MATTHEWS—PEGRAM.

Beneath an arch entwined with evergreens symbolic of an outdoor garden, Miss Lake Pegram became the bride of Carl Matthews Tuesday evening, June 9th, at 8 o'clock at Pleasant Ridge Christian Church. The pastor officiated using the ring ceremony.

A program of pre-nuptial music was presented.

The young bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was a picture of youthful loveliness in her wedding gown of chalk white satin. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and white roses arranged against a fan of satin.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Matthews left for a northern trip and on their return home they will reside in Sledge Garden.

BOWMAN—JOHNSON.

On Friday morning, June 5th, at eight o'clock, Miss Bertie Johnson became the bride of Ralph Bowman, at the home of the officiating minister. Only members of the immediate families and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Johnson of Walnut Cover, North Carolina, was attired in an ensemble of rose crepe with white accessories. Her corsage was pink rosebuds and maidenhair fern.

Following the ceremony the young couple left for a motor trip through the Valley of Virginia, and on their return will make their home in Germantown.

CHARLES M. ASHLEY.

The son of R. D. and Terama Ashley died February 29, 1936 at the age of 50 years.

On the old stagecoach route known as the Somerton Road, leading from Suffolk, Va., to Winton, N. C., is the birthplace of Chas. M. Ashley. Here in Nansemond County at Nurmeville the light of day first swept his brow.

Lafayette, the French General, on his last visit to the U. S. A., passed this way. The Federal and Confederate soldiers marched; the covered wagons marked the great caravan of people to distant areas.

Country life was aglow with splendor and prosperity. The metropolis was the Cross Roads Stores. At Somerton was the firm of Mark W. Smith Co., at Whaleyville R. B. Hayes, A. D. Milteer and the Jackson Bros. Stores, at Nurmeville, Chas Sumner.

The country doctors, Dr. Bob Riddick and Dr. R. E. Parker, with the Rev. W. B. Waff and Rev. H. H. Butler administered to the needs of the physical and religious life.

Nansemond County was a part of the cradle of the English race in America, and for this reason her history is of more than ordinary interest.

Besides this, the great variety of important events that have taken place within her borders, the immortal characters that have nurtured upon her soil and the unswerving manner in which her people have always contended for their rights, render her history specially worthy of being studied. Of all the emotions that stir the human soul, love of country is one of the noblest, and near akin to it is reverence for one's ancestors and friends.

Under this powerful influence the life and character of Charles M. Ashley was shaped and designated him as one worthy to serve, and be called great among his fellow-men.

The metropol, the Cross Roads Stores, have filled their time and place, and as a country merchant this strong man has blessed the people.

His benediction is the mantle of love. His sleep is peaceful.

McDONALD.

Mrs. Beulah May McDonald was born July 27, 1891, and died June 18, 1936, making her age 44 years, 10 months and 22 days. She was a daughter of the late Philip and C. Jane Alger. Some years ago she was united in marriage with Alee McDonald, who survives her. To this union were born four children, Margaret, Thelma, Grover and Lurty, all of whom survive her. She also left one brother, W. H. Alger, and three sisters, Mrs. K. W. Sayman, Mrs.

Eugene Lam and Mrs. Annie L. Freeze of near Elkton.

Mrs. McDonald was a faithful member of the Bethel Christian Church, having joined that church in early childhood. She was a great friend of all the people, never happier than when doing something for another person. Her life was one of the highest Christian character, and she was always held in highest esteem.

The funeral was conducted by the writer at the Bethel Christian Church of Elkton, Virginia. May the Lord be very near to those who have suffered this loss of the loved one.

FAMILY ALTAR.

spirits, how easy is action that will please our God! Indeed, any other action becomes impossible for us.

Prayer—We believe. Lord, forgive our unbelief! Lift us out of it into fineness of faith and trust as we kneel at the foot of Calvary!—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"NEEDFUL PATIENCE."

"Ye have need of patience, that, having done the will of God, ye may receive the promise."—Heb. 10:32-39.

Having done the will of God, what further need of patience? Is not the doing of God's will enough? Should we not at once receive His promise's glad fulfillment? Have we not accomplished the condition, met the test?

No. All experience shows us the gap between our deeds and the happy realization of God's promised bliss. We live our lives of obedience here on earth, but we look for our full reward in heaven. We are to await God's good time.

Otherwise we shall become soured and miserable. God's people are often poor in this world, often obscure, often sick, often beset with many a trial hard to bear, often sorely in need of patience. It is the refiner's fire. It is for our perfection.

Prayer—Thou knowest best, our Father. Send us Thy promises when Thou knowest best. Grant us that loving and faith-filled patience which is the best of Thy promises, because it is the closest approach to Thee.—Amen.

I have no other ambition so great as that of being truly esteemed by my fellow-men, by rendering myself worthy of their esteem.

—Abraham Lincoln.

THE CHURCH MARCHES ON THROUGH SERVICE

THE CHURCH is militant. It is arrayed against evil. The Church is aggressive, each day it marches to new positions. The Church is sympathetic. It is imbued with great compassion, looking with favor and affection upon humanity. It came into existence to serve man, to meet man's needs: physical, mental, moral and spiritual. Its continued existence in human society is merited only in proportion to its demonstrated ability to alleviate human suffering and save men's souls. Song, prayer, exhortation, spiritual resoluteness and emotional fervor may enter into a service of worship, but the service of the Church demands more. Men are out of work, men are hungry, men are naked, men are sick, men are imprisoned. The heart of the world needs the sympathetic touch of God, the healing and redemptive power of the Eternal. The Church is meant to be His medium, His mouthpiece, His servant. Is it possible that the Church of today is so glutted for gain, popularity and worldly prestige that no longer is she able to discern her mission of service and of salvation? May God rift the clouds, dissipate the shadows, enlarge our vision that we may behold Him, and in the splendor of that vision may we become new creatures—a new Church—and may we have the grace to offer ourselves as servants; and as servants of the living God, may we have the courage to obey the royal command—Go ye, Go ye and find, Go ye and administer, Go ye and teach, Go ye and save, Go ye and serve. “Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you.”

Thy Blessing, Lord, on All Vacation Days!

By MOLLY ANDERSON HALEY.

THY BLESSING, Lord, on all vacation days!
For weary ones who seek the quiet ways,
Fare forth beyond the thunder of the street,
The marvel of Emmaus Road repeat;
Thy comradeship so graciously bestow
Their hearts shall burn within them as they go.

Grant those who turn for healing to the sea
May find the faith that once by Galilee
Flamed brighter than the glowing fire of coals.
And when thou hast refreshed their hungry souls,
Speak the old words again, beside the deep,
Bid all who love thee, Master, feed thy sheep!

Be thou with those who bide where mountains rise,
Where yearning earth draws nearest to the skies!
Give them the peace, the courage that they ask:
New strength to face the waiting valley task,
New light to lead through shrouding valley haze!
Thy blessing, Lord, on all vacation days!

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

How would you like to read this paper all the way through and then write the editor what you think of it? Suggest ways to improve it, and you will make him happy.

This is the season for revivals in our rural churches. If those who are holding such meetings will report them to THE SUN those who cannot attend will receive some of the blessings of the meetings.

The present editor promised to work for eight months on this job. One month is gone. Next week he will report what has happened, or at least some of the things that he knows about. Several have made kindly criticisms of what has been done, for which he is very grateful.

Leaders of the Woman's Missionary Conference of Eastern Virginia were in session last Thursday considering plans for the future. They met at First Christian Church, Norfolk. It takes no prophet to predict that out of that meeting will come real plans and work. That is their habit.

"Light Bearing" will be the theme of the Virginia Valley Conference in session at Antioch Christian Church on August 5 and 6, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. The program indicates that real work can be accomplished in that conference. It is hoped that every church will be represented.

Rev. Herbert Council, Jr., will be in charge of the Suffolk, Va., church during the month of August while the minister, Dr. John G. Truitt, is on vacation. He has been working there the past month. This is a fine experience for a young man for it gives him practical experience under the leadership of one who has succeeded in the ministry.

Some fine material has come in for THE SUN that had to be carried over until next week. The writers will please be patient, and the readers have something to anticipate. The editor is very happy when good materials come to him. Many of our young people can write good things. Why not get busy and share your thoughts with others? Thank you!

When Spain had some internal difficulties last week our Government was quick to send battleships to the troubled zone to protect American rights. Suppose we had spent as much to send friendly missionaries, what would likely have happened? The message of Jesus can do more to bring peace on earth than all the battleships and armies of all the nations. Why not try it?

Congratulations to the Young People's Auxiliary of Mt. Olivet (G) in the Virginia Valley Conference on being the first group to send in a list of paid up subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN equivalent to 10% of their church membership. Some other churches are at work on this proposition, but these young people led the list with Miss Winona Morris as leader. Who will send the next list?

Mr. William H. Dudley of Brooklyn, N. Y., Student Summer Service Worker at Norfolk, preached the past two Sundays for Rev. R. A. Whitten of Portsmouth and Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk while they were holding revivals in North Carolina. Next Saturday Mr. Dudley goes to Raleigh, N. C., where he will serve as minister during the month of August while the regular ministers, Rev. Carl Voss, is on vacation.

Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor of our church at Newport News, Va., has stated to his church that he will not serve them the coming year. Mr. House has served the church for several years and has been quite successful. The church regrets his decision to go. His plans for the future are not definite, but it is quite certain that there will be an opening for a man of his ability. Any church interested in securing a minister will do well to write him at Newport News, Virginia.

Flint Hill and Sophia churches entertained the Western N. C. Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention last week in a fine way. Rev. Mr. Penn makes a good host, and his churches support him well. Most of the churches in the convention were not represented, but those present were benefited. Most of the pastors were holding revival meetings and could not be present. Plans were made for some very definite work to be done before the annual Conference meets, at which time there will be a brief session of the Convention.

The decision of Windsor (Virginia), Antioch, Isle of Wight, and Mt. Carmel to form a pastorate, as announced in last week's SUN means that some good man should locate in that vicinity, and that Rev. Carr Gerringer of Windsor, Va., will be in need of other work. It is usually agreed when churches with different pastors come into one pastorate that a new man will be secured. Rev. Mr. Gerringer has done a good work in some of these churches, and it is hoped that some church, or churches, will see that he has an opportunity to serve. Rev. N. G. Newman, and Rev. Elisha Bradshaw are the other ministers now serving in this field. Dr. Newman will continue to serve Holy Neck. The plans of Rev. Mr. Bradshaw are not known to this writer. Any church interested in his services can write him at Walters, Virginia.

EASTERN N. C. CONVENTION.

Minutes

The annual Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of Eastern North Carolina met Tuesday, July 14, at Oak Level Christian Church, Youngsville, N. C.

The theme of the convention was "Going Forward."

The president, Rev. S. E. Madren, presided. The roll call showed that 9 pastors, 8 superintendents, and 20 teachers were present. Four C. E. societies were represented, and delegates representing 20 Sunday schools were present.

An offering amounting to $9.06 was received for the Orphanage.

Among the speakers of the day were Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mr. C. D. Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Harrell, Dr. L. E. Smith, Rev. Carl H. Voss and Rev. E. M. Carter.

The evening session was presided over by Miss Rose Kimball, president of Eastern N. C. Youth Fellowship. The program was in charge of Mrs. Murdock Newman. There were young people taking part on the program representing five of our churches.

The convention was delighted to have Miss Emily Carleton and Rev. F. C. Lester for the evening session. They brought us challenging and inspiring messages.

The following officers were elected for 1936-37:

President, Rev. R. T. Grissom; Vice-Pres., Miss Margaret Alston; Rec. Sec., Mrs. Murdock Newman; Cor. Sec., Miss Grace Ayscue; Treasurer, Mr. C. H. Stephenson.

The convention will meet at Fuller's Chapel, Henderson, N. C. in 1937.

MRS. MURDOCK NEWMAN, Sec'y.

It takes courage to live—courage and strength and hope and humor. And courage and strength and hope and humor have to be bought and paid for with pain and work and prayers and tears.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

INTRODUCING MYSELF.

If this CHRISTIAN SUN business is to be successful, it will be very necessary for those who read and those who write to understand each other. In order that we may the better understand, this column is to become a feature.

Permit me to begin by introducing myself. Some of you know me already, perhaps better than you want to. But some do not know me personally, and none of you know me like I know myself. I am my own worst problem.

I am a farmer come to town. Born fifteen miles west of Reidsville, North Carolina, in the last century, trained to chop wood and plough corn before and after school, taught the simple rules of honesty and industry necessary for poor farmers, I became a dreamer who longed for things that were distant and beyond reach. High School, College, and University all seemed to be impossible for the son of a widow, but because they seemed impossible they became necessary. Elon College and Yale University beckoned me on until they were willing to give their diplomas.

Being afraid of strangers, and especially preachers, it became necessary for me to mingle with strangers and to become a minister. Having prepared to be a missionary, the church called me to work in religious education. Hoping to be a preacher, it now becomes my task to be an editor. You who read can take me for what I am, or what I want to be, just as you like. But this is enough of me. What about you?

INTRODUCING YOU.

If I am to write, I must write to somebody. There is no fun in just writing with never a reader to be found. I must think of YOU when I write.

Some of you I have known for years, some for a shorter time, and some I have never seen. But I must see you in my mind or there will be no message. Who are you out there where the postman leaves THE CHRISTIAN SUN? Let's think a moment.

There are ministers who read books, prepare and deliver sermons, visit the sick and bring good cheer, bury the dead and share with the suffering, marry lovers and love the unlovely, teach teachers, and guide the young. They sometimes get weary "and long to go home" but all of their work is not done. They need inspiration, suggestions, new ideas, courage. I see you out there, my friends, and know something of how you feel for I am also a minister. Your job and mine are the same. Let's share with each other.

Then there are officers of churches, Sunday School workers by the thousands, young people, children, parents with their problems, busy men and women, thoughtful and thoughtless young and old, those who attend the church and those who cannot, people who are rich and many who are poor, college and university students, graduates and professors, farmers and industrial workers who have been denied the joys of schooling, all kinds and classes of people. You are quite a company—a cross-section of our national life. I marvel that I do not get stage-fright when I see you (in my mind). But I like you too much to be afraid. I want you to be my friends.

OUR PROBLEM.

We have a common task and a mutual problem. At heart we are very much alike. We may not agree in our thinking, but we all suffer, rejoice, and love. We meet temptation, struggle to make a living and to live, and find our strength in God.

This CHRISTIAN SUN is our mutual problem. It is our Church Paper. We need its help. I have been asked to edit it, and you are to read it. I am to collect so it can be printed, and you are to pay for it so it can continue to come to you. Your part is as important as mine. I shall do my best, and shall expect the same of you.

Yesterday a young people's society sent in a list of paid up subscribers equal to ten per cent of their church members. That gave the society a neat little commission (25%), and made me very happy. Today a man writes that he is behind in payment of subscription, but will pay this fall. His paper will continue to visit his home, and his money will come according to his promise.

Two things you can do to aid in this mutual task. You can send in subscriptions, and you can send in materials to print. There are no commissions other than on the basis of 10% of church membership, but who wants a commission for sending in a subscription to the church paper for a neighbor or friend? News from the churches will be interesting reading. If you know news, or if you have an idea worth sharing, and you probably have, please send it to the editor. Your help is needed—and wanted.

Aim above morality. Be not simply good; be good for something.

—Henry David Thoreau.

DR. S. PARKES CADMAN—CONGREGATIONALIST.

The passing of Dr. Cadman has centered attention upon what a single individual, born of humble and poor parents, can accomplish in seventy years of life.

The secular dailies have already informed those who read papers that Dr. Cadman was born in England and that he became a preacher under the Wesleyan Methodist banner. This meant that he began preaching under a church organization which has no bishops, but is largely Congregational in spirit. John Wesley's mother's father, Dr. Annesley, was a Congregationalist, and his paternal grandfather was also. The Congregationalists were then known loosely as "dissenters," because they dissented from the Established Church of England, and were closely allied with the Presbyterians, as they still are. Thus John Wesley, coming from dissenter stock, easily returned in spirit to that from which he had come, and had no place in his organization for a "bishop." It was Francis Asbury who made American Methodism "episcopal." The union of American Methodism will, at least in name and let us hope in spirit, return Methodism to its pristine democracy.

When Dr. Cadman came to America, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. After serving important pastorates in that church, he was called by Central Congregational Church, in Brooklyn, New York, to be its pastor. For Dr. Cadman to flow into Congregationalism was as natural as it is for the Potomac river to flow into the ocean. He was a dissenter by birth and temperament. He was democratic in every fibre of his being, particularly in ecclesiastical matters. It would have been incongruous for Dr. Cadman to have over him, in his pastorate, two super-pastors, one a man known as "bishop" who controlled where he should preach, and another super-pastor, known as "presiding elder" who was the bishop's alter ego. Consequently, with no expressed differences with Methodism, Dr. Cadman went to the Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn, where he remained for 35 years to fill such a place in American Protestantism that Henry Ward Beecher had filled years ago in the same city. It is a question if the great Congregationalist, Henry Ward Beecher, had such an influence either on America or on the world, as had Dr. Cadman. Of course, the radio gave the latter pronounced advantage. It is estimated that no man ever before preached to so many people of earth as did Dr. Cadman, since his radio sermons became international.—J. O. Knott in Washington Post.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHURCH VACATIONS.

Some say that churches should never take a vacation. Others are equally as certain that they should. What is the truth? Who is able to say?

The work of the Church is never completed. The forces of evil are always arrayed against the good. Character development is a continuous process. Religion is a fundamental part of human experience and cannot be left alone at will. There is always much to be done by the Church.

But the Church is composed of human beings who are limited in their endurance. People get tired. Even machinery must have a time to rest. People need to renew life by getting a distant view. New acquaintances open new fields of thought and friendship. A visit to another church or community, the relaxation of continuous effort, may give just the needed renewal for successful accomplishment.

If the church puts on a strenuous program during the winter, it may profitably rest a bit during the summer. The minister, teachers, and the leaders may need to get away for a while. There can still be worship services for those who remain in the community, but the rest will give new zest to those who must bear the burden of the work. This shifting of responsibilities and relaxing of effort for a time does not mean that the Church has gone out of business. On the contrary it is taking on new life, making new plans, and preparing for greater effort and success in the days to come.

Many of our rural churches must do their best work in the summer. In the winter they cannot get to church on account of bad roads and weather. The summer is their time of labor and success. Their ministers and leaders can rest cold winter days better than sunshiny days. Their best work is to be done in springtime, summer and fall. "Then, if ever, come perfect days" for the rural southern churches.

The poem on the front page is a wish, and prayer, for all those who may find the joys of vacation. For all of you who steal away from the regular routine in search of beauty God has painted on earth and sky, and the relaxation and renewal so greatly needed for the many tasks that life brings, the editor wishes safe travel, quiet rest, constructive friendships, fruitful meditation, growing hope, and clearer visions of what life can mean.

FREEDOM OF THOUGHT.

An article on another page from the pen of a lawyer in Washington, D. C., opens a problem that the American people must decide. The editor takes no responsibility for the thoughts expressed in that article, but is of the opinion that church people should give thought to the problem raised.

Freedom of thought is one of the things that has helped America to become great. It is a heritage that we will sacrifice at great cost. We are not yet ready for others to dictate our thoughts, speech, or writing. We want to be free.

But freedom comes at great cost. It is easy to defend the things that may hurt on the basis of freedom. In society it becomes necessary to curb personal freedom when the rights of others are involved. The cry for personal freedom helped to flood the country with legal liquors that are making drunkards of our people, as court records indicate. Undemocratic ideals, communism in particular, may undermine our government in the name of intellectual freedom unless thoughtful people are on guard and bestir themselves to protect the younger generation from false teachings.

Our country was founded on the teachings of the Bible. This foundation can be renewed only at great peril. Somewhere, either in our homes, schools, or churches, the children and young people must learn of this great Book, or the foundations of our government and the civilization which it has produced will be destroyed. This is a real problem which the Church must face in the immediate future, or find itself deserted by a generation of unbelievers.

Our desire for freedom of thought should include our willingness to think. The Church of our day has sufficient problems to call forth the best thought of all who compose its membership. The editor of this paper will welcome constructive suggestions concerning the problems which are ours. He feels that those who have light are honor bound to share it with others. This is the kind of freedom of thought for which we stand.

OUR CONVENTIONS.

It has been the privilege of the editor to attend all the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions within the Southern Convention again this year. It has been his custom to do so for the past several years. There are very definite impressions one gets from attending these conventions annually.

The conventions are not now mass meetings as they were some years ago. They have shortened the time of meeting, and have definitely become more of an institute for workers. There are usually leaders present to meet with various groups to discuss their specific problems. Convention officials are eager to bring definite help to the workers in local churches, and plan all programs with this in mind. Most of the conventions have discontinued having addresses by representatives of the departments and institutions, and the others want to do so. They want to get practical helps for local workers.

Two and three day conventions have become one day sessions, often to the discomfort of those who plan the programs. One convention has more than a dozen secretaries who are supposed to work throughout the year and report annually. The officers want time for the reports to be made and other things to be accomplished, but the Convention voted this year not to have even an evening session next year. The officers are helpless. If the people will come at ten and leave at four, the program must be planned for the time they are present. It is quite impossible for the convention to mean all that it should when the time is so limited, but unless the writer is greatly mistaken, the difficulty lies with those who attend (or should attend) rather than with those who plan the programs. He agrees heartily with the article by Dr. L. E. Smith in last week's paper, and sincerely hopes that the ministers and leaders of our churches will seriously consider what should be done in our conventions, and then vote to hold sessions long enough to do the needed work.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

More than two hundred people attended the Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention at Newport News Church on Tuesday of last week. There were 176 registered delegates. More than $600.00 was received from Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor societies, and the Convention voted to give $500.00 to the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention.

Both morning and afternoon sessions were divided into sections for business, addresses, and institute work. Practically all phases of Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work were discussed in small group meetings in which it was hoped that definite suggestions would be made for the benefit of workers in these various departments of the Sunday Schools and Endeavor societies.

The entertaining church did the job well by furnishing excellent meals and courteous entertainment. They are rightfully proud of their new electric organ which adds much to the services and enriched the sessions of the Convention.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows:

President, Rev. J. E. McCauley, Richmond; 1st Vice President, E. L. Daughtrey, Franklin; 2nd Vice President, W. B. Williams, Newport News; Recording Secretary, W. H. Baker, Newport News; Executive Secretary, Rev. Carl R. Key, Holland; Treasurer, J. W. Folk, Suffolk; Supt. of Leadership Training, Rev. Joe French Ocean View; Literature, Rev. R. L. House, Newport News; Missions, Mrs. E. L. Beale, Franklin; Christian Endeavor, Mrs. W. B. Williams, Newport News; Cradle Roll, Mrs. J. W. Rawles, Suffolk; Youth Fellowship, Miss Edna Fulcher, Norfolk; Education, Rev. R. E. Brittle, Suffolk.

WHAT ABOUT THE SCHOOLS.

By RAYMOND M. HUDSON,
Attorney-at-Law, Washington, D. C.

Two years ago Congress passed what they called the "Red Rider," introduced by Congressman Blanton, prohibiting the teaching of the facts of Communism—or Anti-Christ—in the public schools of the District of Columbia.

Then and now teachers were not permitted to teach the Bible, which gives the facts of Christ or the Christian religion in the public schools of the District of Columbia.

Two years ago Congress appropriated for and authorized the inauguration of a course of "character instruction" in the public schools in Washington, but the Congress recently adjourned voted not to extend the appropriation for the next school session and the course has to be abandoned.

During the last Congress Representative Sisson, chairman of an important committee, made a desperate fight to repeal the Red Rider and to permit the teaching of the facts of Communism—or Anti-Christ—in the public schools of the District of Columbia. Quite a furor was raised and many citizens and officials demanded the repeal of the Red Rider, claiming that teachers must not be in any way limited in what they shall teach, that they have a personal liberty that must not be interfered with regardless of any rights of the pupils or what is beneficial for the pupils.

There seems to be a great hue and cry about the personal liberty of the teachers—what they are really asking for is license,—just like the great fights the Wets made for the personal liberty in repealing the Prohibition amendment. No one seems to have any interest or care in any way for the rights of the pupils—the children. They seem to lose sight of the real purpose of the school as stated by the Supreme Court of the United States, not to teach children anything injurious to the health, morals or understanding of the ordinary child.

President William Howard Taft well said: "Education alone, without the instilling of moral principle and without the strengthening of that morality with religious spirit, may often prove to give to citizens a knowledge without the moral impulse to use it properly." Unquestionably the first and most important function of the school is to seek and advance the best interests of the pupil and not the personal liberty or license of the teacher.

The current Christian papers of this country are praising the great Japanese Christian leader, Dr. Kagawa, for having saved Japan from Communism and given it Christianity, but there is nothing in the records anywhere giving the slightest intimation that Kagawa consented to, or failed to fight, the teaching of the facts of communism in the schools of Japan.

Recently Congressman Blanton sent a questionnaire to the public school teachers of Washington. The press reports of the proceedings at the National Education Association in Portland, Oregon as follows:

"Last week the NEA delegates clutched at mimeographed copies of the questionnaire, indignantly read therein: 'Do you believe in God? Do you believe in any of the doctrines of Communism? Have you ever been in Russia? Do you approve of the writings of Charles A. Beard?' Stormed wily, liberal U. S. Commissioner of Education John Ward Studebaker: 'The implications of the situation in the District of Columbia are of great significance . . . We can tolerate no dictatorial censorship of thinking and learning.' Promptly the convention thundered through a resolution condemning loyalty oaths, the Blanton Rider 'curbs on freedom of teaching.'"

Some weeks ago when the investigation of the Black Legion was in its incipency, one of the women who was in the Women's Auxiliary of the Black Legion on examination, according to the press, said, "what could we do? They were teaching our children Communism—Communism—nothing but Communism, and none of the Bible in the public schools. We just had to save our children and our homes."

New York State has a law making it a penitentiary offense to inquire into the religious beliefs, if any, of an applicant for the position of a school teacher, thus opening the door for atheists to become teachers.

While the Bible cannot be taught in the public schools in New York, yet the churches have arranged in many parts of the state for an hour's instruction at the church for the public school children.

The Supreme Court in the Holy Trinity Church case said: "The Declaration of Independence recognized the divine in human affairs." But still many states forbid teaching of the facts of the divine in the public schools.

What is the church going to do about the present conditions and affairs in the public schools, especially the fight between Christianity and Communism? Will it sit by and permit without protest the teaching of the facts of Communism and prohibition of the teaching of the facts of Christianity?

LIBERTY CHURCH.

Liberty Christian Church located in Vance County, North Carolina, is one of our strong rural churches. Rev. S. E. Madren, an alumnus of Elon College, is the pastor. Brother Madren is doing a good work among his people. Liberty Church was organized about seventy-five years ago. Reverend J. W. Wellons was among its first pastors and rendered a great service in that community. His influence still lives. In the "front room" in the home of Mrs. Sallie Ayscue hangs enlarged photographs of Reverend W. J. Wellons, Doctor W. T. Herndon, and Reverend M. W. Butler. Doctors Wellons and Herndon are deceased. Brother Butler still lives. These men, together with other pastors, have served faithfully in this community and the church stands there today as evidence of their labors. The majority of the best people of the community are included in the membership of Liberty Church. They have a goodly number of prosperous farmers in their membership. The writer has had the privilege of visiting this church on different occasions and always he has found a hearty welcome and a definite religious atmosphere in the church. The members of Liberty Church love their church and are devoted to the cause of Christ.

I had the privilege of speaking at the Sunday evening service, July 19. A large congregation was present. A series of meetings began Monday afternoon at three o'clock. Reverend O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Va., arrived to conduct the service. He gave a strong message Monday evening at eight o'clock.

I went to Liberty Church on this occasion at the invitation of the committee appointed to raise Liberty Church's quota for the Elon College Development Program. The quota for Liberty Church is $1,878. The committee said that it would hardly be possible to raise this amount. Miss Margaret Alston, a member of the committee, volunteered her services to help with the canvas. We began at ten o'clock Monday morning and worked until three Tuesday afternoon. We saw only a small percentage of the membership of the church. Wherever we went we received an enthusiastic reception. People were not only interested in the church but anxious for the college and willing to do what they could that the goal set for the campaign might be reached. It was necessary for me to return to the college Tuesday afternoon. At three o'clock, we had secured in cash and pledges $952.50. It is now the feeling of all that with two or three more days of canvassing the quota for Liberty Church can be raised. We called on one good member whom the committee had asked to give the largest part. He asked what the committee thought he should give. We told him. He replied that the committee "represents good people; they have thought the question through, and I think they are right. I think that we all should give what the committee thinks is our individual share. I will be glad to give this amount and make the first payment today."

The canvas at Liberty is the most encouraging thing that I have experienced since I have taken over the campaign personally. Miss Margaret Alston's influence and persistency in behalf of the college are largely responsible for the attitude of the church toward the college and its desire to support the program. May the blessings of God continue to be with this church and I am sure that they will be prospered materially according as they permit themselves to be enriched spiritually, and so with us all.

L. E. SMITH.

WE RISE OR FALL WITH ELON.

I was impressed with the great truth of the statement Dr. Atkinson made in the open letter to Dr. Smith in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of July 9th—that Elon College which opened its doors to students in 1890, is the most significant undertaking of our Church in the South during the last half century. There are many who know more about colleges than I know, and many who can tell the world about such things in so much more beautiful words than I, but not everyone, it seems, knows better than I do what Christian Education can do for human beings. Our Christian Mission here in Carroll County is doing for these hills what Elon is doing for people all over the South. Of course this work here is on a smaller scale, but that fact in itself proves to me how great and far-reaching must be the work at Elon.

There are two points I wish that we could remember: One is, the building of Christian character is important; and the other point is, this very work is being done at Elon. Our people of the South don't seem to realize fully that our hope lies in Elon. The very source of all our strength, or the soul of our Church. Ah, yes, it took strength of character to come this far, and it will take the same to keep marching on. This kind of strength is found in Christ alone. Then Christian character is what we need.

Did you ever stop to think how much sin, sorrow, and all manner of unhappiness could be wiped out of this world if only all people could have a chance at Christian Education? And as I think of all the students Elon has turned out to take up work here, there, and everywhere, I realize how much Elon has done toward giving people a chance. Elon is like a Christian home sending out children to all parts of our country, and as they go they carry with them the strongest aid on earth—Christian Education. We are failing to understand the importance and value of such an education as Elon can give. Many are asking today—"What is wrong with our nation?" And one can go down to the very root of the matter and find this answer today—A lack of Christian Education, a lack of Christian Character is at the bottom of a lot of things just now. Just how much of our national economic and social trouble is caused by lack of Christian character would be startling if we came right to the point. And our Elon can do her bit to help, not only our nation but also the whole world. A school which builds Christian Character is far-reaching.

We have an Elon man on our field here among our hills. Time, and time again, Elon comes to our hills. The highest and finest ideas and ideals I have found in this life have come to me through students of Elon. Rev. Elmore, our pastor now, certainly brought out with him from Elon a faith that wins.

And now may God help people to see that Elon is a light that must not fail.

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be cumbered with your old nonsense. This day is all that is good and fair. It is too dear, with its hopes and invitations, to waste a moment on the yesterdays.

—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

SOME STRANGE FRIENDS.

Mr. Andrew Lang tells some very interesting stories about how some kinds of animals which are supposed to be natural enemies to each other may be trained to be friends. He once knew a cat and a mouse that played together. When tired, the mouse ran back to his hole.

A lady who was very fond of animals owned a fine dog. One day she brought home a cat. War was declared at once between the cat and the dog; someone had to be on guard all the time to protect the cat. At last the lady decided that they must be taught to live in peace. She made them know each other, and in less than a month they became friendly enough not to watch each other; and in three months' time they took their regular meals out of the same dish. Just at this time a friend gave the lady a canary. The bird, then, must be guarded from the cat. As the cat had gone freely about the house it was not an easy thing to remember to shut the doors and to see where the cat was before a door was opened. The lady then determined that bird and cat must live in harmony. She succeeded so well that at last the cat, the dog, and the bird would drink from the same dish, and it was not an unusual thing to see the cat sleeping with the bird standing on her head.

I once owned a dog and a cat that were such great friends that at the close of a summer vacation I sent them by express in the same box from Silver Creek, N. Y., to Boston, a distance of over five hundred miles. While they were waiting to be put on board the train in the express office, the dog was lying down and the cat was curled up asleep, with its head on the dog's shoulder, to the great astonishment of many people gathered about. They went through all right and were as good friends as ever after their journey.

In one of these stories you will read about a cat that adopted a little squirrel and brought him up just the same as her kittens. I have also heard of a cat which adopted a tiny puppy whose mother had died. The cat had five kittens. The puppy was put in the box with the kittens while the mother cat was away. When she came back she discovered the little orphan at once. She was very much interested, but soon nestled down with a contented little "meow" and purr, and seemed to love the new member of the family as well as the older ones. One day, in jumping into the box, she jumped on the pup, and he barked. She sprang from the box badly scared, her tail like a great plume over her back. She looked all around, but not seeing any dog she got back into the box and settled down to rest. Whether he did it just for fun or not I do not know, but the old cat had scarcely got to sleep when Master Pup gave another queer little bark. The cat family were in an uproar at once; mother and kittens were in a state of wild excitement. The lack of fear on the part of the pup seemed to arouse the old cat's suspicions, and she boxed his ears; whereupon he barked again. She saw through it at once then, and her tail came down to regular size. In some mother-cat way she told the kittens that it was their funny little dog brother that had made all the noise, and that they were in no danger. From that day on the pup barked to his heart's content, but the kittens were not alarmed at it any more.

There is no more interesting study for boys and girls than the habits of these creatures which God has made to live in the world with us. The Bible says that Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived, took a great deal of interest in such things. "He spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall: he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes."

Join the great company of those who make the barren places of life fruitful with kindness. Carry a vision of heaven in your hearts, and you shall make your home, your college, the world, correspond to that vision. Your success and happiness lie in you. External conditions are the accidents of life, its outer trappings. The great, enduring realities are love and service. Joy is the holy fire that keeps our purpose warm and our intelligence aglow. Resolve to keep happy, and your joy and you shall form an invincible host against difficulty.

—Helen Keller.

Doing nothing for others is the undoing of oneself. We must be purposely kind and generous, or we miss the best part of existence. The heart that goes out of itself, gets large and full of joy. This is the great secret of the inner life. We do ourselves the most good doing something for others.—Horace Mann.

There is no other way in which one's life will be so surely, so quickly transfigured, as in the faithful, happy, cheerful doing of everyday tasks.

—J. R. Miller.

THE GUIDE.

What place in this life I shall hold,
And what shall be its sign;
How much of bright and minted gold
Shall turn out to be mine;
What service I shall render here;
How high or low it be,
Dear Master, I shall be content
To leave it all to Thee.

What roads my restless feet shall go;
How near, or yet how far;
What joys it shall be mine to know,
What conflicts leave their scar;
If but my little day be spent
Bravely and helpfully,
Dear Master, I shall be content
To leave it all to Thee.

—Clarence E. Flynn.

Learn patience from the lesson
Though the night be drear and long;
To the darkest sorrow there comes a morrow.

A right to every wrong.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE HOPE OF THE WORLD.
MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

The Christian religion offers a way of life which, if adopted and followed, will insure the security of humanity and its fullest development. It is the way of understanding and good will. It abhors hatred. It regards the unforgiving man as an enemy of God. It would incorporate all men into one great family with God as Father. If the world can become Christian, wars will cease. Commercial strivings will be settled on equitable bases. Racial antagonisms will disappear. Disease will be progressively overcome. Undreamed of heights in invention and discovery will be attained. The world will be able to utilize its entire energies in constructive accomplishment.

The practical question is, "Can Christianity prevail?" Christians believe it can. All the churches of all the denominations are committed to it. The people of this nation can in a very general way be called Christian, as can be the peoples of many other nations. Yet our present allegiance to the Christian ideal is not sufficient. If it is to be effective, it must be much more thoroughgoing. It must stride across national lines and racial barriers and industrial disputings. It must put the will of a Christ-like God above all human ambition.

It is the faith of the missionary boards that the Christian religion can become dominant in the hearts of men, that at home and abroad it will prove the solvent for national and international difficulties. To that end we exhort the churches and all Christian people and all men of good will everywhere to continue to send out messengers who shall preach and teach and live their Christian faith with such high success that others will be irresistibly attracted to the same life of good will.—From Biennial Report of Church Extension Boards, Congregational-Christian Church.

KAGAWA'S MESSAGE OF GREETING TO HIS FIRST AMERICAN AUDIENCE.

"I want to take occasion to thank you for sending over to Japan your fine stock to save us. You have the best people in the world in this country. In saying this I am not flattering. I have visited many countries. This one is the best. You have the stock of Lincoln, Wilson and Washington Gladden. You are big-hearted like the Pacific Ocean. We are grateful for the missionaries whom you have sent from America to Japan. Christianity today is common sense in Japan. Secular daily papers write about it. One of these newspapers, because it thinks Christianity has a message to give to Japan, the Osaka Mainichi, which has a daily circulation of two million, gives a weekly Christian message in its Sunday edition, of one and a half pages devoted to Christianity. Many high school girls have Bibles and read them secretly. Christianity is common sense now because you sent to Japan your wonderful missionaries."

Church workers from nearly every city in the Texas Panhandle thrilled to his swiftly spoken utterances. Inspired by the barren wastes over which he had flown by airplane, Kagawa took as a subject the threefold theme, "Love of God, Love of Soil, Love of Neighbor." He said in part:

"I teach a definitely new system of agriculture in my country, in addition to the tilling of the soil, the planting and care of trees for fruits and nuts. If there are trees, there is more water, more beauty, more quietness—and there will come singing birds. There are many blessings. If you develop tree culture, you do not have so much dust. Now, when the wind blows, you have to shut your eyes.

"There are two Americas: a 'Heaven America' and a 'Hell America.' It is unimaginable in a Christian nation that your situation should exist—that of 12,000,000 unemployed persons. You should look more to the church for guidance in economic undertakings.

"Bring Christianity into your business enterprise. Empty yourselves in a revival of the old love for Christ and your fellowman. . . . The principle of the co-operative association can be applied to any business. Destruction threatens otherwise. There is still good 'seed' of Christianity in Japan; but the best 'seed' is in your country—only organization and activity are lacking, and faith without action is unavailing."—Amarillo, Texas, December, 23, 1935.

NEWS FROM DENDRON SOCIETY.

From Dendron Christian Church we have the following news through the president of the Woman's Missionary Society:

"This society observed the week of prayer in February closing with a joint observance of the World's Day of Prayer with the other churches of the town. Another joint project of the year was the study of the mission study books, "Toward a Christian America" and "That Other America" with the Methodist Missionary Society. They report interesting and profitable meetings and feel that their society has been strengthened because of this intensive study and united effort."

They have held all their regular meetings and are striving to make all the points on the standard of excellence by conference time. Mrs. W. D. Barrett is the president of this interested group of women and is putting every effort forth for a successful and helpful society.

THE LAYMAN'S PLACE ON THE FOREIGN FIELD.

By CHAS. A. LEONARD, SR.

A fine young Christian man in Shantung Province heard the call: "Go north, young man, go north," and, with his wife, settled in the village of Siao-suifen, Manchuria, about as far away as one could get by rail in the north at that time. He bought land in the wild, fertile mountains of Kirin Province, four hundred miles east of Harbin, and had it cleared for farming. He never saw the land, for those who are worth enough to own property dare not go outside the villages for fear of being kidnapped; only a poor man as representative may go to "see-a-see," as the Chinese say for "take-a-look."

Mr. Pan let his land out on shares. Returns from the famous Manchurian soya beans were enough to support him and his people down in Shantung Province. His next interest was the salvation of the people in that isolated region. For a hundred miles in every direction there was neither a missionary nor an evangelist. Burdened for the souls of the people, he wrote asking that we come and help preach the gospel to his people. Thirty had decided definitely to become Christians. Twenty were baptized.

These and the enquirers rented a place for worship and evangelistic meetings. Mr. Pan was chosen as their leader. As others grew in the knowledge of the Word, they, too, conducted Sunday services and preached to the unsaved. With the change of government banditry became so bad that Mr. and Mrs. Pan, along with all other prominent people, had to leave Siao-suifen. On one visit there, the writer finished his meeting just in time to escape a bandit raid. They entered the second night after our departure, robbing and looting, burning about one-fourth of the town and carrying away a number for torture and ransome. Through the Lord's mercy, we were lucky to escape.

It was in this locality that the famous war lord, Chang Tsung-Chang, began his career. He came to North Manchuria from Laichowfu, Shantung Province, as did the writer, beginning as a bandit, so we are what the Chinese call "country relatives." Chang gradually got control of a large part of the region. Later he became war-lord governor of Shantung Province, ruling a population one-third of that of the United States. Notorious for oppressive rule, his power waned and he lost out in Shantung.

It is claimed that he was offered a place in the new Manchurian government, but refused it, his old mother threatening to kill herself if he did accept it.

When the bandits entered Siao-suifen all of Chang's property there was destroyed and his representatives kidnapped or slain. It was, therefore, surmised that politics entered into the raid, though nearly everyone else able to pay a ransom was taken.

The preaching hall was not molested, the only place not looted. Because of this the best building was loaned to the Christians as a meeting place until recently, in order to save it from possible burning in future raids. Mr. and Mrs. Pan had left when the bandits came. Chang's old forts still remain, though the barracks built for bandit soldiers have fallen. Chang was assassinated on a railway platform in his native province.

With such leaders, what can be expected of the people generally. Such a background sets off in striking relief the character, life and works of the fine Christian people such as we now find at Siao-suifen and other places where we have work.

The number has grown as we have gone there from time to time, though many have had to leave on account of repeated trying political conditions. In many instances their business has been ruined.

On a recent visit, however, the little group there raised nearly three hundred dollars for the purchase of their own meeting place. Evangelist Kiang Yao-Tang makes his headquarters there now and works from there out to other centers. As conditions improve, people are returning. It is possible that the railway shops at Suifen, the next station east and on the Siberian border, will be moved to Siao-suifen. This will mean prosperity for the little town and an increase in population.

The welcome received here on our last visit was most cordial. It was a joy to fellowship with the group of choice people whom God has saved there, to note their earnestness, steadfastness and hope for the future. They are truly grateful to those who sent to them the saving gospel of our Lord.

MISSION CONFERENCE AT EAGLES MERE.

Eastern Virginia was represented at this conference by Mrs. J. M. Raby, Mrs. John King, Mrs. J. G. Truitt, Mrs. Herbert Harrell, and the writer.

Eagles Mere—the most beautiful spot in Pennsylvania—a fashionable summer resort—but far more than either of these to me. It is the place where I received an enriching mountain-top experience, a place where I caught a larger vision of the glory of our task. Dear friends of the missionary conference and others, I would like to share this experience with you, for I believe the greatest hindrance to our work is lack of vision.

At Eagles Mere everything centers about the Lake of the Eagles on top of the mountain. Its clear, peaceful, waters reminded me of Galilee, "where Jesus loved so much to be."

The mornings we spent in classes, the afternoons in fellowship and recreation, and in the evenings there were lectures. Our first class was meditation, followed by Bible study, then two mission study classes, program making and child study. Both home and foreign books for next year will be on the negro. These courses presented to us Christian attitudes in approaching them. While the south has been accused of agrarian slavery, the north is guilty of industrial slavery. We learned that the negro has always been an important economic factor in America and that he has made contributions to music, literature, religion and other phases of American life. Dr. Ines, Negro Presbyterian minister at Harlem, N. Y., spoke eloquently and without bitterness on race relations. Space does not permit me to tell you of other classes, but they were very helpfully and efficiently taught.

The fellowship with this large group of Christian leaders meant much to all of us. A beautiful feature was that teachers, officials and missionaries mixed together as one large family. I shall never forget the personal touch with the missionaries who attended. Knowing them made me glad I had a share in sponsoring their work. Their presence gave joy, consecration and reality to the work of the conference. Every day a new one sat at our table and told us about her field. They did not act like people who had made a sacrifice or were enduring hardships, but seemed so contented and happy in their work. One girl said, "Isn't it wonderful to be a Christian?" And I wondered if that were not the source of their joy. Another from India said, "I'm home for seventeen months on furlough, and I can hardly wait to go back." Dr. Maybe, a lovely white-haired lady said, "After spending thirty-five years in the Belgian Congo as a medical missionary, if I were twenty-five again and could realize another dream it would be to go back to the Kongo and minister to those people."

"If I be lifted up, I will draw men unto me." Surely these words took on a new and deeper meaning for those of us who attended Eagles Mere and we rejoiced that we shared with others the glory of lifting Him up to the world.

PHILIP'S MISSIONARY LABORS.

LESSON V—AUGUST 2, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "They therefore that were scattered abroad went about preaching the Word."—Acts 8:4.

LESSON: Acts 8:5-40; Printed Lesson Text: Acts 8:26-40.

A Fruitful Deacon.

Philip was one of the seven, a deacon, one who had been appointed to "serve tables." He was evidently a man of ability and of social standing in the community. But above all else he was a man with a passion for people. His heart was warm with the love of Christ, and he wanted to share that love with others. Our modern world needs more laymen, whether they are deacons or not, who have something of Philip's concern and passion for their fellowmen.

A Great Revival.

Philip's love for Christ and for men overleaped the barriers of racial and religious differences. The Jews ordinarily had no dealings with the Samaritans. They looked upon them as dogs. But Philip went to Samaria and preached Christ unto them. His message was both personal and social—he preached the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name, that is the character, of Jesus Christ. He did not quibble over points of theology or practices of religion—he presented Christ as the answer to the hunger of the human heart, and the solution of the social situation. And God honored his preaching. Men and women were changed, people were released from the domination of evil spirits, even physical health and healing accompanied Philip's work. "And there was great joy in that city." To see lives renewed, to know that men have been redeemed, to experience salvation through Christ—this is the supreme joy of life.

A Discordant Note.

There was one discordant note. One Simon, a soothsayer, was impressed by the things that were being done, and thought that he could capitalize the thing if only he could learn the secret. He offered money, saying, "Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Spirit." Like so many men before and since, he thought that everything had its price in money. But God's gifts cannot be bought. His grace, forgiveness, salvation, spiritual insight, spiritual power, the Holy Spirit, these and other gifts from God have no price tag in terms of dollars and cents on them. They are not for sale. Men may buy favor from men with money, but not from God. An humble and contrite heart, a simple faith, a glad obedience—these are the coin of the kingdom.

A Seeming Wild-Goose Chase.

"Arise and go toward the south . . . unto Gaza which is desert." Leave a great revival, leave thickly populated centers, take a sixty-mile trip,—that was what the angel of the Lord said. It looked like a blind alley, for there was no inkling as to what was at the other end, out there in the desert. But Philip recognized the voice of God. He went out not knowing whither he went, but knowing that he was following the will of God, and therefore confident and content for he knew that God does not send men on fools' errands or up blind alleys. The meek will he guide in judgment and the meek will he show his ways. Would that we had the same sensitiveness to the divine spirit, the same ready obedience, the same simple faith. That sixty-mile trip was one of the most strategic journeys ever made by mortal man. The fact that Abyssinia has long been nominally a Christian nation was due to the fact that Philip obeyed the voice of the Lord.

An Earnest Seeker.

If Philip had any doubts—and that is doubtful—they were soon dispelled, for behold, there came along a man in a chariot, a man of ability and integrity of character—he was treasurer for his queen's country; a man who was seeking the satisfaction which material things and position could not give—he had the things that most men crave; a man who was an earnest seeker after God—he had traveled twelve hundred miles to worship Him. (And some people won't go around the corner.) He was a man who was seeking more light—as he returned from worship, he was reading the Scripture. As one reads the story in retrospect he sees how the providence of God was at work in an undeniable way. It was hardly necessary for the Spirit to go near and join himself to the chariot—his common sense must have told him that here was God's man for him.

A Convert to Christ.

It happened that this man was reading the prophet Isaiah. It happened that he was reading Isaiah 53, which is a remarkable personal prophecy concerning Christ. At the invitation of the eunuch Philip joined him in his chariot and opened to him the Scripture — "beginning from this scripture, he preached unto him Jesus." And as Philip opened the scriptures the eunuch opened his heart. He felt a great impulse to give himself unreservedly to Christ, and sought baptism as an open symbol of that inner committal. "What doth hinder me to be baptized?"

A Confession of Faith.

"If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." Rather simple, it would seem. But it goes deep. When any man sees in Jesus the Christ of God, when he believes with all his heart, when he yields himself in simple faith to the Christ, there takes place the perpetual miracle of grace. That man is born anew or from above. This is not all there is to the Christian life, but there can be no Christian life without this.

What about baptism? Undoubtedly in this case Phillip and the eunuch went down into the water. It may be that Philip immersed him, although it is by no means certain. But what if he did? "God is honoring equally those great sections of the Christian Church which practise baptism by sprinkling, pouring, or by immersion, and the reality of the Christian experience in all of these communions must be acknowledged."

A Repeatable Experience.

The word "repeatable may not be good English, but it embodies good evangelism. The experience of Philip can be repeated by consecrated laymen and ministers today. There must be a revival of personal work based on the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR ACTIVITIES.

Fifty-four Christian Endeavorers attended the retreat at Berryman's Beach, Chestnut Farm on the James River, July 16 and 17. The program was well planned and carried out, the main conference being led by Rev. Harold Cheney of Lynchburg. Rev. J. A. Standfield, Friends Church, Ivor, Va., and Rev. J. J. Van Hagel, of the Methodist Church of Claremont shared in the program and activities. The endeavorers enjoyed discussions, outdoor vesper services, quiet hour periods, hikes, games and swimming. Each one greatly enjoyed himself and expressed sentiments of two beautifully experienced days.

The Three "S" Christian Endeavor union hopes to have a similar occasion next year. The officials consider it a successful two-day Christian Endeavor conference.

The regular summer rally will be held in the Waverly Christian Church Sunday afternoon and evening, August 16. Pienic supper will be enjoyed by all, the entertaining church furnishing the tea.

MONDAY.

"DEVIL'S PROMISES."

"All things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me."—Matthew 4:1-11.

Satan never realizes his own shallowness. He makes offers which he deems irresistible—offers of riches and power and fame and pleasure—and does not see how less than nothing they are to any true-hearted man.

For the devil's promises are vitiated with conditions. They are all limited to this brief life, and they all are rendered worthless by requirements of subserviency to himself. In short, Satan's gifts are not real gifts, but are always bargains, and terribly hard and ruinous bargains at that.

The devil's promises fool only the thoughtless, cheat only the careless. No one who enters into his bargains expects to hold to his share of the agreement. No one expects that the devil will, in the end, be able to hold him. But there is where the peril lies, for Satan can see to his end of every bargain.

Prayer—Deliver us from the evil one, O Christ. As Thou didst masterfully contend with him, so teach us. Arm us with the power of Thy Word, and the strength of the Holy Spirit. May we lend no ear to Satan's falsehoods. May we give them no entrance to our souls. For Thy name's sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"GOOD GOLD AND BAD GOLD."

"And the gold of that land is good." Read Genesis 2:1-12.

Would that all the world were the land of Havilah, where the gold is good! Then would this earth be an Eden indeed. For most of the sin and wretchedness of our modern life is due to bad gold, to covetous gold, to proud gold, to oppressive gold.

It is not necessary that we should have much gold at all. We should be amazed if we really tried to see how little of it is positively needed for our comfort and happiness. That is good gold, and God will see that we have enough of it. Every one of us may dwell in the land of Havilah.

But it is so easy to get out of it into the land where the gold is bad, where it poisons the soul and miserably dwarfs the life. The country of good gold lies very close to the country of bad gold. Let us beware of crossing the boundry of Havilah!

Prayer—Thy gold is always good, our Father. It is always sufficient and always delightful. We bless Thee for it and would be content. In the name of Thy Son, who had not where to lay his head.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"BLEMISHES."

From the soul of his foot even to the crown of his head, there was no blemish in him. Read II Samuel 14: 21-27.

With every year the world seems to think more of beauty; and that is well, if it were real beauty. But there is a false beauty and a true, and the difference, not always easily discerned, is as wide as the space between heaven and hell.

David was beautiful, and his son Absalom was renowned for his beauty. David was snared by the beauty of Bath-sheba and committed his great sin. Absalom, though there was no blemish on his body, was nothing but blemish in his soul.

How we need to watch these inner blemishes! How ugly they are! How permanent they easily become! And how sure are they to work through to all men's eyes at last!

Prayer—All beauty is in Thee, O Thou altogether lovely. Dwell Thou within us and impart Thy beauty to us.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"I HAVE JESUS AND YOU."

"Remember Jesus Christ."—Read II Tim. 2:1-13.

One of God's royalty recently went home. She was a rare, ripe, cultured saint, fifty years a school-teacher. Most of her life had been spent in her native New England; but she lived out her radiant closing years in South Carolina with a niece.

This foster-daughter one day expressed sympathy with her aunt because she was so far removed from all her old friends. "I do not mind, since I have Jesus, and you," came the quick reply.

What a window into a vast and glorious truth! To have the constant satisfaction of fellowship with Jesus, and with an understanding earthly friend—that is an adequate life. And consider the privilege of being the "you" in such a relationship.

Prayer—For all that Thou dost mean, blessed Saviour, to human hearts, and for all that Thy other friends mean, we lift up our gratitude today.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"OUR PEACE."

"And this man shall be our peace." Read Micah 5:1-9.

In this Messianic chapter there is no doubt who "this man" is. Nor is there any doubt in the history of the world or in the life of anyone that makes trial of Jesus Christ. "My peace I give unto you," said Christ; and verily He has fulfilled His promise for all His disciples.

This storm-tossed world longs for peace with unutterable longing, and peace stands waiting at the door. Wars and turmoils and troubles afflict the nations and afflict the men that make up the nations, but always afflict them needlessly.

Is there in all history a deeper tragedy than this universal search for the Peace that is so near at hand?

Prayer—Thou shalt be our Peace, blessed Saviour. Our Peace in this world, our refuge from sin and sorrow of all kinds, and our Peace in the world to come, forever more.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"MILADY BREAKS INTO PRINT."

"Moses wist not that his face shone." Read Exodus 34: 29-35.

For many short years, Milady has endured the lot of life partner to a writing man. Not once that I recall has she suggested what I shall write about; until the other day, when she said, "I wish you would write a Meditation showing how persons are what they really are, and what folks think they are. You have made many nice allusions to me; but readers should know that they represent not the real me, but only what you see in me."

How is that for a case of Scotch conscience? As Moses wist not that his face shone, so the noblest lives are unaware of their own nobility.

Prayer—Richly Thou hast dowered our lives with earthly loves and fellowships; and we return thanks to Thee, our Father, source of all love and loyalty.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"AS THE YOUNGSTERS LAUGHED."

Seasoned with salt. Read Gal. 4:

Glad to be freed from class work, the students of a high school trooped into the auditorium to hear a visitor speak. Speeches are a chore, but preferable to lessons. To the students' wide-eyed amazement, this man started off with a joke, the point of which they did not at first catch. Then they howled. Another, fun-

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

AWAKE, O JERUSALEM.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Awake, stand up, O Jerusalem."—Isa. 51:17.

Awake, O Church of God! In echoing the cry of Isaiah I do not mean to challenge this great church to join the hurry, and the bustle of a rushing restless age. Rather I like to think of the church as one place where we may all "be still, and know that God is God." But there is a sense in which I should like to call you to a mental awareness, which would cause our church to stand up to its duty in a day in which the demands upon the church are multiplied.

A sleeping church is not the church of the New Testament. It is not the kind of church that kept Jesus awake all night in Gethsemane, nor led forth from Pentecost to possess the earth. "Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty (Pro. 13)" may be as aptly spoken of a church as of an individual. "Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep (Ps. 121:4)," and as God keeps watch over His own, so also should the church share in an eternal vigilance with Him. "He that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame (Pro. 10:5)" and a church that sleeps now is sleeping in a day when "the fields are already white unto the harvest," and is certainly on its way to poverty of soul, and also poverty of place and power in its community and world.

I. Awake to the church's assets. The material assets of the church are great. It has set its Christian flag on every continent, and has staked off territory in every realm and domain. The nations of the world have not as yet become the nations of our Lord and Christ, but a leaven has been laid in the very center of them everyone. The church owns millions in equipment and material possessions, and controls many millions more. But all these things are mere trifles when it comes to the church's real assets! The church may offer the world Jesus Christ, and through Him, God the Father.

II. Awake to the spiritual needs of humanity. The human heart ever hungers for God. It hurts when it is blackened by sin. It feels estranged, and lonely when goodness is gone. More of the misery and sin of this old world is caused by estrangement from God than the world has ever dreamed of. The church can open the gateway to God. "How dreadful is this place—this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." (Gen. 27:16.) The gate of heaven is on earth! The church has it! "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven (Matt. 16:19)." The race cries out for God, and his kingdom of loving service, and kindness, and the church is given the serious command to answer that cry. It must awake to the spiritual needs of humanity. It knows them, or if it does not it has the opportunity to learn them as nothing else on earth may, and by the very nature of the case having the opportunity it is charged with the responsibility.

III. Awake to the demands of the present day. There was a great demand for the church in the day when it was founded by Jesus Christ. How that old world needed it! As it broke through its misery, want and sin, how beautifully it shone! There was political unrest right where the church was founded. There was economic need throughout the land. There was sickness and the lack of sanitation. Human personalities were bartered for personal weaknesses and sins. The masses followed the mind of the mob, and shouted their deadly slogans to their own hurt. Into that day the church shined. God had mercy and gave them the Galilean.

In every generation since that day the demands for righteous leadership have been insistent. It has taken courage. Some such courage as was set forth in Christ as He climbed Calvary has had to be shown often. The path of the church across the centuries and across the continents has been strewn with its Gethsemanes and Calvaries, and wherever the church has been faithful resurrections have followed.

Can the church stand the strain of the present day? It cannot do it asleep. It cannot do it half-heartedly. It cannot do it lying supinely upon its back. It will have to "Awake, stand up, O Jerusalem!" Men and women everywhere who name the name of Christ, and young people and children, too, will have to take their religion seriously, and make the meaning of their faith a permanent part of their lives, so that a meager portion of their allegiance in time, money, talent shall not be considered enough. Too often we look only at the results in a superficial manner, and forget the all-important thing, namely the cause. If we look out and see the misery and want of our age, its unrest and uncertainty, its fear and oppression, we are all too prone to overlook the underlying cause of such a condition, namely the lack of adherence to the teachings of Jesus Christ.

On the other hand if we are given eyes to see goodness,—and it is all about us; kindness, for it is everywhere; nobleness and courage, for they still live and thrive greatly,—we are too prone to overlook the course of all these, and other virtues. We accept these things as we accept the sunshine and the rain, not fully recognizing that they come from God, thru the Christ, thru the Church, thru the men, women and young people who make up the church.

IV. Awake to our individual and personal duty. Every temptation overcome, every noble impulse encouraged, every answer to honor, every achievement of duty helps to build the power of a Christian character, and to leaven our circle of society with the simple goodness which may rightly be expected of the church of Jesus Christ. Every time we fail as individuals we lessen the power of the church, and hinder the kingdom of God. We have a noble work to do, and a noble being to be, today and every day. If every individual Christian will awaken to his own task it will greatly help the church to "Awake, stand up," and save our day from disaster, and our generation from failure. Your little part in your little place counts, and will be honored of the Christ.

HIS WAY IS BEST.

I laid it down in silence
This work of mine;
And took what had been sent me—
A resting time.
The Master's voice had called me
To rest apart
"Apart with Jesus only,"
Echoed my heart.
I took the rest and stillness
From His own hand,
And felt this present stillness
Was what He planned.
How often we choose labor
When He says, "Rest"—
Our ways are blind and crooked—
His way is best.
The work Himself has given
He will complete;
There may be other errands
For tired feet.
There may be other duties
For tired hands;
The present is obedience
To His commands.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The continued showers make corn and vegetables grow rapidly. It looks like we will have a fine crop of vegetables within the next few weeks.

The boys planted a large watermelon patch and while they are late, the prospects for an abundant crop is good—watermelons are very much appreciated by the children at the orphanage. Any time we want to see them have a real good time and all be happy at the same time, we give them a watermelon feast.

We are looking forward with much pleasure to our Home Coming Day, which will be held on Sunday before Labor Day. We are anxious to have all the former children "come home" at that time and see each other and renew old friendships and make new acquaintances and see the improvements in the old home since they were here.

Every child reared in the Christian Orphanage is invited to be present. Those who have married are expected to bring their companions and we are expecting the orphanage "grandbabies" too. We are going to kill the fatted calf and serve a lunch in picnic style and it will be free. We will have milk, cool and refreshing, for the grandbabies. We trust every one who has had a home here will begin now to plan to come.

THE SECOND WEEK

Following the account in last week's paper describing the program of the First Week of the Bible Conference at Massanetta Springs, we briefly describe the outstanding features of the last week.

The only speaker belonging to the Southern Presbyterians is our beloved "Tom" Young, of Idlewild Church in Memphis. Those familiar with his versatility will rejoice in his return to Virginia. The secret of his platform power is his great soul. Men who must know world conditions will rejoice in Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, of Pittsburgh, Moderator of the 1930 U. S. A. Assembly, radio speaker for fourteen years over KDKA, and now fresh from a trip around the world. What "a serving" he will give his hearers!

Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, of Birmingham, well known for his sheer romance in preaching, will make his Presbyterian hearers feel their hearts burn with Methodist fire. Dr. Wm. Evans occupies a position enviable indeed among the Bible students. He fulfills more perfectly than perhaps any of our Bible teachers in knowing the Bible better than any other book. He is a "Master of the Book." Therefore, men listen with willing ears to his Scriptural interpretations. Bishop Kern, one of the Bishops of the Southern Methodist Church, has always been a shining light wherever he has voiced the vision of the Church's leadership. "Ted" Mercer of Savannah, for years has called men back to Jesus Christ as he tells his story of being reclaimed. Bishop Batdorf will be of especial interest to those who attend the "United Brethren Day" on August 19th. He is a great Christian leader. Dr. F. W. Burnham, of the Christian (Disciples) Church has a wide circle of admirers outside of, as well as in his home city of Richmond, Va.

And now we close this account by pointing to our "finds" from across the sea: Dr. Herbert V. Lockyer, of Liverpool, England, and Dr. D. E.

Hart-Davies, of St. Thomas Church, Edinburgh, Scotland. If American thought follows British theological thought, we need to know our Tomorrow by these messages of Today. They will be timely, if we are prophets, with a challenge.

This is Massanetta's last call for 1936!

ier, followed. The youngsters almost fell off their seats in glee.

So they followed him closely as he talked, informally and frankly, of how the youth of today should be getting ready for the new world in which they are to play the major parts.

Why should speakers ever be dull when they treat the great themes? What excuse has a Sunday School teacher for not being interesting? Jesus preached the loftiest truths by homeliest stories. His servants should be as their Master.

Prayer—God forgive us that we ever make Thy living truth seem commonplace and dreary. Equip us to be winsome witnesses.—Amen.

In Memoriam

ALFRED WELLONS ANDES.

Whereas it has pleased almighty God in His infinite wisdom and mercy to remove from our midst our dearly beloved pastor, Alfred Wellons Andes, who departed this life June 23, 1936 in the fifty-fifth year of his life.

We, the members of Dry Run Christian Church wish to express our appreciation of him in the following resolution:

1. Whereas: That we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well and give thanks for the life and faithful service that he rendered.

2. That in the going of our beloved pastor the church has lost one among the best but our loss is heaven's gain.

3. From the tree of life the buds and blossoms fall with the ripened fruit. Some lives are so full of usefulness to those about them, such a life was that of our brother in Christ.

4. He was one of those who walk the trail of life and leave lovely memories along the path. He made life a pleasure to all those who were associated with him. True and faithful in character, he drew friends to him who trusted him. His place in our church is vacant and our hearts are sad, but while we, as friends, mourn our loss, our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to the wife and children and commend them to the loving care and comfort of a dear Heavenly Father.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the Christian Sun for publication and a copy be written on the records of the Dry Run Christian Church, and a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

MRS. C. M. DOLLAR.

Mrs. C. M. Dollar, of Roanoke, Alabama, relict of the late Rev. C. M. Dollar, departed this life July 6, 1936, at the age of 75 years. She was the mother of nine children, five boys and four girls, all living. Seventy-one grandchildren, twenty-six great grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends are left to mourn her going.

She was the wife of a minister and the mother of two ministers, Revs. J. D. and Jesse H. Dollar. Two grandsons are preparing for the ministry. Sister Dollar was a very quiet, humble Christian. She possessed a very strong faith in God, and all her life gave evidence of her faith in Him.

She was a devoted mother, and her motherly love was very beautifully reciprocated by her children and grandchildren, who, in her last days were attentive, patient, kind, and very thoughtful of all her needs. They "rise up, and call her blessed." This dear mother will be missed in her home, her community and her church.

She was a faithful member of Old Rock Springs Church. She gave herself unselfishly to the tasks of life and was indeed a sympathetic and loving pastor's wife. She rejoiced in the life and work of her husband and contributed in a large way to his happiness. She had great faith in him and his calling.

She had also contributed in a wonderful way to the success of her sons in the ministry. It can be truly said of her that she stood by the cross of her Lord. When the end came she was ready to go—in fact, she didn't have far to go; she just peacefully fell asleep in Jesus.

"Dearest mother, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God who has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

The funeral was in charge of this writer, assisted by Rev. C. W. Hanson of LaGrange, Georgia, and Rev. G. H. Veazey of Wadley, Alabama. The body rests in the Old church cemetery by the side of her husband. Peace to her soul!

G. D. HUNT.

TWO AT A FIRESIDE.

I built a chimney for a comrade old,
I did the service not for hope or hire—
And then I traveled on in winter's cold,
Yet all the day I glowed before the fire.

DID YOU EVER HEAR OF THESE FOLKS?

Did you ever hear of a man who lost his job because he was a total abstainer?

Did you ever hear of an insurance company that offered reduced premiums to booze addicts?

Did you ever hear of a woman saying: "My husband would be the best husband in the world if he would only drink?"

Did you ever hear of a chauffeur who could drive his car with more safety if he took a snort of alcohol before starting out?

Did you ever hear of a railroad engineer who stood better with his employers if he patronized the saloons?

Did you ever hear of an Arctic explorer who stocked up his supplies with liquor in order to keep warm?

Did you ever hear of a child who complained because his daddy did not come home half soured?

Did you ever hear of a man who objected to his daughter marrying a man because he was not a booze addict?

Did you ever hear of a woman complaining because her husband spent too little time in the groggery instead of spending his evenings at home?

Did you ever hear a murderer on the gallows declaring that his abstinence practices led him to his predicament?

Did you ever hear of a man who beat his wife and thrashed his baby because he was sober when he came home?

Did you ever hear of a house owner who charged high rentals because a saloon had been set up next door?

Did you ever hear of a banker who threw up his hat with joy because a snake-hole was opened close by.

Did you ever hear of a mother who consented to her daughter becoming a bar-maid in order to help civilize the dump?

Did you ever hear of a preacher delivering a better sermon because he was half-shot?

Did you ever hear of a gink who boasted that he "could drink or let it alone," and who actually let it alone?

Did you ever hear of a "moderation society that advocated total abstinence?"—W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson.

Teach me to feel another's woe;
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy, I, to others, show,
That mercy show to me.

THE CHURCH MARCHES ON THROUGH SACRIFICE

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH rests on the fact of sacrifice. Its progress through the years is the result of sacrifice on the part of its members. Men and women inspired by the example of our Lord have embraced the opportunity to sacrifice that Christ might have the pre-eminence and that the Church might correctly represent Him in society. In the long ago sacrifice on the part of Christians meant the parting with substance, with possessions, with money, to the extent of the givers own impoverishment, if the needs of Christ and His Church demanded. Even life itself was offered freely that Christ might be lifted up to the world. Christ being their Master, was not only the Master of their wills but of their possessions. They gave freely of their lives and out of their poverty they gave their money. The true Christian does not live for himself but for Christ. He is not anxious about the things of the world, but he is anxious about the things of the kingdom. He is not unduly concerned about his financial security but he is greatly concerned for his spiritual safety. Christ has warned us about laying up treasures on earth. They perish. Let us walk up and stand before the Gospel mirror and look at ourselves—observe the way we live, the luxuries we enjoy, the possessions that are ours, the income that we have; look at the church in its needs, the world in its sins. Listen, you will hear the Spirit say, "He became poor that through His poverty ye might become rich," rich in real riches. You will hear Him say, "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross." Looking again you will see Him standing on Calvary, but between you and Him will be forbidding letters, letters that spell sacrifice. He walked the path of sacrifice. Think you that you can find Him and fellowship with Him by any other path? The church can move forward only through sacrifice.

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1936.

NUMBER 32.

FRANKLINTON SUMMER SCHOOL.

The picture above shows some of the people who attended the Summer School of Leadership Training at Franklinton Christian College, July 6-10, 1936. Thirty-four people were present for the entire time, and many more came for one or more sessions.

This school was a real experiment in cooperation. White and colored races, three Church Boards, and representatives from several States were involved. Franklinton is a college for colored people, established several years ago by the Christian Church of both races. The merger of Congregational and Christian Churches made it seem advisable to merge Franklinton and Bricks Colleges. Then for financial reasons, Bricks closed. Members of the Afro-Christian Convention are eager to get Franklinton started to work again, and the prospects seem to be bright.

Rev. Robert Lee House of Newport News, Va., was Dean of the Summer School, and Professor J. A. Henderson of Townsville, N. C., was superintendent of grounds and entertainment. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill of Florida was director of the program, and Mrs. Chas. Rush of Charlotte, N. C., was registrar and hostess. Professor H. E. King of Raleigh, N. C., taught Bible, and Rev. Carl R. Key of Holland, Va., presented worship and stewardship. Mrs. Rush and Miss Coghill shared in presenting the work for women and young people. Rev. W. C. Bell, missionary to Africa, taught world friendship, and Dean House taught methods of teaching and led the discussion group for ministers. Visiting speakers included Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Rev. E. C. Lawrence, Rev. F. C. Lester, and Rev. H. S. Barnwell.

Franklinton offers a challenge to the churches of the Southeast. There are thousands of Congregational and Christian Church negroes in this section who need the ministry of a college. White leaders who shared in this school were delighted at this beginning, and the colored people were very appreciative.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Congratulations to the Virginia Valley Youth Fellowship officers on the excellent Bulletin recently published. That's fine! Keep the good work going.

Rev. H. S. Hardeastle, pastor of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., has been spending some time in the hospital where he underwent an operation last week. At this writing he is improving rapidly and expects to be home soon. His many friends will wish for him speedy and complete recovery, and the wish will be a prayer.

Miss Dorothy Grigsby of Knoxville, Tenn., and Miss Helene Cosenza of Rockwell Center, Long Island, N. Y., are this week conducting a Vacation Bible School at Newport Christian Church in the beautiful Page Valley of Virginia. Last week they were at Ocean View and Berea churches down by the sea. They seem to be enjoying their work in Virginia.

On Wednesday, August 12, 1936, in Wightman Chapel of Searritt College, at Nashville, Tennessee, Miss Anna Mae Taylor of Crossville, Tenn., will become the bride of Rev. Joe French, pastor of Ocean View and Berea Christian Churches at Norfolk, Virginia. Their many friends will wish for them long life, good success, and much happiness. They will be at home at Norfolk, Va., about the first of September.

Plans are well under way for Leadership Training Schools to be held at Norfolk and Suffolk this fall. Rev. Carl R. Key, Dean, has practically completed his faculty for the Nansemond County school to be held at Suffolk October 18-23, and so has Rev. Joe French, Dean, for the Norfolk school. Among the teachers from away are Miss Priscilla Chase of New York and Mrs. F. E. Bullock and Rev. E. B. Flory of Ohio.

SHALLOW FORD.

Sunday, July 26, brought to a close an unusually successful revival at the Shallow Ford Christian Church. The pastor of the church did the preaching, and his efforts were rewarded by twenty professions and twelve additions to the church. The services were well attended, and a wonderful Christian spirit was shown.

J. EVERETTE NEESE, Pastor.

"You are making a splendid beginning with your editorial work, and we are expecting THE CHRISTIAN SUN to grow steadily better, as you work with it."—Dr. Stanley C. Harrell.

THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY OF THE OXFORD GROUP.

Audiences variously estimated at from 3,000 to 10,000 people gathered at Stockbridge, Massachusetts, May 29 to June 8, to listen to Oxford Group leaders from many lands bear testimony to the change God has wrought in their own lives and to the need of every one for new spiritual life in order that the world may be transformed through men and women in harmony with God. Lenox, Great Barrington and Stockbridge were captured and the leaders moved on to New York, on June 8, to hold a great mass meeting in the Metropolitan Opera House. Among the speakers at these meetings were members of the nobility, professors, preachers and public men from Great Britain and Europe, as well as converted Socialists, pickpockets and drunkards from the lower strata of society. Others came from many walks of life in the United States and Canada. The leaders express their conviction that the secret of a changed world—Godly—world is changed individuals that make up the world, and that the secret of this change is complete surrender to the will of God. Whatever difference of conviction there may be as to method, there is no room for difference of opinion as to the desirability of attaining the objective. Testimonies from many parts of the world give evidence that the Gospel as presented by the Oxford Group is effecting transformations in all lands and in all classes of society.

FIRST REPORT.

At the end of the first month I make a report on what I have done as editor and collector for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Be it understood that the report is not merely what I have done. It is what all the editors and all the readers of the paper have done cooperatively in order that the paper may continue to serve our churches.

There has been a paper published each week. Sometimes it seemed to me that even this could not happen. But it did. And several have been kind enough to say they liked the paper. Thanks, kind friends. That is a help. I am taking the liberty to quote some of the statements elsewhere. (A new editor needs some chance to swell his ego.)

The Southern Convention agreed to pay me a straight sum of thirty dollars a week for salary and expense. At the end of the first four weeks there was a balance in hand of $65 with which to purchase stamps for 219 letters that were to mail and to pay myself a salary. Not so bad as it might have been. I might have escaped with the Convention funds, or gone in debt.

It has been impossible for me to get much work done with the mailing list until the last of the month, but letters have now gone out to those far behind in payment of subscriptions. I do hope that those who receive the letters will take the matter seriously. During July we dropped by request five, secured 24 new subscribers, and received 36 renewals. The list follows:

PIEDMONT COLLEGE.

At their annual meeting in June, the trustees of Piedmont College elected Dr. George C. Bellingrath, acting president, to succeed President Henry C. Newell, resigned.

Dr. Bellingrath comes to his task well qualified for the duties involved. A southerner by birth and a native Georgian, he received his undergraduate training in the South, attending the Boys High School of Atlanta and Davidson College in North Carolina. From the latter institution, Dr. Bellingrath received the A. B. degree in 1918. Following a year in the United States Navy, where he was commissioned Ensign, he entered Union Seminary, Richmond, Va., receiving the B. D. degree in 1923. In the fall of 1924 Dr. Bellingrath entered Columbia University where he received in 1925 the M. A. and in 1930 the Ph. D. degree. He has been pastor of three churches, two in the South at Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Richmond, Va., and one in the North at Flushing, N. Y. For two years he was director of religious education in the Synod of Georgia. He came to Piedmont in the summer of 1934 as Dean of the college, which position he has filled very successfully.

Dr. Bellingrath reports that the college is in splendid shape to go forward, provided friends of the college continue their interest in the enterprise. Student enrollment continues at capacity as it has for several years, with many worthy students turned away because of lack of funds. The indebtedness has been greatly decreased during the administration of President Newell. During the year 1935-36 the college budget was balanced and $19,849.00 debt reduction was effected.

Piedmont occupies a strategic place in the educational program of the Southeast and hence of the nation. Students come largely from the rural areas of North Georgia and are of the sturdy pioneer stock who have lived among these hills and valleys since the time of the early settlers. In these days when a return to the fundamental principles of American democracy is so important, a college enrolling such students can be one of the finest contributions made by churches with the genius for independent thinking and individual initiative which characterize the Congregational-Christian group.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SUNDAY TRAVEL—WHERE?

The church bell had rung for the union evening service in our part of the city. The editor dropped his papers and rushed off to church. A large company was headed that way—until they reached the corner. The bright lights at the drug store and the movies beckoned them, and they went. The church was in the other direction. The editor went there. So did several others. But the majority did not. They were at the movies, the drug stores, the beaches, and with friends.

Traffic on Sunday is terrible. The highways are crowded. Pleasure resorts are filled. People go places, see things, and do things on Sundays. More people are killed and crippled by automobiles on Sunday than on any other day of the week. Life seems to be cheap on Sunday. Speed collects its toll on Sunday. Automobiles make possible long travel on Sunday.

But where are we going? One wonders. What do we expect to get at the end of the mad race? Again one wonders, and wonders. Is it a vision of God's beauty as recorded in nature? Hardly, for who takes the time to look along the highways? Is it great music that calls the crowds? Is it beautiful art that claims the attention of the surging multitudes? Is it some soul-hunger that makes us move from place to place with such rapidity? Apparently these are not the things that claim attention and cause the human wreckage along the highways on Sunday.

THEY HAVE THEIR REWARD.

Those who feed at drug stores or hot dog stands get what they pay for. Those who crowd to the movies in search of thrills should be satisfied with what they get. Those who flock to the pleasure resorts pay the price and get their return. Those who seek food, or thrills, or pleasures, like those who pray to be heard of men, have their reward when they receive the thing they sought. That is the pity of it. They pay so much, and get so little.

The frothing drink or the passing picture must suffice for those who turned away from the church on Sunday at the time of the evening sacrifice. But those who waited in the house of the Lord, the place where His honor dwells, they heard sweet music from the lovely organ, heard about Him who in a crowd said: "Somebody touched me," and were refreshed by the spiritual presence of the crucified Christ. At church the soul began to grow, and will likely continue for centuries. That reward lasts forever. The other passes with the day. Herein lies the right and wrong. Sunday was made for man—to rest his body, renew his soul. The reward that lasts is the kind to seek.

ARE YOU GOING TO COLLEGE THIS YEAR?

Hundreds of our Congregational and Christian Church boys and girls graduated from high school this year. Some of them will read this item. It is intended for them and their parents.

Some may think that you cannot go to college, that it costs too much, that it is not worth the effort. It will cost money and effort to go to college and get an education. But it will cost soul for some of you to stay at home. If God has given you the ability to learn, sufficient personality to develop, talents that you can use, then He expects you to develop to the best of your ability, and to do less will cripple, if indeed it does not crucify your soul.

Education does not mean everything in life, but it does mean much.

Ignorance is nothing to brag about. Neither is laziness. The two together are a bad combination and give a poor prospect for youth. It is worth the effort to go through college whether the pay checks come in large amounts immediately after graduation or not. There is joy in just knowing that you know. And there is joy in being one's best. The wider horizon makes life bigger. College is calling many of you of the younger generation, and you cannot afford to refuse the challenge.

