organizations and agencies in every community, large or small, each of which has a vital program of its own. Unfortunately, we are not so conscious as we might be of the common task. This common task is, after all, that of creating a better spirit and community life, building a finer citizenship, and raising the general level of human experience. Any organization that does not comprehend this larger responsibility, or fails in its program to provide an adequate expression of this larger purpose is quite unworthy of a place in the life of the community.

Our lodges and clubs, our social bodies, our forums, our civic groups, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Cosmopolitans, the Campfire Girls, the Boy Scouts, Knights of Columbus, Masons, Odd Fellows, and many others are all potentially, at least, if not actually, engaged in creating new ideals and ennobling the souls of their membership. They are stimulating men and women to build in their communities environments that will contribute to the improvement of all the people. Included in their projects are the establishment of parks, the building of athletic fields and bathing beaches, the encouraging of various musical organizations, the supporting of municipal bands and symphonic orchestras, the erecting of libraries, the elimination of slum areas, and the improvement of leisure time activities. The opportunities are unlimited.

The Junior Home and Child Life Magazines have formulated exceptionally fine clubs for the teaching of character development in the primary and elementary grades. The State of Nebraska in its state course of study has a splendid program known as the Knighthood of Youth Club, which is adapted to elementary and high schools. The Junior Red Cross offers valuable help to club work throughout the school.

Current practice is emphasizing a wide variety of clubs to meet this demand. Such organizations supplement rather than carry on the work of the school. Schools have been slow to recognize the educational possibilities of voluntary club activities. Gradually the old type of "Literary Society" has given way to Student Activity Clubs. The object of such clubs is to develop character traits in the individual and to promote the policies of the school. In club activity there can be a favorable opportunity for pupils (1) to learn to work together, (2) to explore many fields of interest, (3) to explore himself, and (4) to interpret his experiences.

The types of clubs would vary in each locality. A club needs to have some definite aims and a plan of work in the beginning. There should be progressive steps of advancement in club activities. The schools and homes and churches are justified in looking to these community organizations to contribute to the support of all these worthy endeavors to the end that our youth may be surrounded by wholesome and uplifting environments. More than that, if the schools are to succeed truly in carrying out the mandate of commonwealth as expressed in its statutes then those schools cannot do other than insist with John Dewey, that "There cannot be two sets of ethical principals, one for life in the school, and the other for life outside the school. As conduct is one, so also the principles of conduct are one. The tendency to discuss the morals of the school as if the school were an institution by itself is highly unfortunate."

It is very clear, then, since practically every institution and "arrangement of society" provides for character training that some effort should be made specifically to utilize these organization along with the school, the home, and the church in building character.

Service clubs in Nebraska have, we find, been unusually alert to avail themselves of the opportunity of cooperating with local school leaders in the development of programs for the stimulation of higher ideals of character. In many, if not most of the urban communities, the civic clubs have given school people an opportunity to discuss before their groups the school program of character education. It has been universally true that these civic clubs have given positive assurance of a desire to know more about the work and to learn how they may lend an influence.

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has for a number of years been vitally interested in the citizenship program of the public schools, and each year awards a Junior Civic and Industrial Efficiency Certificate to all members of Junior High School groups who have attained a certain prescribed rating in various activities or projects. It has been found to be a most valuable means of enlisting youth in a program for finer citizenship and character training.

Some other important factors that can and should be powerful agencies for building right character are the public press, the radio, and the motion picture. Society, through its schools, home churches and many other organizations, has an opportunity to unite in a common cause. Such a united effort will be a positive influence for elevating the ideals of all the people and for making possible the raising of the standards of such institutions as the public press, the radio, and the motion picture.

"A nation is made great, not by its fruitful acres, but by the men who use them; not by its mines, but by the men who work them; not by its

S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION OF THE N. C. AND VA. CONFERENCE.

(Rev. W. T. Scott, who is president of this Convention and is now located in Jacksonville, Fla., has laid upon Brother W. T. Dunn, Lynchburg, Va., the duty and responsibility of arranging the program and making all preparations for the Convention. Brother Dunn, under date of May 14th, makes the following announcement.—Editor)

The Convention will be held at Ingram Christian church June 4th and 5th, the first session to be held at 10 A. M., and close with dinner June 5th. We plan to have reports from the following secretaries: Children's Division, Religious Education, Young People, Adult, Administrative, Missions, Orphanage, College, and will have group conferences on the following subjects: Worship, Teaching, Christian Endeavor, Administration, Stewardship of Money. Our theme is to be: "Building a New World." Our theme song will be: "Building Day by Day." We are to have the All-South Secretary of Christian Endeavor, Mr. George Wilson, with us on both days, to help with the Christian Endeavor. All of the Conference Leaders are not decided on yet, but we hope to have the program ready for the next issue of THE SUN.

The dues for the Convention are five cents per enrolled member of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society. This amount should be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. Floyd H. Dunn, 3407 Memorial Avenue, Lynchburg, Va., prior to the Convention.

The program committee decided that our institutions of the Church should be mentioned by one person and at one session we will have the reports of all the institutions and Rev. F. C. Lester will speak on the work of all these. One-night session will be given over to the work of the Young People. At this time the Youth Fellowship will have charge of the devotional service, the report of the Christian Endeavor will be made, and an address on Christian Endeavor.

We are looking forward to a great Convention, and hope to see a large attendance at this convention.

OUR REIDSVILLE CHURCH.

One of the most successful revival meetings has just closed in the First Christian Church, Reidsville. A two-weeks' meeting was conducted with the pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese preaching each service. There were fifty conversions, with thirty additions to the church. Since Mr. Neese came to our church, 18 months ago, there have been 117 additions in membership to the church.

Our Sunday school has reached our goal of 427 in attendance. The classes are well attended and also well represented in church services. The Baraca Class of which the pastor is teacher is composed of 70 or more men, who are much interested in each phase of the church work. We are very much in need of our new building. The outside brick work is almost completed and if some kind reader or friend of our work could just make us a friendly donation at this time our work could go on and the classes complete their rooms.

Mr. Neese has asked each member of the Church to tithe during May and June and a part of the tithing money to be used on the new building.

Our prayer meetings are well attended with approximately 150 people on Wednesday evening. These seem to be the most inspirational services we have and each one looks forward to our meetings.

We, as members, are especially proud of the wonderful work Mr. Neese has done since coming to serve our church and we are so thankful to our Heavenly Father for the deep, consecrated, Christian life he lives and what his influence means to others in our church, city and community.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR BIBLE?

By REV. IRA CHARLES SWANMAN.

St. Matthew.

In the period between the Old and New Testaments three great factors, (1) Greek language and thought, (2) Roman order and roads, (3) Jewish Monotheism, took final form, and about 400 years after Nehemiah, they met to create "the fulness of time," the moment when the "promise" to Abraham was fulfilled by the coming of Christ, i. e., the Messiah or "anointed One." St. Matthew, presenting the Hebrew viewpoint, and emphasizing the "fulfillment of prophecy," appropriately stands first in the New Testament.

Questions.

- 1. From whom is Christ's genealogy reckoned? (1:2, 17.)
2. What does Emmanuel mean? (1:23.)
3. Where was Christ born? (2:4-9.)
4. Where was our Lord's childhood spent? (2:23.)
5. What were the three main divisions of Palestine? (3:1, 4:12, 10:5, v. map.)
6. What was Matthew's occupation? (9:9.)
7. What was the "unpardonable sin" that called forth Christ's remarks about it? (12:24.)
8. How many "parables of the Kingdom"? (13:1-53.)
9. What was the Messiah's popular title? (21:9, 22:42.)
10. Is there any Christian theology (i. e., any mention of Christ's divinity) in the Sermon on the Mount? (Read chapters 5-7.)

Supply the Missing Word.

- 1. Blessed are the ..... for they shall obtain mercy. (5:7.)
2. Ye are the salt of the ..... (5:13.)
3. Where your ..... is there will your heart be also. (6:21.)
4. No man can serve two ..... (6:24.)
5. Judge not that ye be not ..... (7:1.)
6. Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, .... ye even so to them. (7:12.)
7. The Son of man hath not ..... to lay His head. (8:20.)
8. Come unto Me all ye that ..... and are heavy laden. (11:28.)
9. Thou art the ....., the Son of the living God. (16:16.)
10. Upon this ..... will I build my Church. (16:18.)
11. Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the ..... (21:9, 23:39.)

14. Whosoever shall exalt himself shall be .... (23:12.)
15. The spirit indeed is ..... but the flesh is weak. (26:41.)

Thought Question.

Does St. Matthew admit Gentiles to spiritual equality with Jews?—In Southern Churchman.

As a white man, I am not disposed to tell a Negro what is the Christian thing for him to do . . . We do not know how poor we are until we have made a friend across racial lines. . . . In the South there is a beginning of appreciation of the Negro—a stirring of the leaves in the mulberry trees, but in the North there is a frigidity—a slow freezing. . . . We must passionately believe in our program or we get to the stage of brilliant powerlessness.—Buell Gallagher, at the Midwest Regional Conference, Grinnell, Iowa.

MISSIONS
REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE WOMAN'S CONVENTION AND OFFICERS.

The Twelfth Biennial session of the Women's Missionary Convention of the Congregational-Christian Churches held in Burlington, N. C., April 28th, was most helpful and inspiring. The theme for the day was "Ye Shall be Witnesses," Acts 1:8. Mrs. W. R. Sellars, the President of the Convention, presided in a dignified, charming manner and with Mrs. C. M. Cannon as the splendid secretary, the business and program was carried out in a smooth and efficient way. The reports from the various conferences showed a steady increase in interest and efficiency and the treasurer's report was most encouraging. The high spots of the day were the addresses. Dr. J. O. Atkinson spoke on "Missions, the Duty and Aim of the Church"; Mrs. D. E. Brown, associate secretary of the Commission on Missions, N. Y. City, spoke on "The Women and the Effective Church"; Miss Olive Green, Missionary to Turkey, spoke on "Our World-Wide Objective"; and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Jacksonville, Fla., used as her subject, "Standing by One Another."

The various department superintendents made their reports during the afternoon session and these revealed a steady growth and many plans of outlook for the future.

The following officers were elected:

- President—Mrs. John G. Truitt Suffolk, Va.
- Vice President—Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C.
- Secretary—Mrs. C. M. Cannon, Elon College, N. C.
- Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. J. B. Rollings, Suffolk, Va.
- Treasurer—Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle, Norfolk, Va.
- Supt. Spiritual Life—Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, N. C.
- Supt. Young People—Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Greensboro, N. C.
- Supt. Literature—Mrs. Carl R. Key, Holland, Va.
- Supt. Life Memberships and Memorials—Mrs. M. J. W. White, Norfolk, Va.
- Convention Editor—Mrs. W. M. Jay.
- Supt. Cradle Roll—Mrs. B. D. Jones, Holland, Va.

One of the main points discussed at this meeting was the importance of well-prepared and attractive programs for each local missionary society meeting. Be sure to have a program committee whose business it is to see that a worth while program of missionary education is presented each month. Then acquaint your society with the recommendations adopted at the convention and appearing in this week's issue of the CHRISTIAN SUN. Write to Mrs. D. E. Brown, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. and tell her your wants and needs and she will send you literature which will help you on your programs. Read the Missionary Herald and CHRISTIAN SUN for helpful suggestions and materials. Lastly, send a write-up of your plans and accomplishments to your convention editor to be put in THE SUN. How about a question and answer corner?

If you have a problem, ask your question through THE SUN and we will have it answered by someone later. Let's try it.

Mrs. W. M. Jay.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RECOMMENDATIONS.

(At Woman's Convention, Burlington, April 28.)

We, your Committee on Recommendations, would offer the following:

1. The year 1937 marks the 25th anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Convention. We recommend that a committee be appointed whose duty it shall be to compile an adequate history of the Convention, and build a Program of Celebration to be used by churches and Conferences during the year.

2. That every society make sure of at least one paid-up subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and that there be at least one person in each society responsible for a careful reading of each copy. We further recommend the Missionary Herald and Advance as sources of information and inspiration.

3. We recommend that every society president's name be placed on the mailing list of Literature Headquarters, 14 Beacon Street, Boston and the President's Exchange, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.

We recommend the continuance of packets for Juniors and Willing Workers.

We recommend that the Conference Superintendents of Literature be prepared to recommend and sell booklets which in their judgment would enrich society programs.

We recommend that the Young People be encouraged to incorporate the Youth Fellowship Programs in their Mission Programs.

4. We recommend that all other sources, such as Literature Headquarters, 14 Beacon Street, Boston; President's Exchange, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York; Recommended Study Courses; and Spiritual Lift Programs be re-endorsed and continued; further, that the project known as, "A Day of Mission Study," introduced and so successfully promoted in 1935 by Mrs. L. E. Smith, be formally approved by this body, with a request to Mrs. Smith that in so far as circumstances permit she arrange for a similar program each year.

5. We recommend the continued support of the Elon Leadership Training School, and urge societies to send students there and to other available summer schools of religious instruction.

6. We recommend that women from this Convention avail themselves of the privilege of attending the Duke Institute of International Relations, June 8-19, 1936.

7. We recommend that every Christian woman diligently study the problems confronting our government and cast her vote for candidates whom she considers most worthy of her support during the 1936 elections.

8. We recommend to this body that a committee be appointed to appeal to the Southern Convention for the employment of a full-time worker to promote the Educational Program of the whole church.

9. This convention acknowledges and appreciates the splendid cooperation which has been given by pastors in promoting mission work, and we recommend that all pastors of churches which do not have missionary societies be requested to cooperate with State Officers and District Leaders to the end that there may be a missionary society in every church within this Convention.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. S. C. HARRELL, Chairman.

CENT-A-MEAL ITEMS.

At His Work Again.

New Mexico and the Southwest offer unsurpassed sunshine cure for tuberculosis. Tuberculosis Health Communities on the hot desert provide three-room bungalows with a nurse for every few houses. The cure does not come quickly, but the cost of lying in the sunshine with good food is low, yet many who have gone for the cure run out of money and turn to the local minister for help.

Our Extension Boards make a small appropriation to help Congregational-Christian patients by a monthly grant of $20. Such help saved the life of a young man from Montana who had been a state leader of young people, and he is again at his work.

Two Cent-a-Meal boxes in a year provide a month's care for such a patient.

Self Help.

Several girls at our Dorchester Academy in Georgia faced the necessity of quitting school because their parents could not pay the monthly board of $12; yet they could send from home table provisions. Principal Jenkins fitted an unused room with a second-hand stove, students made lockers and a table, and four girls are doing their cooking there with supplies sent from home. It cost $20 to fit out this kitchen. A second has been made and two groups of students are learning to cook under supervision of the matron. More kitchens are needed. Two Cent-a-Meal boxes will in a year provide one and keep four girls in school.

Brought Milk to Thousands.

A group of Philadelphia women organized as an Emergency Food Brigade to get milk for children undernourished because of the depression. Through Cent-a-Meal boxes they collected enough to provide 22,712 quarts of milk.

Pennies mount up when given regularly thru many boxes.

Turned the Tide.

A minister writes: "We have used the Cent-a-Meal boxes for two years. Without them our payments on the apportionment would have been extremely small during these hard years. I expect to get more boxes."

Where a Little Goes a Long Way.

One of our medical missionaries in Africa, with his wife, who is a nurse and African assistants trained by them, give at their little hospital 40,000 treatments a year to folks who have never before had touch with scientific medicine. A Cent-a-Meal box will in a year meet the cost of 327 treatments. Where else will a small investment bring such a return?

If you wish boxes for your dining room table, order of your Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C., or of Commission on Missions, 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y. Ten cents a box.

WHAT WE OWE AND HOW TO PAY IT.

By a Layman.

"Was not tithing a Mosaic and Jewish ritual law only, and hence abolished by Christ?"

No; no more than the law of the Sabbath. Abraham paid tithes hundreds of years before Moses was born. So did Jacob. So, it is fair to suppose, did all the patriarchs. So did the Phoenicians, the Egyptians, the Chaldeans and in fact, all the nations and tribes of antiquity to their gods hundreds of years before the Jews had an existence. No fact in ancient history is better established than this. In giving the law to Moses the first mention of the tithe is the simple statement, "The tithe is the Lord's." Not shall be, but is, as it always has been, and it was at least twenty years after this before God directed that the Levites, his ministers, should be supported from it. It was still longer before the tithes mentioned in Deuteronomy xiv, 22-29, were instituted. These were clearly national and ritual, and expired with the Jewish economy, but the law of the "Tithe Terumoth," God's Tithe, did not expire and never will.

"Did Christ commend the law of tithing?"

Emphatically, yes. He said to the Pharisees, referring to Judgment, Mercy and Faith: "These ought ye to have done and not (referring to tithing) leave the other undone." Can you find in His teachings any stronger language than this regarding the observance of the law of the Sabbath? Can you find any so strong?

"Is there any reason why our Saviour did not more strongly commend the law of the Sabbath as well as the law of the Tithe?"

So far as the records show, He never spoke of the Sabbath or the Tithe, except to the Pharisees and other Jews, who did not need teaching on either subject, except in the line of reproof for their observance of the form rather than the spirit of both laws.

"Do you mean to say that I should expect greater temporal prosperity if I scrupulously devote one-tenth of my income to the upbuilding and spread of Christ's Kingdom in the earth and that the remaining nine-tenths will go further in the support of those dependent upon me than if I should try to keep all for my own use?"

Yes. That is a plain question in plain English and I mean just that.

"Can you explain the reason?"

No; or at least not fully, and there are many more of God's laws which no one can explain. Gravitation, for instance, or how vegetation grows or how flowers are colored, or, to come nearer to the subject, I cannot explain why men and animals can do more and better work in one or five years working six days in the week and resting—doing nothing, so far as work is concerned, every seventh day.

"Do not we and they need rest?"

Certainly, but just now we are dealing with facts, not theories and reasons, and the facts are that it pays in temporal prosperity to observe the law of the Tithe, just as it does to observe the law of the Sabbath.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

THE JOY OF LIVING.

"Uncle" (Rev. J. W.) Wellons, who was then almost a hundred years old, used to say when I was in college, "It is good to be here." That was the way he felt about any good program and about living at Elon College. But he was not the first to say those words. Peter said them when he and James and John had seen the glistening clouthes and glowing countenance of Jesus on the Mount of Transfiguration. He wanted to build tabernacles for each of the honored guests, and remain there. He found joy in living.

Among the types of people I know are some who remind me of bumblebees. They are always buzzing. They make much noise, but seemingly accomplish little. They live for themselves and sting others if they are bothered. Another group are like butterflies. They flit from place to place with no particular reason save to show their personal beauty. If they have plenty of pretty clothes and can deck themselves up for people to see, they seem to be satisfied. Others are like honey bees. They work all the time. They think the greatest sin is to fail to work. Honey bees drag out the drones and kill them. Business so absorbs some people that they kill themselves as well as others at work. They have no time to live because they are so busy making a living.

To be happy one must be appreciative—and that takes time. Say the word of thanks for the favor received and it will bring you joy. Look at the flower and appreciate its beauty and your worries pass away. Accept the weather as it comes and be grateful rather than complain about it, for it takes both fair and foul weather to supply us with water and food. Gratitude pays big dividends in personal happiness.

Sacrificial service is another pathway to happiness. Peter wanted to build places of comfort for Jesus, Moses, and Elijah. He forgot about himself. He could sleep on the floor. Just to be near would be enough. Until we learn to serve and forget self, happiness stays out of reach. But those who serve freely usually sing in their souls.

Another way to find the joy of living is to keep good company. Peter was with the Law-Giver, the Prophet, and the Master of Men. No wonder that he could say, "It is good to be here." Those who read good literature, who study the lives of noble people, who live in the presence of kindly, aspiring, and good people, have a chance to find the currents of joy running deep in their own hearts.

Whether you must live in the kitchen, in an office, in the school room, on the farm, or in a factory, whatever your station in life may be, face the sunlight which God gives daily and say sincerely, "It is good to be here," and you will find the joy of living coming to you.

BEYOND THE BLUE RIDGE.

Mountains have a way of dividing, but friendship unites. There has just come to me an announcement of a Leadership Training School to be held on the western side of the Blue Ridge mountains. Those mountains divide our south-east territory so that the people from West Florida, Alabama, Kentucky, and Tennessee can't come to Elon for the Training School. But I happen to know many of the leaders, and this friendship makes me interested in what is to happen beyond the Blue Ridge on June 8-14, next.

The school will be held at Grandview, sixty miles north of Chattanooga, on U. S. Highway 27, in Tennessee. Those who go will take most of the things they will need to use. Four dollars will pay expenses, or "eats" can be substituted for cash. All who attend will share in the work of cooking and keeping house. Surely there will be fine fellowship among those friends in the beautiful mountains.

Among the leaders will be Rev. F. P. Ensminger, Miss Marguerite Davison, Rev. A. W. Hurst, Rev. Carl C. Dollar, Rev. and Mrs. George Penn, Rev. E. E. White, Chandler Adams, Miss Lillian McKee, and Rev. Milo J. Sweet—all my friends, and many others whom I do not yet know. Good wishes to you, my friends, as you work and worship there on the sunset side of the beautiful mountains! Come over and see us who gather from the mountains to the sea and from Virginia to Florida on the lovely campus of Elon College June 29 to July 5. Whether you come or don't, we are all working at the same great task, and therefore we are together.

THOSE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTIONS.

It is now time for the election of delegates and the collection of dues for the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions. Your local convention has written, or will write soon to each school and society telling the time and place and giving other information. Let me add my word just here.

These conventions are intended to be of help to the local churches by developing a friendship with people of other churches and by inspiration, instruction, and comparison with what others are doing. New plans and programs are considered in these conventions. Churches check up on themselves and see also what others are doing. Usually there are inspirational addresses. All told, the conventions can add much to the growth of the schools and societies that are represented. But those who have no delegates or visitors present cannot get the benefits of the meeting.

The Board of Christian Education depends quite largely on these conventions for money with which to work. It is not much that any school or Christian Endeavor society is asked to give. It is this once during the year that you are called on for contributions usually. Will you please see that your school or society sends in all that it is asked to send, and more if you can? We try to put back into the churches a dollar's worth of service for every dime sent to the Board. Do your best to help us serve. The North Carolina and Virginia Convention will meet at Ingram church June 9, 10, and the Valley of Virginia Convention at Bethel church June 11. Programs are in the making, and there will be something worth while for all who attend.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S BULLETINS.

A notice has just come stating that the Young People's Department, 14 Beacon St., Boston, can furnish Bulletin 55 on "The Effective Young People's Organization." Sub-titles include, Plans its Program, Faces Vital Issues, Provides Stimulating Meetings, Supports the Church, etc., etc.

Those responsible for the youth organizations should keep in touch with Miss Lucy Eldredge and Dr. H. T. Stock, secretaries of Young People's Work, as well as this office. They have an abundance of materials, and we have some. "The Pilgrim Highroad" is always filled with helpful materials, and all young people who hope to mean something to the Church should read this magazine, the cost of which is $1.25 for single subscription, or $1.00 in clubs of five or more.

SOME OTHER THINGS.

Liberty Springs young people meet with the young people of Bethlehem Church (Va.) Thursday night of this week. A party for the young people in First Church, Norfolk, prevented me from attending the other meeting.

Are you or your group going to help send our delegates to the Lakeside Youth Conference in June? If so, please hurry. The time is short now.

Should the Editor of this page become the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN? The Convention said: "Yes." He thinks: "No." What do you say?

Have you contributed to the campaign fund to put Elon College out of debt? That is a mighty good thing to do, and you will be glad of it in years to come.

THE STORY OF THE CRIMINAL: WHAT SHOULD BE DONE WITH HIM?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 31, 1936.

Scripture: Matt. 5:43, 44; 12:12.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Create respect for law. Tit. 3:1-7.

Tues.—The higher powers. Rom. 13:1-4.

Wed.—Apply the Golden Rule. Matt. 7:12.

Thur.—Help the weak. Rom. 15:1-4.

Fri.—Guard against revenge. Rom. 12:17-21.

Sat.—Let justice prevail. Deut. 16:18-20.

Our first problem is to catch the criminal. It is necessary that the criminal be apprehended quickly. Public safety is in grave danger so long as he is free. Much improvement has been made in methods of crime detection. "Scientific," "laboratory" and "training" are new words in crime vocabulary. Our people are becoming finger-print conscious. There is a strictly up-to-date "who's who" in crime. Those who laughed at the law are dead. An intricate system of coordination among federal agencies makes crime increasingly difficult.

The functions of the prison is to curb rather than to cause crime. Our efforts are threefold: first, to prevent crime in the first instance; second, to prevent its repetition; third, to prevent confirmed criminals from continuing.

Let us insist that criminals receive a fair trial, that justice and mercy may never be exploited by mob rule. We must insist that punishment be corrective and not vindictive. We will earnestly con-

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE.

LESSON VIII—MAY 24, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "In your patience ye shall win your souls."—Luke 21:19.

LESSON: Luke 20:1—21:38. Printed Luke 20: 45-47; 21:1-9, 34-36.

Beware of Those Who Play at Religion.

"And in the hearing of all the people he said unto his disciples. Beware of the scribes." The scribes were the copiers of the Scriptures and the teachers of the oral law. As is so often the case, familiarity with sacred things had bred a lack of appreciation of them. The study of the law instead of making these scribes more humble before God had made them more proud before men. They walked in long robes, they loved salutations, they picked out chief seats in the synagogue, and the places of honor at the feasts—they were proud, self-seeking, ambitious, vain. They either lived at the expense of widows who were wealthy and who were their patrons, or what is more likely they stealthily took from widows of moderate means their means. And then for a pretense, for show, in order to make folks think that they were religious, they made long prayers. It was a caricature of religion. It disgusted Jesus. He solemnly asserted that those who pretended to be religious would receive greater condemnation than those who made no such idle profession. Religion must be sincere, it must be real, there is no place in it for pretense.

"Not What We Give But What We Share."

In one of the Temple courts there were a number of trumpet-shaped boxes—thirteen to be exact—into which the worshippers put their offerings, each trumpet-shaped receptacle devoted to some benevolence. Jesus sat and watched the people one day as they made their gifts. Some put in substantial gifts. One woman, a widow, put in only two mites—she could not have put in any less. But Jesus declared that she had cast in more than any of the others who had put in gifts, for she had given sacrificially, indeed she had given everything she had, while the others had simply given of their superfluity, the left-overs. It is not what we give, but the measure of sacrifice involved in the giving. It is not how much we give but how much we keep for ourselves. Giving is a revealer of, and a test of character. The amount given is not the ultimate measure of a gift. And Jesus sees us as we make our gifts and He judges them by the standards of heaven and not of earth.

"When Shall These Things Be?"

The Temple at Jerusalem in Jesus' day was a magnificent and a seemingly permanent building. Imagine the surprise of the disciples, then, when Jesus bluntly said that the time was coming when not one stone should be left upon another. In reply to their question as to when these things should be, Jesus gave an answer that has been variously interpreted and viciously misinterpreted. It would appear that in verses 8 and 9 He was referring specifically to the destruction of the Temple in connection with the fall of Jerusalem. He specifically warns against false Christs, and against those who would come in His name, claiming to be Him. He clearly says that although there shall be wars and tumults, there is no need to be afraid, for these other things must first come to pass, "but the end is not immediately."

His emphasis is upon the words, "But take heed to yourselves, lest haply your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and the cares of this life, and that day come upon you suddenly as a snare." It would seem that Jesus was emphasizing readiness, watchfulness, preparedness. The time of these things was uncertain, but the necessity for preparedness was imperative. "Watch ye at every season, making supplication, that ye may prevail to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man."

Frankly the writer of these notes cannot be as dogmatic on these points as are some writers and speakers. There is much confusion in regard both as to the nature and the time of the coming of Christ. There have been those in every age who have seen in that age the fulfillment of prophecy and the background of the words of Jesus Himself. There are those today who would have us believe that world conditions today fit in exactly with this picture. It is interesting to see how exactly some speakers can work out charts in terms of the imagery and the numbers of the Bible, especially in the apocalyptic books of the Bible. The writer is frank to admit that he cannot speak a dogmatic word on the subject. And perhaps, alas for him, he cannot see any reason for becoming particularly excited about the matter. One thing is certain—Jesus would have us live at our best whether He comes soon or late. And the writer believes that in spite of what some folks say about the few being saved and the world going to the dogs, Jesus would have us serve and sacrifice that his kingdom might come and His will be done on earth even as it is done in heaven. Thanks be unto God one's salvation does not depend upon any one view of the meaning of these enigmatic sayings of Jesus. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ has been shed abroad in the hearts of countless believers who are poles apart in their theological views in the matter. That they are interesting subjects for speculation and study no one can deny. That they are necessary to salvation one can hardly demonstrate.

railways, but by the men who build and run them. America was a great land when Columbus discovered it; Americans have made it greater."

We should remember that if the school administration is to make a success of its dual responsibility of running the schools of today and through them the world of tomorrow, it will be obliged to keep one hand on the throttle of the school machine and the other hand on the pulse of the community life for which it is trying to train the children. The community life needs cooperation and frequently leadership.

And as has been our national experience in the past we must realize that only that democracy will be triumphant which has both intelligence and character; to develop them among the whole people is the task of education in democracy. To this task the administrators of school systems and the communities they serve must consecrate their best efforts.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"PERSPECTIVE."

"Now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known."

"Life is like a work of art. We must get away from it in order to understand it. We must view its details in their proper perspective in order to appreciate their meaning. We must look back upon the events of today from the vantage point of tomorrow in order to perceive their true significance.

"At close range a great painting appears to be little more than a conglomeration of colors, but when one steps back a few paces one begins to appreciate the beauty of the canvass. Likewise a close-up of life often reveals nothing but a jumble of disappointed hopes, frustrated plans, bitter experiences. We must step back a few paces. We must view the present from the vantage point of the future. Then things are seen in their true perspective meaning, purpose, order, beauty and revealed, where before we saw only chaos, and confusion, suffering and sorrow."

"Be still and know that I am God."

Prayer—Our Father, amid the noise and tumult of the day, may we be calm enough to ever hear Thy voice, and, be Thy voice ever so still and low, may we accept it as Thy call, and we shall answer with our devotion. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"OUR FATHER."

There never was a time when man was so completely the master of things around him as he is today, and there never was a time when he was so completely the slave of things, of which he was their master, as she is today.

—John Gass.

There can be no enduring alleviation of the social and political ills which plague us until there is an essential change of ethical and spiritual attitude in the rank and file of men.

—J. R. Angell.

The brotherhood of man is implicitly contained in the words "Our Father," and the happiness and contentment of man lies implicitly in living that brotherhood and that fatherhood.

Prayer—O Lord, restrain these eager souls of ours lest striving we shall strive for the wind and come to despise the truth. Help us to walk in the light of Jesus and be always found true. Then though the end be the cross, we will follow on.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"DESERVING TO BE BETTER."

"Wherefore I abhor myself."—Job 42:6.

Job's words are strange words to our ears today. Humility is not a present day virtue. We love ourselves and self-abasement is no requisite for exaltation. And yet we are not as far removed from the need as we may think, for there still remains with us a desire to be what we ought to be. The thing we will wish we had done when the final judgment comes is the thing for us to do today. We will not abhor ourselves in the judgment if we abhor our sinful selves today. The apostle tells us that if we judge ourselves we shall not be judged.

Prayer—O Lord, our Father, forbid that any self-conceit shall be in us to frustrate the spiritual life thou art waiting to give us.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE STRENGTH OF THE APPEAL OF LOVE."

"Friend, wherefore art thou come?"—Matt. 26:50.

These are words of our Lord addressed to Judas as the traitor was about to betray Him into the hands of the enemy. We wonder how Judas felt when the clear eyes of Jesus were laid upon him and when that soft, pleading voice, with all the beauty and glory of the innocence of heaven shining there, called him "Friend." It must have been hard for him to have gone through with it.

God has given us many barriers to keep us from sinning. The strongest of these is not the law but the love of Christ. Face the searching soul of Jesus and hear His still soft voice, and we cannot escape His call to "come unto me." How can I turn away to do evil and betray Him into His enemies?

Prayer—O Lord Jesus, who are so faithful to faithless ones, be Thou our friend, draw us to Thee always. Let us feel Thine eye and hear Thy voice. When we would forsake Thee, by Thy love forbid. Make us to hear Thy voice, and give us conviction to will to strive for Thee.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"SINCERE."

"For I say . . . to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly."—Rom. 12:3.

We are told that the word "sincere" has its origin from the Latin words "sine" and "cere." It came this way: builders used wax to cover up their flaws which appeared well until exposed to the weather and use. In contracts it became necessary to specify "without wax." They used the latin words, "sine cere." These two words have become the word for "sincere," by putting them together and dropping an e.

There are lots of people "with wax." They cover up, veneer, or put on a front that represents them to be what they are not. One may appear better than he is, or if goodness is not popular, he may cover up his best and appear to be a "rough-neck," or something worse than he is. Either is hypocrisy. Either is not "sincere." Either is "with wax." A sincere person is one who is not only free from that which covers up unworthiness, but is equally guiltless of that which pre-ther master, as he is today.

Prayer—O Lord, we would think of ourselves more highly than we ought to think. Help us to remember always that we are Thy children and to be pure and innocent, true blue midst all people. In Jesus' name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"RICH REPUTATIONS."

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."—Prov. 22:1-6.

A good name is not necessarily a great name. Some of the earth's most famous names are mentioned only to be execrated. Nero's, for instance, and the name of Judas Iscariot.

But a good name is everywhere blessed. We cannot mention John without an increased reverence for piety, or Paul without a stiffening of the backbone, or Livingstone without an impulse toward heroism.

And the wealth of a good name is not at all confined to such great names as these. It is the dower equally of humble folk, like Mary of Bethany, like the little maid in the household of General Naaman, like all who in any sphere sweetly do their best.

Prayer—Bestow upon us these great riches, our dear Saviour, even as we hope in Thee.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"CRUEL CHARACTERIZATIONS."

"Others mocking said, they are filled with new wine."—Acts 2:1-13.

How men jump at unkind conclusions! and there is nothing in the world less worth jumping at. If we place the worst construction on the deeds and words of others, we have no right to be displeased when others treat in the same harsh fashion our own deeds and words.

The apostles and the other Christians in Jerusalem at Pentecost were so moved upon by the Holy Spirit that they received the gifts of prophecy and of tongues. That the amazed listeners should charge them with drunkenness was little less than sacrilege; but do we not ourselves virtually say when others exhibit more religious enthusiasm than we feel, "They are filled with new wine?"

Let us seek in others the manifestation of God's holy spirit. Let us expect others to act in divine fashion. Let us believe the contrary of them only when we must.

Prayer—Help us, O God of love, into the charity which believeth all things and hopeth all things. Give us the spirit of Christ.—Amen.

A Story for the Children

SHOOTING STARS.

Jack and some of his friends had gone out into the country for a hike. After a while they came to a hole in the ground with fresh dirt thrown out around it.

"It must be an animal of some kind," Jack suggested.

"Let's dig it out," said one of the others.

They dug it out all right; but what they found was far more interesting than any animal. They found a curious rock—small, but very heavy. Just twenty-four hours before, this same rock had been more than three million miles away from that spot. That is so far away that if Jack's father had gone after it in his automobile and had been able to drive a thousand miles a day, it would have taken him twenty years to make the round trip.

But Jack's father could never have gone after it, for this strange stone came not from any place on earth at all, but from millions of miles out in space among the stars.

In fact, it was a piece of a star or a smaller heavenly body that had exploded a long time ago and still continued to travel through space. There are untold millions of these heavy rocks flying through space all the time. The earth travels through showers of them constantly; and it is estimated that thousands of them strike the earth's atmosphere every day. Only a few of them are seen, and still fewer are found. They travel so fast that most of them burn up when they strike the earth's atmosphere. Indeed, they travel as far in a second as you drive a car in an hour, or about thirty-six hundred times as fast as you go when you're out for a brisk drive with your father and mother.

The ones that burn up as they speed through the air are called meteors, while those that strike the earth are known as meteorites.

Some of these meteors appear to be small points of light traveling across the sky. They look like lightning bugs flying high, or like stars falling from the sky. But others streak halfway across the heavens like great sky-rockets, leaving brilliant trails of sparks behind them.

You are liable to see these meteors, or shooting stars on any clear, moonless night during the year. I have seen them while on a sleighing party in January and while camping out under the stars in August. One night a group of us counted nearly five hundred of them in a single night. Another night not long ago a friend and I had climbed a hill to watch the sunset. The stars were out when we started back home. "It ought to be a good night for meteors," my friend said. Hardly were the words spoken when a brilliant meteor shot out of the east and blazed across the northeastern sky. It left a dazzling trail of sparks behind it, and a bright path of light that glowed for several seconds. It seemed almost to hiss through the air, though it was probably fifty miles high.

But while you see meteors any night during the year your chances are much better in late summer or fall. The middle of November is probably the best time of all, for that is when the Leonid meteors appear. Some of them are seen each year, and about three times in a century thousands of them can be seen. A hundred years ago there were such great numbers of them that people who saw them said that the stars fell as thickly as snowflakes all night. It was estimated that more than two hundred thousand of them were seen that night.

There is no way of being sure of a meteor shower; but if one occurs, I guarantee you will have no trouble keeping awake. And even if you see only a few dozen shooting stars, it will be a night you will never forget.—Ray M. Johnson in Advance.

GATES COUNTY CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.
DAMASCUS.

Easter Sunday was a very busy day for the people at Damascus. At sunrise we had a dramatic sunrise service. "The Light of Life," given by the members of the church and friends from the other churches in town was inspiring and very much enjoyed by all.

The boys and girls of the church had charge of the evening service and they used for their program: "The Saviour's Seven Sayings." Each one on the program rendered his or her part just fine. This service was enjoyed by all.

EURE.

We are having a busy time at Eure. We hear much talk from church people about what we are going to do for our church. But we have gone by the talking part now at Eure. The paint is at the church and the painters are painting the building.

On May 17th, we had our annual memorial and home-coming service. Preaching at eleven o'clock with lunch at 12:30 and preaching in the afternoon. All members and former members and friends were invited to attend. We had a great day in the service of our Lord.

OAK GROVE.

We met in our regular quarterly conference Saturday, April 11th. At this meeting it was decided to elect three Junior deacons to help the senior deacons. Brothers H. V. Beamon, Emory Rountree and Emmett Jones were elected. These brethren were ordained at the eleven o'clock service Sunday.

We have been laboring under hardship for the last three months. The roads have been so bad we could not get to church on cars. Even if we had to walk in mud almost ankle deep, we have missed but one service and the attendance has been good.

HENRY C. HILLIARD, Pastor.
Sunbury, N. C.

YOUNG MINISTERS AT GRAHAM.

Last fall the Graham Christian Church was at a very low ebb and it seemed as if all activities would cease. No pastor was called and closing of the Sunday School was considered. In some way Mr. W. Alphonzo Grissom, a ministerial student in the Junior Class at Elon College became interested in the church and consented to preach for us on third Sundays, doing what pastoral work he could. He has preached most acceptably, has made friends and shown a strong missionary spirit.

We obtained the assistance of Rev. Millard Stevens, also a student at Elon and held a revival service May 3-10. Mr. Stevens did the preaching and Mr. Grissom led the song service. Although there was only one addition to the church, we feel that we are much helped by the meeting and the cooperation of these young ministers. We pray God's blessings upon them in their work.

A. H. R.

If we Christians, believing in the teachings of Jesus Christ and being guided by them, took a definite stand on modern problems, we could not only prevent another terrible war, but we could shape the political and economic tendencies of our day. As long as there is faith, civilization cannot be destroyed. As long as there is belief we will have the vital force necessary to improve the world.—Rev. F. A. Liotard, minister of the French Church, Washington, D. C.

Reading history, we smile at, we even admire, eccentricities of genius; but if we meet a warped genius in the flesh we hound him.—Gennett.

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Our Graded school closed Friday the 15th. The Orphanage had four to graduate—three girls and one boy—all happy to graduate. We rejoice with them, because it is a credit to them to accomplish this honor before they reach the age limit here.

The sad and touching part comes when they have to say good bye to their classmates and their loved ones at the Orphanage. It is leaving home to them. It brings a bit of sadness to those in charge here who have had the joy and pleasure of training them these years. They grow to be near and dear to us. We feel toward them as if they were our own children. It always fills our hearts with joy when they go out and make good in life. One of the girls will enter college this fall. Another one hopes to, but arrangements are not fully made.

The third girl will accept work with a big manufacturing concern in the near future. The young man has promise of work in the next few weeks. The Orphanage will have several others to go out shortly.

Each year when school closes we always have a number who have reached the age limit and go out. It has been our custom for a number of years when a child reaches the age limit during the school term to let it remain until the close of the school and make its grade.

It is real interesting to watch the progress the children make after they leave the orphanage. Of course, some get along better than others because they are more talented. We find in our follow-up of the children who go out that those who are faithful in their work here are faithful in their work after they go out to take work to make their way in life. When our four children stood to receive their diplomas at the close of school with a happy smile playing over their faces, I could not help but think that the care given them here and the money spent on them was a fine investment. The orphanage gave them a chance when they had none.

Blackwell. She graduated from Oberlin College, Ohio, in 1847 and, with much misgivings on the part of some members of the faculty, from its theological school in 1850. She was a classmate at Oberlin of Lucy Stone from whom has come the term "Lucy Stoners" for women who keep their maiden names after marriage. They married Blackwell brothers, whose sister, Elizabeth Blackwell, M. D., went to England for a medical education and then returned to found the Women's and Children's hospital in New York where women could be internes and women physicians could practice.

MRS. FRANK W. WILCOX.

Mrs. Frank W. Wilcox, 69, head of the woman's department of the American Missionary Association from 1913 to 1927 and then until 1932 associate secretary, died unexpectedly of a heart attack Tuesday morning at her home in Upper Montclair, N. J. Mrs. Wilcox for many years represented Congregational Women as a vice-president of the Council of Women for Home Missions.

Mr. Wilcox died in 1911 and in 1913, Dr. H. Paul Douglass, at that time corresponding or executive secretary of the A. M. A., who lived in Upper Montclair and knew of Mrs. Wilcox's activity in women's missionary circles, urged her to become successor to Miss Delia E. Emerson who was retiring after a period of service which had begun in 1869. Miss Emerson, now in her ninety-eighth year, is living at Biddeford, Me.

Mrs. Wilcox endeared herself to the workers in the churches, schools and hospitals of the Association and as an interpreter of these to the women in the missionary societies. She travelled much, wrote and spoke effectively but cherished especially the personal interest which she could share in the "box-work," those boxes and barrels of clothing, bedding, curtains and table linen, the "Martha" side of mission work, whose assignments between the field and the missionary societies she directed.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

tend that the criminal be educated and that he be treated as a human being.

The criminal should receive religious training. The majority of men and women in jail have never even been introduced to religion. Not only have they had no religious training, but their treatment by society has been far from Christian.

They are walking examples of what happens when privileged people refuse to admit that they are their brother's keeper. There is no better investment for the State than providing religious training for the criminal.

For Discussion.

1. Is it true that some men and women are worse criminals when they are released from prison than when they entered? Can this be blamed on their associates? Prison rule? The State?
2. Do you believe in capital punishment? Give reasons for your answer.
3. Do you believe that criminals should be dealt with scientifically or should they be just punished?
4. Investigate and report on the conditions at the jail in or near your community. What, if anything, is being done to remake men?
5. In what ways can the criminal be trained for good citizenship?
6. When a person sins God will forgive him and give him another chance. Should society give the criminal another chance? Mrs. W. B. W.

WOMEN SMOKERS.

A woman said to us a little while ago: "Women have just as much moral right to smoke cigarettes as men have." All of which is granted in toto. On the other hand, men have the same moral right as women to paint their finger nails red, brown or pink. Men have the same right as women to wear a "permanent wave" or to parade in skirts. But a man like that would have qualified for a show of freaks in a traveling carnival. What we are saying is that some things look worse if men do them and others look worse if men do them and others look worse when indulged in by women because there is a fundamental difference between men and women, "believe it or not."—*N. Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

OBITUARIES

ETHERIDGE.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in His Infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove from our midst our dearly beloved Brother C. C. Etheridge, who departed this life Saturday, May 9th, 1936, in the 51st year of his life.

Whereas: From the tree of life the buds and blossoms fall with the ripened fruit, some lives are so full of usefulness that they adorn the world and bring blessings to those around them. Such a life was that of our dearly beloved brother, co-worker, and chairman of our Deacons' Board.

Whereas: He was one of those who walks the trail of life, and leaves such memories along the path. He made life a pleasure to all those who were associated with him. True and faithful in character, he drew friends to him who trusted him. His place in our Church is vacant and our hearts are sad, but while we as friends mourn our loss, our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to the wife and children.

Therefore be it resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family. And be it further resolved: That a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a page of our records be dedicated to his memory.

CASWELL.

(The following account of the death of one of our very faithful Christian ministers.)
W. W. STARNES, Secy.
Old Zion Church, Norfolk, Va.

"Rev. E. R. Caswell died February 29 very suddenly. He was deacon of the city ministers, having been pastor twenty-one years at Laconia, N. H., and before that at Swansea Christian Church. He studied at Boston University and at the Gordon School of Theology. A classmate from Concord, N. H., conducted the funeral services. The daily paper expressed the opinion that he was one of the best known men in the city and would be greatly missed. He leaves a widow, three daughters and a son. His death is a loss to the whole Southern part of New Hampshire, for he had held, or had opportunities to hold, special meetings in various parishes of friends. He was a strong preacher of the Bible and also a very faithful pastor."

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR INVESTMENT IN MEN AND WOMEN

SOME investments pay three per cent. Some, with more risk, six or even ten per cent. Many fail to pay anything and vanish entirely. There is one investment to which there is no risk attached and which will pay living dividends far beyond the value of money and beyond the span of time allotted to human beings.

This investment is in Christian Character. Its dividends are men and women equipped for the heavy responsibilities of leadership and service. If you are not a stockholder the opportunity to become one is now offered to you. It is an opportunity you cannot afford to ignore.

DECORATION DAY

By PHILIP JEROME CLEVELAND.

A blare of bugles shakes the sky,
Wind-crumpled flags go swinging by
And to the throb of war-worn feet
Long khaki lines press down the street.
A cheer roars from the market place
And hope illumines each young boy's face;
The din is now so deafening
It drowns the robin's song of spring.

Inside one house the long lines pass
A mother weeps alone—a glass
Of sweet fern on the table spread,
And on the wall the shapely head
Of one—a boy—about whose lips
A smile still clings. Devout, she sits
Beneath his face, not knowing why
He had to leave her—had to die.

Still throngs can hear the marching feet;
But in the houses of that street
Now kneel a bent and broken line
Of gray-haired mothers—so like mine,
To pray the God of earth and men
That war shall never come again.

Two lines went down the city's way,
One young in years, one old and gray—
The seen and unseen passed today,
One line to fight—and one to pray!

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. Robert Lee House, Newport News, Va., preached the baccalaureate sermon for the Sanford High School, Sunday, May 24th.

The Southern Baptist Convention, in session at St. Louis, Mo., recently voted against the survey of social and economic conditions in the South, and also voted against the resolution favoring union with the Northern Baptist Convention.

Now why should our neighbor, the North Carolina Christian Advocate, get off a thing like this: "What is the remedy when a public speaker does not know when to stop? A man who knows prescribes as follows: 'The man who thinks by the inch and talks by the yard, should be dealt with by the foot.'"

Concord Church, Caswell County, N. C., Rev. L. L. Wyrick, pastor, held the annual Memorial Service, which was very largely attended, Sunday, May 24th. The former pastor, Rev. J. S. Carden, to the delight of the congregation, preached at the morning service. In the afternoon Dean J. D. Messick of Elon College was the speaker.

The forty-sixth Commencement at Elon College was concluded on Wednesday of this Week, when thirty-seven young men and women received their diplomas. There were present quite a number of alumni and former students and well-wishers of the College, and there was evidenced much interest in the plans which are now in progress to make of the College an even more useful enterprise.

Elon College first opened her doors for students in September of the year 1890, and all the members of her first faculty are still living, with the exception of the late lamented President, Dr. William S. Long, and one member of the original faculty, Dr. J. U. Newman is still in the faculty and giving good account of himself and his great ability as a teacher and scholar.

The editor sends greetings and gratitude for being remembered with the following and congratulations also: "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Godwin Hyatte request the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, June Joy, to the Reverend Robert Lee House, on Tuesday, the ninth of June at eight o'clock in the evening, First Congregational-Christian Church, Newport News, Virginia."

The program for the 34th biennial session of the Afro-Congregational-Christian Convention is now printed and covers five full days, May 31-June 5. The place of meeting is Kinches Chapel Christian Church, Graham, N. C., Rev. W. M. Lake, Pastor. The acting president of the Convention is Rev. J. D. Farrar, D. D., Newport News, Va., and Rev. C. A. Harris, D. D., is secretary. Quite an elaborate program is presented and a large attendance is anticipated.

A very suggestive and appropriate Children's Day Program has been prepared and published by the Church Extension Boards of the Congregational-Christian Churches. Requests and orders for programs should be sent direct to The Sunday School Extension Society of Congregational-Christian Churches, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York. The program takes in the pupils for various ages and departments and will be found quite interesting.

The 18th session of the North Carolina Pastors' School, the third session of the Rural Church Institute of International Relations, are to be held at Duke University beginning Monday afternoon, June 8th. The roster of speakers and teachers for these institutes is especially promising and attractive, and any pastor or reader who may be interested should address a request to Duke University for a program for these institutes which have proven so very valuable in past years to many of our ministers who have attended them.

Mrs. Jesse F. West, relict of the late Judge J. F. West, of Waverly, Va., passed away from her home at Waverly May 19, 1936. The burial was from the home May 20th, the funeral service being conducted by the pastor of the deceased, Rev. T. Fred Wright, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. J. L. Foster, Elon College, N. C. Mrs. West had been for a long time a member of our Waverly Church, of which she and her late husband were faithful, loyal and life-long members. We express our sympathy for the bereaved ones. When "Mother" goes away there is always sadness in the separation.

Rev. James Everette Neese, who graduates from Elon College this week, having completed his course—the Bachelor of Arts Degree—was, by order of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, in annual session, Concord Church, last November, ordained to the full orders of an elder at 3:15 P. M., Sunday, May 24th, at Elon College, the Ordaining Presbytery being J. O. Atkinson, chairman, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Dr. C. H. Rowland, Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. J. U. Newman. Brother Neese is pastor of nearby churches and many of his members were present to witness the solemn service of ordination. Several of his ministerial brethren were present to give him the right-hand of fellowship and welcome.

Deacon J. J. Rountree, Norfolk, Va., died suddenly from a fall at his home at 7:15 P. M., May 20, and was buried in the Rountree burial ground near Damascus, in Gates County, May 22, the funeral services being conducted by the pastor of the deceased, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle of Christian Temple. Brother Rountree leaves to mourn their loss a wife and three children, Mrs. Lester W. Haynes of Norfolk, J. Hinton Rountree, Business Manager of Elon College, and Frances Rountree of the home. Our sympathies are extended to the bereaved. Brother Rountree was a good man, living such a life of faith and loyalty to his church as to leave an inheritance imperishable and incorruptible to his family and loved ones.

The Methodist Protestant General Conference, meeting in quadrennial session at High Point, N. C., after a lengthy debate, voted by a large majority for the merger of the three Methodist bodies—the Methodist Episcopal Church (North), the Methodist Episcopal Church, South and the Methodist Protestant Church. The first named voted for the merger by a very large majority in quadrennial session at Columbus, Ohio, leaving only the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to vote on the union—the prevailing opinion being that this body will also be favorable to the union. In case the annual Conferences of these bodies vote confirming the act of their General Conferences, this will make the largest Protestant denomination in America, numbering altogether over 8,000,000 members.

By order of the Executive Committee of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, after due examination, the vice-president, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, in an appropriate service in the Whitely Auditorium, Elon College, at 3:00 P. M., Sunday, May 24th, licensed Prof. D. J. Bowden to the Christian ministry. Prof. Bowden, son of Deacon D. J. Bowden of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., is a member of the Elon College Community Church, by which church he was recommended for licensure. As a teacher of religion in Elon College and by his exemplary walk and Christian character, he has proved himself highly worthy of this privilege granted by the Conference and is welcomed into the fellowship of the ministry by pastors and laymen who know him and his work in the School of Religion at Elon College.

A writer who signs "Mrs. V. Much Irked" in the Methodist-Protestant Herald is no more irked than the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been since this monstrosity of language crept into so many quarters and persons. Read what "Mrs. Much Irked" says and tell your neighbors about it, and if they all take heed there will still be enough of the unreached to irk the writers and speakers of correct English for some time to come: "Why don't we stop it? We hear people say nice things about a man sometimes and then, like a slap in the face, call him Rev. Smith. In the name of all that's English and polite, let's stop our Rev. Smith-ing and at least give him that appreciated 'Mr.' that every little boy hopes to grow to. If his name is Sam or Bill or Tom and you leave it out, do put in Rev. Mr. Smith. Rev. Smith, Rev. Jones, Rev. Brown is unpardonable."

SUN readers should bear in mind and give the information that the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training is to be in session, beginning Monday afternoon, June 29th, to Sunday, noon, July 5, 1936; the cost of the entire school, board and registration is sent in by June 15th. The chairman to furnish the information is Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, 117 W. Forsyth St., Jacksonville, Fla., or the dean, Rev. F. C. Lester, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va. It is to be hoped that a large number of our ministers, church leaders and young people in the churches will take advantage of this school which promises so much to all who attend. An excellent program is to be presented. "World Missions" is to be taught by Rev. Wm. C. Bell, one of our missionaries to Africa. Other courses which will be given are—"Personal Religious Living"; "Family and Parent Education"; "Administration of Children's Work"; "Church Music"; "Youth Fellowship at Work"; "The Young People's Department"; "Vacation Church Schools," etc.

THE GENERAL COUNCIL MEETING.

The main feature of the program for the biennial meeting of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States to be held at Mount Holyoke College, So. Hadley, Mass., June 16 to 23, will be a series of seminars on the general theme, "The Effective Church."

The mornings from 9:30 to noon, except Sunday and on the closing day, will be devoted to the seminars. The sub-topic for each day will be introduced by two speakers. All registered persons will then separate into eight previously assigned discussion groups.

On the closing day, the findings of the discussion groups will be presented for joint discussion and the adoption of a message to the churches.

Associate membership in the Council is open to all persons who wish to enroll. There is a registration fee of one dollar for this enrollment. This entitles the members to a badge of admission, the rights of the floor at seminars and as otherwise announced, the assistance of the hospitality committee in finding lodgings, the advance reports, the minutes and other printed matter.

The voting membership of the Council numbers 850 and consists of delegates elected by the State Conferences and by the Associations, or representatives of colleges, officials of the Council and editors of national papers of the denomination.

Visitors will be always welcome within the limits of the seating capacity.

Noonday luncheons for laymen only are to be held in the First Congregational Church of South Hadley. Suggestions of topics for discussion will be gladly received by Donald A. Adams, 152 Temple Street, New Haven, Conn., chairman of the national Laymen's Advisory Committee.

Rooms completely furnished in the college dormitories with meals in the college dining rooms will be furnished at the rate of $2.75 per person per day to the limit of the accommodations. Names of all delegates and associate members will be sent on to the College office at South Hadley as rapidly as they are received at the General Council office, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City. It is suggested that persons planning to attend should also write directly to the College Comptroller of the College, Mr. Boardman Bump, South Hadley, giving information as to when they will arrive and how long they will stay.

Hotel accommodations, if desired, can be secured in Holyoke, Amherst, Springfield and other nearby communities. Reservations can be made through Dr. Moses R. Lovell, Second Church, Holyoke, Mass., a general chairman of the local Council committee. For those who wish to camp, a well-equipped auto park will be provided with lights, rest rooms and cooking facilities.

The platform meeting the first evening will be the occasion for the moderatorial address to be given by the honorary moderator, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Pastor of Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, N. Y. An address of welcome will be given by President Mary E. Woolley of Mount Holyoke College.

REV. CHARLES E. BURTON, D. D.

Congregational Church, Norwich, Conn., who will speak in the Second Church, Holyoke.

MARY LYON HALL, MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE

Of special popular interest in the program will be the Council Lectureship, the noon worship services, the Sunday services, and the platform meetings each evening.

Dr. Albert E. Day of the Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, Md., will be the Council Lecturer, speaking each afternoon at five o'clock upon "Religion and Experience." The topics for his separate lectures will be: 1. "The God of Experience." 2. "The Experience of God." 3. "The Jesus of Experience." 4. "The Experience of Jesus." 5. "The Experiencing Soul."

The noon worship services and the communion service Sunday morning will be conducted by the Council Chaplain, Dr. Arthur H. Bradford of Central Congregational Church, Providence, R. I.

The Council sermon will be preached Sunday morning in the College auditorium by Dr. Ferdinand Q. Blanchard of Euclid Avenue Congregational church, Cleveland, Ohio. The alternate preacher will be Theodore M. Shipherd of Park

Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford, Connecticut, Assistant Moderator of the Council will preach Sunday morning in the First Church, in Springfield. Arrangements are being made for other visiting ministers to occupy pulpits on Sunday in Massachusetts and the Connecticut valley by Dr. Edwin B. Robinson of Grace Church, Holyoke.

Sunday afternoon the Council will hold a special session in the Municipal Auditorium, Springfield, Mass., in observance of the tercentenary of the founding of the city. The principal addresses will be given by James Grover McDonald, former League of Nations' high commissioner for refugees from Germany and honorary chairman of the Foreign Policy Association; and Dr. T. Z. Kee of Shanghai, China, Secretary of the World Student Christian Federation.

A platform meeting will be held in the auditorium of Mount Holyoke College, Sunday evening, when Dr. Frank C. Laubach of the Philippines

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MOVING.

The flight of the Hindenburg on regular schedules across the Atlantic from Germany to the United States and return, carrying, as the huge flier does, tons of mail and freight, in addition to more than one hundred passengers and crew, emphasizes the fact that we are moving. The huge zeppelin has now established her record and is to continue its schedule through the summer, with trips weekly between the two continents. So the matter of navigation in the air across the ocean is no longer a venture, or an experiment, but an established custom. No wonder we are upset in our thinking and activities. The only thing that man has done from Adam to the present is "to move"—either move himself or the things about him. Our Creator, in endowing man with imperial and divine attributes, saw fit to limit him, after all, to the sole business of moving. No man from the cradle to the grave has done anything else than this. The farmer moves his plow and hoe and the soil. He moves the grain to the furrow and, after moving away the grass and all hindering agencies, finally moves the scythe to the harvest and then moves the grain to the mill, and power moves the machinery for grinding, and the flour is moved to the bin, then to the cook-stove and the table. The same is true of all the attitudes and activities of man. He can only move things. The manufacturer moves the raw material to the machine, and the machine against the raw material, and the traffic agency to the consumer, and the consumer moves the material to whatever need in the moving process the material may be required. The last analysis in every activity and achievement of man reveals the fact that the sole sphere of man's activity on this earth is that of moving himself or something else.

And thus the rapidity of motion, the swiftness with which men, women and events have moved, and been moved within the last decade, have upset our human adjustments, and we have somehow to establish new standards of measurement in time and space that we may fully get hold of ourselves and of the universe about us. The only security, the sole hope of mankind in a moving world, is the one supreme and omnipotent Power from Whom cometh all energy and the ability to move, viz: The great God of the universe who holds in His hands and the grasp of His power the planets above us and the earth and all contained therein. He is the source of our power and the strength of our might, and He it is that changeth not and is the same today and forever, and in Whom at all times we may find safe anchorage and security for all our aspirations, undertakings, and activities.

CONSIDER AFRICA.

"Africa is no longer isolated." Basil Mathews need not have told us that in the preface to his new book on Africa. We have just seen how Italy reached out its arm and took over a large part of what was formerly called the dark continent. David Livingstone, it is recalled, gave to the world the declaration that "here is the open sore of the world" and I "beg to direct your attention to Africa." This continent may have been remote in Livingstone's day, but it is just outside our door now and, "because," says Basil Mathews, "today that great continent is central to the world's life, I invite you to 'consider Africa.'" Besides being the open sore and a fertile portion of the world, it has been for long ages the besetting sin of men and nations to exploit this country and do injury to its peace-loving, helpless peoples. Away back in 1791 William Pitt, the great orator, speaking in England's House of Parliament, said: (as quoted by Mathews) "And now, sir, I come to Africa . . . How shall we hope to obtain, if it be possible, forgiveness from heaven for the enormous evils we have committed, if we refuse to make use of these means which the mercy of providence has still reserved for us for wiping away the shame and guilt with which we are now covered?" So back in the 18th century, England had already committed her sins against Africa, and the other nations have done likewise. The God of mercy and justice surely has yet enormous debts against many nations for the crimes they have committed against Africa and the Africans. Our own nations, along with the rest of the world, was and is guilty, and the war of 1861-65 baptized us in a sea of fratricidal blood through which we may have expiated, in a measure, some of the wrongs we had committed, but not all, for the wholesale and heartless lynchings of Africans in our midst is a crime for which atonement must be made some day.

But Basil Mathews has written a great book, and it will help us if we shall read it—"Consider Africa." It is, indeed, a country worth considering. Through trade and the use of her products we are closer to Africa than many may think we are. Mathews thinks the citizens of the United States "will be startled to discover that at their breakfast tables over three and a half million pounds of coffee are used each year from Ethiopia alone, and some twenty-five million pounds from Africa as a whole; fifty-five million pounds of palm oil are poured annually into American soaps, lubricants and cosmetics; and one hundred and ninety million pounds of African cocoa are used in our chocolate candies. For billiard balls and hairbrushes America imports over eight thousand pounds of ivory. For gloves and shoes, purses and coats many million pounds of sheep, goat and kid skins are sent to the United States from Ethiopia, Kenya, Algeria and Nigeria; and thousands of monkey skins from the Gold Coast."

"The housewife would hardly imagine that the kitchens of America are using some seventeen million pounds of African spices and salt, including over four million pounds of cloves, one and a half million pounds of ginger, over eleven and a half million pounds of salt; and more than a hundred thousand pounds of vanilla. It seems fantastic that the tiny beaks of canaries in the United States should consume over two million pounds of African canary seed. Copper—thirty-three million pounds are annually imported into this country from Africa—is only one of numerous minerals from that continent; the most valuable are the diamonds and the gold, of which the Bantu youth mine the greater part of the world's supply. Our demand for those materials thus ties us up in the bundle of life with Bantu men and women and youth even in the remotest equatorial forests of Africa."

This, however, is only the economic side, the moral and spiritual side being that through these contacts our Western industrialism, reaching out to control Africa's industries, has upset the African mind and methods; and in large areas of African life produced serfdom quite equal to the ancient slave regime. We are yet sinning against Africa, and the only way of removing this sin and shame and crime is to give the gospel of salvation to the African and the African a fair show and a square deal, remembering always the words of Him who said: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." We invite CHRISTIAN SUN readers to "Consider Africa" with Basil Mathews, a copy of whose book many times worth the price of $1.00 in cloth or 60c in paper, may be had from the Friendship Press, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York.

It will greatly enlighten, maybe help us white people of Christian America (?) to consider Africa.

J. O. A.

PERSONAL WITNESSING.

THE SUN's editorial column called attention, more than once recently, to the life and labor of a layman who believes with all his heart that the chief cause for slow growth in the church today is that so few members of the church, other than the pastor, bear witness for Christ by word of mouth, "individual to individual." Spiritual awakening comes when there is an awakening of an interest on the part of the laity, not in the welfare of the church, corporately, but in the salvation of individuals in the community. Quoting again from a personal letter, our friend says:

"This work seems so easy to begin and to carry on. No organization, no complications, no machinery. Just seeking on the part of the individual layman to do God's will in telling others. And if the churches will to do 'His' will, the power will come. Make Christ known—what a privilege as well as duty. What spiritual enrichment will come to a church and people who make it a vital part of their service.

"I have two letters now I wish I could read. I would send them but must not reveal the authors. I think you know them both—very prominent clergymen. Both long letters. One writing of my foreign work, after re-reading my experience says: 'Think of what it means to those tens of thousands who have learned of Christ through you. I wish I could feel that a single soul has been led to Christ through anything I have done or said.' Now think of that! All his life he has been in Christian work, and he is in it now. Of course, he is pessimistic and low-spirited to say that. I know him well and have for years, and don't think that's true of him by any means, but in his mind a lack of definite results troubles him. It is cause for serious thought. The other letter from a distant city. After reading the booklet, 'Concerning the State of Religion in the Churches,' he says of my article that the responsibility is the pastor's for the pitiable condition of the churches. He uses these words 'us Ministers and Pastors!' Note he is one of them. He states boldly 'We have taken into the churches thousands who are not Christians by any standard he knows of.' He cites a big church 'in a New England city,' largest in the State. Less than 50 per cent of its membership give anything to church or Missions, or perform any service. He wishes he was a young man again with the knowledge and vision of his age to start over again. At the close,—he is sure a spiritual awakening is coming 'for God still lives in Christ.' Note:— I am getting some inside views of Christian service that confirms my convictions that 'Personal Witnessing for Christ by Word to Individuals' is a vital way of 'Making Christ Known.'"

Because THE SUN's editor has the conviction that this humble layman, who writes the above, has laid his finger on the weak spot in present-day churches, he passes this information on, hoping that pastors and laymen may consider this matter—and do something about it. "Ye shall be my witnesses" are the words of the Seeking, as well as the Saving Christ.

MURDERING THE INNOCENT.

The world has just witnessed a tragedy of first magnitude. The "victory" of Mussolini, the dictator, and his Italian cohorts, over helpless Ethiopia seems to be complete. This writer does not recall that war was ever declared against Ethiopia by Italy. Mussolini wanted Ethiopia, and because he had the weapons of warfare, robbery, and destruction in his hands, he proceeded to his self-appointed task. It was nothing more or less than the wholesale slaughter of the helpless by the strong and the mighty. One of the pathetic incidents of the sinful procedure was the helplessness of the League of Nations to prevent or check the catastrophe. Nor is our nation to look upon this with pride or pardon, since we have persistently refused to join the League and, even during this Italo-Ethiopian conflict, we went on in the even tenor of our way, refusing to allow Ethiopia to purchase from us munitions of war that might have aided her in her self-defense. Of course, our nation was seeking neutrality and only watched at a distance, and with indifference, the conflict of the strong against the weak.

One is reminded of the ancient history of Rome when she arose to might and majesty through the sheer force of arms, and held the peoples of the wide world in and under her sway and dominion through force—and sang of "Arms and the Hero." Force, injustice, human might, may gain the ascendancy and rule for a season but not always. Ancient Rome, even with her advanced civilization, crumbled and went to pieces before the steady march of justice and mercy, divine love and righteousness. Somehow, some day the God of love and equity overcomes the forces of injustice and hate, and this same God will not be deaf to the prayers and pleas of the abused and the injured.

THOUGH WEAK WE LIVE.

It is by and through the power of God that we live and shall live. Paul said as much of the Christ: "For though He was crucified through weakness, yet He liveth by the power of God." We may be indifferent to that Power, unconcerned as to its source and even deny Him who gives the power. It was noted in the papers recently that Clarence Darrow, the noted criminal lawyer of Chicago, said on his 79th birthday anniversary, "to believe in immortality of the soul, one must believe in God, and I believe in neither." Poor soul! Though he faces a future that is blank and without hope, though he repudiates and denies the power by which he lives, yet that Power sustains him while he docs ilve. How different the words and the assurance of Paul: "For we also are weak in Him (the Christ), but we shall live with Him by the power of God. Know ye not yourselves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates." Thus we live in the flesh by the power of God, and if in the flesh we realize that the power of God sustains us and that the strength of His Son is sufficient for our weakness, we shall live in the spirit in spite of all that disease and afflictions and death itself can do.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

May is the month for Memorial Day. The 30th day is recognized as a National Decoration Day. Many churches have designated a day—usually Sunday—as a time for decorating the graves in their respective cemeteries. It is a beautiful custom. There is ample authority in the Bible for such a service, which honors the dead, and recognizes the goodness of God in guiding human destiny.

One of the heart-breaking facts about death is that one may be forgotten. Dr. W. W. Staley was instrumental in removing the remains of the late Dr. W. B. Wellons and others from a small cemetery to Cedar Hill in Suffolk. He thought it would be fitting to have a brief service in recognition of their lives. Only a few people accepted the invitation to be present. After the service he said: "It is sad to see how soon one is forgotten after the funeral is over. Fifty years from now who will know that I have ever lived?"

The cemetery is an interesting place to visit. It is a silent reminder of human mortality. Here and there a Scripture quotation may be carved upon a tomb stone as a comforting promise of our immortality, but the most lasting impression is, that death is the common enemy of man. As one reads the inscriptions upon these tomb stones one is reminded that these brief facts are revealed to an immortal soul. God is interested in every one who has lived and passed away. The Creator is watchful over every one of his creatures and His deepest concern is for the salvation of man and the spiritual uplift of the human race.

When the time came for Joshua to lead the Israelites over Jordan and establish them in the Promised Land of Canaan, God gave definite instructions about the establishment of a memorial of this great day. Twelve men from the twelve tribes were designated to take up twelve stones from the river bed and set them up as a sign, or memorial of that historic event. And it should be observed that this order was given before the people crossed the river bed. History should be written while it is being made. Much is lost because historians wait too long before they think of writing great spiritual history. Some day children will gather around these twelve stones and will ask questions about them. "Then ye shall let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land. For the Lord your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as the Lord your God did to the Red Sea which He dried up from before us, until we were gone over; that all the people of the earth might know the hand of the Lord, that it is mighty: that ye might fear the Lord your God forever." (Joshua 4:22-24.)

Three lessons are suggested by that heap of stones: 1. God has a hand in human history. 2. People should know that the hand of God is mighty. 3. People should fear God forever. And these lessons were crystalized in a background rich in spiritual leadership. As long as that nation learned these lessons, and recognized the leadership of God, it grew in power and influence. There came a period when memorial stones meant nothing to them. Their children were not permitted to play around this heap of stones and ask questions. In all probability the stones were crushed and scattered. Their lessons were forgotten.

How this age needs such a lesson! God is forgotten. He is neglected. Historians are leaving Him out of the records. The church has lost His power. Many do not know His Voice. If the grave stones in our cemeteries may become a sign of Divine leadership, and if Memorial Day may be an occasion for sitting at the feet of historians, and biographers, who will tell us of God, and His mighty power, and call all the peoples of the earth to fear Him, then let us have a universal observance of Memorial Day. Make it spiritual and let it ring with the voice of God in human destiny.

RADIO ADDRESS.

(Presented at Norfolk, Va., May 12, 1936.)

Inheritance and environment are the contributing factors to individual ability. Instruction and training are the principal forces in the development of personality. To the home, the school, and the church the individual is committed for instruction and training. Tremendous responsibility rests upon these agencies, particularly in a day such as ours. Neither the home, nor the school, nor the church can evade this responsibility or its consequences. The home stands at the beginning of this instruction. The college with its advanced and technical curriculum stands at the end. At this moment I am to speak in the interest of higher education and particularly with reference to Elon College.

Today, May 12, has been designated as alumni day. By means of newspapers, mail deliveries, personal messengers, and radio broadcasting, we hope to reach everyone who at any time was a matriculated student at Elon College. You will be greatly interested in what has been happening and what is happening today in the interest of your college. Every advanced step on the part of the college increases your admiration but at the same time multiplies your responsibility.

Elon College is an institution of higher learning, owned and controlled by the Congregational and Christian Church. It is interdenominational and positively religious. It is located in the beautiful Piedmont section of North Carolina. It is adequately equipped for first-class instruction in the classics, arts, sciences, and religion. Dr. Robert L. Kelly, Executive Secretary of the Association of American Colleges, has said over his signature that Elon College is the best equipped small college in this country. Honorable O. Max Gardner, Ex-governor of North Carolina, declared Elon to be one of the beauty spots of the state. Elon was founded in 1889. During its nearly half century existence it has graduated more than one thousand young men and women and has enrolled on its campus an additional seven thousand. These graduates and students have gone out to take their places efficiently in the various trades and professions of life. The second ranking officer in the chaplaincy of the United States Navy is an Elon College graduate.

During these years of depression Elon College has moved steadily forward along all lines that make for efficiency and progress in institutions of higher learning. During the past four years the student body has more than doubled. Three additional dormitories have been opened to accommodate the increased enrollment. The faculty is made up largely of younger men and younger women, selected on the basis of superior scholarship and adaptability for class-room instruction and college responsibilities.

Elon College has been in serious financial difficulties. Debts mounted up and far beyond the financial ability of the natural constituency of the college. Through the helpful cooperation of creditors and a handsome bequest of a benefactor of the college our debts have been reduced to $160,700. We are now in the midst of a campaign to raise $250,000 to be used in complete settlement of all claims against the college, to provide for necessary repairs, and to supplement our current funds so as to prevent annual recurring deficits. In this campaign members of the Congregational and Christian churches in North Carolina and Virginia, every alumnus and alumna, and the generous friends of the college will be approached. In a financial crisis a college naturally turns to its alumni. Every alumnus of a college is indebted to his alma mater. He may have paid the tuition charge, plus the fees required. Even so, it is a known fact that the average college student today only pays about 50 per cent of the cost of his education, the other 50 per cent has been provided by contributions to buildings, grounds, equipment, and endowment. If you will turn back to your records and secure the totals paid by you for your college expenses you can easily ascertain somewhat your present obligation to your college. Aside from the monetary contributions, the college made contributions to your life that cannot be measured in dollars and cents nor can you begin to estimate their real value. However, there comes a time when financial contributions are necessary and for your college that time has arrived. Payments may be made monthly, quarterly, or semi-annually for a period of two years. Elon College lays its claim for support on the grounds that it is a church institution, interdenominational and religious. It stands for the development of the whole of life—not merely the physical and the mental, but the physical and the mental plus the spiritual. It shares the conviction often expressed today that the needs of sane, safe, wholesome leadership for state and church will be met largely by young men and young women who are the products of the small church college. Elon College commits itself to the high task of discovering the possibilities of the individual and developing individual personality to the highest possible degree that the individuals interested in the future well-being of his day and generation. On this declaration of purpose we rest our case and covet the support of individuals interested in the future well-being of the nation.

GENERAL COUNCIL NEWS.

will speak for the American Board, and Dr. Geo. Luther Cady of New York for the Home Boards.

PRES. MARY E. WOOLLEY

The Council will be called to order at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, June 16, by the moderator, Judge John V. Sees of Huntington. Mr. Sees, who was first assistant moderator, succeeded to the moderatorship upon the death of Dr. Jay T. Stocking, of Newton Center, Mass., in January.

Exhibits and literature of the work of the American Board, the Home Boards, the Council for Social Action, the Interdenominational Bureau of Church Architecture and of colleges and other church agencies will be arranged. There will also be an exhibit of religious education materials, of program material of the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, and of books from the Pilgrim Press.

REV. S. PARKES CADMAN, D. D.

The business sessions of the Council will be held each week-day morning from 9:00 to 9:30 o'clock and at periods in the afternoons as the Council may decide.

Voting members of the Council are also voting members of each of the mission boards. The American Board will have its annual meeting on Thursday afternoon and the Home Boards on Monday afternoon.

The principal business of the Council will be the election of officers, of members of commissions and committees and of directors of the boards, and the consideration of the prepared reports of officers, committees, commissions, and boards. An important report having to do especially with the promotion of missionary interest in the churches will be presented by the Strategy Committee which was appointed at the preceding meeting of the Council at Oberlin College, Ohio, in 1934. Dean Luther A. Weigle of Yale Divinity School is chairman of the Committee and Dr. Oscar E. Maurer of Center Church, New Haven, Conn., was acting chairman during Dean Weigle's trip to Asia.

FUNCTIONS OF THE COUNCIL: STATEMENT BY DR. BURTON.

Just what is the General Council? It is the national expression of the fellowship of the churches. Our churches have fellowship, first, in their local associations, to which all churches are invited to send delegates; in the next place, these same churches are invited to send delegates to the State Conference; then these associations and the State Conferences throughout the country elect delegates to the General Council for its meeting held once in two years.

The functions of the Council include in addition to the personal contacts made possible, the inspiration of public addresses, the discussions of church problems, and public questions, and the making of recommendations to denominational organizations and churches.

The matter of recommendations becomes the important thing when it is remembered that every member of the Council is also a voting member of each of the national missionary and education societies, all of which hold their annual meetings in conjunction with the General Council.

IS IT TRUE?

By REV. G. H. VEAZEY.

Is it true, if I would humbly Be a Christian brave and strong That I must tread the rugged pathway 'Ere I join the bloodwashed throng? Is it true that I must ever Live a life that's free from sin If I would reach the pearly portals And by Christ be welcomed in?

Is it true the Christ my Saviour Bled and died upon the tree For the sinners lost in darkness That through Him they might be free? Is it true that I must tarry There in dark Gethsemane And in agony and suffering Have His will revealed in me?

It is true through fiery trials I must witness for my Lord? I'll be true to my conviction And rely upon His word. Is it true that I shall ever Meet with persecutions great? And will Jesus shield and keep me, While I labor, watch, and wait?

Is it true that from the graveyard There beneath the silent sod I'll be called on that great morning To appear before my God? Yes, 'tis true, this Holy Record Given by the God of love He'll fulfill each precious promise, We shall reign with Him above.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

TRAVELING BY TRAIN IN COLD NORTH MANCHURIA.

If sardines in a can should come to life, they would hardly find themselves more crowded than passengers in the Harbin railway station. Tickets are sold only a short while before the trains are to leave, so the crowds come early and stand for hours. Then before the line has bought tickets, the trains frequently leave. Families get separated. Baggage frequently cannot be checked and one has to wait for another train. Many try to get through with bedding which they would use for covering on cold cars, but are turned back. Only a limited number are allowed on each train, and the next day must make another attempt. Just as many as can actually be packed into a definite number of cars; the remainder must wait until a later train. There are plenty of cars but not enough engines to pull them.

When Soviet Russia realized that she would ultimately have to sell the Chinese Eastern Railway to Japan and the new state of Manchukuo, she began sending into Russia from North Manchuria all the best rolling stock. Only the old engines were left. These have broken down badly the past winter. Being a different type of engine to that used by the Japanese on the South Manchuria Railway. It has been impossible for the Japanese to keep the engines in repair. The engines are able to pull only a limited number of cars even when in fair condition. If the train must stop between stations there is danger from an attack by bandits. On much of the line trains dare run only in the daytime. In winter a long delay might mean freezing to death of passengers, for our winters here are terribly cold and this has been the worst in thirty years. The Japanese, who are efficient in operating railways in South Manchuria are working hard to meet this difficult situation. In the meantime the public must be patient.

These third-class cars have no ventilation, so the atmosphere is dense and can be endured only by Europeans who are used to it, as are we missionaries. The cars are triple-deckers, old Russian style, so a vast number can be packed in. Alas, that so many Chinese now smoke cigarettes, and of the rankest kind! It is claimed that many of them are drugged with cheap morphine, etc. On returning home after one of these trips the old clothes which I wear must be aired for at least a day before they can be put away in the back part of our house for the next trip. Those who support us as missionaries would not object to our riding even first-class, but if we traveled even second-class the amount of travel in extensive evangelistic work as is being done over a large area would hardly be possible for financial reasons. Someone asked Hudson Taylor, the founder of the great China Inland Mission, why he traveled third-class. He replied: "Because there is no fourth." We, too, would extend the usefulness of our money to the limit. Then we desire to travel with the common people, of whom we are a part. There is a saying in the Far East: "Fools travel first-class; sensible people second; missionaries and natives third." The second-class here is now filled almost entirely by Japanese officers and officials. The writer travels on a third-class free pass. This enables us to cover much territory at little expense. We were afraid to ask for a second-class pass fearing it would not be granted. For a third we are most grateful. Riding even third-class on a train is much better than on a rough bus or old car over rough roads, or on a cart or sled with the thermometer thirty degrees below zero. Traveling third-class gives us an excellent opportunity to preach and talk to the people while traveling with them. There is always much for which to be thankful.

Will churches that have not yet sent in the Annual Easter Offering for Missions now do so? This is sorely needed and will be greatly appreciated.

J. O. ATKINSON, Secy.

"I wish the people in the churches of America could know how many times the American Board is remembered in prayers on Sunday mornings in our congregations both large and small," writes Rev. Raymond A. Dudley from India. "When there is so much that divides the world today, blessed is this wonderful tie that binds us together."

THE CHURCH AND ITS YOUNG PEOPLE.

(By REV. CARL R. KEY. Published by request of Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association.)

The church is the recipient of the most priceless heritage outside the home and the school. To make a supreme contribution to the development of the life of its youth is its greatest business. It goes without saying that the church and its young people are two of the mightiest factors in modern civilization. All other units in society are handled on a more business-like basis. Why all the carelessness and disinterest, I almost said, disloyalty, on the part of youth and to the church? If, and when, we have answered this question we will have begun to solve a most vital problem. Such issues as administration, leadership and the like will be less troublesome.

The church is a group of believers of like mind and purpose whose chief concern is the worship of God, our Father, and the development of radiant personality. The church stands second to none in the guidance of youth into realms of experience where they may develop the fundamental Christian characteristics that become the warp and woof of fellowship, democracy and the abundant life. Organizations, methods and mechanics are secondary and only means to an end. The end is the increase in life and the continued revelation and realization of the kingdom of God in the corporate group.

The young people are its most sacred trust. The home is the greatest ally of the church. Parents place their children in the Church School in good faith that it will do its best to continue the work of character development or the sculpturing of souls begun in the home. They cooperate with a definite end in mind. These children will be the men and women, the leaders and burden-bearers of tomorrow. It is the business of the church, in cooperating with the home, to so equip, train and guide its priceless heritage for the task that lies ahead.

Plastic, enthusiastic, anxious youth is hungry for adventure. They are ready to pioneer. They are ready to blaze new trails and discover what the present deems impossible. Lack of invigorating, lasting vision may be most detrimental. A group of young people who fail to retain their youthful attitudes and to understand the real values of life may be worse than a bull in a china shop, if let loose in society. Failure on the part of the church to provide for its young people the proper metabolism of the spirit has revealed in recent years this most essential fact.

It is high time that the church realize that its chief purpose is to provide for the highest type of worship possible for its young people in which each individual has an active, vital part. Once the church has learned the art of guiding its youth in sharing in the problem of worship it will begin to solve the many problems of attendance, lack of interest and participation and the general moral breakdown in the country. The church has failed to make real the presence of God in the religious experience of its youth. This seems to be the heart of our universal problem. That is why we ministers suffer many heartaches and disappointments while haphazardly seeking them as members and participants in our program of worship. We touched on the problem in the Annual Spring Conference of the Youth Fellowship while seeking a way for youth to share in the program of worship, evangelism, missions, finance and leadership training. We are only partially awake. What we need is a total awakening if we care to avoid a total eclipse of the future.

It seems that Raymond C. Knox, Chaplain of Columbia University, heartily agrees with us, in his most timely book, "Religion and the American Dream." In his thinking, "The highest thought of God which the mind can conceive is that He is One whose purpose for men is the fullness of life, whose nature can best be expressed by the word "love." So to apprehend His Reality is the sole aim of worship. Life will then be seen to have supreme worth. One becomes inwardly aware of the meaning of the Kingdom: that it is the upbuilding of a society of free personalities, united and working together in constructive good will, expressive of His spirit, and in which life is to be realized."

We fail to some degree in leading our young people into a vital experience of the presence of God because our methodology of worship is a bit faulty. How to meet this indictment is almost beyond us. The technique of worship was discussed with clarity at the Youth Fellowship meeting and we accepted it without a murmur. It is fine to recommend sharing in worship by cultivating our devotional life, through music, improvement of art and architecture and participation speaking from a group standpoint. But our task lies in the field of personal religion first. The minister and the other leaders must cultivate individual worship and urge and guide our young people in the cultivation of the same. Once the individual learns to worship privately he is better equipped to share his experiences in the group.

A second problem of which we are quite aware and have made some effort to solve is the lack of leadership with the vision and the commitment of an Isaiah. We need leaders with a keen sense of their responsibility to God, an understanding of the young people placed under their guidance and a keen insight into the issues involved in this changing civilization in which youth must "live and move and have its being." The leader must have a profound conviction and faith in the supremacy of God and human personality if they hope to have a group of live, vibrant, energetic young people follow them.

Youth demands as much from its leaders. They seek the guidance of kindred spirits, sympathetic hearts, understanding minds and the willingness to explore each human situation or experience from every angle. They want to leave no stones unturned.

To substantiate our position here we turn to the records of the Spring Conference report of Youth Fellowship as to how youth may share in leadership training:

"A. We believe every person having the responsibility of teaching in a church school should prepare themselves to teach that class; a preparation which should compare favorably with the preparation of a public school teacher.

"B. We believe that there should be held within the reach of every present and prospective teacher or leader in our conference a Standard Training School in as many churches as possible, and that each church should send at least two young people to Elon Summer School of Leadership Training.

"C. Every Sunday School should provide leadership training books and literature which should be accessible to the teachers.

"D. We believe that every Sunday School in the Conference should cooperate with the Board of Christian Education by seeking assistance from the Board for the promotion of leadership training and by contributing financially to the Board."

This is no criticism of our past and present leadership but a constructive effort to pave the way for a creative leadership which can lead us to the very throne of the Eternal. A creative leadership will of necessity employ the creative method of teaching which is a new name for the present system in use in the public schools of Virginia as explained by the supervisors and teachers. Creative teaching utilizes all the tried and tested methods. The young people who worship and are taught creatively will come to see that each item in a worship service such as the offering, a talk, a sermon and announcements are just as vital a part as the hymns and prayers.

What are some of the fruits of creative worship as observed in the growing youth? The fruits of creative worship with which the church supplies its youth are an inspiration, a vision of the fullest possible life, a vision of God which promotes and increases in life, an alert leadership, knowledge of God an apprehending experience, the culminating sacrament of fellowship, and an unchanging faith in God which establishes the highest values in life as real and makes lucid our one purpose.

Creative worship produces a faith which brings adjustments necessary and the harmonizing of life to each growing person. It clarifies one's philosophy of life. It gives the youth an invisible faith in God and in humanity. Their convictions arise from the crucible of experience and once they are harmonized with his faith and purpose he becomes well-grounded for the battles and vicissitudes that often wreck lives. Then their resolutions are rooted and grounded in God. This is the deepest meaning of worship.

The final consummation of creative worship is the preservation of sacred personality which is its natural fruitage. It is the business of the church to provide just such worship for its young people even if it means the scrapping of stereotyped methods and customs. This depends upon the knowledge the church has of its heritage and whether its program is based on the interests and experience of its youth.

Raymond C. Knox describes the worship experience. It is just such an experience that each young person in the church must have if it hopes to serve its youth to the best of its ability. "In worship, man's finite life has its contact with the the Infinite. Within his life there is an inner court, a shrine wherein his sacred values are placed, where he may have a vision beyond the world of sense with which he is daily concerned. There his innermost resolutions are formed, and the purpose his life will serve is determined. Into this court he alone can enter; but it is there that he can be aware of the reality of God. In obedience to that vision he goes forth to a life of fellowship and achievement." p. 79.

S. S. & C. E. CONVENTION TO MEET— BUT WHERE?

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western North Carolina Conference is to meet Tuesday following the first Sunday in July. But where is it to meet?

At the 1935 sessions of the Convention held at Pleasant Hill Church an invitation for a place of meeting for 1936 was not received. Nor has one been received since.

What church will extend the Convention an invitation for this year's sessions? The Convention convenes at ten o'clock and adjourns at four. So entertainment consists of the use of the church and the provision of a dinner.

If there is a church so disposed, communicate at once with Miss Lillie Horne, Ireland Street, Burlington, N. C.

BURLINGTON ITEMS.

During the recent sessions of the Southern Convention the Burlington Church provided overnight entertainment for one hundred and nine delegates and visitors.

On Monday before the Convention convened, funeral services were held for Cara, wife of Mr. John Isley. She was a woman held in high esteem and general affection. Mr. and Mrs. Isley had celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

On Friday afternoon following the adjournment of the Convention funeral services were held for Judge Wm. Houston Carroll. Judge Carroll had lived richly and usefully, serving in many ways the church and the state. He was a veteran Mason, dean of the Alamance County bar and Judge of the County Court. On the 6th of last November the wife of Judge Carroll preceded him in death and her going deeply affected the husband. He wished to go to her.

On Sunday, May 24th, Baccalaureate Services were held at our church for the 1936 Class of Burlington High School. Rev. Daniel T. Eaton, Rector, The Church of the Holy Comforter, Episcopal, Burlington, preached the sermon. It was an unusual and especially effective message based upon marriage as instituted of God, on the basis of mutual love, endless and holy.