WHAT COLLEGE WILL YOU ATTEND?

This is very important. Parents should have some say. There is a reason for giving thought to the college you will attend. That college will do more to mold your mind and character than almost any other thing. You will be a sort of reflection of the institution you attend. You may not believe it now, but it is true all the same. Those who have attended will tell you so.

As a citizen you pay tax to support colleges and universities. Why not attend them? The answer is simple. You want philosophy that takes not give. You want scientific facts interpreted in the light of Christian experience. You want literature that is the best, and that includes the Bible. You want philosophy that takes account of all the facts, and that includes religion. You want to be surrounded by those whose lives are dedicated to God rather than to a science or an institution. When you look through a telescope you want to be able to say, "the heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." When you analyze the human body or mind, you want to be able to say, "Thou hast made him a little lower than God, and hast crowned him with glory and honor."

If you read this paper, you are connected in some way with a church, and you want to go to a church college because the church college can meet needs of yours which other institutions cannot supply. It will also probably cost you less to attend your church school. You will certainly get much more for your money.

Don't say that you can't attend until you have all the information in hand from the institutions of your Church. Elon, Piedmont, Southern Union, and Rollins, have something to offer that you need. They were established by your Church for you. Call on them and give them a chance to aid you in your upward climb. They are yours for the taking. Your Church wants you to have the best, and it offers you a Church college.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH—ITS NATURE AND FUNCTION.

Moderatorial Address to the General
Council, by the late

DR. PARKES S. CADMAN.

I have been moved to speak upon the Christian Ecclesia as our paramount concern because she is fighting for what has been called a "lost cause" having no real significance in the human world. Did we believe what her antagonists boldly declare, we should be compelled to regard her as an organization condemned to "Dwell in God's contempt apart With ghastly smooth life, dead at heart,

Tame in earth's paddock as her

Again, when the verdict of not a few influential thinkers of a kind is cast for a mechanistic cosmos, in which a man figures as the by product of an insensate process, what have we who profess allegiance to the Church to say in rebuttal? The wild drivers of the chariot of modern society who are heading it for destruction are vocal enough. Can we be silent concerning the spiritualities the Church embodies?

A third reason for this utterance is the fact that Western Christendom has not fulfilled Christ's Ideal of His Church. She was torn asunder in the sixteenth century, and one of her divisions has split into further fragments, with disintegration still at work and reintegration a slow and difficult task.

A fourth reason for this apologetic is that the evils of the church's disorganization are a heavy drain upon the efficiency of her ministry. It is "So much of earth, so much of heaven,

And such impetuous blood," that we need to be reminded, though the world seems mad, it is forever God's world. Amid the babel of contending factions, some of these as coxsure as they are erroneous, it is not surprising there are moments when faith and reason, even faith and righteousness, appear at variance. Such moods confirm the saying of Sir Francis Bacon that those who begin with certainties end with doubts, whereas those who begin with doubts end with certainties. But I open my heart to you as brethren in Christ who are "Dowered with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn, the love of love"; who know the Church must set her house in order before she can reasonably expect to disseminate peace based on justice among the agitated and perverted human beings to whose rescue she is pledged.

My contribution is, therefore, irenic in purpose, determined by the fact that the Church Universal is New Testament Christianity's most characteristic creation, and that her mission and witness for twenty centuries are mankind's most valuable assets. Moreover, I speak of the Church as a whole; of the congregation of all souls reborn in Christ and gathered out of every nation and kindred, fused into one spiritual homogeneity broadly and securely founded upon the teachings of her Living Head. If this description, rather than definition, of her Being seems too fluid, at least it escapes the rigidities which hitherto have wrecked her oneness in her Lord. One crying necessity is a doctrine of the Church sufficiently spacious and coherent to stimulate the fidelity of her ministry and to renew the devotion of careless millions who are her debtors for what civilization they possess. That doctrine would release us from a staggering load of claims. High or Low, which delay her catholicity. It would supply a strategic basis from which to attack the iniquities which have wrought incalculable wrong while churchmen have wrangled. It would neutralize the sharpness of the controversial spirit by the forbearance of the fraternal temper.

It is treason to God for Christians to evade their moral obligations. However stupendous the difficulties may seem we agree that our Lord's conception of the Divine Society should be our goal; toward which we must set out, seeking till we find it. From its birth in Judea His religion of inwardness and power was registered as a self-sufficient and independent Commonwealth whose citizenship is in heaven; absolutely set apart from all Papan systems of political imperialism; nor did subsequent degeneration of methods blot out its sanctuaried life. The Church has assembled notable Synods and Councils, built strong States and won some lasting and some Pyrrhic victories. But her principal achievement consists in an unbroken succession of impressive personalities who avow with St. Augustine: "If God is my Father the Church is my Mother." They extended the meaning of their Redeemer's Incarnation; in them was the satisfactory evidence of His leavening influence upon a corrupt social order. However lamentably some Church magnates revealed distrust of her spiritual supremacy in their attempts to constitute a super-

State, she continued to produce saints, theologians, pastors, preachers and missionaries. All periods of her history are our inalienable heritage, and as such, they are related to what we consider in this Council.

Here institutional Christianity's theological reconstruction looms into view. The Puritanism we revere, excellent in resistance to unlicensed power; influential as the architect and builder of the free Churches in free States, must not be content with its record nor assume airs of distinction. It, too, has to flow in the general stream of Church life and consciousness. The rampant individualism or sectarianism which declines this mergence will be isolated. The unhistoric attitude which looks with aversion upon the ages between Apostolic times and those of Luther as a night of unclean things must yield to a more correct and sympathetic interpretation of Mediaevalism. As the firm perspectives of the past lift above the mists of prejudice it is clear that nearly every priesthood and prophecy, doctrine and ritual, has conferred some specific benefits on us who are their heirs.

If these fragmentary references convince us that the Church is absolutely indispensable to the Christianization of the social order, the total truth and vantage of our ministry will be confirmed. Her moral control has now everywhere perceptibly declined, and is ruthlessly supplanted by some political governments which insist the Bride of Christ shall become the paramour of the political State. We shall not, as inheritors of hardly won civil and religious freedom, submit to any dictatorship whose regimen must be obeyed. This resolution, however, saddles Protestantism with the responsibility of choosing whom or what it will obey. Since obedience is the first law of social progress, it is indissolubly related to liberty. Perfect obedience to a perfect law would give us perfect freedom. This being the ideal, to what extent can Protestantism conform to it? An answer is imperative. We cannot call that freedom in the church which is lawlessness in the State.

In his Stanzas from the Grande Chartreuse Matthew Arnold speaks of our fathers in God who

"... water'd with their tears
This sea of time whereon we sail;
Their voices were in all mens ears
Who passed within their puissant hail.
Still the same ocean round us raves,
But we stand mute, and watch the waves."

If we have a purer and more intelligent interpretation of religion than

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mr. W. W. Ballard is dead! That message came over the phone Thursday, July 30, 1936, about half past ten o'clock. It was a shock to his family and many friends. He was 79 years old, but appeared to be in good health until a few days ago. On the day of his death he remained in bed later than usual and called the doctor for consultation. When the doctor arrived he found him ill from a heart attack, and he lived only a few minutes. He died whispering a prayer to the Father of all living.

The deceased was a son of the late Robert and Louise Virginia Ballard, and was born in Nansemond County, near Suffolk, February 4, 1857. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Annie Norfleeter, one daughter, Mrs. John E. Wirkler, of Oberlin, Ohio, one granddaughter, Mrs. Ralph Wolf of Kalamazoo, Mich.; two grandsons, John E. Wirkler, Jr., and Richard Wirkler of Oberlin, Ohio, and four great grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Otis S. Smith, Sr., are the next nearest of kin living in Suffolk.

Mr. Ballard and Mr. Otis S. Smith opened a general merchandising store in Suffolk in 1880, and later developed this into a department store under the firm name of Ballard and Smith. The firm conceived the idea of selling the best goods obtainable at a fair price. For 51 years Mr. Ballard was a member of this firm and sought to maintain high ethical business standards in this relationship. He retired from business four years ago.

Mr. Ballard united with the Suffolk Christian Church 60 years ago. He was interested in every phase of the church, but gave much of his time in his earlier years to the choir and Sunday school, being greatly interested in the work among the young people. He devoted much time to the study of music, and enjoyed the opportunity of worship in song.

Since his retirement from active business he kept a record of the funerals in which he assisted in the singing. During this time he has assisted in 322 funerals. From personal experience this writer can testify that he was willing to give his service alike to the rich and the poor. Whenever he was called upon to sing in a funeral service, he responded cheerfully. He has gone to the cottage of the poor and the palace of the rich to help in time of sorrow. Hundreds of people in Suffolk and the surrounding counties can bear testimony to this observation,

This sketch is not offered as a biography. After more than thirty-five years of association with him, it is possible to give some trustworthy impressions of a man well known to thousands of people in Suffolk and vicinity. He had his faults. He did not seek to conceal them. In order to be fair it is necessary to look upon a man's life as a whole. This man was a musician. He loved the beautiful. Nature, in field and forest, in shaded glen and fragrant flower, spoke a message to his aesthetic mind and soul. He had a vivid imagination. He saw life in deep colors. The evil appeared worse to him than to the average man; the good was more to be desired. People of his temperament are sensitive to every influence within their range. For them life must move with swiftness and thrill. He was full of energy. He was alert. He was active. He had a high sense of honor and integrity. He was deeply religious. He was spiritually-minded.

With all of this he frequently appeared to be explosive and lose his self-control under slight provocation. But this only indicated his conception of integrity of character. He deeply resented any injustice, real or imaginary, and he was often misunderstood in the more active period of his life. At heart he was sincere and friendly, seeking to do the will of God as he understood that will. He fought his battles, upon his knees, before an open Bible, and won his victories where others failed. He was a man of much prayer. He was ready to obey the summons to appear before God. He wrote out the plans for his funeral on the day before his death. The following ministers officiated at the funeral, which was conducted in the Suffolk Christian Church, Sat., August 1, 1936, at 4:00 P. M.; Revs. J. G. Truitt, Carl R. Craig, H. J. Goodwin and the writer. Mrs. John G. Truitt, Mrs. Archie Smither, Mr. J. N. Alexander and Mr. R. A. Harrell sang "In the Hour of Trial," "When the Saints from all Their Labors Rest" and "Abide With Me." Mrs. C. R. Wallace was the accompanist.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Twenty-five years ago, Saturday, August 1, Mr. Luther E. Carlton and Miss Myrtle Boyd were united in marriage. This has proven to be a most happy union. They have not only lived together through these years, but they have sought to understand each other, to appreciate each other, and to love each other more.

The anniversary of this happy event was communicated to a number of their intimate friends who had the happy privilege of celebrating together with them Saturday evening from seven to ten o'clock. Friends, neighbors, and relatives, came by the scores. It would be difficult to conceive of a more fitting occasion or happier associations.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton are members of Ingram Christian Church. They have wrought well for their local church. They are devoted souls to the cause of Christ. Their interest and efforts have swept far out beyond the local church. In many ways they have been a blessing and a benediction to the entire denomination and most of the denomination's enterprises and institutions. To visit in their home is a distinct privilege and pleasure. It has been my privilege to spend the evening in the home on different occasions. Always, when the day is done and the hour for sleep and rest has come, this family is called to prayer. Family prayers in the home have gone out of style with many families, but not with this one. There is something refreshing to the spirit to be given the privilege of turning the minds of the members of the household to the giver and preserver of life by the reading of the scripture and the exercise of prayer in behalf of all.

In this day of materialistic domination, of mechanical speed, and of multiplied responsibilities, it seems difficult for many to recognize God and give him a place in their lives. It is refreshing and most heartening to find faithful souls who, while succeeding in the affairs of the world, take every care to succeed in the affairs of God.

The friends who came to share in this happy event sought to accentuate the happiness of the occasion by bringing tokens of admiration and affection. Gorgeous and more modest pieces of silver graced the table that stood on the second floor at the head of the stairway. These gifts evidenced in a small way the affection and esteem in which these Christian friends are held.

It is the hope of the writer that Mr. and Mrs. Carlton may be blessed with many days and given the privilege of celebrating their golden anniversary, and that many of the friends who helped to celebrate the silver anniversary may have the privilege of joining in that celebration twenty-five years hence.

For the Children

Dear Boys and Girls:

How would you like to have your very own page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN? Well, your Editor has been thinking about it. He wonders if you would like it. And then he wonders, even if you would like it, how he is ever going to find it out. That is what he is thinking. If you would like your page, a page just for you, will you write and tell him so?

He promises you, if you will write him: 1. That he will print your letter in the SUN (would you like that?) 2. That if enough of you want the page he will try to arrange it for you. 3. That if you will tell him what you would like to have on the page, he will do his best to make it like you want it. Now isn't that a fair offer?

All right, who will be the first to write? We are going to list the writers under the names of the States from which they come. Which state will have the honor of sending the first letter?

THE STORY OF THE CAT.

"Pussy, pussy, pussy, come here. Nice kitty, come on."

But pussy preferred to lie still under the shade of the big furze bush rather than obey the calls of the children.

"Get some milk, and give it to her, Marion," said mother. "She will be sure to come for the milk, for it is time for her lunch, but I would not try to pet her this hot day. She will be as uncomfortable as you would be if someone kept bothering you, and trying to take you in their lap."

Marion got the milk. They watched the dainty creature lap it all up. She did not spill a drop. "She drinks her milk the way you taught us to eat our soup," laughed Clara. "See, she takes it from the other side of the dish every time."

"Where do cats come from, mother?" asked Bob, as Puss, having drunk her milk, walked sedately away.

"I do not know, dear, nor do I think anyone else does. As far back as we have any history there have been cats, both wild and tame. Cats never make as good pets as do dogs. You remember the story you like so much by Kipling of "The Cat Who Walked By Himself?" Cats do that. They can be very tame, indeed, but they will seldom learn to obey, or to be as friendly as do some dogs."

"I read once," added Lucia, who was in High School, "that in the old country of Egypt, cats were regarded as sacred animals. The Egyptians had a cat-headed goddess whom they called Pasht. Cats were sacred to her. When a cat died, the family shaved its eyebrows as a sign of mourning. Cats have even been found embalmed so their bodies might be preserved. Maybe the family thought there would be rats in the other world and cats would be needed."

"Yes, Egyptians regarded the cat as sacred," nodded mother. "Once, so we are told, the Persians sent an army against Egypt. Learning of the Egyptians' reverence for the cat, the Persians provided a cat for each soldier in the front rank of the Persian Army. The Egyptians were armed with strong bows and sharp arrows, but when they saw that to fire on the Persians might mean killing a cat, they refused to fire. The Persians advanced and won a decisive victory. Egypt had to give one of the little princesses to the Persian monarch as a wife for his son, and pay a huge ransom as well, because the Egyptians would not fire on cats."

"Another thing," chimed in brother George, who had just entered the

A GOSPEL HALL OPENED ON THE RUSSIAN BORDER.

That part of the great Trans-Siberian Railway system which passes through Manchuria on its extensive course from the Polish border in Europe to Vladivostok on the Pacific Ocean was known as the Chinese Eastern Railway until purchased a year ago by Japan and Manchukuo, but is now known as the North Manchuria Railway. Where this line enters Manchuria on the west, at Manchuli, we helped organize a place of prayer a few years past. Meetings were held for Chinese in the Russian Baptist Church. Later the little Chinese group rented a place for meetings and a Korean pastor who speaks Chinese served as spiritual leader while studying Mongolian to become a missionary to Mongolia. However, during the recent political disturbances following organization of the new state of Manchukuo, so many Chinese and Russians left Manchuli that during our furlough last year the group ceased to meet. But we know of one Christian Chinese family remaining there, are in touch with them, and hope to reorganize work there again.

At the other (eastern) end of the Chinese Eastern section of this long Asiatic railway, where it enters Siberia again, there is another frontier city, of greater size than Manchuli on the west. Its name in Chinese is Suifen, in Russian Pogranichnaya. Since coming to North Manchuria eleven years ago, this place, as others, has been on our heart, but we had no money to place an evangelist there, nor were there any Christians to serve as a nucleus for a beginning. A Seventh Day Adventist evangelist opened a preaching hall there, but made no headway, and later moved to another town.

On our recent trip to ten places east of Harbin we were able to get started a beginning of mission work in this frontier city, Suifen. While distributing tracts among the people we found an earnest Chinese Christian, a Mr. Liu, who, with his family, had moved there from near Laichowfu, far down in Shantung Province. He was baptized by our old friend and Chinese colleague, the lamented Pastor Liu Chien-Cheng, who was serving as superintendent of the North China (Laichowfu) Baptist Orphanage when shot by bandits in Shantung. Old Bro. Liu agreed to take charge of the preaching place at Suifen as a voluntary lay worker, if we would furnish the rents and incidental expenses. His son donated some benches. There will now be a place on the main street where the gospel can be preached when one of us missionaries, or an evangelist passes that way. Furthermore, Bro. Liu will be there to explain the way of life to those who come in, distribute tracts and sell gospel portions and Bibles.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

If any church has seats, or pews, that it has replaced on any account, it will certainly be a great favor and a generous act if they can be given to our newly organized church, Ivy Hill, in Carroll County, Virginia. If any pastor, or anyone interested, knows of pews that can be thus donated, please advise Rev. O. A. Elmore, at Fancy Gay, Va. Pastor Elmore of our Carroll County, Virginia, work will gladly get trucks to haul the seats, or pews, that may be thus donated.

Gratefully,

J. O. ATKINSON.

MISSIONARY NEWS ITEMS.

The Willing Workers Missionary Society of the Bethlehem Christian Church, near Suffolk, Va., has had a most successful year. Monthly meetings have been held regularly with more than a fifty per cent attendance. The mission study book "Around a Mexican Patio" was used very effectively with the aid of Mexican pictures. At Christmas time they sent peanuts to the boys and girls in our Carroll County, Va., mountain work.

A contest is in progress now in this society in which the two teams are racing to Mexico and back to America, using a chart with a car and boat to represent the teams. Each mile of progress is earned by the amount of money turned in. The "foot of pennies" plan and also the sale of pencils have been other means of raising their apportionment.

They are planning a Mexican party to be held soon when Mexican articles, albums and pictures will be displayed and the refreshments will be made from Mexican recipes. All requirements of the conference have been met and this splendid group is worthy of praise. Miss Ruby Piland is the superintendent and Mrs. A. C. Moore is the assistant of these interested boys and girls. Keep the good work going.

WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD.

Durham, N. C., July 27.

Society Presidents!
Greetings:

Tuesday, October 6, at 10:00 A. M. Durham Congregational - Christian Church; corner Main and Gregson Streets. There! You have the time and place for our fall conference. Of course you plan to attend and have your society represented.

The bad winter months prevented good attendance and consequently reduced payments on apportionments, so we must be very busy between now and September 29. We certainly would like to place the name of every society upon the Treasurer's Honor Roll. Remember all who go over the apportionment are placed on a list for Special Mention.

We have enjoyed visiting other churches during these two years, now we hope to have you return our visit October 6. Until that time we wish you a pleasant summer, and a successful termination for your Society's year.

Cordially,

MRS. S. C. HARRELL, Pres.

MRS. C. H. STEPHENSON,

Treas.

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Virginia Valley Central Missionary Conference of the Congregational-Christian Church met Thursday, July 23, with the New Hope Christian Church. The conference, using as its theme "Winning Others" was called to order by the president, Mrs. K. H. Sale of Winchester, Virginia. Dr. M. L. Weekley, pastor of the New Hope Church, welcomed the conference, and Rev. W. J. Andes gave the response. Mrs. J. E. Bryant led the worship service, using as her theme "The three marks of a Christian." These three marks or characteristics of a Christian were forgiveness, gratitude and humility. The Scriptural setting was found in the 17th chapter of Luke.

Various reports were read, and all of them showed that there had been some activity going on within the Missionary Conference during the year.

One of the best features of the program was an address by Mrs. Ralph Moore, a returned missionary from India. She stated that most of the missionary activity was and should be credited to the women of our churches. She desired that they do more and more for the support of the missionaries that are on the field and for those that want to go. A description of the people in India was given as to their living conditions, their superstitions, the caste system which is prominent there. As a closing remark she rescribed a Christian wedding there. Throughout her remarks one could feel that the people in India are worthy of all that we may do for them.

Appointment of committees followed, after which Miss Helen Showalter read a "Radio Broadcast."

Dr. M. L. Weekley led the afternoon worship service. Here he presented the three great conceptions of life. In the 10th chapter of St. John we find these conceptions. The first one is the "thief" conception; the second the "hireling" conception and the third is the "shepherd" conception.

Various reports were made. The missionary society from New Hope gave a playlet in which was seen the work that a missionary society can do.

A round table discussion, led by Miss Verdie Showalter, revealed some of the difficulties which some of the mission societies are experiencing.

The following officers were re-elected:

President, Mrs. K. H. Sale; Vice President, Mrs. A. W. Andes; Secretary, Mrs. B. F. Frank; Treasurer, Miss Verdie Showalter; Literature Superintendent, Miss Minnie Dofflemyre; Cradle Roll, Mrs. E. Lena Rothgeb; Women's Societies, Mrs. Samuel Earman; Young people, Miss Helen Showalter; Spiritual Life, Mrs. A. F. Kite.

An installation service, directed by Rev. W. C. Hook of Washington, D. C., was very impressive. The candle-light service was used and a greater determination was made on the part of everyone to render a great service to the mission cause in the next year. Rev. R. L. Williamson dismissed the congregation by prayer.

Many thanks should be given to the New Hope congregation for their bountiful entertainment, and congratulations should be given to the program committee for the wonderful program which was rendered.

W. J. ANDES.

BEAUTIFUL HILLS.

When I was a tiny tot and sat on the doorstep of our mountain cabin to watch the sun drop behind a blue hill, it never occurred to me to say, "Beautiful Hills." I recall many a day when I watched the sun come up over my little world and wondered if this life would ever be worth living. My world at that time consisted of towering blue peaks, rugged winding trails; and the greatest amusement I had was when I could string red peppers and green beans on a string to dry.

However, my lot was far better than many other children of these hills. I had milk to drink most of the time, as do all mountain children except when some old witch puts a spell on the cows. We were always fortunate in having cows that witches didn't take any fancy to. But I was too young to know about my good fortune. All I knew was that the world that I was living in was neither good nor beautiful. I could not understand why a fellow had to be born if this was what he was born for. All this was life among our hills a little while ago, but today as I come over the old Elk trail from a visit with our Elmores, I look below and far away to where blue hills fade into the sky and say: "Beautiful Hills." And indeed they are lovely. I realized that all these hills had ever needed was light. It takes light to bring out the beauty of any good picture. Now that God-fearing people have sent the light to our hills—the Light of the Cross—our hills have become a more beautiful picture. Even I who have felt every disappointment the human heart can feel, have known every failure a human being can know, still I can now see in these hills a beauty unsurpassed. Why? Because you who believe in a living God have made these hills over and are still adding touches of light here and there to bring out the best there is in this hilly picture. You have sent to us from the Christian world these Elmores and they have a spirit that is adding light where they go. I want to thank those who have sacrificed for these servants of God to come. Those who are paying, those who had to give up these people, and all who are praying, are helping to send us a light here. May God bless you.

This past week the Elmores have been used in a mighty way. They have closed a one week's meeting at Ivy Hill which was the first revival ever held there. They took in twelve members and the people are very anxious to organize a church there. Bro. Elmore had good congregations at the services all the week and the best of attention and behaviour. They are using a little school building to hold services in and not half the people could find even standing room inside the building. The Elmores believe that Ivy Hill has a wonderful group of people and that they will continue to climb.

And in the three churches or Sunday schools in our hills, there has been a total increase of 324 since June in attendance. Considering that most of these people walk over steep and rugged trails to come to church, I think our hills are doing well indeed this summer. Our hills are getting more beautiful every day.

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

MISSIONS HANDICAPPED BY INTOXICANTS.

The apparent inability of the government to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquor to Indians adds to the difficulties against which Christian missionaries are continually obliged to contend. Before repeal, the bootlegger was more easily discovered by Indians who were opposed to liquor traffic, and apprehended by government police. Now the supply of liquor is abundant and it is offered at a price within the reach of the Indians, especially those receiving cash for their labor under the government work relief program.

Numerous tribal councils have appealed to the government to seize and punish those who engage in debauching the Indians, by enticing them into vicious resorts, and the Navajo Council some months ago assumed the responsibility of appointing a force of special policemen to ferret them out and bring them to justice. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is aware of these distressing conditions and is making earnest efforts to apply corrective measures. Large appropriations of money not now available would be required to clean up these plague spots, such as are found in centers like Gallup, N. M.—Tribune.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

YOUTH AND ITS BIBLE.

The Bible is the best pathway to Christian living. However, some of our young people today do not understand why the Bible, written years ago could be of any aid to the modern youth of today, and they think a book should be substituted to suit the modern machine age.

This substitute was offered a few years ago with poems and excerpts of classical literature included in it; but, the idea was not accepted. The facts with which the Bible deals authoritatively were vital two thousand years ago and are vital today. They were of importance in obscure Judea and are of importance today whether one lives in a populous metropolitan area or on a fringe of civilization. The modernization of society is a process to which the Bible is indifferent. "Be sure your sins will find you out" does not care for clock or calendar. "Jehovah is my light and my salvation" has no reference to latitude nor longitude. Therefore, it is hardly to be expected that a substitute is going to be found when the Bible gives no promise of being outmoded.

The Bible is a piece of literature that has stood the test of time and has guided youth in innumerable instances. Abraham Lincoln, who has been the ideal of thousands of American young people, read and studied the Bible more than anything else.

The Bible deals with personal problems that will help us very much today. When we need advice on such problems as choosing a purpose in life, friendships, anxiety over loved ones, financial perplexities, the guilt of sin, or when tempted to do wrong, certain passages of scripture will give us the best advice we may secure from any source.

A few verses read in the morning will start the day off right, and a few verses read before retiring is soothing to the tired mind.

ROSEMONT MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Rosemont Christian Church has done splendid work this year under the leadership of Miss Charlotte Morgan, president, and her fellow officers and committees. All the meetings have been held regularly, and the attendance has been encouraging. The study books have constituted a prominent part of the program at each meeting, and have been taught by members of the society.

The annual mite box opening and rally program was held on July 10, and when the boxes were opened and the money counted it was found that the offering was $16.00, which put the society over the top with the apportionment for this year.

At this rally meeting Mrs. J. F. Morgan gave a message on the subject, "Catching a Vision," which was very much enjoyed. Games were played on the beautiful church lawn, after which refreshments were served in the social rooms of the church. Much of the success of the society is due to the adult leader, Mrs. A. S. Mills.

HAVE YOUNG PEOPLE LOST INTEREST IN RELIGION?

At the close of four weeks of Conference and Convention of two different races of young people—seekers, like ourselves—we are faced with this most interesting question. We declare, with our comrades, that our religion is more vital than ever before. The crises we are facing make us think honestly and intensively about our social welfare. We are seeking deeply to purify and consecrate our lives to active service of the Master Teacher. We dedicate ourselves to the Father's business of "Going about doing good." We are vitally interested in spiritual things. We warn others who have become too "thing-minded" in this age. We hunger and thirst after righteousness in all walks of life. We crave the intelligent understanding of our elders and associates. Will you, and you, and you help us to make our "religious torch burn" a little brighter before we pass it on. This seems to be the heart cry and mind stirrer of youth.

CHRISTIAN IDEA OF SUCCESS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR

"It's good to have money and the things money can buy, but it's good, too, to check up once in a while and make sure you haven't lost the things money can't buy."—George Horace Lorimer.

There are many people today who measure their success in life by dollars and cents. Their success or failure is written into their financial statement. Many others measure success by their popularity and fame. But the Christian idea of success is very different. "What profiteth it a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul?" The Christian idea of success is not measured by money, fame, or popularity. These can all be taken from us—the bank may fail and leave us penniless; our fame will soon be forgotten; at the height of our popularity it is easy to stumble and have the world turn against us, or someone else accomplish a greater feat and the eyes of the people turn toward that person and in the newer victory we are soon forgotten. But, Jesus remembers when the world forgets. The success we make "in His Name" is not forgotten. The one ambition of every Christian is to ever strive to be more like Christ, to live the life He would like to have them live.

Many persons are too easily satisfied with their accomplishments. Paul was never satisfied with his life. He always strove to be better, to live more completely like Christ. The Christian does not count his gain in this earthly world, but thinks of the gain he will receive after his work here on earth is finished. Paul believed that he could not really live a happy, fruitful, and worthwhile life unless he lived like Christ. So he made up his mind that as long as he lived he would preach Christ—not only through his words, but through the life he led. His was a successful life! If we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, we, too, can make a success.

Phillips Brooks has said, "Bad will be the day for every man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life that he is living, with the thoughts that he is thinking, with the deed that he is doing, when there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger, which he knows that he was meant and made to do because he is still, in spite of all, the child of God."

SAUL CONVERTED AND COMMIS- SIONED.

LESSON VI—AUGUST 9, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision."—Acts 26:19.

LESSON: Acts 9:1-31; Galatians 1:11-17; I Timothy 1:12-14. Printed Text: Acts 9:1-9; 17-19; I Timothy 1:12-14.

Paul is unquestionably the greatest Christian that God has chosen to give to the Church in nineteen hundred years. He is its profoundest theologian, its greatest missionary, its most tireless worker. The doctrinal foundations, the ethical heights, the missionary passion that have marked the Christian church down through the ages all spring from the apostle Paul. And the greatest event in his life was his conversion. Indeed it has been said that the two greatest witnessings to the divine origin of the Christian faith are the resurrection of Jesus Christ and the conversion of Paul. Paul was indeed a "chosen vessel" of God. Well acquainted with Greek learning, well versed in the Scriptures, efficiently trained in a great rabbinical school with Gamaliel as a teacher, richly endowed with a passionate nature, and a gigantic mind, with a zeal for obedience to the law, and unswerving loyalty to his convictions, he was a vessel meet for the Master's use, after he had been cleansed and sanctified by his contact with Christ.

A Zealous Persecutor.

Paul did not do things by halves. When he was converted he was on his way to Damascus, one hundred and sixty miles away, to persecute any followers of Jesus of Nazareth whom he might find there. But after Paul was converted he gave himself with the same zeal to the propagation of the gospel. It is too bad that we cannot display the same zeal for the Lord's work that we do for other things.

A Significant Conversion.

There are three accounts of Paul's conversion in Acts, two of them from the lips of Paul himself. There are minor variations in the accounts, but that attests to, rather than detracts from their authenticity or validity. And there are incidents in connection with the accounts that sound somewhat strange to many modern men—a light from heaven brighter than the sun at noon-day in an oriental country, an audible and a distant voice, a temporary blindness. But there are certain irrefutable facts—Paul met Christ face to face, Paul yielded his life to Jesus, Paul became a completely changed man. The conversion of Paul is one of the strongest historical evidences for Christianity.

There are several interesting factors in that conversion. In the first place it is quite evident that Paul had a profound and disturbing unrest and dissatisfaction in his heart. "It is hard for thee to kick against the goads"—it is hard for a man to be satisfied away from Christ.

Then there is the human factor involved. Of course Paul was transformed and renewed by the power of God through the Holy Spirit. But human personality entered into his conversion. Ananias, a man unknown was the instrument through whom the final light came. Trace conversions back to their source and you will usually find some person as a determining factor.

An Active Convert.

"What wilt thou have me to do?" Paul was ready to do something. As soon as he was converted he went to work witnessing for Christ. With characteristic zeal he flung himself into the Master's service. What a rebuke he is to us with our lukewarm loyalty, and half-hearted service! The best thing the church can do for the new convert is to give him something to do.

A Friend In Need.

Paul had a hard time of it at first. He had to live down his past reputation. As a matter of fact when he came to Jerusalem the disciples would not receive him. Luke said they were afraid of him and believed not that he was a disciple. But Barnabus, the great-hearted was a friend in need. He vouched for Paul, became his closest friend, and a co-worker with him. What a splendid thing it would be if every young convert could have someone to take a personal interest in him, and help him over the rough places during his early Christian experience. Converts to Christ need Christian companionship.

A Good Word for Jesus.

There was a deep sense of gratitude in Paul's life which found expression again and again. When he wrote to his young friend Timothy he told him how thankful he was that God had helped him through Christ, and had called him into his service. And this in spite of the fact that Paul had been a blasphemer and a persecutor. It was by the grace of God that he had become what he was. The extenuating circumstance was the fact that Paul had sinned ignorantly. He had followed his conscience, but had sinned in doing it. His sin was sin, but it was more readily pardoned because it was not presumptuous sin. But when he saw the light, he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. Alas for the man who sins against the light. Alas for the man who knows to do good and does it not.

Somehow or other we are not as vocal about our Christianity as we ought to be. We are not as alert to speak a good word for Jesus Christ as we ought to be. Before high and low, Paul was always ready to witness for Christ, a witness given humbly but with such sincerity and confidence that it counted tremendously for the cause of Christ.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

that of the Patristics, Mediaevalists and Scholastics, it is high time we demonstrated it to insurgent multitudes. Yet this cannot be done unless churchmen act conjointly from cardinal beliefs consistent with the marrow of New Testament Christianity.

Congregationalism rejected the Calvinism which sacrificed man's moral freedom at the behest of a false metaphysic. But it has not as yet authorized any satisfactory statement to fill the vacancy created by the disavowal of a creed which outraged every instinct of justice. Doubtless our flexibility in creedal matters has its gains. As believers we are not so closely articulated in one doctrinal body that the loss of a single non-essential bleeds it to death. But flexibility also has its losses. The justifiable repudiation of Calvinism's spurious limitations on God's free grace and man's cooperative will has given rise to the clerical free lance who severs himself from whatever has been, feels no affinity for it, suspects all creeds, and is susceptible to theological changes for their own sake.

Here is no lasting policy. It is not conceivable that the captain of the "Queen Mary" would have refused chart and compass for her maiden voyage as merely conventional signs. Yet it is conceivable that some sincere but misguided brother's ministry will be jettisoned for want of the aid supplied by a definite creed of the Christian philosophy of life. After all, no reasonable thinker, however individualistic, has seriously affirmed the complete freedom of the will, even in the pulpit.

Meanwhile lesser breeds without the law have seized the skirts of circumstance. Councils assembling Christianity's finest minds and its devoted spirits once fashioned its cardinal verities and prescribed codes of human conduct. But these are now at the mercy of philosophers, novelists, es-

THE GREAT OCULIST.

TEXT: "Lift up your eyes."—
Read John 4:35-38.

"What you need is not an opportunity, but an oculist," said a wise person to one who complained that his life held no opportunities. Of course, there were opportunities: there always are. What was lacking was the power to perceive them. "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

As the great Oculist of souls, Jesus Christ is forever opening blind eyes. It is a commonplace of religious experience that once Jesus has become Saviour and Lord of a life, that person's spiritual perceptions are opened to all of the beauty and opportunity that surrounds him.

Nobody need pray for opportunity for larger, nobler living; but only for eyes able to see the opportunities that throng every day.

Prayer—As Thou didst make the blind of old to see, so touch our eyes, dear Saviour, that we may behold the loveliness of life and the fulness of opportunity all about us.—Amen.

MONDAY.

AREUNION OF CLASSMATES.

TEXT: "Ye are my friends."—
Read John 15:12-17.

In the aisle beside me, at a great college musical festival, two professors met, after thirty years of separation. Both were changed, but they recognized each other. And their happiness in the reunion warmed the hearts of observers.

Doubtless other minds than mine were set to thinking, by that pleasant incident, of the greater reunions in store for us, when we shall meet and know the dear ones from whom we have long been parted. What a knitting up of broken ties there will be! And the reminiscences! As Moses and Elijah and Jesus colloqued together on the Mount of Transfiguration, so will congenial spirits commune.

Some persons who are reading these feeble lines will next month be in the glorious realm where they will "know fully." Why should not Christians have high and happy anticipations of eternity's reunions?

Prayer—We are sometimes lonely here, dear Father; and we anticipate, as part of Thy beautiful providence, the reunions of heaven; and the meeting with our Saviour, face to face.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

BACK TO OLD BOOKS.

TEXT: "Ask for the old paths."—
Read Jer. 6:14-19.

After weeks of reading new literature I am turning again to the old. I have just reread "The Pickwick Papers," and I am content to echo "the old is better." Why cumber our minds with this artificial, materialistic, sensual, atheistic stuff when it is possible to read better books, with a deeper understanding of human nature, and with an implicit faith in God and in the old verities?

Best of all, why not give unhurried, intelligent reading to the Bible's masterpieces; then give the waking moments of bed-time meditation to pondering upon them? I had a gorgeous hour last night with the Transfiguration.

Prayer—We would be people of the Book, our Father; knowing it, loving it, and finding our souls enriched by its ever-new revelations of Thee.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE MERRY HEART.

TEXT: "A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance."—Read Prov. 15:1-17.

We all know "solemnoly" folks, "with just enough religion to make them miserable," as Moody said; who front life in a spirit of gloom. And we also know folks, old folks, who wear smiling faces, and are ever ready with a quip of a jest or a pleasantry, as if life held never a care for them.

These latter are usually the riper souls. They have lived and thought more deeply than the melancholy ones; and know that joy is a Christian apparel for life. Whatever they feel of grief and burdens, they hide as a secret in their hearts, known only to themselves and to their Comrade, who, on the way to a Cross, taught and practiced joy.

Prayer—Perhaps our Christian lives are weak, O Lord, because we have not accepted the strength which is in the joy of the Lord. Give us cheerful faces and merry hearts, that we may advertise Thee aright.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

MEETING A CRISIS.

TEXT: "How wilt thou do in the swelling of the Jordan?"—Read Jer. 12:1-6.

My friend and fishing companion is a business man from Ohio, a Presbyterian elder. Yesterday we were in an automobile smashup, when a reckless driver struck us at high speed. Both ears were wrecked, but nobody was seriously injured.

My pride in my friend was enhanced by his conduct; for crises reveal character. He was as quiet and as self-possessed as when missing a fish. No fear or frantic accusations; he was the least vocal of all the crowd that gathered. In a word, he behaved like a Christian gentleman.

Self-control in great emergencies comes from self-control in life's little things. The man who fusses about his food or his laundry will lose his head when it is most needed. But the life mastered by the Master will meet all contingencies with strength and serenity.

Prayer—Grant us grace, dear Lord, to live in quietness of spirit, that in the common days we may be exercised for the day of uncommon need.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

HEROES OF FAITH.

TEXT: "These all, having had witness borne to them through their faith."—Read Heb. 11:32-40.

Every day brings revelation, by letters, by the printed page or by real life, of heroes of faith—men and women who have been thrown back upon sheer reliance upon God, because they have no other recourse.

Here, for example, is a clergyman, passed the Psalmist's allotted span of years, responsible for dependents, his position gone and scarcely any money in sight. Yet his letter breathes in every line confidence in the Father's care.

Every day, and in every place, the children of God are trusting Him and finding Him faithful.

Prayer—Lord, increase our faith. Teach us the simple trust in Thee, for life's every need, as Jesus taught it to His disciples.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

HOW BIG IS YOUR GOD?

TEXT: "Like as a father pitieth his children."—Read Psalm 103:1-22.

High-sounding words about the Deity are quite the vogue today. The little minds that use them think that their conception of God is "big." They believe that by being vague they are being spacious. This "Primal Force," this "Creative Intelligence," about which they prate is really a belittled God.

For the greatest greatness of God is expressed by His fatherhood, as defined by Jesus. He who first set the universe to whirling, and still rules it by inscrutable laws, is so great that

GROWTH OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Thy kingdom come."—Matt. 6: 10.

We have taken it for granted that the work of evangelizing the world is getting along all right without us. We know that Jesus commanded the preaching of the gospel until it was heard under every flag, but we have assumed that that was a matter for someone else to attend to. We know that Missions were a good thing when the preaching of the gospel transformed our forefathers from savages, but we talk now about religions of the jungles being good enough for the folks that inhabit the jungles. It was alright for the Jew of Tarsus to travel into Europe for the gospel's sake and die there for the furtherance of the faith, as long as we are the proud possessors of the results of such Christian fortitude, but when it comes to our passing it on into further horizons, we change the subject by saying there are needy ones right here at home. Jesus answered this by saying: "The poor ye have with you always." Right at your door, but unless your religion goes beyond your door and does something outside the circle of self, it is no better than the religion of the scribes and pharisees.

We have contented ourselves with singing "This is our Father's world" and then by our actions have said: "Go ahead, Father, and do what you can with it, we are busy attending to our own affairs. It's more than we can do to raise money to run our local church." And eases have been known where professed Christians have said: "I do not believe the Lord ever intended that I should take bread out of my little children's mouths and give the money for Missions," when he knew all the time that the Lord's eye was on him when he, instead, took the bread from his children's mouths, to put the booze to his own. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things I command you?"

Others have pled hard times, and sought their pleasures, wondering how a few pennies for Missions might be rendered from their purse.

We hear of excellent gifts made by other individuals and churches, and other denominations, and we commend it. We would like to do the same, but we are just not able. And so we sing, "Jesus shall reign where e'er the sun does his successive journeys run," and hope that probably it may some time be true, but others must see about that. We have calls of our own.

If something does not shake us out of that philosophy of life, we shall lose all the joy of the Christian religion, and be yet as dead as the Dead Sea—always receiving and never giving. Such a philosophy of life and our churchly and personal duty is as foreign to the teachings of Jesus as the east is from the west. Jesus said: "The kingdom of God is as if a man should cast a seed upon the earth,"—a seed must give itself before there is any growth,—; and should sleep and rise night and day, and the seed should spring up and grow, he knoweth not how. The earth beareth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, then the full-grain in the air. But when the fruit is ripe, straightway he putteth forth the sickle, because the harvest is come." The kingdom of God is to grow! We know not how! God will do His part! He giveth the increase! But we must do our part. We are not doing our part if we simply grow up as a stalk of corn, and produce enough to come again next year a like stalk of corn, and so on and on, year after year! In the morning such grass as that flourisheth, in the evening it is cut down and withereth.

"Another parable spake he unto them; the kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till it was all leavened." Each tiny yeast plant multiplied, and multiplied and re-multiplied, until the whole portion of meal was leavened. There was no stopping of the yeast at a given point and place in that meal, and patriotically shouting: America for Americans, it is nice to be leavened with the Good News of God's love and mercy, and care and blessing, but here we stop and re-leaven ourselves, and go no further, why we can hardly keep this bit of meal right here at home leavened. No, the kingdom of God is not like that. No more than God is like that! There is no Christ of Calvary in such religion as that.

What will Jesus say as the Judge of all the earth to the Christians of our day and age? To many of them he will say: Yours was a great opportunity. In your day money was multiplied. Christians could build for themselves beautiful homes, great yachts, and spend months in luxury. Other Christians not so greatly blessed with this world's goods could go regularly to the movies and often to games wherein an entrance fee was required at the gate, entertain much, and go in beautiful automobiles and while untold millions lived on roots have many of the luxuries of life, and nuts and fruits of the jungles; others lived in poverty, disease and superstition; unbelievable misery sickness and death existed in your day; ignorance, superstition and hate held back countless millions off the road to abundant living, while many gave only a pittance for pity, and less for love of the under-privileged in lands afar.

Will you help us raise our apportionment? is the question. When what we should ask is: "Will you help us lift up the Lord Jesus for the eyes of all the world to behold? Until we love the Lord more, and give out of a heart of sympathy, love and anxiety for the evangelization of the world; rather than from a sense of personal pride in our church's reputation, we shall still have to beg for our apportionments and have rummage sales for our Saviour. The rags of the poor given in humility may be a king's ransom in the sight of God, while the rummage of the rich may raise a small apportionment, yet fail to please the Lord who holds the bounty of all the earth in His hands!

When I think of what I myself have given to Missions, I bow in shame before the bleeding heart of my crucified Lord, and I pray God that I may be used to lead the way toward a better understanding of our duty along that line. Then may I truly pray: "Thy kingdom come."

FAMILY ALTAR.

He can give personal care to every need of man.

Prayer—We adore Thee, O infinite Creator and Ruler of the universe; but we love Thee, our Father, and rest our times in Thy hand, and seek to do Thy will. Amen.

Taken from the Christian Herald of June, 1932 by AMOS R. WELLS, deceased.

You know that a little thought and a little kindness are often worth more than a great deal of money. This charity of thought is not merely to be exercised toward the poor; it is to be exercised toward all men.

—John Ruskin.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

At the beginning of this year we set our goal for the year at $18,000.00. In other words we built a financial ladder and put 18 rungs in it. It will be necessary for us to climb up this ladder at the rate of one and one-half rungs each month or have an income of an average of $1500.00 per month. The first seven months are in the past and we have just reached and passed the eighth rung in our financial ladder. We should have reached at this time, $10,500.00, so we have not reached one and one-half rungs each month.

The rains have come and the crops are looking better. Thus we should all feel encouraged and have more inspiration to give to help these little children.

We have many applications to take children and turn away some who ought to come here or go to some other institution of like kind, because we do not have the funds to support them. There are some applications that we do not have the heart to refuse and take them and trust in the kind Master to put it in the heart of someone who has plenty and to spare to contribute money to help us feed and clothe them.

The writer sometimes almost reaches the place of being discouraged when he reads the reports of other orphanages in North Carolina where other denominations take so much interest in orphan children and have several hundred children and spend from one hundred to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars each year for their maintenance. They consider their orphanages an asset to their denomination. They count the thousands of dollars they spend a wise investment in dependent boys and girls. I hope the Congregational-Christian Church will get awake to the great need and grasp the opportunity to help the fatherless ones through its orphanage.

The orphanage accepted a little boy last week five years of age. He came to us through the county welfare department and was a most pathetic case. He is a bright, attractive little fellow and very much alive. The first two or three days after he came we almost decided that we had a little prize fighter. He weeded a wide row and made the other little boys of his age and size stand out of his way. But he tamed down after a few days and tells me that he has decided not to contend for the world's championship and will not fight any more. Who knows but one day he will be a State Senator or hold some other big position of trust and then all of us who had a part in his care will be happy.

room as mother was speaking, "many different countries made laws to protect cats. They, you see, killed the rats, and rats eating grain might easily make all the difference between plenty and starvation. Just think of the millions of dollars of damage done by rats every year in our own country. No wonder they protected cats which killed rats."

"Why," he went on, "it is not so many years ago since there was a law in England that if anyone killed a cat, the cat should be hung up by the tail, with the nose just touching the floor, and the offender must bring enough wheat to pour over the cat so that its entire body was covered. If you remember wheat was then reaped with a hook, and threshed by hand, you can see that was a pretty severe fine. Perhaps they thought the wheat represented what the rats would eat now the cat had been killed."

"See, Puss, how bored she looks," laughed Bob, "she doesn't know we are discussing her."

"That's another thing," remarked Lucia, rising, "whenever you say 'Puss,' you are going back to the queer cat-headed goddess of Egypt. You remember her name was 'Pasht' and our 'Puss' is just another form of the name for the cat goddess."

"That's all right," laughed George, "one of the old, old stories about cats tells of how, in ancient Greece there was a war in which Typhon, the god of storms, was victorious. The other gods and goddesses fled to Egypt, where the goddess Diana became changed into a cat, and thus saved her life."

"Kitty, kitty, how proud you must be to have such a history behind you," cried Marion.

But Kitty kept on walking away, without once looking back.

sayists, scientists and psychologists whose product is very unequal in value. Yet it should be said that secular literature of any kind which faithfully mirrors human life must be more or less religious because it testifies to the innate and indestructible beliefs of the heart of man, and concedes something to the inchoate Christianity which cleaves to his conscience and history. The net result is, however, that a huge public obtains what religious or moral ideas it has outside the Churches.

Mr. Deavert Franklin Housden and Miss Nola Blanche Kern, both of Shenandoah, Va., were joined together in the holy estate of matrimony by the writer at his home in Harrisonburg, Va., on the morning of July 29, 1936.

Mr. Housden is the son of Mr. George W. Housden and Della M. Housden of near Shenandoah and is employed by the state.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. W. E. Kern and Mrs. Martha Kern of Shenandoah.

In Memoriam

COURTNEY.

Maudie Cadellia Courtney was born February 28, 1887 and died July 18, 1936, making her age 49 years, 4 months and 20 days. She is survived by her husband, seven daughters, three sons, and eighteen grandchildren.

For thirty-one years of her life she was a member of the Newport Christian Church.

The responsibility of a large family prevented her from attending church as much as she would like to have attended. She was devoted to her husband and her children. May the Lord comfort those who mourn.

The funeral was held at the Newport Church by the writer assisted by Rev. E. L. Cave.

W. J. ANDES.

THOMAS.

Mr. James W. Thomas was born in Chatham County, N. C., July 3, 1873. He died at Burlington, N. C. Route 5, July 12, 1936, at the age of 63 years and 9 days.

He leaves to mourn his departure a wife, four children, five grandchildren and one sister. Many relatives and numerous friends are in deep sympathy with the family.

Brother Thomas was a devout member of the Hopedale Christian Church which he joined approximately fourteen years ago.

He loved his home and his children as he loved his own life.

The funeral service was conducted at the Hopedale Church, July 14, at 2:30 P. M. by the writer in the midst of a large concourse of relatives and friends. Interment was made in Providence Cemetery.

O. A. ELMORE.

LOUDERBACK.

Lydia A. Louderback was born on July 6, 1854 and died on July 9, 1936, making her age 82 years and 3 days. She was married to John S. Louderback on October 21, 1875, who preceded her to the grave on January 6, 1933. Seven children were born into this union of which five survive her—Amos, Jasper, Edward, Mrs. Vergie Huffman and Mrs. F. J. Dovel. She also leaves three brothers, one sister, twenty grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Mrs. Louderback was a faithful and consistent member of the Newport Christian Church. The church will miss her greatly as well as her family who are sorrowing because of their loss.

The funeral was conducted by the writer at the Alma Lutheran Church.

W. J. ANDES.

PHELPS.

Miss Alice Phelps was born June 6, 1861 and died June 3, 1936, at the age of 74 years, 11 months and twenty-seven days. Miss Phelps was of the Presbyterian faith. She was the last member of her family. Her life was spent in the vicinity of Milton and Semora, N. C. Several years ago her health began to decline. She left her home and lived in the home of her cousin, Mrs. Mary Foster. For more than two years she was bedridden for the greater portion of the time. Mrs. Foster and family cared for her as if she were her daughter. I visited her several times during the season of her intense suffering. Before the end she expressed a hope of entering into rest.

The funeral was from the home of Mrs. Foster on the afternoon of June 4, and burial was in the Phelps family cemetery near Milton. A crowd of friends were present, and while there were no close relatives, many tears were shed and expressions of love were manifested for the deceased.

C. E. NEWMAN.

MODESITT.

William Andrew Modesitt was born January 17, 1858, and died April 6, 1936. His honest, upright living gained for him the respect of all who knew him; while his interest in those about him, his kindly spirit and courteous demeanor drew many friends to him, whose friendship he retained through life.

He was twice married, first to Miss Lola Belle Henkel. To this union were born the following: Clyde H., Mrs. R. E. Brumback, Mrs. Ray C. Rothgeb and Miss Annie. All survive except the latter. He is also survived by his second wife who was Miss Ethel Rothgeb.

Funeral services were conducted from the Leaksville Church by the writer in the presence of a large number of friends and neighbors.

May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

SANFORD.

Mrs. Sallie B. Sanford, daughter of Alexander and Nancy Pool, was born August 5, 1853, near Blue Wing, N. C., and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Marian Garrett, Durham, N. C., on June 30, 1936. Age—82 years, 10 months and 26 days.

On July 25, 1875 she married Deacon Robert G. Sanford who died several years ago. Six children survive: Mrs. J. N. Sanford of Stern, N. C., Mrs. Marian Garrett of Durham, N. C., Mrs. W. L. Gay and Mrs. Fred Jameison of Fresno, California, Robt. of Canada and Johnny of California. There is one stepdaughter, Mrs. T. L. Chandler of Durham, and the following brothers and sisters: John Andrew Pool of Portsmouth, Va., Stephen Pool of Virgilina, Va., and Mrs. Rebecca Goode and Mrs. James Gordon of Virgilina, Va. She also leave 24 grandchildren and 4 great grandchildren.

Sister Sanford was a remarkable woman. Left a widow with a large family, by industry and careful management she reared and educated them and was spared to see them settled in their own homes and prospering.

I was her pastor for twenty-nine years and was never in her presence very long but that there was on her part an expression of her faith in her Heavenly Father to guide and uphold.

For five years she suffered much from a broken hip. Early in March she suffered the misfortune to break her other hip. She was taken to Watt's Hospital, Durham, where all that was possible was done. A few weeks before her death she was removed to the home of her daughter where she, after much suffering, quietly fell asleep.

She was a member of Union Christian Church, Virgilina, Virginia, for 66 years. The funeral was conducted at her church, and burial was in the town cemetery.

THE CHURCH MARCHES ON THROUGH EVANGELISM

THE GOSPEL is good news. The man who bears that good news is an evangelist. The writers of the "four gospels" were evangelists. The early Christians who went everywhere preaching the gospel were evangelists. The founding and organization of the early church were the fruits of evangelism. With an evangelistic program the church has marched down through the years, offering forgiveness to the sinful, redemption to the fallen, cleansing to the impure, hope to the despairing and life to the dying. The gospel of Christ has been and is the hope of the world, but of what value is that gospel if it is not preached. Everyone born of the spirit is under divine commission to witness what great things the Lord hath done for him. Under the spell of the spirit. 'Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel,' exclaimed one of old. If only we, all of us, individual Christians could be seized by the overwhelming consciousness of such impelling responsibilities. God has heard my cry, listened to my plea, brought me into the secret of his presence, and renewed my soul within. His only exaction is that I should tell others. How unworthy and how treacherous if I hold my peace. Yet how blessed if I, by word and life, send out the light unto the ends of the earth, dispelling the darkness of ignorance and shame.

Periods of evangelism within the church have always been periods of growth and of expansion for the church. If ministers, church officials, and laymen, one and all, would simply begin to tell the old, old story—old but ever new—sin, suffering, and sorrow would be swept away. Men, women and children would be redeemed. Our church would be renewed, and the kingdom would begin to come in its fullness.

"How beautiful are the feet of them that bring glad tidings."

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Gillette are spending their vacation—the month of August—at Bannockburn Inn, Asheville, N. C.

Dr. and Mrs. C. Rexford Raymond of Southern Pines, N. C., are spending the month of August at Melbourne, Fla., where they will be with their son-in-law and daughter, Rev. and Mrs. Orville D. Ullom.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill will spend the month of August at her home in Henderson, N. C., enjoying a well-earned vacation. Miss Coghill has been attending a series of Summer conferences, ending with the conference at Piedmont College.

The pastorate of First Congregational Christian Church, Henderson, N. C., will be vacant at the end of this conference year. Ministers considering making a change in pastorate are invited to correspond with Mr. F. M. Hayward, Chairman Pulpit Committee, Box 26, Henderson, N. C.

Rev. and Mrs. George N. Edwards of Charleston, S. C., are spending their vacation in New England. Those who must swelter through the Southern summer will doubtless be tempted to envy them the joys of a New England vacation, but to keep from envy, we shall wish them happiness.

A personal note from Mrs. J. J. Lincoln of Lawrenceville, N. J., says that her eyes are so dim that she can write but little now. Evidently her mind is clear as the article found elsewhere in this paper and the following quotation indicate: "By 'unalloyed' I mean wholly committed, specific worship; not a fragment of time given place in some program featured by things that are a composite of most everything but worship."

Circular Congregational Church of Charleston, S. C., the Rev. George N. Edwards, minister, has recently closed a two-weeks daily vacation Bible school, which included several churches of the community. The school was notable for its record of 100 per cent attendance right through the hottest days they have ever had there. Miss Charlotte S. Sears, Student Summer Service worker, was there during the last week and gave fine help. They had kindergarten, primary, and junior departments, and the handwork was donated to the children's ward of the city hospital.

THE GLORY OF THE CHURCH.

The Church of Jesus Christ should be the responsibility of every member. It is the serious responsibility of every loyal member and true disciples. For my part, I am burdened for the glory of the Church and I want my church to share, to the fulness of its capacity in hastening that glory. Why does a (any) single church decline? Often, not because it has no right-meaning, capable members, but because church essentials are emphasized in the wrong order. As I see it, the leading essentials to church stability and expansion are, first, unalloyed, assembled worship; second, cooperative work, third, individual giving whether it be the "widow's mite" or, like the centurion, enough to "build a whole church." (Luke 7:5.) Failure to give first and full heed to the first essential is sure to cripple achievement in the second and third essentials.

MRS. J. J. LINCOLN.

NEWS FROM HOLLAND.

On Sunday evening, August 2, after an appropriate worship service, the Junior Choir of the Holland Christian Church, under the direction of Mrs. Carl R. Key and Mrs. E. L. Rawles, gave the following musical program:

"Praise Ye Jehovah" (Gounod); "The King of Love" (Shelley); "Dwell in My Heart" (Wansborough); "Come, Let Us All Rejoicing" (Warhurst); "Twilight" (Widener); "I Waited for the Lord" (Mendelssohn); "Praise the Lord" (Baines).

A splendid rendition was given of the entire program, but especially well done was Mendelssohn's difficult and beautiful "I Waited for the Lord" sung by Misses Margaret Pittman, Eloise Holland, Frances Everett and Catherine Jolly. The program showed variety and included a very high type of music.

The choir was organized in April with the Pastor's Class forming a nucleus. Its members have been hard workers, faithful attendants and have made much progress.

At a recent meeting of our Sunday School Cabinet the group decided to recommend the organization of a Junior Department in the school. This recommendation was accepted and became effective July 1st. This department is functioning efficiently under the leadership of Miss Frances Everett, superintendent, and Mrs. Carl R. Key, pianist and assistant.

HOSPITAL MEMORIES.

I have just returned from the hospital where I had an operation, and where I spent nine days. It was not my first experience in a hospital—many of my friends recall that I spent three months in one in Vermont several years ago. And, of course, it was not altogether a pleasant experience. There were the sights and sounds and smells of a hospital. There was the after effects of the operation, the pain and weakness and weariness, the suffering and sleeplessness, the discomfort and inconvenience, all of these intensified by the unusually hot weather that prevailed most of the time I was in the hospital. It was, from one standpoint, a grievous experience.

And yet as I think of that experience, even already, and I am sure that this will be increasingly true of the days to come, the things that are most vivid in my memory are pleasant experiences and memories. I remember the friendly spirit and the skilled technique of the kindly surgeon. I remember the prompt and efficient and kindly ministry of the splendid nurses. I remember the faithful service of the orderlies appointed to do the menial and unpleasant tasks in the sick room. I remember the attention of the internes, doctors and surgeons in the making, but already skilled in their art. I remember the thoughtfulness of friends—flowers, cards of greeting, messages, visits. I remember the devotion and the sympathy of my good wife, and her generous spirit of sharing. I remember the sense of peace and serenity of spirit in my heart because I knew that there was One Who was able to supply all my need according to His riches in glory by Jesus Christ. And for all these happy memories I thank God and praise His name.

And now I am back home again. Already strength is returning, and life takes on new meaning. I can look forward to a return to health and strength, to taking up again my work, to showing by my service that I am truly thankful. Thus the experience which for the moment may have seemed grievous, has really been gracious. It has ministered to me in the things that have permanently enriched my life, and I trust shall make increasingly fruitful my ministry.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

OF COURSE THERE WERE.

We tried awfully hard here to be sure there were no mistakes in the first month's report. We try to be careful to give proper credit to every person who writes us or pays a subscription. We like for the records to be correct and clear. But there were mistakes. Tell us about yours so we will be sure to correct it.

I might get excited about all this, but I had rather tell you a story. A little mangy mongrel dog was scratching for dear life. A beautiful little fluffy fellow just out of his bath and decorated in ribbon said to the mongrel: "Do you have fleas?" The little mongrel replied: "Cose I is. Ev-erybody does."

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

The Southern Convention said that all subscriptions should be discontinued that are more than a year in arrears. That seems fair. But an invalid writes in that someone has given the paper to him or her, that they do not have money to renew, but they want the paper. Perhaps they can scarcely see to read it, and cannot walk. What would you do in a case like this? Would you discontinue the paper, write to the former donor, or try to dig up cash and send the paper yourself? I just thought that perhaps someone who reads this might want to do something about it. Two dollars pays the subscription for a year, and there are several of these people who want the paper but cannot pay for it. Just thought I would tell you about it. You may give me an idea even if not a subscription.

IT'S NOT BRAGGING, IF—

If your church has done a real bit of constructive work, it is not bragging for you to tell about it so others may know and perhaps follow your example. Of course it can sound like boasting if the same person tells over and over what he has done himself, but if several people working together have rendered a service to their fellows in the name of the Master, as churches so often do, it is only fair that others interested should know about it. So, my friends, if you know something good about your church or your church friends, tell it in this little newspaper that specializes in religion. It may be just the inspiration that someone else needs.

NEVER SAY "I CAN'T."

Not that it is bad English, although it is not elegant. But it is bad philosophy. (Philosophy is the ideas by which we live.) When you say that you can't you have closed the door to progress. If you can't go that road, then you are stuck, or must turn back. Rather than get stuck, try another way. You may yet get to where you are going.

This is particularly true about going to College. One big reason that I went was because I couldn't. The oldest son of a widow living way back in the woods is not a good prospect for college, it would seem. But things are not always what they seem. These poor boys sometimes come out of the woods. Elon College invited me to rake leaves on her campus during the time that I did not want to study, and I did it. Some college may be calling you to come and run errands while you learn how big the world is, how big you are, and what a person can become under the leadership of God. Never say, "I can't" so long as you are alive, for there may be a way. There often is. You may find it if you try, and keep on trying.

"College Men Without Money," is a book written by an Elon student about my day. It was a help to me. I think it is still among my books. If some youth would like to read it with the hope of going to college without money, I shall be glad to lend it. They are still going without money, as some of them can tell you today. Do not say you can't. Keep on trying.

HOME COMING AND REVIVAL MEETING.

The Isle of Wight Church will hold a Home Coming on the afternoon of August 30th, and all former pastors, former members, and friends are cordially invited to attend. A splendid program is being prepared.

The revival meeting will begin on the same day at 8 P. M., and Rev. J. F. Apple of Elon College will do the preaching. You are invited to attend, to pray, and to worship with us.

THE PROGRAM COMMITTEE.

NOTICE.

Mt. Pleasant Church has planned to have a Home Coming Day, as a celebration of its Fiftieth Anniversary, the fifth Sunday in August. The program will begin at 10:30 A. M., with lunch served at the noon hour, and closing with the afternoon exercise. All former pastors and former members, with the present membership, are requested to attend. The public is cordially invited.

L. L. WYRICK, Pastor.

N. C. & VA. S. S. & C. E. CONVENTION

By action of the Executive Committee, the next annual session of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference will be held with the Bethlehem Christian Church, Albemarle County, N. C. According to the Constitution: "The Convention shall meet annually on Thursday after the third Sunday in June for a two-day session."

Unless some emergency should arise, the Convention will be governed by its Constitution as to its next session.

W. M. JAY, President.

A trouble shooter in mechanics is the gentleman who locates the trouble when the machine is out of order. What would an expert religious trouble shooter find were he a firm believer in the all-sufficiency of the New Testament and thoroughly versed in its contents? Would he locate the trouble in an inherent inability of human beings to see things alike? It is popularly accepted as a chief cause of division, and division is widely condoned on that ground. The divine basis of unity consists mainly, if not wholly, of facts, commands, and promises. A fact is about the easiest thing in the world to understand. And even a child soon understands a command and feels the urge of a promise. A modernist breaks fellowship with a believer in the fact of the resurrection, not because he does not understand it, but because he does not believe it. The woman was refreshingly frank who said she knew that Simon Peter commanded baptism "for remission of sins," but she did not believe it. The real trouble shooter will recognize unbelief and downright disbelief as more potent causes of division in religion than inability to understand the plain teaching of the New Testament.

It was a stinging criticism made of the church by the man of wide experience who said that the only difference he could distinguish between his friends who went to church and those who did not was the matter of the habit. I hope he was wrong. Near to a certain town in the state of Oregon there is an Indian reservation in which there is a particularly virile Christian church. A visitor to that town was told by one of the merchants that when an Indian came into his store and asked for credit the question always asked the one seeking credit was whether or not he was a member of the Christian church. If he were a member of the church, his credit was unlimited. That is as it should be. Is this as it is in your community and mine?—John McAfee.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN.

The probate court measures a man by the size of his estate. The athletic coach considers the build of the body. Certain young ladies consider the profile and ability to dance. Politicians are measured by the way they can persuade their fellows and lead the crowd. Men are measured by many standards, most of which have little value.

A man is really measured by the way he serves and the values of the soul. He may not have much money, he may not be athletic, he may not be skilled in the social graces, he may not even be a great leader of his fellow men, and yet have those qualities which make him a great man.

Measured by many of the standards of today, Alfred Wellons Andes would fall far below many of his fellows, but measured by the quality of soul which makes a man forget himself in serving others, he rates high. The conference of which he was a part voted its approval to the memorial given on this page, because they believe that he was a real man. They measure him by the standards of Jesus and see reflected in his character qualities which were in his Master. In this opinion those who knew Alfred Andes concur.

IN MEMORIAM.

The bodily presence of Rev. A. W. Andes is with us no more. But that imperishable life that wrought a while in the flesh has invaded the world of beauty and light and life.

The few years of inspiring fellowship with this good man have left some outstanding impressions of his character.

He was faithful and sincere to a fault. Never have we seen a man who took more seriously the business of preaching the "Good News" to men. He believed with a holy enthusiasm that the Gospel is literally the "power of God unto salvation to every one who believes," and the only power that can save men. He had no confidence in human wisdom or human expedients to redeem human life.

He had a very high conception of the eternal values of life. He believed in the immeasurable significance of a human life, however drab in outer appearance. He believed that it is an appalling tragedy for any man to lose his soul, and he dedicated himself with a divine passion to avert this tragedy as far as lay in his power. As every true preacher must be, he was deeply identified with the lives of men in all their hopes and failures, struggles, pains, and joys with a desire that reached a spiritual passion, he longed to lead men to the flaming altar of God to have their lives renewed and glorified.

He was the embodiment of simplicity. In dress and speech and manners and all the contacts of life he was direct and simple. He was utterly transparent and needed no protective mechanisms to guard the citadel of his soul. He heartily believed and practiced Jesus' command "Let your communication be yea, yea and nay, nay." He was pure-minded. We never heard him say a word that was even remotely suggestive. He had a clean mind as well as a pure heart. His life was never bedeviled by inordinate ambitions or corroded by jealousies. He made no pretensions to greatness, but was perfectly willing that others should assess his worth. With confident certainty a great company of men and women and children will enshrine him in their souls and revere his memory. We say with the poet:

"Soldier of God, well done,
The arduous warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the vict'ry won,
And thou art crowned at last."

M. L. WEEKLEY.

REV. A. W. ANDES.

Rev. Alfred Wellons Andes was born November 19, 1880, and passed from labor to reward June 23, 1936. His parents were the late Jacob A. and Mrs. Barbara Andes. At the age of twelve he united with Antioch Christian Church, of which church he remained a member until death.

Early in life he was impressed with a call to the ministry, and in October, 1899, he entered Elon College to continue his preparation for his life work. I write "to continue" advisedly. The preparation was begun by his Godly parents as they very early impressed on his young mind their piety and devotion to the Lord and the Church.

On graduation in 1906 he began work with the churches of his own conference. All of his time thereafter was devoted to the ministry among his own people. He served nineteen of the twenty-two churches of the conference.

Soon after graduation he was elected secretary of his conference, and served most faithfully and efficiently until unable to attend the mid-year session last March. Up to that time he had never missed a session.

In all his ministerial life he was faithful, consecrated, loving. The fruits of his labors are in the hundreds of lives he won to Christ and blessed by his loving ministry; besides countless others who were blessed by his life.

On December 26, 1912, he married Miss Minnie Effie Bowman. We feel that not a small share of the success of his ministry was due to the efficient service she rendered as they labored together in home and church. To this union were born the following: Rev. W. J. Andes, Roy, Raymond, Clarine, and Mark. Besides, wife, children and mother, he is survived by two brothers, Emmett and Owen, and one sister, Mrs. B. F. Frank.

Funeral services were held from Antioch Church. The following took part: Drs. L. E. Smith, who preached the sermon, I. W. Johnson, Stanley C. Harrell, M. L. Weekley and Supt. C. D. Johnston, Rev. W. B. Fuller and the writer.

The large congregation of friends, the abundant and beautiful floral offerings from individuals and churches attest the high esteem and love in which he was held.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH—ITS NATURE AND FUNCTION.

Moderatorial Address to the General
Council, by the late

Perhaps an even greater danger than the rankest idealization of sin, blasphemy, incontinence, animalism and profligacy, is the confusion worse confounded which prevails in the average mind concerning what shall be held inviolate in matters of faith. If in days past spiritual realities were throttled in the grip of dogma, are they not now obscured in the fogs of doubt? A creedless Church pays heavy toll for its exemption, and it will not do to confront ourselves with the facts of Christian history while we disdain reasonable theories for their explanation. Hence, as I see the situation, a processive reconstruction of theological beliefs is the duty for which Congregationalism has peculiar fitness. Its insistence that the mind shall support the heart and the will in Divine service, its heroic vigor in dealing with the philosophical postulates underlying all religion, can only be preserved and strengthened by an objective worthy of their excellence.

This reconstruction also requires the holy fire Christ came to kindle; the flaming faith which consumes the dross of vain conceits, and refines the gold of sacred convictions; the light that focusses the soul's vision upon eternal realities. As a task it unites robust genius and competent scholarship with an inner consciousness of "the powers of the world to come." Before we can hope for doctors of the Church who will reconquer her lost provinces of thinking, and others she has partially relinquished to worldlings and flesh worshippers, we shall have to consecrate ourselves afresh to what St. Paul terms "saving truths"; the truths by which men and nations live.

Above all else, the test of any restatement of Christian doctrine is its ability to raise human personality to a higher level, to aid its righteous living and to emphasize its eternal qualities. We do not have to be meticulous about details, and we should be open-minded concerning the forms in which religion's regal truths are cast. But if we would regain the strength, the beauty, the tenderness, and the vitality of intimate as differentiated from legalistic or apologetic religion, the reconstruction for which I plead must have priority. The Church Universal can "be the staunch ally of personal and collective righteousness in one way only," by the possession of "that spontaneous religious assurance which is the perpetual miracle of the Christian life."

We have briefly considered the Church as God's ordained fellowship for the spiritual interpretation of His creation; as the reincarnation of her Living Lord for the redemption of mankind, as the depository of His Gospel and the appointed agent for its diffusion in every age. Do we accept her on these terms? Do we believe that which in the name of Christ she proposes to our belief? If we do not, we deliberately break the bond which unites us to her spiritual development from the first and to the Apostles, Fathers, and Saints, who have blessed the tie. If we do, we stand fast in the liberty which is the source of all other freedom.

Here we confront the claims of the political State whose genesis as an institution is hidden in prehistoric voids. It awaits everyone at his birth and commandeers the resources of his being. Nor can we live safely and to purpose apart from the State. The strong affection we feel for it is justified by the immense benefits we derive from it. Yet some earth-bound theorists suggest the subordination of every authority to that of the State, and insist its immoralities and dehumanizing policies should be condoned because of its indispensability.

It is interesting to note that the clamant nationalism which today acknowledges no rival, flatly contradicts the contention already mentioned, that Christianity must be non-theological if it is to be cohesive. This fond belief is nullified by the depressing spectacle a limitless super-patriotism presents to the somewhat dismayed Christian Church. Its source is predestination, the staple doctrine once applied to the individual, and now extended to nations. The Philistines who insist on "my country, right or wrong" have ploughed a wide furrow with Calvin's oxen. The solidarity which eludes the genius of the Churches is the soul of nationalism and the ambition of autoocrats. Famous nations have indeed thrown away freedom at their bidding, because they trust by instinct rather than reasoned conviction, the superiority of the State. The mystery of this strange development is elucidated by Troeltsch, who asserts that "the consciously elect man feels himself destined to be the Lord of the world, who in the power of God and for the honor of God, has it laid on him to grasp and shape the world." Here the march into Belgium and what ensued had its origination. This is the tyrannic idea which having enslaved central Europe, stretches its tentacles toward countries still free, and determined by God's help to keep their freedom.

Fascism and Naziism are a unit in abolishing personal freedom and personal responsibility. The cultivation of energy, courage, and resolution is forbidden. Causes the support of which elevated their advocates are "taboo." The weal or woe of nations hitherto celebrated for their gifts to ancient and modern civilization is at the disposal of a single ruler whom his sycophants salute as a demigod; and loyalty to whom necessitates self-stultification.

Patriots, poets, philosophers, and statesmen, as well as peasants and artisans, must "goose step" with the armed youth which sets the pace. In view of these developments and of a few sinister indications in English speaking and kindred lands, how shall we as our Lord's servants determine our attitudes toward the State?

Since democracy is as inseparably related to biblical theocracy as it is to the incurable individualism of the New Testament, are we to function with these factors or yield to the pressure of political exigency? If we urge that criticism of the State rests on identically ethical grounds with that of the citizen, its worshippers protest. They tell us the Decalogue and the Sermon on the Mount are admirably adapted for personal or ritualistic ends, but that they should not interfere with a nation's demand for material gain or territorial expansion. Yet in the strength of her Lord she must attack wickedness in high places with spiritual weapons. God's chronometers do not often strike, but they have struck now to warn us that the choice between Christ and Caesar is again to the front. Which shall it be?

With the choice come two conceptions of the State; the human and the metaphysical. The first views it as the servant of the people. The ship is built for the passengers, not the passengers for the ship. Every political organization is to be judged by what it accomplishes for the well-being of its constituents and also for the aggregate of human welfare. The second conception is rooted in the blind arrogance which is the vice of fools. It enthrones the State as self-sufficient, sovereign, supreme, custodian of its own affairs, beyond which its interests languish unless those affairs are involved. The human conception views these ideas as a hang-over from primitive tribalism.

There is no middle ground between these conceptions. Their propositions

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Bethlehem Christian Church sustained a great loss in the death of the late Mrs. Etta E. Byrd, wife of Mr. William Benjamin Byrd, Superintendent of the Sunday school. She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Benton of Gates County, N. C., and was born November 27, 1875. She died after a long illness, at her home near Suffolk, July 28, 1936. The funeral was conducted at Bethlehem church, where she was a beloved and faithful member. Besides her husband she is survived by three daughters: Mrs. Russell Taylor, Mrs. Herman Bradshaw and Miss Margaret Byrd all of Nansemond Co., Va.; two sons: William Jordan Byrd of Suffolk and Stanley Byrd of Nansemond County.

Mrs. Byrd was a quiet type and was content to take a lowly place among others, if an opportunity was offered for service to her church. She did not aspire to hold positions of prominence or leadership, but she delighted to work for her Master. She impressed her neighbors and associates by her sincerity and faithfulness to her duty. Her children arise up and call her blessed. The best evidence of her integrity of character is the spiritual ideals and example of her husband and children. Her home was dedicated to God and her heart found grace and power at that quiet and sacred altar of devotion and consecration.

In these days when the new freedom for women opens new avenues for service and rich fields of adventure, there is a tendency to forsake the quiet obscure life of the home and find life's challenge in the forum and market places of the world. Many women spurn marriage and motherhood for a mess of pottage. But in the mature years motherhood is the sweetest and dearest realm for inspiration and meditation. The weekly pay envelope cannot compensate for loss of home ties and the childless fireside. The woman who is blessed by the tug of a tiny hand guides the destinies of the church and the nation. Her work stands above the political agitators of any legislative assembly. Her voice may not sound as rich and eloquent as her contemporaries who take the air and preside over the public gatherings, but she has more power in determining the future course of human history.

The memory of mother is a precious memory when it is linked with the spiritual experiences of the church of Jesus Christ. Think of mother in prayer. Think of her spiritual plans and ideals. Think of the beauty of her life and the strength of her faith. Think of the touch of her hand upon your fevered brow. How her presence calmed you when you were perplexed, and soothed you when you were in trouble. Yes, the memory of mother sweetens as the years pass. And life is richer because she lived and loved for you. When she passes to that land to be with Jesus, every reminder of her becomes dearer to an appreciative son and daughter. Appreciate and honor mother while she lives and hold her memory as one of the priceless treasures of your life. Heaven is not far away. The mothers in heaven are waiting for their sons and daughters to come home some sweet day. What a welcome that will be.

THE VALLEY VIRGINIA CENTRAL CONFERENCE.

The Valley Conference of the Congregational and Christian Churches convened with New Hope Christian Church near Harrisonburg, Wednesday, August 5, at 10 o'clock A. M. Rev. A. W. Andes was the secretary of conference for many years until his recent death. His son, Roy, was assistant secretary. Rev. W. J. Andes was elected secretary pro tem for this conference and in the election of officers was elected permanent secretary, another instance of following in the footsteps of his father. The annual sermon was delivered on the first day by Rev. W. J. Andes. He spoke on "The Gospel Light," and gave the members of conference an inspirational and most helpful message. Antioch Church is one of the oldest local organizations in the conference. It is more than 100 years old and has a remarkable history. It numbers in its membership some very prominent families, and is capable of rendering a most worthwhile service to the denomination and to the kingdom at large. It has been the writer's privilege to attend different sessions of this conference for a number of years. It seems to be the custom of the numerous officials to be present at the annual sessions of this particular conference. They always have a good program. This year we missed the presence of J. O. Atkinson, Mission

Secretary, who is away on vacation. Mr. C. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage could not be present on account of the death of his sister. Both of these officials sent their regrets and their messages to conference. Among the visitors were Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Harrell. Dr. Harrell conducted devotionals for both morning and afternoon sessions. His messages were appropriate, most helpful, and were enjoyed by all. Mrs. Harrell added to the conference by taking part in the discussions. Dr. and Mrs. Boone of Durham, N. C., were also visitors at the conference. Dr. Boone is chairman of the board of trustees of Elon College. In the absence of Brother C. D. Johnston, he spoke in the interest of the orphanage.

Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of the First Church of Norfolk, executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education, and editor of the Christian Sun was present. Mr. Lester always makes worthwhile contributions to gatherings that he is privileged to attend. There were general expressions of approval of the splendid services that he is rendering the church through the church paper. He certainly deserves complete and generous support of the entire church.

Wednesday evening was given over to Youth Fellowship for the young people's annual program. They put on a unique and an unusually interesting program. The first part of the program consisted of songs, scripture, and prayer, with a short address by Dr. S. C. Harrell. This was held on the church lawn. The closing program was held in the church with the transaction of business and the inspirational address by Rev. Lanson Granger, a recent graduate of Elon College. Mr. Granger brought a very forceful message in which he appealed to his audience earnestly to take Christ as their ideal and to put forth every effort to be like Jesus in all the relations of life. It was certainly a most timely message and greatly appreciated by all present.

Rev. B. J. Earp and his wife, Mrs. Earp, were likewise visitors at the conference. Brother Earp labored in the Valley Conference for a number of years. He has a large circle of friends who were glad to see him and Mrs. Earp in attendance again at the conference. When he left his work in the valley to come to North Carolina, he was president of the conference and made a good one.

It was the writer's privilege to speak in the interest of Christian education with the interest of Elon College, our own institution, in particular. The college is certainly increasing in favor with the churches in the Valley. There are still a number who have not given their support to the college, but where the college has been presented adequately, it has won many friends. Antioch Church, hostess to the conference, is apportioned $900. It has already secured a total of more than $500. Mr. W. C. Wampler, an active member of the church, was local chairman and deserves credit for much of what has been done locally for the college. It is the feeling of many of the members of Antioch Church that the entire college quota can be raised. Rev. R. L. Williamson was elected president. On this trip to the Valley, the writer was privileged to speak at Newport Church on Tuesday evening. A good attendance was present and some interest manifested for the college. On Thursday evening, he spoke at Mount Olivet Church, Green County. The weather was unfavorable and the notice of the meeting was given only the day before, but in this beautiful little church, the people of the community gathered for the service. It was most encouraging to the speaker to have such a large attendance for a week-night service.

Miss Thelma Morris, a graduate of Elon College is a member of this church, and is one of the moving spirits of that community. This is the first church to meet the challenge of the new editor of the Christian Sun to increase the circulation of the paper to a number equal to ten per cent of its membership. This church has also manifested real interest in the college, and has subscribed nearly half of its quota for the college. This much I observed, that in the local church where there is one person who is interested in the college and determined that the membership of his church shall know more about the college and about the campaign and shall have an opportunity to make subscriptions to the college, that church always makes a good showing. On the other hand, where no one in particular takes any special interest in the college campaign or is concerned sufficiently for its success to put forth personal and persistent efforts, very little is done in that church for the college.

If the membership of the church could realize actually the great need for the college in their forward program, the college would be adequately supported without question. Some day the church will wake up to the real value and actual necessity of Elon College if the Christian Church is to take its place in the work of the kingdom and to make the contributions that God Almighty intends for it to make.

"OUT OF AFRICA."

One of the most interesting books recently written is that by Emory Ross entitled "Out of Africa."

The author has been a missionary in the Belgian Congo and has traveled extensively over Africa. He has done much popular speaking on the subject, which is reflected in his rather impressionistic style.

The six chapters of the book treat the following subjects:

First, the recent rapid changes which are involved in putting modern tools and products into the hands of people who had never used even wheeled vehicles.

Second, African society and land, the communal spirit and structure of society, and its particular semi-religious attitude toward land.

Chapter III discusses the relation of Africa to world peace, the clash of national ambitions aroused in the partition of Africa, and the danger of sacrificing the human welfare of the African people in the desire to exploit raw materials.

Chapter IV takes up the educational problem with its difficulties of language and the problems of effecting adjustment of two civilizations that are so dissimilar.

The last two chapters present methods, problems, and products of missionary work: types of successful American missionary effort and of the African leadership it has developed; the Ethiopian situation; and the particular problems of the use of American Negroes as missionaries in Africa.

Finally, the need of cooperation of missionaries with each other and with Africans, some outstanding needs and illustrations of possibilities, ending with the problem of Africa becoming Christian.

The book makes easy reading and the manuscript has received some enthusiastic appreciation.—By T. H. P. Sailer in Missionary Herald.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

are unmistakable and the Church Universal must decide between them.

The contingencies set forth above are not shadowy abstractions, but ponderable realities. Not a few trained observers question whether institutional religion can survive the momentous changes everywhere in process. The cynic listens to our homilies on fraternity, justice and goodwill, and tells us "we are all brothers now; all Cains and Abels." This may be a libel on the race, but contemporary events have given it point. Certainly as Protestants we should ascertain to what degree our branch of the Church is responsible for the abysmal gulfs which separate countries and continents, and intensify their insecurity. If Christianity means anything, it means the brave acceptance of life as the earnest of more and better life beyond. Can we stir up in our fellows the believing mind; the mind owing no fealty to surface distinctions for which blood is so readily shed? It is a voluntary mind, self-imposed, confined to no race and to no creed. East and West are embraced in it; all who devote themselves to the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man compose His inner society of service and sacrifice. They realize that apart from man's Brotherhood, God's Fatherhood is little more than a theological notion. It is our business so to enlarge the heart and mind of the Church that through her His endless grace may have larger outlets toward the race as a whole.

No Fabian tactics can stem the flowing tide of resistance to armed conflict and also to its incipency in vain-glory, perfidious diplomacy, imperialism, territorial greed, the quest for raw materials, economic injustice and industrial strife. But muddled reasoning from wrong premises only inflames these contentious issues. Not because impulsive combatants are hard headed, but because they are thick headed, they fall foul of each other in useless battlings. How often, as in their demand for sanctions, sincere pacifists adopt policies which must inevitably result in war! Pure emotionalism will not serve; it may tell us to do right, but it does not tell us what is right to do. The threatenings of war cannot be averted, nor can human sufferings be alleviated, except by straight thinking as the outcome of thorough knowledge. Its acid strength dissipates the flummery of sensationalism and the froth of sentimentalism. Nor can this Council render a more important and timely service to the age than patiently to investigate and clearly expound the problems of militarism in their manifold ramifications."

Broadly considered, war can be stopped in two ways. The first and direct way is the simple refusal to fight, and many valiant men and women have taken to it. Their action as a spiritual victory in behalf of the inviolability of human personality, and if it were as universal as it is deserving a millenium of peace might set in. Here, however, we face the affirmation of an ideal which chiefly governs individual and not national behaviour. Yet the Church should regard it with warm sympathy even though many sincere lovers of peace believe it more heroic than effective.

The second and indirect way is by mobilizing the overwhelming forces of civilized nations against wanton aggressions which outrage the general peace. The arguments for and against this collective method are too complicated to be set forth at length. Faulty though it undoubtedly is, it appeals to the majority as our only hope under prevailing and barbarous conditions. God is not in the thoughts of lovers of war and where His spirit is excluded armed conflict enters, and with it the seven-fold diabolisms attending it. Because its needlessness is profoundly amoral those who are responsible for it become utterly irrational; drunk with the brandy of the damned.

It sounds incredible, nevertheless it is true, that some unwilling advocates of war tell us its curse is not so bitter as that of unemployment which commits its victims to boredom and gradual degeneracy. Those thus deprived are weary of a peace which prostitutes their manhood; they crave to be and to do something worthwhile. Desperate poverty and growing discontent cause men, and especially women, to recall the fool's paradise when the guns at the front kept everybody busy in the rear making what they blew to fragments. This is not a fanatical fancy but the report of practiced observers. Against so two-edged a demand for war's "fatal prosperity" what can pacifists do except show that the remedy aggravates the disease?

Moreover from a different angle man has become the creature, not of God, but of his own inventions. Scientific progress has forged ahead of moral progress, and its choicest gifts often are bestowed on corrupted hearts. Undeniably a selfish, reckless pursuit of private profit has wrought havoc in our society. Sociological experts have shown "it has produced shoddy and adulterated goods; destroyed forest lands without thought of future generations; been unintelligent and wasteful in the extraction of oil and coal; denied to labor a just and necessary share of the product of industry; pitilessly exploited women and children; gambled with the trust and bank funds of the poor; perverted the tastes of multitudes through newspapers, magazines and movies; devoted millions to propaganda against movements for the common good; and so gravely disturbed the balance between production and consumption that in a world where there is bread enough and to spare, hosts of people have gone hungry to bed."

"Notwithstanding these indictments, many sincere Christians are obsessed with the idea that economic and social questions are not a part of the Gospel message. It may be readily granted that some economic and social theories do not belong to the Gospel, but righteous economic and social attitudes cannot be severed from it. When this is understood and applied one can scarcely doubt that the mind of man which has never yet succumbed to difficult environments will ultimately subdue the mechanistic and the materialistic forces arrayed against it."

PRAYER.

Dear Lord and Father of Mankind,
 Forgive our Feverish ways;
 Reelotho us in our rightful mind;
 In purer lives thy service find,
 In deeper reverence, praise.
 In simple trust like theirs who heard,
 Beside the Syrian sea,
 The gracious calling of the Lord,
 Let us, like them, without a word,
 Rise up and follow Thee.
 O Sabbath rest by Galilee!
 O ealms of hills above!
 Where Jesus knelt to share with thee
 The silence of eternity, Interpreted by love.

—Whittier.

The church must in the selection of her teachers keep always in mind that other qualities than those of high scholarship and intellectual ability are indispensable, qualities which no timetable or lecture-room takes count of. Beyond analysis and definition they stand revealed for most of us in the person of some beloved teacher whose character left its impress upon us. Deep religious emotion and conviction, self-forgetfulness, simplicity, unselfishness—these have a place in education which produces men fit for the ministry of Jesus Christ. By them the church must lay greatest store, organizing and relating the academic and social life of the college to the end that these qualities may freely and greatly abound in its life.—Ex-Chancellor R. P. Bowles of Victoria University.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST.

In this glorious age so full of possibilities, we need above all that spirit of loyalty that will cause us to step out and stand for the right. Weak Christians have gotten to be too much in the majority.

The Bible gives us many beautiful examples of faithfulness to the principles of Christ, such as I am presenting to you.

I like to think of Abraham who left his home and went to a land of which he knew nothing. Only God told him to go there and represent Him—and how nobly he did it—and how immortal his name is today.

I like to think of Moses—living in the king's palace, choosing to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than dwell in tents of wickedness. It is a challenge to us as a band of young people to desert our pleasure-filled lives and consecrate ourselves to high and noble service. Can you think of any time when Christ needed loyalty more than these days in which we live?

Now let us consider the wonderful Hebrew captives in a heathen land, but filled with that purpose that does not know defeat. Parents, have you planted within your children's minds and hearts the noble idea of being strong in the Lord and in the power of His might as did these Hebrew parents? If so, you can rest easily about them as they go in and out among the temptations of the day.

Think of the brave captive Daniel as he is commanded to pray only to the heathen god, throwing up his windows toward his beloved Jerusalem, as was his custom, and praying three times a day to his God. Hear the king as he takes Daniel alive from the den of lions, as he says: "Let every man tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is the living God, and His kingdom is steadfast forever." Would you not be loyal to a God like Daniel's?

Now will you visit the fiery furnace with me? Heated seven times hotter than it was wont to be; see Shadrach, Meshack and Abednego bound and cast into the furnace. Why? Because they were loyal to the one and only true and living God. A fourth person, even the Son of God Himself, comes and goes in with them and the fire has no power over them. Not a hair of their heads is singed. Don't you want and need this Christ as you walk the fiery trail of our day? He alone can keep you from the evil.

I trust that one and all will register a determination here to be true to the God of the Hebrew children, keeping close to the guiding presence of our Christ of Galilee, and help drive from the land the sinful pleasures as they entice the youth of our great land today. To this end we ask the prayers of our mothers, fathers, pastors and the membership of this conference.

VALLEY VIRGINIA FELLOWSHIP.

The Youth Fellowship of the Virginia Valley Central Conference of Congregational and Christian churches held its annual meeting August 5, in connection with the Annual Conference at Antioch Church near Harrisonburg, Va.

The conference opened with a vesper service led by Rev. W. J. Andes. The Conference theme, "The Cross of Christ," was beautifully presented on the church lawn at twilight time. A choir in the distance sang "Day Is Dying in the West," which was followed by a call to worship. Both choirs joined in singing: "Jesus Calls Us." Dr. L. E. Smith read Isaiah 53, and led in prayer. Dr. S. C. Harrell gave a very inspiring talk. As the main choir sang "The Old Rugged Cross" the other (Antiphonal) choir, holding lighted candles, formed a cross. The Mizpah benediction closed a very impressive vesper.

The business session and evening program were presided over by the president, Miss Thelma Morris.

The roll call showed that eight churches were represented by thirty-seven people, and that four Key-workers were present.

Mr. Norman Morris made the report on goals, and the following recommendations were adopted:

1. That concentrated effort be made to have a young people's group organized in every church.
2. That the young people use their influence in the promotion of a daily vacation Bible school in each church next year.
3. That the young people of this conference work for a young peoples week at Massanetta Springs in cooperation with other denominations.

4. That ten representatives of this Fellowship attend the Elon Summer school, every church sending at least one young person.

5. That this Fellowship be represented by at least one of the officers at the Holiday Conference.

The report of the treasurer showed collections amounting to $22.60, with a balance of $12.97.

Miss Annie Lou Showalter gave a very interesting report on the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training.

Rev. Lanson Granger, president of the Southeast Youth Fellowship and of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, gave a very splendid address on "We Would Be Like Jesus." The program closed with an installation service in which the officers lighted their little candles from two large ones on the altar representing the Bible and Christ, and pledged to carry their light out to the churches. Rallies are being planned for the early fall.

Officers were elected as follows:

President, Miss Thelma Morris, of Dyke; Vice President, Amy Louderback, Shenandoah; Secretary-Treasurer, Irene Hensley, Elkton; Superintendent Service, Anna Lou Showalter, Harrisonburg; Supt. Devotional Life, Kathleen Oates, Highview, W. Va.; Supt. Leadership Training, Charlotte Hillyard, Broadway; Supt. Publications and Reporter, Mrs. C. L. Whitlock, Winchester; Pastor Counselors, Revs. W. J. Andes and R. L. Williamson; Lay Counselors, Mr. E. W. Cather, Winchester and Mr. R. R. Hosaflook, Linville.

SOWING AND REAPING.

(Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON VII—AUGUST 16, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap."
—Gal. 6:1-10.

LESSON: Gal. 6:1-10.

How a Christian May Help a Fellow Believer Who Has Yielded to Sin.

"If a man be overtaken in any trespass" he ought to be helped. Indeed he must be helped. But the right person must do it, and he must do it in the right spirit. "Ye who are spiritual"—one who has the Spirit of God in his heart and in his life, restore such a one—the word means to "reset" or "to repair what was injured," in the spirit of gentleness—not by harsh criticism, not in a high-handed manner, but in a kind, sympathetic, gentle way. The man who does wrong usually feels bad enough about it anyway, especially if he is an earnest believer. Gentleness and kindness alone can win such a one.

"Looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Moody was once asked if he would steal. He said that he did not think that he would, but he would not be too dogmatic about it. He said that if he should be placed in some situation in which others had been placed, he hoped he would not steal. We must put ourselves in the other fellow's place. We might think that we would not do what others do, when as a matter of fact we might do even worse. Let every man be careful how he judges for with what judgment he judges others, he shall be judged himself.

Bearing One Another's Burdens.

Sharing the burden of others—this is the law of Christ. To lift the load from another's shoulders or from his heart, not only helps him, it helps us to bear our own burdens. We that are strong ought to bear the burdens of the weak, and not to please ourselves. There are many heavy hearts in the world, and the call is for men and women who voluntarily take upon themselves the burdens of others.

Bearing One's Own Burden.

"For every man shall bear his own burden." In spite of all that others can do for us, we must bear our own burdens. A sense of guilt, personal responsibility, personal sin, individual suffering, a hundred things must a man bear himself. There is an alarming tendency in modern life—it has always been that way, however—to pass the buck, to make someone else responsible for our failures, etc. Every man must bear his own burden.

Christ the Burden Bearer.

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." These words are not in today's lesson, but they can be put in here without doing violence to this lesson. Christ is the great Burden Bearer. He can help us to bear our own burdens and He will inspire us to bear the burdens of others.

Not Thinking Too Highly of One's Self.

"For if a man thinketh himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself." A man ought to think something of himself, but not too highly of himself. It is easy to get too high an opinion of one's self. And it is dangerous. Pride goeth before a fall. Too much self esteem blinds one to ever-present dangers. Pride alienates us from others. Nobody likes a "stuck-up" or a cad. Let every man judge himself not by others but by Christ and he will not think too highly of himself. Neither should he think too little of himself by the same token.

Sharing With Others.

"But let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things." These words have as their background the classes in catechism which were held in the early church. Those who were taught ought to share with their teachers both their material things and their spiritual experiences. The principle is still valid in our modern life. The laborer is not only worthy of his hire, but teacher can learn from pupil as well as pupil from teacher.

Sowing and Reaping.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Everybody knows at once that this is true in the natural world. Sow wheat and you reap wheat—not oats. Sow clover seed and you reap clover, not alfalfa. But this law operates in the spiritual realm as well. A man reaps what he sows. The man who lives for the flesh shall have a harvest, but it will not be of the things of the spirit, it will be the things of the flesh. Let a man cater to his appetites and his passions and he will reap a sensual harvest. Let him cultivate the things of the spirit, let him give attention to the nurture of the spirit and his life will blossom and bear the fruits of the spirit. There is an idea abroad in the world that a man can sow his wild oats and then reap a rich harvest of good grain. Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. This passage has a particular point for young people, for youth is the time of seed sowing. Let every young person take heed how and what he sows, for the harvest of the years to come will be determined by what he sows and how he cultivates it.

Indiscourageable Continuance in Well-Doing.

"And let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." We church folks often become impatient of results. We are as a farmer planting seed today and expecting a crop tomorrow. God's work demands infinite patience. Ministers, Sunday school teachers, leaders of young people, the forces of righteousness must be willing to plant the seed and to cultivate the crop, and God will give the increase.

Doing Good to Others.

"As we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of faith." Every day brings an opportunity to do something for somebody else. And every opportunity brings responsibility. Let every man seek to do what Peter sums up in a brief biography of Jesus, when he says, "He went about doing good."

that do not contribute to our complete happiness in this life and the life to come. Many people today have tuned into their hearts such things as hate, fear, selfishness and sin, and they are fooling themselves into believing it is the program they desire. But, those who are seeking the higher way know that we must twist the dials and let come into our life such things as beauty, love, peace, truth and faith, for only then can we find complete happiness and give to the world a program that is worth broadcasting.

If we would see Jesus and lead others to Him, we must tune out hate and tune in love—love for God and love for our fellow-man; tune out lies and gossip and tune in truth—let our word be our bond; tune out selfishness and tune in unselfishness; tune out sin and tune in on a Christian life. But it is not as easy to tune these things in and out of our life as it is on the radio. We must let faith, truth, beauty, love and the desire for service come into our hearts and grow with us. We will find that the only way to do this is first to let Jesus come in, for when our hearts are in tune with Jesus and when we read our Bible and pray these other things

"DESERT SWEETENED."

"In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength."—Isa. 30:15.

A sign often seen along the highway in California reads "Desert Sweetened." Fruit "desert sweetened" is supposed to be a little more delicious than other fruit. That desert fruit can be made a little better than other fruit is a comment upon what man can do for the desert. It reflects the promise of God that the "desert shall be made to blossom like a rose."

So will the life that follows God. Jesus said, "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile." It is significant that every great reformer of history has done this. They have come from a desert. Moses, Abraham, Elijah, John, Paul, St. Augustine, Martin Luther, Abraham Lincoln—"Desert Sweetened." They all came forth into the burning life with a message that came to them from the desert. Jesus himself came from a desert where He met and mastered temptation and where He got His power for the glory of God.

The most of people have no time for the quiet places these days. The rush of the day swings through the night and we are swung along as a fly on a revolving wheel. Nevertheless the facts remain that a little quiet at the beginning of the day, a place where, "though the feet may join the throng, the soul may enter and pray, will give special blessings of calm and courage and confidence, and we may hear the 'still small voice.'"

Prayer—

Our Father, save us from so much care,

That we have no time for prayer;

Forbid the busy rush of time

To blind us to the glory of Thine.

—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"CHRISTIAN REQUIREMENTS."

"What do ye more than others?"—Matt. 5:47.

It is only the "extras," the going of the "two miles," the turning of the "other cheek," that attracts non-Christians. The casual man sees no difference between himself and most professed Christians. Christianity requires retaliation by love. He doesn't see it. Jesus graphically describes this in the parable of the Prodigal Son. Let us call it "the parable of the Loving Father." The father saw the son and ran to meet him, forgiving him everything. Jesus praises the man who refused to pass by the fallen man who was left by the roadside to die. He praises the man who will take abuse and forgives repeatedly. He says that speaking the truth, that helping the fallen brother and saving the lost is far richer compensation in life than the risk of the "second mile," or the "other cheek."

Prayer—Father, we thank Thee for Thy love,—that love that makes men minister like Jesus did. Give us the faith to value divine possibilities, and help us to build with Thee a bit of Thy kingdom on earth.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE SCOPE OF CHRISTIANITY."

"Cleanse first that which is in the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also."—Matt. 23:25, 26.

The prophets of old dreamed of a day when the humblest vessels of the temple should be regarded as sacred vessels of the altar. They even went so far as to say that even the ordinary utensils of the home should be regarded as holy.

When Christ came preaching, He did not condemn the importance which the Jews placed upon the exterior of things, but He said that if the heart is right, everything else will be right. Religion sanctifies the common-place. So Christ broke down the wall of partition between the material and the spiritual. From Him emanates the truth that religion is life and religion in life is all that counts. A man is to be judged by his worth and not by the clothes he wears.

Prayer—O Lord, our Father, open Thou our eyes to the abundant life. Come Thou into our lives and set us right, and send us forth to do Thy will.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"CONTENTMENT A CHRISTIAN GRACE"

"I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content."—Phil. 4:11.

Mr. H. C. Henderson has said: "There are two types of contentment. One is induced by a lack of physical and moral courage necessary to undertake to better conditions. This is tragic and deadly. The other is a state of heart and mind arising out of faith in God and an inner self-mastery which will not permit one to become fretted or upset by circumstances."

Christian contentment simply cannot be understood by people who do not know the secret of Christian living. Yesterday one said: "I have found that when I am angry with someone, to pause and think about the good things about that person dissipates my anger." To know how to be abased as well as to abound, to know poverty as well as comfort, to know sickness and misfortune as well as fortune, and to let such experience project into the lives of others in sympathetic helpfulness gives the richest contentment life has ever known.

Prayer—Our Father, we hear Thy words: "All things work together for good to them that love God." Strengthen our faith and give us grace to trust Thee with a whole heart.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"RESPONSIBILITY OF THE EARS."

"Take care what you hear."—Matt. 4:24.

There is a responsibility of the eyes: Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." There is also a responsibility of the lips: "For every idle word we shall be brought into judgment." Frederick Brown Harris, in the "Upper Room," says, "There is a responsibility of the ears. What we hear in the world depends upon what sort of receiving sets we have made of our souls."

We hear as we love, as we desire, as we would like to have things. We hear as we are prejudiced, or according to our fears. When truth appears what we are rises up to welcome it, or to defy it, or to argue it away,—all according to our individual slant on things.

In view of these facts, our chiefest responsibility is: to see to it that our loves, our desires, our prejudices, our fears and all else,—things that make us what we are,—are attuned to the Christ spirit. The words to Moses at Sinai were, "Go thou near and hear all that the Lord thy God shall say." That is also our commission.

Prayer—Our Father, speak Thou to our souls. Attune our souls to Thy will. Give unto us the right hearing. Send us into each day with Christlike spirit and poise. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"FOR THE NEXT STEP."

"God said unto him, thou fool."—Luke 12:16-21.

Down in Babylonia, shortly before the war, I came up with a rich young German traveler; and as we trudged about the ruins of Ctesiphon he showed me a notebook in which he had charted his plans for the years to

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

UNDERSTANDING OURSELVES.

By HERBERT G. COUNCIL, JR.

"For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known."—I. Cor. xiii: 12.

There are some desires which every human individual is sooner or later apt to feel, and one of these is the desire to be understood.

In his life, so full of controversy and collision, the Apostle Paul must have felt that desire. The suggestion that he did feel it flashes out in this thirteenth chapter of the first letter to the Corinthians. Professor James Moffatt translates the expressions of Paul in this way. "At present we see only the baffling reflections in a mirror, but then it will be face to face; at present I am learning bit by bit; but then I shall understand, as all along I have myself been understood."

Yet these are curious words—"as all along I have myself been understood." They say the very thing that does not seem generally true of human experience. Often as we read St. Paul's life and letters, it does not appear that such a thing was true of him. And certainly we often think it is not true of us.

To begin with, we do not understand ourselves. If once we understood what our own natures are and what we within are meant to be, then we could make a better business of our living. "Know thyself" is a very ancient maxim, but to this day most of us have not been able to follow it out. We either do not take stock of our inner lives at all, or else, when we do take stock, we are humiliated by the jumble and confusion which is there. Every sort of contradictory impulse seems to be mixed up within us, impulses of good and of evil, of courage and of cowardice, of power and of laziness, and which is the real self, heaven only knows.

It is certain also that a man's real life and character are not understood when they are looked at in the mirror of other people's estimates. All we need do is to look at some of the great men of history to know the truth of that. The mirror of public reputation will distort the likeness until it is nothing but caricature and hopeless contradiction.

Take, for example, George Washington. There would seem to be a character in history about whom all men's judgment might be clear. But George Washington himself was certainly never under that delusion. Since his death he has been recognized as the father of his country. He has been exalted as one of the great patriots of the ages. During his lifetime also there were those who recognized the loftiness of his public devotion and the grandeur of his fortitude through good report and ill. But there were others who joined in a very different estimate. They said he was an aristocrat, a miser, and the oppressor of the many for the enrichment of the few. They said his personal habits were low and base. One of the leading newspapers among the few that then existed in America said, on the day after Washington retired from the Presidency, that if "ever there was a period for rejoicing, this is the moment. Every heart ought to beat high with exultation that the name of Washington from this day ceases to give currency to political iniquity and to legalize corruption." It is evident that Washington, as he went back to Mount Vernon, was not saying, "as all along I have myself been understood."

The same can be said of Abraham Lincoln and of Woodrow Wilson. So it was even with the Apostle Paul, himself. What evidence is there that he was understood—understood by any consensus of judgment in his time? There were those who loved him, and would go, if necessary, to death in his companionship; but there were many, not only without, but also within the new-born Christian Church, who hated him with a malignity such as few persons have aroused. There were forty men in Jerusalem who took an oath not to eat or drink until they had killed him. People in the church thought he was a destroyer of old loyalties. They brought all manner of abominable accusations against him. They said the reason he took up collections for the poor was because he kept all the money for himself. They said that he was brave enough at a distance, but insignificant when he came near. They said he was not really an apostle at all but a self-commissioned adventurer, and that nobody ought to listen to him. If someone had asked the great apostle, "Did they understand you and your motives, those men in Antioch that day when the mob drove you out of the city? Did they understand you that day when they stoned you in Lystra and left you for dead? Did they understand you that in Athens when the listeners on the Acropolis shrugged their shoulders and went away? Did they understand you in Ephesus when Demetrius the silversmith raised a riot and threw the whole city into confusion as a protest against your preaching? Did they understand you that day in Jerusalem when you said to the Sanhedrin, "Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day," and the high priest commanded someone who stood by to strike you on the mouth?" Then it is safe to say that Paul would have had to answer, "No, it did not seem as though I were understood."

Yet here it is written in two translations of his letter. "Then I shall understand as all along I have myself been understood." "Then shall I know as even also I am known."

What does He mean? As we think more deeply, we realize what he did mean. He was not thinking of his own self-knowledge. That might seem clear one day and the next day be utterly blurred by his own doubts and discouragements, as the reflection in a lake is blurred by the gusty winds which blow from the sudden storms greater understanding altogether. He speaking, either, of the understanding of people. He knew how fickle that could be. He was speaking of another and a greater understanding altogether. He was thinking of the understanding of God. It was as though he had said: "There is a great deal which as yet I do not know—about myself, about truth, about life. But I am persuaded that all the while God knows me. This little fragment of my knowledge is held in a larger grasp, this brokenness of my purpose is yet safeguarded by a grander control. God understands me. That is the important matter. And if I am faithful and obedient, then some day I shall understand more fully than I do now what it is that He desires should come to pass in me and in the world."

Let us now link these thoughts directly with our own needs. We may divide our consideration into two parts. One has to do with our desire for understanding. The other is God's answer to that desire.

To begin with, we want to understand ourselves. That is the reason for the tremendous popularity of all sorts of psychologists, psychiatrists, fortune tellers, and palm readers. We know just enough about our personalities to realize how much there is that we do not know. We have been

Dear Friends:

Vacation time will be over for most of the children here during this month. Practically all of them who have not had their vacation will get one. We try to get them all out on vacation for a week or ten days. I think it does them good and gives them a little better insight into life. They generally have a good time and enjoy the outing.

It will soon be school time again and then it will be books, tablets, pencils and many other school accessories. It takes quite a lot of cash to get them all supplied and in good working order.

Winter is creeping up as the days go by and that means shoes, clothing, and all kinds of wearing apparel and that means another heavy expense.

Winter also brings a chill in the air that calls for heat and to keep the buildings comfortable it will take three cars of coal and a car of coal for our use here costs us $250.00. Three cars will cost us $750.00, so you see just what this one item will cost us and how it will cut into our small bank balance. If you will read our financial report in the Christian Sun from week to week and if you were in my place, would you sometimes feel blue?

Then we have extra expenses that we sometimes are not looking for. For instance I bought a second-hand hotel range eighteen years ago and it has completely burned out and a few days ago I had to purchase another one. If you have priced any stoves of that size lately you will know how that cuts into a bank balance too. I never buy till necessity forces me to buy. I call your attention to these things thinking perhaps that you might appreciate my position and help to swell the offerings in your Sunday school or perhaps mail me a personal check to help me to be able to forget my worries and smile more.

come. He had diagrammed his whole life.

But he was crazy and was traveling with a keeper. Only a mentally unsound person presumes to know far into the future. The Bible promises only a lamp for the feet and a light for the immediate path. As Milton wrote:

"To know

That which before us lies in daily life,
Is the prime wisdom."

Light for living, a day at a time, is God's provision.

Prayer—Give us, our Father, a heart of peace as we follow the unfolding path of life, content with light for the day and with the knowledge that Thou art our guide.—Amen.

"THE LOST GOLD."

"What shall it profit a man?"—
Mark 9:34-38.

There is an old story of a Klondike miner, returning to Seattle with his season's store of gold in a belt. A boy fell overboard from the boat and the miner leaped after him. But he had to give up his heavy store of gold to make the rescue.

Years later the miner said: "I've never been sorry. I lost my gold, but I saved a life."

In concrete form that tells the whole story of values. Many men have saved their gold and lost their own sons. More have sacrificed wealth for the sake of spiritual values. They are the sort whom Jesus calls "rich toward God."

Prayer—High and heroic souls challenge us to be our best also; and we pray for sustaining grace, O God, to live at our highest even when our estate is the lowest.—Amen.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

taught that we have emotions, impulses and instincts, and queer inhibitions with which some forgotten experience may have tangled and blocked the free flow of our happy life. All these things are seen as in a cloudy panorama, with its shifting glimpses, now stabbed with a gleam of light, and now wrapped in a bewildering fog. We wonder what hope there is in us of a personality set free for unhindered exercise. Are we the masters of our fate, or are we the victims of obscure forces which we cannot control? Is it true that material forces and considerations are the only things that matter? Do we believe, as some people would have us believe, that the idea of a soul is an outgrown superstition? We cannot believe that we are meant to crawl and wiggle our way through this world in a muddy materialism. Everyone of us feels that those impulses within him which are the highest are the ones which ultimately be true. But we want a larger guarantee of our real nature and a larger assurance of the prevailing power of those things which instinctively we feel to be the best, than our own lonely consciousness can give. Is there an ample reserve somewhere on which we can lay hold?

And then, if we are baffled at understanding ourselves when we look within, how much more are we baffled when we try to recognize ourselves in the mirror of other people's estimates. Our friends and the people who love us tell us one thing, and the people who dislike us may emphatically tell us something very different. The temptation is to listen to the first group, always. And how dangerous it is to carry with us any of those softening delusions drawn from flattery or from half-deserved commendation. We shall sooner or later find ourselves in a sorry confusion, and we shall be full of self-pity in the conviction that everybody has misunderstood us.

So the net result is that often in our desire to understand ourselves and to be understood by others, there seems no fixed point of judgment. We are like ships without a compass, or with a compass that does not work. There is no steady pole of certainty and assurance toward which the compass can point.

Or rather, there is not until God comes into the picture. And here we advance to the other matter for our thought.

Suppose we knew that there is Some One who does understand us. Suppose we knew that there is a wisdom higher than our perplexities, a confidence that is stronger than our hesitations, and a love that is never blind and yet that will never let us go. That would make a difference.

And this is exactly the difference that Christianity brings. It is the difference which Jesus himself brought to those first disciples whose lives he touched most intimately. They had only the dimmest notion of their own possibilities. They were surrounded by all sorts of contradictory estimates from their neighbors. There was no force great enough to take the scattered elements of their personalities and magnetize them into a whole. Then Jesus came. He turned the eyes of his divine perception upon them. He saw what they had it in them to become: Peter the Vacillating turned into Peter the rock; John the son of thunder turned into John the loving and the beloved; Matthew the publican turned into Matthew the Apostle; Mary Magdalene the sinner turned into Mary Magdalene the Saint. For the first time, these men and women knew that they were understood. Their lives were caught in a larger grasp, a grasp of knowledge and of mastery which could make them over into the beautiful pattern of the thing he saw. And the knowledge that he understood gave them courage to walk in the way of obedience even when it was difficult and dark. Jesus understood their weaknesses, and would be patient with all the false steps they made. Jesus knew the end from the beginning, and in the power of his confidence, they dared to believe that spiritually they would arrive.

The message which I want to bring you this evening is the message that you can have the same essential experience which the early disciples had. Above the heads of those people who might laugh at you, or in the presence of whom you might stand embarrassed, you can lift your eyes; and there you can see the understanding of God looking at you in the face of Jesus Christ. He has seen the little fluttering desires of your spirit. He trusts them, and he tells your conscience that they are the truth. He bids you believe in your best. It is as though he said, "I understand all that you have begun to understand, and a great deal more. The light you see is the light which God's love long ago has lighted for you. The glimmering courage you feel has come from his confidence, which will not fail. Take the next step on the better way. Never mind the fears and the partial failures. You will grow in understanding because you are growing up toward God in Whom alone you are fully understood."

"But how shall I know the will of God?" you may say. "Tell me something more definite within myself which I can trust as the indication of his guidance." St. Paul has summed them up in those three incomparable words with which he brings to his climax that part of his letter from which our text is taken. "But now abideth," he says, "faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love." These are the elements in you which God sees. These are the sources of power in which he understands your possibilities. There is much within you and around you which would make you distrust them all. But in them are the ways of life.

We learn to know ourselves as we discover ourselves in obedience to those best ventures of character and conduct which the thought of Christ inspires in us. And as we do keep living by these three great inspirations, more and more we begin to recognize that our lives are being lighted and strengthened by the grace of God himself, and we know that we are learning to understand the meaning of life, through Him by whom our real souls have first been understood.

THE CODE OF ELON COLLEGE

ELON COLLEGE exists for the church and for the exaltation of Christ, that in all things He might have pre-eminence. It seeks to discover the individual student's talents and to accentuate his personal possibilities. It labors zealously for the development of the whole of life—physical, mental, spiritual—that the youth of today may discharge completely his duties to man and to God. It stands for honesty, individual integrity, fairness to all and undue deference to none, for sound scholarship, for freedom in the field of research, for the discovery of truth, and for the elucidation of that truth in the wisdom of the Spirit.

It relies upon its natural constituency, the Christian church, its alumni, and friends, for adequate support that it may continue its high service to the present and future generations.

A Planned Church Program.

(An Editorial.)

The day of the circuit rider has gone, and with the new day has come the necessity for a planned church program. An evangelist may preach to a group and pass on to another place without making much preparation, but a pastor has to work long in advance and plan for both the present and the future if he is to build a real church. It is as impossible to develop a successful church without planning as it is to construct a building without blue prints.

Experience teaches that it is easier to work by plan than by chance. A series of sermons planned for months ahead make preaching pleasant, but if one has to scramble around on Saturday night to get something to say on Sunday, preaching becomes a nightmare. This is equally true of other phases of church work.

A planned program is also more successful. Those who object to plans should not ride in automobiles. There has always been sufficient wood, steel, and rubber to make automobiles for all the people of the world, but until plans were developed for the building of the machine, nobody could ride in an automobile. All evidences point to the fact that God works according to plan, and not in a haphazard fashion.

Successful leaders of a worship program know what is likely to happen before they begin. Music, poetry, scripture, talks and prayers are arranged in definite order and fitted together with one supreme idea. Those who share in the service may not be conscious of how much thought has gone into the making of the program, but they worship God the more devoutly because of the labor of those who have planned ahead.

Vacation time is the season when many ministers map out their church program for the year. Sermon subjects are scheduled which may, of course, be changed at any time; mid-week services are planned to do certain definite things; a financial program takes form in the mind of the minister; socials that serve are fitted into the church program; goals for new members and methods of securing them become clear in the minister's mind; all phases of the church work, missionary, education, devotional, financial have their place in the program. The church must minister to men, women and children. All of these services must needs be thought through and definitely planned if they are to be successful.

Ministers, deacons, missionary leaders, Sunday school workers, all church leaders should have a definite goal, and can best accomplish it by definitely planning their programs long in advance.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Revs. O. D. Poythress and J. F. Morgan of Norfolk, Va. are spending this week at the Massanetta Bible Conference at Massanetta Springs, Va. Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk were there last week and this week also.

Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Jay and two daughters, Virginia and Mary Nelle, left Winston-Salem, N. C., Sunday afternoon, August 2, for Ohio where they will visit Mrs. Jay's father, and her sister, Mrs. E. R. Marty, Wapakoneta, Ohio. They will return by way of Pennsylvania where they will visit relatives of Dr. Jay in Bedford County, Pa., and attend the fifteenth annual reunion of the Jay family. Dr. Jay will fill his pulpit again on August 23.

Rev. F. E. Hyde, minister of the Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford and the Shallow Well Christian church, assisted by Dr. W. C. Wicker at Pleasant Grove Christian Church during the week of July 13-18. Fourteen additions or professions of faith were reported. During the week of July 26—August 1, he assisted Rev. L. L. Wyrick at the Concord Christian Church. Eight accessions to the church by profession of faith are reported.

Rev. B. F. Vaughan, D. D. of Centerville, Ohio, writes a personal note to the editor in which he says that he is nearly 84 years old, crippled for life, partially deaf, and can just read The Christian Sun by careful attention. But with all of this he finds joy in reading the paper and remembers with delight the Herald of Gospel Liberty. He joins with many others in saying that the former editor of The Sun, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, is a noble, Christian gentleman. When one comes toward the sunset of life, it must be great to have satisfying memories and multitudes of friends.

The North Georgia Association of Congregational - Christian churches met at Macedonia Church, Braselton, July 28. The meeting was well attended by churches and ministers. On the program President G. C. Bellingrath, delegate to the General Council, spoke on "Impressions of the General Council." Rev. Wm. T. Scott, the new superintendent, spoke on "The Effective Church." In the afternoon the Association was divided up into three groups—the Woman's Group which was led by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Mrs. Alan Jones; the Young People's group led by Rev. H. B. Mowbray and Rev. Wm. T. Scott. Plans were laid for the 22 per cent increase in missionary giving for 1936-37. Officers for next year were elected as follows: Moderator, Rev. Alan Jones, Braselton; Assistant Moderator, Rev. R. Wiley Scott, Atlanta; Registrar and Treasurer, Mr. James P. Mahaffey, Braselton.

REVIVAL MEETING.

Rev. Jas. L. Foster held a series of revival meetings at Oak Level Christian Church the first week in August. Mr. Foster preached in a very inspirational way, and no doubt caused numbers of young people to choose the Highroad that leads to everlasting joy and peace and rest. He explained very clearly why we young people should accept the Highroad to journey upon through this earthly life.

The people of Oak Level community always hold their annual revival meetings during the first week of August.

I feel that the community was drawn nearer the Kingdom of God because of the revival meetings, and because of Mr. Foster's preaching.

CHURCH REPORTER.

SANFORD CHURCH.

The Congregational and Christian Church of Sanford has improved its auditorium by new lighting fixtures which add beauty and dignity to the worshipful atmosphere of the place. Mr. A. H. McIver was the donor of the fixtures.

At the third quarterly conference of the church, John Thomas and Martin Wicker were elected to the office of deacon. Their ordination followed shortly.

During his vacation, the minister, Rev. F. E. Hyde, attended the six weeks' session of Junaluska School of Religion, a subsidiary of Duke University, at Lake Junaluska, N. C.

This church joined in with the other four major churches of Sanford for union services during the month of August. This is an old custom among the local churches for the evening services.

CHURCH REPORTER.

CONCORD.

The revival meeting began at Concord the fourth Sunday in July and closed Friday night, July 31, 1936. Sunday morning the pastor preached to an appreciative congregation, and Rev. T. F. Underwood brought the afternoon message very acceptably. Mr. W. R. Routh, with his chorus, aided very greatly the Sunday program with their melodious voices in song.

Rev. F. E. Hyde, Sanford, arrived Monday and did the preaching very acceptably until the close of the meeting. His messages were highly Scriptural and instructive in Christian ideals. He made many friends while with us. We wish for him great success in his labors elsewhere.

There were eight professions of faith in Christ, eight accessions to the church, several reconsecrations, and the spiritual life of the church was quickened and refreshed.

For all the good that was accomplished, we thank the Lord to whom be glory forever and ever.

When we went to our car to come home, behold, it was loaded with things to replenish a pantry such as a pastor needs. Items we call to memory include lard, sugar, flour, meat, corn, honey, tomatoes, preserves, etc.

This is a splendid congregation to serve. We thank every one who had a part in this expression of good will, and hope we may be a better pastor in return, manifesting appreciation for their kindness.

L. L. WYRICK.

WINSTON-SALEM.

The Daily Vacation Bible School of the United Congregational-Christian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., opened Monday, July 27, and lasted for one week. The interest and attendance of the school well warranted another week of the session, but the program of our work only permitted one week. There was an enrollment of 45. Thirty-four was the average attendance, and seventeed attended every day.

The pastor acted as principal of the school and taught the Intermediate group as a pastor's class, using as a theme, "How to Become a Christian." Emmanuel Hedgebeth of Holland, Va. who assisted with the school was in charge of the Juniors and assisted the pastor with the craft work for boys.

Mrs. J. A. Wester and Mrs. C. W. Crawford had charge of the Primaries and their craft work; and Mrs. J. A. Flynt and Mary Nellie Jay were in charge of the Beginners. Miss Virginia Jay had charge of the music drill work. Mrs. W. M. Jay and Miss Mila Flynt Neale assisted with the story-telling.

All teachers reported excellent progress and interest in memory work, Bible study and craft work.

A two-weeks' school will be in our plans for next year. The preacher cannot commend too highly the splendid and faithful work of his staff of teachers and helpers.

W. M. JAY.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

THANK YOU, I WILL!

Is that watermelon you are eating? Yes, thanks, I will have a piece. Or is it ice cream? I like that too. What could be better on a hot August day than to sit in the shade with your family and friends and to eat ripe, red, luscious watermelon, or delicious home made ice cream? The food, fun and fellowship are delightful. How I would like to walk in and share with you!

After all, what is life but the joy you get out of it, and the joy that you put into it? A slice of melon on a plate can never bring the thrill like that of biting into it while holding it with both hands. A dainty dip of drug store ice cream will never satisfy like sitting down around a freezer and helping yourself to the kind of ice cream that mother made.

Don't ever get too busy making a living to really live. Whether you are out on the farm, or parked in an apartment, you can still find the joy of self-expression and fellowship with your friends. I like to think that you are my friends and that we are sharing this paper together.

HAVE YOU BEGUN YET?

Have you started getting new subscriptions for The Christian Sun in order that 10 per cent of the people in your church may read its pages from week to week? Only one church has sent in such a list, but others are at work on it? The editor believes that it will be a fine thing for your church to send in such a list, and he is quite suspicious that your missionary society, Sunday school class or C. E. society could use the 25 per cent commission to good advantage, and like it.

It would be a delight for the editor to call on the people of your church, eat with them, and share the joy of their family while securing new subscriptions to the paper. This, however, is totally impossible because he has a church of his own to visit and must needs spend considerable time each week in finding material for the pages of the paper. You have the joy of getting the new subscriptions and in so doing have your share in making the paper of value to your friends.

CRITICISMS.

Criticism are eased to give than to heed. They may be kind or unkindly; they may be helpful or destructive.

Most of the criticisms which have come to the editor concerning this paper have been kindly and constructive. He is delighted to know how the people feel and is always glad when material is sent along with the criticism. News items, brief articles, and anything that may have religious value will be welcomed at the office of the editor. He does not expect to do a perfect job but is sincere in trying to give what he thinks will be helpful, and in soliciting the cooperation of all who read the paper.

LOOK AT YOUR LABEL.

The little label on your paper tells a very important message. To some it says that they do not have to bother about paying a subscription for years to come; to others it says that they have not bothered about paying their subscription for years that have gone. According to the list I have on my desk, it must be a rather disturbing little label to most of the people who receive the paper.

I have just checked over the list of those who are in arrears, and they seem to be in the majority. Dr. N. G. Newman says that the majority is usually wrong, and in this case he is doubtless correct.

Now, if you do have money left over from vacation, or if you can sell a spring chicken, or if you rather, just write a check on your bank account, it will be doing a Christian service for you to pay up your subscription to The Christian Sun so that the paper can continue to be published and that you can be very happy about it as a subscriber.

Thank you very much. We'll be seeing you.

True happiness comes from within; from the satisfaction, among other things, of having obeyed the Golden Rule. For, surrounded by the luxuries of kings or amid the beauties of mountain, desert, or sea, among the crowd or on solitary plain, if one has not the feeling that he has done unto others as he would have others do unto him there can be no real happiness.

NOTICE.

The Middle Georgia Association of Congregational-Christian churches will meet at Bethany Church, The Rock, Georgia, August 29-30. This occasions will enable the Middle Georgia churches to join in the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Bethany Church. Rev. David W. Shepherd is the pastor.

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.

The Georgia young people had one of their best Summer Conferences at Piedmont College, July 20-27. There were fifty in attendance, and leaders of the Conference consisted of Rev. and Mrs. Alan Jones, Rev. and Mrs. D. W. Shepherd, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Dr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Bell, Rev. W. Carl Parker, Rev. H. B. Mowbray, President G. C. Bellingrath, Mr. Aubrey C. Todd, Miss Annie R. Campbell and Rev. Wm. T. Scott.

The success of the Conference was due in a large measure to Miss Annie Campbell, director. Miss Campbell retires from active service in Georgia on September 1st, after six years of faithful service and Church Extension Board worker for Georgia. The Georgia young people paid a fine tribute to Miss Campbell and unanimously passed the following resolutions, with a request that they be published in The Christian Sun:

"Our hearts are made sad by the announcement of the coming retirement of Miss Annie Campbell, who has been our Church Extension Board worker in Georgia for six years. On Sept. 1, 1936, she will retire from this work to enter other fields of service.

"Miss Campbell has rendered faithful service to our churches. She has organized our Young People's work, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor societies, and social activities. Thru her consecration and able leadership, she has been able to hold churches together when they were without pastors. She has served as a missionary in our neglected parishes; inspired young people to attend school and college for the growth of our churches and the Kingdom. She has not forgotten the outcast, the down-trodden, and discouraged, but she has walked many miles over hot, dusty roads and fields, and through snow and ice that she might do personal work of reclaiming and encouraging the needy in the name of Jesus Christ.

"As a Church Extension Board worker she never tired nor asked for personal favors. She did not choose any easy paths. God only knows the sacrifice of this one who has grown to mean so much to our churches of Georgia. Our loss will be a great one. It is hard to give up one whom we love as much as we do Miss Campbell, but in her going we wish her much success as she enters into another field of service. May God richly bless her labors wherever she goes. Therefore, be it resolved:

"As an act of appreciation for her unselfish and devoted services as our

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WHAT DOES THE CHURCH NEED MOST?

We all generally agree that there is something desperately wrong with the Church; that we should get something from the services that we are not getting; and that gradually people are drifting away from God and His institution. This fact has become so evident that Christian young people have taken steps to improve this world in which we are living; devout Christian leaders are trying to do something to cause people to become conscious of the presence of God; and both are attempting to the best of their ability to do something that will cause young people and older ones to become interested in bringing about a change in our social and economic order. I do not intend to say anything that is in opposition to the work of these two groups, for I believe that they are as sincere as they can be in their work and that eventually, if they carry their work through as they have planned it, we will have established here a new form of society that will be far more Christian than the one that we have at the present time, and that we will have a world in which there will be peace, love and brotherhood among men. I do say, however, that the thing that is wrong with the Church is not outside in the social and economic orders, but within the Church among those who call themselves Christians.

There is one thing that the Church is losing and that is a spirit of reverence. And I do not believe that the Church will go forward until there is a much deeper feeling of reverence and sacredness toward the Church than we have at the present time. There are few people today who ever really experience the presence of God, for they never get that opportunity in most of our church services, because God is hardly ever consciously present in our services. God is present everywhere, but we cannot experience that presence without a little effort on our part. If God were consciously present in our lives all the time, we could not possibly do some of the things that we do.

We go to church as a sense of duty and not to worship. We take a part in the religious activities of our community, not because we are Christians and do it of our own free will, but because we use the church as a blind to hide our real selves and to make ourselves conspicuous. We help the poor not in a true sense of helping them but because someone will compliment us for what we have done. How can we expect to get anything out of the worship services when we do not go to Church primarily for the purpose of worshipping? How can we expect to experience the presence of God when we do not serve Him because of our love for Him? And how can we experience the joy of giving when we give for selfish fame?

If we do not go to church to worship, we should not enter the door of our Church on Sunday morning, for when we enter a church auditorium we should feel that we are entering a holy place and we cannot feel that way if we do not go to church to worship. Is it any wonder that so few people experience the presence of God when the majority of us enter the church with about as much reverence as we would enter a dance hall, and after we enter sing so loudly that someone on the opposite side of the auditorium can hear us? The first thing that we do when we enter a church is to turn around to see who is there, or to see what kind of dress Mrs. Smith is wearing, and some even go so far as to notice if the preacher's tie is too loud. All these things have become trivial, but just the same they take away from the spirit of reverence that should be present in our services, and that is exactly the reason that we say that we do not get anything out of attending church. If we expect to get anything out of the services, we have got to participate in them and go to church with the idea of worshipping while we are there. We cannot worship in a true sense of worshipping by remaining at home listening to a radio preacher, for we miss something that comes only from participating in the service with our presence.

Many people say that they do not like to have the worship service before the sermon as long as many of our churches have it, but when a person says that you can be sure that they do not really worship God during that part of the service. We should get more real spiritual benefit from the worship service than we get from the sermon itself, but people become so anxious to hear the preacher start to preaching to see of he is going to say anything that conflicts with our political views or to see whose "toes" he is going to "step on," that we lose all our desire to worship and sleep blindly through the most important part of the service. Most of us say that we believe that there is a God, but if we were asked who or what God is, there are very few of us who can give an intelligent conception of Him, and I believe that this is because we have never found for ourselves that experience of His presence.

We do away with the reverence in our churches by coming in late, by letting a door slam, and by disturbing someone to get to the seat that we want. We should not speak a word from the time that we enter the auditorium until the time that we leave it unless it is by participating in the service, and when we enter we should bow our heads for a few moments of silent prayer.

The Church is supposed to be a place where we meet God and talk with Him, but we have made it a place where we meet our friends and talk with them. I wonder what Jesus would think of us if he heard some of the conversations that we carry on in His Father's House. The altar is supposed to be a sacred place, and we have made it a place where we discuss plans for a party during the week. Our Sunday service is where we should go to worship, but we have made out of it a fashion show.

Reverence is the thing that the Church needs most, and until we cultivate a reverence for our Church that is far superior to what we have now, we should not be surprised when people say that they do not get anything out of attending church.

EMMANUEL HEDGEBETH,
Holland, Va.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH—ITS NATURE AND FUNCTION.

Moderatorial Address to the General Council, by the late
DR. PARKES S. CADMAN.

(Concluded from last week.)

We realize beneath the Cross that as a philosophy of life our religion glowing experience and sound learning; that social reconstruction is best approached beneath the banner of Christ's teaching, and that any creed solicitous for nothing more than the salvation of the individual cannot win the interest, much less the reverence of mankind. Why should it? The genius of the Gospel lends itself to social betterment with singular power and fitness. Its capacity in this respect makes one wonder how institutional Christianity could waste so many centuries in comparative indifference, while the harvest field of human aspiration, labor, suffering and wrong, awaited its Christlike ministries. To be sure, the vision of the stream of tears and blood falling darkly through the shadows of mortal travail appeared to illuminate like St. Francis and to other Christian leaders before and after the thirteenth century. But the Gospel's social viewpoint was frustrated by that sense of individualistic importance the latent egotism of which still disfigures religious advocacy. It has its rights, but their over emphasis thwart the free play of Christian humanitarianism, and reduce the New Testament Evangel to a scheme for personal rescue rather than for social restoration. So we take for granted the social force and meaning of that Gospel, and contend that if its Lord does not reign in industrial and international affairs, He cannot reign at all. If we have lingered too long with those who “Trusting to crowded factory and mart,

And proud discoveries of the intellect
Heed not the pillage of man's ancient heart”

may the All-Merciful pardon our tardiness!

The opportunity is ours; Europe and America have elevated their respective social and economic theories to the status of a religion. The choice is not between Christianity and sheer negativism; it is between Christianity and rival faiths heralded with frenzied zealotry.

Nor need we fear the grandiose display of fleeting temporalities or the pomp and circumstances of resurgent tyranny. I concede Christianity is less articulate in many lands, but its spirit broods over their troubled deeps. Entrenched wickedness and hoary privilege are assailed by all branches of the Christian Church. They no longer try to evade the issue by defying the future at the expense of past and present. If the abundant life Christ imparts is desirable on earth, it is almost more desirable on earth. The principle of postponed blessedness is a snare; human good must be obtained here and now or that of the future becomes hazardous.

We agree that filiality with God is uncertain until it is manifest in our fraternity with men, and whatever this involves. Perverted mammonites who have not even the shadow of an empty heart for humanity's woes are a ragged remnant. Since the world with which our Lord forever identified himself cannot be doomed, if faithful we are predestined to overcome. Time was when the Church was the visible witness of a Divine order covering the whole life of man. Every occupation, learned or simple, was controlled by her. She gave to Europe a law of conduct, a fixed conception of how they could so live here as to enjoy eternal life beyond the grave. Trade and commerce invoked her benediction. Today as never before she is confronted by an insidious, and dangerous Paganism. Can she maintain? The answer we should give is that by God's grace she can. Doubtless our desire for a recreated Church and State, united as soul and body in justice and righteousness, seems to secularists and materialists as futile as the longing of the moth for the star. But reason, revelation and Time's ameliorating tide are with us. God Himself has so ordained and made it known in the Gospel of His Son. Let us counsel together with confidence and resolution, knowing that “Power is with us in the night

And dwells not in the light alone.”

GOD LOVES THE HILLS.

When God called the Elmore's out from a busy world and sent them up to our hills, it was an expression of His great love for us. And just now we have had a new experience of His love. Misses Edna Fuleher and Margaret Butt of Norfolk, came to our hills to help our pastor with the Daily Vacation Bible Schools at Rocky Ford and Elk Spur. These schools are reaching more people of the hills each year. This time the enrollment was 110, which is especially good for this part, as this is a busy time of year and we had rain and muddy roads to go over the week of our Bible school. A splendid spirit of cooperation was shown on the part of all who took a part.

Our pastor, Bro. Elmore, taught the adult class and all enjoyed the valuable thoughts brought out in the life of Christ. He taught in a way that was new and interesting to us, and I feel that everyone carried away with him or her some truths from the Bible that will go with us through life. Some people are born to teach, it seems, while others can acquire as much knowledge, but can not give out that knowledge. A cistern gathers water and holds it. Some people are like that, while others are like a fountain giving off water freely, yes, gladly. In Pastor Elmore we find a fountain filled with the spiritual water and with a natural overflow. It is no burden for him to preach or teach; he feels no sacrifice in so doing, but this is just his work and he does it gladly. Whether his field of labor lies in the city or in the heart of the hills is little difference to him; the fountain just overflows wherever it is.

Miss Fuleher and Miss Butt taught the younger people. And these girls either had that spirit of the fountain or they caught it from our pastor when they got here. Anyway, their glad spirits overflowed, and their happy laughter reminded us once more how much real joy is found in Christian living. They love to live, and live to love.

We hear a lot about our young people of this flying age being wild and having no faith in God. However, I wonder if we are not just keeping our eyes on the “Jacks and Jills” on the roll down the hill and failing to notice the faithful young people who have their shoulders to the wheel. We do well to keep in touch with our young people who are faithful. It keeps us believing in people and helps us to see the sunny side of life. The happy voices and bright spirits of those two girls seem to linger still on our hills and to make the sun shine just a little brighter and the flowers bloom a little sweeter for us of the hills. We are shut off from the world up here, and we need that fellowship and contact with the Christian world. Edna and Margaret were like a connecting link, and their warm handclasp reminded me once more that there are happy young Christians out in the great world beyond these peaks so blue.

“There's a heap o' consolation

In the handclasp of a friend;

It can wipe out desolations,

And bring heartaches to an end.

It can soothe a troubled spirit

Like no magic in the land;

Heaven? You are pretty near it—

When a good friend grips your hand.”

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A revival meeting was held at Oakland church last week. The pastor was assisted by Rev. J. F. Morgan. There were a number of reconsecrations, and nine new members were received into the church. Brother Morgan's gospel sermons were helpful and inspiring.

On the Second Sunday, Mr. Russell T. Bradford and Mr. Kennie Brinkley were ordained to the office of deacon in Berea, Nansemond, Church. It was a pleasure to have Dr. J. O. Atkinson assist in this impressive service.

This letter is written at Massanetta Springs, Harrisonburg, Va., where the Bible Conference of the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia is being held. This is our ninth consecutive season of attendance. Mrs. Johnson and the writer appreciate the privilege given by our churches to attend this Conference. Rev. C. E. Newman of Virginia is attending for the first year, and has already decided to come again next year for two weeks. So far, (Saturday, Aug. 22) we are the only ministers from the Congregational-Christian churches in attendance.

The Bible Conference Program represents careful planning, and measures up to the high standard of the previous years. Rev. Peter Marshall of Atlanta, Ga., delivered a series of popular addresses. The story of his life and career is thrilling and inspiring to young people. Dr. C. L. King of Houston, Texas was also an outstanding speaker on the platform. Dr. Albert W. Beaven of the Baptist church, and a resident of Rochester, N. Y., brought a series of strong messages concerning the fundamentals of the Christian faith. To him Christianity offers the broadest and most comprehensive field of investigation and service. Science and philosophy finally become self-centered and narrow, while Christianity offers man the finest and fullest explanation of human life and destiny.

Some people are fearful that the church may lose its place of leadership and be relegated to the graveyard of the dead systems of antiquity. But we should have no fear for Christianity. It will triumph because of the security of its foundations and the possibilities of its eternal program. The present-day chaos and confusion will come to an open door which will lead humanity into a new adventure of faith and reality. Science and philosophy will some day build upon the principles of Christianity, and find that God is the supreme inspiration of all intellectual and spiritual advancement.

Dr. F. Crossley Morgan is giving a course in the study of Habbakuk. This course alone is worth the cost of attending the Conference. Next week another group of speakers appear on the program. Advance reservations for rooms at the hotel have reached the limit. Several have been unable to secure accommodations for next week. Another week here and we return home to our work and to the good fellowship of beloved churches and congregations.

ELON COLLEGE SETS HER HOUSE IN ORDER.

For the past 46 years and more, Elon College has been sending her sons and daughters out into all parts of the country to take their places in the various walks of life. Some of these remain with her for only one year, others for two or three, and many for four years. She loves them all alike and wishes for them every success and happiness in life. The ones who remained with her short of four years, she gives her good wishes and high hopes. The ones who remained four years, in addition she gives a sealed and signed recommendation which entitles them to the rights and privileges of the society of the learned.

The ones who have gone out the past four years who did not win their diploma from the college are earnestly urged to return to take advantage of the increased opportunities which the college has to offer.

There will perhaps be between 275 and 300 former students of Elon College returning for the opening of the school on September 2. In addition to these former students, there will be between 150 and 200 new students to join the ranks of the constantly increasing family at Elon. Alma Mater is always glad to have her children return and is equally rejoiced to have new additions to the family, for at Elon we are one big family in quest for happiness and success through learning and service.

The college is anxious that everyone shall be agreeably and happily situated. She has been extremely busy during the summer months, setting her house in order. She has been cutting grass, trimming shrubbery, removing rubbish, that the campus might be attractive and inviting. She has been painting, repairing roofs of buildings, scrubbing floors, mending and painting furniture, sweeping, dusting, so that everything will be in order in advance of the coming of her increased family.

There will be some new instructors to take the places of those who have gone. It has been the plan of the college to improve its faculty from year to year. This plan is still in force. The students will be greeted by a faculty in September that will be equal to any ever employed by Elon College.

We have taken particular pains to improve the living quarters of the girls this year. West Dormitory rooms will be found tidy and in order. Every room has been thoroughly cleaned and all furniture repaired and retouched. Ladies Hall will take on a completely new appearance. The old floors have been replaced by new hardwood floors. The spacious rooms in this building offer most attractive quarters for young ladies. The reception room in West Dormitory and the dining room have been completely overhauled. Changes have been made that will delight faculty and students alike.

On September 2, Elon College will be in order and anxiously awaiting the arrival of all who are interested in the pursuit of knowledge on her campus.

School opens September 2.

LET'S COOPERATE.

As chairman of the Committee on Religious Literature of the Eastern Virginia Conference, and as a pastor, I am very much interested in the circulation of The Christian Sun. It would be fine if every church could reach the standard that has been set for the circulation of The Sun.

The plan is that each church secure subscriptions equal to ten per cent of the church membership. Any organizations, group or committee may make the campaign for subscriptions and receive fifty cents on each annual subscription secured.

If you like him to do so, the editor is willing to send you sample copies.

In the meantime plans can be made for the canvass. Have someone definitely responsible for seeing every family in the church membership and offer them the opportunity to subscribe for The Sun.

We know the merits and the need of The Sun, so let us support our new editor in his good work.

For the Children

Dear Uncle Fletcher,

I am so glad you are going to have a page in your paper for boys and girls. I hope that you will put my letter in your paper. I liked the puzzles and the story about the Pussy and your letter. Can you make a puzzle like the missionary names only use Bible names and not give the answer until the next time?

I think it would be nice if some of the boys and girls could write to each other and find out what the other one was doing.

Mama says she thinks you will know my writing, so now you guess who wrote this.

From Me to You.

P. S.—Mama told me how to spell some of the words, so I think they are all right.

Haw River, N. C.,
August 8, 1936.

Dear Uncle Fletcher:

Would I like to have a page for children in The Christian Sun? I'll say I would! I hope a lot of children write you so you can arrange a page for us.

Now, you want to know what I want on the page. I would like a child's story or two, and a lot of poetry that you think would be good for children.

A reader of the Christian Sun,
Elizabeth Neese.

Now what do you know about that? The very second letter received has no name or address. And I am a very poor guesser. Well, I have an idea who wrote this letter, but perhaps some of you can help me out by guessing, too. The letter came from Jacksonville, Florida. I happen to know that a minister who has children has just moved from North Carolina to Jacksonville. Can some of you help me to find the person who wrote the letter? Thank you!

And I am not good at making puzzles, or guessing them. Perhaps someone will make up some for us soon. But can you tell me this riddle: "Out of the eater came forth the meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness." It is in the Bible. Do you know who said it, where it is, and what it means? Did you know that the Bible had riddles in it?

Who is it that the Bible says was "without father, without mother, and without descent, having neither beginning of life nor end of days?" Where do you find that story?

The next letter came from the town where I served my first church, and I thank you, Elizabeth. I shall try to see that you get the things you want on this page. Don't think that I will be able to edit it myself, but I am sure that someone will. Hope you will write again, and that many others will write also. Send your mail to

I liked this story about birds so much that I wanted you to get it too. Wouldn't you just love to have a preacher who loved birds like this one did?

A SPARROW IN CHURCH.

One morning in a London church, early in the service, a sparrow began to fly about the pulpit. It must have got in through one of the open windows, and remained quiet until the people began to sing. Then it took refuge in the big pulpit. It did not seem frightened. It perched for a while on the light above the minister's head. When he sat down, it came and looked at the glass of water on a little shelf, and put its head on one side as if it was wondering whether it might take a drink and have a bath. Then it fluttered on to the reading desk, and looked at the people.

You can imagine how the children enjoyed themselves watching it. So the ministers took the sparrows for a sermon, and told the boys and girls about two places in the Bible where the sparrows are mentioned.

In the eighty-fourth Psalm, the poet writes about the temple in Jerusalem, and of his great desire to go and worship there. Some of the altars were in the open air, and he had once noticed that the little birds went flying round the altars; and a swallow had actually been bold enough to make its nest in one of the carvings on the stone or in the moldings on the brass.

He said to himself, "Oh happy birds, which have found a home in God's altar! The very birds want to dwell where I wish to be." His soul felt like a bird longing to fly away to God's house of prayer; and he wrote his poem, describing the pilgrimage up to Jerusalem, telling how people became happier and happier as they drew near the sacred place.

God is not shut up in churches. He is everywhere. We can feel His kind presence when at school or at play. But in church we can remember Him most easily and worship Him best, and there we may feel Him very near. Jesus has a great love for little folks. We older folks should emulate the youth, because Jesus says, "Unless ye become as little children ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." Another place in the Bible Jesus says, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Jesus loves to see the children in church, learning to think of Him and to remember His love for them. He wants you to feel at home in His church because it is the special place where He meets with His people. Remember the birds who flew round His altars in ancient Jerusalem the next time that you are inclined to grumble when you have to go to church.

How can you be sure He cares for you? Our Saviour told us. He spoke about the sparrows being in a very different place from the temple—in the shop! The sparrows He spoke of were dead, not living. Poor little birds, exposed for sale for people and their children! "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing?" He once said. Another time, "Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings?" You see, they were so cheap that if you bought a half-penny's worth, you got an extra one thrown in. It did not seem as if God had troubled about them. It was as if they were too little

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

SOUTHEAST DISTRICT.

(I. Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and West Florida; II. Florida; III. The Carolinas and Georgia)

Following the death of Dr. Bloom, I was asked by the Administrative Committee to serve as acting superintendent of this district and in the January meeting following was elected to that office. It would seem fitting therefore to make something of a report for the district as a whole.

When elected I stated that those who represented the Extension Boards in this region were a united fellowship—that we would serve as a committee of the whole with myself as it were designated as chairman of the committee, representing the Extension Board in the coordination and the promotion of our work, but always working in close harmony with the other members of the staff. In this spirit and in this fellowship, the work in the Southeast has been carried on, and we feel that there has been a marked and substantial progress made during the past two years. In this we have also worked in close fellowship and harmony with the leaders of The Southern Convention.

These two years have been significant in the promotion and development of the merger. This process is reaching its final stages. In Alabama and Georgia the Congregational and Christian churches early completed their merger through united state conferences and are happily functioning in complete accord. In the Carolinas and Virginia the Congregational churches have united with the Southern Convention Conferences (corresponding to associations elsewhere) and beginning with January of 1936, the former Congregational churches will be in complete working fellowship with the Southern Convention in all matters, including apportionment giving. The only serious problem remaining in the merger in the Southeast is the merging of the Afro-Christian Convention and our Congregational Negro Conferences. The Afro-Christian Convention is a large body and there have been perplexing problems, which we believe now are beginning to be solved.

With the merger has come also an interest in our whole southeastern work as a denomination and there is an earnest desire to study it in all its aspects and to formulate an adequate and statesmanlike program for the future. A Survey Committee has been set up representing the various agencies working in the Southeast, and has begun to function satisfactorily. A study made by this committee revealed some interesting facts. The statistics gathered were based on the last printed yearbook and as a large proportion of the Afro-Christian churches were not included, and as the unmerged Christian churches of Kentucky are also not included, the figures are not complete. These figures as available showed that there were 634 Congregational Christian churches in eleven southeastern states. Of these churches 403 were white and 271 Negro churches. Of the former churches there were 46,681 members, and of the latter 15,834, making a total membership of 62,516 members, besides the large number of unreported Afro-Christian members. Of the total membership approximately 42,000 were in the Southern Convention. There are in this district one theological seminary foundation, eleven colleges, nine academies and nine institutions of academic rank. Most of these educational institutions are under the American Missionary Association, there being three colleges for white students—Elon, Piedmont and the Southern Union. The contributions of these southeastern churches for missionary causes in 1934 amounted to $56,257, and the contributions for local church support, $376,203.

A large majority of the churches in the Southeast are self-supporting and most of them are of indigenous growth. Large numbers of them are rural, facing the difficult rural problems that are current in the South and many of the churches are grouped, and have only part-time ministry. But they are doing a vital work in helping the people to face their problems in an intelligent and Christian fashion.

Beyond the pastoral leadership and the immediate services of the church, the most vital agencies are the various summer and Christian life conferences and the student summer service work. Last summer, in June, it was my privilege to visit five of the summer conferences in succession, in Florida, Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina (Elon and King's mountain). In all of them were gathered together splendid young people from the farm, mountains and the city. The value of these conferences in the spiritual and social development of the coming generation in these areas is immeasurable, and the same is true of the student summer service, since the students mingle with and bring new life especially to the rural churches in their summer contacts. Everywhere one finds broadening influences, softening of the denominational and racial asperities, awakening of a new sense of social responsibilities, and with all, the realization that Christ and the Christian religion are to be lived by.

We have had repeated assurances on the part of leaders in other denominations that our denomination, tho a small one, has a real service to render in the Southeast. One of the prominent men of an old and large denomination, in a private conversation, assured the writer that because our denomination was not involved in the old controversies of the South, and because of our general breadth of sympathy and outlook, we had the opportunity to serve as a harmonizing influence and to promote leadership in interdenominational activities and spirit. "Furthermore," he said, "in our denomination many are interested in your Council for Social Action and we need your churches to interpret it." Our churches are points of contact with real human need and we are striving in the spirit of the Master to serve.—Report to Church Extension Boards by E. C. GILLETTE.

THE CAROLINAS AND GEORGIA.

During the year 1935 our churches of the Carolinas cultivated and consummated organic union with the Southern Convention. It must be said that they were heartily welcomed by the Christian conference of the Carolinas to a fine fellowship. While it is history now, it seems well to repeat that each of our churches is now a member of the conference of its choice, and will hereafter function through the regular channels of the Southern Convention. They will, however, continue their close connections with our Extension Boards. Details could be furnished if necessary, but perhaps it is sufficient merely to state that the beginning of this organic union is a very happy one.

Pastoral relationships are very satisfactory. Dr. C. Arthur Lincoln has taken the place of Dr. John Brittain Clark at Tryon, and reports indicate increased strength in the work of this fine church. Dr. J. Edward Kirby called into Government work, has been succeeded by Rev. Carl Herman Voss, who is now acting pastor at Raleigh. Here again reports are very encouraging. At Niagara we are very happy in having a volunteer, Rev. J. S. Johnson, take up this work with vigor and at so little cost that it really may be called sacrificial service. Mr. Penn, a long time pastor in Sophia Parish, has added First Christian Church of High Point to his parish to the blessing the the entire field in many ways. John Chapman at Asheville and Geo. N. Edwards of Charleston, continue their high level of service in their respective churches.

From a high religious sense of Christian fellowship, and a desire for economy and efficiency, we released our church at Columbia, South Carolina, to the watchful care of the Episcopalians, who are many and strong and are doing a remarkably helpful and inspiring work with this church. They have retained our Mrs. Florence Squires as a full time worker.

Our United Church at Salisbury is unquestionably growing weaker and weaker although it maintains services regularly. In contrast to this our Winston-Salem church is forging ahead steadily, strongly, and surely. The pastor, Rev. William T. Scott, has just resigned to accept the position left open by the retirement of the present pastor-at-large. Mr. Scott is a most worthy successor to that office and the whole Southeast will profit by his magnetic personality and judicious and careful administrative ability.

Beyond the understanding of those who have slight opportunity for close contact with the religious tendencies of the people themselves, Georgia offers a wealth of genuine missionary activity, appealing in its need, inspiring in its content and satisfying in its results. Wherever are human needs, Christian or material, there Jesus is. A poet has said, "Wherever are children's eyes, there Jesus is." Here in Georgia are the hungry eyes of children, the longing eyes of youth, the tender eyes of home folks, and in so many places the almost woeful eyes of age—all looking up and but for us some would not be fed. If there be those who harbor an untaught feeling that Georgia can get along just as well without us or that we can function just as faithfully without administering to the spiritual, racial, and social needs of many communities through our churches, our prayer is that the Lord may open men's eyes that they might see. The divine call to all missionary action can be nothing greater than the need. Childhood, youth and age, city church and rural communities need the religion of Jesus; cleansed and freed from the waters of stagnant thinking and the rocks of theological dogmatics. The need is for the real religion of Jesus. It has been reported that in one of his noblest moments Dr. Orchard, of English fame, cried out to his congregation, "You need God and I can give Him to you." In many ways, in many places in Georgia we need God and you can give Him to us. Yes, and you are doing it. May you never grow weary in well doing.

You are doing it by aiding our Georgia churches to keep consecrated young ministers, who prove themselves worthy, in the ranks of the modern prophets. Take Lawrence Stanley, David Shepherd, Theodore Leverett, Cary Parker, W. C. Carpetner, and Alan Jones out of Georgia for the last six years and how much smaller would have been the results! These men, backed by the integrity of your faith, have caused light to shine in darkness, and their deeds are like a candle set upon a table so that all who have eyes and love to share in their good works, praise God for the privilege of such sanctified and loyal cooperation.

In one of his most inspired moments, that disciple who in many ways best reflects the character of Jesus, ecstatically exclaimed: "The Lamb shall overcome for he is Lord of lords and King of kings; and they also shall overcome that are with him, called and chosen and faithful." These Georgia ministers of ours are with him called, chosen, faithful. It is ours to stand by and see the glory of God.—Report to Church Extension Boards by M. J. SWEET.

SOME DIFFICULTIES ON THE FOREIGN FIELD.

As the rickety old bus, with plain board seats and baggage piled high on both sides outside, sped through the village, chickens, hogs and dogs scampered in all directions. When we got out onto the rough country roads we could see a long string of motor lorries winding their way over a new motor road through the snow-covered mountains. The scene reminded us of what we had seen in France. But this is on another side of the world and with the thermometer far below zero. We prayed that there be no war, certainly not in such a cold winter as we were having then.

Ours is a conquest, but of a different kind. We were going in the same direction, but with a different purpose for the King of kings, willingly and as representative of those who pray for the salvation of those we may visit.

After a day's hard travel over rough roads we crawl out from a packed mass of small baggage, men, women and children, cigarette smoke and various other smells. Impossible to move, and windows nailed tight, those nauseated must almost stand on their heads. On a steamer one can at least lean over the railing. What a relief to get onto terra firma—and into fresh air!

The evangelist met the bus, but we did not recognize him. His face was peaked. He had gone through some real persecution. Six men and four women desiring immigration had gone a whole day's journey in severe cold by cart to this evangelist to be baptized along with others. A lay evangelist of another denomination, who has more prejudice than religion or common sense, followed them by motor to forbid this. When the ten returned, rented a place for worship and had the evangelist come for meetings, the other evangelist had our friend arrested, accusing him falsely and causing much trouble. It was so far from Harbin that little assistance could be given. The persecuted evangelist won out by patience. On our visit the matter had been adjusted. Nine more were baptized. A better place has been rented. The little group there not only pay all the rents and incidental expenses, but part of the salary of the evangelist of that region. They are asking for a full-time preacher for this growing town of fifteen thousand and for other centers springing up along the new railway.

A young man whom we baptized at another place comes to this town after two years of Bible school in Shantung if means can be found to support him.

NEWS OF WINTER PARK.

The Congregational Church of Winter Park, Florida, unites with the Methodist Church for vacation activities during July and August. The young people meet at 6 o'clock Sundays for a social period followed by refreshments, then a meeting. The Methodists were responsible for the services in July when the meetings were at their church, and the Congregational young people have charge during August. At a recent meeting they discussed wise use of leisure time under the leadership of Miss Emily Carleton. Earle Ward and Rev. Mr. Metcalf are other leaders.

The youth activities include dramatics on Tuesday nights, prayer meeting on Wednesday nights, swimming and picnic parties on Thursday afternoons and evenings, with a community sing on Friday night. At the end of five weeks they expect to make a definite effort to get all the young people of the community into the young people's services. The first "sing" had 70 people present with Bobby Matthews running the machine to put the words of the songs on the screen and the president of the Methodist group leading the music. This sounds like a real summer-time program of young people's activities and one that may have suggestions for other groups than those in Florida.

GOING TO COLLEGE.

News from Elon says that probably more than 500 young people will be there for the opening of Sept. 2. Will you who read this be among that group? I am hoping that many of you will, for Elon is our College and you need the help which Elon can give.

Of course, there are other colleges which are good. Some of them may even be better than Elon in some respects, and they may cost a little less money. There may be cheaper places to board than in your home, but most of us like to go home to eat most of the time. Elon has something to give to Congregational-Christian Church young people that other schools cannot give. That something—the personal leadership of our own people—is a thing that we cannot afford to miss.

If you are not going to college this fall, why not give a party for those who are. Let them know that your church group appreciates the fact that they can go and that you will be back of them while they are away, wishing for them good success. They will need your help and will most likely appreciate it greatly. Keep in touch with them, and get something of college life yourself even though you may not be there.

The editor of this page wishes for everyone who can attend college the joy of increasing knowledge, expanding friendships and developing personality.

Leader's Introductory Talk:

In the teachings of Christ He reveals to us the will of His Father. So as we learn to know and love Jesus we will come to a deeper realization and understanding of the will of God. Jesus teaches us that God is our Father and cares for us even more so than our earthly father. God cares for the sparrows and knows when they fall—how much more so that He should care for us. As we study the words of Christ, and know God, we find that one of the most beautiful things about being a Christian is that we can trust God, our Father, and that He cares for us. Jesus teaches us that God is ever in our presence. He is not far off, but close at hand, ministering to the poor, the sick, the prisoner, the stranger, the oppressed. He sympathizes with all our griefs. He joins with all our worthy ambitions. We would not think of what Jesus teaches about God without remembering the lesson He taught Nicodemus, the great love of God. We know that "God is love." "For God so loved the world, that He

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN.

LESSON VIII—AUGUST 23, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life."—John 3:16.

LESSON: Acts 10:1-11:18; Romans 1:13-17. Printed Text: 11:5-18; Romans 1:15-17.

The lesson text covers too much to be compressed very well into the space of these notes. It embodies the story of the vision of Cornelius, the vision of Peter, the meeting of Peter and Cornelius, the sermon which Peter preached, the manifestation of God in Cornelius' home, and Peter's defense of his ministry before the Church at Jerusalem. Fortunately the shorter lesson text is a summary of the whole thing in Peter's own words, and this will be used as the background of these notes.