The Burlington pastor was privileged to be the afternoon speaker at the annual Memorial Services at Long's Chapel, May 3rd, at Union, May 10th, and at Bethlehem, May 17th. It is reported at the latter church that after preaching twenty minutes he four times said, "and in conclusion,"—and preached on for five minutes more each time.

On the 21st of May, funeral services were held at Union Church for Mrs. M. J. Foster. Esteem for Mrs. Foster was manifested by an attendance of friends and neighbors which over-taxed the capacity of the Union Church, and love for her found expression in flower-gifts which formed for her grave a wilderness of beauty and fragrance. Four fine children survive, the husband having died seven years ago.

This world in which we live is a huge example of cooperation. The sun cooperates with the earth in the production of food, and man must cooperate with both sun and earth. If one link in the chain breaks, the effect is spoiled or weakened.—Anonymous.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

TO THE GRADUATE.

Here on my desk is the invitation to his Commencement. It was only a little while ago that he came as a very small boy to join my church. Now he is graduating from High School. He is one of thousands of boys and girls in Congregational and Christian churches and members of other churches, and member of no church at all. Then there are other thousands who are receiving their diplomas from college. One of the members of my church, Lanson Granger, is among this group. And a niece of mine will be in the line of those who march across our college rostrum and receive all the honor our college can confer.

This Saturday night as I think of those who are now happy in the attainment of their educational ideal, I remember back to the days when I was graduating from College and then University. Memory leaps over the years and makes me share in the life of the dreamers who are happy in the fulfillment of hopes and yet look to the future with its unexplored mysteries. Time blurs the vision of the little things that vexed and annoyed, and leaves standing, like mountain peaks on a clear day, the golden dreams of youth.

To you who today stand in the company of the fortunate ones who have cared to keep on until you reached your goal, let me say just a few words of counsel.

Yes, I want to congratulate you, and to wish you all the happiness that you deserve. If you have been faithful, if you have done your best, you deserve much, and much will come to you. Your family and friends are proud of you. They may say but little about it, but they are. If parents have sacrificed so that you could study, they need not speak words for what they have done speaks for itself.

Now the counsel. If you have your heart set on making money, don't become bitter if you fail. In recent years most college graduates have been unable to get a job. There is a better chance for you. More of you will find work. But some will have difficulty in doing so. And most of you will never get rich. It is to be hoped that the social order will change in your day so that all will have plenty and few, if any, will be wealthy. The chances are that it will become more and more difficult for people to get rich in America, but it is likely that it will become easier for all to make sufficient for comfort and culture.

If you have dreamed of sharing in the process of world change, you are now ready to get into the company of those who are really making the world over. You are fortunate in your desires, and can find plenty of problems to whet your keenest thoughts and to use all your skill. Thrills that you have not yet dreamed of will probably come to you, or else you will go to them. But do not be disappointed if "making a new world" becomes hard work in pretty nearly the same way that you have seen others at work. And do not get weary if the millennium does not dawn when you wish that it would.

Another dreamer long ago thought that He saw the Day Star arising in the east, and launched a campaign for world revolution. His enthusiasm took Him to a cross, and the dream has been long in fulfillment. But it is coming. The very fact that you and millions of others are eager to share in His program is evidence that He was right. The heaven is gradually going through the dough. The seed is growing. The Kingdom is coming. But you are to have your share in its coming. Keep your dreams even if sometimes it seems a bit dim. The Master did.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Saturday is Memorial Day for our nation. About this season of the year many of our churches observe Memorial Day. This is a time to recall the heroic deeds of national heroes, faithful soldiers, and familiar friends who have answered the call of the Captain of the Soul. E're long we too shall answer the summons to join "that innumerable caravan that moves to that mysterious realm from whose mournful no traveler ever returns." This Memorial Day gives us a chance to make some thoughtful preparation for that journey.

THE CONCORD HYMN.

I hope never to forget the dignity and poise of the eight-year-old boy who acted as our guide at the battle ground and burial place at Concord, Mass., in the summer of 1924. He had shown us the "House of Seven Gables," the home of Emerson, the last resting place of many of our country's great. Then we went down to the little stream hard-by. With hat in hand he approached cautiously a slender shaft and a rude bridge. Almost in a whisper he directed us where to stand. Then with reverence and awe, standing at attention, he repeated Emerson's immortal poem:

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world.

The foe long since in silence slept;
Alike the conqueror silent sleeps;
And time the ruined bridge has swept
Down the dark stream which seaward creeps.

On this green bank, by this soft stream,
We set today a votive stone,
That memory may their deeds redeem,
When, like our sires, our sons are gone.

Spirit, that made those spirits dare
To die, and leave their children free,
Bid Time and Nature gently spare
The shaft we raise to them and Thee.

THE WAR IS OVER.

More and more we are learning that war is foolish. It settles nothing. It breaks up homes; it destroys life; and it divides nations. All honor to those who have sacrificed and died for a cause they believed to be right! But God pity us if we try to settle our disputes by the sword, machine guns, and poison gas.

My maternal grandfather fell on the fields of battle in Virginia. His widow and orphans entertained uninvited Yankees, and found them to be friendly. It is too long since then for me to poison my system with the hatred of war. I can tell no difference between the sons of the Rebels and the sons of the loyal Unionists. The war is over. And let it be over forever.

"Under the roses the blue;
Under the lilies the gray."

What matters the color of the clothes? Who cares whether your grandfather followed Grant or Lee? It was an honor to be in the company of either.

"Oh, the roses we plucked for the blue,
And the lilies we twined for the gray,
We have bound in a wreath,
And in silence beneath
Slumber our heroes today.

"Over the new-turned sod
The sons of our fathers stand,
And the fierce old fight
Slips out of sight
In the clasp of a brother's hand."

This, I think, is the spirit of Memorial Day that will bind us to the past and prepare us for the present and future.

THE STORY OF THE CRIMINAL: HOW SOCIETY RECEIVES HIM.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 7, 1936
Scripture: Gen. 4:9-15; 41:39-41.
(CONSECRATION MEETING.)

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Help the prisoner. Matt. 25:31-40.
Tue.—Help the prisoner's dependents. Jas. 1:27.
Wed.—Jesus can save the prisoner. I Cor. 6:9-11.
Thurs.—The right training. II Tim. 3:13-17.
Fri.—A helping hand. Luke 10:30-37.
Sat.—No case hopeless. Heb. 7:25.

Since society is partly responsible for crime and the criminal, in that social conditions often encourage crime, it must accept as its responsibility the task of helping the criminal to get a new start in life.

It is true that the attitude of society toward the criminal is a result of the very nature of crime itself. Experience indicates that a criminal cannot be trusted. And the hostile attitude of the public is a protest against that kind of person and life. It is not to be hoped or expected that we should condone crime or the criminal. The difficulty is that a man may serve his term and then remain a criminal at heart. Society should frown on a criminal life before and after conviction and imprisonment. Too many people indulge in obvious criminal conduct and receive the approbation of human society. Crime must never be encouraged by the shock-proof conscience of a complacent society.

However, when a criminal has repented he is no longer a criminal and should not be treated as such. If God forgives a criminal, we cannot as a Christian do less. The church can help such a person. It can fortify him with friendship and new incentives. It can open up to him the possibilities of a new life.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

THE LAST SUPPER.

LESSON IX—MAY 31, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "This do in remembrance of me."—Luke 22:19.

LESSON: Luke 22:1-38; Printed Text: Luke 22:7-23.

The story is told that just before his death in April, 1735, Samuel Wesley, the father of those two great religious pioneers, John and Charles Wesley, asked his two sons to celebrate with him the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. "The weaker I am in body," said the aged man, "the stronger and more sensible support I feel from God. There is but a step between men and death. Tomorrow I would see you all with me around this table that we may once more drink of the cup of blessing before we drink it new in the kingdom of God. With desire have I desired to eat this passover with you before I die."

It was with this spirit of deep and sacred emotion that Jesus came to the last passover supper with His disciples. He himself says: "With desire have I desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer." It was a significant, even if a simple feast, teeming with sacred associations, commemorative of the delivery of the Hebrews from the bondage of Egypt, reminding them that because blood had been sprinkled on the doorposts, the angel of death had "passed over" them, and spared them and their first-born, and calling to their minds the fact that God had delivered their nation and made them free. That passover signified in a striking way the birth of a nation and the birth of a new freedom. For centuries that feast had been kept, and although there is evidence that there had been some breaks in the continuity of the feast, it had become a permanent part of the nation's national religious life.

Jesus knew the value of religious feasts and fasts. In keeping with his spirit, he took it and filled it with new meaning. He was especially eager to eat this passover with them, not only because of its past history, but because of its future influence. He wanted to have his disciples alone that night for a few precious hours to tell them such things as they were able to bear, and then to put indelibly into their hearts an unforgettable experience that through them, would continue through eternity.

The supper itself was comparatively simple. A paschal lamb, roasted according to the ceremonial law, unleavened bread, some bitter herbs, and the usual Jewish wine. There were certain forms and ceremonies associated with the meal, but dignity and simplicity were the main notes. There was an air of solemnity and sacredness about it too.

This particular supper was eaten in a large upper room, furnished and made ready. A persistent tradition has it that it was at the house of Mary the mother of John Mark. Here away from the bustling crowds, above the level of the noisy and the dusty street, safe for the time being from His enemies, and in intimate companionship with His disciples, Jesus came at the evening hour for the passover supper. From that plain room and that simple passover meal there came the central sacrament of the Christian Church, and a permanent or continuing memorial to Christ Himself.

Today, after nineteen centuries, in great cathedrals and in crude, plain buildings, by high and low, by rich and poor, by learned and ignorant, this Lord's Supper stands as a memorial to Jesus Christ. It is a modern miracle. No costly monument, no magnificent building, no endowed foundation, nothing that modern men do to perpetuate their memory. Just a simple sacrament, the eating of a very small piece of bread,—it is supposed to be unleavened, and the drinking of just a bit of the fruit of the vine—sometimes it is fermented, sometimes it is unfermented, but as often as men observe this simple custom they are inevitably reminded of the One Who said, "This do in remembrance of me." It is hardly likely that He would have been completely forgotten if He had not instituted this sacrament. But it is undeniably true that His memory is more vividly kept in mind and more precious kept in heart because through the centuries men and women have attended the communion service and there had their memories refreshed and their lives renewed. And miracles of miracles the thing grows greater, not less.

The details of that first Lord's Supper are familiar to the average Christian. The Lord Jesus Christ, on the same night in which he was betrayed—alas that that should be a part of the record—took bread and when he had given thanks, He said, Take eat, this is my body which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me. And in like manner he took the cup when he had supped and said, This cup is the new testament in my blood; this do as oft as ye drink in remembrance of me. And then the prophetic words, For as oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death, until He come. It is a reminder of what He has done and a pledge of what He will yet do. It looks back to his sacrifice as it looks forward to his coming. It reminds us that because he loved us and gave himself for us we ought to love one another and to give ourselves to Him. It is the seal of a new covenant, a covenant signed and sealed not with ink, but with blood, the blood of the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. Let no man eat unworthily. Let every man examine himself. But let no man remain away from the Lord's table. Just as the physical elements which are used in the Supper strengthen the body of the physical man, just so is there in this simple sacrament, rightly received, that which feeds a man on the bread of life and renews life of the spirit within.

Just because a person has served a prison term is no reason why he should bear the stigma of prison all his days, or why his family should suffer and be looked upon as the wife and children of a "jail bird." There are many people who are unkind in their dealings with the person who has a prison record, and place them as below their station in life even though the person has signified his intention to go straight. But none of us are perfect. Jesus said, "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone." It is up to the

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"THOU ART WITH ME."

"Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world."—Matt. 28:20.

These words were spoken on the occasion of Christ's appearance to the disciples after His resurrection and in them He declared His presence, what their mission is in the world, and He assures them that He will always be with them.

Although these words apply to the ministry of the disciples in the world, they are also intended for every Christian that they may be ever conscious of the reality of His presence in everyday life. We are to understand that Jesus Christ is a personal, conscious, intelligent presence forever abiding with us, sharing our difficulties in life and participating in our triumphs to the end of the world. Thus, we can believe that He is a personal presence, He is an abiding presence, "always," and He is a victorious presence.

It is in this three-fold abiding presence that He comes to us momentarily and would inspire every act. It is in this abiding presence that the judgments of our daily doings approve or condemn our acts. If we are consecrated and watchful, we shall be prepared to march to Zion gloriously.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe in the ultimate victory of our Lord, and we want to be there with Him. O God, we take Thee this day as Heaven's presence with us. May we live the life of the faithful. "Abide with us still."—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"FAITHFUL ENDURANCE."

"Moses endured as seeing Him who is invisible."—Hebrews 11:27.

"Where the many toil and suffer,
There am I among mine own;
Where the tired workman sleepeth,
There am I with him alone.

"Never more Thou needest seek me,
I am with Thee everywhere;
Raise the stove and there shalt find me;
Clear the wood and I am there."

—Hasting—G. T. B.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy presence. Suffer us not to fail in our duty because Thou art with us. We must work Thy works every day. Inspire us to that faithfulness that at last, like Paul, we can say, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight. I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"BELIEVE. FOLLOW. BEAR."

"Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."—Zech. 4:6.

There is nothing we can do, of ourselves, to become heirs to the Kingdom of God, save to believe in God and surrender our lives to Him. Christ is our light and example and it is through humbling ourselves as He humbled Himself that we shall be exalted and become like Him.

But even this cannot be accomplished without following Him. He is pattern as well as Redeemer. "Follow Me" was His theme. It was the world's greatest event when there was born into it a Perfect Man, whom to follow disclosed what man can be and do in achieving like perfection.

To follow the Lord, however, is not all. There is a cross to bear. Christ said: "Take up his cross and follow me." See the Saviour bearing the cruel load of the cross up Golgotha's hill. We, too, have crosses to bear up the hill; crosses that fall upon our shoulders from the hands of sinful men, crosses of self-denial, crosses of various sorts every day. In His name and for His sake, we shoulder these crosses and we struggle with Him on the upward way. We are His soldiers, and we share with Him the burdens of the world, that His glory may come, and that we may be with Him in that glory.

Prayer—Our Father, make the consciousness of self-denial in our lives voluntary and a delight. Make us to share His spirit consciously, willingly and lovingly. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"CONFESSING AND FORGIVING."

"But if ye do not forgive, neither will your father which is in heaven forgive you."—Mark 11:26.

The forgiving spirit is a necessary condition of peace and well-being, and of happiness in our relations of man to man. There is scarcely a day in which it is not necessary for us to say to someone, "I beg your pardon." So human are we that it is almost impossible to keep from "treading upon someone's toes." He who is unforgiving brings upon his own head the condemnation and ill will of others. It is a case of forgiving and being forgiven, if we would get on.

When Christ said, "forgive and it shall be forgiven you," He was not merely declaring a condition necessary to entrance into heaven, He was declaring a law of life, and in that law heaven's laws are operative.

Furthermore, whoever opens his heart to God, makes a clean breast of his sins, of himself, and says, "I am a fool and erred exceedingly," the Psalmist said, that man is "without guile." (Ps. 32:1, 2.)

Prayer—Our dear Father, humble our hearts into true sorrow for sins and enable us to sin no more. In Jesus' name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"COURAGE AND STRENGTH."

"Be of good courage and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord."—Ps. 31:24.

Strength is related to courage indescribably. Without courage man is a failure.

"Courage is not just to bare one's breast
To the sabre's thrust. Alone is daring,
Courage to grieve, to have the hurt
And make the world believe
You are not caring.

Courage does not die alone, in dying for a cause,
To die is only living.
Courage is to feel the daily daggers of relentless steel,
And keep on living."

—Author Unknown.

Prayer—Lord's Prayer.

SATURDAY.

"MUCH FRUIT."

He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit."—John 15:1-8.

Lives that abide in Christ are happy lives. Lives in which Christ abides are successful lives. With Christ as our home we are at peace. He is around us as an encompassing wall, warding off all harm, closing in all joy.

And lives in which Christ abides are successful lives, achieving lives. He furnishes the needed strength for all enterprises. He supplies the winning plan for all our labors. He cheers us on. He comforts our failures. He rejoices in our triumphs. He is our all-powerful Partner, our all-comprehending Companion.

Such lives cannot fail of bearing much fruit, because Christ, who is in them and through them, is the living Vine. No word of His falls empty to the ground. No deed of His dies resultless on the air. And such are our words and deeds when we are in Him and He is in us.

Prayer—Our blessed Saviour, may we never be content with meager harvests. May we build large barns and fill them to overflowing, to Thy glory.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"THE DEVIL'S LIE."

"And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die."—Gen. 3:1-8.

The devil, that "liar from the beginning," does not originate new lies. He finds the same old falsehoods amply sufficient for his devilish purposes, and so he repeats them over and over.

And so this primal lie, that sin is not bad after all, has gone its snaky way down the centuries. In spite of accumulated human experience to the contrary, in spite of God's word, men go on believing Satan when he tells them that the wages of sin are not death.

"You can go on," says the devil, "in the path of vice, and later, when you tire of it and when it is quite convenient, at the close of life, you can shift over to the path of virtue." Like all the devil's lies, this falsehood contains a half truth, for it is possible that a man may repent, and it is certain that God will gladly receive any repentant prodigal creeping back to the Father's arms. But, alas! how dim is the hope that repentance will end a career of shame!

Prayer—And how contemptible it is our Father, that men will serve Satan most of their life, and then give to Thee, the rightful owner of it all, only its final hour!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

A college cannot educate the student. Teachers put knowledge before him, but his own brain must assimilate it. That takes time and effort, and is part of the cost of education.—Anon.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE LORD'S WITNESS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Ye shall be witnesses."—Acts 1:8.

Once more they were assembled in their old country,—Galilee. Once more they were looking upon familiar scenes. Once more, for a brief while, they were with Jesus, their Lord and teacher. Far to the south of them was Jerusalem. Jerusalem, the city over which Jesus had wept; Jerusalem, the place of the trial, and crucifixion of their friend. All that was far away. What joy now, and ecstasy! they were back amidst their familiar hills. Hard by was Capernaum, and Cana, and not far away was Nazareth. Together they had met in Galilee, and just as far as possible they had shut out of their minds Jerusalem, and the awful Calvary just outside its gates.

We might pause long upon their meeting in Galilee. Convinced of the resurrected presence of their Christ, assured of His forgiveness, and alight with His eternal glory what joy must have been theirs! The heat of thunder had died out of their souls and a new power was warm within. The hope for a material kingdom had died on Calvary. The places on the left-hand and on the right seemed now such a strange, unnecessary request. What will be the further program?

Well, my friends, men and women in every age have come to just that place in life, and they have answered it in various ways. Some great soul-discipline has been felt, and a cleanness has followed. A cleanness like that which follows a terrific storm, when all is peace and sunshine again. Perhaps they have wrestled with some great sin, and won their forgiveness, or they have been to some great convention and been upon a mountain top of spiritual experience, or perhaps they have been enjoying a great revival in their local church, and this is the morning after, or perhaps they have just been graduated from some school and had their idealism reach its supreme zenith, or in some way they have been visited with the very presence of God, and have felt themselves a-tingle with the triumph of it. What shall the program be? They have said, some of them, I shall absent myself from all the things of the world, and they have shut themselves up unto their ecstasy and their silent meditations. Others have sought to build some fair Utopia and wasted their strength, and often the strength of many others with some "wild-cat" scheme which resulted in everything but a success. Still others have mistaken the might within their hands and have put themselves up as supermen and have thus brought about havoc and servitude for others. And others still have been content to remember only yesterday, and drift along with the tide, say-as they reflected on it that it was very fine while it lasted, but it could not continue.

There is that danger to mountain-top experiences, the follow-up is so often fatal because it is not based on the sound wisdom set forth in the instructions given these followers of the Christ. They might gather together their nets and go back to the sea, or to the receipt of custom, or to some other work in unknown places. Whatever they did they might elect to forget Jerusalem! "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets (It had just killed the greatest Prophet that ever walked through its portals!), and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how oft would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wing, and ye would not!" Yes, they might at least leave Jerusalem alone. Forget her, if they could not forgive her, but their Lord was standing in their midst, and He was telling them to go right back to Jerusalem! There is where we left off! Go back there, begin again! ! !

Again, they might slip into Jerusalem, and get their clothes, and quietly steal away. They might go there and bring out their friends, and possibly some members of their families who were still there. But how could they become known again in that city? That was the city that had asked them about following the Nazarene. And they had crucified Him. That city was indeed the city that killest the prophets. If they went back to Jerusalem at all they must do it very quietly. But Jesus was standing in their midst and telling them to go back to Jerusalem, and talk! Speak out! Cry aloud! Witness!

Go back, and get together. Marshal the friends of Jesus. Wait in prayer in a given place until endued with power from on high, and then ye shall be my witnesses. But said the disciples, we are too weak, we have such a little following, some of your own brothers are not with us, we fight against overwhelming tides, it is an impossible task. But Jesus was standing in their midst answering: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." Wait for that power which shall be given you, and then talk! Tell it right out, yea, tell the whole story. "Ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem."

They went and they waited. The power followed their praying. They spake as never before tisciples had spoken: "Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles, and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know: Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain: whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it" . . . "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses." You know the result. Instead of crucifying them they cried out for their help, and became themselves, in turn, possessed with this Christian courage.

When I read those words, "Ye shall be my witnesses," I say to myself: "What a trust!" For there was giving over to them, faulty as they had been, the great business of propagating Christianity. He had laid a supreme trust in their hands. But, my friends, we stand in their shoes today. To us in our day this same trust is given. They did their work. They did not fail their Lord. Even to the death they served Him! Again when I read these words, "Ye shall be witnesses"

I see that it is not only a trust but it is an inescapable command. They could not overlook it and be true to Him or themselves. It was imperative. They could but obey. Is it not just as binding upon us today? Did Jesus mean to get this far and fail here? Is there not the need for the Gospel story just as urgent as ever today? Then by what logic can we escape that command? We have chosen to be his followers. We must obey.

Then, too, I like to say to myself it was not only a trust, a command, but it was also a prophecy! How they witnessed! In Jerusalem, and in

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP. (Continued from page 11.)

Christian and the Church to help any person who tries to "come back." No case is hopeless.

For Discussion.

1. What do you think should be the attitude of the Christian toward the person who has a prison record and who seeks to re-enter society?

Would you welcome an ex-convict to your society meeting? What could easily be the effect on him if you did not accept him?

2. There are many people who would mingle with the ex-convict at church and at other public places, but would you be willing to entertain him in your home and receive him on the basis of a friend? Or would you be afraid of what "the people" would say?

3. If you were in the business world would you employ a person with a prison record who was trying to go straight?

4. Do you think a person with a prison record should, in seeking employment, tell the employer about his past? Why?

5. How do you think Jesus would receive the criminal?

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth! In dungeon, on the scaffold, at the stake, before the courts, before the crowds, as one expressed it, "they turned the world upside down" as they went with their witnessing! They put their testimony on every road, they poured their truth into every stream of thought, by word of mouth, by script of pen, thru establishing churches, and building schools, in their own country and unto the uttermost parts of the earth, indeed, they went witnessing. Their witness still lives. The Gospels and the epistles are still racing from our modern presses at publishers' top speeds! And you and I dare not be stagnant pools along this progression, but let us be used of the Lord to bear on this most beautiful testimony. For see what we bear forward when we carry the gospel forward: "It is the power of God unto everyone that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

Let us observe some of the ways in which we may be witnesses,—the Lord's witnesses,—today. There is yet no finer way than that of the personal testimony given. There are many in this church who definitely bear this sort of testimony. Seventy-five new members received into this, our church, in recent months show the results of that sort of witnessing. Let me urge its continuance. I shall be glad to meet you in the study and give you names and addresses of men, women, and young people you may seek to win in that way.

Again we may establish this great church as a teaching force and power in this city. To it we may bring our own children. In its school we may instruct them in the gospel, and the Christian way of living. Your special contributions today greatly helped in that very thing. You may feel like you want a very real, and definitely worth while part in this most excellent work. Feel then and know that your contributions of your own time, talent, and money to your Sunday School and Church serves in a great way to make you a witness.

One of the finest places I know about now to do a real, and lasting piece of witnessing for the Lord is to lay up, in our college's need, a portion of that with which God has blessed us to enable our own college,—a part of our church's program just as our Sunday Schools are,—to do the witnessing for our sons and daughters in a way such as only a college can. Your dollars devoted thru your college to serve thru the years to come is one of God's modern ways of making us witnesses. You may not be able to witness personally as your heart prompts. Give your dollars a chance to speak for you years after you are gone. Say to your dollars as Christ said to His disciples: "Ye shall be witnesses." And the Lord's witnesses they shall be!

Then, too, what more noble thing can we do than devote much of the earnings of our hands to Him in fields at home and abroad? It multiplies our testimony in many ways. It shows that we believe what we profess. It speaks for us when and where we cannot ourselves in person speak. And it puts the seal of discipleship, and kinship with the Christ upon us, for then truly we are the Lord's witnesses.

The men who are gone seem to have left behind them in the world much of their power of vitality; and I suppose hardly a day passes in which we do not do some act under this power of inspiration of our predecessors, something we should not have done, or should have done differently, if, even with all the machinery of living and all the truths we now know, we had no predecessors; had been the first tenants of our earth.—Phillips Brooks.

OBITUARIES

MARION.

Bro. J. E. Marion died March 9th at Lanett, Ala., at 86 years of age. A kind and gentle character, he will be remembered as an angel of mercy by his many friends.

He was a member of Lanett Christian Church. He leaves five children and a number of other relatives. His body was laid to rest in Concord Cemetery by the side of his wife, the writer conducting the funeral with Rev. G. P. Penn assisting.

G. D. HUNT.

GRAHAM.

We, the deacons of Union (Alamance County, N. C.), Christian Church, wish to commend our faithful brother, George R. Graham, for his long service as secretary of this church. He was first elected October 25, 1902, and served until October 12, 1912. On August 8, 1915, he was again elected as secretary and served in this capacity until October 12, 1935.

During the thirty years of his tenure, he was absent only four times from quarterly conference, which was held 128 times. Few persons could equal this record, and few persons have shown as much interest in the affairs of the church as Brother Graham has done. The work of the church would prosper and be carried to untold usefulness if more of its members had the zeal of our recent secretary. This example of fidelity should be an inspiration to all members to share more of their lives and give more of their time to the Master. Especially should all members who are elected to offices of responsibility in the church organization strive to fulfill their duty with such sincerity of purpose. As a mark of respect and appreciation we recommend that a copy of this letter be sent to Brother Graham, a copy to The Christian Sun, and a copy recorded in the Minutes of this meeting.

WHICH SIDE

THIS ROAD from Jerusalem to Jericho represents the Great Highway of Life.

Elon College, our beloved and faithful Child has been beaten, stripped, and left half dead on the roadside by robbers of fire and economic depression.

You and I are traveling this Road today from Jerusalem to Jericho. There are only two sides on this Highway. The Samaritan side, the side of sympathy, unselfishness, and love, and the Priest-Levite side, the side of self-centered selfishness and murderous-mindedness. The first leads to life—the second to death.

On which side of the road from Jerusalem to Jericho are you traveling?

"Think ye upon these things."

"If ye love me, 'Feed my lambs.'"

Pretty Well Named.—

They call it an "Angel Buggy" and its name is suggestive to say the least. Its driver needs a steady hand and an iron nerve, for he handles one of the most ticklish jobs that can be imagined. It is rubber-tired, mounted on soft springs, and is cooled before receiving its cargo, and it is pushed along over a specially prepared bumpless roadway. The "angel buggy" is used to convey the nitroglycerine used at dynamite factories. And yet, according to accident records, "angel buggy" pushing is a comparatively safe job. Thousands of "angel buggies" of another type crowd our highways today, and in the hands that control them, they are far from "comparatively safe."

The Little NRA Upset.—

One of the last acts of the United States Supreme Court before adjourning was to upset the Guffey Coal Act, popularly known as the little NRA. This was almost a foregone conclusion in the minds of legal authorities, but notwithstanding this it has caused comment far and wide. The thing that killed the Guffey Law was its attempt to regulate coal-miners' hours of labor and wages. The Court held that even though coal might be sent outside of the state in which it was dug, "the local character of mining, of manufacturing and of crop-growing is a factor and remains a fact," and "the relation of employer and employee is a local relation." Five of the justices held that the regulation of labor was unconstitutional, and the Chief Justice agreed with them in a separate opinion. Three justices refused to render an opinion. On the question of price-fixing, the situation was reversed, however. The majority held that they were not called upon to decide that question. The Chief Justice and three associates did express an opinion that the price-fixing feature of the act was constitutional. If Congress re-enacts this part of the bill the Court may have to render a decision. Opinion is divided as to the good or harm that may come from the court's decision.

Population Changes.—

Figures presented by the Census Bureau present a statistical picture of many shifts in America's population during the past five years. While most of the states have shown gains, eleven have even fewer residents than they did in 1930. From that date until 1935, the population gain of the entire country increased from 122,775,046 to an estimated 127,521,000, or nearly 5,000,000. These figures were given by the Bureau some time ago, but only recently were they broken down to show the gains and losses of the individual states and the District of Columbia. The district led in percentage of increase, showing a gain of 107,131, or 22 per cent for the five-year period, and giving it a present total of 594,000. This increase was due primarily to the increased number of government employees during that time. New York, with 12,889,000 as compared with 12,588,000 in 1930, was still by far the largest state. Pennsylvania increased her 9,631,000 to 66,000 above the ten-million mark, while Illinois added 183,000 to make a new total of 7,817,000. The eleven states showing a loss of population were Arizona, with the largest percentage of decrease, 11.4; followed by New Mexico, 5.0; Michigan, 3.7; South Dakota, 2.6; Mississippi, 2.4; Rhode Island and Nebraska, 1.9 each; Kansas, 1.8; Montana, 1.2; Wisconsin, 1.1, and California, 0.7. States showing the greatest percentages of gain included South Carolina, 15.7; Georgia, 15; Tennessee, 11, and Florida, 9.9.

Still Blessing War.—

"With God, let us have faith in the national and Catholic mission, particularly since at this moment, on the battlefields of Ethiopia, the Italian flag is carrying to triumph the cross of Christ, breaking the chains of slaves, and leveling the path of missionaries of the Gospel. Peace to the dead who died in doing their duty, in the faith and by the grace of Jesus Christ. Peace and protection to the valiant army, which in unquestioning obedience to the command of the country and at the price of its blood, is opening the gates of Ethiopia to the Catholic faith and to Roman civilization. . . . For according to the eternal mission of Catholic Italy and Dante's Rome, where Rome is, there is also Christ." These words, according to the Italian newspaper, Corriere della Sera (quoted by the Nofrontier News Service), were uttered by Cardinal Schuster in the Cathedral of Milan on the occasion of the 13th anniversary of Mussolini's "Black Shirt" march on Rome, and in blessing the battle flags and machine guns before sending them on their mission. Before condemning the Catholic Cardinal, it is well to remember the horrible imprecations that were uttered in the name of God by British Protestants during the Boer War, and by Protestant leaders of this and other countries during the World War. If man in his blindness, incompetency and brutality is bound to have war, let him leave God out, and the more he can do to leave the church out, also, the better. The Pope, it should be added, has spoken better than the Cardinal and we may quote one of many pronouncements, in which he declares, "We affirm solemnly again that we appeal to all men of goodwill, wherever they may be, that peace inseparable from justice, from truth, and from love, be their warmest desire. It is peace which with all our power we will endeavor to establish."—Advance.

Men and Machines.—

Nearly everyone who reads at all has seen the phrase "technological unemployment." It is usually used by those opposing modernization because of their belief that machines take work away from men. They have the idea—a mistaken one we believe—that the installation of a machine, because it lets one man do the work of five, means that four men must join the bread-line. Such thinking goes only half way, for actually the machine, instead of throwing men out of work, has increased employment. It is proven by facts that during the three decades ending with 1929, the United States went through the most rapid development in its history in the invention and application of machinery. What was the result? The number of persons employed rose 88 per cent, while the population increased only 62 per cent. Mechanization increased 331 per cent and production rose 216 per cent. An example is a machine with which the writer is most familiar—the linotype. It was introduced in the early 90's. In 1889 there were 50,000 persons employed in the printing and publishing business. Forty years later—though the linotype did the work of five men—there were 150,000. And this does not take into consideration the thousands of others who received jobs because of the stimulus given to the paper, ink and printing machinery businesses. And certainly the linotype played its part in the drop in illiteracy which included 10.7 of the population in 1900 and had dropped to 4.3 per cent in 1930. One writer in a current magazine blames the present unemployment situation on the failure of capital to have provided research laboratories that might have developed new machinery and new industries. He proves his point to his own satisfaction, at least, by pointing out the present telephone system and the automobile industry, either of which employs as many or more people than are now out of employment in the United States. The development of another machine such as the automobile, ten years ago, would have by this time absorbed all surplus labor.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

In filling the vacancies on the Board of Trustees of Elon College, from the nominees presented by the recent session of the Southern Convention, two women members were elected by unanimous vote of the Board: Miss Susie Holland, Suffolk, Va., and Mrs. R. T. Bradford, R. 2, Suffolk, Va., both being alumnae of the institution.

Rev. Joe French, pastor of our Ocean View Church, Norfolk, Va., writes May 20th: "We are beginning our evangelistic services here Monday night, June 1st. Prospects look promising for a great revival. Our church needs a meeting that will bring the people about here into the kingdom. We are hoping, working and praying for a great meeting."

A postcard bearing a photograph of our Leaksville Christian Church and the following message reached THE SUN's office this week: "You are cordially invited to attend the Annual all-day Memorial and Home Coming Services of the Leaksville Christian Church on the first Sunday in June." We regret that it was not received in time to have a cut made for this week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Congratulations to our highly favored friend, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, beloved pastor of Ingram Church and Apple's Chapel. In appreciation of their pastor's services, these two churches united recently in presenting their pastor with a "brand new spick and span" Plymouth automobile, which in addition to being an expression of the gratitude of his members, is a pressing invitation for their pastor to come to see them and to ride hastily, happily and comfortably when he does come.

Welcome visitors to the Richmond office of THE SUN were Rev. Frank Atkinson, and his wife and daughter of West Palm Beach, Florida. Journeying leisurely up the Atlantic seaboard, they are viewing with interest the historical points along the way. Their ultimate objective is to reach Mt. Holyoke College in time for the opening sessions of the General Council on June 16th. Rev. Atkinson is one of five delegates elected to represent the state of Florida.

Rev. Wilbert W. White, D. D., president of the Biblical Seminary, New York City, has recently given to the public a booklet, "Why Read the Bible?" The three topics treated in the booklet are: "Why Read the Bible?", "How to Read the Bible," "What to Read, and Why." This booklet is exceedingly readable, giving not only the appraisal of Dr. White, himself an eminent Bible student and teacher, but the appraisal of the best minds of our times and of antiquity. A copy can be had for one dime if ordered from the Biblical Seminary, 235 E. 49th St., New York.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom brought to a conclusion their work as our representatives in Carroll County, Va., with three services on Sunday, May 31st, one each at Elk Spur, Ivy Hill, and Rocky Ford. These two faithful workers have rendered faithful service while they have been in charge of the work, and many regret to see them leave the work. They are succeeded in this field by Rev. and Mrs. O. A. Elmore, Greensboro, N. C., who are to move into the parsonage next week, Brother Elmore having his first appointments at all three of the Sunday schools and preaching places, Sunday, June 14th.

The North Carolina Christian Advocate comments as follows on the union of American Methodism: "Saturday, May 23, 1936, the Methodist Protestant General Conference assembled in High Point, N. C., by a majority of 142 to 39 voted for union with Episcopal Methodism. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church assembled in Columbus, O., voted by a majority of 470 to 83 for union. When the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, votes on the question the majority doubtless will exceed the vote of either of the other two."

Florida will be well represented at the General Council at Mount Holyoke. The following have been elected regular delegates, the state being entitled to five: Rev. Frank Atkinson of West Palm Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Williams of Lake Worth; Rev. Everett B. Leshner of Jacksonville; Rev. Walter Metcalf of Tampa. The alternates elected are Rev. Henry J. Condit, D. D., of Orange City, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Mrs. Everett B. Leshner of Jacksonville; Rev. James E. Parker of New Port Richey, and Rev. George B. Spalding and Miss Edna Atkinson. Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Scott will also attend, but they will attend as delegates from the Georgia Conference.

Rev. James E. Parker has accepted the call to the church at New Port Richey, Florida and will begin his services with that church in the fall. In the meantime, Mr. Eben Chapman, student at Union Theological Seminary, will supply the pulpit this summer under the Student Summer Service. Mr. Parker has served the church at Palm City, Florida, for about nine years. He was responsible for the building of a comfortable parsonage and after the church was destroyed in a hurricane he supervised the building of a beautiful little church which was financed from the storm relief fund raised in 1928. Mr. Parker spends his summers at his old home in Spencer, Iowa. He was recently elected Moderator of the Florida Conference.

Rev. and Mrs. Oscar H. Denney were given a delightful farewell reception at First Church, Miami, on May 26th, as they were leaving Miami to take up their residence at the Granger Homestead in Canandigua, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Denney have rendered the churches a splendid life service. They have been in Florida churches for the past twelve years, having served several years at New Port Richey and North Miami, and at different times serving as interim or assistants at Miami First, Coral Gables and St. Petersburg. Wherever they have been they have won the love of the people, especially of the young people. They will be missed in the church life of Florida, but their friends wish them years of happy life at the Granger Homestead. At the reception they were presented with a generous purse from their many friends.

A long-time subscriber, a widow far advanced in years, in renewing her subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and declaring she would not know how to get along without it, lists first in her enjoyment of the paper, "The Youth Fellowship Page," especially. Now there you are! One gets the opinion that youth alone is interested in youth, but here is a dear soul far past her threescore and ten whom youth and the writings about youth very much interest. And then, secondly, in her list of appreciation, she records "The Family Altar Page," "The Sunday School Lesson" and "The Sermons by Dr. Truitt." It is true that all the people do not read their church paper, but it is likewise true that some of the people, often the elect and the saints, whose lives influence other lives about them, not only read the best that their church paper carries but make the same essential and fundamental in their living and experience.

COMMENCEMENT AT ELON COLLEGE.

Elon College has just closed one of the most successful years in its history. Commencement exercises were held May 23rd-27th inclusive. The graduating class numbered thirty-seven. There were others who received diplomas and certificates in music, expression, and business. This was one of the smallest graduating classes that we have had in years. This class entered in September, 1932. The enrollment for 1932-33 was the smallest that the college has had for years. The class, however, represented a very high type of scholarship and a variety of talents. We graduated a very fine type of young man and young woman. Many of this year's graduates will make their marks in the world.

The commencement exercises were well attended, particularly on Sunday for the baccalaureate sermon and on Wednesday for graduation. Dr. Charles F. Myers of Greensboro inspired his great audience with a message Sunday morning at 11:30 on "The Rugged Individual." Honorable Cameron Morrison of Charlotte, ex-governor of North Carolina, addressed the graduating class on good government and made an appeal for the support of democratic principles in government.

Tuesday was alumni day with a morning program, a complimentary lunch at noon, a business meeting in the afternoon, and the regular literary address in the evening followed by the regular banquet. Honorable J. O. Atkinson, Jr., of Greensboro, is president of the association. Mr. M. L. Patrick is secretary-treasurer. The morning address was delivered by Dr. H. Shelton Smith of the Duke University faculty. He delivered a most unusual address on the Christian college, an address that should be read by every one interested in the cause of higher education from the Christian viewpoint. Publication of this address has been requested. Dean Lindley of High Point College gave the regular literary address. Dean Lindley is an interesting and an entertaining speaker and gave his audience a great message.

We are looking forward to another year. We seriously request the cooperation of alumni and friends of the college to the end that the campaign now in progress may be a complete success and that we may have the kind of student body for 1936-1937 that we can serve best and that will mean most to the institution.

General News

of the

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

REPORT OF THE STRATEGY COMMITTEE.

The formation of a new "National Board of the Congregational and Christian Churches" to take over the administration of all missionary work, church extension, church building, religious education, general education, ministerial relief and other benevolent work which is conducted on a national scale, will be recommended to the General Council at its biennial meeting at Mt. Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass., June 16th to 23rd.

The recommendation is made by the strategy committee of nine appointed at the last biennial meeting. Dean Luther A. Weigle, of the Divinity School, Yale University, is chairman of the strategy committee; Dr. Oscar E. Maurer of Centre Church, New Haven, is vice-chairman and the Rev. John C. Schroeder of State Street Church, Portland, Me., is recording secretary.

The recommendation for the formation of a new Board follows upon ten years of increasing unification in the work of the national boards under identical directors and general officers with Dr. William Horace Day of the United Church, Bridgeport, Conn., president.

Referring to the committee of twelve which planned the reorganization of the Congregational missionary boards adopted in 1925, the strategy committee says:

"The Committee of Twelve recommended the unification of the Home Boards and recorded its judgment that a consolidation of the existing Societies into one corporation was the ideal and practical method of effecting such unification.

"After a study of the charters and by-laws of the different Societies, and an examination of the controlling laws of Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York, a review of opinions made by lawyers and laymen when the question of unification was being considered by the Committee of Twelve, and after securing other legal advice,

"We recommend:

"1. That steps be taken to have a multiple corporation created by the Legislatures of the States of Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York, possessing under its charters powers similar to those granted by the charters of the following Societies:

- The American Missionary Association
- The Congregational Home Missionary Society
- The Congregational Church Building Society
- The Congregational Sunday School Extension Society
- The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief
- Congregational Education Society
- Congregational Publishing Society

"The corporate charter will also contain express authority (a) to take over, carry on and conduct the work, or any part of the work, now or heretofore carried on by these Societies, and (b) to receive such portion of the property, estates and rights held by such Societies as may hereafter be legally permitted.

"2. That the activities of the existing Societies shall be conducted by the new corporation, and their funds used by it to carry out the respective purposes of each Society and to comply with the terms of all specific gifts. The Societies shall, however, continue as legal entities, and not be dissolved until, in the future, it shall appear certain that their dissolution will in no way injuriously affect the funds which they now possess, or in the future may possess."

Other recommendations concerning the unification are made by the strategy committee, the most important being one for the creation of the office of an executive vice-president who would be the general executive of the new Board.

The entire report of the strategy committee is a lengthy document. Besides its recommendations for a National Board it has sections dealing with Unified Promotion, with the Council for Social

DEAN LUTHER A. WEIGLE of Yale Divinity School; Chairman of the Strategy Committee.

Action, with Retirement Age and Pensions and with the Executive Committee of the General Council.

Another section is headed "Eliminating Distinctions Between Congregational and Christian Churches." This section says:

"The Oberlin Council passed a resolution favoring the elimination in financial and administrative matters of all distinction between Congregational and Christian churches so far as possible. This was not referred to the Societies for action.

"We therefore recommend to the General Council that it in turn recommend to the several Societies and agencies and to the State Conferences that so far as legally possible and morally justifiable, no distinction be made henceforth between Congregational and Christian churches.

"Here a word of caution may be needed lest there should be a thought of some change which should shift missionary moneys from churches and organizations now receiving them to those not receiving them. The significance of this recommendation is that when money is available for expenditure, without subtracting it from worthy objects to which it is now devoted, Societies should consider what projects are most worthy of its use without any reference to previous connection with Congregational or Christian churches.

"On the positive side we wish to record our sense of the highly important contribution which the former Christian churches are making to the life of the united denomination. Their contribution to the common fellowship has given a geographical distribution of more nearly national scope. Especially in the southeast, where Congregational work was chiefly on the missionary level, they have added a body of indigenous self-supporting churches, many of which occupy places of vital leadership in their communities. Along with the final removal of administrative distinctions between the institutions of the two happily merged churches we urge full appreciation and cordial support for the common work in areas where the Christian churches were relatively strong and the Congregational weak, that we may fully possess our common heritage and render the largest possible service in all parts of the nation."

In a general statement about the agencies of the denomination, the strategy committee declares that its studies "have made it clear that our denominational agencies have been and are doing the important work with which they are charged with a high degree of efficiency, so that the task of the Strategy Committee has not been that of designing a plan of rescue from failure, but rather that of adding efficiency by any improvements it might be able to suggest."

REVERENCE.

Reverence is born out of a sense of mystery. It is a mood of the soul arising in the presence of the unexplainable. We feel it when we look into the face of a little child within whose fragile life are all the possibilities of divinity. We are aware of it as we gaze wistfully upon the immobile features of one whom we have loved lying at last in the majestic dignity of death. The stars, shining in their etheric solitude, command it. Life! Death! Stars! Who can explain them?

God is the supreme mystery, everywhere apparent and yet everywhere concealed. He is manifest all about us in trees and flowers, in storms and rainbows, in friends and strangers, but He is vastly more than our eyes can see or our minds can comprehend. To realize His nearness is to be on holy ground. Pride, arrogance, self-esteem vanish at such a time. Reverence is the only appropriate mood. But reverence is more than duty; it is the innate courtesy of the soul. Its garments are humility; its language is silence; its crown devotion.

The spirit of reverence should prevail within the church, for it is the house of God, a sacred shrine to which men come to meet Him. Its very stones should command our respect. Its services should be places of holy meeting. When we wait in the courts of the Lord, let us do so with bowed heads, with contrite hearts and with reverent spirits, that we may have fellowship with Him who is the great Reality and the eternal Mystery.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE COMMENCEMENT.

The Forty-Sixth Annual Commencement of Elon College was in routine much like other Commencements that have gone before; but every Commencement is new and a-throb with significance to every member of the graduating class and to all the hopeful, vigorous and expectant youth who take part in these formal exercises. The Class Day exercises, the sermon and baccalaureates, the musical numbers and all the rest may fall in line with the prevailing custom for such events, but those who are conducting these exercises and those who are a part thereof are deeply and immeasurably concerned personally, for after all a college commencement is a very personal affair—personal to the fathers, mothers and relatives and friends of the members of the graduating class and those participating in the exercises, and then personally, intensely so, to the graduates and the departments whose day and performance belong to and are an expression of the individuals participating.

On Saturday, May 23rd, 8:00 P. M., the College Players opened the commencement and held the stage and drew an appreciative audience to its delightful performance. Sunday, May 24th, Dr. Chas. F. Myers, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Greensboro, N. C., gave the baccalaureate sermon, using as his topic the note that was sounded through the whole commencement exercises,—“Rugged Individualism.” His message was exceedingly appropriate, in that it brought impressively to the minds of the class and all who heard it the fact that a firm, fixed faith in God is absolutely essential to the making of any life that counts for righteousness and immortality.

The students in the Department of Music gave a vesper recital at 4:00 P. M. and at 8:00 P. M., President L. E. Smith gave a very practical and pointed baccalaureate address to those with whom he had wrought and labored for four years. The Class Day exercises, Monday, the 25th, varied from those of previous years and afforded much merriment and glee to the graduates themselves and to the large number of friends who heard them. The art exhibit from 3:00 to 5:00 P. M. in the Art Department and by the Home Economics Department were of a high order and enjoyed by those who viewed the exhibits. The Department of Music, under the leadership of Prof. Dwight Steere, head of the Music Department of Elon College, with Miss Helen Barney at the piano and Mr. Fletcher Moore at the organ, presented a festival chorus at 8:00 P. M. on Monday, which was appreciated and enjoyed by all lovers of music who gathered for the occasion.

Tuesday, May 26, was Alumni Day, with the alumni in charge of all the exercises, President Smith, himself an alumni, presiding. The exercises began at 11:00 A. M., with many alumni present, J. O. Atkinson, Jr., Attorney, Greensboro, President of the Alumni Association, introducing the speaker for the morning, Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke University, who delivered a very thought-provoking and stimulating address (which in condensed form, by the request of the editor, is to appear in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.) A sandwich luncheon was served on the campus at 1:00 P. M., followed by the Alumni business meeting at 2:30 P. M., at which many alumni spoke enthusiastically of their Alma Mater and of their great anxiety for the present development program for the College. President and Mrs. Smith received at a garden party at 5:00 P. M., which was attended by a merry throng and was exceedingly attractive with its campus setting and appointment. The College band gave a concert at 7:00 and at 7:30 P. M., Dean P. E. Lindley of High Point College and an honored alumnus of Elon, delivered the Alumni Address, an address filled with humor and brilliant lights of wit and wisdom to all who heard him. The Alumni Banquet followed at 8:30 P. M. and was very largely attended, the president of the Alumni Association being toastmaster, and many toasts by alumni made the occasion delightful and auspicious.

The graduating exercises at 10:30 A. M., Wednesday, May 27th, were very largely attended. After the academic procession had entered the building and the processional march was concluded, the exercises were opened with the invocation by Rev. Carl Hermann Voss, pastor of our United Church, Raleigh, N. C. Of this occasion a correspondent of the College wrote as follows for the daily press:

“Elon College, May 28th.—Thirty-seven members of the graduating class received their diplomas at the finals of the commencement week program held in the Whitley Memorial auditorium at Elon College yesterday with Hon. Cameron Morrison delivering the literary address.

“Concluding the year’s work at Elon, the commencement finals today was a highly impressive ceremony with a number of distinguished visitors, the final appearance of the Elon band and choir, and the commencement procession.

“Morrison, Charlotte, former Governor of the State of North Carolina, and former United States senator, who has rendered great service to the state, gave the graduates a parting farewell and a bit of advice as to the things to expect when turned out into the business world of today. With a life of experience and service to the government, the former state governor urged the graduates to become true citizens. “It takes a great deal of sense to become a citizen of the United States, because it is unlike any other country in the world,” he stated.

“The speaker criticized the methods that are being used to run the public affairs of today. He named a ‘few organic difficulties in politics of today,’ and stated that the ‘sorriest people in the country seem to be trying to get into the political parade while our best and most learned people are staying clear of politics.’ He called attention to the fact that difficulties are arising in the government of the nation not because of lack of power, but because of our ineffectualness. The only way to true patriotism, conscience, and the brains of our continent, he pointed out. ‘Rise above these little prejudices of the hour,’ he told the Elon Graduating class.

“The list of those receiving diplomas and certificates and awards follows:

“Bachelor of Arts: Ernest Askew, Eure; Donald Autman, West End; Helen Barney, Elon College; Luther Boyd, Henderson; Herbert Burton, Brown Summit; Drury Chandler, Durham; Turia Coble, Haw River; Esther Cole, Durham; Oliver Cook, Norfolk, Va.; Wm. Cooper, Norfolk, Va.; Ollie DeMoss, Burlington; Hazel Farmer, Norwood; Nannie Farmer, News Ferry, Va.; Lanson Granger, Norfolk, Va.; Charles Holmes, Caldwell, N. J.; Esther Hoppenstedt, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y.; Waitus Howell, Goldsboro; Chester Hughes, Elon College; Earl Johnson, Elon College; W. W. Kimball, Jr., Manson; Dan Matthews, Mount Olive; James Neese, Reidsville; Martha Neese, Burlington; Alfred Nelson, Bris, Va.; Ralph Newman, Virgilina, Va.; Rhetta Newman, Woodleigh; Elmina Rhodes, Windsor, Va.; Thomas Rosser, Jonesboro; Robert Sims, Mt. Airy; Wyatt Stevens, Roanoke, Ala.; George Taylor, Lewisville; Aubrey Todd, Norfolk, Va.; John Troppoli, Neptune, N. J.; Ethel Truitt, Glen Raven; Margaret Walker, Brown Summit, and Samuel Watson, Sanford.

“Certificates: Diploma in piano—Helen Barney, Elon College; Oliver Cook, Norfolk, Va. Expression—Hilda Lee Heatwole, Burlington; Sara Virginia Hook, Elon College. Certificates in Secretarial Practice: Jesse Howard Cates, Burlington; Lou Vina Brann, Brown Summit; Mattie Lucille Pickett, Burlington; Geraldine Mangum, Burlington; Henry Speck Morgan, Prospect Hill; Mary Lois Straughan, Siler City.”

A Bible was presented, on behalf of the College, to each member of the graduating class by Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor, First Christian Church, Greensboro, in a most fitting, impressive and comprehensive manner.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on Rev. Richard H. Clapp of New Haven, Conn., a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College and a very able minister and pastor of one of our New Haven churches. The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Clapp, thus bringing to a close another and an epoch-making Commencement, the 46th in number, of Elon College.

UNDER ATTACK.

Ours is a time of attack and criticism of the existing order, whether that order be in society, church or state. Nothing seems to escape, and the high ideals of the best seem to invite rather than repel the vigorous attack of opposing forces. Speaking with marvelous fervor and zeal as a fraternal messenger to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in session at Columbus, Ohio, recently, Dr. W. Harold Young of the United Church of Canada used words which brought to their feet hundreds of assembled churchmen who heard him and registered their approval by rounds of applause and hearty "Amen's." We give two or three closing paragraphs from this masterful address:

"The things, the ideals we have tried to live for for centuries, the very ideals in which your nation had its birth, are under such attack as they have never been subjected to in modern times before. In one thing only, fathers and brethren, is there any real chance of their survival.

"In the things which greatly matter, the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack should remain forever entwined and the two great English-speaking peoples of the earth should stand as one on all moral questions which confront mankind. The time is upon us when only by a high and perhaps by a costly loyalty to the most genuine Christian idealism can a future of any worth be assured to mankind.

"Surveying the life of the world today, one is increasingly conscious that it is in the English-speaking peoples that there lies the best chance of the emergence of that type of loyalty can it be effective for the saving of the world.

"Men and brethren, in all the things that greatly matter, we are one. Whatever can divide two peoples who have in common the cultural and spiritual heritage that is represented by the names of Chaucer and Wyclif, of Ridley, of Shakespeare, of Milton, of John Wesley and John Knox? May we ever realize our essential oneness and live by it, and live with it—for in that, justice and freedom and decency among men, and Jesus Christ and His dreams, have their best chance in this troubled world today."

J. O. A.

SHARING.

It should be borne in mind by our critics of "Foreign Missions" that we of America have shared, and are sharing, the worst we have with the heathen, and it certainly behooves us to share with them the best we have. Our industrialists have sent to the East their shrewdest salesmen, our manufacturers have shipped to the Orient their worst and vilest productions, our movies have reeled off before the eyes of the Orient the most sensual and degrading scenes of American life, and a soulless press has heralded to the four corners the deeds and daring of our gangsters, our lynchings and our murders. A returned missionary from the Orient was heard to say not long since that there were people in Christian America who felt that the time had come to call home the missionaries from abroad. He said the missionaries would be willing enough to come home and devote the rest of their lives to helping Christianize America, provided the agencies of evil from our American society and civilization would also come home from abroad and confine their degrading and pagan practices to the people at home. We agree with a recent publication by our Commission on Missions that "America desperately needs the spirit and message of Christ. Our churches exist to exalt Righteousness against selfishness and strife." Continuing, our Commission declares that "America's best export is the spirit of Christ, and the more of that we send to others, the more we have to share with each other. America's commerce, good and bad, goes to every nation. Surely, we must share our best export—the teaching and service of well-selected missionaries—with nations in need and thus help to build a better world." And this is exactly what our Mission Board is trying to do—to export the best that, in a measure, at least, the export of the worst may be counteracted. Under the American Board more than 765 national churches, with their pastors and Bible women, now spread the Gospel of Christ abroad. Six thousand new members were added during 1934. About 85,000 pupils are now receiving Christian instruction in our schools, whose purpose is to 'select and train in Christian character the leadership of the coming generation. More than 650,000 treatments are given each year in our clinics and hospitals overseas. Clearly, our 'foreign' work is more than an 'export.' It strengthens and inspires the Christian forces in America. It goes forth, but returns heavily laden with blessing, to increase faith and loyalty here."

It is the climax and glory of our religion to share the love of our Lord with others, that others less favored than we are may have Him and His power in their lives, since it is only through His name and power that the most unfavored may be reached, redeemed, saved.

MASSANETTA SPRINGS CONFERENCES.

Massanetta Springs, four miles east of Harrisonburg, Va., is to have a new swimming pool this summer. The excavation work has been completed, the concrete is being poured and the contractor promises to have it finished by June 15th.

The pool is located on a beautiful sloping hill south of the hotel and east of the old pool. This location with its commanding elevation is unsurpassed. From this hill there is a beautiful view, and the Management plans to make this an ideal recreational center. The walls of the pool will be white so that the blue-green Massanetta water will make the pool a thing of beauty.

Massanetta Springs has gradually grown during each of its fourteen years. Last year it had an attendance of approximately 50,000 people. There were 1800 young people on the grounds for a period of a week. The State Christian Endeavor Convention will be held at Massanetta Springs this summer for the first time, which will bring 200 more young people to this conference center, making approximately 2,000 in attendance for a period of a week. So far as is known, no other conference in America has so many young people in the course of a summer.

A beautiful Biblical Pageant was an added attraction last year, drawing a crowd of about 4,000. A pageant of even larger proportions, and more attractive in its setting, is to be put on again this year.

The program has won national reputation, securing as it does the outstanding leaders in the whole Protestant world as principal speakers. Representatives were present last year from eighteen denominations and thirty States. Three other denominations—Methodist, Lutheran and Baptist—put on an annual assembly for a period of a week with a superlative program, securing leading men of their respective denominations.

The dates of the Conferences at Massanetta Springs this summer are as follows:

State Convention of the Virginia Christian Endeavor Union, June 18-21.

Camp for Intermediate Boys and Girls, June 22-28.

Presbyterian Young People's Conference, June 29-July 5.

Methodist Young People's Conference, July 6-12.

School of Sacred Music and Sacred Music Festival, July 13-19.

Elders and Deacons Conference, July 18-19.

Lutheran Church Workers Conference, July 20-26

Dr. Robert E. Spear, New York.

Dr. Herbert Lockyer, of England.

Dr. S. D. Gordon, Winston-Salem.

Dr. Wm. Evans, Los Angeles.

Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, Birmingham.

Dr. F. Crossley Morgan, Augusta, Ga.

Dr. Hart-Davies, of England.

Dr. Charles L. King, Houston, Texas.

Rev. Peter Marshall, Atlanta, Ga.

Other outstanding speakers will be added to the program from time to time. For information, literature, etc., write to Wm. E. Hudson, Conference Manager, Box 684, Staunton, Va.

MY CHURCH.

Dr. Alfred Grant Walton, pastor of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., has a very high regard for his church. He writes in his calendar about it in these lines:

My Church—

"Is the branch of the great fellowship of Christian believers in my community with which I have chosen to be identified and I will give it my noblest efforts and my greatest enthusiasms.

"I will support my church regularly. It is not too much to ask of any man that he give one hour each week for the worship of the living God.

"I will think of my church not simply as an organization from which I may derive benefit but one through which I may give my devoted service.

My church will have my full support and undivided allegiance. I will be prompt to recognize its virtues and quick to overlook its faults.

"Since my church is composed of many individuals of varied training and diverse backgrounds, I will be ready to respect the opinion of others, seeking a basis of unity through comprehension and not through compromise.

"I will support my church financially, not as a matter of duty, but as a Christian privilege.

"I will give my full cooperation to the pastor, my complete fidelity to the church's program and my prayers will be raised for its progress, prosperity and peace.

"Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for it."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Saturday, May 30th, 1936, at 3:30 P. M., a fitting service dedicating a Memorial Urn to the memory of the late Dr. W. W. Staley, was held at his grave in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk, Va. The Memorial Urn was presented by the Woman's Missionary Society and the W. W. Staley Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church. The pastor, Dr. John G. Truitt, presided. The Urn is carved from granite and is beautiful in design.

Dr. John G. Truitt read the following "Opening Sentences" and led the Invocation:

"Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth.—The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord and He delighteth in his way."

Mrs. W. H. Andrews on behalf of the Missionary Societies, made the presentation in the following words:

"Thou shalt remember all the way the Lord thy God led thee. . . The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." In behalf of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, and of the W. W. Staley Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, it becomes my great pleasure to present this Memorial Urn, which bears the following inscription:

"IN MEMORIAM

REV. W. W. STALEY, D. D.,

Erected by the Woman's Missionary Societies Suffolk Christian Church, 1936.

And may this Memorial Urn be this day dedicated to God, and to the memory of our beloved, sainted Doctor William Wesley Staley, who for fifty years, as pastor and pastor emeritus, led our feet in the pathway of righteousness, and pointed our eyes to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.

Scripture Lesson: Ephesians 3:8-21, was read by the writer.

Dr. John G. Truitt spoke as follows in accepting the Urn and dedicating it for future use:

"As pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, it gives me great pleasure to accept in behalf of the family, the church, and the friends of the late Reverend William Wesley Staley, D. D., the beautiful Memorial Urn, as presented today. And I hereby dedicate it to the glory of God, and the memory of Dr. William Wesley Staley, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. In this humble, but artful, and beautiful way, the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church have done honor to the name of Dr. Staley, whose memory we all alike cherish and delight to honor, and have also brought honor to themselves, for we honor ourselves when we honor so great and worthy a name as that honored here in this simple rite and ceremony."

Prayer was offered by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, a former pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, who was associated with Dr. Staley for a number of years.

The writer pronounced the benediction.

DUTY.

Webster defines duty "as that which a person is morally obligated to do or forbear." Duty is a household word. We have been urged to do our duty all of our lives. When a person does his duty completely there is a sense of satisfaction accruing to him personally and enjoyment to those who are interested in him. When a person fails to do his duty there is a sense of condemnation from within and not much admiration from without. To do one's duty fully has never been injurious. The failure to discharge duty completely has often times resulted in dissatisfaction and in serious losses to the individual. When a person becomes a Christian certain responsibilities are his. The question of duty becomes a definite requirement. When he becomes a member of the church by such an act he assumes for himself definite responsibilities and faces squarely the question of his duty as a Christian.

I write chiefly to the members of the Christian Church. The Christian Church is a great denomination with a wide vision and a spiritual program. Ours is a denomination with various and varied departments necessary for the conduct of a great religious program. The membership of the Christian Church individually and severally is obligated to the requirements of their denomination. Elon College is an institution of the Christian church, conceived by the church's most enthusiastic and most progressive leaders. The Christian Church at no time has questioned the need of her college, nor has it ever minimized the responsibility of the church to give to the college necessary support. Every individual belonging to the Christian Church has a definite responsibility for the support of Elon College. He has a duty to the college to perform. The extent of this duty is determined by the extent of his ability. No one is expected to do more than his duty and every Christian wants to do his duty, he is not impoverished; when he fails to do his duty he must pay the consequences for such a failure either directly or indirectly. The results of living cannot be evaded. The law of compensation in the field of duty is inexorable. Neither the Christian Church nor educational institution expects anyone to do more than his duty but expects everyone to do his duty to the full.

If you are an alumnus of the college your responsibility is more weighty and your duty is more exacting. You have entered into the labors of those who have served and gone. It now becomes your solemn duty to perpetuate the high privileges that were yours that others may have the joy of entering therein. In the Development Program for our college we are at grips with the future of our church. This is an appeal to every one certainly to do his duty. As we stand in the face of duty many things may influence us. Voices from the past cry out mistakes, failures, losses, but these do not compensate. Fortunately God does not hold us responsible for things acknowledged, confessed and asked to be forgiven for. The life of the college is at stake. We are asked to forgive and forget, and walk up like Christian men and women take our stand on the plain of Christian cooperation and discharge our duty completely regardless of the cost. Suppose you have given suppose you did give in the re-building program, did God cease his favors to you then or have you enjoyed the blessings of life and have you been blessed with the necessities of life since? Our Master taught us to pray for forgiveness as we ourselves forgive. He has also taught us to give as we have received. Our support to Elon College today cannot be withheld on the ground that we have given in the past unless God has ceased giving to us. This matter of giving is conditioned not by our own generosity but by God Almighty's goodness to us. We hope some day when for us life is done to be given abundant entrance into riches of which we know but little. How terrible if we have blocked that entrance by piling up possessions which we should have shared that his kingdom in force and power might march uninterrupted in its conquest for righteousness in the earth. We need to be careful, seriously so, lest our own decisions and our own conclusions become for us the voice of judgment when we stand in the wake of eternity.

God's gifts to us are not ours because of Divine duty but because of Divine love. God's gifts to us on the other hand create on our part a duty to God that is inescapable. If every individual will do his duty by Elon College nothing more nor less, he will be enriched and the college will be made secure. Not only the college but our own destiny is at stake.

GULPH MILLS (PA.) LETTER.

The Gulph Mills Christian Church began a series of special services March 23, closing March 29, with Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor of the Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., assisting the pastor. The purpose of the services was to quicken the spiritual life of the church, and to bring to fruition some of the work done during the past year in our various departments of Christian Education. Brother Morgan did all the preaching and rendered a valuable service in his messages of song. He left a fine impression on the church and community, and we have reason to believe that the church and community impressed Brother Morgan. We hope to have him here again sometime after the summer season. Brother Morgan is a good preacher, with an excellent evangelistic note in all of his messages. About twenty professed faith in Christ and a large number of church members made reconsecration during the services. At the close of the series the pastor organized a Pastor's Class for study and instruction in church membership and received thirteen of them into full membership on Easter Sunday. Palm Sunday and Easter gave us record attendance when the influence of the series of services was reflected.

This is a suburban church, near the city line of Philadelphia, within sight of Conshohocken, and a community center. Three years ago we celebrated the hundredth anniversary of our organization and last year the hundredth anniversary of the dedication of our first building. The church was dedicated free of debt and has never had any debt on the property, and no trustee note ever existed, although we have no wealthy members. Through the entire century the church has kept her doors open and maintained regular services. We do not write this in any sense of boasting, but think that it is an unusual record and worth publishing for the brotherhood. The writer served this field from 1911 until 1919 when he resigned and accepted a call to the First Christian Church of Muncie, Indiana, and after seven years was called back to this pastorate, in 1927, making in all seventeen years we have spent in this parish.

Six years ago the church purchased an abandoned school building adjoining our grounds, which has been fitted up as our Education Building. It is used by the primary department of our Bible School, and a Circulating Library, installed and conducted by a friend in the community, which makes the church still more a community center. The library now has about two hundred readers. The purpose of this letter is not to project myself or work, but to give our southern friends a slant on a southern man's field in a northern climate, and the fellowship which he has recently had with a southern brother in evangelistic work here. Possibly after all it is a contribution to the improvement of sectional differences and a better understanding, to have had pastors locate at points far removed from their native environment and local prejudices and customs. However, there still steals upon us seasons of home-sickness for the dear Southland and scenes and associations of earlier years. The climate here is a bit severe and the winters are long, yet the people are warm-hearted and of generous hospitality.

TO THE RESCUE OF HUMANITY.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Three men hitherto unknown except to their own community descend into a mine. They are trapped by a cave-in; and although in another land, the news spreads throughout America and other countries. The world waits anxiously and hopes for their rescue. Minutes grow into hours and hours into days, and days into months to those most directly affected. Prayers go up from a million hearts—many hearts least suspected of supplication. Hope almost fades, one victim of the accident succumbs and the world grows more anxious. Newspaper headlines grow larger and rescue workers heighten the tenseness of their labors. At last to the joy of the world the two survivors are rescued. What a relief!

And what a lesson in this tragedy for us! Death and destruction come through cruel and senseless wars that engulf its thousands, its millions. Only close relatives of soldiers and potential soldiers are really anxious. What if all humanity treated war to the extent that we would work feverishly to avert it? What if public opinion placed the profits of war in the same category with robbery with intent to kill? What if all nations should be so thoughtful of and interested in humanity that war would be hated—hated into extinction?

Crime—that monster within our midst—aside from its cost of more than fifteen billion dollars per year, is trapping young and old, destroying property, and doing irreparable damage. What if nations became so anxious for the eradication of crime that united forces would combine to wipe out this sorry blight upon our civilization? Victory would be the result.

Ignorance in many forms still stalks the earth, taking its victims by the thousands and marring the lives of millions. Trapped as we are in many forms of illiteracy, would that every heart went out to scout this scourge so that knowledge in its full significance would fill all the earth!

Disease and death take their toll of children and grown-ups in thousands of instances where longer life and greater happiness should prevail. Disease could be abated even more; it could be stamped out, if only we became as engrossed in the welfare of all humanity as we do at times over the rescue of one or more individuals.

Glorify that indefinable heroism that moves us to save one mortal; let not a word be spoken to condemn, but rather sing the highest praise of him who gives effort and risks his life to save his brother-man. Let us encourage and kindle that same spirit that we may seek to rescue all humanity from the cruelties of war, clutches of crime, shackles of ignorance and blight of disease.

Truly there are encouraging signs that men are moving toward such a great, but not impossible, ideal!

REVIVAL AT HOPEWELL.

On Sunday, May 10th, a revival meeting was begun in the Hopewell Christian Church and although God had apparently abandoned His Son May 24th. The meetings were conducted by Rev. W. H. Garman, of Mt. Zion Church, Norfolk, Va., assisted by Rev. T. N. Lowe, pastor of the church. The services were well attended, having a number of conversions and many reclamations, with ten additions to the church membership. The singing was inspirational, and the sermons were forcibly rendered by Rev. Garman. The Gospel truths which he preached are indelibly stamped on the hearts and minds of his hearers. May God bless him for the good that he wrought in this part of God's moral vineyard.

MRS. J. R. BABER.

DAMASCUS.

On Sunday, May 17th, the annual memorial service was held at Damascus Christian Church, (Chapel Hill, N. C.). The morning service was divided into two parts, the first being beautifully presented by the children. The next was a Memorial Address by Rev. Farrell Pledger of Duke University. Then the service was concluded in the cemetery where flowers were placed on all the graves.

Lunch was served out in the grove.

The afternoon service consisted of familiar hymns sung by the audience. At this service we were favored in having a male quartet from Palm Street Christian Church, Greensboro, one from Carrboro Baptist Church and a solo by Mr. Larry Poythress of Washington.

The afternoon sermon was by the pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes.

At the close of the service Mr. A. M. Crabtree and Mr. Aubrey McLandon were ordained as deacons of this church.

Large audiences attended the services and enjoyed the day together.

MISS LOUISE CRABTREE.

"SINGIN' IN THE RAIN."

A college president has said, "All my life I have heard great cheering. Expectant cheers, clamorous cheers, loyal cheers, the thunderous cheer of victory. But I never heard such cheers before or since, as that which greeted a crippled boy on commencement day, carried across the platform in the arms of a college football player to receive his degree with honor."

For, years before, upon entering college, his professor had said, "Stand up." "I should like to, sir," came the answer, "but I have not been able to since I was four year old."

Suppose we put ourselves in that boy's place. How easy to surrender; to stop dreaming; to become lost in a morass of self-pity. Instead, that boy fought his fight, and so carried himself that thousands cheered him on the day of recognition because he kept "Singin' in the Rain."—Christian Advocate.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

SEEN FROM A CAR WINDOW IN MANCHURIA.

There is an advantage in learning to enjoy all kinds of food. Likewise one is fortunate if interested in many phases of life and objects in and out of doors. Under these conditions life never grows monotonous.

We have much snow here in North Manchuria, but it never ceases to be beautiful. When the writer grows too old for real, aggressive work and there's time, he's going to sit down and just watch it fall for hours. The flakes are now striking the dirty double-window panes of this packed railway car. We see wood being hauled into the villages on sleds. Beautiful Manchurian pheasants are scratching up the famous Manchuria soya beans from beneath the snow, or are feeding on grass seeds, paying no attention to the train. An acquaintance shot plenty of rabbits and some foxes out this way. A deer has just bounded out from a clump of trees and gone up and over the hill. In the mountains more distant are wapiti, elk, wild boar, bear, Manchurian tiger—and still plenty of bandits.

The large city of Achong, which we are now passing, with clay animals perched on top of the station, as on heathen temples, holds many tens of thousands of people who do not know the Creator of all we see in this interesting, wild country. As a rule they persist in their old superstitious beliefs and practices. Here and there from this city has radiated to many places streams of spiritual light, for in the midst of its crowded homes and shops Scotch Presbyterian missionaries have preached and taught the saving gospel of our Lord. Truly it is the power of God, for we have found many whose lives have been changed from darkness to light as they have taken Christ as Lord. Now on nearly every car of these trains we find men and women who at these gospel centers have come to know Him, more and more in numbers as we few here proclaim His Word.

Burnt farm houses and railway stations tell of recent numerous bandit attacks. One frequently sees holes in car windows and seats, rifle shots of the cruel bands who have unloaded their rifles against the trains, but more striking are the remains of burnt passenger cars, bean oil tanks and engines. These bring to mind the robbing of all passengers, the death of some, and the carrying away for torture and ransom, or torture and death, very many over the past few years. Here at Ert-sientenza we see a beautiful big hotel, summer-resort building, the only one east of Harbin, standing in ruins, another mute reminder of lawlessness.

The Japanese were wise in cutting back for a quarter of a mile all trees along the railway line. This makes it harder for the bandits to attack, even when the trains have been wrecked, putting the outlaws at a disadvantage. Since this has been done and systematic drives made into the mountains against the organized bands, trains are now not so frequently wrecked.

One can hardly imagine a state of greater personal insecurity and hardship from lawlessness as has existed in this part of the world for a long time. But attacks of the devil through opium, morphine, gambling, immorality, heathen customs and other forces of sin are just as violent and even more disastrous. Christ is truly needed in this land. We rejoice that improvement is being made in law and order, and that many are turning from darkness and sin to the light and righteousness that may be had only through Christ Jesus. Deep gratitude and thanksgiving we hold for those in the homeland who are making possible this lasting spiritual improvement and blessing for many!

TOPICS FOR DISCUSSION IN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

1. What is done in your Society to interest and enlist new members in mission work?
2. How may the Society introduce and promote a mission program for the entire church?
3. What percent of the church membership attends the regular services of worship, and how might the Society help to increase church attendance?
4. How many Sunday School members 12 years of age and over are not church members?
5. How many families in your church, and how many members of the church families over 12 years of age who are not affiliated with any church?
6. How many families in your church community which are not affiliated with any church?
7. Does the Missionary Society's reaching its financial goal help or hinder the other financial interests of the church?
8. Has your Missionary Society ever made a study of the financial plan of the church?
9. If your church does not have an Every Member Canvas, and provision for regular and systematic giving, could the Missionary Society introduce such a system?
10. How can the Missionary Society share its Spiritual Life Program with the entire church?

SURVEY OF CHURCH GIVING.

The research department of the Federal Council of Churches reports that annual gifts to twenty-five Protestant church bodies dropped 43 per cent in the seven years from 1928 to 1935. Contributions for 1935 slightly exceeded those for 1934, however. The contribution per capita for all purposes in 1934 was $12.07 and in 1935 it was $12.10. The contribution per capita for congregational purposes only was $9.92 in 1934 and $9.98 for 1935.

Total gifts declined from $532,368,714 in 1928 to $304,692,499 in 1935, while total gifts for congregational purposes declined from $402,683,861 to $251,347,435. The per capita contribution for all purposes declined from $23.30 in 1928 to $12.10 in 1935. Per capita contribution for congregational purposes declined from $17.30 in 1928 to $9.98 in 1935.

The report says that nearly all the communions maintained their per capita contributions for congregational expenses better than those for benevolences. The Protestant Episcopalians were the only group to lose proportionately less on benevolences than on contributions for congregational expenses.—Exchange.

TRAVEL IMPROVES IN CHINA.

A man drank hot coffee in the afternoon in Szechuan Province that was brewed that morning in Shanghai—a journey which used to require the better part of six weeks. Reason? China's rapidly developing air lines. Rev. Earle H. Ballou of Peiping traveled to Taiku in a clean, comfortable train within a few hours on a journey that two years ago by bus was a painful affair with 15 buses stuck in the mud and 25 miles traveled on foot, before his own bus caught up with him. Now there are two railroads running into Taiku. Such stories come often from China usually with the phrase: "If only she could be let alone. . ."

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL RELATIONS.

(Read before, discussed and adopted by the recent session of The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches and published in THE SUN by vote of that body.)

Congregational and Christian churches have always concerned themselves to some extent with the social application of the Christian gospel. But the precarious condition of the present world order compels much greater vigilance in this sphere. The gospel of Christ is the gospel for the whole of life, or it is the gospel for none of it. Moreover, no individual gospel is adequate for our generation that does not concern itself with the most crucial relations within which persons achieve Christian character. Approached from this standpoint, it is clear that the church is compelled to share in social reconstruction, or else suffer loss of Christian vitality.

I.

The Social Ideals of the Churches.

Ever since 1908, the major Protestant churches in America have supported a platform of social ideals, popularly called a social creed, as adopted through the Federal Council of Churches. In revised form, these ideals were re-adopted by the Council in 1932<sup>1</sup>. Your Committee recommends that this statement be adopted as the basis of study and of Christian social action on the part of the Congregational and Christian churches of the South. These Ideals, in revised form, are as follows:

The Churches Should Stand For:

1. Practical application of the Christian principle of social well-being to the acquisition and use of wealth, subordination of speculation and the profit motive to the creative and cooperative spirit.
2. Social planning and control of the credit and monetary systems and the economic processes for the common good.
3. The right of all to the opportunity for self-maintenance; a wider and fairer distribution of wealth; a living wage, as a minimum, and above this a just share for the worker in the product of industry and agriculture.
4. Safeguarding of all workers, urban and rural, against harmful conditions of labor and occupational injury and disease.
5. Social insurance against sickness, accident, want in old age, and unemployment.
6. Reduction of hours of labor as the general productivity of industry increases; release from employment at least one day in seven, with a shorter working week in prospect.
7. Such special regulation of the conditions of work of women as shall safeguard their welfare and that of the family and the community.
8. The right of employees and employers alike to organize for collective bargaining and social action; protection of both in the exercise of this right; the obligation of both to work for the public good; encouragement of cooperatives and other organizations among farmers and other groups.
9. Abolition of child labor; adequate provision for the protection, education, spiritual nurture and wholesome recreation of every child.
10. Protection of the family by the single standard of purity; educational preparation for marriage, home-making and parenthood.
11. Economic justice for the farmer in legislation, financing, transportation and the price of farm products as compared with the cost of machinery and other commodities which he must buy.

12. Extension of the primary cultural opportunities and social services now enjoyed by urban populations to the farm family.
13. Protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste of any traffic in intoxicants and habit-forming drugs.
14. Application of the Christian principle of redemption to the treatment of offenders; reform of penal and correctional methods and institutions, and of criminal court procedure.
15. Justice, opportunity and equal rights for all; mutual goodwill and cooperation among racial, economic and religious groups.
16. Repudiation of war, drastic reduction of armaments, participation in international agencies for the peaceable settlement of all controversies; the building of a cooperative world order.
17. Recognition and maintenance of the rights and responsibilities of free speech, free assembly, and a free press; and encouragement of free communication of mind with mind as essential to the discovery of truth.

II.

Items for Special Emphasis During Next Biennium.

Although every item of the foregoing social platform is important, certain ones are of imperative concern to the churches at this stage of our social scene, notably the following:

1. Peace Action.

War is not only a present reality, but it threatens to spread to the dimensions of another world war, with consequences infinitely worse than those of the war of 1914-1918. Europe is an armed camp that may burst into violent conflict at any moment. Should war embroil Europe, the United States will be sought as an ally by both sides. Economically interwoven as we are with European powers, the United States will find it extremely difficult to remain neutral to military operations, to say nothing of other forms of neutrality. Only with the greatest economic sacrifices can we hope to avoid involvement. The present Emergency Peace Campaign is an effort to awaken the people of this nation to the threat of war, and to create among us the will to sacrificial peace. If the churches really believe in peace, let them say so by united peace action that is convincing.

2. Race Relations.

In many centers of the world racialism is the basis of human tension and conflict. If racialism is finding bitter expression in Hitler's Germany, it is also a source of friction elsewhere, even in our own America. In times of economic strain factors of race are especially disturbing to the social peace. It is not surprising, therefore, that the years of depression have seen here in the South a recrudescence of racial antipathy, resulting in an increased amount of lynching. It's a time in which the churches of the South should give more thought to the underlying factors of racial disturbance, and seek to remove them in every possible way.

3. Civil Liberties.

One of the most disquieting features of our present social scene is the way in which ordinary civil liberties, as guaranteed by the Constitution, are being arrested by the drift of economic and political circumstances. In some twenty states, we are told, legislatures have been asked to enact Teachers' Oath Laws. Historic Massachusetts is an example of what can happen, even in a state whose past derives its principal glory from its loyalty to human liberties. Such democracy as we now enjoy can be preserved, and can be the instrument of orderly social change, only if our constitutional guarantees of free speech, free press, and free assembly are maintained. Once civil liberties are lost in the political and economic sphere, the churches will not long enjoy their historic liberties in the sphere of religion. For confirmation of this, we may examine the religious situation in certain areas of Europe.

4. The Liquor Problem.

Since the collapse of the 18th Amendment, the churches have been bewildered in the midst of the growing ravages of drink. No issue reveals more clearly the moral impotence of American Christianity. However much the church needs the arm of law for policing purposes, the ultimate solution of the drink evil lies in the realm of moral regeneration. "The letter killeth, the Spirit maketh alive." If the church believes in a personal gospel, then here is one test of its redemptive power. Failing to make men morally temperate, we must acknowledge that our gospel has no message with which to rout the saloon.

This is no time to indulge in band-wagon campaigns. Rather let us re-examine the problem of drink in its deeper nature, noting its fundamental causes, investigating the groups who indulge in drink (including church members), and experimenting with spiritual processes with a view to developing a more constructive approach to liquor abolition. A real church of God will seize this moment in which to discover a strategy by which to rout this social curse of man. But let it be re-emphasized, the ultimate source of abolition is moral, not political.

5. Economic Relations.

Despite the efforts of government and of other agencies to secure re-employment, a disturbing proportion of our able-bodied population remains idle. This is particularly disturbing, inasmuch as there are, at least in certain quarters, signs of economic restoration. An economic order that tolerates recovery for the few and charity for the many must not itself be ultimately tolerated. Moreover, a maladjusted social situation will surely breed bitterness and class conflict, and finally undermine the foundations of orderly civilization.

One of the most acute social issues confronts us of the South in the sphere of farm tenancy. According to a recent study<sup>2</sup>, more than a million families must eke out their existence as tenants. Moreover, tenancy is on the increase. In 1880, 36.2 per cent of the farms were operated by tenants; in 1920, 49.6 per cent; in 1930, 55.5 per cent. In the cotton region, the percentage is even higher. Out of every hundred cotton farms, sixty are worked by tenants. Whole communities once made up of owners are now servants of absentee landlords.

Sections that were once socially secure and morally vigorous are now being overrun by a sort of peonage that easily equals that which prevails in many parts of the Old World. In its wake the churches become puny, sick with the ravages of economic hook-worm. The moral and economic health of the South calls loudly for a physician. This scandal of share-cropping, this new sort of slavery, must be checked or the country-side will become a moral, social and economic desert.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

VIRGINIA VALLEY S. S. & C. E. CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Churches will meet this year in a one-day session, Thursday, June 11, 1936, with the Bethel Church. The meeting will open at 10 o'clock and close with a night session. The executive committee has prepared a good program, and it is hoped that representatives from all churches will be present. The one-day session will make it easier for people to attend.

The Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor societies who are asked for contributions should feel that they are helping not only to carry on their convention but to support the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention. Please do not feel that this is an imposition, a duty that is hard to do, but rather accept it as a privilege and find the joy of sharing in Christian work.

The writer anticipates the pleasure of meeting with old friends and making new ones at the session of this Convention. He sincerely hopes that young people and adults will attend in large numbers to report on what has been done and to make plans for future activity.

REGISTER NOW.

Those who are going to the Elon College Summer School of Leadership Training will do well to register now. All that needs to be done is to send in your name and address to Mrs. W. B. Williams, 1253 24th Street, Newport News, Virginia. If you have a special roommate, you can make that statement also. It is not necessary to send money. If your registration is in by June 15th, you will be due $8.50 to the Summer School for all expenses when you arrive, but if you do not send your name, $9.00 will be the fee. Now is the time to register and be ready to go.

TO TEACH AT ELON SUMMER SCROOL.

The first graduate agriculturist ever sent into the foreign field, William C. Bell of Lobito, West Africa, has been invited to teach in the Leadership Training School at Elon College, North Carolina, June 29th to July 5th, 1936.

Mr. Bell, who through 37 years of first-hand experience with the Ovimbundu and other tribes, first went to the dark continent as a young man under the Phil-African League but in 1907 became a representative of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and was stationed at Dondi, now the educational center of the West African field.

Unresponsive to a missionary call that stressed the sending out of only ministers, Mr. Bell felt that service to a country like Africa needed adequate training in carpentry, house-building and business as well as farming. So with characteristic thoroughness he acquired this background, together with experience of mining before he set sail for Africa.

His first job was the establishment of a Christian center in an entirely new area among a primitive people where farming, irrigation and better villages were demonstrated. Right from the start he seemed destined to be a pioneer being sent out to look over new sites for missions, erecting buildings and seeing new little churches and schools organized and developed.

Mr. Bell's last post in Africa was at Lobite, that beautiful and rapidly developing seaport in Angola at the cross-roads of the continent and into which runs the new Trans-African Railroad that opens up the heart of Africa to European trade. Mr. and Mrs. Bell conducted there a hostel for travelers and sponsored a growing piece of Christian work carried on by one of their own "boys," a young native-Christian from Bailundo.

Against African scenes such as met Mr. Bell in those early days when he traveled by foot or bush car along jungle trails and where the most elementary knowledge of hygiene, farming and modern medicine was unknown, he can tell the tale of a growing African Christian church and of schools pushing on in the training of their youth to meet the new day in Africa.

Mr. Bell was born in New York and educated at Cornell University.

FLORIDA CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

The eleventh annual summer conference for Florida Congregational-Christian young people will be held at the Ponce DeLeon Hotel, DeLeon Springs, June 6-13. The opening session will be held on Saturday evening, June 6th. Already one hundred and fifteen have registered for the conference, indicating that this will be the largest conference held.

The Dean of the Conference will be Rev. Victor B. Chicoine of Winter Park, Business Manager Charles A. Hoyt, Jacksonville. Dr. Marna S. Poulson of Pennev Farms will preach the sermon and Mrs. Poulson will be Counsellor for Girls. Councillors for boys will be Orville D. Ullom, of Melbourne, Eben Chapman of Union Theological Seminary, New York. The pianist, Miss Ruth Lincoln of Rollins College; Bugler, Wendell Waters of New Port Richey. Following will be the courses of study and lectures:

"A Survey of the Old Testament," Mrs. C. Fred Ward, Winter Park.

"A Survey of the New Testament," Mrs. A. Craig Bowdish, North Miami.

"Christian Life in Our World Today," Prof. Edwin L. Clarke, Rollins College, and Victor B. Chicoine, Winter Park.

"World Friendship," Mr. W. C. Bell, Agricultural Missionary from Lobito, West Africa.

"The young People's Society," Eben Chapman.

"Principals of Teaching," Rev. Lawrence A. Gedcke, St. Petersburg.

"Our Church and the Whole Church," Rev. Wm. T. Scott, Jacksonville.

"Dramatics," Miss Martha Race, Jacksonville.

There will be meetings for the state officers and key workers of the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship, led by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

Vesper services will be conducted by faculty members. Morning meditations will be led by young people from the different churches. In the evenings there will be Panel Discussions, dramatics, a Major Bowes program and the Candle-light Service.

REV. WALTER SPOONER.

News has recently reached this office of the death of Rev. Walter C. Spooner D. D., at East Orange, New Jersey. Dr. Spooner was for several years superintendent of the Middle Atlantic Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches. About a year ago his health gave way and he went to Hollywood, Florida, where he spent last winter in recuperating. Apparently much improved in health, he started on a trip to visit his people and then out west to begin a pastorate. In East Orange he became ill and soon passed away in the hospital.

Dr. Spooner is known by a good many of our southern people who will regret exceedingly the loss of the Church occasioned by his death, but who will rejoice to have shared in the blessing of the fine spirit which was his.

The passing of our leaders is a challenge to the younger people to fill in the gap made by their going and to carry on the work which they have so nobly promoted.

MOB VIOLENCE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 14, 1936.

Scripture: Acts 19:21-41; 7:54-60.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Escaping from the mob. Acts 14:1-7.

Tue.—Mobbed for their faith. Acts 16:14-24.

Wed.—Mobs fed by lies. Acts 21:27-33.

Thur.—Mobs that failed. II Cor. 11:23-33.

Fri.—The changeable mob. Matt. 21:1-11.

Sat.—The voice of the mob. John 19:13-18.

The spirit of the mob is certainly not Christian. It was a frenzied mob that demanded the crucifixion of Christ. Pilate would have released Him, but the crazed mob demanded that He be crucified. So Pilate "washed his hands" of the whole affair and yielded Christ to the mob to be crucified.

There are other accounts of mob violence in the Bible. In our scripture lesson today we read the account of the stoning of Stephen, the first Christian martyr; also how the mob at Ephesus sought to kill Paul. At Lystra the mob stoned Paul and threw him outside the city for dead, and on several occasions his life was endangered by mobs.

Even as these men were not guilty of crime, today there is real doubt of the guilt of at least half the victims of mob violence. There is no place for mobs in a Christian nation. The Constitution of the United States provides for a court of law to give a person a fair trial. But the mob takes the law in its own hands and acts upon the impulse of the moment. Even though the mob is usually composed of ignorant people the mob is dangerous because once they are started it is difficult to stop them.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE.

LESSON X—JUNE 7, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Not my will, but thine be done."—Luke 22:42.

LESSON—Luke 22:39-71; Printed Text: Luke 22:39-53.

A certain preacher has said that whenever he is called upon to treat of the sacred mysteries of Gethsemane, he cannot divest himself of a certain degree of awe. Those of us who read these notes know how he felt. There is something about this incident that subdues and sobers one. Alas for the man who does not feel some sense of awe as he reads the gospel records of Jesus in Gethsemane, and meditates thereon.

"And he came out and went, as his custom was, unto the Mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him." The Master evidently often went apart from the multitude, and even from his disciples, and had his seasons of meditation and prayer. This Mount of Olives was evidently one of his trysting places with the Father. Prayer was habitual with Jesus.

"Pray that ye enter not into temptation." Prayer helps us to avoid temptation, it keeps sensitive the heart, it sharpens the intellect, it reveals the allurements and the ugliness of sin. Prayer also gives us strength against temptation. It releases new energies, and it undergirds life with new power. Prayer is the key to victorious living.

"And he kneeled down and prayed." Standing for prayer was the common attitude in the gospels, but Jesus usually knelt when at prayer. The posture of the body helps to induce the spirit of prayer. But of course the inner spirit, the attitude of mind and heart is the important thing in prayer.

"Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." Jesus thought of prayer as conversation and communion with a Father. He thought of prayer as a means of understanding what the will of the Father was to do it. He thought of prayer as submitting to and cooperating with the Father's will. The cup to which Jesus referred has been variously interpreted. It was not death itself, but the particular form of death, from which Jesus prayed to be delivered. He prayed that if there was some other way in which he could redeem the world than by the cross, God would reveal it to him.

"And there appeared unto him an angel from heaven, strengthening him." He did not get the answer he desired, but he did receive strength to do what he knew he ought to do. It is also significant that when he did not get what he wanted the first time he prayed, he did not turn to other devices; he turned again to prayer. When a man is tempted to give up prayer let him remember the history of the race and the experience of Jesus.

"And being in agony, he prayed more earnestly, and his sweat became as it were great drops of blood falling down upon the ground." We cannot enter into the full meaning of this. And it need not be thought that Jesus always had this experience every time he prayed. But on this occasation Jesus came to grips with the very power of the unseen world of darkness. There was a terrific conflict in his soul. Even his physical body was racked and torn. The story can rightly be called the Agony in Gethsemane.

"He came unto his disciples, and found them sleeping for sorrow." Asleep, while the Master went through his agony. How unwilling or unable are we so often to enter sympathetically into the Master's compassion and concern. How often we are asleep because of indifference or indulgence. How often we lose the battle because we are slumbering or lulled into a false sense of ease, when temptation overtakes us, and thus overcomes us.

"Judas, one of the twelve . . . and he drew near unto Jesus to kiss him." Strange thing indeed that one of Christ's disciples should be the one to betray him. Alas, Christ so often suffers at the hands of his friends. Again and again he is betrayed by those who are supposedly his followers.

"Betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?" If betrayal comes with a curse or a frown, we know how to interpret its approach. But when it comes with a kiss, a symbol of friendship, it can deceive even the best of us. Thus do men so often cover their sinful lives and deeds by the cloak of pious actions and religious appearance. As Dr. Jowett says, "Let us beware of borrowing the livery of the saints to hide the devices of the sinner."

"And he touched his ear, and healed him"—thus would he show kindness even unto his enemies, and mercy unto those who did him wrong. He was demonstrating the principles of love in action even to those who spitefully used him, and who hated him without cause.

"And Jesus said . . . Are ye come out as against a robber with swords and staves . . . but this is your hour and the power of darkness." Jesus did not resist those who did him wrong, but he did rebuke them. How little those people must have felt in the presence of Jesus and under the quiet and restrained, but polite rebuke which he gave them. And he did not add to their comfort when he told them that they were wholly within the power of darkness which was a symbolic way of saying the powers of evil. Men can so let themselves go that they are given over to do evil. How important it is that we yield not to the so-called little temptations, lest when the great crises of life come, we shall have already given ourselves to the powers of darkness and evil.

Perhaps it ought to be said in closing that although God had apparently abandoned His Son and had allowed him to be taken by the powers of darkness, such was not the case. The arrest and trial and crucifixion of Jesus was simply a demonstration that after men have done their worst, and in spite of all that they can do, God can and will deliver His own. The Lord is our light and our salvation; whom shall we fear?

The Middle Atlantic Conference of the Congregational-Christian Churches established a precedent when it elected as superintendent Mrs. David E. Brown, of New York. She succeeds Rev. Walter Spooner, who resigned on account of his health. Mrs. Brown has carried on the work of the superintendent during his period of recuperation. This is the first time a woman has been elected to the office of State Superintendent in the Congregational-Christian fellowship.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt."—Matt. 6:20.

Like oft-misplaced affections, treasures, the hearts affections, are oft misplaced. It is the misplacement of affections that has always damned man's soul to perdition. Christ came to give the world a vision of true affections which only save the world from downfall. Thus he said to the rich young ruler, "Go, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." It had been, was then and has been ever since, that "treasures surrendered on earth are treasures laid up in heaven."

It takes a lot of courage to surrender our treasures of this world. But there is always a reward for that sacrifice. It takes more courage still to be faithful and not give up the conquest, but there is a crown always for faithfulness.

To a man on the eve of his ordination the Bishop wrote, "Be faithful over a few things." Christ said the reward is at the end of the road.

Prayer—

"Lead me, Almighty Father, Spirit, Son,
Whither Thou wilt, I follow, no delay,
My will is Thine, and even had I none,
Grudging obedience still I will obey.
Faith-hearted, fearful, doubtful if I be,
Gladly or sadly I will follow Thee.

"Into the land of righteousness I go,
The footsteps thither Thine and not my own,
Jesus, Thyself the way, alone I know,
Thy will be mine, for other have I none.
Unprofitable servant though I be,
Gladly or sadly, let me follow Thee."—Amen.
—Long.

TUESDAY.

"A SOUL'S STRENGTH AND BEAUTY."

"He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."—Luke 16:10.

Faithfulness is the most beautiful and the most necessary characteristic of a true soul. It is the real basis and bond of all that is lovely. It is the essence of everlasting strength and endurance. It is the test of Christian character. Our Lord said so. From the beginning to the end of his ministry He proclaimed it.

We learn from this text that in God's sight many big things are very little, and many small things are very great; that "He looketh upon the heart and the hidden springs of action, and He judgeth the flow of life by what He finds there."

Browning said:

"Say not 'a small event!' Why 'small?'
Costs it no more pain thou this, ye call
A 'great event,' should come to pass,
Than that? Untwine me from the mass
Of deeds which make up life, one deed
Power shall fall short in or exceed!"

Prayer—Our Father implant in us Thy children the unshaken truth and the firm reality which can be relied upon and that which all people admire, strength and beauty of character.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"MY CREED."

"Give and it shall be given to you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Luke 6:38.

"The food that I share with others
Is the food that nourishes me,
The strength that I spend for others
Is the strength that I retain.
The freedom I seek for others
Makes me forever free.
The pain that I ease in others
Shall take away my pain.
The load that I lift from others
Makes my load disappear.
The good that I see in others
My greatest good shall be.
The love that I feel for others
Comes back my life to cheer.
The path that I walk with others
Is the path God walks with me."

—Grace Hill Freeman.

Prayer—

"Each time a hungry man knocks at my door,
I see a child, with a table neatly spread
In white for him, and someone whom he loved
To pour his milk and slice the crusted bread.
"For wandering men were one time little boys
Whose mothers loved them as I love my own,
And held them close and dreamed as mothers do,
O God, be kind to men who go alone!"—Amen.
—Helen Welsheimer.

THURSDAY.

"REJOICING IN SALVATION."

"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."—Luke 15:10.

We often wonder just what the scene in heaven is when a sinner on earth repents and becomes a Christian. But it does not matter what that scene is, the result of Christianity in a new-born soul, (or in a community and in the world) is always that which makes happy.

In the light of the fact of this happiness and the desirability of it, we again wonder if we are not guilty of a grave sin in these modern days. Just as in reverence there is but little bowing down today. So there seems to be but little onward manifestations of joy when sinners go forward and take their stand for Christ. We look on with stolid indifference. We just say, "That's fine," and then we move out into the common world where the "Music Goes Round and Round," and forget it. That's all.

We would not advocate extreme emotionalism, but we believe that emotions are a part of us and they find expression in every other phase of your life. When we are glad we show it, when we are sad we show it. And in the pleasures of life our joy reaches the pitch of shouting sometimes. Yea, in the private circles of life sudden delights have made us shout. Why should emotions in religious expression be silenced? Let us be natural in religion, and nature itself will join us with the angels of heaven in their rejoicing over a lost soul receiving the joys of the Christ life.

Prayer—Our Father, make us as divine in the simplicity and purity of the natural outgoings of our lives.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"HOW BE LIKE JESUS."

"When he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."—I Jno. 3:2.

The following is taken from The Upper Room published by the Committee on Evangelism of the Methodist Church. It is illuminating and satisfying in the question of being like Jesus.

It says:

"The most contagious thing in the world is human personality. Every person is largely a composite of the personalities who have crossed his pathway. The soldier was fortunate who was chained to Paul, the prisoner in Rome. A new life passed over from the prisoner to the soldier and soon there were followers of Jesus in the Praetorian Guard.

"A dirty little gamin of the slums was taken into the lap of a lady visitor. He excused himself for a moment and soon returned with the indications that he had gone to wash his grimy face and hands. In the presence of sweetness and cleanliness aspirations were born within him. And in the presence of that altogether lonely One our own imperfections and sordidness are revealed and we begin to be like him."

Prayer—Dear Lord, we cannot know our imperfections and sin until we come into Thy presence. We crave to be like Christ Thy Son. Grant us Thy pardoning love that Thy restoring grace may work within us His likeness.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"GOD BEHIND AND BEFORE."

"Jehovah will go before you; and the God of Israel will be your reward."—Isaiah 52:1-12.

It is blessed to know that God is before us. He is marking out the best way for us. He is removing hindrances from our way. He is conquering the foes that lie in ambush. He is filling up the hollows and leveling the hills, and making a plain path for our feet.

And it is blessed to know that God is behind us. If we have made mistakes, He is counteracting the evil of them. If we have failed, He sees to it that our failures shall not utterly ruin our lives. If we have been tempted, even in our temptations he has prepared a way of escape.

We are like soldier who know that powerful troops are in the rear and the van. We cannot be attacked. We can move forward in safety and confidence.

Prayer—Lord, Thou art our Guard and our Guide. We place our earthly lives in Thy hands, and our eternity.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"OUR ONE OFFERING."

"For by one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."—Heb. 10:1-14.

Perfected forever—what a glorious experience! To be purified for all time from every stain of sin, every corruption of evil; to face the limitless

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE DIVINE GIFT OF LIFE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"We spend our years."—Ps. 90:9.

It is not necessary that you hear a great sermon but that you give heed to a great truth. You have the divine gift of life in your hands. There are no treasure vaults beneath the stars that can exceed that. You are rich. Of all earth's possessions yours are the most precious. You could not make a good bargain if you gave your life for all the material wealth of the world. The greatest Friend of man, and the greatest Teacher in all time asked this unanswerable question: "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"—the Greek word for soul is also translated "life." "What shall it profit a man if he should gain the whole world, and lose his own 'life'?"

Suppose we had forty-nine of the wealthiest persons in all the world present this morning and sitting in your pews the great dailies in all our land would have their finest reporters present to tell about this meeting. The radio would herald across the seven seas anything that was said, and men would listen with abated breath at their words. But, my young friends, let me say in all candor and without fear of contradiction, that the life which is yours is worth more than all that wealth. You have the divine gift of life. And "a man's life consisteth not in the things which he possesseth."

Besides life you have youth. Some would barter their souls to possess, if possible, your youth. We cannot be assured that youth means length of days, but the assumption is that youth means many more years yet to come. Youth carries with it no load of great sins, no weight of awful mistakes, no haunting and horrible regrets. You are blessed by not only what you have,—the divine gift of life,—but you are also greatly blessed by what you have not. What possessions some men and women would give if they could but erase from their life-record some single act. You now have no such debts to pay, even if it were thus possible to pay them. Again I say your possessions are precious!

There is not time to tell of all your invaluable possessions. Life, youth, health, sound mind, clean record, any one of which is worth more than a king's ransom. God has given lavishly, and graciously, and in this church this day let me remind you of those gifts in order that you may render the gratitude of your hearts to Him for them. That is the very essence of worship. And that will help to enhance your gifts, and increase their value.

Now the text which I have chosen for help this morning says: "We spend our years." We call upon our account in the 'bank of life' with check after check. Minute by Minute, hour by hour, day by day, week by week, month by month, and year by year we check it off. It is passing. Even as we worship here together the minutes tick off. And we are even impatient to have them pass. We spend them lavishly. Time flies, and we fly with it,—almost ahead of it if such were possible.

Young friends, let me call your attention to a quotation from Owen Meredith which sticks in my mind as a suggestion that I had better spend my days as wisely as I can. It is beautiful poetry, containing a great thought: "Who can dig the sunken sunset from the deep?" It is the picture of a man standing on an eminence overlooking the ocean. The sun seems to go down into the very water. When the sun is down life is done. "Who can dig the sunken sunset from the deep?" "We spend our years." And when we spend them there is no way of regaining them.

You may think that is a sombre text for seniors in high school, but it is not. It is a beautiful text. It is a lovely thing to have a treasure-trove of years, and to have the privilege of spending them. Do you know who wrote those words? There is perhaps only one other life in all time that has influenced humanity as that life has. The writer of those timely and beautiful words was born of a slave-mother, and was condemned to die before his birth. His life would seem almost worthless. What chance would he have? If he lived he would perhaps be a slave all his few years, for he could not live long under the rigor of the Egyptian lash. And besides it had been commanded that at his birth he should be slain. Well, he did live. He had been given the divine gift of life! How he lived! He spent his years, indeed! With his life he bought, as it were, the freedom of a whole race of aristocrats who had been made bond-slaves of a most brutal monarch. With his life, he purchased as it were, the larger half, and the first half, of the longest living literature the world has ever had. And it lives for what it contains, namely, the dawn of human history, the doings of a chosen race, the Ten Commandments, and the promise of Jesus Christ. For four thousand years his life has been blessing humanity, and building the fundamental laws of all time.

It would be interesting to pause here to look at the way in which some persons had spent their years. For instance David, a little shepherd lad, spent one day of his life purchasing the honor of his race in mortal battle when a mighty giant had single-handed defied the armies of Israel. Is it any wonder that a boy who had the clean, white soul of courage like that should be destined to be the one who should substitute song for superstition in the business of worship! The soul that could save Israel's honor could sing the songs of humanity as none other has ever sung them. With the source material for worship also he fashioned in his heart the house of worship. Thus he spent his years.

Esther stood in the chasm of a race's history, and with her two hands held it together. She was a stranger in a strange land, but she spent her years for something worth while. Ruth, by setting a worthy ideal before her eyes, and following unflinchingly after it became an ancestress of Jesus Christ, although she was the daughter of the unspeakable Moabites! She spent her life for something worthwhile. Paul, youngest member of the court of the Sanhedrin, tutored above the men of his time, taught in the languages, literatures, and philosophies of his day, dedicated his life to what seemed a doomed and lost Cause and laid the foundations of christendom as no other man save Jesus Christ laid them. He spent his life for something worth while. The pages of history are brightened with the names of men and women who have spent their lives for things worth while, whether they have been a John Bunyan in a Bedford jail, or a Florence Nightingale amongst the sick and dying of Europe, they have spent their lives in a way worth while.

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Out of all the twenty years we have spent at the Christian Orphanage we have never experienced a season like this spring. We had lots of rain and snow during the entire winter and up to April first. Since that time we have not had even a shower of rain. The weather has been hot or cold—with some wind and dust. Garden vegetables that we planted the first part of April came up nicely and grew off beautifully but the continued drouth has parched it up. Our field of Irish potatoes has not had a drop of rain since they came up. Our hay crop is a complete failure. Corn has not come up and neither have beans. In fact I believe now we would be better off if neither had been planted. To say the least, it is the most discouraging time for a crop we have ever experienced.

Our friends have been good to us and the offerings have come in fairly well. As long as we can meet our bills at the end of the month we are always happy.

The thing that is giving us the most concern is vegetables for the children. No green beans, no cabbage, no garden peas, and they need them. We have faith to believe that rain will come and that the latter part of the year will be better than the first. Since school closed the children who have reached the age limit are getting jobs and starting to enter the wilderness of life. We trust that they will find no obstacles too large to surmount and no temptations that they will not be strong enough to overcome.

IN THE STRAWBERRY FIELDS.

Nothing has furnished me greater opportunities for doing good among the young people, and older ones as well, as a few spare days, now and then, wherever I might be, to get out and join them in whatever they might be doing about their homes. Besides learning a great deal myself, that I could take along with me, I have made it a sort of habit to pass on what I have learned to others, here and there; and in this way I have rendered them a real service. I receive many encouraging letters from people both old and young, in different states, expressing their lasting appreciation for something I have done for them or have shown them how to do that has been of much service to them. Only last week, I received a letter from an aged sister, reminding me of her appreciation for the adjustable cot frame that I made for her almost two years ago. I have found that these little things that I have been able to do for people in a material way, have helped me to get a hold on them that I never would have gotten otherwise.

About the first of this month, I am expecting to have a few days that I can spend out with the boys and girls of the Mount Olive, N. C. section, picking, packing and crating strawberries. Of course there are a number of older people in the group, but much of the work is done by boys and girls, early in the morning, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and Saturday.

Bruce Morton went to Porto Rico some years ago to preach and teach the people how to farm. His service as a farm director was as fruitful of material blessings as his preaching was in spiritual blessings. Jesus was not a preacher only, but a helper as well in every sphere of life. He expressed a willingness to help men with their problems regardless of what they might be. I am a firm believer in well-prepared discourses for the pulpit but it is very unfortunate for a minister to feel that his job begins and ends in the pulpit. One of the supreme needs of our times is willing Christian workers, especially in the rural districts who know how to adjust themselves intelligently to the environment of the people with whom they need to work. I believe that a preacher who knows how to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ effectually on Sunday ought to know how to do some things on other days that would be profitable to his parishioners. Material blessings are many times our best means of reaching men spiritually. To my mind, Christian deeds count for much more than creeds. I am fearful that many Christian workers separate themselves too far from those with whom they work, but the laborers are few and we have to move on. I believe it was Herbert Spencer who said:

“Could a man be sure,
That his day would endure:
As of old, for a thousand long years,
What things might be known;
What deeds might he do,
And all without hurry or care.”

A. R. FLOWERS.

Sims, N. C.

It is worth while to remember that ages before science had revealed worlds beyond our world, prophetic vision and experience had discovered things beyond the orbit of earthly vision. Paul said that there were things that eye had not seen, nor ear heard, nor human experience encompassed, that God had prepared for them that love him, but that God had revealed these things unto men by his spirit. The Christian lives in an eternal world; his feet are on the ground, but with mind and soul he reaches out toward eternity.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

A daily newspaper commenting on the "Black Legion" through its editorial columns says: "The 'Black Legion' whose ramifications are being ferreted out in Detroit (Mich.) is startling evidence of the susceptibility of the American people to mob rule. From accounts of its operations, the organization, doing its work in black hoods ornamented with skulls and cross-bones, has taken upon itself to be judge and jury of the doings of the people in whose communities it operates and has dealt out death to an undiscovered number of people, with corporal punishment to others, to 'purify' America. . . .

"This country has no room for such glaring examples of mob rule. . . . The courts and the constituted authorities for the preservation of the peace are the only authorities that a free people should recognize or tolerate. There is in them ample means of apprehension and punishment for those who would make lawful complaint against the conduct of their neighbors. We do not have to have hooded bands of vigilantes to do justice as self-appointed administrators of self-created law."

As long as we have lynchings and other evidence of mob violence here in America, how can we expect our missionaries to accomplish great things on the mission field? First, we must make our own civilization Christian before we try to Christianize other nations.

You young Virginians have plenty of precedent for noble living: Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, and Lee, are but four of the hundreds of names of men and women whose lives have been spent for things worth while. Nor do you have to go outside your own city, nor outside your own homes to find names of men and women who have and are spending their lives nobly. Will you be worthy sons, and daughters of a great christendom, of a great civilization, and of a great country? What is the goal you are setting before yourselves? Will you barter your lives for bubbles that vanish in a moment, or will you spend them for the good of others, and the everlasting joy which shall thus accrue to yourselves?

Hans Christian Andersen, who wrote the beautiful stories of my childhood says, "Every man's life is a fairy tale written by the fingers of God." That is the way Andersen would like it to be, but that is not the way it is. Many persons do not allow the fingers of God to fashion them, but the lives that do allow the fingers of God to fashion them turn out to be more beautiful than fairy stories!

"There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
Give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you."

OBITUARIES

GERRINGER.

Several days ago a very unusual occurrence took from this world our young friend and brother, Marvin Gerringer. Marvin was the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Gerringer and was born October 1, 1919, and died March 7, 1936, aged 16 years, 5 months, 6 days. He was found to be a kind, energetic, and conscientious young person; a member of the Shallow Ford Christian Church, becoming a member of that church about six or seven years ago. Marvin was buried in the Shallow Ford Church Cemetery and the memory of his young conscientious life will always be remembered.

BROTHERS.

Once more the ranks of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church were broken, when on Sunday, March 22, 1936, God, in His infinite wisdom, called to her eternal home Miss Margaret Brothers, a beloved and faithful member. Therefore be it resolved: First: That we bow in submission to His will for we know our Heavenly Father doeth all things according to His love and mercy. Second: That we hold in loving remembrance her service and her meek and quiet personality. Third: That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her brother and commend him to God, Whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble. Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her brother, a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our society.

Respectfully submitted,

IF THE Elon College Development Program is to succeed, the sum of $250,000 must be subscribed.

Unless this amount is raised and the program carried to completion, the work of Elon College will suffer seriously.

Any impairment of the efficiency of the College would be a costly blow to our Church and its membership.

In order to assure the success of this movement, to make secure the future of the college and to preserve to the Church the benefits of its most valuable educational agency, it is necessary that the members of the Southern Convention contribute promptly and generously to the Development Fund.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATOR

Church Groups on Liquor Control.—

During the past few weeks general conferences and annual conventions of Protestant denominations, representing more than 12,500,000 members, have spoken on the issue of liquor control, and their voices have been practically unanimous for continuance of the fight to rid the land of this blight. The statement of the Methodist General Conference at Columbus deplored the use of income from sale of liquor to support schools and charities, and said that unless the Christian people of this country rally in united warfare against the legalized evil "we are facing an era of debauchery and degradation such as this nation has never experienced." The Baptist conventions, both the Southern and Northern, in session in St. Louis, united in vigorous denunciation of this great evil and pledged their support to work for its elimination.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Streamlined Horses.—

The Borden milk people decided that milk routes of under twelve miles could be more economically operated by small, silent wagons, drawn by small horses, than by motor trucks. They wrote to the Horse and Mule Association for whatever facts it might have to substantiate their decision—what new ideas of operation for horse-drawn vehicles had been evolved. The reply was the gloomy one that there had been none in twenty years and weren't likely to be any. But they were wrong. Says the June issue of Reader's Digest, "The Borden company found or invented dozens of new wrinkles. In the first place, their wagons have automobile wheels. This decreases their weight by 300 pounds, and lowers the center of gravity. They have ball-bearing axles and second-hand re-treaded tires which contain a gutta-percha fluid that reduces puncture trouble. All this makes the wagons easier to draw; hence the little horse, weighing 1300 to 1400 pounds against the old 1700-pounder. The smaller horses have smaller appetites, and . . . that saves in food. This mounts up, as the Bordens have 2,000 horses in New York alone. The horses wear rubber-covered shoes that cost half as much, weigh half as much, last twice as long as iron shoes, and prolong the horse's usefulness two or three years."

Bonus Bonds and Life Insurance.—

Thomas A. Buckner, president of the New York Life Insurance Company, created a surprise in the business world when he turned thumbs down on requests from agencies for advertising matter urging veterans to use their bonus bonds to purchase life insurance. Instead of sending out the literature as requested, he addressed a letter to company agents in which he urged them to advise veterans to hold onto their bonds. In explaining his point of view in the current issue of Forbes, he says: "By the very nature of the life insurance business, we tend to take a broad, long-range point of view. In suggesting that veterans keep their United States Government bonds, our thought is that what may be best for the veteran may also eventually be best for the nation as a whole and the life insurance business in particular. The bonus bonds are an excellent investment. The veteran who keeps his bonds has a financial backlog which he can use in case of emergency. If, on the other hand, he cashes the bonds and squanders the money, it might tend to have a negative moral effect on his financial outlook. Anything that tends to make people more thrift-minded benefits life insurance, savings banks, and other legitimate methods of providing for the future."

A Study in Contrasts.—

Though the Republican National Convention is in session, the balloting will not have started until after THE SUN is in the mail. But unless there is a startling upset in present predictions, Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas will be the next Republican standard bearer. While the name of the Kansas Governor has become familiar to nearly every man, woman and child in America, his pre-convention campaign has brought very little knowledge of his personality before the people. His campaign itself has been quite unique, there having been possibly less money spent and fewer deals or trades or bargains made than in any similar campaign of recent years. Those who are running Landon's campaign make no claims of greatness for him, but his closest friends believe that he can and will measure up to the presidency if he is nominated and elected. Certainly he is not a conservative, measured by old G. O. P. standards, and he is probably not the man old-line Republicans would pick as their first choice. Yet while not a conservative, he is conservative in a way, and shows strong contrasts to the present occupant of the White House. Mr. Roosevelt likes the spectacular—for example, his flight to the last Democratic convention to accept his nomination in person. If Landon is nominated he will probably accept with a well-worded telegram. It has even been suggested that that telegram is already prepared. This is significant of the man. He prepares himself for possible events, and when his course is set, no amount of pressure from without changes that course. He is as plain as his opponent is spectacular. Mr. Roosevelt's philosophy, as expressed at Baltimore, is to do something—"do something, no matter what, but do something." Mr. Landon's philosophy is said to be, "If you don't know the right thing to do, do nothing until you find out."

Denying the Plain Facts.—

A flood in China that kills thousands seems of comparatively little importance to the average American, but a tornado such as struck piedmont Carolina several weeks ago, calls to the attention of North Carolinians the terrible power of the wind for destruction. Until government interference, ownership, or whatever other governmental operation it may be, causes inconvenience or loss to a particular individual, it is somewhat like a Chinese flood. Under the above caption, an editorial in a recent issue of Business Week says: "A man has built up a business, putting his own money into it, as well as other money that he has borrowed, and depending upon the business for paying his debts, and paying taxes, and providing his own livelihood. And this man comes into a United States Supreme Court and says: 'The Government of the United States is trying to drive me out of business by competing with me on terms that I cannot meet. It sells at prices below the cost of production. All the tax-payers, including myself, pay money to make these low prices possible. . . Therefore, I pray this court to enjoin the government from such conduct.' Any man or corporation that makes such a complaint and is correct in the statement of facts is plainly entitled to an injunction. That is the situation of the nineteen utilities that have sued in the Federal and Tennessee courts to enjoin the Tennessee Valley Authority." As this editorial continues, these utilities are plainly entitled to an injunction, if their facts are correct, and it adds that the facts are correct. But these facts have to be proven, and TVA and the Department of Justice, it says, "will move heaven and earth to prevent legal proof of the facts which they know to be correct." The complaint being made is by companies representing an investment of nearly a billion dollars, and thousands of stockholders—many of them small ones. No one can doubt what the decision would be if the Government, instead of making the ridiculous claims that the power generated is incidental to its efforts to regulate navigation, would acknowledge that it is attempting to create "a great federally-owned and operated utility."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro, preached in our Southern Pines church at 11 A. M., Sunday, June 7th in the absence of the pastor, Dr. Rexford Raymond.

We begin in this week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN an article, "The Improvement of the Rural Church—A National Plan." On account of its length, it will be run in three instalments. Dr. Malcolm Dana is the esteemed writer.

In the death of Deacon W. E. Cook, of our Haw River Church, both the church and Conference lose a good, loyal and faithful member. His pastor, Rev. J. Everette Neese, tells in our obituary column this week of the career and passing away of Brother Cook.

Rev. Robert A. Whitten, pastor of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, at a recent meeting of the Portsmouth Ministerial Union, was elected president of the Union for the coming year beginning October 1st, succeeding Rev. E. E. Wrenn, pastor of Wright Memorial Church, president for the past year.

In the absence of the pastor, Dr. L. E. Smith, the eleven o'clock services at Elon College last Sunday were conducted by Dean J. D. Messick, head of the Department of Education in the College. Dean Messick, a layman, gave to his audience a message of deep religious significance and inspired his listeners with the high ideals that controlled many of the best men and women of the past.

Rev. J. Everette Neese of Elon College will leave Wednesday, June 10th, for Lake Junaluska, N. C., where he will register for study in the Duke School of Religion summer school. Mrs. Neese and small daughter, Carolyn, will visit Rev. Mr. Neese's parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Neese of Reidsville, until June 15th at which time she will join her husband and also do work in the School of Religion at Junaluska.

Rev. W. M. Jay, D. D., pastor of our United Church, Winston-Salem, which work he recently began, writes: "We are happy in the work here and have high hopes of a splendid future for this field. The Sunday school attendance is increasing. Three new members were added to our Bible class May 31st. Our folks here felt very keenly the loss of their former pastor, Brother Scott, when he resigned, but all of them seem most cordial and loyal to their new pastor and the work, for which we are profoundly grateful.

An interesting series of summer sermon topics has been announced by Rev. William A. Keith, minister of the Collegiate Church in Nashville. The general topic is: "Some Issues of Today Faced by Men and Women of Yesterday." The sub-topics are: The Man Without A Shrine—"The Loyalties We Live By"; The Man Who Quit—"Keeping Your Hold on the Ladder of Life." Some Young Women at a Wedding—"An Invitation to Life." A Man Who Loved His Country—"The Larger Patriotism." Two Questions God Asks—"The Issues of Life are Here." A Man Who Chose A Mountain—"The Heroic Life." A Man Who Stood Alone—"The Glory and Power of a Minority."

The following members of our Church and Sunday School, members of the Senior Class of Suffolk, Va., High School, were entertained for dinner last Friday evening by Dr. and Mrs. Truitt: Ann Blanchard, Betty Butler, Helen Holmes Clarke, Rachel Graham Crocker, Hontas Eure, Esta Louise Everett, Judith Juanita Foster, Mary Vivian Gardner, Marjorie Leigh Harvey, Hazel Marie Joyner, Georgie Piland, Nathaniel Lafayette Eure, Thornton Jethro Haslett, Hugh Latane Holland, Jr., Oscar Jordan Parker, Frederick Morrison Wagner, Joseph Henry Wilkins. Their pastor and his wife expressed their appreciation of such a large number present, and wished them God-speed in all of life's changes and choices.

Revival services are being conducted this week in our First Church, Portsmouth, Va. About the Revival, the Norfolk, Virginian-Pilot carries the following: "Revival services continue each night at 7:45 o'clock in the First Christian Church, Washington and County Streets, with the Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of the South Norfolk Congregational-Christian Church occupying the pulpit. Mr. Poythress spoke last night on the subject, 'The Controlled Life,' and told how the love of Christ had directed his own life as well as the lives of other Christians. Tonight will be designated as Sunday school night and it is expected that a large congregation will be present to hear a special message to the young people. The pastor, the Rev. Robert A. Whitten, will preach at 1 a. m., Sunday and Mr. Poythress will speak at 8 p. m.

Florida will be largely represented at the biennial session of the General Council of Congregational-Christian churches, which will be held at Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts, June 16-23. The following were elected regular delegates from Florida Conference and Associations: Rev. Frank Atkinson, West Palm Beach; Rev. Everett B. Leshner, Jacksonville; Rev. Walter Metcalf, Tampa; Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Williams, Lake Worth. In addition the following will also attend: Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Leshner, Mrs. Metcalf and two sons, Dr. and Mrs. George D. Owen, Ormond; Rev. and Mrs. Geo. B. Spalding, Miami; Rev. Henry J. Condit, Orange City; Miss Emily Carleton, Winter Park; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, D. D., of Jacksonville. Rev. and Mrs. William T. Scott and Dean Bellingrath of Piedmont College will represent Georgia at the General Council.

SOUTHERN CONVENTION EVANGELISM.

Are we emphasizing evangelism enough in our Southern Convention? Are we receiving as many new converts into our churches as we ought? Are we getting as many men, women, and young people to really work at winning others to Christ as we should? Are we leaving too much of the business of winning others to the ministers? Are our churches growing as they ought? How many persons has the reader of these lines won to Christ and the church during the year? Such are some of the questions I ponder in my mind as I am charged with the responsibility of heading up the committee on Evangelism for the Southern Convention. You would like to see, and I would like to see a real revival of religion sweep over the country. We would all like to feel the spiritual glow which soul-winning brings to every church. How shall we get at it. Where shall we begin? I am willing to have your suggestions, and anxious to have your help.

Who make up the Committee on Evangelism in your Conference? We have five Conferences. Are the committees praying for, and planning for an increase in each of their churches during this year? If you are on the Evangelistic Committee in your Conference will you not redouble your efforts to build up the evangelistic spirit in your Conference, and in the local churches thereof? The Evangelistic Committees in the Conferences, according to the Annual, are as follows:

Virginia Valley Central—W. J. Andes, Alfred Dofflemyre, W. B. Fuller, Eugenia Snow.

Eastern Virginia Conference—John G. Truitt, R. E. Brittle, J. F. West, Jr., O. D. Poythress, Aubrey C. Todd.

Western North Carolina Conference—S. M. Penn, J. M. Allred, B. H. Lowdermilk.

Eastern N. C. Conference—M. T. Sorrell, J. A. Denton, J. Lee Johnson.

N. C. & Va.—(No Committee on Evangelism in this Conference.)

If you will read the reports of the Committee on Evangelism in the Annual you will see that they are very splendid, and they show a desire on the part of these committee members to have a growing interest taken in this so vital matter. We all want it. The tables of churches show that we all need it. How shall we get it? Belittling the work we sought honestly to do is not one of the ways to begin. Decrying our interest in Evangelism, and destructively criticising our evangelistic efforts will not help, as easy as that is to do. Throwing stones at the other fellow's methods of seeking to win others will not help. But seriously thinking the matter over, looking to God in earnest prayer for leadership, and beginning to go witness for Him will be a good start. If laymen read these lines and will talk to their pastors about it, and if any minister who may read these lines will get a group of the men, women, and young people of the church together and talk to them about it, a beginning will be made. You may think of some better way to begin. Begin it. Let us all help each other, and get busy on this vital task of the Church. Pick out some person among your acquaintances whom you feel the responsibility of winning to Christ and go after him.

I am calling a meeting of the Southern Convention Committee on Evangelism to meet at Elon College during the week of the Leadership Training School, and shall give each member of the committee definite notice of the time and place of the meeting, and will also send notice to each member of the Conference's committee on Evangelism to meet with us. Let us pray, all who read these lines, that God will give us a desire to witness for Him, and that He will lead us by His Holy Spirit to awaken within our entire Convention a great zeal for soul-winning.

JOHN G. TRUITT, Chairman,
Southern Convention Committee on Evangelism.

THE DOWNWARD TREND.

"In considering statistics we should keep our heads level. We should also keep our hearts right and our consciences acute."

With this word of counsel, Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, secretary of the General Council, presents "the comprehensive and comparative statistics for the preceding biennium" as he is called upon to do by the by-laws of the Council. The statistics are given in his report prepared for the meeting of the Council which will open at Mt. Holyoke College on Tuesday. He says:

"Let us not shrink in looking at the figures for what they are worth, remembering that they may not tell the full truth. Number of churches, 6,282, a loss of 406, or 6 per cent in nine years; membership of the churches, a gain from 1925 to 1931 of 37,997, followed by a loss of 18,837 in the last three years, or 1.9 per cent. Addition on confession were 45,722 for the Congregational churches alone in 1925 and 33,323 for the combined denomination in 1934, or a loss of 27 per cent plus the loss if any in the Christian constituency, the number being unavailable. Number of churches reporting no additions on confession, 2,893, or 46 per cent in the zero column. Total additions, 20,855 fewer than in '27. Total number in the Sunday Schools in 1925, 888,681, and in 1934, 734,146, a loss of 154,535, or 21 per cent in nine years. If it were conceivable that this rate of loss should continue the number in our Sunday Schools at the end of two generations would be negligible, and the source of church membership would be dried up.

"Total giving for home expenses in 1926, $23,171,300; in 1934, $13,305,260, a decrease of $9,806,040, or 42 per cent. Apportionment giving (not shown in the table) in 1925, $3,425,086 for the combined denominations, and in 1934, $1,523,107, or 55 per cent decrease. Taking the more reliable figures of 1930 and 1934 the decrease in four years is 50 per cent. 1,652 churches report no apportionment giving in 1934. That is, 26 per cent are in the zero column. In 1934, 12,200 members were dropped from the roll by death, and 34,189 by revision, or nearly three times as many by spiritual as by natural death.

"So far as finances are concerned there are more than alibies to be found in the present situation accounting for the decrease in giving. It is perhaps no more than a fair parallel with present financial conditions. With reference to membership in the church and in the church school, we must recognize that there are ebb tides as well as flood tides. This does not mean that we should be complacent in the face of ineffectiveness. Again it may be a good thing to eliminate the dead wood from our church membership and from our church school roll. Once again we want to be sure, however, that those who are left are better than those who were with us in the larger numbers. In other words, it is not a question for panic, but is a real question for seriously facing the effectiveness of our churches and church schools. Quite apart from any interpretation which we may put upon statistics there is doubtless none who thinks that the church is as efficient as it might be."

GAINS WHICH ARE IMPORTANT.

"In contrast with the losses shown above the record of the young people is on the right side. 4,314 churches report young people's organizations; this is 84 fewer than in 1931 (the first year combined figures are available) but the membership is 189,330, or 10,073 more than in 1931.

"In 1934 the revision of the rolls dropped 34,189 names, which is 2,570 less than the average of the preceding three years. Absentees number 114,976, or 5,878 fewer than in 1931.

"1934 statistics show 3,387 churches with fewer than 100 members, or 54 per cent, and 1935 with fewer than 50 members, or 31 per cent.

"The number of ministers in 1934 was 6,059 as compared with 6,161 in '33. 185 were ordained to the ministry, and the deaths amounted to 283 for the biennium. The difference is largely made up of ministers received by transfer from

FRED B. SMITH, LL. D.

Chairman Executive Committee of the General Council and Program Committee for Mt. Holyoke Meeting.

other denominations, which appears to be balanced by transfers from our rolls.

"The average salary paid to full-time ministers by churches reporting salaries was $1,663. This is to be compared with $1,997 promised as salaries in 1931. Notice that the former is the amount received; the latter is the amount promised.

"Church attendance was reported in 1934 for the first time. 3,428 churches reporting show an average attendance of 81 at the chief Sunday service.

"Property value in 1934 was reported as $172,281,384 (5,857 churches reporting). The amount reported by 5,808 churches in 1931 was $193,815,321. Debts reported in 1934 by 1,582 churches amounted to $11,458,847, compared with reports from 1,542 churches in '31, with a total of $13,281,033. Legacies received in the biennium totaled $1,521,146.

"It is of interest to note that twenty languages besides English are used in preaching in our churches."

In the sessions of the Council meeting, for which the theme is "The Effective Church," the discouraging as well as encouraging aspects of the present situation will be faced in a determined effort to marshal all forces for a new advance in the next biennium.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ELON DEVELOPMENT CAMPAIGN.

Up to date the campaign has not resulted in the financial returns that its sponsors and friends of the college had hoped and expected. However, the campaign has done two things worthy of note and emphasis. First, it has given publicity and that of a high and revealing type and in many quarters where that publicity was necessary. No institution ever grows so good or large or strong but that it needs, and for its progress must have, words of commendation and approval. The church itself is good, is divine, is immortal, but even the church has to be defended and commended, approved and appraised, for there are always those who are indifferent and who doubt.

Second, the campaign has revealed and emphasized the dire straits in which the college finds itself, and the absolute necessity that its friends, and those who wish it to live, now sacrifice for it. As President Smith has so aptly said, "We must now sacrifice for the college, or we must sacrifice the college." Creditors have been good and lenient, and great compromises have been effected. The indebtedness has been brought down to a minimum. This campaign has heralded far and wide the fact that $250,000 would clear the institution of all its indebtedness, liberate from bondage for the support of the institution the income from endowment and all permanent funds; and that the amount absolutely essential to cancel the debts of the college, and put it on safe and sound footing, is in the reach of those of us who care. We can if we will. Let no CHRISTIAN SUN reader feel that the campaign is over. President Smith, and those working with him, are burdened to the point of heart breaking, and health breaking as well, and are seeking by every inch of strength and energy they have, to carry the campaign to a successful conclusion. In this connection it is recalled that when a certain General was called on to surrender at a time when all seemed to be lost, he uttered those immortal words, "We will not surrender. We have just begun to fight." Friends of Elon College, under the devout and unselfish leadership of President Smith and his associates, have not given up and will not give up for they know full well that no sadder day or greater tragedy could come to our work as a church, than that of closing up Elon College, or turning it over to others than the members and friends of our Congregational-Christian constituency. Friends, far and near, are wishing to know what has become of the campaign. The reply is that the campaign is going on with courageous hope and zeal even to the breaking point of the strength of its leaders and workers.

THE S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference met in annual session with our Ingram Church Halifax County, Virginia, at 10 A. M., June 4th. The president of the convention, Rev. W. T. Scott, had moved away during the year, and the convention was called to order and presided over by vice-president, W. T. Dunn of our Lynchburg Church. Brother Dunn had prepared the program with the single purpose of giving to the schools and societies represented, and the visitors present, some information and inspiration that would help the schools and societies back home. Brother Dunn and those present agreed that a good slogan for this and other conventions would be: "Every Sunday School and Endeavor Society represented in the Convention, and something in the Convention for every school and every society." The president in his message revealed to the convention, in a very pointed and practical way the solemn obligation and responsibility resting upon those who engage in, or should be engaged in, Christian education. Religion has to be "taught" as well as "caught" and very many young people in our day are not being taught religion either at home or in the Sunday School and this, in a measure, tells why so few are "catching" religion. A very large per cent of high school pupils in the state of Virginia in a test recently made show that they were entirely ignorant of facts pertaining to the Bible. Brother Dunn felt that the teachers in the schools of religion—Sunday School and Christian Endeavor were largely responsible for this.

The reports by the departmental secretaries were revealing since they showed deep anxiety for those charged with the responsibility of teaching in our Sunday Schools and Endeavor Societies.

Mr. George Wilson, All-South Secretary for Christian Endeavor made an address explicit and forceful showing outstanding achievements of Endeavor Societies, and the value of such societies in the work in and out of the church. Mr. Wilson declared that many of the outstanding characters of our time had come up through, and trained by, Christian Endeavor, and this society had more than repaid for the effort and means spent in its behalf.

Then the convention broke up into discussion groups: a group on Worship, led by Rev. B. J. Earp; on Teaching, by Prof. A. L. Hook; a group on Christian Endeavor, led by Secretary Wilson and one on Stewardship, led by Rev. W. E. Wiseman. These groups discussed practical problems pertaining to their topics and brought a digest to the convention when it reassembled. At the evening hour, Rev. F. C. Lester, Secretary of the Board of Christian Education, Norfolk, Virginia, discussed our "Institutions" following the reports made by secretaries from the institutions—the Orphanage, Missions, College and Christian Education.

The writer did not attend the second half-day meeting of the convention and failed to get the details of the proceedings. Dr. W. M. Jay, Winston-Salem, was elected president for the coming year with Brother W. T. Dunn as vice-president.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, the pastor of the entertaining church, with his co-workers, did everything necessary to make the convention happy and to give cordiality, hospitality and good fellowship to all who attended. It was a worthwhile session of this body and the schools and endeavor society who failed to have delegates were the losers. The theme of the convention was "Building a New World." The devout purpose in the heart and mind of the speakers was to help build a world which needs to be made over again under the leadership of our Lord and His Christ.

OUR EARTH AN ISLAND.

Of course we, all of us, knew that we were living on an island—inhabitants of this small planet called the earth. However, a preacher from the little isle of Britain had to come over to tell us about it in a commencement sermon at Duke University last Sunday.

"We are marooned upon this round and relatively microscopic plot of ground we call the earth. It may not seem a very frightening thought since the earth is still very vast in relation to the little space upon it which we personally occupy, but for all that we are beginning to chafe against our limitations."

In such words, Dr. Norwood, Pastor City Temple, London, England, brings to our mind the very ancient and well-accepted doctrine of years ago. We don't hear so much about it now, and possibly it is on this account that the words of this London preacher comes to us with force and freshness. Long time ago faithful Abraham realized that he was a pilgrim, marooned for the time being on earth, and thus sojourned as in a strange country, "For he looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." The priests and prophets of the old Testament, as well as the preachers and writers of the New, realized that they were strangers on this earth and were making their way, or trying to do so, toward the heavenly and permanent home. The Apostle Paul, mightiest of men since his day, realized that he had much to do with heaven and heaven much to do with him, "for our conversation is in heaven," he says. The men and women who have most vitally wrought in this earth have been those who realized that this earth was an island and above it and surrounding it is the heaven of God; and the fate of the island is in the hand of the Power above.

It has come to be the fashion of our day to say that all we need is a religion that will suffice for this present world; if we can get along in this world, we will let the next shift for itself. We talk and act as if our island were the whole universe of God and that our planet was sufficient in itself. No wonder we grow materialistic and count success by the number of dollars to our credit, or the houses and lands in our title. Believing such, there is little wonder that the London preacher could say, "That if we are only islanders with no relation to heaven, then we are bound to succumb to the material facts with which we are dealing. What then is wrong with us?" We are becoming more ruthless and savage, even while we are becoming more prosperous and potent. We are finding less and less standing ground for the soul and higher things for the soul. We are being forced by our own conception to live as if our earth only exists, whereas we know it is only a speck in the universe. "We have nearly lost the heaven, and the earth forces threaten us with destruction. Our island-civilization is becoming an orgy of crude force and ruthless primitive greed. Nothing can save us but the rediscovery of the great Beyond in which our earth can only find its true harmony."

All of which is only the modern way of preaching the fundamental truth of our Bible, namely, That there is a heaven of God towards which the people of earth may travel in faith and in hope. When we leave heaven out of our rating of things, we are ruling out the higher ideal that should control us, and the greatest power that should influence us in our daily life.

A FAITHFUL STEWARD.

Our editorial page has told recently of a friend, a member of our denomination, who has invested $300,000 in the last twenty-five years solely in personal evangelism. This man believes, as we have told our readers previously, that the church will recover spiritually when its members, laymen in particular, become willing to go as individuals to individuals and bear testimony from experience to the saving power of our Lord. Our opinion is that this man has been a faithful steward, both of his means and his time and we are delighted to give the following further facts about him from the pen of our distinguished friend and brother, Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, who writes in the News Bulletin of The American Board, June 15th, as follows:

"We have one member in our denomination, now eighty years of age, who has carried the principles of stewardship throughout his long life. As a young man just entering business, he made a covenant with God that he would give one-tenth of his income to Christian work, and that if his estate ever reached a certain modest figure, he would divide fifty-fifty all above that amount. Years later he found himself able to give in increasing amounts, and quietly began the support of native evangelists in various mission fields. After twenty-five years of this investment, the total number of converts as the direct result of his work, have reached the amazing number of 55,000. Many of these now occupy posts of responsibility and have themselves become winners of other souls in the spread of the Gospel of Christ.

"The total amount invested in this work comprises the most significant gift which has been made to the American Board in recent history. In addition, this quiet emphasis upon the evangelistic work has been no small factor in stressing the spiritual purpose of winning souls in the policy of our mission stations. Nothing can ever rob him of the deep satisfaction of having made the highest investment he knew, in helping the spread of the Gospel. During the depression his losses have cut his giving to much smaller figures but an equally generous, friend has stepped into the picture, anonymously and temporarily, to maintain this work and thus conserve the results of previous years."

Thus it will be seen that this man who has been favored of the Lord, and highly prosperous in business, and who has now retired to devote all his time to witness bearing for his Lord, adopted a principle in early life that has stood him in good stead. Namely, the principle of tithing. When a young person starting out in life realizes his or her partnership with God and decides definitely to pay one-tenth of the income to the cause of the Kingdom, something takes place in that life which is wholesome and which always results in cheerfulness and joy in Christian service.

GENERAL BUTLER SPEAKS.

On May 10th the United Dry Forces in the District of Columbia had as guest speaker, General Smedley D. Butler, who besides being a distinguished general, knows how to fight and to fire. The General told his audience that prohibition is "not a lost cause, but is going through an evolution." Right now everything is probably at low ebb. Now is the time to organize. Get together, get a lot of smart politicians to advise you and hire some good newspaper men. It was licked by propaganda before."

And then the General becoming prophetic said: "You are not going to get a constitutional amendment right away. It may be 25 years, but the next time it goes dry it will be dry right. It will be dry with honest, straight-forward men in public office to enforce it. The last law was sacrificed, double-crossed, butchered and thrown into the waste-basket by people you elected to office, who talked dry and drank wet."

And then General Butler gave his audience some advice: "Fight the nuisance of drinking driving. Every time you see a man in an automobile accident, find out if he has been drinking. If he has had one drink he is unfit to drive. He is a potential murderer. If you find a man is let off without even a fine, inquire how he happened to get out. . . .

"Drive straight at purification of office holders. Put your members of Congress on the spot. Ask what they are going to vote for when they go to Congress and publish their answers. Then make them live up to it. . . ."

In connection with the above, it may be noted that the Treasury Department at Washington makes the statement that a coast-to-coast drive is to be made beginning July 1st to enforce liquor control laws and to collect liquor taxes. The Commissioner announces that 500 men will be added to the present force of 4,000 for this campaign of enforcement and that the offensive will be directed against tax evaders, bootleggers, moonshiners and other violators. The Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue reports that the distillers are now producing annually 250,000,000 gallons of spirits, an increase of about 80 per cent over last year, and that the number of plants under the bureau's supervision has doubled during the year.

Another speaker was Congressman Guyer, who, among other things, said:

"A wet Congressman from one of the wettest cities in the United States told me recently that in the finest hotel in his city 75 per cent of the drinkers were girls and women, and added: 'I hope it will be as dry as . . . before my nine-year-old daughter grows to womanhood.'"

Through all history nothing has been as difficult to control as liquor. It will possibly be so as long as human nature remains as it is. The one source of absolute control is by the individual himself or herself and no law that has ever been passed can be substituted for individual control.

THIS GOOD DAY.

By ELMER L. DAUGHTREY.

"It is a glorious thing
To live in such a time,
When we may help each other
To deed and thought sublime.
Just now the world is calling
For hearts both brave and true
To guide the erring brother
To hope and life anew.

"It is real joy and gladness
To live and work today,
For humble deed and service
Are done the royal way,
And forces strong and mighty
Extend a helping hand
To quicken, cheer and gladden
Where need makes most demand.

"How good to live serenely
And fear not tyrant king,
When liberty and freedom
Through many regions ring,
When all may hope for justice,
When all may do and dare,
And of earth's many blessings
Demand a rightful share.

"How good to be enjoying
This day of larger life,
When truth and honest dealing
Outrank all hate and strife.
How good to live and labor
When love does much abound,
When life is vain and worthless
"Till it is service crowned."

Holland, Va.

Many a heart is hungry, starving,
For a little word of love;
Speak it then, and as the sunshine
Gilds the lofty peaks above,
So the joy of those who hear it
Sends its radiance down life's way,
And the world is brighter, better,
For the loving words we say.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Pierce, daughter of the late James and Celia Rice, was born in Gates County, N. C., November 20, 1853, and died at the home of her son in Sunbury, N. C., Wednesday, June 3, 1936, at the age of 83 years, 6 months, and 13 days. She and Mr. Joseph Henry Pierce were married January, 1873. Her husband passed away several years ago.

She is survived by two daughters: Mrs. J. R. Parker of Sunbury, N. C., and Mrs. C. Y. Jones of Corapeake, N. C.; three sons: C. H. Pierce, J. S. Pierce of Sunbury, and R. L. Pierce of Norfolk, Va.; one sister, Mrs. Jennie Moore of Richmond, Va., and one brother: Mr. Warren Rice of Philadelphia, Pa., 34 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. There are 51 living descendants of the deceased.

In early life she united with Sandy Cross Baptist Church. Nearly fifty years ago she transferred her membership to Damascus Christian Church, where she remained faithful until her death. Several months ago she suffered a stroke of paralysis from which she never recovered. She was a patient, cheerful sufferer during those long months of waiting for the end to come. The funeral service was conducted at Damascus Christian Church, Sunbury, N. C., Friday, June 5th, at 3:00 P. M., by the pastor, Rev. H. C. Hilliard and the writer. A large congregation gathered to pay tribute and respect to her life and memory.

It would be impossible to give space of this length to every death and funeral. But the consistent life and faithful service of the deceased, in her church, seem worthy of special recognition. She was a regular subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for many years. During her illness she requested her family, or friends, to read the paper to her every week. She kept a complete file of the paper for a number of years and often read old issues with eager interest. Constant and faithful reading of the church paper kept her well-informed regarding the general enterprises of the denomination. She was a bureau of information in her local church. She was generous in her financial support and faithful in attendance until her health failed. It was a great disappointment to her when she was not able to be in her place in the church of her choice.

There is nothing spectacular about such a life. People who go daily about their tasks in an humble way are not sought out by press agents for front-page display in the newspapers. They come and go with no blowing of trumpets. But they make a contribution to the world of more importance than much of the over-emphasized spectacular type of service. The church has the opportunity of giving prominence and emphasis to this type of life. The church needs more people who are willing to forego the call of pleasure, when the hour of worship should find them in the house of God. Of course the minister is expected to go, and the members of the choir should be in their places. But here is a humble member who gives the church first place every Sunday. No visiting, no guests,—can interpret church attendance. Such people are the salt of the earth, the light of the world, the hope of the church and the salvation of the nation. Without them civilization would degenerate into the quagmire of delusions and disappointments.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

For more than half a century the Christian Church has been greatly interested in the cause of higher education from the Christian viewpoint. Under the inspiration and leadership of the dominant spirits of the church, Elon College was founded. With the founding of Elon College the Christian Church took a new position in militant Christianity. Her leadership has constantly risen to higher planes of efficiency and effectiveness. Her numbers have increased from year to year, and her material assets have multiplied perhaps more rapidly. Elon College as the training school for the church has furnished the foundation and inspiration for the growth and development of the church. No church can advance beyond the vision and efficiency of its own leadership. It is exceedingly difficult for the institutions of other denominations or the institutions of our state to train effectively leaders for our own church. I think that we are not yet willing to concede this important function of denominational activity to the custody of those not interested in our particular problems or in any problem that pertains to religion. It is necessary to preach the Gospel. It is equally necessary to prepare individuals to preach that Gospel. Such were the convictions of the sainted souls of our church who in their day made the contributions with the assurance of their own souls that we, the ones of us, who have come after them would make ours. If I read correctly the records that tell of the founding of Elon College and of her struggle through the years, she was born as the result of a moving conviction and has maintained her existence by an upward struggle.

She has faced many difficult situations, has fought many battles, and won many victories. Today she faces a situation equally as serious and a battle more terrific than she has yet faced. Truly we owe but little money comparatively speaking. We have made such wonderful progress that the friends of the college and the general public expect the remaining indebtedness of the college to be wiped out without difficulty. The public cannot conceive of a denomination as strong, as capable, and as concentrated as the Congregational and Christian Churches in the South failing to come to the rescue of Elon College, the greatest tangible asset that it has, and thus allow her heritage of the past to be swept out of her hands into the grasp of others.

For the past eight weeks we have been conducting an intensive campaign through the churches to raise $250,000 for the college. The George W. Williams Company of Lebanon, Pennsylvania, has been leading this campaign. Under contract their services terminated last Friday. The Company has been settled with in full and their representatives are no longer on the field. The total amount subscribed to date is approximately $65,- 000, leaving $185,000 to be raised. You perhaps will say that the campaign is a failure. It is not a failure. Many have given, some have given to the point of sacrifice, but many, many more have neither given nor subscribed to the campaign. Some who have given represent merely what they could spare and this is far from presenting a real sacrifice. Elon College can never be saved with spare money. It will be saved by sacrifices upon the part of those who care. This campaign is not over. It is just beginning. You will be given an opportunity to increase your contribution if you have already contributed. If you have not contributed, you will be given the opportunity to make your contribution. The ones interested in Elon College are determined to see this thing through and we have faith in the genuineness, in the consecration, in the loyalty, and in the generosity of our folks. We believe that they will walk in the footsteps of our forefathers before they will see so great an institution as ours go down in defeat.

Sunday, June 21st, has been set apart as a day of prayer for the college. On this day at eleven o'clock every church and every Sunday school in the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian churches is asked to make the college an object of prayer to the end that every member of the church and every alumni of the college will do his full duty by the college and will immediately forward his contribution or pledge for the college over a period of years, and further you are invited to join the prayer circle for the college and forward your name to Elon College at once. Address the Prayer Circle, Elon College, North Carolina. If you cannot give you can pray. If you will pray fervently enough and long enough, you will find a way to contribute.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College through a designated committee has requested that the writer cancel all other engagements, put aside all other responsibilities, and give himself fully and completely to the task of raising the amount set to be raised for the college. This is a tremendous undertaking. It cannot be done by human ingenuity and by human strength alone, but it can and must be done by the help of One who is able. The writer covets your prayers, your cooperation, your assistance that the responsibility laid upon him may be patiently and successfully borne.

Truly, the fight is on. The weapons with which we battle are faith, prayer and money. You may feel that the first two are easy, that the third is difficult and that herein lies the crux of the whole fight, but nothing is further from the truth. It is harder to believe and more difficult to pray than it is to give. The individual who believes and believes as he ought, who prays and prays as faith demands, will find giving a delight and not a difficulty. May I urge you to take up now the weapons of faith and of prayer that you may fight successfully and be encouraged with victory.

L. E. SMITH.

Wouldst thou feel thy soul's rest in Christ? Thou must know His voice, hear it, learn daily of Him, become His disciple; take up from His nature what is contrary to thy nature . . . yea thou wilt find it very hard and unnatural, when His nature is grown up in thee, either to distrust the Lord or harken to His enemy.

M. J. SWEET AND THE CHATTANOOGA CHURCH.

Words of cheer to his many friends come from the work of our good friend and brother, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, formerly of Elon College, now pastor of the Union Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tenn. They gave Brother Sweet a cordial welcome and a "Pentecostal home-coming" on Sunday, May 31st. Of the services the Chattanooga News, May 30th, says: "Union Congregational Church, Thirty-Second Street and Fourteenth Avenue, will observe a Pentecostal home-coming Sunday, the Rev. M. J. Sweet, pastor, announced. The observation will begin with the Sunday school at 9:45 A. M., when Warren Adair, new teacher of the Friendly Boy Scouts' Class, will deliver a special message.

"The home-coming will continue in the morning service when many of the old-time members will be welcomed to their old church. Every member is expected to be present if living in this community and far-removed members are requested to send letters to be read at this service.

"New members will be received, among them three members of one family representing three generations, the oldest being 86 years old. There will be appropriate music by the volunteer chorus choir, and a sermon by the pastor.

"The spirit of Pentecost will be continued in the service of Christian Endeavor at 6:30 o'clock, with the pastor in charge: subject, "What Shall This Man Do?"

"Our Church Delivering Its Message to Our Community,' is the theme for the evening sermon."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

WHERE THE MISSIONARY'S HEART REJOICES.

By CHAS. A. LEONARD, SR.

What a joy it is to spend a few days at outstations like Chuhehsien (Wuchimihe), where the Lord has blessed His work in such a pleasing, encouraging way, and where there are so many choice Christian characters! This started the mission off in high spirits for a long, trying trip of a month to ten outstations.

Lying, as it does, in a rich valley, on a river's edge, and at a railway station, we were sure that from Chuhehsien a motor line would sometimes be projected in still another direction and the town grow. This town and region has now been selected by the Japanese for settling of Korean colonies. Irrigation schemes are being projected along the river and motor lines are being extended. Less land is in cultivation due to the flare-up of banditry following inauguration of the new regime and burning of farm houses by the government to decrease the number of places as rendezvous for the smaller robber bands. Yet in spite of present drawbacks, this center of twenty thousand and will probably double in population within the next decade, if conditions continue to improve.

But these people have truly been tried. Again and again bandits have entered the town these past few years, looting, burning, kidnapping, torturing. Christians suffered, but in less proportion to others. The hands of one were tied behind him with those of another, but while their captors were helping break into a business house the two men backed up against on a fence, worked the rope loose and escaped. Other Christians were praying for them.

When the Japanese army first entered the town the people fled in consternation. A woman who was crossing a swollen stream on a foot bridge feared she would fall in, and instead of dropping her roll of bedding, as she intended, she loosened her baby from under the other arm and it fell into the stream. The Japanese artillery mistook for an opposing army hundreds of frightened civilians who had fled to the foot of the mountains, and opened fire, killing many.

The preaching hall, now a church building, given by an opium smoker who became a Christian after purchasing and reading a Bible, is now inadequate, so during our recent visit the brethren decided to enlarge it, and change the thin paper windows to double glass ones. Contributions toward the evangelist's salary for this year have been doubled. They contribute to every worthy outside cause, besides paying all incidental expenses.

They asked on this trip for the ordination of Evangelist Liu as pastor. This Mr. Koon and I shall do soon. Trained in our Baptist Theological Seminary down in Shantung, earnest, faithful, growing in knowledge of the Lord, in patience and grace, and filled with the Holy Spirit, we do not hesitate to place our hands upon him, for he is worthy to become pastor of this excellent group of Christians.

These earnest believers were not content to hold meetings only at the church, so we helped them rent a gospel hall on the main street, where laymen could help their preacher witness to the many who come in from the country to this county seat and business center. Among these are many Koreans, who are settling in the town and country in increasing numbers.

In the meantime God was preparing an evangel for these Koreans. Mary Cheng, a Korean Christian woman who had lived in Russia and speaks Russian and Chinese as well as her own language, attended the Seminary Bible classes down in Shantung, aided financially by the Chuhehsien Church. She has now come back, filled with the Word and a longing to preach to her own people and to the Chinese. She is known now by Chinese, Japanese, Russians and Koreans, to all of whom she can witness. (She also speaks some Japanese.) Her husband, a Korean doctor, had grown cold and had fallen into gambling and drinking, but since her return he has been revived, forgiven and is helping also in preaching to his people.

So evangelistic services are held regularly at the main-street gospel hall for Koreans as well as Chinese, Sunday worship there being conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Cheng. On our visit this time forty earnest men and women and some young people, were baptized. Twenty-one of these were Koreans largely the work of Mary Cheng, among them her own son. Worship had to be held separately at the two places, and we spoke to both, Mrs. Cheng interpreting into Korean from Chinese; but both groups were together for the baptismal services and for the Lord's Supper, though some had to stand.

Evangelist Liu stated with joy that frequently he hears the singing of hymns in the homes of Christians north, east, south and west of the Church. The children of a nearby Catholic family steal into the church and learn hymns. The oldest brother, a soldier, beats them for this, but they continue to come.

Old Mr. and Mrs. Hu, members of the Harbin Baptist Church, too old and ill to support themselves, are provided living expenses by the Harbin church and the Chuhehsien Church provides them a home. Old Brother Hu had decided he wanted to go on to the Lord before we arrived and was sure he would go home soon, but as his health is better in the summer and the worst of winter had passed, we persuaded him to wait until next fall. Prayer was made for him, so he got up from his "kang" (brick bed) and came to the services the next day, stating that he had decided to stay on, with the help of the Lord, until cold weather starts in the fall.

MONEY TALKS.

One penny speaks in a wee, small voice;
Two pennies can scarcely be heard;
But, handfuls of pennies which have been saved up
From movie-shows, ice-cream cones, gum and lollipop
Can do a lot of talking as they clink, clank, clank,
When slipped with eager hand into a cent-a-meal bank
They can tell of loving hearts, and willingness to share
The good things we've always known
With children everywhere.
Put a Cent-a-Meal Box on your table and let it talk for you.

THE SAD PENNIES SAID:

"We are all sad pennies
You can see that at a glance
In buying cows and such like things
We've never had a chance.
Instead, we're spent for chewing-gum, and lollipops and shows,
But the thing that makes us saddest
Is that everybody knows
We're often blamed for stomach-ache,
And dreams that keep young folks awake—
Now please, do you suppose
That sometime we could have a share
In telling children everywhere
That love keeps growing wide and deep
The more you give, the less you keep?"
If you would like a cent-a-meal box, send a letter to—

THE MISSION SECRETARY.

Elon College, N. C.

People do get queer notions. At least that is what Walter Reuling, aged three, thinks! Erna, his sister, eight years old, came home from school where they had been reading fairy tales. "Mother," she asked Mrs. John A. Reuling, of Adams, Natal, South Africa, "are fairy tales true?" Walter fixed her with a scornful eye—that such stupidity should be evidenced by a sister of his—and cut in scathingly: "Fairies don't have tales!"

THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE RURAL CHURCH—A NATIONAL PLAN.

By MALCOLM DANA, D. D.

(Delivered at the National Conference of the Rural Church, held at Washington, D. C., January 13-17, 1936.)

This subject was given me; and I speak of it at all, under protest. For I am, by position, a member of a reputed "old guard," supposed to be endowed with a "defense mechanism," and proverbially accused of inability to "take it on the chin." As a member of the program committee; I urged the banishment of all old line speakers, who have been addressing the Home Missions Council for ten or fifteen years. I also stood for a new type of annual meeting. I finally agreed to make this presentation; and that is all that it pretends to be; if allowed to use the referendum method, for the purpose of really provoking a discussion.

As I address you, therefore, it is not I alone who is speaking. It is the voice of exactly one hundred and eight letters, representative of five groups: sociologists, laymen, modern youth, administrators, and rural ministers. These persons were carefully chosen; and the voice is not only numerically large, but geographically inclusive. (1) Twenty-six sociologists, mostly from Universities and State Colleges of Agriculture, write from thirteen different states. (South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, District of Columbia, Connecticut, Massachusetts.) (2) Twenty-seven laymen, from eleven different states, express themselves. (Colorado, Wyoming, Iowa, Ohio, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont.) (3) Modern youth is represented by thirty-three people from twelve states. (South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Virginia, West Virginia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, Vermont.) Six professors, connected with State Colleges of Agriculture, submitted our question to their classes; and their opinions are included. (South Dakota, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, New York, Connecticut.) (4) Eighteen administrators, speak for seven of the major denominations. (Congregational, Methodist Episcopal, North, Methodist Episcopal, South, Presbyterian North, Presbyterian, South, Church of the Brethren, Disciples.) Letters also are included; from officials of the National Y. M. C. A. and National Y. W. C. A., the International Agricultural Missions, etc. (5) Four rural ministers are included in the referendum; their number being small, because of a somewhat similar inquiry made from them quite recently.

The only requirement made from all these correspondents was—utter frankness. And it was given! The question was taken seriously, given earnest and painstaking thought; and it excited universal interest. Therefore let him that has ears to hear; listen, to what these one hundred letters have to say, to representatives of the churches.

I. Several correspondents are somewhat skeptical as to the possibilities of any inclusive "national plan." Others think denominational, and interdenominational plans, should be made separately; with allowances for regional differences. These suggestions are not unreasonable; but one thing is certain. Unless real beginnings of some interdenominational plan do result from this Conference; the latter will have been simply "another meeting." For our peripatetic, and everlastingly-at-it General Secretary is right—"A satisfactory national plan for the rural church that is denominationally or ecclesiastically centered, is doomed to failure. The rural church can no longer thrive on denominational diet. It must have richer food." Probably ninety-five per cent of our correspondents would say "Amen" to such opinion. And why not? It took a national Catholic League of Decency, to begin a marvelous clean-up of motion pictures; almost over night. Nor is it letting up with an initial victory: but, unlike Fusion New York City, it is following the ball through the holes made in Will Hays' line. This question is a legitimate one! Are the twenty-six denominations represented in the Home Missions Council so agreed, so united, and so able to act, as to do such a thing as that? There are skeptics in our midst who have declared that in this Conference does not devise, and really begin to carry out something akin to the "Catholic Plan of Action," future Home Missions Councils will see them no more.

II. As a matter of fact, the prescriptions made by our one hundred letters, are almost equally applicable to either a denominational or interdenominational national plan; and are regionally pertinent. Their suggestions will be presented in a series of affirmations; growing out of them. These will outline some elements of a satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church.

A primary element in a satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church, must be a profound and initial appreciation of Spiritual values.

Such assertion, directly or indirectly, and in no traditional way is made in many of our letters. This affirmation should be noted at the beginning of our consideration. For our theme does give opportunity for unduly exalting the "mechanics" of a plan. There is, therefore, much wisdom in words written by O. A. Baker; himself a scientifically trained man. "When I saw your word 'Plan,' I was annoyed slightly. This a mechanical age. I have found so many people who seem to think that our social organism is a machine, and that if the right lever is pulled people will behave like 'robots' and turn out the product desired, that the word 'plan' is beginning to irritate me. A plan, it seems to me, can be at most, merely a body to clothe a spirit; and this spirit, in turn, must find its life, its power, in a conviction as to truth—believe itself to be animated by the will of a Supreme Being. I doubt if much can be done by the rural ministry, plan or no plan, until it is convinced that it has a mission, and that this mission is to carry to the people a body of truth, received from God. May I express the opinion that many ministers are no longer sure that they have a body of truth, essential to the salvation of the present-day world. Science has more or less undermined the theological foundations or sanctions of the church, and new foundations of sanctions have not yet been erected. Our task, as it seems to me, is to restore the foundations or sanctions of Christian ethics, by showing that they have developed out of the experience of the race; and that in the preceding evolutionary process, there has been an upward trend, suggestive of a Divine Will. The urgent need of a rural church is not a plan, but a purpose; and that purpose would be, I believe, to convict people of sin, and save our civilization from death. What is sin? In large part, at least, it consists of those attitudes and actions which the experience of the race, and scientific teachings reveal as tending to reverse the upward trend of the evolutionary process, and to undermine the institutions which promote peace, prosperity and intellectual progress among men."

This fine statement, and worthy conviction, might well be seconded by the written contribution of the President of the Home Missions Council, E. M. Halliday: "A deeper religious experience is the need of our rural churches. The people need a deeper religious certainty, and a warmer religious experience. A second need is—ministers spiritually aroused." And other significant words might follow the above contributions—"Jesus Christ proposed no great plan; but a great heart is infinitely above any plan."

A satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church will be not only willing, but enthusiastic, in an effort to meet change with change.

During the Great War, Henry Ford was asked: "What is coming after?" His answer was—"only one thing is certain; and that is change." As a witness to that change, we have only to compare his original Model T with a 1936 V8. In the days of that same war, Lloyd George gave pointed advice, concerning change. "Quit harking back to the good old days before the war; and get a new day." The Lord's business is the biggest of "big business"; and the rural church may well catch step with a modern business man, Edward Filene. In the face of inevitable change, he says: "The man who is not himself considerable of a prophet, will get no profits. By that I mean that I am myself looking ahead twenty-five years. I am trying to see what is coming in the realm of modern business. And I am not waiting until we arrive; but I am right now altering my theories and plans of business to approximate what I think I see lying out there."

Those are the words of statesmen; and the rural church should be as statesmanlike! But many of our letters deplore "the decline in the (rural) church"; which "is due to inability to meet change with change." One letter says: "the constant development in our industrial and economic world, and the changing concepts of religion, demand a change in the set-up of religion. The rural church is an unchanging institution in a changing environment." Another contributor writes, concerning "loss of authority and influence," on the part of the rural church, because of its indifference, or actual resistance to change. He declared that the future "hinges on whether or not churches are capable of conceiving of themselves as changing or adjusting entities"; and he also wonders "if the church can change rapidly enough to catch up with the changing community. Can it make adjustments in time to allow for itself a realistic and vital place in the future community?" A young girl asks, in all seriousness: "Can the church replace its worn out 'pasts,' enough to satisfy modern conditions?" An eminent writer, speaking of the church, and its continued resistance to change, writes as follows: "Social institutions may live on in a changing environment long after they have ceased to function

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

NORTH CAROLINA PASTORS' SCHOOL.

The 1936 session of the North Carolina Pastors' School and Rural Church Institute began on Monday evening of this week at Duke University, Durham, North Carolina, and will close Friday noon, June 19th. This is the eighteenth annual conference and the program promises an unusually fine series of discussions and addresses for ministers who may be able to attend.

Among the leaders are Dr. Harvie Branscomb, School of Religion, Duke University; Dr. R. L. Russell, Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.; Dr. J. V. Thompson, Drew University, Madison, New Jersey; Mrs. H. D. Guerrant, College Park, Georgia; Dr. E. T. Thompson, Department of Sociology, Duke University; Dr. F. W. Otterbein, Pastor North Austin English Evangelical Lutheran Church, Chicago; Bishop Paul B. Kern, Resident Bishop, North Carolina and South Carolina Conferences, M. E. Church, South; Dr. T. H. Sun, Editor "The Christian Farmer," a Farmers' Magazine in China; Dr. Edwin Lewis, Drew University; Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Resident Bishop, Washington Area, Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C.; Dr. William S. Sadler, Psychiatrist, Author, Lecturer, Chicago; Dr. H. W. McLaughlin, Director, Department of Country Church and Sunday School Extension, Presbyterian Church in the U. S., Richmond, Va.; Dr. C. J. Galpin, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and Dr. Paul Green, Teacher and Writer of Novels and Plays, University of North Carolina.

There is a registration of $1.00, and board can be secured at the college for $9.35, the college furnishing free room. Those who are fortunate enough to attend will certainly be benefitted by so doing.

INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

The University of Virginia will hold its Tenth Annual Session of its Institute of Public Affairs under the direction of Dr. Charles G. Maphis from July 5th to July 18th.

The program this year will be divided into four sections: (1) Round Table Conferences meeting from 9:00 A. M. to 1:00 P. M., daily for one week each; (2) Special Conferences meeting from 3:00 P. M. to 5:00 P. M., daily for from two to four days; (3) Open Forum Meetings from 3:00 P. M. to 5:00 P. M. daily for the entire membership of the Institute; (4) Evening Lectures nightly at 8:00 P. M.

From July 6th to 11th the round table will center on "International Good Will," and will be led by Dr. Robert McElroy of Oxford University. The Rotary Clubs of Virginia will share in this round table, and such topics as the following will be considered: "The Provincial Mind As Our Obstacle to International Good Will," "The Problem of Neutrality," "Debts and Repudiation of Debts," "The Problem of Armaments," "Trade Relations," "Human Relations."

Another round table will consider the church and the problem of democracy and will be led by

Rev. John McDowell, Secretary, Committee on Social and Industrial Relations, Board of National Missions, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., New York. Dr. Henry W. McLaughlin and Rev. Minor C. Miller will assist in this round table. Topics will include the following: "Democracy's Judgment Day—Will It Stand?"; "The March of Democracy—Has It Halted?"; "The Foundations of Democracy—Are They Secure?"; "The Meaning of Democracy—Has It a Definite Content?" "The Appraisal of Democracy—Its Foes—Are They Inherent?"; "Its Safeguards—Are They Adequate?"; "The Expanding Scope of Democracy—Is It Limited?" "Making Democracy Work—Is It Possible?" "Democracy and Education—Are They Supplemental?" "Democracy and Religion—Are They Inseparable?" and "The Future of Democracy—Is It Assured?"

Other round tables will include one on "Current Problems in our Latin-American Relations" led by Dr. Dana G. Munro, Former U. C. Minister of Haiti, Princeton University; "The New York Stock Exchange"; "Local Government" led by Professor Arthur W. Bromage, University of Michigan; "Changing Asia" led by Mr. Grover Clark, Author and consultant on Far Eastern Affairs, New York; "The American Political Scene in 1936" led by Mr. Spencer Miller, Jr., Director Workers Education Bureau of America, New York; and "Public Opinion in a Democracy," led by Dr. Herman S. Hettinger, University of Pennsylvania.

The University will provide living accommodations at extremely low rates. Room and board may be had as low as $1.65 a day or $12 a week. Those interested should send requests for information to Miss Marjorie McLachlan, Secretary of the Institute.

YOUTH CONFERENCES.

Young people and their leaders in Florida will close their annual conference at DeLeon Springs on Saturday of this week. Our colored friends of Congregational and Christian Churches close their annual conference on Thursday of this week at King's Mountain, North Carolina. These conferences and those that are to follow stir within the minds and hearts of those who attend deep currents of life. This is shown sometimes by things that are said and done while in the group and sometimes by the changed outlook on life which manifests itself through the years that follow. The Following poem, written by Miss Dora Byron, dedicated to the "healing waters" of DeLeon Springs, is rather typical of what happens to young life in these conferences.

MAGIC WATERS.

Healing Waters,
Soothe the hearts
That we bring to Thee,
Weary from the heavy years,
Wounded by our selfish fears,
Ill with doubts, or secret tears
No one can see.

Crystal Waters,

Cleanse the hands
That build each day anew,
May we build with deeds of grace,
With words of love our pattern trace,
May every thought that finds its place
Be pure and true.

Sparkling Waters,

Cool the winds
Heated by the strife
Give us as we go along,
Laughter and lilted song,
Joy and beauty that belong
In every life.

Holy Waters,

May we ask
Strength, whate'er the way,
Humility to meet success,
Faith and courage for distress,
Lift our souls to nobleness,
Great Spirit, this we pray.

VIRGINIA STATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

The Forty-Second Annual State Christian Endeavor Convention of Virginia will be held at Massanetta Springs, June 18 to 21, 1936. An excellent program has been prepared with such leaders as Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, vice-president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, Miss Helen Lefevre Lyon of Washington who accompanied Dr. Poling on his recent trip around the world, Dr. Warren G. Hoopes, Pennsylvania's Executive Secretary, W. Roy Breg, former Southern Field Secretary, Geo. H. Wilson, present Southern Field Secretary, and a number of others. The theme is "Seeking the Living Way." Those interested in attending should send their registration fee of $1.00 to Miss Phyllis G. Brown, 3220 Fifth Avenue, Richmond, Virginia.

HAVE WE LEARNED TO USE OUR MINDS?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 21, 1936.

Scripture: Phil. 4:8.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Study hard problems. Heb. 5:12-14.

Tues.—Keep the mind active. I Tim. 4:6-16.

Wed.—Study nature. Ps. 8:1-9.

Thur.—How Jesus used His mind. Luke 2:40-52.

Fri.—A mind set on heaven. Col. 3:1-4.

Sat.—Open the mind to wisdom. Prov. 2:10-15.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think thou on these things." (Phil. 4:8.)

Shakespeare said, " 'Tis the mind that makes the body rich." In this day and time as never before young people are taking upon themselves the task of enriching their body. The youth of today are not content to go by some rules that have been handed down to them—but they desire to think problems through for themselves. The "findings" that come from the group discussions at our various young people's Conferences and Leadership Training Schools are indicative of the

JESUS CRUCIFIED.

LESSON XI—JUNE 14, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "God commended his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."—Romans 5:8.

LESSON: Luke 23. Printed Text: Luke 23: 33-46.

A melancholy and mournful procession was making its way through the streets of Jerusalem. Three men, guarded by a squad of Roman soldiers walked with laggard steps to what they knew was a shameful and terrible death. Each man carried on his shoulders two heavy beams of wood from which the rude cross on which he was to be crucified was to be made. Densely packed on both sides of the street was a morbid multitude, some of them openly jeering the condemned men. When the procession reached the city gates it followed for a short distance one of the main roads leading northward, and then turned aside to a grim-looking place just off the highway that bore a striking resemblance to a huge human skull. In fact it was called Golgotha which means "the place of the skull."

A crucifixion was a grim thing. It was invented to make death as painful and lingering as possible. First of all the longer beam of wood was securely planted in the ground. Then the shorter transverse wood was laid on the ground, the condemned man was placed on it with arms outstretched, and were made fast to it by strong, sharp nails driven through the hands. This transverse was then drawn up and either bound or nailed to the upright, and a rest or support for the body fastened on it. Lastly the feet were extended and either one nail hammered into each, or a larger piece of iron through the two. The sufferers were left thus, exposed alike to the pitiless rays of the sun, and the equally pitiless jeers and jibes of the heartless crowds, and suffering untold agonies from wounds and thirst and fever. So might the crucified hang for hours, till death mercifully ended it all. It is well for us to keep this in mind when we think about the Cross of Christ. Only a supreme love would prompt a man to take upon himself voluntarily such a death.

There were three crosses on that hill that morning. There was first of all the cross that hardened. "One of the malefactors railed on him." He was a criminal, paying the just debt for his crime. He was reaping what he had sown. His experience had hardened him. He had become bitter, rebellious. He took his spite out on others, even the innocent. It is a parable of life. How often men rebel against the suffering that comes as the inevitable result of their own folly and sin. How often they blame others, or curse God. Suffering, even merited suffering, often hardens.

But the thing goes deeper. There are those who have tried to live right, those who have tried to honor and to serve God, who also become hardened when suffering comes. Here is a woman hard and bitter because as she says, God has taken her child away in spite of her good life and earnest prayers. Here is a business man hard and bitter because he has suffered financial reverses, not always because of his own folly but because of the dishonesty of others. Here is a young man or a young woman bitter and cynical because they were disappointed in love, or because marriage did not turn out happily. Here is some person suddenly stricken down by a malignant disease, crippled by an accident, thwarted by circumstance or handicapped by environment, betrayed by his friends, bitterly complaining, rebelling and growing hard and cynical about religion and God. There is a cross that hardens, both the deserving and the undeserving.

Then there is the cross that softens. The other malefactor said, "Dost thou not fear God seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And we justly, for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss. And he said unto Jesus, Lord remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." The same thing had happened to both of these men. In the one case however, it had hardened; in the other case it had softened. This man's sufferings and trouble had awakened within him the finer sentiments and sensibilities of life, had quickened within him a desire for a better life, had prompted him to yield himself to the highest and best. What might have been a curse became a blessing, because it had softened life. This too, is a parable of life. There are those into whose lives there comes experiences and events that are unpleasant and undeserved. Loss of fortune, desertion by friends, disappointment, disaster, disease, invalidism, suffering, bereavement—all that life in its ugliest moods can do, comes to them. But it leaves them uncomplaining and unembittered. They keep sweet and strong and brave through it all. Indeed those experiences are as refining fires, burning away the dross and revealing a splendor of character that shines like gold with a lustrous beauty. There is a cross that softens.

And then there is the cross that saves. It is the cross on which the Son of God was crucified. He saved others—thus did the enemies of Jesus unwittingly state what has always been held as an abiding conviction and a glorious experience by the followers of Christ. They know that the cross has redeeming, saving power. To be sure there have been many theories as to the how of the Atonement, but there has not been any doubt as to the fact of the Atonement. Christians thru the centuries know that through the cross they have been reconciled unto God through Christ, and that they have found salvation from the penalty and the power of sin. They have felt that the cross was a revelation of the extent to which Divine Love will go to make that love known. They have seen in it the willingness of God to take upon himself the sorrows and sufferings and sins of His children. They have seen in it the redemptive power of suffering when voluntarily accepted and borne for others. They see in it a pledge that love cannot fail, that God can take the suffering caused by the ignorance and sin of man, and use it to accomplish his purpose. They know that through the Cross they have come into a new life, that they have been saved by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. And because they know this, they seek to share with God his redemptive power of love that suffers for others, and thus saves.

Our government will be made better according as good citizens watch it and help it.—Jordan.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"THE UNCHANGEABLE LORD."

"For I am the Lord, I change not."—Mal. 3:6.

"With whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."—Jas. 1:17.

Our New Testament reference is the testimony of James the brother of Jesus and the Bishop of Jerusalem. He was called "rationalistic in spirit" and "narrow in views," but out of his beauty of character, purity of life and humbleness in devotions, he was prepared as but few others to declare this truth. Like the Saviour he stood firm in his faith to the end and it is said that his end came by being hurled from a pinnacle while testifying for Christ. His dying testimony was, "Jesus the same yesterday, today and forever."

All life, all nature, animate and inanimate, is either changing or passing away. The life of the world is so changing with the march of time, that all things are new. So rapid are these changes that tomorrow the things of today are either old or gone.

But there are things that never change: Beauty, Purity, righteousness, love, joy, peace, justice and mercy. These were in the beginning, is now and ever shall be the same for man's blessedness. As the river, though changing them, makes the shores more beautiful so the Lord Jesus is an ever-flowing river of spirit, though changing man, making him more beautiful in these heavenly graces.

Every individual is a plan of God to make the world more beautiful and to make him known in the ever-growing and ever-changing universe. And that individual who is steadfast enough to be always found at the altar of the Mercy seat, constantly at the post of duty and willing to stick, as Frances Little puts it, "Willing to spend a year in Hades if heaven is at the end of it," has something richer and knows God better than the world can know.

Prayer—O Lord, we poor souls know that if the world is to be better Thy children must live on the high plane of moral and spiritual values. Grant this to us this day, we pray, for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"DIVINE PROTECTION."

Read: 2 Tim. 4:18; Heb. 13:6; 2 Thess. 3:3; Joel 2:32.

"I will be an enemy, unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto their adversaries."—Ex. 23:22.

Let us liken a true Christian to a garden by the side of the road. It lies at an angle between the road and a railway line. It is well flowered, well kept and beautiful, in spite of the terrible forces that come so near it. Hearing the rushing rumbling motor vehicles of the road and the screaming engines that pass thundering by, one might think that "these beautiful things would be torn to shreds in a moment." But the road is well-paved and holds its own traffic. Behind the fence faithful steel keeps the trains in their appointed place. Though the air vibrates with destruction the garden is safe. It grows on in strength and beauty.

Though it trembles with the thunder of the outside world, not a filament is snapped, and not a petal falls untimely to the earth. Its greatest enemies are within it.

So with the fine husbandries of faith in souls. Environments hurtle with hostilities. Diabolical temptations and sin encroach on every side. Society is infested with vice and ill-ordered living threatening disaster. Often the air quivers with devilishness. Yet Jesus is still declaring, "Upon this rock (the faith) I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Midst all the evil in the world, His work will thrive. The hidden lines of His protecting power are there. "He will not fail."

Prayer—O God help us to have the faith to stand in one place. Reveal to us Thy purpose and, whatever it be, we would be true and loyal. Grant this, Lord God, in the name of Jesus.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE WAY OF THE LORD."

"The Lord is the rock, his work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment."—Deut. 32:4.

One of the interpretations of "Judgment Day" is, first, the judgment of sins,—sins that we have committed, sins of omission and sins that others have heaped upon us. Whatever may be the source of our sins, we are the ones accountable for them, and judgment awaits our accounting.

It is error to think of the judgment as "the one far-off divine event toward which the whole creation moves." Though there will be such an event, it is more vitally true to understand the judgments of every-day life.

"All His ways are judgment." There is not a deed nor a thought of ours that is not judged by the power that justifieth or condemns. And Paul said, "It is God that justifieth," and that is as much as saying, "He knows the way that I take" and I know that He is on my side and will take my part.

The finest privilege that anyone has is the consciousness of the fact that the way one walks with others is the way God walks with Him, and, so living, a Christian has God and not man to judge his actions.

"The God whom all men own is wholly just,
Hold thou that last word dear
And live untouched by fear
He knows with what strange fires He mixed
His dust.

"Fear not; He made thee dust,
Cling to that sweet word 'Just,'
All's well with thee if thou art in just hands."
—From Anne Reeneo Aldrich.

Prayer—O Lord, we delight to dwell in Thy thoughts and walk in Thy ways. We throw ourselves at Thy feet. We pray for Thy truth and for the power of Thy way to give us life, health, and lawly righteous hearts.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"SPIRITUAL SUICIDE."

"He that speaketh truth sheweth forth righteousness; but a false witness deceit."—Prov. 12:17.