Vision Through Prayer.

Peter came home for dinner, but it wasn't ready. Instead of going into a tantrum as men have been known to do under similar circumstances, he went up on the flat roof of the house to pray. And as a result of this prayer under these unusual circumstances, Peter had a significant vision, significant for him, and for the future of Christianity. The thing teaches us two things: the possibilities of prayer as a means of seeing the unseen, of getting new insight into life's problems, and the possibilities of odd moments devoted to prayer. We wonders, even in our busy life can find odd moments which we can devote to prayer, vital prayer, if we are alert.

The Glory of the Common Man.

Peter's vision was unique. It was in the form of a large sheet filled with fourfooted beasts and wild beasts and creeping things, and a command to rise and eat. A Jew was, of course, very circumspect about his diet, and Peter immediately replied that he had eaten nothing common or unclean. The voice from heaven reminded him that he should not eat unclean what God had cleansed. And then these supposedly unclean things were drawn up into heaven, and that was significant.

Of course, this strange vision had a practical side. Peter had looked upon those who were not Jews as unclean, as outside of the pale of the Christian movement. He did not think the gospel was for the Gentiles, they were dogs, unclean, common. But God would have him—and us—know that all men are precious in his sight. Christ died for all men and every man. The gospel is for all men: Dago, wop, nigger, Chink, Jap, poor white trash, there are none such in God's sight. They are all the objects of his love and of his care. They are all included in his plan of salvation. Christ loved them all and gave himself for them all. Our modern world with its race prejudice and race pride and race superiority needs this lesson. And this applies to us as well as it does to Hitler.

The Mount of Vision and the Valley of Service.

Visions are not ends in themselves; they are means to ends. They give us insight to new tasks and give us strength for those tasks. "And behold forthwith three men stood before the house in which we were." Even as Peter thought about his vision, the men were waiting at the door for him. Visions must be translated into action. Visions are a call to action. Where there is no vision the people perish, but where there is no action the vision loses its meaning. "I have not been disobedient to the heavenly vision," thus did Paul give us the secret of his life and his success. Be true to the light you have. Try to do the best you know. Translate your dreams into action.

The Democracy of the Holy Spirit.

"And as I began to speak, the Holy Spirit fell on them, even as on us at the beginning." Here were Gentiles, a centurion, a soldier, a Roman, and his household, but the Holy Spirit came upon them even as it had come upon that inner circle at Pentecost. The Holy Spirit is no respecter of persons, that is if the heart is right.

Rich and poor, learned and ignorant, free and bond, white or colored, first-class or out-caste, orthodox or unorthodox, upon the one as on the other the Holy Spirit comes through penitence and faith. The Holy Spirit is not bound. He works in all nations and among all peoples, and he bestows his blessings in their fulness upon all those who through faith receive him.

The New Wine and the Old Wine Skins.

The new wine of Christianity was breaking the old wineskins. "When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God saying, Then to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life." It was beginning to dawn upon them that the blessings of the gospel were for all men, that God's love embraced Gentiles as well as Jews, that the Holy Spirit was manifesting his grace upon the people of other nations. Those who try to keep Christianity to themselves try to do the impossible. God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have eternal life.

The Gospel the Power of God.

Paul said he was not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. The word translated power is the same Greek word from which we get our word dynamite. The gospel is the dynamite of God. It is mighty unto the breaking up of hard hearts, of the breaking up of social customs, of the breaking down the walls of partition, of the breaking up of the old order. It does not make a noise like dynamite, it works silently, but surely and steadily. It is the power of God unto salvation. The gospel saves. In it is revealed the righteousness of God, from faith unto faith. It is the good news, not merely good advice. Let no man be ashamed of the gospel of Christ.

Life is just a little mixture

Of joy and sadness too,
You must have a little bit of each
Before your days are through;
But joys outweigh the sorrows,
And smiles are more than tears,
And the days of woe are seldom,
But joys are ours for years.

MONDAY.

"HOW DO YOU PRAY?"

"Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lust."

Most prayers are selfish. Is mine? Are yours? We ask for a job. Why do we want a job? What is the motive back of the request? If we get a job, how do we use it, to make the world and humanity a little better within the sphere of that job, or to use it for our own pleasures and lusts?

The other day we heard a criticism of the American man, especially the American youth, by an Italian-American citizen, a man who for twenty years has been a hotel manager in this country, a man whose position has brought many people under his employ and thrown him in contact with masses of people. He says that a great fault of the American people is that their primary desire is for money. Millions of Americans are asking for jobs. Offer one a job, and the first question is, "How much will it pay?" In the speaker's experience, he says, he has to offer to many young men a career, as it were, handed to them on a platter, and they have turned it down because they wanted more money than the job offered. "The American mind needs a vision of service and not money."

This criticism seems to sound a Christian note. When we fail, it is probably because we have failed to pray, or we have prayed amiss.

Prayer—O Lord, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer."—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE TRUE TEST OF THINGS."

"We know that all things work together for good to them that love God."—Rom. 8:28.

Bishop Brent once said, "The thing that is most difficult for me to understand is the lovingly fatherly goodness of God."

Reply by Bruce S. Wright: "We live in a world full of darkness and mystery, sorrow and pain, failure and loss, frustrated plans and unfulfilled hopes, and it is hard to reconcile a world of pain with a God of love. However, the test is not in things, but in love. Things detrimental in themselves are made helpful in the experience of the one who loves God, who is guided by God's deep, far purpose."

Prayer—Our Father, we pledge our love to Thee and we desire to renew our desire to follow Thee. We pray Thee that no event or experience, however tragic or sad, may blur our vision of the great span of Thy life and Thy love, and Thy ministries for us.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE DUAL SOUL."

"When I would do good, evil is present with me."—Rom. 7:21.

"Unite my heart to fear Thy name."—Ps. 86:11.

We are all familiar with "split feelings." Often we are torn between what we ought to do and what we want to do. Our better self desires to do the good and promises to do it. The other self wants to do as it pleases, and since we like that we yield and our good intentions are thwarted. Result: "Instability." "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways."—James.

Our experience confirms this. Our experience tells us that we do not lack in knowing what we ought to do, as a rule, but we lack in the power to do what we ought to do. This power comes only with the enveloping sense of God which the Psalmist prayed for when he asked to be made a unit in his own character. Where that sense abides virtue grows and vice dies, and that other one of us is subordinated from an enemy to a friend and is caused to do what the better self ought to do.

Prayer—Our Father, we wish in our hearts that we were like Jesus our Saviour. But we are so weak. Descend upon our unholy selves and make us one with ourselves and one with Thee. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"POSITIVE CHRISTIANITY."

"All are yours."—I Cor. 3:21-23.

D. Townes Windam says, "We are not making a worthy contribution to the work of the kingdom simply by refraining from evil? We must also do good."

If Paul's words of the text mean anything, it must be that the unlimited resources around about us are ours for the "going after them." This applies to doing good fully as much as it applies to anything else. If we have failed to realize this it is because the resources of God are not developed within us. Paul said, "Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, meekness," and "victory over death" are the prize graces of Christian experience and they all may be ours for the price of using the resources about us. "All are yours."

Prayer—O Lord, we beseech Thee to harmonize our wills with Thine. We offer ourselves to Thee. Use us for Thy glory.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"FOLLOW ME."

"If I be lifted up from the earth I will draw all men to me."—Jno. 12:32.

One of the charms of life is the lure to adventure. The wandering paths midst the trees, rocks and crags of the mountainside; the blandishments of the inviting lights of the night life; the curiosity of the suspected yet unseen; all constitute an attractive illusive and indefinable perspective that beckons us on.

It is asked, "Is not this law of allurements and perspective a natural law in the spiritual world?" At every turn of the road the great adventure of faith beckons. With every recurring thought the question of right or wrong appears and the claims of Christ demand an answer. Not only His words urge us on, but the urge to see and know Him and to have His power is one of the greatest lures to adventure. Then, as we go along this path, to realize the happiness that comes from companionship with Him and His spirit, demands that we follow Him and thus we are lifted up to Him.

Prayer—Grant, O Lord, that our feet may be guided by Thy light.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"ROOT IN ONE'S SELF."

"Yet hath he not root in himself."
—Matthew 13:18-23.

To have root in one's self is to have inner resources sufficient for the heats and colds and storms of life. It is to be independent of untoward circumstances, to be calm in the face of sudden danger, to be proof against the insidious attacks of crafty temptations. It is to stand firmly upright throughout life, rich in leafage and abounding in fruit.

Yet let not anyone think to have root in himself unless he has Christ in himself. He is called the Root and Offspring of David. He is the secret source of all power and abiding.

And how glad He is to take root in the soil of any welcoming heart! How eager He is to strike root downward and expand upward in beauty and strength! If we have not root in

THE CHOICE—WITH OR WITHOUT A CROSS.

By HERBERT G. COUNCIL, JR.

Two periods came in Jesus' life when he was deeply tempted to face the sin and sorrow of the world in some way other than the one he chose. The one was during the temptation in the wilderness and the other was at the coming of the Greeks. At those two crises there came before him practically all the methods and ways by which men meet these tragic facts of sin and suffering. He rejected them all except one, and through that one became the light of the world. As we look at these rejected ways, we will recognize many of the means used by our people today to find a way out. He knew that they would lead to dead ends, as men are slowly but surely finding out by tragic experience.

At the beginning of Jesus' ministry, John the Baptist was calling a nation to repentance. As the thunderous words of the Baptist fell upon the heart of a nation, it was moved to repentance. It must have been a powerful spiritual awakening. People came in repenting streams to take the baptism of repentance at his hands. The account says that "when all the people were baptized, Jesus also was baptized." He who knew no sin was taking his place in the line of repentant sinners as one of them. It was identification with man at the lowest place. He gave up what is hardest of all to give up, namely, one's good name. Before him in the line was probably a harlot, behind him a thief. He seemed one of them and was counted a sinner.

There must have come a strong reaction against this attitude, for he was inwardly driven into the wilderness to fight it out. He would get away from man to see what attitude he should take toward man. There are different ideas held as to the issue over which he fought. Many people think it to have been the question of whether he was the Son of God. I do not think that was the issue. He had just heard at the baptismal waters "Thou art my beloved Son." No, the question seems to have been this: Being the Son of God, would he also be the son of man, if being the son of man meant identification with man such as he had taken? To be the son of man would mean that he would take on himself all that falls on the sons of man. For forty days he deeply brooded and meditated. So deeply was he absorbed that he forgot about physical hunger. At the end of the forty days he hungered. Then he thought that he should go back to feed his weakened body.

"No," said the tempter, "you need not go back to men. Stay out here and feed yourself by means of a miracle. Since you are the Son of God, you need not be the Son of man."

This is the first great temptation of Spiritual Religion. It is to withdraw, to feel oneself apart, to be exalted by spiritual communion so that the tragedies and pains of life do not touch one, to be a Son of God, to rejoice in that fact, and to feed on it. This is the temptation to which the mystic is liable. When religion falls in it, then it becomes an opiate, for, drugged with devotion and wrapped in its exalted states, it puts its devotees to sleep concerning the sin and suffering of the world. It is essentially an escape mentally. It would solve the problems of sin and suffering by its own isolation. This will not work. Wherever it is tried, whether in the professor's study, on the foreign fields or in the convents and monasteries of Christendom. It inevitably leads to pessimism. The attempt to escape the gloom of the world brings on an inner gloom of spirit. The way out of suffering is not to attempt to escape it. Jesus refused this way.

Then the tempter suggested: "If you must go back, and if you will be the Son of man, then do not take the attitude you took as you began. Do not stand alongside of man in this humiliating fashion, stand on the pinnacle of the temple; be exalted, lifted above man. Be the sign and symbol of religion as you stand and be gazed at, and worshipped; be the chosen of God, honored and respected. In that way you will give prestige and position to the cause of the kingdom of God. God will not let you, the Son of God, stand alongside of degraded men, for even if you throw yourself down, God's angels will bear you back up again. Your place is up there, not down here with these wretched multitudes."

The second great temptation is this, To stand up above, aloof, superior, to look down on the multitudes as they sin and suffer, to see it only from afar, to consider yourself superior to all these things. It is the temptation of the Stoics, the Chinese "superior man," the Brahman, the cultivated gentleman, that attitude of mind that stands lifted on pinnacles of position, birth, belief, and class. We never quite get to people. The fact is that when we adopt this attitude, we feel that we belong above them. All of this meant that Jesus would not be the Son of man. He would escape the sufferings of men by insulation. This too, would be an escape mentality, however lofty it might seem to be. Jesus rejected it.

Then came the third temptation: "If you art determined to be the Son of man, then be the Son of man; if you are to be with him, then take his methods and spirit; win by being a hail-fellow-well-met, let nothing be between, merge your spirit as well as your sympathy and interest, go the full way." To fall down and worship Satan meant to take the attitude of those who obeyed him. This temptation is to use the methods of man in order to gain man, to gain the world and its kingdom by using worldly methods.

Jesus refused this way just as he had refused the others. He would be the Son of man. He would let everything that falls on man fall on him, but there would be one exception, in his inmost spirit he would be different. He would be like them and yet unlike them. He would be the Son of man, but he would also be the Son of God. He knew that only as he was inwardly different could he change men. In everything else he would be like them.

He knew that the choice he had made would mean his ultimate identification with man on the cross. He had been baptized between sinners, he would be crucified between thieves. The problem of sin and suffering could only be met by an honest facing of the problem; there would be no subterfuges, no make-believes, no short cuts, no drugs. It would be solved, not escaped. It would be solved by standing with man within, not by bending over man and touching him with tongs as it were. He then put his feet upon the way that he knew would ultimately lead to the cross.

There came another great moment in Jesus' life at which time he was asked to take another way. It was when he was visited by the Greeks. This is a moment comparable in importance with the wilderness temptation. It represents the temptation of mid-career, to compromise, or to take an easier way. There was something in the depths of this great soul-crisis that made him say, "Now is my soul disquieted." The whole account has in it something far more than we

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We have not had so many applications to take children in a long time as we have had in recent weeks. Many of them worthy and if the orphanage had funds to support them we really ought to give at least the most needy cases a home. When our Master was on earth he gave his life teaching and helping the needy. He gave it freely. The lame were made to walk, the blind were made to see. The sick were healed and the leper cleansed. The hungry were fed. If we are to emulate his life are we not expected to give to help others? Children are left orphans and they cannot help it. They are left homeless by no fault of theirs. It was not their choice by any means. They are left without a chance in life and yearn for a chance to make good citizens and live a life worthwhile. God has, perhaps, blessed you so you can bless these little children by your gifts.

These children deserve a chance in life and it is the churches' duty to see to it that they get the chance that is due them. Jesus said: "Inasmuch as ye yearn for a chance to make good least of these, ye have done it unto me." Please take an inventory of what you have done for these little ones so far this year and be perfectly honest about it with yourself and ask yourself this question: "What have I done for the little children in the Christian Orphanage this year?" Then ask yourself the question: "Has not the Lord richly blessed me this year with home, food, clothing, good health and all the blessings of life? Plenty and to spare?"

Then ask yourself another question. "Have I shown my appreciation by helping others who are denied the blessings I enjoy?" Then what are you going to do about it?

"HAMANS OF TODAY."

"The king commanded that his wicked device should return upon his own head."—Esther 9:20-25.

Haman would slaughter the Jews and he found death for himself. The scaffold he erected for another he himself swung from. His curses, like chickens, came home to roost. His wicked device returned upon his own head.

So it is with all malicious planning. It is never successful in the end. Disasters planned for others prove to be our own calamities. There is no such boomerang as a hateful word or evil contrivance.

Love is the supreme joy and it is also the only safety. Brotherhood blesses ourselves even more than it blesses our brothers. Enmity makes war first on him that makes war. This is the law of Christ.

Prayer—Love Divine, all loves excellent, be Thou the animating spirit of our life. May the Hamans of envy and hatred have no influence over us. May we join ourselves to the conquering good-will of heaven. For our Saviour's sake.—Amen.

to count, as if there were too many of them to bother about.

But Jesus knew it was not so. He said, "One of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father knowing it." He keeps count of the birds, and knows each one and how it comes to its end. Then Jesus said: "Fear ye not, therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows."

Jesus is also concerned about the hair of the little children because we read in the Bible, "The very hairs of your head are numbered." He also cares for the stars and knows their number and can call them all by their names.

There are millions of boys and girls in the world, but He knows each one. He knows you. He thinks of you. He who marks the sparrow's fall, cares for you, and wants you to love and please Him. So be sure of His watchful love; and when anything troubles you, tell Him about it. He will be certain to hear your prayer, and to help you. He is your Father in heaven. Jesus loves the birds and he also loves all the little children, rich and poor, black and white.

could expect from the mere coming of the Greeks for an interview.

These Greeks probably saw the storm that was gathering; they perceived that he would end in disaster if he went on among the Jews. They came to invite him to get out of the whole thing, to come to Athens, where men's minds were broad and liberal, where teaching such as his would be appreciated, and where he could live long as an honored and respected teacher.

This is the issue between Athens and Jerusalem: Athens with its bright, surface interest in everything, but sounding no depths, and Jerusalem with its cross. It was the battle not of the good and the bad—there was nothing bad in going to Athens—but the battle of the good and the best: the good without a cross, the best with one. All systems, all men line up on one side or the other of that issue. They will take the Athens method of dealing with sorrow, the method that attempts to explain it or explain it away by words, by mental suggestion, by pollyanna views of life, by subterfuges both mental and spiritual, by sublimating themselves away from the facts; or they will take the Jerusalem way, the way of going straight toward the worst that life can say or do, the way of letting the storm strike one, the way of accepting Calvary.

It is only those who have faced the alternatives of Jerusalem or Athens, and have chosen Jerusalem, who can really interpret life. They are in it. They know what the cross means, for they can feel it cutting into their shoulders; they know what suffering means, for they are being crucified on a cross of a chosen pain. They also know what life means, for they feel throbbing, bursting, singing, life coursing through every fiber of their beings.

As a result of this momentous decision, Jesus saw that three things would happen: First, the judgment of this world. "Now is the judgment of this world." At first sight we see no connection between the choosing of a cross and the judgment of the world. At second sight we see them intimately connected. The cross is the judgment seat of the world. It is there that men are really judged. I feel no inward tremblings when I picture God's throne on the last day, but this man upon the cross judges me, condemns me, and sends me to my knees. Here at the cross his love judges my hate, his all-inclusiveness judges my narrowness, his self-sacrifice judges my selfishness. He was right when he said, "Now is the world to be judged."

Second, the expulsion of the power of evil from this world: "Now is the prince of this world to be expelled." He would expel sin and suffering from the world by taking them into his own heart and there smothering them to death. He would expel suffering by taking suffering, and he would expel sin by becoming sin.

Third, he would manifest supreme power in choosing this cross. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth (on a cross), will draw all men unto myself." He was to manifest the power of overcoming evil with good, hate by love, and the world by a cross.

The choice was made. He would thank the Athens group but would refuse their offer. He would choose the people who were rejecting him. There was no other way, for Jerusalem and the hill called Calvary lay between him and the Easter-morning victory. He could not teach men to sing who bear crosses unless he allowed his own voice to be hushed on a cross.

"He cooperates best with others who has learned to cooperate with his higher self."

TRANQUILITY OF TEMPER.

Who does not love a tranquil heart, a sweet tempered, balanced life? It does not matter whether it rains or shines, or what misfortunes come to those possessing these blessings, for they are always sweet, serene and calm.

The exquisite poise of character which we call serenity is the last lesson of culture; it is the flowering of life, the fruitage of the soul.

It is as precious as wisdom, more to be desired than gold—yea, than even fine gold. How contemptible mere money-wealth looks in comparison with a serene life—a life which dwells in the ocean, as it were, of truth, beneath the waves, beyond the reach of tempests, in the eternal calm!

It is a question whether the great majority of people do not ruin their lives and mar their happiness by lack of self-control! How few people we meet in life who are well-balanced, who have that poise which is characteristic of the finished character!

The Plight of the Farmer and How Uncle Sam is Helping Him.

By ALVA W. TAYLOR, Nashville, Tennessee.

America's welfare depends upon the welfare of the farmer. He furnishes the food, the material for clothing and shelter and all those things without which nothing else could be done. Yet he fares poorly in the national economy. In the past twenty years his debts have doubled, his taxes more than doubled. The value of his farm has decreased from thirty to fifty per cent. The proportion of our national wealth invested in farms decreased from one-half the total in 1860 to less than one-tenth in 1929. During the fifteen years before the depression the farm wealth increased by one-fourth and that of urban real estate by more than four times. While land prices increased the percentage income on it decreased.

The farmer as a home owner suffered most from the depression also. Where all property suffered a loss of 30% he suffered one of 57% between 1929 and 1933. The average gross family income of the farm family sank in 1933 to about $900; out of that he had to pay all expenses, including interest and taxes, neither of which decreased. In 1929 a farm agent in the rich corn lands of Central Illinois induced 200 farmers to keep books. Only 23% of them made the wages of farm hands after deducting 5% on the selling price of their land—and the selling price had declined 40% below what many of them had paid for it.

The American farmer has been a rugged individualist. It required a rugged character to pioneer. From the colonial days, when, with an axe and a gun he built his cabin and cleared the woods, down to the eighties when he built a sod house and conquered the prairies he had to be able to stand on his own individual feet, meet all enemies, carve out his own destiny and "win the west." At the same time he "robbed the soil," depleted the forests and saw his lands suffer corrosion, heedless of the consequences. Governor Frank Lowden of Illinois, the choice of Republican farmers for the presidential nomination in 1928, said:

"The land of any country is the basis upon which its civilization must rest. . . . No satisfactory standard of living can be achieved and maintained unless we shall be more successful in the future than we have been in the past in conserving the fertility of our soils. . . . Less than any other civilized nation have we given heed to those primary considerations. We have destroyed our forests and given over the land to farming where it is suited only to a new growth of forest products.

We have established farms in semi-arid regions where the land was suited only to grazing purposes."

The effort of the Resettlement Administration to deal with this problem is built upon the work begun by Theodore Roosevelt's Rural Life Commission and that of Gifford Pinchot for conservation. Surveys show that already more than one hundred million acres of soil has been depleted by erosion and abandoned; another one hundred million is so depleted that its value is only six per cent that of all farms. There is pathos in the fact that hundreds of thousands of the unemployed have moved back to this poor land, as there is also in the fact that pioneering young farmers have moved onto it and the poorer lands of mountain, cut over timber areas and dry prairie grass, following the paths of their heroic fathers in the ambition to make a home of their own.

A B C's IN GREEN

The trees are God's green alphabet:
With them He writes in shining green
Across the world His thoughts serene.
He scribbles poems against the sky
With a gay, leafy lettering.
For us and for our bettering.
The wind pulls softly at His page,
And every star and bird
Repeats in dutiful delight His word,
And every blade of grass
Flutters to class.
Like a slow child that does not heed,
I stand at summer's knees,
And from the primer of the wood
I spell that life and love are good,
I learn to read.

In Brown County, Indiana, where a great re-forestation project is under way, it was found that population had decreased by 50% between 1900 and the beginning of the depression, but that it has increased since through unemployed city workers coming back to the abandoned farms in a pitiful effort to make a living. Less than three per cent of them have been able to raise and sell as much as $100.00 worth of product per year. In the area now being reforested the farmers were able to pay a total of less than four per cent of the upkeep of their schools and about the same for the upkeep of their roads; in other words, local taxation had provided, in round numbers, only $5,000 for schools and roads and the state had contributed more than $110,000. The residents had eked out a living by cutting down the trees left by the lumberman as too small for saw boards and selling them for wood and ties—thus still further depleting timber resources. The Resettlement Administration is buying the land at from seven to nine dollars per acre and at the same time offering the hard-working, underprivileged and defeated farmers good lands on long term, low interest payments that will enable them to make a good living and in due course become owners. The secret of this lies in the difference between six per cent and three per cent for the loans and in the further fact that Uncle Sam can take the risk where no banker or loan company can do so.

Down in the Piedmont of northern Georgia another project relieves the highlander of his hillside acres and its corn mubbin income by taking over 300,000 acres for reforestation—the only thing for which the land is useful. Another illustration is found in the poor "cut-over" lands of north Minnesota where five thousand scattered farms, worth to purchase less than the annual rental value of good land, is being taken over, the pioneering but defeated farmers being offered good lands on a basis that will enable them to pay for them by the saving of interest and the acceptance of supervision to teach them scientific farming. On this one project a saving of three quarter's of a million dollars will be effected yearly in the support of schools and roads. Up in Montana the dry lands that help to make up the dust bowl are yielding to the same enterprise. The Taylor grazing act will restore 122,000,000 acres of "dust bowl" soil to grass and thus save it from wind erosion. Scientific studies made by the Department of Agriculture show that where a twelve-inch top soil will, on an eight per cent slope, disappear through water erosion in from twenty-nine to thirty-five years, it will require from 7,000 to 12,000 years for it to do so under a cover of grass.

Thus Uncle Sam is at last, through the Resettlement Administration, undertaking, in a manner befitting the problem, a beginning of conservation of both his natural land resources and of those thousands of his citizens who are still possessed of the spirit of the pioneer but are defeated through the disappearance of the richer soils that gave their pioneer fathers a chance at success. The secret of the enterprise lies in the supervision given the undertaking, the offering of a credit to those who have none in the commercial world and in the fact that a saving of three per cent in interest, plus instruction in scientific farming, will enable any honest tiller of the soil to do what his forefathers did on cheap or free lands in the past—make himself a self-supporting home-owner.

A Message to Ministers

By ROGER W. BABSON, Moderator

General Council of Congregational-Christian Churches

The Council, at its South Hadley meeting, elected me Moderator because I am a layman. It, therefore, is well that I should give laymen's views. Of course, laymen differ in their opinions. No one can speak authoritatively for them all. This statement is based upon opinions gathered from the laymen with whom I personally come in contact.

Laymen believe in evangelism and preaching missions. They are glad to hear ministers preach when they are "all excited" about something. Such ministers are then inspiring and effective. Every minister can do this a few Sundays each year. Laymen, however, are not interested in the routine half hour weekly sermon which ministers mechanically produce. Laymen believe they can use their time much better at home by reading or listening to the radio than by attending church and listening to a discouraged minister preach. When you see a layman in church remember that he has some real trouble and has come to you for guidance and courage.

One of the common criticisms of laymen is what they unjustly call the ministers' "hogging of Sunday." They refer to taking an hour and a half in the middle of the day for the only Church service, thus spoiling the day for other things. They feel this is unreasonable and unnecessary, especially during summer and fall. Laymen believe in the Church and love the Church; but they feel that ministers should endeavor to adapt the Church program to changing conditions. "Build the ship to suit the passengers," instead of the reverse.

"What kind of church Sunday program would laymen like?" you may ask. Well, here is my guess: Arrange for at least five services each Sunday, viz, Early Service at 8:00 A. M., Children's Service at 9:30 A. M., Formal Service at 11:00 A. M., Vespers at 5:00 P. M., and later a brief evening Young People's Service. None of these services should exceed one hour. With the exception of the 11:00 A. M. service, one-half would be a better goal at which to shoot. Then count the number of persons who enter the church during the entire day instead of at the stated hour in the middle of the day.

Use no written sermons and except when especially inspired, limit your talks to fifteen minutes, repeating the same talk, prayer and scripture-reading at 8:00 A. M., 11:00 A. M. and 5:00 P. M. Have familiar hymns, emphasize prayer and worship. Be content with a very few people at these services: but make an honest attempt to help those who do come. Churches having parish houses will hold some of the services in the living room of the parish house. Other churches will remove the rear one-third of the pews, carpet this portion of the auditorium and furnish it with comfortable chairs and sofas, as a lounge. Of course each church has an individual problem. My point is that most churches have a real problem and that this problem can be solved.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, former editor of The Christian Sun, and the present Mission Secretary of the Southern Convention, is spending a quiet vacation at Virginia Beach.

Rev. J. Howard Smith, pastor of Second Congregational Church, Hartford, Vermont, is a graduate of Elon College and Yale Divinity School, and would like to find a pastorate in the South.

Mr. F. N. Harward, Box 26, Henderson, N. C., is chairman of the Pulpit Committee of the Henderson, N. C., Church, which is on the lookout for a new minister. Mr. Harward's name was recently given as Hayward by mistake.

Rev. J. Everette Neese of Elon College, N. C., and his good wife spent a few days in the vicinity of Norfolk recently taking a bit of rest. The editor enjoyed spending an afternoon with them seeing the sights of the city, battleships, etc.

Rev. C. Carl Dollar, Route 3, Roanoke, Alabama, is a graduate of Elon College, received a B. D. degree in 1934, and took master's work at Vanderbilt last year. He is now free to accept any church or churches that may desire his services.

Rev. and Mrs. Walter Metcalf of Tampa have recently returned to Florida after a delightful trip to Canada and through New England. They are spending some time at Winter Park before returning to their work in Tampa.

One new member was added to the Carolina Christian Church, near Burlington, N. C., as the result of the meeting held August 9 to 14. The pastor, Rev. J. Everette Neese reports that quite a number of people reconsecrated themselves. This church of 66 members has preaching twice each month.

Haw River Christian Church held its revival meeting August 2 to 7, with the pastor Rev. J. E. Neese doing the preaching. There were 6 professions and 5 additions to the church. Attendance was good, and there was a fine spirit in the meeting. (The editor remembers this church very kindly because it was the first one to ask him to become its minister.)

A vacation Bible school closed on Thursday night, August 27th, at Mt. Olivet (G) Church in the Valley of Virginia. They enrolled 35 children in this school, and that is practically all there are in the community. The local people have conducted the school themselves and are enthusiastic about it.

News from the Valley of Virginia is to the effect that plans are under way for rallies in October, perhaps the second week-end. Young people in all of the churches should be thinking of what can be done cooperatively, as well as making plans for local work. Be on the look-out for the new bulletin which will probably arrive soon.

Many Sun readers will be interested to know that Gardner T. Gillette, son of Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, was recently elected executive secretary of the sonville, Florida. The Sunday Times Union of Jacksonville, says that Mr. Gillette has been a resident of that city for fifteen years and has been active in the Junior trade board for the past three years. He is a graduate of the University of Florida in the class of '33.

Shallow Ford Christian Church, near Elon College, N. C., organized a Christian Endeavor society three months ago with twenty-five members. They now have more than 50 members with an average attendance of about 45. "The Christian Endeavor World Quarterly" and The Christian Sun furnish them with material for their programs. They not only have regular Sunday evening worship services but monthly business and social meetings in the homes of the members.

Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Vincent have spent six weeks with their children on their farm at Henniked, N. H. Dr. Vincent has given the sermon at the annual meeting of the Friends for twenty-four years, and for the third year spoke and read from his poems at the State Forestry meeting. He has preached in the Congregational-Christian Churches at Henniker and Bethany Church, Quincy, Massachusetts. He takes up his work at Miami Shores on September 6. Rev. and Mrs. O. L. Robinson have taken charge of the church during their absence.

The Layman Company is now putting out its tithing pamphlets in four-page Bulletin form, printed on two inside pages only, other two pages blank for local news and announcements. This Bulletin offers every church the most effective of tithing education plus relief from half of the expense and worries of the ordinary church bulletin. The company suggests that churches conduct a five weeks' or ten weeks' program of tithe education by using these bulletins, which are offered at a nominal sum. It offers a sample set containing 32 different tithing bulletins at 20 cents. When you write please mention The Christian Sun and also give your denomination. Address the Layman Co., 730 Rush St., Chicago, Ill.

GEORGE T. WHITAKER.

Many of the alumni and friends of Elon College will remember pleasantly George T. Whitaker, Sr., who was a student at the college and is a graduate of Elon College of the Class of 1904. After graduation, Mr. Whitaker taught school in Georgia. He met and married Miss Floyd, daughter of the late Henry Floyd. The Whitakers lived for a number of years at Franklinton, North Carolina. They recently moved to Raleigh. The oldest child, George T., Jr., enlisted in the Navy. A little more than a year ago, he graduated from Annapolis. Since then he has been a commissioned officer in the Navy and was stationed on the West Coast. A little more than a week ago, George T., as known to his friends, was out swimming with a friend. He was not familiar with the currents and tides on that particular beach. He got in difficulties and was swept to his death. The body was recovered and returned to his boyhood home at Franklinton, N. C., for burial.

The services were conducted from the First Baptist Church in Franklinton, Thursday, August 20, where the body lay in state one hour before the services. The services were conducted by the pastor of the Baptist Church at Annapolis, Md., pastor of the Baptist Church at Franklinton, and the writer assisted. The attendance was large, the flowers beautiful, and the whole service quiet and impressive.

George T. was an unusual young man, diligent, faithful, loyal, and consecrated. During his brief career, he had made a name for himself and was a source of joy and of satisfaction to his parents.

He lost in the battle of life, but won in the things that count. Sympathy and prayer for the bereaved.

AT THE PARSONAGE.

Come around to the parsonage and sit down for a chat. Just make yourself at home, for it is your home, if you are a part of the church that owns this house.

The parsonage is the house in which the pastor and his family live. It was either built or bought by the church for the comfort and happiness of those who serve the church. Some of these houses are well arranged and beautifully kept by those who love the people who live there. Let's not say anything about those where the paint is gone, the floors are bad and the walls need papering. Nobody wants to live in such a place, and we don't even want to discuss it. We much prefer to think of the cozy rooms made beautiful by the loving care of members of the church.

But, of course, the most interesting thing is not the house. The people who live there come closest to our hearts. In some of these parsonages are children who will some day become famous. More of them will have their names written in "Who's Who" than any other group of children in this country. Some of them doubtless will go wrong so the world can still have something to talk about, but most of them will become good citizens and Christian workers.

There may be an aged mother living in this parsonage where you sit who has given her life in order that her son may serve the Christ and the Church. Waiting during the twilight time of life, sometimes lonesomely, she likes to feel that she has some part in the onward progress of the Kingdom. Just a little visit occasionally

We are glad to invite them back on

About the pastor, we may talk later, but right here let me say that you will never visit in a home where you will be more welcome and where you will find a more sincere friend than you find in the parsonage. He covets your friendship; he appreciates your visits. His tasks consume his energy, but his spirit is rebuilt by the kindness of those whom he serves.

Thank you for coming to the parsonage today. Come back again. Add a word of good cheer, a bit of hope, a ray of sunshine, and this writer believes you will return to your own home a bit more radiant in soul.

WHEN DEATH COMES.

When death comes to a home, it upsets all of our plans. It throws out of adjustment all the relations of the home. It brings sorrow—and maybe a bit of joy. The joy depends upon the faith of those who live and the life of the one who has gone.

The funeral is a farce unless it brings comfort and courage to those who mourn. It is the preacher's best opportunity to come close to the heart of those who suffer. It is the time when religion goes deepest and reaches highest, or when one loses faith. Such a service must be well-planned, carefully thought out, and prayerfully executed. It is intended to bring strength and courage, not tears and sorrow.

Then comes the obituary when the minister or a committee speaking for the church wants to say something about the deceased. Isn't it true that the life speaks louder than words? Just a brief statement of the facts concerning the birth, life and death of the individual is quite sufficient, it seems to me, to put in the church paper. This allows friends at a distance to know, and the simple statement is a monument in itself. Those who write such notices for this paper are requested to read the "notice" on page 15 before sending in such notices.

When death comes, God comes very close to the home. We need Him then, and He is near.

WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

It is a little late for a report of the World's Sunday School Convention at Oslo, Norway, in July, but I have just returned to the United States and this is my first opportunity to write.

Our party consisted of 300 people bound for Oslo on the "S. S. Columbus" leaving New York on June 27. Not all of our party were bound for the convention, but they took advantage of the party. The main delegation was a day late so we were prevented from being in at the opening, but we found ourselves very soon in the great congregation.

There was a certain amount of inspiration in being a part of a congregation made up of delegates from many countries. In fact, the speakers represented twenty-five different countries, and there were delegates from nearly everywhere. We had as fellow passenger on our ship the famous Dr. Kagawa, who spoke to us one evening—and there were others not so well known, but important parsonages in Sunday school and educational work.

I do not intend in this article to give a report of the Convention, but I will say that there were certain impressions made on me that I desire to mention.

It was everywhere made manifest that the Church needs the Sunday school. The burden of many speeches was just this. Leaders in Scotland and Wales and Germany and India told us of the importance of the school and the part it could play in the advancement of Christianity. I was impressed favorably by the reports of leaders from Egypt, Syria, Poland, Africa, and many other countries. They told us what they were doing for the religious education of the children through their mission schools. Outside of America, where Sunday school work is farthest advanced, the progress on mission fields seems greater than at the home base.

It seemed to me that most of the speeches were made in English and interpreted in Norwegian. One was made in German and interpreted in English. Most of the speakers from abroad wore the conventional European dress. The singing was in any language the delegate knew, though the hymns were printed in English and Norwegian.

The educational "clinics" were held in separate buildings and in university halls. There were meetings for the discussion of methods according to grade and departments. The convention exhibit was in a separate building and consisted of method material, printed matter, pictures, textbooks and general Sunday school literature. It seemed to me that the American text-book systems were by far the best.

It is evident that outside of America there is no great and extended work being done through the Sunday schools for young men and women. Probably there are young peoples departments in some churches. I visited one church where the pastor has charge of a Sunday school of small children on Sunday and a week-day school in another part of the city and a day nursery in still another location. There are many such schools in Oslo.

Dr. Kagawa continually emphasized the fact that "the child is the best amongst us." He meant to say the child's education and training in religion is the most important task of the Church. He said, also, that he had not always appreciated the value of the Sunday school to the Church, but in recent years, and because of certain personal experiences, he had come to this conclusion. He spoke of some cases that had come under his observation. Young people who had

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

VIRGINIA VALLEY CONFERENCE.

Your editor had the joy of attending the Virginia Valley Central Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches which met recently at Antioch Christian Church near Harrisonburg. Others have given us some impression of what was done during the two days' session, and the editor simply wishes to express his appreciation for the courtesies shown while there and then to pass on to the readers some of the reports which were made to the conference. These reports can have real value if they are taken seriously and the churches undertake to do the things suggested. In hope they are given place here.

Officers were elected as follows:

President, Rev. R. L. Williamson; Vice Pres., J. C. Bradford; Secretary, Rev. W. J. Andes; Asst. Secy., Roy Andes; Treasurer, Samuel Earman; Director of Religious Education, Alfred Dofflemyre; Assistants, Miss Elsie Matthews, Norman Morris; Mission Secretary, R. O. Rothgeb; Stewardship Secretary, Miss Minnie Dofflemyre.

REPORT OF STEWARDSHIP SECRETARY.

What is stewardship? Stewardship involves more than just giving money. It means the recognition of Christ service—to devote a share of our time, strength and money to the service of others in His name. It means the consecration of self. It involves not only giving but intelligent giving. A Christian steward is a trustee and will seek to know the aims and needs, and will properly distribute that he has in his possession. Stewardship changes one's attitude toward appeals, makes one more generous in giving and enriched in life by sharing in a larger number and variety of worthy interests.

Missionary education deals with stewardship because of its effect upon character, and means of providing support for benevolent causes.

In these days of great financial depression, is there no remedy for the child of God? Is there no deliverance from its grinding heel of poverty? What saith the scriptures?

As we search them, we fear much is due to the niggardliness of the child of God himself. He has held from God that which was not his own to hold. He has sowed sparingly and is reaping sparingly. The churches of Macedonia gave abundantly in the midst of trial and deep poverty.

Has God a plan for giving? We find that the Jews gave one-tenth under the law, but long before the law was ever given, Abraham paid tithes to Melchisedec. Jacob promised God one-tenth if he would bless him. And God did bless him.

God will never bless a man who retains for his own that which belongs to Him; no man ever gained by serving God with a half-heart, nor ever lost by serving Him with a whole one.

Have you been failing God in tithes and offerings? Have you been having a hard time spiritually and financially? Are you being destroyed by the devourer? If so, turn to Malachi 3: 10-11 and read its comforting words, "Bring . . . and prove me." If you will, He will open the windows of Heaven for you, the very windows which have been closed against you, and will empty out for you a blessing so large that you will have more than enough. And He will rebuke the devourer, the locust, etc., for your own sake. Do not be afraid to trust the Lord. Prove Him and see.

Where shall I give? Tithes and offerings should be given where God is honored, and where His word is preached. They should not be given where the minister does not believe in the deity of the Lord Jesus Christ.

They belong to God, and He will hold you accountable if you withhold them or do not place them as a faithful steward.

MINNIE DOFFLEMYRE.

COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM.

The part evangelism is to play in the building of the Church in the future will be a very important one and will hold a strategic position. If the Church fails to hold this strategic position, then the desire for lost souls to be saved will be lost to a large extent. Therefore we, your committee on evangelism, recommend the following:

1. That a survey be made by the pastor, or someone designated by him, of each community in which a church is located in order to determine the number of unchurched people in the community.

2. That we put forth as much effort the year around to win souls as at the time of the revival.

3. That the church train and use the ones who join the Church from time to time in the service of the Church. It is a new life for them, so show them how to use that new life and how to live it.

4. That we endorse the "Preaching Mission" being planned by the Federal Council of Churches.

5. That family worship be re-established in the homes of the Church members.

6. That we give more time and thought to the study and use of evangelism.

W. J. ANDES, Chairman,
EUGENIA S. SNOW.

REPORT ON SOCIAL SERVICE.

Attention is called to the fact that we are living in a time of rapid change in all social conditions. Moral standards, economic conditions, race attitudes and national outlook are all changing rapidly. In such a time it is important for the Church to be alert and to definitely seek to direct trends of thought and conduct.

The following recommendations are suggested:

1. That the churches undertake to develop a recreation program that will meet the needs of community, rather than leave the recreation entirely to commercial enterprise.

2. That each church have definite teaching in regard to the social evils of the present system of alcoholic beverage control and the use of strong drink.

3. That churches and church people use their influence toward honesty and initiative in industry.

MY PART IN BUILDING THE BETTER WAY.

By REV. J. E. McCAULEY, President.
(Address delivered to the S. S. and C. E. Convention at Newport News, Va., July 21, 1936.)

Two stanzas from Tennyson's "Locksley Hall" give us a fitting introduction for this message:

"Comrades, leave me here a little, while as yet 'tis early morn.
Leave me, and when you want me, sound your bugle horn.
For I dipped into the future, far as human eye could see, Saw a vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be."

Sometime ago it was my privilege to go to the top of Washington's Monument and view our nation's capital. I went from there to Cathedral Hill and as high up the pinnacle of the Cathedral as I could. There, like Tennyson, I viewed our nation and the world. In my imagination, this is what I saw.

Geographical Position and Wealth.

Geographically our nation is almost at the heart of the world. We are located at a strategic point of the world civilization and industrial order. We are located at the heart of a world twenty-five thousand miles in circumference and eight thousand miles in diameter. It has a population of one billion and eight hundred million people. These people are crowding the teeming marts of the world's most strategic points. Many of them are poverty stricken and unemployed while others are living in extravagance, luxury, and ease.

From my reviewing stand, I saw our nation's capital. I saw national buildings, some of which covered two and three blocks, costing millions of dollars each. As far as human eye could see, I saw the expanse of fertile lands which produce crops to supply the world's need for food and clothing, a nation with its thousands of miles in expanse of timber, minerals of almost every kind, and one hundred and six thousand square miles of coal beds. I saw even more, I saw a nation worth over three hundred billion dollars. Looking from that point down the Potomac and along the coast of the Chesapeake Bay, I could almost see the Jamestown Colony where the first permanent settlers landed. They sought a better economic way. Then turning to the Northeast and using my imagination a little, I could see Plymouth Colony. There the Pilgrim fathers landed, seeking to better the way religiously. Those early settlers were willing to do their part in helping to discover, build, and give us a better way of life.

The vastness of this nation and the world which we saw is no longer perplexing as a problem. The automobile, speeding through the streets of the city, the sheamship plowing through the ocean's waters, the locomotive steaming over her tracks, and the airships circling over us, all these make this vast earth of ours a joy-ride and a trip across our continent only a day's journey. Now a man can go around the world in less time than a ship could travel from either of the earliest settlements to our nation's capital.

We could also see the United States patent office, a place where more inventions have been recorded than any other place on the globe. Among the modern inventions, the radio is the most astounding. It makes the world a whispering-gallery and brings immediate news from the remote corners of the globe to our fireside.

Material Substance and Invention Not the Most Important.

But this is not all that I saw. Neither are they the most interesting things to meditate upon. In my imagination, I saw the world's population of one billion and eight hundred million people passing to and fro in the streets of our city, and of all the parts of the earth. Only five hundred million of these people professed the name of Christ. If we could line the non-Christians in one line, sixteen abreast, stand at our pinnacle as a reviewing stand, and let them start marching, if the present birth and death rate continued to exist, we should stand there through all eternity and see them march on to a future with no hope. And yet, we, as professed Christians are doing little about this mighty army of people who know not Christ. But let us fix our gaze upon the situation a little nearer home. Confine it to Virginia for only a brief period. We would have to view another pathetic sight. According to Minor C. Miller's "The Lost Bible," we would see a population of approximately two million white people, of which only thirty-five percent are enrolled in the Sunday school. We would see only seventeen and one-half percent going to its classes regularly. We would also see a blush pass over the cheek of those high school boys and girls (and must I say Sunday school teachers, as well?) as we ask them questions about the Bible. A test given in 213 communities in that many high schools, given to 18,434 pupils, showed that 16,000 could not name three Old Testament prophets, 12,000 could not name the four gospels, and ten thousand could not name three of the disciples. It is true that merely knowing the facts about the Bible is not a test of the character of the people. But the increase of crime, one hundred and five per cent during the last two decades, is an index to the need of our people.

One day Jesus stood on the mountainside, towering above the capital of His nation. He, too, saw material resources, beautiful buildings, and wonderful displays of human progress. He saw the gorgeous rays of an afternoon sun reflected from the golden-lined porch of Solomon's temple. But He saw more. He saw the people of that capital city and his nation. When he saw them and their choice of life, and realized the way they were going and the destruction that the way was leading them, He wept. I am wondering if He is not also weeping today as He looks upon our nation? Is it not enough to make us weep?

Our Economic Condition.

I have shown you wealth and expanse in our country. It is capable of producing enough for the world's need. And yet we have our bread lines that are comparable to those of any nation in proportion to its population. In one of our large cities, alone, there are 150,000 families who are on relief. This means that self-respect is gone, the home life destroyed and the morale of the entire family broken. These people cannot believe some of the things that the Church and its schools have been believing and practicing. As a result, it has led many into the practice of crime.

Crime.

We are the leading crime nation on the globe. Last year we averaged twenty-seven murders per day. We are spending annually from fifteen to eighteen billion dollars for crime. According to newspaper reports nearly all of the dastardly crimes are either committed or headed by a foreign element. This is an indictment to us; and makes our shame in building the better way all the more acute. When I was a boy, I was usually assigned the task of digging thistles in the cow pasture and old fields on rainy days. At that time I could not see any reason for doing such a laborious task when I could have been either playing or resting. When I became older I learned that the seed was blown from the old fields and pasture into the cultivated field and would reproduce thistles, if allowed to continue to grow nearby. Too long have we allowed the thistles of crime to grow in our neighboring nations, without supplanting them with the gospel of Christ. We have failed to help them cultivate their fields and give them Christ. As a result, crime has found its way and multiplied its fruits in our nation.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

One Conference of the Southern Convention has met in Annual Session for 1936. The other conferences will meet within the next three months. In view of the needs of the various general enterprises of the conferences and the Convention, it is important for the pastors to urge the churches to pay their conference apportionments in full. The remaining weeks of the present year should be used in diligent effort to deepen the spiritual life of our people, increase the membership of our churches and discharge our financial obligations to the churches and the Kingdom of God.

A number of revival meetings will be held during the next two months. These meetings should be more than an annual protracted meeting. Many churches depend upon these meetings as a means of calling the unsaved to penitence and enlisting converts in the membership of the church. At any rate, every church should seek to gather in new members at this season and cultivate the evangelistic spirit throughout the year. The Church lives by growing in grace, in power and in membership.

Every pastor should consult the minutes of his Conference for the year 1935, and secure definite information concerning the various funds of the Conference Apportionment tables. In most cases a separate apportionment is suggested for every Fund of the Conference and Convention. There should be no preferred funds in the Conference Apportionments. They are of equal relative importance. But the emphasis should be placed upon the fact that the Conference Fund is used for the actual expenses of holding the annual session and printing the minutes of the Conferences. The Convention Fund is used for the annual obligations of the Southern Convention. The apportionments for these two Funds are barely sufficient to meet these actual expenses. If they are not paid in full there is no other source of money for this purpose. Therefore the pastors and the churches should make it possible for the Conferences and the Convention to pay their expenses by paying these apportionments in full. The other enterprises have other sources of income. All the Funds can be paid in full if the task is undertaken in a sympathetic, systematic and united effort. The easiest way to pay the current expenses of the local church is to raise the Conference apportionments in full. The broader outlook and more comprehensive program enriches the spiritual life and increases interest in the common task of the church. Raising money is not the chief work of the Church, but it is one of the means of grace, if the people will give liberally and sympathetically. The church should seek to use every opportunity to grow in power, in numbers and in service.

I. W. JOHNSON.

PART-TIME CHURCHES.

In the Southern Convention, our Congregational Christian Churches are largely rural. We have a number of city churches that we call full-time churches, meaning that they require a minister's full time as pastor. We have a few rural churches who give employment to a pastor for his full time. The greater part of our churches, however, are known as part-time churches; that is, they have preaching one or two Sundays a month. We have the Congregational form of government. The local church is the final authority. I know a community in which there are two churches. One of these churches has preaching twice a month and the other one once a month. The pastor serving one of these churches lives in the community. The other church is served by a pastor who lives miles away, and of course, is compelled to pay the expense of traveling in order to serve this church. He cannot meet the immediate needs of the church, living at such a great distance. We have other instances where preachers living in different communities go into the same section, ministering to different congregations. In other words, there seems to be but little system or orderliness in looking after the spiritual, social, and material welfare of our churches. Numerous efforts have been made to group our part-time churches into convenient pastorates, and have the pastorate employ a man who could give his full time to the pastorate. All previous efforts seem to have failed. Pastorates have been formed. These pastorates have come together through their representatives and called a pastor. Something happens at one church, and rather than make some concession and cooperate with the other churches in the pastorate, this church breaks away and employs another pastor—a selfish sort of thing to do. If religion is anything, it is unselfishness; yet, it seems at times that churches themselves become selfish and contentious.

Just at this time, the problem of our so-called part-time churches is acute. We have any number of churches that are without a pastor or are without competent pastoral work. A minister fulfills but a small part of his duty who goes into a community, preaches a sermon on Sunday, and leaves that community for a month or two weeks. The time has been when merely the sounding of the gospel from the pulpit on Sunday would meet the needs of the church, but that day is past. The gospel has to do with the whole of life. The minister, to preach that gospel in its entirety, must in some way touch the whole of life. We have come to realize that there is something more to religion other than a confession and a witness. These are vital and essential to the beginning of the Christian life, but by no means do they constitute the sum total of Christian living. A true minister of the gospel must not only have an understanding heart, but he also must have an understanding mind and be anxious to give himself to redeem the individuals in the whole realm of his living. Before he can do this easily and effectively, he is compelled to spend some time with the folks, other than in a worship service. In addition to being a prophet in things spiritual, he must also be the shepherd of men's lives, and the bishop of men's souls.

As a denomination and a convention, we have a great opportunity, but we also have a great responsibility for our churches who are without pastors and our pastors who are without churches. We have a number of good men who, with the proper encouragement and guidance, could render a worthwhile service. It is a reflection on our denomination and on our system for one pastor to be undertaking to serve six, eight or ten churches, and it is certainly unfair to expect any one man to serve such a large number of churches. It is impossible for him to do the work that a faithful pastor should do. I know that in our local conferences, the contention is made that the Home Mission committee should look after these details. Perhaps they should, but the fact is they don't. It seems that today we have come to the time when our convention should assume the authority and create a commission whose business it shall be to group our part-time churches into convenient pastorates so that it will be feasible for each pastorate to have within its parish a settled minister who can give his entire time to that pastorate. If there be instances in which this is impossible, then certainly one pastor could serve the churches nearest each other

Dear Boys and Girls:

It looks like we may be getting somewhere now with this children's page, for the children themselves are making contributions. That's just what I wanted. It takes a lot of help to make the world go. You remember Jesus needed somebody to help him carry his cross up the hill. A man named Simon helped him. You may want to read that story. You will find it in the 15th chapter of the Gospel of St. Mark.

Now, I think it would be fun to have your pictures in the paper. I had been thinking of that before little Mary Ruth suggested it, but there is just a little difficulty, and that is that it costs quite a lot of money, but I am going to see if there is any chance to do it. Thank you, Mary Ruth, for suggesting it, and for the nice story which you sent. I like the story, and I am putting it in the paper this week. It certainly does show what happens when people are selfish.

Here's hoping that some other boys and girls will send riddles, stories, games and poems and all other kind of things that you would like to see in the paper. Just send them to

Dear Unele Fletcher:

I am so glad you are giving a "Children's Page" in The Christian Sun. I think it will be so interesting to have stories, games, riddles, and could we send our pictures and have them in The Christian Sun? I am sending a story I hope the children will enjoy reading. I am 8 years old and in the third grade.

Lots of love,
MARY RUTH MARTIN.

WHEN PETER HAD ALL THE CANDY HE WANTED.

Peter's father gave him a dime one Saturday morning. "I thought maybe you'd like to buy the children some eandy," he said.

Peter was ten years old, but Dave was only eight, while Dot was five and a baby, so Peter always called them "the children."

Peter decided to buy the eandy before he told the others about it, so as soon as he could he put on his coat and ran to the grocery store.

My, what a lot of eandy there was in the ease! Peter bought a yellow gum drop and a pink one too; a blaek all-day sueker, round and hard like a marble; a lemon and a peppermint stiek; two pieeces of lieoriee; a big pieee of peanut brittle; a choeolate cream; five lemon drops, and three strawberry drops—all in a big, knob-by saek. They looked good! Peter had never eaten all the eandy he had wanted, and on his way home decided he would eat it all himself and not tell the ehildren anything about it.

When Peter got home he went in the baek door and climbed the steps very softly. He went away up to the attie, where he knew they wouldn't think of looking for him. It was cold up there, but he found a blanket and wrapped up in it and ate the eandy as fast as he could.

First he ate a pieee of lieoriee, and that stuck his teeth together and made him ehew hard. Then he ate a yellow lemon drop, but he was in such a hurry that he bit it up before he thought and it didn't last long. Just as he started on the pink gum drop he heard Dave calling from downstairs.

"Peter, where are you, come here," he called.

Peter sat very quiet. "They know I've got the eandy, and they want some," he said to himself, "but they're not going to get any."

At last the children quit shouting and the house was still. Peter put the all-day sueker in his mouth and sucked all the blaek off until it looked like a white marble, but that took too long to eat, so he put it baek in the bag and ate the choeolate cream.

As he ate, somehow the eandy didn't taste as good as he thought it would. He ate slower and slower, and after a long, long time, two hours, maybe, he got most awfully tired and went downstairs.

Just as he got downstairs the front door opened and Dave and Dot came running in all wrapped up, their eheeks red, and very excited.

"Oh, where are you, Peter," cried Dave. "We hunted and hunted and ealled and ealled. Unele Ed came and took us for a long drive in his new ear."

"And we had eandy and eakes," added Dot.

"Yes," agreed Dave, "he took us to a fine shop, and we had hot choeolate and eakes and sandwiehes and he bought us each a big saek of eandy. See, I saved you some. Here it is."

"Here's some of mine for you, too," said Dot.

And both the ehildren wondered why Peter looked so funny and would not eat any of the eandy.

and nearest him. I know that our present form of government does not give the convention this authority but I also know that our ehurehes, under the instruction and inspiration of a commission appointed by the convention could be reasoned with, and I think indueed voluntarily and of themselves to form themselves into pastorates and obligate themselves to remain as a unit in earrying on the work of the ehureh and of the kingdom. I am eonvinced that we are suffering irreparable losses as a result of our laek of unity of purpose, of unity of action, and of unity of organization. In our present state, our losses continue to overbalance our gains. It does not require a mathematiciean or a prophet to read for us the signs of the times.

It is my hope and prayer that our convention will undertake to do something to remedy the present situation, and that our ehurehes and our pastors will be glad to eoperate that our ehurehes may be strong and their eause advaneed. I would like to hear from someone else on this subject.

RACIAL UNDERSTANDING.

The Sunday school lesson of August 23rd is a fitting introduction to our "racial problem." We have a racial problem, several of them in fact, but one in particular. A while ago I heard a Negro speaker begin his address by saying to us whites who composed his audience, "I am a problem." He was voicing a universal fact of his race in America. What the speaker had in mind was that the Negro is here, by no choice or will of his own, and since the white man had brought him here the white man's burden was to consider dispassionately this problem and solve it correctly and justly in the sight of God and for the good of both races concerned. "For," said another thinker, "at bottom and fundamentally with God Who made of our blood all the nations to dwell upon the earth, there is one race, namely, the human race, and our kind of man, namely mankind."

We may differ as we will in our views about the "Negro problem," but we must admit that since our citizenship is composed of some twelve millions of African origin and descent; and some hundred million of whites with their descendants here in America, we have a problem of some magnitude which must be worked out.

The War of '61-'65 between the states, did not solve our racial problem; it only made it more complex. And no racial problem has ever been solved in this world, for good and all, by one race's subjugating and exploiting the other. One race can't rise by standing on the shoulder, or the prostrate form of the other. Both must rise or fall together. A civilization advances only as every race and group composing it advances. The stronger race proves and maintains its strength only as it helps lift the weaker, and by guaranteeing to the weaker the same rights, and opportunities as it enjoys itself.

The Jews, in the days of Peter and James and Paul thought themselves superior to all Gentiles. Very well. Now since God has given you high privileges and special favors as "His chosen people" through many centuries, prove the worth and merit of those high privileges and opportunities by sharing them with others, since "God is no respecter of persons." So is the teaching of Scripture. It is well that for the coming year our mission groups are to study, calmly, dispassionately, prayerfully, we hope, our race problems, along with the condition, needs and history of the underprivileged. "A Preface to Racial Understanding" by C. S. Johnson, is among the books presented in this series for studies, and it is a volume that reflects the balance, the wisdom and the scholarship of a man who has given much study to this all-important topic. It will help any group seeking light, where much light is needed, to study it.

J. O. ATKINSON.

OBEDIENCE, NOT ARGUMENT, IS REQUIRED.

A quite talented and conscientious young lady, a real Christian girl, too, we take her to be, said to this writer recently, "With so many poor, needy, unemployed, and wicked round about us I can't see that we have any money or missionaries to send to Japan, or China, or Africa." And there are others by the thousands in the church and composing it who will agree and argue likewise. Thus you can always use argument and good reason and logic, too, against the spiritual needs and efforts of the Church and Christianity. Christianity is not built on reason and logic and intellect. Its one foundation and support is Jesus Christ—to the Jews foolishness and to the Greeks a stumbling block, but to them that believe the power of God unto the salvation of souls. Had Paul and Carey and Judson and Morrison and Livingstone listened to reason and squared their conduct with intellect and logic only, India and China and Japan and Africa would still be without Christ, and our Christianity would yet be in the tribal state, and far more futile and impotent than it is. The logic of events and the intellect of his day sent Paul on his way to Damascus to find and put in prison those of the Way who were turning the world upside down with the foolishness of preaching. But obedience to the heavenly vision, not to the logic and learning acquired at the feet of Gamaliel, showed Paul what he must suffer "for His name's sake" and made of Paul eventually one of the first citizens, and most influential men of all time.

Now the supreme and most emphatic command our Lord ever gave to His followers was, "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every nation." It was His to command. It is ours to obey. And the church has had power at home or elsewhere, only as it has obeyed that command, "Obedience is better than sacrifice, and to obey is better than the fat of rams and all burnt offerings." The strength and power of the Church are measured by the willingness of its members to obey its Founder and Builder.

"LET THE CHURCH FACE THE ISSUE."

Herman F. Reissig, minister of the King's Highway Congregational church, Brooklyn, in a contribution to the Christian Century, "Let the Church Face the Issue," begins by asserting: "If the church is to have a significant influence in the next two or three decades it must begin by recognizing, with complete frankness, that the immediate issue before us is in the reconstruction of the economic order. As in the decades before the Civil War the church was challenged and tested by chattel slavery, so now the vitality and relevancy of its message is measured by its attitude toward the economic crisis. In our time, every social problem one can name either grows out of or is inextricably involved in the economic problem."

Then Dr. Reissig becomes more specific:

"Whatever else we may do about crime, no really significant contribution without radical changes in the economic system which produces our terrific extremes of wealth and poverty.

"Whatever else we may do about the liquor problem, no really significant contribution without radical economic change!

"Whatever else we may do about the racial problem, no really effective contribution without radical economic reconstruction!

"Whatever else we may do about marriage and the home, nothing will be of ultimate avail without the economic security which capitalism denies!

"In a dozen direct and indirect ways war is rooted in and made unavoidable by the system of private ownership of the means of production. Whatever else we may do about war, no finally significant contribution without radical economic reconstruction!

"Whatever else we may do to revive faith and hope, nothing lastingly significant without fundamental economic change!"

"The fundamental malady of our modern world," continues Dr. Reissig, "is the profit system. Until with a bold and determined faith we take our gospel into that area we are dealing with the fringe and filigree of modern issues. Whatever may have been true in the past, the supreme task of the decades ahead, and therefore the supreme concern of the church, is the reconstruction of the economic order."

The above declarations furnish a summary of the present situation and the way in which Dr. Reissig would have the church face the issues. This is one of the favorite processes of a great many present day leaders in the church for bringing in the Kingdom of God. But they run counter to the New Testament and they disregard that which was fundamental with Jesus. With Him, the heavenly and spiritual were always above the earthly and the material. He went direct to the heart of the individual. This meant a change of the group. "Out of the heart are the issues of life."

It is expected that political parties will deal primarily with the financial, political and social systems of a people, for their method of attack is in the realm of the material, but with the church the situation is the very opposite. Spiritual leaders, prophets, and saints are potential because they deal with the inner essentials rather than the incidents of the outward.

The church must face the issues but these issues are primarily in the region of the spirit. These social reformers are clipping twigs rather than getting at the roots of the tree. All such captains tend to steer the Old Ship of Zion on to the rocks.

A preacher who does not know that every reform in the church of God has not been from the outward to the inward, from the social and ecclesiastical to the inner and the spiritual, should review his history. Wherever the old Methodist preacher went with a thrilling message of salvation he expected every dog and horse, servant and master, saint and sinner of that community to know that something had happened. Then followed a radical change in the economic order—in the life of the whole community.

Some such gospel as this, dominant in all of our churches, would do more to solve the problem of crime, the liquor problem, the race problem, the problem of marriage and home, the war issue, the problem of moral cynicism and all else, than all these modern leagues and conferences to deal with economic reconstruction.

A MANCHURIAN LAYMAN WHOSE LIGHT DOTHS SHINE.

When the gospel of Christ gets hold of a Chinese to the extent that he contributes liberally of his money, then he has really gotten religion. Three years ago Brother Shan handed me a hundred dollars at Pansiene as a first voluntary contribution for erection of a church building in his town. While on furlough last year he sent in two hundred more. On our recent visit this faithful servant arranged for an additional sixty dollars. He has witnessed over many years in an isolated village far over in north-east Manchuria, carrying gospel tracts also to other towns where there were no evangelists. While witnessing he has frequently been reviled and in his home town persecuted.

The ambition of this good man is to see before he goes above a place of worship in Pansiehe dedicated to the worship of God. To this end he has contributed liberally, and also to the Lord's work at other places. Recently he was thrown into prison for a whole month because he had in his possession a Christian magazine published in China some years ago. Other Christians and the missionaries vouched for his good character, so he was released. He is now more earnest than ever, "counting it all joy" to be persecuted.

Everywhere this man goes people know he is a Christian, but the reception received here is quite different to that given in lands where Christ is better known. The four or five hundred dollars given by Bro. Shan these three years approximate the earnings of nearly a year. To this should be added persecution, imprisonment and other difficulties—all for Christ's sake. We wonder how many of God's people with even centuries of Christian background and hosts of visible witnesses about them, would do so well.

This man is only one of many who move us to admiration—because of their admirable qualities. Is there wonder that we find great joy in working with them for the saving of their people even though there are inconveniences, dangers and frequently other difficult situations; and is there surprise that we would have God's people in all lands take a larger part in spreading the gospel among these people here, who are in great spiritual need, but who become such faithful witnesses and display such excellent character; later becoming Christian?

SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

More and more it becomes apparent that we must look to our Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies for the larger number who will join our churches in the future. The leadership for our church tomorrow must be trained in our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies.

Your committee would recommend that the best literature be secured for our Sunday schools, and we know of no better place than our denominational publishing houses.

Our Sunday school teachers and workers have been doing good and faithful work, and we want to urge them to do all they can to improve themselves in their work with our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor groups. In view of the many worldly things that are enticing our young people, we must put forth our best effort for the advancement of our Church work.

Boys and girls who will be trained in our churches under inspired workers will be the spiritual leaders for our next generation, and we want them trained in the knowledge of our Holy Bible and guided by God for the great task that confronts them.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

GREENSBORO.

During the summer months, Thursday evenings mean Christian Endeavor meetings to the young people of the Greensboro First Church. We visit in the homes of our members for a period of study, transaction of business, and a truly enjoyable hour of fun. In the course of this, the third year we have followed this plan, we feel that we are becoming really well acquainted with each other. We have found great joy in working, studying, and playing together during the week, in addition to our worshipping together on Sunday evenings.

The study for the summer has been The Negro. We have indeed broken down, to a great extent at least, the barrier which once stood between us and our brown-skinned neighbors. We have striven to "understand our prejudices" by becoming more familiar with their race characteristics, their economic conditions, their literature and art, their music, and with some of their great personalities, including such outstanding persons as Paul Laurence Dunbar, James Weldon Johnson, Phyllis Wheatley, Roland Hayes, Paul Robeson, and Richard Harrison. The concluding meeting of this study has been planned to center around a young negro girl—a delegate to the Lakeside Conference this summer—who will speak to our group in joint meeting with a group of negro young people.

"Janey," a home mission play in two acts, was presented by our group at a Sunday evening service in July. The offering was added to our contributions for missions. We highly recommend this play to any group interested in impressing upon their church group the necessity for home missions. Then, too, the actors themselves find it interesting and beneficial, as they work out in detail the dramatic moments which go together to make up the story of the young mountain girl who became a dynamic power for good because of the kindly interest of a Christian woman.

As for our socials, we are beginning to believe that there is no end to good games and contests. And then there's always so much to talk about! We're still listening eagerly to the experiences of Dorothy Truitt, our member who represented North Carolina at Lakeside this summer. Of course, too, our delegates to the Elon Leadership Training School tell us many stories of their happy days spent there, which bring to the minds of most of us pleasant memories of our own similar experiences. Our social chairman sees to it that we can always say truthfully, "We've had a grand time!"

We're planning a great many other things for the remaining weeks of the summer. A committee is working on the selection of another play, sides have been chosen for a contest, details are being worked out for an ice cream supper, and we are looking forward to our annual picnic.

We are very grateful to our pastor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wisseman, for their friendly guidance and council throughout these happy summer months.

We should like very much to read in The Christian Sun about the activities of your group. And if you are ever in Greensboro on Sunday or Thursday evening, please do make us a visit. We would like to know you better.

FRANCES FOSTER.

THE VALUE OF A MAN IN GOD'S SIGHT.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
SEPTEMBER 6, 1936.

(Consecration Meeting.)

Scripture: Gen. 1:26; Ps. 8:4-8;
Heb. 13:20, 21.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Man's high value. Matt. 12:10-13.
Tues.—Mental and spiritual greatness. II Cor. 4:16-18.
Wed.—Man is godlike. Jas. 3:9.
Thur.—The cost of man's redemption. I Peter 1:17-21.
Fri.—Respect manhood. Acts 10:15.
Sat.—Respect human rights. Lev. 25:8-17.

It has been said that a test of any civilization is the value it places on a man. Greece and Rome achieved greatness along certain lines, yet a majority of their population were slaves. The value of a man was no greater than that of an animal. The greatness along certain lines, yet a not only to Pharaoh but to the multitude of slaves who made them possible. No one will ever know how many lives were lost in the construction of these monuments. It is only in Christian lands that safety devices and humane laws have become a reality.

Judging from the human standpoint man is relatively insignificant, but seen through the eyes of God he is of infinite worth. Man was made in the image or nature of God. If we look at people through yellow glasses they look yellow; if through a magnifying glass they appear large. If we look at man through the eyes of God, or from God's viewpoint, he becomes great in cosmic significance.

It is not easy for man to realize his own importance and value as related to God. Often man uses his humanity as an excuse for ordinary living. He says, "Oh, I am only human." But seen in his divine significance man is little lower than the angels and crowned with glory and honor. Humanity truly is not something to be lived down to but lived up to.

God needs men today, men young and old. They are needed, yea indispensable, not only in politics and industry, but also in the church. There is a place in the church today for men of character and ability, men of vision and consecration, helping to bring in the Kingdom of God.

"God send us men of steadfast will,
Patient, courageous, strong and true;
With vision clear and mind equipped,
His will to learn, His work to do."

NEW LEBANON.

The work of our Church has been going along nicely for the past five years under the wise leadership of our pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese of Reidsville, N. C. Since his coming, he and his wife have both won the love of our people through their deeply consecrated lives and their love for the work of our Master. All these years he has had our interests at heart and has worked faithfully in building up our church to a higher spiritual level. Our membership has grown every year.

Early last spring our building was repaired, painted inside and out. Our revival began the first Sunday in July. This was also Home Coming Day. Rev. M. T. Sorrell of Danville did most of the preaching. He delivered some real gospel messages. The church and community were greatly revived. There were several professions and reconsecrations with nine additions to the church.

BEGINNING OF WORLD MISSIONS.

AUGUST 30, 1936—LESSON IX.

GOLDEN TEXT: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation."—Mark 16:15.

LESSON: Acts 11:19-26; 13:1-12;
Printed Text Acts 11:19-21; 13:1-12.

If we Christians knew some of the handicaps which Christianity had to face, and the obstacles which it overcame in the beginning we would have more faith and more zeal. Take for instance the Church in Antioch. Here was one of the three great cities of the world of that day, "the Gate of the East," a flourishing city to be sure, but one of the worst cities of all time. Here was vulgar pleasure, superstition, idolatry, licentiousness, luxury, imposture and impurity. For the most part its population was a worthless rabble of Greeks and Orientals. One writer has said "it is probable that no populations have ever been more abandoned than those Oriental Greek cities under the Roman Empire and of these cities, Antioch was the greatest and the worst." And yet it was in this city that a virile Christian Church was founded, and it was from this city that the world mission of Christianity began its glorious career. The gospel of Christ is power. It can go into the most difficult places and transform life.

The Church at Antioch.

Some of those who were spread abroad by the persecution that arose at Stephen's death went to Antioch. Instead of confining their ministry to the Jews as others had done they preached also to the Greeks, proclaiming or preaching the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ was the center and the circumference of their message. God honored their work—the hand of the Lord was with them; it is always with those who try to do His will—and large numbers were added to the believers. A church was established and the work grew, grew so rapidly that Barnabas the great-hearted had to seek help, and thus it was that Paul came into the picture. Under the leadership of these great and consecrated men, and the blessing of the Holy Spirit the work grew and its influence waxed strong.

Christians.

It was at Antioch that the disciples were first called Christians. Heretofore they had been called "of this way, saints, believers, the faithful, brethren, disciples." Henceforth they were to be called Christians. It is significant that this did not happen in Jerusalem. It could not have happened there. Not until the Gentiles were admitted into the fellowship, not until membership in the church became inclusive, not until the middle wall of partition was broken down, did the followers of Christ become known as Christians. And what is more strange the name was perhaps first given in ridicule or as a nickname. In essence it means a "Christ-man, a follower of Christ, a Christlike man." Let no man wear this name lightly. What the church needs more than anything else is for Christians to take this name seriously and to put meaning into it by their daily lives and service.

Missions.

Let those who say they do not believe in missions skip the story of the church at Antioch if they want to remain in their ignorance and blind prejudice. For the launching of the missionary enterprise was distinctly divinely determined. "As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted The Holy Spirit Said. . . . So they being sent forth by The Holy Spirit, went down to Seleucia. Missions were born in the heart of God before the foundation of the world. They were implicit in God's plan from the beginning. And here the Spirit of God furnishes the final impulse that sends them out on a high enterprise that shall never cease until the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ. The missionary enterprise is a divine, not a human enterprise. Man did not think it up, it came not by natural causes; it was revealed and released by the Holy Spirit. Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation." That is a command, not a pious hope. We disobey Christ at the peril of losing our own souls. For Christianity can never be vital unless it is shared.

Opposition.

The first missionaries soon found out that their work was no joy-ride. They almost immediately encountered opposition. They soon found that there were persons and forces that withstood the gospel, that there were those who did not want others to have the light. After preaching "the word of God"—their message was Christ—at one end of the island of Cyprus they went through the island and finally reached Paphos at the other end. Here the proconsul, a man of understanding, sought to hear the word of God. He might well stand for the representative of the pagan world, dissatisfied with what the pagan religions had to offer him. But Elymas, a sorcerer and a false prophet withstood Paul and Barnabas, "seeking to turn aside the proconsul from the faith." It is serious enough unwittingly to cause another to stumble, but alas for the man who deliberately seeks to break down the faith of another, or to turn him from the truth and the light. It were better for that man that a millstone were fastened around his neck and he were drowned in the depths of the sea.

Victory.

The defeat of Elymas and the winning of the proconsul was a symbol of the superiority of Christianity over the pagan beliefs and customs. It was more than an isolated victory; it was an earnest of Christianity going forth conquering and to conquer. The history of Christianity has confirmed this initial victory. To be sure there are vast areas of the world yet unevangelized. There are many phases of life which have not yet been transformed by the gospel of Christ. There are many things in the church which are a reflection on Jesus Christ. But history clearly shows that the gospel of Christ is superior to all other ways of life. It shows that wherever Christianity comes into conflict with superstition and ignorance and paganism, it has steadily if slowly won a victory. Christ's gospel even today is as leaven leavening the lump. The future belongs to Him. Let every one of us who name his name do with all our might what our hands and our heads and our hearts find to do.

WORLD'S S. S. CONVENTION.

drifted away from Sunday school at about sixteen finally came into the Church because they had a background of religious teaching that helped them to respond to the evangelistic appeal. Dr. Kagawa made an appeal to the convention to re-write the Sunday school text-books of the future with a more scientific method in keeping with modern knowledge. His plea was for a better interpretation of nature so that young men and women who go from Sunday school teaching to college and university teaching need not lose their Christian faith.

The convention as a whole was like a voice calling for a greater interest in the religious education of children and youth. It was a confession that the field is so tremendously great that what is being done seems very small. It was an announcement that the churches of the world are working at the task and advancing, even though slowly. It was a reconsecration to a great task and an awakened sense of the importance of the work.

MONDAY.

“THE ETERNAL QUEST.”

“The word became flesh and dwelt among us and we beheld his glory the only beginning of the future full of grace and truth.”—John 1:14.

The essential nature of man is a quest of God. One cry common in all ages is “O that I might know where I can find him.” In order that that quest might be answered, God wrapped himself in the nature of flesh, and said to Man, “You have been wanting to know me. Here I am. See me. Know me.

How shall we know Him? Here is an idea we got the other day. “Jesus bears relationship to God as a word does to an idea. For instance, I think but no one gets my thought. My thought is here but no one gets it, until I utter a word to express my thought. Then they get it. Suppose I say “Mother,” now you all have my thought.

Jesus is the word. The word is God. Now you know because you know Christ and if He is the word and that word is God, then you know God through Jesus. When we see this clearly we can follow Him better.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou art my rock, and my salvation. Help us ever to keep Thee before us.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

“OUR CIVIL WAR.”

“Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation.”—Matt. 12:22-30.

What a curse is this war in our members, this ceaseless struggle of the evil with the good in our hearts, this uncertainty whether woe or weal will triumph! Are we Christ's or Satan's? Who can surely say?

And what a blessing is a life unified in Jesus Christ, all thoughts brought under his blessed dominion, all demons driven out, the house swept clean and occupied by the rightful Lord of the mansion!

And this may be the lot of every one of us. The desolation of a divided kingdom need never be ours. Civil war within us may be absolutely and forever ended, as Christ the Conqueror enters His kingdom within us. The conflict may be ended. Eternal peace may be established.

Prayer—Come then, Lord Jesus, to Thy rightful throne in our souls. Put from us every wickedness and every base desire. Reign in us wholly and forever more. To Thy name's honor and glory.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

WEDNESDAY.

“WHAT PRICE LIFE?”

“Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.”—2 Tim. 2:15.

The matter of a job is a tremendously important item in our living, and the choosing of a job is just as tremendously significant. The number of people out of employment and the necessity of doing whatever may be offered in order to keep soul and body together leaves many without a choice. Nevertheless, it is obvious whatever we do at any time, and especially in the choice of, a mode of life, is relevant to that which we shall become. Therefore, the things that we do should be of our own choosing. A means of livelihood should be carefully inquired into as to routine, personal relationships, etc. Our life and our destiny depends upon it.

Everyone has a right to life; and everyone is more or less fitted and equipped for a place in life. There is no doubt that if this were realized, the world would be relieved of an avalanche of obligation, resentments and sorrows.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank thee for Thy word that reveals Thy will in all the mazes of life. We pray for an undersanding kind and lenient, that we may receive Thy revelations more and more.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

“MAGNIFYING EYES.”

“Rejoiceth in the truth.”—I Cor. 13:1-13.

Many persons see life through either magnifying glasses or diminishing lenses.

The magnifiers of good—bless their hearts!—seem all to be readers of a church paper. Nothing impresses me more about the letters I receive than the evident fact that the writers have projected their own devout personalities into these little articles. They find more merit therein than was ever put in by the author. Spiritually sensitive themselves, they catch and enlarge every glint of Christian meaning.

In life we get back what we give out. And if our spirit is one of appreciation and alertness, our own best selves are mirrored to us in what we read and see and do and think.

Prayer—Give us eyes to see all hidden truth and beauty, dear Lord, as we go through the days. And make our souls so lovely that they will magnify all loveliness.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

FRIDAY.

“AMIDST PETRA'S MYSTERIES.”

“Unto you it is given to know the mystery.”—Mark 4:9-12.

I have never written a book, nor yet a long article, on mysterious Petra, “The red rose city, half as old as time,” although I have repeatedly visited it, and clamored over its brilliantly-colored hills, and explored its strange cuttings in the living rock.