In the text there are two of the greatest words known to humanity,—"truth" and "righteousness," the one being the revelation of the other, or, we might say, the one being the liberation of the other. Stick to the truth and righteousness will be liberated and the Kingdom of God will come.

Only truth reveals righteousness. For truth is the vital principle of life. It is the practical realities of life. And when it is known and applied to life everything else must declare it and abide by its dictates, because truth is the last word upon which everything depends, to which everything must be subjugated and in which everything is completed.

When truth is realized in the human spirit, it is the consciousness of an indwelling God, it is the enactment of moral law, it is the potency of immortality, and the truth in Christ is the vital element of our spiritual nature, and he who would deny it or cover it up commits spiritual suicide.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, in all our ways we would live approved of Thee. Give us the "more abundant life." Come Thou and dwell within us, where to dwell not only "give us power to become sons of God," but invests us with the hope of supreme glory.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"LET GOD DO THIS."

"Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth."—Prov. 24:17.

Every man shall stand "in his own lot" in the day of Judgment. Recompense for an evil thing is no part of man. That is God's work. "I will repay," saith the Lord.

Destiny is character worked out. That applies to the other fellow as well as to me. God has decreed that a man will be where he is fitted to be, and have what he is fitted for. Life on earth settles how much of God a man will be able to hold in the last day, and what he gets will be the outcome of his life on earth. "We shall reap what we sow."

An enemy is a potential brother. He has his allotted place as well as we, and the Christian attitude toward him is the Christ attitude. Christ's attitude was to feed him with what he needs. Christ never sent a man away as a useless servant. Christ strives with the soul till He can gladden him with His grace, till all can rejoice together, no one any longer an enemy, but a friend.

Prayer—Lord, deepen our sense of the purpose of man and Thy purpose with him. Give us grace to strive to help, rather than be glad at a fallen brother. In the name of Christ we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"SILLY COPYING."

"Beloved, imitate not that which is evil, but that which is good."—III John 9:14.

It is necessary to imitate much. No one can initiate all the time. No one can be ceaselessly original. Careful imitation is one of the greatest secrets of successful living.

But let it be careful imitation. Many copy whatever comes to hand. The hour's fashion of speech, the season's mode of thought, the outcry of the mob, the current fashion of words, and of YOUTH AT THE LORD'S TABLE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Let no man despise thy youth."—I Tim. 4:12.

It is very encouraging to see the large number of young people who delight to attend the church worship services. Much favorable comment has been made concerning your attendance in such large numbers. Is not this just as it ought to be? If worship is good for adults is it not even better for youths? Worship is life-ennobling. The sooner a life comes under the help of it the better. For the past twelve Sundays we have had an average of four hundred and fifty-seven persons at our morning church service. Young people and children have done their share in holding up that high average. Parents and older people have likewise done their share of that fine work.

I want to speak about young people and children attending the service of the Lord's Supper. The Lord's Supper is one of the very highest and holiest services of the church. Much worship crowds itself into a few minutes. One seems to come closer to the Christ in the Communion service than in any other regular church service. The examining of one's own self, the thinking of one's own relationship to the Lord in supping at His table with Him, in being a guest of Jesus, and thus accepting as a friend and fellow of His the bounty of spiritual food offered, the renewing of our pledge to be loyal and true to Him, and the expectant hope of supping with Him in a future Kingdom all go to make it a service supremely spiritual and worshipful. It is thus a communion. It is the church's highest expression of fellowship.

And that fellowship is with the Christ first, and others second. Both aspects of this fellowship are helpful beyond measure. Our Sunday School, and our parents should teach our children from earliest years something about the Lord's Supper. Who instituted it, and who partook of it. The story of its institution is one of the sweetest and prettiest ever told. It reaches bed-rock in simplicity and beauty. It has found a first place in the heart of the painter, and nothing has been more beautifully portrayed in art. Across the canvas might be written in invisible letters: Friends! or Farewell! or Future Fellowship! Or one could ponder over the picture and find a very lofty meaning of the word: Servant! How much and how often they would need His saving strength! How the world would need Him as Saviour! Again looking at the picture one might see a new glory, as he looked on the faces of those rugged men, some of them old, some of them young, in the word: Saints; Young people should learn early that saints are made by being servants. And that a Saviour makes the ascent possible. The highest bounty earth can give is to be a bond-slave of the Lord. In the picture the poet may see: Wonder! When he thinks of the friends, and the farewells, and the cross on tomorrow he may be filled with wonder, and may even see it on the faces of the men in the picture. The maid in my kitchen may see in a way given only to toilers to see a glorification of work! In this picture, my dear young friends, the sinner will see Warning! We all need that warning, young and old, and that is one of the most helpful things about the Lord's Supper. It sounds, in tears, and love, and a torn body, and a bleeding heart, the note of warning.

A wise teacher will find many ways to lay the beauty of the Lord's Supper, and something of its significance, in the heart of the child, so that by the time he joins the church he is ready to take his place at the table of the Lord. It may not be as orthodox as some would like, but, realizing that the minister has made an invitation for those who desired to honor the Lord after examining themselves, and a little child who is a not a member of the church should offer to take communion, I would not forbid him. If I pushed his little hand away I should be sure to hear the Lord saying, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Although for the sake of the children present who have not as yet united with the church I shall say that you are not supposed to take the Communion until you have made a public profession of your faith in Jesus Christ and been received into the church as a member.

Now, to the large number of young people present for this Communion service, let me say a direct word. "Let no man despise thy youth." One of the finest ways in the wide world to keep from having a youth that may be despised is to keep close to Jesus Christ. I speak that message quietly and calmly and as we are gathered around the Lord's Table. In this particular message I would like to hold three things, in that connection, before you. Idealism. You have it, but is it as sane, and beautiful as it ought to be? If you know Jesus, and take Him as your Friend, and as your Saviour, and plan your life in the latitude of His idealism and love your life will be nothing short of beautiful. One of the saddest things in all the world is to find a young man, or young woman, "water-logged" of soul. Must I explain that word? Such a log is one that is so full of water, and muck, and mud that it will not float. You are not "water-logged" and the way to keep above that state is to keep in the sunshine of God's love. What are your ambitions? Examine them habitually at the Table of the Lord. Your ideals will mount, even though they may have to climb a hill to reach the required heights!

Another thing as we are gathered about this Table of the Lord, I desire to hold before you is seriousness of purpose. I glory in your laughter and your fun, your frankness and your fair-play, the readiness of your spirit of venture, and your willingness to risk. Natural gifts these are, but may I beg of you to bring them under the Spirit of Jesus Christ, and guide them with that seriousness of purpose that will make them assets instead of debits on the ledger of life. What awful risks young people run, and with what terrible results, what heart-ache, anguish, and hopelessness are theirs when those risks are run without seriously considering the goal to which they have in some holier moment dedicated their lives. Young people who delight to draw themselves up to the Table of the Lord, who are willing to check their lives by the seriousness of the cross that stood just before the Saviour who instituted the Lord's Supper, and who take a look in at the kind of things they are keeping in their souls will have ugliness driven from their souls as the sunshine drives deadly germs from the face of the earth! Perhaps

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Quite a number of our children are out on vacation. It makes quite a difference when three or four go out of a building. We try to give each child a ten-days' vacation during the vacation season and the larger number of our children get to go. Some of them have no place to go. We have three little boys that have had no vacation since they came here. They often ask me when they will get their vacation. The pity of it is, they have no home to go to.

Can you imagine how you would feel if you were a little child and had no home and nowhere to go and left to the cold world to give you what it chose to give? It was no choice of these three little boys that they were ushered into this world and their plight since arriving here is no choice of theirs. Cruel fate has placed them here and we are happy that the church through its orphanage can give them a home and a chance.

They came to us from a home of poverty. The conditions under which they were living was pathetic. They will be given the best the church has to give while here and we hope when they grow into young manhood they will go out and make useful citizens.

On June 8th, we had two to go out to make their way in the world—a boy and a girl. They came to us when they were little tots and the girl graduated in high school this spring. They now accept the responsibility of making good. The orphanage gave them a chance when they had none. Now, after years of training, they step out from the home that has mothered them, these years, to meet the obstacles of life alone—our earnest prayer goes with them for a successful life.

IMPROVEMENT OF RURAL CHURCHES.

positively. They may exist by reason of protest against impending changes. They may feed on remnants of the older culture. They cannot become creative agencies in the changing society unless they are positively identified with its change. If social institutions are to become a part of the dynamics of social change, they must move with the changing order. If they lag behind, they will soon find themselves maneuvered into the ranks of negative, reactionary groups. Nor is it enough to make concessions here and there. Creative adjustment to a changing environment means change all along the line. Anything less than fundamental change of this sort, means that the constituency of the institution (the church) will consist of those who are too old, or too adamant, to alter their ways of life, and habits of thought."

A satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church must secure for churches and communities the unhindered rights of "self-determination," in the choice of the amount and kind of religious privilege they shall enjoy.

How far is this, which should be esteemed an "inalienable" right, accorded rural churches and communities? One correspondent writes: "It would seem to me that locality should serve as the starting point. I recognize full well, that many of the state and national administrators are oblivious to the local situation, as a basis of administration. Here they need help." Another letter voices important consideration: "No church can properly become a response to its local community setting, if its policies are determined outside the community. Local effectiveness will diminish in proportion to the rigidity and force of outside control." It is imperative that communities shall themselves have a right to determine how many, and what kind of churches, they shall support. If such right is not accorded them; they will take it anyway. Only one letter argues for the independent type of "community church"; which accords with the Home Missions Council approval of the Federated, or denominational type, of community church. But, it is worth while asking: how came this independent type of community church, after all? An answer is contributed. "It is the layman's kickback; against official and ecclesiastical thwarting of efforts of communities to limit the number of kind of churches." (The second instalment of Dr. Dana's article will appear in next week's SUN.)

fact that young people of today do have minds of their own—and they are using them.

In our scripture lesson today Paul warns us that we must measure life's values and think on things that are true, honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report. If we keep our minds filled with thoughts of good things, then sin will not enter in—because there will be no room for it. "There is no door through which evil can enter, and no space for evil to fill in a mind filled with goodness. Good thoughts are an imperious armor; clad therewith you are completely shielded from the attacks of error of every sort. And not only yourselves are safe, but all whom your thoughts rest upon are thereby benefitted."

God gave each of us a mind and He expects us to use it for a worthy purpose. We do not have to believe what the propagandist tries to make us swallow. When an important issue is at stake we must not be so lazy that we accept what is handed out to us through the newspaper, the radio, etc., but we must set our own mind to functioning, and when the issue is put to a vote of the people, vote the way we think Christ would cast His ballot. Christ did not "follow the crowd" in His way of thinking. He made observations of His own and then He stood by His convictions. It has been wisely said that "the man who thinks is truly God's best friend and the devil's worst enemy." Mrs. W. B. W.

"God's GLORY IN GOD'S HOUSE."
"Behold, the glory of Jehovah filled the house."
—Ezekiel 43:1-5.
God's glory is the most wonderful thing in all His universe. It comprehends all other wonderful things in the universe. It is comfort and joy. It is all things that are splendidly just and true. And whoever would see God's glory is surest of seeing it in God's house. There it pulses in the songs of praise. There it breathes in vital instruction. There it is reflected from the faces of those in whose hearts God dwells. The very air of God's house is full of God's glory.

Whoever attends God's house constantly becomes himself full of God's glory. He carries it wherever he goes. All men behold it in him, and it controls all his deeds and words and thoughts.
Prayer—Lord, thus transfigure our lives, we pray Thee, as we wait upon Thee in the place where Thine honor dwelleth.—Amen.
AMOS R. WELLS.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

if Judas had stayed by until his heart broke he would never have betrayed his Lord. Train yourselves, young people, not to walk out on the service of the Lord's Supper. Stay by, and cry from the depths of your soul, "Lord, is it I?", and even though you may sometime be as weak as that one there who swore before the break of day that he never knew the Lord you may likewise come to know something of His great strength and worth to the world.
One more word I would add today to idealism, and seriousness of purpose, and that is loyalty. I can scarcely think of a lovelier word! You will find that a fellow who has the ability to be loyal to his own best self, his highest ideals, and his choicest resolutions will have no occasion to worry about anyone despising his youth. Are you disloyal to your father and mother, teachers and friends, school and church, home and state? Can you easily make a promise, and as easily forget it? Can you be contented to offer a weak alibi when a worthy action is needed? Are you putting off until tomorrow what you should be putting on today? Then as we are gathered about this Lord's Table may we not pray for a greater loyalty to our best selves, a deeper seriousness of purpose, and a loftier idealism. In this way you shall be able to keep the command in our text: "Let no man despise thy youth."

OBITUARIES

WILKINS.

On April 21, 1936, the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church lost one of its oldest members, Mrs. Margaret Wilkins.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Wilkins we have lost a faithful member and a true friend.
2. That we seek to emulate her worthy example in all walks of life.
3. That we extend our love and sympathy to her relatives.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy placed on the records of our Society, and a copy sent to the bereaved relatives.

Respectfully submitted,
Committee.

COOK.

Mr. Wm. Edwards Cook was born in Alamance County, N. C., January 9, 1860 and departed this life June 3, 1936, at his home near Mebane, Alamance County, N. C. He was united in marriage to Miss Frances Isabell Thomas in 1886 and to this union were born ten children, nine boys and one girl.

Early in life Mr. Cook united with the Christian Church and remained a faithful member until his death. About 25 years before his death, Mr. Cook was ordained a deacon in the Haw River Christian Church and served in that capacity as a faithful soldier of the cross. He was a faithful servant of the conference in which his church was located. Out of the past twenty-nine sittings of this conference, he missed only one session. The Haw River Church and friends grieve over the loss of such a great Christian character.

The funeral was conducted in the Haw River Church and interment was in the Providence Cemetery at Graham, N. C.

A MESSAGE

June 6, 1936.

TO THE CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATION WITHIN THE CHURCHES:

By the authority of the Southern Convention and endorsement of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, we are conducting a campaign through the churches and alumni to raise $250,000 for Elon College.

The time set for the campaign to close has about arrived, however, the campaign cannot stop here but must, I am sure you will agree, be pushed on until the goal set is reached. We have effected settlement with the Williams Company. Their representatives are no longer in the field. The Board of Trustees has requested me to continue the campaign. I have cancelled all other engagements and will give myself to this undertaking.

Manifestly, I cannot do it alone. I am entirely dependent upon you and others. I know that I may depend upon you. This is just a word to express my appreciation of your services, of what you have done, and to appeal to you earnestly to consider this your job until your church has reached its goal.

Won't you please keep your church committee intact and on the job? Write me stating that you will, and if I can be of assistance to you let me know what you would like to have me do? Won't you please stand by until this job is completed?

Yours truly,

L. E. SMITH, President.

Farmers' Income on Upward Trend.—

Notwithstanding that crop prices will be somewhat lower than last year, the American farmer, it is estimated, will have an income this year of nearly a billion dollars more than he received in 1935. There is the likelihood of the best crops in years, weather conditions having been ideal in many sections. Parts of the wheat belt and parts of Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee have proved the exception, the dryness being worse than in the drought of 1926. Income of farmers for the present year is estimated to be at least $8,100,000,000. This compares with $6,943,000,000 for 1935 and $4,328,000,000 for 1932. The farmer's largest income during recent years was that of 1930, when it reached a total of $8,451,000,000. If the bonus payments to farmers, estimated at $500,000,000 should be included in the year's income, 1936 will easily prove a banner year.

Pine Trees for Rayon.—

In the last few years the pulp and paper industry has assumed quite sizable proportions in the South, due to discoveries that have made possible the use of resinous woods like pine. Even at the present time there are being built several additional mills throughout the South for the production of paper, such mills being under construction at Savannah, Ga., Crosett, Ark., and Houston, Texas. Only recently plans were announced for a mill at Charleston, S. C., and one concern is planning to spend $6,000,000 on a new kraft mill in Florida. For the past thirty years resinous woods have been used for natural kraft papers, but it is only recently that it has been possible to successfully bleach the kraft pulp and thus use it as a substitute for the sulphite pulp of the non-resinous woods. Now there appears another use for kraft pulp. It is reported that one of the largest rayon producers will soon begin the manufacturing of kraft pulp as a raw material for the rayon industry.

A Twenty-Billion-Dollar Congress.—

The Seventy-Fourth Congress of the United States bids fair to be a twenty-billion-dollar Congress. The first session of this congress appropriated $9,600,000,000 in the period January to August, 1935, and authorized projects which will, if completed, require around $800,000,000 more. Beginning in January of this year, the second session passed cash appropriations of $8,200,000,000, and authorized additional future projects in the sum of $1,400,000,000. This makes a total of approximately $20,000,000,000. The enormity of this amount can only be judged by comparisons. This amount would purchase all of the railroad and railway-equipment stocks and bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange, plus the automobile industry, the electrical-equipment industry, the farm machinery industry, the paper industry and the publishing industry, and then leave a balance. It is more than the total income of farmers of the nation during 1932, 1933 and 1934 combined, and it is as much as the total Federal expenditures for any hundred-year period prior to 1908.

Combatting Food Waste with Light.—

From the research laboratories of electrical manufacturers has come a lamp which is creating unusual interest among the packing and baking industries. This new gas-filled tube is said to kill mold and bacteria, and meat packers, bakers, and dairymen look for large savings from the reduction of waste. Meat when properly ripened suffers heavy losses through deterioration between slaughter house and table, this waste running sometimes as high as 30 per cent. Experiments show that by the use of the lamp not only were refrigeration expenses reduced but the loss was greatly curtailed. It has been found that in the baking industry that under experimental conditions losses were reduced from 15 per cent to 2 per cent. One dairy reported that 90 per cent of bacteria were killed by flowing milk in a thin film under a battery of these lights. This new development in the electric-lighting world indicates important progress in germicidal irradiation in various branches of the food processing business. It also has opened up new avenues in the field of health, as it may be used to sterilize the air in hospitals and sick rooms as well as in rooms where food is kept.

Did Mr. Farley Say the Wrong Thing?—

It was but natural that politicians should have awaited with interest to hear what Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee would say about the nomination of Governor Landon and the Republican platform. This is what he said: "Every single Republican who had had a part in shaping party policies for the last generation was passed over in favor of a man who eighteen months ago was unheard of by 95 per cent of the American people." If the Republicans worked for any one thing during the past week, it was just this one thing—to attempt to prove to the American people that the old "machine" was no more, and that a new, virile, American party was being born. Was it not unfortunate that Mr. Farley called attention to this one thing? The platform as adopted is certainly a series of compromises that can hardly please either the eastern conservatives or the western progressives of the Norris type. While they cannot well say so, their opinion must more than likely agree with something else that Mr. Farley says—that the platform faces "both ways." "The Republican party has made an accomplished art of the difficult business of facing both ways in a national election. Once again it proposes to be all things to all men." One can but question the use of a platform anyway. Is it to be used to stand upon, or only as a diving-board for one high dive?

Fosdick Sees New Dry Crusade.—

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick in his sermon on May 31st (as reported in the New York Times of June 1st) charged that post-repeal conditions are worse than pre-prohibition and predicted a new dry crusade. Admitting that prohibition was a failure and "in any such form as we had it will be a failure," Dr. Fosdick declared that repeal did not solve our problem. "It simply threw us back to the status quo ante, plunged us once more into the intolerable situation which our fathers faced two generations ago when they rose up in indignation against the liquor traffic." Pointing out that the consequences of the traffic are everywhere anti-social, not to say criminal, Dr. Fosdick added: "I say that we were plunged back into the old situation which two generations ago our forefathers faced. It is worse than that. Theirs was not a machine age. They had no automobiles. Their lives day after day upon the streets did not depend upon public sobriety. Moreover, women then did not drink as now, so that generation did not have the nauseating disgust of seeing drunken women commonly in public places. We are not in the Status quo ante. We are in a worse status by far, and this present, loose, tipsy, cocktail-party generation cannot be the last word in the story of alcoholism. As sure as history repeats itself, a revolt is due, a change of public attitude born out of disgust with and fear of the intolerable estate we now are in. Meanwhile, who are keeping the present customs going? Customs that twenty-five years ago no levelheaded business man downtown would have tolerated in himself or in any employee of his! It is the consumers who keep them going; it is the mass demand of ordinary people. They who create the demand create the custom."—Exchange.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The Woman's Missionary Conference of the Virginia Valley will meet at New Hope Church on July 23rd at 10 o'clock in the morning and continue through the day.

There are yet several churches that have not sent in their special (Easter) offering for missions. In many instances these offerings were taken and are being held for increase, but all should be sent in before June 30th.

Rev. J. S. Johnson of our church at Niagara, N. C., declares that: "At this point of crisis in world civilization surely the cause of missions must stand foremost in our thinking, for we hold that only our gospel of reconciliation can bring hope of sanity and creative living."

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., Assistant Moderator, and a speaker on the program of the General Council, in bi-ennial session this week at So. Hadley, Mass., finds it impossible for him to attend, and along with several of the rest of us who had fondly hoped and planned to attend, deplors the fate that prevents him.

The Virginia Valley Conference will meet at Antioch Church on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 4th and 5th of August. The Youth Fellowship will be given one session in the conference, and a good program is being prepared. The executive committee held a conference relative to this matter during the recent S. S. and C. E. Convention.

A last-minute communication from Rev. Joe French of our Ocean View Church, before leaving for So. Hadley, Mass., and the General Council, brings the following encouraging news: "We have had a great evangelistic campaign at the Ocean View Church. Large numbers of people reconsecrated themselves. Our church membership had a great experience in fellowship and communion. Rev. R. E. Brittle preached with power for two weeks. We received twenty-five members tonight."

June 29th-July 5th, should be auspicious days at Elon. It is the week of Bible study, religious institution, and Christian education with such teachers as Mrs. C. Fred Ward of Rollins College on "Old Testament"; Dr. Jno. G. Truitt of Suffolk, on the "Life of Christ"; Dr. C. Rexford Raymond of Southern Pines on the "Life of Paul"; Rev. W. E. Wisseman, Greensboro, on "Building a Total Youth Program"; Rev. Carl H. Voss, Raleigh, on "Personal Religious Living"; Rev. W. C. Bell, Missionary to Africa on "Education for Missions and World Friendship"—and many other inviting topics to be taught by capable teachers and leaders.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, Pastor of our Richmond church, believes thoroughly in the use and merit of the Cent-a-Meal Box. For two years now he has used the Cent-a-Meal Box instead of envelopes, or what not, for Special Offerings, and he finds far better results, both financially and spiritually, from the use of the Boxes. Many pastors think the families will not cooperate in the use of the Box, but Pastor McCauley finds that—"Most of the families will cooperate if the Box is taken to the home." It may seem too small and insignificant in the eyes of many, but the lessons this Box has taught in thousands of families and the results achieved, financially and spiritually, highly justify the use of the Box. It certainly is a good device for reminding us, three times a day, to be grateful for our daily bread, and for teaching us the benefits and the blessing of contributing, though in a small way, to the cause and kingdom of our Lord.

Rev. W. J. Andes is succeeded in his pastorate at Cary, and also at Haye's Chapel, by Rev. W. A. Grissom; and in his pastorate at Damascus and New Hope, by Rev. R. T. Grissom. Brother Andes resigned the pastorate of these churches to return to the parental home at Harrisonburg, Va., where his father, Rev. A. W. Andes, continues quite ill and unable to serve any of the churches of his pastorate. The son, W. J., is now serving the churches in the Valley Virginia Conference, which had not had pastoral services since his father's affliction began last winter and he is finding much to do in these churches and in getting ready for the Annual Conference August 5th and 6th at Antioch, near Harrisonburg. "The work here," writes young Brother Andes, "started off well with my first service at Leaksville Sunday, June 9th. Memorial Day Service was held with large audiences in attendance. That night I preached at Newport and a good congregation was there. Certainly the work has not altogether failed and fallen to pieces since my father has been out. I am to have until Conference the nine churches that he served. A stupendous task, more of a task than I am able to carry, so I ask an interest in the prayer of friends. It was with a great deal of sorrow that I had to leave the work in North Carolina, but I am glad that I can be of some little help here in meeting the appointments and doing what I can in such a large field until the annual Conference."

FROM LYNCHBURG, VA.

The Finance Committee of the United Congregational-Christian Church of Lynchburg sponsored a Victory Supper at the Church Thursday night, celebrating the final payment of the building debt on the Church.

The Church was built in 1924 and since that time the membership has grown from 27 to 117 and the Sunday School from about 60 to 166, the average attendance at the Sunday School at the present time is about 100. There have been five pastors to serve the Church since its organization being as follows: Revs. M. F. Allen, H. G. Robertson, G. C. Crutchfield, Roy D. Coulter and the present pastor, Rev. B. H. Watkins, who has served for the last three years. The Sunday School has had three superintendents: W. T. Dunn, C. B. Coffey and J. W. Tolley, who is the present superintendent. The church has two C. E. Societies, Junior, under the leadership of Mrs. W. T. Dunn and the Intermediate with W. T. Dunn as Superintendent. Two missionary societies: The Woman's Missionary and Aid Society with Mrs. S. R. Gay as President and the Young People's Society with Mrs. Marshall Dowdy as President.

Having paid its Building Debt in full, the church hopes to go forward with more power.

A Daily Vacation Bible School is planned for the near future. Miss Lillie Spain of Norfolk, Virginia, an experienced leader in this work, has been secured to head up the School and she is expected to come to Lynchburg for a week's conference and work with the teachers of the school prior to the opening which has been tentatively set for June 22nd.

The Sunday School has stressed the importance of trained teachers and officers and these teachers and officers have been in attendance at the Lynchburg Standard Training School for several years and have secured 42 credits in this school.

The supper Thursday night was served picnic style, the menu including fried chicken, country ham, potato salad, pickles, pies and cakes galore, and was served by Mrs. W. W. Webb, Mrs. J. W. Tolley, Mrs. W. T. Tolley, Sr., Mrs. O. F. Tolley, Mrs. W. T. Dunn, Mrs. Alice R. Dunn.

The social room of the church was filled with members and friends of the church.

After supper there was a musical program including two numbers by the Yeatts Quartet, one number by a male quartet, a duet by Mrs. W. W. Webb and Mrs. O. F. Tolley, a solo by Miss Bettie Tolley, also group singing with Miss Evelyn Tolley at the piano.

THE HINDENBURG VISITS OUR SHORES.

The dramatic success of the giant dirigible, Hindenburg, in flying from Germany to the U. S. in sixty-two hours marks a new advance in aviation and brings friends and enemies into closer touch. The flight of the Zeppelin emphasizes the imperative necessity for strengthening international good will. On its return trip the Hindenburg carried to the German Foreign Minister a letter from the American Committee for German Refugees. This letter, signed by Dr. Cadman, Dr. Leiper, and Mr. Frank Ritchie, of the committee, was a protest against Germany's oppression of her minorities and an appeal for justice. Stressing the achievement of the great ship in the realm of aviation, the letter expressed concern for the "less tangible instruments which eliminate misunderstanding" and serve to draw nations together in friendship. It pointed out that the friendly visit "does not obscure the issues which are estranging our people," and added this appeal: "As a Christian nation, we are unable to understand Germany's present attitude toward her minority groups. It is not our desire to enter into political questions or to dictate to another nation. Our wish is to remove those obstacles which hamper our mutual progress toward permanent friendship and good will in human relationships. As members of the Christian faith, we find it difficult to extend our hand of fellowship to those in Germany who seemingly ignore the common right of all human beings to live and work without prejudice or persecution because of race, color, and creed."

The letter asked that a commission of unprejudiced Americans and Germans be selected to study the problem of the refugees and other matters which foster ill will between the two countries.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

"ADVERSUS JUDAEOS."Some Lessons from the Past.*

JOHN STUART CONNING.

The failure of the Church to win the Jew is one of the most tragic failures of Christian history. The religion that has won race after race to the faith of Christ has found no way to win the race from which it sprung. It is time that the Church took its failure to heart and sought with penitence to discover why with a Gospel of divine power entrusted to us, a special commission to proclaim that Gospel to the Jews, and an assurance of the divine presence in its conveyance, we find ourselves after nineteen centuries with the task scarcely begun. The past has its lessons to teach, and in Canon Lukyn Williams' scholarly volume, "Adversus Judaeos," a bird's-eye view of Christian apologiae until the renaissance, we get glimpses which account for the failure of Christianity to win Jews to the faith of Christ.

Without doubt the most serious defect in the treatises reviewed by Canon Williams is the general attitude of opposition to the Jews which they reveal. The very titles in many cases express an attitude better calculated to create antagonism than to win Jews to the faith of Christ. Here are a few: "Adversus Judaeos," "Contra Judaeos," "Rhythm Against the Jews," "Testimonies from the Old Testament Against the Jews," "Homilies Against the Jews." Though in some of the treatises there is manifest a real concern to bring Jews to a better mind concerning Christ and the Christian faith, there is a woeful lack of love and sympathy. Even yet we are slow to learn that any approach to the Jews to be truly Christian must in spirit be for the Jews and not against them. Modern missionary psychology teaches us that much.

Then we learn from this volume the necessity of understanding and appreciation in effective approach to the Jews. The writers of many of these treatises reveal a pitiable ignorance of the background of the Jew, and where there is knowledge of the Jew's background, there is wanting an understanding of his mind, and very little appreciation of his rich spiritual heritage. It is a fundamental principle of modern missionary effort that in the presentation of the Gospel it must be adapted to the history, traditions, mental and social life of the people to whom it is carried. This is especially necessary in an approach to the Jews. We must seek to integrate our message into the thought-system of the Jews, see things from their point of view, and seek to lead them out of the best in their own faith into the surpassing riches of our inheritance in Christ.

This volume also reminds us that these writers of other days depend upon argument to secure the acceptance by Jews of the Christian faith. An amazing array of arguments have been marshalled to support the claims of Christ or to prove the superiority of Christianity to Judaism. But we have no record that these arguments were successful in winning Jews to the discipleship of Christ. For argument has never established a religion and can never abolish it. This is not to say that there is no room for intellectual discussion between Jew and Christian. It has its place, but a very subordinate place. As Origine recognized, "argument as such plays a very small part in the defense of the Gospel compared with the personal experience of Christ by the believer." When one has been led to find refreshing at the spring, he needs no argument to prove its existence and arguments to convince him that it is a mirage come to nothing. The strongest appeal to the Jew is testimony, not argument. Yet to this day an approach to the Jew is often made in a whirlpool of controversy which leaves him in the end more committed in his own position and farther away from the desired goal.

A careful reading of this most helpful volume also reminds us that the whole question of our relationship to the Jews as Christians revolves about the person of Jesus. It is not arguments to prove this or that concerning Him that is needed. This book is full of such arguments. When we turn to the Gospels and ask how it came about that Jews of that day, who held substantially the same views of Jesus as those of modern Jews, were led to accept Him as Saviour and Lord, we discover the way of Evangelists. Their aim was not primarily to prove the validity of the Christian view of Jesus, but to present Him as they had learned of Him in the full splendor of His divine nature and character. We have a message for Jews, a glorious Gospel. Something far beyond verbal controversy and the polemics of the schools. As Canon Williams declares: "When we Christians learn to present to Jews, in our actions as well as by our words, Jesus in His true character, as the full revelation of the one true God, then, but not before, they will accept Him. We cannot but honor the Jews for their faith in God despite all our ill-treatment of them. It is our part to show Him to them in Jesus of Nazareth, the Messiah, very God of very God, as Incarnate Love."—Exchange.

FADING MAGNOLIAS.

During the noon hour of Monday, in the late session of the General Conference, someone placed a vase of magnolias upon the communion table within the altar of the Conference church. The flowers added a touch of loveliness to the room. One bloom was a large bud with a milk white color and a texture that the finest satin could not approach. The leaves were large and thick with a rich glossy green surpassing jade. The flowers were in a dull pink vase placed on a dust blue cloth which covered the mahogany table. The composition in color and form was perfect. We wished for an artist to make the ensemble permanent. Through the hours we sat listening to the debate and feasting our soul on the beauty of the gorgeous Southern blooms. Only a severe restraint kept us from asking the Conference to give a vote of thanks to the one who placed so fine an offering on the altar of Christ. The beauty of the Lord God was seen in the flowers. Only God could make a magnolia tree. There is an opulence in the magnolias that testify to the matchless benevolence of our Father in Heaven who sends so much loveliness upon the earth.

Tuesday the large bud was in full bloom and by Wednesday it was faded and drooping. We spoke of the passing of the flower to a friend who sees the meaning of all things and he answered: "It is a parable of life." We continued to look at the flower which had changed from white to brown. As we kept our eyes upon it we saw tints in the faded petals that seemed like old ivory. Of late we have been finding new delights in carved ivory and now the cases in a museum which hold the masterpieces of the Byzantine and early Italian periods hold us too long, but no ivory ever had quite the sheen, the softness, the delicacy of the colors of this fading magnolia. Continuing to look we thought we saw a meaning in the drooping petals finer than could be seen in the perfect bloom. This is also a parable of life.

There is the loveliness of freshness and promise in youth, the beauty of breadth and strength in maturity, and also the color of age that adds richness to life. Some of the men of our General Conference, who are no longer young in years, came to our mind and we saw in them tolerance, faith, loyalty, and fearlessness which make their influence a benediction. They add to the depth of color within our Church. They also teach us that the best is yet to be. They lead us in the prayer which has been answered in their lives:

Let me grow lovely, growing old—

So many fine things do;

Laces; and ivory, and gold,

And silks need not be new.

There are graces which come only with age. In Christ faith worketh patience and patience bears fruit in experience which creates a hope that is not only not ashamed but has an expectation and a hope that makes one unafraid. The ivory tinted magnolia, clinging to the unfaded leaves of green, were symbols of the undimmed testimony that we have heard from voices which had lost the resonance of youth, but had found the certainty of experience, the vitality which clung tenaciously to life while fearless in the face of death. There are those who love life and yet are not afraid to die. They give warmth, color and confidence to those whose lives are still verdant.—Editorial in the Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

LIFE IS JUST WHAT YOU MAKE IT.

"Life is just what you make it

Everywhere you go.

Some folks are ever happy,

To others life is woe.

There is no use to worry

When things seem going wrong,

Just meet your troubles squarely

And rout them with a song.

"It would be useless folly

To always have your way,

And life would be less jolly

Without its cloudy day.

So do not sit bemoaning

Life's burdens and life's care,

But let real joyous action

Make light the cross you bear.

"Success means more than dollars.

Strive on and be content,

Give loyal, honest service,

For which most life is meant.

Try not to shun the burdens,

With love meet each new care.

Life means not selfish getting,

But just a chance to share.

"Life is just what you make it—

Let evil longings end.

Follow the steps of Jesus,

Make Him your trusted friend,

Think good, not ill of others,

Be kind each passing day,

And you will soon be living

The brighter, better way."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

GOD SEEKING.

An exchange makes this arresting statement, "The most amazing revelation of the Bible is not that man, the lost sinner, is seeking God, but that God, the loving Saviour is seeking man." In previous editorials we have pointed out that this is the one distinction that clearly separates our Bible from all other sacred books. In all pagan writings, whether of philosophy or religion, we find man seeking God. How different, indeed, is our Holy Book, the Bible. It opens with a scene in which the first man, Adam, because of sin, was trying to hide from God, but God through pity and love came seeking Adam. And from that scene all the way through to the Book of Revelation and in Revelation, we find God revealing himself to man, and through His condescending love, calling to man even as a father to his child. Moses, because of sin in a murderous moment, tried to flee from God and hide himself among pagan peoples for forty years. Then God came seeking him and saying to him: "Take off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the ground whereon thou standeth is holy ground." It was the voice of God, even in a strange land, revealing to Moses that though he had sinned, God was still seeking him and making the ground holy on which he stood. David committed a heinous crime, but we have the scene of the God against Whom he sinned, coming to him through His prophet and calling him to repentance and salvation. The prodigal son sinned against his father and went away into a strange country and there wasted his substance in riotous living. Then he recalled that his father was a man of favors and compassion, and decided to return. The father sees him far off and without waiting actually "ran and fell on his neck, and kissed him." Here is the Father full of compassion, anxious to forgive, longing, to receive and welcome. This is the story that our Book tells from cover to cover, the story of God, Who though Creator of the vast universe, remembers his erring, wayward, sinning sons and daughters, and as a father he pitied them and even seeks them in their sin and their rebellion. And we can only think of His only Son, our Lord and Redeemer, as a seeking Saviour. He came to seek and to save that which was lost. There isn't such a Father as that pictured in any other book written by the hand of man—that of a loving and forgiving God and Saviour seeking to find and to save the wicked and the rebellions. In the sacred books, philosophists and religious traditions of the Hindus, the Buddhists, Mohammedans and the rest, you find only gods of terror and dread, of fierce anger, gods who in very truth are demons of disease and death rather than any God of hope, health and life.

Verily the love of our Lord constraineth us. And our God seeks us—if we would be found of Him.

A PRINCE INDEED.

When Dr. Wilbur Fisk Tillett of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., fell on sleep the morning of June 4th, there passed from this earth no ordinary man. His line indeed had gone out to many parts of the earth and there is no voice nor language that can tell the worth and weight of such a life. Himself a great teacher and preacher, he informed and inspired thousands of others to teach and preach the gospel of love and peace and power. Himself one who lived in the calm, serene haven of a Saviour's love and life, he led others in thousands to seek, to find and live such a life. Himself a great scholar and thinker, he wrote books revealing in lucid manner the nature and character of the God he served and the Christ he loved and adored. If his pen and the labors of his years had given to the world nothing else than his volume "Providence, Prayer and Power," his name and fame would be secure for ages to come; but he wrote other books, revelations of his own life and experience such as, "Paths that Lead to God," a book that sold for $3.00 and went through several editions at that; "Personal Salvation," that sold for $1.75 and went in sales of many thousands; "The Hand of God in American History"; and "Hymns and Hymn Writers of the Church." Here indeed was a man like Enoch of old, who walked with God, and now God hath taken him, after years of marvelous labor in pointing believers and unbelievers to that Name that is above every name, and to Whom every knee shall bow. Dr. Tillett was born in Henderson, North Carolina, August 25, 1854, and was educated at Trinity College in Randolph County, and was a classmate and life long friend of our own late lamented, Dr. W. W. Staley. At the age of 24 he was licensed to preach by the Virginia Methodist Conference and after a short pastorate went as chaplain to Vanderbilt University in 1882. After one year as chaplain to the university, he began his career as teacher in Vanderbilt and in 1886 was made Dean of the School of Religion, to which work he gave his life and through which he revealed himself to the thousands whose lives he touched as a man of God, a scholar of deep learning and unquestioned piety. The years of his life, 1854 to 1936 cover more than four score years of momentous history and epoch-making events, and very few men of those years influenced more deeply and abidingly the thought and life of his time for good and for God than did Dean Wilbur Fisk Tillett. If there are young men, or young women, of our day who doubt or are indifferent to the power of Jesus the Christ to reach and redeem a life, we advise such to read Tillett's "Personal Salvation"; or if there are wavering preachers of mature years who are doubting about the power of a personal God, we would advise them to read Dean Tillett's "Providence, Prayer and Power," for, though studies in the philology, psychology and dynamics of the Christian religion, it is a volume whose every page the casual reader can understand, and whose teaching will lift one closer to God and to that which is sacred and safe and secure.

Here indeed was a prince who prevailed with God, and was mighty among men of his day.

COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM TO MEET.

In last week's SUN it was printed that Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., Chairman, was called a meeting of the Committee on Evangelism for our Southern Convention, which meeting is to be held at Elon College on a day to be named of the week June 29th-July 5th; each member of the Committee to be given definite notice of the exact date and in addition, a notice and invitation will go to each member of the various Conference Committees on Evangelism. This call by Dr. Truitt seems to the SUN's editor, and no doubt to many others, as timely and significant. Our reasons for saying this are three, among others: First, pastors and churches everywhere are realizing that something must be done for spiritual recovery and momentum. Pastors and churches are equally pronounced in their verdict that this recovery can only come by, and through, the agency and activity of Evangelism.

Secondly, pastors and churchmen generally are quite at sea, if not hopelessly divided, in their convictions as to the kind of evangelism necessary to meet present conditions. Ministers and laymen of wide intelligence and experience declare that "mass evangelism" or the annual "revival" is not meeting requirements of the present and is not getting results as in past years. Dr. Truitt in issuing the call to his Committee indicates as much when he says, "We would all like to feel the spiritual glow which soul-winning brings to the church. How shall we get at it? Where shall we begin? I am anxious to have your help." Many other pastors and churchmen who wish to feel "the spiritual glow" is asking the same question that Dr. Truitt is asking, "Where shall we begin?" Twenty-five years ago that question would have been answered in one sentence and quite unanimously, "Hold a ten-days' or two-week revival in your church." That answer will not suffice today.

Thirdly, in the same issue of the SUN that Dr. Truitt's call for his Committee was printed is found this statement by Dr. Herbert D. Rugg giving the "General News" of our churches: "In 1925 there were 45,722 additions on confession to Congregational churches alone; in 1934 for the combined denomination (Congregational-Christian) there were 33,323 additions on confession, or a loss of 27 per cent. Then Dr. Rugg adds this sad and sobering fact: "Number of churches of our fellowship reporting no additions on confession in 1934,—2,893, or 46 per cent of our churches in the zero column. The total additions (1934) were fewer by 20,855 than in the year 1927. Total number in the Sunday schools in 1925, 888,681, and in 1934, 734,146, a loss of 154,535, or 21 per cent decrease in nine years. If this rate of loss should continue, the number in our Sunday schools at the end of two generations would be negligible, and the source of church membership would be dried up." That, good reader is a fact to weep over.

If these are not serious facts that Dr. Truitt's Committee on Evangelism should face, then we do not know serious facts when we find them.

We are told on all sides that church attendance has decreased and that Sabbath day amusements, excursions and picnics are claiming church members by the thousands, even at the hour when their churches are open and children as well as grown ups should be in Sabbath school and at worship.

The Committee on Evangelism may not be able to remedy these ills, but it may be able, by wisdom and divine guidance, to at least tell us how to stop the drop and point us to the way of spiritual recovery. To this end pastors everywhere, as well as the members of the Committee on Evangelism, should and will be interested, not only in the declaration: "We would all like to feel the spiritual glow which soul-winning brings to every church. How shall we get at it? Where shall we begin?"

THE "LADY DRUNKARD."

Calling the term "lady drunkard" something new under the sun, Mrs. William Tilton, Chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Education Against Alcohol, said:

"Today I read in a New York paper that a secretary of Keely Institute says:

"The problem of the 'lady drunkard' is rapidly becoming as serious as that of the male inebriate. The secretary finds an increase of 14 per cent in feminine patients seeking cure in the last ten months. Of these, 90 per cent are married; 77 per cent are housewives. Poor homes! Poor children!"

"The drink-cure institute secretary adds, 'A tragic fact about women's increasing indulgence is that they are far less able than men to withstand the rigors of hard and constant application to the bottle.'

"Another New York paper commenting on this new phenomenon, 'the lady drunkard,' says in the old days at their worst you never had to 'fight your way through school girls to get to the bar.'"

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR THE BIBLE.

By GEORGE WILLIAM BROWN.

A decade or so ago H. G. Wells published a much-discussed article advocating a new Bible. If I remember correctly he offered a list of poems and excerpts from literature for inclusion in it. Mr. Well's justification of his proposal was very earnest but there is no record of the idea ever having been acted upon.

Why did the suggestion not take hold? Is not the Bible a very ancient book, and is not this a very modern age? Can the reactions of a man of the twentieth century be at all similar to those of David or Jeremiah or Paul? It is to be remembered that this ancient Book came into existence when the world was tiny, the Atlantic unexplored, and the Pacific still uncharted. Its outer rim lay only a little beyond the edge of the Mediterranean. An entire hemisphere has been added to the known part of the globe since the Scriptures took their form. Why has there never appeared a substitute for the Bible of that small, long-ago world?

One observation to be made at once is that time and space are factors having no relation to the Scriptures. The facts with which the Bible authoritatively deals were vital two thousand years ago and will be vital two millenniums hence. They were of importance long ago in obscure Judea, and they are significant today whether people live in populous metropolitan areas or on the outer fringe of civilization. The modernization of society is a process to which the Bible is indifferent. Its readers are seldom greatly interested in knowing when the Psalms was written, or in being told the exact habitat of the recipients of the epistle to the Galatians. "Be sure your sin will find you out" cares not for clock or calendar. "Jehovah is my light and my salvation" has no reference to latitude or longitude. There is a quality of universality in the Bible that is simply astonishing. It is therefore hardly to be expected that a substitute is going to be sought seriously when the Bible gives no promise of being outmoded.

A substitute for anything is desired only when the item which one has been using is no longer acceptable or adequate. Among the many uses to which the Bible is put, two near the top of the list are its use in crises and as a book of devotion. For many generations it has equal to the demands of both.

The writer recalls from his college days being roused from sleep by the crash of a collision. My roommate and I hastily dressed and went outside to witness the tragic and bloody after-effects of a serious accident. It was a sobering experience. When we returned to our room I noticed that before getting into bed my roommate hunted up his Bible and read a chapter from it—the only time in a year's living with him that I saw him look inside it. In that solemn hour when we had walked beside death he turned not to great passages of literature, not to the dissertations of any philosopher, not to any learned scientific treatise but to his Bible. Such a use the experience of the years seems to have justified. No satisfactory substitute for the Bible in severe crises seems to have been devised. Ian MacLaren, author of "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," stated once that in his pastoral calling he had never been asked to read from any part of the Scriptures save the fourteenth chapter of John. Neither had he ever been asked to read from Tennyson or Browning or Bunyan or Scott. There are certain Bible passages to which the Christian goes when his heart is heavy, and he cares for no substitute.

The Bible is rich with passages appropriate for reading in critical situations. There are chapters to be read when one confronts an epochal decision, or faces an overwhelming sorrow, or meets with heavy reverses, or stands in baffling perplexity. Across the centuries embraced within the Bible its characters have sounded the tragic depths common to humanity. Some grew hopeless but others bravely came off more than conquerors. The Bible lover reads the defeats and victories of Scripture and is stimulated to take his place with those who have triumphed. He kneels with Jesus in Gethsemane and determines to walk the Via Dolorosa undaunted. He needs no other book. He wants no other book.

Life is not all crises. There are long periods of routine living with every day very much like all its predecessors. During these stretches the Christian life must be cultivated. There must be enrichment of spirit and invigoration of character.

As a book of spiritual nurture developing the devotional life the Bible has an inexhaustive adequacy. There are mornings when reading the 121st Psalm sets the character of a day as nothing else can. There are evenings when the final paragraphs of the eighth chapter of Romans are the precise tonic the spirit craves. There are moments when contemplative brooding on the stirring imperatives of the Commandments or quiet reflection on the teachings of our Lord gives sinewy resistance against alluring temptations. Many Christians rejoice in the possession of a guide to the Bible's use advising that in discouragement a certain chapter be read, in periods of uncertainty turn to such and such a passage, and so on. Thus is imparted to Christian character that fine quality which makes the personality of the Christian attractive. The popular New York City preacher who told of examining the Bible of a deceased friend and finding in its markings a veritable spiritual autobiography can be duplicated many times. "He who ceases to be better ceases to be good" is said to have been written on the fly-leaf of Cromwell's Bible. The young Christian reads that "Jesus advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man," and tries to do likewise. The mature follower of our Lord noting how Saul of Tarsus became Saint Paul becomes ambitious for a saintly life. The elderly read of the Father's house and strive to qualify for a worthy welcome.

Many good Christians today are becoming better Christians because of a systematic use of the Bible. No other volume or anthology of good literature serves the same purpose. And interestingly enough, no other book is being sought!

If we wish to see what emphasis on love toward God means, without attempt to love man, or without attempt to show love to God through deliberate cultivation of good-will toward men, we have only to look at the practical outcome of many so-called perfectionist movements in the career of the church; movements whose adherents have, through neglect of the human values, become pests and nuisances by their exaltation of piffling trifles as communications from God and by their indifference to the massive needs of mankind.—Bishop McConnell.

Thou art, O God, the life and light!
Of all this wondrous world we see;
Its glow by day, its smile by night
Are but reflections caught from Thee.
Wh'er we turn Thy glories shines,
And all things fair and bright are Thine.
—Thomas Moore.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Human life has many problems. Some are real, others imaginary; some are created, others discovered. Youth finds them, middle life battles with them, old age ponders over them. There is no escape from them, and no solution can be found for many of them. Life becomes a burden with them, and it would be intolerable without them.

The thousands of young people who have returned from school are facing new problems. For many young people will turn from the school room this summer to seek their field of service in a different world. One of the first problems is a place. It is not easy to find one's place in a busy world. Economists are telling youth, today, that the machine is displacing people in workshop, factory and office. Many writers and public speakers are constantly blaming the present economic distress upon the multiplicity of machines. If this explanation is true, the outlook is distressing and discouraging. New machines are being invented and manufactured every year. If these new machines are a menace to the economic security and progress of our day; if they are responsible for the increasing bread-lines and demands for relief, why not tax machines of every kind to carry the burden of state and national government? Incidentally, this writer does not agree with the opinion of many others—that the machine age endangers our economic stability.

However, that does not make it easy for youth to find a place in life. That is difficult in every land and in every sphere of life. It should not be otherwise. Life is worthy of a great challenge, and it is worth while to go in earnest quest of a place of real living and adventurous service. There is a place for every human being. Youth is the time when that place should be sought and found.

The second problem is, a possession. Youth must find a place. And in that place there is a potential possession. Parents desire to amass wealth for their children. They dream of luxury and ease for their sons and daughters. Many sons and daughters expect their parents to supply them with ready-made homes and abundant provision for all the material needs of life. Too often such ease is a calamity and a misfortune. Youth should face the problem of finding a way of providing the essential possessions for themselves. Life is inevitably linked with a material world. Food and shelter must be found for a developing civilization. Youth should seek to be self-sustaining. There is a challenge in that objective. The way is not clear, and the task is not easy; but the reward is to the faithful.

The third problem is a person. Youth should seek the right place. Talents and opportunities should be improved by wise use for worthy ends. But in the final analysis personality is the most effectual force in human history. Every normal young person will seek the fellowship of another person. That other person may be of the opposite sex. Some person will come into the life of every one of the thousands of young people as they face the larger expression of their faith and dreams. Everything will be influenced by this other person. Therein lies one of the greatest problems of youth. "To whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." What is a young man worth? What is a young woman worth? That question is usually asked when there is an approach to the friendship of young people. Why not make the question more searching and ask: "What has this young person stored within personality and character?" Does he have words of eternal life? Does she have words of spiritual death? No youth should be satisfied until the friendship and fellowship of Jesus Christ has been discovered as a personal ideal. Find a great spiritual personality and live under this holy and inspiring influence.

FREE TO PRAY.

Last week a letter was addressed to the churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches through our pastors to be read to the several congregations assembled last Sunday for worship. I trust that these letters were read and that this message was received in earnestness and in sincerity. Our help is in God. God will not abandon us in our needs. He may condemn us in our doubts and chastize us for our lack of liberality. Many times we look for help when help lies within our own purses. We are sincere in our contentions that we need what we have for ourselves and for our own after us.

In the scriptures we are told of a man whose fields brought forth bountifully, who built for himself new and larger granaries wherein he stored the fruits of his fields. Then he declared, speaking to himself, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years, take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry." But God said unto him, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee, then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?" So is he that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God. Such statements need no interpretation, they are perfectly plain to all who read.

Some weeks ago in addressing a Sunday School in interest of the college, I said, "If you cannot give, you can pray. Every one can pray." As I think of that statement I wonder if it is true. In fact, I think it isn't true. Outwardly speaking there are no hindrances. We are all free to pray but within there may be realities that chain our spirits, that close our mouths so that we cannot pray. The high road of confession is open to every one but the higher road of petition is closed to many of us. Haven't you knelt at your place of prayer and found yourself confessing before you could begin to pray? Confession is the means by which we clear the way for our askings.

No one can pray effectively for the growth and progress of his own church until he has used wisely and judiciously all that God has given him in the interest of his church. No one can pray in the real sense of prayer for the salvation of the world until he has done his best to save the world. No one can pray as God would have him pray for the college to be free of its debts until he has done his best to pay those debts. He is not free to pray God to put it into the hearts of others to give to the college until he has given to the extent of his own ability. When he has brought his gifts, gifts that register the maximum of his ability in the light of Christian revelation, then he may remain at the altar to pray that others like himself may give until the needs of the college are met. He may pray with the assurance that God will not only hear but that he will answer.

Are you free to pray? If so refresh your mind. There was a certain judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man. And there was a widow in that city, and she came unto him saying, "Avenge me of mine adversary." And he would not for a while, but afterwards he said within himself, "Although I fear not God nor regard man, yet because this widow troubleth me I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me." And the Lord said, "Hear what the unjust judge saith. And shall not God avenge his own elect which cry day and night unto Him?"

Are you free to pray? Are there no hindrances within? Is your spirit free? Can you speak the language of faith? Is the way from your heart to God's altar clear? Do you have burdens to bear, burdens unequal to your strength? If so, you will do well to heed the counsel of the psalmist when he said, "Cast thy burdens upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee." The poet has enlarged upon this entreaty:

Child of My Love, lean hard,
And let Me feel the pressure of thy care,
I know thy burden, child. I shaped it;
Poised it in Mine own hand; made no proportion
In its weight to thine unaided strength.
For even as I laid it on, I said,
"I shall be near, and while she leans on Me,
This burden shall be Mine, not hers:
So shall I keep My child within the circling arms
Of My own love." Here lay it down, nor fear
To impose it on a shoulder which upholds
The government of worlds. Yet closer come:
Thou art now near enough. I would embrace thy care
So I might feel My child reposing on My breast.
Thou lovest Me? I knew it. Doubt not then:
But, loving Me, lean Hard.

AN APPEAL TO MINISTERS.

The Board of Christian Education and the Extension Societies of Congregational and Christian Churches are doing their best to help you who are ministers in local churches to train your leaders. The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training is our greatest effort along this line. We want a chance at you, your superintendents, teachers, young people and all leaders. If you will get them to Elon we promise you our best efforts to send them back enthused and inspired with some new idea concerning the work which you are undertaking to do. Getting them there is your job. Please do your best.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond will lead a discussion group each day for ministers only. If you have problems, please come and discuss with your brethren methods of solving them. Topics which he has announced include:

"The Pastoral Spirit"; "Leading the Organization of the Church"; "Public Worship"; "The Preaching Ministry"; "Presenting the Social Gospel."

A Story for the Children

A PRESENT FROM GRANDFATHER.

A big apple tree grew in Jimmy's yard. It was many years older than Jimmy's father. In fact, it had been planted by Jimmy's grandfather. It was a large tree, almost three feet through, and its many branches were loaded with apples. Jimmy had seen the tree in the spring with its pretty pink-and-white blossoms that filled the air with sweet fragrance. He had watched the little green apples that began to grow soon after the petals fell to the ground. In a few weeks he noticed that they were larger than marbles.

Jimmy was anxious for the apples to grow, for he remembered how they had tasted the summer before, and he wanted the pleasure of eating them again.

The hot July sun had begun to pour down on the lawn before the apples began to turn the yellow color which show that they had the proper flavor. Jimmy sampled them as they fell to the ground and he found that they suited his taste.

One afternoon a thunderstorm came up out of the west. The clouds grew black and the wind made the apple limbs sway back and forth. The apples began to fall to the ground. After the storm had cleared, the sun came out again. Jimmy hurried out of doors and there on the lawn underneath the big tree were dozens and dozens of apples. Jimmy went to the garage and got his wagon and began picking up the apples and loading them into it.

When he had picked up all the apples, he pulled his wagon around to the kitchen door and called to his mother, "Mother, I have a present for you!"

Mother came to the door and looked at the heap of apples in the wagon. "That certainly is a nice present," she said. Then she looked thoughtfully at Jimmy and asked, "Did you ever stop to think who really sent them to us?"

Jimmy looked at the apples a long time. Then the truth dawned on him. "I guess grandfather sent them," he said. "He planted the tree, didn't he?"

"You're right," replied his mother.

Jimmy's grandfather had not been living for a great number of years, and yet here was a wagon-load of apples from a tree that he had planted long before Jimmy was born.

"We receive a great many presents like this from our grandfathers, if we only stop to think about it," continued Jimmy's mother. Then, getting a basket from the back porch, she said, "If you'll fill this basket, I think I will make some pies."

Jimmy hastily filled up the basket. "Mother," he said, "I think it would be nice for us to plant an apple tree, so that we may give presents after we are gone."—Don Young in Zion's Herald.

The General Council is this week in biennial session at Holyoke College, So. Hadley, Mass., at which many of our leaders and officials are gathered in earnest and sincere desire, and devout purpose, to find a way, through common counsel, to lead the church to a better and happier day. God grant them speed and wisdom.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR BIBLE?

By REV. IRA CHARLES SWANMAN.

St. Luke.

The third gospel, by St. Luke, a Gentile, portrays Christ as the Saviour of ALL—Jew, Samaritan, everybody—and breathes the spirit of the New Covenant prophesied by Jeremiah (31:31-34). The book is characterized not only by its Gentile-ness but by its gentleness especially toward so-called "outcasts."

Questions.

- 1. In whose city was Christ born? (2:11.)
2. Where was Nazareth located? (2:39.)
3. Christ's genealogy begins with whom? (3:38.)
4. How many apostles were named Judas? (6:16.)
5. Was Mary Magdalene a "sinner"? (Careful! 8:2.)
6. Is the Samaritan called "good"? (10:36, 37.)
7. Who climbed a sycamore tree? (19:1-4.)
8. How many times did Peter deny Christ? (22:54-62.)
9. Who carried our Lord's cross? (23:26.)
10. In whose sepulchre was Christ's body laid? (23:50-53.)

Supply the Missing Word.

- 1. My soul doth ..... the Lord. (1:46.)
2. Blessed be the Lord of ..... (1:68.)
3. Mine eyes have seen thy ..... (2:30.)
4. Physician, ..... thyself. (4:23.)
5. Woe unto you when ..... men shall speak well of you. (6:26.)
6. Of the ..... of the heart his mouth speaketh. (6:45.)
7. No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the ..... (9:62.)
8. Martha was ..... about much serving. (10:40.)
9. Bring hither the ..... calf. (15:23.)

- 10. Ye cannot serve God and ..... (16:13.)
11. Remember ..... wife. (17:32.)
12. Not my ....., but Thine be done. (22:42.)
13. Then entered ..... into Judas. (22:3.)
14. Today shalt thou be with Me in ..... (23:43.)
15. Did not our ..... burn within us? (24:32.)

Thought Question.

Christ's death was part of God's plan of salvation, and since Judas and Pilate helped carry it out, why shouldn't they be given praise instead? —In Southern Churchman.

FOR ME.

"Close by my latticed window
A bluebird sweetly sings,
Its song in some small measure
Reveals the joy earth brings.
Around me life is teeming,
Fast grows the budding tree,
And myriad things give promise
Of harvest time to be.

"The sun in glowing splendor
Gives light and warmth for all.
The stars like jewels sparkle
In God's great wonder hall.
The stream, the hill, the valley,
The boundless, restless sea
Declare the Maker's Glory,
Tell of His gifts to me.

"And oh! such priceless treasures
The world so freely gives—
Lakes, mountains, fields and friendships,
To him who truly lives.
Tall trees, sweet fruits, fair flowers
Did never chance to be,
God in His matchless goodness
Just put them here for me."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

CANADIAN AND AMERICAN MISSIONARIES IN MANCHURIA.

By CHAS. A. LEONARD, SR.

The most cordial relationships have existed between representatives of the Canadian (British Columbia) Baptist mission and representatives of the American Southern Baptist mission ever since the coming of the Canadians, Rev. and Mrs. L. G. Baker and Miss Esther Peacock, to Harbin two years ago. Their moving to Manchuria was partly due to reports they had seen of the needs and opportunities in this new, coming part of the world. During the absence of the writer and his wife to the United States for a year's furlough during parts of last year and year before, Mr. and Mrs. Baker kindly superintended our work. Our Mission Board furnished them a home. The work went forward in a fine way.

Since our return Mr. and Mrs. Baker and Miss Peacock have opened a preaching hall here in Harbin using a graduate of our Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Shantung, and they make their headquarters here in Harbin. But their most fruitful and promising work is at Mutankiang, a new town far out east of Harbin, and at two other new centers of that district.

A new railway has been built by Japan from Kcrea and important cities in Manchuria up to the Siberian border. Mutankiang has grown up at the point where this line crosses the North Manchuria (formerly the Chinese Eastern) Railway. The Japanese plan to make the town equal in size and importance to Harbin. The placing of large military forces in that region and the development of industrial establishments, as well as the settling of many Koreans and Japanese along with the coming of more Chinese, gives the whole area an air of progress, and assures rapid growth. We are glad to see our Canadian Baptist fellow-missionaries come in on the ground floor at this important center, and have sought to give them every assistance possible.

No one of our North Manchuria outstations has extended its influence to other places so widely as the Christian Church. As Christians of that town have been scattered abroad, largely due to political disturbances, they have preached the gospel, as did the early Christians when driven by persecution from Jerusalem. Two members are now witnessing regularly as evangelists at two places, four young people are preparing for the ministry; and the leading Christians of the Mutankiang Church are men and women who have moved there from Chuhehsien.

This Mutankiang work lies half-way between the Harbin region and a large section on further east where we have work. It was a pleasure on this month's trip to nine other centers, where we have work, to stop off going and coming, and speak to the Mutankiang group also to witness their earnestness and hopefulness. The house was full of interested baptized believers and enquirers. They had just celebrated Christmas and the foreign New Year, and were entering into the Chinese New Year holidays when special evangelistic meetings are begun at all places where there is work, extending on into the spring and summer. An old Chinese Lantern Festival celebration was on outside the gospel hall, crackers being fired, flutes and horns blown; but we had a good, appreciative audience.

These people were much interested to hear of progress in the work at other places where we have work and assured us of their determination also to assume greater financial support and to erect, or purchase, soon, a building to be used for worship and evangelism.

As that region grows commercially and industrially, may there be a corresponding growth in the Kingdom of God among those needy people, who have left their old homes and have become pioneers in a new land. There was considerable difficulty in obtaining permission from the authorities to open work there and, for some unknown reason, it required a long time to get permission from the Japanese police in Harbin for beginning Canadian Baptist work here; but all goes well now. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are at this time on a visit to their outstation work, where, they report, good numbers are hearing the gospel and not a few being saved. There is, too, real response to the message at the new place opened here in Harbin.

Harbin, Manchuria.

LARGE TREES FROM LITTLE ACORNS.

It is quite likely that many pastors, and even more families, have not seriously considered the merit of the Cent-a-Meal Box because of its name. There be yet those in the world who decry the "poor penny" and deem it of such little worth as not to be esteemed and honored religiously or socially. In one particular at least such persons reason without their host. In many families and churches this device, the Cent-a-Meal Box, with such insignificant name, has wrought marvels not to say miracles. It is simply wonderful what a Cent-a-Meal Box placed on the dining table of a family can do. A pastor of a certain church in another state tells, for instance, how his church last year met its full apportionment and was happy indeed to be again giving on the old scale; yet that church would have been $300 in the red except for this humble, insignificant Cent-a-Meal Box. So many of us forget that constant giving, even little, amounts to very much, both in the volume given and in the lives of those who give constantly. We little reckon, many of us, that this Cent-a-Meal Box has saved hundreds of churches from debt, and has given other hundreds of churches happiness and joy in going beyond their goal. In a soliloquy of the Box this is given:

"It is not just work, work for me all the time. I go with my friends on their vacations and bring back more money than I had to start with.

"I am a member of Sunday School classes everywhere and the members of some take me home by turns to spend a week at the family table, so I board around, as school teachers used to do. In Young People's groups I raise money to carry missionary projects. I am in women's organizations the country over. The women have always been givers and they give more than ever since I came.

"There are churches where I bring in all the money that goes for benevolences and I find money in churches that before gave nothing. One of these said that their people could give nothing. The State Superintendent answered, "Try the Cent-a-Meal boxes and see." Two weeks ago they opened the boxes and found over fifty dollars, given in the first half year. Try me, if you never have."

The Commission on Missions relates this telling event that occurred when a pastor was spending the night in a home where the Cent-a-Meal Box was in use. On this night the youngest in the family said:

"Daddy, it is my turn to put the pennies in the box." The father took some pennies and a nickel from his pocket and the little girl, looking at her mother said, "Mother, are you thankful?" "Yes, dear," and a penny dropped into the box. "Daddy, are you thankful?" "Yes, very thankful." In went another penny and the child said, "I thankful too," and dropped in the nickel.

"When they were alone after dinner, the father said, "Dr. Lloyd, you did a wonderful thing for us when you left that little box. My wife and I are Christians, that is, we are not heathen, but we never thought of missions. That little box has made us ashamed of our lack of gratitude, when we think of what we have compared to what other folks have. It has taught us not only to be more thankful, but I hope to be a little more thoughtful of other people. When Betty asked what the box was for, and who missionaries are, I could not tell her. Her mother had to ask the minister. Now we are getting quite a lot of information about missionaries, and we are really sold on it. I suppose that the money in that box is the first that we have ever consciously given to missions."

Surely a device that can achieve such results even though it bears an humble name, is worthy of a place in every Christian home, and is certainly worth being told about and promoted by every pastor in a Christian pulpit.

THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE RURAL CHURCH—A NATIONAL PLAN.

By MALCOLM DANA, D. D.

A satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church must secure pressure from the top downward; in the interests of fewer and better churches.

The slogan "Fewer and Better Churches," is virtually handed us by an aggressively unanimous opinion of the five groups, and our one hundred letters. There is not a single exception! Opinion seems to be a unit, as far as expressed, that when the national "overhead" is really willing to lose life in order to find it; and when it exercises pressure upon those having to do with the rural churches, and rewards instead of penalizes them for a militant interest in "fewer and better churches"; the thing will be done. We of the overhead come in for heavy indictment for indifference, hostility, and even for hindering! A secretary of a Council of Churches, in a state which has gone first and farthest, in the matter of fewer and better churches; writes as follows. "Permit me to say that there is only one thing that holds it up, and that is denominational and official selfishness. If the denominational officials of the churches would just take this matter seriously, the overchurched problem would be solved in not to exceed ten years, and probably five. Youth has a word to say in this matter! Will the older people be willing to see the federation of churches come about as I believe young people will be? I feel that the federation of churches is probably something ministers, maybe, and adults, have known about for some time, and yet have done nothing about it, and that it is something that youth is more interested in and eager to see accomplished." An author of probably the best book on town and country, H. Paul Dougless, makes this contribution: "Let me say that the churches, in my judgment, should go sympathetically over the whole country and undo the evils of superfluous churches, as loyally, conscientiously, and with the use of a definite 'missionary' appeal, as they had in founding these churches in the first place: adjusting churches and populations in the non-sectarian spirit, and hence solving our financial problems. This would be a pre-requisite to a properly trained ministry, adequate programs; and would secure emancipation from an intolerable ecclesiastical situation." The substance of words uttered by Prof. Arthur Holt, endorse this prescription of spirit and method. "I see no way out, except for those of us who have been leaders of the churches to go to over-churched communities, and make this honest confession: we acknowledge that we led you into this mess, and now we would like to lead you out."

When are we going to take this matter seriously enough to secure unanimous action? Twenty-six denominations, represented in the Home Missions Council, have repeatedly re-affirmed certain "Comity Principles," which should long ago have cured the evils of over-churching, and its twin sin of over-looking. Can it be that our agreements, also, are taken as a mere "scrap of paper"? We have enthused over a "Five Year Plan of Survey and Re-adjustment"; and still the cry about "too many churches" ascends to high heaven! And our sins are not those of ignorance, but those of persistence, in sinning in the face of known facts. For the Inter-church World Movement, settled for all time the validity of the "survey" method; and its successors have supplied us with every kind of field knowledge. It ought to get on our conscience! For sixteen years, the speaker, and many in the seats before him, has been touring rural America; and been obliged to see countless communities where religion is veritably "a binding of heavy burdens," rather than joyful privilege; because of too many churches. And there has ever come to his mind, the war-time picture of the Christ, shanding in a shell-torn field, full of crosses, in stricken France. Sadly he looks, and asks, "Why have ye done this thing?" If the Master were to come today, and behold communities where his church is disunited, competitive, and often un-Christian, would he not ask, "Why are ye still doing this thing?"

A satisfactory national plan for improving rural churches, will obtain fewer churches. It will do that as a means to an end, of better churches. And such doing, must consider relocation and rebuilding of these country churches. One letter affirms, that "no denomination can say that the present location of its churches is the result of careful study of field needs. In many sections, they were located far in advance of changes in number and character of population, and in facilities for communication; which have completely altered the situation. In some sections, locations anticipated population growths and social developments which never came." He also adds: "A representative of one of the larger northern denominations is reported to have said that should all churches of his denomination be removed simultaneously, none of them would again be located where they now are." And rebuilding and re-equipping of rural churches, is as much needed as relocating them. Granted today, that we had a competent ministry; in this respect, rural ministers would still be obliged to make bricks without straw, and to undergo an impossible comparison. Too little thought is given to this last item. We are told that eventually, ten per cent are going to feed the ninety per cent in America. What does that mean? It means that ten per cent farmer is going to be the most skilled farmer the world has ever seen; employing every up-to-date machine upon his acres. Will that ten per cent farmer follow the lead of a country minister less prepared in his craft than the farmer is in his; or less industrious, less intelligent, and less effective? He will not; and this may account for the fact that probably less than one out of five farmers are going to church. Will that ten per cent farmer enter a church which is altogether unsightly, ill-equipped, and totally unsuited to the modern religious needs of the community? He will not! And what about country youth? It is attending Union High and "Consolidated" schools; which are conveniently located, beautiful outside and in, equipped up-to-the-minute; and the pride of all in the community. Is youth going to be attracted to, or held by, an uneducated minister, holding forth in an unkept and poorly equipped building;—a church for which he must apologize? He is not! One of our young correspondents says: "Youth wants a church to which he is not ashamed to bring its cultured and educated friends. Youth wants to be proud of the church, and not apologetic."

A campaign for fewer and better churches is imperative. True, churches cannot be swapped as easily as horses; nor should it be done in a thoughtless manner. Nevertheless it can be done, when pressure is exerted from the top downward, and a premium put on so doing! Attention is called to an unemployment situation in the ministry: and an over-supply of ministers; which demands keeping open churches that would otherwise be closed. This situation is due to the inexcusable lack of provision for retiring elderly ministers, and caring for the unfortunate. Suggestion is made, of a retroactive annuity or ministerial relief, which would allow ministers to qualify who were unable to do so under comparatively recent "annuity plans." Thus elderly ministers would not be hurt, in the process of getting younger men who are needed in an age of fewer and better churches. Seminaries, and seminary students, are heavily criticized for "using" churches, as "meal tickets." Are church officials less guilty of "using" them; to make jobs for super-annuates, unfortunates, or inefficient ministers?

A satisfactory plan for improvement of the rural church must have a correct theory and practice of "parish"; a sociologically sound area, large enough to provide a sufficient income to support the right kind of minister, church and program.

Our one hundred letters are unanimous at this point! A dozen years ago, Hermann N. Morse, said that "the Protestant church had no theory of parish based upon a study of areas to which the church ought to minister. Parish was not a geographical concept; but the sum of the church's adherents or supporters. Thought was in terms of constituencies and not of population." The situation continues about the same. But our correspondents re-iterate the implied demand made by Mr. Morse, with an additional requirement, that the parish be "sociologically sound." Let us quote from a few of the letters! "There is need to organize into larger units. Persistence in small parishes shows lack of courage, or lack of information as to the present situation." There should be "reparishing to suit changed conditions, and to eliminate competition; including cooperative supervision of town and country fields." "A town-country community should be the basis; a larger parish arrangement." "A plan for consolidation of churches should prevail; giving each church a proper economic foundation. The rural church is resting upon an unstable economic foundation; therefore the lack of response. It is not a matter of "so many miles to the next church," or of 'numbers'; but of an area—giving a proper income to support a church." "There is need for a church which will serve the vicinity, rather than a denomination." "Very small, incompetent, underfinanced, denominational churches, should be united. Young people are not interested in an organization struggling for existence. They go to church because interested, or not. 'Competition' causes disgust."

A satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church must use "mission aid" in the interests of fewer and better churches; thus making possible the right kind of a ministry, equipment, and program.

Our letters do not make much reference to "mission aid" as such; but the inference is, that such monies keep competitive churches alive. Frequent mention is made concerning scandalously underpaid ministers; and mission aid seems to be thought of, as connected with ministerial salaries.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

VALLEY VIRGINIA CENTRAL S. S. & C. E. CONVENTION.

The Valley Virginia Central Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention held a one-day session this year at Bethel Church near Elkton and voted to hold a one-day session next year at Mt. Olivet (Green) which is near March, Va.

Most of the churches were represented by their pastor, superintendent, teachers or delegates. Reports from department secretaries indicated interesting work which is being done. One fine feature of this Convention is the recognition work done on the basis of certain standards. These standards are:

School open all year, an active cradle roll, Children's Day observance, monthly offering to Orphanage, monthly offering to Missions, a workers' council held at least quarterly, annual report presented to Convention, Annual dues paid to Convention, a working Home Department, school represented at Convention, quarterly offering to Elon College, an average attendance of 60 per cent on enrollment.

Any school that makes 75 per cent is given a certificate of recognition. Winchester had a rating of 100 per cent, and other churches recognized included Bethlehem, Antioch, Mt. Olivet (G), New Hope, Timber Ridge and Linville.

The Convention had an unusually fine address on "The Challenge of the Church" by Rev. C. W. Caulkins, Chaplain of the C. C. C. camps in that section. Rev. Mr. Caulkins is preaching for Winchester Church and is doing an excellent job of it. They report an increase in attendance at the church services even though they have no pastoral service at all.

Officers for the new year are as follows: President, R. A. Larrick; Vice-President, Roy H. Andes; Secretary, R. O. Rothgeb; Treasurer, R. Roy Hosafloek; Secretary Organized Classes, Alfred A. Dofflemvre; Home Department, Miss Amy Lou Louderback; Teacher Training, Mrs. R. C. Myers; Missions, Thelma Morris; Christian Endeavor, Minnie Dofflemvre; Annual Address, Alfred Dofflemvre, Alternate, Norman Morris.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA S. S. & C. E. CONVENTION.

The North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention held a fine session at Ingram Church on Thursday and Friday, June 4th and 5th. About 125 delegates attended. Reports were made by the various secretaries of work being done. Mr. W. T. Dunn of Lynchburg, the Vice-President, had his first experience in presiding over any such body, but did his job well. Mr. George Wilson, the Southern Secretary for Christian Endeavor, added much by his presence, addresses, and counsel. The Convention received a little more money this year than last, but not all of the churches reported. It is hoped that those who have not reported will do so. Officers for the new year were elected as follows:

President, Rev. W. M. Jay; Vice Presidents, W. T. Dunn and H. E. Crutchfield; Recording Secretary, Evelyn Stewart; Assistant Recording Secretary, Florence Smith; Corresponding Secretary, Margaret Earp; Treasurer, Mrs. Floyd H. Dunn; Secretary of Children's Division, Mrs. Robert Simpson; Young People, Miss Avis Dunn; Adult, Rev. C. E. Newman; Administrative, W. B. Truitt; Missions, Mrs. J. H. Dodd; Orphanage, Mrs. L. E. Carlton; College, Prof. A. L. Hook; Christian Endeavor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield; Junior Christian Endeavor, Dorothy Truitt.

HAVE YOU REGISTERED?

The registrar, Mrs. W. B. Williams, 1253 24th Street, Newport News, Virginia, said that several had sent in their registration last week for the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training which is to open on June 29th. Those who sent in their names by June 15th, are entitled to a $.50 reduction on the registration and board fees. Other will pay $9.00 which is itself a very small cost for what will be received.

Rev. William C. Bell, our first agricultural missionary, who has spent many years in Africa, will be present to tell us concerning Africa. Both women's societies and young people will study books on Africa the coming year. This is a golden opportunity for leaders of local missionary societies to get the needed training so they can direct the study in the local church, and it is sincerely hoped that a great number will take advantage of this opportunity.

NORTH AMERICAN YOUTH CONFERENCE.

The North American Youth Conference will meet at Lakeside, Ohio, beginning on Tuesday of next week and closing on the following Sunday. The Southeast Youth Fellowship of Congregational and Christian Churches will be represented by Rev. Lanson Granger of Virginia, Miss Dorothy Truitt of North Carolina, Mr. Chandler Adams of Tennessee, and Miss Emily Carleton and Mr. Earle Ward of Florida. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill of Florida will be one of the adult counselors, and the editor of this page is supposed to be there also.

Several youth groups have sent in money to help pay the way of these southeast delegates who could not finance it for themselves. Thank you very kindly for the contributions. The total was not quite sufficient for the expense of the trip, but the Board of Christian Education will make up the balance, for the young people must go to get the inspiration and help which this interdenominational conference can give to them to bring to us who are not able to attend.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND THEIR READING.

Hymn: "Wonderful Words of Life."

Prayer—Thanking God for the gift of the greatest Book of all ages.

Announcement of topic—Scripture lesson.

Points for Leader's Talk.

Isaac Barrow said, "He who loveth a book will never want a faithful friend, a wholesome counsellor, a cheerful companion, or an effectual comforter." Sometimes we hear a person say that they do not like to read. Yet, there are a large number of people who could stay in a deserted place for months, and give them plenty of good books and they would never get lonesome. These people have made friends and companions of their books. The person who doesn't avail himself of the privilege of reading good books deprives himself of much enjoyment, and loses the inspiration and influence of the great writers of the ages.

It was Goethe who said: "Never let a day pass without looking at some perfect work of art, hearing some great piece of music and reading, in part, some great book." Many people think they do not have time to read every day. Have you stopped to consider how much time you waste in the course of a day? There was a business man who had an unlimited knowledge of good books. He said he kept a book open on his desk all the time, and did a great deal of his reading while waiting for telephone connections. One can receive a liberal education from the reading of books that are usually found in the average home. Through the pages of a book we can travel to the far corners of the earth and feast on the wonders to be seen. The person who has developed the art of reading is indeed fortunate.

Hymn: "Open My Eyes, That I May See."

Talk: "What and How to Read." (Have some person give this who has a wide knowledge of books, and reads for pleasure and study.)

For Discussion—

1. What types of literature are young people reading today?
2. What books have you recently read that appealed to you most? Why?
3. Do the books we read reveal our character?
4. Have you ever been influenced by the reading of some book?
5. Do you think any person is too busy to spend at least fifteen minutes a day reading the Bible?
6. What method do you use in your study of the Bible?

Period of Directed Prayer—(Pianist play softly: "Break Thou the Bread of Life.")

1. Thank God for those writers who have made it possible for us to read good literature.

2. Ask God to help us in our study of the Bible, that His truth may be revealed unto us.

(Sing very softly the last verse "Break Thou the Bread of Life.")

Special Music: "Thy Word Have I Hid in My Heart."

Mizpah Benediction.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS EXALTED.

LESSON XII—JUNE 21, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Wherefore also God highly exalted him, and gave unto him the name which is above every name."—Philippians 2:9.

LESSON: Luke 24:36-53. Printed Text: Luke 24:36-53.

In the beginning of his second great literary work, the Acts of the Apostles, Luke writes as follows: "To whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." As a careful historian, Luke bore record that the Resurrection was an indisputable fact, one of the best attested facts in history. Today's lesson tells of one of the ten recorded appearances of Jesus after he rose from the dead.

Jesus Appears to His Disciples.

The disciples were in a room, the doors were closed, but Jesus suddenly stood in their midst. He greeted them with the ancient salutation, "Peace be unto you." The disciples were terrified. They thought they saw a spirit or a ghost. Jesus sought to allay their fears, and to answer their questions. He sought also to establish unmistakably his identity by showing them his hands and his feet which evidently bore the marks of the cruel nails that had fastened him to the Cross. He called attention to the fact that a spirit does not have flesh and bones—He did not say flesh and blood.

The disciples thought it was too good to be true—they disbelieved for joy. Jesus went a step farther. In order to convince them of the reality of His presence and of His identity, he took a piece of broiled fish, and ate it before them.

We are in the presence of mystery here. How could a man come through a door being shut, and yet take food and eat it? The fact seems to be that the glorified body of Jesus was a changed body, but at the same time a recognizable body. It was not subject to the limitations of a body of flesh. It did not violate natural laws; it was raised above natural law. John says that we shall be like Him for we shall see Him as He is. Our fleshly bodies must be clothed upon with immortality.

Jesus Opens the Minds of the Disciple.

"Then opened he their mind, that they might understand the scriptures." He made clear to them that the things which had been written concerning Him in "the law of Moses, the prophets, and the psalms or writings," had to be fulfilled, that the Christ must suffer, and rise again from the dead the third day. It is a significant statement. "No other person has ever lived on this earth who could truthfully say that he was the fulfilment of predictions of a great body of writings circulated hundreds of years before He was born." We need Jesus to open our minds that we might understand the Scriptures. Mere intellect will not give us an understanding of them. The Spirit of Truth alone will guide us into the truth.

Jesus Commissions His Disciples.

"And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name unto all the nations, beginning at Jerusalem." Repentance toward God and faith in Jesus Christ—this is the starting point. Unless and until a man repents, there can be no remission of sins, there can be no forgiveness. But if a man repents, God is faithful and just to forgive him his sins and to cleanse him from all unrighteousness. That is the good news, or the gospel, that God is a gracious and generous loving Father who will forgive if we repent, that sins will be remitted, that peace will be shed abroad in our hearts.

The missionary enterprise is central in this commission. They were to begin at Jerusalem, they were to start at the place they were. But they were to preach in his name "unto all the nations." The gospel is for the whole world, for the whole man, for the whole life. The essential genius of Christianity is its missionary spirit.

"Ye are witnesses of these things." A witness is one who bears witness to the truth, one who is convinced of a fact, one who speaks that which he knows. It is significant that the word which is translated witness is the Greek word which also means martyr. Many Christian witnesses, especially in those early days were just that—martyrs. "What a terrible comment on the depravity of human nature that witnessing for the truth should ultimately become a synonym for martyrdom!" One somehow feels that Christians are not quite as vocal today as they ought to be. Anti-religionists are quite vocal—they talk against religion all the time. But alas, Christians are all too slow to speak a good word for Jesus Christ. Perhaps one reason why we do not bear witness for Him is because we have no experience for which to bear witness. Our religion has become unreal, Christ is no more vital in our lives, we have no word to say for Him.

Jesus Promises Power to His Disciples.

"I send forth the promise of my father upon you; but tarry ye in the city, until ye be clothed with power from on high." The task to which He commissioned them was not to be done in mere human strength or wisdom. It could be done only by the help of the power from on high. He promised that if they undertook his work he would send his power. The weakness of much modern church work is that we try to do superhuman tasks with human resources. The Holy Spirit, the Spirit of power is in the world today. He is available for us as He was available for those early disciples. It is only as we are filled with His power that we can prevail.

Jesus is Exalted.

Jesus led his disciples over toward Bethany, old familiar, beloved ground, and it came to pass "while he blessed them he parted from them, and was carried up into heaven." The great unseen spiritual order from which He had come again received him unto itself. His visible presence had been withdrawn from the earth. The Jesus of history became available as the Christ of experience. His parting attitude was significant. With uplifted hands, and with words of blessing on his lips, he went from them. His blessing and his benediction were bestowed upon them and upon the world in which they lived. And they returned to Jerusalem with great joy. They knew their Lord was alive forevermore. They knew that altogether unseen he was always with them.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"BELIEVING AND DOING."

"Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only."
—Jas. 1:22.

The following came to the writer's desk the other day. It exemplifies the text. Quote:

"Constantinople is one of the most impregnable natural fortresses in the world. England suffered her most serious reverse in the World War trying to capture the city from the Turks. But, in spite of its impregnable position, Constantinople was taken in 1453.

"Gibbon, the historian, says that the city would not have been captured if its Christian defenders had made an earnest effort to save it. They expected that an angel would descend from heaven with a sword in his hand and would deliver the city with that celestial weapon."

"Relying upon divine protection, the Christians made no real endeavor to protect themselves, and when the Moslems swarmed over the walls, the angel failed to appear, and one of the greatest cities in the world passed from the hands of Christianity into the hands of Mohammedanism.

"Of course, that was a false belief. A 'belief' which looks for angels to perform disagreeable tasks which we can do ourselves is counterfeit, and only an excuse for our laziness.

"The Lord helps those who help themselves' is an old but very true saying.

"Belief is not a substitute for doing something. It is an incentive to do greater things."

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we believe. Help Thou our unbelief. Send us forth every day to do Thy works and Thy will.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE PERENNIAL CRUCIFIXION."

"Jesus wept."—Jno. 11:35.

"The most disturbing feature about Christ's crucifixion is that he was brought to the Cross not by bad men but by ordinary people who were acting from familiar and common motives. There were the religious people, who were prejudiced against Him; there were the money-changers, who found their profits interfered with; there were the politicians, who were a bit afraid of Him. So it is that just ordinary men, with familiar motives break His heart today."

OUR PRAYER.

"Teach me Thy way, Lord, and make it real,

That I may teach others what I feel,

Showing them what to me is shown,

Reaching their heart by what has reached my own.

Help me to live the words I daily speak,

Searching my own while others' lives I seek Being consistent with myself at home and abroad.

Rising with men while raising them toward God."

—Chaplain P. G. Linearweaver.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE SYMPATHY CURE."

"In all things I gave you an example, that so laboring ye ought to help the weak, and to remember the words of Jesus—it is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35.

"Have you ever tried the sympathy cure?" a doctor once asked a patient.

"Oh, doctor, that's just what I want—sympathy. But people are so heartless; they will not sympathize with me."

"Wait a minute," said the doctor, "You don't understand me. What you need is to sympathize with them. You need to forget your own troubles by thinking about other folks' troubles, by helping and serving others."

In other words, the doctor is talking practical Christian living as a healing agent. The Spirit of Christ, the spirit of loving service is one of the mightiest medicines of life. Christ was, and is, and ever will be the Great Physician, because Christ is the incarnate Love of God.

Love is the supreme therapeutic agent. Love is the wholesome atmosphere of life—love which casts out fear and anxiety; love which begets joy and peace; love which finds its noblest expressions in Christlike sympathy and service.

Prayer—In little acts of unremembered kindness, Thy love, O God, may still be poured out on barren lives. In kindly deeds, which the world never sees, the goodness of Jesus and all His truth may still be revealed in lonely hearts. May our hearts be responsive to the need about us and may we render gladly and freely for the sake of all.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"SAVING GRACE."

"Love—beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things."—I Cor. 13:7.

"In our own times of disillusionment no one thing could more greatly help than that we should turn to the Bible anew. We should, of course, not find there blueprints for social, political, and religious techniques; but there would be clearly discerned a love of God and of men, principles, which, if followed, and ideas which, if developed, would lead us to that more perfect society—on earth and in Heaven—which men of good will seek, and for which our Lord taught us to pray."
—Schermerhorn.

Prayer—We all pray in a crisis. It is the natural instinct of mankind. But surely we are pretty poor specimens if we limit our prayers to such emergencies. It is a poor sort of son whose sole conversation with his father is limited to: "I'm in a jam; please get me out," or "I'm out of cash, please give me some more." What kind of a conversation do you have with your heavenly Father?—Lawrence.

FRIDAY.

"CHRISTIANITY AND EFFORT."

"I have given you an example."—Jno. 13:15.

"In the long run, we get just about what we pray for. We don't expect to be expert musicians without practising. We don't expect to speak a foreign language fluently with effort. We don't expect to be a success in business without working. And yet, somehow, most of us do expect to be good Christians without doing anything special about it. What price are you paying for the right to call yourself a Christian?"

Prayer—Father, may we be too honest to seek the name of Christian while we refuse the service Christ has rendered us and all men. May we despise no man's soul because he is poor. May we close our hearts to no man's need. In Jesus' name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"STRENGTH AND SONG."

"Jehovah is my strength and song."—Exodus 15:1-11.

God is not my strength until He is also my song. There is no power in religion until there is also joy with it; then the power comes.

It is comparatively easy to be a strong Christian; one has only to exercise will enough, only to be obedient enough, only to compel one's self with sufficient severity. That is a monastic sort of life, gloomy, silent, monotonous, forbidding. But when the song comes! ah, then the windows open to all the airs of spring, then the step grows light and the voice grows young, and the heart leaps in blessed ecstasy!

Enter into the joy of the Lord! Discover the happiness of divine communion. Trust, and be not afraid. Love God and love man, and find in that love the essence of religion.

Prayer—For Thou, our God, art Love, and thus Thou art Song. Sing through all our lives and make that song the strength of our souls.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"CHAMBERS OF IMAGERY."

"Hast thou seen what the elders of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in his chamber of imagery?"—Ezek. 8:7-13.

One of the most horrible pictures of the Bible is Ezekiel's scene of the hole in the wall of Jerusalem, the concealed door, the hidden room, and in it the walls covered with obscene pictures of beasts and idols, and the leaders of the people in there worshipping them! That "chamber of imagery" was the rotten spot in the Jewish state, whence all uncleanness was surely spreading.

Such a chamber of imagery is the foul imagination of many a man, and until it is thrown open to the day and thoroughly purified there can be no health in the life.

For we are what we are inwardly, what we are in the secret apartments of our soul. Does sweetness reign there, and purity, and holiness? Then God can enter, and from there God will overflow into all our being.

Prayer—Cleanse Thou us, Holy Spirit, and we shall be clean. Without Thee we shall be homes of all impurity. Grant us the sweetness and the light of heaven, even in the innermost places.

AMOS R. WELLS.

One sinner runs to and into sin; another runs away from and out of sin. Which way are you running? You are on the road one way or the other. The word will tell you how to run; so run that you may win.

—H. M. Phillips.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

OTHER WORKERS ALSO.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"And He ordained twelve that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach."—Mark 3:14.

"After these the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place, whither He Himself would come."—Luke 10:1.

There is no joy beyond the joy of real service. There is nothing that gives sweeter, or more abiding satisfaction, than that of doing a real favor to some other. That was the supreme joy of Jesus. In talking with His disciples in that farewell message He spoke to them about His joy, and said "These things have I spoken unto you, that My joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." And closing His message with a prayer to His Father, He said, "And now I come to Thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have My joy fulfilled in themselves." Jesus wanted them to know the joy of helping others as He had known it, whether it be when He had talked to the woman at the well, the palsied man in His midst, or the poor sinner on the cross, there was a supreme satisfaction to Him in His message of healing, and mercy and forgiveness.

But did Jesus intend that only the twelve should know this joy? It is all mighty fine for them to feel the glory of his personal presence, and to share in this work of blessing others, but how about all the others of us? Really I do not read in the New Testament of any successor of Peter, or James, or John. Only one disciple had in the New Testament a successor appointed for him, and that was Judas. The appointment of that successor must have been a disappointment to the Lord, seeing that his selection was determined by casting lots, and seeing that we never heard any word about him ever after. Are none, then, to have joy but those disciples? The answer is in the text of the morning's message: "Other seventy also."

This is a laymen's message. And let me say from the very beginning that "laymen" shall mean both men and women, and be in distinction of ordained ministers. Let us look upon the twelve as the ordained, for that is what is said of them by the Lord Himself. "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you." And let us look upon the others as appointed unto their service. May we not have it read: "The Lord appointed other (workers) seventy also." "Other workers also." Into every Christian heart goes that message, into every Christian home, into every corner of our country, and into every place in Christendom, throughout the wide world let that message go: "Other workers also," until all share in the joy of working and witnessing for the Lord.

It is a real joy to be your pastor and to serve you, to work for you night and day, to call in your homes daily, and to preach unto you the gospel regularly, to seek you and yours for Him constantly. There is no joy above it. By it I do my best, and for it I earn a sustenance for my family and myself. That is all very well, but the Kingdom of God is no kingdom at all if only the minister may serve Him! It was never intended that the pastor should have all the joy of Christian service. It was never intended that he should be the only soul-winner in a congregation. It was never intended that only his persuasion should be used to get young men and young women to have a holy hour on the holy Sabbath day in which they would worship the Lord, their God and Creator. In this great church there are many who daily divide this service amongst themselves by having a full and frequent share in it. This large number on Wednesday night, nearly a hundred of you, is in itself an illustration of what your invitations to attend prayer meeting may mean. And everyone is happy here tonight. You have invited someone else, and your joy is full for they are here.

To the laymen, men and women, let me say yours is a holy and sacred task. You may reap satisfaction in piling up a few of this world's goods, more satisfaction maybe in getting a certain amount of the praise of your fellowmen, but the deep, lasting, abiding, complete joy and satisfaction will come with offering the best you have by the testimony of good living, and kind words and deeds, to others. The best you have I said, and that is your religious faith, your fellowship with the Infinite, your appreciation of the goodness of God in your own life and destiny. If you have too little of that to make any boast of it, try the simple business of seeking others for the Christ and for the Church. Exercise, cultivation, nourishment: these are laws of growth, laws of the eternal God. Sometimes we take trifles too seriously, and do not take seriously enough the main thing.

"I've labored in Thy vineyard Thou dost know;
I've sold ten tickets to the minstrel show;
I've baked a pot of beans for Saturday's spree,
An oldtime snapper it is going to be;
I've dressed three dolls, too, for our annual fair,
And made a cake which we must raffle there."

And so, on and on, goes a jingle I picked up the other day, but no souls were won, no new persons were started to attending church, no prayers were said in homes of the shut-ins, no setting apart a definite portion as the Lord's share of one's money was made.

I approve of suppers, like I approve of friendship and fellowship, for they have their excellent part in the cultivation thereof. I approve of thrift, whether it be the saving of old garments or the baking of good pies. I especially approve pies! But, the Lord help us, if we expect to finance the Kingdom of God either at home or abroad with the sale of "ten tickets to the minstrel show," or the baking of a "pot of beans for Saturday's spree." But, rather, let us sit humbly, and reverently, and prayerfully down with the members of our family, and agree upon a Lord's portion, and liberally give it is regularly as we get it to the Lord. Let us teach our children that a definite portion (the Lord has blessed givers of the tenth) is the Lord's and that regularly and cheerfully we will give it to Him. Sometimes we shall have to deny ourselves to make good, but God will never deny us if we do.

I have preached on this text before, but I did not, at the time, observe what I see now to be the most beautiful part of it, namely, "whither He Himself would come." What do I make of that? This, that Jesus was saying to the "other workers": You are appointed, and you are sent, go on and do your best, I will follow! You make maybe a call for your Church and your Christ. You stumble over your words, you do not say what

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friend:

The beautiful showers we have been having for the past week have been refreshing and a great blessing to this section. The first rain we have had since the first day of April.

The drought cut our oat crop in half. The wheat crop at least one-third. Farmers have no control over the weather conditions and have to bear the loss when the clouds bring no rain with patience and trust God for bread to eat.

When we think about it there has never been a year that there was not a time to plant and a time to reap. Sometimes the yield is not so bountiful one year; but probably the next year the crops would be bountiful and make up for the year before. The Lord is good to us and always blesses us with the blessings that are best for us, though sometimes we may in our own selfish way think some other way would be better.

Health examinations and operations are the order of the day at the Christian Orphanage. The Kiwanis club at Burlington have kindly volunteered to sponsor this work and the children, or most of them, have been examined and all defects noted, as to teeth, eyes, throat and nose and any other defects.

About thirty children in our group were found to have diseased tonsils and we are to have five operations each week until have been looked after.

Then the teeth will be treated and all other troubles corrected. We trust when the vacation season is over all of our children will be in fine physical condition.

We appreciate this consideration of the Kiwanis Club very much indeed and we feel sure the health of the children will be greatly improved when all the defects which retard their growth and development have been remedied.

We want to appeal to every Sunday school not now on the list of monthly contributors to join with those now on the list and let us make it 100 per cent in support of the Orphanage. We are dependent upon your assistance in feeding and clothing these little children.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

you had planned to say, you falter, and maybe you think you failed. The whole business went flat, and you are chagrined. Too bad, thus far. But, my friend, where you have failed God will not fail! When the follow-up call made by the Holy Spirit comes into the heart and conscience of your friend a new story will be written. Just keep right on doing your best, "it is God that giveth the increase."

It is not that our words fail us, and that our speech is faltering, that the church of the living God languishes, but rather that we do not go as sent, and do our best, with the assurance that God will follow-up our efforts. If you read this whole chapter you will find that Jesus told these laymen workers to go with power, with a message of healing, and strength. Do you realize how it would reflect strength upon this church if during this week everyone of the thirty homes of shut-ins in this church should have a call made by two members of this church in the name of the Christ? Multiply that by the homes of young people who should be sympathetically sought for church-attendance, and older persons who may find it easier to neglect worship in the season of the church's test,—the summer, and further still with the nearly two hundred persons who should normally belong to this church.

Well, the seventy went, and when they returned they were rejoicing that even the devils were subject unto them through His name! We can do little in our name, or in our strength, but in His name and in His strength, mighty things can be done. I spoke of joy,—deep, abiding satisfaction,—Jesus told them to rejoice that their names were written in heaven! Their obedience, their efforts, had been a seal of their sonship. There is nothing that will give greater Christian assurance than Christian service.

what, but does not alter the fact that reasonable minimum salaries are not maintained; that many ministers of rural churches serve for only nominal or at least sub-normal salaries, and that salaries of rural ministers are more than ordinarily subject to the effect of economic fluctuations." Another letter affirms that, "temporarily the rural church should have a major share of mission funds. There might be a scale for paying a share of the salaries of rural ministers. This should be regarded by city ministers as a type of insurance, and not an uplift program." A third letter adds: "the maintenance of all ministers installed over rural churches should be made secure from the funds of the whole denomination, rather than from those of the local community alone." A final word asserts, that a completely satisfactory national policy should "assure to the rural field such proportion of the total amount of missionary money available, as would be commensurate with the relative importance of the rural field in relation to the total amount of missionary money available, as would be commensurate with the relative importance of the rural field in relation to the total missionary task."

A general fault in the administration of mission aid is mentioned by our correspondents. "It is still controlled primarily by ecclesiastical considerations, rather than by sociological or educational or service considerations." One writer mentions the attempt of his own denomination to "free the administration of mission aid from certain traditional limitations; and to base it: first, on an analysis and classification of fields; second, on definite standards of program, and records of achievement; and thirdly, on a personnel policy, which will stabilize support. "One other contribution, calls attention to state procedure in the matters of rural schools, health, and roads; and suggests that mission aid might be so administered.

ed. "The state recognizes the tendency of money and men to concentrate at urban centers; leaving behind economically depleted rural areas. Its own interest is, to maintain a common level of citizenry everywhere. Therefore, it establishes supplementation funds. When a community has done all that it can, which is easily ascertainable by tax lists, etc., that community area becomes automatically a recipient of state aid." Here is suggestion for administration of mission aid! It might well copy the state! Such a method would do away with the humiliation of asking for help; and the granting of that needed assistance according to the good pleasure of some individual or Board. Every church would be required to do its full part, before it received any assistance. The incentive to do just that would be present. And still more to the point, the help received would not smack of "charity" or even of "missionary" giving. It would be, as with the state, a recognition of just dues.

Mention should be made more of the most important interdenominational achievement of our time—THE MASTER LIST; which proposes after suitable examination, to refuse mission aid to competing churches. This is splendid! But, alas, only six of the twenty-six denominations represented in the Home Missions Council, are partners in that ideal team-play. It would be a triumph of this very National Conference on the Rural Church, if those other twenty denominations, would "sign on the dotted line" before adjournment. It would go out as real "news"; evidence of the fact that Protestantism can act unanimously on, at least, one all-important enterprise. Such action, of a united Protestantism, might not have anything to do with the clean up of moving pictures: it would have much to do with curing the almost as devastating evil, of moving preachers!

OBITUARIES

GOODWIN.

Mrs. Bettie Poole Goodwin was born October 12, 1856, and died on May 10, 1936, making her age 79 year and seven months. She was married to Mr. Jim Goodwin on December 20, 1876. After his death she was married to Mr. Jack Goodwin in March, 1906. She is survived by her two sons, three grandchildren, one sister and two brothers. She was preceded to the grave by four children.

Mrs. Goodwin was a faithful member of the New Elam Christian Church and attended as long as her health permitted her to do so. She will be remembered long for her Christian life and the Christian influence which she exerted. Services were conducted by the writer and interment was in cemetery of the Ebenezer Methodist Church where deceased members of her family are buried. She lived a beautiful life, and was loved by all who knew her. May the Lord bless and comfort those who mourn their loss.

W. J. ANDES.

RICHARDS.

Miss Prude Richards departed this life March 13, 1936 in the 96th year of her life at the home of her grand-nephew, where she had lived for many years.

Aunt Prude, as she was known by all, was a great friend of all the people, never happier than when doing something for another. Her long life was practically spent in serving those who were needy and sick. She will be sadly missed by those who knew her and especially by those who attended her in her last illness.

Her body was borne by loving friends to the cemetery at Old Darien Church where it was committed to the grave. "Weep not for me as you stand round my grave. Think Who has died to save. Think of the crown all the ransomed shall wear."

The funeral was by the writer assisted by E. E. Lancy of the Baptist Church. G. D. HUNT.

A MESSAGE

June 6, 1936.

TO THE CAMPAIGN ORGANIZATION WITHIN THE CHURCHES:

By the authority of the Southern Convention and endorsement of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, we are conducting a campaign through the churches and alumni to raise $250,000 for Elon College.

The time set for the campaign to close has about arrived, however, the campaign cannot stop here but must, I am sure you will agree, be pushed on until the goal set is reached. We have effected settlement with the Williams Company. Their representatives are no longer in the field. The Board of Trustees has requested me to continue the campaign. I have cancelled all other engagements and will give myself to this undertaking.

Manifestly, I cannot do it alone. I am entirely dependent upon you and others. I know that I may depend upon you. This is just a word to express my appreciation of your services, of what you have done, and to appeal to you earnestly to consider this your job until your church has reached its goal.

Won't you please keep your church committee intact and on the job? Write me stating that you will, and if I can be of assistance to you let me know what you would like to have me do? Won't you please stand by until this job is completed?

Yours truly,

L. E. SMITH, President.

Business and Presidential Elections.—

It is often said that Presidential election years are bad business years, but statistics based on Ayer's Index of Industrial Activity would indicate that such an opinion was fallacious. Indeed, business was rated as better than normal for 21 election years since 1792, while it fell below normal for only 15. This does not mean that election years must of necessity be good years, but it does explode an oft-repeated saying. Presidential elections are fixed by law. There has not yet been found a law that will regulate business cycles.

How the Churches Gave.—

The United Stewardship Council reports the gifts for religious purposes of the leading denominations in the United States for the year 1935. Per capita gifts for all purposes of some of the larger denominations were as follows: United Presbyterian Church, $21.56; the Presbyterian Church in the United States, $19.03; the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, $18.56; Methodist Episcopal Church, $14.15; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $9.36; the Northern Baptist denomination, $11.34; the Southern Baptist denomination, $5.76. The largest per capita gift of any denomination listed is that of the Church of the Nazarene, $26.77. The lowest is that of the Southern Baptist denomination, $5.76. The total gifts for all purposes of twenty-five denominations listed were $304,692,409.21.—Exchange.

Real Billions.—

It is unusual for the Ford Motor Company to make any statement regarding its financial affairs, but recently, William J. Cameron, radio spokesman for the company, revealed some most interesting facts and figures. The Ford Company is owned by three people, Henry Ford, his wife, and his son, Edsel Ford. It celebrated its thirty-third birthday last week. It costs more to run the Ford organization than it does to operate the City of New York. The budget adopted for the country's biggest city this year was $613,369,000. The cost of running the Ford plant was in the neighborhood of $800,000,000. During the thirty-three years there have been sold 24,500,000 Ford cars and trucks, and the total receipts of the company have been $12,951,338,028. Of this amount the company has paid out $12,109,321,884 for materials, labor and taxes. It estimates that there are current obligations of around $60,000,000, which leaves "$782,016,144 as the so-called profit for the work of thirty-three years."

It will be seen from these figures that the total income of this company has amounted to approximately one-third of the Federal debt, it is larger than the total gold reserve of the United States at the present time—$10,501,522,015, and it more than matches two for one the paper dollars in circulation in the United States.

The Treasury's "Conscience Fund."—

One day, back in 1811, there came into the treasury $5 from someone who confessed that they had defrauded the government of that amount. Since that time this "spark of celestial fire" which dwells to a greater or less degree in all mankind, has brought into the United States Treasury the sum of $626,043.26. Letters kept in the Treasury record many quirks of religious feeling on the part of remitters. Some seem to be moved by the promise of Zacchaeus that: "If I have taken anything from any man by false accusation I restore him four-fold." An example: "Since becoming a Christian I am duly impressed to restore . . . a postage stamp which I used twice. It had served its purpose once, but seemed not to have been cancelled much, if any at all, nevertheless, I used it . . . I am restoring it four-fold and trust I am forgiven for using it." Another was impressed to send in $80,000, saying that it was in repayment of a theft of $20,000. Only recently someone in a wealthy suburb of Philadelphia mailed a letter, and the next day, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau opened it and took out currency amounting to $2,900. Once the Secret Service was able to trace a man who had sent in some bonds. It was found that he really owed nothing, but it was hard work persuading him to take them back.

Where Do Meteorites Come From?—

Not later than the beginning of the nineteenth century, it was doubted that meteorites came from the sky. In 1807 a Yale professor, Dr. Benjamin Silliman, made the pronouncement that he had authenticated a meteor that had landed nearby as having done this very thing. When Thomas Jefferson, himself somewhat of a scientist, heard of the professor's statement, he exploded: "I would rather believe that a Yankee professor would lie than that stones fell from heaven." Today no one doubts the correctness of what the professor said, but astronomers still are disagreeing among themselves as to the origin of these comparatively small heavenly bodies. Among various theories are: They are particles of old comets that have exploded, still following in the comet's orbit around the sun. Coming too near the earth, gravitation causes them to fall. Others believe that space is filled with these particles, which have no fixed motion but are going aimlessly in all directions. Another theory is that they are possible debris left from the formation of our stellarsphere. Meteorites do not burn until they have come within fifty or seventy-five miles of the earth, but at that point they come in contact with the beginning of our atmosphere and friction causes them to become white hot, giving off the light of a "shooting star."

An Appreciation.—

The present writer of this page and the retiring managing editor, has invariably endeavored to be as impersonal in his writings as possible. Not all of the statements appearing have reflected his opinions or even what he might wish things to be, but they have been as accurate as time and effort could make them. There has always been the attempt to see that they were absolutely impartial. Fourteen years ago, the late Dr. J. P. Barrett, then then editor, conceived the idea of such a page. After his death Rev. S. N. Lynam most creditably carried on the work for a while. Since that time several others have written the page for a short while. At one time Dr. Wicker edited it for a short while, but due to poor health had to give it up, and when his health returned, other and more important duties prevented him from again taking on this task. During the interims, and almost continually for the past several years the task has been the writer's. It has not been an easy one and has required the reading of much material and considerable research, but it has been enjoyed nevertheless. There has been criticism; there has also been commendation. I have tried to profit by the one and have appreciated the other greatly. Now before closing this paragraph, may I for once, become personal. For the past twelve years it has been my pleasure to work with the now retiring editor. Two of these years have been as acting managing editor and the past four as managing editor. My work has only been made worth while—if it has been—by the closest and most congenial cooperation on the part of the retiring editor, Dr. J. O. Atkinson. He could have made the task hard. He has done his best to make it a joy, and I am most grateful to him. He has given freely of his time and of himself. He deserves, and I believe receives, the eternal gratitude of our entire constituency. Now, to the incoming editor I wish to tender my offer of support and to wish for him all success in the work that he takes over.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

An interested friend in our Carroll County, Va., work commenting on the service now being rendered says, "Now tell our Christian friends that the gospel is being preached to the poor and thank them for this help in our name."

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, editor of our Family Altar Page reported at his new station, The Destroyer Base, San Diego, California, on the 30th of May. He writes that he is highly pleased with his new duty and finds both religious and welfare opportunities in abundance.

Rev. Jas. L. Foster, Elon College, N. C., is serving regularly now, and has been for some months past, a new work, not yet organized into a church, at Lucama, N. C. Brother Foster is finding the work here quite interesting and promising, meeting at each appointment an organized and well-conducted Sunday school and a very attentive and large congregation for the preaching services.

This item relative to the exposition, "Parade Of An Empire" now on in Texas is significant: "During the Texas Centennial Exposition, itself, from June 6th through November 29th, nightly mass meetings will be held on the grounds to hear world-noted religious leaders. To each denomination special days have been assigned for their special observance. Thus does religion take its place in the Parade of An Empire."

Rev. W. E. Wiseman, pastor of our First Church, Greensboro, N. C., and that loyal layman of his church, Brother H. V. Simpson, were fortunate in attending the General Council at Holyoke College, Mass., the past week. Pastor Wiseman is hereby invited to use his pen in telling SUN readers of his impressions and the great work of the Council. And Brother Simpson, the faithful, will see to it that his pastor does this at an early date.

Dr. John G. Truitt, Chairman Commission on Evangelism, Southern Convention, has requested through personal letter and verbal invitation, over thirty of our pastors to meet with his Committee at 3 P. M., June 30th, or at 10:30 A. M., July 1st (at both meetings when possible) at Elon College to study together the serious and all-important work of Evangelism. This is during the School of Leadership Training at Elon, which opens June 29th and closes July 5th.

The New York Congregational-Christian State News says: "At their Annual Meeting held May 19th, at Broadway Tabernacle, the women voted to make several changes. Recognizing that group of devoted, loyal women who came into the organization when the merger was formed with the Christian denomination, the name of the New York State group of women was changed to read Society of Congregational-Christian Women (instead of Society of Congregational Church Women)." Thus the blessed work of the "merger" goes marching on.

Dr. Elwood W. Jones of Franklin, Va., is a firm believer in the merit and worth of the Cent-a-Meal Box and is finding the Box of considerable worth and help in raising his missionary and benevolence funds in his churches. Rev. J. E. McCauley of our Richmond Church, is another pastor who is finding the Box of great help in raising conference apportionments. The wonder is that more of our pastors do not introduce the Box in the homes of their members since it is proving so very helpful.

The following telegram tells its own story:—"J. T. Kernodle, Richmond, Virginia. Father died at 2 A. M. (Tuesday). Funeral Thursday at ten thirty A. M. Billy Andes." This short message will carry sorrow to the hearts of many as it has to that of the writer of this note. Alfred Wellons Andes, though quiet and unassuming in his manner, has truly been a valiant fighter in the cause of his Master. He has labored well and will reap a rich reward. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the loved ones who have lost him for a time.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Beginning with the July 2nd issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Rev. F. C. Lester assumes the duties of editor and business manager. All matter for publication in the issue of that date and subsequent issues should be addressed to him at 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia. Beginning July 1st, all matters of business, including subscriptions, both new and renewals, and items pertaining to the policy of the paper should also be addressed to Mr. Lester.

The Publishing Board of the Convention, working with the incoming editor, has recommended certain changes in the size, and mechanical make-up of THE SUN. These will be made as rapidly as conditions justify.

To those who have most loyally supported me while serving as Managing Editor of THE SUN, I wish to extend my heartiest thanks. In turning over the business management to Mr. Lester, I ask for him your cooperation and support.

JOHN T. KERNODLE.

Burlington Christian Church, with Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, pastor, and Miss Julia Woodson, Director of Religious Education, enjoyed the past two weeks a well-attended and effective Daily Vacation Bible School, as was fully demonstrated in the public program given in the church auditorium last Sunday evening. It is a wonder what the children and young people, in a two weeks' school, can learn and demonstrate in pantomime and handiwork about interesting and thrilling events of the Bible. Every church, urban and rural, should have a Daily Vacation Bible School for the sake of the children as well as the grown ups of the entire community.

AN OPEN LETTER TO DR. JAMES OSCAR ATKINSON, EDITOR.

My Dear Doctor Atkinson:

From my earliest connection with the Christian Church, the church of my heart and of my love, I have been inspired by your writings and blessed by your spirit. You have rendered a great service to your church, to the cause of Christian education, to Christian missions, and to religious journalism. You have rendered significantly helpful service as editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, our church paper. In this capacity it has been your privilege to instruct the church in her program of service and worship and in a definite way help to shape her destiny. Great and unusual have been your opportunities. You leave for your youthful successor a great heritage.

According to the action of the Convention in session in Burlington, North Carolina, which action was in accord with your earnest request, you are to retire from the responsible position as editor of our paper on July 1, but ere you lay down your editorial pen in silence, will you please speak to us, your brethren in Christ, and tell us:

1. What you consider the three most significant undertakings of your church in the South during the last half century. Please list these undertakings in order of their importance.
2. What you consider to be the three greatest responsibilities now resting upon our church and awaiting our hearts and our hands. List these responsibilities in the order of their importance.
3. What you consider to be the most effective means in meeting these responsibilities and of accomplishing the tasks that God has laid out for us as a church.

I am sure that I speak the sentiment of the entire church when I express to you in this public way our sincere appreciation of your faithful service and significant contribution to the cause of Christ through your church everywhere.

Yours in Christ,

L. E. SMITH.

TO ENTERTAIN OR TO EDIFY?

This age seems to have gone mad in the pursuit of pleasure. Fortunes are being made in commercialized amusements and sports. The multitudes have turned away from the Sabbath in seeking pleasure on God's holy day and have called his Sabbath a delight.

This evil spirit has come into the church in that many are seeking a preacher who entertains instead of edifies. One recently said that he believed some people went to hear an evangelist more to see and hear his vaudeville stunts than his appeals to repentance. It was noticeable that many went forward in the meeting with smiles on their faces, while scarcely any were seen to weep in penitence.

Hedonism has practically become the religion of many in this day. Temples and stadia more costly than cathedrals are built for pleasures and sports.

As always, when the people's hearts are perverted, vice attends and morals degenerate.

The godliness and profligacy of Greece and Rome seem to have come again. Sin reigns, and unbelief blinds the soul to beauty in godliness and joys of righteousness that are forevermore.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

The timid soul never is a leader. He is too busy fighting the shadows in his own mind and too distrustful of himself. Fear must be conquered, but one must not go to the other extreme and become bold.—Arthur Wardlaw.

THE ADVENTISTS LEAD US.

By REV. J. SPENCER VOORHEES,
Minister of the Congregational Church.

For more than a year I have been using Seventh Day Adventist sanitariums for the recovery of health. Among other benefits I have got a new appreciation of Christian giving. If we were willing to follow their Christian example only halfway, our Congregational financial problems would be solved.

"How do you Congregationalists manage to support your churches adequately without tithing?" a nurse asked while giving me a treatment.

"We don't," was the only answer I could give.

Then he explained to me how a denomination less than one-third as large as ours and made up almost wholly of wage-earners could have twenty-two thousand missionaries in the home and foreign fields and not only did not retrench or withdraw any during the depression, but kept sending out new ones every year.

They are the Lord's cheerful givers and reap a rich compensation in results. On the same basis we with greater wealth could have a hundred thousand missionaries and would only be enriched by it.

How Do They Do It?

First, they recognize God as the Giver of all they receive and in recognition of this fact they give the first tenth of all they receive to His church.

This is not "Christian giving." It is simply a religious obligation. It is what we owe to God the Giver and have no right to use for other purposes. It is the first debt to be paid out of all receipts.

"Of all that Thou givest me I will surely give the tenth unto Thee." This is the lowest standard of our religious recognition of God as the Giver. It takes care of the administration of the denomination and the local churches, and is not Christian benevolence any more than our support of our lodges or our houses.

Then comes the privilege of "Christian giving," which is cooperation with Christ in the extension of his Kingdom over all the earth. It is the greatest incentive to worthwhile living and the honest earning of money.

"That our part personally may be as large as possible, we feel it is wrong to spend money or time for things that are not of value, like alcoholic beverages, tobacco, most movies, card playing, dancing, etc."

To let the offering plate pass us in a service of worship without our recognition seems like an open denial of Christ and His invitation to help Him save the world.

To spend more for "moderate drinking" or tobacco or movies than we give for the extension of the Kingdom of God is practical infidelity and dishonors the Christianity which we profess to accept.

Their Average Gift Per Member.

The Seventh Day Adventists, a denomination largely of working people, average per member for missionary extension work forty cents per week. This is "Christian giving" and is over and above the one-tenth of income given for the support of the local churches and denominational administration.

One who has enjoyed tithing and giving for over fifty years is disturbed by the pious sophistry which discredits tithing as below the Christian standard recognizing that we owe all to Christ. Very good, if it is made clear that we cannot begin our Christian giving until we have met the Old Testament standard of Abraham as a religious duty. Then on this foundation we may build a superstructure of Christian beneficence that under the leadership of Christ, who gave all, will speedily extend His Kingdom over all the earth.

We can do what the Adventists do, if we will.

KAGAWA CONFERENCE AT LAKE GENEVA.

The work done by Toyohiko Kagawa in this country and how its influence may be conserved throughout the life of the nation is the theme of the International Conference at "College Camp," on Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, from Saturday, June 27th to Tuesday, June 30th. The Conference will be addressed by some forty Christian leaders, and will be attended by members of the National Kagawa Coordinating Advisory Committee, which is calling the Conference, and many others who are interested in seeing Kagawa's message made to live in the life of the entire Church and Nation.

"Kagawa in Lincoln's Country," a 100-page booklet in magazine form, will be off the press June 25th. It will contain a startling comparison of the likenesses between the Emancipator and Japan's outstanding Christian leader. Stenographic reports of the principal addresses Kagawa has made in America will make available in permanent form the inspiration thousands received. Pictures of Kagawa and other material concerning him selected from the newspapers and magazines of the country will complete the contents of this delightful tribute to one who has brought so much of the Kingdom of God to America. This booklet may be had for 25c a copy from Rev. J. Henry Carpenter, 285 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

TO PASTORS—SPECIAL NOTICE.

Pastors, and others interested, are asked to take notice that there will be held at Elon College, in the Administration Building, June 30, Tuesday afternoon at 3:00, a session of the Southern Convention Committee on Evangelism. This will be an open session of that committee, and the members of Conference Committees on Evangelism are urged to meet with this Convention Committee, and the pastors within driving distance of Elon are urgently requested to be present—in fact all pastors and interested laymen are urged to be present.

Following this meeting of the Convention Committee, and all others interested, I am taking the liberty of calling a meeting for Wednesday morning at 10:30, July 1st, at the same place, and in connection with the Leadership Training School in session at Elon at that time, of all pastors and interested laymen,—men and women both, of course,—for a further discussion of Evangelism, for prayer, and the further planning of our evangelistic efforts. Others deeply interested in evangelism have written asking for such a meeting, and it is hoped that great good will come out of it.

"The field is white unto the harvest." With about half of the population not members of any church, with a large number holding an "absentee membership," can it be possible that a local church can go a whole year without winning one new member? Can it be possible that a pastor can work in such a ripe and open field without adding a single new member to the church? Can it be that enthusiastic Christians can thus fail to witness in the pew, in the home, and at their work to such an extent that their church receives no new members during the year? Brethren, and co-workers all, let us get together and move our Convention forward in a soul-winning campaign for Christ.

JOHN G. TRUITT, Chairman,
Convention Evangelistic Committee.

"THE METHODIST CHURCH.

This is the name of the new church which is now in the making. And the name sounds good to us. The Methodist Episcopal Church will drop the word "episcopal," the Methodist Protestant Church will drop the word "protestant" and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will drop the two words, "episcopal" and "south." In marriages the rule is for the woman to change her name, but in this marriage all parties will share in the change of name, the Southern church a little more than the others.

This merging of American Methodism got a good start in Columbus, Ohio, Monday morning, May 4, when the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church by a vote of 470 to 83 voted for the plan submitted by the joint commission. While the majority is very great it hardly represents the overwhelming sentiment of the conference. The only question upon which there appeared a word of controversy was the establishment of a Central Jurisdiction for negro annual conferences and missions in the United States. A majority of the negro members of the General Conference vote against the plan but not all, for a large minority of these negro members voted for the plan. While the warmest friends of the negro among the whites voted for the plan, Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield, for example, who gave his life for the negro and no Methodist living or dead has rendered a service equal to this good man, was an ardent supporter of the plan as it came from the joint commission. This is most highly significant.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

PRAYING AND PAYING.

Now isn't it funny! When people have money
To spend on themselves every day
Why they are so sure to be too poor
To do more for missions than pray?

It's only quite fair to back up one's prayer
With money, and service, too;
Prayers are all right, but a pocket-book tight
Won't help much to get them through.

And if there are any who can't give a penny
For the Gospel work in our land,
Then how can they go to the picture show?
I really don't quite understand.

If we'd pay as we pray and work every day
To send the glad tidings around,
The world would be bright with Jesus' own light,
And Peace and good will abound.

—Mrs. Carrie B. Adams
in World Comrades.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

HANDING OVER THE EDITORIAL PEN.

With this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the present editor hands over the editorial pen to his successor, Rev. F. C. Lester, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Va. And with the editorial pen goes the solemn pledge of loyalty and esteem to my capable and worthy successor. And now to write for once, editorially, in the first person singular, editing THE SUN these twenty-eight years has been a rare privilege and a real joy. It is counted the higher privilege because it has been without reward and a task wholly unsought on my part. At the session of the Convention in Franklin, Va., May 15, 1900, I was elected editor and served for a period of 16 years, resigning at the Convention, which met in Burlington in May, 1916. In May, 1924, immediately following the death of the then editor, the late lamented, Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., the Convention again asked me to become editor, since which time I have gladly served till now. The continued willingness on the part of the brethren and co-workers to continue me as editor of the SUN is a mark of indulgence, forbearance and confidence that I esteem beyond all measure. With my other duties claiming attention, especially those enjoined by being Secretary of Missions since 1916, I have not been able to give to the editorial work of THE SUN the attention and the service it deserved. While I am fully conscious of my shortcomings in giving to the readers of THE SUN each week, and to the church it represents, such services as they so richly deserved, I have at least endeavored to keep from the columns of the paper that which would be divisive, or hurtful, to the church, its enterprises, its institutions, and its homes. I have sought with diligence at all times to be fair to our contributors and to have in mind always the moral and spiritual welfare of those to whom the paper went in its weekly visits. In retiring now from the editorial work of the paper, I am not saying farewell since the incoming editor has graciously given me the promise that the Missionary Department of the paper shall still be at my service while I remain Secretary of Missions. I shall be wishing for Brother Lester the very highest meed of success in an undertaking to which he brings a trained mind, a skilled hand and a devout heart.

A PROFITABLE VACATION.

With summer comes the thought and need for a vacation. Every person who works requires relaxation, and, to be efficient, must have some let up and change. The trouble with many who seek vacation and relaxation is that they go the whole length and seek to throw off all restraint and substitute license for liberty.

It is not to be forgotten that the soul as well as the body needs recreation by which we mean, re-creation. And there is no way by which the soul may be created anew and afresh like attending a service of worship. To cut our attendance upon public worship during the vacation is doing violence to the soul while seeking to build up the body. We agree with Frederick Stamm, writing in the New York State News when he says:

"To clamp down on church attendance during the summer on the ground that one is throwing off something irksome, is like refusing to eat food in the hope that he will thereby build up a physical reserve. If one never cares to go to church, that might find some justification. But if one feels the necessity of worshipping God and sharing with others in the winter, he can hardly depart from that practice in the summer without doing himself harm. An hour's worship in some little church at a summer resort each week might go a long way toward educating one in the art of how to spend a vacation profitably."

If one would come back from his or her vacation refreshed, relaxed, and re-created one will certainly not forsake the opportunity of renewing the spiritual life by attending when opportunity affords, a public service of worship and devotion.

WITHOUT THEMSELVES.

From the beginning mankind has had one implacable foe. It is the worst enemy he has to fight. This is "Self." When Self gets complete control, one is indeed devil-possessed. Invariably when Christ met individuals who were completely self-centered, He called them "possessed of devils" and always when he cast the devils out He directed the attention of the individual to something without. Ibsen, in one of his plays makes the actor say, "Without a fixed point, without myself, I cannot exist." The fixed point without the self in the teachings of Christ was God, or Himself, the Son of God. Quit thinking of yourself so much; go sell what you have which has come to be the greater part of yourself; come take up your cross and follow Me. Make Me the fixed point without yourself, that in doing so you shall find life. Christ was always reaching folks just that way. Every human being on this earth needs a fixed point outside of Self. No compass is secure for travelers or sailors unless the hand of it directs to a fixed point outside the compass itself. And no individual is secure who hasn't a fixed point without the self toward which one is going. Here is man's fiercest and most terrific battle. Self comes in to make the individual a center around which one's universe revolves. God has given man the example to follow. The planets revolve around the sun that shines in the heavens, and the planets are safe as long as they follow the revolutions designated for them to follow around the sun as the fixed point without themselves. And in the spiritual world God has given His Son as the fixed point without the self around which the individual may travel with safety and security as long as the individual keeps the heart fixed on this sacred point without one's self.

The nations of the earth are finding this true of themselves, as well as individuals. "Nationalism" is like a blight that is withering the life of the nations of the world today. Rapid travel and instantaneous communication have linked the nations together physically, socially, and economically and each is self-centered; each is trying to take care of itself and leaving the hindmost to fight its battles as best it can. The nations, like individuals, need and must have a fixed point within themselves in order to exist. God so loved the world that he gave His only begotten Son. We have not learned that yet, and the nations as well as individuals are saying that God so loved a nation or an individual, that He gave His only begotten Son. Jesus said, "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men up under Me." His enemies lifted Him up physically, but His friends and those who profess Him are not exalting Him as the fixed point without themselves in order that they may exist.

J. O. A.

CHRISTIAN MATERIALISM.

It is generally believed that there is no such thing as "Christian Materialism" since the one is supposed to be antipodal to the other. It is often thought that if we are materialistic, we are not Christian and if we are Christians, we have to do with the mystic and the metaphysical, and not with the material and physical.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist church evidently believes otherwise, and he has written a very engaging book which bears the title of this editorial, in which a very practical and intense study of Christian stewardship is made in a unique and challenging way. The author of "Christian Materialism" declares that one of the most discouraging phases of the Christian attempt in bringing in a new earth as well as a new heaven, is to encounter so often the belief and declaration in pulpit and pew that the mention of money should be left out in religious worship and attitude. "We tell men that they are to give themselves. Most such advice is a bit vague and cloudy and misty. We do not get far with it until we get down to what a man earns through his daily labor. I have heard church leaders call for a new consecration to a spiritual ideal and do so with avowals of weariness at discussions of practical measures to bring in the Kingdom. These are possibly suffering under the notion that there is something inherently vile about money. Money means food and clothing, books and works of art, chances to help one's fellows—in a word, life!

"If we could actually trace the history of a coin from the day it leaves the mint, with its image and superscription clear and sharp, to the day when it returns to the melting pot, we should find that the coin has been closer to human life than any other material agency, that the pressure of human hands upon it has known an indescribable tensility, that the coming of the coin has been looked to with more anxiety and its departure often with more sorrow than those of any other forms of the material. To control this force for moral and spiritual purposes is the aim of Christian materialism."

In such a belief the author of the book asked and endeavors to answer three very practical questions in a practical way. First, How the Christian gets his money. Second, How he spends it. Third, How he gives it. The real strong feature of the book is in answering the third question, that of giving. The author avers that a person may give to good causes and not be a Christian, but if he is a real Christian who practices his profession, he will give, as the Lord has prospered him, with a liberal hand and a glad heart.

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST AND BAPTISTS.

The Christian-Evangelist, national weekly of the Disciples of Christ, is devoting much of its space, editorially and otherwise, to clarifying the "issue of the union of Disciples and Baptists." The National Weekly, editorially, favors the merger, but recognizes important differences that must be eliminated before the union is possible.

In pointing out the differences between the two bodies, the The Christian-Evangelist says, "They (the Baptists) have a strong denominational consciousness, whereas we do not have that intense group feeling. Also, they are predominantly calvinistic in background—emphasizing more than we the importance of the emotional experience of conversion. Alexander Campbell and Barton Stone both reacted against the emphasis on that experience, teaching instead a "rational," common-sense attitude toward conversion, making it the intelligently achieved and solemnly believed conviction that one wished to accept Christ as Saviour and public confession of that conviction."

In response to a personal inquiry by the editor, scores of nationally-known pastors, college teachers, and other leaders of the Disciples, answered emphatically that the Disciples do not believe in baptismal regeneration and therefore, they are not "sacramentarians" as the Baptists and others had accused them of being and that they look upon immersion not as having any saving grace or having any necessity in itself, but as a symbol and a token to the obedience of Christ, and this position interpreted as being that generally accepted by Baptists on the matter of baptism." So this theological issue should no longer stand in the way of church union of the two bodies. The many difficulties in the way of such a union are recognized by the editor of Christian-Evangelist, who admits that to rush pell-mell into the union negotiations would be absurd. But the work has been begun and should not be discontinued even though there are great difficulties to overcome. The National Weekly continues: "The merger of two large church groups is a complicated job and many questions would have to be considered before even a beginning could be formally made.

"But such mergers can be brought about, as several recent consolidations have demonstrated. Congregationalists and the Christian Connection (Sic!) people have merged successfully, the Reformed and Evangelical churches have completed their first year together without any necessity for a single use of their adjudicating committee set up to hear possible disagreements. The day will yet come, we think, when all congregationally controlled churches such as Northern and Southern Baptists and ourselves, will merge their program and their influence. When that time comes we want our people to know that they have done their part in achieving so desirable an end."

(We wonder by what quirk of the mind, slip of the pen, or ignorance of facts, our distinguished contemporary manages to get into his otherwise sane editorial, "Christian Connection" as the name of our Christian Church.) Protestant churches under various titles and names very much need the influence of the solidarity and oneness of the Catholic church in united pronouncements and efforts to curb national and international social ills, and to speak with some authority on the fundamentals of Christian faith, and practices; but no church, no branch of the church, in its desire for numbers and prestige can with security ignore the necessity for individual salvation, and of redemption through the atoning blood of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. His is the Name that is above every name. In Him is life, and in none other; and through Him and His teachings, comes the power of saving a lost world from its sins.

A VISIT WITH DR. MARTYN SUMMERBELL.

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

It was my delightful privilege a few days ago, Tuesday—June 2nd, to be exact—to spend several hours visiting with one of the most distinguished leaders the Christian Church has had in all its history,—Dr. Martyn Summerbell of Lakemont, New York. Knowing that hundreds of THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers will be interested in learning about a visit with and the health conditions of this "grand old man" I write these few lines.

The early morning drive along the beautiful shores of Seneca Lake on my way to Lakemont gave me one of the secrets of the inspiration life has had for the President of Starkey Seminary down through all the years. For in the setting of the charms of this picturesque lake with its unique shore approaches, the Seminary is located as if the landscape setting were made for the school itself. Nature indeed lavished its touches of beauty upon Lake Seneca and its environs. The inspiration of this wondrous bit of scenery has no doubt contributed much to the mind and soul and accomplishments of the hero of this sketch.

And a real hero Dr. Summerbell has been in the fight against narrowness, bigotry, and blindness in religion, and against ignorance in every realm of human interest. An outstanding leader in the organization and life of the Federal Council of Churches in America, a prophet in his own denomination, his life and work have been a constant challenge to all the ministers of the younger generation who have rejoiced that even the shadow of his influence has fallen upon their lives.

Heroic, but always unassuming, courageous but always considerate, aggressive but always patient, Dr. Summerbell has labored in season and out of season for more than seventy years in the vineyard of the Lord. At the young age of sixteen he began to assume the responsibilities of Kingdom service, and now being in his eighty-ninth year, he still has the marks of youth in his sense of humor, cheerfulness, hopefulness and human interest.

Knowing that he had suffered two serious accidents within the last two years, I was happily surprised to find him in such splendid condition of health for a man his age, able to go with me to show me places of interest about the village and the Seminary, the student body of which I addressed at the Chapel services in response to his gracious request and the urgent invitation of the new president of the institution, Dr. Long.

On the spacious veranda of the beautiful home overlooking the lake, the home which Dr. Summerbell has occupied for so many years—until the death of his devoted wife last fall—we sat and talked of the interests of our United Church, of the men who served the Christian Church before the merger, and of the larger contribution of vital interest and cooperation some of the Christian Churches and ministers ought to be making to the merger, which from the beginning has been very close to the heart of Dr. Summerbell.

One of the things that impressed me greatly when browsing through his private library was a sectional book case, orderly and systematically filled with the most carefully and neatly as well as scholarly prepared outlines of his sermons and lectures given down through all these years. Only a genius could devise such a unique system of classification as that which Dr. Summerbell has used in preserving the product of his hard study and constructive as well as creative thinking down through the years. The well-known books from the pen of Dr. Summerbell: "Religion In College Life"; "Faith for the College Man"; "Christian Home Training"; "Christ in Word and Work"; "The Re-Birth of Europe" and other meritorious books he has written suggest the wealth of scholarship the collection of outlines referred to contains. An illustration of the reach of his wide popularity is a recent, interesting tribute to his life and work, as printed in a large magazine in England.

Since a serious accident about two years ago, Dr. Summerbell has discontinued his labors as president of Starkey Seminary, but his interest in the school, which most unfortunately will be closed next year, remains the same, and his concern for young life is as strong as ever.

After the death of his wife, Dr. Summerbell decided to close his large home and live at the Aged Ministers' Home, of which for years he has been the president of the Board of Directors. His home is kept the same as when Mrs. Summerbell passed to her reward, so that he has the pleasure of its attractiveness and memories whenever desired. His characteristic spirit of independence is expressed in his insistence that he pay for all his accommodations at the Aged Ministers' Home, though no minister would be more entitled to its courtesies gratis than is he.

The hours spent in the companionship with this friend of so many of us will long be remembered. His "God bless you" as we shook hands and said good-bye, will echo in my soul in all the years to come.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Rev. Herbert George Council, Jr., a member of the Franklin Christian Church, graduated from William and Mary College during the recent Commencement. He plans to enter Yale Divinity School next September. He is a licentiate of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference. He has supplied, occasionally, several pulpits with acceptance, since being licensed to preach the Gospel.

He came to Suffolk several days ago and held a conference with the pastor, Dr. John G. Truitt. He felt the need of some practical experience and an opportunity to study the work and methods of a city church. In revealing this desire he frankly said: "I am not looking for salary. I want to know more about pastoral work as a prelude to my work in the Seminary and University. If you have some work I can do, I will be glad to spend the summer months working in the Suffolk Christian Church." A small remuneration was named—too small to be considered as pay—and he accepted the offer and is at work.

This adventure on the part of Brother Council is so full of suggestion and so rich in significance that it seems worthy of mention and emphasis. Thirty-eight years ago, today, this writer accepted a call to Oakland Christian Church (and a week later to other churches), a week after graduating from Elon College, without any experience and with little contact with any other minister. Text books and college professors are a great help to a young minister. But they cannot anticipate and supply all his needs. It was fortunate for me, in the untried experience, that I came in contact with that prince of pastors, Dr. W. W. Staley. He was more than a seminary faculty and a university staff, when the practical questions needed solution.

This is a great privilege for this young man, and such an opportunity should be sought by every young man who is preparing for the ministry. A pastor's assistant serves the place of an apprentice. Too many young men, in every area of life, desire to begin at the top—from the standpoint of salary and position. It is better to begin at the bottom—near the foundation—where the ladders are not too long and the climbing too steep. The foundation of all education is in books, but the personality of the writer and the teacher counts more than the writings of the author and the lectures in the classroom. Sweet memories of lovable teachers are a rich heritage. And one would be happy to be able to forgive and forget the egotistic teacher who expended his superiority complex to the point of exasperation and disgust. Both kinds are needed in the classroom. But a different type of personality will help the young person who is taking his place in the active field of his chosen work.

Young ministers throughout our church should be encouraged to follow the example of the young man who is now in Suffolk. It would make them more efficient in their pastoral work, and save them and their churches many a heartache in the future. There is an old saying that, "where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise." But there can be no bliss for the young minister who is unwilling to learn from others. No minister can be his best without personal contact with other ministers. For that reason, if for no other, all ministers should spend as much time as possible in fellowship with their brethren. Personal touch enlarges the horizon and broadens the vision. There is no place for envy and jealousy among ministers who have the vision of God and the kingdom. What difference does it make if some other minister has a larger church, a more beautiful parsonage and more salary? Why should a man be measured by the size of the place of his ministry? The field is the world, and there is room for all who will work. Forget the place, and the pay, and remember the work and the kingdom.

ECHOES FROM THE CAMPAIGN.

When a campaign is launched in the interest of any good cause, there are always those who are cold and indifferent, if not antagonistic, who will do little or nothing to help the campaign and are not seriously disturbed if they find they have hindered it. On the other hand, there are always those, and their number is usually larger, who are interested in the campaign, willing to do their part and anxious to do whatever they can to help with the campaign and to assure its success.

The Elon College campaign is not different in this respect. A few have expressed lack of concern for the college or for the success of this effort in behalf of the college. Others are greatly concerned and are offering themselves that the goal set may be reached. This morning one interested and anxious to help dropped by the office, paid half of his subscription, half of a friend's subscription, and a voluntary contribution from another, declaring anew his interest in the college and in the campaign and offering to stay in the fight until the job is done. A number have expressed their interest in the campaign verbally and have assured the ones charged with the responsibility of their continued interest. A few have taken the time to write and express their interest in the college. A lady unknown to me under date of June 21st, writes: "As the campaign has about closed and no one has come to solicit, I am sending my little mite of $2. I wish I could send a larger amount but I can't at this time. I have been paying a $1 a year for a long time and expect to continue to pay as long as I live. I love Elon and hope I will have some grandchildren to go there for school. I hope the campaign will go over the top." Under date of June 11th, another interested party writes: "I had no committee to serve with me so I did all the canvassing. If there is anything about my report you do not understand I shall be glad to explain. Our quota was $1,090. We went fifty cents over the top and have sent $600.50 in cash. If each church would do its duty there would be no trouble in raising the entire amount. You will always find me willing to do what I can for Elon and I most surely appreciate the great service that you have rendered to our church through Elon. It would be such a blow to the church should the college fail. I wish so much that every member of every church could realize this." Under date of June 5th, another good brother writes: "If more of our people could see and realize what we have in Elon, there certainly would be a deeper interest. Yes, I shall continue as chairman for my church and I am sending my pledge for $25 more. The campaign cannot fail. Elon College must live on after we are gone. I owe personally $1,500 and I am paying 6 per cent interest on that, but I owe Elon College something too, and to pay $125 now is quite a sacrifice, but by the help of God I will pay it and be richer toward Him. I shall pray for the success of the college and for your health and strength to win and in the end we shall rejoice together."

The above letters from which I quote express a very real interest and put heart and encouragement in the ones charged with the responsibility of carrying on for the college. I appreciate these letters and will appreciate any word of encouragement from those throughout the church and alumni who are interested and anxious for the success of the campaign.

TO A SICK FRIEND.

"I wrap this little gift about
With sweet friendship's finest feelings,
And may life bring to you its best
In all its various dealings.
For oft through pain we find true gain,
Rugged strength comes with dark shadows,
And all is well if we attain
Life with no distressful shallows.

"We all must have our testing times
When bodies ache and spirits pine,
When hope and love are needed most
To conquer fear and selfish whine;
Yet life is cast in firmer mold
As courage grips fast with sorrow,
While grief and pain seem but as gold
In the joy that comes tomorrow."

GREATER THAN MONEY.

Great as is the purchasing power of money, there are some things that "money cannot buy," and this can only be because these other things have an intrinsic value and power of their own greater than that of money. General Robert E. Lee, after the close of the Civil War, was offered a salary of fifty thousand dollars or more per annum by an insurance company, if he would consent to become its president and allow his name and fame to be commercialized and used by the company in a way to make money. He refused, saying that he wanted to work for and with the young men of the South who had fought with him in that awful struggle and were now moneyless and poverty-stricken. They needed to be educated, and he gave his life to this work as president of Washington and Lee University at a salary of only fifteen hundred dollars. America has never produced a man more honored and beloved than Robert E. Lee. A modest, humble, self-effacing Christian man of spotless life, his character was pure gold. There was "the hiding of his power." Money is great, but manhood is greater. Every man may have his price, but there are some things money cannot buy.—Dean Tillett in "Providence, Prayer and Power."

THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE RURAL CHURCH—A NATIONAL PLAN.

By MALCOLM DANA, D. D.

(Concluded from last week.)

A satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church must secure for it is a ministry qualified for service; with a liking for the country and country people, and specially trained to serve and function in the countryside.

Our one hundred letters agree, in their ideas and assertions, as to who should serve the country church. Let a few of them tell us! "The rural pastor needs to be a well-qualified and consecrated teacher of Christianity; for that is the form of religion which prevails in rural communities." "Rural ministers should be selected because of their fitness to live and function in the country. This should include a love for the country, a sympathetic appreciation of rural peoples and of their contributions to civilization—a sociological point of view." "The rural minister must be sympathetic with rural environment; this means, intimate knowledge of out-of-doors, and an appreciation of informal neighborhood activities." "Rural ministers need to be concerned with fundamentals of rural life; stability, love of family life, love for living things, concern for the stability of all social life—rather than many texts." "Selection of personality, education, health, point of view."

These are only a few quotations, from the many letters which express opinions as to who should serve rural churches. The demand for specially trained rural ministers is equally stressed. "A rural church needs a minister who has been trained for rural work, and who expects to find in it his permanent work; but this cannot happen until the country minister can be assured of at least a living wage." "The fact that so many of our young people are being educated makes them much more critical of a narrow, uneducated ministry; that preaches at them or against them; rather than giving them wise leadership in constructive thought and service." "Rural ministers should be specifically trained for specific tasks, as all of their leadership competitors are—the rural school superintendent, the county agent, the county health and social worker, etc." "There is need for an adequately prepared ministry, with agricultural, economic and social training and experience." "Population shifts have robbed rural life of leaders, and none are being trained for replacement, as far as the church is concerned. Our immediate task is to train leaders for local situations, with an adequate background of sociology—I wish that the highest paid and highest trained ministers, might be available in the country; instead of the poorest paid and poorest trained. He need not be trained to be a farmer, but he certainly should be rural-minded, and should appreciate and love the country. He should be cognizant of rural problems, and should be able to recognize the strength as well as the weakness of his particular situation." Youth gives us a final word, at this point: "Leaders are the first need: leaders with personalities that stand out. We soon forget what people say, but what they are, makes lasting impression. The rural church is used for a stepping stone to something better financially. The answer to that is: if we make the job bigger, then bigger leaders will come forward."

And, right here, this opinion should give us pause! Our letters are unanimous in holding that rural ministers should be specifically trained for work in the country. It is also intimated, that denominational field executives should have similar special and specific training, if they are to care for rural ministers as well as their churches. They cannot, in this day and generation, be mere placement men, or office statisticians; playing fast and loose with the country and its churches. Rural ministers should know something of sociology, social psychology, economics, farm management. Field executives should be even more interested and informed; or how will they understand the modern agrarian movement, which conditions and limits the whole enterprise they are supposed to care for, and promote. And yet, how many rural ministers read sociology, psychology or economics, or attend Summer Schools for Rural Ministers, where they can get the best instruction in these subjects? How much do field executives read in such lines; and when are they ever found, with their ministers, at such schools?

As to the theological seminaries, which are supposed to prepare men for rural churches! They come in for criticism—and even worse! A rather just query is made "from whom should these institutions take orders; in the matter of who they send to the country, and how they train them to go there? From their own 'inbred' academic idea or from the churches, whose servants they are supposed to be? Are curricula authoritative and trustworthy; so often devised by cloistered faculties, far removed from field contacts, decades away from actual pastoral experience, and, worst of all, with no contact with, or knowledge of, or sympathy for, the rural church—a church which is the majority church of America?" This Conference should register an unqualified opinion on this matter and by something more than placid "resolutions," or "agreements in principle," or toothless "findings," that never will be found. Let a few of our letters speak to the issue! "Colleges, universities and seminaries, should place more emphasis on training rural leaders; they should challenge leadership to be dedicated to the country." "There is need to make an analysis of what the rural minister is called upon to do; and then proceed to train him to do those things." "There is need to train men on the job to do those things which that particular job demands. Rural ministers must be specifically trained for specific tasks." "Let the theological seminaries take account of stock, at least once a year, and determine what they are doing, and what they are not doing and determine what ought to be done, and what they are leaving undone that ought to be done. Con not the seminaries more carefully choose students, quietly turning into the current of mercantile and other business or professional life, those whose education is defective, whose personality is not too attractive, and whose probable aim is as easy a job as possible.

Seminaries, executives, and rural ministers themselves, are grossly guilty of "using" rural churches as "stepping stones." There is a tragedy in the fact that the following statement will probably call forth smiles, rather than tears; a statement concerning one of our greatest denominations. "We start our young ministers in the country. If they fail there, they remain in such churches. If they succeed, they are lifted out, and sent to the city. If they fail in city churches, they are sent back to rural pastorates." More crimes are committed against the country church than this world dreams of! It is a grievous sin not to send the right kind of men, and with the right kind of training; to the rural church. It is a more grievous sin, that when the right men do go to the country, and are proving their rightness, they are not permitted to stay there. Wrong ideas of what constitutes "success," possess seminary professors, field executive and rural ministers, themselves. This situation brings a statement from one of our contributors who says: "There are no sensible denominational policies in regard to tenure of ministers"; so that "many of our rural ministers are as bad as the poorest of farm tenants. They are roving, restless creatures, and until we get some stability of tenure, by means of more decent and forward-looking denominational policies, we will get nowhere in the rural church."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

AN AFRICAN HOUSEWIFE.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

(If our women wish an interesting reading for a Missionary Society meeting, here it is.—Ed.)

Oregon housewives who can return from an afternoon at the Woman's Club or the Church Guild to find their summer supper all prepared in the electric refrigerator would find a startling contrast between their lives and those of the Ovimbundu women among whom works an Oregon City woman, Mrs. Marian Ingram Waln of Chilisso, West Africa.

But they would also find that the saying about "The Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady" could be applied to American and Ovimbundu women when it comes to fundamental emotions and desires. Mrs. Waln, who first went to Africa under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions with her husband in 1928, was home on furlough in 1934 and visited her sisters, Mrs. Bessie Van Wey of Center Street, Oregon City, as well as other parts of the home state and Massachusetts.

Rising with the sun the Ovimbundu women pack their baskets and small native hoes on their heads and start out for the fields without breakfast. No, it is not a new diet, just an old Umbundu custom to eat but one meal a day except for a few nibbles, perhaps, of a baked sweet potato or roasted corn as they work. Many of them take their babies strapped to their backs all thru the long hot day. But before they go out to the fields in the morning the Christians attend devotions at the little church.

After the day's work they trudge back often several miles along rough trails to their kraals keeping a sharp eye out for bits of wood to start the evening fire. They carefully balance these on their heads with their basket and hoe and often when they reach home the load has become so heavy that it must be lifted to the ground by someone else.

Native customs in Africa are hard on a woman. So when she returns from a day in the fields she must first prepare supper for the husband and the elder boys who eat first, after which mother and the children can have their breakfast, lunch and dinner three in one. Mush is the main dish and to have mush, meal must be pounded each day on the rocks by the river. It is prepared by pouring into boiling water and having all the lumps stirred out. No self-respecting Ovimbundu cook serves lumpy mush.

Then come the dishes, which, to be sure, don't amount to much more than a grass mat which may be shaken and possibly a bowl or two. Then tomorrow's corn must be pounded. After this the Christian women go to vespers, and following a chat they early roll out their sleeping mats to give their toil-wearied bodies a little rest. To them their Christian services are the heart and center of their lives, for Christianity, as no other force in the world, has freed women from slavery and helped to give them a decent chance in life. But there is a long way to go yet in Africa.

"When a man dies here everything goes to his family no matter how the widow may be situated or how many small children she may have to care for," writes Mrs. Waln. "Pagan relatives will strip everything from a hut or house even to the food, and, as in the instance of one ambitious young man who had acquired a real home, the curtains from the windows and the oil from the lamp."

A Red-Letter Day to Christian Ovimbundu women is the World Day of Prayer, which this year came on February 28th. At the same time women of every race, color and creed unite for prayer and worship. Out in that isolated corner of the universe those dark skinned sisters of American Christians entered wholeheartedly into their group gatherings, with many coming miles from distant villages and bringing their offerings in the form of eggs, chickens, corn and beans. "It certainly is a big help and inspiration to all of us," said Mikulu, a native Christian woman, to Mrs. Waln.

Happy in her work, Mrs. Waln finds problems that American women, for the most part, do not have to meet. For example, she had a visit recently in her work-room of two 40-inch snakes. She says she didn't appreciate their call one bit. Then, while picking violets she nearly put her hand on a black viper. "From now on," she writes, "I shall poke a stick into the violet bed before I start picking. The people told me that the snakes hid in the hedge so I have had to cut down my carefully nurtured evergreen trees. I could not take any chances when I have two barefooted boys running in the yard."

It may be remembered by Mrs. Waln's friends here that she spent several months in a native village with her baby in order to learn the Umbundu tongue. Her husband visited her once a week and milk was sent for the baby, but otherwise she lived close to the people. The women had never seen a "bottle baby" or one fed on schedule. They feed their babies whenever they cry and often food very bad for little tummies.

"Ndena, Mariana," they cried in distress when the little Waln wailed. "Have mercy and give him food! When our babies cry we feed them." To which Mother Marian serenely replied, driving home a lesson in child care, "But isn't my baby just as fat as yours; does he cry any more?" And the tender-hearted Ovimbundu mothers had to admit she was right.

The Walns are the representatives in Africa of the First Congregational Church of Springfield, Mass., the Congregational churches of Columbia and Andover, Connecticut, and of the Hampton Association in Massachusetts of 46 Congregational church including Holyoke, Chicopee, Springfield, Wilbraham, Palmer and Westfield.

KAGAWA'S FINAL MESSAGE TO AMERICA.

Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, Japan's Apostle of Jesus Christ, will deliver his final message to America over the air Tuesday, June 30th. He will then sail for Oslo, Norway, to attend the World Sunday School Association Convention. During his six months in the United States, Kagawa has spoken in 150 cities to audiences ranging from 2,000 to 15,000. Like St. Paul of old, he has travelled up and down the land interpreting the love of Jesus Christ from an oriental viewpoint. He has challenged World Peace, and has reinterpreted the Oriental to America. He has stirred thousands with his deep spiritual message and his emphasis on the social teachings of Jesus. And he has interpreted the brotherhood idea of Jesus Christ in terms of a cooperative commonwealth.

The keen interest manifested by thousands unable to get into the public meetings has brought about the magnanimous cooperation of the National Broadcasting Company in giving coast to coast facilities for Kagawa's farewell message. The exact hour of the broadcast, and the stations over which it will be heard will be announced in local newspapers throughout the country.

This great national figure in Japan who saved Christian cooperatives, especially among the farming and laboring classes, goes to Europe at the request of the Japanese Government to study Health Insurance. He is a member of a committee of the Japanese Government which is studying this important matter, and which will make recommendations for a Health Insurance Plan for all Japan.

In China today everything is challenged in the earth and in the heavens,—religion, marriage, family affection, respect of son for father, or pupil for teacher, or servant for master.

—Basil Mathews.

IMPROVEMENT OF RURAL CHURCH.

To offset, but in no way to lighten the indictment, against the seminaries, let us recognize the fact that a miracle has happened in the seminary world! Last November and December, the Interseminary Commission for the Training of Rural Ministers, which consists of five New England seminaries cooperating toward this end, met, first, the combined Faculties of Boston University School of Theology, Andover-Newton Theological School, and Bangor Theological Seminary; and two weeks later, the full Faculties of Yale University Divinity School and Hartford Theological Seminary. A ten-page document had been wrought out by the Commission itself, in a four-session meeting; which dealt with a great many of the very points raised in our one hundred letters. This document furnished a basis for discussions concerning curricula, placement, supervision, continuing and reconditioning education. Such actual get-together of theological seminary faculties never before happened in New England, and probably not in America.

A satisfactory plan for the improvement of the rural church must encourage programs dictated by studies made, to ascertain just what the particular needs of the people are to which the churches should minister.

One of the greatest weaknesses of the rural church is, that it is "preacher centered" and not "program-centered"; and programs are imported rather than indigenous. Each new minister comes on to the field, with his own pet "little bag of tricks." He casts aside most of what has gone before; and uses sermons and plans which have made him famous somewhere else. This happens with every new minister, and the rural church is kept in a perpetual kindergarten stage, of ever new and untried beginnings. And, Hermann Morse said years ago, "even among strong churches, the program is formal, conventional, and stereotyped. It is no part of the practice to ascertain by actual study the particular needs of its people, to which it ought to minister." Our one hundred letters again make the suggestion, in this matter of program; that orders should be taken from the local field. Let us quote! "Too many churches allow programs to grow, instead of planning them." "There must be a more inclusive church program, in which the people of the community can have a part." "Drives must be made to build up self-appointed local groups, to study the needs of the local church. Expert advice must be had, but organization must not go ahead of thinking." "A program should give our communities financial stability. This lack, works to the detriment of our churches. Communities are not able to equip a church suitably for its needs; neither are they able to support a pastor who has training to meet the present day needs. Nothing adds more to the stability of a rural community than for the people to own their own homes. When that is the case, they take a long term view of things, and endeavor to build for the future." "The economic system must be corrected. Christianity began with the home. What if the latter becomes only a place in which to stay?" "The church must take an enlarged interest in country problems such as organization, cooperatives, marketing, rural education, scientific agriculture." "Someone must know the psychology of children, to lead and direct their activities. This is the most fruitful field of Kingdom building, and the least money and effort is spent on it." "Programs must be adapted to the fields themselves, unhampered by denominational rivalry, broad enough to include everything of importance to the life of the community, concerned with material, intellectual, and spiritual needs; developing interest in the whole sweep of national and international problems. "We do need a national program designed to develop agrarianism, as a way of life. Commercial agriculture has robbed the farmer of his real policy and program, which is to develop agriculture as a way of life, in which all social and religious programs are designed to enrich rural living."

A satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church must give youth and laymen proportionate place in the actual conduct of the denominations and local churches.

Here is our colossal failure: originally at the Cleveland Conference, later at the Washington Congress; and now, once again, at this National Conference on the Rural Church. Where is modern youth? Where are the laymen? We shall, as usual, talk about them, but not with them; although the rural church stands or fails as it builds into itself these two most desirable elements. Our one hundred letters speak to this point! Let two sociologists tell us. "There is need for re-thinking with and for modern youth; which does not think in terms of its parents, and the 'old time religion.' There must be plans whereby youth can have a chance and responsibility to do something; and each and all of them have a job." Listen to the words of a layman! "Give youth a part in the administration of the church, a voice in determining its policies; thus creating a feeling of responsibility." Permit modern youth to ask for its own place in the sun! "At the Indiana Young People's Conference, it was said that modern young people do not want older folks talking about them as 'the future generation,' but as the 'working church of today.'" Again, "Youth is demanding a place in the program of the church. But don't let the church make the mistake of building a program for youth. In building an entirely new and separate program there is no future. Youth soon outgrows itself. Instead, build a program for the entire community together, one in which the old and young can take part." And once more: "Rural leadership must be persuaded to attract youth, and convince it that they are wanted in positions of responsibility—despite the attitude of the elders." Finally: "Youth wants a church that can give it leadership in cultural life and activities. Youth wants a church whose principles can solve every problem, and whose members have faith enough to put those principles to work. Youth wants a church that will change to adapt its program to changing needs."

Here are no flippant words, or captious criticisms. Rather, the thirty-two letters from modern youth, manifest a wistful tone. The young people seem to be standing outside, but not wanting to hold aloof from the church of their parents. They appear to be asking, rather hopelessly, "cannot adults and young people, in the rural churches, do things together?" What are we going to do about it? The saddest tragedy of family life is when, through fault of theirs, a father and mother have lost the ability and chance to be their children's best "pal." People outside of the family have that rare privilege and joy of playing the friend; and of counselling, in the most intimate affairs of young life. It would seem as though this tragic thing has happened to the rural church and its young people. And so, perhaps, these questions from a young, but serious-minded girl! "How serious is the problem of the rural church? Is it still to be considered a factor in American life? Is the need for religion as important as when those churches were built? Is it possible that the church, as a social factor, has finished its service to the community?" A young man, who has recently made a study of 4,000 young folks going over from the last year in high school to the freshman year in college, has tried to find out what has happened to them religiously:—in the twenty-one colleges entered. He reports that these young people have not lost their religious faith, or their belief in religion. But the sad fact is that they almost universally distinguish between religion and the church. They are for the one, but indifferent to the other." The retiring President of the Youth Section of the American Country Life Association, said a few words to the adult section, last November. "It seems to us young folks, that you adults do not trust us. You are not willing to let us do things, and in our own way." And yet, Dr. Robert Gammon, an expert in young people's work, said, not long ago, in substance—"If we grown-ups do not stop trying to superimpose our own adult theories and ways of doing things, upon modern young people, we will lose them, and we will deserve to lose them."

All that youth asks is a real part in the management of the church; which we profess, needs them. Ought not their request to be a welcome one? But suffer this query! Is there a young man or woman, under twenty-one years of age, on any one of the committees of the three Councils represented in this National Conference? Is there one such, on any of the Boards of management of the denominations represented here? Is there such a young man or woman, on the Board of Trustees or Boards of Deacons, of any of the local churches we belong to? Was there a person on the program committee, that made the program for this conference? If not, whose fault is it that youth is not "pals" with the church?

And now in conclusion, we will take our final prescription from our one hundred letters.

A satisfactory program for the improvement of the rural church must restore adventure, risk, and even romance, to missionary achievement and the work of the rural church.

Three years ago, it was said by someone, on the floor of the Home Missions Council, that the great tragedy of the "depression" was, that it had taken from the missionary task all experiment, adventure, and demonstration: the three most valuable assets of any militant enterprise. Yea, verily! And how we have pared to the bone, and gotten down to a "pinch-penny" maintenance of the drab status quo. What wonder enthusiasm, exuberance, and seeming confidence in God and man, appear to have departed from our deeds. We have ceased asking, and attempting great things for God. A satisfactory national plan for the improvement of the rural church, cannot achieve along such lines. Joyous venturing against odds, will alone bring "recovery." And by what sort of deeds? Let three final letters chart the way!

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

"THE EFFECTIVE YOUNG PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATION."

This is the name of Bulletin No. 55 for the Pilgrim Fellowship, which is an excellent bulletin filled with suggestions concerning young people's work. The General Council of our Church in session the past week had as its theme: "The Effective Church." This bulletin tells how the young people's organizations can be effective.

It is divided into ten main sections. The topics concerning the effective organization are (1) It Plans Its Program. (2) It Faces Vital Issues. (3) It Provides Stimulating Meetings. (4) It Supports the Church. (5) It Serves Those in Need. (6) It Works for Social Justice. (7) It Budgets Its Income and Expenses. (8) It Grows in Membership. (9) It Trains and Supports Its Leaders. (10) It Organizes for Action.

As an example of what may be found in the bulletin, I am quoting the page: "Plans Its Programs."

PLANS ITS PROGRAMS.

Pilgrim Church, Toledo, is enthusiastic about an activity which has resulted in better plans for the year, a fine feeling of fellowship, and real co-operation. Here is the plan:

1. A "Retreat" is held near the city for two days in late summer.

2. The officers and committee chairmen of both the high school and older young people's departments, the director of religious education, and two counselors attend.

3. Careful advance preparation is made. Conferences are held with the young people who lead the "planning groups," of which there are five: program (Sunday evenings and World Friendship); Sunday School worship; recreation; finance (planning budget for the year); and personnel (to choose special committees for some of the events of the year and to see what all members can do.)

4. The schedule for the two days includes two "planning groups," an assembly where all report, a worship service, free time for out-of-doors fun, and a well-planned party for all.

5. All share in cooking and washing dishes. Meals are simple. Much food is prepared in advance at home to save time at camp.

6. Needless to add—everybody has a good time!

7. They return to develop and promote their own plans. The adaptations of this scheme may include "fifty-seven varieties." Here are a few. The time may be extended, or the retreat may be for one day only, closing with a vesper or camp-fire sing. You may gather at some country home, or a near-by camp, or on some college campus. A small church may invite its entire group. Officers confer in advance with the minister, so that plans will be made with the whole church program in mind. Summer conference delegates are often included. Youth officers of two or three churches of different denominations may hold a retreat to plan a community program. In many states, Youth Fellowship goals and plans are being worked out in such gatherings. Plans for fall can be made during a series of August committee meetings in some comfortable place. Remember two essentials: (1) careful advance plans, and (2) assembling of such resources as this "Bulletin," with Lakeside Report and "The Pilgrim Highroad."

THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

The General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches was in session the past week at Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Massachusetts. Representatives from all over the country were there to report on the work they had done and to make plans for the future. Among those from the Southeast were Rev. E. C. Gillette, Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams, Rev. and Mrs. E. B. Leshner, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Miss Emily Carleton and Rev. and Mrs. Frank Atkinson from Florida; Rev. Fred P. Ensminger and his son, Ross E. Ensminger and Miss Marguerite Davison of Alabama; Rev. M. J. Sweet of Tennessee; Rev. George N. Edwards of South Carolina; Rev. W. E. Wissemann Mr. Simpson and Dr. H. Shelton Smith from North Carolina; Revs. H. S. Hardcastle, Joe French, Elwood W. Jones and J. E. McCauley, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, Rev. and Mrs. R. L. House, and the writer from Virginia. There may have been others whom I did not see or do not remember.

Judge John V. Sees, a member of the Christian Church, presided to the delight of all present. Mr. Roger W. Babson was elected Moderator for the next biennium. Dr. Mary E. Wooley, president of Mount Holyoke College, was elected Honorary Moderator.

The Strategy Committee elected at the last Council recommended several changes in the organization of the Council, and the committee report was accepted. This means that hereafter the Executive Committee will do the work formerly done by the Business Committee and Survey Committee. The Council for Social Action has taken over the work of the Commission on International Relations. The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life will have a seminar on church attendance which will probably supplant the present Commission on Church Attendance.

The discontinuance of some of these committees and commissions makes it impossible for the southeast to have quite as many representatives as officers of the Council, but the same is true of other sections of the country as well.

The addresses, worship services, and seminars on "The Effective Church" were all of high order and will doubtless mean much in strengthening our united Church.

"TO READ AND TALK ABOUT."

This is the name of another little booklet put out by The Pilgrim Press which lists a large amount of materials for young people's societies. All leaders of young people's groups should have a copy of this in hand for suggestions concerning material to use. Single copies can be had free, and additional copies at $.05 each by writing The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, or the Board of Christian Education, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

Hymn: "Lead On, O King Eternal."

Prayer.

Hymn: "Living For Jesus."

Announcement of Topic—Scripture Lesson.

Leader's Introductory Talk.

Hymn: "More Like the Master."

Talk:

"The first law of right conduct was the law of conscience which told Adam and Eve that they had sinned. Throughout all the ages this master-power has reigned in majesty over the hearts of the world. Those who obey that little voice within cannot stray from the great highway of right, for this is God's greatest "guide-gift" to pilot man throughout his earthly journey. The best part is, that it gives to your inner self the golden stamp of approval. It is better to have the approval of your own conscience than the applause of all mankind. Conscience is the overall compass; the pilgrim's staff; the director-general of acts conforming to "Blessed are the pure in heart." Immediate reproof comes to those who disobey its divine mandates, herein being the call to return to paths of rectitude, which if unheeded result in a seared conscience, to which we cannot become subordinate if we are to be numbered among the worthy. Cultivate a growth of the delicate sensibilities of your conscience; maintain its freedom, mastery and purity. It will then be the morning and evening stars of life; an angel of light; a sunburst of moral graces, shedding its noon-day light in perpetuity on all the paths of man."

"Man's conscience is the oracle of God!

What exile from himself can flee?"

(Taken from The System Bible Study.)

For Discussion—

1. Is it safe to "let your conscience be your guide?"
2. Does our conscience ever lead us wrong?
3. Do you think that some people sin repeatedly until they do not have a conscience?
4. Do some people let their conscience go to extremes on some subjects?
5. Is everyone able to interpret the Divine Voice for himself?

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

REVIEW: JESUS MEETING HUMAN NEEDS.

LESSON XIII—JUNE 28, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Jesus of Nazareth . . . went about doing good."—Acts 10:38.

LESSON MATERIAL: The Lessons for the Quarter

Jesus is too many-sided to be treated in one review lesson. Indeed although we have spent six months on lessons from Luke's gospel which is one of the records of Jesus' life and ministry, we have but skimmed the surface of that record. But in this review lesson a few of the general impressions of this many-sided Son of Man and Son of God will be presented.

Jesus the Man.

Jesus was the Son of man. He was "made in the likeness of men." He grew and developed naturally and normally. He lived a genuine human life. He entered into the experiences of a normal human being. He achieved character and goodness—it was not given to Him. He studied and worked and played. He was tempted in all points like as we are tempted, but unlike us He did not yield to temptation. He was a man, a perfect man. Luke sets him forth as a truly human being, and as the perfect man from the standpoint of humanity. Jesus was the Son of Man.

Jesus the Teacher.

Jesus was not only a teacher. He is known as The Teacher. Never a man spake as He spake. His teaching was at once simple and profound. For the most part He spoke in words that even children can understand, and yet in terms that the wisest cannot exhaust. His teaching had freshness and vitality and power in it. He used the laws of practical pedagogy and psychology. He was The Master Teacher.

Jesus The Friend.

Jesus was a friendly fellow. His personality was attractive. He had a friendly spirit, even toward his enemies. He was a tried and true friend—having loved his own he loved them unto the end. His eyes were always open to human need and his heart was responsive to those needs. He loved folks, the unloving and the unloveable folks. Men found in him a true friend. Men instinctively think of him today as The Great Friend. This does not mean that Jesus was weakly sentimental or soft. No man ever made more exacting demands on his friends.

Jesus The Mystic.

Jesus believed in the reality and the integrity of the inner life. He believed that men could have immediate and direct access to and communion with God. He believed there were realities which could not be seen and handled, but which could be experienced. He believed that the Spirit of God and the spirit of man could be brought together in a personal and vital way. Jesus believed in religion, in the things of the spirit, in the impulses of the heart.

Jesus The Physician.

Jesus healed people. We do not know the secret of his healing ministry, that is, the technique of his work. We do not know that again and again, Luke, who was a physician, records the healing ministry of Jesus. And Jesus had power not only over bodily disease, but over mental and spiritual illness. We call him the Great Physician and we do well, for so He is.

Jesus The Prophet.

Jesus was a prophet, not so much in the sense of one who foretells things which are to come to pass—although of course Jesus did this—but in the sense of speaking for God which is the root meaning of the word prophet. He went beyond the hard and fast literal word. He had spiritual genius and insight. His message was creative. He was the prophet of God, the One through whom God spoke directly.

Jesus The Master.

Jesus was always master of himself. He never lost his self-control. He always disciplined himself. He always kept himself subject to the will of the Father. One of the miracles of the life of Jesus was his mastery of himself.

But Jesus was also master of others. There was something regal about him. He was a man of power. But it was not physical force. It was the mastery which came from character and life. He knew what was in man and He knew how to handle men. He did not break down the will of men, but men recognized in him their Master.

Jesus The Saviour.

Jesus was and is the Saviour of men. Through him men come into a new relationship with God, come into a new experience of God that means salvation. Jesus did for men what men could not do for themselves. He himself said that he had come to seek and to save that which was lost. It is as Saviour that Jesus made His most distinctive contribution to humanity. We call him Jesus for He saves his people from their sin. His death on the Cross was redemptive.

Jesus The Lord.

"Wherefore God hath highly exalted him and given him a name which is above every name." Peter said that God had made the same Jesus whom the Jewish rulers had crucified both Lord and Christ. He is more—he is Lord of lords and King of kings. And He shall reign forever and forever.

Jesus The Son of God.

"Surely this man was the Son of God"—the words of the centurion at the Cross express the sentiments and the convictions of multitudes of believers through all time and in all places. Men have become convinced that while Jesus was a true man, He was more than man. They believe that He was divine to such an extent that He partook of the nature of Deity. He was God manifested in the flesh. He was the Son of God.

THE CHURCH THAT IS TO BE.

"There cannot be a God of love," men say, because if there were, and He looked upon this world, His heart would break." The Church points to the Cross and says: "His heart does break."

"It is God who has made the world," men say. "It is He who should bear the load." The Church points to the Cross and says: "He does bear it."

"God is beyond man's comprehension, and it is blasphemy to say you know Him," and the Church answers, "We do not know Him perfectly, but we worship the majesty we see."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"BLESSEDNESS."

"Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is."—Jer. 17:7.

"Better is a little with the fear of the Lord, than great treasures and trouble therewith."—Prov. 15:16.

The world has its own idea of blessedness. It thinks in terms of immediate possessions. Some of those terms are: "Blessed are the successful." "Blessed are the rich." "Blessed are the admired." "Blessed is he who has a place in society." "Blessed is a strong man." "Blessed is the man who can govern affairs." "Blessed is the man who has a lot of leisure." "Blessed is he who can have pleasure." For after all these things do we seek. These are the beatitudes of sight and this present world.

The Lord must have realized the weakness of man in these temptations when He declared heaven's blessed Beatitudes. As we read His utterances we are almost shocked to realize that not a single one of the world's list of blessed things is found in the mind of Jesus when He treats of blessedness.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us the blessedness of attainment in Christian character and in God consciousness. We would know Thy blessedness in humility, love, loyalty and service. O God, forgive us of our sins. Strengthen us by Thy grace and make us Thine through and through.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"DESCENDING IN ORDER TO RISE."

"Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the Kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:3.

"For if a man thinketh himself to be something when he is nothing he deceiveth himself."—Gal. 6:3.

He who thinketh himself something cannot humble himself because he thinks he already possesses, and he cannot desire that which he already has. Only in feeling the lack of that which one most needs can one humble himself to seek that need. Preparation for the blessedness of heaven both here and hereafter consists in feeling the need of heaven. No doubt this is the reason for the Master's words.

Earthly blessedness is earned by starting at the bottom and building up. Heavenly blessedness is earned by descending. "We must stoop if we would rise," said the preacher. The Master's way was to gird Himself, assume the position of a slave and wash the feet of the disciples. This humility was necessary in order to share with the glory of the Father. Said He, "He that would be greatest among you, let him be your minister."

Prayer—O Lord God, fix our eyes on Jesus who humbled Himself to serve man that man share with Him Thy Glory. Tear down the altar of pride that we have built for ourselves. Upset the tables of carnal ambition. Drive out all unholy and unclean desire. Compel us to yield allegiance to Thee, and rule Thou in our hearts, forever.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"A MYSTERIOUS UNION."

"My spirit remaineth among you; Fear ye not."—Hag. 2:5.

Every act of the Lord Jesus Christ was not only an example but was a divine act. When He descended to the position of a servant and washed the feet of the disciples, He was God still. And throughout the whole history of His ministry on earth, He was still the everlasting Son of God. It was that divine personality brought to the level of man's own living that constituted the very center of His enduring love and eternal abiding in the heart of man.

This mysterious union between God and man defies the powers of the world to deny or diminish it, and he who abides in Him "shall ask what he will and it shall be done unto him."

On the other hand if one forgets Jesus and His ever-abiding presence, moral and spiritual decay sets in.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, give unto us a keen sensitiveness to the divine in us, our part with the Lord Jesus, and a discerning spirit to know right from wrong. O God, help us to separate wrong from right, the trivial from the important, and give us the courage and the strength to hold on to those pursuits and pleasures that endure. Choose Thou for us. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"WEIGHED AND WANTING."

"God be merciful to me, a sinner."—Lk. 18:13.

This is the prayer of the poor publican, who, seeking the grace of God fell down in the dust and plead for mercy.

If we are not mistaken, the spirit of the publican is lacking today in a very profound fashion. There are masses who believe that there is a God, who believe in the efficacy of Jesus in the life, who fall in the ranks of the army of the Lord. But they are sophisticated. They approach God with their own ideas of righteousness. They feel that to indulge the pleasures of sin for a season is not so bad. Says one, "A miserable sinner? Preposterous! I'm not so bad."

Behold, we see them falling in as though they did God a favor, and like soldiers who load themselves with all their personal belongings, they take with them all their pet ideas of goodness. But the soldier soon learns that even the weight of his mother's photograph is a burden and he must unload down to the barest necessities if he is to endure to the end. Paul said, "Let us lay aside every weight that doth so easily beset us." Disgorge of all that is thine own. Lay it on the altar. The greatest gift of our Lord's was Himself. The greatest gift of a man is himself. And, if we understand, in making that gift it must be done prayerfully, penitently, as a "miserable sinner."

Prayer—Whatever we may think of ourselves, Dear Lord, enable us to think Thy thoughts after Thee. Forbid that we shall degrade Thy glory with an attitude of patronage or personal esteem. Reveal to us the sinfulness of sin, and forbid that we shall think that life can be happy with any less goodness than that which thou hast shown us in Jesus Christ. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"PROFITABLE ARITHMETIC."

"Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish from it."—Deut. 4:1-8.

How can we add to God's word, and how can we take from it? In the old days, when the Bible was in the making, a scribe might omit what displeased him, a ruler might order excised what condemned his arbitrary acts, a priest might insert some of his favorite regulations, many changes might be made in individual copies if this rule solemnly forbidden them were not insisted upon. But who, today, could add to God's word or subtract from it?

It seems impossible, and yet many Christians are constantly guilty of it. We do it when we slur over portions of the Bible without regarding them. We do it when we deliberately forget and put behind us some command that we do not like. We do it by overemphasis on other requirements. We do it by needless ignorance of certain Books and wilful misinterpretation of other Books.

Let us reverence the Word of God so deeply that every sentence of its shall be sacred in our eyes, and that it shall be in every part the man of our counsel.

Prayer—God of Holy Writ, implant every one of Thy truths firmly in our hearts. We ask it in the Name of Thy Son, Thy living Word.—Amen.
AMOS R. WELLS.

SATURDAY.

"TESTIMONY IN TURN."

"For ye all can prophesy one by one."—I Cor. 14:26-40.

Are we too loquacious? Let us ask ourselves. Do we, like the Christians of Corinth, hold our contributions to the current discussions to be so valuable that we must thrust them in at every turn, abash our fellows, and confuse the issue by our ceaseless prating with speech or pen?

If so, let us become more selective of our words. Let us learn that the man of few sentences, well considered, is the man of influence, and not the man who is endlessly chattering.

We will do our part. We will give what wisdom we have. But first we will be sure that it is wisdom, or at least our nearest approach to wisdom, and let us give all others their chance to contribute also of their minds and hearts.

Prayer—How few were Thy words, greatest Teacher! And how Thy few utterances dwarf the ponderous tones of conceit! man!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"THE HARVEST OF LIFE."

"Now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the first fruits of them that are asleep."—I Cor. 15:20-28.

What a glorious harvest had Paul in mind, the life of all the ages rising into immortality, led by the risen Saviour! No array like it, of all the multitudes ever assembled on earth. No march—

THE SHINING HOUR OF FAITH.

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Anne Byrd Payson was a brilliant woman. She had no religious training. When she passed the doors of a church, she wondered what the attendants brought out from the services to the work-a-day world. She had read William James' Psychology, and felt that there might be a God but she never sought to know Him. She smoked and moved in a worldly set of agnostics. Her two major interests were Bach's music and her husband and son.

Sorrow.

Suddenly her husband died. She could not pray. God was unreal. Spiritualists sent her booklets on the Future Life but they did not appeal to her. Bach and her son were the only satisfaction she had. One night she returned late to her apartment after listening to Wagner's "Gotterdammerung." Its darkness and despair filled her heart. She could not sleep. Jane Austin's stories which she usually read when she was sleepless, were in another room. She reached out and her hand touched Stanley Jones' "The Christ of the Indian Road." She knew nothing of the author or of the book. Suspiciously she began to read. The Christ that Stanley Jones presented won her heart. She read it through and prayed that "My Shining Hour might never tarnish."

A New Creature.

Her whole nature seemed changed. She wanted to live in harmony with Jesus' teachings, and to share her new-found life with others—to cheer and lead them. All that had been first in her thoughts and emotions began to follow these higher purposes and emotions. This is what "Conversion" does for one. The higher nature comes to the front and the lower nature takes its secondary place, or disappears. Zaccheus, the dishonest business man, becomes honest and restores what he has taken fourfold. The degraded woman at Jacob's Well is made clean and discerning. Saul, the harsh ritualist becomes Paul, the gentle disciple. A seed in the ground begins to rot. A germ within it gently and yet with the power of the Universe back of it, breaks the husk. A new life begins. This is what a new-found faith in Jesus does through the old, decaying life. Life immortal, with all the power of the spiritual universe back of it, breaks through the old husk. The hour one gives himself to Jesus Christ is indeed a Shining Hour.

Peace of Mind.

With the new life comes a peace of mind and heart. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." So many are restless in these days. Too many women rush from one bridge party to another. They try to find satisfaction in mere temporalities. They fear old age. A white hair disturbs their peace of mind and a wrinkle creates a panic. Some professing Christian women are thus disturbed, but many of them meet the coming years confidently and cheerfully. They are the women who, when old, have the sweet faces and cheerful spirits. Too many men try to find satisfaction only in business, golf and other temporal things. Many of these are good and, add to them reverence, prayer, church fellowship and service to one's fellowmen, and satisfaction of spirit comes.