I do not believe that the bookish visitors are right in their interpretation of the meanings of the long-lost city itself, or of its rock-cut chambers. I cannot see it as a caravan trade entrepot, nor yet as a vast cemetery. I think Petra was probably either a summer resort for Egypt; or, likelier, a religious shrine city.

Petra stands for the unknown and the unknowable. Human life is filled with mysteries that will be solved only when “we know fully.”

Prayer—Life's zest is in its uncertainties; and we thank Thee, our Father, that Thou hast reserved so much for that time when “we shall know fully, even as we are known fully.”—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SATURDAY.

“OUR INVINCIBLE ALLY.”

“If God is for us, who is against us?”—Rom. 8:26-31.

Do we feel that we are living in a hostile world? No, never; for it is God's world. Does fate seem against us? No, never; for God is for us.

Whoever has given himself to God has thenceforth no right to be other than triumphant. His Lord rules on high. His Lord rules over the affairs of men. “To doubt would be disloyalty, to falter would be sin.”

Having such an ally, infinite, ready and all-wise, is to go through life with head proudly lifted, with feet confidently moving forward. Evil circumstances are quietly brushed aside. They are only cobwebs in the way of God's host.

Prayer—Forgive our foolish fears, Thou Captain of our salvation. Cause us to realize Thy puissance, to exult in Thy mastery. May it be enough at all times for us to know that Thou art for us.—Amen.

THE POWER IN QUIETNESS.

HERBERT G. COUNCIL, JR.

"Be still, and know that I am God."—Ps. 46:10.

"Be still." How far away the suggestion of those words seems from much of our reality. If there is one thing we are not, it is still. We are obsessed with a nervous restlessness. We cannot be content to settle down to anything. Whatever we are, we must be going somewhere else. Whatever we are doing, we must be twitching with impatience to do something new.

A short time ago the president of a great eastern university expressed his concern about the disintegration of college life caused by the exodus of men who poured out of the college as soon as their Friday or Saturday lectures were over, and did not come back again until they had to come on Monday morning. How well that links up with the conditions which existed at the College of William and Mary during my four years there. When boys and girls who thus have been taught to be restless all through their college years go out to be builders in the towns and cities where they live, they will continue to be restless. They go chasing after trivial satisfactions without even knowing that greater satisfactions existed.

Our civilization knows little of silence. We fill our world instead with a noise and fury of haste. As long as we can be doing something, we feel normal, and the practical mind looks on stillness suspiciously as though it were only idleness. Speed has for us a divine intoxication. If only we confided that we must be moving effectively. So the streets clash and roar with cars, and men and women hurry on their business or to their other engagements, and out of the rushing, swirling current of the day we emerge at evening a little dizzy but virtuous, having checked off all the memoranda from our schedule and kept time with the hurrying clock. Are we really as sure as we seem to be that we have grasped the method of effective living? Are we sure that we go farther by being so alertly on our feet and so little on our knees? Are we sure that we are right in assuming that we have no time for quiet churches and all the time that is necessary for clattering offices and noisy stock-market and the bargain counters of crowded stores? Or does there creep into our minds in some luminous moment the uncomfortable suggestion that, after all, this whirling activity of ours may look to the infinite eyes like the riding of children on a merry-go-round? We pay our money for the chance to climb upon the hobby-horse of our particular preference. We listen delightedly as the music of our mechanical world begins. That platform begins to turn beneath us, slowly at first and then faster, until the merry-go-round and the music alike are racing madly; and on the hobby horses, as they bob up and down, we lift our heads happily with our feet flying in the stirrups and our hands on the bridle-rein; and then presently the speed begins to slacken, the illusion of our journey subsides, the music gradually turns to silence, and a little vaguely we climb down to earth because the ride is done.

If we are at all conscious of our predicament, and we have already begun to wish for something better than the restlessness by which so many of us are possessed, then we shall listen with a kind of eager hopefulness to those great words, "Be still, and know that I am God," uttered by those ancient men who knew what religion meant and means.

Certainly without an inner stillness we can never possess some of the great enrichments of our world. You cannot listen to music while you walk up and down a roaring street. You cannot talk about things that involve your sensitive emotions in the clatter of a factory. You cannot become intimately close to another man's soul in the confusion of a crowd. You must be still before you can be aware of the great backgrounds of beauty which may lie behind the pressure of our unregulated chaos. And if this be true of the loveliest human values, it is still more greatly true in the realization of God. We must be still if we would know him. We must be quiet if we would sense the infinite beyond the finite which is so noisy and so near.

The question is, are you willing to learn to be still? You must be hushed if you would find God. And as we grow older we will understand that better. Prayer does not mean a clamorous petition for benefits. It does not mean the recitation of a formula. The great prayer is the attunement of ourselves with the greater self of God, that our desires, even as they find spontaneous expression, may also be refined; that our sense of littleness may be lifted up into God's largeness, and that all our scattered purposes may be brought into a focus in our consciousness of Him. You are not apt to gain the power of an effective silence like that unless you are willing to take pains about it. You need to make a time and to have a place where you can go down on your knees, quite free from interruption or the fear of it, and try to speak to God, and even more to try to let God speak to you. As one grows in spiritual consciousness, it is possible to attain an inner quiet before God even in the noisiest and most unlikely places.

I know now that it is possible for questions to arise. How can we be still before God when we do not know who or what God is? The time is full of questioning as to God's nature and even as to His existence. Why should we talk about praying until we have proved that there is some objective fact to whom we pray? The answer is that prayer itself is the way of proof. God cannot be found at the end of a syllogism. God cannot be experienced if we hold Him off at arm's length and defy Him to demonstrate himself. That attitude makes religious experience impossible, exactly as the same attitude would make impossible the contact of human friends. The reality of God is not a thing to be settled in brawling debate. It is something that they alone can know who have entered into its immense and thrilling consciousness, who have felt their little personalities to be in the presence of God's majestic otherness, who have lifted up the empty cup of their own limitations and have felt it filled, and have come forth from their communion knowing that they have been united with reality because a quality of life more real, more brave, and more abundant has been aroused in them.

Quietness before God and the power which it produces is no new experience. Look back and consider the mighty ones of religious history. Abraham was aware of God in the silence of the plains, and in him was born a faith in his own destiny which made him the creator of a nation. Moses in the solitude of the desert became aware of God's glory in the vision of the burning bush, and back he went to Egypt, his soul clothed with the power of a divine commission to set a people free. David communed with God in the pastures of Bethlehem. Amos the prophet and John the Baptist, heard the message which kindled their souls to flame, as they dwelt in the solitudes above the Jordan; and Paul the apostle went apart

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We are all looking forward to our "Home Coming day" for the Christian Orphanage children—to be held Sunday, Sept. 6th. This is an annual affair. It is the day the Orphanage invites all the children who have gone out, back home again. In other words it is a family reunion for the orphanage children. It is a day when they come back home and see each other and talk over days spent here and the happenings when they were children here.

The management is looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to having them back home again. We are extending to each former boy or girl who once had a home here, an invitation to come back on Home Coming day. There is nothing that brings the real joy to one's heart as that of going home. The writer left his old home forty years ago to establish a home of his own. During these forty years we just have a desire often to go back to the old home and look at the fields we helped to plough and the meadows we used to mow. We like to look at the old spring where we would quench our thirst when we came in from the field hot and tired and hungry too. How refreshing the cool water was to a hungry boy. We still get a real joy going back to the old home.

The Christian Orphanage is the only home many of the boys and girls remember and it is still the old home to them, though many of them now have a home of their own and families; but they enjoy a day at the old home seeing each other and looking over the fields they helped to cultivate while here.

We are glad to invite them back on "Home Coming Day."

BUILDING THE BETTER WAY.

Liquor Problem.

For a group of religious leaders and teachers to meet and ignore this phase of our social life is to allow a poisonous serpent to become a pet of the home. This problem as it exists is probably one of the greatest social menaces that we have had to face for the last century. The subtlety in which it is brought before the youth of our land, and the decency by which it makes its appearances, is alarming. On July 9, 1935, both daily papers of our state capital carried articles showing a comparative statement of conditions of June a year ago and June of 1935. Drunkenness had increased by leaps and bounds. Drunken driving had increased a hundred per cent. Other law violations seventy-five per cent. The very next issue of the same paper had an article on the front page telling the public that a certain politician in the state said the A. B. C. system was the solution to the liquor problem. To cap the climax, he brought out how much the sale of liquor had brought into the treasury of the state. We have a part in helping to prevent this. We must teach our youth the evil effects of all alcoholic beverages. I had rather walk the muddy streets, drive a car over rough roads, or have the responsibility of teaching my own child, than to have smoothly paved streets and roads built with blood money from taxes on liquor at the expense of human lives.

War Problem.

I pity the mother and father, yea the professed Christian parents of our nation, who can sleep soundly every night under present conditions. War clouds are arising at practically every cardinal point. We have not, and will not, live to see the debt of the last war paid. A war that cost the world more than any other single expenditure in the history of the world. It has been estimated that we spent enough money for that war to build a church and school accessible to every citizen on the globe, to erect a hospital for every twenty thousand population and properly endow it with perpetual care for the sick. It took ten million of the youth of the world by death, and wounded for life twice that many more, and left its immoral effect upon us. The world can not afford another such conflict. Our part in building a better way for those who come after is to prevent another such conflict. We need leaders who can lead the people to think aright and act aright. It may be that in your Sunday school class there is a boy or girl who will be that leader.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

for three years in Arabia in order that he might meditate upon the meaning of the new gospel which he was to preach. These men were changers of their worlds, but first of all they were men of prayer. So was Martin Luther, so was John Wesley, and so, (to name the name which is above every name) was Jesus. He never gave his disciples elaborate reasons for believing in God. He only desired that they should look and see in him the fact of the power which he had drawn from the days when he had communed alone upon the hills of Nazareth and the nights when he would go up into the mountains and kneel there for hours while his soul was at one with God.

And now if you should ask more specifically for the conditions under which God may come to us, and before which we shall be still in awareness and in wonder, I would name three.

I. The first of these is the beauty of the created world. There are times when nothing is so convincing of God as the impression of something that is very beautiful, so ineffably beautiful that we can only feel in it a depth of meaning impossible to express. When we go into the presence of the grace or the grandeur of nature. In such times and in such places, I think you must have felt, as I have felt, a strange meaning of ecstasy and pain. Through the woods, especially by quiet waters in the evening when the fringe of forest is mirrored in the lake, and radiance of the sunset begins to spread over the western horizon, every sense of sight and sound cries out for very joy, and yet with joy unsatisfied that seeks for something larger than itself. Something immense is there, something that exalts the heart and leads it forward with the promise of an infinity of satisfaction glimpsed but not attained; and in such moments, beyond all understanding, but in the heights of consciousness, one is aware of God.

II. In the second place, consider the lives around you. Very often people pass in front of us and stand round us all day and we never see them. We see them with our physical eye, but with our souls we never see them. The result is that we never perceive what they really are. We think of them and treat them as implements in the day's work, impersonal cogs in a meaningless routine. "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" said St. John, and his question might well be expressed in another way. He that will not see God where He is visible, how may he hope to see Him in the invisible? The significance in the human lives around us lies in the fact that they are not merely human. Through the human, in every soul which is trying to be honest, faithful and courageous, the glory of God is working. And in these people, if we could perceive them, the very hands of God the Creator are fashioning His immediate work.

III. And finally, there is that realization of God which is nearest and most intimate of all. St. Paul expressed the fact of it in immortal words when he wrote in his epistle to the Romans, "Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that it, to bring Christ down from above); Or, who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead). But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart." The beauty of the Christian experience is that the very glory of God can dwell in us and that we may dwell in Him. The process of discovering God is not a gazing into the distance. It is a recognition of that which already may be beginning to enter into our inmost selves. And in some great hour of joyful surprise we suddenly perceive that which is taking place in our own souls and cry like Jacob, "Behold the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not." The more you look into that which is deepest and highest in your own life, the more you perceive the presence there of God.

Be still, then, and know. Be still before the beauty of the created earth. Be still before the manifold human drama of all the lives which have been lighted by some gleam of the divine. Be still to contemplate the experience which your own fullest living will daily bring to you. "Be still, and know that I am God."

"GOD'S FORGETFULNESS."

"None of his transgressions that he hath committed shall be remembered against him."—Ezekiel 18:21-24.

God's forgetfulness is one of the divine mysteries. How strange that He, the all-knowing, can forget anything. How wonderful that He, the Omnipresent, can put any of our sins behind His back!

It is not strange that God should remember our evil deeds. We cannot ourselves get them out of our minds, try our best. If we do not repent of them, God will not forget them; but if we repent, and trust in God's forgiving mercies, He blots our sins out of His thought.

Equally strange it is that, if we sin, God will forget our righteous deeds. Not one of them shall be remembered, as Ezekiel says. Our sin has obliterated them. Our sin has placed us outside of God's favoring memory.

Prayer—Infinite Judge of all the earth, wilt Thou not do right? We rejoice that we can rely on Thy forgiveness, if we seek it. We rejoice even in Thy stern condemnation when we sin, for it also is in mercy. Thy memory and Thy forgetting are both of Thy love.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

MAN-MAKING.

We are all blind until we see
 That in the human plan
 Nothing is worth the making if
 It does not make the man.

Why build these cities glorious
 If man unbuilded goes?
 In vain we build the work, unless
 The builder also grows.

—Edwin Markham.

POISE

By F. M. DUNAPHANT.

Poise is one of the most important things that anybody can possess. It is a great deal more besides bearing or carriage of body. It is a significant manifestation of the mental and spiritual side of man's nature. It is the index to character, the handmaiden to virtue. It is an oil ballast that is stored in every staunch ship of life, a ballast that can be readily pumped from the central storage tank into the starboard bunkers to trim the ship whenever it is buffeted by any of life's violent storms.

In short, poise is man's stabilizer, is means of self-control, and the main support of his courage and nobleness.

Poise helps to keep the body and mind in a healthful condition. It calms the nerves, placates wrath, and drives worry away when the body needs rest and sleep. It seals the lips when silence is more golden than utterance.

Poise is judgment's chief attribute. It was Dryden who said: "Men of unbounded imagination often want the poise of judgment."

Lack of poise keeps jails, hospitals, insane asylums, bankrupt courts, and almshouses filled.

It can be truly said that there can be no enduring greatness without poise. An outstanding deed or action performed by a person may be the means of raising him up from the common mass and placing him upon the pinnacle of fame, but unless he has poise to keep his balance he will fall.

As we read the lives of men and women who achieved fame and held it, we marvel at the calm, graceful manner in which they conducted themselves through great crises. Our small natures and lack of poise make us wonder why they did not make an ostentatious display of their powers. We also wonder why they were seemingly able to ignore the libelous attacks made upon their characters, since they were so often able to ruin those who sought to defame and ruin them. Poise kept them from yielding to the dictates of their lower natures.

Poise is developed only by those who are willing to pay the price. The price is great, it is true; but the reward is still greater.

Those who have poise have developed it by clear, unprejudiced thinking, self-constraint, self-control, correct bodily carriage, industry, well-formulated plans, tact, determination, persistency, and moderation in all things.

Song of Christian Workmen

By Thomas Curtis Clark

Our Master toiled a carpenter
Of busy Galilee;
He knew the weight of ardent tasks
And oftentimes, wearily,
He sought, apart, in earnest prayer
For strength, beneath his load of care.

He took a manly share of work,
No thoughtless shirker he.
From dawn to dusk, before his bench,
He labored faithfully.
He felt just pride in work well done
And found rest sweet, at setting sun.

His Father worked, and he rejoiced
That honest toil was his—
To whom was given grace to know
Divine mysteries:
And shall not we find toiling good
Who serve in labor's brotherhood?

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Hardecastle and their two children, Jane and Hardy have recently visited in the home of Mrs. Hardecastle's father at Luray, Virginia. It was Mrs. Hardecastle's first visit with her new stepmother.

Rev. G. D. Hunt of Roanoke, Alabama, says that he has been in revival meetings for the past seven weeks. These meetings mean a great deal to the churches, and especially to those where service is held only once a month.

Miss Emily Carleton of Winter Park, Florida, secretary of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, shared in the Florida Christian Endeavor Convention last week-end at Miami by telling of the recent North American Youth Conference at Lakeside, Ohio.

Rev. Murdock W. Butler of Gulf Mills, Pennsylvania, was a pleasant caller on the editor of The Christian Sun recently. Rev. Mr. Butler was twice pastor of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, and has spent some time recently renewing old acquaintances and visiting with his friends there.

Rev. Joseph W. Fix of Urbana, Illinois, has recently visited in his home at Burlington, North Carolina. On the way back to his church he preached last Sunday morning at the First Christian Church at Richmond, Virginia, and at the evening hour preached in Washington, D. C., for Rev. W. C. Hook.

THE GOSPEL OF LABOR.

This is the Gospel of Labor—
 Ring it, ye bells of the kirk—
 The Lord of love came down from above

To live with the men who work.
 This is the rose that he planted
 Here in the thorn-cursed soil—
 Heaven is blessed with perfect rest;
 But the blessing of earth is toil.

Henry Van Dyke.

PASTOR WANTED.

Rev. M. A. Pollard, our pastor for the last thirteen years, having resigned Smithwood Church, to the sorrow of the church and community, leaves us without a pastor. Anyone interested in this church for half time work is requested to get in touch with the undersigned.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

Those who voted for me to become editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN gave me a very interesting job. I am learning things. The second month was even more thrilling than the first. Some of the things I like to know, and some—well, we'll just forget them, if we can, which we probably can't.

I now know the number of subscribers to the paper, how many are paid up to date, and how many are ready to be cut off of the subscription list. I also know how some of the people feel about their Church Paper. For instance:

"Please discontinue the paper until I renew my subscription which I will do as soon as it is convenient. I expected my paper to stop as soon as it expired."

Here's where I got a real thrill: "Let me congratulate you on your splendid work as editor of THE SUN. Frankly, I would doubt your ability to fill so big a job were it not for the fact that you are already doing it successfully. Inclosing check for one year's subscription." I like this letter because of its frankness—and because of the check.

THE HATCHET.

I may not be like George Washington in most respects, but it appears that I will have to use the hatchet and at least cut some limbs off the cherry tree.

Letters have gone to all subscribers who are not paid up to date, telling them the sad story and expressing a sincere desire that they will either send the cash for renewal or say when we may expect it. Quite a number have responded—to the delight of all those interested in the paper. But many have not. The order of the Southern Convention is that not any shall be carried more than a year. That order will be carried out with the next issue of the paper. Unless a few hundred subscribers send in their renewal immediately on receipt of this paper, this will be the last one to come.

"THIS HURTS ME."

"This hurts me more than it does you" children have heard parents say, but likely did not believe it. Neither will some of those who have received statements relative to THE CHRISTIAN SUN subscription believe that it hurts me to send them out, and just breaks my heart to drop the names from the mailing list.

Some people seem to think that a statement that a subscription is due is a "dun" or a demand for payment, a sort of annoyance that should not be sent. That really is not what this is; it is simply a reminder, and some people appreciate it.

When it comes to dropping a name, I think in terms of a home that will no longer have the Church Paper bringing its weekly message concerning religion, and not merely of a financial loss to the paper itself. There may be children in the home or aged people going toward the sunset of life, or active adults who need strength to live Christian lives in a time like this. The paper undertakes to aid those people in their living, and when they discontinue it this writer wonders what kind of a substitute they are going to use. Will it be a daily with its news of crime, or a cheap magazine, or the movies? Is there a substitute for the Church Paper? How can a church family afford to be without the help which comes to them from reading it? This is why I regret to discontinue any Church Paper, and make every effort possible to continue subscriptions.

LABOR SUNDAY MESSAGE, 1936.

(Issued by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, through its Department of the Church and Social Service.)

Requested to be read in the churches on Labor Sunday, September 6, 1936.

On a day in the spring of this year this wireless message came from London: "Edward VIII, after visiting the great new liner, 'Queen Mary', and the squalid Glasgow slums, turned to someone near and asked, 'How do you reconcile a world that has produced this mighty ship with the slums we have just visited?'"

That question has to do with more than an accidental contrast. It focuses the drastic interrogation which the Christian mind and heart must direct to our whole civilization now.

How can we reconcile a world which provides, on the one hand, luxury and freedom for the few, and a sordid, drab, and pinched existence for the many? For the Christian conscience there can be no reconciliation while these facts remain. We cannot merely look the other way. Rather, we must look straight at the harsh reality and never be at rest until we have set in motion redeeming social purposes which can change old facts to new ones, juster, fairer, and more kind.

Our danger today is that the discontent with social and economic evils which these recent tragic years have roused may try to satisfy itself with soft compromise. We are in danger of looking at the ship and forgetting the slums. As the first signs of industrial recovery begin to appear and men's energies launch out with a reviving boldness, we may think that record of the depression years. We may imagine that unemployment, poverty, the disintegration of families and the disillusionment of millions of people, old and young, will somehow take care of themselves. The ships of our economic fortunes are on the high seas again, we think. Never mind the cost at which they were put there.

But this cost we must mind. It is intolerable to the Christian spirit that we should forget the human havoc which economic depression has caused, and which no haphazard business revival can possibly cure. Out of the crucible of these recent years, one iron purpose should be forged; namely, the will that nothing shall divert us from the continuing effort to find those necessary ways of readjustment—whether through voluntary cooperative organizations, through taxation, or through other practicable social controls—by which those who are now doomed to a cramped existence may be set free into larger life.

The Christian influence ought to bring to our contemporary world three things

First, a Compassionate Heart

Christian individuals and Christian churches must be sensitive to the need of all who suffer. We must not allow ourselves to forget, not let the community forget, the men and women in industrial towns reduced to a bleak and almost hopeless existence through unemployment; the undernourished children in families where relief budgets are too small; the sweatshops and child labor in some industries; the wretchedness of those who live around the shafts of idle coal mines; the exploited, sharecroppers and homeless migrants in many of our agricultural

JESUS THE CARPENTER.

If I could hold within my hand
The hammer Jesus swung,
Not all the gold in all the land,
Nor jewels countless as the sand,
All in the balance flung,
Could weigh the value of that thing
Round which his fingers once did cling.

If I could have the table Christ
Once made in Nazareth,
Not all the pearls in all the sea,
Nor crowns of kings to be
As long as men have breath,
Could buy that thing of wood he made—

The Lord of Lords who learned a trade.

Yea, but his hammer still is shown
By honest hands that toil,
And round his table men sit down;
And all are equals, with a crown
Nor gold nor peals can soil;
The shop of Nazareth was bare—
But brotherhood was builded there.

—Charles M. Sheldon.

areas; the Negroes denied equal justice; and all others upon whom the bitter pressure of unfair conditions fall. We are bound to remember that it was with such as these that our Master identified himself when he said: "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it not unto Me."

Second, a Courageous Mind

The Christian conscience does not make us more nearly infallible than other men in technical details. It does not equip us to speak dogmatically on precise political or economic give a clarity of central judgment. programs. But it ought to, and does. It turns upon all questions the light of one supreme consideration. Because it believes that all men are the children of God, it believes that the only right ideal for any community is one in which there shall be freedom for all men to develop in thought and in action the best that is in their personalities. Therefore, the Christian spirit must stand like a flaming sword against all frightened attempts to bring upon America that shackling of human thought and that stifling of independent speech which lie like a dark shadow on those lands where dictatorship prevails. The teachers' oath bills introduced in many legislatures and passed by some, the "gag laws" introduced in Congress, the vicious assaults upon academic freedom, and ultimately upon academic honesty, the widespread denial of the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, which have been launched by sinister influences under the mask of patriotism, are denials not only of political democracy, but of the Christian faith in the dignity of the human soul; and with them, therefore, the Christian Church can have no part nor lot.

Third, a Faith in the Will of Christ

In these immediate days when the conditions of our world have become so ominous we need the heroic confidence of this faith. There is too much bitterness between the nations. The conflicts of economic interest and the antagonisms between economic classes are turning away from patient reasonableness toward forcible repression on one side and violence on the other. Many today believe that our social unrest will lead to revolution, and that the old hatreds between the nations are leading inevitably to new war. But those who follow Christ will yield to no such impotent fatalism. In thought, in conversation, and in our influence on public policy, we must set forward and persistently support those measures of cooperation and constructive service through which a better social order may be peaceably achieved. We must resist the policy of increased armaments and the growth of military control, and unflaggingly urge the participation of the United States in study and adjustment among the nations of those inequalities, political and economic, from which wars take their rise.

Christians should follow the pioneering example of those who, like Kagawa, make love the controlling principle in personal, economic, and international relationships. Such men may be hated, misunderstood, persecuted, executed even; but they can be the seed for the future. Though the pathway leads to a cross we remember that the cross is the sign not of defeat, but of final triumph.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LABOR DAY

In 1822 the Knights of Labor paraded the streets of New York. Two years later they voted that the first Monday in September should be the date of all such parades by labor. On March 15, 1887, Colorado voted to make this a legal holiday, the first such vote in America. Other states followed suit, and then the Federal Government. On next Monday we will keep holiday, supposedly in honor of laborers. We call it Labor Day, but actually is it a day of rest for laborers, and for most people it is either not observed at all or is used for the final holiday of the summer.

We are not supposed to be class conscious in America. The caste system of India, and the social distinctions of the Old World we are supposed to dislike. But we are familiar with such phrases as "capital and labor," "employer and employee," and "rich and poor." And they have some meaning in the life of those who struggle to live. It still happens in America that when a great city council votes increased pay to its employees the increase goes only to those who are already receiving much while those who receive little get no increase with which to meet rising costs of living. We still have some class consciousness in America.

Labor recognizes these distinctions and is becoming more and more vocal in political and industrial life. While there is not now harmony among labor leaders they are being heard by politicians and may yet dictate much of our legislation.

Labor Day is an excellent time to bridge the chasm that is apparent between capital and labor. Class war will not aid any group in America, but class cooperation will work to the mutual advantage of all. Both capital and labor have a right to just rewards, but neither can expect to prosper without the other. Strikes and lock-outs are industrial war, and war is destructive. Cooperation is the path of progress, and the sooner both capital and labor learns this lesson the better it will be for all concerned.

F. C. L.

LABORERS AND RELIGION.

In the "no man's land" between capital and labor stands the Church and headed by a bleeding Christ. Sometimes deserted by the rich and often derided by the poor, the Church of Jesus preaches its gospel to both classes when they will listen. To the one it says, "sell and give." To the other it says, "come, and I will give you." To both it says, "practice the Golden Rule."

One of the strange things is that laborers turn their back upon the Carpenter of Nazareth and the Church which He began. A recent paper carries the picture of Communists shooting at the stone statue of Jesus. What could they have against Him? He really practiced having "all things in common"; His hands were roughened by daily labor in the carpenter's shop; and after beginning his public ministry He had no place to lay His head. His hands never laid burdens on men's backs, but His bleeding heart took them up to Calvary. How can suffering humanity hate this Divine One?

There is some truth in the belief of laborers and agitators that the Church sometimes forgets that all men are brothers. It still sometimes happens that church people value the church members by the amount of their contributions to the church. There is enough of this to make some of us heart-sick. But the Church probably is less guilty on this line than most organizations. We know that loyalty, service, sacrifice, and love mean more than money. Jesus based His life on love, and many in the Church do the same.

The Church is the sustaining influence in the world. To it come rich and poor. In its fellowship belong people of all races and stations of life. No group has more favor than the laborer, for the Master Himself said: "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The Church needs to re-assert its power of redemption for all classes, and save laborers from false leaders by bringing them into a real brotherhood headed by the Carpenter of Nazareth.

WHY I PREACH CHRIST.

In this topic are two simple, but very significant questions. Why do I preach? And why do I preach Jesus Christ?

The answer to the first is a personal testimony. It may not jibe with the experience of others, but it is mine. Theorists of various kinds may be able to find flaws with this testimony, and may explain it in language far different from mine. But I must still live with my thoughts, and seek for growth on the basis of past experience.

At the age of fifteen, at an altar where Christians prayed, I asked God to forgive my sins, and to make me His servant. In response there came a peace of soul, and a definite consciousness that God had work for me to do. The joy that was mine I wanted to share with others. But the joy soon began to fade because there was a growing consciousness that my work was to be that of a preacher, perhaps in a foreign land, and I did not want to preach, and was afraid of strangers. Then at another altar where Christians prayed, I offered my life to the One who is Life, and from that minute to this my real job has been to preach.

In May of this year the Southern Convention of my Church offered me an attractive job as editor and promotional agent. I have hesitated to accept because I still want to preach to a living, visible church that meets in a house dedicated to the worship of God.

Some are saying that the way of salvation is for preachers to stop preaching for at least two years. Others feel that the radio is quite sufficient. In my humble opinion St. Paul was quite right, and the world will be saved, if it ever is saved, by what some then and now call "the foolishness of preaching."

But some will say, "Why preach Christ? That is a fair question, and I am glad to answer.

I know of many other philosophers and religious leaders. It is not ignorantly that I worship at the foot of a cross. I see other philosophies in daily practice, and do not like them.

By Christ I do not mean something apart from Jesus. I mean both the human and divine as represented in Jesus of Nazareth and the spiritual person who came from the tomb on the first Easter Morn. I preach the Christ because He was both human and divine. That is the way we are, and He was like us, only He gave the divine first place in His life and we make it secondary or try to crowd it out entirely. He was what we want to be when we are at our best. He is our ideal of what a person should be. No other compares with Him in perfection of character. Even Pilate could find no fault in Him, and those who yelled for His death could give no reason for the yelling. I shall not stop preaching Christ because He was a Jew, and not a German, or American.

Neither shall I quit because His ideals do not fit into the American scheme of business and social ethics. The Golden Rule is still superior to the rule of gold. The movies, dance halls, and bathing beaches have not yet presented ideals equal to those of Jesus. Until they do, I choose Jesus. Critics of religion, and radicals of various kinds cannot yet point with pride to the ideals and idealists that they have developed which are superior to the Sermon on the Mount and Mary Magdalene. Until they do, I choose the One who wrote on the ground and waited for those without sin to cast stones at the woman taken in adultery, and who said to her, "Neither do I condemn thee. Go and sin no more."

I preach Christ because the things He taught fit into my experience perfectly when I test them by living. He taught honesty, truth, humility, faith, loyalty, obedience, forgiveness, love. Tested in life, they work better than the opposite. They did for Him, and they do for me. That is why I tell others about Christ.

When trouble comes I need help to keep up courage. When work is heavy and friends fail, I need companionship. Jesus, the Christ, said that He would be with me. He is.

I want a place to go to when I leave this world, as I must do soon. Jesus taught that love and life will triumph over death. He said he was going to prepare a place for those who love Him and will come again and receive them unto Himself. I am sure to like the place He will prepare. Eternity will be short enough for there, but it is too long for here, or any other place offered by men. Jesus practiced His belief in immortality and found it to work. I want it to work in my life and the life of my friends. Therefore I preach Jesus, the Christ.

For these and many other reasons I preach Christ, and love to do it.

WORLD SUNDAY SCHOOLS

I wish to present a few interesting extracts from Sir Harold MacKintosh's opening address at the World's Sunday School Convention held in Oslo, Norway in July. Mr. MacKintosh is president of the Association.

The slogan of the convention was "Christ, the Hope of the World," and the president declared that Christ is the only hope of the world and "we seek to win the children of all nations to Him." He further said, "The world has been increasingly putting its hope in material and scientific progress only to find that without a spiritual basis these things are not progress but the very reverse."

It is also very important to win the children to Church membership. "The ultimate aim" Mr. MacKintosh says "is to lead the children into full Church membership." He quoted the familiar saying, "He who plants a tree, or fells and saws it into planks makes a bench of the planks does well, but he who, sitting on the bench, teaches a child does better than the rest; the first three have added to the common capital of humanity, the last has added something to humanity itself." He reminds us that the work of the Association is a world-wide movement. It is an army of youth of all nations numbering close to fifty million scholars and teachers, and it is international, interracial and interdenominational.

"There are three sides to our work," he says. "First, to sustain the Sunday schools in all Christian lands. Secondly, to assist all missionary societies in non-Christian lands with their Sunday school work. And, Thirdly, to promote Christian brotherhood, peace and good will among all peoples."

The purpose of the Conventions, held once in every four years, is to review the tasks, to exchange experiences and to gain fresh inspiration. The reports given from the different countries by delegates from these countries constitute "living pictures of the world wide enterprise." The convention was called a spiritual League of Nations working for the healing of the nations through the children of all lands. "The Sunday schools in every land," said Mr. MacKintosh "are indeed the hope of the future."

MY PART IN BUILDING THE BETTER WAY.

By REV. J. E. McCAULEY.

Another Picture.

Thus far in this discourse we have talked on the liabilities that confront us. At this point let us look at the bright side. As we think of our part individually in helping to build a better way, let us see the whole of life. We have to look at the bad side, but when we do we sometimes say, "What's the use?" and feel like giving up. But when we remember that Sunday school enrollment has grown to thirty-seven million Sunday school pupils, we should take courage. This army has been mustered in less than one hundred and sixty years. We also have a corps of teachers and officers in the United States numbering more than two million. We often hear tirades against these people for thus and so. But we must remember that they are not working for pay, they are not working for power and prestige. They are working for a cause they love. They are trying to establish the better way.

We must take an inventory of ourselves. Are we prepared to cope with the above-named problems? Our part is a more consecrated self to the cause and way of Christ. We must study the problem and find out our need and a more adequate way. This the executive committee has undertaken to work out for this convention and the local school as well. We realize that the Worker's Guide Book as presented by the executive committee is inadequate, but it is a help and if used will be a benefit to your school. If you are willing to reconsecrate yourself to a task, to study these problems with an eye single to the cause of Christ and then to go back to your Sunday School and try to help the church and school to study them and do something about it, I believe that we will make even greater progress in the next century than we have for the past 160 years.

As your speaker sees it, Christ's program of education is the only solution to this problem. Our people must know the needs of the world and nation, and each community. But we must know God's word as a basis. For in both the Old and the New Testament, great emphasis was on teaching. Christ climaxed this by his teaching on the mountain. The disciples were taught to pray and then He gave specific command to go into all the world and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever he had commanded them.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"For" or "against" is a fair description of present day attitudes. Ultimately personal attitudes center around a person. Principles may be the underlying motivating guide of many people, but principles, when related to conduct, have their expression in personality. No wonder Jesus said: "He that is not for me is against me." Jesus is the ultimate ideal in moral and spiritual attainment, and He is the center of all systems of Christian theology and doctrine. The devil is the personification of evil, and the goal of all sin and unbelief. Jesus or the devil is the final choice of every person. Every one is either "for" Jesus Christ or "against" Him. Consequently to be "against" Jesus is to be "for" the devil.

It is popular now to be "against" instead of "for." The recent national movement to reestablish the legal manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors was a direct appeal "against" a section in the Constitution of the United States and also "against" the faith and teachings of the churches and the Bible. It was a destructive and not a constructive appeal. That war of the newspapers, magazines and other current literature is as relentless as ever "against" Christianity in any form. The daily press, today, in most cases, is "against" the clergy, if the pulpit dares to express any public utterance concerning the current social, political and economic standards of the present day. As a matter of fact the press would like to enjoy its own freedom to be against every thing, and muzzle the pulpit and put a muffler on every moral reform movement, emanating from the churches.

The present day stress and strain over the economic situation can be analyzed on the same basis. Some people are "against" profits and prosperity, and will take any steps, in their power, to wage war "against" people who have money or become prosperous. There are not many very wealthy people in the world. The majority of people live below the level of real comfort. People who live below the average are responsive to any appeal to divide the wealth of the rich among the people. That is why the "share the wealth" movement has so many followers. It is "against" the rich and the prosperous. The present advocates of an economic system which will displace so called "capitalism"—incite their followers to rally "against" an imaginary evil. Political revolution thrives upon the emotion to be "against" instead of "for." War rests upon this basis of appeal. The genius of war is its power to resist and be against, either in the offense or on the defensive. Constructive policies may be born and arise from the ashes of fire swept battle fields, but these motives are not inherent in the spirit of war. War is against the best interests of humanity. It is against humanity itself.

The church, through the spirit of Christianity is "for" humanity. Its program is constructive. Its ideal is to build human character and save human life. The Gospel of Jesus Christ is against war. It is against exploiting races or nations. It is for peace and prosperity. It is for high moral ideals. It is for splendid character. It is for long life. It is for social uplift. It is for economic and social justice. It is for love. It would transform the wilderness and the solitary place into a fertile field. It is for progress. It is for pleasure and human happiness. It is for living faith and unending hope. The church—Christianity—is in the midst of great struggle. It is fighting for its life. Are you "for" or "against" it?

ARE TWO AGREED?

Diversity assures interest. Few things on earth are identical. The Creator of the world was versatile beyond finite conception. When it came to design and form, the beauty of the world is magnified by its variety. The rivers are not alike. Flowers in their beauty are dissimilar. No one's personality is identical with another, certainly our minds are different. We do not think alike; but even so, there is a possibility of agreeing to purpose and procedure. Jesus, on one occasion, said, "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven, for where two or three are gathered together in my name, there I am in the midst of them."

This has to do with prayer—prayer to God—that our hopes and our desires might be realized. Too often we fail to move forward for the lack of faith. All too frequently we carry our own burdens alone. We stand and allow our strength to diminish and our talents to waste, because we lack the courage to take our case to the Lord. The assurance of the minister is all inclusive. There is no question about the supply or His ability to grant according to our askings, but there is a great question about our agreement. In prayer, want takes a secondary place; need is paramount. We perhaps could agree on what we need, but might find ourselves in disagreement as to the amount necessary to satisfy us. Our wants are usually so much more extensive than our actual needs that agreement with oneself is difficult. There is plenty to pray for. In fact, when we find ourselves in prayer, things for which we would pray crowd in so rapidly that we fail to find words or time sufficient to express our desires. If we find it difficult to agree with ourselves, how much more difficult to bring ourselves into agreement with others. It is much easier to reach agreement in material matters than in spiritual realities. Man is agreed pretty well on what it takes to satisfy the material man, but he has always been at odds as to spiritual necessities.

Today, we literally give our interest to a multitude of values which, in the long ago, might have been designated as God's. Certainly we continue to worship the Unknown God when it is our privilege to know him through Christ. When we do come to know him, the chances are that we will be in accord, and agreement will not be difficult. The church, as we know it today, gives us concern. Her needs are numerous. Most of us are connected with a local church. We find it difficult to see the needs beyond our local church when the responsibilities within our own community are so enormous. Debts to be paid, improvements to be made, competent and inspiring leadership to be provided, all these call for ability and money. Are we justified in assuming outside obligations until our own house is set in order? When we think of our church as a whole, the task becomes more appalling. Churches within our fellowship faltering for the lack of proper leadership—failing to measure up to their own abilities for the lack of vision, declining in membership for the lack of the gospel plus the power of the spirit! When we think of our boards and institutions, how they are hindered and hampered for the lack of money and men, if we look at ourselves, all boasting goes from us and we find ourselves helpless in the presence of our needs. If we could only realize that all things are God's, and that we are His through

Dear Uncle Fletcher,

I am so glad that you are going to have a page in your paper for boys and girls.

I would like to have a child's story or two, and some questions about the Bible.

I hope that you will put my letter in your paper.

BOOKS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT

The great Jehovah speaks to us
In Genesis and Exodus;
Leviticus and Numbers see,
Followed by Deuteronomy.
Joshua and Judges sway the land,
Ruth gleans a sheaf with trembling hand.

Samuel and numerous Kings appear,
Whose Chronicles we wond'ring hear.
Ezra and Nehemiah now,
Esther, the beautiful mourner, show.
Job speaks in sighs; David in Psalms,
The Proverbs teach to scatter alms;
Ecclesiastes then comes on,
And the sweet Song of Solomon.
Isaiah, Jeremiah then
With Lamentations takes his pen,
Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's Lyres,
Swell Joel, Amos, Obadiah's.
Next Jonah, Micah, Nahum come,
And lofty Habbakuk finds room;
While Zephaniah, Haggai calls,
Wrapt Zechariah builds his walls,
And Malachi, with garments rent,
Concludes the ancient Testament.

HOW A GREEDY SNAKE CAME TO GRIEF

A man residing in Visalia, Cal., writes to a San Francisco paper an interesting story about a big bull snake which he captured in the mountains.

This species of snake, which is quite common on the Pacific coast, grows sometimes to be quite large, but is entireless harmless to human beings.

The Californian, being something of a naturalist, set himself to work to tame the snake, and, having a good deal of spare time on his hands, was able to teach Slippery Dick—the name he gave his strange pet—many tricks.
He taught him to come at call, to coil up, and to wave his folds about in imitation of dancing. He would coil up on the table, his head in the center of the coil, elevated about six inches in the air. The gentleman would place the handle of a small fan in his mouth, and then the snake would gently wave the fan to and fro, and thus keep the flies from his master's face.

He was as good as a cat to keep the old log-house free from mice. He often brought in ten or twelve in a day. His fondness for mice was his ruin. It happened in this way: One day the gentleman missed Slippery Dick, and tho he hunted and called all day, he could not find any trace of his pet. About a week after his disappearance, having occasion to explore the loft of the cabin in which he lived, he came across the remains of his old friend. Apparently, he had been more mouse-hungry than usual, and in his haste to satisfy his appetite had swallowed a live mouse, which killed him. Poor Dick! how surprised he must have been at such a result. It was a case of reward for gluttony. No doubt he repented when it was too late.

Now the doctors tell us that as the live mouse gnawed the life out of the snake, so strong drink gnaws at the vitals of the boy or the man who drinks it. It does not always kill its victim as quickly as the mouse did Slippery Dick, but it gnaws away until it brings him down in disease and drunkenness and despair.

The Bible says, "The drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty," and there are more boys and girls whose lives are sad and sorrowful because of father's or mother's intemperance than for any other cause. But those who are already drunkards will soon die off, and if all the boys and girls would vow to keep their bodies clean and pure, and grow up totalabstainers, this gnawing beast of intemperance would soon starve to death. What a happy world this would be then!

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

UNDERTAKING THE MOST DIFFICULT.

It is not the easy, but the hard, difficult, seemingly impossible things God has led man, or commanded him, to do. That which is impossible with man has ever been God's challenge to man. This develops courage, and the heroic, in man. The world had never known Columbus with his spirit of adventure and conquest, nor Lindberg with his skill and heroism, had not God made the boundless ocean and left man with feet and hands instead of with wings and feathers. God has ever challenged man to undertake the impossible.

This is the very spirit and heart of missions. It was as easy for the risen Christ, who then had all power both in heaven and on earth, to command the angels to evangelize the world, and do it in a six months' period, as it was for Him to command men—with all their infirmities and defects to "Go preach the gospel to all the creation."

As Rev. H. S. Hardeastle pointed out in THE SUN of August 27, "That is a command, not a pious hope. We disobey Christ at the peril of losing our own souls." And then this significant line is added by commentator Hardeastle, "The first missionaries soon found that their work was no joy-ride." But "the Gospel is power. It can go into most difficult places and transform life."

This last is indeed a lesson that we of the Southern Convention need to take to heart and learn thoroughly. We seem to be quite content with what we have—and are. Where is the spirit of adventure for Christ? Who of us is undertaking the untried, the impossible? Who is venturing out into new territory for Christ and our church—even here in the home land? Who, what pastor, what devout layman, or woman, is undertaking to even open a Sunday school, or preach the gospel, or plant a church in territory not yet reached by us, and where a Sunday school or a Church is really needed? Are all fields about us sufficiently "churched"? Are there no communities within our reach or range without Sunday schools and the teachings of Jesus? Have we reached the scope and limit of our enlargement and strength. If so the time is here and now when we, like the church at Antioch, need a baptism, a stirring up to new and impossible tasks, of the Holy Spirit. Has not the time arrived when we may enquire "Who will go for us?"

Then we may hope, some one of God's chosen may hope, to have the faith and courage, even as Isaiah had, to cry out "Here am I, send me?" Who indeed will go for us to undertake in his name, and for our sakes as a church and people, the difficult, the impossible? God is calling. He ever calls even weak man, and the church, to go for Him and conquer in His name.

J. O. ATKINSON

CEASING TO USE.

A recent Sunday school "Quarterly" suggests that "It would be better, perhaps, if we would cease to use the word 'missions' in connection with spreading the gospel." And then the author of the Quarterly in question proceeds to "cease" using the idea, as well as the word, "missions" in connection with the lesson he is supposed to elucidate, though the Scripture and Golden Text of the day and lesson are solely missionary. The author seems to have strained himself in his "lesson comment" to steer clear both of the word missions, and of what this mission—any section of the Scripture (Acts 11:19-21 to 13:12) plainly and very forcefully teaches. If just the scriptural verses with the golden text had been printed, and then the pages for the comment had been left blank, how much more valuable and impressive this lesson would have been.

A gentleman in renewing his subscription to his county paper for a year urged the publisher to leave his paper blank as he got so much more satisfaction out of the blank, than out of the printed portions.

No word of our every day speech is fraught with richer heritage and tradition, suggests greater courage and faith, has a more significant meaning and merit, nor is more worthy of veneration and immortality than the word "missions." Under that name, and for that word, with its sacrifice, more heroic courage, more dauntless daring for Christ and righteousness have been made than any other word not coined and sanctified by Scriptural usage. Lord Christ said "Go!" Well, millions can only carry out that supreme command by "going" through self-denial of means, by a devout faith in those who actually go, and by prayer for those who do go, and the power they have with God in winning souls to and through their Christ.

Missions! Abandon the word missions! Shall we abandon the Sabbath, and its season of worship, because many, very many, think of it only as a part of "the week-end"? Shall we cease to use many of our most sacred names, and practices, because many have already done so, and have substituted other names as milky, maudlin and meaningless as some of the words and ideas they would substitute for "missions"? "World-service" (?) for instance, just as Henry Ford, the American Tobacco Co., the Standard Oil Co., and certain big businesses are claiming that they are doing with and through their organizations that distribute their products throughout the world "for the service of mankind." "World Service."

SOCIETY NEWS.

HOLLAND.

The Junior Missionary Society of Holland Christian Church under the leadership of Mrs. L. J. Daughtrey has been doing a splendid piece of work and the interest manifested is most encouraging.

Miss Nelle Dixon Rawles is the president and with the cooperation of the parents, several projects have been realized. To begin with, their superintendent presented each one with a unique missionary calendar on which were the dates and typewritten programs for the year. The children presented the devotionals and programs at each meeting followed by a social good time with refreshments.

As a stimulus for attendance each child was given an animal sticker each time they were present with dues paid. These stickers were placed on the child's card at each meeting and the card presented to the child when finished.

The society was divided into two groups known as the rain barrels. One side had red barrels and the other blue and the plan was for each one to put a penny in the barrel each day when it rained.

Group 1 made a poster on the life of Moses and several lessons were spent studying it, then at the end a public program was given on a Sunday morning entitled "He Careth for You."

Both groups put on a Christmas program and Group 2 rendered a public Easter service.

The attendance this year has been unusually good; the apportionment has been raised through the annual bazaar, dues and rain barrels.

Group 1 made a special study of Mexico by taking a trip by stories and pictures. Each child was asked to bring pictures which were pasted on posters on the wall and a Mexican village cut-out was erected on the sand table.

Group 2 made a study of the map of Mexico at the first meeting and a jigsaw puzzle of the map of Mexico was enjoyed during the social hour. Composition books were then brought and the superintendent gave them 100 questions taken from five books on the people, occupation, churches, religion, schools etc. Much help was realized from Mrs. Neff, our missionary in Mexico who wrote several letters of information and sent lots of materials from her schoolroom.

A display of these materials was given at the school one morning and a collection of stamped sofa pillows which were colored and pressed by the children, along with a large package of post cards, posters, etc., was sent to Mrs. Neff in return for her wonderful help.

This society raised $5.00 more than their apportionment and are really proud to have gone over the top this much.

Besides their special missionary effort they gave their new minister and his bride a lovely shower of many useful and beautiful gifts. They also sent clothing to Mildred Hines at the Christian Orphanage at Elon College.

The August meeting was held at the lake near Suffolk, Va., ending with a trip to the movies. Thus ends a most interesting year for the Junior Missionary Society and they are already looking forward to the study of next year's work.

LIBERTY SPRING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Liberty Spring Christian Church has had a most successful year both spiritually and financially. They had the pleasure of meeting with the Societies of Beech Grove M. E. Church, Oakland Christian Church and Berea, Nansemond, at Beech Grove Church, Driver, Va., for the World Day of Prayer Service. A helpful and interesting service was enjoyed and a goodly number attended.

The Society met with the Berea, Nansemond Society to hear Mrs. R. L. Brewer teach the home mission book "Who Is Our Neighbor?"

They also accepted an invitation from the Holland Church to hear Mrs. Lee Britt of Suffolk teach the foreign book.

This society has enjoyed the fellowship of meeting with the different societies this past year and commend the idea to other societies for real fellowship and strength. They decided to take out memorials for three of their deceased members, so gave a lawn party in order to raise the amount.

The Society has raised the Conference Apportionments up to the present time and hope to be able to meet all the requirements for their year's work.

This information comes through Mrs. G. O. O'Berry, who is secretary of this wide awake group of consecrated women.

ROSEMONT.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Rosemont Christian Church held a very delightful luncheon meeting at their Spring Nite Box opening. Decorations and games appropriate to St. Patrick's Day were utilized and much appreciated and enjoyed, as were also the delicious viands served.

The Society is going ahead under the leadership of the new president, Mrs. D. D. Johnston, while their pastor's wife, Mrs. J. F. Morgan has shown very capable leadership in the study of the year's Study Books.

Mrs. H. C. Hedley is the secretary of this society and renders an efficient service in this office.

BUILDING THE BETTER WAY.

Conclusion.

In order to perfect this way, Jesus chose twelve men and sent them out into a social order far worse than the one we have today. He sent them into a world far larger than the world we have today, so far as the time it would take to contact and do the work we are to do. We can change this order as they changed theirs if we will do our part individually as they did theirs. That is my part and yours. If Walter Reid was willing to go to the canal zone and combat yellow fever for the sake of human life and medical science; if the Key brothers were willing to stay aloft for more than six hundred hours for the sake of winning an endurance record; if Professor Beebe was willing to go to the bottom of the ocean in an iron ball for the sake of discovery; if Richard Byrd was willing to go and stay for six months in the icy regions with a temperature of eighty degrees below zero for the sake of exploration; if Mahatma Ghandi is willing to fast for days and go with only scant clothing in order that he may get more liberty for his people; and if these early disciples were willing to give up all of life and die as martyrs for the better way, deeming it to be their part, what do we as Christians consider as our part? And what are we willing to do?

The history of the Monotheistic religion is that a conscientious effort to know and apply the word of God to daily life preceded every great revival. Moses gave the law and commanded its use. Ezra made it a living word among the people. Preceding every great revival in the Christian Epoch there has been a preaching of the word and teaching it diligently into the youth of the land. That was the fundamental purpose back of the organization of the Sunday school. The word of God, known, taught, lived and applied to these present day problems will bring a spiritual revival into our nation today. This is my challenge to you. This is my part in "Building a Better Way."

The infinite in man is his expansive and marvelous intelligence, in his capacities for love and sympathy, in his conscience and its law of righteousness, in his will and its power to subdue the wild cosmos, in its power to incarnate in human society the vision of the City of God.—Gordon.

The longer we hesitate over a difficult duty the less likely we are to do it. If a thing is right its difficulty makes no difference.—Anon.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

SUGGESTIONS ON CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

September is always the signal for increased activity in the society—perhaps you have been disbanded (I hope not) or have had a number of your members away on vacations, but now that the weather is cooler, and everyone is back again, let's not lose time but "catch a new hold" and move forward, "seeking the living way."

Our consecration topic for Sunday, September 6th, is "The Value of Man In God's Sight," and is truly one which should make us think a great deal. Outline your talks to bring out the differences in man and beast, and to show some of the advantages God has given to man. Then with these in mind discuss how sinful it is for man to sap his strength with bad habits and to destroy one another in war. Do not forget though that this is consecration night and plan for a period of real worship and consecration at the beginning or end of your meeting.

Sunday, Sept. 13th, is the second annual Founder's Day and I can make no suggestions to you except that you should secure the program which the International Union has outlined (41 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston) and carry out this observance as closely as possible.

Let's change the topic for September 20th to a question, "Does the Law of Love Work?" If you happen to have a blackboard why not write below the topic question a number of phrases of our life, such as at home, in school, business, social life, and others. Then assign each phase to an individual speaker who will give his ideas then lead a discussion (or the leader) on that phase. Finally write beside that phase the answer, yes or no, as determined by the society..

We have another question on Sunday, September 27th, "Are Missions Done For?" This time let's put our missionary committee to work and let them present to us some real facts on the question. They should be able to tell us of curtailed budgets but advancing work, and how in some fields the natives are beginning to take hold and support themselves, and other such examples.. If we make our meeting a "fact finding" one then we will be in a position to really answer this question intelligently..

Hymn—"I Choose Jesus."

Prayer—Thanking God for Christ, our greatest Friend.

WORK.

Work thou for pleasure.
Paint or sing or carve
The thing thou lovest,
Though the body starve.
Who works for glory
Misses oft the goal,
Who works for money
Coins his very soul.
Work for the work's sake,
Then, and it might be
That these things shall Be added unto thee.

—Kenyon Cox.

Hymn—"Jesus is All the World to Me."

Announcement of Topic—Scripture.
Leader's Introductory Talk:

It has been said that a friend is a person who knows all about you and loves you just the same. Jesus knows all about us, and He loves us—He is our friend. Even as He is our friend we must be friendly with others. It is easy for us to do little deeds of kindness for our chosen circle of friends. But if we are to be friends with Christ it means that we must be friendly with all people. Jesus was friendly with Mary and Martha and Lazarus and many others who loved Him; but He also befriended those who were despised—He did not hesitate in speaking to the woman of Samaria. As Jesus mingled with the multitudes He extended a hand of healing, comfort, friendship and blessing. He has told us, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." He has commanded us to love one another. If we desire to be friendly with Him we must not draw ourselves into one little clique of chosen friends, but we must have a real love for all people. Jesus laid down His life for those who loved Him; He also died for those who hated Him. To be a friend with Christ we must love all, even our enemies, and be willing to do a good deed for someone whenever the opportunity presents itself. Let each of us follow the footsteps of Jesus who is our great Example of a Friend.

Special Music.

For Discussion.

1. Tell of some of the homes that Christ visited. What effect did His visit have on these homes?
2. How do you think Christ would be received in the average home today? What preparations would be made for His visit?
3. Can we be friends with Christ and hold malice against any person?
4. The effect on our attitude toward all people if we really let Christ come into our lives.

Sentence Prayers.

Hymn: "What a Friend."

Mizpah Benediction.

WASHINGTON'S PRAYER

Almighty God: We make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in thy holy protection; that Thou wilt incline the heads of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to the government, and entertain a brother-affection and love for one another and for their fellow-citizens of the United States at large.

And finally that Thou wilt most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility, and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the Divine Author of our blessed religion and without a humble imitation of whose example in these things we can never hope to be a happy nation.

Grant our supplication, we beseech Thee, through Jesus Christ, our Lord.
Amen.

Every step not only brings us forward, but leaves a footprint behind.

TURNING TO THE GENTILES.

LESSON X—SEPTEMBER 6, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles; that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Acts 13:47.

LESSON: Acts 13:13-14:28; Romans 10:8-13.

The central theme of this lesson is Forfeited Privilege. God has chosen the Jews, not in any arbitrary way, but because they had that genius and passion for religion that would make it possible for him to reveal himself to the world as He could not do thru the other nations of the world. All of their history had been a preparation for the revelation in Christ. But alas, when Christ came unto his own, his own received him not. Paul put this in another way when he said, "Lo, we turn unto the Gentiles." What a tragic loss, albeit an unnoted loss, to the Jews that Paul was not able to carry on his ministry to them! How much they missed because they did not respond to the message. Because they did not perceive and live up to their privileges, their privileges were taken away from them. The gospel was taken to the Gentile world.

To whomsoever much is given, of him much be required. He that hath not, that is he who does not use what he has, from him shall be taken away even that which he hath. To fail to use is to lose. To see the light and to refuse to walk in the light inevitably exacts a terrible penalty. The principle applies to the individual and the nation.

Instead of dealing in an expository way with the material in today's lesson, a few teaching points will be listed, suggestions arising out of the experiences of Paul and Barnabus in Antioch, Lystra, and Derbe.

Pertinent Points.

1. Opportunities for witnessing for Christ present themselves to those who have a willing spirit. 13:15.
2. Truth is a divider of men. 13:42.
3. Envy is a troublesome factor in life. 13:45.
4. Strange as it may seem, there are those who try to hinder the progress of the gospel. 13:45.
5. A Christian can have joy even in untoward circumstances and unpleasant events. 13:52.
6. Courage is a primary Christian virtue. 14:3.
7. Christianity makes men stand upright. 14:10.

8. The men who have done great things for God have been men of like passion as we are. 14:15.

9. God does not leave himself without witness. 14:17.

10. Pastoral work is just as important as evangelism. 15:22.

11. The important thing is not what we do for God as what we allow God to do through us. 15:27.

12. Salvation comes through faith in Jesus Christ. Rom. 10:9.

13. There should be an external manifestation of an experience within. 10:9.

14. Salvation is a matter of heart rather than of head. 10:10.

15. There is no fundamental distinction between Jew and Greek, that is between any of God's children. 10:12.

16. God is able to save all and is available for all who call upon Him. 10:12.

17. The gospel of Christ is for all men. 10:13.

TWO ARE AGREED.

Christ; that we have the privilege of asking and the assured joy of receiving, if we can be agreed.

Elon College is the institution of our church; our people love the college. For years, now, we have been standing helpless in the presence of our great needs. We have been looking out for ourselves and our own possessions. We have been counting on our own abilities. The time has come for us to forget ourselves—take our eyes off ourselves, to look unto Him from whence cometh our help, and make our request known unto Him. There is no question as to His ability, but there is a great question as to our agreement. Can we agree? Should God be put first? Should spiritual matters be put above material possessions? Is God able to do for us beyond what we are able to ask? Should we lay up treasures on earth, or should we lay up treasures in Heaven? If we bring our gifts, will we in return receive a blessing? If we give, will we be blessed in our giving? Can Christ be the master of our souls and not be the master of our gold? Can we give him ourselves and withhold our possessions? Can we agree as touching the things of earth and the things of the spirit in the light of the revelation of God in Jesus Christ?

"If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask it shall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven"

Will you pray for the college to the end that it may be freed of its debts and be made secure through an enlarged patronage and greatly increased endowments? Our privileges in God are unlimited.

VALLEY LETTER.

The Valley Virginia Conference is still trying to carry on. We had an outstanding Conference this year at Antioch the fifth and sixth of August. A large crowd was present both days. All seemed to be very interested in the work of the churches here and they returned to their local churches with a passion to bring souls to Christ during the coming year.

Several of the churches were fortunate in securing the wonderful help of Miss Dorothy Grigsby and Miss Helene Cosenza. These two fine young ladies held Church schools at Dry Run, Bethel, Newport and at Linville. At Bethel they were assisted by Mr. Kenneth Hook. Credit also goes to the various local helpers in the local churches who made a sacrifice to help teach. They were interested enough to get up at four and five A. M. to do a day's work and then walk a mile or two to get to the school. This was the first time these two ladies had worked in the Valley and all of the people seemed to like them fine and hoped that they might come again next summer. Their work was of high character and brought forth much fruit. They seemed dedicated to their task and wherever they went they seemed to take new inspiration and new joy into that home and church. They have made footprints upon the sand of the Valley Conference churches which will linger long in the hearts of us. We pray God's blessings upon them as they go to their homes and to their schoolwork this fall.

Revival meetings will soon start and we are asking the people of our church to pray for us that there may be a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon these meetings. The people in and among these hills and mountains need God as much as the people in the plains. May we do our best to bring God to them.

W. J. ANDES.

TWO VIEWPOINTS

A story is told of two buckets which conversed at the well. One said, "Oh, what's the use; every time they fill me up, they empty me again." "I don't see it quite that way," replied the other. When I am emptied, I am ready to be filled again."

SUNDAY.

"NOT IN VAIN"

"Did ye suffer so many things in vain? If it be indeed in vain."—Gal. 3:4 (Read Gal 3:1-9).

We are told in this scripture that we are christians by faith and not by law. The People of Galatia had suffered much persecution because of their faith in Christ. Paul knew a Christ—a Saviour—who doeth all things well to them that love and serve him, and who turneth even evil to his account. The Galatians were discouraged in their faith and Paul sought to hearten them by convincing them without a doubt that they would win and that their sufferings were not in vain. Thus he urged them to stand fast by the cross until their departure from it was so manifest as not to be denied.

In this Paul sets a noble example in himself. He urges them to believe in men's good sense as long as possible. He tells them "that he that is not against us is for us," and they should consider every one as for them who is not proven to be against them. They were heartened by this encouragement and the church of the living God has been built upon this rock.

Many a friendship would be maintained, many a feud or misunderstanding averted, if men only held to Paul's doctrine, "suffering and sacrifice are not in vain in the lord.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to be a friend to man. Grant that there may be found in us and in man a truth that is invincible, and in that trust grant the abiding of the fullness of truth. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

MONDAY

"SELF-BOUND"

"He shall be holden with the cords of his sin."—Prov. 5:22.

What man would snap hand-cuffs on himself, or lock himself up in a prison cell and throw the key out of the window? Gulliver was a very big man among the Pigmies. They were only as ants about him. Their cords were like spider's web to him. But while he slept they wove their cords about his body a thousand times and stobbed them down. When he awoke, giant that he was, he could not move.

This is what every sinner does, binds himself with cords which he himself can never break. No one would sin willingly if he thoroughly understood what his sin would do for him; how it would pull him down into the pit of utter ruin. Men sin with the eyes of their souls closed, and only the eyes of the lower senses open.

Only the Lord Jesus can cut asunder the cords of wickedness that bind us, and set us free. Reach out thy hands in faith toward heaven and call upon the name of the Lord. Only thus can we be saved. We can never save ourselves.

Prayer—Our Father, do Thou pity all prisoners. Pity all people who have bound themselves through their own condemnation. Loose Thou our bonds, we pray Thee, and set us free from sin and death, and use us, Lord, for Thy service. Amen.

TUESDAY

"DIVINE SLOWNESS"

"The Lord is slow to anger and plentuous in mercy."—Ps. 103:8.

God is often thought of as exhibiting sternness and wrath, and especially in the Old Testament. Those who think that, are in error, for the Old Testament is one long history of God's forbearance with His sinful and ungrateful people.

Amos R. Wells used to say that if God had not been slow to anger, there would have been no New Testament, for the New Testament is simply the flowering of divine mercy whose roots are in the Old Testament.

When we consider our own sins, our own mistakes, our own shortcomings, how thankful we should be for God's slowness of anger towards us! If He were quick to punish, who could stand? Surely "He hath not rewarded us according to our iniquities."

Prayer—O Lord, we thank Thee for Thy unending mercy and Thy loving kindness towards us. In return we would offer Thee ourselves to do our best for Thee and Thy kingdom in this world. Amen.

WEDNESDAY

"MODERN CAESARS"

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are Gods."—Mk. 12:17.

Do not think that these words of Christ were merely incidental, rendered as a reproof to the politics or an oriental day. It was a fundamental teaching of the doctrine of christianity from the heart of God to be applied in our every day relations.

There are Caesars still to whom we owe and pay tribute. Our employer is a Caesar and he has a right to our faithful service. Our friends are Caesars who have a right to our love and loyalty. Our dependents are Caesars and they have a right to our provisions and welfare. Our health is a Caesar and it has a right to our care. Our city and our country is a Caesar and it has a right to our interest and best thoughts, and to our personal loyalty to its needs.

There is a sense in which all Caesars are agencies of God claiming our manhood, demanding that we so live in relation to the affairs of this world that we may be true in all of them and thus true to the next world. He who is most helpful in this world will be the richest in the next.

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, midst the duties of this world grant unto us Thy holy Spirit that we may see divinely and discharge our duties to life in harmony and with a view to Thy glory. Amen.

THURSDAY

"LONE SUFFERERS"

"I have trodden the wine-press alone."—Isa. 63:3.

Do we ever feel alone in our sufferings, or in our understandings? Yes, all of us are familiar with that feeling which has come over us at times despite every effort to overcome it. But in those feelings we have learned that any of us can endure adversity when a comrade is by our side. Any one can suffer with a smile if there is another sufferer smiling with us. But we do not always have such friends to smile with us. We often go through the wilderness alone, climb the heights alone and face the tempest alone.

Yet, we are never alone. Our Redeemer who trod alone the infinite wine-press of woe, did so that we might look to Him, know Him, feel His presence and never be alone. We can have no sorrow that He has never borne. And He came to earth to share with our sorrows and woes. We can have no temptations that he did not have, and for that reason, He died on the cross that we might receive His strength and live.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou art our daily comrade. If all others should forsake us, Thou art there. We rejoice in Thy love forever. Amen.

FRIDAY

"MEN AFTER GOD'S OWN HEART"

"I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after my heart, who shall do all my will."—Acts 13:22.

How can a man be called "after God's own heart?" David was not without his sins of adultery and murder. How could even he be called "a man after God's heart?"

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

TURNING CHRIST AWAY

By HERBERT G. COUNCIL, JR.

"And they went to another village."—St. Luke 9:56.

When you listen to those words by themselves, they may seem to you to mean nothing. But they mean one of the deepest facts with which you or I could possibly be concerned. They mean lives which have lost their opportunity.

Here is the picture to which the words belong. Jesus with his disciples is on the way from Galilee to Jerusalem. He is going there to meet the crisis of his life, to face the gathering forces of hatred and hostility in the nation, to be arrested in Gethsemane, tried before Pilate, and then to walk the road to Calvary and crucifixion. From Galilee, he passed into Samaria, and night comes on when he is near a Samaritan village. He sends two messengers ahead of him to ask that he and his disciples may be received. But the villagers will have none of him. They do not want their Galilean visitors in their houses or in their neighborhood. And they send the messengers away.

Some of the disciples were indignant. James and John especially, those hot-tempered brothers who are called elsewhere the "Sons of Thunder," wanted Jesus to punish the Samaritans, "Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?" they exclaimed. But Jesus had a different answer. "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." How gentle that was, and meek. Yes, but there is iron in it too. Through the beauty of Jesus' spirit, something else is sounding like some deep bell of judgment and of doom. It is not a judgment that he imposes. It is one that he recognizes as already imposed. He had come not to destroy men's lives, but to save them. But these Samaritans would not let themselves be saved. He was ready to give them all that he had to give, but they would not take it. He was at their gates, and they would not let him in. So the only thing left was to pass them by. He went to another village.

The strange part about that tragedy was that they never knew that one had happened. It never occurred to them that they had lost anything by sending away these Galilean messengers. They had simply refused to be bothered by strangers in whom they were not interested and against whom perhaps they conceived a prejudice anyway. They went on about their business feeling that they were rid of a bother. They did not know what it might have meant to have Jesus come into those streets of their's. Now they never would know. They would not even have regrets, because there would be no way of their imagining the meaning of that which was to be regretted. Yet sick people in that village who might have been filled with new hope and strength by Jesus' touch would lie as they were before. Little children who might have looked into his eyes and seen there something they would have remembered all their lives, would never see him, and never know that there was anything they had missed. Men and women going about the business of the little town who might have seen through him the horizon of a new life, beckoning them to something more beautiful and thrilling than they had ever known, could go on about their same tasks and never imagine that life held anything beyond. Their opportunity had drawn near and been rejected, and gone away unrecognized. Jesus went to another village, but their village remained as it had been before, a poor little pool of complacency and spiritual stagnation.

That village is a parable. It does not belong to Samaria only, nor in the first century. It may represent us as we are now. The living spirit of Jesus comes to us and offers to enter and dwell with us; but we do not receive him, and there is nothing left for him except to go away.

Like the Samaritan village, we might be blind to life's most tremendous consequences. We will not recognize that anything is happening because we are not jolted out of our dullness by any startling and unmistakable event. If James and John had been able to have their way, the town would at least have recognized that something serious had happened. If punishment had come upon its people suddenly and dramatically like a fire from heaven, they would have begun to ask questions as to what it was all about. As it was, they did not ask any questions, and they did not care. That was the saddest part of their situation; and exactly the same is true with us. Those moments when we feel that life has nothing to be bothered by, may be the moments of our critical impoverishment.

Let us turn again to the consideration of the Samaritan village and ask ourselves why it may have been that the villagers rejected the message of Jesus. Through that we may be led to a clearer understanding of those motives which put us in danger of rejecting his spirit now.

In the first place, they were ill-disposed toward the messengers simply because they represented something new. Those Samaritans disliked strangers, and they did not want the effort of concerning themselves with anything that was new, and his in itself would have been enough to make them send the messengers away.

In the second place, the messengers represented something which to the Samaritans was definitely alien. For generations there had been a bitter, if smothered, hostility between the Samaritans and the Jews. The Samaritans had their own customs and their own way of worship inherited from ancient years, and the Jews had an idea of the superior sacredness of Jerusalem. Let the Jew go his way and not be asking favors of a Samaritan. That was the mood in which the villagers received the messengers of Jesus.

In the third place, the messengers were not important men. Naturally they were not impressive. Whom did they represent? Jesus? And who was Jesus? A man born among the peasants, an inhabitant of Nazareth up in the hills of Galilee, a village no more important than their own, a man of the people, son of a carpenter.

For these three reasons, the Samaritans turned the messengers away, and very likely never gave the incident another thought.

The new, the alien, and the unimpressive. Do we not also quite as instinctively turn our backs on these? It is easy for our minds to grow inert. Our thoughts curl up in their familiar corners like a cat in the corner of a chimney. We stick to our inherited dogmas and definitions because we do not want to have the trouble of contemplating anything different.

ARISTOCRATS OF LABOR.

They claim no guard of hearaldry,
They scorn the knightly rod;
Their coats of arms are noble deeds,
Their peerage is from God!

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage family had a good day Thursday, August 27, when the following Sunday schools held a joint picnic on our campus: Mt. Zion, Mebane, Chapel Hill, and Damascus.

Sometime ago our good friend, E. W. Nevill of our Chapel Hill church; Julius Pace and Zeb Lynch of our Mt. Zion church and the friends in our Mebane and Damascus churches, decided to have a joint picnic on the orphanage grounds—serving lunch for the entire orphanage group. It was quite an undertaking to feed the picnic group and then all one hundred orphanage children in too. My friend, E. W. Nevill, said when this plan was first mentioned some said it was out of the question—that it could not be done, but by constant persuasion the Sunday schools of the four churches above mentioned did undertake it.

And did they put it across? I'll say they did and in fine shape. The orphanage had built a long table for the occasion in the shade of the trees and the good women of the four Sunday schools loaded it to its limit with good things to eat in an abundant supply—plenty for all and plenty left after all appetites had been satisfied. Brothers Nevill, Pace and Lynch saw to it that the little fellows had ice cold lemonade and how they did enjoy it. The day was warm and cold lemonade was mighty nice.

Many of our visitors had never visited the orphanage before and their visit gave them a better insight into the work we are trying to do for the fatherless. We are always glad to have Sunday schools to picnic on our campus. It brings the Sunday children in touch with the children they contribute from month to month to help. They see the buildings, the farm, the cattle, the children and they realize they are having a part in its support. Brother Nevill says it can be done and hopes to make it an annual affair.

I will remember soon after the writer took charge of the orphanage he made a talk in behalf of the orphanage at one of our churches and after the service was over a good woman said to him, that she said when the orphanage was established it would be a burden on the Christian denomination. But instead of being a burden it has been a real joy and a blessing to our churches and Sunday schools to contribute to help the helpless and give them a chance in life.

Those who contribute to the orphanage get lots of joy out of the giving.

Some years ago a man gave the writer a check for seventeen hundred dollars to purchase a tract of land and when he placed the check in the writer's hand he took the writer's hand in both of his hands and tears trickled down his cheeks. "This is the happiest contribution I have ever made." He got a real joy out of the giving. So will you. Try it and see.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

The answer is: Because he proposed in his heart to obey God; because, when he fell, he went to God to obtain pardon for his sin; because he had in him the embodiment of the Christ's spirit a thousand years, as it was, before Christ came. This was the same spirit of our Lord's that forgave the thief on the cross.

If this be true, we all can have hearts like God's, not by being perfect, but by seeking the perfection of purpose and achievement that He alone can give.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou dost understand us. Thou knowest our frame and that we are weak and but as dust. Forgive us of our iniquities and love us freely. Take us to Thy heart. In Jesus name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY

"A FEARLESS RELIGION"

"Serve him without fear."—Lk. 1:74.

To be religious through fear is not to be religious at all. It is mere awe without a heart. Worship in fear is just trembling. It is like swearing promises to the murderer who holds the bludgeon over the head. There is no fear in the love of a child for a loving Father, and there should be no fear in a child of God for the heavenly Father. "Perfect love casts out fear."

The grandest thing we know about the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is that it embues one with fearlessness. In it there is no fear of unfavorable fortune, of loneliness, of failure, of doubt or sin, and no fear of friend or foe.

Prayer—Our Father, cleanse from our hearts all fear and dread. May we serve Thee freely and live in the warmth of Thy all-embracing love. Amen.

HORNADAY.

On July 2, 1936, God sent his death angel to claim our beloved brother and friend, Marion Fidella Hornaday. We, the members of Pleasant Hill Christian Church, and the Men's Bible Class wish to express our appreciation of him in the following resolutions:

1. That while we just cannot understand this act of Divine Providence in removing from us one whose life and place in the Men's class meant so much and was so badly needed, may we whose hearts are bleeding lift the hand of faith and feel for the Master's hand and walk with Him till we do understand;

2. That we express our appreciation for his blameless life and character, his self-sacrificing service, unflinching devotion to duty, his Christian stewardship, and loyalty to God's Kingdom and this class of men;

3. That we recognize that his was a life of high ideals, great faith, optimistic spirit, loving friendship, wise counsel, trustworthy judgment, childlike tenderness, Christ-like spirit which won the confidence, esteem and appreciation of the poor, the rich, the young and old, and made for him a trusted friend of all who knew him;

4. That we, the members of the Men's class of Pleasant Hill Sunday School, imitate his regularity, faith and resignation evidenced by his own words and presence each Sunday morning in the class and the church service.

5. That we, as a class, extend to this bereaved family our deep and abiding sympathy in this hour of gloom and sorrow and commend them to the loving care and comfort of our Heavenly Father who can heal all our sorrows, and "who doeth all things well."

6. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the permanent records of our class and copies be sent to the family, and to The Christian Sun, and the county paper for publication.

Act the Way You Want to Feel

By Winfred Rhoades

If I scowl my face, grit my teeth, clench my fists, and blurt out ugly sounds, I develop the feeling of crossness even though I was not cross when I began. If, on the other hand, I lift up the corners of my mouth so as to smile a little, I begin to feel smiley inside.

If you want to feel sick, act sick: let your shoulders sag, and your feet drag, and the corners of your mouth turn down, and your eyelids droop, and heave a few long sighs. If you want to feel well, or at any rate better even though you are sick, straighten your shoulders, talk with energy about something interesting, bring a smile to your lips, and face the world gallantly.

Try it now, as you sit with this paper in your hands, and see how the action of your body has its reflex upon your mental and emotional life.

We affect ourselves by the way we permit ourselves to act. We also affect those round about us. "Smile up your face, dearie," a young wife used to say to her husband when he came to the table. He was not conscious of feeling grumpy; he was preoccupied with his thoughts, with the work he was trying to plan, with perhaps a little left-over weariness from the strain of toil. But his heavy expression had a depressing effect in the room; and, moreover, the way he let himself look in the face (because of its reaction upon his mind) could have an effect upon the tasks that were next before him.

The principle is one for everyday application. When someone with whom you are dealing gets into a tantrum and becomes abusive, keep your own voice calm, speak in a low tone, sit or stand with all your muscles relaxed, and you will feel calm and will keep your emotions at a low pitch. When you have a pain or a trouble, whistle a cheerful tune, make your mouth and eyes look gleeful, and you help yourself to cease from brooding and make a change in your actual emotional tone. Look gloomy and you feel gloomy. Look cheerful and it has an effect inwardly. Act lovingly to those with whom it is hard to get along and your heart feels warmer.—Advance.

Leaders Cannot Be Wobblers

By Roger Babson.

To talk about the Church passing out of the national picture is utterly foolish. Anyone who suggests such a catastrophe shows his ignorance of history. Several times the Church has been neglected far more than it is today. In each instance it has rebounded more powerful than ever. Our task is not to lament over the present state of the Church, but to prepare for the next period when the people will flock to it.

I have already indicated certain lines of action which ministers might take, which would appeal to laymen. These, however, are only the shell of the nut. The kernel is something far deeper and more spiritual. The real difficulty today is that the Church utterly fails to satisfy existing hunger for spiritual help. This cannot be satisfied by prevalent denomination-ism. Most sermons absolutely do not click nor register. They drive more people away from the churches than they attract.

Ministers must realize that they have only one real job and that is to help people spiritually. If you are a minister with a declining congregation, you should know that you are failing in this main task. Your first step in correcting the situation should be to get right with God yourself and use your religion yourself. Leaders cannot be wobblers. Leaders must show by their own lives that they have faith, courage and a goal. You can never expect to be a leader unless you know where you are headed and enthusiastically urge others to follow you.

"How can I remedy my situation?" you ask. To laymen the answer is very simple. Consider these four suggestions:

(1) Don't try to preach one or more sermons every week. Preach only when filled with fire and enthusiasm. Then give us "both barrels."

(2) Remember that most of us laymen are in trouble. We have come to the church hoping for help. Be sure we go away satisfied.

(3) Have classes in prayer. If you wobble as to the power of prayer for guidance get out of the ministry. If you believe in it, then boldly teach it.

(4) Finally, take your work seriously. Don't be content to go through a formal service like an old Russian priest. Go out and sell the Gospel as a salesman goes out to sell insurance, automobiles or vacuum cleaners.

A basic difficulty today with the Church is that most ministers have an "inferiority complex." Ministers should take a militant attitude—sure of something that religion can do for their people—and then insist that they actively proclaim it to everyone on every occasion.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. L. L. Wyriek, Elon College, N. C., a graduate of Elon and in the class of 1918, is open for pastoral work during the coming year. Any church desiring his service should write him at Elon College, N. C.

Our Lynchburg Church is losing its minister, Rev. B. H. Watkins, whose resignation takes effect November 1. Anyone interested in becoming pastor of the church is invited to correspond with Mr. W. T. Dunn, Kemper Street Station, Lynchburg, Va.

Several pastors have written to say that they are sponsoring a campaign to get new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This is the kind of thing that gives new hope to the editor as he struggles with the task of editing and securing subscriptions for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

September is the time to begin afresh with the church program. Many pastors send greetings, letters, or invitations of some kind to the members trying to get them back on the job with the opening of the fall program in September. One such letter is given in this week's paper.