Greater Than Circumstances.

A living faith makes one greater than circumstances. Electricity, uncontrolled, runs to waste, and sometimes is dangerous. Confine it in a wire and it lights houses and streets, runs machinery and does many useful things. Life's energies expressed through the channel of faith makes one generous, cheerful, just, helpful and hopeful. Daniel was greater than circumstances. Human energies, uncontrolled by faith, run wild. Life, like a boat, is dangerous without a pilot—with The Pilot on board—safe.

"The wind and waves would sink my boat,
What hope is there for me?
If Christ is there, He does not fear
The dangers of the sea.
'Awake, O Master,' loud I cry,
'Awake, O Master, or we die!'
And he awoke and spoke the word
That even the wind and the waves heard,
And soon a peace breathed everywhere—
The sea was calm, the skies were fair.
When Christ sails with us on Life's sea, Confident may every sailor be!"

JUST THINKING.

By OWEN PRINCE.

I was just thinking the other day and when I fully realized what I was doing it gave me a queer feeling. Imagine! Here I was, a product of the twentieth century and I was thinking. Rather old-fashioned, don't you think? At any rate I knew why.

Trouble was that I had been reading the Bible. It made me think. It always does. Wonder why more people don't read the Book? Today, when everything seems to be in such a mess, every wise man in the world has some pet theory for the salvation of man. Funny no one wants to follow the teachings of the Bible that gives us a progressive revelation of God and introduces us to the One who is "the Way, the Truth and the life."

Met a man the other day who was rather well read. He had read all the great systems of theology. He knew all about the Bible, too. He had learned about that from them. When asked how much he read the Bible he admitted he hadn't done much of that. Seems to me we all read too much about the Bible and not enough of it.

Reminds me of the time I was asked to preach in a church of another denomination. The minister requested my text and when I told him it was in the book of Habakkuk he wanted to know where that was. Didn't seem to know. Oh well, maybe he was joking.

When I was a local preacher, the treasurer of a large church in Baltimore asked me what I preached about. Do you suppose he ever listened to his own preacher or read the Bible?

Well, men may not read the good old Book, but it is here for them to read and if they don't they are losers. As some one has said, "This Book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners, and the happiness of believers. It involves the highest responsibility, will reward the greatest labor and will condemn all who trifle with its sacred contents."

Wonder why people don't read the Bible? Do you think they are afraid to? I don't know, I was just thinking.—M. P. Recorder.

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Edith Virginia Bryant, one of the orphanage girls, graduated in High School last May. Virginia made good grade in school. She has been a member of the 4-H Club in Alamance County for several years and has been honored by the club by holding an important office. The club went on a camping trip last week near Asheville, N. C.

Three prizes were offered for the best campers. One for the Health Queen; one for finding the most different leaves. Edith Virginia won all three. The first prize gives her a free trip to Raleigh, N. C., to attend a 4-H Club short course at the State College for a week with all expenses paid.

She was selected Health Queen. For the third prize she was presented with a booklet of leaf prints.

The orphanage feels very proud that Edith Virginia was so honored.

When prizes are offered in school or in anything that our children are members of, if they don't win they give the one who does win a hot race.

The drought seems to have broken and we are beginning to have showers now and we hope after all the dry weather that we will yet have good crops.

SOMETHING WRONG.

There are times when mankind as a whole agrees with God. Men are very fond of disagreeing with their Creator, hence their agreement is the more significant. Just now there is a world-wide unanimity among the most thoughtful and intellectual of men. Dr. Will H. Houghton, President of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, called attention to this in a recent address in Philadelphia. Said he: "Sociologists, philosophers, forums—all have decided that there's something wrong with the world." And so has God! But men and God do not agree as to what is wrong with the world, nor do they agree as to the remedy. Men would say that all we need is a better environment and more education. God says the trouble is that "when they (men) knew God, they glorified him not as God," but "changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed forever." Because "they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind," so that men are "filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity," and a further long list of sins. The remedy is not environment or education, but a Saviour, Jesus Christ. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Sunday School Times.

ing army to compete with it, though Xerxes or Alexander summoned the tribes!

It is an exhilaration to look forward to that day. The prospect enrolls us in a majestic convocation. Immortality confers upon us eternal significance. In the light of that harvest every hour's growth has importance.

To be more worthy of the first fruits is sufficient achievement for a lifetime. Let my roots go deep into the soil of God's goodness. Let my stalk rise far into the sunshine of God's grace. Let it be heavy with grain, even to a hundredfold.

Prayer—For thou hast gone ahead to prepare the way, our divine Lord. Thou are already risen, and we shall rise. Every day shall be a glad anticipation of Thy harvest day in glory—Amen.

IMPROVEMENT OF RURAL CHURCHES. (Continued from page 9.)

1. Here speaks Warren H. Wilson, Dean of the Rural Life fraternity. "I propose the building of manses in parks throughout the country. The proposal would be parallel to the proposal for the consolidated school unit, which rural educators are familiar with. Let us propose a manse, church, graveyard, playground, farm, museum, and library unit; and let us sift out the country churches by their fitness to use such a unit. Obviously, it would be located at the center of a Larger Parish. The Larger Parish has never yet produced a conception of great equipment. It has conserved tiny congregations; but it has built no cathedral center. This is the center which I propose: an embodiment of nature as it reflects God; that the ministers live in the center of it, with the dead buried there, with agriculture represented and forestry and the historic as a basis. This would be a laboratory unit which would project the future.

2. B. F. Lamb, Secretary of the Ohio Council of Churches, gives the following challenge. "We will never solve the church problem in rural territory until the number of churches is reduced to the point where every church can have a staff of four or five paid professional workers, to specialize with different groups of people in the community.

a. There must be a preacher, who can give sufficient time to the preparation of his sermons to be able to preach a sermon every Sunday that will challenge the respect of the community.

b. There must be a religious education director, who knows the psychology and pedagogy of teaching as well as of religion, and who will work and direct the organization of an effective religious education program.

c. There must be a director of children's work, someone who knows the psychology of children, to lead and direct the activities of children. This is the most fruitful field of Kingdom building, and the least money and effort is spent in it?

d. There must be a specialist with young people who has not forgotten that he is a young man, and how, as a young man, to live with and direct the special activities of young people, leading them into the Christian life, while they are living according to the nature of young folks."

3. The evidence is all in; and the compiler and commentator rests his case! The call of the one hundred letters for forward-looking and adventurous deeds, is clear cut. And God will not hold us guiltless, who have listened to such words in vain! And this last thought: a successful national plan for the improvement of the rural church must be a plan of a somehow United Protestantism.

Sentence Prayers. Special Music. Poem:

"I have to live with myself, and so I want to be fit for myself to know; Always to look myself straight in the eye. I don't want to stand with the setting sun And hate myself for the things I've done. I want to go out with my head erect; I want to deserve all men's respect; I don't want to look at myself and know That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show. I never can fool myself, and so Whatever happens I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free."

Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee." Mizpah Benediction.

MARRIAGES

GOFORTH—MILLS.

The Rosemont Christian Church was the scene of a quiet wedding Tuesday afternoon, June 16th, at 4:30 o'clock, when Miss Alice Elizabeth Mills, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Mills of Portlock, Norfolk County, became the bride of Mr. Frank Asbury Goforth, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walker Goforth, of York, South Carolina.

The bride is quite popular in her community, and has been for several years the efficient organist of the Rosemont Christian Church and a fine worker in the Sunday School and other organizations of the Church.

She wore a suit of white crepe, with accessories to correspond, and carried, instead of flowers, the beautifully shored Bible that was used at the wedding of her mother.

The maid of honor was Miss Lucille

Mills, sister of the Bride. She was at the presence of the immediate members of the family.

The groom had as his best man, Mr. Jennings Richardson.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. F. Morgan, the bride's pastor, in the presence of the immediate members of the family. Following the wedding an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which the happy couple left by steamer for Baltimore and Washington.

They will make their home in Portsmouth, Va.

May the blessings of our Heavenly Father rest upon these two and His Spirit attend them through their wedded life.

J. F. MORGAN.

TO THINK ABOUT

EVERYONE admires a conscientious, consistent, courageous, consecrated soul. A genuine Christian is not governed by past deeds; by what others have done, or by what he himself has done, but by present needs. He delights to match his ability to the needs of the hour. If his ability be unequal to present demands, he does not seek to lessen the demands but to increase his ability.

In this campaign for Elon College we know what the demands are—we know our ability—we know whether what we have done or purpose doing correctly represents or denotes our ability—whether it is an expression of faith, fear, or evasion.

To turn a deaf ear to the clear voice of duty under the plea of self-preservation, or for provision for our own against the treacherous trends of tomorrow, is to puncture faith, assassinate trust, and leave ourselves to the merciless fate of material values, which must perish with the day.

Our relief lies within ourselves, within our own church, within our own alumni. We are honest in declaring our inability. It will take the searchlight of truth, for truth is unbiased, to reveal our holdings and convince us of our ability. We pray for truth, not only truth but for revealing truth that we may arise like men and women, like men and women of a great church, and of a great school, and bring of our hearts, and our souls, our money, and our money's worth, that our college—great in vision, great in service, and great in purpose—may live, may live efficiently and effectively.

RELIGIOUS JOURNALISM

AN EDITORIAL.

RELIGIOUS journalism has had an easier time but has never had greater opportunity and was never more needed than today. If the voice of the church leaders can be believed, religion itself is in for hard sledding at present. All who listen or read are aware that the world in which we live is not a very happy or contented place. Revolution is rampant all over the earth. Change comes with every succeeding day. Political faiths fail, and religious beliefs are tested as they have not been for ages. Wars and rumors of wars flare up in every corner of the earth. Economic changes startle us with their rapidity. Moral standards that once were considered steadfast glide away as age and youth search for new thrills.

In a world like ours religion is not quite at home. This is especially true of the Christian religion. To many people the Ten Commandments are a bit antiquated, and but few business men dare test the teachings of Jesus in their line of endeavor. Who knows of a politician that would take the Sermon on the Mount as his platform? It just isn't being done. And custom seems to have more authority than the Bible with most people.

A world like ours needs the Christian religion more than any other thing. It needs it to straighten out economic, political, social, and international problems. Christianity is needed to supplant crime with cooperation, and to give people courage to live even in the midst of difficulties. Christianity is needed to re-establish the home, and to furnish a standard for conduct.

Into this sort of world the Church sends its religious journals. Every denomination has followed our own in establishing their Church papers. There seems to be nothing to do the work of these papers except more papers. But the competition is keen. Daily newspapers are glad to feature religious news. Secular publications of various kinds deal definitely with religion. Interdenominational and non-denominational periodicals go to church people regularly with much helpful material. Movies sometimes feature matters of religion. The radio flashes religious news around the earth often. There is an abundance of material being published concerning religion.

Why, then, let us ask, should the various denominations have their own Church papers? The answer is both definite and simple. There are many church people who do not receive the other information in the field of religious journalism. The material published, pictured, or radioed is often biased, or even conflicting. The denominations have definite beliefs for which they stand and definite programs in which they cooperate. They are one big family who share in each other's hopes and fears, plans and programs. The Church Paper is the news-letter that binds them together; it is the bearer of good news from friend to friend; it is the organ through which the members speak their minds; it is the instrument of the Church to spread the religious faith of those whose hearts are bound together by cords of love and fellowship.

There is no substitute for the denominational Church Paper. Secular publications, inter-denominational and non-denominational religious journals, the movies, and the radio can no more take the place of the Church Paper than hotels and restaurants can supplant permanently and happily the home.

It seems tragic that in a time like ours the Church Papers should be having such a struggle for existence. Many have had to discontinue. Others have to be heavily subsidized. Our own CHRISTIAN SUN has its difficulties, even though it represents eight states of the southeast and is the only weekly publication of its kind in the Congregational and Christian Churches. Because the writer believes in the necessity for such a paper in our midst, he has yielded to the call of the Southern Convention to try his hand with editing for a short while. There is great need for the most hearty cooperation on the part of all church leaders. The editor expects to find this cooperation not because of his own contribution or personality, but because of the great need for the kind of religious journalism that this paper affords.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. W. M. Jay, pastor of our Winston-Salem church, writes: "We had a delightful Children's Day Service, Sunday night, June 21st. Mrs. Jay, Mrs. J. A. Wester and Mrs. C. W. Cranford were a committee to get up the program and train the children. Mrs. Jay said it was the easiest and most pleasant program she ever helped prepare, as the children who took part were so willing and the parents so cooperative in getting the children out to practice."

NEWS FROM SUFFOLK, VA.

(The following article is taken from the Bulletin for June 21 of Suffolk Christian Church. If all churches will send in their bulletins which have news of interest, it will be appreciated by the editor and readers of this paper.—Editor.)

Rev. Herbert H. Council, Jr., licensed to preach as a probationer by the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, a graduate 1936 of William and Mary College, and to continue in September his theological course in Yale Divinity School, is, by permission of the deacons and pastor, to act as a summer assistant to the minister, for the experience it will give him as a theological student, and for the help he may render the pastor and church.

The Rev. Mr. Council is the son of Herbert G. Council, of Franklin, Va. He is a member of Franklin Christian Church, where this morning he is supplying the pulpit for his pastor, Rev. Elwood W. Jones, D. D., who is attending the General Council at Mt Holyoke. Mr. Council will be with us at the evening service.

Special duties assigned him for the summer include work with the Young People's Department of the Sunday School, attending and helping with the Young People's Christian Endeavor, following up the work of the Church in the absence of the pastor, and aiding the pastor in his regular work as needed.

It is a fine thing to have a part in helping a deserving and worthy student make his way through college and seminary. It is hoped that we shall make Mr. Council feel at home amongst us, and useful for our church.

NEW ENGLAND NEWS.

Wesley Powell has resigned at Northampton (N. H.), to give all his time to his studies at N. C. State University. His brother, Captain of the Salvation Army work at Raleigh, N. C., is well-known to some of you.

Rev. John Dutton and wife celebrated their Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary June 22. Rev. Dutton rebuilt the fine Kittery (Me.) Church after the former one was burned. Rev. Roy Dinsmore is the present pastor. Rev. Dutton was long pastor of the Christian church at Westerly, R. I., and was Christian Endeavor secretary for our churches in New England when they supported Miss Penrod and Miss True in the foreign field. He has two sons, one of whom is a Congregationalist minister.

One wrote "The Samaritan of Molokar," an account of a relative who gave his life to work among the lepers. The Dutton's present address is Agawam, Mass. (near Springfield.)

Laconia (N. H.) church called Rev. Smith, who has long conducted a mission in Springfield, Mass., as pastor beginning his pastorate July 1.

Rev. E. R. Caswell, former pastor for 21 years, died very suddenly, February 29. He had studied at Boston University and Gordon College. He was dean of the churches in Laconia and was well and favorably known in Southern New Hampshire for his expository sermons. He was a great Bible preacher, a good pastor, a strong man in the ministry.

Three young people within the last five years have entered Christian work from this church of about three hundred members.

TRIBUTE TO A STEP-MOTHER.

(Editorial Note: Step-mothers furnish material for many a coarse and crude joke. In fact, little is ever heard of step-mothers unless it comes as a slur and a joke at her expense. Therefore, we read with keen appreciation this fine tribute to a step-mother from Dr. Forney Hutchinson, pastor of Boston Avenue Methodist Church in Tulsa. And as we read it the tears dimmed the pages. We believe if you read it, there will come to you a fine emotion and to your eye a tear of joy and appreciation.)

My mother died when I was six years of age. Following that domestic tragedy, my two brothers and I lived for more than a year in the home of an uncle. They were kind to us, but had a large family of children of their own. Finally my father wrote that he would be married on a certain day and would expect us home the following day. We had heard many stories of the cruelties of step-mothers and went with fear and trembling at the appointed time.

I'll never forget when we drove up in front of our country home. My new mother stood on the steps waiting for us. She was a beautiful and cultured woman, something like thirty years of age. Her eyes and hair were black. She had a large mouth and a fine set of pearly white teeth. For some years she had been a music teacher in a private school.

One by one she took us in her arms, kissed our frightened faces, hugged our hungry hearts up close and called us her boys. From then until at the age of seventy-eight, when we laid her by our father's side, she was a real mother. She cooked for us, sewed for us, loved us, spanked us, and did everything else for us that a mother has to do for a trio of growing boys. It was not an easy task. She left the comforts of her county-seat home and came to the inconveniences of our country home, took up the duties of a farmer's wife, for which she had had no training, and for the remainder of her days carried on without whining and without complaining. She identified herself with us in every possible way, even joined our church, though she had grown up an ardent Episcopalian.

Two boys were born to her, thereby enlarging our group, and increasing her responsibilities. However, if she knew any difference between us and them she never showed it. We were all her boys. In later years her oldest son prospered in oil and insisted that she make her home with him. She declined, preferring to live at the old home with her step-son, my oldest brother, who had never married. She said he needed her and she needed him.

At last the five of us stood together about her open grave, all equally bereft. I spoke the last words as we laid her tired body to rest. I could not have loved her more if she had been my own mother. Today I am profoundly grateful for the best substitute God has ever found for a mother—a good step-mother.—In Richmond Christian Advocate.

DR. CADMAN'S ADDRESS.

The address of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, honorary moderator, delivered on the evening of the opening day of the biennial meeting of the General Council at Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass., on June 16, was a notable review of the present situation of the Christian Church in the world. He spoke for an hour and a half, adhering closely to a manuscript comprising sixty-five typewritten pages. His address he described in a sense as his valedictory to the Council upon whose programs, he said, he did not expect to appear. He expressed high appreciation of the honor accorded him to be asked to give the moderatorial address at this meeting.

A FIVE-POINT PROGRAM.

Roger W. Babson of Babson Park, Mass., newly elected moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches in the closing address of the biennial meeting of the Council outlined the following five-point program:

"1. I shall see that those interested in the strategy board be given a free hand to carry their plans into effect. I believe Superintendent Frazier deserves the help and cooperation of us all. He is an excellent choice. But let us tinker with our denominational machine no more for a while. Let us 'step on the gas' and go somewhere.

"God bless the Council for Social Action. I seconded the motion at the Oberlin Council for its appropriation. I have great respect for those who formed it,—especially for the group of younger ministers who have it so much at heart. Frankly, I had hoped the delegates would give the Council for Social Action another two years at least to see what it can do without either ballyhoo or handicaps. I have advised both conservative and liberal friends accordingly; but my advice was not heeded. Now that a 'poll' is to be taken, I sincerely hope the executive committee will act absolutely impartially in preparing the questions, and have them approved in writing by both sides before being sent out. I shall further suggest to the committee that the 'Advance' be requested to be fair to both sides by using the term 'profit and loss system' instead of always referring to the 'profit system.' Personally, I believe the Council for Social Action could accomplish most by encouraging the ministers to preach the Golden Rule and use their $60,000 appropriation getting out a 100 per cent Congregational vote. However the important thing is to start operating our machine instead of arguing about it.

"I shall appeal for more aid to the various commissions and especially to Donald Adams in his work with laymen. We should arrange for him to publish two handbooks,—one on 'Church Administration,' and the other on 'Reaching Laymen.' I, of course, am greatly interested in both home and foreign missions, religious education and all departments of the churches. I am also anxious that the denomination shall be generous to the Advance. I, however, must emphasize that, as a practical matter, we must watch church attendance, birth rates, religious education, personal habits and be very careful to exercise our voting privileges after earnest prayer. The future of the Church lies in demonstrating that church-goers are better, healthier, happier and more influential than non-church goers.

"4. I favor making a drive through the state superintendents on our 2,893 'zero' churches. I urge that definite contacts be made with the men making up the prudential or standing committees of these 'zero' bodies.

THE FLAG GOES BY.

By HENRY HOLCOMB BENNETT.

Hats off!

Along the street there comes

A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums,

A flash of color beneath the sky:

Hats off!

The flag is passing by!

Blue and crimson and white it shines,

Over the steel-tipped, ordered lines.

Hats off!

The colors before us fly;

But more than the flag is passing by:

Sea-fights and land-fights, grim and great,

Fought to make and to save the state;

Weary marches and sinking ships;

Cheers of victory on dying lips;

Days of plenty and years of peace;

March of a strong land's swift increase;

Equal justice, right and law,

Stately honor and reverend awe.

Sign of a nation, great and strong

To ward her people from foreign wrong:

Pride and glory and honor—all

Live in the colors to stand or fall.

Hats off!

Along the street there comes

A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums;

And loyal hearts are beating high:

Hats off!

The flag is passing by!

—Selected.

Let us find out what example these laymen are setting as to church attendance, financial support, personal habits and civic interest. Let us appeal to them to show results. Perhaps we should publish a list of these 'zero' churches with such comment as the state superintendents can give.

"5. Gradually work both to simplify 'joining the Church' and to have church attendance figures rather than either the number of churches or the number of members, become the basis for both apportionment and representation. Of course, I am praying for the elimination of all outworn customs and the substitution of efficient methods of Christian work, especially in the Sunday Schools. But I believe that other men are better equipped than I am to bring about such changes. I wish my grandchildren, for instance, could be taught from the Shorter Bible instead of forced to use the King James Version. I believe in the co-ordinated church service and Sunday school. However these innovations are not in my field. I do, however, urge the Theological schools to give more attention to changing conditions.

"Now one personal word: I am not a trained public speaker. My entire life has been devoted to executive work. Therefore, I beg of you not to ask me to make speeches. Remember Abraham Lincoln's Mississippi River steamboat, which had boiler enough either to whistle or to run; but not enough capacity to do both. I am in that class. Besides, a battery must be charged before giving off power. Let me spend my first year, at least, in charging my spiritual battery. It is very weak just now! Furthermore, I can be of most help to you in a connection with the executive committee.

"Finally let me thank you all for your confidence in me. I really do not deserve the position of moderator. I have accepted only with the assurance of help from Dr. Burton and Fred Fagley and the Assistant Moderators. I have lots to learn and am anxious to learn. Please be patient with me. I, in turn, will try to help you all, especially the small churches and the poorly paid ministers, who are making such tremendous sacrifices. God bless these earnest and struggling men on the firing line,—men we should provide for and protect at all hazards."

QUIET PLACES.

By BESSIE GATCH JONES.

I love the holy, quiet places,
The garden, field, and wood,
Where nature pulses heaven's wish
In sweetest solitude.

The magic still of early morn,
A dream world shining through,
As the sky encircles the glad some earth
In a wide, wide sea of blue!

The quiet of the old home farm
And the dusty roads that run
Along life's highway, hill, and plain
To meet the journeying sun.

I love the moorlands, silent and calm,
And the charm of twilight time
When God is whispering messages thro'
Of peace and rest sublime.

He serves his country best
Who lives pure life and doeth righteous deeds,
And walks straight paths however others stray
And leaves his sons, as uttermost bequest,
A stainless record which all men may read;
This is the better way.

No drop but serves the slowly lifting tide;
No dew but has an errand to some flower;
No smallest star but sheds some helpful ray,
And man by man, each helping all the rest,
Make firm bulwark of the country's power;
There is no better way.

—Susan Coolidge.

EDITOR

F. C. LESTER,
505 S. MAIN ST., NORFOLK, VA.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE
117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MY PREDECESSOR.

Among my earliest recollections of leaders in the Christian Church stands Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. My mother tells me of her impression of him when he came to our old home church as a golden-haired, upstanding, eloquent young man who had assumed the responsibilities of editing THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The speaker at our high school commencement one year was this self-same man who talked for two hours on that classic poem:

"Jack and Jill went up the hill
To fetch a pail of water.
Jack fell down and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after."

As a student in college, I knew Dr. Atkinson as college pastor and followed his sermons with keen delight. For many years I have read his editorials with joy and satisfaction.

For twenty-eight years his lucid pen has made profitable the pages of our CHRISTIAN SUN. It seems impossible that he is not to be editor now, and it is even more unbelievable that the present writer should be chosen to continue the work so well done previously.

As a thinker, orator, editor and great-hearted Christian, Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., has made a marvelous contribution to the Christian churches in the South. No words of mine can adequately describe the feeling of my own heart, or that of many others, concerning this good man who has been editor of our Church Paper. Let it suffice to say that he is admired and loved by those who have known him and shall continue to be held in esteem through the years that lie ahead.

THE EDITORIAL POLICY.

Congregational and Christian church people are distinguished because of their democratic spirit. We have no creed or statement to which members must subscribe and no authority above that of the local church. This makes it possible for people of varying faiths to fellowship each other in our churches. As a pastor, I have served those who were strict Presbyterians, devout Baptists, loyal Methodists, and faithful Catholics. They work together harmoniously because they all love the same Lord Christ.

It is the opinion of the editor that the pages of the church paper should be open to all those who have a contribution to make that is worth printing. He does not believe that the columns of the paper should be used simply for debate or to air somebody's private peeve, but he is sincere in the belief that conservative and liberal alike should have a chance to say that which they believe will aid the progress of the Kingdom of God.

The church paper is not a political organ. It may deal with matters political, economic, social or religious, but its major emphasis must always be on interpreting the message of religion for the day in which we live. Constructive thought will be welcomed.

The editor shall say the things that he believes to have value and will endeavor to give a reason for the faith that is his. He may differ radically from leaders and other writers, but he sincerely hopes no offense will be taken at what may be said but that everyone who reads will endeavor to gather the bit of truth which may be helpful in their own lives and leave the chaff for the wind to drive away.

He has no undue optimism about his ability to edit a paper. It is with fear and trembling that he undertakes the job at all, even for a short time. The heartiest cooperation of pastors and people will be needed if any degree of success is to be attained. Your articles for publication, your criticisms and comments will be welcomed heartily.

THE BUSINESS ARRANGEMENT.

The editor has not seen his way clear to resign his church pastorate and give full time to editing and promoting THE CHRISTIAN SUN along with the promotion of other enterprises of the Church. He has simply agreed to undertake THE CHRISTIAN SUN job for an eight-month period, beginning July 1, 1936, and ending March 1, 1937.

By vote of the Southern Convention, all boards, and boards of trustees of the convention are to meet in annual session simultaneously at Elon College, North Carolina, in February. It is hoped that at this meeting some definite arrangements can be made to carry on THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

In the meantime, all articles for publication, except those by regular weekly contributors, should be sent to the editor at 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia. All subscriptions and renewals should be sent to the same address. The paper is published in Richmond, Virginia, but the printer is no longer responsible for collecting subscriptions or managing the publication. It will be a great help if all readers of the paper will bear this in mind through the months to come and send the materials to Norfolk rather than to Elon or to Richmond as heretofore.

THE NEW PAPER.

With this week's issue THE CHRISTIAN SUN changes its form somewhat and has a different line-up in the editorial staff. Other changes may follow from time to time. There are real reasons for these changes, but let it be understood by all that any change which may be made is in no sense a reflection on what has been done previously. It is simply an attempt on the part of those who are new at the job to carry on in the way that they can.

Financial conditions made it necessary to reduce the size of the paper. The same conditions make it necessary to increase the paid up subscription list. By vote of the Convention no subscription can be carried which is more than a year in arrears. Financial conditions may make it impossible to carry them anything like that long.

The new editor is exceedingly anxious to have as subscribers all those who in former years have taken the paper. He is also anxious that many new friends may be made. The Board of Publications proposes that any church sending in paid up subscriptions equivalent to ten per cent of their church membership may have twenty-five per cent commission on the subscription price of $2 per year for each subscriber. There are no other commissions allowed.

F. C. L.

EXPLANATIONS, THANKS, ET CETERA.

It was expected that THE SUN should take upon itself new shape and size this week. The evident press of other matters, has caused delay on the part of the editor and business manager in furnishing the necessary copy for such changes. It must be remembered that he was secretary to the nominating committee of the General Council, and during the past week has had upon his shoulders the operation of the Elon Summer School. As pinch-hitter, the writer assumes blame for what he has put in the present issue.

While writing, I would like just one further word. First, I would like to thank those who have responded so splendidly to our effort to carry out the mandate of the last Convention regarding subscriptions. Second, we have not complied fully with this mandate, hoping that there may be those who will in the near future remit to Mr. Lester. However, we have this week, before turning the list over to Mr. Lester, discontinued back subscriptions totaling approximately $4,800. We hope that some of these at least will reconsider and respond at a later date.

Sincerely,

JOHN T. KERNODLE.

THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

The General Council at Mt. Holyoke was notable among Councils for its repeated emphasis on the "deepening of spiritual life," "the awareness of God," "the experience of God" and "the carrying of the evangel into society and into the world. One felt the reality of the experience of those who spoke on experience, and the vitality of the church which has an evangel, and the poverty of the church that has nothing to communicate to the souls of men.

Not only in the devotional noon hour so beautifully conducted by Rev. Arthur H. Bradford; not only in the marvelous five o'clock afternoon lectures on "Religion and Experience" given by Rev. A. E. Day of Baltimore, but in the morning talks on "Making the Church Efficient" these heart-searching messages stirred the conscience of every minister.

Allow me to bring to your readers a few thoughts from one or two of the speakers on that morning when the "Evangel," was presented. First, Rev. Vere V. Loper of Denver: "While evangelism," he said, "has been abused by emotionalism and discredited by commercialism, it has flourished at various times and places from the days of Pentecost and not least through the ministrations of the Wesleys, Jonathan Edwards and D. W. Moody. It may be said to be the approach of the whole gospel to the whole man with the purpose to transform the whole man. It must insist upon decisions, it seeks commitment to God. We cannot discard it without discarding the New Testament. Its intention is to bring the individual within the range of God and make him aware of his moral relations. Our half way efforts are in no way worthy of this high calling. We must get into the main stream of New Testament Christianity.

"There may be seen a new race of professional evangelists, they may be intellectual giants able to clear away intellectual hindrances, but they will be shot through with a passion of eagerness to share the values of religion with other souls. Every sermon should include an appeal to the human will. It must aim to bring into action the human soul. The Christian message must at times be personally escorted into the personal consciousness of the hearers. So did Jesus with the woman of Samaria. Personal evangelism is not a blanket invitation to all to try to do what they don't know how to do, but it is our common aim to build the fundamental Christian experience on which evangelism depends. Every Christian can speak humbly, simply, naturally of what the Christian experience has meant to him.

We must also put ourselves in the presence of world opportunity. If the evangel of Christ has entered into our very being we shall be able to go beyond barriers even at great cost. There are many institutions which may function to meet the needs of the world but we shall never get world peace without the church. The world cannot be saved until the missionary retreat is halted.

Mr. Loper was followed in the same vein by Rev. Stoddard Lane of Des Moines. "We make Christian enlistment," he said "too casual, too easy. Someone said, 'There is something wild in believing in a living God.' But we cannot be saved from selfishness by centering one's attention on one's self. You save your life by losing it to God. What measureless unselfishness in four outstanding Christian lives of the present: Kagawa, Jane Addams, Albert Schweitzer and Wilfred Grenfell. We should believe in talking our religion, getting its ideas incorporated in the minds of others. The people who are absorbed in it are the most attractive. The church becomes exciting, captivating, profoundly interesting when it is lost in the cause of God. The evangelism of life speaks most effectively. Such churches are outstanding on the foreign field. If we do not find them on our field we can begin to create them. E. M. Tittle has said that the church ought to mobilize the people who believe that there is no way out of the world's misery but by the way of Christ."

In one Seminar that day there was considerable discussion of the personal methods of the Oxford Group. While the movement was thought not directly contributory toward building up the local church, its method of stimulating personal evangelism among all kinds of people was found highly commendable. The ministry should not do all the preaching. Personal work should not be an argument over religion but sharing of your fellowship with God. Miss Ruth Seabury told a touching story of a Chinese woman in the mountains who had so eagerly awaited her visit in order to hear about the "Jesus people across the seven seas" who had sent the Gospel to China. "How goes the rest of the family?" she inquired. "I am part of that family." This fellowship is keenly felt in native churches. "What we need," said Miss Seabury, "is to feel a sense of the world family in Christ." We are allied not only to a cause but to Christ.

REV. GEO. N. EDWARDS.

Charleston, S. C.

DR. ATKINSON TO RETIRE AS EDITOR.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, who for a long period of years has ably edited The Christian Sun is retiring from that strenuous work and is being succeeded by Rev. F. C. Lester, of Norfolk, Va.

We have known Dr. Atkinson personally since the day that he delivered the literary address at Liberty, from the same platform where, with much fear and great trembling of the knees, the present editor of the HERALD delivered his first commencement "oration." In his long career as a minister of the gospel as well as editor of The Christian Sun, Dr. Atkinson has been fearless and aggressive and has rendered valuable assistance to the cause of righteousness. For the past two years we have drawn heavily on his able editorials and henceforth we shall miss them very much.

It has been our pleasure to know the Rev. Mr. Lester for a number of years and we predict that he, too, will maintain a high standard in the editorial work to which he has been elected. We understand (not officially) that he will continue to serve his church as pastor and at the same time do this extra work. Having had almost two years of this dual relationship we know how to sympathize with him even before he begins.—Editor J. E. Pritchard, D. D., in Methodist Protestant Herald.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP FORGES AHEAD.

Churches in the United States continue to increase in membership, according to the Christian Herald Annual Report of Church Statistics, appearing in the July issue of that magazine. The report was prepared by Dr. George Linn Kieffer, president of the American Association of Religious Statisticians and statistician of the National Lutheran Council.

In 1935, churches and religious bodies in the United States showed a total gain in membership of 670,801, and a gain in "adult" members—13 years and over—of 538,800, according to the report. This is a gain for the year of 1.08 per cent, compared with a total gain in population for the U. S. of only 0.71 per cent. The average annual gain in membership during the past nine years has been 1.66 per cent, while the average population gain for the same period has been just 1 per cent. This refutes the statement often made that the church is declining.

The Baptists, with a gain of 163,318 in 1935, led all the Protestant denominations. The Methodists are next, with 91,069, and the Lutherans a close third, with 86,088. Other notable increases were the Disciples of Christ, 12,698; the Assemblies of God, 11,505; Church of the Nazarene, 7,741; and the Evangelical and Reformed, 6,212. Most of the other denominations showed some increase, and where losses took place they were small.

The Baptists also lead all Protestants in total membership, with 10,191,697. The Methodists, with 9,067,561, are second, and the Lutherans, with 4,568,300, are third. The Roman Catholics, with an "adult" membership of 14,797,479, a total membership of 20,609,302, and a total gain for the year of 210,793, are still the largest religious body in the U. S.

The total all-purpose contributions made by church members in 1935 amounted to $12.10 per capita, as against $12.07 in 1934—a gain for the first time since 1930. The 31 largest bodies report property holdings of $2,636,964,492, while the 24 largest report indebtedness of $250,970,509, bearing out the contention that the church is one of the most solvent institutions in the country.

The report proves conclusively, according to Dr. Kieffer, that the church is neither financially nor spiritually bankrupt.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

Do you take the Christian Sun? Did you want to see Dr. Truitt's sermon to the graduating class? It was in there. Do you wish to know how Mr. Hardecastle would teach the Sunday school lesson? It is in there. Do you wish to know about churches, programs, policies of the Southern Convention? Read the CHRISTIAN SUN. They like it who read it.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The death of Rev. Alfred Wellons Andes of Harrisonburg, Virginia, was a great loss to the Virginia Valley Central Congregational Christian Conference. He passed away Tuesday, June 23, 1936, at 2:00 A. M., after a long illness. A sketch of his life will be prepared by others and it is not the purpose of this writer to go into details in that field. This is not a biography. The man is more important than the passing events in his life. Life is made up of many details. A real man creates many of the outstanding experiences of his career.

Five weeks before his death it was our privilege to drive from Suffolk to his home—a distance of two hundred miles—to visit him. It was a very precious visit. We became acquainted before he graduated at Elon College in 1906. He accepted a group of churches in the Valley Conference where he labored with honor to himself and the church of his choice. His interest was not limited to his local churches, but he was identified with all the institutions of the denomination. He sought to give himself for the cause of Christ.

Brother Andes was a man of God. He was deeply religious. The great fundamental truths of the Word of God were deeply impressed upon his mind and heart. In spite of his arduous duties as a country pastor, he was a faithful student. Few ministers in our denomination possess a library surpassing his, in point of size and selection. He used this valuable library. Clear in his thinking and spiritual in attitude, he made an impression upon the people of his congregations.

He was a man of the church. He thought in terms of the kingdom of God. He loved the church. He sought to enlarge its work and extend its borders. He received hundreds of members into the churches of his pastorate. These members felt the power of his influence and were inspired by his chaste life and forward-looking ministry.

He was a man of the people. He loved people and they loved him. Quiet and unassuming, he was aggressive but not obtrusive. The personal touch went beyond the members of his own church, and people of other denominations looked upon him as their personal friend.

The funeral service, in charge of Rev. R. L. Williamson, was held at Antioch Christian Church, near Harrisonburg, Va. The following ministers took part: Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Rev. W. B. Fuller, Dr. M. L. Weekley, Dr. L. E. Smith, the writer and Mr. Chas. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage. The music was rendered by three quartettes: The Sacred Quartette of Dayton, Va., the Valley Choristers and the Male Quartette of Leaksville. Nine vocal numbers were used. The music was comforting, appropriate and impressive. These quartettes were composed of members of other denominations, and their contributions to the occasion evidenced the high regard of the people for the deceased.

A great congregation assembled for the service held at 10:30 A. M., Thursday, June 25. Two hundred and sixty-five people came from the gallery and church yard to view the body before the close of the service. An equal number sat in the main auditorium. There were at least seven or eight hundred people in attendance.

A good man has gone to his reward. A faithful, consistent minister has passed from the church militant to the church triumphant. His warm hand clasp and friendly greeting will be missed. His wise counsel will be heard no more in church, Conference and Convention deliberations. The workers pass, but the work must go on.

I. W. JOHNSON.

REV. A. W. ANDES.

The funeral for Reverend A. W. Andes of Harrisonburg, Virginia, was conducted from Antioch Christian Church, the family church, Thursday morning, June 25, at ten-thirty, by Reverend R. L. Williamson, president of the Valley Conference. The following persons were present and took part: Doctor I. W. Johnson, secretary of the Southern Convention, read the Ninetieth Psalm, Reverend W. B. Fuller read the Corinthian selection, Doctor M. L. Weekley offered the prayer, appropriate and sympathetic remarks were made by Mr. C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, Doctor S. C. Harrell, president of the Convention. The funeral message was brought by the writer.

Brother Andes was a conscientious and consecrated Christian and a faithful minister of the Gospel. He was a graduate of Elon College of the class of 1906. He spent his entire ministerial life in the Valley Conference. For thirty years he ministered to the people of the Valley. He served as secretary of the conference during this entire time, never failing to be present at a session of the conference until the recent session, when failing health would not permit his attendance. He was a member of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, and faithful in his duties as a member of this Board. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College and faithful to the last in this capacity. The churches of the Valley and the church as a whole will miss the faithfulness, loyalty, and the services of our good brother.

Reverend W. J. Andes, oldest son of Reverend A. W. Andes, a graduate of Elon College, and for one year a student of the School of Religion of Duke University, will take up his father's work in the Valley. There is no finer young man among us, and, while Billy undertakes the difficult task of serving in his father's stead, there is no question on the part of any who know him but that he will succeed completely in this undertaking. He will be a source of comfort and strength to his widowed mother, his three brothers, and one sister.

The presence of the aged mother and her evident grief at the funeral were both sympathetic and inspiring. She is a woman of great faith and of deep consecration.

The home of Brother Andes has been the home of all members of the church visiting the Valley work. His home was open to everyone at any hour, day or night, and one has never visited in a more hospitable or more evidently Christian home. The doors are still open to the followers of Christ and the friends of the church.

The heart of the entire church will go out in sympathy to Mrs. Andes and her children and, I am sure, that it is the prayer of us all that they may be blessed and strengthened as the days come.

The funeral service was made more impressive by the presence of three quartettes and the songs that they rendered. They sang separately and as a group. The funeral service was largely attended. Representatives from practically every church in the Valley, attesting to the devotion and esteem in which Brother Andes was held by all, were present. Among the ones whom the writer noticed attending from a distance were Doctor and Mrs. I. W. Johnson and Mrs. B. D. Crocker of Suffolk, Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Wood and daughter, Mary, of Norfolk, Virginia.

Interment was in the cemetery on the church lawn. The committal service was read by Reverend R. L. Williamson, prayer was offered by Doctor I. W. Johnson, and the benediction by the writer.

“The Lord is our refuge and strength, and a present help in time of trouble.”

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE FORWARD.

The small Christian College has played a remarkable part in the history of this country. It has given us preachers, missionaries, teachers, social workers, high-minded business men and women, home builders, and social workers almost without number. With small classes, close contacts of student and teacher, and fine Christian idealism, it has made an impress far beyond the limits which small resources would suggest. Its faculties and administrative staff in the main have been hard-working, competent, Christian men and women who think far beyond any monetary return to them, and count themselves rich in the service they have been able to render to the manhood and womanhood of the state.

What would the church or that state have done without these colleges? The state would not have done and could not have done the work which these church colleges have done. The public would not have stood for the taxation. The church and private benevolence have relieved the state of a considerable part of the necessary task of educating the people—and the state should be grateful for this splendid cooperation. The state should not now attempt to occupy the whole educational field with the church colleges standing ready to continue and to share the task and to save the taxpayers large expenditures of funds for additional buildings and teachers. In performing the educational task of a state, there should be full cooperation between the independent church and state agencies to the end that the interest of society and our young people may be best served.

For the future, the church school will be needed—may be even more needed from the cultural and spiritual point of view than it has been in the past. But it must be immensely strengthened for its work. With the State and Federal Government pouring out vast sums for tax-supported education, there must be wise statesmanship and sacrificial contributions on the part of the church and Christian people if their type of school is to hold its own. These schools must be freed of the incubus of debt; they must be largely endowed; they must receive vastly more in annual support than they have been receiving—if they are to hold their own in the great march of educational service and progress. What a disaster it would be if these Christian colleges should be crippled and handicapped so that they constantly must occupy a smaller and smaller place in the whole educational program of society. Society would lose immensely in spiritual emphasis; the church would lose a wonderful privilege of human service; and our young people would lose in the privilege of instruction in the small but strong Christian colleges.

We are justly proud of the past which the small Christian college has had. It has blazed the educational path; it has trained body, mind and heart; it has inspired leadership; it has emphasized Christian citizenship, culture and character; it has sent men and women around the world to carry the gospel; it has enriched lives, built Christian homes, founded churches, led the forces of law and order, culture and religion; it has been a foundation rock for the best structure of civilization. What it has to give is what the future needs. Shall we not strengthen it, empower it, support it, encourage it—let it go forward with confidence toward a better future day?

The church college, in its desire to serve and do a great work for church and state, eagerly and hopefully awaits the word of generous command—Go Forward.—Editorial in Nashville Christian Advocate.

PARDONED AFTER 30 YEARS.

By REV. A. R. FLOWERS.

(Information which I gathered from The New York Times a few months ago for my note book.)

In 1631, a young minister, Roger Williams, and his young wife, Mary, arrived in Boston, Massachusetts, and became associated with the Colony. He was very religiously inclined and became a teacher in the Church at Salem and at other posts. He was the author of many booklets, among which was a "Key into the Language of the American Indian," and "The Blaudy Tenets of Persecution for the Cause of Conscience." He did not believe that the Civil Power should control conscience. He did not believe that the King's Patent was a just title for land in the New World; and that the Indians were the rightful owners and should therefore be paid for their lands. He did not believe that the oath should be administered to an unregenerated man, as he said that the oath was a form of prayer.

These beliefs soon aroused the antagonism of the authorities, and he was charged with being a heretic. He was taken before the Massachusetts grand court and tried, found guilty and banished from the Colony in 1665, but since the sentence of banishment was not immediately effective, it was in the early spring of 1666 when he, with four others, left the Colony and went to what is now Rhode Island. There they bought lands from the Indians and established a settlement which they named Providence. Later Williams obtained a royal charter for the Providence Plantations at Narragansett Bay; a gift that he never used for selfish ends. He died in 1683, having lived an honorable life, but the sentence of banishment from Massachusetts still remained against him.

Last year while Rhode Island was preparing to celebrate her three hundredth anniversary in honor of Roger Williams, a committee of the Massachusetts Legislature voted unanimously to extend a pardon to Roger Williams. Somehow, I became satisfied when I was a boy that "Truth crushed to the earth will rise again," and I am never at all uneasy now when I can feel sure that I am on the right side.

Through all these years of my life, I have seen men of different standings laud their erroneous ideas over the protest of others: and I have also seen many of those men come to their finish under the chagrin of failure; and all others will if they persist in trying to promote unsound policies. So I am appealing to all young men and women, who read this article, to try as far as possible to make sure you are right and then go ahead; and when you find out that you are wrong, as you doubtless will do, be honest enough to stop and confess your mistake, get right and go ahead.

When you go out in the morning,
To begin the work of the day,
Don't neglect the little chances
You will find along the way;
For in lifting another's burden,
And speaking a word of cheer,
You will find your own care lighter,
And easier far to bear.

—Mrs. F. S. Lovejoy.

CHINESE CHRISTIANS PROTECTED IN BANDIT ATTACKS.

By CHAS. A. LEONARD, SR.

"I got low on my knees in prayer to God there in that little out-house when the bandits were robbing, looting and burning the town," said an earnest Christian brother as he took us into his yard, where, at his house we were to eat Chinese "chow" with chopsticks, as we have done so many times. "I hustled my wife and children into one room and told them to lie flat on the "kang" (brick bed) to escape bullets. The gates were bolted and scotched strongly. I was ready to make a plea to the outlaws that they spare my wife and children, offering everything they wanted but our lives. Then I went to God in earnest prayer that in His goodness He would protect us; and my prayers were also for the other Christians."

Rifles were being fired everywhere and houses burned to cause confusion and fear among the people, so they would not dare run, offer resistance, or refuse to give up their money, clothing, bedding, and other valuables. Before entering a village those most able to pay ransom are already spotted and seldom escape, but no discrimination was made here. Those worth anything had already been kidnapped—some more than once—and others able to do so had left for Shantung, whence most of these people had come, or gone elsewhere.

As we entered the house this brother told of how a few days before this attack the son of his neighbor had been held for many days. Then his neighbor finally managed to sell his land for almost nothing and offered this for redemption. It was accepted, but, as frequently, only the mutilated form was brought and with it a demand that unless he produced more money he, too, would be taken.

This was at Makiaohoe, one of our oldest outstations, where, even before the change of government, banditry was bad, but in the disturbed years following establishment of the new state of Manchukuo a reign of terror has existed. At one time the past three years no trains were run from that region for six months.

God heard the prayers of this Christian. While other homes were burned, his was sparer. His yard was not even entered. He has suffered no harm. The other Christians there have gone through it all without harm, and now into a better day, without suffering more than the great financial loss which has come to the community at large. They have, of course, shared mental anguish with their neighbors. It is really remarkable how Christian people have escaped harm at so many places. They frequently remark on it and in tears of gratitude thank God—and us; for our prayers, interest, sympathy and support.

In spite of their great poverty and difficulties, the group at Makiaohoe determined during our recent visit to go forward this year. They decided to build a much-needed wall around the church premises this spring, to advance thirty-six dollars on an evangelist's salary in addition to carrying all incidental expenses; and in the fall they plan to pay fifty dollars toward redeeming the note of two hundred dollars on their church building. A number were baptized at this place only recently and others are to be baptized there soon. One of the members who gave up the ministry for farming was much revived in recent meetings and is asking to be sent as an evangelist to a place where we would place a preacher but for the lack of funds. The gratifying results of revival meetings held by Mr. Ko Hung-Kun, a lay preacher from Shantung, are evident here at Makiaohoe, as at other places. The revival movement continues among the people, though the evil one seeks in many ways to hinder.

A MILLION FOR MISSIONS.

By A. M. CHIRGWIN.

(The General Secretary of The London Missionary Society tells of a certain man and his money.)

"You ought to be ashamed to wear such clothes, Robert," said a business friend to Robert Arthington of Leeds, England, as they walked down the Headingley Hill together.

"Why, what's wrong with my clothes?"

"They are thread-bare and shabby. A man of your position ought not to wear them. Look at your coat," replied the friend, pointing to the discolored frock-coat fastened with bits of string in place of buttons. "It's green with age. Your father would never have been seen in a coat like that."

"Oh yes, he would," replied the millionaire, "it was his."

His father had been dead fifteen years!

The story of Robert Arthington is probably unique in missionary history. Born to riches, he voluntarily accepted poverty. Reared in cultured environment and given a university education, he deliberately narrowed his interests and cut down his wants.

Accustomed to the amenities of a well-appointed home, he lived in one room, dining on a red-herring and a crust of bread. All the while his wealth mounted up, and he died a millionaire.

But Robert Arthington did not, miser-fashion, seek to heap up money. He was consumed with a passion, and could give himself no ease till, as he said, "every tribe in every land shall have the Gospel."

In Leeds they called him "the Miser of Headingley." But he had none of the instincts of the miser. He did not gloat over his gold.

It was that the Gospel might be offered to all men that he dressed shabbily, ate frugally and lived in penury. He cut off his other interests in order to devote himself to the study of missions.

He probably read more missionary journals than any other living man and had a more extensive correspondence with men on the outskirts of civilization than any man of his time.

He was not interested in the economic or political affairs of nations; he was not concerned even with humanitarian questions. He was perfectly frank about it.

"There are," he said, "plenty of men and women who are ready to care for the bodies of men. God has called me to care for the souls of the heathen."

For the advancement of this purpose he left considerably more than a million pounds sterling; probably the largest British gift ever made to the missionary enterprise.

Arthington had his own quite definite views on missionary strategy. He looked with the greatest favour upon those societies that were the most mobile in their methods, the most adventurous in practice and the most eager to thrust forward their frontiers.

He had scant patience with the highly conventionalized missions, believing that the very weight of their denominational machinery made them move slowly.

He regarded Episcopacy, Presbyterianism, and Methodism as useless impedimenta for the missionary. He had equally little patience with the type of mission that is prepared to sit down in one area and devote itself to the task of elevating a whole community.

It was the eager evangelistic zeal of the Baptist Missionary Society and the characteristic "forward trend" of the London Missionary Society that drew him to leave the bulk of his fortune to them.

The will of God, as he understood it, was not to plant the Church in every land, but to offer the Gospel to all people without delay. The slogan "Preach and pass on," practically summed up his view.

He was anxious to force open all the closed doors and to enter every land in the name of Christ, but he was not greatly interested in the question of conserving the territory that had been newly won.

He was concerned to initiate the work rather than to maintain it. He held that the advent of Christ only tarried until the Gospel was offered to all nations.

To hasten the day of the Lord was accordingly his object, and the world-wide proclamation of the Gospel was the means to that end.

The terms of the bequest, as approved by the Courts, were that the total sum should be expended on new work, and all of it disbursed within twenty-five years.

Within a few weeks, or at most months, the money will be exhausted and the trust will come to an end.

Rupert Brooke's words, "We have beacons the world's night" can be applied without reservation to the Arthington bequest. By its aid Christian work has been initiated and carried forward in India and China, Japan and Tibet, Africa and Madagascar, the South Seas and Papua, Central and South America.

Almost every type of missionary activity has been assisted, but mobile evangelism most of all. Through the work made possible by Arthington grants bodies have been healed, minds enlightened and souls saved.

One thing is beyond doubt. Robert Arthington would have in his heart nothing but thanksgiving to God if he could see the unnumbered multitude drawn out of a hundred tribes and nations who today praise God both in the Church militant and the Church triumphant who are in truth his spiritual children, in that they owe their knowledge of God's redeeming grace to the millionaire of Leeds who became poor that they through his poverty might become rich.—Missionary Herald.

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men, the trust of pure women and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has looked for the best in others and given them the best he had; whose life was an inspiration, his memory a benediction.

CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP: DEVOTIONAL SERVICE.

By MRS. LILLIE J. RAYMOND, Everett, Wash.

Hymn: "America."

Scripture: Micah 6:8. "And what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

July Fourth is the day on which we commemorate the birth of our nation; a nation founded upon principles of Freedom, Equality, Justice and Humanity; a nation of which we are proud to be citizens, whether that citizenship be by birth or by choice.

If we, as Christian citizens, were doing our duty in maintaining these fine principles upon which our nation was founded, would we have our industrial strifes, our racial hatreds and our unemployment problems as we find them today? Are these not conditions directly due to the fact that we have become self-centered and have wandered away from Christ's way of life? Christ's way of life is to love thy neighbor as thyself.

And who is our neighbor?

In the Bible we read of a certain man traveling from Jerusalem to Jericho who was robbed and wounded and left by the wayside half dead.

Later a certain priest came along and when he saw the injured man, passed by on the other side.

Then a Levite likewise came by that way, saw the wounded man, and he too, passed by on the other side.

But a certain Samaritan came along, and when he saw the man in need, had compassion on him, went to him, bound up his wounds, set him on his beast and took him to the inn and cared for him and paid all expenses.

Which one of these was neighbor unto him that was in need?

The measure of our responsibility as Christian citizens is determined by our neighbor's need.

When the president of one of our large companies draws an average salary and bonus of eight thousand dollars per month, and during that same period pays its workers an average wage of fifty-eight dollars per month to a man with a family to support, is this inequality the Jesus way of life? Is it Christian citizenship?

The amount of worldly possessions we may accumulate is not going to give us lasting peace and happiness, but knowing we have lived the Jesus way, doing unto others as we would have others do unto us.

When the farmers of one of our states crusade for alien ousters, saying that the Hindu and Japanese farmers must go, is it Christ's way of life? Is it Christian citizenship?

It is, of course, necessary to have rules and regulations and adequate immigration laws, but is it necessary to discriminate in such a way that it hurts a heart so deeply, the hurt won't erase?

We are told that Jesus is color blind as to races; He sees only the soul, and to Him all human souls are the same. Color does not go soul deep.

We may not be able to go as missionaries to foreign fields, but we are able to show the love of Christ to the stranger in our midst.

Dr. Frank C. Laubach said, "The song of love will win where a song of hate will not. Language of service is so much better than language of words. Help someone to help somebody else."

Our troubles between capital and labor and our racial prejudices will cease when we see one another as Jesus sees us. The trouble is with men's hearts, and we never will have a better world until we have better citizens, citizens that do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with their God. We, as Christian citizens, might so exemplify the principles of Jesus' way of living that we might become a truly Christian nation.

Hymn: "O Beautiful for Spacious Skies."

May we as a nation unite in praying that in all things we may do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with our God, that the kingdom of God may come into our hearts and into the life of the world.

Prayer: Our Heavenly Father, Thou who art the Father of all men whatever their color or condition of life, we ask Thee to help us to love all men even as Thou didst love them. Give us the spirit of Thy compassion. Keep us from wounding any heart or adding to the burden of any life. Cleanse our hearts from all selfish individual ambitions, and grant that our vision may be clear as to right and wrong, that we may see our duty as Christian citizens. We ask it in the name of Jesus.—Amen.

TITHING BULLETINS OFFERED AT A SAVING.

The Bulletin, as prepared by The Layman Company, offers every church the most effective method of tithing education plus relief from half of the expense and worries of the ordinary church bulletin. The Bulletin consists of four pages. Pages 1 and 4 are for the use of the local church. They may be printed, multigraphed or mimeographed at one impression. Pages 2 and 3 carry any one of thirty-two of the famous Layman tithing messages. This affords a quiet but effective course in Stewardship education. It combines simplicity, effectiveness and economy. Send for a sample set containing 32 different tithing bulletins for 20 cents. Please mention the CHRISTIAN SUN, also give your denomination.

LIFE'S MISSION TRUE.

If I but knew some heart this side the dead
Had felt its burden fall by what I said,
Or that one life had bloomed in noble deeds,
Because I'd sowed somewhere some worthy seeds,

Then I should feel life's mission had been true.

"LIVING FOR JESUS."

(Worship program during the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Ingram Congregational-Christian Church, June 4, 1936.)

Call to Worship:

"O, come let us worship and bow down,
Come before His presence with singing."

Hymn: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

All hail the power of Jesus' Name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all.

Poem: "Living for Jesus."

"Living for Jesus a life that it true,
Striving to please Him in all that I do,
Yielding allegiance, glad-hearted and free,
This is the pathway of blessing for me.

"Living for Jesus who died in my place,
Bearing on Calvary my sin and disgrace,
Such love constrains me to answer His call,
Follow His leading and give Him my all.

"Living for Jesus wherever I am,
Doing each duty in His Holy Name,
Willing to suffer affliction or loss
Deeming each trial a part of my cross.

"Living for Jesus thro' earth's little while,

Short talk: "Living for Jesus."

Although we realize that this phrase, "Living for Jesus" has a strong challenge as a group of words, yet if you'll allow me, I'd like to take the phrase apart and analyze each of the three words which go into its making.

Our first word is living. It has been said that: "We have not life, but living." When we first think of the word, our mind immediately turns to thoughts of taking food, water and oxygen into our bodies so that we might have energy with which to carry on the many functions of this wonderful body which God has given each of us. But we know that living consists of more than that. Each of us has been given a soul, a character, a personality, which identifies us from other human beings. This is the part of the human makeup which scientists have searched for in vain. Living as used in our phrase "Living for Jesus" does not include that life which is to come, but only to that lapse of time between our birth and death when we can be up and "about our Father's business."

Our second word "for" seems hardest of all to analyze. Our dictionary tells us that it is "a word of wide application, indicating generally the reason of an action or the object sought." Several synonyms are "on account of," "with a view to," and "in honor of." Using each of these synonyms in place of our "for" we throw new thoughts upon our subject. Living "on account of" Jesus; yes, because He came on earth and founded the Christian Church, the existence and influence of which we enjoy today. Living "with a view to" Jesus. Artists through the ages have striven to put on canvas their vision of the appearance of Jesus' face which must have truly beamed with personality and power. In living for Jesus we ever keep before us a vision of Christ who came here and lived among men and then died for our sins. Living "in honor of" Jesus; yes, living to honor and glorify His name and works.

I dare not try to fully analyze the word "Jesus" for we all have a different conception or idea of Jesus. We know he was the one who came to earth and lived among men for thirty-three years. We recall those three crowning years when He was teaching His disciples how to carry on His work after He had gone back to the Father. We read in His word of His death upon Calvary for our sins and His later ascension into Heaven.

Putting our words together again, I wonder what different ideas there are concerning the act of "Living for Jesus." Does it mean the pious attendance of Sabbath worship, the engaging in the singing of hymns, listening while the pastor prays, and dropping a few pennies in the offering plate as it passes by? No! Living for Jesus includes personal religious living, taking a part in the program of the Church and its affiliated organizations, and doing one's share in the carrying on of the missionary work in home and foreign fields. The thought of serving Him embodies the whole of living for Jesus. "Love expresses itself in service" and "Faith is dead without works." With this idea before them the Christian Endeavorers pledge "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do." That is why we consider our national youth theme "Christian Youth Building a New World" as a great challenge to our Christian faith and love of Christ.

"Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His Way;
He has no tongue but our tongue
To tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help
To bring men to His side."

Silent meditation: ("Take My Life and Let It Be"—played softly.)

"Living for Jesus who died in my place,
Bearing on Calvary my sin and disgrace,
Such love constrains me to answer His call,
Follow His leading and give Him my all."

Hymn: "I Would Be True."

"I would be true for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure for there are those who care;
I would be strong for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave for there is much to dare."

Suggestions for Leader's Talk:

The Bible is the Book of books. Even today when thousands of books are being printed daily the Bible still remains the most precious book in the world.

"The majority of Christians are lukewarm in their Bible study and the majority of those who are not Christians do not read the Bible at all. But the world still needs the Bible. The nations cannot get on without it. Civilization cannot last without the ideas and ideals which the Bible was written to proclaim. The Christian church is doomed if church members cease to search the scriptures, and non-Christian nations will never find the path that leads to life without the guidance of prophets and apostles and the Prince of Glory."

God speaks to us through the Bible. The prophets and the apostles who shared in the writing of the Book were guided by the Holy Spirit. Through this Book is revealed more truth about God and the duty of man than any other book ever written. The Bible is a world power; and this power is released only through us as we read and study it and incarnate the great truths we have revealed unto us. This divine library of sixty-six books holds secrets that we must discover if we would prosper. Let each of us with one accord search the scriptures in quest of these great truths the Divine Voice is waiting to reveal unto us if we will but turn a listening ear.

THE COMING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN POWER.

LESSON I—JULY 5, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you; and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."—Acts 1:8.

LESSON: Acts 1:6-14; 2:1-47. Printed Text: Acts 1:6-9; 2:1-11, 32-38.

We begin today a study of the spread of Christianity. It is an amazing story—how this thing which was as a grain of mustard seed grew until it had gone into all the Roman Empire, and had begun a leavening influence that has continued until this day. And the end is not yet—it shall not be until the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ.

An Impossible Task.

Jesus had set before his disciples an impossible task, that is from the human standpoint. They were to go into all the world and make disciples of all the nations. Without money or prestige or political or military power they were to go forth into a hard and hostile world. But they believed Jesus meant what He said and they went. One of the miracles of miracles is the story of the Church of Jesus Christ as it has faced the impossible and done it.

A Waiting Church.

They were to go. But first of all they were to wait, to wait until they had been endowed with power—power from on high. The thing was not in them; it was from God. What they could not have done, God could do thru them. The church has lost some of its power because it is not a praying and a waiting church. It is trying to do its task with mere human resources. It is not enough that a church is carrying on a lot of activities. The church must be primarily a spiritual force. A church that waits on God can do the works of God.

The Coming of the Spirit.

Jesus had promised that He would send power if they waited. They waited and He kept His word and sent the power. He always keeps His word when we do our part and when we obey Him.

There are a number of interesting phases in the story of the Pentecost, the birthday of the church and the festival that marked the coming of the Spirit. As one reads this story one thing stands out—the sense of fullness, abundance, adequacy, completeness. "There was a sound as of a rushing mighty wind, they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and it filled the house where they were sitting"—the Spirit was given without stint or measure. And the symbolism was suggestive. It was as of the rushing of a mighty wind, cloven tongues like as of fire, symbols of the divine presence, of power, of cleansing. There was the speaking with other tongues, symbolic of the universality of the gospel, and earnest of the fact that the gospel should be declared to all men in their own language. There was the fact that the Spirit came upon both sexes, and upon laymen as well as upon apostles. The first few verses of the second chapter of Acts will yield rich truths to those who study it intensively. It is a central document in the history of the Christian Church.

A Great Sermon.

Simon Peter preached the first sermon for the Church on the day of Pentecost. He had a great theme—Jesus Christ and Him Crucified and Risen from the Dead. He had a great backing—the eleven stood up with him. He had a great experience—Christ had forgiven him and given him a new start. He had a great message—his sermon is filled with biblical quotations and is based on scriptural authority. He had a great congregation—there was a great multitude from all parts of the then known world. He had a great compassion—he wanted other men to share his experience of the grace of Christ. He had great courage—he denounced the rulers and the people to their face for their sin in crucifying the Lord. He got great results—three thousand were saved and others were brought to conviction.

A Warm Fellowship.

The new Church of Christ had all things in common, they saw to it that no man had need, they continued in fellowship and in the breaking of bread, they worshipped in the temple, they were continually praising God, and they made a deep impression with the people, having favor with all the people. And they were so spiritually alive that there were added daily unto their number such as God in His grace was saving. It had the spirit of Christ and it was a growing, vital church.

Beginning at Jerusalem.

They were to begin at Jerusalem. They were to begin where they were. But they were not to stay there. The succeeding chapters of Acts tell the story of how the inherent power of Christianity burst the bonds of a narrow and provincial religion and became a great world religion, presenting its claims and making its demands upon all nations.

Vexation arises, and our expression of impatience hinders others from taking it patiently. Disappointment, ailment, or even the weather depresses us; and our look or tone of depression hinders others from maintaining a cheerful and thankful spirit. We say unkind things, and another is hindered in learning the holy lesson of charity that thinketh no evil. We say a provoking thing, and our sister or brother is hindered in that day's effort to be meek. How sadly, too, we may hinder without word or act. For wrong feeling is more infectious than wrong doing; especially the various phases of ill temper—gloominess, touchiness, discontent, irritability—do we not know how catching these are?

—Frances E. Havergal.

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY.

"STRANGE INCENSE."

"Ye shall offer no strange incense thereon."
—Exodus 30:1-9.

Not all prayer is good. The Pharisee stood in the temple and offered a prayer that was only pride. He stood on the street corner and prayed only to be seen of men. Some prayers are hollow forms. Some prayers are only the effort of duty. Some prayers are nothing but self-congratulation. And some prayers are the mere beating of self-will against the gate of heaven.

We are to offer no strange incense upon the prayer-altar of the sanctuary, only the pure incense that has been compounded according to the divine prescription. "After this manner pray ye." We are coming to a King, and the King has a right to say how we shall come.

Deep sorrow for sin. Sincere repentance of our sin. Profound humility in the presence of the Most High. Grateful trust in our divine Intercessor, our expiatory Sacrifice. Entire willingness to accept His blessed will. This is the incense that is acceptable to our Lord.

Prayer—Help us, O Christ, to purge our lives of all strange incense. Put it completely away from the Tent. And give us the pure incense that alone will avail with the Father. We ask it in Thy name.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"OUR CUP."

"The cup that I drink ye shall drink."—
Mark 10:35-40.

James and John and their mother Salome were eager to share Christ's honors. Would they have been so eager if they had known what those honors involved, what shame, what agony, what bitterness of death?

But it was not for them alone, ambitious as they were, that the Lord foretold a share in His cup, His fortunes. Every true disciple, however obscure. Andrew as well as Peter, Bartholomew as well as John, the janitor of your church as well as the famous preacher, is to drink Christ's cup with Him.

For that is what our religion includes and means, being with Christ and living His life. Read the four Gospels. Learn what the Saviour's life was, and His death as well, and in it all see your own life, if you are true to Him. Shall the servant be more favored than his master?

Prayer—We ask for nothing but Thee, O Christ, Thee and Thy fortunes. With Thee we shall be exultantly content, through time and eternity.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"TERRIFYING CHRISTIANS."

"Neither did there remain any more spirit in any man, because of you."—Joshua 2:8-14.

Rahab and all the people in Jericho had heard what great things Jehovah had done for

His people in delivering them from Egypt, and bringing them up to the border of Canaan. They knew that the Hebrews' God was a great God, and that they could not hope to stand against Him. Their hearts were filled with terror at the approach of such a conquering foe.

It is the fault of Christians if they do not fill the wicked with fear. The Christians' God is omnipotent. Evil cannot exist in His presence. All unrighteousness flees before Him. We have only to march with Him, and worldlings will melt before us.

Yet how often we foolishly count up the resources of wickedness, and allow our hearts to grow faint before the powers of darkness! One ray of the Sun of righteousness will put them all to flight.

Prayer—Grant us the courage of Thy presence, O Conqueror divine! For Thy Son's sake.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"DEAD OR ALIVE."

"Even so reckon ye also yourselves to be dead unto sin, but alive unto God in Christ Jesus."—Romans 6:1-11.

We can be dead and alive at the same time, just as at the same time we can be deaf to certain sounds but keenly sensitive to other sounds, or see certain sights but be blind to others.

If we are alive to God in Christ Jesus, then sin, so far as we are concerned, does not exist; we are dead to it.

Those whose life is one long and sad struggle against sin cannot comprehend how great is the relief to find it removed from their lives altogether. No more shame. No more remorse. No more fear of yielding to temptation. Death to sin does not mean dissolution but abundance of vigor, when it is life to God in Christ. It is a transformation of the entire being from misery to joy.

Prayer—Take us up into Thy abounding life, O God, and let sin no more have dominion over us. Through the power of our Redeemer.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"COPYING THE WRONG THINGS."

"My father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions."—I Kings 12:12-17.

Solomon, when he began his reign, made choice of wisdom; but his son Rehoboam, at the outset of his reign, made choice of folly. Solomon laid heavy taxes on the people to support his luxury and extravagance, but Rehoboam proposed to lay still heavier taxes. So he lost the greater part of his kingdom.

We must follow someone's example, but we may choose the right things to copy and not the wrong things. We have before us the perfect Example. We can follow Him, in His strength, and then we shall make no mistake.

Pride means the loss of kingdoms. Greed means the loss of kingdoms. So do sloth and folly and sin. It is the way of the young to vaunt themselves in self-glorification. If they cannot exceed in wisdom, they will excel in folly. But that way leads only to loss.

Prayer—Abase our spirits, O God of all wisdom! Teach us the profit of humility. Make us like Thy glorious Son. In His name.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"UPSIDE DOWN."

"The way of the wicked He turneth upside down."—Psalm 146:1-10.

There is always a reason for reversals of fortune. If your life has been happy and has become unhappy, look within your heart for the cause. Loss of property, loss of health, loss of friends, will not account for loss of joy. There must have been another loss.

Life is staunchly upright so long as it points to heaven, so long as it looks to God. Wickedness only can bring about a reversal that counts for anything.

Wealth may be turned upside down by fluctuations of trade; but if the heart is fixed on God, that reversal will not change joy to sorrow. So with changes in all the other exterior and temporary aspects of life.

Prayer—Thou, God, art our perpetuity. Thou alone art our firm reliance. Resting in Thee, we are established forever.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"TONGUE AND TROUBLE."

"Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles."—Prov. 21:16-24.

If we will keep a record of our troubles and trace each to its cause, we shall be amazed to see how many of them come from careless, thoughtless, unkind, or tactless speech. Few habits will do more to keep us happy than the habit of thinking before we speak.

Speech is a surly dog, liable to slip his leash at any time. Speech is a pestilence, communicated from one to another. Speech is a fire, speedily rising beyond control. It is a lion cub, easily managed only when it is a cub.

Some are eager to be thought brilliant talkers; they would far better strive to be thoughtful talkers. Some are pleased when men laugh at their sharp wit; they would better seek men's gratitude for their wise commendation. Speech has ten thousand uses. Let us carefully select the uses that bring honor and friends.

Prayer—Put a guard, O Lord, at the door of our mouth. Hold back our tongue from all bitterness. May the law of truth dwell within us and keep us in Thy blessed ways. For Jesus' saks.—Amen.

Oh, many a shaft at random sent Finds mark the archer little meant!
And many a word at random spoken
May soothe, or wound, a heart that's broken!

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A MOTHER AND HER CHILD.

By JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"Train up a child in the way he should go."—Prov. 22:6.

It is an honor to be called upon to address the Mother's Club of this church, for this is a mother's club with a devotion to the true goal of motherhood. You are a group of mothers with tiny babies meeting for the purpose of learning how to train up your children in the way they should go. You are seeking, too, to be better mothers yourselves, and to be in the learning process for the development of your own fuller lives. What a noble purpose is yours! What an inspiring privilege you have! What destiny hangs upon your brave hearts! Scarcely can one think of a more important organization within the church, or a more important group within society than the young mothers as they seek to solve the problems which so largely affect the destiny of their sons and daughters, and the future of our civilization.

I feel my incompetency as I come before so important a group. But I had a mother! She loved me, her son, and that is something of a beginning. I daily observe, even seek to assist, a mother who has a little girl and a little boy whom she seeks to train up in the way they should go. I attend that school, from which one never graduates, and in which the more one learns the less he is willing to admit he knows. Our children tug at our heart-strings and we stand before hope with fear and trembling, and daily look to Him who rules over the destiny of individuals, as well as nations, and trust Him for guidance and help. Something like that is what leads you, no doubt, to ask your pastor to bring to you your message today.

A goal from the beginning. There should be some sort of a goal from the very beginning. It would be a poor contractor that would start to build a house without a plan, or lay a railroad, or grow a garden. Too often the child is raised like Topsy,—"jus growed." By a goal, of course, it is not meant that the mother, or parents, have in mind just what they wish their son, or daughter to do in life as a work, or profession. But it is important that parents should have in mind from the beginning the kind of attitude they desire their child to have toward life, or else there would be no point to the injunction: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

A life inspired by a religious purpose. "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." Christian parents will want their children to know God, and Jesus, whom He hath sent in such way as to inspire their daily living, and serving. Suppose Mary had asked herself the question as she held the Babe in her arms, it could have been answered in words which the Son later used: "I am come that they might have life." His life was inspired by a religious purpose. And it was so while he was a carpenter's boy in Nazareth, as well as when he was himself a carpenter at the bench, or the Saviour of men giving His life on Calvary. Christian mothers know that the lives which last, lives which live on and on in a community, lives which are noble, are lives inspired by a religious purpose. And so they hope for their sons and daughters from the very beginning that they may be motivated by Christian principles, and purposes.

"One ship drives east, another drives west,
While the selfsame breezes blow;
'Tis the set of the sail and not the gale,
That bids them where to go.

"Like the winds of the sea are the ways of fate,
As we journey along through life;
'Tis the set of the soul that decides the goal,
And not the calm, or strife."

"In the beginning God." The first words of Scripture are surely appropriate when we think of the tiny infant. The mother who can, and does throw about her baby the very breath of God moves a long, long ways in the matter of bringing up that child in the way he should go. "In the beginning God." That should be the starting place in life's actions, and life's planning. In the beginning of the seriously beautiful business of getting married, God. God is love. Happy the child who inherits life from parents who truly love one another. Parents who even in selecting their mates have thought deeply, wisely and well. Young people who have made their choices on that basis of sound judgment and common sense. Young people who have lived up to that point a life inspired by a religious purpose are young people who have lived in homes of Christian training, homes that have honored and respected the church, homes where the children have been taught to love and respect the church, and to make life's decisions in the light of the best in religion.

One day the mother holds the tiny infant to her breast. The father takes the little babe in his arms. What are the thoughts of an hour like that? What destiny hangs upon the birth of a child! If they hope to train up the child in the way he should go certainly there should be at that moment, "In the beginning God." There may be little of outward show. But there should be much of inward determination, and consecration of the lives of the parents to the holiest and best of which they are capable. A deep, beautiful reverence should be indelibly written upon the faces that bend above an infant child. They are gifts of God! If humbleness, reverence, holiness of life, and nobleness of purpose in both parents are brought to the altar of service as the babe's first impressions of life much has been achieved already.

The trainer in training. It will be impossible to "train up a child in the way he should go" unless the trainer knows for himself the rigors of right training! What patience is implied in this business of training. It is not easy to train a puppy, or a horse. Training a child is a far more delicate business. The trainer keeps himself in constant training. The football coach keeps his player in training for a season, and in the meantime keeps himself in training in season and out. He has a goal in view for himself, and for each player. The goal for himself is his

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Someone said to me sometime ago that if the people know more about the Christian Orphanage they would be more liberal in its support. For twenty years I have been trying to tell our people about the Christian Orphanage. I have tried to acquaint them with the inside work of the institution. I have tried to show our people from time to time some of the results of the work here and show them that the money invested here is a wise investment.

Some who make contributions think the money is given away and that it is gone forever. That is a mistaken idea. It is not given away, but it is invested in humanity, a chance to boys and girls who have absolutely no chance.

The Church, through its orphanage steps in and says to the child, "You have been unfortunate, you are left alone without a chance; but you shall have a home, you shall have a chance. You, though fatherless and motherless, shall be on an equal footing with other boys and girls. The church will invest in you but will expect you to make good and be worthy of the investment it makes."

Today, when we visit different communities and see our girls as private secretaries, and stenographers, clerks, or the heads of nice homes, or sitting by the bedside of the sick nursing them back to health again or see our boys, who one time were helpless and homeless, holding responsible positions, it makes us feel that the investment was a wise one.

The Christian Orphanage is taking homeless children without a chance in life and giving them a chance. It's a good investment.

standard of life, and that standard of life shows itself in the quality of his team. The standards of life live in the children when the rules of the household have been forgotten. The words of the soul still talk when the words of the lips have ceased. The child catches your love before it understands your language, and it will know when your words belie your life. You may have many faults, but if your spirit is right, your motives above reproach, and your failings of the hand only, and not the heart, then your children will be the first to forgive the failures of your hands. They cannot forgive the failures of the spirit, that is another matter, for "out of the heart are the issues of life."

If you do not have the courage to discipline yourself, to deny yourself, to set the right example, then there is lacking some fibre of the soul for which nothing can make amends. If you can easily do wrong, neglect right, forget duty, violate reverence, and trample under foot the finest life has known, then the child will read it all like a book and will probably never know what great courage, and real nobility of the soul is. You say, "blood tells," and I say, "God tells." In the beginning life came from God. Keep that life in reverent respect of its eternal Author and the aristocracy of the infinite channels through its veins! That is true greatness. Whether in the despised city of Nazareth, or in the lowly work-room of the humble carpenter, or the homes of the little city of Suffolk.

The first lessons are always first! Many changes may come, some for the better, and some for the worse, maybe, but the first lessons will flavor, to a certain extent, all the lessons that follow, and fix to a certain extent the very fashion of the soul. The first lessons at home shine on the lessons at school, and on and on through the years of youth, and young manhood and womanhood. That is why I say, "In the beginning God."

You may say, "but I do not know enough to train my children aright." Yea, mother, do you love enough? Do you care enough? Are you willing enough to do the best you know for the object of your love? Then give yourself,—the best self you can be and you will not fail!

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Directed Prayer—(Pianist play softly "Open My Eyes, that I May See.")

- 1. Thank God for the Bible; its influence on the world, and in our own individual life.
- 2. Ask God to help us to so live that thro' us others will catch the vision of Christ, and they too learn to listen for the Divine Voice.

Sing very softly the second verse "Open My Eyes, that I May See."

Closing Thought—

"The two most precious gifts from God to this world of ours are the Bible and the child. When the truths of the Bible live and breathe and become incarnate in the child, when the child and God's Word become one, we have God's greatest and best gift. . . . God has given us the child, and he has given us the inspired Word. He has also given us the blessed privilege of making the two to become one. His voice is calling today to parents and to teachers to join hands and hearts in this great and noble task. Let us study the child, study the Bible, and learn the method of bringing the two together; then shall we send forth young men and women, with all their youth and glory, beauty and enthusiasm, to be light-bearers for God and humanity, to bring in His Kingdom on earth." (Annie L. Williams.)

Hymn: "Break Thou the Bread of Life."

Leader:

- Word of God incarnate,
- Wisdom from on high,
- Truth unchanged, unchanging,
- Light of our dark sky,

We praise Thee for the radiance
That from the hallowed page,
A lantern to our foot-steps,
Shines on from age to age."

Mizpah Benediction.

A POLITICAL SUMMER.

With the two great party conventions over as well as the smaller one of the Socialist Party, we can expect the usual excitement of a political summer preceding an election to the presidency. The role of Church people should be that of endeavoring to view the whole scene with calm judgment rather than the hatred that is already showing its head.

We have such a bad habit in America of viewing things emotionally. We allow ourselves to believe wild rumors. We insist upon involving those whom we disagree with politically in lack of proper moral responsibility. Surely none of these things belong to Christian people. We can, if we are Christian, violently disagree with any political faith or creed, and yet without vicious emotional hatred work for the cause which we would like to win in a political election.

It is a particular challenge this year, which promises to be a bitter one politically, for Christians to demonstrate their Christianity, and we hope that in the unstable world in which we all live, the instability will not be furthered by bitterness or hatred. Preachers will do well to watch their words, and laymen will set a great example if they can be temperate and Christian in their attitudes.—Southern Churchman.

MARRIAGES

WHITT—PIERCE.

Mr. John Burnett Whitt and Miss Florine Pierce of White Plains, New York, were married by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, at his home in Virgilina, Va., on the evening of April 18, 1936.

Mr. Whitt is the son of Mr. James David Whitt and Elizabeth Bray Whitt of Nathalie, Va., and for several years has held a responsible position at White Plains, N. Y.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Oscar Melvin Pierce and Amie Tuck Pierce of White Plains. All are members of Liberty Christian Church. Mr. Whitt, before going to New York, was for several years the efficient superintendent of Liberty Springs S. S. Mrs. Whitt is a lady of unusual personality. Her rare gifts and tact have won for her a host of friends.

May the blessings of our Heavenly Father ever attend them.

CROUSE—FAULKNER.

In an impressive and beautiful ceremony, Miss Sarah Frances Faulkner of Burlington, N. C., and Mr. Clair Hurley Crouse of Burlington, N. C., R. 4, were married Friday, June 5, at 8 P. M., at the Shallow Ford Congregational-Christian Church.

The couple took their vows before an altar which was improvised by the use of Queen Anne's Lace and candles against a background of palms.

The bride wore a gown of Ivory Satin and a corsage of Sweetheart Roses and Valley Lilies. The couple entered the church unattended.

Mrs. Crouse is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Faulkner of Burlington, N. C. Mr. Crouse is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Crouse of Burlington, N. C., Route 4.

May God's blessings be upon this happy union.

SPARE MONEY

A FEW DAYS ago I had a serious talk with a friend of mine and a friend of the college about his contribution to the college at this time. He said, "I have figured every way that I know. I have discussed the matter with my family. I certainly want to do what I can but this is all I can spare." Elon College will never be relieved of its present embarrassment nor saved from the possibility of impending failure with "spare money." It was not built with "spare money" and it cannot be maintained with "spare money." The founding of Elon College called for sacrifice. Its adequate support throughout the years has called for sacrifice. Its present financial condition accentuates this call more emphatically than ever before.

When the plain path of Christian duty requires of us material sacrifice, to fail to walk that path we make an even greater sacrifice—in fact, by failing to sacrifice material things for real values we immediately sacrifice the higher for the lower. As a church and as a people we face the inevitable. We will sacrifice. It is our privilege to sacrifice the material for the real. If we be unwilling to sacrifice the material, involuntarily we sacrifice the real, the spiritual.

No Christian has yet faced duty that called for sacrifice and remained the same. He is either richer or poorer for having faced duty that required sacrifice. "Spare money" provides comforts, conveniences, luxuries, but "spare money," however used, rarely, if ever, enriches one's life.

Elon College will not be saved by what we can spare but by what we are willing to sacrifice. "If any man would come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow Me."

L. E. SMITH.

QUIET PLACES

By BESSIE GATCH JONES.

I love the holy, quiet places,
The garden, field, and wood,
Where nature pulses heaven's wish
In sweetest solitude.

The magic of early morn,
A dream world shining through,
As the sky encircles the gladsome earth
In a wide, wide sea of blue!

The quiet of the old home farm
And the dusty roads that run
Along life's highway, hill, and plain
To meet the journeying sun.

I love the moorlands, silent and calm,
And the charm of twilight time
When God is whispering messages through
Of peace and rest sublime.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

One of our splendid Christian women, thoroughly imbued with the missionary spirit, in a personal note says: "My income isn't large. I give a tenth, but do not stop there. Last year it was over a fifth. It isn't a sacrifice to give, even when I go without things I think I need. The only hurt I feel over giving is that I can't give more. Christ gave a life. The finer the nature, I believe, the keener the sufferer, and no matter what comes we cannot realize that full extent of what Christ endured even before the cross."

The information comes that Mrs. C. M. Dollar, relict of the late lamented, Rev. C. M. Dollar, Roanoke, Ala., passed from her earthly to her heavenly home at 2 A. M., Monday, July 6. Mrs. Dollar, a saintly soul, was the life-long companion of a devoted, preacher husband, and the mother of two beloved ministers, Rev. J. D. Dollar of Roanoke, and Rev. Jesse H. Dollar of La Grange, Ga., and Grandmother of Rev. Carl Dollar. A mother in Israel indeed, from whose life and home abundant blessings flowed out in many directions to enrich and bless other lives.

Rev. Carl Parker, who was in attendance in the Summer School of Religion at Elon College last week, was Dean of the Young People's Conference of our South Georgia churches. Of this latter Conference the Waycross Journal Herald, June 20, says: "The Young People's Conference of the South Georgia Congregational and Christian Churches has just closed its session at Glynn Haven Estate, Sea Island, Ga., at "Camp Mighty Fine." The personnel of the conference included a select group of young men and women from the various churches. The purpose of the conference was to better train those present for places of leadership in their local congregations. The faculty was composed of Rev. Carl Parker, Dean of the School, Mrs. E. O. Branch, Dean of Women; Rev. H. B. Mowbray, Worship and Missions, Rev. Carl Ekblad, Prophets and Problems of Life; Rev. Robert Kinball, Chaplain; Mrs. E. P. Wiles, Nurse; Rev. J. H. Dollar, Lecturer on Palestine; Miss Eva Casey Dietitian; Miss Esther Pearson, Asst. Dietitian; and Mrs. Esther Mae Coleman, Camp Mother. Mrs. Margaret Davidson Kate, Glynn County historian, was guide to all points of interest. The conference closed with a sermon by the Rev. J. H. Dollar.

NOTE OF APPRECIATION.

We wish to take this opportunity to express our appreciation of the many acts of kindness, of the many beautiful cards, letters and words of sympathy and also of the many gorgeous flowers which were given us during the recent illness and death of our husband and father, Rev. A. W. Andes. Upon all we pray the Lord's richest blessings.

MRS. A. W. ANDES and family.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

What?—The S. S. and C. E. Convention of Eastern N. C. Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches.

Where?—Oak Level Christian Church two miles east of Youngsville, N. C.

When?—July 14, 1936, at 9:30 A. M. We urge all pastors, Sunday School Superintendents, teachers and delegates to be there. Please be on time and help make this our best convention.

HENDERSON AND LIBERTY.

On May 4, we had the great privilege of having with us for a ten-day evangelistic meeting at Henderson, Rev. O. D. Poythress of Norfolk, Va. This was a very fine-spirited meeting. Brother Poythress preached with a zeal that was backed by a life of deep consecration, and his messages touched the hearts of those who had the happy privilege of hearing him. At the close of the meeting nine accessions were made unto the church. This meeting planted the seed which will bring forth a harvest in lives of many who had been growing cold.

Beginning Sunday, July 19, Brother Poythress will assist the writer in another meeting at Liberty, Vance, and we hope to have a week of profitable evangelistic effort which will increase the spiritual life of the church as well as lead to Christ those who do not know Him as Saviour. We ask your prayers for the success of this meeting.

S. E. MADREN.

He was better to me than all my hopes
And better than all my fears,
He made a bridge of my broken vows
And a rainbow of my tears.
The wave that threatened to bury me
Carried my Lord on its crest,
When I think of his love in days past
I can trust Him for the rest.—Anon.

WHAT THE PREACHING MISSION IS NOT.

For an adequate understanding of the true genius and spirit of the National Preaching Mission, which is to be conducted from mid-September to mid-December, three possible misconceptions need to be avoided.

1. The Mission is not a display of "star preaching." Great preachers are associated with it—and others are to be added—but they go to the various communities only as co-operators with their Christian brethren in reinforcing the permanent ministry of the local churches. The greatness of the Preaching Mission is not in its preachers but in the Gospel that they preach.

2. The Mission is not limited to 25 major cities. While 25 metropolitan centers will feel the first direct impact of the Mission, the extension program, reaching out from each of these centers over wide areas, will bring hundreds of communities within range of the Mission's work and influence. Moreover, strong emphasis is being laid on the simultaneous holding of preaching missions in local parishes throughout the country. Thus every minister of every denomination may be an active participant in the National Preaching Mission.

3. The Mission is not trying to "put over" any particular social program. It has nothing to urge except the Christian Gospel. It conceives the Gospel as having dynamic significance for all the burning issues of our contemporary world but it will not identify the Gospel with anyone's pet formula or ism. What the Mission aims to do is to confront the American people afresh with the summons to a living faith in God, a personal dedication to Christ and a discipleship to Him in every aspect of their relations with their fellowmen. The Mission will not set forth the specific solution of our problems, but it may, under the guidance of God, create the spiritual atmosphere in which alone those problems can be solved.

I turned an ancient poet's book
And found upon a page,
"Stone walls do not a prison make Nor iron bars a cage."

Yes, that is true, and sometimes more
You'll find where'er you roam,
That marble floors and gilded walls
Can never make a home.

But every home where love abides
And friendship is a guest,
Is surely home, and home sweet home,
For there the soul can rest.

THE NATIONAL PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP AT LAKESIDE.

By EMILY CARLETON.

The Congregational and Christian group at Lakeside was the largest of all the groups represented there—one hundred and twenty-five of us coming from thirty states. This group was very prominent in the general conference, as one of our members was elected Vice Chairman of the Lakeside Conference and three of the ten commissions were led by members of our group. Lanson Granger, of Norfolk, Va., was Chairman of the commission which made plans for "Helping Others to Be Christian."

Each denominational group met in the evenings as separate units; thus we were able to know each other and to work out plans for the Congregational-Christian group as a whole. All that we did was based upon two convictions: that every local organization must be free to have the kind of program and type of organization best suited to its needs, but that every local organization should join with the thousands of others in the Pilgrim Fellowship to undertake great tasks which require united action.

The group was divided into commissions to work on specific problems. Each of these was led by a capable adviser—a leader in that particular field in our church. These commissions were: Personal Religion, Social Action, Missionary Action, Christian Life Topics and Pilgrim Highroad, The Student Program, Associational and State Fellowships, and the Council of the National Pilgrim Fellowship.

The last-named commission worked out plans for the future of the Pilgrim Fellowship and presented them to the group as a whole for adoption. The result is that we now have a permanent organization which will meet every two years in conjunction with the General Council. We are very proud of the fact that Lanson Granger was elected President of the National Council, while Zelma Hoag of Indiana was elected Vice President. Each section of the country is to have a representative on the Executive Council, the one from the Southeast being Dorothy Truitt of Greensboro, N. C. In addition, each state or conference will have two representatives on the National Council. These young people will not form a cumbersome organization, but will assist Dr. Stock and Miss Eldredge in making the program for the year—their advice will be asked about the Christian Life Topics and any program formulation which will affect the group as a whole.

WHY WE WENT TO LAKESIDE.

By DOROTHY TRUITT.

The Christian Youth Conference of North America held at Lakeside, O., June 23-28, gave to some of us the greatest opportunity life has brought. Five of us represented our Southeast Congregational-Christian Youth Fellowship. There were over a thousand delegates from the United States and Canada, representing seventy-one denominations and agencies, such as the Y. M. C. A. and Christian Endeavor and one hundred and seventy-five colleges and universities. From every state in the Union and from Canada young people came by freight car, bicycle, automobile, bus and train.

What was it that drew these people together?

In February of 1934 leaders of youth met in Chicago and began to think together concerning "Christian Youth Building a New World." That same year a group of young people and their leaders met at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, to plan definite aims and to outline procedures for this new movement. This Lakeside Conference brought together selected young people to consider the next steps in the promotion of this ideal. Specifically the purpose of the conference was:

- (1) To secure contributions of young people themselves in the future development of the movement.
- (2) To find out methods by which common aims and procedures of the movement can be carried out in the areas represented by the young people attending the conference.
- (3) To develop plans of action by which the ideals of the movement can be made effective in our world.
- (4) To give these representative young people a sense of fellowship with those of similar purpose in other Christian agencies.

The Conference was divided into ten commissions, each taking one phase of the topic "Christian Youth Building a New World" to study and develop definite plans for work. Each Commission had as its objectives (1) To evolve a commitment of specific individual responsibilities. (2) To plan definite immediate group activities. (3) To give specific recommendations to the conference in helping to form the conference platform. (4) To plan action for state, county and associational groups. These commissions were as follows: Personal Religious Living, Helping Other Young People to Be Christian, Creative Use of Leisure Time, Developing a Christian Type of Patriotism, Christian World Outreach, Preparation for Home and Marriage, Helping Build a Warless World, Helping Solve the Liquor Problem, Breaking Down Barriers, and Helping Build a Christian Economic Order. Each commission made a statement of its conviction, pointed out some of the most urgent issues, and suggested definite methods by which Christian young people should act.

With our task before us, it was thrilling to hear the thousand young people sing together the conference hymn:

"We would be building; temples still undone O'er crumbling walls their crosses scarcely lift,
Waiting 'till love can raise the broken stone
And hearts creative bridge the human rift;
We would be building, Master, let Thy plan Reveal the life that God would give to man."

HOLY HABITS.

Slowly fashioned, link by link,
Slowly waxing strong,
Till the spirit never shrink,
Save from touch of wrong.

Holy habits are thy wealth,
Golden pleasant chains;
Passing earth's prime blessing—
health,
Endless, priceless gains.

Holy habits give thee place
With the noblest, best,
All most god-like, of thy race,
And with seraphs blest.

Holy habits are thy joy,
Wisdom's pleasant ways,
Yielding good without alloy,
Lengthening, too, thy days.

Seek them, Christian, night, morn,
Seek them noon and even;
Seek them till thy soul be born
Without stains—in Heaven.

Forty American radiologists and roentgenologists were named at Hamburg, Germany, among 165 heroes of science who sacrificed their lives in medical research. Their names are chiseled on a simple sandstone monument in front of the Roentgen Institute of St. George's Hospital. The honor list also includes 46 French and 17 German scientists.—Exchange.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EVANGELISM.

Elsewhere in this paper is an article concerning a meeting of ministers at Elon College, North Carolina, the past week to discuss "Evangelism." The report is worthy of study and ought to stimulate the thinking of both ministers and laymen. If the things stated in this report are correct, all those who love the Church should become exceedingly concerned.

There is no question but that evangelism is needed for our time. There may be a difference of opinion concerning the definition of evangelism and the methods that should be followed, but certainly there is no question that the "Good News" should be made known to the people who live in our time, many of whom live with unhappy thoughts and despondent emotions. The gospel of God, as made known in Christ Jesus, is needed by every individual and when properly presented is usually quite welcome.

Statistics of our denomination and of other denominations indicate that church membership has been on the decline in recent years and is just beginning to take an upward turn. There is real need for recruiting members for the Church. Unless new names can be added from time to time our churches must ultimately die. New life should constantly come into the church.

It must be remembered, however, that recruiting members and evangelizing the world may be two entirely different things. The membership roll may be increased by getting people to come from other churches or by receiving those into membership who have not accepted the Christian way of life. Of course, the ideal method of recruiting is to secure definite allegiance to Christ on the part of those who have not previously accepted Him and then securing these persons for membership in the Church. This is evangelism in its best sense. Those who have not accepted Christ are given His message and accept His way of life and become a part of His church. This is the goal toward which we strive.

Any method which will aid individuals in knowing and accepting the way of Christ for their personal lives is appropriate to be used by Christian individuals and churches. Many of our pastors and churches depend on a series of services annually, called the revival, to do the evangelistic work and to recruit Church members. Still others depend upon the religious educational program to accomplish this same end. Others believe largely in the personal work of individuals seeing other individuals and presenting the claims of Christ personally. Still others feel that the way to evangelize is for the church group to minister to the needs of those who know not the Christ, in such a fashion that the non-Christians will be drawn to the Master. Any or all of these methods may be used to good advantage and should probably be combined. But certainly all churches should have a definite program of evangelism that will be constantly redeeming people from sin and bringing them into the fellowship of those who love God.

ELON LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL.

At this writing there are one hundred and twenty-seven people attending the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training, which is sponsored by the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention and the Extension Boards of our denomination. A fine faculty is doing good work teaching and an excellent student group is hard at work trying to get new information that will help in local church work, seeking to develop their spiritual lives and to make friendships that are good.

Thirty-eight of these people are from Eastern Virginia; thirty-two from North Carolina and Virginia; fifteen from Eastern North Carolina; twelve from Georgia; eight from Florida; five from Virginia Valley; three from Western North Carolina; one from Alabama and thirteen from outside of the Southeast. This makes for fine fellowship and helps to strengthen the growing spirit of comradeship among our people. There is an unusually fine spirit of cooperation and an apparent desire to find the best way to live and to work. Pastors, adults and young people mingle together happily in classroom and on campus. It is a real joy to work with this group.

DR. LEON EDGAR SMITH'S OPEN LETTER.

My dear Dr. Smith:

Your open letter to me in THE SUN of June 25 was more than generous and could have come only from a great heart and a sincere soul. Your lines of approval of the service I have sought to render, as editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for 28 years, with other letters of similar tone from my brethren, more than compensate for all the work as Editor for this period. Indeed, I am grateful.

And now your questions. First: "What do you consider the three most significant undertakings of your church in the South during the last half century?"

Answer:—To me all undertakings of the church, especially of a corporate or cooperative type, are deeply significant in that they indicate a moving together, toward a definite goal and objective. Moreover, every such undertaking directly affects every other interest and enterprise of the church. We rise or we fall together. All the institutions and enterprises of the church thus become deeply significant since if one member suffer, all the other members suffer with it, and the eye cannot say to the ear, nor the hand say to the foot, I have no need of thee. We are members one of another and as such we rise or fall, rejoice or suffer together. With this said, one who has observed the facts, or will read our history must readily declare that Elon College, which opened its doors to students in 1890, is the most significant undertaking of our church in the South during the last half century, because along with the rise, progress and prestige of the institution, there has gone the rise, progress and prestige of every department of the church. Since the college has been our most stupendous and gigantic undertaking, demanding as a necessity of its existence, both larger gifts than any other enterprise and more men and women employed in its staff as all-time workers, its significance is at once apparent and reflects its life and power throughout the entire church. Although the missionary enterprise as a distinct feature of the church, was launched prior to the opening of the college, and although the spirit of benevolence and of Christian education was manifest in many quarters prior to that date, these enterprises were quickened into action and given a new impetus towards a larger vision and a wider faith, as the intelligent leadership of the church manifested itself through the students and graduates of Elon College.

Second:—"What do you consider the three greatest responsibilities now resting upon our church and awaiting our hearts and our hands?"

Answer: My candid conviction is that the greatest responsibility that the church of our day has is that of deepening, quickening, or, shall I say, recovering the spiritual life of the church, and of every community and home of which the church is a part? I find myself in accord with a recent pronouncement of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America to the effect that church life is running at low ebb, that there are many vacant pews in our churches, that the sanctity of the Sabbath is being recklessly disregarded, or abused, and that violence has been done to moral and spiritual standards. The recovery of the spiritual life, the establishment of new moral standards, (where old ones are torn down), building up the morale, influence and power of the local church, through the spiritual life of its individual members is, to me, the greatest responsibility and charge our church now has. How this is to be done, I doubt if anyone of us can say with accuracy. Maybe through the widespread effort of Evangelism. Maybe through the teaching and the practice of Christian education and the building of Christian character. And maybe we can do this most rapidly and successfully by courageously facing the inadequacy of the support we have given to our own Elon College, and by rising, like one man, and through sacrificial giving, wipe out its indebtedness and thus make it free to do its work of quickening again all our other enterprises. Maybe this is the road to recovery, but whatever the road may be, the greatest responsibility now is recovery.

Third:—"What do you consider to be the most effective means in meeting these responsibilities and of accomplishing the task that God has laid out for us as a church?"

Answer: The answer to this question has been anticipated in a measure, through the answer to No. Two, above. The church cannot rise to its deserved might and majesty, as long as even one of its institutions, its most weighty institution in particular, is hindered in its divinely appointed task of building up the kingdom of righteousness and discharging the functions whereunto it was created. My conviction is that if we are willing now, and can summons the courage, and spirit of sacrifice, to wipe out the indebtedness of Elon College, this would in a very large measure restore confidence in ourselves, and renew our courage for greater tasks in the service of our Lord. Every institution and enterprise of the church has its loyal and enthusiastic friends and adherence. That is why it is necessary for a church to have varied institutions, and enterprises, that thru them men and women, boys and girls, of many minds and attitudes, may all be enlisted at least in some phases and features of church work, and that some at least, as all should be, shall be interested in, faithful to, and willing to sacrifice for, every enterprise of the church.

We must never forget the fact that ours is a spiritual kingdom, and that the church is ever seeking to enlarge and make more powerful on the earth the kingdom of heaven; that is to say, the kingdom of righteousness among men. Whatever best leads to this desired goal is at once the greatest responsibility, as it is the chief asset of the church of God on earth. By patience, by prayer, by fortitude, through self-denial, we shall win out in and through the church, since the church is the body of Christ and cannot perish from the earth. Our church deserves, and should have the best we can give, for it always gives us back far more than we give to it.

J. O. ATKINSON.

Do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for powers equal to your tasks. Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle. Every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness of life which has come to you by the grace of God. —Phillips Brooks.

THOUGHTS FROM LAKESIDE.

By LANSON GRANGER.

It was agreed by those at Lakeside that there must be some real inner urge on the part of individuals before they can build a new world. They must have real reasons for putting Christians principles into action. This will grow out of their belief in God, and their dedication to Him.

In his address "What God Means to Me," Kirby Page outlined the three attributes of the God to whom we should consecrate our lives. First, He is a working God, who is present in all the processes of life. He works with His children, and through them is attempting to bring about a social order in which people can live well. Secondly, He is a suffering God. Since man made his first evil choice, God has been suffering. The third attribute of God is His trust in man to carry His message of love into all phases of life.

This working, suffering, trusting God is endeavoring to build a home—a family in which all men may be united as brothers. The family is not built upon coercion or violence, but upon love and brotherhood.

As Jesus faced the Cross, so will young people today who accept the challenge of the Cross face numerous conflicts in life. They will collide with forces which will demand that they bear all the risks and penalties. Even within the church, there are persons who will believe that they are doing God's service when they oppose the Christian action of modern youth.

When hundreds of the Lakeside delegates pledged themselves to oppose war, they did so conscious of the penalty that they must pay. They decided to seek immediate reduction, through Congressional legislation, of the R. O. T. C., of military training in the C. C. C. and of compulsory military training in civil schools and colleges.

The Lakeside delegates declared their intention to aid labor, but realized that they faced difficulties in their opposition to the evils of the present capitalistic system through which many lives are being exploited. They recommended the consumers' co-operatives as one method of bringing about economic readjustment. "When the church fails to heed the cries of those in need, it fails to heed the call of God."

Concerning the liquor problem, many representatives pledged themselves to total abstinence from alcoholic beverages. They endeavored to develop a program which will strike at

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On July 1, as previously stated in THE SUN, the financial plan of providing for a church paper within the bounds of the Southern Convention for the next biennium, became effective on the basis of the order of the last session of the Convention. This new order puts an increased responsibility upon the constituency served by the paper. For several years the Central Publishing Company, Inc., of Richmond, Virginia, assumed all responsibility for securing new subscribers and renewals. Under that arrangement the Convention paid $4,000.00 to the said Publishing Company, annually, in addition to collections on subscriptions. The editor and managing editor have been serving without any salary compensation.

Under the terms of the new contract a definite amount is to be paid to the Central Publishing Company, each month for printing and mailing THE SUN. The editor and manager is to be paid a salary. All collections for subscriptions will be used by the Convention officials toward paying the expenses on the basis of the contracts already made. A maximum apportionment of $4,000.00 has been assigned to the Conferences of the Convention for this purpose. To meet the expenses, for the next biennium, it will be necessary to collect about $4,000.00 on subscriptions to the paper each year. This is a much greater amount than has been collected during the past four years. Unless subscribers are prompt in paying for their paper, the Convention will be embarrassed by a large deficit in the Department of Publications. The situation is desperate and the call is urgent.

This matter is brought to the attention of SUN readers in order to make it clear that the ministers and churches have an opportunity to render a great service to the work of our Convention, and the cause of Christ, in our midst. It would be a calamity for us to discontinue our church paper. We cannot go forward unless the church paper has a more liberal financial support. The Business Manager and editor will have definite plans for promoting this work. Ministers and laymen should rally to the support of this essential enterprise. In the meantime every subscriber whose account is due should forward a renewal to Rev. F. C. Lester, Norfolk, Va. Some plan should be worked out to have a thorough canvass in every local church, seeking to enlist new subscribers on a cash basis. Every dollar collected on subscriptions helps to reduce the amount required from the Conference Apportionments for THE SUN. There are hundreds of loyal families within the Convention who do not read THE SUN. They need it. They should be subscribers. The church paper should go into every home representing the constituency of the Convention.

The financial element is the smallest part of the matter. The church paper should not be measured in terms of dollars. Raising money to support the paper is important, and the SUN serves a high purpose in promoting the various financial functions of the church. But it should not be considered as a medium of financial propaganda. The paper is educational and promotional. It should have readers to glean the messages of its pages for their information and inspiration. Parents should teach their sons and their daughters to read the paper. It should be a part of their literary and religious education. The family should be able to discuss the merits and contents of the paper. It should be regarded as an essential part of our religious duty to know what appears in every issue of the church paper. The church paper reading habit can be easily acquired. It is wholesome and elevating for the family to cultivate this habit.

May we suggest that Missionary Societies and Sunday School Classes in every church take up this matter of supporting and reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It will mean new life for many people. A new impetus will be given to the work of the local church. Try it.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHY GO TO COLLEGE?

This question is in the minds of many today. Parents who have children ready for college are in doubt as to the next step to take in their interest. The youngsters themselves question the advisability of taking time out of their lives necessary for a college education. To complete requirements for graduation from a standard college approximately four years is required. The cost of four years in college will amount to from two to eight thousand dollars.

Heretofore, advocates of college training have held out to parents and prospective college students the lure of greatly increased earning capacity. Books and periodicals have been written showing the increased financial earnings on the part of college trained individuals in comparison with those without training. This is a low basis on which to place the merits of mental and character training. The argument of increased earnings on the part of college trained men has been refuted in part today in actual experience. The individual who has the capacity to trade and bargain may attain financial success equal to those highly trained for a business or profession. College trained men and women are to be found among the jobless today. If an increased earning capacity is the only benefit to be derived from a college training, certainly the adventure would not be worthwhile.

The advantages of college life are manifestly on a higher plain. College life brings the youth in contact with others, who, like himself, are in quest of knowledge and of understanding, and also in contact with those who have already experienced the privileges and opportunities into which they are now entering. The contact of young men and young women with teachers in the classroom is of tremendous value in helping to determine ambitions and courses for the future. The college student begins to experience in a very vital way his own discovery of himself and the gradual development of the possibilities within him. Nothing can be of greater joy or of greater inspiration than for an individual to discover for himself that he, after all, is able to do something that is really worthwhile. Not only does he begin to discover himself, but he begins to discover others. A light from the past is always uplifting and inspirational. The mind is greatly enriched by the efforts and successes of those who have lived before. History has its value. One is better able to determine proper courses to pursue after he has learned the highways of time over which previous generations have traveled. The obstacles of yesterday may hinder the traveler of tomorrow. The paths that led to success may again point the way to achievement. Conditions change. The currents of society flow in different directions, but after all there are certain fundamental principles that make for character, stability, and progress. No one can inform himself as to the happenings of yesterday without being better prepared to meet the responsibilities of tomorrow.

CHAIRMAN'S REPORT.

There is a blessing to be had in the conscious development of one's own self. There is a satisfaction in being reasonably assured that you are prepared in a measure for the eventualities that may confront you. In college you not only become acquainted with what has been done and with what may be demanded in the future, but you somehow become possessed with the determination to become a factor in the achievements of the world. It is one thing to be born into the world and to follow the lines of least resistance while you live. It is another thing to come into existence and to fight the battles of humanity that the world may be better because of your having lived.

Some of the benefits then to be derived from college life are enlarged acquaintance, enrichment of friendship, the discovery and development of personality, an intelligent existence in a conflicting world, the ability to map out one's course and to know something of the direction in which he travels and the ends desirable. In addition to these evident advantages to be obtained in college life, there must come an enlarged and more intelligent conception of God and of His universe. It is difficult to develop the mind without cultivating the spirit. Mental vision has a tendency to broaden one's spiritual outlook. Along with the safe-guarding of health in the training of one's mind, goes the responsibility of the cultivation of one's spirit. College training, if given in the right atmosphere and with the right ends in view, will not result in a confusion of one's religious thinking or the disturbance of one's Christian faith or the destruction of one's religious belief, but will develop him in these essential factors by removing doubts, clearing up questions, and making faith more intelligent.

The successful and worthwhile citizen of tomorrow will be the individual who has experienced training on a broad comprehensive line, inclusive sufficient to develop spiritual as well as so-called intellectual powers. The college that avails itself of the opportunity of training young men and young women today should be conscious fully of the responsibilities of the campus from the college campus of today will go the minds and characters that will determine largely the destiny of states, nations, the church, and the world.

L. E. SMITH.

We can best prove our thankfulness to the Almighty by the way in which on this earth and at this time each of us does his duty to his fellow-men.—Theodore Roosevelt.

The work of our Board has gone along about as usual during the past year. The amounts of money received and the types of work done and the accomplishments are similar to those of the last three or four years.

Perhaps a little more emphasis has been placed on young people's work. There was a Christmas Conference of youth fellowship officers held at Winter Park, Florida, during the Christmas holidays of 1935. Representatives from each of our southeastern states were there and shared in a fine conference. There are active Youth Fellowship groups in each of the conferences of the Southern Convention except Western North Carolina, which is organized but not active. The report of Treasurer will indicate that we have given the Fellowships some money with which to work. I am quite well pleased with what has been accomplished in most instances. Five delegates from the southeast attended the Lakeside, Ohio, Conference, during June of this year. Two of them paid their own expenses and our Board aided the other three.

Interest in leadership training appears to be lagging just a little. This seems to be true with other groups than our own. For local reasons, Norfolk did not hold a school last fall, but is planning one for this year again. Suffolk, Newport News and Lynchburg went along as usual.

The Summer School of Leadership Training last year enrolled 186. This year the enrollment is 127. The cost is greater this year than last to the pupils, but I am not sure that this is the major reason for the difference in attendance. We are having an excellent school from the standpoint of work and fine cooperative spirit.

We have mailed out during the year 423 Bibles and New Testaments and have on hand approximately 1,000 more New Testaments. This service seems to be appreciated by the people who know about it and call for the books.

Our financial condition does not seem to improve greatly and I see no chance of it doing so any time soon. The Southern Convention meeting in May authorized us to receive funds from the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, to make a call for a special offering during July and August, and to receive a small portion of the Conference apportionments. This and some offerings from Sunday School Conventions in June made it possible for us to come up to the present time without any indebtedness, but with almost nothing in our treasury. I have done my best to get larger contributions through Conference Apportionments and from the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions, but have been unable to succeed. I have attended all of the conventions and spoken in the interest of our Board.

It has been my pleasure to serve our churches through the Board of Christian Education for eight years. Part of the time we have had a field worker, but most of the time we have had only office help and what work I could do in connection with a pastorate. The time has come, I think, for me to discontinue some responsibilities concerning the Board, and therefore I am asking that in the election of officers someone else be elected as Chairman of the Board and that in arranging for the Summer School next year someone else shall be elected as Dean.

Appreciating the privilege of serving with you in this work for so long a time and sincerely hoping that the future may be even brighter than the past, I am hereby submitting my final report as Chairman of the Board.

F. C. LESTER, Chairman,
Board of Christian Education.

THE GREATEST MISSIONARY INCIDENT AND TEXT.

A correspondent wishes to know the most outstanding and significant missionary incident and text of the Bible. That is a rather large order. The Bible being a missionary book, to answer that question is like picking the most beautiful and costly diamonds from a store full of precious stones. Despite this fact, and regardless of the attitude of others, more deeply skilled in selection than this writer, he has no hesitancy in pointing to the incident of the woman in the house of Simon, the leper, in Bethany, as the supreme and superlative missionary incident of all the Scripture. Both Matthew and Mark relate the incident in words that are almost identical—Matthew in chapter 26, verses 6 to 13, inclusive, and Mark chapter 14, verses 3 to 9, inclusive. This deed of the woman has all the elements and significance of a purely missionary incident. First: the gift that the woman brought was very precious and thus signified her self-denial spirit in securing the same. Secondly: her gift was not for the sake of any human being but purely out of love and unselfish devotion to her Lord. Thirdly: the deed thus done and the spirit in which it was done, brought to the mind and heart of her Lord the prospect and promise of a world-wide gospel—a gospel that “shall be preached throughout the whole world”; and wherever that gospel should be preached this deed should be spoken of as a memorial to her, because it was the Name, the love and the power of her Lord that were to be shared with others, and not her love, or her name or her power. Her deed was thus wholly divested of any selfishness and solely divine, since its effect was to honor and exalt her Lord and thus prepare Him for the terrible ordeal of His death on the Cross and the suffering He must endure for mankind. The woman had discerned with a keen spiritual discernment that her Lord was to suffer, and her gift revealed distinctly that she would honor Him and glorify Him, in and through that suffering, which He was to endure for all men everywhere.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

By Mrs. W. M. JAY, News Editor.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Holland Christian Church has had a most successful year under the leadership of Mrs. H. B. Everett. The Society held its annual public program at the Church, Sunday night, May 31, at the regular church hour.

The devotionals conducted by Mrs. Carl R. Key were most impressive, consisting of appropriate hymns, a short responsive reading, two poems, prayer, and special music by the Junior Choir.

The devotionals were followed by interesting readings which were most effective in relating the urgent need of Missions. They were as follows:

“Are Missions Important?” by Mrs. G. G. Holland, explaining how Christ was so concerned not only over conditions at home but over the welfare of other countries and peoples as well, showing us that it is very essential that we live this same kind of life and help others to carry the message if we cannot go ourselves. This was followed by silent prayer during which Mrs. A. L. Jolly and Mrs. Sumner Rawles sang, “Give of Your Best to the Master.”

Poem—“Get Somebody Else,” by Mrs. H. B. Everett, was a reflection of Christ giving us this same kind of answer to our petitions if we offer that response when asked to give Him service.

“A Vision of Hands,” by Mrs. L. J. Daughtrey, was very effectively given with the hymn, “The Touch of His Hand on Mine,” being played softly by Mrs. E. L. Rawles. It was a picture of hands of other people more needy than we, being uplifted to us. This was visualized to us in this reading.

Reading—“How One Treasurer Got the Missionary Idea over to Her Society,” by Mrs. Sumner Rawles, was a story so true to everyone's response when asking for pledges from the members to make up the quota for the Society. This particular treasurer was very disappointed in the pledge she received from a very special friend of hers, whom she knew was able to give liberally. When she picked up the paper the next day after having asked for her pledge, the treasurer noticed an account of a luncheon being given at the Country Club by this same girl friend. The treasurer was so worried with her friend and felt that she knew her so well, she made a bill for everything she would have needed in giving her luncheon, making the total expenses twenty-five dollars, underneath it she put her small pledge of twenty-five cents per month for Missions and sent it to her friend. When the girl read it she was touched and sat down and made out a check for Missions equally as large as the one for the luncheon and sent it to the treasurer. This helped the spirit of the whole society.

The Society united with Holy Neck, Franklin, Liberty Spring, Suffolk in having the foreign mission book, "That Other America," taught by Mrs. Lee Britt of Suffolk. The book was most interestingly taught and a good crowd attended. It was held in Holland Christian Church and each one brought her lunch. The lunches were spread together on the table and coffee was served. Everyone seemed to enjoy the fellowship of the meeting.

THE EVANGELISTIC COMMITTEE MEETS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

Some thirty or thirty-five pastors of the Southern Convention met during the session of the Leadership Training School at Elon College by invitation of the Committee on Evangelism of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches. They held two sessions of very interesting and helpful discussions. Various pastors presented for discussion their programs of evangelism in their local churches during the first session. At the second session the following handicaps to the evangelistic spirit in our churches were recognized:

- (1) The lack of knowledge of the field, by which was meant that many pastors and leaders in the local church do not know how many families or individuals in their community are not members of the church.
- (2) Lack of zeal, by which was meant that the pastors themselves felt a lack of zeal upon their own part in seeking to win others to Christ and the Christian way of life.
- (3) Lack of method. The discussion developed the fact that many churches have no systematic definite method of evangelism throughout the year.
- (4) Lack of spiritual vitality. It was felt by all present that the spiritual vitality of the church as a whole was low, as indicated by attendance upon its services and the type of living practiced by some of its members.

- (5) The ministers present recognized that there were distorted views of evangelism, so that the very word "evangelism" itself was distasteful to many who might have the spirit of evangelism.
- (6) Breakdown in the home, by which was meant that family devotion and religious interest in the home itself made the whole program of the church weaker.

The following resolutions were adopted by the group of ministers present:

We Resolve:

- (1) That a survey be made by the pastor and his members in every community, seeking to learn in what way they can best proceed to win their community to Christ.
- (2) That through the pulpit and the Sunday School, and other organizations of the church, a larger emphasis be made upon the devotional life.
- (3) That the best method adaptable to the local church be adopted for the program of the church.
- (4) That family worship in the homes of the church members be re-established.
- (5) That we recognize the value of the preaching mission being planned by the Federal Council of Churches and desire our pastors and churches to cooperate with it.
- (6) That Committees on Evangelism, both in the Conferences and Convention, seek to have a more prominent place for the discussion of evangelism in their programs.

THOUGHTS FROM LAKESIDE.

the economic basis and political root of the liquor traffic.

In attempting to break down barriers which exist between classes, and races, and nations, the group proposed support for anti-lynching legislation and the repeal of the 1924 Oriental Exclusion Act.

There is a definite need for the constant enlistment of other young people in the great cause of building a new world. The commission on Helping Others to Be Christian outlined specific methods by which Christian young people can induce those outside the church to align themselves in the cause of truth and righteousness.

The challenging difficulties are before us. Do we dare face them?

SOUTH GEORGIA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

By ANNIE CAMPBELL

The South Georgia Young People's Conference was held at Glynn Haven Estates, St. Simon's Island June 9-16. The young people brought their own food and prepared it under the direction of Miss Eva Casey, S. S. S. worker from Southern Union College and Miss Ester Pearson from Pearson. The group lived in cottages by a small lake, and ate their meals on tables set under the bending moss-laden oaks.

Chapel services were led by Mr. Robert Kimball, a student in Yale Divinity School. Classes in Missions, Worship, Bible Studies and Dramatics were conducted by Rev. H. B. Mowbray of Demorest, Rev. J. H. Dollar from La Grange, Mr. Carl Ekblad, S. S. S. worker from Piedmont College, and Annie Campbell of Roberta Georgia. The afternoons were given to swimming in the ocean. The evenings were devoted to vespers, prayer meeting, young people's meetings, stunts, Major Bowes' program, candle-lighting service and communion.

Rev. W. C. Parker of Waycross had general supervision of the whole conference. Mention should certainly be made of the faithful service of our nurse, Mrs. Annie Wiles, and of Mrs. Nell Branch, the Dean of Women, who contributed in so many ways. Mrs. D. A. Woodward, who helped secure the place at such a reasonable rate, was present and ready to give herself and her car to help in any way that she could. Our genial host and landlord could be heard almost any time of the day at his store booming forth "Mighty fine." So, "Mighty Fine" became the slogan of the camp even at dish washing.

One of the outstanding events of the conference was a trip over the island conducted by Mrs. Margaret Davis Kate, Glynn County historian. On Sunday the group attended services at the little old historic Episcopalian church there. Everyone had a joyous good time and went home with a resolve to really use what they had learned at the conference to become better workers in their own churches. It was truly an experiment in learning to live together in Christian fellowship.

OUR DELEGATES REPORT.

On Thursday night of last week four of our representatives from the Southeast, who attended the Lakeside, Ohio, Youth Conference from June 23-28, reported to the Elon Summer School concerning the Lakeside Conference. This made an excellent program for the Summer School and the information was so vital that it is being reproduced on this page. When the youth of our land begin seriously to plan for making our country Christian, then there is hope that a new day will dawn in the life of our people.

Those of us who are older may not always agree with their conclusions and their methods for making the world what it ought to be, but we certainly can become enthusiastic over their eagerness to make the changes which are necessary to have people live happily and in a Christian-like fashion. The editor invites your careful reading of the reports which these young people make of the work done at Lakeside.

THE DIVINE VOICE IN NATURE.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Nature and God's greatness. Psalm 97:1-12.

Tue.—How nature speaks of God.— Acts 14:15-17.

Wed.—God revealed in nature. Romans 1:18-23.

Thur.—Listening to nature. Matt. 13:31-33.

Fri.—Nature and God's wisdom. Psalm 139:1-18.

Sat.—Thoughts aroused by nature. Psalm 8:1-9.

(Outdoor Meeting)

Hymn: "Day Is Dying in the West."

Opening Sentences—Leader.

"Be still and know

That God is in His world,

God speaks, but none may hear

That voice, except we have

The listening ear."

Hymn: "This is My Father's World"

Prayer.

Scripture Lesson—(Repeated from memory)

Points for leader's talk—

One must be deaf indeed not to hear the divine voice of God as He speaks to them through the wonders of nature. We have only to turn a listening ear to hear the Master as He speaks to us through the grasses, the birds and the trees. The person is indeed fortunate who sees the beauties of nature—who feels the presence of God as they walk through a garden, and find His love as revealed to them through the lovely rose, and the song of the bird.

Many people are so busy living such hectic lives that they never find time to seek some quiet spot, such as a garden, and there listen for the voice of God. One can find wonderful opportunities for meditation in a garden. There, with heart and ear and eye divinely tuned, we may hear the still small voice, and catch a vision of the presence of the Master Gardener who is invisible.

We read in God's Word that Jesus often went to some quiet spot and there communed with His Father. How much more do we need to seek some refuge, especially at the close of day, away from the noise and turmoil of the modern life and there listen for the voice of God.

Sentence Prayers—Thanking God for

His love as revealed through nature and asking Him to so tune our ears that we may hear His voice as He speaks to us.

Poem: "IN THE GARDEN OF THE LORD"

"The word of God came unto me,
Sitting alone among the multitudes;
And my blind eyes were touched with light,
And there was laid upon my lips a flame of fire.

"I laugh and shout, for life is good,
Though my feet are set in silent ways.
In merry mood I leave the crowd,
To walk in my garden. Ever, as I walk,
I gather fruits and flowers in my hands,
And with joyful heart I bless the sun
That kindles all the place with radiant life.
I run with playful winds that blow the scent

Of roses and jessamine in eddying whirls.
At last I come where tall lilies grow,
Lifting their faces like white saints to God.
While the lilies pray, I kneel upon the ground;

I have strayed into the holy temple of the Lord." —Helen Keller.

Hymn: "Fairest Lord Jesus."

Talk: "Finding the Divine Voice in Nature." (Or some nature story)

Closing Hymn: "Now the Day Is Over."

Benediction.

WITNESSING UNDER PERSECUTION.

LESSON II—JULY 12, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "We must obey God rather than men."—Acts 5:29.

LESSON: Acts 3:1—4:31; I Cor. 1:21-25. Printed Text: Acts 4:5-12; I Cor. 1:21.

Time—The events recorded in this lesson took place in the summer of A. D. 30. Paul's letter to the Corinthians was probably written about A. D. 56.

Place—The city of Jerusalem.

Human Need at the Door of the Temple.

Peter and John found the lame man at the door of the Temple. It is a parable of life. Human need lies at the door of the church, and looks to the church for help. One of the tragic facts in modern life is the fact that many of the needy, and many of the laboring classes do not feel that the church is interested in them. As a matter of fact, most of the relief work in city and country is done by city, county, state or national government. And in so much of it there is no personal touch between the one who helps and the one who is helped. This whole problem is one of the most pressing problems of our modern life. What can the church do to relieve human need? How far should the church go in social welfare? Is not much of our present-day relief alleviative rather than remedial?

It should be noted that Peter and John had no money to give, but they gave something far better than money. If they had given the lame man money, he would have been no better off. They put him on his feet, restored him to normal manhood, made it possible for him to earn an honest living. This is the ideal form of relief. Many a man does not want relief; he wants only the opportunity to work so that he can earn an honest livelihood. To be sure there are many who would not work if they could get it. And one sometimes fears that much of our present form of relief is defeating the very thing it is trying to do.

"Such as I have give I thee"—this is the nub of the matter. Because we cannot give as much as we would like to give, because we do not feel that we can do as we ought to do, we do not give such as we have, or do such as we can. God is reasonable; He does not expect the impossible. He does not expect us to give what we do not have. He does expect us to give such as we do have.

"And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up." How vital is the personal touch! How desirable it is, both in social service and in religion. One of the problems of our modern complex life is to keep the personal touch in matters essentially personal. Churches become so big that pastors cannot hope to maintain a personal touch with members. Numbers on relief become so great that wholesale methods have to be resorted to. The individual is lost in the multitude.

Peter and John gave credit where credit was due. They frankly said that it was not they, but God, who had done the great miracle. How often we talk about what we have done, when it was not we who did it at all. Indeed what counts most is not what we do for God, but what we allow God to do through us.

Faithful Witnessing.

The leaders of Church and State did not like what had been done. They saw in the new movement that which threatened their prestige and their power. And as always is the case, they thought they could put down spiritual things with brute force. After putting the apostles in jail over night they summoned them the next morning to tell by what authority they had done these things. They did not have to wait long for an answer. Peter rather bluntly told them that it was through Jesus Christ that the man had been made whole. He rubbed it in a bit by reminding them that this Jesus whom they had crucified had risen from the dead, that the stone which they had rejected had become the head corner stone.

"Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." It should be noted that it was the boldness of these men that made the chief priests and rulers know that they had been with Jesus. It was their moral courage. It was their willingness to pay any price for their convictions that so deeply impressed them. The word witness comes from the Greek word from which we get the word "martyr." That is very, very significant.

The priests forbade the apostles to speak any more in the name of Jesus. The apostles immediately replied that they would obey God rather than men. When they returned to their fellow-apostles they told them the situation. They prayed that "with all boldness they might speak Thy word" . . . and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and they spake the word with boldness."

This lesson comes right down to modern life. In Germany the crucial question right now is "Shall we obey God or men?" Hitler would make everything, even man's conscience subservient to the State. Mussolini would do the same. And there are evidences that even here in our own America, the land of the free (?) and home of the brave (?)—the question marks are inserted for it is a question as to how free we are and also as to how brave—there are those who would say that man should obey man rather than God.

The Church of Christ needs to become vocal again. Indeed it is a question whether she will ever become vital until she has become vocal. A witnessing church is a victorious church.

The Foolishness of Preaching.

"It was God's good pleasure thru the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." There is a great deal of fun poked at preaching, and there is a great deal of preaching that ought to be better. But after all is said and done God has chosen it as His way of saving those that believe.

There is and always will be a place for vital preaching. And the heart of all vital preaching is Christ crucified. That is the power of God and the wisdom of God. As Christ is made central the gospel becomes creative. Let every preacher and teacher make the Cross central in his life and in his message.

CONFUSION.

"Do they not provoke themselves, to the confusion of their own forces?" The term confusion is used to describe a mixture of things to such a degree that the various elements mixed can no longer be distinguished. Here it is the result of trying to mix worship of the true God with worship of idols and all that this implies. Men, women and children joined in this idol worship. As a result, worship of the true God became impossible. It is always that way. God will not become involved in such doings, and confusion of the people is always the result. We today have brought many heathen and idolatrous ideas and activities into our faith, worship and living, therefore confusion has set in. There is only one way to change this, and that is by getting rid of these sinful affairs and yielding full allegiance to the Lord Jesus Christ. The greatest enemies of the church are not outside the professing church; they are inside.—Exchange.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE.
of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

MONDAY

"FACE TO FACE."

"There hath not arisen a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom Jehovah knew face to face."—Deut. 34:1-12.

The only knowing of God worth while at all is face-to-face knowledge. Partial knowledge of God, or of any one or anything else, never satisfies. We do not want a mere glimpse of God, or to see the curve of His garment, or to hear the echo of His voice. We want our Father altogether.

But if Moses alone of all the prophets knew Jehovah face to face, how can we hope for that intimate knowledge of Him?

The answer is, through His Son, our Elder Brother, Jesus Christ. To that end He came to earth, that He might show us the Father. To that end the Holy Spirit dwells with us, that we may see and know Him face to face.

Prayer—Day by day and hour by hour, O God, may we look in Thy glorious countenance, through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"ASSEMBLING FOR THE BETTER."

"I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better but for the worse."—I Cor. 11:17-29.

We are judged by every meeting with our fellows. If we are not the stronger and wiser and happier for that meeting, something is wrong with us. When true Christians assemble, the Lord is in their midst. They commune with one another and with Him. Can they thus commune with one another and not to their vast and eternal profit?

Let us take heed how we make contacts with other men. Let us bring a blessing to every such meeting. Let us add a grace, a comfort, a power. Let us glorify the assembling of ourselves together.

And as we give, we shall take away. No one ever imparts a blessing without receiving one richly in return. No one ever joins himself to another in social intercourse in the Spirit of Christ without gaining from that Spirit the betterment that he imparts.

Prayer—We love to talk with our brothers, our Father. They ennoble us and enrich us. Grant us much, we pray Thee, whereby we may enrich and ennoble their lives. Through the grace of Thy Holy Spirit.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE COMING KINGDOM."

"They supposed that the Kingdom of God was immediately to appear."
—Luke 19:11-27.

Let the coming of Christ's kingdom be postponed a century, an era, a millennium, yet it is good for us to suppose that it is immediately to appear. That expectation is heartening. It fills us with hope. It is cleansing. It drives away our sins. It is strengthening. It leads us to persevere.

Prayer—Even so, come, Lord Jesus! Come tomorrow. Come today. Come in some remote age. Come in Thine own best and most blessed time. But quicken in our souls the expectation of Thy coming. For that expectation, that assurance, is the joy of our lives. It is the one thing to which we look forward. It ennobles our living. It brings this world very close to heaven. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. Thy kingdom come.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"DEVOTED THINGS."

"Every devoted thing is most holy unto Jehovah."—Lev. 27:26-33.

The ancients must have had great satisfaction in setting aside to the Lord this sheep or that portion of a field. They must have taken great pleasure in tending what had been devoted to the Lord, in watching the Lord bless it, and in finally bringing it to the temple.

It is good to do definite things for God. It is good to be assured that our lives are of certain profit to the Most High, though the profit is very small. Thereby we are lifted up. Thereby we are made to feel our worth. Thereby we are made certain of some measure of the divine approval.

But when we live aimless and haphazard lives, when we are not sure that we count at all toward the coming in of the kingdom, we go about with our heads hung in shame. We are not much, but we want to be something. We want to justify our existence.

Prayer—Graciously permit us, O Lord, to be of service to Thee. Graciously accept our gifts, however small and lay Thy hand upon our heads. Give a blessing to Thy servants. For the sake of Christ and through his merits.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"BETTER THAN RUBIES"

"Wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared unto it."—Prov. 8:1-11.

Rubies are the most valuable of precious stones—not small rubies, which are less valuable than small diamonds, but large rubies, which are more rare and costly than large diamonds. That is why wisdom is compared to the ruby. Wisdom is the condensation of value. It is the most desirable of all desirable things.

Power is less than wisdom, for wisdom brings power. Learning is less than wisdom, for wisdom is the highest learning. Beauty is not to be compared to wisdom, for beauty fades with the years, but wisdom's loveliness increases with the years. Love itself is less than wisdom, for unwise love is hardly love at all.

If we believe this—and it is most certainly to be believed—the search for wisdom is the supreme search. All efforts are trivial over against the effort to be wise.

Prayer—O Thou the All-wise, our Saviour, Thou alone canst make us wise. Thou art the Fountain of wisdom. Conduct us to it, we pray, and may we drink deeply and still more deeply as life goes on.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"THE LORD AN ENEMY."

"The Lord has become as an enemy, He hath swallowed up Israel."—Lam. 2:1-5.

Christ has said that we are His friends, if we do whatever He tells us to do. Obedience is the portal of friendship, because obedience is the proof of love and faith.

So that a lack of obedience will transform this divine friendship into divine enmity. Jeremiah saw the Lord become "as" an enemy to His people—the prophet could not bring himself to say "an enemy" without the softening "as"—because of their sins. He was not against them. He longed over them with unutterable longing, but He was against their sins fiercely and unalterably against them. While they were sinners He was—He must be ruin to them, swallowing them up.

We are very complacent toward our sins. We take them easily. We readily put them out of our minds. We can forget them so calmly that we have no trouble in imagining God's forgetfulness of them. But, ah, how He hates the mwith a bitter hatred!

Prayer—Put us, our Father, into Thy attitude toward all that is within us that offends Thy holy will. It shall be as hateful to us as to Thee. In the name of Thy Son.—Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

AN INEVITABLE QUESTION.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"What then shall I do with Jesus which is called Christ?"—
Matthew 27:22.

Such was the question of Pilate. Crucify him, was the answer of the rabble. There is one thing you must say for Pilate. He recognized that he had an inevitable question before him. It was not that he did not consider the question, nor know his responsibility. He perhaps did not consider it enough. I think he had considered it enough to know its answer. If he had declared in favor of the Christ, and have been crucified on the same hill his name would have lived equally as long, and would have been far more honored. He must have known the answer for Luke says: "He said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done?" He had surely taken the matter under very serious study. He had a sense of justice. He knew the innocence of Jesus, "for he knew that for envy they had delivered him."

Again it must be said of Pilate that he put the question well to the crowd who sought his death. True it was his own question, and ultimately he had to decide it, but it was also their question and ultimately they too, would have to decide it. They did not consider for three times its answer. They relied on the logic of the mob, which is no logic at all. They are perhaps no more to be blamed at this particular point than was Pilate, for he could coolly consider the whole question and then act. He chose his course deliberately. They had not the same advantage. And they chose their course hysterically. To a court of honor and justice their clamor should have amounted to words only. His amounted to deeds! Their words were cruel as death, his were death. After all there is little difference.

Again it must be said for Pilate that he offered a way out: "Ye have a custom that I should release unto you one at the passover, will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?" He hesitated to do what they wanted, hoping against hope that their anger would cool, and that an innocent man would suffer no harm. His sin is all the greater because he knew the Saviour's innocence, and in the light of that knowledge still condemned Him to death

By his acts Pilate gained something. He sought gain and got it. He wanted the favor of the mob. He received it. He wanted to keep his standing with the authorities above him. He did, for a very short while. He wanted to save his own life. He did that, for a time. Three bubbles. First breath of hill-top air of human justice burst them everyone.

What foolish things the leaders of that mob did in moments of anger! What cowardly things Pilate did in moments of fear! Anger and fear! Anger for a fool, fear for a coward. I am aware that we are enjoined by Paul "Be ye angry, and sin not." One of his many paradoxes, for when he says, "Be ye angry," he quickly adds, "and sin not," knowing full well that without special care that is next. Later Paul says in the same chapter, Ephesians 4, "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Poor Pilate chose favor of the mob; his place as a governor, and life before honor and unsoiled conscience. He lost all. Jesus said, "He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall save it." If Pilate had been willing to lose his life rather than condemn an innocent man to death he would perhaps have had his own life and position saved to him; he certainly would have had his honor and eternal glory.

"What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?" Members of the band of twelve reacted to that question in different ways, just as men react to it in differing ways today. Judas said to himself that he would betray him, and for what consideration? It seems hard to decide just what Judas did expect out of his awful decision. Surely it was not the mere paltry pieces of money. It is odd that men, women, and young people should be willing to sell out for so little. Esau sold a place among the immortal patriarchs for a mess of pottage. Judas sold Jesus for a few pieces of silver, which he later threw on the floor of the sanctuary, and went out and hanged himself. For what little we sometimes sell the highest, holiest, and best! May we learn our lesson from Judas, and not sell the Lord for any amount, for thus we sell ourselves, and all that is worthy and best in all the wide world.

Peter reacted in a different way from Judas. Peter loved the Lord. Fear rushed Peter off his feet, when faith and love sought to help him hold his ground. Judas has lost his love for Jesus. Peter had lost his moral courage, but he still loved the Lord. There is a difference, my dear friends. Peter wept over his denial of the Lord, Judas further blackened his betrayal with a bitter kiss. One was sorry, the other sordid. One was repentant, the other was belligerent. Both gave their lives. One gave his in humble submission as he followed his Lord, the other hanged himself in bitter remorse for his awful sin. One accepted the wages of sin; the other accepted the gift of God. "The wage of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." Both had answered the question: "What shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ?" One said "I will love him and serve him;" the other said, "I will leave him and sell him!"

At the front door in your parsonage, just as one comes down the stairway, and is apparently ready to step out onto the street, there hangs a copy of a beautiful painting. Jesus is standing with a young man, one hand about his shoulders, and the other pointing out across a needy world. One feels by the expression on his beautiful, serious, and lovely face that he is asking the young man to carry his message into the hearts of many. The young man is lifting his eyes to the wide open foreground of the future, but he has not decided as yet, according to the expression on his face, what he will do about it. Eternity is wrapped up in that moment of decision! Eternity, that is, for the young man, throughout all the years to come. A short span of frivolous years full of the getting of gain may be his, or he may answer the call of Christ to carry his message of love, and peace, and pardon across all the hard, and high places of life into the hearts of many who will rise up to call him blessed. What will his decision be? Will he make the mistake of turning Christ away? Or will he lift that lovely face of his in answer to his Lord, and invest his life in others?

If it please God, may the little boy who comes down those steps every morning some day catch the question in the face of the picture there, and answer it in favor of the Christ. Into whatever walk of life he may be called may he have the arm of the Christ,

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Through these twenty years:

Twenty years ago the writer was elected Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage by its Board of Trustees. It meant (if we accepted) a real sacrifice. It meant giving up a position of trust where the work was pleasant and the office hours short. It meant being away from wife and children much of the time. It meant giving up a position where we could count our friends by the thousand and go out in a new field of labor to make new friends and new acquaintances. It meant taking charge of an institution badly in debt and its credit badly strained. It meant hard work and long hours. It meant exposure in the cold in winter and the heat in the summer. It meant meeting problems and solving them and many obstacles to overcome. It meant meeting times of sorrow as well as seasons of joy. It meant meeting disappointments. It meant much more than I have mentioned. It meant the opportunity of making more friends in a larger field. It meant dealing with churches and Sunday Schools. It meant giving fatherless and motherless children a home and a chance in life.

We accepted the challenge. During these twenty years it has been a source of joy to see how faithful and loyal the churches, Sunday Schools and the friends have been in their support of the orphanage. We keep a record of each contribution from S. S. organizations, churches and friends, and in looking back over the record book, it is real interesting to note the Sunday Schools that have an offering credited each month for twenty years without missing a single month. We can depend upon them. We know their offering will come.

By the loyal support we have received we have added land to our farm. We have been able to build two buildings for children and a modern barn. The greatest joy of it all is to see so many boys and girls who have gone out from here and are filling positions of trust and making good because you gave them a chance through this institution when they had no other.

SUNDAY.
"GODLESS GAIN."

"What is the hope of the Godless, though he get him gain, when God taketh away his soul?"—Job 27:8-23.

Gain is not always gain, it is often loss. Godless gain is always loss. It always cheats its owner. It ruins him. It makes him a pauper.

Men are content if they put money in the bank, heedless of whence the money comes. Some kinds of money will burn up their bank account. Men are satisfied if they add acre to acre, taking no thought of how the addition is made. Some estates are enlarged in such a way that they dwindle to nothing.

God alone is the judge of gain, whether it is true gain or false, whether it is real gain or loss.

Prayer—May we go to Thee, our Father, with all our striving and getting. When Thou takest our soul to Thyself, may great gain go with it. In Jesus' name.—Amen.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

as it were, about his shoulder, and may he hear the Christ calling him to witness for him. He will not necessarily have to be a minister to do that, but he will have to be a man, fearless and fine, and faithful and true. He will have to seek to win others both by work and word to follow the Saviour as friend and redeemer. What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called the Christ? Love him! Serve him! Honor him with the life he gives, and lead others to do the same.

Every day in many a way one has to answer that question. Here is Sunday morning. The call to this, or that, has come. How they beckon but what shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ? Shall I turn him down, and the church for which he gave himself, and the folks for whom he died, or will I be faithful both to the church and to them? What shall I do with Jesus? Here is opportunity presenting itself to speak a proper word for the winning of a friend to the church and the Christ. A little timidity, or human halting, steps in, and one hesitates. What shall I do with Jesus? Here is right, and here is wrong, presenting themselves side by side. They clamor for first place and the Christ is with the right, and wrong has him on trial. What shall I do with Jesus? May we be led in answer to that question by the Holy Spirit, then we may crown him Lord of all!

ALFRED WELLONS ANDES.

On June 23, 1936, God sent his death angel to claim the spirit of our beloved pastor, Rev. Alfred Wellons Andes.

We, the members of Newport Christian Church wish to express our appreciation of him in the following resolutions:

1. That while we just cannot understand this act of Divine Providence in removing from us one who was doing so great and badly needed work in the Valley of Virginia, may we whose hearts are bleeding lift the hand of faith and feel for the Master's hand and walk with Him till we do understand.

2. That we express our great appreciation for his blameless life and character, his self-sacrificing service, unfaltering devotion to duty, his Christian stewardship, and loyalty to the Kingdom of God.

3. That we recognize that his was a life of high ideals, great faith, optimistic spirit, loving friendship, wise counsel, trustworthy judgment, childlike tenderness, Christ-like spirit which won the confidence, esteem and appreciation of the poor and rich and made for him a trusted friend of all who knew him.

4. That we extend to his bereaved family our deep and abiding sympathy in this hour of gloom and sorrow and commend them to the loving care and comfort of a dear Heavenly Father who can all our sorrows heal.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the county paper and the Christian Sun for publication and a copy be written on the records of the Newport Christian Church.

Committee.

APPLE.

Mr. Richard Harris Apple was born February 13, 1902 and died June 11, 1936, at the age of 34 years, 3 months and 28 days. He just returned to his house from the field when the mule he was riding bucked, entangling him in the harness, and dragged him to death before he could be freed.

In Danville, Va., February, 1902, he was married to Miss Ada Minor. To this union four children were born all of whom survive with his loving wife. Others who lament his departure are three sisters, five brothers, two half-brothers, a step-mother, many other relatives and a host of friends.

About eighteen years ago Brother Apple professed Christ as his Saviour during revival at Concord Church. The testimony of relatives is that he had been faithful to that profession.

Mr. Apple was a hard working farmer, a good neighbor, a highly respected citizen and a loving husband and father.

Funeral service was in charge of the writer, assisted by Elder Curry Kink. Interment was in Concord Cemetery, attended by a large crowd, with many beautiful flowers. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

L. L. WYRICK.

BROOKS.

Mr. Percy M. Brooks was born January 26, 1904 and came to a tragic end March 6, 1936, being 32 years, 1 month and 9 days old.

On January 22, 1934, he was joined in holy wedlock to Miss Clara Rigby. To the union one child was born.

Those who sustain a loss are a loving wife, young daughter, father and mother, six brothers, two sisters, other relatives and many friends.

Mr. Brooks professed Christ as his Saviour in his youth and joined Mt. Pleasant Church, where he was a faithful member. His sudden death was a shock to the neighborhood.

Funeral service was held in his memory in his home church and interment made in the local cemetery.

The Lord comfort the bereaved.

L. L. WYRICK.

BULLEN.

Mr. William Lee Bullen was born August 24, 1881 and died February 8, 1936 at the age of 56 years, 5 months and 12 days.

In 1900 he was married to Miss Minnie Harris, to which union ten children were born.

Surviving him are a loving wife, seven children and other relatives.

Mr. Bullen was a member of New Home Christian Church in Surry County, Va. He spent the last ten years of his life in Hoke County, N. C.

Memorial services were conducted in Mt. Pleasant Christian Church a few weeks after the burial of the body in the local cemetery.

May the Lord comfort the family.

L. L. WYRICK.

HARRELL.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom hath called to the great beyond our beloved fellow member, Brother Richard H. Harrell; and,

Whereas, he had lived thirty of his three score years and ten in Franklin, Va., being a faithful and devoted member of the Franklin Congregational-Christian Church, and the oldest deacon of said church; and,

Whereas, his example of loyalty and devotion to his Church, and to every good cause in our community has been an inspiration to us all.

Therefore, Be It Resolved: That we, as members of the Franklin Congregational-Christian Church, do hereby express our gratitude to God for the faithful service of Brother Harrell in both the Church and the community life; and be it further resolved:

That we shall greatly miss him in the services of the Church which he attended so regularly; and be it further resolved:

That we extend our sympathy to all the members of the bereaved family, and do commend them to God for His grace and comfort; and be it finally resolved:

That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Church, one sent to the sorrowing family, and another to the Christian Sun for publication.

VAUGHAN.

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to take from our midst our esteemed friend and beloved member, Mrs. Lydia Holland Vaughan;

Be it resolved: That we, the members of the Jr. Philathea Class deplore the loss we have sustained in her going and that we miss her gentle presence. That we commend her Christian Life, and her beautiful faith and resignation evidenced by her own words. And that we imitate her example and bow in submission to the will of Him "Who doeth all things well."

Second: That we extend to the bereaved family our deep and sincere sympathy, and that we bear them in our petitions to our Father in Heaven, "For earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal."

Third: That these resolutions be spread upon the permanent records of our class, in the memory of our beloved friend, and that copies be sent to the family, and to the Christian Sun.

 MRS. G. E. ROGERS,
 MRS. J. E. BABB, JR.,
 Committee.

WEST.

In the death of Mrs. Nannie B. West, the Waverly Christian Church and the Ladies' Aid Society have lost a faithful member who had given many years to her church and its work.

It is with a feeling of deep sorrow that we write these words in memory of her, realizing that in her going, we lose her presence and her influence.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we will not mourn her going for we know the joys of heaven surpass all earthly pleasures.

2. That we seek to follow her example, to carry on the Master's work.

3. That we send a copy of these resolutions to the family, one to the Christian Sun and one to be spread upon the records of our Society.

 MRS. P. A. PAYNE,
 MRS. ALLEY HARRIS,

WHITE.

Wade White was born June 27, 1891 and died February 28, 1936. He spent his life in sight of and in service to Oak Level Christian Church, near Youngsville, Franklin County, N. C.

He joined church when a young man. He married Edie Bell Pierce, December 31, 1919, who survives him. He had been a deacon of the church for about 14 years.

Deacon White was large and robust of body yet gentle as a girl; he so lived that the old and the young, white and colored loved him. A good man has gone to his reward for a splendid life of love and service. Much love and sympathy are felt for his widow in the community where he lived.

His popularity was evidenced by the extra large attendance at his funeral services.

The floral offerings were many and beautiful, their beauty and fragrance being emblematical of the life he lived.

Rev. E. M. Carter, a former pastor, was in charge of the services, assisted by the writer. God bless the memory of this good man.

JAS. L. FOSTER.

THE CHURCH MARCHES ON

TH<sup>e</sup> church is the living body of Christ operative in human society for the redemption and well being of all men everywhere. We are indebted to the church for the wholesome ideals that have enriched society and made for world progress. Much has been said about the failure of the church to comprehend actual conditions in present-day society. Much more has been said about the church's losing its power and its failure to meet the needs of today.

But, even so, the church is still with us. It is still the most choice among our possessions. It is still our stay for today and our hope for tomorrow. The church marches on—marches on on the highway of faith, the humble road of service, and the red path of sacrifice.

The ones who prepare the way for the march must themselves be prepared. They must be prepared in the schools of the spirit. They must be prepared in the schools of the mind. They must know what men have said and done. They must know the ways already traversed by the church if they are to guide the church in its conquest of tomorrow.

Elon College is the training ground for our church and Christian leaders everywhere. Wholesome, efficient, and consecrated to its task, the college invites and merits your patronage and support.

DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

December 18, 1864 — July 12, 1936

Born in Wellington, Shropshire, England, S. Parkes Cadman worked in the coal mines there before studying for the ministry. He came to America in 1890, a comparatively unknown youth, but his eloquence as a preacher soon brought him to positions of prominence. Though he first served the Methodist Church, he had long been identified with the Congregational Church and was minister of the Central Congregational Church of Brooklyn for many years. Dr. Cadman was one of the first religious leaders to use the radio as a medium of preaching, and he used it most effectively. He was elected president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America in 1924 and was several times re-elected. He was Honorary Moderator of the National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches during the biennium 1934-1936. Dr. Cadman was an advocate of world peace, and was delivering a lecture on that subject in Plattsburg, N. Y., when he was stricken by his last illness.

FRANKLINTON COLLEGE.

For a number of years the former Christian Church aided the Afro-Christian Convention in developing and carrying on Franklinton Christian College at Franklinton, N. C. In the midst of the depression and the merger of Congregational and Christian Churches, Franklinton College closed. This has been a great disappointment to the negro leaders of the Christian Churches in the south.

Last week the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, the Extension Boards working in the southeast, and the Board of Christian Education aided the negroes in conducting a leadership training school at Franklinton. Approximately three hundred people attended one or more of the sessions and the leaders seemed to be well pleased with the work accomplished.

Rev. Robert Lee House acted as Dean of the school and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, aided by Mrs. Charles C. Rush of Charlotte, directed the program. Other teachers and workers included: Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Bell, our missionaries to Africa; Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Key of Holland, Va.; and Prof. H. E. King of Raleigh, N. C. Among the visitors who shared in this school were: Dr. J. O. Atkinson of Elon College, N. C.; Dr. E. C. Gillette of Jacksonville, Fla.; Rev. E. C. Lawrence of Raleigh, N. C.; Rev. H. S. Barnwell of Atlanta, Ga.; and Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Va.

A new Board of Control is being elected and plans are under way for making Franklinton serve the colored people of our southeast Congregational and Christian churches.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

Western North Carolina Conference.

The 1936 sessions will be held on Thursday, July 23, with the Flint Hill and Sophia churches. The morning and afternoon sessions will be held at the Flint Hill Church and the Sophia church will entertain with an evening meal.

The sessions will convene at 10:30 A. M., 2:00 P. M., and 8:00 P. M. The Flint Hill church is about five miles southwest of Sophia.

Rev. Mr. Penn, pastor of the entertaining churches, will welcome the group by stating some of the needs of the rural church Sunday school and Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Va., will respond by showing how some of these problems are being met by the Board of Christian Education. Missions, Elon College and the Orphanage will come in for consideration. Problems of the Western North Carolina Conference will be discussed. At the evening session Rev. F. C. Lester, Executive Secretary of the Board of Christian Education, will speak on "The Place of Christian Education in the Program of the Local Church." Other items of interest will be included in the program.

Representatives from all churches in the Conference are wanted and will find it for their advantage to attend.

LILLIE HORNE, Secty.

We can quarantine germs, but not ideas. We cannot check sedition with censorship nor paganism with prohibitions. To break up crowds of agitators with police usually serves only to scatter more widely their ideas. Ideas must be fought with ideals.—

BRAVE JIMMY.

"Here it comes!" shouted Jimmy. "I hear the whistle."

"And I see the smoke," added Peggy. "It is just going to come around the curve. Look, Billy, the big train is coming, and Uncle Jim, who has been on trains and boats for days and days coming from Africa, will be here in a minute."

Then the long train roared in and almost before it had stopped a tall man stepped off and began kissing mother and shaking hands with daddy and putting an arm around his nieces and nephews all at the same time.

"So this is my namesake," he said, patting Jimmy on the shoulder as they all drove home in the car. "And you'll soon be as big as I am."

"Some day I will," laughed Jimmy, stretching himself to look at tall as possible even now. "And when are you going to tell us about your adventures, Uncle Jim, about the time you were almost killed? You wrote to mother about it, but you didn't tell how it happened."

"It's too long a story to pack into one letter, Jimmy, but of there is time before bedtime, perhaps—just perhaps—we'll tell something about it."

And of course there was time after the tea dishes had been put away and the whole family gathered in the cozy sitting room.

"It's a long story, and I don't like to think about it all, but I will tell you how it ended, for that is the happy part."

"It was the time that three of us took a journey into a part of Africa where no missionary had ever been. We knew that the people there had heard just enough about the white people with the new God to hate them, but we felt that we would go, in spite of the danger. Everything bad that we had heard about them was true, and when they had taken us and locked us up in the damp dark hut, we feared that the worst was going to happen.

"All night we prayed and hoped that the morning would bring help, but it didn't. As soon as it was light we were led out to where they were building a fire, and when the flames began to shoot out we trembled. Then the men who were holding us let us go, and I knew what that meant. They thought we would run, and the chase after us would make it more exciting. But not one of us moved. Then, as if we were all thinking the same thing, we dropped on our knees and I asked God to help us die like Christians, and to send someone, some time, to tell these poor savages about Jesus and His love.

"Then, savage as they were, they seemed to understand that we were speaking to our God, and although some of them would have rushed at us, the chief waved them back and motioning to us, led the way to the path that we had taken, and watched that no one would harm us as we made our way back to our car."

"And weren't you a bit afraid?" asked Jimmy.

"Of course, but we knew God would do what was best, even if it meant our being killed, and that helped us seem braver than we were. One isn't always a coward just because he is afraid, Jimmy boy."

"My, but I'm glad I'm called after you, Uncle Jim," was all Jimmy said, but what he thought was, "I don't care if the boys do think me a coward. I'm going to Mission Band next Wednesday even if every boy in school calls me 'sissy'." And he did.—Olive Plants.

Enjoy the present, whatsoever it be, and be not solicitous for the future: for if you take your foot from the present standing, and thrust it forward toward tomorrow's event, you are in a restless condition: it is like refusing to quench your present thirst by fearing you shall want drink the next day. If it be well today, it is madness to make the present miserable by fearing it may be ill tomorrow.—Jeremy Taylor.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

S. PARKES CADMAN.

Announcement of the death of S. Parkes Cadman brought sorrow to people around the earth. To many he was known in person, and to millions more his radio voice was that of a familiar friend.

From the mines of England he arose to be perhaps the world's greatest preacher and religious leader. By strenuous study and work he pulled himself to the pinnacle of success.

His brilliant mind gleaned from the history of the race and interpreted the trends of the world.

Pastor of Central Congregational Church for thirty-five years, president of the Federal Council of Churches in America for years, radio preacher, Honorary Moderator of the General Council of our church the past biennium, member of many commissions with world-wide influence, Dr. Cadman served people everywhere.

In his address given recently at Mt. Holyoke he seemed to feel that this was his Valedictory address. For nearly two hours he plead for friendship, understanding, cooperation, religion in a weary world.

A truly great man, whose place will be hard to fill, has fallen in our midst. His influence will live long in the hearts of those who have been inspired by his success and leadership.

HUMANIZING RELIGION.

It is very easy for ministers and religious leaders to become professional. They deal in ideas that are professional, and sometimes find it difficult to leave out technical language in presenting those ideas. Church groups, societies, classes, facts and figures become part of the daily consideration and individuals get lost in society, or a social gospel.

Professionalism in religion is very deadly. Theology must have its phrases that are understood in seminaries, like medicine is learned by doctors, but the ordinary person does not want theology in terms of the seminary any more than sick people want the doctor to describe their disease and medical treatment in terms of the medical school. People old and young are quick to sense the reality of religion on the part of those who preach or teach it. Prayers that use the same words and tone for the same things on all occasions will soon lose their reality. Bible reading that seems to be done because the reader thinks that it must, and not because there is something important to be read has but little meaning to those who listen. Even an invitation to accept Christ and join the Church that is given because it is supposed to be done has little drawing power.

People in our time want religion that is human, religion that comes into every phase of life, religion that is a help at all times, religion that fits into human experience as it must be lived today. Religion that can meet the test of our time must be personal, human, related to life.

This will make it none the less Divine. Jesus was human, and met human problems with personal religion. God is a Father and deals like a father with His children. The Christian religion is human, has always been so, and should be so kept by leaders in the Church. To do less will mean the loss of multitudes who are sincere in their attempt to find God.

SECURING READERS.

It costs good money to edit and publish THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The only reason for spending this money, of course, is to give to the members of our churches reading matter that may prove to be of help to them.

At the present time the subscription list indicates that only a comparatively small number read the paper. If those who read it feel that it has value, they can do a real service by getting other people to read it. The subscription price is only two dollars a year—the price of one good book or of a few weeks subscription to a daily paper. Surely those who want it can buy it at that price. This is an appeal to those who believe in THE CHRISTIAN SUN to aid in getting other readers; not merely that the paper may have funds, but more especially that our church people may read concerning what is going on in the Christian world and be benefitted thereby.

Any church sending in a subscription list equivalent to ten percent of their membership is entitled to a 25% commission, or fifty cents out of each subscription. This will make it financially worthwhile for churches to secure subscriptions and at the same time will benefit the churches by giving the church religious help.

WHAT DO YOU WANT?

Some who have sent in their subscriptions have been kind enough to suggest things that they want in the paper. Others have talked with us about it. All suggestions are greatly appreciated.

It is the opinion of the present editor that those who pay for the paper should have some share in the selection of materials which are printed. For that reason, he is sincerely asking for constructive suggestions concerning things that should be included, as well as suggestions concerning what may well be left out. If you have an idea, please send it in, for it may prove to be very valuable for your church paper.

THEY MUST OCCUR.

Mistakes seem to be a part of human life. They just occur. This is particularly true in the time of transition. Several mistakes crept into last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and others will probably do so later. The editor hopes that the readers will make allowances and accept the good, while the chaff is thrown away. Perhaps he will learn, as he goes along and as more time becomes available for this work.

Only he who lives a life of his own can help the lives of other men—Phillips Brooks.

THE ART OF APPRECIATION.

By REV. ARTHUR HEDLEY,
Station Sq., Flitwick Beds, England.

A well-known English professor said recently that if he were a dictator, he would establish a college of "praise-givers," whose sole duty would be to give encouragement to others.

There are so many men and women who are sadly in need of a word of appreciation. They carry on day in and day out in the office, factory, home, without so much as a "thank you" from those they serve. Life would be less drab and dreary if only someone would take notice of them, and pass on a word of approbation. The man of first-rate talent is always in the limelight but the average man does his work unnoticed, and must be content with his bare wages.

If we learned the Christian art of appreciation and passed on a kindly word of encouragement, whenever possible, we could make life easier and more pleasant for so many. I met a gardener the other day who said he was working for another gentleman and was very happy and contented in his new post. Thinking that a raise in wages had made him happier, I asked whether it was a better post in a material sense. "No!" he replied, "I get less wages but more encouragement. My old employer never showed the least appreciation of my work, but my new master takes a walk around the garden daily and notices my work. He often gives me a word of praise and encouragement."

I have just received a letter from a Christian servant girl, in Scotland, who has known what it is to have hard work without a word of praise. For the past few years life has been transformed for her because her present mistress is so kind to her. "My mistress," she says, "is so appreciative and it is a real pleasure to work for her. It is so hard and depressing when you give your best and never receive a word of encouragement."

The world owes so much to those kindly humble appreciative souls, who seem to think so little of themselves because they are so full of thought for others. We think of Christian employers who show their appreciation of their workers' faithful service in such practical ways. In the beautiful garden village of Bournville, in England, there are thousands of happy workers in the famous firm of Cadbury Brothers. These brothers, who are Quakers, have put the welfare of their workers first. They do everything possible to encourage and cheer their employees. People travel from far and near to see this ideal village with its churches, baths, parks, etc. The English public show their appreciation of these model Christian employers by giving them their patronage. For over fifty years the firm of Cadbury has been one of the most successful confectioners in Britain. If only more masters would give a little more praise and encouragement to their workers they would win their love and respect, and make life a glad new existence for them.

We could all be a little more appreciative in our homes. So many are growing up with an inferiority complex simply because, in their childhood they were so often criticised, and made to feel their inferiority by being compared with those children who excelled in their lessons. If parents would give the backward child more encouragement they would save it from so much failure and misery in after years.

Are we not apt to take everything for granted in daily life. We come home to our meals and enjoy them and little realize all the thought, preparation and care that lies behind them. Do we ever give mother a word of appreciation for her cooking? Does father show his appreciation for her economy in the domestic arrangements? Does he appreciate her taste in dress? These are little things but they help to transform drudgery into delight and make the wheels of life run smoothly. When children in the home are taught to practice the beautiful art of appreciation, it keeps out of the home the green-eyed monster of jealousy.

I have noticed that the ministers who get the best results out of their members are those who are experts in the art of appreciation. In many cases they are not great scholars nor eloquent preachers: just average pastors. But how quick to note and encourage the good in others. By their kind appreciative words they have cheered and inspired many a discouraged worker to win through. Young men and women have been encouraged to develop their latent gifts by their pastor's faith in them, and today they may be found in the home ministry, or the mission field. It is the appreciative pastor who sees the best in the worst, and inspires confidence and faith, so that the lowest outcast turns back to God. I am confident there would be less talk of empty churches if ministers would learn and practice this divine art.

What a great Appreciator was our Lord! He quickly saw the best in Matthew, Peter, Zacchaeus, Mary Magdalene, and revealed it to the world. He didn't look for the bad and then condemn them but for the good and showed that those who were despised by the religious people of the day had far more real goodness in them than the Scribes and Pharisees. By His faith in them our Lord led sinners to repentance and faith. Mary would never forget her Master's kindly words of encouragement and praise when she was condemned by Judas, and the rest of the disciples for pouring her precious box of ointment on the head of Jesus. "Why trouble ye the woman?" said Jesus, "for she hath wrought a good work upon Me . . . wheresoever the gospel shall be preached in the whole world, that also which this woman hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her."

It is in the school of Divine Love that we become experts in the royal art of appreciation. Love alone will destroy the jealousy, envy, selfishness, love of self-praise, covetousness which prevents us seeing and praising the good in others. The more we love our Lord and our fellows the quicker will we appreciate the good in our loved ones, our neighbors, our fellow church members. As we live to encourage others, God will give to us an abundance of encouragement.

WE ARE SAVED BY GRACE.

After all, we are saved by grace. If Jesus and the Father had not loved us, if they had not been forbearing and forgiving, none of us could be saved, for no man will ever merit salvation. Such "good works" as we are able to do are only means of grace to help us on the way. We are not saved by our "good works," but we cannot be saved without them. Even with all our "good works" we are far from meriting salvation; and when we do all we can, we are still "unprofitable servants" and beggars at the throne of grace. That is why Jesus had to come here and die. If "there had been a law given that could have given life," there would have been no need for a Saviour to die, and there would have been no place or need for grace.

—T. B. Wilkinson.

When we cannot see our way,
Let us trust and still obey;
He who bids us forward go,
Cannot fail the way to show.
Though the sea be deep and wide,
Though a passage seem denied;
Fearless let us still proceed,
Since the Lord vouchsafes to lead.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mr. Wade Hampton Brinkley, son of the late James Brinkley and Mrs. Martha Speight Brinkley, was born in Nansemond County, Virginia, September 8, 1876, and died in Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Virginia, July 5, 1936, at the age of 59 years, 9 months and 27 days. His health had been failing for four or five years. He was unable to leave his room for about two weeks before his death. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Hargroves Brinkley, his mother, Mrs. Martha S. Brinkley; three brothers, Junius, Glenwood and James Brinkley; one sister, Miss Mamie Brinkley, all of Driver, Va.

Mr. Brinkley united with the Berea Christian Church, Driver, Va., when a young boy, was faithful to his church and enjoyed the confidence of his fellow-members and friends. About twenty years ago he was elected deacon and served in that office with dignity and entire satisfaction. He served as Superintendent of the Sunday school for many years. He was also Secretary of the Lower Parish Poor Fund Board. He was employed as a clerk in the store of the late Mr. E. J. Driver. About thirty-five years ago he opened a general merchandise store in Driver. He was prominent in the agricultural, business, educational and religious interests of the community.

The funeral service was conducted in Berea Christian Church, July 6, at 4:00 P. M., by the pastor who was assisted by Rev. E. P. Miner, Rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Burial was in City Grove Cemetery, Portsmouth, Va. Active pall-bearers were: H. P. Harrell, Richard Savage, Roy Jones, Harry Jones, Dr. Josiah P. Leake, William Parker, Ellsworth Jones and Herbert Hall.

Deacon Brinkley was a man of remarkable energy. Until his health failed he was able to devote his time and talent to long hours of work attending to the arduous duties of his business. He sought opportunities to challenge his mind and heart. He employed hundreds of people during his life-time. He was considerate of the needs of those who worked for him. In a private way he dispensed many gifts of money and provisions to the poor and needy of the community. These deeds of charity were not recorded for public information. He was modest and unassuming in his life, and he refrained from any appearance of appealing for public praise or honor.

It was the privilege of the writer to serve as his pastor for nearly thirty years. During those years many opportunities were presented for sweet counsel concerning the spiritual life. When time and opportunity made it possible he delighted to discuss the deeper things of the kingdom of God. His mind sought to know the inner meanings of spiritual truth. He was a seeker after truth. To him it was a joy to know more about God. He was resigned to the will of God.

Life is filled with many experiences. Clouds and sunshine, calm and storm, sickness and health, joy and sorrow—these and other things seem to enter into the circle of normal human life. Sooner or later every home must be broken up, and every family must have its share of sorrow. We are pilgrims, and no one can tarry long in a strange land. This is not our home. When God is at the center, when He rules our lives and directs our ways, rainbows are written upon the clouds and calm follows the storms. Sorrows are sweetened by precious memories, and bereavements are transformed while the night breaks into the bright morning. Faith may be tried but it is not dismayed. "Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him." (Ps. 42:5.)

CHOOSING A COLLEGE.

The four years spent in a college are significant. As a rule they come climaxing the teens. During these four years, visions have begun to be realized. Solid foundations for ambitions become a reality. Certain definite changes take place in the individual. The fallacy of preconceived ideas becomes apparent. New conceptions of life are born. One's outlook is vastly different. After college experiences, the individual is different, his intentions and ambitions have undergone a change—in fact, experiences in the classroom, on the campus literally transform the individual. He becomes a product of the college, not only that but in many respects he is the projection of the college into society. Owing to these facts, it is highly important that the proper college be selected.

Every institution has its characteristics. There are certain things that are sacrificed, often at the expense of others. The environment of a college is supposed to be intellectual. If the college does not stand for the intellectual, it has no right to publish itself as a college. On the other hand, if it specializes in the intellectual alone, it will fail to administer effectively to the student's whole life. The college that meets adequately the demands of present day youth will advance and execute a balanced curriculum, a curriculum that takes into consideration the whole of life and that seeks to develop the whole personality in proper proportions. More and more the successful institutions of learning will face fearlessly and constructively social and domestic problems. A man may or he may not live in the so-called intellectual world, but he must live in society and in domestic relations. In college the individual is training not only for a profession but he is training for life and he should be given instructions in fields that contribute vitally to success and happiness. The individual who is ignorant of domestic responsibilities and proprieties and unacquainted with social and moral questions is wholly unfitted for a peaceful and successful career. He may be intellectual but if he is void of these essential achievements, he will find existence miserable. In all probability the average college curriculum will experience violent revolutions within the next decade. The effective curriculum for college will always have to do with the classics, with history, with languages, and with the sciences. But it will also have to do with the practical questions of every day living.

The college not only has its curriculum but it has its standards, standards that become apparent to faculty and students alike and that are discernible by freshmen as they enter. There are standards of refinement and culture. Young men and young women should find advantages along these lines in advance to what they have been accustomed to in the high school and home surroundings. Every college should leave its mark upon those who spend one or more years in its environment. Correct customs on social occasions should be so much a part of its life that the members of the student body would have but little difficulty in observing and practicing such customs with ease. The college that does not impart such opportunities misses its opportunity. If social and cultural standards are not advanced on the campuses of our colleges, society in general will not make progress along these lines.

There are standards of honor. More than any other place dishonor should be outlawed on the college campus. Wherever young people come together by the scores and hundreds, there may be found tendencies toward reckless conduct and dishonest living. On the other hand there will always be found strong tendencies toward the better and higher things. The college that is able to encourage the best in its students to the extent of frowning upon the low tendencies sufficiently strong to eliminate them will attain the ideal. If there are dishonest and dishonorable practices among students on a college campus, the students themselves are not entirely to blame. The faculty must take its share of the responsibility. Student government is a wholesome sort of thing and occupies a position of influence certainly, but the influence of strong government is by no means as strong as the influence of faculty counsel when the faculty takes its position and responsibility seriously. Faculty and students working together can bring about a sense of personal and collective integrity on any college campus.

The college of today offers an attractive field for friendship. The student leaving home enters a new world when he becomes a part of the student body. As a rule he enters this new world alone, but immediately he is introduced to other students and is face to face with the opportunity of friendship on a much larger scale perhaps than he has yet known. Friendships made at college often times prove to be of the strongest type. College friends are true and genuine. It is highly important that care and consideration should enter into such friendships. The individual who misses this side of life may well regret his loss.

The college, like a friend, has its characteristics. And like choosing a friend, we choose our college for the college becomes a definite part of us so long as we live and as we use care and consideration in selecting friends, we should likewise use care and consideration in selecting a college.

Different individuals have different needs and different types of institutions are required to meet such needs. A large school may meet the needs of some whereas on the other hand the smaller institutions are necessary to meet the needs of others. The characteristics of a college, the ambitions and needs of the individual, should determine the training ground for the individual. Perhaps the only advice to be given in the choosing of a school is for the individual to consult one's ambitions, take stock of his own abilities, weigh carefully his needs, and when he has correctly analyzed his own case, to make an analysis of the institutions in mind and the institution that will more correctly and adequately meet his personal needs should become his college.

L. E. SMITH.

THOUGHTS FROM THE FIELD.

By A. R. FLOWERS.

There is many a man, who has not lived beyond his thirties, who is older than many other men who have lived on much beyond middle life. Deserting one's purpose and drifting into a sort of idle intellectual mood is the surest way I know to grow old and fruitless in living. Wendell Phillips used to say, "Learning and growing wiser is the only interest worth the deep concern of thoughtful men. While I was attending a course of lectures on Christian education in the Auditorium of the John B. Stetson University in Deland, Florida, a few years ago, the speaker asked the question as to how old a person could grow before he became incapacitated for a teacher. The consensus of opinion was that a person is a good teacher as long as he is a good learner.

It is virtually true that our achievements are but objectified growing thoughts which express themselves in our disposition toward the peace, happiness and good-will of those about us. I do not see how there can be a growth in grace and in the saving knowledge of our Lord, apart from the unfolding of new and greater truth. Did not Jesus, in his teaching, advance from the external toward the center: from the temporal toward the eternal and from the literal toward the spiritual. We should lay aside our weights, whatever they may be and move forward toward the greater things that it is possible for us to achieve.

It is true that genuine Christianity and prosperity have gone hand in hand through the years. Ignorance and superstition, prejudice and poverty never remain very long under the influence of a fruitful Christianity. Faith in God and obedience to His will never fail to bring better living conditions in every realm of life.

Francis Bacon said that: "Men ought to take heed of rending God's church with worthless controversies, such as, when the point of difference is too insignificant to be controverted; and in discussion where the meaning should govern the terms, but in effect the terms govern the meaning." I remember a few months ago, being in a small group of men, when the subject of religion and different denominations came up; and before the little talk, which was all in the best of feelings, was over, two of our little party had just spoiled the pleasure of the whole meeting by becoming offended with each other, because of unrestrained remarks that were not rightly interpreted, but when they took time to have a sane reckoning with themselves, as to their attitude in the matter, they at once discovered their folly. Few people really know the hurt of over-emphasized denominational allegiance. Such narrowness should have been abandoned long ago.

The business of becoming identified with some branch of Christ's church should occupy first place in our devotions, plans and possession. Nobody is wise enough to tell how much has been lost in righteous enthusiasm, among good church workers by the laggardness of so many merely nominal members. The supreme need of our churches today is a training service. I mean Christian education, in our homes; in our schools and in our churches.

A MISSIONARY LESSON FROM THE BIBLE.

Matthew's Gospel, chapter 22, verses 35-38, tells of a lawyer who put this question to the Great Teacher: "Master, which is the great Commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment," said the Teacher. Not only this lawyer, but very, very many since his day have been tempting Christ with the same question, nor have they been willing to accept what the great Teacher said about it. In practice, if not in preaching, many are still wondering if there is not a commandment greater than this. Christ said there was a second like unto it. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," but He certainly nowhere intimated that this second was the greater, or could take the place of the first. We will do well both in our practice, preaching and teaching, to bear in mind that our Lord knew best when He said the greatest commandment, the first commandment is "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." We shall find people disagreeing with us when we put that into practice. They have always done so. Our Lord Himself faced this fact and drew the distinction. This distinction you will find a little later in Matthew 26, verses 6-13, and also in Mark 14:3-9. Here we are told of a woman who put the love of her Lord above her love for the poor and needy around about her, for once in her life, and for the time being, at any rate. The disciples said she should not have done it, but her Lord said she had done right and commended her more highly than He ever commended anyone else, in all His teachings and His preaching. The alabaster box of very precious ointment was poured out as a love gift on the head of her Lord. She made this offering, knowing it was a very precious one, a very costly one, solely out of her devotion to her Lord. The disciples, of course, immediately said it was a waste and that it should have been sold and given to the poor. Now here we have the distinction made between giving to the Lord and giving to the poor. When we give to Missions, we make a love-offering to our Lord. It is for His sake, not for our sake, nor for the sake of the poor around about us, that we pour out gifts to Missions. It is not even our love, nor our life, nor our offering, that we are trying to share with others; but it is the love of our Lord, the life of our Lord, the sacrifice of our Lord, that we are trying, through our missionary giving and teaching, to share with others. It is our love-offering to our Lord. Jesus knew that if He could find those who were so devoted to Him that they would make a love-offering in His Name and for His sake, those same persons would in due time and season give something to the poor, but He did not put giving to the poor first; He put that second and Himself first. This is the whole spirit and the whole motive, and the whole explanation, of the missionary movement today.

IN THE HILLS OF OLD VIRGINIA.

Just now as our mist-wreathed hills bloom out in all their beauty, our hilly churches bloom out also and their bloom really looks as if it might bear fruit.

We have a new family of missionaries here with us now. The Elmores now take this field and they are starting on their new work with faith, works and love. They seemed to be blessed with understanding hearts and have had twelve years of experience. This is the first time we have had a pastor here with that much experience and we hope they will continue to like our hills and will stay here till they can build this field up until it is a strong and glorious place.

Over the steep and winding trails these Elmores are making their way into the hearts and homes of our people here. As they go from one humble home to another, they are finding a welcome and all the doors of these mountain cabins swing open to them. Their visiting is creating more interest in the church work than has been shown before in years. Our Sunday school has grown from 32 to 83 in one week. We are looking forward to greater things among our hills. Our Elmores wind their way into the most remote sections to homes where a car cannot go. So you see, they, like the missionaries of old, are going on foot, and by faith.

Over the hills and far away the Ivy Hill field is now coming to life once more, and while this is an added work for our pastor, it is also an added joy. He says Ivy Hill is one of the most interested groups of people he ever saw. They are working and praying for a church. Their Sunday school is growing steadily. God bless Ivy Hill and give them a church.

Let me thank you Christian friends who make it possible for these God-fearing workers to be among our hills and to hold the Cross of Christ before us here. And as they climb the mountain where they go.

These Elmores, like true followers of His, do not feel they are making a great sacrifice to work here, but they love people and where there are people they can go. There is no scorn in their hearts for the most unfortunate creature. They meet all people with a smile that says, "We love you, and believe in you." And so our hills find they can be moved. People are doing more than I had expected in many ways. However, though these trails are picturesque as they wind their way among the hills where the rhododendron drops her soft petals by the wayside, still the way is steep. These workers will need your prayers. Many a cloud will hang over their path that I cannot write about; many a rock will be in their way that perhaps I will not know about, only God can know and only God can help, so pray. This is a work of Faith and Love.

WHERE THE COURSE OF EMPIRES MOVES EASTWARD.

CHAS. A. LEONARD, SR.

As the gospel of our Lord has moved eastward from Harbin to other centers where we have now advanced the Kingdom, the Japanese army has likewise gone eastward from here these past three years, pressing extension of the Japanese Empire on the continent. The armies pressed northward to Harbin, as we have done, and are now establishing themselves in the north, east and west, with Harbin as the center.

Many Russians think that Japan's ultimate purpose is also to enter eastern Russia, Siberia; but this will hardly be attempted now, certainly not until Japan establishes herself more strongly in Manchuria and obtains a firmer hold in China. There are indeed extensive military preparations along the Manchuria-Siberia border, as is well known, but we need not concern ourselves particularly regarding this. The chief concern of Christians should be extension of the Kingdom of our Lord unto the uttermost parts of the earth. May the time soon come when His gospel can be preached freely in Siberia, and all Russia. We believe this opportunity will present itself if the Lord tarries. Let us be ready to enter when the time comes.

The county seat mission outstation Tungning is almost directly north of Russia's Far Eastern port, Vladivostock. It is south of the large range of mountains through which has been constructed toward Vladivostock the North Manchuria Railway, and so near the sea that spring comes there a month earlier than here in Harbin. On our first visit to Tungning the trip of two days from the railway was on a Russian wagon, pulled by five horses. There were thirty wagons. We had a mounted military escort of thirty Chinese soldiers. Our last trip from the railway to this eastern city by wagon had to be made in one day, the seven horses to each wagon and the mounted escort having to run the whole sixty miles of continuous mountain country except when climbing. We started at three in the morning in a snow storm. From my bedding on top of a wagon load of freight, on which I perched, sermon notes and my marked Chinese Bible were lost, never to be found. A motor bus which we decided not to take on another trip was shot up by Russian bandits, some of its occupants being killed and all robbed. It was on this road that last year our dear old faithful colporter friend and brother, Tsung Shao-Yu, was taken by bandits, held for months and then shot through with bullets by soldiers when the bandits holding him and others were exterminated in the mountains with machine guns. He still had portions of Scripture with him when killed. As Christ was crucified with thieves whom He would save, so the body of Tsung Shao-Yu was burnt in the wild mountains along with those to whom he would impart the Word. He is not dead, for his works follow him. I was told of one man who had no money to buy Scriptures, but Tsung, hungry, exchanged the bread of life for a boiled egg and a piece of bread. We have been lucky to escape bandits at these places. Care has been exercised, but, best of all, many in the homeland and here in Manchuria have prayed for our safety.