The Baptist Church of Holland, Va., is cooperating with the Holland Christian Church and Holy Neck Christian Church in evangelistic services. This week services will be at the Holy Neck Church with Rev. O. D. Poythress preaching, and next week they will be at the Holland Church with Dr. Stanley C. Harrell as preacher.

Dr. Nathaniel Newman, dentist, who has been living at Hartford, Conn., has had to give up his profession temporarily, and will spend the winter at Chapel Hill, N. C., seeking to regain his health. He is the son of Dr. N. G. Newman of Holland, Va., and a graduate of Elon College. His many friends will wish for him speedy and complete recovery.

Rev. and Mrs. L. B. Chase of East Bridgewater, Mass., spent part of the summer visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Key at Holland, Va. The Rev. Mr. Chase spoke to the adult classes of the Holland Church School twice to the delight of all present. The Chases and Keys visited historic Jamestown, Williamsburg, Yorktown and other places.

Emmanuel S. Hedgebeth of Holland, Virginia, the only ministerial student at Elon this year from Eastern Virginia Conference, conducted the morning worship and preached the sermon at his home church on August 29, using as his topic, "Building Highways." One who heard him say, "He did credit to himself, his church and his college in this hour of worship and the sermon."

Rev. B. J. Earp is leaving Palm St. Church, Greensboro, this year. Therefore, the brethren of the Palm Street Church are looking for a pastor to fill this place. The pulpit committee is receiving applications for this pastorate from ministers that can consider this work. There is a great field for work here for some ambitious minister. Address your communications to A. H. Hinshaw, 17 Poplar Street, Greensboro, N. C.

The office of the Board of Christian Education, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, acknowledges receipt of Rally Day materials from the Congregational Publishing Society, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., and the Methodist Publishing House, Fifth & Grace Streets, Richmond, Va. The Christian Publishing Association of Dayton, Ohio, can also furnish Rally Day and Sunday school materials. The Board is eager to help any school with their problems.

Berea Christian Church, near Norfolk, Va., will celebrate its sixty-fifth anniversary with a Home-Coming service next Sunday. Dr. Sidney B. Hall, a member of the church and State Superintendent of Public Instruction for Virginia will give an address. Mr. M. W. Hollowell, clerk of the church, will give the history of the church, and Rev. J. F. Morgan, a former pastor, will preach. The program begins at ten o'clock. Former members and friends are invited.

Attention of pastors, superintendents, teachers and religious workers in and about Nansemond County, Va., is called to the fact that the training school will open on Sunday, October 18, 1936, and continue each evening through the week. Courses and teachers include "The Prophets and Their Message" by Dr. N. G. Newman; "Christian Worship" by Rev. E. B. Flory; "Guiding the Religious Growth of Juniors" by Miss Priscilla Chase; "Church Music" by Mrs. Carl R. Key; and a "Seminar on Missions" led by Mrs. John G. Truitt. The dean, Rev. Carl R. Key, will have charge of the assembly period and will speak briefly on "Personal Religious Living."

The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot of August 23, 1936, carries a news item and picture of a historic old house in Suffolk, Virginia. The item says: "The house was originally built in or around 1835 by Thomas J. Kilby, who represented Nansemond County in the State Legislature in 1865-66.

"Around 1856 it was used as a girls' school, operated by Dr. William B. Wellons who died in 1877.

"In this house in 1860 was held the meeting at which the Suffolk Christian Church was originated. It was also from this house in 1862 this Miss Sallie Brinkley, a pretty Nansemond County girl, who was visiting Mrs. Wellons, slipped out at night in the darkness, and traveled in a cart over the county roads to Somerton, to notify General Longstreet's army that the Federals were planning a secret attack upon them.

"The news of this proposed attack was told to the Rev. James Wellons, a brother of Dr. William B. Wellons, who during the War of the Secession was a Confederate chaplain, and Dr. James Wellons sent the girl on the secret errand to the Southern troops."

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT ALBERMARLE.

The Daily Vacation Bible School at Albermarle, N. C., was the largest in many years, over 120 enrolled and the average daily attendance was 103. Two sessions were necessary. The workers, Loring Chase and Kathleen Rawls made a great team and did splendid work. The closing session, demonstrating the results of the school was well attended, and they were particularly impressed by the Bible drill and the handwork.

Fortunately, we had planned our annual revival to follow the two weeks D. V. B. S., and the interest created made it easier to build a receptive attitude. The visiting pastor, Bro. McCauley of our Richmond Church, gave some inspiring messages. The people enjoyed his visits to their homes and decided Brother McCauley was the very man they had needed for the occasion. The congregations were large and attentive; nine were added to the church by confession; a tenth person confessed but asked to have her name sent to another local church.

The church spirit is very good and we are anticipating further results from this splendid meeting.

(REV.) ARNOLD SLATER.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

Loyal members of the Church who send in their subscription and subscriptions of their neighbors make all those connected with THE CHRISTIAN SUN very happy. We had quite a list for August, and the prospects are bright for even a longer list in September.

This Church Paper business is an important matter that demands immediate attention. If our people are to know what is going on in the Church realm, this is a fine way for them to learn. At present the subscription list is far too low for the comfort of any who know the facts.

Pastors can do themselves, the local church, and the Church at large a real service by securing new subscribers to the paper.

Now is the time for all loyal members to come to the support of their Church.

GETTING STARTED.

Many churches have been taking a sort of vacation through the summer, but are now ready to begin their fall program. The most difficult task is to get started. It is far better to begin with enthusiasm and a large crowd than to simply drift back into the regular routine.

There is a thrill in joining with the entire church in worship and work. A full church on the Sundays of September will have much to do with the success of the church through the year. Pastors are eager to meet with their people in the house of the Lord, and the sermons which they preach should be a ringing challenge for those who hear to give themselves with new abandon in Christian service.

HOW TO MAKE A HOME MORE HAPPY

There is one matter in which most of us are interested, namely, how to have happy homes. In almost every newspaper we pick up we find references to tragedies of broken homes. Why is the home so often a failure? How can we make our home a success?

There may, of course, be many reasons for failure, but there is one outstanding one. We are too touchy, too opinionated, too stubborn. We hate to acknowledge ourselves in the wrong. We want to be the big toad in our small puddle. The result is friction, heat, and flaming words. Quarrels ruin homes.—Anon.

ELON COLLEGE.

The 47th opening of Elon College is now underway. This has been an inspirational occasion. Many of our former students are back on the campus with high hopes. A large number of first year students are here with fear and trembling. They have always wanted to go to college; they have pictured themselves enrolling and beginning their college work, but the outcome of it all has been a great question in their minds.

This occasion, however, is not without its disappointments. For financial reasons we have been compelled to adopt more exacting financial rules for students than we have done heretofore. It is good to see a youngster with ambitions for college life and for a college education, and it is good to see him begin the realization of that ambition; but it is heart-rending to have a youngster come and literally beg to be permitted to enter without funds with which to pay even his board. Some college administrators seem to be able to face this situation without feelings or emotions. I cannot. It has been most difficult to turn from our campus a large number of fine young people who would be here enrolled in the school but for the lack of finance. They promise to pay when their education is completed if not before. They are sincere and in all probabilities would pay, but the college is without sufficient funds to carry them through the period of preparation, banking on their earning capacity when they are out in life. The majority of these youngsters have the stuff in them to make real, genuine, American citizens. It would seem an investment on the part of the country to make it possible for them to have training that they might be a high type of citizen. Many of these are of our own church. They need assistance. The college cannot give it.

I hope that some day the church will realize its opportunity and come to the rescue of her own. Where could money be more wisely invested than in human life?

Our advanced registration was a bit in excess of that of a year ago. The present enrollment, under the new plans, is about equal to that of last year. Enrollment at this writing has passed the 400 mark. Registration, of course, will continue on thru the 15th and even as late as the 29th. Registration of special students has not begun yet. The enrollment for last year reached an all time high of 483 for the entire year. At this date there seems to be no question but that this mark will be reached this year and perhaps exceeded.

I would like to thank pastors, members of the church, members of the board of trustees, alumni, and friends, for every good word spoken in behalf of the college, and for every effort put forth in its interest. The college and its present administration pledges its best to the church, to the state, and to the world.

L. E. SMITH, President.

PART-TIME CHURCHES.

In writing on part-time churches, Dr. L. E. Smith has given the weakness of the Congregational form of government, but none of its advantages. If correct when he says, "In our present state, our losses continue to overbalance our gains," we should change our form of government and adopt the pastorate system of the Methodists.

I am opposed to the creation of a commission by the Convention to compose pastorates and help select pastors and so forth. This is a conference matter and should be handled by the Home Mission Committee. Speaking for the Eastern Virginia Conference the Home Mission Committee has endeavored to handle same. Several years ago, upon recommendation of that committee, the conference adopted an advisory Pastorate System. Some of the pastorates were offered mission funds to join suggested pastorates. The pastorate system was talked about, written about, and some progress was made. There are several pastorates now and another being formed, embracing four of our strong rural churches. If the other Conferences will do as well as Eastern Virginia, the problem will be partially solved. Unless we are going to abolish our congregational form of government, the solution of the problem is largely in the hands of Elon College where our ministers are educated and President Smith holds the key to the situation.

These young men should be taught the history and principles of the Christian Church, the strong and the weak points in our government, denominational loyalty, cooperation, obedience to the resolutions and the requests of conference and convention and loyal support of denominational programmes. They should study both rural and city church problems and the necessity for voluntary pastorates of rural churches. The ministers should be the leaders, and while it will take some patience and time, if they will practice unselfishness as well as preach it, the churches will generally fall in line and the problem will be largely solved.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHURCHES AND PASTORS.

Information which has come to the editor's office indicates that one-fourth to one-third of the churches in the Southern Convention have had, or expect to have, a new pastor in this year, 1936. This is a startling large turnover in pastorates; and one with an inquisitive mind naturally wonders why, and what the effect may be on our churches.

Perhaps these men have not met all the standards set for them by their members. It may be the churches have not measured up to what the preacher had expected. Sometimes it happens that people get peeved with their minister because of something he says or does, or doesn't do and determine that he shall move.

There are reasons why ministers should move, but in the opinion of one who has been a pastor for twenty-one years, there are many more excuses than reasons. This editor will welcome statements from laymen giving reasons why the church should change pastors, and methods by which the change should be made.

In my judgment, this is a matter that demands serious thought on the part of pastors and people—much more serious thought than is often given. For a minister to move means quite a large expense, and few of them have the money for this investment. It means also that the church must get acquainted with a new man and his family, that for some time those who attend the service will compare the new minister with the one they have had when really they should be praying, otherwise worshipping, or making plans for constructive cooperative Christian work. Frequent change of pastor usually means slow growth or deterioration of the church.

It sometimes happens that ministers move with broken hearts because of the petty and cruel treatment by members of the church, or by the church as a group. This is not right. The minister is just as noble, Christian and worthy of respect when he leaves the field as when he comes, unless the church has changed him. He should leave, if leave he must, with the appreciation and good wishes of those he has served.

And woe betide the minister who may seek to leave a church weaker than when he found it. If it was worthy his effort when he came, it certainly ought to be worthy of his love when he leaves. Some other pastor must take up where he left off, and it is his business to see that the new man has as good a start as possible.

All of which means that changing pastorates for ministers and changing pastors for churches is a serious business that should be transacted with the most careful thought and courteous, Christian conduct.

TWO MEETINGS IN ASHEVILLE.

The writer spent the month of August enjoying a vacation in Asheville, and while there attended two unusual and strongly contrasted meetings.

The first of these was designated as "The National Conference of Clergymen and Laymen," in what was called "An American Forward Program." The announcement made stated that twenty-five hundred were expected to attend this nation-wide meeting. The session which the writer attended had about one hundred and twenty-five present, and the automobile license tags indicated that most of them were from North Carolina. The movement was obviously an attempt to amalgamate a wide variety of patrioter organizations, anti-communists, anti-pacifists and anti-semitic organizations. Such topics were discussed as "Communism—Our Common Enemy," "The Penetration of American Methodism by European Communism," "Termites in the Temple Gates," and "False Peace Prophets." While all the names signed to the original call were Protestants, the effort was made to make it broad by including Catholics and Jews on the program, but the first night one group seceded because the name Christian had been left off, and that group held a rival meeting which was intensely anti-Jewish. The leader of that group claimed to have been "slugged" as he entered his hotel room, and valuable lists and papers were stolen. A few days later the police announced that they were through with the case, believing that it was a hoax the like of which the leader had perpetrated in several other places previously. Intensely anti-Jewish literature was distributed in both meetings.

One was impressed with the intense bigotry and unfairness of the utterances. Not only was communism presented as a Russian propaganda, but every pacifist or peace advocate was and even Kagawa and the Cooperative Movement were pictured as being workers for the same Communist devil. There was never any indication that an American minister who believed in peace could do so because of his own thinking and of his conscience. There was no indication of any sympathy for the vast multitudes otherwise suffered because of present conditions.

The writer is too intensely committed to historic American democracy to wish to see either Communism or Fascism growing in America, but it is obvious that unfair judgments, bitterness and hate and injustices tend to drive the victims toward radicalism. One Herndon case (negro sentenced to forty years in the Georgia chain gang for possessing Communist literature); floggings such as occurred in Tampa, Florida and in Alabama; and such ugly organizations as the Black Legion and various kinds of "Knights," can make more Communists than such a meeting as the one at Asheville could cure in a year. What is needed in American life is not so much organizations to 'attack' Communism as sincere movements to cure the inequalities and injustices which tend to create Communists, and certainly one did not find in the speeches at Asheville a single note of Christian brotherhood or sympathy, or desire to help the down-trodden and the oppressed. Certainly Jesus would have found himself in a strange environment there.

The other meeting attended was a meeting of the organization of the heads of church related colleges in the south. It was a pleasure to sit in and hear these broad-minded Christian educators discuss the church related college, its place and function and its possibilities. One was impressed with the fine leadership in our Christian colleges. There was a singular freedom from bigotry, narrowness, or unfair judgment. These men believed in American freedom, they believed in the freedom of teaching, provided the teacher himself was not cynical and was fair in his presentation of opposing opinions. In fact one felt that there was more breadth and freedom in the Church Related College than in some of our state universities, where there is the constant fear of the small-minded bigoted legislator who will threaten appropriations if thereby he can appeal to popular prejudices. This meeting was such a tonic in contrast to the other that one felt his hope renewed for the sanity and Christian leadership in America.

PROPAGANDA.

I have returned from Europe with a new sense of the value of the printed page. A reading of the history of the Russian revolution shows plainly enough that the revolution began with the circulation of printed pamphlets and the Soviet government blazed its way by the use of millions of posters printed in red ink and by banners carrying slogans, and by signs painted over buildings inside and out. Pictures of the Soviet leaders are to be found everywhere. On my visit to Russia, I was deeply impressed with the literature stands at every turn with cheap books and pamphlets not only in Russian but in English and German and French. The revolutionists know how to use printer's ink.

Along another line I found every Chamber of Commerce and transportation agency issuing attractive folders in colors filled with pictures and maps. These are distributed freely and are for the purpose of attracting attention and getting business. Much care is given to the composition of the messages, and very often they are printed in three languages. The cost of issuing these documents is considerable but they are profitable. There we find the newspapers and magazines carrying all kinds of promotional articles. Advertisements carry messages to millions of people, and it is evident that publicity pays or it would not be used.

In speaking of propaganda, I am, at present, thinking of it in its good sense, in its promotional character, and I want to use my reference to it for the benefit of our churches. In former years, the church bell made the church known to the community. In many cases the chimes do it still. In a rather sedate and formal way some newspapers carry announcements of church services on Saturdays and there are announcement boards in some hotels. More often now than twenty years ago one finds church announcement boards in front of the church building calling attention to the denomination, and perhaps, the time of meetings and subjects of sermons. All of these methods are good and helpful, but more should be done.

It is not my intention here to present a lot of methods, but I do wish to say that all churches could do more than they are now doing to arouse the attention of the indifferent to what the Church has to offer. We need to build up the congregations so that every seat will have an occupant. The gospel message does not get very far among empty wooden benches! I look upon church publicity as a high grade evangelistic effort. The minister himself, or a committee, can secure plenty of names and addresses of non-church going people and to them may be sent courteous letters inviting them to the church services, and cards of invitation can be handed out by members of the congregation. One of the most effective ways of getting people to come to church is to carry through a house-to-house visitation. Let two persons go together, making social calls and carrying with them some attractive piece of printed matter.

We have so much splendid promotional literature issued by our denominational headquarters that we should secure a supply and circulate it. The world is full of atheistic, communistic and sensual printed matter. The Church must do its best to counteract this influence by circulating printed matter of another kind.

MEMORIAL TABLETS.

There were recently installed in the vestibule of the Asheville church two memorial tablets. One was for the venerable Dr. Thrall, who, when over sixty years of age, established this church and served as pastor for nineteen years, and as pastor-emeritus for two years more.

The other tablet was for the architect of the building and a devoted member of the church. These tablets read as follows:

SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Please help us begin with a large attendance!

Suffolk, Virginia.

Sept. 1, 1936.

Dear Members:

Please help us begin our fall work with a large attendance. Let us not take a "long time to get back to the church." Why should we? We love and honor our church, so why not begin with the first Sunday in September with a large congregation?

"Return unto Me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord." Let us take Him at His promise, and seek His blessing upon ourselves, our families, and our work this fall.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Get your children back into Sunday School the first Sunday in September, and teach them to remain for church. Come with your entire family (this letter is addressed to you, but to save postage all the other members of your family are included in this appeal) on the first Sunday, and let us have a large congregation.

We count everyone present, you and your family will count. Attend church this Sunday, please.

Most sincerely yours,

JNO. G. TRUITT, Pastor.

Think of three things; whence you came, where you are going and to whom you must account.—Franklin.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Revival services were held at Cypress Chapel Church week following the Third Sunday in August. Rev. R. E. Brittle, the Pastor, was assisted by Rev. S. E. Madren. There were ten additions to the church.

Week after the Fourth Sunday a protracted meeting was held at Bethlehem Church. The Pastor, Rev. R. E. Brittle, did the preaching, and there were twenty-one additions to the church.

During the past week Liberty Spring Church held its annual protracted meeting. The writer was assisted by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, N. C. Nine members were received into the Church at the close of the meeting. Dr. Harrell greatly endeared himself to the congregation by his helpful sermons.

On the Fifth Sunday in August a Home Coming Day was observed at Isle of Wight Christian Church. Rev. Edgar A. Potts of Suffolk, the Pastor, read an interesting historical sketch of the church. This church had its origin in a Sunday School held near Isle of Wight C. H. The Sunday School was first held at Sycamore Lawn, and Central Hill Baptist Church and the Isle of Wight Christian Church were both probably a direct outgrowth of the same school.

On the Second Sunday in July, 1887, the late Rev. John T. Kitchen preached in the Sycamore School House, which was located near Wm. A. Crocker and belonged to Dick Pulley. The congregation desired to change locations and in January, 1888, they came to the old Wilson Store and worshipped there one year, the first prayer being offered by Mr. Dick Spivey. Services were held under a brush arbor during the summer months, and then the Court House was used. Mr. N. B. H. Munford was the Superintendent of the Sunday School during this period. The church was formally organized during the year 1888 with 22 charter members, and was received into the Eastern Virginia Conference at the session held at Cypress Chapel Church, the same year. Rev. John T. Kitchen organized the church and served as Pastor until 1895. The following have also served as Pastors: Revs. W. J. Laine, 1895-May, 1898; I. W. Johnson, 1898-1903; H. H. Butler, 1904-1908; R. H. Peel, 1908-1911; Stanley C. Harrell, 1911-1917;

E. T. Cotten, 1917-1919; J. M. Roberts, 1919-1922; W. B. Fuller, 3 months; T. E. White, 1923-1924; W. D. Harward, 1926-1927; D. M. Spence, unexpired term of Dr. Harward; G. A. Pearce, 1927-1929; E. B. White, 1929-1934; C. E. Gerring, 1934-1936.

Three of the charter members of the church are living at this date, and two were present at the Home Coming Day service mentioned above. At the present time there are 83 members on the church roll. The church building has an adequate equipment including Sunday School rooms. The congregation is not large but it is loyal and progressive.

The following persons have served as deacons: Wm. N. Pierce, L. H. Whitley, J. M. Darden, C. H. Chapman, L. P. Roberts, W. M. Stephenson, Robt. F. Whitley; J. H. Turner, John M. Roberts, W. E. Wills and W. J. Darden.

Space will not permit a complete history in this sketch, but this will probably appear in another place and at some other time. Several years ago our Sunday School Convention emphasized the importance of seeking places to establish "Mission Sunday Schools" within the bounds of the Convention. A number of churches were established in this way. Is it not possible to return to that method of finding suitable places for establishing new churches? It is time to organize new churches if we are to grow. Who will find the places where new churches are needed?

I. W. JOHNSON.

OUR MISSION BOARD.

On the sixteenth of this month, our Mission Board will meet in annual session. The meeting is always held in Suffolk, Virginia. Colonel J. E. West is the chairman, and Dr. J. O. Atkinson of Elon College is the executive secretary.

The board was organized January 5, 1907 at Elon College. Colonel J. E. West and Dr. J. O. Atkinson were members of the original board and have rendered continuous service in this capacity. Through this board and its ever-widening program, the church has given expression to its evangelistic and missionary passion. The members of this board have always been vitally interested in every department and every undertaking of the church. New communities and new sections for our church have been entered under the direction of the board and churches have been established which have resulted in substantial organizations.

It is this board which has also directed and sponsored the foreign missionary efforts for the denomination. Through the missionary board and the general convention, and now through the American Board of Commissioners for foreign missions, this board represents the missionary efforts abroad of our united church. When a complete history of the Mission Board for the Southern Convention is written, it will embrace the facts that a large percentage of our local churches have been assisted, either directly or indirectly, by the board, and that the gospel has gone into other countries and ultimately, we hope, to the utmost parts of the earth. As a result of the program of the consecrated endeavors of our Mission Board, literally hundreds and thousands have been led to Christ and into the church. As fruitful as the efforts have been, much more good could have been accomplished if the church had responded to the earnest appeals of the board according to its ability to provide funds for the march of the church through the years.

Under the counsel and direction of the Mission Board, the Woman's Board was organized. This organization has not only been thorough and competent, but most aggressive. The women of our churches have responded most generously and have not only given of means but of their lives that the kingdom in its fullness might come at home and abroad. The missionary organizations of our convention have wrought faithfully and successfully, and are still fighting the good fight of faith that our Lord's commission might be fully and completely fulfilled.

It seems to the writer that we have come to the place in our organization where our Mission Board would do well to either expand its program or recommend to the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention a plan for expansion—not a plan that would necessarily entail great expenditures of money, but one that would require more consecrated courage and a higher degree of Christian statesmanship than we have yet displayed. I am thinking particularly of our churches already established and of our ministers already ordained, and of course, the earnest hope is for the ultimate good of the church itself. Programs and men are of no value unless they advance the church. The church is

Dear Boys and Girls;

It is now about time for school to begin, and many of you will be eager to get back into school where you will try hard to learn those things that will make you fine men and women. Here's hoping that you have a very happy school year. I remember how happy I used to be when school opened. I did get a little tired in the spring, but I was always ready to begin again in the fall.

Some of you may someday be the editor of this, or some other paper. Wouldn't you like to begin writing for the paper now? Write me a letter telling what you hope to be when you grow up, or describing your school, or telling of some vacation experience, some picnic trip, or whatever you may want to write. Short poems, good stories, all kinds of things that interest you, will be appreciated. Let's make this a children's page. One written by children rather than one made up by an older person. What do you say? All right, send on the material, and see how it looks in print.

You can write to The Editor, Children's Page, or to "Uncle" Fletcher. But be sure to send your letter to 505 South Main street, Norfolk, Va.

FAIRIES AND ELVES.

Eight little fairies and two little elves
Didn't know how to amuse themselves;

They ran up and down on the piano-keys

Until somebody said, "Don't do that, please."

They danced up and down on the windowpane

Until somebody said, "Please don't," again.

Then eight little fairies and two little elves

Discovered some work on the nursery shelves;

For, oh, what a mess those shelves were in!

They scarcely could tell just where to begin.

They laid all the toys in tidy rows,
A place for these and a spot for those.

Eight little fairies and two little elves,
Perhaps you have guessed who they are for yourselves.

So do keep them busy, for if you shirk,

Old Man Mischief will give them work.

But if they have plenty of work and play,

Old Man Mischief will keep away.

—Author Unknown.

THE FOUR PLANTS.

An old teacher was once taking a walk through a forest with a scholar by his side. The old man suddenly stopped and pointed to four plants close at hand. The first was just beginning to peep above the ground, and the second had rooted itself pretty well into the earth, the third was a small shrub, while the fourth and last was a full-sized tree. The tutor said to his young companion: "Pull up the first."

The boy easily pulled it up with his fingers.

"Now pull up the second."

The youth obeyed, but not so easily.

"And now the third."

The boy had to put forth all his strength and use both arms before he succeeded in uprooting it.

"And now," said the master, "try your hand upon the fourth."

But lo! the trunk of the tall tree, grasped in the arms of the youth, hardly shook its leaves.

"This, my son, is just what happens with our bad habits. When they are young we can cast them out readily, but only divine power can uproot them when they are old."

—Young People's Paper.

"If the world ever comes to a realization of the mind of Christ, it will solve the riddle of existence. For in that mind was perfect clarity, perfect understanding and perfect sympathy."

A PRAYER.

Our Father:

"Help us to be kind.

Help us to learn

To put ourselves in others' places:

Help us to do as we would be done by;

To carry the burden for tired ones,

To remember those that are in bonds as bound with them,

To speak for them who cannot speak for themselves,

And never to find in another's pain our sport.

Help us to be like Thine own self

Who are all love, kindness and tender mercies."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A TRILLING STORY.

Many of us read books or magazines with the expectation of getting a thrill, or, in the language of the street, a "kick" out of them. And a large per cent, or if not the majority of us, have the idea that in order to get a thrill, or a kick, we must read fiction, or a detective story, or some blood and thunder make-up. This is a grave error. George Elliott won fame and a permanent place in the field of literature by taking the common place, the ordinary, the everyday experiences, and writing about them in such a graphic and revealing manner as to rivet and hold the readers attention and give her readers a thrill. Her stories were not of the lords and ladies of high life, nor of the romance and adventures of the leisured upper class, but of the daily experiences of the carpenter with his tools; the plowman in his field; the domestic at her cooking. She gave these ordinary people a chance to be heard in the world, and wrote of their inner experiences in a way that made them interesting and really thrilling to the reader.

Now comes Ina Corinne Brown and takes a most familiar and common place topic and not only writes an interesting and revealing history, but tells the story of the American Negro that will bring a thrill to any lover of good books, and wholesome, elevating literature. Miss Brown is a Southern girl, born in Texas, and got her college training there. After completing her college work at the Southern Methodist University in Dallas, she went to Nashville, Tennessee, where she served for thirteen years as a secretary for the missionary education of young people in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Her work as secretary for missionary education carried her often and much through the South, teaching and speaking in colleges, summer camps, and conferences for both white and Negro groups, in which her church and Mission Board were interested. For four years Miss Brown was a trustee of Paine College for Negroes in Augusta, Ga.

In 1929-30 she traveled in Europe, Africa and Asia, studying problems of contact, and crossed Central Africa from the mouth of the Congo on the west coast to Mombassa on the east. Out of such a background of southern rearing and culture, and out of study and observation and wide travel, both in this country and abroad, Miss Brown lays the foundation deep and secure in established historical facts and records, and then writes a story of the American Negro that will fascinate anyone who, white or black, brown or yellow, is concerned in the high drama of history, and the thrilling incidents of experience and achievement of a large group of the world's citizenship. Miss Brown is not settling, or trying to settle, "the Negro problem," nor does she attempt anywhere in her thrilling story to charter a course, definite and fixed, that the whites or Negroes must follow in order to arrive at definite conclusions, or a fixed solution of this intricate problem. She does what the title of her book indicates, namely: Gives her readers a story of the American Negro and does so with such accuracy and acumen, and yet with such color and charm, as to fascinate her readers and bring them face to face with what she's talking about.

In her Foreword she gives one some idea of her task and her story in these words, "This book is not another study of the race problem as such. It is rather a simple, chronological story of the Negro as the chief figure in one of the most dramatic migrations and adjustments made by any people who, in custom and temperament and even in physical features, have been modified and changed by their life in the New World. They, in turn, in no small measure have molded and influenced the total life and history of the American people of which they are a part. It is, therefore, as interesting and significant human beings, neither better nor worse than other folk of like opportunities, that I have tried to present American Negroes in these pages."

Then the final chapter which she entitled "A Postscript for White Americans" has this paragraph, "In this book I have tried to step outside of race and to tell the story of the Negro as objectively and impersonally as possible. I have tried to forget my own color, the place of my birth, the nature of my taining, and even the potential readers of this book. There are no personal pronouns in its pages, no words meant specifically for either white or Negro readers, no special emphasis on the place of the church or any other institution. Moreover, 'The Story of the American Negro' properly ended in the last chapter. The facts in the case cannot go beyond the present: prophecy, prediction, warning, or admonition does not belong in this narrative."

This book which is one of the mission study books for the year, is out of the ordinary, since the author, though writing with a purpose, makes no appeal for funds or folks, but lays bare with a vivid and facile pen a condition and facts which every citizen and household of our America should know, and will be interested in, and the better, for knowing.

"What shall be done to solve the race problem?" asked Miss Brown of a distinguished sociologist. "I do not know," replied the man of wide study and research, "We will have to leave that question with those who know less about the task and problem than I do."

Reading Miss Brown's book will at least thrill and charm us while we read, and then leave us to wonder how little we know about the so-called "race problem," and to seek knowledge and understanding and wisdom from God as to how this and all our other difficult problems are to be solved. The Friendship Press, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, is the publisher of the book which can be had in cloth for $1.00, or in paper for $.50, and believe it or not, you can take it from this writer that every reader will get more than his money's worth from this edifying and bewildering story.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Mission Board of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will meet at 9:30 A. M. Wednesday, September 16, 1936 at Suffolk Christian Church. This is the annual meeting of the Mission Board, and all who have business with the Board should communicate with Colonel J. E. West, Suffolk, chairman, or Dr. J. O. Atkinson, secretary.

AN ALFRESCO MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church enjoyed very much their alfresco meeting. In a beautiful park, beneath the tall original oaks and elms, and about the out-of-door tables gathered the women of the Society. Folding chairs had been carried from the Fellowship Hall of the church, the women furnished sandwiches, lemonade, pickles, fruit, and flowers, and just as the sun was turning the smooth waters of Lake Kilby to a sheen of seeming gold, we reverently bowed our heads in thanksgiving for life and fellowship, and for the bounty spread before us.

It was easy to turn from thoughts of God's goodness to thinking of how thankful we should be for the Gospel, and Churches, and Christian worship. The supper over, there followed a brief session of business and then a closing moment of worship. With a breeze bringing refreshment from a day which had been very hot, with the sunset softening into twilight, and with a sweet freshness lifting from the cool waters of Kilby, it was easy to sing softly,

"Day is dying in the west,
Heaven is touching earth with rest;
Wait and worship while the night
Set her evening lamps alight
Thro' all the sky."

The Scripture readings seemed to be sweeter, the prayers simpler and more earnest, as the enveloping beauty of the out-of-doors unified our thoughts and ennobled our hopes for the whole wide world. In such moments we get a much better perspective of what God would have us be and do. It was one of the easiest meetings to have, and one of the best to remember of the entire year. A sore of extra heart-throb held us as we thought soberly of our duty to our Christ at home, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth!

REPORTER.

MISSIONARY NEWS ITEMS

By Mrs. W. M. JAY, Editor

The Wakefield Woman's Missionary Society reports a splendid year in every respect. The attendance, interest and offerings have been up to expectations. The world's day of prayer was observed in February.

In March a public program was rendered.

This society entertained the Waverly District missionary meeting in April and proved to be a fine hostess.

Two new members were enrolled during the year. Mrs. R. E. Murphy is the secretary of this society.

The Young People's Society of the Eure Christian Church was organized and held its first meeting Nov. 6, 1936. Mr. Atmill Felton was elected president and Miss Amy Harrell was made secretary. Miss Louise Eure was elected superintendent and has proven herself a capable and helpful leader. They have a membership of forty-five young people and hold regular meetings each month with good attendance. They have worked hard to make all the points on the Standard of Excellence and have been doing some charitable work in the community also. These young people are a wide awake group and are doing a good work. Such a fine group is an inspiration and a help to any church. Keep the good work going and may your second year be even better than your first.

The Bethlehem Woman's Missionary Society has had a very successful year. At the beginning of the Conference year there were 45 active members and 3 associate members, and to date the Society has enrolled 11 new active members. Five active members have dropped their names and one member died, which leaves a total active membership of 50.

The Society being divided into three circles, each circles has worked for new members, and one-third of the apportionment.

They were happy to report at the end of the second quarter their apportionment paid in full, and since then have taken out a life membership for their pastor. They also gave $5.00 towards sending a delegate to a Summer School of Missions.

Each circle took up the Home Study Book "Toward A Christian America" at their monthly meetings, and the society as a whole attended the lectures given in Suffolk by Mrs. Lee Britt on the foreign book "That Other America."

They have had very interesting programs presented each month by their Spiritual Life Superintendent, Mrs. J. W. Folk and her assistant, Mrs. L. A. Savage. In December a very impressive public program was rendered by Mrs. Folk with different members of each circle taking part.

There has been good attendance at each of the monthly meetings and great interest manifested by the members, and through cooperation, prayer and faith they feel the Society has accomplished great good this past year.

Mrs. W. C. Joyner is the president and Mrs. J. C. Taylor secretary of this loyal group of women.

The Holy Neck Woman's Missionary Society has enjoyed a most encouraging year under the leadership of Mrs. J. O. Davidson. An inspirational public program was given in November at which time the thank offering was received. On January 22 they held their twentieth birthday anniversary social, and in addition have had quarterly social meetings. The finances have been taken care of by the division of the Society into three groups with competent leaders for each. They held joint meetings with the hall and church for the World's Day of Prayer observance, and to hear Mrs. Lee Britt teach the foreign study book. The home book was taught by six of their own members at the regular society meetings. Attendance at all meetings, including the District Meeting at Mt. Carmel has been good. Five new members have been enrolled and only one lost, due to leaving the community.

The above news was sent in by Mrs. W. John Norfleet, reporter for the society.

"THE SIMPLE THINGS."

I would not be too wise—so very wise
That I must sneer at simple songs and creeds;
And let the glare of wisdom blind my eyes
To humble people and their humble needs.

I would not care to climb so high that
I Could never hear the children at their play;
Could only see the people passing by,
And never hear the cheering words they say.

I would not know too much—too much to smile
At trivial errors of the heart and hand;
Nor be too proud to play the friend
the while,
Nor cease to help and know and understand.

I would not care to sit upon a throne,
Or build my house upon a mountain top,
Where I must dwell in glory all alone,
And never friend come in or poor man stop.

God grant that I may live upon this earth
And face the tasks which every morning brings,
And never lose the glory and the worth
Of humble service and the simple things.

IF.

(With Apologies to Rudyard Kipling)

If you can go to church when all about you
Are going everywhere but to the house of prayer;
If you can travel straight when others wobble
And do not seem to have a righteous care;
If you can teach and not get tired of teaching,
Or tell the truth when others lie like sin,
Or pray and pray and carry heavy burdens
Without a murmur—senny, you will win.

If you can undertake a noble service,
Expecting others to pitch in and boost,
But find them doing everything to hinder,
Or sitting down like biddies on a roost;
If you can serve while some stand off and jabber,
And never think of climbing up a tree,
Or keep right on the path of love and duty,
And never stoop to an iniquity;
If you can smile when cliques unite in scoffing,
Or laugh when factions prophesy defeat,
And hold your tongue when choirs
kick up a rumpus,
And sisters fight like furies when they meet.

If you possess yourself and pray, "God bless you!"

When every muscle in you aches to smite;
When something says, "Give up!
Give up the struggle!
Since others fail, why stand alone and fight?"

You'll find a Presence by you in the furnace,
You'll find a Presence by you on the sea;
You'll find a Presence by you in the battle —
Yes! Everywhere and always victory!

If you can trust when others faint and falter,
If you can stand and serve when others flee away,
Unmoved by either Jezebel or Ahab, Remaining faithful every livelong day;
If you can keep your courage as few have ever done—
You'll prove yourself a very noble human,
And what is more, you'll be a saint,
my son!

A MEMORY SYSTEM.

Forget each kindness that you do
As soon as you have done it;
Forget the praise that falls on you
The moment you have won it;
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it;
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer
Wherever you may meet it.

Remember every kindness done
To you, whate'er its measure;
Remember those who lend you aid,
And be a grateful debtor.
Remember praise by others won,
And pass it on with pleasure.
Remember every promise made
And keep it to the letter.

THE LAW OF LOVE WORKS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
SEPTEMBER 20, 1936.

Scripture: I Sam. 24:1-22.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Active love. Lev. 25:35-38.
Tues.—Good advice about kindness. I
Kings 12:1-7.
Wed.—How love manifests itself. I Cor.
13:1-7.
Thur.—Joseph's generosity. Gen. 50:15-21.
Fri.—Natural kindness. Acts 28:1, 2.
Sat.—Love in daily life. Eph. 4:31, 32;
5:1, 2.

How do we know the law of love will work? Because it has worked in a marvelous way that cannot be ignored. Let one eliminate from history all labors of love and its leaves will be tattered and torn. Take love out of history and you eliminate every consecrated leader who ever rescued a helpless people and brought them into a land of promise. Take love out of history and you must omit the heroic account of every noble soul who ever suffered for a great cause, every consecrated servant of the Most High who would suffer rather than compromise with the forces of evil.

Take love out of the home and we dash into nothingness those acts of devotion which have made life worth living and home worth remembering.
Truly, "Love is like the sun—it lightens the darkest places and warms the coldest day."

Love is not merely a delicate flower that grows in domestic circles, it is a creative force that must be reckoned with in human society. Dr. Walter Judd, a medical missionary in China, faced the constant danger of the Communists and bandits. Someone said to him one day, "If I were living as you have been living, I would want a gun." "Well," he replied,
"if I had had a gun I wouldn't be here now."

The law of love works. It is the only ingredient that can save our civilization.

THE COUNCIL AT JERUSALEM.

LESSON XI—SEPTEMBER 13, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "For ye brethren were called for freedom; only use not your freedom for an occasion to the flesh, but through love be servants one to another."—Galatians 5:13.

LESSON: Acts 15:1-35; Galatians 2. Printed Text, Acts 15:22-29; Galatians 2:1, 2, 9, 10.

A Critical Issue.

The first Christians were Jews. Even though they were Christians they continued to observe some Jewish customs. Gradually as we have seen in this quarter's lessons, these Jews discovered that the Gentiles were included in God's love and in His plan of redemption. In obedience to a vision Peter preached to some Gentiles, and in keeping with his heavenly vision Paul was preeminently a missionary to the Gentiles. Gradually, and in increasing numbers, therefore, Gentiles became believers and sought admission into the Christian Church. This fact precipitated a crisis in the life of the early Church. There were those, strict but undoubtedly sincere Jews, who insisted that in order to become a Christian, one must be circumcised. "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved"—that was their dictum or ultimatum.

On the other hand there stood Paul who insisted that salvation came through faith in Christ, apart from rites and ceremonies. Paul insisted that a Gentile could become a Christian directly without first becoming a Jew, that is religiously a Jew. Paul saw the far-reaching implications of the Jews' position. He saw that it would make Christianity legal and narrow. He saw that it would stifle its spirit. Therefore he determined to make an issue of the matter and to establish once and for all the principle of salvation through faith. To Paul it was a matter of life and death, a decisive battle.

The Better Way.

In spite of the sharp disagreement and the warm feeling engendered these people showed an admirable spirit. Paul in writing later to the Galatians said that what was done was done by the revelation of the Spirit. In any event these Antioch Christians decided to refer the matter to the mother church at Jerusalem, to those who were leaders by virtue of wisdom and experience, to the apostles and elders. It was a sensible and gracious thing to do. If only individuals and groups and nations would arbitrate their differences, if only they would submit their differences to wise and sympathetic friends and councils, how much bitterness and even bloodshed would be avoided. The League of Nations and the World Court are examples in point of the effort of nations to apply this principle to their international relationships. It is Jesus' way.

A Fair Hearing.

The apostles and the elders and the church heard both sides of the case. It would seem that it was an open-minded council. It encourages people to bring their differences to arbitration if they are assured that they will get a fair deal. Courts of law must be kept just and fair at all costs. One of the tragic factors in modern life is the lack of confidence which many people have in courts of law.

Irrefutable Evidence.

After the Judaizers had had their say, Peter, and Paul and Barnabas had their say. They met arguments with facts. Peter first told of his experience in the house of Cornelius where God poured out His Holy Spirit on those who were Gentiles, even while he was yet speaking. There was no rite of circumcision in this case. Those Gentiles experienced the saving grace of Christ in spite of the fact that they had not been circumcised. And Paul and Barnabas added their testimony, "declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them." It was irrefutable evidence. There was nothing that could be said in refutation. "Then all the multitude kept silence." The principle still holds good. The irrefutable evidence for Christianity is changed lives. One sincere Christian is worth more than a thousand arguments. An honest personal testimony is far more effective and final than any theory or argument.

A Momentous Decision.

James rendered a decision on behalf of the Council. "Wherefore my sentence is that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God." It was a momentous decision. It established in principle the principle of freedom in Christianity. It released Christianity from the shackles of Judaism. It announced the principle of salvation directly through faith in Christ. It undoubtedly avoided a break in Christianity. It gave the spirit a victory over the letter of the law. The question of salvation by grace alone was forever settled, as far as the church universal is considered in this council. "Had the decision gone the other way and circumcision been made necessary for salvation, not only would there have been two great doctrinal divisions in the church, but it is difficult to see how the gospel would have ever gripped the Gentile nations as a whole, as it did in the succeeding centuries."

Thoughtfulness of Others.

The Council did suggest that where there were Gentiles and Jews in the same congregation, the Gentiles refrain from giving offense to the Jews on certain matters. These things, such as refraining from pollutions of idols, from eating things strangled, and from eating blood, were matters of Christian courtesy rather than of principle. The matter of fornication was held somewhat lightly in Gentile communities, but was condemned by Jews. Gentiles were therefore asked to be very careful at this point also. It was a wise decision and a fair request, based on Christian courtesy and religious amenities. It is not a mark of a Christian gentleman to offend another, even when no principle is involved.

RUTS GET DEEP.

Most of the world runs in ruts. We stay in our ruts because it is easier than to try to get out of them, or because our fathers before us traveled in the same ruts. The deeper the rut, the longer people have moved in it, the harder it is to get out of it.

The only really free individuals are those who succeed in getting out of the ruts in which their fellows are moving. Once in the rut, the individual is merely one of the crowd. He is not free to move in any direction except that in which the crowd is moving. He has to follow a pattern or a trail marked out for him by others.

No man is entirely free from some sort of restraints. The worst slaves, however, are the ones who could be free but who prefer to stay in the rut and revile the more enterprising ones who have succeeded in climbing out of it. It is human nature never to shoulder the blame for one's own condition, but to try to find a scapegoat who is responsible for all of one's individual troubles.

MONDAY

"THE GRACE TO BLUSH"

"O my Lord, I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to Thee, my God."—Ezra 9:6. (Read Ezra 9:5-9.)

To be meek and humble is considered by some to be unmanly. The fellow who wrote, "I am the captain of my soul," seemed to feel that it is noble, heroic and Christlike to face front with an iron will that undertakes to subdue every oncoming circumstance, disregarding the principles involved. That man is in error. Humiliation and shame is as manly as heroism when there is cause for it. And surely there is much cause for it in us poor weak errant human beings. There are deeds, words, yes, thoughts, that we need to be ashamed of. Who can stand in purity before the purity of our Lord Jesus Christ?

Prayer—Our Father, we lift our faces unto Thee. Make us ashamed of wrong any time or anywhere. Have pity upon us and raise us daily unto manliness of true repentance. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY

"YET NOT I."

"I labored more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me."—I Cor. 15:1-11.

Paul knew his strength and delighted in his achievements. Every strong and achieving soul has a right to exultation. The Christian harvester comes with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. He is happy, for he hears his Master say, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

But always Christ's faithful servant says with Paul. "Yet not I." Always he knows that in his own strength he is nothing. Always he is conscious of his all-powerful Helper.

There is no room for pride in the life of a true Christian. If pride gets in, there is no room for Christ.

Prayer—At all times, our Saviour, may we say, "Not to me, not to my weakness and unwisdom, but to Thee be all the praise."—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

WEDNESDAY

"ALL FOR ONE"

"The children of Israel committed trespass in the accursed thing."—Joshua 7:1. (Read Joshua 7:1-26.)

It proved to be only Achan that had taken the part of the spoil that should have been reserved for the Lord, but because of him the whole people suffered a disastrous defeat, and the curse was not removed until Achan and all his family were punished by death.

You and I should recognize in our lives our relations to mankind. To do good, we bless; to sin we send out a curse. None of us can act alone and without affecting others. Our influence spreads from ourselves to the family, from the family to other families, to the community, the town, the country and to the world. This is our greatest responsibility. From the beginning God has made us keepers of our brethren.

Prayer—Our Father, we would hate sin with the hatred that Thou dost hate it. We pray for this hate for sin. We flee to Thee this morning for a passion for the world, for the passion of the Saviour to bless us.—Amen.

THURSDAY

"CHRISTIAN OLYMPICS."

"Let us run with patience the race that is set before us."—Heb. 12:1.

"So run that ye may obtain."—I Cor. 9:24.

The runner paused—

To quit was in his mind,
So many fleeter feet
Were leaving him behind.
Then this thought came
With all said and done;
Was it not within himself
That the real race was run?

He had two selves,
Living deep inside;
One always a quitter,
Was without pride.
The other was constant
And a truer friend:
He always urged effort
To the bitter end.

He hated that quitter!
His face was grim—
At least—so he determined
That he would outrun him!
He took a deep breath;
His heart felt light
As he forged ahead
With all his might.

He reached his goal
With sweat-beaded face.
He heard a great shout—
He had won the race!
But he thought to himself
As the praises ran free,
That the best race was the one
That the world didn't see.

—Alma Leggett Lonsdale.

Prayer—Our Father, may we never lose heart, let come what may, for Thou art with us "Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort us."—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE BEST KIND OF BELIEF."

"Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."—John 20:29.

(Read Jno. 20:24-29.)

The heart is the first consideration in belief. If the heart is fixed on material values and sees no further than that, it is a dead heart. He whose heart discerns spiritual values penetrates into the invisible of things and becomes conscious of that greatest and most powerful life,—the invisible.

God cannot reveal himself to a dead heart. He cannot come into such a heart. He who is life, the life of all things, dwells not in decaying temples but dwells in living Temples not made with hands.

Prayer—Our Father, bless us with the Christ life this day.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"COMING GLORY."

"Beloved, now are we the children of God, and it is not yet made manifest what we shall be."—I Jno. 3:2.

(Read I Jno. 3:1-9.)

"Children of God." Really? If so, can we conceive anything that exceeds this in glory?

John at least conceived a greater glory and a more magnificent power. He could not imagine what it might be; but he believed that it was waiting for him, because he knew that he was a son of God already, and he knew also that there is no standing still in the Father's kingdom, but that we are to go on from grace to grace and from glory to glory.

Progress. Endless advance in all things holy and beautiful and desirable! That is the happy fortune of the children of God.

Prayer—Our Father, Life of our life, forbid that we shall ever try to live without Thee. May we grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord, and grant unto us those new and surprising joys that John saw.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"SHAME AND GLORY."

"Is not this great Babylon which I have built for the royal dwelling place, by the might of my power and for the glory of my majesty?"—Dan. 4:30.

(Read Dan. 4:28-33.)

Nebuchadnezzar ate grass like an ox because he had a mind like an ox, because, says Amos R. Wells that no more than an ox did he understand the universe and comprehend his own

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE LORD GAVE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35.

We stand on the threshold of a new church year. We are properly gathered about the Communion Table. How conscious we are as we gather about this table that the Lord gave. It is fitting that we begin this year with the idea of seeing how much we can put into it. And especially is this timely since for the first time in many years our church will have an every member canvass for the current and benevolent pledges to our budget beginning next Sunday.

To give is blessed. The Lord Jesus knew the blessedness of it. From the first years of his life when he gave obedience, and loving service to his parents in Nazareth to the last years when he gave of his life for others he knew the blessedness of giving. One of the oldest refrains in one of the oldest books of our sacred Scriptures is: "The Lord gave." It is the Lord's way. Ever he gave. Where did he ever withhold? He came that they might have life. He gave life. Wherever there was that which withheld life he overcame it. Hunger was an enemy of life. He gave food, literally fed the thousands symbolic of his gifts to the hungry wherever his principles prevail. Disease was an enemy of life. He gave healing. Every known disease of his day fell back beaten at his hands. Sin is an enemy of life. He forgave sins. He pardoned sinners. He overcame evil with good! The last enemy that should be conquered was death. He gave his life to overcome death, that those who believe on him should not perish, but have life everlasting.

Does that seem too platitudinous? Well, let us bring it a little nearer home. We enjoy worship in this beautiful church today. Without Christianity, without the Gospel of Jesus Christ, without the historic Jesus this would be a howling wilderness of swamps, forests, creeping men and wild animals. Or suppose a civilization without Christianity should have come to these shores. You do not have to imagine what that would be like. Hunger, strife, disease, poverty, brutal punishment, greed, imprisonment of the defenseless, and servitude of the weak follow like a black death where God is not known and worshipped. "The Lord gave." Yes, he gave us today all that is worthwhile in ourselves and in our civilization. The Lord gave us our cultivated Christian conscience. The Lord gave us our family life as it is at its best. The Lord gave us through his followers our beautiful songs, our comforting and encouraging scriptures, our high ideals of right, and our joy in serving others unselfishly.

James 1:17 says, "Every good, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of light." Even our very talents come from God, "For to one is given the spirit of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge, etc." I Cor. 12:8. "Covet earnestly the best gifts." The very best gift of all is life eternal, more than we can measure or understand, "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift." II Cor. 9:15.

The common blessings of life, food, water, air, toil (Heaven is blest with perfect rest, but the blessing of earth is toil) all these things are from God: "and also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labor, it is the gift of God" (Ecc. 3:13). To give is blessed. It is to be like God. It is to know an eternal joy, a sense of satisfaction within one's soul differentiating him from the beast. All we have the Lord gave.

"We give Thee but Thine own,

Whate'er the gift may be:

All that we have is Thine alone,

A trust, O Lord, from Thee.

"May we Thy bounties thus

As stewards true receive,

And gladly as thou blessest us

To Thee our first-fruits give."

"It is more blessed to give than to receive." Are we givers or getters? Our modern business has exalted the "go-getter." The ages honor the "go-givers"! "Go—give," are divine commands, with divine blessings in the obeying. It is because enough good Christian people are following the latter command that we have as good homes, and hopes, and blessings of life as we do. If we could saturate civilization with some evil acid of selfishness so that it would be all "getting," and never "giving" twilight would already be turning into midnight darkness. The living waters of Mt. Hermon would truly head downward toward the fatal waters of the Dead Sea. Why is the Dead Sea dead? It gets and never gives!

Do you know, my friends, that one of the very greatest services organized Christianity, and especially the local church, has to offer is the channel for regularly giving unselfishly to a good and righteous cause. We probably have not thought about the sheer blessedness of regular, systematic, week by week, month by month, and year by year giving to God! It vitally links us up with God, it definitely entwines us into the heartstrings of our fellowmen. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." But some will say, I like to give when I feel like it, or when I have a bit extra, or when there is some definite demand,—spasmodically. Suppose the things we need were given to us like that: We need the steady heart-beat, suppose it let up a while! We need regular food, and water, and air. Life is not spasm! It means something to have a steady, regular part in helping the onward going of the Church of the living God. Bring all the criticisms that are justly due against the Church, and any others that one's prejudices or personal bias may demand, and still the Church is the greatest sponsor of goodness, and righteousness beneath the shining stars!

Paul tells us in Ephesians that the Lord gave himself for the Church. He considered it worthy. It is good to give to other things, but keep open a place in your heart, and purse for the Church, and I do not advocate this because by it the church's expenses are paid, but rather because by it one's own life is enriched. Christian giving is a Christian grace!

littleness and the greatness of his God. When he came into a comprehension of God he arose from his bestial estate. When he placed God in His rightful place in his heart and on his throne he regained his majesty. When he reached the humble state of realizing that he could do nothing of himself, then he became able to accomplish something.

When man bows low before God, then and only then does his soul stand upright. When man lays all of his achievements at the foot of God's throne, then and only then is he a victor and an accomplisher.

Prayer—Our Father, we would exalt Thee in our lives as King of kings. Forbid that we shall dream of wearing crowns, but to dream of the crown of righteousness that shines with glory forever.—Amen.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

On September 6, we had our Annual Home-Coming Day for the children who have gone out from the Christian Orphanage. This is a day when every child is invited back home. Many of the children came and enjoyed meeting old friends and making new friends of the children who have come since they left.

The morning was given to exercises in the Orphanage Chapel. The meeting was opened with a song. Prayer was offered by Dr. J. U. Newman of Elon College. Rev. E. M. Carter of Youngsville, N. C., a former superintendent of the Orphanage, was present and made a talk in which he recalled a few incidents that occurred at the orphanage when he was superintendent. Dr. J. O. Atkinson, in his usual beautiful manner, presented Judge James L. McLemore who delivered an address. Judge McLemore, in his calm and pleasant way, presented truth after truth for serious thought.

Lunch was served on the grounds to all present. The afternoon was spent in looking over the premises and talking of old times. The day was ideal and all the children present seemed to enjoy being back home on another Home-Coming Day.

In our financial report in the SUN of August 13th, we erroneously reported the Suffolk Sunday school and the Elm Avenue Sunday school offerings under the heading of Eastern North Carolina Conference instead of Eastern Virginia Conference. We regret the error and thank the good lady who called our attention to it.

OUR MISSION BOARD.

of no value unless it advances the kingdom of God on earth. As the writer observes the existing situation in our convention, the impelling need is to bring our churches together into convenient pastorates, either willingly or advisedly, so that they will be of inspiration and help to the minister—the one whom they invite to be their counselor in things spiritual. How long will we neglect the opportunities, dissipate our energies, and allow the kingdom to go to waste, simply for the lack of an intelligent and cooperative plan of organization? Every evidence of God is that He is an all-wise being, intelligent in His organization and economic in His dispensation, save when it comes to beauty and mercy, and here He is gloriously extravagant. I cannot conceive of it being the will of God for one man to drive or ride a hundred miles to serve a church and then two other men ride or drive the same distance to serve two other churches with a radius of ten, fifteen, or twenty miles. Plainly, I believe it to be the responsibility of our church to form our part-time churches into convenient and workable pastorates so that a pastor may live and work in a given community or contiguous communities, thus uniting his pastorate as to people and his efforts to do the will of God in their midst.

Perhaps some readers may feel that this is not the business of the Mission Board. Maybe not, but it is the business of the Mission Board to refuse to give funds on conditions not agreeable or impracticable to the board. We have today churches scattered thru-out the convention without pastors. We have pastors without churches.

Both are suffering. There are certain things that the Lord will do for us. There are other things that he expects us to do, for he has given to you the capacity. My hopes and earnest prayers are with our board as they convene in annual session, and I trust that not only will lines of security be emphasized but that plans for solidarity and for aggressiveness for the church may be seriously considered and wisely undertaken. L. E. SMITH.

STUPIDITY AN OBSTACLE.

the way of human progress is not greed or tyranny but stupidity. Show me a man who prides himself on being conservative, and, nine times out of ten, I will show you that his so-called conservatism is merely stupidity. He has been taught, or has taught himself, certain fixed rules which, to his stupid mind, chart the only perfect course of life. He refuses to listen to any suggestion that a new way or a different way of doing things might be better for everybody, including himself.

I do not mean to suggest that the new way or the different way is always the better way. What I am trying to say is that the true conservative, if he is intelligent, will look at any new ideas with an open mind and an impartial eye, instead of dismissing them from all consideration merely because they do not conform to his preconceived ideas.

LEADERSHIP SCARCE.

The only way the mass of mankind gets out of the old ruts and the habits which handicap it is when some forceful character who has set himself free from the inhibitions which bind most of us to the old ways, points out a new way so persuasively that first a few and then the many are induced to try it.

Such leaders are rare. Not very many of them are born in any generation. When they do arise they change the world.

I have in mind particularly one young man who has achieved the presidency of a great business enterprise because he was not afraid to try new ways of doing things, and has been successful in persuading huge numbers of people to accept new ideas, while his competitors in the same line of business have been content to stay in the rut and follow the patterns which their predecessors laid down for them. While they were losing money, he started new ventures at the bottom of the depression and made them pay.

In Memoriam

HARRELL.

Whereas our Heavenly Father hath seen it in His infinite wisdom to call from time into eternity our friend, James Harrell, who was a faithful member of Liberty Spring Church, therefore be it resolved:

DUNN.

Again the circle of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational-Christian Church, Lynchburg, Virginia, was broken when on Monday, May, 25, 1936, God in His infinite wisdom called to her eternal home Mrs. Ella Pribble Dunn, a beloved member, and wife of our faithful steward, Mr. A. S. Dunn.

We wish to pay tribute to the memory of one whose going has brought sorrow to us all, therefore be it resolved:

First: That we know our Heavenly Father doeth all things according to His love and mercy, therefore we bow in submission to His will;

Second: That her service, her faithfulness and her staunch loyalty we shall ever hold in loving remembrance;

Third: That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her companion and children and point them to God whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble;

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be inscribed on the minutes of our Missionary Society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun.

MRS. W. E. TATE,
 MRS. E. W. HARVEY,
 MRS. S. R. GAY.

HORNADAY.

On July 8, 1936, our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to call unto Himself our beloved brother, W. A. Hornaday. We cannot understand why this one who was so faithfully filling his place in our Sunday school, church, Christian Endeavor, and community, and whose work was so badly needed should be taken from us.

He loved this Pleasant Hill Sunday school and church above other interests to the extent that for 12 years as superintendent he was there on time with his usual kind greeting and deep interest in the things that build up the Kingdom of God.

We, the church, the Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor society wish to express our appreciation of him in the following resolutions:

1. That his example of loyalty and devotion to the church, the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor society, and to every good cause in our community has been an inspiration to us all.

2. That we do hereby express our gratitude to God for the faithful service he gave as superintendent of our Sunday school and for his interest and presence in the religious meetings of the community.

3. That we shall greatly miss him in the services which he attended so regularly, his great faith in God, his high ideals, wise counsel and trustworthy judgment has built up the church and community life and won the confidence, esteem and appreciation of all who knew him.

4. That we seek to follow his example to carry on the Master's work.

5. That we extend to the family our deep and sincere sympathy, and that we bear them in our petitions to our Father in Heaven "For earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal?"

6. That these resolutions be spread upon the permanent records of the church in loving memory of our beloved friend, that copies be sent to the family, to The Christian Sun and the county paper for publication.

WHY CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS?

Why.—

Members of local churches sometimes ask why they are expected to send money to Conference. They have a right to know, and this page is intended to be a partial answer. Every member of the church should know what is expected, and why. This article applies primarily to the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

The Conference.—

Long ago it was found that "in unity there is strength." Groups can do what individuals cannot. For this reason individuals join local churches, churches unite in conferences, conferences form conventions, and conventions (and state conferences) unite in a national council.

The conference receives reports from pastors and churches at its annual session, plans programs of cooperative work, aids new or weak churches, and shares with the larger bodies of the church in things that cannot be done by a conference.

It takes some money to run the conference itself, and more to aid churches in the conference, but most of the money received by the conference is sent to the convention.

The conference asks each church to make contributions for the work it does, and for the convention.

The Convention.—

The Southern Convention is composed of the five conferences in Virginia and the Carolinas. Dr. S. C. Harrell of Durham, North Carolina, is president, and Dr. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk, Virginia, is secretary.

The Convention meets every two years and is composed of delegates elected by the conferences.

The Convention receives money only from conferences. It makes no direct call to churches or individuals. Unless the conferences support it, the Convention cannot serve.

Two-fifths of the money received by the Southern Convention is sent to the General Council for its support. Part of the remainder goes as a subsidy to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, which leaves only a small amount for running expenses.

The Convention is responsible for certain boards and institutions, and asks the churches, through the conferences, to support them.

Elon College.—

One of the first cooperative enterprises of our Southern Church was Elon College, established in 1889. The College is an institution of higher learning maintained by the Church for the training of Christian workers and the development of Christian character.

Obviously, the College is both a necessity and a missionary enterprise. Those interested in the growth of our churches through the leadership of trained workers, and those eager to develop Christian character in growing youth, find Elon College a good investment.

The College is supported by Sunday schools, churches, conference apportionments, and gifts from individuals. Dr. L. E. Smith is president.

Board of Christian Education.—

In 1918 the Board of Religious (Christian) Education was organized to promote leadership training, Christian Endeavor, and all forms of young people's work.

Rev. Joe French of Norfolk, Virginia, is president, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, North Carolina, Secretary, and Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Virginia, Executive Secretary.

This Board sponsors the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training, local training schools, Youth Fellowships, Christian Endeavor, Sunday school work, and all phases of religious education in local churches. Books, pamphlets, plays, program material, and quite a variety of helps are available from the Board office at 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, without charge.

The Board is supported by the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions, gifts from the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies, and by about four per cent of conference apportionments.

Board of Ministerial Relief.—

This Board undertakes to see that aged ministers, their widows and orphans, are cared for in the time of their distress. Most ministers receive small salaries and have many calls to meet. Being generous souls, they save little or no money. When age, illness, or death comes there is no money for the emergency.

The churches minister to these needs by giving an offering at Christmas, and through the conference apportionments, about 8 per cent going for this good cause.

In 1933, the last year figures at hand, fifteen families were aided by this fund.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson of Elon College, North Carolina, is chairman of the Board.

The Orphanage.—

Homeless, orphan children tug at the heart-strings of Christians. For 35 years our Church has offered a home for these children at Elon College, North Carolina. About 100 are there now, and dozens of them have reached maturity and gone out to make good citizens as well as to live Christian lives. This is both a humanitarian and missionary work.

Mr. Chas. D. Johnson is the much-beloved and efficient superintendent.

Sunday schools, churches, and individuals make contributions direct to the Orphanage, but the amount is credited on conference apportionments.

Board of Publications.—

The Board of Publications is charged with the responsibility of editing and publishing THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the organ of the Convention. This paper was established in 1847, and is now the only weekly publication of the Congregational and Christian churches in the U. S. A. Dr. N. G. Newman of Holland, Virginia, is chairman of this board.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN receives money from subscriptions, from the Orphanage, Elon College, the Mission Board, and the Board of Christian Education, and from the Convention Fund. A larger list of subscribers will reduce the amounts necessary from other sources, and will be a blessing to the homes the paper reaches.

The Mission Board.—

With Col. J. E. West, of Suffolk, Virginia, as chairman and Dr. J. O. Atkinson as secretary, the Mission Board seeks to build new churches and strengthen old ones within the Convention, and to send the Gospel to eleven other countries around the world. In the foreign work we cooperate with the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

The Woman's Board is a department of the Southern Convention, and works with the Mission Board. The women have societies in many local churches, and sponsor mission work among young people and children. Mrs. J. G. Truitt of Suffolk, Virginia, is president of the Woman's Board.

The Mission Board receives money from Sunday schools, missionary societies, churches, individuals, and conference apportionments. All these funds, except from missionary societies, are credited on conference apportionments.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, of La Grange, Ga., was the preacher at the Congregational-Christian Church in Newport News, on last Sunday.

The Eastern Virginia Young People's Missionary Conference will hold its annual meeting in the Suffolk Christian Church on the evening of September 25th. All young people of the Conference are invited—and so are older people, especially the ministers and youth leaders.

The Ocean View and Berea churches of Norfolk, Va., have welcomed the return of their pastor, Rev. Joe French, and his bride, the former Miss Ann Taylor, of Crossville, Tenn., from their bridal tour. Both churches have given receptions to the happy couple, and have supplied them with many lovely and useful gifts.

News from Florida is to the effect that the workers there, including Dr. E. C. Gillette, Rev. W. T. Scott, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, are busy on the fall program which includes a variety of meetings. That is a fine team of workers. Many other States to the north of them would do well to have such a group of workers directing the efforts of our churches.

Professor P. J. Kernodle, an important person in the councils of the Christian Church, long-time printer and business manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, passed to his reward on Saturday morning, September 15, 1936. His son, John T. Kernodle, the present printer of the SUN, and the other members of the family have the sympathy of their many friends of the SUN family.

The Portsmouth, Va., newspapers recently carried a picture of Rev. R. A. Whitten and a long write-up of the work he has accomplished there during the past few years. The paper announced that Rev. Mr. Whitten has accepted the pastorate of our Winchester and Timber Ridge churches, and that he will move to Winchester just as soon as the Portsmouth church releases him from contract there. His many friends will wish him much success in his new field.

Rev. J. Everette Neese, of Elon College, N. C., writes that he is vacating his churches this fall to begin a pastorate at the First Christian Church of Henderson, N. C., and that anyone interested in his present field may correspond with the following persons: Haw River, Mr. Frank Baine, Haw River, N. C.; Carolina, Mr. Earnest Paylor, R. 3, Burlington, N. C.; Shallow Ford, Mr. W. E. Walker, General Delivery, Burlington, N. C.; Martha's Chapel, Mr. Walt Morgan, R. 3, Apex, N. C.

A correspondent writes: "Nine new members united with Shallow Well Christian Church by profession of faith at the closing service in Religious Emphasis Week. The pastor, Rev. F. Erwin Hyde, did his own preaching, and was assisted by Mr. Henry Lewis, of Jackson, Miss., who is a tenor soloist of outstanding ability. Mr. Lewis sang his way into the hearts of this congregation, as he does wherever he goes. The people feel like these services of the first week in September were very profitable and inspirational."

The women in the Eastern Virginia missionary societies are busy finishing up their work and getting ready for the annual meeting which is to be held on October 2nd, at Suffolk Christian Church. The treasurer, Mrs. J. M. Raby, of Windsor, Va., says that some societies have sent in more than their apportionment. All reports were supposed to be in her hands by September 15th, and most of the societies cooperate by sending in the report on time. Those that have not done so will aid in the work by sending in the report at once. Mrs. Elizabeth P. Bryant Harris, of Norfolk, is the president of this Woman's Conference.

A recent letter from Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, one-time pastor of the Elon College Church, tells some things that are of more than personal interest, and the editor takes the liberty of passing this information along to the SUN family. He says: "Our work here moves along encouragingly. The past year has been a very interesting one. I have just concluded a year as president of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Pastors' Association, an organization of eighty members. During the year we brought to the city Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, president of the Federal Council of Churches, for two addresses, and Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa for one address. We also promoted an interdenominational pulpit exchange in May. During Holy Week seven denominations downtown, our own among the number, joined in a union communion service. Pilgrim Church has just spent $500.00 in re-decorating the church outside and in and in repairing the furnaces. We are preparing to entertain the Tennessee Conference here October 20th-22nd."

VIRGILINA LETTER.

Three successive weeks in July in series of meetings, and a vacation during the month of August are the principal things of interest to report in this letter.

I was assisted the first week in July at Liberty by Rev. W. M. Stevens; the second week at Virgilina by Rev. W. E. Wisseman; and the third week at Lebanon by Rev. A. L. Granger. The preaching was excellent and these brethren labored faithfully in every way to help believers and to point the lost to the Lamb of God. I am comforted in the hope that much good was done in the Master's name. Fifteen members have been received as one result of these meetings. Hebron did not hold a meeting this year.

Both family and self have been graciously remembered in a substantial way. Liberty gave me a suit of clothes, and Lebanon assisted liberally in the expense of my vacation. Individuals have aided in cash and substantial for our pantry.

Each of the four churches voted me a vacation for August. After spending a few days with our daughter and grandchildren in Washington, D. C., I went for a week's stay at the Massanetta Bible Conference. The time spent there was a period of strenuous work rather than one of rest. So wonderful were the opportunities that I felt I must make the most of them. In seven days I attended and took notes on thirty-five sermons and lectures. I found the water excellent and the hotel fare all that one could desire. My stay was made more pleasant by the presence there of Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk. Dr. Johnson came to see me every day, and took me in his car through a portion of that wonderful section of our country which I had desired to see for years.

Vacation is over and I am back at work hoping to be of more help to the people I try to serve as an appreciation to them for their goodness in allowing me a period of recreation.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

Some of my friends tell me that I am thinking of everything in terms of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. But I sincerely hope that such a calamity will never come to me. This new work has made me think more about the whole program of the Church than ever before. It is my candid opinion that the Church Paper should help to develop individual life, and all phases of church work. I suspect that most of us become so busy with the thing close at hand that we fail to see how what we are doing fits into the whole program of the Kingdom of God.

ABOUT SUBSCRIPTIONS.

All money for subscriptions should be sent to the Editor, who has the responsibility of handling the subscription list. That is not an excellent arrangement, but it is the one under which we are working at the present time.

September has been much the best month so far in collections. By the tenth we had received 76 new and renewal subscriptions. And still they come. In order to get our list up to what it should be, it will be necessary to average ten subscriptions each work day of the year. It gave us a thrill here in the office when we reached that number one day recently. If the people out in the churches will keep working, it will not take so long to get our CHRISTIAN SUN shining in three thousand homes of our churches. Then we can do business!

Commissions are allowed only to churches and church organizations, and then only on the basis of a paid up list equal to ten per cent of the church membership. The organization sending in the list, receives twenty-five per cent of all money collected, whether for new or renewal subscriptions. Any subscriptions sent in before reaching the ten per cent of membership should be paid in full. The total commission can be retained at the end of the campaign, or will be refunded by the editor.

WE ARE GLAD TO.

Some of you, my good friends, have found that we sometimes make mistakes here in the office. I am a mere man, and have many of the limitations of humanity. The two girls in the office are trying hard to keep records straight, but they are human, too. The printers in Richmond are eager for everything to work smoothly, but they are also subject to human limitations.

If by chance you find that we have not given you the credit that should have been given, that we have sent a statement that your subscription has expired, when really it has not, or that anything else we have handled is not correct, please send us a note giving the correct information, and we shall be glad to make the correction. We are just as eager to get everything in proper shape and keep it that way as you are.

It is a real joy to get some of your letters. They are so kind and courteous. Old friendships come to mind. Unknown friends say kind things. We like to hear from you. Write us as much and as often as you like. And remember that it is a friendly thing to call our attention to ways in which we can improve our work.

LET'S BE FRIENDS.

In the struggle to live a full and happy life, it is necessary for us to be friendly and to be friends. We are all members of the Father's family and members of the same Church. We have the same temptations. Many of our weaknesses are the same, or similar. Your friendship and helpfulness make it easier for me to live. And I like to think that when I sweat away here in this office day and night that you may read this little paper, by so doing I am proving my friendship for you.

If some little item, some poem selected, or some article written, brings to you a bit of inspiration, courage, or guidance, then I feel that I am being a friend of yours, and joy comes to me for being friendly.

I thank God for sunshine and bird-song, for the sweet morning light upon the hill-tops, and the tender eyes of my loved ones. The great world is awake and athrob with life. I, too, am awake and life is pulsing through my veins. I have a part in the great world, in its work, its joys and its sorrow. Today I can be a little center from which I shall radiate peace, kindness and good-will. I thank God for opportunity. A beautiful golden sunbeam has entered through my chamber window, and awakened me to the gladness and beauty of the morning. May my spirit be wakened and kindled by the Divine Spirit, so that all this day it may warm and gladden the hearts it touches.—Stevenson.

AT THEIR EASE IN ZION.

There are too many people who are satisfied with their present condition. Great lives are never free from the desire for more and greater achievements. Paul believed that he could not live a happy, fruitful life unless he advanced in the virtues of Christian growth. The one supreme ambition of every true believer in Christ is to become more conformed to the likeness of Christ as he advances in years. I believe it was Phillips Brooks who said, "Bad will be the day for every man when he becomes content with the thoughts he is thinking; with the life he is living, and with the deeds he is doing; when there is at all times a deep desire beating at the door of his soul for the accomplishment of something greater, which he is conscious he was created to do, because he is a child of the King."

The Christian religion is more vital today than ever before. The crises we are facing in this age makes it more imperative that we think honestly and intensively about our social and religious welfare. With so many omens concerning the future of the Church that we pause in our bewilderment to catch some new vision as to what we can do or what we should follow. How our standards of living, it seems to me, have fallen! Ask the man who has not identified himself with some Christian brotherhood why he is not affiliated with the Church, and he will ask what the Church has to offer him more than he finds in the world.

Too much and too long has our education failed to be enough Christian. I saw seventeen young people baptized not long ago in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and received into the fellowship of a Christian brotherhood, but how pathetic it was when I was told that there was not anybody among the older members of that church who was capable educationally of leading them on in their motives and activities to a more fruitful life. Too many members of the Church have been at their ease in Zion.

A. R. FLOWERS.

People who are content to dwell in dirty and ill-kept surroundings are quite certain to be wanting in high spiritual ideals, and in deep religious sentiment. They cannot possibly be near to God either in their lives, or in their thoughts. God loves order and cleanliness. Poverty can never be pleaded as an excuse for dirt and disorder: for poverty ought to shun dirt as its worst enemy.—Anon.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SHALL WE GROW?

Within a few weeks the churches will make their reports of what has been accomplished during the past year, and will then begin on another conference year. These reports are often very revealing. They tell what the church people have done, how interested they have been, and how well they have succeeded. Some reports indicate that the secretary has carefully filled out the report, but others seem to indicate that whoever was responsible for the report thought that it made but little difference whether it was right or wrong. It is very important that church reports be accurate. Unless one can find accuracy, truth, in the Church, where can one find such?

It is to be hoped that the reports this year will show a healthy growth. We have been going the wrong way in recent years. It is time to change the tide. It is time for us to make an aggressive attempt to increase members, activity and accomplishments.

The President of our country says that we have passed the depression and are now in the days of prosperity. All we need, says the President, is to scatter the prosperity among all our people. Fact is that most of our church people are now in pretty good financial circumstances. It is not now necessary for our churches to plead poverty as an excuse for not putting on a progressive program that will reach the entire membership as well as that much larger group who are outside the church and should be brought within the fellowship.

It is the candid and considered opinion of this writer that our churches can grow. We need make no excuse for failure. We have the needed money to finance a fine program. We have the ability within our churches. The real question rests upon the will of the membership. If we want to grow, we can. God is giving all the things needful for growth. If we have the will to use our resources, we can grow. Shall we grow?

LEGAL OR RIGHT?

A few years ago a friend of mine drove his car in front of another that was loaded with liquor, and he was considered by some to be a criminal. He never put alcoholic beverages in his auto. He acted only as a lure to attract the officers of the law and keep them away from the rum-runner. That was all wrong four years ago.

Today big trucks loaded with dozens of barrels of liquor pass the street in front of my church. No official stops them. They have the protection of the state, because the beverages they haul bring revenue to the state.

Transportation and sale of alcoholic beverages are legal here now. But are they right? The reason it is wrong to murder is not because it is against the law. It is against the law because it is wrong. The change in the law has little or nothing to do with the question of right and wrong. The law does not change the effects of alcoholic beverages.

Legal beer, wine, and liquor, are just as destructive to human flesh, mind, will, and moral ideals, as illegal beverages are. They do not make people more gentlemanly or ladylike. They destroy rather than build. The effect of the alcohol is exactly the same regardless of whether the government gets a profit or not.

An up-standing young fellow is offered a job in a drug store where they sell beer and wine. He needs the job. He does not drink beer, wine or liquors. Should he sell that which he does not use and which he does not want his friends to use because it will injure them? It is legal, this sale of beer and wine. But is it right? Will taking this job strengthen the moral fibre of his character, or will it weaken his moral backbone? His pastor believes that it will have the same effect on him that pitching his tent toward Sodom had on Lot. Because the work is legal is no sign that it is right.

Christians live by love, not by law. They live under civil government, but their final authority comes from the Moral Ruler of the universe. They must follow the upward trail regardless of human laws.

F. C. L.

OUR INCREASING FELLOWSHIP.

It is difficult for some of us in the Southern Convention to feel even yet the thrill of the larger fellowship into which we moved by the union of Congregational and Christian churches. We have been so busy with local problems, with building our college, our orphanage, our missionary and educational programs, that we have failed to see the significance attached to the merger.

The Southern Convention now covers only the Carolinas and Virginia, because Georgia and Alabama formed state conferences after uniting with the Congregational churches. But there are about the same number of people in the convention as before. We are now more compact as a convention and can deal with local problems in a more intimate way. For instance, it is easier to direct the formation of pastorates now than when the far South was included.

While there can be a more intimate fellowship within the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches and a broadening fellowship with new people from the two branches of the former churches, there is also a wider fellowship that reaches throughout the entire Southeast. The Southeast Convention grew out of this larger fellowship, and includes the Southern Convention, Kentucky and Tennessee, and all the other states to and including Florida.

It is very interesting for some of us to learn what the Congregationalists were doing in Florida and what our own Christian Church people were doing in Kentucky. This new knowledge, the new acquaintances, the broadening fellowship, is, indeed, very strengthening to the church loyalty and spiritual stamina of our lives.

And some of us rejoice greatly that now we are part of a fellowship that reaches all around the earth, that when we give missionary money we know that it will help to preach the Gospel of Christ to people in at least twelve countries. The long view gives new beauty and joy. The golden glow on a western sky at twilight-time is far prettier than the damp darkness of the nearer view on a cloudy day. The world-wide fellowship of our Church brings richer joys and greater challenge than the smaller group of which we were formerly a part.

ABOUT WORDS.

About sixty years ago a boy from a remote community in the southern mountains was converted in a revival meeting and decided to become a preacher. This eventually meant his leaving his home and going to a school which was not far in miles from his old home, but very far in its ways of living, and especially in its ways of speech.

Because he meant to be a minister, this boy was from the very first very much interested in improving his ways of speaking. He joined a literary society and was active as a debater. And as he learned, he immediately practiced.

When he went home the first summer and succeeding summers, he came in for a good deal of raillery because of the change in his way of talking. In spite of the fact that he was inclined to be self-conscious and self-distrustful, this was a matter in which he felt such a degree of conviction that he persisted in spite of all obstacles, pronouncing his words in the way he had found to be correct, and using the right grammatical forms. In the course of time hardly a trace of his old speech habits remained. In every essential, his speech had become a new creation.

This sort of progress may represent a moral triumph of no small proportions. Most of us have at one time or another made a real effort to improve our speech, but there are limits beyond which we do not have the courage to go. These limits are usually imposed by the standards of the people around us—we must at all costs avoid being thought affected! And what an abysmal sense of insecurity it gives to feel that some phrase you have employed in a moment of enthusiasm without being absolutely sure of your ground has been used out of place and is resulting in raised eyebrows on the part of your hearers!