The little band of Christians at Tungning appreciate our visits under these circumstances, but we have not been able to prove true to the little group in that isolated place. As far back as four years ago, and once since, they have contributed money and have rented a place for meetings, believing we would be able to send them an evangelist. But for lack of funds we have not been able to do this. On this last visit, when in the heart of winter, another trip was made to Tungning, on our visit to nine other centers, the little group again raised money, a hundred dollars, for rent of a preaching hall and incidental expenses to cover the first half year. A blind Christian doctor is supplying the furniture. All we could do was promise that an evangelist be supplied from other places for two months, they to conduct worship in rotation. But there should be an evangelist at Tungning which has a population of fifteen thousand and will grow fast when the railroad is completed.

Trips can now be made there safely by motor bus. A railway line is being constructed from Korea directly north by this city on up to the North Manchuria Railway. We were moved—and put to shame—to see Japanese building concrete buttresses for railway bridges in the midst of winter, the thermometer fifteen degrees below zero. Inside a big mat shed surrounding the work concrete was mixed, the inside heated with stoves, a deep shaft sunk below the frozen river and ground supplying water. Chinese were doing the work, it is true, but it was for Japan, and she was furnishing the money. There are Chinese evangelists who are available to act as representatives for God's people in America to build a 'highway for our Lord' in these dark, isolated regions, to which He would go.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."
REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP ACTIVITIES.

The Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship met at Bethlehem Church on Tuesday of this week, with Mr. W. B. Williams of Newport News acting as president. Unfortunately, the program did not get printed in the CHRISTIAN SUN, a thing for which this editor is sorry.

The Eastern North Carolina Youth Fellowship, under the leadership of Miss Rosebud Kimball, president, had charge of the evening program of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, which met on Tuesday of this week.

The Valley of Virginia Youth Fellowship will be responsible for an evening's program during the session of the Conference to be held on August 5. Miss Thelma Morris is president of this group and is preparing the program.

More and more the young people of our various Conferences are being given responsible positions and a part in the regular meetings. This is a hopeful outlook for the future of the church. The records indicate that young people do their part well, when given responsibilities.

BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention met in annual session at Elon College, N. C., on July 3. Reports were made by the chairman and treasurer and the work of the Board thoroughly discussed.

It was voted to comply with the request of the Southern Convention to pay two hundred and fifty dollars annually on the CHRISTIAN SUN account, as soon as the money becomes available.

It was evident that work needs to be done of the type sponsored by this Board, but that the income would not permit the accomplishment of what should be undertaken.

Rev. Joe French of Norfolk, Va., was elected Chairman and Rev. John Chapman of Asheville, N. C., Vice-Chairman. Mrs. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, N. C., is the new recording secretary. Mr. C. H. Stephenson of Raleigh, N. C., who had been the treasurer of the board since its organization in 1918, was re-elected to fill that office. Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Va., was elected as executive secretary, a newly created office. Miss Edna Fulcher of Norfolk, Va., was recognized as the office secretary for the Board.

The Board adjourned to meet in February in connection with the other Boards and Trustees of Institutions, in keeping with the vote of the Southern Convention at its last session.

GOOD AND BAD IN OUR COMMUNITIES.

Prelude—(to be selected)

Hymn: "Praise Him, Praise Him."

Prayer—Asking God to help us to keep our light shining for Christ in the life of our community.

Hymn: "God Bless Our Native Land"

Announcement of Topic—Scripture
Points for Leader's Introductory talk.

Most people think that the place in which they live is the "garden spot of the world"—that their community is better than any other. In all communities we find some good and we find some bad. We cannot speak too highly of our public school system here in America, yet in some communities the teachers are placed because of "pull" and not their qualifications. In a certain community at the present time leading citizens are making an investigation as to the reason why a very prominent teacher in the high school was not recommended for re-election by the Superintendent of Schools. Many people believe it is because the superintendent had a friend that wanted the position.

In most communities there are those who conduct their business as Jesus would like to have them do—but there is the vast majority who are interested only in their own welfare.

Nearly every community can boast of at least one place where young people can go for clean, wholesome recreation; but then there are the public dance halls, beer gardens, road houses and commercial places of amusement that have a bad effect on those who seek pleasure there.

There are movies of a high type that young people should patronize, yet think of all the cheap pictures that are placed on the screen to be absorbed by boys and girls who are to be the citizens of tomorrow. Since the formation of the League of Decency much improvement has been noticed in the class of pictures being produced.

Down through the centuries the Church has stood for Christ. It has proclaimed the abundant life for all those who choose Him as their leader and let their light shine for Him. The Church stands as a guardian over the community which it graces; yet sometimes the members of a church defeat a contribution the church might make to the community. It may be that some of the members leave their religion on the church doorstep when leaving on Sunday and do not pick it up again until they return the next Sunday. It may be that they failed to come to an understanding with other races in their community.

While we find some good and some bad in every community we must remember that the community is as good or as bad as the individuals who are a part of it. As a Christian let each of us strive to take the spirit of Christ into whatever community activity with which we come in contact.

Hymn: "A Charge to Keep."

For Discussion: (Two weeks in advance of this meeting instruct a group to make a list of all the good things in their community, and another group to bring in a list of the bad things. Compare these lists at this meeting. Discuss ways in which the bad things can be improved; and what part the local group can have in bringing about better conditions in the life of their community.)

Sentence Prayers.

Hymn: "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life."

Benediction.

SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE EARLY CHURCH.

LESSON III—JULY 19, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35.

LESSON: Acts 4:32-35; 6:3-7; 9:36-39; II Cor. 8:1-9; I John 3:13-18;

PRINTED TEXT: Acts 4:32-35; II Cor. 8:1-9.

Making Christianity Work.

They had a "Share the Wealth" program in the Early Church. It was a very effective program. The secret of it was that it was voluntary. There was no compulsion about it but the compulsion of a deep sense of stewardship—none of them said that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; and the compulsion of a deep sense of concern for the members of the group—for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them at the apostle's feet; and distribution was made unto each, according as anyone had need; and the compulsion of a great love and loyalty to Christ—they were of one heart and soul, and great price was upon them all. It was not difficult for the Church to have Christian Communism or Socialism for they had the Spirit of Christ Himself. By whatever name one calls the thing recorded in Acts 4:32-35, it was a convincing demonstration of the spirit and principles of Christ finding expression in a practical way in social or community life.

It is to be noted that this state of affairs did not continue indefinitely. It is not necessary to accept it as the ideal way in all its details. It may have been simply an attempt to meet a pressing problem in a practical and unique way. It is hardly likely that the plan would work in toto today. But its basic principles are sound, and they need to be applied to our modern life—a deep sense of stewardship, a deep loyalty to Christ, a deep concern for others. When men are governed by the spirit of Christ and guided by the mind of Christ, our modern world will find the solution to its social welfare work.

Deacons.

Like so many other things that came out of the New Testament, the institution of what we call deacons arose out of a very practical need. As the numbers in the early Church increased and as the need for relief became greater, a problem arose as to just distribution or administration of relief to both Jews and Greeks. The apostles with fine spiritual insight quickly recognized the two issues involved. Christianity had a message to proclaim, the gospel must be preached, spiritual things, so-called must be put first. But Christianity also had a practical duty to perform to the physical needs of humanity. That was a spiritual duty also. With discerning wisdom then they selected seven men to look after the so-called more practical affairs of the Church, while they gave themselves to the ministry of preaching and prayer. Thus arose what is now known as the "deacons" of the Church.

The emphasis was put upon character—they were to be men of honest report, men of integrity, men of good reputation in the community. They were to be men of sound judgment and common-sense, "men full of wisdom"—they would have some difficult situations to handle and brains would be needed. They were to be men of spiritual insight and impulse—full of the Holy Spirit—they were to be men who brought to the practical affairs of the Church spiritual power. Let no man look lightly upon the office of a deacon. If he is worthy of the office he is fortunate indeed, honored of man and recognized by God.

It is to be noted also that at the beginning the deacons had the responsibility of looking after the poor and the needy of the church and the Christian community. In modern life too often the deacons think that they have been chosen simply to assist with the Communion Service. Deacons should be trained and used in many of the activities which so often fall to the lot of the minister.

The Grace of Giving.

The Churches of Macedonia had greatly impressed Paul by their liberality in giving. Indeed so liberally had they given out of their affliction and their poverty, that he thought they had given too much. As a matter of fact they had to beseech him to accept the gift for the church at Jerusalem, and for the fellowship in the ministering to the saints. The secret was the fact that they had first of all given themselves to the Lord. Having made a complete dedication of themselves to God, it was easy to give of their possessions. They could give without stint. Of course here is the rub in many a modern man's giving. He gives grudgingly and of necessity because he has not first of all given himself. He who does not love much does not give much. He who does not give much does not love much. To be sure giving cannot be interpreted simply in terms of amount. But the principle still obtains—he who does not give much does not love much and he who does not love much does not give much.

"See that ye abound in this grace also." Paul puts giving in the list as a grace. Three times in the space of a few verses he refers to it as a "grace." Without the presence of liberality in the life of a Christian, there is a decided incompleteness in his Christian experience and activity. Paul makes it a test of their sincerity—but as proving through the earnestness of others the sincerity also of your love.

And he bases his appeal for liberality on the fact of gratitude and love to God and Christ. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he were rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich. Here is the final and ultimate appeal. Unless giving springs from this source it is not real giving. Alas for the man who in the light of what Christ has done for him and given to him, does not gladly give as God has prospered him. The decrease in giving in the churches in recent years has not been due altogether to the depression; it has been due to the decrease in spiritual life.

Remember that the warfare for which St. Paul urged his converts to put on the whole armour of God is a spiritual one, a struggle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, as he put it. We may paraphrase this by saying our conflict is not with individual men, but with established systems, habitual attitudes, entrenched customs, vested interests, and false standards of life. and the struggle is with ourselves as well as with institutions and economic or political systems.—Dean Speight of Swarthmore College.

Just Try This.

If the day looks kinder gloomy,
And your chances purty slim,
If the situation's puzzlin'
An' the prospects awful grim,
An' perplexities keep pressin',
Till all hope is nearly gone,
Just bristle up and grit your teeth,
An' keep on keepin' on.

MONDAY.

"THE BOOK AT THE BASE."

"Thy word have I hid in my heart."—Psalm 119:9-16.

Rich and stimulating have been the newspaper dispatches of late concerning the discovery of old and ever older fragments of manuscript of the Bible. It does seem as if, in these loose thinking times, God were buttressing more and more the credibility of the Book that reveals Himself.

Anybody who does real thinking about religion soon finds himself beyond the shallow speculations of superficial teachers, and squarely confronted by the Bible. Christianity stands or falls with the Scriptures. If they are trustworthy and true, then all our essential questions are clearly answered.

Multitudes of men and women, who want to be "modern," are groping today in a twilight zone of religious speculation. Out of the attested Bible they should learn, "The entrance of Thy word giveth light."

Prayer—For dusty Bibles and neglected devotions, we crave Thy pardon, O patient Father. May we daily seek Thee where Thou art to be found, in Thy word.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"DEBORAH'S SNOW-TAN."

"I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content."—Phil 4:10-20.

While her grandparents seek the warmth and sunshine of Florida, little Deborah finds both in her activities in the snow. This unusual winter has meant to her only added pleasure with sled and toboggan and sliding on the ice. Deborah has a tan from her winter sports comparable with that which tourists acquire in Florida.

As Deborah has found health and happiness in winter snows which many of her elders deem difficult, so all of us may extract from seeming adversity the benefits that are there. We need to learn, like joyous little Deborah, to get the most out of the unexpected. Trouble is not a huge and growing snowball to overwhelm us, but a toboggan on which to ride.

Prayer—With the carefree abandon and delight of childhood, we would meet each new experience that comes to us as a fresh opportunity for increased strength and happiness.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"JUST A PAT ON THE HEAD."

"Render to all their dues."—Rom. 13:1-10.

Patsy is an old and nondescript watchdog which we have inherited with the little Florida bungalow that we are occupying for the season. For reward, she asks only that I pat her head as I go in and out of the house. She comes up to me expecting this attention, and wags her tail in pleasure.

What she really says to me is, "Why don't you give a pat on the head to all who serve you? What about a pleasant word to the laundress, to the milkman, to the paper boy and to the clerks? There would be more happiness in the world, and more faithfulness, if pats on the head were more frequent."

So for this morning's Meditation we thank Patsy, the dog.

Prayer—Fill our mouths with words of recognition and appreciation, we pray, our Father. May every life we touch know that the gentleness of Jesus is in us.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"FISH AND NO FISH."

"Rejoice with them that do rejoice."—Rom. 12:9-21.

Like life is a fishing trip on the Gulf Stream. Three of us went out the other day, and Milady landed a fierce and fighting barracuda, "the tiger of the sea"; and our friend caught a sailfish—and I got never a strike.

That is the way life seems to behave in its distribution of rewards. Some get, and some do not, inexplicably. There was nothing wrong with my line or my bait or my fishing. I just didn't have luck.

But I could rejoice in the success of my comrades. For one of life's profound lessons, if we would escape smallness and meanness and bitterness of spirit, is to "rejoice with them that do rejoice."

Prayer—For all the prizes of life that come to others, we would learn to thank Thee, O Lord; and to be sharers in the joy of our fellows.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"FROWNING STATESMEN."

"Gladness for the upright in heart."—Ps. 97:1-12.

I have met most of the Presidents of my time; and one of them impressed me as a second-rater because he was so glum. He was habitually fretted and worried, like a nervous housewife who could never catch up with her tasks. His petulance was petty;

he was not great enough to wear a smile.

Sunshine and serenity, and the capacity for laughter, are signs of strength. Long-faced preachers are usually poor preachers. First rate Christian workers are uniformed in pleasant countenances. "The joy of the Lord is your strength," is sane Scripture.

Prayer—We would be reflectors of the sunshine which Thou, O Lord, dost put into the hearts of those who trust Thee. May our very faces advertise the peace and joy we profess.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"A BAFFLING MOCKING BIRD."

"In your patience ye shall win your souls."—Luke 21:10-19.

Milady has her reward. The mocking bird which lives in our yard has at last begun to sing. For weeks she fed it daily, and watched it selfishly drive away other birds from the food, and scold the faithful old watchdog for being in the way.

But today the mocking bird is singing, filling the air with sweet melody. Milady's patience is justified, exactly as it was justified while she uncomplainingly waited for two small boys to grow up into their real character.

Love knows how to wait. It is confident that the beautiful capacities of every life may yet find expression.

Prayer—We are overawed by a contemplation of Thine infinite patience, O God. Make us sharers of this Divine secret.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"WATCH YOUR SWASH."

"It is good not to . . . do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth."—Rom. 14:1-23.

Along beautiful New River, from the ocean to the docks, are signs, "Welcome to Fort Lauderdale. But watch your swash."

That is to say: Do not go so fast that the waves of your wake will disturb other boats, or their moorings, or splash over onto the river-front lawns.

In life, we are responsible not only for our own progress, but also for its effect upon other lives. We must not only look ahead to where we are going, but also behind, to our influence. In all relationships, we are our brothers' keepers. That teaching comes close to being one of the fundamentals of the doctrines of Jesus.

Prayer—While we would live in the light of Thy guidance, O Lord, seeking Thy favor first, yet we would remember also the influence which follows us as a shadow.—Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE VALUE OF WORSHIP.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Is not the life more than meat, and the body more than raiment?"—Matt. 6:25.

Jesus began in the very heart of need. In the fullness of time, and the ripeness of need he stepped into the arena of life. He has been in the thick of the fight ever since. While other leaders have hit at some area of need, sought to solve some incidental problem, Jesus, through His Church, has placed the axe at the very root of the tree, and he has gone to the very heart of the matter.

Now the mind governs the body. Jesus got into men's thinking. Get men to think rightly, and most of the problems, both big and little, are solved. Jesus got back to the very source of thinking, to the very foundation of life. Jesus placed men back right at the beginning: God! Coming to God is worship.

An engine is on the wrong track. That track will go to Boston when it is Atlanta that is wanted. It must come right back to the starting place. And from that place get on the right track. How many lives are on the wrong track? They are pushing further and further on toward ruin. Their need is growing greater and greater. Their anxiety keener and keener. In many ways they are trying to patch up their troubles, and then too often they are giving up in despair. Some of them are heedlessly rushing on into the terrible way of making havoc of their lives. They need to go back. They need to go back to the beginning point: God! Going back to God is worship.

That is what Jesus taught men and women to do. One day standing in the midst of the teeming multitudes that had gathered on the hillside to hear him he gave them insight into the reality of life, and the deeper meaning of religion, and worship. He saw their need. Many of them were almost mad with hunger,—actual, gnawing, physical hunger. They knew hunger in that land, where the death rate was high and food scarce. It was a day of despotism,—a day when everyone present could thoroughly understand what Jesus meant when he said "You cannot serve two masters." The whip and the lash were in constant demand, and a foreign nation ruled their people.

Therefore beside intense hunger, there was a still more deadly thing, namely, bitter hate. Hunger will impoverish the body; hate will impoverish the soul! Hunger will kill; hate will cast into hell! It is awful for an individual to hate; worse by far for a nation. Bad for any nation, but very bad indeed for that nation which had handed the world the Ten Commandments, and its purest and best conception of God. The heart of humanity's hope was being broken, for the nation which had sung "the Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want" was losing its grip and civilization itself stood at a crisis.

Coming back to God will not only save an individual, but it will save a nation: "Blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord." Therefore, Jesus sought to have these people who listened to him that day get back to God. He asked: "Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" And he said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." "Seek . . . God." That is worship.

How often some people miss the true meaning of things now, even as they missed them then! Jesus sought to show them that they were keeping the letter of the law, and missing the spirit of it! "Think not that I am come to destroy the law: I am not come to destroy but to fulfill," he said when he saw that they thought he was uprooting, but planting, watering, nourishing, and giving life and growth to that which they were allowing to die. He showed them how they had missed the spirit of the laws of Moses and had multiplied the letter instead. Does not that too often happen with our regular services of worship? We talk about going to hear this or that minister when we should go to worship,—to hear the "still small voice" of God. We talk about the singing of the soloist or choir, when we should be more concerned about the songs of one's own soul. We may be happy if the minister helps us worship! We should be happy if the choir leads us in our worship! But seeking God in worship is first in spite of the minister, and beyond the choir. The message in sermon and song should be but "a voice in the wilderness" of human need and hope and hunger "making straight the way" for the worshipper to the presence of God. "Is not life more than meat, and the body more than raiment?" Paraphrasing, is not worship more than the message, and the service of worship more than the music, as needful and helpful as these both are? They mean as much to worship as meat does to life, and as raiment does to the body, but worship is more than either of them!

Worship stands guard at the very fount of life, and holds the cup of living water in its hand. He who misses worship impoverishes his own soul, and greatly lessens his hope of happiness either in this world or the world to come. Worship shows us ourselves as we are, and leads us up to our best selves and says, Be that. It feeds where nourishment counts most, it clothes us in the robes of righteousness, it adds to the stature of real manhood! "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?" If you give God a chance He can bring you "into the full measure of a man in Christ Jesus." Neglecting to seek him in worship both public and private has set many a young person, who was started by a Christian mother and father on the road of high ideals, on the wrong track, and later they have waked up in time to find that they have missed the first great opportunities in life.

Here is a young boy, clear-eyed and clean-faced, making his first thoughts about life. "The thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts," says Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, at least they reach a long ways sometimes. Let that young fellow take seriously the matter of worship. Let him find himself regularly keeping his tryst with a loving heavenly Father in the house of God, and he will think the right thoughts as well as "long thoughts." That young man, like another Young Man, will "grow in stature and in wisdom, and in favor with God and man." He is drinking at the very fount of life, and the needs of life "shall be added unto him."

Not long since a noble Christian man, a true husband, a loving father, a good deacon in his church, told me that he would not miss worship in his church for anything if it could possibly be avoided. He is a man of rather large interests, and recounted to me how he missed one Sunday from the church and felt an emptiness, and a shallowness in all his work of the week following. He concluded: "I don't believe I could make it without worship." What that good business man said untold numbers of others have felt all across the centuries.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The recent rains have brought life to vegetation, and corn and garden stuff is making quite a growth.

The grass in the corn field has not lost any time either.

The boys have been putting in good time trying to get it killed out. The weather has been very hot and working in corn in hot weather is hot work.

The boys are proud of our grain crop this season. We threshed nearly eighteen hundred bushels of oats and five hundred and twenty bushels of wheat. That does pretty well for an orphanage farm and orphanage boys.

Our luck on Irish potatoes was not so good. We planted with expectations of making 300 bushels and made about 70 bushels. They had no rain from the time they came up to the time the vines died, so the yield was very small. Irish potatoes are one article of food that we can use every day in some form, but for the last several years the seasons have not made enough to supply our needs.

The season has been so dry all spring, and up to ten days ago, that we have only had a few snap beans and some beets out of our garden. The cabbage were a complete failure.

We depend largely upon vegetables to supply food for the children and when we have no vegetables it makes it hard to feed them the proper diet in the hot summer weather.

We are blessed with plenty of good wholesome sweet milk and the children are very fond of it and it goes a long way toward supplying the needs of the body. Our children are healthy and happy.

"In renewing your strength," said C. H. Spurgeon, "ask the Lord that you may undertake fresh work, and that this work may be done to a nobler tune—that you may have more expectancy, more confidence, more faith, more God-reliance. What things are done by men in common life with self-reliance! But with God-reliance we work impossibilities, and miracles fly from us like sparks from the anvil of a smith. When a man learns to work with God's strength and with that alone, he can do things."—Baptist Message.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

The little fellow at the table says of some food set before him, "Mother, I do not like that." Well, how does he know? He has never tasted it. He has not tried it. Many persons are saying the same thing about one of the most essential things of life, worship, "I do not like it." How does he know? Maybe he has never really tried it. The truth of the matter is he does not know what he is missing, —neither for the time being, nor for the years that may stretch themselves before him.

What is the value of worship? It is not designed primarily to feed the body, nor to clothe it; but it is designed to bring one into fellowship with God, and in his fellowship to have his blessings in making life full, free, useful, happy. In other words to put life in its proper perspective; to put first things first; and with the complete assurance that all other needful things will be added unto one. What is the value of worship? To give one the supreme joy of knowing and loving God, and of learning how to express it in loving service for his fellowmen.

In Memoriam

ALLRED.

On June 24, our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom and love, called Mrs. Mary Catherine Allred, our beloved friend, to her eternal home.

In her going Concord Christian Church (Caswell County, N. C.) has lost a faithful and most beloved member.

We realize that we are bereft indeed, for she was a loyal Christian, a loving mother and a faithful friend, ever ready to lend a helping hand. Our loss is her gain. However, we feel that she is peacefully resting in the sunlight of God's eternal love.

Be it resolved:

1. That we hold in loving remembrance her faithfulness as a friend to all, and that we pateru our lives after the goodness and brightness of her life in such a way that our lives may reflect the same Christian sunshine as did hers.

2. That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy and love, realizing that they have lost a faithful, loving wife, and mother, and the church a loyal member.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to The Christian Sun and one be spread upon the church record.

MRS. W. D. GARRISON,
MRS. ROACH SIMMONS,
MRS. H. E. TERRELL,
Committee.

MAJOR G. COBB.

Major G. Cobb, son of Daniel W. and Mary Jane Cobb, was born at Sebrell, Va., December 29, 1862. Here he spent his childhood and youth. Soon after the outbreak of the Spanish-American War he volunteered for service in the army of his country, becoming a member of a Southampton County Company recruited by Captain C. C. Vaughan of Franklin. He saw service with his company in the Cuban Campaign. At the expiration of the war he was mustered out of service and soon came to Franklin to live. He was a charter member of Suffolk Camp, Spanish-American War Veterans.

In 1900, Bro. Cobb married Miss Ave Gertrude Cobb who survives him. Devoted to each other, they established a house which breathed the very air of Christian kindness and forbearance through the long years.

Reared a Methodist, Bro. Cobb united with the Franklin Christian Church soon after he moved to Franklin. He was baptized and received into the Christian Church by the pastor, Dr. Chas. H. Rowland, and to this church of his choice he remained faithful and loyal throughout the rest of his life.

For a number of years he had been in declining health but in Christmas week of 1935 he was stricken with the illness which finally proved fatal March 13, 1936.

Funeral services were held at his late home March 14, 1936, in charge of his pastor, Dr. Elwood W. Jones, assisted by Rev. R. D. Stephenson, pastor of the Franklin Baptist Church, interment taking place in the Franklin Cemetery. The funeral was attended largely by friends and relatives indicating the high regard in which the deceased was held.

ELWOOD W. JONES.

GOMER.

William Jasper Gomer died at his home, R. F. D., Whaleyville, Va., June 3, 1936, at the age of 43 years.

The funeral service was conducted at Holy Neck Church by the writer, assisted by the Revs. R. E. Brittle, W. H. Corbitt and Rufus Corbitt. The interment was in Holy Neck Cemetery.

Mr. Gomer leaves a widow, Mrs. Bertha Worrell Gomer, two sons, his father and mother and three sisters.

Brother Gomer had been a member of the Holy Neck church since childhood, and before his affliction was a regular attendant and active in the work of the Sunday school and church. He was a man of a kind spirit and gentle disposition, loyal to his family, generous to his friends and withal a man of great faith and courage. Within the last nine years he had undergone six serious major operations, spent many months in the hospital, and years of suffering at home, all endured with a resignation and Christian fortitude that commanded the love and esteem of all who knew him. May the God of all peace comfort and keep his loved ones.

N. G. NEWMAN.

DUNN.

Mrs. T. L. Dunn was born in Chambers County, Alabama, September 20, 1868. She died at Lanett, Ala., December 8, 1935, at the age of 67 years, 2 months and 12 days.

She leaves to mourn her departure a husband, two sons and two daughters and several grandchildren. Many relatives and numerous friends are in deep sympathy with the family.

Sister Dunn was a devoted member of the Lanett Christian Church, and was a great Christian wife and mother.

She loved her home and her children as she loved her own life. "They rise up and call her blessed—her husband also he praiseth her."

The funeral services were held at Lanett Christian Church December 10, at 10 A. M., in the midst of a large concourse of relatives and friends. The floral offering was great and beautiful. The services were conducted by the Reverends Penn and Dollar, interment being made in Lanett Cemetery.

G. D. HUNT.

LUTHER JONES and his wife

EMMA FULLER JONES

For more than half a century these companions traveled together the ups and downs and the levels of life's way; sharing the triumphs and defeats, the joys and the sorrows to which their considerate souls were subjected. God blessed them with the privilege of coming to the end of the way at so nearly the same time, Brother Jones having entered rest on January 22, and Sister Jones on January 30th. Their ages were 78 and 75 years respectively.

They were among the promoters of the movement resulting in the organization and building of the Mebane Christian Church. To this, their church, they were faithful to the end.

Their only living son, Robert Jones, of Greensboro, N. C., and their grandchildren, with whom they spent their last days, were joined in sorrow by other relatives and a host of friends in various parts of the state.

The pastor was with Rev. M. Lyerly, of Greensboro, in the funeral of Brother Jones, and with Rev. W. C. Wicker, D. D., in that of Sister Jones.

B. J. HOWARD.

PIERCE.

Wednesday, June 3, 1936, the Woman's Missionary Society of Damascus Christian Church lost one of its oldest members, Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Pierce. Therefore be it resolved:

First: That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

Second: That in the death of Mrs. Pierce, our Society has lost one of its most loyal and faithful members.

Third: That we endeavor to follow the example set by her in her zeal for the work of the Missionary Society.

Fourth: That we extend our sympathy to her relatives, with the assurance that her beautiful life will be to them a comfort and inspiration.

Fifth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one placed on our records, and one sent to the Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. H. C. HILLIARD,
MRS. GENIE PIERCE,
MISS MARGARET CORBITT
Committee.

ROUNTREE.

Solomon Rountree died at his home, R. 1, Holland, Va., June 8, 1936, at the age of 59 years. The funeral was conducted at Holy Neck church by the writer assisted by Rev. W. H. Corbett. The burial was in Holland Cemetery. Mr. Rountree leaves a widow, Mrs. Minnie Smith Rountree, five sons, Otha, of Suffolk, Dennie of Chicago, Jamie, Pressley and Charlie of Holland, four daughters, Mrs. Frank M. Brown of Atlanta, Ga., Leora Rountree of Suffolk and Gladys and Minnie Rountree of Holland, seven grandchildren, a step-mother, Mrs. Frederick Rountree of Gatesville, N. C., and several brothers and sisters.

N. G. NEWMAN.

STAINBACK.

We, the members of the J. O. Atkinson Woman's Missionary Society of the Liberty (Vance) Congregational-Christian Church, wish to pay a tribute of respect to one of our members, Mrs. Ludie Ayscue Stainback, who on December 19, 1935, was released from pain and suffering to enter "the house not made with hands eternal in the Heavens," prepared by the One she faithfully tried to serve since childhood.

Mrs. Stainback was a great sufferer for a long time, but her faith was ever triumphant.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That our heartfelt sympathies be extended to each member of the bereaved family.

2. That a copy of this tribute be sent to the family and to the Christian Sun and a copy be inscribed on the minutes of the Missionary Society.

Respectfully submitted,
MARGARET ALSTON,
MRS. G. W. MASON,
MRS. W. S. AYSUCUE,
Committee.

THE CHURCH MARCHES ON THROUGH PRAYER

PRAYER is still the Christian's vital breath. To live spiritually is to pray. To cease to pray is to lose contact with the spirit and die. In our needs we express our desires in prayer. We are invited to. In our anxiety we should be careful not to mistake our wants for our needs. There is a vital difference. The church was born in prayer. The Holy Spirit came after they had prayed. Prayer was the vital breath that withered disease and put evil spirits to flight. Through prayer prophets have banished evil, brought righteousness, and established the kingdom of God on earth. As a result of prayer, individuals have changed their minds. They have been caused to face about and to do things which they had determined never to do. Through prayer men and women of means have been caused to open their purses to meet the needs of the church and her institutions, to endow Christian colleges, and otherwise provide for their needs.

Present day conditions call for Divine intervention. Human ingenuity, however keen, is unable to cope with the situation. All things are possible with God. Has the church the faith, the courage, the disposition to lay her case before God in prayer? The present condition of our own church and her institutions constitutes a call to prayer. Will we heed the call? Will we confess our sins? Will we bring our needs to the Almighty in fervent prayer and wait upon Him until the answer comes?

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME LXXXVIII.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JULY 23, 1936.

NUMBER 30

DR. JAMES OSCAR ATKINSON

Our Retiring Editor

On July 1, 1936, Rev. James Oscar Atkinson, D. D. laid aside his facile editorial pen, and turned over his responsibilities for THE CHRISTIAN SUN to another. He is to continue as Secretary of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches, and as such will edit the Mission page of this paper.

For twenty-eight years, with an interval between twelve years ago, THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been the length and shadow of its Editor, James Oscar Atkinson. Multitudes have followed his writings with pleasure and profit, and will watch eagerly for words of wisdom from his eloquent pen.

As a minister, college professor, mission secretary, orator, editor, and Church leader, Dr. Atkinson has made his place secure in the hearts of Christian Church people far and wide, who will continue to wish for him health, happiness and success.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. Kerrison Juniper of Miami, will spend August with his family at Tryon, N. C., where he will serve as summer supply minister.

Rev. Joe French of our Ocean View and Berea (Norfolk) churches began his vacation Bible schools Monday of this week. This is a regular annual feature of his churches and one that he feels is quite profitable.

Plans are in the making for vacation schools at Elk Spur and Rocky Ford, our mission churches in Carroll County, Virginia. Misses Edna Fulcher and Margaret Butt of Norfolk will go to aid the pastor, Rev. O. A. Elmore during the week of August 2-9.

Miss Emily Carleton, secretary of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, spoke to the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship meeting at Bethlehem and to the Eastern North Carolina S. S. & C. E. Convention last week. She gave an interesting report on the Lakeside Youth Conference.

Holland and Holy Neck Christian churches (Virginia) have recently closed a united vacation church school in which fine work was done. Some of the things made in the school will be sent to mission hospitals in Mexico, which has been a project of the Junior Missionary Society of Holland this year.

Eastern North Carolina S. S. and C. E. Convention, meeting at Oak Level last week, was well attended, and more churches were represented than usual. The Youth Fellowship had charge of the evening program and did an excellent job of it under the direction of Miss Rosebud Kimball, president.

The Board of Christian Education, with offices at 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, is still sending out copies of the Bible and the New Testament to supply those who need them. These books are free for the asking. The Board is particularly anxious to give copies of the New Testament because more of these can be given than of the entire Bible since they cost less.

Mr. William H. Dudley of Brooklyn, New York, who is a Student Summer Service worker in First Christian Church, Norfolk (Virginia), began a vacation school in that church Monday of this week and will close the school with a commencement program on Friday of next week. Mr. Dudley seems to be enjoying his stay in the southland, and is making a fine contribution to the church he is serving.

The Georgia Young People's Summer School of Leadership Training is in session this week at Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia. They have the good wishes of other young people scattered throughout our country. These summer schools are becoming very important in the life of our churches and give to youth wonderful opportunities which the youth of an earlier generation did not have.

The Extension Boards in New York notified the Board of Christian Education at its annual meeting at Elon that four Student Summer Service workers will be available for the Carolinas and Virginia next summer. Those wishing to have these workers in their churches should plan long in advance and notify Rev. Joe French, Norfolk, Virginia, who is chairman of the Board of Christian Education.

Rev. William T. Scott has moved his family from Winston-Salem to Jacksonville where their address will be 2149 Ernest St. Mr. Scott's business address will be 117 W. Forsyth St. Mr. Scott has already been very busy in the new duties at Pastor-at-Large, visiting many of the churches in Georgia and also sharing in summer conferences at DeLeon Springs, Florida, and Elon College. He and Mrs. Scott attended the General Council at Mt. Holyoke.

The Baptist Church of Holland (Virginia) is cooperating with the Holland and Holy Neck Christian churches in an evangelistic campaign which is to be conducted in September. They have begun their work with a community survey, and then each church will have its own revival or evangelistic campaign. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, North Carolina, president of the Southern Convention, will be the guest speaker in the Holland Christian Church.

Rev. J. P. Jockinsen has begun his ministry at the church at St. Petersburg, Florida, where he has been cordially welcomed. Mr. Jockinsen held several pastorates in the middle west and then had a notable ministry at the Union Church at Manilla. The St. Petersburg Church is one of the outstanding institutions in our Southeastern Fellowship and it has had a series of notable ministers. The greetings and good wishes of our fellowship are extended to Mr. Jockinsen.

Rev. Harry H. Jones has accepted the call to the church at Palm City, Florida, the pulpit of which is made vacant by the resignation of Rev. James E. Parker after nine years of service in that church. Mr. Parker becomes pastor of the church at New Port Richey. Mr. Jones lives in Stewart, just across the river from Palm City. He was formerly pastor in Jupiter and in recent years has supplied the pulpit at Jensen, another community near Stewart. He is a member of the Palm City church and his acceptance as pastor of the church promises well for it.

Rev. J. Bernard Root has completed ten years of fine pastoral service with the church at Sanford, Florida. Mr. Root's special achievement has been the changing of a church of elderly people into a distinctly young people's church. He has recently sent to Jacksonville office a picture of a group of his young people around the big cypress tree near Sanford. This tree is probably the oldest and largest cypress tree in America and scientists estimate its age as probably three thousand years or over, but there is more life in the young people's group than in the hoary old tree. Mr. Root is to be heartily complimented on the success of his ten years of ministry to the Sanford Church, and especially upon his fine leadership with youth.

Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Bell, formerly missionaries in West Africa, have been rendering fine service in our Southeast area. They began with the Young People's Conference at DeLeon Springs, Florida, where Dr. Bell conducted courses in missions and lectured especially on Africa. He has also in a similar way, made a valuable contribution at the Elon Conference, the conference at Franklinton, and at present is sharing in the conference at Piedmont College. He has spoken in a number of churches in Florida and North Carolina. After completing the conference at Piedmont College, he and Mrs. Bell start for California where they hope to make their home, though Dr. Bell will continue to serve the churches and the mission board on speaking tours, especially during the year in which African missions will be the subject of study.

SOME STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE REPORTS.

The young people in Student Summer Service frequently report interesting experiences. Eben Chapman, a student at Union Seminary serving as summer pastor in a Florida town, reports interestingly concerning his parish visiting showing the variety of life and contact in this little community.

"My parish calling has been very interesting. It has included such people as this: a retired U. S. Army surgeon who has served from Philippines to Alaska, a tailor who makes clothes for Gene Sarazen the golf pro, a Swedish man who makes violins, a world traveler, the shoe repair man in town who learned his trade in my native city of Brockton, Mass., a manufacturer of orange blossom perfume, proprietor of a beer joint, a retired nurse, a Catholic woman from the Azores who just lost her husband, an Episcopal lady who broke her hip and is desperately poor, a retired Pennsylvania Railroad man, etc. This is a community of old people for the most part. Many live on pensions, returns on estates, stocks, etc. Some are here for their health, some who have broken down under the pressure of city life, many who have lost heavily in a financial way. Of course, about half the town moves out in summer, more so this year than ever. This tells heavily on the Community Church that relies so on winter residents. This community is rife with change—someone coming or going all the time."

* * *

Rev. Robert M. Kimball, a graduate of Elon College and a student at Yale Divinity School, is in Student Summer Service, serving as summer pastor of the church at Columbus, Georgia. Owing to the long illness of Mrs. Held and Mr. Held's need of an extra vacation a two months' leave of absence has been granted him. The Held family are at West Palm Beach, Florida, near Mr. Held's former parish at Jupiter. Mr. Kimball reports the work at the church going along well, a fine spirit of cooperation prevailing.

Guy S. Usher, Piedmont Graduate, and student at Vanderbilt School of Religion, reports an unusual spirit of interdenominational fellowship in Pomona, Florida, where he is in Student Summer Service.

"The cooperation with the Baptist Church is very nice here. The only church besides ours is Baptist. A number of our group participate in the work over there on Sunday evenings as we don't have any service in our church. They in turn are active in our Pilgrim Club on Thursday evenings. The Pilgrim Club is an organization something on the order of the Christian Endeavor, but it meets on Thursday instead of Sunday. This gives the members of both Baptist and Congregational churches a chance to attend both Sunday evening services and Thursday evening services. Our average attendance of the Pilgrim Club is forty-five."

FRANKLINTON SUMMER SCHOOL OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

More than three hundred young people, lay men and lay women, teachers and ministers attended the Leadership Training School held from July 6-10, inclusive, at Franklinton Christian College, Franklinton, N. C. Over fifty of these interested persons were regular attendants.

They came hungering and thirsting after spiritual food and drink. They came for Christian Fellowship. It was one grand and glorious week of sharing. The Spirit of the harmonious Christ guided both the black and white during this week of spiritual experience and guidance together.

It was the first time in the history of the colored people of this area that both Congregational and Christian churchmen adventured with Christ as one. Any close observer would be forced to say that the bonds of unity were decidedly strengthened.

This venture was a great success in many respects. It revealed to the participants the strength and progress possible in united action. It laid bare the glaring need for a common meeting ground such as Franklinton Christian College offers in its central and convenient location, the need for the training of ministers and leaders for our Negro churches in the Southeast, the vital part that both colored and white leaders and Boards must play in this venture, the interest and willingness of the colored people to do all that they can to provide training for themselves, the splendid manner in which great problems may be attacked and solved by cooperative action of the two races and the many opportunities for much growth of Franklinton as an institution of Leadership Training in the various angles and groups.

This week was one of the mountain-peak experiences of the writer's life. It will long be remembered. He is very grateful to colored and white friends who made it possible. Let us make this our prayer: May God's richest blessings be upon our work, our lives and our dreams for the future of Franklinton.

*Holland, Va.THE CHRISTIAN COUNCIL AND DR. CADMAN.

The office of the Universal Christian Council recently issued the following statement in connection with the death of its chairman, the late Dr. S. Parkes Cadman:

"From its earliest beginnings the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work was dear to the heart of Dr. Cadman, because he saw in this movement for Christian cooperation on a world-wide scale, in what approximates a world federation of non-Roman churches, one practical approach to the problem of a divided Christendom.

"Year after year always at his own expense, the Doctor went to the meetings of the Council and its executive body in Europe. He cultivated the acquaintance and won the confidence of the leaders of the churches in other lands. He interpreted the ideals and the achievements of ecumenical Christianity with eloquence and purposefulness. His pen as well as his voice was always at the service of this movement which owes an unpayable debt to him.

"Those who were privileged to be associated with him in its activities regard him with profound affection, and while they mourn his passing they cannot fail to sense the triumph of his faith over mortal death. With confident hope they will continue to work for that ideal which animated him and in loyalty to which he won world-wide respect. He went down like some giant monarch on the hill-tops, 'leaving a vacant place against the sky.' But his spirit lives on in the Church he loved, and from the unseen world we can believe that he watches with affection those who carry on in the same great calling to which he devoted his all: that is, the ministry of Christ to the whole human family."

Have you ever had your day suddenly turned sunshiny because of a cheerful word? Have you ever wondered if this could be the same world, because someone had been unexpectedly kind to you? You can make today the same for everybody. It is only a question of a little imagination, a little time and trouble. Think now "what can I do today to make somebody happy?"

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE LITTLE CHURCH.

Members of little churches sometimes get discouraged because their churches are small. They think that little can be done because the church is little. In a sense they are right, but in a larger sense they are wrong.

A church of a hundred cannot do as much as a church of a thousand, but it can do something that the larger one will likely miss. It cannot pay a large salary to the minister or give much for missions; but it can know the minister and all other members intimately and develop a friendship and fellowship that it is difficult to find in the larger group. Mutual understanding and helpfulness can enrich life for every member, and working together these people in the little church can do a work that will reach around the earth.

This writer comes from one of those little country churches. There were about 110 members then. There are 125 now. But out of that church have come seven ministers. The church has not grown greatly during the last quarter of a century, but it has given much to the world. Seven ministers tell the story of Christ as they learned it in that little church by the side of the road. The simple prayers of the country people, prayed when I was a boy, are being answered now. From the little country, village, or city churches today may go out a stream of life that will live through the years to come.

"Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom" were words spoken by Jesus as recorded in St. Luke 12:32. If God can be pleased to give to the little flock the kingdom, then the little churches should be satisfied to work with the Father in developing His kingdom here on earth. Our eagerness to get large numbers does not seem to have had a place in the thinking of Jesus. His ministry was sometimes with the multitude but more often with the few. He seemed to think that if the leaven of His love could be hid in the hearts of a few, it would work itself out in the lives of many. The important task for each of us is to see that the Christ's spirit finds a place in our own lives and in the lives of those near us. A little church with great spirited people can bless the world in a way that a big church with little spirited people can never do.

This hymn of praise for the little church is not intended as a criticism of those that are larger. There are great souls in big churches just as there are little people in little churches. Most of the churches in our fellowship are small in numbers, but they may be large in outlook, service and Christian fellowship. The type of person being developed is much more important than the size of the church.

THE FRIENDLY FARMER.

It is the aim of the editor of this paper to bring a message, as often as may be, suitable to the needs of those who may read. He is aware that most of our churches are rural, and is sincere in his desire to bring to those friendly farmers a message of hope, cheer, and inspiration.

Not all farmers are friendly, but most of them are, and all should be. Living as they do amidst the beauties of nature and working, as they must, in cooperation with God for the benefit of the world, it is only natural that they learn the laws of nature and develop a cooperative spirit. As a boy on the farm I discovered the importance of cooperating with God (nature) in cultivating crops. There was usually sufficient sunshine and showers, if I could discover what time to plant and to cultivate.

These friendly farmers who share with each other in some of their work, much of their play, and practically all of their religion need to read not only their Bible but their church paper and other religious literature. Into every family should go the church paper. It is the hope of the editor that those who read this item will bear a friendly message to neighbors across the way and will secure them as readers of this paper.

THE BUSY BUSINESS MAN.

In the struggle for life and prosperity the busy business man needs the friendship of his fellows. Fraternal organizations and civic clubs are witnesses to this great need on the part of those who struggle to get ahead in the business world.

Sometimes these business men forget that the Church is also an institution intended for their aid. The Church believes in mutual understanding and helpful service. Perhaps the Church has not always made its message clear, but the message is always there.

It is the hope of the editor that in some brief, but sincere way, this little paper may bring messages from time to time for those who are in the thick of the fight and share largely in the world's work. He may not succeed in fulfilling his desire, but if those who are classed among busy business men will give us some idea of what may be helpful to them the editor promises to do his best to meet their needs.

THE CONVENTION.

Oak Level Church, Franklin County, N. C. was the host on July 14 to the 42nd Annual Session of the Eastern N. C. Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention. Oak Level is one of our good, substantial, rural churches with a membership interested in all the enterprises of the church and Sunday School. The president of the Convention is Rev. S. E. Madren, Henderson, N. C., the Recording Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Newman, of the Liberty (Vance) Church; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. E. M. Carter, Youngsville, N. C., and the Treasurer, Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, Raleigh, N. C. Energetic efforts had been made beforehand through the president and other officers of Convention to bring to the Annual gathering, superintendents and delegates from every school and Society in the Convention. The results were in evidence during the day when it was discovered that a large per cent of superintendents and teachers were present for the day. President Madren's annual message to the Convention was practical, appealing, and instructive. He is seeking with commendable zeal to keep up the traditions of this Convention in bringing together once a year, representatives from all the schools and societies, and then give to all who come something of merit and profit to carry back with them. Brother C. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage was there to tell the Convention of the merits of this institution; Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College was there to tell the Convention of the merits and might of Elon College; and the Mission Secretary was there to tell the Convention what he "would do if he was a Sunday School Superintendent"; Rev. Carl H. Voss of our United Church, Raleigh, was there to emphasize "Evangelism Through the Sunday School," and Rev. E. M. Carter was there to show why Temperance should be taught in the Sunday school.

But there were others, not interested merely in one enterprise, or one institution, but profoundly interested in having better Sunday schools and also more and better Christian Endeavor Societies. To this end Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham showed the broad implication of missions, and what teaching missions means in the Sunday school, and how such teachings apply to every department of the school and how the school is profited thereby. Then a group of young people from the Christian Endeavor Society of Liberty (Vance), put on a "pageant of worship" to impress the entire Convention with the beauty, as well as the sanctity of worship. Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, too, attended and helped put on a program of "Youth Fellowship" and to talk to the Convention about teaching religions. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, President of the Southern Convention, came to tell all the representatives and visitors how to have a better Sunday school and to conduct a Round-Table for a general discussion for that important topic.

With all it was a day worthwhile and all who attended must certainly have learned something different and helpful, which they could and will carry to their school and Society.

WHEN THE CHURCH HAS PROSPERED.

Roger Babson, the statistician, says: "History shows that the Church has prospered when it has preached sacrifice as the basis of health, power and happiness.

"People," says he, "are not interested in church going, per se. They say that the Church has forgotten its fundamentals. People are now getting too little appreciable benefit from church-going. In my humble judgment the future church-going rests with making church people better, healthier, happier and wiser than those who do not regularly attend some church and support its missionary work. I believe that this was always true. People are just as hungry for spiritual help today as they ever were; but 2893 churches apparently need a change in officials, trustees or prudential committees. I am by no means sure that there has been a change for the worse in the motives, desires and emotions of laymen as a whole; but I do believe that the group that is running 46 per cent of our churches has forgotten for what the Church exists. In past years when church attendance was universal, the Congregational Church stood for spiritual life and personal sacrifice. This program inevitably results in progress. It fearlessly preached temperance and as a result the church families were the healthiest in the community; it bravely fought dancing, card-playing and gambling, which—whether you like it or not—caused the church people to have the respect of the community. The Church encouraged large families, which provided the raw material upon which it grew. Most of all, the Church emphasized the Word of God, Sunday observance, family prayers and the importance of the spiritual life.

"The Church must return to these fundamentals before church attendance, religious education, gifts to missions, social action and other activities will return to normal. Just asking people to attend and support a church as a 'duty' will not long bring results. Our Church must stand for more than transient matters. We must be a militant Church, and by emphasizing sacrifice, develop a more virile and stronger people. Therefore, I would like to see this whole problem approached in an entirely new way. We, at least, should stir up some of the dry bones among the laymen and get them thinking of life's fundamentals."

AUGUST 10-23, 1936.

Mention "Northfield" and there comes to the mind at once the New England Bible Conference, and the Moody's.

Mention "Massanetta" and immediately one thinks of Virginia—Harrisonburg—and Dr. Hudson, that genial man of God, who with the vision of a prophet saw the possibilities of a defunct summer hotel property nestled in the midst of a wilderness of loveliness. Here was a Land of Promise for the Christian Pilgrim. During the years since he has been leading members of every great denomination into new spiritual lands of corn and wine. They have found "the sons of Anak" there, but they have been friends instead of enemies—these giants of spiritual power, imparting to all who came to them, new visions of truth, and new pathways of service.

"Massanetta" each year provides a varied program, from June through the month of August. Already the Christian Endeavor Union of Virginia has been there; six hundred and forty-eight Intermediates have constituted perhaps the largest meeting of its kind ever held in America, at least in the South; the Young People of both the Presbyterian, and the Methodist Churches have come again and gone away filled, the mountains still ring with their calls. The Lutherans this week are holding their Church Workers Conference, giving fresh emphasis to great traditions; and the Baptist Assembly will close July with a great challenge to their membership. Last week the School of Sacred Music, under the direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson, brought to Massanetta more than a hundred Ministers of Music from five States, and coincident with its close was the Elders and Deacons Conference, sounding the clarion call to adult leadership throughout the country for many miles. Thousands have already attended this year's sessions, gone away refreshed, and there have been set in motion new plans for months to come, and in turn to touch at least a million lives.

Following the Baptist Assembly, July 27—August 2, the Presbyterian Woman's Auxiliary Training School will convene for one week, August 3-10. A glance over the list of speakers and teachers will prove an attraction to many. They are Dr. Walter L. Lingle, President of Davidson College, and broad observer of world events, and a wise interpreter of the Christian program of life and service; Dr. Donald Richardson of Union Sem-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Antioch, Isle of Wight, Mt. Carmel and Windsor churches recently appointed a joint committee on forming a pastorate. The committee met in Windsor last week and voted to recommend to the churches that such a pastorate be formed at the close of the present conference year. Three ministers—Revs. Elisha Bradshaw, C. E. Gerringer and Dr. N. G. Newman—are serving in this field at this time. These churches are near Windsor, and one man can cover the field easily from that point. This is a step in the right direction. The minister needs to be in constant touch with the people of his field, and the people want the counsel and advice of their pastor.

In former days when the principal work of the country pastor was to preach sermons on Sunday, conduct funerals and officiate at marriages, it was comparatively easy to serve a large scattered parish. But conditions have changed. The minister who faces the task of serving a country pastorate today must be alert and progressive. The improvement of the public school has raised the educational standards. Better schools mean better churches. The young people find efficiency in the class room and they have a right to find the same in the pulpit. If the churches and ministers fail to meet these expectations the people are disappointed and the churches lose a great opportunity.

To meet this situation ministers and churches must unite in hearty cooperation. The minister cannot meet the challenge single-handed. The churches cannot render their best service without united effort. In a denomination such as ours—the Congregational-Christian—every church has the privilege of calling its own pastor. Four churches—such as those mentioned above—might find it difficult to agree upon the type of pastor they desire. Churches develop a certain type of composite personality. Some churches want their pastor to be very conservative, dignified, with a show of scholarship. They want spiritual formality. Other churches prefer the sensational type. They swing away from the dignified, formal type. Now when churches insist upon a certain type of minister, as pastor, it is difficult to bring them into a group pastorate, unless they are assured that they will secure their type of pastor,

Pastors and churches may suffer from what is commonly called the "big-head." A minister may have a "superiority complex," and a church may have a "complex superiority." It is not unusual to find a church that brings out the idea that only a few ministers are capable of being its pastor. Ministers find it difficult, in some cases, to select a man who is qualified to supply their pulpit for a series of services. As a matter of fact the rank and file of the people in all churches strike about the same level inability and spiritual insight. And ministers may be regarded in the same way. Some have more ability than others. But where natural ability and consecration meet at the altar of spiritual devotion, ministers are on the same level. Five hundred people in a country church and the same number in a city church might be transferred each to the other without serious loss or great gain on either side. The place where people live and worship does not have as much importance as narrow-minded prejudice and false pride would indicate.

This writer believes in grouping country churches into reasonable pastorates. The minister should do his part, and the churches should do likewise. Ministers should have an adequate salary. No group of churches should expect to secure a capable pastor for less than $1,500.00 a year. One may be secured for less than that amount, but he cannot render his best service, take care of a family and meet the demands of this day, on a smaller amount unless he has other sources of income. As a rule ministers depend upon their salary for their support. Let other churches follow the example of the Isle of Wight churches and form a pastorate where needed.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is composed of five different conferences. These conferences are separate units and conduct their own affairs. Our plan of organization calls for an annual meeting of each conference constituting the Convention. At these annual meetings reports are received, recommendations are made, inspirational and instructional addresses are given. The general interest of the local church is considered in different ways. At these annual gatherings claims of the various departments of the church, such as education, missions, superannuation, Christian education, et cetera, are presented, usually by officials connected with the department. In these conferences the Sunday Schools of the local churches are grouped together. Representatives of these local schools meet together in annual gatherings. Such gatherings are called Sunday School Conventions.

Christian Endeavor Societies, as a rule, are likewise included in these gatherings representing all ages of the church and community. A few years ago our Sunday School Conventions were the largest gatherings within the conference. They held two and three-day sessions with varied and inclusive programs. Interest in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention seems to have waned. Whether this is indicative of the loss of interest in the local Sunday School is a question. As one interested in the efficiency and progress of the church comes from one of these one-day sessions of our Sunday School Convention he is beset within himself with many questions. As a rule the program consists of devotional services, an address in the interest of the different departments of the church such as benevolences, the orphanage, missions, and education. In recent years youth fellowship has come in for its share of the time in these one-day sessions of our conventions.

As you observe the printed programs for our convention you are made to wonder really what these one-day sessions have to do with our Sunday Schools. Occasionally there is an effort to face the problems of the Sunday School in different groups which is fine and is to be most heartily commended. Certainly we do have problems in our local Sunday Schools, problems that should be faced by the leadership of the church and faced seriously. Unless I am wrongly informed our Sunday Schools are at a pretty low ebb, at a low ebb in attendance, in efficiency, and in interest.

According to records and experience the Sunday School has not only been the teaching arm of the church but has been its principal source for recruits in membership and effective service. If the losses are recorded in the Sunday School, the church may not reflect these losses immediately, but in the future it is bound to lose in proportion to the losses in the Sunday School. A check on attendance in our Sunday School would in all probability reveal serious tendencies,

It seems to me that it is high time that somewhere and in some way we should face constructively the present conditions of the Sunday Schools of our various conferences. The ones that are efficient and aggressive should be commended and used as examples to others. Some step should be taken to increase attendance in our Sunday Schools in our local church. This can be done and would have its effect on other phases of the work.

The average Sunday School has difficulty in securing proper officials and efficient teachers in sufficient numbers. The teacher problem is always with us. From experience and personal observation I should say that the annual Sunday School Convention of our several conferences is the proper time to face these other problems connected with our educational work through our Sunday Schools. It is a fine thing to have the various causes and claims of our church presented but a much better thing to have the needs of our Sunday School discussed in an effort to find the remedy.

Would a program somewhat as follows be practical for our Sunday School Conventions?

1. Devotions.
2. An address dealing with Sunday School problems in general.
3. Materials, including all departments.
4. What departments should be included in our large or city Sunday Schools, and in our small or rural church Sunday Schools?
5. Qualifications of a good superintendent.
6. A separate study of the problems of the various departments of the Sunday School with efficient group leaders for each department, separate meetings.
7. How to increase the enrollment of our Sunday Schools in city and in country churches.

Personally, I am convinced that in our Sunday School Conventions we should face Sunday School problems and exert every possible effort to encourage our Sunday Schools and to point the way to efficiency and increased interest in different departments of our work. I have my serious doubts as to the real value of a one-day session, scheduled to begin at ten o'clock, but in reality beginning from ten-thirty to eleven, time out for lunch, and adjourned at four. During this time reports are received, place for next meeting determined, et cetera. For efficiency, effectiveness, and real value, I say a two-day session of our conventions and a frank facing up of the problems that are ours with an earnest and determined effort to find adequate solutions to our problems that our local schools may be more efficient and more effective is desirable. It is of far more value to the church as a whole to see our Sunday Schools increased than to be constantly looking to them for assistance. I cast my vote for a real Sunday School program in our Sunday School Conventions. L. E. SMITH.

OUR SHADOW SELVES.

"I have a little shadow which goes in and out with me." So sang Stevenson, and most of us have enjoyed that childhood rhyme. But our shadows do more than go in and out with us. They touch the lives of others in strange ways. An unknown writer has said:

This learned I from the shadow of a tree;
That to and fro did sway against the wall
Our influence, our shadow selves may fall
Where we shall never be.

"I do like Mrs. Brown; you can always depend upon her to do exactly as she says." "Yes, and the thing she says she will do, and does, is always the kindly thing," was the reply. The words fell on the ears of a little child who did not know Mrs. Brown, who, perhaps, never saw her; but she had born in her heart that day the ideal of the kind of woman whom people love and trust, an ideal which was never to leave her.

John came late to work. His employer, Mr. Watson, anxious to get off to town, spoke sharply over the delay. John answered with asperity, and a quick interchange of words followed. Mr. Watson drove away, aggravated, and late for his appointment. When he finally arrived he was still irritable. He refused outright a business offer which otherwise he might at least have considered. The man refused, irritated in turn, and having the door of opportunity shut in his face, refused shortly even to listen to a man who came to him that afternoon for help. But that man was at the end of his rope. Ordinarily this friend to whom he turned had influence with him. Lacking the optimism which might have been born from even a talk, discouraged by the shut door, he went home and shot himself. The next day's paper carried an account of a suicide. John read it. "A fellow is foolish to do such a thing," he said. He never faintly connected it with his own late rising, and consequent lateness for work. He would have hotly denied responsibility for the death of this total stranger.

Influence, our shadow selves. In these hot, terribly hot, days of summer, how glad we have been for a bit of shade; how gratefully we have spied a tree as we walked or even drove along the road. Yes, even passing an auto at forty or fifty miles an hour we are conscious of a grateful shade even though its influence lasts but a second of time. And there are people who affect us in the same way. Their very presence changes life for us. We are better, stronger, wiser, because we have spent an hour with them. We might not be able to tell one thing that was said, one act committed, but we go away refreshed, strengthened, and more able to take up the burden of life, more willing to pass on a kindness, to speak the word of friendship.

"A man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as streams of water in a dry place, as the shade of a great rock in a weary land." So spoke a seer of God thousands of years ago. But thank God, men—and women—like that are still with us.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

FIVE FALLACIES CONCERNING MISSIONS PROBED.

By D. BREWER EDDY.

Fallacy First: That War threats and world unrest make Missions untimely.

Of course the exact opposite is true. Missions train national leaders who help mould the policies of their countries toward a cooperative world. The missionary motive directly opposes selfish Nationalism. It would spread the spirit of mutual service across the face of the world.

War in Africa and its near approach in Europe and the Far East add immeasurably to the need of a strong missionary advance.

Fallacy Second: That America's "depression" and "isolation" policy justifies the alibi "No dollar abroad until we are out of the woods at home."

Again, the exact opposite is true. A return to missionary courage and purpose in our churches would help save our country from defaulting its world leadership. "Isolation" increases the narrow and excessive Nationalism that has destroyed world trade and undermined the spirit of cooperation. The Law of Love and the teachings of Jesus stand squarely opposed to political self-interest and the spirit of Nationalism. Unless the missionary conception of sharing achieves new victories, America and the world face nothing but strife and class division.

Fallacy Third: That in some way the recent Laymen's Report exploded the missionary idea with basic criticism of methods and policies.

The Laymen's Report, or Re-Thinking Missions, did no such thing. It claims that Missions are as basic as the spirit of goodwill at the heart of humanity. It explicitly commends policies which are vital to most of the missionaries under the American Board. It selected some illustrations from our work to prove what types are most needed. The work of our missionaries is particularly free from the taint of the excessive doctrinal and denominational emphasis which this Report criticizes. Our groups stand ready to unite with all Christian believers where increased efficiency can be gained. Some years more than half our new missionaries have come from other denominations.

Fallacy Fourth: That missionary gifts drain church budgets of needed money.

Our church gifts to the foreign work under the American Board today are less than one-half of one cent per week for each member of the denomination. Yet this tiny sum purchases for us the continuing vision of a Christ who will yet win the world to His Way if He is adequately and fairly presented to meet world needs. Missions dropped from church budgets produce a feeling and attitude of disobedience and disloyalty to Christ. Missions never subtract dollars available for local church budgets, but rather increase the spirit of stewardship and maintain the ideals and the very life-energy of our churches for their own needs as well.

Fallacy Fifth: That the results of the Board's work are meager and its benefits unappreciated.

The results in the last fifty years have become significant, even in cold figures, with 85,000 pupils in our schools; with more than 641,000 treatments a year in our seventy hospitals, with 104,000 members in our churches, which like 178 Kumai churches in Japan, are entirely self-supporting. Our missionaries, numbering one-tenth of our home pastorate, have seen these churches abroad grow to at least one-fifth the number of those at home. Even in depression years these actual figures have risen while gifts have been cut in half. Payments and gifts from our constituency abroad are now fifty per cent greater than from home churches. Results heap up in cumulative progression.—In Missionary Herald.

"Whatever would I have done had I not heard the truths that I did hear while in this school!" The speaker was an "old girl" of Matsuyama Girls High School, Japan, who had lost her daughter several years back. She was attending the memorial service of another girl who had died. To Miss Olive S. Hoyt, principal, she continued: "It was the truth of Christianity that made it possible for me to bear patiently the grief I felt over the death of my daughter." These frequent testimonials are what make the workers at Matsuyama feel the school is worth any sacrifice if it may continue to bring similar hope and comfort to the Japanese in the future.

FRUITS THAT FOLLOW THEM.

By CHAS. A. LEONARD, Sr.

There was a mingling of joy and sadness as we walked out of a store-room, where seven had been baptized, into the little preaching hall, there had lived a faithful servant of the Lord just shot along with the outlaws who were holding him for ransom. There were his clothes, hanging as he had left them, also Bibles and scripture portions, the former for teaching and the latter for sale. No meetings had been held there since the colporter was taken, never to return, except in spirit. But the enquirers whom he had led to the Lord met in the living quarters of a merchant nearby.

These were the first believers baptized in that region. How far-reaching are these small beginnings! Two interested Russian Christian families living at the Lishuchen coal mines welcomed us on our very first visit, when, while distributing tracts among Chinese and Russians, we came across them. They, with some Chinese, responded to the suggestion that money be raised for a gospel hall. The Russians hoped to secure an evangelist to come there for other Russians, but were unable financially to do so; and we had no funds for this. Bandit raids, other disturbances and the financial depression resulted in the Russians moving away, one family joining other Russian Christians in far-away Brazil. But work with the Chinese has gone on in spite of many difficulties. Since our visit the former preaching place has now been sold and a better one secured. An evangelist is being sent there and the work put on a solid foundation.

These seven baptized believers will grow into a larger group and later a church will be organized. So the work grows here in this new part of the world. God's Word does not return void. The devil seeks to destroy, but the work goes on. Blessed are they who die in the Lord, and their words follow them. Others will carry on the torch of old Bro. Tsung, kidnapped and later shot, but still alive in the works that follow him.

If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost; that is where they should be. Now put the foundations under them.

—Henry David Thoreau.

Art thou little? Do thy little well;
And for thy comfort know
Great men can do their greatest work
No better than just so.

"MASSANETTA."

inary of Virginia, and keen student of world conditions on the mission field; Dr. Ernest Thompson of the same institution, whose writings are so universally read by hundreds; Rev. Wallace McP. Alston, new Secretary of the Southern Presbyterian Young People, whose years of study and nearness to the heart beats of youth have prepared him for a rich service; Miss Janie W. McGaughey, the head of the Woman's Work of the Presbyterian Church in the South, perhaps knowing more of the best methods of work among Christian women than any other woman in the Church; Mrs. E. L. Russell, of Mobile, down in Dixie, a "Little General" who commands and the Book lives; with Mrs. C. D. Hawpe, beloved leader of Woman's Work of Old Virginia; and others equally well qualified to make the program for the coming years the best in the history of the Presbyterian Church.

The First Week of the Bible Conference will be August 10-16. If every preacher had an airplane, well it is safe to say, the folks around Harrisonburg would experience the sight the folks in Kansas experienced during the descent of the locust many years ago. It is said the sky was so full of them that the sun was darkened. A preacher knows where to go to get fresh grist for his mill. "Massanetta" has it. The School for Pastors presents the very atmosphere for the busy preacher to clarify his thinking.

Here is Dr. Albert Beaven of Colgate-Rochester Seminary. There are men peculiarly gifted to present some ideas in a simple way: Dr. Beaven has that gift. Having served in large capacities in his own denomination, the Northern Baptist, and in the Federal Council of Churches, he has a sympathy and an understanding which is helpful to every soul sitting at his feet.

The First Week presents Dr. Crossley Morgan, who will open to us the Scriptures. Dr. Morgan is to the manor born. He got the spirit of Bible interpretation as he lived with his illustrious father, Dr. Campbell Morgan. He is pre-eminently a teacher. To hear him take the Old Testament characters, and their great prophecies, is to walk into yesterday and feel at home. And then to go home and make one's people familiar with them.

"Chickens come home to roost," is an old and true saying. One of our own young men, known and loved in the Synod of Virginia, is "Charlie" King. Dr. King is now the shepherd of a great fold in Houston, Texas. For years he ministered to the Grace-Covenant Church of Richmond—his first love. What the years have brought him in the depths of his own heart and mind will be echoed in the First Week's Program.

Echoes of church life in Atlanta bring the voice of a new prophet, one Peter Marshall. It seems that this young Scotchman hid himself in an unknown Home Mission field, but his light could not be kept hidden. The desert place was God's plan for the city pulpit. Pulpit Committees from Dan to Beersheba have been dropping into the Westminster Church of Atlanta, and then asking the preacher to have dinner with them. But to no avail. The Lord has not called him from his present great work. Except to Massanetta, and here he will be heard with pleasure.

Dr. D. W. Kurtz, President of the Bethany Biblical Seminary of Chicago, combines in one man many talents. He is not just a man devoted to the training of preachers, but he can show his students how preaching is done. Wide travel adds variety to his addresses; and years of study has enriched his mind and soul. He will especially be welcomed by his own people on "Church of the Brethren Day."

And as a least great drawing card to the First Week's Bible Conference is the name of Dr. Robert E. Speer, that household word for Christian leadership. Well do we remember the first time we heard him back in 1912 at Chattanooga. Then he was a comparatively young man. Today he is planning to retire from such active work as the past years have demanded but his ripened scholarship and broad contacts have made him more sought than ever. Those hearing him last winter at Union Seminary will want to sit in his audiences again. What would the Christian church do without the sanity of his outlook, and the soundness of his faith?

"Massanetta" modern "Mountain" on which He goeth up, and opening His mouth He teaches men."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS.

Quite a number of our southern churches this year are holding vacation Bible schools, or vacation church schools as they are now being called. In these two weeks of work it is possible for the church to make an indelible impression on the lives of our boys and girls who attend. There is always an opportunity for study, worship, and play, the making of things that can be given to others, and the personal development of those who share in the schools. Bible stories are told and retold, studied and dramatized until they become part of the life of the individuals. These vacation schools give the church a chance to teach the Bible, and the church should certainly make good on its opportunity. There are many other things that can enter into the program, but the Bible and its teachings certainly should be central.

The Board of Christian Education has been able to aid quite a number of churches with materials for their program, and will be glad to aid any others who need help.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship met in its tenth annual session last Tuesday at Bethlehem Christian Church. Fifteen churches were represented by 109 people. Miss Mary Savage welcomed the group.

"Let Youth Be Heard" was the theme. Miss Mary Snead led the opening worship service. "Christ's Call to Youth." Mrs. Robert Lee House spoke briefly on "Why I Go to Church," and Miss Virgie Whitfield on "Why I Do Not Go to Church," Rev. F. C. Lester leading the general discussion. News from the Lakeside Conference was brought by Miss Emily Carleton of Winter Park, Florida. The key-workers were given an opportunity to tell the best thing their young people had done during the year.

The afternoon worship, "Answering the Call," was led by the Franklin young people. Miss Dorothy Edwards and Mr. Herbert Council, Jr., spoke on "What Is Wrong With the Young People's Work in Eastern Virginia," and Miss Mary Rawles Jones and Miss Roberta Wright spoke on "How We Can Improve the Young People's Work in Eastern Virginia."

Rev. Carl R. Key was the leader of the general discussion which followed.

Dr. I. W. Johnson installed the following officers to serve the ensuing year:

President, W. B. Williams, Newport News; First V. President, Chas. Heath, Hampton; Second V. President, Miss Mary Savage, Suffolk; Sec., Miss Theodocia Beacham, Holland; Asst. Sec., Miss Mary Snead, Norfolk; Treasurer, Miss Margaret Byrd, Suffolk; Supt. Devotional Life, Mrs. Robert Lee House, Newport News; Supt. Service, Miss Alice Yates, Suffolk; Supt. Leadership Training, Miss Lottie Mae Cross, Suffolk; Supt. Moral Standards, Allen Piland, Holland; Reporter and Supt. Publications, Miss Roberta Wright, Waverly.

Pastor-Counselors: Revs. J. G. Truitt and F. C. Lester; Lay Counselor: Mrs. Carl R. Key, Holland.

The closing period was led by Dr. J. G. Truitt.

(The goals which were adopted will be published on this page later.)

WHAT SERVICES SHOULD STATE AND COMMUNITY RENDER?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
AUGUST 2, 1936.

Scripture: Rom. 13:1-8
(Consecration Meeting.)

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Protected from a mob. Acts 21:20-40.

Tues.—The fate of evil-doers. Ps. 37:1-9.

Wed.—Crime does not pay. Gen. 4:1-15.

Thurs.—Religion protected. Zech. 2:10-13.

Fri.—Good councilmen and bad. Prov. 11:11.

Sat.—Upholding justice. Prov. 11:1.

Instrumental Prelude.

Call to worship: Leader:

"Righteousness exalteth a nation.

Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; and the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance.

O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon the earth.

Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee."

Hymn: "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Prayer: That each individual will dedicate his life to the building of a new community, new state, and new nation; that in the end the building of a new world will no longer be a vision, but a reality.

Hymn: "America the Beautiful"

Announcement of Topic—Scripture.

Leader: Last Sunday we discussed the good and bad in our communities. In the discussion of the topic today we want to talk about the services the state and community should render its citizens. Only as the state and community care for its people and is concerned with their interests does it build good citizens, upon who, after all, rests the destiny of our great nation

(The leader should begin preparing for this meeting early. Appoint members to do some research work along lines similar to those listed below and report at this meeting. Discuss these reports, and make suggestions as to how these services could be improved.)

Reports and discussion on the following topics:

1. Services my state and community render in the educational field.
2. Services of protection rendered by my community and state.
3. The services rendered through our public health department.
4. Services our state renders to the aged, orphans, poor, deaf, blind, mentally unbalanced, etc.
5. The correctional institutions of our state—jails, prisons, reformatories.
6. Some other services our state and community should render.

Sentence Prayers—Thanking God for the opportunities that come to us to prove we are good citizens. Asking Him to bless us in our humble service to our community and state.

Leader: We know that the standards and ideals of a community or state cannot rise any higher than the citizens who are a part of it. In all our undertakings let us seek to make practical the principles and teachings of Jesus.

"He serves his country best

Who lives pure life and doeth righteous deed,

And walks straight paths however others stray,

And leaves his sons, as uttermost bequest,

A stainless record which all men may read;

This is the better way.

CHRISTIANITY SPREAD BY PERSECUTION.

LESSON IV.—JULY 26, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Revelation 2:10.

LESSON: Acts 7:54-8:4; 11:19-21; 26:9-11; I Peter 4:12-19. Printed text: Acts 7:59-8:4; I Peter 4:12-19.

The futile attempt to put down truth by force goes a long way back, long before the Christian era. The classic example, of course, is the crucifixion of Jesus. And the stoning of Stephen is another example. For "when they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake" they stoned him to death. It was the method used by Rome in its effort to kill the early Church. It is the method of Hitler today. Humanity has not yet learned the lesson that "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again," that force cannot prevail against Truth.

The First Martyr.

Stephen was the first Christian martyr. The word martyr comes from a Greek word meaning witness. A martyr is one who witnesses even at the risk of his life. Stephen had borne witness to his faith in Christ. He had courageously convicted the council of putting Jesus to death. He had insisted that religion was primarily a matter of spirit. He accused his self-appointed judges of breaking the laws of God. It was too much. And when finally he added insult to injury by saying that he saw the heavens opened and the glory of God and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, they felt that they must put this blasphemer out of the way. They drew him out of the city—they wanted to be ceremonially correct although they were committing murder—and stoned him.

There is a striking analogy between the death of Stephen and the death of Jesus. Stephen said, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit"—he had quiet confidence in God, he thought of death as going to be with the Father, he committed himself unto the Father's care, quite sure that God was able to keep that which he had committed unto him against that day. Happy is the man who, as death approaches, thinks of it as going to be with the Father, and in serenity of spirit and peace of mind commits himself in the Great Adventure to a loving and powerful Heavenly Father.

"Lord lay not this sin to their charge"—how much that sounds like Jesus'. "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." Stephen had the Master's spirit, the willingness to forgive them that wronged him, to pray for them that spitefully used him. It takes a big-hearted man to forgive his enemies. Stephen met the acid test of Christian living.

"He feel asleep" to wake with Jesus in newness of life. Death is not the end of life. Death is the doorway into more abundant, abiding life for those who die in Christ.

A Zealous Persecutor.

"And the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet whose name was Saul." "And Saul was consenting unto his death." There is a world of meaning to be read between these lines. That young man Saul could not get away from that picture of Stephen calmly, serenely, sweetly facing death, even praying for his enemies. It made an indelible impression on his mind. Some years later when recounting the story of his conversion, he said, "And when the blood of thy martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by and consenting unto his death." One never knows how much influence he exerts when in the right spirit he bears witness for the Lord Jesus Christ.

This fellow Saul did not do things in any half-hearted way. Stephen's death seemed to have lighted the fire of persecution, and Saul was the ring-leader in that persecution. He went from house to house and dragged out Christians and had them put into prison.

When he thought he had wiped out the movement in Jerusalem, he went to other places, even to far-off Damascus. "He laid waste the church" as Luke says.

One has to admire his zeal and his enthusiasm, even though one questions his judgment. But God was going to find a place for that zeal when it was devoted to right ends. What we often call meanness or badness is simply misdirected energy.

Growth Through Persecution.

There was one large fire in Jerusalem. When the members of the Jerusalem Church were scattered abroad they started fires everywhere they went and there were a hundred fires where before there was but one. The disciples started a fire because they were on fire. We cannot kindle a fire in the lives of others unless we have a fire in our own hearts. There is an unrecorded word that comes from the New Testament times credited to Jesus to the effect that "he who is near Me is near to the fire." Our coldness is due to the fact that we are not living close to Jesus.

The Church grew through persecution and hardship and affliction. It developed resiliency and strength. It is dangerous for the church to be at ease. The church is most alive and alert when under pressure.

Christians Taking It.

That is slang but that is exactly what Peter was writing about. The Church had been persecuted, was being persecuted, and Peter wrote to the scattered Christians urging them to be worthy Christians. There was danger lest the Christians might think that because they had accepted the Christ, they would be spared the fiery trial, or that they might think that they had invoked God's displeasure. Peter reminds them that they are partakers of Christ's sufferings, and that God's glory and God's spirit rested upon them.

They were not to suffer as wrongdoers—they should see to it that their manner of life was above reproach, lest they bring reproach upon the name of Christ. But if they suffered as a Christian, if they suffered because they were living up to their Christian convictions, there was nothing to be ashamed of. Indeed let him rejoice that he could thus glorify God. Whom God loveth he chasteneth. It was necessary that God should burn out the dross. But if they suffered as the will of God directed, let them commit themselves unto a faithful Creator. God would vindicate them and give them the victory.

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"JEREMIAH'S FIELD OF FAITH."

"But my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth."—Jer. 32:1-15.

The enemy were spread all around Jerusalem. Jeremiah's ancestral field was in the hands of Nebuchadnezzar. The most powerful empire on earth had it in full control. Yet the prophet had enough faith in God's promise to buy the field and await God's time to get it.

How many Anathoths lie round about our Jerusalem! What foes possess them, seemingly impossible to dislodge! Are we ever to regain our health? Shall we ever become rich and at ease? Will men ever recognize our worth? May we ever enter into the strength and wisdom and love for which we long? Are not our Anathoths hopelessly inaccessible?

Not to the heart of faith! We believe God's promise, and we have already what we believe. Our spirit leaps over the intervening time, be it long or short, and we tread Anathoth already, the Babylonians all vanished from our land. Such is the sure power of faith in the Christian life.

Prayer—Poor in gold, O Christ, yet we pour out what we have in payment for Anathoth. Thou wilt accept it, we know, in full valuation. And Thou wilt hold Anathoth securely for us, awaiting Thine own best time.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"LANDMARKS."

"Thou shalt not remove thy neighbor's landmark."—Deut. 19:14-21.

Landmarks stand for honesty. Landmarks mean independence. Landmarks signify ownership and security. Landmarks look to the past and bind it to the future. Landmarks are precious things, and whoever disturbs them is a robber.

There is the landmark of my fathers' faith. It has staked out for me a blessed inheritance in the Land of Promise. There is the landmark of my father's achievements, the nations they have built up for me, the civilization they have accomplished. Best of all, there is the landmark of the salvation wrought out for me by my Saviour so many years ago, grown ever more valuable and to be ever more cherished through the ages of eternity.

What miscreant shall rob me of these? What crafty neighbor shall come in the night, with mattock and pick, and dig up my landmarks and narrow my boundaries? I will ever be on my guard. I will watch over my ancestral estate. I will allow no one to cheat me of it.

Prayer—Least of all, my Father, will I cheat me of it myself. Least of all will I cravenly contract the fields Thou hast given me. Confirm, I pray Thee, my possession of them forever, through Christ.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"NEHEMIAH'S PETITION."

"Then the king said unto me, for what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of Heaven."—Neh. 2:1-8.

Nehemiah's first thought, when he would ask permission to return to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, was not of the mighty king of earth before whom he stood, but of the omnipotent King of heaven. Thus all his great work was referred first to Jehovah, and so it prospered greatly.

Among all the splendid characters of the Bible, few knew so well as Nehemiah how to get things done. He lived consciously and always in the presence of the Infinite, and for that reason his work in this finite world was well performed.

For God is the Supreme Worker. Our petitions must go first to Him, our plans be laid first before Him, and He must be the guide through all our activities.

Prayer—Give us good success, O God. Give us Thyself, O God. For Christ's sake.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"TRIMMED WICKS."

"Ye are the light of the world."—Mat. 5:13-16.

Christ is the Light of the world! Christians are the light of the world! There is no contradiction in this, but a blessed harmony, for our light is His light, springing from Him alone, day after day and night after night.

It is as in a lamp. Who could say whether the light is of the oil or of the wick? Without either, the lamp would be dark. The oil burns and gives the light, but only as the wick burns and draws the oil upward and throws the light outward.

So let no Christian think to shine with his own illumination. So let every Christian take heed to keep the wick of his Christianity trimmed and burning. Christ has no other way to reach the world except through us faulty, weak human souls.

Prayer—Aid us in our lamp-tending, O Light of the ages, blessed Redeemer from all evil, Dispeller of all darkness! May we make the care of our lamps our first and constant obligation. In Thy name.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"WHOLE IN HIM."

"In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth . . . even in him doth this man stand here before you whole."—Acts 4:1-12.

Peter and John had no doubt of the origin of the cripple's cure. They had seen too many lame men made whole by Christ to fail to recognize His handiwork. He had passed into the heavens, but His power remained on the earth. His spirit, as ever, was manifesting itself in cures, in wholeness, in health.

And to this very day, if we lack wholeness, it is because we lack Jesus Christ. He can supply what is missing in our lives, whether it be happiness or purity or strength or wisdom or peace. All half-men, all partial living, is filled out in Him.

We shall not seek wholeness elsewhere. Philosophy cannot repair us, our will-power cannot restore us, the love of our earthly friends will comfort but not avail. We are to seek our health, our wholth, only in our Saviour.

Prayer—Thou only Physician, we bring Thee our lame and crippled lives, and we leave Thee walking, and leaping, and praising God.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"THE TRANSMUTATION OF FAITH."

"Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness."—Gal. 3:1-9.

Stranger than any of the changes in the material realm, as dull clay into the flashing ruby or black coal into the flashing diamond, is the spiritual transmutation of faith into righteousness. How can belief, an affair of mind and soul, become good deeds, an affair of hands and feet, of spoken words and loving acts?

It would seem impossible, yet we see the miracle performed daily all around us, and, if we are wise, we may witness it constantly in our own lives.

For outside of our belief in the loving Father and His self-denying Son it is impossible for us to live uprightly and lovingly ourselves. But as that belief grows vital and permeates our

HIS MATCHLESS LOVE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

"How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"—Heb. 2:3.

These two texts throw into bold relief what God has done, and suggest what we must do. They tell us that God's matchless love has made ample provision for all, and suggest to us that we should not neglect that provision. God's love is so great that none need despair, our duty is so plain that none may presume. "Who-soever will" may have life eternal, but "how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" His giving and our receiving, his loving and our believing, must go hand in hand before we feel the fullness of his love, or know the joy of fellowship with him.

God's love is a theme so broad we are mentally staggered as we stand before it. It is as impossible for us to take it in as it is to sip the salt water from the caverns of the sea. Its magnitude is incomprehensible.

"For the love of God is broader

Than the measure of man's mind,

And the heart of the Eternal

Is most wonderfully kind."

We begin to sense it in the shepherd psalm. When we are told the Lord is my shepherd, and assured that we shall not want. It begins, I say, to dawn upon us. More and more we see its glory tended for the slaughter, but the shepherd of the psalm assures the sheep of eternal life by walking with them through the valley of the shadow of death. No harm shall come to them, and they shall live in the house of the shepherd forever! Goodness and mercy shall follow them everywhere, and for all time, and they shall never lack. An everlasting, and infinite love is expressed there that cannot be fathomed.

But the teachings of Jesus have carried us far beyond sheep, as noble as the picture is in this, the world's most beautiful psalm, for we learn from him that God is more than the owner and keeper of the sheep, He is a Father. He exclaims how much a man is better than a sheep,—and especially, we may add, when the man is one's own son! David had not the insight to go as far as Jesus. His idea of God's loving care is sublime. But Jesus plumbed the infinite depths when He taught His disciples to say when they pray, "Our Father." And when He said after His resurrection to Mary: "Go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God and your God." God as a shepherd is beautiful,—so beautiful that Jesus himself carried the figure over into his own teachings. But God as Father expresses in final form the matchless love of God.

God as Father implies all ever thought in the greatness of a mother's love, all ever hoped in the magnitude of a father's care. I wonder if that is what Dr. Wellons, brother of the founder of this great church, used to have in mind when addressing God in his public prayers he said. "Kind Parent." How often, while I was in college, I was impressed by the wealth of devotion expressed in just the way "Uncle Wellons" praying to God would tenderly say, "Kind Parent." It bore in it all the depths of mother's love and all the heights of father's care. Isaiah, speaking for God, says: "As a mother comforteth her children so will I comfort you."

How wonderful are the words of David! How infinitely beautiful are the words of Jesus! But the deeds of Jesus go beyond them all! All that is expressed in the text, "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," is set forth in the life, death and resurrection of our Lord. God's love is shown us in all nature about us. In the seed, and the soil, and the seasons. In the minerals of the earth, and the mind of man. In the laws of the universe, and the light of the sun. In the handclasp of a neighbor, and the love of a friend! All these things tell us of the love of God, but when God desired to express his "so great" love he gave us Jesus.

It was as though God said, My Son, make it clear to them that I love them. That they are my children, and that there is nothing within my power that I will not do to give them all the happiness of which they are capable.

Show them that although they have everyone chosen to wander away, as sheep from the fold have wandered, that I shall go out and hunt the last one until I have found him, and lead him to the fountain of the water of life,—but further teach them that I cannot make them drink from that fountain. Teach them that I have given them, out of infinite love, a will of their own. That they are my sons and daughters, with a sovereign right to choose.

Jesus did it. Calling twelve to be disciples, he did not force them to keep the faith. He surrounded them with his own loving, healing, helping personality; he taught them as man never taught them; and having loved his own he loved them unto the very end; but he did not force them to remain within the fold. If they would neglect God's salvation they could, even the disciples could. By his forgiveness, his kindness, his tender compassion, by his gentleness, patience, and longsuffering, Jesus set forth the love of God. By the story he told of the prodigal son he further set forth the loving heart of the Father. By the condemnation, cruel, unjust—which he received in the courts of men, and by death of shame and degradation which he died upon the cross of Calvary, he showed forth God's love.

The anguish of a broken heart was expressed in his cry from the cross. How God must have grieved upon the death of His Son!

As I said in the beginning we are mentally staggered before the infinite love of God. We cannot express it. But did not Jesus express something of it when he told the story of the ninety and nine, and the lost sheep left out in the cold? How God must grieve when after he has done all he can men and women still neglect the salvation which he offers. In his Word he says, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God." How emphatic! Most often we have the expression "Holy Spirit," but here we have the full emphatic form, "the Holy Spirit of God."

The world may go on, and forget! But Anne Lindbergh will not forget! Her eldest son is no more! He was but a baby. A little bundle of living form in a beautiful crib. Gone! The world may lose him, and the place thereof may know it no more, but he is still in her heart. He is still in the heart of Lindy, the lad that flew across the seas alone to immortal fame. The little boy is still there.. If you have never lost a loved one you may not feel the force of this illus-

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We want to extend to you a cordial invitation to visit the Christian Orphanage. It is your orphanage. You should visit it and see what you have here in the way of farm, buildings, and children. We would be glad to have you visit us. You can see how the work is carried on and see how your money is spent in the care of the children here.

Twenty years ago when the writer was called to take charge of the orphanage we only had one building for children and it was badly out of repair and some additions started but not finished. The furniture was broken and unsightly. The beds broken and scarred and uncomfortable. We had invited a man of wealth to visit the orphanage thinking he would see our great need and would come to our rescue. He came. I showed him what we had. He looked it over and when he bade us goodbye he said: "I am glad I came and saw for myself." He furnished nothing. He never sent us a contribution after that.

Why? We had but little to show him and he was not interested. I resolved that day, that if God would bless me in the work and the good people would help me I would give my best that some time in the future the orphanage would be noticed and would interest visitors. For twenty years the writer has tried to carry out that resolution. I want you to visit the orphanage. I believe when you visit the main building and meet the boys and girls in the building and see how nice and clean and neat it is kept; then visit the "Baby Home" where the little tots stay—33 of them—and see how clean and neat the rooms are kept and how nice the beds are, you will wonder how it can be done with 33 little tots in the building every day. Then visit the "Johnston Hall" where the older children live and visit the rooms where the boys and girls have their home fixed according to their tastes and look into the happy faces of all the children in all the buildings, you too, will be interested in what your denomination is doing for unfortunate children.

When you visit the orphanage now you will see three beautiful brick buildings for children. You will see a splendid modern dairy barn, you will see nice stables for the mules well equipped so the mules will be comfortable. You will see a splendid farm of 230 acres with farm machinery. You will see a herd of 35 dairy cows. You will see a pen of twenty-five hogs that will furnish meat for the orphanage family. But after you have looked the buildings, the farm, the dairy over, the most interesting thing you will see will be the 100 splendid boys and girls with bright faces and high hopes of proving worthy of the chance the Church through its orphanage is giving them. It has taken thirty-one years to build and equip the orphanage plant and it is in the best equipped condition now, in its history, to do a larger service for the fatherless children. Visit the orphanage—you will be interested.

I want you to meet the good women who have charge of the children in each building, who are giving their lives to make it a home for the children. Not just a place to stay but a real home where they can have home life as near as can be given in an institution.

tration, but if you have you can understand. The great heart of God will miss you, son or daughter, if you do not come home to him. The way for your return is made in Christ Jesus. The plan of salvation is so open that whoever will may enter, and he at whose in the heart of God, now and ever! But if you neglect to enter, he will not force you in.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son that whoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life; for God sent not his son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." "Behold, I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in and sup with him, and he with me." How God is seeking, seeking for us! His love is matchless, indeed. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"