Far better, however, to use a wrong phrase occasionally than never to venture at all. And what a satisfaction there is in learning to use out-of-the-ordinary words and feeling at ease with them, and how stimulating it is to hear other people do so!

"Your speech betrays you," said a maid to a frightened Galilean. Our speech is likely to betray the part of the globe from which we come, and it is said that the initiated in such matters can also tell from our speech from what part of the world, even from what states, our parents come. It betrays something about our general reading and the care with which we listen to the sermons and lectures we hear; it betrays a good deal about our habits of carefulness and accuracy. Most of all, it tells whether we are of the select company in which words have a special value, to which belong all those who feel "the urgency of the necessary word."

One modern poet has said that God in his goodness has devised many beautiful things,

"But made not anything at all
So beautiful as words."

Fellow enthusiasts will pardon the overstatement. It is true that words must have experience behind them in order to have reality; it is also true that the fitting word can interpret experience to ourselves and to others.

Let us pluck up our courage and improve our vocabularies.—International Journal of Religious Education.

SUGGESTIONS FOR WORSHIPPERS

Our church service would be improved if our worshippers followed these suggestions: 1. Get to the church before the service begins. 2. Leave the three rear pews for late comers. 3. Fill up the middle part of the pew first, leaving the ends of the pew for those who come later. 4. Take your cue from the minister and the choir. If they whisper, you may. The children will not whisper if the adults do not. 5. If the service has begun, wait in one of the rear rooms until there is a break in the service. 6. Join with the choir and congregation in the hymns and responses. 7. When the service is over exchange greetings with those who have been seated near you. Do this whether you know them or not.—Anon.

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.—A. M. Kelley.

PASSING OF MEN.

Politics not only remind us of the strength and weakness of men but the passing of men. Only among those who are looking toward the Sunset Valley can we find individuals who knew Presidents before the turn of the century. The ranks of those who came into personal contact with the spectacular Teddy Roosevelt, who was at the helm of national affairs at the ushering in of the present century are rapidly thinning. But that President Roosevelt is no more in the flesh. Death has also removed his contemporary, William Howard Taft. More than a dozen years have passed since the broken-hearted Woodrow Wilson went to an immature grave. Warren G. Harding quickly passed from life's stage of action in the midst of his troublous days. His successor, the beloved Calvin Coolidge, has also passed to that land from which no man returneth. How men die!

Among those who escaped the torturous and deadening life of the Presidency and are still living, the names of James M. Cox, John W. Davis and Alfred E. Smith are best remembered. Their names were household words in the days when millions flocked to see and to hear them as standard-bearers of their party. They are now almost forgotten save by a group of their closest friends and admirers.

As for lesser lights, Vice Presidents and candidates for the Vice Presidency, few of us would make a passing grade to name those who have come and gone since the turn of the century. Quickly do men pass from the stage of public career into isolation, into death.

National issues also pass and die. The shifting of civilization's problems and needs brings new responsibilities. Some men, regardless of their age, adjust themselves to these inevitable changes in the hearts and outward manifestations of men and thus live out their years as admirable servants of the generations which they serve. Others see only as they once saw, feel only as the aims and issues of another era stirred them, and think in terms of yesterday's struggles, not of today's turmoils. They are one generation men.

Not so very many years hence such names as Roosevelt, Landon, Garner, Knox, and others who hold the political spot light of today, will be remembered only by matured men and women. Others will take their places in life's great arena where men fight for power and supremacy.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Many writers are busily engaged in the task of giving a satisfactory diagnosis of the ills of the church. Ministers are telling their congregations what is wrong with the church. Laymen are decrying the weaknesses of the ministry and suggesting the ways to a recovery of spiritual leadership. In the last week's issue of THE SUN, Mr. Roger Babson used this sentence concerning the church: "The real difficulty to-day is that the Church utterly fails to satisfy existing hunger for spiritual help."

Mr. Babson has a national reputation as a statistician and columnist on financial conditions. But when he undertakes to be an authority on preaching and the administration of spiritual affairs in the Church, he appears to this writer to miss the mark in many respects. He seems to assume, as many other laymen do, that when an ordaining presbytery lays its hands upon a man who once was a layman, that much common sense and many business qualifications are subtracted from this person who is transferred from the pew—the status of a layman—to a minister.

The above quotation presumes that there is an "existing hunger for spiritual help." And is it a fact that "most sermons . . . drive more people away from the churches than they attract?" Is there a hunger for righteousness among the masses of laymen today? Who can give us reliable information and accurate statistics concerning this spiritual hunger? And is it true that the services of worship, including preaching, are not satisfying and helpful to those who attend? If the services are not helpful and uplifting, why do the people who go regularly to church grow in grace and in the richness of spiritual fellowship? Of course no one could fail to understand that the people who are not hungry find no satisfaction in the service of the church. A man who has no appetite for food cannot appreciate the joy of eating a well-prepared dinner. The dinner has been well prepared. The food is delicious and attractive. The meal is well balanced. But the poor sick man has no appetite. He loathes the food. He turns away from the table in disgust. But the difficulty is not in the food; it is in the physical condition of the man.

The masses of people are not hungry for any kind of a sermon or service of spiritual worship. Fire and enthusiasm will not develop an appetite in a sick man. A minister may "fire both barrels" in the face of an apathetic congregation without "hitting the mark" for those who are not hungry for a spiritual message. If there is a real spiritual hunger, a sympathetic listener will find some help in most of the sermons of the average pulpit of this generation. The ministers could improve their work and raise the standard of their preaching by prayer and faithful preparation, but they cannot restore spiritual appetites to sinners. A hungry congregation will inspire any consecrated minister to render more acceptable service. The present day critical attitude of many laymen is enough to chill the enthusiasm of strong ministers. In most cases, the laymen who seek to give advice to the ministers wrap it in stinging criticism.

The ministers are not all that they should be. They have their faults. And the same observation can be made concerning the laymen in the pew. And the laymen who do not attend church should have the same inclusive consideration. The ministers should have a hunger for better preaching, and the laymen should be hungry for the Gospel message.

I. W. JOHNSON.

"LIKE A MIGHTY ARMY."

Since the day of Pentecost, the Church has been moving through human society with an irresistible force. In its movings, it has been changing things, cleansing human minds, purifying human hearts, and regenerating human souls. This transforming force that touches the world, we have been taught to think of as power—spiritual power—not material power, not physical power, not intellectual power, but spiritual power; the power that has the ability to harness human energies and direct human lives to high and holy ends. This power was made possible to man because of man's oneness, because of his agreement. When "they were all with one accord in one place," the spirit came and possessed them, and as a result of His coming, a marvelous work of grace was wrought. Had they not been agreed, there is no evidence that the spirit would have come; and further, there is no evidence that the spirit will abide where there are contentions and strife and discord. According to human experience, worthwhile things are accomplished in agreement and in concerted action. Politics and political parties have demonstrated to the world, not only the feasibility, but the practicability of a compact organization if desired ends are to be reached.

I am a member of the Christian Church; I am in favor of the congregational form of government. I think that our church should hold fast to the heritage of our fathers. I am not in favor of the Episcopacy or of a dogmatic church policy, but I am positively in favor of a constructive leadership for our convention. There is not any question in my mind but that our church has suffered severely, and when the Church suffers, we all suffer—for the lack of a thorough plan of organization and coordination that we might make the best of the opportunities that God has given us.

There is no need for my good friend, Colonel West, to raise the question as to whether our losses have overbalanced our gains. The published facts for the past years support this statement. This to me is alarming. This, however, is not a fault of the congregational form of government, but it is the fault of the leadership of the church that represents that form of government. I am in favor of congregationalism, but I am utterly opposed to the continuation of the situation that we have in the Southern Convention. First, I am opposed to two churches within five to ten miles of each other, each having a different pastor and requiring each pastor to drive from fifty to one hundred miles to serve a church. Second, I am opposed to a system that offers a pastor to a part-time local church for the Sunday services only. Third, I am opposed to a system that permits pastors to preach for a few churches and turn to do other things to make his living. The folks of the Christian Church are just as good as the folks of any church, and if the pastor will give his time to the folks and look to them for his support, he will not be without the necessities of life. But if we are to continue a system that invites unholy competition between the ministers of the church, the church will continue to pay the price for such folly.

If we will group our churches into convenient and adequate pastorates—pastorates that will require a pastor's time and that will, in turn, provide

For the Children

Dear Boys and Girls,

Isn't it wonderful how the weeks just slip by without one even knowing where they go? Vacation is gone, and you are back in school again, or many of you are and the others will be soon. I sometimes wonder where the weeks go anyway. It was just yesterday, it seems, when I wrote a page for this paper, and here it is time for another. But I like to write to you, and like to get your letters, so it does not bother me that the time goes rapidly.

There is only one letter this week. How about some more of you boys and girls writing me a letter? It would make me very happy to have just lots of letters every week. Then I would have a good time picking out the best ones to print in the paper. And I believe you would enjoy writing. Try it. Here's the letter for this week.

Suffolk, Va.,

Sept. 8, 1936.

Dear Uncle Fletcher,

I am delighted with the Children's Page in THE SUN. There are so many things I want to say, but I guess space is limited. However I wish lots of boys and girls would write each week.

School has begun and it is work, work for nine long months, but I enjoy it. Vacation seems a dream, but I had a wonderful time. I would like to see a short Bible story printed on our page. If my letter is not too long, I hope to see it in THE SUN.

With very best wishes, I remain,

Very sincerely,

JANET SAVAGE.

Thanks, Janet, that is fine. I am delighted that you have the chance to attend school, and that you like the work. I have just been thinking of some little folks who are sick or crippled who cannot go to school. How eager you should be since you have good health and can learn.

Right now I cannot lay hands on the kind of a Bible story that would be right to print. But you may like to read a story that I often read when I get a bit lazy or discouraged. It is one of the best that I know to give one new life. You will find it in the first chapter of the Book of Joshua, the first nine years. Moses was dead, and Joshua, a young man, was to be the leader of the Jews as they marched into Palestine. I guess Joshua was a little afraid. Anyway God spoke to his heart and said:

"Arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people. I am giving you a great country. There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life. As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. Be strong and of a good courage. This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, and do what is written therein. Then thou shalt make thy way prosperous and have good success. Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, for the Lord thy God is with thee."

Don't you just love a story like that? Read it in your Bible. I did not give it just as it is in the Bible, but almost. Think of the young soldier who was afraid. Think what it meant for God to tell him he did. Then when you get afraid to do the things that seem to need doing, remember this story of Joshua and go on with the hard task, and God will be with you.

Send me some good stories, poems, puzzles, and anything that you think will be helpful. And be sure to tell me about yourself, your school, your home, your playmates, anything that you like. You may send your letter to The Editor Children's Page, or simply to Uncle Fletcher, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Va.

Love always craves for fellowship, and love for Christ invariably presses on to fellowship with him. Nothing strengthens our moral fiber like fellowship with those who are stronger than ourselves. The mightiest moral dynamic in the world is fellowship with the all-conquering personality of Christ.—H. Maldwyn Hughes.

ALABAMA LETTER.

Roanoke, Ala.

September 4, 1936

Dear Brother:

Will you allow me space in THE CHRISTIAN SUN to give a little report of my summer evangelistic campaign?

My first meeting was with Lowell Christian Church, Roanoke, Ala., of which I am pastor. The preaching was done by the pastor, and local talent was used in conducting the song services. Brother Joe Harris, was the efficient leader and the Lowell quartet rendered valuable assistance. This was a good meeting and quite well attended. The meeting began the second Sunday night in June and closed the third Sunday night in June. We had no increase in members but many souls reconsecrated themselves to the Lord, and the Church. We are very much encouraged with the interest manifested in this church. They are very thoughtful of their pastor's needs and very sympathetic in their expressions.

Permit me to say in this first letter that I am at home this morning from an eight-weeks' tour of evangelistic service. Seven weeks of this time I have done the preaching—have preached seventy sermons in the seven weeks besides filling my own appointments at all my churches. I praise God for his support. I shall try to give a weekly report.

My second meeting was at Antioch Church in Covington County, Ala. Rev. W. H. Tillman is the pastor. I reached him on Monday, following the second Sunday in July. Here we had a great time together, I had never met but a few of these people, but I found them real friendly; and they were ready to hear the word of the Lord and we all richly enjoyed the refreshing from His Presence.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

AN ANNONYMOUS GIFT TO THE AMERICAN BOARD.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions announced last Monday, through the treasurer, Harold B. Beleher, that a deficit of $5,939.51 on the fiscal year ended August 31, 1936, had been met by an anonymous gift made available before the final closing of the books. This is the third year that the books have closed without addition to the accumulated debt of previous years, which now stands at $111,713.03.

The total expenditures for the year amounted to $1,036,140.35. This is $62,000 less than the expenditures of last year, the reduced amount being largely due to the further carrying out of the reduction program that was put into effect three years ago. This reduction program was necessitated by the rapid decline in the gifts from Congregational and Christian Churches and the shrinkage of other sources of income.

For the year just ended the gifts from the Congregational and Christian Churches total $436,678.42. And while this total is less than last year, it is encouraging to note that during recent months the gifts from the churches have nearly equalled the corresponding months of the previous year. During the last three months of the fiscal year, gifts from over 2,500 individuals have been received totalling $83,764.06. The increased number of gifts and the many increased amounts are evidences of the devotion and generous interest of the friends of the Board to whom the officers and the missionaries are deeply grateful.

REVIVALS IN THE HILLS.

Our Elmores have been holding revivals at all the preaching places in the hills. Rev. O. S. Elmore has done all the preaching himself, and how he has any voice left is more than I can tell. He closed a one-week's meeting at Rocky Ford with seven new members added to the church. They had good crowds throughout the meeting and the best of attention.

At Elk Spur our revival closed with ten new members added to the church. We are proud indeed of our church this summer. The people here are going to church over muddy roads and are carrying the small children and showing lots of interest in the Sunday school. Our pastor is still enjoying his work here, and the people surely enjoy hearing him preach. His spirit-filled sermons are finding their way into the hearts of our people here. These meetings have been more than just revivals. It has been a seed-sowing in soil that will bring forth fruit. It is as a gate being opened into a new road that leads to the city of Light.

In addition to the above mentioned revivals, our pastor has preached one week at Sandy Ridge. That is in an out of the way place where they have never had a revival that I know of. The people there were anxious to hear the Gospel, though it was new to them, or the way it is set forth by a Christian preacher is new to them.

In the remote sections of our hills the folks have a kind of faith, but it would sound odd indeed to the Christian world if I were to put it down here for you to read. Enough is said when I say that these Elmores are doing a great work as they plow their way through these dark and rugged hills spreading, wherever they go, a light that cannot fail.

We thank God for these unselfish and God-fearing Elmores who are willing to climb these rugged trails to reach those who have not been reached. They are being rewarded, so far, for their efforts. Our hilly Sunday schools have already reached 773 this summer. That is besides visitors who came in from time to time from out of our territory. We do not count visitors, for they are not on roll. We are looking forward to a greater year next year.

And I must say that these hills have surely learned to love Mrs. Elmore. Her even temper and sincere smile have won a place for her in the hearts of the people here. Though she is young in years she seems to be a mother for all who cross her path. That woman has religion.

MISSION NEWS ITEMS.

The Franklin Woman's Missionary Society reports an unusually good year under the leadership of its president, Mrs. E. P. Jones. The attendance at all meetings has been good and the programs have been an inspiration to all, to carry on in a larger way.

On December 15th the Woman's and Young People's Societies gave a very impressive pageant at which time the mite boxes were opened and a satisfactory offering received.

December 22nd this society sponsored a Christmas cantata which was held at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. A large congregation assembled to hear and see this beautiful rendition.

Several of these members attended the review of the mission study book, "That Other America," by Mrs. Lee Britt, which was held at Holland. They report a profitable and pleasant day.

The annual birthday party was held March 25th, at which time a beautiful and colorful program was given under the direction of Mrs. J. J. Felton.

The annual cradle roll meeting was held June 8th, under the supervision of its superintendent, Mrs. Hayes Holland. An attractive little program was rendered by the small children and a social hour followed with plenty of ice cream and cake.

The society had a real treat on June 28th, when Mrs. Hendricks Jones, of Holland, gave a very inspiring address on church symbolisms. At the conclusion the mite boxes were placed at the foot of the cross as a fitting climax.

This society raised $5.00 to help defray the expenses of a delegate to the School of Missions.

Their August meeting was held at the Country Club with a full attendance. A picnic supper was enjoyed and an inspiring meeting was held. Thus they close a year of good fellowship and with the realization that all points on the standard of excellence have been met.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Bethlehem Christian Church, has had a successful year, both in a spiritual and financial way, under the leadership of Miss Margaret Byrd, president. Miss Audry Byrd is the secretary, and Mrs. J. E. Harris, the wide-awake superintendent. All requirements have been met and much good in a spiritual and social way has been realized.

The mission study book was taught by their pastor, Rev. R. E. Brittle.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL MISSIONS.

In connection with our Leadership Training School in the Suffolk Christian Church beginning October 18th, we are conducting a class in Missions, in which we hope to consider the following:

1. A study of the organization of our missionary program, convention, conference and local.

2. The Foreign and Home Mission study books taught by women who attended the Mission Conference at Eagle's Mere, Pa., last spring.

3. Study as thoroughly as time will permit "Missionary Education in the Church," by Herbert W. Gates.

4. Materials and methods for effective program building.

We invite all interested to share in this course.

MRS. JOHN G. TRUITT.

The most marked trait that distinguishes the strong from the weak is the ability to see what is essential and what is non-essential.—Dr. Frank Crane.

"If you think your church the best Tell her so!
If you'd have her lead the rest,
Help her grow!
When there's anything to do,
Let the fellows count on you.
You'll be happier when it's through Don't you know."

for him the necessities of life, I am convinced that our ministry will be more content, will be happier, and that our lives will be far more productive. The time spent in traveling long distances can be far more profitably spent ministering to the needs of the people. I believe that our ministers and our churches are interested sufficiently in the welfare of the church and in the coming of the kingdom to cooperate in a plan designed to accomplish that for which the church was founded and for which we pray. It is not necessary to have a bishop or an Episcopal form of government to obtain these things, but they may be realized in common counsel, in earnestness of purpose, and in the fervency of the spirit.

My good friend, Colonel West, must be reminded that the churches constituting the other conferences of the convention are not so closely related in point of territory as are those of Eastern Virginia; and further, that there is, perhaps, a more aggressive leadership in Eastern Virginia than in the majority of our other conferences. The Eastern Virginia Conference has a larger percentage of trained ministers, and therefore, greater things are to be expected. Colonel West and I are agreed. What I am pleading for is for the work of organization, so well begun in Eastern Virginia, to continue till the churches of that conference are adequately organized into pastorates and that this business of organization shall continue until the churches of all of our conferences are organized into pastorates so that they may be conveniently and effectively served by our pastors, and that they may be encouraged to give adequate support to the ones serving them.

I believe in church loyalty and have tried to practice it, but I am convinced that if the local church does not engender church loyalty in the minds and hearts of its people before they reach college age, that the college would be given a difficult task to make them loyal after they become young men and young women. If we are to have church loyalty in our denomination, we must teach it to our children in our Sunday schools. Elon College stands ready to do its share, and does to its utmost. Many of the things suggested in Colonel West's article of last week, as he realizes, of course, come in a distinctively theological school. We do teach history at Elon College. We teach church history at Elon College. And, by the way, wouldn't it be a fine thing if somebody would arise and write a history of the Christian Church, setting forth its genius, its organization, and its accomplishments, adaptable to classroom work in college. I know of no one better fitted or more capable of doing a job of this kind than one of Elon's illustrious sons, Mr. Wilbur MacClenny of Suffolk, Virginia, who is associated with Colonel West in business.

Please be assured that I have no personal ambitions in these statements, but that I do have a great passion for the coming of the kingdom of God through our church. I know that we can do better with our opportunities than we have done.

If we can be agreed, if we can come together in one accord, if we can form ourselves into a compact organization for righteousness, truly we may sing, "Like a mighty army, Moves the Church of God; Brothers, we are treading Where the saints have trod; We are not divided, All one body we, One in hope and doctrine, One in charity."

L. E. SMITH.

TREES AND MEN

The tree that never had a fight
For sun and sky and air and light,
But lived out in the open plain
And always got its share of rain,
NEVER became a forest king,
But lived and died a weakly thing.
The MAN who never had to toil
Or never stooped his hands to soil,
Who never had to win his share
Of sun and sky and light and air,
Never became a super-man,
But lived and died as he began.
Good timber does not grow in ease—
The stronger the winds, the tougher the trees;
The farther the sky, the greater the length,
The more the wind, the more the strength.
By sun and cold, by rain and snows,
In trees or man good timber grows.
Where thickest stands the forest growth
We find the patriarchs of both,
And they hold converse with the stars
Whose broken branches show the scars
Of many winds and much of strife—
This is the Common Law of Life.

OUR FRONT PAGE.

The picture of Lanson Granger on the front page is a surprise to him, for he is such a modest fellow he would not want it there. Lanson has done so much that the editor thinks that it is only fair that his efforts be recognized and appreciated.

He has worked his own way through college and has, at the same time, made a real contribution to college life and to the churches nearby. His keen mind and eloquent speech and willingness to work have been dedicated to the Lord and His Church so completely that his contacts make life richer wherever he goes.

It is because of his personal work that the young people elected him president of the Southeast Youth Fellowship and later of the Pilgrim Fellowship for the entire denomination.

The good wishes and sincere prayers of many will go with him to the Divinity School of Yale University, and wherever else opportunities may beckon him.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The place of our second annual meeting was Mt. Auburn Christian Church, near Manson, N. C., on the 28th day of August, 1936.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Miss Rosebud Kimball. The opening song, "Give of Your Best to the Master," was voted upon to be the theme song for this Fellowship. The worship program was also conducted by the president who gave many inspirational ideas on worship.

The welcome was by Mr. Thomas Ellington, Jr.

Misses Ford and Perry, who were holding a Bible School in the vicinity, spoke a few minutes on their work.

Minutes of the last meeting were read, and also the treasurer's report was given.

In the absence of Rev. F. C. Lester, Lanson Granger made the address, which everyone enjoyed. A hymn and benediction followed the address.

After lunch we all entered into the recreational period, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The afternoon session opened with a hymn, followed by a pageant conducted by the young people of Mt. Auburn, entitled "Who Bids?"

The address of the afternoon was by Rev. W. E. Wisseman, of Greensboro, N. C. The points of this were: The visions of people should be translated into action—go when the call comes, consecrate our lives to the Lord, and none need live in vain.

Then the key-workers discussed the work they had done and each gained new ideas. Mrs. W. E. Wisseman led the discussion.

The present officers were reelected with the exception of superintendent of publications, in which post the incumbent, Miss Katherine Newman, was succeeded by Miss Mary Nell Eaves.

ARE MISSIONS DONE FOR?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
SEPTEMBER 27, 1936.

Scripture: Mark 16:14-20.

Daily Bible Readings.

Monday—Home Missions.—Luke 4:16-21.
Tuesday.—A Missionary to Ninevah.—Jonah 1:1-3; 3:1-4.
Wednesday.—Personal Evangelism.—Acts 8:26-35.
Thursday.—The Gentiles Hear the Word.—Acts 10:1-6; 34-48.
Friday.—Men that Hear the Call.—Acts 16:9-15.
Saturday.—Preach the Word.—2 Tim. 4:1-5.

Are missions done for? If they are let us pray that God will have mercy on Christian people. For theirs is the huge task when we stop to consider the fact that statisticians have figured out that eighty-three heathens pass into eternity without Christ every time a minute is registered by the clock. But missions are not done for. Could we believe that when we sit in the vast audiences and hear missionaries home on furlough tell how the natives will walk miles and miles over muddy roads, sometimes requiring two or three days to travel, in order to reach the mission station and hear the story of Jesus; when they tell of the persecutions some of them must endure as a result of following Christ; and tell how in some of the Christian colleges in the Orient there is not even compulsory chapel, yet the men and girls choose to go to chapel?

While missions are not done for, there are many hindrances the missionary on the foreign field must combat. The unsaved in India cannot understand why American missionaries seek to tell them how to live when there probably are other Americans walking the streets of India who are indulging in riotous living. Why should our missionaries try to save them if some of the types of movies America sends there for their entertainment portrays the way men and women of America are living? Why tell them alcoholic drinks hurt their bodies and at the same time America repeals the 18th Amendment? They wonder why the missionaries do not Christianize their own country first.

Not only is the missionary compelled to face situations such as these, but they also have to worry about finances. When a church has to cut its budget in many instances the missionary quota has to bear the brunt! This is one burden that each of us can help in our own small way. We may feel that we cannot give but a small amount, but if each of us would do the very best we can we would soon realize the result of our combined efforts.

But even with these hindrances, missions are not done for. Our task of fulfilling the Great Commission will not be complete until every man, woman and child in the world has been told the story of Jesus, and is brought to the realization that God is the Father of all, and His Way is the Way of Salvation.

IF YOU WOULD BE BANKRUPT

In friendship, live for yourself alone.

In purse, spend everything and then some.

In spirit, admit that you are down and out.

In initiative, follow the line of least resistance.

In influence, pay no attention to selfmastery.

In happiness, always think of getting the joy instead of giving it.

In health, heed not the timely warnings which disease usually dispatches.

In imagination, just shake your fist in the fact of progress and shout, "It can't be done."—Anon.

To the question, "What is the difference between one who is a Christian and one who is not?" a Chinese girl answered:

"Happiness."

CHRISTIAN LIVING.

LESSON XII—SEPTEMBER 20, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Christ liveth in me."
—Galatians 2:20.

LESSON: Romans 12. (Printed Text, 12:1-3, 9-21.)

The key word to the twelfth chapter of Romans is the word "therefore" in the first verse. In the preceding chapters of this great letter Paul has been setting forth the doctrine of salvation through Jesus Christ, salvation not by works, but by the grace of God through Jesus Christ, salvation by faith. And in the twelfth chapter he shows the implications of this thrilling truth. Because God through the riches of grace in Christ and by faith has saved us, we ought to do something about it. We are not saved by our works, but our works ought to show that we are saved. "I beseech you therefore."

The Christian and God in Christ.

Because Christ has loved us and given himself for us, we ought to love him enough to give ourselves to Him. We are to present our bodies a living sacrifice unto God. They are the temple of the Holy Spirit, they are the instrument through which we are trust, and they are to be presented at their best, holy acceptable unto God. Hands, feet, ears, eyes, head, voice, lips, heart—they are to be yielded to God for His service.

And we are to yield our minds to God also, minds that have been transformed by the spirit of Christ. The mind that has been thus transformed will understand what the will of God is to do it. If the eye of the mind is light then our whole life shall be full of light.

The Christian and the Body of Christ.

We are members, one of another. We are tied up in the "bundle of life." We may have different gifts but there is a place for us all. We have more than others, but we are not to think more highly than we ought to think of ourselves. Whether prophets or ministers or teachers or philanthropists or ruler or humble man in the ranks we are to remember that we are all members of the body of Christ, each with his place and part, each necessary to the well being of the whole body, each subject to the will of Him Who is the Head, Jesus Christ. How the individuals and the denominations and the industrial organizations and the nations need to keep in mind these words—we are members one of another.

The Christian and His Fellow-Christians.

We do not, we cannot live in a vacuum. We touch other lives for weal or for woe. Because we are of the body of Christ we should express the spirit of Christ in our relationships with others. This twelfth chapter of Romans covers almost the whole range of Christian virtues—simplicity, sincerity, mercy, cheerfulness, devotion to the good, hatred of the evil (not the one who does the evil), kindness, love, self-forgetfulness, courtesy, diligence, enthusiasm, joy, patience, sensitiveness to spiritual impulses, steadfastness, generosity, hospitality, sympathy, humility, democracy, magnanimity, peaceableness. These qualities of life are not the result of something put on life from without; they are the product of the life of the Spirit within. They are the fruits of the Spirit, both beautiful and useful. Read carefully verses nine to eighteen and see how in brief compass this inspired writer presents in a gripping and challenging way the spirit and attitude which should characterize Christians in their relationships with others.

The Christian and Outsiders.

The law of love which is the law of Christ is exacting. We are to love not only those who love us; we are to love even our enemies. Paul did not preach or practice a one-sided or an incomplete gospel. He therefore enjoins his readers, and us, to remember that we are members of the body of Christ when we deal with those who are outside the household of faith, and even those who are our enemies. Vengeance does not belong to us—God is the Judge and the Great Avenger. We are to return love for hate, kindness for unkindness, the spirit of peace for the spirit of strife. Our attitude must be positive. It is not enough merely to be passive; we are to be active in our attitude toward those who have done us wrong. Paul boldly assumes and confidently states that by so doing we shall get a great victory for ourselves, and furthermore, win our enemy. This principle holds true in other phases of life. The easiest way to break up vicious habits is to cultivate virtuous habits. The surest way to drive out evil thoughts is to think good thoughts. The safest way to a good life is a good purpose.

"The ambition to do well is far better than the ambition to be well to do."

A TEACHER'S PLEDGE.

We have been hearing a great deal here of late about the Teachers' Oath or Pledge in the public schools, and rightly so, for the efforts of some States to enforce this pledge or oath is a menace to democracy and a denial of freedom of conscience. But the Baptist Church of Elmhurst, L. I., submits a pledge of another kind to the teachers of its church school which is worthy of consideration. It reads as follows:

"I will sincerely endeavor to be present at every session of the Sunday church school at least ten minutes before time of opening. If illness or other causes prevents my attendance I will provide a competent teacher. I will also notify the superintendent of my department as early in the week as possible.

"I will endeavor to attend every monthly workers' conference.

"I will be faithful in attendance at all regular services of the church—for I cannot expect to ask the pupils to do that which I am unwilling to do.

"I will insist upon regular and frequent departmental teachers' meetings and help in planning varied and helpful services of worship.

"I will try to visit all pupils at least once a year, and also if they are absent more than one Sunday.

"I will endeavor to be the best worker that it is possible for me to become. I will therefore prayerfully study the lesson at least one hour each week. I will endeavor to lead pupils to acceptance of Christ as a personal Saviour and help them to live the Christian life."

That pledge takes high ground. It demands something of those who sign it. And yet in the light of sacredness of the office of a teacher, does it ask too much? How many of those of us who read this pledge are willing to take it as our own? Those who do will find a new joy in service and an abundance of fruitfulness. Let us not be afraid of that which is high.

To be popular at home is a great achievement. The man who is loved by the house cat, by the dog, by the neighbor's children, and by his own wife is a great man, even if he never had his name in "Who's Who."—Thomas Dreier.

Six evils must be overcome by a man who desires prosperity: sleep, sloth, fear, anger, idleness and procrastination.—Hindoo Proverb.

MONDAY

"THE COMING OF CHRIST'S HOUR"

"Mine hour has not yet come.—
Jno. 2:4. (Read Jno. 2:4-11.)

What and when is Christ's hour? These words of our Lord are not interpreted to refer to the on-coming manifestations of His sacrifice. They are interpreted to mean that the hour of His public manifestation, with all that it implies in thrusting himself forward and in the rejection of Him by those who would seek to oppose Him, had not yet come.

We are also to understand that our Lord had His own time for accomplishing His purpose in the hearts of men and for giving blessing to His followers. As the farmer awaits the season for planting and must also prepare the soil for the seed, so the Lord has His time for His work. To try to anticipate it may lessen the blessing and diminish the happiness. If we try to force His affairs ourselves we may even deny His goodness to us and also to others.

"But the farmer," one says, "anticipates the seasons and prepares for it." Yes, and so do we anticipate our Lord's time and invoke His blessings by humble, contented, Christian waiting on Him, always assured that His time is best and that He will act without sloth or delay when our hearts are warm and ready. The perfect hour will bring perfect happiness.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, Thou knowest best, and Thou knowest us better than we know ourselves. Forbid that we shall ever yield to foolish or unwise desire, and may we always be submissive to Thy all-wise divine will. Amen.

TUESDAY

"THE CHRISTIAN'S OPEN MOUTH"

"Be thou not rebellious—open thy mouth, and eat that which I give thee."—Ezek. 2:8. (Read Ezek. 2:8-33.)

Parchment did not seem an appetizing meal to Ezekiel. But after eating it, we are told that he thought it was sweet as honey. Then and there Ezekiel learned that obedience to the law of the Lord was supreme. He also learned that many things thought to be bitter are sweet, yea even that the Lord is able to turn bitter things to sweet.

The Lord who made man's mouth knows best how to fill it. The Lord who made man, knows best how to direct him. The Lord who made man's world in which he lives knows best how to use it.

Man is always hungry for something and he is never satisfied, even when he gets what he wants. Too often he desires what is not best for him. He is sitting at the wrong table eating the wrong sort of food and he wonders why he is not satisfied. Too often he regards Christian principles, its teachings and its sort of living as a parchment and he turns away from it. Despite this, we have the history of Christian experience to be thankful for, which is that they who have embraced the Lord's provisions have found it a source of continual delight.

Prayer.—Our Father, who art in heaven, give us this day, from Thine own heart, our daily bread. Amen.

WEDNESDAY

"OUR RESURRECTION"

"And you did he make alive, when ye were dead through your trespasses and sins."—Eph. 2:1. (Read Eph. 2:1-10.)

When we say "Resurrection" we are apt to think of the resurrection of Jesus and that it applies to Him alone. We must get away from that. The resurrection of our Lord has a far richer meaning. It means that we have a resurrection every day of which His is but the type and the symbol, a resurrection that is a continual delight and joy.

"The wages of sin is death." He who sins is void of life and finds himself deprived of life's most blessed things. The true Christian lives in the joy of the Saviour. He is lifted up. He is released from the power of sin. He rises to life every day. He knows the power of the resurrection.

Prayer.—O Lord, Thou art our daily resurrection and joy. Help us to trust constantly in Thy Salvation. Amen.

THURSDAY

"THE BLESSEDNESS OF BELIEF"

"Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."—Jno. 20:29.

When Jesus declared to Thomas the blessedness that comes to those who believe in the unseen realities of life, He must have been thinking of all those in Palestine who had not the opportunity to meet Him and hear Him but yet had believed on Him, likely through what they had heard of Him. He must have been thinking also of the uncounted millions who would believe in Him in the oncoming centuries. They all are far more blessed than Thomas who refused to believe until he could put his own fingers in the wounds in the body of the crucified Lord.

The highest faith is the faith in immortal truth. Truth is founded on eternal realities.

Prayer.—Our Father, we draw nigh to Thee that we may embrace Thy spirit. Make us kin to Thine own soul and more and more give us a consciousness of that life lived in Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY

"A FIGHT WORTH MAKING"

"Fight the good fight of faith."—
1 Tim. 6:12. (Read 1 Tim. 6:11-16.)

Christianity does not laud war, therefore the warlike utterances of Paul seem strange. But these utterances are born in a warlike age, and are not militant. They are used to express the struggle which has to be made in order to win in one's undertakings and they are frequently taken from athletic contests rather than military operations.

At any rate, they are strenuous reminders of a strenuous man that Christian living is a strenuous living—a life of intense struggle, ceaseless exertion and endless strife for that which is good.

Happy is the Christian who can face the world and say that his fight is the good fight of faith. In this faith he is contending against the foes of the cross; he is contending for right; he is seeking with all his power to advance the kingdom of God, and he is seeking all this with the surety that he is going to win. Only the good fight of faith will accomplish this.

Prayer.—Our Heavenly Father, we belong to Thy army. Thou art our commanding officer. Thy spirit alone can make us faithful and give us the victory over our foes and the foes of the kingdom. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY

"OUR BUDDING ROD"

"And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod, whom I shall choose, shall blossom."—Num. 17:5. (Read Num. 17:1-7.)

This story of Aaron's budding rod records God's approval of Aaron's

THE INNER CIRCLE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"He suffered no man to follow him, except Peter, James and John, and the father and mother of the maiden."—Luke 8:51.

Here is one of the most touching stories in the New Testament. It shows the faith, patience, and composure of Jesus. It gives us a look at a ruler of the synagogue. It pictures the mocking crowd. It throws a ray of light on the inner circle. It is a picture with many colors. It sets forth things as they were. It is a picture taken right out of the life in Jesus' day. It is worth studying.

They tell us that a painting of natural scenery should have in it sky, and land, and water. It should touch all phases of the natural view. As a picture of people this one does it. Jesus infinitely aloft as the blue sky above, yet touching and enveloping all; the land level of the three inner circle disciples, Peter, James and John; and the people like a never resting sea of humanity as far as eye can see! This picture touches all phases of the natural view. Life, death, evil, good, weeping, laughing, tears, triumphs, sympathy, scorn, crowds, quiet solitude, old, young, publicity, secrecy, fear, and faith,—all this and much more is found in this picture of sunshine and shadows.

And that is life. Jesus moved thru it, organized it, brought out its infinite power and possibilities. That is what Christianity should do to civilization today. That is the function of the church in the community. It is a steadying, life-giving, influence touching the most intimate and fundamental needs of the individual and the home, and through them the whole circle of society round about.

A man came to Jesus—a real man with a well-known name, Jairus. He was a man in need. A ruler of the synagogue,—a place of great prominence in his day. He was in need. His prominence did not keep him out of that! He was as far from blind Bartemeus as the east is from the west, as far from the poor cripple at Bethesda as the north is from the south, yet in trouble he could come to Jesus. He knew enough to do that. He was in very great need for his only daughter lay dying! When he saw Jesus he fell at his feet, and begged him with tears running down across his face to come to his home, and heal his child.

There were crowds about Jesus, but Jairus did not mind them. A poor sick woman was pressing also through those crowds to touch if she might, the hem of his garment, but Jairus was not aware of that. Little mattered save that his child was dying, and he needed the infinite help of God. Our need is as great today. God is as near. Getting men, women, and young people to see that need, their need, is one of the pressing problems of the day.

Before Jesus could make his way out of the crowds a courier came with the message that the daughter was already dead. Jesus must have seen the hopeless agony that filled the father's face, for he comforted him with the words, Fear not; believe only; and she shall be made whole.

When he arrived at the house he was confronted with a wailing, weeping multitude. Much of it genuine, for it was a very sad death; much of it professional for Jairus was a very prominent man. Jesus lifted his hand to still their crying, and told them: "Weep not; she is not dead but sleepeth." "And they laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead." The street corners still resound with scorn. The wise-ones still laugh at the Lord. The humble, both high and low, still find their way to the source of help, and still secure his blessings for their sons and daughters.

Passing up the laughter of the scorners Jesus went into the room where the child was. And here we have a new phase of this picture. We have seen the Master moving among the multitudes, heard the cry for help, seen him arrive at the house, and have heard the jeers of the crowd when he says that the child shall be made whole again. And now we see him entering into the room where help was needed. And with him the men of the inner-circle!

Here is one of the most beautiful parts of this picture. The Son of God entering into the room of life and death—where battle royal would reign between the powers of darkness and the powers of light. It is something to know that at that battle Jesus took with him Peter, James, and John. What did they do? They were "with him." None save the parents and these three went in. The parents naturally, and the three others invited by the Lord. What did they do? The Scriptures do not tell us. We are told what the father did, we are told what the crowd did, we are told what the child did, and we are told what Jesus did, but we are not told what the three disciples, Peter, James and John did. There were times when just to be "with him" meant much to Jesus. For instance when Jesus went down toward the brook Kidron after having instituted the Lord's Supper he took his disciples with him. His farewell speech had been made to them, and he knew he must go alone into the garden of Gethsemane to suffer, but he took the eleven disciples along with him just as far as he could. Going on further he took the three with him,—if he could only have someone "with him"! Finally he bade them wait while he went on a little further, alone!

Not only did it mean something to Jesus to have the three "with him," but it meant a great deal to the disciples themselves. By it they learned more of his love, saw more of his most inner self, learned how to be more and more like him in the hour of crisis. Something finer, bigger, nobler, gripped their own souls, and a larger part they were given to play in advancing the Kingdom of God on earth.

They came to be in the inner circle by choice,—by their choice, and by the choice of the Lord. If they had not wanted to be near Jesus he would never have forced them, had he not wanted them he would never have called them. Are you choosing a place near the heart of God? It is yours for the asking. Are you choosing the joy of the inner circle? It carries with it added responsibility, and infinitely added joy! It will require that you stand ever "with him" and he will be with you always even unto the end of the world!

Life is just a little mixture

Of joy and sadness too,
You must have a little bit of each
Before your days are through;
But joys outweigh the sorrows,
And smiles are more than tears,
And the days of woe are seldom,
But joys are ours for years.

—Charles Day.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Filling the silo at the Christian Orphanage is one hard job. As I sit at my desk writing this letter, I can hear the hum of the silage cutter as it cuts and blows the green corn into the silo. It is an occasion when all the boys have a job. Our silo is of the metal type and holds 125 tons. The larger boys load the corn in the wagon and some feed it into the machine. The little boys have lots of fun in the silo packing the silage. It is work for them too, but it is play work. They have a big time running around the wall one after the other, but as they play they are packing the silage—the thing we want done.

The boys who load the wagon do not have a play job. It is real work but they stick to it till the job is done.

Handling 125 tons of green corn is no easy job. I am glad it only comes once in a year. We are all happy when we see the silo full and running over at the top.

The Lord smiled on us this year as we had no wind storm to blow the corn down. When it stands straight up we can cut it with our corn harvester which ties it in bundles which makes it so much easier to handle.

Our little folks were happy a few weeks ago when Mr. Wagoner (my assistant) went to the watermelon patch and pulled a truck load. Our melons are late this year on account of the extreme dry weather in the early spring. To show you how well our boys can stand temptation, this melon patch is right in full view of all our buildings and as well as boys like watermelons not a single boy has broken the rule "not go in the patch," which we feel is quite a compliment to our boys.

School opens next Monday. There will be books, pencils, tablets and the usual supplies for school. And does it take money? And too, our checking account is so low it about takes our breath when we look at it.

A friend when we are in financial distress is a friend indeed.

ALABAMA LETTER.

This old church has a fine future before it, and it is supported by many aged Pilgrims, who are happy on their way to the Glory Land.

I enjoyed the friendship of these Saints of God and especially so that of Bro. Tillman and his good wife.

Brother Tillman is one of the most patient men I have ever seen. His wife is an invalid and has been for some ten years. She can scarcely walk, but she is the most cheerful soul I have ever met—deeply spiritual and much concerned for her church, and is in full and sweet accord with her husband in all his work, and he is so patient with and thoughtful of her needs.

The Lord gave us a great spiritual meeting here, many hearts rejoiced, and many renewed their pledge to God and the church. Many expressed their appreciation of our efforts.

My home was with Brother and Sister Johnie Adams, whose kindness I shall never forget. G. D. HUNT.

act and His disapproval of the acts of the high priest.

Lesson: Resultless lives are not Christian lives. Life in Jesus, rather Jesus in the life, are not waste nor empty and hollow lives. God set his seal of approval on such lives and they blossom and bear fruit.

At the same time this lesson reflects fruitless lives. Fruitless lives are like the rod that did not blossom. This is an inspiration to examine ourselves. Find out in thy life what definite achievements in Christian living thou canst point to. It doesn't have to be some big thing. Christ said that it might be no more than a cup of cold water to a thirsty one, even so it is a blossoming rod.

Prayer.—Our Father, be with us that we may do Thy will. Strengthen us that we may accomplish Thy purpose. Amen.

SUNDAY

"WHAT ARE YOUR CONSENTS?"

"And Saul was consenting unto his death."—Acts 7:54-81.

Saul, a member of the Sanhedrin, voted for the death of that noble Christian, Stephen. Stephen thus became the first martyr of the Christian age.

This was the most terrible act of Paul's life. It followed him to his grave, and he paid the price with his own life in a similar manner. God forgave Paul for his sins, and He made him one of the greatest powers of the ages. Nevertheless, Paul always felt himself the chiefest of sinners, pardoned only by divine grace.

Paul's sin was only consent, nevertheless it was a consent which made this deed possible. How often dost thou consent to passing sins? Perhaps it is only listening to slander, or profanity, or tacit approval to utterances of infidelity, or perhaps to degrading stories, without rebuking them or even showing thy disapproval. He who does this, consents, and who can estimate the impetus that may be given to sin by such a consent? Who can estimate the proportions and the magnitude to which sin may grow under this consent?

Prayer.—Our Father, give us the courage of Jesus, Our Saviour, to renounce sin wherever we may find it. Amen.

The measure of a man's life is the well-spending of it, and not the length.—Plutarch.

In Memoriam

MORNINGSTAR

Iva Ethel Morningstar, daughter of John W. and the late Marie Elizabeth Morningstar, was born March 31, 1919, and died July 28, 1936. Age, seventeen years, three months and twenty-six days. She leaves father, three sisters and three brothers as follows: Blue Bell, May, Janie, John, Jr., Thomas and Kenneth. Her mother died four years ago. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Union Church, Virgilina, Va., on the afternoon of July 30 and the burial was in the town cemetery. A large crowd of sorrowing relatives and sympathetic friends attended the funeral. The floral offerings were abundant and beautiful. Iva was a very bright and attractive child. At about 8 years of age, while attending school, she was hurt in an accident from which she suffered intensely as she grew older, and which resulted in her early death. Her afflictions caused the family to be more devoted to her and to grieve more at her passing. Yet, there is great comfort in the assurance that she no longer suffers, but is forever at rest.

C. E. NEWMAN.

ATKINS

Seldom has the town and community of Virgilina been in deeper sorrow than that occasioned by the death of Mrs. Bettie Irene Atkins on July 27, 1936.

Sister Atkins, the daughter of Peter and Agnes Fulp, was born in Forsyth County, N. C., on March 28, 1935. Age, forty years, eight months, and twenty-nine days. When young she united with the M. E. Church, but in 1916, transferred to Union Christian Church. In 1915 she married Daniel Atkins, of Virgilina, who survives her together with three daughters, Louise, Maud and Bettie Jean. She is also survived by three brothers and three sisters as follows: Robert, Elias, and Daniel Fulp, Mrs. Nobie Gordon, of Virgilina, Mrs. R. Richeal, of High Point, Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of Charlotte, and Mrs. S. P. Crum, of Belew's Creek. The deceased was an excellent Christian lady, a real homemaker and unselfish toward all.

The funeral was at the home, and burial in the town cemetery. A large number of sorrowing relatives and neighbors attended. The flowers were in abundance and very beautiful. Husband and daughters are almost heartbroken, but are comforted in the assurance of a reunion in the home prepared for the humble believing ones.

preceded her in death many years ago. Her husband died just one year ago. She leaves several grandchildren and numerous other relatives, together with a host of friends.

Sister Hill has been afflicted several years, but she has borne affliction with patience. No complaint nor murmuring. Always cheerful and happy, a fine specimen of Christianity. A faithful member of Pleasant Grove Christian Church for more than 50 years, she was always in her place ready to do her part for God and the church as long as her health permitted. She was never happier than when doing something to make others happy. He home was the first home visited by the writer in her community 47 years ago, and she has remained one of our best friends through all these years. I count myself fortunate indeed to have enjoyed the fellowship, and pray God to richly bless the bereaved.

The funeral was held at Pleasant Grove Church by the writer assisted by Rev. G. W. Penn, of Lannett, Alabama.

"Peace to her ashes."

G. D. HUNT.

HILL

Mrs. Georgian Hill departed this life August 18, 1936, at the age of 75 years. She leaves of her immediate family one daughter, Mrs. Mollie Hill of Lannett, Ala., and two sons, W. G., of Lannett, and J. P., of Pleasant Grove, Ala. One little son

Why Some Newspapers Exclude Liquor Advertising

The American Business Men's-Research Foundation of Chicago has recently completed a study of why, despite the flood of liquor propaganda, many influential daily newspapers steadfastly ban from their columns beverage alcohol advertising.

It may surprise some readers to learn that his Foundation discovered that the reasons given by newspapers for adhering to the policy of rejecting the advertisements of brewers and distillers "were by no means those of morals or social welfare, but even more definitely those of commercial benefits from more and higher-class legitimate advertising and increasing circulation due to popular acceptance of the policy."

A prominent publisher stated: "We are convinced that it is good business not to carry liquor advertising in competition to merchandise advertised in our columns." Another publisher commented: "Our policy in refusing liquor advertising is an aid in obtaining other business." A daily newspaper serving a community of more than 500,000 population wrote: "Altogether we were well satisfied with our decision last year to refuse advertising of alcoholic beverages and haven't the slightest thought of changing." This publisher believes that he has turned down in the past year from $50,000 to $60,000 worth of liquor advertising. Yet, he stated: "We have had very substantial circulation and advertising gains and feel that our liquor policy has definitely contributed to the former."

Frank E. Gannett, who publishes a group of nineteen daily newspapers in New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Illinois, with an aggregate circulation of approximately 600,000, has a more comprehensive and clearly defined policy of rejecting liquor advertising, which the Foundation summarized as follows:

"Believing that the use of alcoholic beverages is harmful both to the individual and to society, I cannot consistently accept beer and liquor advertising in my newspapers. It is probably the most potent force today in changing habits and points of view as well as in the selling of goods and services.

"It seems to me, further, that the prevalent type of desire-creating advertising for liquor is as stupid as it is anti-social. I mean stupid from the point of view of persons who profess to believe that temperance and not prohibition is the way to deal with the liquor problem.

"If the liquor interests were wise—and they have never been wise—they would content themselves with factual advertisements appealing only to persons who drink.

"But hardly was repeal in effect before all the scientifically developed advertising appeals of sex, ambition, popularity, health, color, and humor were being used not only to increase their consumption of liquor, but to induce others, particularly women, to become tipplers.

"We feel that a paper that goes into the home should be fit for the home. We don't believe that parents in the home who take a paper would like to see their favorite paper filled with appeals for consumption of alcoholic beverages.

"We feel that no progress will ever be made against the liquor traffic until advertising of liquor is prohibited and promotion of the business is checked effectively."

The Foundation survey indicates how complex is the problem of the control of liquor advertising, but it shows also the forces of righteousness have powerful allies in combating the liquor traffic in one of its most venomous and dangerous activities. The refusal of newspapers to accept liquor advertising is an effective form of mass education.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

A surprise awaits the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the issue of October 15th. Watch for it.

Improvements on church buildings have been the order in Georgia during the summer, many of our congregations making needed improvements on and beautifying our edifices. Bethany Church, The Rock, Georgia and Vanceville Church, Tifton, have installed electric lights.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill is spending two weeks in Ohio, speaking in the interest of the Home Boards at several Association meetings and several churches under the direction of Superintendent Fred Hall. She expects to return to Florida, October 6th.

Rev. Warner C. Carpenter, Tifton, Georgia, pastor of Enigma, New Light, Ambrose, and Vanceville churches, reports very successful meetings at each of his charges this summer. More than twenty members were received at Ambrose. Vanceville Church will entertain the South Georgia Association September 25th-27th.

The program for the Georgia State Conference, which meets at Oak Grove Church, Chipley, Ga. is being prepared. Each church is entitled to two delegates, and the Christian Endeavor Society, Women's Society, and the Sunday School are each entitled to ONE delegate each. The conference meets October 27th-28th.

Rev. Harry H. Jones of Stuart, Florida, has been called to serve as pastor of the church at Palm City, which is near Stuart. Mr. Jones has been for several years serving as part time pastor of the church at Jensen. He has a record of several years of efficient service in Florida churches, among them being New Smyrna, Miami and Jupiter.

Dr. Kerrison has been called to the pastorate of the church in Ormond, Florida, and will begin his service there on October 1st. Dr. Juniper was for several years pastor of the First Congregational Church of St. Petersburg, and later of the church in San Francisco. More recently he has been serving the First Church in Miami.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference will hold its annual meeting at Liberty Springs Christian Church December 8, 1936. The purpose of this notice is to remind all members to be present with their dues and all church leaders to secure as many new members as possible. Rev. R. E. Brittle is recording secretary, Rev. Joe French is financial secretary, and Rev. J. F. Morgan, president.

The Middle Georgia Association of Congregational Christian Churches held its annual session at Bethany Church, The Rock, Georgia, August 29-30, with a full attendance of ministers and churches. The occasion made very significant the 50th anniversary of Bethany Church. Rev. David Shepherd, pastor, was Moderator of the Association. Officers for next year were: Moderator, Rev. Frederick Held, Columbus; Assistant Moderator, Mr. T. J. Holloway; The Rock, Ga; Registrar-Treasurer, Mr. R. L. Farrar, LaGrange.

The ministers of our churches in and about Norfolk, Virginia gave a dinner party on Thursday evening of last week honoring Rev. Joe French and his recent bride. Even though a hurricane was passing through that vicinity all the ministers and their wives in the Norfolk group were present except one who was out of town. Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton made an appropriate talk welcoming Mrs. French into the Norfolk fellowship. Rev. H. S. Hardeastle acting as toastmaster presented the happy couple with a present from the group.

Miss Frances Everette, president of the Eastern Virginia Young People's Missionary Conference, is urging all young people, pastors, leaders of young people, and friends of young people of the Eastern Virginia Conference to attend their annual meeting at Suffolk Christian Church, Friday evening, September 25th, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Their theme will be "The Trail the Negro Travels." Mrs. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, N. C., will speak on "The Contributions the Negro Has Made to Our American Culture", and several young people of the conference will discuss various phases of the theme.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

Mt. Pleasant Church was organized September 29, 1886, in Hoke County, N. C. by Res. G. R. Underwood and D. T. Jones. The anniversary program began at 10:30 A. M. August 30, 1936., present pastor presiding. Main features: singing, prayer. Scripture reading and a brief history of the Church read by Deacon E. M. Marks; Rev. T. E. White, president of the Western N. C. Conference, climaxed the morning exercise with a striking sermon entitled, "Right Things in the Wrong Place."

A picnic dinner was served on the church yard to a large group of people.

On the evening program appeared Rev. J. S. Carden, Durham, N. C. with a timely sermon on the subject of "Growth, he being the only former living pastor of the church present. Good fellowship was manifest throughout the day, for which we are thankful.

POINTS ON PREPARING A SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

1. Start Early.—Begin your preparation early. Know what the lesson is about as far ahead as possible. Thus you can be thinking over the lesson in your spare time, your thoughts can be incubating, you will be able to make your preparation more thorough, you will be able to pick up many illustrations from your reading or from your observation, you will have a much greater wealth of material.

2. Read the Scripture Lesson Itself.—There are many suggestive helps for Sunday school teachers, written by capable and consecrated workers; but before you read what others have written or said, read what the Bible itself says. God has given you an individuality, and He wants you to use it. You may see some truth that others have not seen. You may see the same truth that others have seen, but from a different angle. Have faith in your own mind. Let the Word of God speak to you first, let it make its own impression.

3. Do Your Own Thinking.—This is a re-emphasis of what has just been written. Jot down the impressions a careful and repeated reading of the lesson has made upon you. Try to recall everything that you have ever read or heard on the subject. Jot down any illustrations that come to mind. "Squeeze your subject dry" before you turn to others. As a wise man has said, "Never read until you have thought yourself empty; never write until you have read yourself full."

4. Use All the Helps You Can.—The context of the lesson, commentaries, notes by others, teacher's quarterlies, anything and everything that throws light on the lesson are grist for the teacher's mill. Read as wide-

ANNUAL FLORIDA MINISTERS' CONVOCATION.

The tenth annual Convocation of Congregational ministers in Florida will be held at the Ponce DeLeon Hotel at DeLon Springs, beginning with supper on October 5th, and continuing until after breakfast on October 8th.

The first of these series of convocations was held at Rollins College in 1927. Two years the Convocation had to be suddenly called off, once because of a hurricane and again because of the sudden illness of both speakers. Otherwise, the Convocation has been an annual event and has been a most favored meeting for our ministers. Not only is it intellectually stimulating and spiritually inspiring, but the fellowship is most enjoyable. We believe the program this year to be of a high order and we trust that every minister of our fellowship will be there from the beginning to the end.

Dr. John L. Lobinger, of the Education Society, will give a series of five lecture discussions on the general topic: "The Pastor and the Educational Ideal." Other speakers will include the following from among the Florida group: Prof. A. B. Trowbridge of Rollins College, Dr. Trover Mordecai, Rev. Walter Metcalf, Rev. O. T. Anderson, Dr. Elisha King and Rev. Everett B. Losher. There will be a period for discussion of our current church problems, led by Dr. E. Gillette and Rev. Wm. T. Scott.

SOUTH GEORGIA ASSOCIATION MEETS THIS WEEK.

The forty-seventh annual session of the South Georgia Association of Congregational Christian Churches meets this week, beginning on Friday, September 25th, at the Vanceville church, Tifton, Georgia. The general theme of the association will be, "Making Our Churches Effective," and a well worth while program has been prepared by the program committee. The officials of the association are: Rev. D. J. Pearson, moderator; Rev. J. F. Haddan, assistant moderator, and T. S. Corbett, registrar-treasurer. Rev. W. C. Carpenter is pastor of the entertaining church.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR HERITAGE.

It is difficult for most of us to realize how great a heritage is ours. We accept the Church as a matter of fact—attend its services or leave it as we like. Many church members never know what sacrifice was necessary in order for them to sit quietly in a beautiful house and worship the one supreme God.

It is a long struggle from the cave man up to our present civilization. The religion of the ancient has gone through a fiery process of purification that has called for the sacrifice of human life. Without the preaching of Paul in Eastern Europe there would have been no Europe or American churches unless God had worked it out some other way. But this preaching cost Paul a stoning that almost took his life, shipwreck, and long imprisonments. If Jesus had not gone to Calvary there would have been no Easter Day and no Christian Religion. If his followers had sought for ease and comfort there would be no Church today. Without the Church education would be neglected, material progress impeded, and the human family would probably be far down the scale of living from where it is.

The institutions of Congregational and Christian churches are the heritage which our fathers and forefathers have given to us. Our Orphanage, College, mission churches, educational program, missionary outlook—all these are our heritage passed on from another generation. It is no more right for us to neglect them than it would be for us to destroy the will of parents who had sacrificed and saved for our well being.

F. C. L.

OUR PARTNERSHIP.

The institutions of our Church bind us as members together in one big partnership. Dr. L. E. Smith is president of Elon College, but Elon is not his college, and he is not the college. He is a member of our United Church who is doing a task commissioned to him by those who constitute the partnership and own the college.

Mr. C. D. Johnston is superintendent of our Orphanage at Elon, but he is only the servant of the larger group who have sent him there to manage finances, direct workers, and develop children into good citizens and Christian servants. The orphanage belongs to the partners, you and me, who have inherited this institution from those who have sacrificed for its founding and to keep it going by their contributions.

Colonel J. E. West is chairman of our Mission Board in the Southern Convention, and Dr. J. O. Atkinson is its secretary, but these brethren are not the Mission Board. They are the servants of our Church who have been called upon by the partners in missionary activity to aid in raising our contributions and pass them on to where they can be used to the best advantage.

So it is with all of our boards and institutions. They belong to the members of the local churches who have received their heritage from the past, and who are partners in the process of building the Kingdom of God here on earth in our own day. If the rich and the poor in churches that are large and little can realize that they are partners in carrying forward a heritage which is ours, then the support of our institutions will become a joy rather than a burden; the raising of conference apportionments will be a privilege and not a hardship. It is this spirit which we need to cultivate among the people of all of our churches, and when this spirit dominates the life of our churches it will be easy for us to support all of our institutions, and our Church will grow.

F. C. L.

STORMS.

Last week a hurricane roared up the Atlantic coast doing a considerable damage to life and property. Three years ago there were two such storms that came through Norfolk. Then and now the tide rose enough for the tide water to come up to my church. We are beginning to understand storms a bit in this section.

The Bible tells us about storms. Jonah tried to sail the seas against the winds and failed; Saint Paul met with shipwreck because the sailors misjudged the value of the south wind that blew softly; Jesus slept in the bottom of a boat when the storm raged about Him, and on another occasion walked amidst the waves on his way to those He loved.

The people with Jonah and Paul and Jesus were afraid of the storms, but these three men were not. Jonah said the storm had come because of his sin; Saint Paul said the angel of God stood by him in the night while the billows tossed the boat; Jesus found peace and quiet and was unafraid and marveled at the fear and unbelief of the twelve.

There are storms within and storms without. Those within the mind and soul of an individual are more destructive to human life than those that nature displays. There is a sure and safe retreat in the midst of storm. The ancient poet knew about it when he wrote, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble, therefore shall not we fear." Faith in God brings peace and quiet to the human spirit regardless of what may be going on around one. It is this calm which the world needs today more than it needs battleships, or dugouts, or dungeons. The human family will never be safe from the storms which threaten us until we learn to find security in the presence of the Eternal God.

Storms sometimes strike within the Church, and when they do, wreckage is the result. The only security from this kind of storm is a fine spirit of love within the hearts of the members. "Peace be still" might well be spoken in many a church conference where love is kept off the record.

The time to prepare for a storm is before it comes, whether the storm is within the human breast, or in a church assembly, or according to nature's making.

A BIBLE GAME AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

The story is told of a man who was waited on by a book agent who wished to sell him a dictionary of the English language. The man asked the agent, "What do I want of a dictionary? I have no need of one!" In the same way some people say, "What do I want of a concordance? I know my Bible. I have no need for one!" And yet, a good concordance is as necessary to an understanding of the Bible as a dictionary is for the understanding of the English language.

When I was a small boy my aunt gave me a Bible bound beautifully in a soft black leather with gold clasp and corners. I loved that little book and read it with great interest. Later on I found a concordance in a book store and bought it and learned how to use it. Since then I have never been without one and do not see how anyone can expect to know what the Bible says on this or that subject without one, or, perhaps, a Biblical analysis or a book of topical studies. Some modern Bibles that have "Bible helps" bound in the back, arrange the contents of the book in an index. However, I think a concordance about the best tool for finding out what the Bible says on any particular theme.

This article is not written primarily to encourage Bible study, but to tell the story of Alexander Cruden. He was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, on May 31, 1699. His parents were very strict Scotch Presbyterians which meant, in those days, that Sundays were observed with great care. The boy learned to read the Bible with growing interest and committed many passages to memory. The long Sunday afternoons were spent in Bible reading and in playing Bible games.

One of these games consisted in selecting a Biblical word and tracing it through all the books of the Bible. The results were jotted down and the scores added at the end of the search. Young Alexander liked that game and discovered that it could be played alone. Many long, happy hours were devoted to this new word-hunt. This experience, you see, laid the foundation for his great book published later in life.

He became a proof-reader or, as in those days, a "corrector of proofs." It fell to his lot to read the proofs of Matthew Henry's five-volume commentary on the Bible. He used to sign his name "Alexander the Corrector," and his biographer says that put an idea in his head that he might become a "corrector of manners and morals." He was devoted to whatever he undertook and he started out to suppress profanity and to advocate Sabbath observance. In his earnestness, we are told, he became a nuisance! As a result of his methods of carrying on his campaign, he was arrested and put into prison. The fact is, he was considered to be out of his mind.

This imprisonment worked out differently from what the authorities expected. Prison conditions in those days were exceedingly bad, and Alexander undertook to have them corrected. He wrote letters to officials, even to the king; he published pamphlets and made personal calls in the interest of prison reform; he became a national figure, and enjoyed some degree of success in his efforts.

During all those years he spent his leisure time in playing the word-game that he learned when a boy. One day the idea came to him that he would put the results of his investigations into a book, and he began to arrange his notes in order. The result was the publication of "Cruden's Complete Concordance of the Old and New Testaments." It was the most complete book of its kind that had ever been published. Others since his day have produced more pretentious ones, but Cruden's, with certain revisions and additions, is still a popular tool for Bible study.

He died on November 1, 1770, and his name has come down through the years as a pioneer in Biblical explorations. He is considered of sufficient importance to be included in the British Dictionary of National Biography. The full story of Alexander Cruden may be found in a volume entitled "Alexander the Corrector."

SUGGESTED PASTORATES FOR THE NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

In recent issues of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, there has been an agitation for the grouping of our part-time churches into convenient and workable pastorates. That is, to group our part-time churches in such a way as to provide a field of closely related churches for a single pastor, making it possible for the pastor to give his full time within the given pastorate.

The advantages of such a plan are evident. The churches could have a man living on the field and serving them seven days in a week instead of merely preaching for them the seventh day once or twice each month. This would occasion greater saving of the pastor himself, and would have a tendency to consolidate our churches into units which, of course, would mean more efficient work and greater growth. Under such a plan, it would not be long before there could be built for each pastorate a parsonage with sufficient acreage to provide for adequate gardening for the pastor's family.

I do not know just what churches should be grouped together or how large the pastorates should be. I have not taken the time to ascertain who the pastors of our part-time churches in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference are, but I am venturing to propose the grouping for this conference. These are only suggestions. If anyone has a better plan, I would gladly withdraw mine in favor of his; but if there is no better plan to offer, it seems to me that we might make an effort in this direction. This grouping does not take into consideration the full-time churches. I am only dealing with the part-time churches.

Suggested pastorates:

- I. Apples' Chapel, Hines' Chapel.
- II. Belew's Creek, Salem Chapel, Pleasant Ridge, Mt. Bethel.
- III. Berea, Shallow Ford, Bethlehem.
- IV. Mt. Zion, Bethel, Concord.
- V. Palm St. (Greensboro), Monticello.
- VI. Carolina, Hopedale, Haw River, Old Providence (Western N. C. Conference).
- VII. Hebron, Lebanon, Union (Virginia).
- VIII. Ingram, Pleasant Grove, Liberty.
- IX. Happy Home, New Lebanon, Howard's Chapel, Kallam's Grove.
- X. Long's Chapel, Union Ridge.

I believe that if these churches and the pastors of our conference will cooperate in a plan of this kind, that it will mean the development and the enlargement of our work in this conference on a satisfactory scale. I would like to hear from some of the churches and pastors regarding these suggestions.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The body of the late Dr. P. J. Kernodle was laid to rest in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk, Virginia, Sunday, September 13, 1936, at 4:00 p. m. Eight ministers were present. Dr. (or "Prof." as he was more generally called) Kernodle was a man of wide range of activities during his life of more than eighty years. He taught school in Suffolk and in Elon College, both of which Institutions represented the Christian Church in a vital way. He was an expert printer, an authority on mathematics, and, at the time of his death, was completing a Latin grammar. He was a careful student, diligent in his research and tireless in his effort to discover and record exact information.

In the Christian Church he served for many years as Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention. This office gave him an opportunity to gather much historical data concerning the ministers, leading laymen, churches and institutions of the denomination. His memory was far above the average, and he was able to act as a guide for many others who desired to search the historical records of the past. In this respect he was exceptional, for it is unusual for a person of mathematical mind to have a memory capable of retaining a multitude of details.

He published a book in 1909, entitled, "Lives of Christian Ministers." This is a large volume of its kind, and represents years of laborious research and tedious investigation. This book is a credit to any author, and is an outstanding example of his ability as student and a writer of history and biography. At the time of his death he left hundreds of bits of scattered historical data concerning Christian Church history, invaluable to future generations, if they could be collated, edited and published. Nothing of importance related to his church escaped his attention. He collected and kept on file every thing of apparent importance as historical data.

He rarely attempted to speak in public. He was modest and timid in public utterance. He was at his best in his study, in the school room, and in the printing office. He made an address before the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday School Convention when the writer was a small boy. He asked the boys and girls of the Convention to answer this question:

"What king mentioned in the Bible slept on an iron bedstead?" (See Deut. 3:11.) This writer had never heard of that king before, and it was impressed upon his memory, being my earliest recollection of the deceased.

He was deeply interested in the progress and unity of the denomination to which he gave the best years of his active life. His heart was in his church. He talked about its possibilities, prayed for its growth, and gave himself to carry on its work. The Central Publishing Company represented his largest and most successful adventure in the realm of business, but he made sacrifices in this project in order to continue the publication of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at a time when other publishers were unwilling to undertake such a task, under the conditions imposed upon him.

In his local church he always manifested a deep interest. He was loyal and devoted to it in adversity as well as in prosperity. His true value as a member of the church and as a tireless worker, will never be fully realized by his contemporaries. He was not a publicist; he was a worker. He did his best in the scholastic workshop. Those who wish to appraise him adequately will be compelled to spend a while in his workshop—in vestigating and evaluating his labors. The Christian Churches of the Southern Convention, especially, owe him a debt of gratitude and sincere appreciation. A valuable man of God has fallen asleep, and his works do follow him. I. W. JOHNSON.

DR. P. J. KERNODLE.

Others more closely related and better qualified will, in all probability, write concerning the life and achievements of Dr. P. J. Kernodle of Richmond, Virginia. I trust that I will be pardoned for a few personal references regarding this Christian statesman. Professor Kernodle, as we knew him at the college when I was a student, was a very admirable character: brilliant in mind, irreproachable in character, steadfast in principles and efficient in the class room. Few men of our church possess the keen intellect that was his.

As a student in Elon College, I knew him as professor of mathematics. He was admirably qualified for the position. Rarely, if ever, did he refer to a text book for anything. He seemed to know every problem and its solution as well as the author of the text book himself. The students who were fortunate enough to be in his classes at the college will not forget him. He possessed the ability of impressing students with the necessity of thorough preparation and honorable presentation of their knowledge. He was not given to inquiring into private and personal matters, but inately he seemed to understand the attitudes and practices of individual students. He could not condole any kind of dishonesty on the part of a student. His own personal life was a safe example for all who came under his influence.

He was not only a teacher, but an author. He wrote text books for schools and colleges, and a history for the instruction and help of his church. His book, "The Lives of Christian Ministers," will keep before the church many who otherwise would have been forgotten by the rank and file of our people.

Aside from his professional duties, he possessed a keen insight for business. He established the Central Publishing Company of Richmond, Virginia, and through his business and executive ability, this concern has become recognized as one of the representative printing companies of the capital city of Virginia. This company has printed THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the Christian Annual the Elon College Catalogue and other periodicals of the church for many years.

For the past few years he, as a result of failing health was confined to his room. His body was afflicted, his strength had well-nigh failed him, but his mind continued keen and active. In the early days of the Southern Christian Convention, he compiled and edited its manual, the Government and Principles of the Christian Church. Since that time several editions of the manual have been produced, but none recently. He was greatly concerned that the church have its manual revised again and brought down to date. In his confinement he offered to the committee a manuscript embodying his ideas for such a manual.

The church in general has never appreciated the value of Dr. Kernodle as it should. Elon College, in the appreciation of his literary ability, some years ago conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of literature. The college again wishes to express its appreciation and debt of gratitude to the life and labors of its friend and former professor as life for him in the flesh comes to a close. The college also wishes this opportunity to express its sympathy to the family and to assure them of its prayers in their behalf, L. E. SMITH.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Our report for this week carries us up to the ninth rung of our financial ladder for this year. This leaves nine more to reach by the end of the year. Our income this year has not been what we expected. Last year the infantile paralysis cut off our income very much on account of so many of our Sunday schools closing. This year the severe drouth in the spring hit us again. The prices of most everything is soaring so rapidly that it digs into our bank balance so rapidly that it is nearly blank.

The autumn months are here with coal to pay for, so that the children can be comfortable. School opens this week, and books, many books, are to buy, besides the minor school articles.

Then, as the mornings get chilly, and frost bites the toes of the little fellows, the cry for shoes will ring in the writer's ears from every side. Then the winter clothes—jackets, and sweaters, and lots of other garments. It all takes cash, and we are dependent upon you to see to it that we are financially supported.

The committee appointed by the Orphanage Board met several days ago and the applications on file were considered, and enough accepted to fill the vacancies. The committee tries to help the most needy ones and those who have no one to help them.

Mothers cross over to the other side and leave a family of innocent little children or a father is called to his reward and a mother left stranded financially with a family of little tots and no way to make a living for them. An appeal for help. It's a worthy case. It's a case where the church should step in and visit the helpless family with food and clothing and care. What are we going to do about it? Are we going to live some for others, or are we going to live for self alone?

The greatest joy that we get in this life is not in our possessions; but in doing for others. Some years ago a little boy came to the orphanage to live. He was in need of friends and a home. He has made good. He finished high school and is now in his senior year in college. Who would regret a single dollar they have invested in this splendid young man? Help give the boys and girls here a chance.

C. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE MISSION BOARD MEETS.

The regular session of the Mission Board was held at Suffolk Christian Church, Wednesday, September 16th.

Since the last meeting of the Board, Rev. A. W. Andes of Harrisonburg, Va., has passed away, he being the first one who had died while a member of the Board, since its organization in 1907.

Members absent from the meeting were: Brother J. M. Darden of Suffolk, Va., and Brother J. A. Williams of Franklin, Va., on account of illness; Mrs. W. M. Sellars of Burlington, N. C., whose presence was prevented by the illness of her husband; and Brother K. B. Johnson, who was in Texas at the time of the meeting.

Members present were: Col. J. E. West, Chairman; Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Vice-Chairman; Rev. C. Rexford Raymond of Southern Pines, N. C.; Mrs. E. W. Boshart of Raleigh, N. C.; Mrs. J. G. Truitt of Suffolk, Va., and the Executive Secretary, J. O. Atkinson.

It was a busy day, being given to the serious consideration of missionary and church extension interests within the bounds of the convention and to the work in our foreign fields.

No board meeting for a day during the year is called upon to decide more important and vital issues to our church life and work than this board. It is concerned with every possibility of advancing the work, and to new fields, in the convention, to sustaining churches that are on the decline and have to have help in order to live, and to the evangelizing of under-privileged areas within our borders. Up to the depression in 1930, the Board had an income of from $20,000 to $50,000 a year with which it could do much aggressive work. The depression caught the Board, as it did many other enterprises, faced with obligations to which it had to turn its attention; and with decreased funds these obligations have absorbed most of our income. Income dropped to less than $15,000 in the fiscal year 1933, from $25,000 in the fiscal year 1931. The total income the past year was $17,440.68. These figures are deplorably small and indicate the great indifference to Missions in a constituency of more than 30,000 members.

As a church we will never grow much until we learn to give to Missions—to evangelize the unevangelized, to build and sustain churches that the gospel of righteousness may be preached to those in need at home and abroad. No church grows except through its missionary endeavor and outreach, and our church can prove no exception. Christ promised to be with His disciples until the end of the ages only on one condition, namely, that they obey Him and “Go preach the gospel to all nations.” The report of the Board showed that it had been discharging obligations made in previous years, and the Board looks hopefully to being out of debt in another twelve months, that it may again go forward as in former years in trying to enlarge our borders and strengthen our stakes by building churches and preaching the gospel where needed, and in sustaining churches that are dying from lack of funds.

We reduced our indebtedness during the year from $5,605.71 to $3,143. This amount includes assets which if turned into cash would discharge these obligations. The Board still has an obligation of $968 on the indebtedness of our South Norfolk Church, which obligation it has reduced the past year from $2,000.

In addition to the outstanding obligations which must be met in the debt-paying process, the Board voted to assist in the coming year a pastor in the Valley of Virginia Conference, a group of churches now without a pastor and unable to employ one; also to assist Lynchburg in going from a part time to an all time pastor for the growing work there; and to assist on the pastor's salary in Richmond, Va., pending the clearing up of financial conditions, which entail current obligations upon that church which are more than it is able to meet and keep going. The Board will continue to assist Winston-Salem Church in its growing work in this large city of North Carolina, prospects of which grow more hopeful with the passing months. We are to sustain the coming year and to do a more extensive work in Carroll County, Va., and also at Ocean View, Va., than that previously. These two fields afford an opportunity for a real missionary endeavor and growth. These are among the most important and essential items that are to receive attention from the Board, some smaller contributions being made to points which had to be helped in order to keep going.

The appropriations, however, are only a small part of the work of the Board whose interests, as above stated, reach out to every part of the convention and of our fellowship. The Secretary of the Board was instructed to keep the Board informed by surveys and the collecting of data, as to points needful of help, counsel and encouragement.

This Board is now working with the Church Extension Boards through whose agency we are able to assist financially in supplementing the pastors' salaries in our churches at Asheville, Niagara, Sophia Parish, Albemarle, Winston-Salem, N. C., and in Charleston, S. C. We had previously merged our work in the foreign field, and this completes the merging of our work here in the home field. The two Boards now work in harmony and in cooperation with each other.

It is understood that the funds coming to the Board are divided one-half to foreign and one-half to home missions, unless otherwise designated. Our foreign funds are handled by the Prudential Committee of the Commission on Missions, of which our Secretary is a member, and which work on foreign fields he stays in touch with through the regular meetings and proceedings of the Prudential Committee.

One day our people will awaken to our tremendous Mission opportunity and obligation, if God wills, and then there will be that growth and progress and joy to which those are entitled who seek in all things to obey their Lord and to win souls and build up the cause of righteousness in His name. Should anyone inquire as to why our Congregational-Christian Churches, unitedly, have such slow growth, tell such an one that these churches have not taken seriously the command of our Lord, nor put into practice in their hearts and their churches the “great commission.” The world was never more in need of the gospel and the preaching of Christ than it is today, and those who have not that gospel and the living message of the Cross are waiting and will wait until those who have that message shall give it to them. Giving to Missions is the most serious and sacred offering we ever lay upon the altar of our Lord, since this offering is made solely, not to make our life and love known, but to make the life and love of our Lord known to those who are in need of His saving light and life.

MISSIONARY NEWS ITEMS.

Mrs. W. M. Jay, Editor.

BEREA (NANSEMOND).

The Woman's Missionary Society of Berea Christian Church, Driver, Va., has had a pleasant year in every way. They raised their apportionment by the use of the Cent-a-Meal boxes and found it an excellent plan and recommend its use to other societies. Other years they had found it necessary to have suppers, cake sales and similar ways to raise their quota, but this year they found the little boxes a helpful and easy method. In June they celebrated their 18th birthday, and at that time opened their boxes and were surprised at their contents. The boxes were returned to the owners to be opened again at a later date. Mrs. L. A. Daniels is secretary of this society.

PORTSMOUTH.

The Junior Missionary Society of the Portsmouth Church has had a very successful year under the guidance of its superintendent, Mrs. R. F. Edwards. They have worked jointly with the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, using the fourth Sunday night in each month as Mission night. At this time a special missionary program was put on and the mission study book was used.

On August 23d they presented a special program at the Kiwanis Fresh Air Farm to the twenty-five boys between the ages of 8 and 12 who were guests at the farm at that time. The program was conducted entirely by the society and Miss Mary Floyd acted as leader, using as her topic, "Daniel." The trustees of the farm were very much pleased with the program and expressed many words of praise and appreciation to the young people for their effort. This was indeed a good adventure and they were glad for the opportunity.

DENDRON.

The Young People's Society of the Dendron Church has been busy under the leadership of Mrs. Garland Spratley, as superintendent. They have held regular meetings and added several new members as a result of the membership campaign during the first quarter.

The most outstanding piece of work they did was to study and discuss the book, "Christian Youth in Action" at Wakefield with the Waverly, New Lebanon and Wakefield young people. Out of this grew a strong sentiment against Sunday baseball and a determination to do all they can to discourage it.

The younger members of the group have read "Land of the Golden Man." Next year they are planning to divide the group, with Miss Irene Cotten as leader of the Juniors. This is a good step and much more will be accomplished and the interest increased. Mrs. Spratley gives the following information as to the Young People's Conference which is to be held in Suffolk, Va., soon. The theme will be "The Trail the Negro Travels," divided into three talks, "The Jungle Trail," "Contributions Along the Trail," such as art poetry, music, etc., and the challenge to the young people, "Smoothing the Trail." Mrs. W. E. Wissemann of Greensboro, N. C., is expected to be present and address the conference.

FRANKLIN.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Franklin Christian Church held its first monthly meeting on October 20th, at which time the new officers were installed. The topic for the year, "Youth and Missions in the Americas," has been discussed in their program. The following subjects have been used: "Life among the Philippines," "Mexican Life in the United States," "Mountain Life and Negroes in the Southland." The two mission study books used this year were "Lupita," by Alberto Rembas, and "Toward a

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 502 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

MY SWAN SONG.

There is an ancient belief that just before a swan dies it sings a very sweet song. And so wide-spread is the belief that "swan song" is understood to mean that a person is passing out of the picture.

Six years ago last May, when the young people organized the Southeast Youth Fellowship at the Burlington Christian Church, they asked me to edit a page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN for them. At the time it seemed almost impossible for me to do it. I had never written for publication; I was busy with other things; but I have never been able to resist the call of youth and to share with them any service within my power.

These six years have passed rapidly, and this experiment has brought me much joy. Some have been kind enough to say that helpful things have gone on the page, but I am sure that it has meant more to me than to the readers.

With this week's paper I relinquish my privilege to another. The new editor is a young person, one who has never done this type of work, but one who is quite capable of accomplishing more than I have. It is a pleasure for me to turn over the editorial pen to another, and I shall do it with high hopes that the Youth Fellowship Page will carry more inspirational and helpful materials than it has ever done before.

Releasing the pen does not in any sense diminish my interest in the work of young people. Any call for service will be answered cheerfully. As executive secretary for the Board of Christian Education, it is still my duty to aid young people with their work, and this is a most pleasant duty. As editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, it will be my joy to see that the young people's work is aided through the paper.

And now to those who called me from the multitude and put into my hand an editorial pen, I wish to say, "Thank you a thousand times." You opened for me a new door of opportunity and have made my life richer. Give to the new editor the same kind of co-operation you have given me—thus you will enrich another life.

AN APPRECIATION.

For the past year or so, Mrs. W. B. Williams of Newport News, Virginia, has written notes on the Christian Endeavor topic for this page. Quite a number of people have reported that they appreciated these notes and used them in their programs. This is the reward an editor receives. Mrs. Williams has done faithful and efficient work, and those who have known of the work and used the material are grateful to her.

Mrs. Williams reports that she cannot continue this work for the present. The editor of the page wishes to express publicly his personal appreciation for the service she has rendered and he is sure that quite a large circle of friends join with him in this appreciation.

A successor to Mrs. Williams has not yet been found, but an effort is being made to find one who will continue the work, and it is hoped that the Christian Endeavor notes will be continued as heretofore.

ATTENTION PASTORS AND SUPERINTENDENTS OF EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA.

Have you sent to the Secretary of the Youth Fellowship for your Convention the names of the young people in your church that would make "key workers" for the Youth Fellowship? The youth of today has energy. They want to do something, and they will be glad to cooperate as key workers in their church if they are once started. Some of the pastors and superintendents of Eastern North Carolina have cooperated very nicely with the officers of the Youth fellowship, but others have failed to appreciate the work of the young people. "Let us work together" is the will of our Master. Are we working together? Have you sent Miss Katharine Macon, Henderson, N. C. the name or names of key workers in your church? If you have not, please do so at once.

MAYLON WATKINS,
Supt. Leadership Training.

REMAINDER OF MINUTES.

By mistake on the part of the copyist, the minutes of the Eastern North Carolina Youth Fellowship annual meeting appearing on this page last week were not complete. The remainder of them follows:

Liberty, Vance, was selected for the place of meeting the next year.

Rev. Lanson Granger, acting in the place of Rev. F. C. Lester, had charge of the installation service.

A collection was taken which amounted to $4.26, and this was deeply appreciated.

A hymn was sung and the day's meeting was closed by the benediction.

During the coming year may we all do bigger and better work in the Fellowships of our conferences of the Southeast.

KATHARINE MACON,
Secretary.

BUILDING A CHRISTIAN WORLD.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
OCTOBER 4, 1936.

Scripture: Rev. 21:1-7; I Pet. 2:11-17.

Daily Bible Readings.

Monday—Psalm 67: 3-7.

Tuesday—Romans 13: 1-14.

Wednesday—Ephesians 4: 4-16.

Thursday—I Thessa. 1: 1-10.

Friday—Luke 22: 24-27.

Saturday—Romans 1: 13-17.

We have heard much recently about building a new world. This topic deals with building a Christian world. There may be a big difference. The Communist and most of the other modern movements among men visualize a new world, but few, if any, of them think in terms of it being a Christian world. It is the business of Endeavorers to try to discover how to build a Christian world.

In planning this program, those in charge should try to visualize a picture of what a Christian world would be like. Perhaps you will want to take out the dark background of crime and fill it with the light of love. The golden glow of money may need to fade into some less brilliant shade. However, you may see the picture, try to make it whole—complete in all its parts.

Some society may want to discuss several elements that enter into the Christian world. Other societies may want to discuss only one phase of what they think is required in a Christian world. Decide definitely on what you want, after having read the scriptures, then proceed to gather hymns, poems, quotations, all kinds of materials that will go into the building of a program that may have real value for your local group.

It is a hope that this program may be the beginning of definite activities which will be carried out by Christian Endeavor societies in an attempt to make real that which you first visualized as a dream-picture.

THE SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY IN WESTERN ASIA.

(Review.)

LESSON XIII—SEPT. 27, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "They rehearsed all things that God had done with them, and that He had opened a door of faith unto the Gentiles."—Acts 14:27.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matt. 13:24-33.

The lessons during the past quarter have had as their general theme The Spread of Christianity. The aim of these lessons, as stated by the committee, is "to lead the student to an understanding of New Testament Christianity, and to beget in him the desire and purpose to live the Christian life and to win others to faith in the Lord Jesus." They have set forth in dramatic fashion one of the most thrilling chapters in the story of Christianity. In this review lesson, the writer wants to set down some impressions and emphases of these lessons. They are not necessarily in the order in which they are recorded in the book of Acts.

The Centrality of Jesus Christ.

This comes first on every count. Christ is the heart of the Acts of the Apostles as He is the heart of the gospels. The apostles in all things tried to give Christ the preeminence. They went forth and preached Christ. They exalted Christ as both Saviour and Lord. Their message was Christ.

The Universality of the Gospel.

The conception of the fact that the gospel was for all men did not come all at once. The early chapters of the Acts record the unfolding revelation of this glorious fact. But the background of the work of the apostles was the belief in the universality of the gospel because of the adequacy of Jesus Christ. Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria, then Western Asia, then Europe, then Rome, and thus symbolically unto the uttermost parts of the earth—thus the gospel vindicated its claim to universality, not only as to geographical bounds, but as to human needs. Jew and Greek, bond and free, one and all, whosoever would.

The Faith of the Apostles.

The apostles certainly did not see all the implications of the new movement. But they believed that Jesus meant what He said when He told them to go into all the world. They took Him at his word. They went out not always knowing whither they were going, but quite confident that wherever they went, He was with them. Their faith was simple—and superb. How paltry our faith as compared with theirs.

The Courage of the Apostles.

These men were unafraid. No peril on land or sea seemed to have any dread for them. Because they had seen the face of God in Jesus Christ, they were not afraid of the face of man. When we remember the age-long and the powerfully entrenched evils of their day and then think of them going out into the Roman Empire and the pagan world, we do indeed take knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus, they had caught something of the moral courage of the Master himself.

The Power of Personal Witnessing.

The spread of Christianity was not due primarily to what we call preaching services. For the most part the foundation work was done by laymen, and in a personal, certainly in an informal way. When persecution arose, these people went everywhere preaching the Word. But for the most part they were lay-preachers. But their word was with power. They bore witness to the truth in Christ. They spoke out of the abundance of a full heart and a rich experience. There was no refutation of a fact like that. Christianity has lost something of its power because it has become less vocal in a personal way.

The Adequacy of the Gospel.

The gospel was able to save all kinds of people in all kinds of places. Christ was sufficient. He needed no apology; He needed only to be revealed. Whenever this was done, and when the hearers responded to his spirit and yielded to his will, they came into a new life. Both in the printed record and in between the lines the adequacy of Christ for all men is embedded in the story of the Acts.

The Guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Read this book with this idea in mind, and see how in mysterious and gracious ways, God's Spirit was the life and power and determiner of the new movement. Whether it was in the selection of men and women, or whether it was the occupation of new fields, it was the Holy Spirit which "said" or which "suffered them not." These men had something more than general orders; they had specific guidance. This story is a challenge to us.

The Practical Power of Prayer.

The heart of the matter, so far as the apostles were concerned, was prayer. Prayer is the central and primary factor in the story of what they became and did. It was through prayer that the Holy Spirit came, that they renewed their courage, that they found guidance, that they received their message, that new fields were opened up, that they won others. The men and women of the Early Church were men and women of Prayer. They did not argue about prayer; they simply prayed. And they would teach us that "more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

The Vindication of Missions.

The Acts of the Apostles is sufficient vindication of missions. In it is answered every objection which many modern church members make to missions. And these objections are answered not by mere arguments, but by lives and deeds. To be sure times have changed. Our world, outwardly, is different from their world. But the essential problems of humanity are the same. The needs of humanity are just as urgent and no more varied than then. And the gospel is just as adequate to supply all those needs through the riches of grace in Jesus Christ.

NOTES ON PREPARING A SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

ly and as wisely as you can. You will have more material than you can use, but this will serve the double purpose of giving you latitude of choice and also a sense of power through reserve.

5. Have Objectives.—Your lesson has a subject. You ought to give it an object. Try to have some plan, some purpose, some end to which you bend all your efforts, and around which you organize your material. Above all else, work for results. Bring every lesson down to the point of personal and practical application.

6. Do Some Writing.—It might be well to write out your lesson from time to time, even if you do not read it. (In fact it would not be best to read it.) In any event, you ought to have a clear outline of what you are going to say. Unless you can put your thoughts down clearly on paper, you will not be likely to present them clearly to persons. Discipline yourself at this point.

7. Pray.—Pray, even before you begin to prepare the lesson. Ask God to illumine your mind, to guide you in all truth, to bring to your remembrance whatsoever things He has said unto you, to help you to understand His Word, to select and arrange your material, to help you to teach the lesson, speaking the truth in love. Pray without ceasing in preparing and in teaching a Sunday school lesson.

"GOD'S ELOQUENT SILENCES"

"I cry unto thee, and thou dost not answer me."—Job 30:20. (Read Job 10:16-23.)

One of the distresses of christian living is that christians often cry out of their distresses for God's help and there seems to be no answer. Of all our experiences this mystery is the hardest to understand,—divine silence when we pray out of terrible agony.

But as we look back over a stretch of years and view the outcome of things, we understand vaguely that the father's silences have been as much an answer to our prayers, as though He had said "Yes" or "No."

If we love Him and realize that He loves us supremely, and if we believe that He doeth all things well to them that love and serve Him, then any answer, or no answer at all, from him should be happily interpreted and bring contentment and blessing.

We believe that some day we shall understand His silences and shall praise Him for it. Let us try to seek this understanding, and the earlier in life we are able to do it the greater the charm and the delight of such a faith.

Prayer—Dear Father, help us to trust Thee in all things. Thy way is best and that is enough. Teach us how to be patient and humble in Thy silences and know that Thou art loving us still. In the name of the great answerer, Jesus our Saviour, we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"CHOOSING God."

"Let me fall, I pray thee, into the hand of the Lord; for very great are his mercies; and let me not fall into the hand of man."—I Chron. 21:9-17.

This text records David's choice of a punishment which was to fall upon him for the sin of numbering the people. He chose the hand of God rather than the hand of man, and he prayed that the punishment should not fall on any of his people, but upon him only.

God is the only judge who is sure to deal justly with us. Are we ever concerned about ourselves? Let us flee to God. Let us throw ourselves into his hands. There is no other place in the universe so safe, so kind, and so full of God's mercies and forgiveness.

Prayer—O Lord, our Saviour, plead for us at the throne of mercy. Be Thou our judge and our punishment.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"DEAF TO GOD'S PROMISES."

"Yet they would not hear."—Isa. 28:9-13.

We have seen a red-letter Bible, marking the promises of our Lord. That has always been a most interesting volume. We heard of a book once that contained nothing but the promises of the Bible, surely a very interesting volume. It is now out of print, we are told.

But one of the finest spiritual exercises one ever engaged in is to take the Word itself and hunt for His promises. When doing so, they seem to flash upon you with unexpected glory. They are a rest in our weariness, solacing and refreshing in our discouragements, and uplifting to victories. Yet how seldom do we turn to these promises! The Lord is so kind and tender and ever ready to help, and yet we will not hear.

Prayer—O our heavenly Father, forgive our deafness. We confess that we hear the vices of the world easily enough. May we hear Thy voice always and in everything.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"WHAT PROFIT TO BE A CHRISTIAN?"

"Ye have said, . . . what profit is it that we have kept his charge?"—Mal. 3:13.

"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"—Mark 8:36.

Man is born to deals, and he is constantly asking himself, "What can I get out of it?" So important is the profit business to the youth of our age that it is his first thought in seeking a job. He has lost the importance of a career, and he has no conception of a personal service to the world. Here we find Malachi charging the Jews with this folly over two thousand years ago. It is indeed a common vice.

Why should one wish to profit materially out of obedience to God? No profit is so lovely and valuable as no profit at all. No experience is so enriching as doing things for love's sake. Somebody has beautifully said that "love's givings pay continual dividends." The glory of any service is that we have served, and the advantage of a noble life lies in its nobility, not in material profits.

Prayer—Our Father, we would love Thee through Jesus our Saviour, for love's sake alone, and for Thy sake alone. And may we serve our fellow-man, the world and Thee this way. We pray for the richest gifts. Forbid that we shall forget that richest of blessings are in Thee.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE INNER SANCTUARY."

"Your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you."—I Cor. 6:19.

Our bodies for the indwelling of the Lord! It matters not how much we have been told this, we still act as though we never heard it. We make our bodies the marts of trade. We fill them, we stuff them and we pour into them in a way to break down their every function. We take them into dens of the devil and turn them loose to the ravages of pleasurable indulgencies. We crown them with habits of every day life that make them homes of the devil.

We clean up our bodies before we go to work in the morning. The housekeeper cleans her house and sets it in order. In the morning, cannot we also say, "Now for the purifying and the beautifying of God's temple." Then we may go forward through the day of toil, saying, "God is in His holy temple." When we lie down to rest at night, we can also say, "We bless Thee, O Lord, that Thou hast honored Thy sanctuary." This is the holiest of thoughts and the highest of privileges.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for the blessedness of thy presence.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"MEETING GOD IN THE MORNING."

"They entered into the temple early in the morning."—Acts 5:1.

I met God in the morning,

When my day was at its best,
And his presence came like sunrise,
Like a glory in my breast.

All day long the presence lingered,
All day long he stayed with me,
And we sailed in perfect calmness
O'er a troubled sea.

Other ships were blown and battered,
Other ships were sore distressed,
But winds that seemed to drive them
Brought us to a peace and rest.

Then I thought of other mornings,
With a keen remorse of mind,
When I too had loosed the moorings,
With the Presence left behind.

So I think I know the secret,
Learned from many a troubled way;
You must seek God in the morning
If you want him through the day.

—Bishop Cushman.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A GLIMPSE OF THE WORLD.

By DR. ELISHA A. KING.

This morning I have chosen as a text a scene in the wilderness of Judea where Jesus beheld all the realms of the world in a single, swift glance. The incident belongs to the first great trial of Jesus commonly spoken of as His Temptation. Here are the words taken from the fourth chapter of Matthew (8-10).

"Once more the Tempter conveyed Jesus to an exceedingly high mountain and showed Him all the realms of the world and their grandeur and he said: 'I will give you all that if you will fall down and worship me'."

Jesus' answer was, "Begone, Tempter! It is written, 'You must worship the Lord your God, and serve Him only.'"

I.

Jesus was wise and far-seeing when He refused to worship the Tempter. If the Satan appeared to Jesus in bodily form, as a person, it might have been easier to resist such a personality than to have conquered an inner mental temptation. In any case Jesus put the emphasis where it belonged, true to His teaching, "You cannot serve God and Mammon." But the temptation included more than what these words imply. All the realms of the world came up into vision. What were they?

At the very moment Jesus was visualizing the world there were great issues and projects at stake. We can only mention the Greeks and the name of Alexander who changed the world's thought; and the Roman Empire and the great Romans, and the Jews and their place in the religious and political maelstrom of history. The greatest Power then in the world was Rome and the very land and people to which Jesus belonged was subject to Rome. Anyone familiar with the history of the world at the time of Jesus' birth does not need to be told of the glory, grandeur, wealth and power that made up the world. But all of that constituted a considerable gift—if anyone had it to confer. Many a conqueror has dreamed of such treasures. (I have this past summer visited the historic building in which the treasures of Napoleon are housed. It is a thrilling experience to follow through in order the evidences of his great power, wealth and success. But no thoughtful person can make the rounds of that museum without recalling the fact that the glory, grandeur, power and wealth once belonging to that great man faded away and is now only a memory. Surely he left much to prove that he had a tremendously vigorous existence. What Napoleon sought to achieve through war Satan offered Jesus as a gift! But we hasten to say that we do not believe Satan had any such gift to offer and if he had in any sense the right to bestow such a gift he could not have delivered it.

It is entirely reasonable to suppose that this story of the Temptation was Jesus' own account of the great inner struggle related in objective form such as his disciples could understand. No one but Jesus was present in the wilderness to see what transpired. But the Temptation was a real one, greater and more terrifying than we of today can rightly appreciate. Jesus had to face the choice of a life-work. He knew the world in which He lived. His temptation was a problem of political lordship over the world. That was a living issue in His age. His nation was hoping for and expecting a Messiah who would lead it in a successful revolt against the Romans. This meant nothing less than the use of military power, or war. Jesus had to face this—there was no escaping the ordeal.

Jesus did face it and he made his choice. He refused to become the military leader. He asked for no crown, no throne, no army. He refused to be influenced by the pomp, grandeur, wealth and power of the world, but he determined to conquer the world in a different way. This new way of conquest was to be by love, service and sacrifice. Upon this He staked His life!

This is pure Idealism and many of the world's practical men have called it foolishness; but with all their practical notions they have made a mess of civilization. George Adams says he had rather be an Idealist than a Capitalist any day. Idealists are not always practical but they lay foundations over which a practical way is finally achieved. The aims of the Idealists, the things they seek to achieve too early for the practical man to adopt, finally become a part of the established order. And very often the pioneer efforts of the Idealists are forgotten. Idealists have a very thorny road to travel. Jesus was the world's greatest Idealist and they crucified Him. Practical men of His age did not understand Him, but His ideals lived and they always will. They have done more to bring genuine happiness and comfort to the earth than all the schemes of kings and rulers since time began.

It is a long time since Jesus stood on a high hill in the Judean area and visualized a lost and misdirected world. But His meditation was not so much taken up with the lost condition of the world as with plans as to how it could be saved. He knew then, as well as we know now, that the world cannot be saved through jealousy, hatred, greed and war. He was consumed with plans as to how, by love, service and sacrifice this lost world could be saved.

There is no hill or mountain in Palestine from which all the realms of the world can be seen and there is no mountain in the world today from which such a sight is possible; but the miracle of modern life makes it possible to see the world every day from our own homes if we will have it so. We live in a wonderful age of the daily newspaper with its telephoto service, its telegraphic and cable communications, and with wireless and radio and fast steamships and flying machines and we are able to know, at least, even though we cannot see with the naked eye, what is going on in the whole world every day. When the daily newspaper comes to our door every morning or evening there, spread out before us is a cross-section of what the world did yesterday or today. And what we read today is not very re-assuring. However, what we observe is not wholly discouraging. We are often tempted to think that the whole world is in a very sad plight. No longer is anything stationary, fixed, settled. Everything is in flux. The whole world is upset, disturbed, groaning in death and new birth. The forces that are struggling are ideas and principles. The evil and the good are still wrestling with each other. In the midst of civil war, of intense nationalism, of increase of armaments and of materialistic paganism we behold more plans for the promotion of peace and good-will than anyone has ever seen in the history of the world. The voice of Jesus is heard over the din and selfish confusion calling the inhabitants of the world to a greater realization of brotherhood. The Gospel of Good-Will and Brotherhood is being Christian America," by Herman N. Morse.

There have been two social gatherings this year besides the regular meetings, including a "Christmas Package Party" and a Lawn Party.

The apportionments for their society have been sent in in full each quarter, and they have had their percentage of attendance at eleven meetings.

HOLY NECK.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Holy Neck Church had a most successful year's work under the leadership of Miss Lillye Holland as superintendent, and Miss Theodosia Beaham as president. They have reached all their goals, and one of the most interesting things they did was their Mission study classes which were held jointly with the Holland society. Teachers from each of the societies made the classes most interesting, and the society is looking forward to the coming year and hoping for more achievements.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE.

The Woman's Council of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., which includes the missionary organization, has had a successful year both spiritually and financially under the efficient leadership of the president, Mrs. A. B. Jarvis.

They have held eleven monthly meetings. The Spiritual Life department has had charge of the devotionals and at each meeting used a theme in harmony with the program.

Mrs. R. B. Wood and Mrs. C. L. Dawson arranged very helpful and interesting programs, using the study books of the year, "Toward a Christian America," "Women Under the Southern Cross," and "That Other America," as a basis for the programs. Maps, posters and pictures were also used, including missionary news items and other items pertaining to the progress of Christianity.

Mrs. J. F. Morgan was guest speaker at their meeting in July and gave a most interesting account of the conference at Eaglemere, Pa., which she attended in June.

They have had a luncheon each quarter at the noon hour and the meeting following, which they found very helpful in regard to attendance. They have a social half-hour at the close of each regular monthly meeting also.

The pastor, Rev. H. S. Hardecastle, and his capable wife, are always present when at all possible, and are most helpful when called upon.

We are indebted to Mrs. J. W. Manning, an active member of this group for the above information.

NEW LEBANON.

Miss Christelle Price, secretary of the New Lebanon Young People's Society sends the following program, which was presented at the church in August on a Sunday night.

Hymn—"All Hail the Power."

Scripture reading—Matt. 28:10-20.

Prayer—J. W. Maynard.

Hymn—"He Whispers His Love."

Dialogue by five children—"A Geography Lesson."

Song—"Tell Me the Story of Jesus."

Exercise by three girls—"Jairus' Daughter."

Song—"Our Best."

Play—"Something Big," by members of the society.

Special Offering.

Benediction—Dr. W. D. Harward.

WINSTON-SALEM.

The Woman's Association of the Winston-Salem Congregational-Christian Church has enjoyed a very interesting year, under the capable leadership of Mrs. C. E. Zeiger, the president. This church, though small in numbers, is pushing forward with a determination and the women are leaders in this case as they usually are in most churches.

Regular meetings are held each month with a specially planned missionary program. This association does all phases of church work for women and the missionary side is emphasized from the educational standpoint.

They make a special effort to have representatives attend the missionary conference meetings and are planning to send at least one car load to Durham on October 6th, to the Annual Woman's Conference.

They meet in the homes for their monthly meetings, with an attendance of from 15 to 20 members. After the program and business meeting, a delightful social hour is held. One of these social hours was in the form of a handkerchief shower for Mrs. W. T. Scott and her sister, Miss Bertha Cotten, just before they left for their new home in Jacksonville, Fla.

SUNDAY.

"MINE OWN VINEYARD."

"They made me keeper of the vineyard; but mine own vineyard have I not kept."—Sol. 1:6.

We have often heard the addages: "The bricklayer does not repair his chimney"; "The carpenter lets his house go to pieces." We have also seen some Christians so interested in purifying others that they forgot themselves and became befouled. It is easy to see the faces of others, but we have to use a mirror to see our own, and some Christians, like the vivacious boy, forget to look in the mirror.

Reform certainly means first a sincere and honest qualification of self. The physician, to be of greatest service to others, should guard his own health. The general must plan his own campaign. The teacher must first learn the lesson.

Our own lives call for our first tilling. If we are not faithful husbands at home, we are not likely to be away from home. Jesus has covered this in His teachings when He admonished us not to look at the mote in the other person's eye, but first to pull out the beam in our own eye, that we may see clearly how to pull the mote from our brother's eye.

Prayer—Our Father, dwell Thou within us and make us pure and holy. Then whatever we may undertake for Thee will be Thy work and a guarantee of success for Thee.—Amen.

II.

Since I left Miami Beach in June I have traveled 15,000 miles and am now at home again. I wish to make public thanks to a kind Providence and to the countless number of men and women on land and sea who have so faithfully fulfilled their duties and made travel so safe. The journey took me through Norway, Sweden, and Denmark, then into Germany, Belgium, Holland and France. A portion of time was given to the city of London. In the nature of the case the tour was rapid and no one in my position would presume to think that such a visitation of foreign countries gives him the right to speak authoritatively on all conditions prevailing in those countries. The best one can do is to report faithfully what he saw and heard.

The chief reason for my going abroad this year was to attend the Twelfth World Sunday School Convention held in Oslo, Norway, July 6-12. The first Sunday School Society was organized in Philadelphia in 1791, the London Sunday School Union was founded in 1821, the first world convention was held in London in July, 1889.

The World Convention at Oslo represented 48 national and international associations devoted to religious education. They comprise a membership of 38,000,000 adults (besides children and youth). One gets some idea of the scope of the work by observing the countries to which grants of money are made by the Ghitish Committee: Albania, Austria, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Esthonia, France, Hungary, India, Italy, Jugoslavia, Latvia, Madagascar, Palestine and Syria, Poland, Portugal, Rumania and Spain. The North American Committee makes grants of money to Angola (Africa) Argentina, Belgian Congo, Brazil, Burma, Ceylon, China, Ecuador, Egypt and the Soudan, Greece, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Peru, Philippine Island, Puerto Rico, Rhodesia, Siam, Uruguay and also to Palestine and Syria. If you wish to get a glimpse of the world take your globe and locate these countries and then try to think that the World's Sunday School Association is undertaking to encourage the education of the children of these lands along the lines of the Christian life.

The world's population is, roughly estimated, 2,036 millions, and in this world there are 232,374,142 Protestant Christians among whom there are 62 million children under 14 years of age. The Sunday Schools of the world have an enrollment of 34 million pupils. Only about one-third of those under 14 years of age are in the Sunday Schools.

Out of the 34 million pupils reached 28 million are found in North America and Europe where 205 million of the 232 million Protestants live. The 6 million Sunday School pupils in the rest of the world are gathered from the remaining 26½ million Protestant Christians. Increases in Sunday School enrollment have been noted in every other part of the world except the older Christian countries. Surely you can picture for yourself the great masses of children in the world who never have such training in religion as the Sunday school affords. And one can easily understand that the falling off of Sunday school attendance in the older established Christian countries means something quite serious.

There were about 3,000 regular delegates to the Oslo convention, over 800 of whom came from the United States of America. The general attendance was about 5,000. Twenty-five speakers came from different countries. Most of the speeches were in English interpreted in Norwegian. Familiar gospel hymns were sung in the delegate's own language, the music, of course, being an international medium.

III.

No thoughtful person could make such a journey as I made without doing a great deal of serious thinking. Kagawa emphasized the fact that "the child is the best amongst us." If this be true, and it is true, then the Christian Church has a great task before it, and that is to Christianize the children of the world. This means that we must begin in our own homes and in our own church, and it further means that more Christian men and women must interest themselves in the work and give more time to it.

The world at large is sick. The bottom has dropped out for many millions of people, and the disease of pessimism and indifference is spreading even among those who were once loyal to the Church. I have gathered a large amount of information on many subjects, and it will be my privilege to share it with you and all other interested persons from time to time as opportunity offers.

I have asked myself many a time during this tour what can I do as an individual to help cure the world's ills. I return home with the conviction, shared with many others, that the best solution of the world's sickness is religion, and for us that means the Christian religion. This is not a pious or platitudinous remark of mine; but it represents the opinion of countless numbers of educators, statesmen, men of affairs and thoughtful politicians. Religion is faith in a meaningful existence. This faith is grounded in a spiritual institution of a transcendent power able to harmonize life's discords and bring ultimate victory out of temporary defeat. Professor Whitehead's remark is to the point: "Religion is the vision of something that stands beyond, behind, and within the passing flux of immediate things."

I shall continue to urge upon you all a greater loyalty to Christ and to this particular church. And in order to give me a chance to share these facts I urge upon you continuous attendance upon the services. This may be just the day for you to resolve to devote more serious thought, to give more time to the promotion of true religion.

The Perils of Virtue

By Rev. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Self-Satisfaction.

The Pharisee was outwardly correct—he fasted twice every week and gave tithes of all he possessed, but he was cold and self-centered and selfish within. There was a sneer in his prayer.

The trouble with the Pharisee was that his life was according to the law, but his spirit was harsh with self-righteousness and his judgments critical.

This is a danger of the virtuous, an outer formality and an inner contempt for others. A man successful in business or in his profession, a College graduate estimating the unprivileged, or a respectable person, as he thinks of others, is apt to exalt himself. It is one thing to be thankful for what God has enabled you to be and to do, and quite another thing to look down upon others. Self-righteousness is the danger of many whose outward lives are good. There is a fruit, fair on the outside, bitter within.

Inherited Opinions.

Nicodemus thought that he was in the kingdom of God because he was born a Jew. He was the greatest theologian of his day, yet Jesus taught him in a brief conversation that the entrance into the kingdom is through repentance, and the work is one of the Holy Spirit.

Even the followers of Jesus are in peril of resting their confidence in inherited theologies, family ancestry, national and racial pride. The Jew of Jesus' day sneered at the Samaritan. Today a false family, national and racial pride curses the world. This and suspicion are leading Europe into war. A false pride of the native-stock American has made it hard for the Indian and the Negro. If the spirit of Love was in every citizen's heart and he intelligently understood its application to human relationships, most of the problems of the United States would be solved.

Stagnation.

The third peril that threatens us all is to rest in the knowledge and applications of religion that we have rather than to make the effort to enlarge our knowledge of God and his truth, and to apply it more searchingly to our social relationships. A few years ago it was said that a man was found on the mountains of Tennessee who thought that Jackson was still President. The Scriptures are a mine of riches, but it takes intellectual digging to find that truth and to put it into circulation. A minister can use over and over again his sermons and thus stagnate in mind and emotion. A family may have many Bibles on its shelves, but if they remain unopened and covered with cobwebs and dust, the members of that household will not have a growing life.

It is easy to follow the path of least resistance. It requires a strong and steadfast will to study the Scriptures every day and to think how the larger and wider applications of these growing views must be applied to society to heal it.

Periods of Temptation.

Youth has its appealing temptations. Passion is surging and hot. When we pass from youth to mature years, we assume that middle-age has few perils and that they can easily be overcome. But in this opinion lies danger. Too many mature men whose lives have been without criticism yield to sex-allurements, and families smash. Business faces men with temptations. The danger of becoming submerged in business and golf to the neglect of family and church is a real peril.

The youth and middle-age think that old-age is immune from temptations. The temptations are different from those of youth and middle-age, but they are none the less dangerous and they come when men and women do not have the strength of earlier years with which to meet them. To lose confidence in youth, to think that because in old age one must be less active he is losing his religion, to miss the thrills of youth and to mistake this for the loss of spiritual reality, frequently sadden the feelings and weaken the influence of the aged. Yet, a cheerful, trustful faith in old age makes one an inspiration to others.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The Rev. Leslie J. Barnette, pastor of the Congregational Church in Coral Gables, Fla., returned from a month's vacation to find his home had been looted of all furniture and clothing. "It couldn't have been a more complete job had I been going to move myself," he said.

REVIVAL AT HOLY NECK.

Revival services were held at Holy Neck Christian Church, near Holland, Nansemond County, Va., September 7th to 11th. Rev. O. D. Poythress was the evangelist and preached with great fervor and zeal, and the congregations were delighted and inspired by his messages. He also rendered special service with his sweet gospel solos and by directing the junior choir. There were twenty-one professions, a large number of reconsecrations, twenty-one joined the church and the same number were baptized. Brother Poythress a funeral. Dr. J. G. Truitt took his place and delighted the audience with was called from one service to conduct his message.

N. G. NEWMAN.

HOLLAND REVIVAL.

The close of our Evangelistic Campaign came with the series of services held during Religious Emphasis Week September 14-20. We had as our guest speaker, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, who preached with spiritual zeal and power and with a keen insight into the problems and vicissitudes of the Christian life. The following topics were used: "Sources of Spiritual Power," "Essential Attitudes of Prayer," "Threads of Destiny," "The Man With a weak Ankle or The Paradox of Christianity," "Spiritual Weapons" and "The Fullness of Christ."

By Friday evening we had received a total of eight new members on Confession of Faith. This hour might be called the climax of the meeting. The majority of the members came that evening and many reconsecrations were made. A fine spirit prevailed throughout the meeting and continues until the present. We invoke God's continued blessings on all touched by His Spirit or affiliated with our church in any way.

The Baptismal Service was held Sunday evening at which time twelve candidates were baptized. The pastor feels amply repaid for all efforts and those of the Church with the success of these meetings.

NEW ENGLAND NEWS.

Porthmouth, N. H., has services as usual all summer, though this is not usual in most northern churches. This is the church founded in 1802 by Elder Elias Smith, where the "Herald of Gospel Liberty" was first published.

It is centrally located on Court Street and is the only Congregational-Christian Church in the city, is not closed in the summer, is ready to serve summer visitors who do often drop in.

August 9th the pastor and his brother were at a camp meeting in Connecticut, and Rev. Ralph Williams, of Mill, N. H., supplied.

At Freedom, N. H. the Daily Vacation Bible School enrolled 88 and had an average of 75. Five confessed Christ as Saviour during the sessions. One day the pastor drove seventy miles, carrying children back and forth to the school.

Eighteen people, most of them adults, have joined the church recently. Good 80-year-old Deacon Bennett said at the outdoor baptism, "God has given us another victory."

Yes, this is the church that seven years ago some of our good and wise brethren in the ministry wished to sell "because nothing would ever be done at Freedom." Wait before you sell those church buildings of inactive parishes. God may send a man as He did at Freedom.

ALABAMA.

My third revival meeting was at Roanoke First Church. Rev. A. R. Van Cleave did the preaching through the meeting. He greatly endeared himself to our people, and did some very fine preaching. His sermons were inspiring and thought provoking. Our church was greatly revived, and two names were added to the roll. The music was in the hands of local talent and well rendered.

Quite a number of our young people of this church have gone away to school and to teach, which reduces the regular attendance at our young people's meetings. But here we have a faithful few that can be depended upon. God bless them.

My fourth meeting with Rev. H. N. Gray at Mt. Olive Church, four miles north of Tallassee, Ala. Here we had a fine meeting, good attendance and some very fine music. People came to church in large numbers, and the house was crowded to its capacity at all the evening services. Our last service was on Thursday night, and it was indeed a great service. The tropical storm came Friday and we had no further service. Everything was blown flat, and much damage was done to the crop.

This is a fine section of the country, and very fine people. Great was our pleasure to be with them in the services and to share the hospitality of their homes. Mrs. Ledbetter prepared a room for Brother Gray and myself. Here we spent the nights and enjoyed the fellowship of this good home.

There is much unharnessed talent in this community. May it be saved for God and His Church. Brother Gray is held in high esteem by his people.

I shall never forget their kindness.
G. D. HUNT.

THANKS.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing thanks to the many readers of THE SUN who have in one way or another shown their sympathy to us at the time of the passing of my father and the subsequent illness of my mother. Mingled with the sorrow for his death has been the gladness of the knowledge of faithful friends who are ever ready and willing to help alleviate that sorrow.

A REVIEW.

We have had just a little review of the first five books of the Bible. The word Bible is taken from a Greek word meaning "books," because there are many books in the Bible. These first . . . books are called books of law. The first is the . . . . ., which means . . . . .; the second is the book of . . . . ., which means . . . . .; the third is the book of . . . . ., which means the book of . . . ; the fourth is the book of . . . . .or . . . . .; the fifth is the book of . . . . .or . . . . . The three patriarchs (or first fathers) are A . . . . ., I . . . . and J . . . . The man who brought them to Egypt was J . . . . ., and the man who brought them out was . . . . . After Moses died, they were led by a young man named J . . . . ., and his name brings us to the next Bible division, the twelve books of history. The Ten Commandments are found in Exodus the . . . . . chapter. Deut. . . . .; give the first verses every child was taught. (These, you see, are the first Bible verses the Lord Jesus ever learned Do you know them?)

A QUEER OLD PROPHECY.

How many of you, I wonder, have ever heard of Old Mother Shipton? Your parents have probably done so, but perhaps you have never even heard her name. This woman lived many, many years ago. Her home was in England, in the County of Yorkshire, and because she was in some way able to foretell things which did come to pass, people called her a witch. She is said to have been a very ugly woman, but this did not stop her marrying a man named Shipton when she was about twenty-four years old. Her maiden name was Ursula Southill (or Southiel) and she is said to have foretold strange things in regard to Cardinal Wolsey, Lord Percy and many other prominent men. She lived in the days of Henry the Eighth, and probably was a very keen-minded woman, who saw how events were shaping better than did most of her neighbors. The prophesy for which she is best remembered, however, was in a sort of rhyme or chant. It was lost to sight for a long time, then about 1862, a man named Charles Hindley printed it, but he added to it some of his own rhymes. The last two lines he added were these:

"The world unto an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one."

Many, many people read the prophesy, but few, I suppose, read Hindley's statement made in 1873, that he had added those lines. By that time hundreds of thousands of people were terribly frightened, not only in England, but all around the world, because "Mother Shipton" had prophesied the end of the world, and so many of her other prophecies, they said, had come true. Of course, they were foolish to be so scared. If our Lord had really come, no Christian need have been afraid. But fear never helps anyway, does it? Here are the rest of the rhymes known as "Mother Shipton's Prophecy." Remember, it is said to have been written about 400 years ago. See how many things you can find which have come true. Perhaps your parents can help you do this.

OLD MOTHER SHIPTON'S PROPHECY.
(Uttered about 1550.)

Over a wild and stormy sea
Shall a noble sail
Who to find will not fail
A new and fair councree.
From whence he shall bring
A herb and a root
That all men will suit
And please both ploughman and king.
And let them take no more measure,
Both shall have even pleasure
In the belly and the brain.
Carriages without horses shall go
And accidents fill the world with woe.
Primrose Hill in London shall be
And in its centre a Bishop's See.
Around the world they shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.
Water shall yet more wonders do;
How strange, yet shall be true.
The world upside down shall be,
And gold found at the root of a tree.
Through hills men shall ride,
Nor horse nor ass be by their side.
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep and talk.
In the air men shall be seen
In white, in black and in green.
Men shall walk over rivers and under rivers;
Iron in the water shall float,
As easy as a wooden boat.
Fire and water shall more wonders do,
England shall at last admit a Jew.
The Jew that was held in scorn
Shall of a Christian be born and born.

War will follow with the work,
In the land of the pagan and the Turk,
And state and state in fierce strife
Will seek each other's life.

But when the North shall divide the South,

An eagle shall build in the lion's mouth.

All England's sons that plough the land

Shall be seen book in hand,
Learning shall so ebb and flow
The poor shall most learning know.

The world then to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

A LETTER FROM DR. WHITE.

The only missionary from the Southern Convention is Dr. M. J. W. White of Norfolk, Virginia, who is now located at Christinsted, St. Croix, Virgin Islands. SUN readers will remember Dr. White as our recent missionary in the Philippine Islands, and summer school students will remember him as a teacher at Elon and other of our training schools.

A recent personal letter from him carries information that will be interesting to others, and the editor is pleased to pass it along. After request that THE CHRISTIAN SUN be sent to him he writes as follows:

"I am with the Public Health Service of the government of the Virgin Islands. I am rated as municipal physician which means hospital work, public health, and taking care of the sick in the locality. Just at present there is a typhoid epidemic but these Islands are considered very healthy. While you were blistering in the recent heat wave we enjoyed cool breezes from the Caribbean.

"These Islands are off the coast of Puerto Rico and were bought by the United States from Denmark during the World War. The natives are 90 per cent negroes, brought over as slaves by the Danes.

"The Lutheran Church we attend was built before Revolutionary War and contains some very interesting old tablets written Dutch and Danish. The altar and pews of mahogany are beautifully carved.

"The Moravians have a large church here and a good attendance. It is over 100 years old and in excellent condition.

"Then there are the Episcopal, the Burning Bush, the Salvation Army, Holiness, Pilgrims and other sects.

"Living conditions here are rather difficult, but we are all in fine health, and I am enjoying my work."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A PLEA FOR ENTHUSIASM.

One great need of our churches is enthusiasm. We have buildings, many of which are supplied with good equipment. We have a goodly number of members. We have principles worthy of our best devotion. The history of both the Christian and Congregational Churches is such as to make one proud to share in the onward march of these peoples. Most of our members are neither too wealthy or too poor—they live well by the sweat of the brow. Our preachers are educated. Literature is piled about us for a minimum price. The world needs the Christian message which our United Church has to give.

Everything seems to be right for our Church to move forward. Most of the problems of merger are cleared, or nearly so. The machinery is ready for work. The call of the world for the Christian message has never been more definite and demanding. Individuals, communities, political parties, churches, nations and international relations are now in the midst of tremendous change. If ever there can be a chance for the Church to preach its message, that time is now.

But there seems to be a hitch somewhere. The machinery moves, but it moves slowly when there is every demand for speed. It moves indefinitely when there is a need for definiteness. It moves cautiously when it should move without fear. It moves doubtfully when there is every reason for faith in the final outcome. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Now is the time for the Church to make its influence felt in the life of our nation. We are in the midst of the change that can easily turn the nation to a Godless atheism, or may just as well make it Christian. If the Church will stand for the right and let its light shine into the dark places, whether they be in high or low circles, then our country may accept the Christian message. But if we fail in this our day, deliverance may come from another source, but those of our day, we who have the present opportunity will never see the glory that should be ours.

This is a plea for enthusiasm for our Church work. When leaders go out to get pledges for the coming year of church work, they may well go with a very high enthusiasm. They are helping to make the world a safe place in which to live, and the money received by the churches will have something to do with the peace of the world. Those who teach the Bible may well do it enthusiastically, for they are among the fortunate few who are telling of the one thing that can make life happy in this world and the next—they have no competition in this field. Those who share in any part of the Church may rightfully rejoice not only because they themselves are followers of the King of kings, but are commissioned by Him to do His service.

Every minister should feel a fine enthusiasm creep over him each morning as he thinks of the day's untold duties, for he is God's man commissioned to a task quite the equal of that of Moses or the prophets. Sunday school superintendents ought to be able to shout a little about the God-given opportunity of leading old and young in the worship of a saving Christ who transforms life. A missionary society worker may well sing for joy because of the privilege of teaching about what the Christian message will do out there towards the end of the earth, and as he or she collects the mites of money that will send preachers, teachers and doctors to those who need them most in many countries around the earth. What we need in our churches is the kind of enthusiasm that will make us forget the weather, certain aches and pains, and all criticism, and give ourselves without reserve to the work commissioned to our hands. F. C. L.

A MISSIONARY COMMITTEE IN THE CHURCH.

Has your church a missionary committee? If not, is it not failing in the most important and vital consideration and cause for which the church itself exists? It is important "that bills be paid, hence we have a financial committee; music is important, we, therefore, appoint a music committee." Look over the list of the committees in your church and see how many of these committees have to do with the efficiency and the developing of the religious life within the walls of the church. And now our inquiry is, in the words of another, "How many have to do with the outreach of the church beyond its own walls?" Since the church exists to help build the kingdom of God, outside of its own walls, as well as inside, does it not need a committee charged with the responsibility of planning how this may be done?

These pointed questions, pertinent now to every church and pastor, come to us by the way of "the World Friendship Bulletin."

What would such a committee do? Well, its job is a big one and should certainly engage the best that the church has. May be one man, one woman and one young person—boy or girl. May be this number should be doubled, with the pastor as the chairman. Its job will include, we again follow the suggestion of the "World Friendship Bulletin":

1. Cultivating the missionary mind, so that the church is increasingly concerned for the spread of the spirit of Christ in every geographical area and in every relationship of life.

2. Increasing the amount of knowledge of peoples and races and groups and situations; of human needs; and of manifestations of the spirit of Christ in meeting such needs.

3. Financing the enterprises that express the church's larger sense of mission. For the whole work of the church includes more than the maintenance of the church itself.

4. Working out a program for the church as a whole and for each age-group within the church.

5. Creating new interest and enthusiasm by experiences that enlarge people's vision and stir an emotional response. J. O. A.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Young People's Missionary Conference of the Christian Churches of Eastern Virginia and Gates County, N. C., met in the Christian Church of Suffolk, Va., Friday evening, September 25th, at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Frances Everett, of Holland, presided, and Miss Ruby Piland, of Suffolk, Va., was the secretary. No report of the attendance was submitted, but approximately 200 young people were present. The total amount of money raised by the young people during the year was about $50.00 less than last year. Several churches reported larger gifts, but three or four churches failed to reach their goals, and this accounts for the difference. The Conference re-elected the president and secretary for the ensuing year.

The theme of the Conference was "The Trail the Negro Travels." This theme was based upon the Mission Study Book for the coming year—a study of the African and American Negro. Addresses were delivered as follows: "The Trail the Negro Travels," by Miss Frances Everett; "Jungle Trails," by Miss Louise Burch, of Ivor, Va.; "Contributions Along the Trail," by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, of Greensboro, N. C.; "Smoothing the Trails," by Miss Dorothy Edwards, of Portsmouth, Va. Rev. F. C. Lester pronounced the invocation. Mrs. W. B. Williams, of Newport News, led the devotional service. A vocal solo, "O Rest in the Lord," was rendered by Mrs. Carl R. Kay, of Holland, Va. Revs. J. F. Morman and O. D. Poythress sang the Negro spiritual, "Lord, I Want to be a Christian"

It was stated in the Conference that the American Negro has made more advancement than any other group during the past fifty years. One speaker said that at the present time 90 per cent of the Negroes in America can read and write. If this statement is correct, they are advancing more rapidly than the white people in the field of education. At this rate the time may come when the young people of the Negro churches will study the needs of their white neighbors, and lay plans to awaken and deepen their interest in the educational and religious development of their friends. Who knows? The Negro is not a peril and a menace to the white people of the United States. But the indifference of many white people to their educational and religious opportunities is a menace to their social, industrial, moral and religious future. The young people of today who are willing to work and hold up high ideals of mental development and moral character will be the leaders of the next generation regardless of race or color. The color of one's skin is not a guarantee of superiority in the mental and spiritual challenges of life.

It is encouraging to see the young people turning their attention to a study of the various races of the world. It is the program and purpose of the Church leaders to extend this study to all the nations and races. The Church can do much to prevent war and create a world friendship through the changed attitude of the young people. The young people will fight the battles of the nations in the next war. They will determine the mental and spiritual attitudes of the nations and races in the next generation. It is important that they understand each other today. The Negro young people will learn much by undertaking an unbiased Christian study of the white people, in the manner suggested for the young people of the white churches of the United States. There should be a mutual comparative study pointing the way to a better understanding and an increasing effort to help each other.

SHOULD THE CHURCHES SUPPORT THE COLLEGE?

This question has been up for an answer since before the founding of the college. The years, with their thousands of other demands, have not silenced it. Whenever we face the question of leadership for the Church we are compelled to evaluate the college and its contribution to a progressive program. When churches are vacant and ministers are needed, instinctively we turn to see what the college has produced. The offering that the college has to make in this particular may be unsatisfactory, yet it is the best that we have. To found a college and not provide for its adequate support will not provide pastors for our churches and leaders for our program. The college could not found itself; equally is it unable to support itself. It is the product of the church and rightfully it looks to the Church for its support.

At this particular time of the year, when local churches are wrestling with annual reports and the problems connected therewith, the problem of finance is always to the forefront. Every local church with a sense of loyalty, a desire to comply with Convention requirements and a vision that sweeps on out beyond its natural bounds is desirous of reaching its full financial quota. By vote of the Convention, Elon College is put on the list as an institution of the Church to share in its offerings.

The churches constituting the Convention are asked for a total of twelve thousand five hundred ($12,500) dollars. This amount has been apportioned to the Conferences and the Conferences have in turn apportioned it to the churches, so that every local church knows exactly its share of the Convention's budget for the college. To evidence its good faith in its askings of the churches, the Convention has given its note to the college for two hundred and fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars, obligating itself to pay 4 per cent interest on this amount, but stating that it is not liable for the face of the note. This note is given in good faith and the college accepts it in good faith. This is not only a moral but a religious obligation on every church. I am sure that every pastor and every church will endeavor to see that the full apportionment for the college is raised.

If every church will raise its full quota the college will be able to weather the storm, but if the churches fail she will likely hit the rocks and only by the mercy of God will she be able to make the harbor.

What the college has been able to accomplish in the past few years seems almost impossible. The enormous reduction in current debts, the unprecedented growth in enrollment, the effective improvement in faculty and the wholesome transformation of the morale on and off the campus. In fact, practically everything that goes to make up a college has been greatly and satisfactorily improved except the financial income for current accounts. In this particular we have failed miserably. Now is the time to turn this failure into success. We can do it, and it will be done if every individual and every local church will determine to do his share—no more and no less, but his share to the full. Let every one do his best to make this year 1936 a banner year for the college. We have the equipment, we have the faculty, we have the student body, we have the opportunity, we have the Church, and may God help us to match the Church to her opportunity and may glorious successes crown her efforts.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The Orphanage children have had a good time eating watermelons for some time, but we have pulled the last and hauled them in. The children here are very fond of melons and they have all been so obedient and considerate this year about staying out of the melon patch, so all could have an equal share, that we feel encouraged to plant more next year. I asked all before the melons were ripe to be fair and not go in the patch and let me divide them on an equal basis, so all would fare alike, and we have had no complaint to make. One cannot help but admire an obedient child, whether it's in a home, orphanage or in any other place.

We had a boy in the Orphanage some years ago who had a bright mind and was talented, but he did not want to go to school; but with a lot of persuasion we did get him through high school and we then made arrangements for him to go to college and take a special course, but he backed out and decided he would not go. This same young man visited the writer some weeks ago, and in talking over his days he spent in the Orphanage and especially his school opportunities, he said to the writer: "I wish you had taken a leather strap and used it on me freely and made me go to school, as I now see the opportunity I threw to the winds." So many young boys and girls make this same mistake.

The time has been when a business man would take a young boy in his office and teach him the business, but not so now. When one makes an application now for a position, about the first question will be what college did you graduate from? The job will go to the young man or woman who have been willing to pay the price for an education and prepare themselves for the line of work which they wish to follow. It has been interesting to watch the boys and girls who have been reared in this institution and those who were willing to pay the price now hold good jobs and are making good.

It always makes us feel happy when we visit a man's office and see one of our girls sitting at her desk as a stenographer or secretary. It also makes us feel happy when we visit hospitals and see one of our girls on duty nursing the sick back to health again, or see our boys occupying responsible positions where it takes education and training to fill the positions they hold.

It makes us feel that the chance the Orphanage has given them has been worth while. We also know they were willing to pay the price and they are now reaping their reward.

October, November and December are the months for special stress in our Sunday schools and churches on behalf of the Christian Orphanage. Thanksgiving comes in November, when a special effort is made to raise a special thankoffering for the Orphanage which we have looked forward to for all these years to help us meet the extra expense of the fall season. It is dependent upon you.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

REACHING OUT

The merit and worth of a church institution, or enterprise, are measured, not by what it receives but by what it gives. It is more blessed to give than to receive, was spoken by our Lord and reiterated by Paul, for the benefit of enterprises and institutions as well as for individuals. By this standard the blessings as well as the merits of the missionary enterprise are obvious and indisputable. We, as individuals, may win souls to Christ and members to its fold. The heart of the missionary movement and activity is the passion for souls and the building of the kingdom by the winning of individuals and building churches in the name of Christ and for the sake of Christ. Though these souls won to Him and through these churches built in His name, virgin soil is always being sown and cultivated, so that all other institutions and enterprises of the church may reap benefits, and enjoy the donations of those who become willing to give and to share their income with others. On this account missions is not a benevolence nor a philanthropy, but a passion; a passion to obey Christ, and in His name and for His sake, win disciples to Him and thus add other power and strength to the church which He himself is building in the world. Evangelism is sounding the evangel of Christ within the walls of the church; missions is sounding the evangel of Christ by those sent out and sustained by the cooperative effort of those in the church, that other recruits may be won and that other churches may be built, at home and abroad. Those who have gone out in His name to suffer hardship, to live on meagre salaries, to deny themselves of comforts and privileges for the sake of their Lord; those who have faced dangers by sea and by land, foes within and without, and have been willing to give their lives and their all for the sake of sharing their Saviour's life and love with others, were not prompted by motives of benevolence and philanthropy; they went under the compulsion of a great dynasty, whose power was the Holy Spirit himself and whose leader and example was their crucified and resurrected Lord. Thus our missionary giving isn't a ceaseless, begging enterprise that it may receive, but a continued process of giving lives and talents and time for that which it has received and thus return to the church tenfold blessings and benefits for every mende of help it receives in gifts from others.

Is a church about to close up, or die from lack of support? It appeals to the Mission Board that it may live, and be a source of strength and helpfulness to the fellowship of the living and the serving. Is a new church needed and demanded that the conference of churches may be stronger and grow in membership? The appeal comes to the Mission Board to help build that church that it may become a source of constant strength and power in the conference. Are these places where the gospel has not been preached to the underprivileged and is not being preached here in the home land and the community is without church and without preaching? The Mission Board is appealed to to send a preacher to proclaim the salvation of the gospel and to build a church that even in these underprivileged areas there may be secured members and churches who will themselves become assets and contributors to the cause of righteousness. Missions is the one enterprise of the church that pays back a hundred fold to the strength and power of the church for every dollar that is invested in it. Not to see these apparent truths is to be ignorant of the salient facts that our Saviour had in mind for us when He said "When the Holy Spirit is come upon you, ye shall be my witnesses." J. O. A.

REV. A. W. ANDES.

In the passing away of Rev. Alfred Wellons Andes from his home at Harrisonburg, Va., June 23, 1936, this Board sustained a loss which it feels very keenly. From the time he was elected to membership on this Board, May, 1932, till his decease, he never missed attending the regular session of this body and showed the deepest interest in, and gravest concern for, all matters coming to the attention of the Board. His counsel was always wise and helpful and his fellowship with us was delightful and helpful. As a Board, we desire to express our esteem for the faithful and efficient service he rendered us and the Church which he served with such singleness of purpose and devotion.

Therefore, be it Resolved: First—In the passing of Brother Andes we have sustained a loss of a fellow-member whose place it will be difficult to fill. Second—That we shall cherish his memory as that of a man who gave the best he had to the service of this Board, to the Church of which it is a part, and to his God, Whom he so devoutly revered at all times. Third—That this preamble and these resolutions be given a page on the permanent records of our Proceedings, that a copy be sent with our esteem and sympathy to the bereaved widow and family, and a copy be sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

 THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

PASTORATE SYSTEM.

In order to correct the impression made in certain quarters that the Home Mission Committee of the Eastern Virginia Conference has not always given due consideration to all the Conference Church problems, including the pastorate question, it necessitates the giving of a few facts for the benefit of those who have not kept posted as to what has been going on for over thirty-five years.

The committee had recommended the pastorate system, offered financial assistance to enable the formation of pastorates, and so much had been accomplished along this line that in 1918 it recommended the formation of five additional pastorates (this included all churches not formed into pastorates) two of which were partially functioning at that time. Pastorate No. 1 has been attached to other pastorates for several years; No. 2, with one added church, becomes a pastorate for next year; Nos. 3 and 4, with two exceptions, have been adjusted into two pastorates for several years; No. 5 has formed into a pastorate this year. There are only one or two churches that really are not in pastorates, except the churches in Dendron pastorate, which failed largely because of the removal of the Surry Lumber Company from the town and state, an unusual situation.

The committee appreciates the attitude of churches and ministers in solving this problem as to this Conference. The committee has never recommended a parsonage for every pastorate, whether it consisted of one or more churches, and one thousand dollars as a minimum salary. The 1935 ministerial reports indicate that only about three ministers received less than $1,000 salary, one of which was Hopewell. I think over one-half of our active pastors live in church parsonages.

Realizing as a serious problem the loss of members who move from one locality to another, the committee recommended that each church have a membership committee of three. So far as I know, no church has adopted this recommendation, which I regard as most constructive.

Among the greatest drawbacks to progress has been the failure of mission churches to follow the recommendations of the committee as to cost of church plants and acceptance into our Conference of a few ministers from other denominations who did not fit into our way of doing things and who did not have that denominational loyalty which should characterize every minister in the Christian Church. Another disadvantage in our Conference and Convention work has been the inroduction and passage of new and conflicting resolutions and programs on the last day of Conferences and Conventions, many of which would have received more consideration and have been defeated on an earlier day in the session.

The committee has co-operated with the Mission Board of the Southern Convention and the Christian Missionary Association of the Conference in a rounded program for the churches of the Conference and has endeavored to be progressive and constructive as well as reasonably conservative. It welcomes suggestions as well as constructive criticism.

Its annual meeting will be held early in October.

J. E. WEST.

WHAT MAKES ONE GOOD?

A few Sunday mornings ago I spoke on the subject, "What Makes People Good," using as a text Acts 11:24, "For he was a good man." I was trying to find out what made Barnabas a good man. To make my service more interesting, I conceived the idea of asking the question, "What makes people good?" of a number of people during the week as I studied my sermon. I am giving the answers to the question to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN with the hope that they may not only be interesting, but helpful as well.

The first person I asked, answered, "The love and confidence of those who know him." The second person I asked replied, "The Spirit of God working in him." The third said, "Divinely inspired ideals, loyally followed." The fourth person asked answered, "Faith in Christ." The fifth replied to my question, "Reason rebelling against one's meanness." The sixth person I asked gave the reply, "The proper response of the soul to the experiences of life."

The seventh person asked, replied, "The trials and the sufferings which men often have to bear help to make them good."

The writer's own thought was about as follows: The personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as Saviour makes a person good, and the training in Christ's ideals of life, the study of the Bible, the sincere worship of God, the fellowship of good people, service for fellowman, and the vision of the life to come help to make him better and better as he journeys on the ascending trail of life.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

INTRODUCING MISS CARLETON.

The new editor for page 10 of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is Miss Emily Carleton, of 541 Osecola Avenue, Winter Park, Fla. Many of the young people in the Southeast already know her and others will be delighted to make her acquaintance.

This editorial work is new to Miss Carleton, but is the sort of challenge that a young person with fine spirit can not pass by lightly. The former editor of this page and the present editor of THE SUN bespeaks for her the most hearty co-operation of the readers of this page. He is quite sure that you will be repaid by the enriching of your own spirit if you follow from week to week the reading of this page.

When it is more convenient to do so, news items, fellowship programs and such like may be sent to the editor of THE SUN at 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Va., but Miss Carleton will be delighted to receive suggestions and materials for the page from any who may wish to send them.

My friends, it is my pleasure to take a polite bow and present Miss Emily Carleton, the new editor of the Youth Fellowship Page for our CHRISTIAN SUN.

F. C. LESTER.

GREETINGS.

Dear Youth Fellowship Workers:

It is always thrilling to begin some new piece of work. Behind the thrill, however, there is always a doubt of one's ability to successfully carry out the new task and a feeling of the deep responsibility involved. That is my state of mind at present.

One reason I agreed to attempt the editing of this page was because, as secretary of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, I realize the necessity of continuing the only medium we have by which new methods and materials for young people's meetings can be presented and a helpful exchange of ideas can take place.

There is only one method by which this page can be of service to the young people of the Southeast—and that is by the co-operation of all of you. This is your page; a clearing-house for your ideas. Each local group has interesting meetings and projects which will serve as helpful suggestions to others, if others can find out about them. Please consider it your duty to send in such reports and plans, that we may benefit by the things you are doing.

Any suggestions you may have as to ways of increasing the effectiveness and usefulness of this page will be greatly appreciated. Most of my religious training and experience has taken place outside of the North Carolina-Virginia district, which is the heart of the Southeast so far as our churches are concerned. Therefore, my ideas on what would be most helpful to most of you may not be correct, and so I need enlightenment from you as to what you need and want. I shall be delighted to hear from you at any time.

It is with an earnest conviction that the work of young people in the Church is important, and with the sincere hope that you will co-operate with me that I begin this new work.

Sincerely,

EMILY M. CARLETON.

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

On Friday evening of last week some 400 people met in the Suffolk Christian Church for the annual missionary conference. They were rewarded by sharing in an unusually helpful program.

In the brief business session, the report of the treasurer indicated a slight decrease in contributions over last year. Two societies made no report; eight gave less than last year; eight the same as last year, and six gave more than they did last year.

Officers elected were as follows: President, Miss Frances Everett, Holland, Va.; vice-president, Miss Lorraine Halstead, Buell, Va.; secretary, Miss Ruby Piland, Suffolk, Va.; assistant secretary, Miss Lois Harrell, Franklin, Va.

"The Trail the Negro Travels" was the theme, and was delightfully and inspiringly developed by addresses by the president, Miss Frances Everett, Miss Louise Burch, Mrs. W. E. Wiseman, and Miss Dorothy Edwards. These speakers made clear the fine contribution Negroes have made, the type of life they now live in Africa and America, and something of the Christian attitude which the white race should take concerning the Negro.

The worship service was very helpfully conducted by Mrs. W. B. Williams, of Newport News.

NEVER GIVE UP!

A barber invented the old-time spinning wheel.

A farmer experimented and worked during the long winter nights, and finally brought forth the invention of printing ealico in its many pretty colors.

A gardener spent evenings studying architecture and became famous while working in his employer's garden.

A blacksmith earned his living working at his trade, and, in spare time, learned eighteen languages and twenty-two dialects, which brought him money and fame.

A baker became one of the world's distinguished astronomers.

A common printer discovered electricity with two sticks and a silk handkerchief, probably having borrowed the latter.

A shoe cobbler became a great naturalist while working at his bench.

So never give up; your turn may be next.—Exchange.

STRUGGLE

Why ask from life such tender eare

As to escape its every blow?

Who has not had a grief to bear

The beauty of it doesn't know,

Who has been ever safe and warm

Has missed the grandeur of a storm.

A foolish man is he indeed,

Who takes not comfort when he can,

But every page of life we read

Proclaims that struggle makes the man.

Nations stamp medals just to tell

The fame of those who battle well.

I would not try to feed with words

The hungry, nor with speech to cure

Men's agonies, but beasts and birds

Have no such sorrows to endure.

They live and die and never seem

To battle for a broken dream.

'Tis man alone who copes with fate,

Who questions life; has doubts and fears,

Losses and gains, and soon or late

Must suffer sorrow and its fears.

Only to man, who should be proud,

Is the high gift of strife allowed.

The Pastoral Heart.

Paul was an evangelist. But he was also a pastor. He was not only concerned with winning men to Christ; he was eager to see them built up in Christ. "Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do," he said to Barnabas. Let every minister and Sunday school teacher cultivate this pastoral or shepherd heart. The most important factor in Christian work is that we care for people, that we are concerned about them.

A Second Chance.

When Paul and Barnabas discussed the matter of going back to visit the churches they had a sharp division of opinion—Luke says "The contention was so sharp between them"—over John Mark. Mark had left them on the first missionary journey and Paul evidently had lost patience with and faith in the young man. He refused point-blank to take Mark with them on the second mission. But Barnabas the Great-Hearted wanted Mark to have another chance, and when it was evident that Paul was adamant in the matter, Barnabas took Mark and went on an independent mission. He believed in giving a fellow another chance. And his confidence was justified. Mark developed into a splendid worker—Paul later writes that Mark was profitable unto him in his ministry. And it was this same John Mark who wrote the gospel of Mark. How much difference it sometimes makes when some one believes in us, even when we have failed!

Enlisting and Training Leaders.

In Lystra, Paul found Timothy a young man, well reported of by the brethren, and with a background of good home religious training. He may have been a convert of Paul's on his previous visit. In any event, Paul saw in this young man a splendid prospect for the ministry in Christ's service. He immediately enlisted him and took him with him as an assistant. One has only to read the references to Timothy in the New Testament to see how he fulfilled Paul's faith in him. A good home, a vital religious experience, association with a great preacher and teacher—these were some of the elements that entered into Timothy's preparation for his life work. Let every minister and teacher be alert for young men and young women of promise, and seek to help them to find God's will for their lives.

Closed Doors.

Paul and Silas attempted to preach the word in Asia—in the northwestern part of Asia—and again in Mysia, but "they were forbidden of the Holy Ghost" and "the Spirit suffered them not." It seemed as if God was closing doors instead of opening them. How often that seems to be the case in life. How many lives seem frustrated, how often it seems we come to the end of blind alleys, or to seemingly closed doors. But the steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord. What seems like a closed door is often but an open door to larger opportunities for service. Many a man who could not get to the mission field has found an open door for service at home. Those who have been turned aside from one field or vocation have found larger opportunities in another. God closes some doors that He may open others.

Opened Doors.

"They came down to Troas . . . and a vision appeared to Paul in the night. There stood a man of Macedonia and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia and help us." Here was a great continent, the continent that was going to dominate the history of the world for many centuries to come, a continent with deep human needs, calling for help. That call for help was made articulate through a man. It was an open door that opened to this man of imperial spirit and opportunity far beyond what he could have dreamed or hoped. If we will to do His will we shall know.

Obedying the Heavenly Vision.

"And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for preaching the gospel unto them." God makes plain eventually the thing He wants us to do. And the vision is immediately followed by a practical call to service. A vision is to prepare for that service. Alas for us if having seen the vision we do not follow it. The secret of Paul's life was that he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision.

A Prayer Meeting Out-of-Doors.

When Paul and Barnabas finally reached Philippi they found not a great continent eager for their message; they found only a few women at the side of a river holding an informal prayer-meeting after the fashion of Jewish women. (The fact that there were no men there makes it sound quite modern.) But Paul was alive to every opportunity to make known the gospel of Christ, and he seized upon this chance to preach Christ. And as he preached God's spirit was at work on the heart of a wealthy, efficient, honorable business woman, Lydia by name. As a result, she became a believer and was baptized, and furthermore, the members of her family also believed and were baptized. God needs only an opening in a family or in a city, and He can begin a great work. Lydia and her family were the nucleus of what later became a strong and spiritual church.

A Symbol of Greater Things.

Reference has already been made to the fact that Lydia was the beginning of a great church, the church at Philippi. But she was a symbol of something even greater. She was a symbol of a new womanhood, a womanhood touched and transformed and lifted by Christ. The hope of that great continent was to be a finer type of womanhood and finer type of Christian home. How little one knows what great forces he is releasing, and what influences he is setting in motion when he wins a soul to Jesus Christ!

There is no truer test of a man's qualities for permanent success than the way he takes criticism. The little-minded man can't stand it. It pricks his egotism. He "crawfishes." He makes excuses. Then, when he finds that excuses won't take the place of results, he sulks and pouts. It never occurs to him that he might profit from criticism.—Thomas A. Edison.

FEET THAT NEED SHACKLES.

"Feet that are swift in running to mischief."—Prov. 6:18.

The doing of mischief is one of the things discribed in the Scriptures as an abomination to the Lord.

There is a sort of willingness that is so prompt and facile that it is a weakness to be condemned. There is a skill that is despicable. There is a strength that is weakness. You can commend the devil because he is resourceful, industrious and always on the job. We are told that Horace Mann would not graduate from his college a young man who had the wrong propensities. An educated sinner he rightly held, is twice as powerful for harm as one who is allowed to remain in ignorance.

Our business is "The business of the King." We need to be alert and skillful, and unabating in strength; but only when on the King's business, heralds of love, righteousness and peace, heralds of mercy, joy and gladness. If we seek wealth, let us regard the purposes to which wealth should be put.

Prayer.—Our Father, Examine our hearts; make our aims right; and furnish us with all the means necessary for our work for Thy glory. So govern our desires that we may be pleasing in Thy sight. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUR LIFE'S WAYSIDE.

"Some seeds fell by the wayside, and the birds came and devoured them."—Matt. 13:4.

There are many lives in whom there are many waysides pounded by the feet of others, the soil of whose hearts is trampled to hardened clay, and truth cannot find its lodgment and germinate there. There are the promoters of pleasure, the advocates of gain, unwise friends and bitter foes, agnostice, infidels and scoffers. They have made thousands of lives a barren waste.

To keep the soil of our hearts mel-low and receptive, we must pray, we must know His word and possess its inspiration, we must meditate much on His love and the sacrifice of Jesus, the Son, our Lord and Saviour.

If we allow the world to grind us hard, we cannot expect to be more than the world. If we keep our souls tender, fallowed for the Lord, our next world will be the world of God and Christ. No phase of our living is so important as this.

Prayer.—Our Father, Plow through our hearts with Thy spirit. May the world gain no dominion over us. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

GLORIOUS CHRISTIANS.

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

Jesus expressed this truth in another scripture in which He said, "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." One might as well not be a Christian at all as to be dead, stagnant or inert. In fact, it would appear that a lifeless Christian is not more a Christian than is a light a light after it has gone out. Let your light shine. Let your leaven spread through the dough.

In order to be all this, we have to take a check on ourselves every day. Let us find out whether other people are happier because of us, whether they are wiser, or stronger, or more serene and hopeful because of our influence with them. It is by this test we can know if the spirit of Christ is in us. It is written of Christ, "He could not be hid." Neither can a Christian hide his Christianity.

Prayer.—O Lord Jesus, Come into our hearts and be Thou our light forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE LIVING WORD.

"My words shall not pass away."—Mark 13:31.

Christ says, "Heaven and earth shall pass away," but His word shall not pass away. That is truly eternal. "Heaven and earth"—how it sums up everything that we could wish! But it is to pay away.

The emphasis is not to be placed on "heaven and earth," however. We are told that it refers to the elements around us and not to the eternal abode of the righteous. The emphasis is to be placed on Christ's words, the truth of Christ. They are the imperishable things.

In our longings, in our daily life, in our plans for the future, how small a place do we give to Christ's words. And yet they are the only abiding things of the earth. They stay and continue while everything else passes away.

Let us magnify His word and exalt it in our thinking. Let us lay aside anything that hinders us from giving it the proper attention. Let us memorize it and thus write it upon the fleshy tablets of our hearts, for they are the imperishable things of time and eternity.

Prayer.—Heavenly Father, Thou who art the word from the beginning and ever shall be, be Thou the energizing power of our lives, make it our delight and may nothing of Thine fall to the ground in our presence. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

MY LARGE PLACE.

"Thou hast set my feet in a large place."—Psalm 31:8.

David's was a large place. He was a man after God's own heart. He was known as a glorious prophet. His songs and Psalms have become a guiding light and the divine word of the ages. He was an ancestor to the lineage of Jesus and a king above kings. Do we rejoice with him in his large place?

We should be able to rejoice with him, for that which made his place large is our also. David had a large place because he stood with God and God stood with him. And so, though lot in life may seem very humble, if it is the lot that God has made for us, it is a large and glorious place.

Prayer.—O Lord our heavenly Father, we too are heirs to the throne through our Lord Jesus Christ, Thy Son. The work Thou hast given us is our fortune and we are glad, forgive us and make us glad. Suffer us not to slacken our hands in the performance of the work Thou hast designed for us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

TRUE HUMILITY.

"Not my will but thine be done."—Luke 22:42.

It is one thing to be humble. It is another thing to be humble to the point of renunciation. The horrors of the cross were enough to make Christ shrink from them, but He had put God's will first in his life. When He prayed to be relieved of it it was not a petition, but it was a prayer of self-renunciation. The Father's desire had been his motto from the beginning, and there is not an instance from the time He resisted the temptations in the wilderness till He hung on the cross that He did not let the Father's will have first place in His life.

When we go fourth into our daily duties to suffer its tasks, meet its obligations, suffer its defeats, face its temptations, and to pass through all the experineces which the days bring,

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

GOD HAS THE WORLD IN HIS HEART.

By REV. T. L. LEVERETT.

[Sermon delivered before the Middle Georgia Association of Congregational-Christian Churches, Bethany Church, The Rock, Ga., August 29, 1936.]

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

The text is from one of the greatest verses of the Bible. It is a verse that is very precious to every one of us, because it brings the message of salvation. It opens a window into the heart of God.

Did you ever think how big that verse is? It is as great and high as the infinite wisdom and love of the Almighty. It is as broad in scope as the whole wide world. How deep is it? It is as deep as the lowest abyss of ignorance and sin, into which the world has fallen. In a half hour's time it would be impossible to cover it all. As well try to count the myriad stars of heaven, that as to comprehend all there is in the meaning of this little verse. But I promise that we examine one star cluster of the firmament, one clause of the verse, "God so loved the world"; God has the world in his heart.

I.—God's Infinite Love.

God himself has preached the sermon. It began at Bethlehem in a manger. Angel's songs were the prelude. Through 33 beautiful years that sermon fan to three crosses on a hill, and an empty tomb. It is the greatest sermon that ever was preached, the paragon of lives, the perfect life of Jesus; the most lovable of all lives, God's well beloved.

That he might be what he was, all the teaching and discipline of Israel had been. The historians and prophets of Israel were right. There was a divine purpose that stretched clear back to the time of Abraham. He left his homeland and went into a country that he knew not, in order that he might live where he could best bring up his family for God. It was that some day from that family the Christ might be. For this Israel was taught by the prophets: for this they were disciplined by punishment. They were forgiven and restored, all that from the tree of Israel might grow the perfect blossom, the perfect fruit of the life of Jesus. Nothing was spared to make that life perfect. The diamond is just a bit of black carbon that has been under intense heat and pressure. Its flawless purity and clear cut lines are only possible thus. There is a pure lustre and beauty of human character too that comes only through suffering. So he has been made perfect through suffering, through the hardships of life and through death on the cross.

God loves the beautiful. He longs to find holiness in man. He yearns for a soul that shall perfectly love him. All these he found in Jesus.

But it was not for this that he gave Christ to the world! It was because he had the world in his heart! "God so loved the world that he gave." It was for you and me, because he loved us in our sin and unworthiness. There is cruel selfishness in the world, there is ugliness and evil. That the world might be saved from a hell of its own making is the reason God gave Christ. For this was all the preparation of the ages, for this that perfect life of love, and the death of the cross—because God has the world in his heart.

Never let any theory of the atonement deceive you into thinking that Jesus died that God might love our race. That life and death were to reveal God's love that was from all eternity, not to cause it. Jesus stretched out his arms on the cross and let men pour ingratitude, contempt and cruelty upon him, wracking his body with pain, and then prayed, "Father, forgive them." He says to us, "God is like that, it is his love you have seen in me." "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." It was all for this, that we might know that there is love in the heart of the Eternal. There is no other power that can lift us to the level of God's thoughts, none other that can save.

This is the good news, in our failure and sin, to know God's love in Christ. When disappointment and defeat comes there is no despair but assurance of victory. Life is drab and dreary in its monotony sometimes, but to know the love of God in Christ gives it all meaning. Life's hindrance are its helps; its seeming failure is success; its death is life because God so loved that he gave. In this is the glory of living for us; in this is the splendor of the life of Jesus—the fact that God so loved the world!

II.—God's Love in Us.

There is a blessed personal message to each of us in this. Our individual salvation is bound up in it. As you and I believe in God's love in Christ, all life takes on new meaning and there is born in us that love of God which saves.

But is that all? It was that the world might know God's love that Christ came. It is that the world might know his love that his spirit called you; for this he has loved you in your unworthiness and need—because he had the world in his heart. As with the Christ so with you, the ages have been preparing for each of you. The times are ripe for what you have to do. God has sent you, that through you his love might be known to the world. All God's planning and love for you on me is because he loved the world.

If Jesus had failed him, if Jesus had not taken the world in his heart, could he have been the Christ? If you and I fail him and refuse to take the world in our heart, understanding, forgiving, helping without limitation of class or creed, regardless of boundaries of nation or race, can you and I be Christians? God has the world in his heart; you and I cannot have the love of God in our hearts unless we, too, have the world in our hearts.

Our Master chose the Twelve and then poured out his very soul into them because beyond them he saw those whom their lives would touch. He loved Simon not for his own sake alone but for those who should be won by Simon's words at Pentecost and because Simon would open the door of the Church to the Gentiles.

Paul understood this: "For this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all long suffering for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting. (I Tim. 1:16.) We know God's will for us as we let his great love for the world possess us. We find ourselves as we lose self in that love.

The men of Nazareth did not understand this and they lost the Christ. Israel would not believe it and lost their homeland and their place as a nation in the kingdom of God.

God has loved our land. We have been favored beyond many other nations in our opportunities. The spirit of freedom and devotion to ideals came to those shores in the Protestant pioneers and the nation is what it is today because of those ideals of lib-

There are some beautiful words in one of our hymns:

"I thank thee too, that thou hast made joy to abound,
So many gentle thoughts and deeds circling round,
That in each darkest spot of earth some love is found."

God still so loves the world that he gives those who shall carry that love into each dark spot of the earth.

The Armenian deportations were before the memory of many of you. That was one of the blackest deeds of modern times. The sultan was the ruler of Turkey, and Mohammedanism was the state religion. Turkey has come a long way since those days. The Turks had come to fear the Armenian Christians living in parts of their empire, and the decree went forth for their "deportation." They were to be moved from their homes and sent on journeys which they were not expected to survive. The order came to one of our Mission schools in Asia. All the girls were to be given in charge of the Turkish guard who would take them away to hardship, perhaps death or worse than death. The order could not be resisted. But as once against the darkness of man's sin and hate God's love blazed out on Calvary, so here two devoted women, missionaries of the Congregational Church, said, "We will go with you." They shared the hardships, the dangers that they could not prevent, and thus saved the girls. God so loved the world that he gave these two women to Armenia.

One of the greatest minds of the Christian Church in Europe was Albert Schweitzer, a theologian whose books were eagerly read, a musician who could command at any time a large audience by his skill on the organ, giving concerts and interpreting the music of Bach to the cultured of Europe. The need of Africa came into his heart. He studied medicine to fit himself for ministering to Africa's needs, and today in his hospital at Lambarene, financed by the proerty. Because of God's love in Christ we have hospitals and schools; it was the spirit of Christ that founded them and continues them. It was loyalty to Christ that founded Harvard and Yale, that keeps Piedmont and Elon Colleges running. He has enriched us and given us high privileges. But it is not for ourselves alone, it is because "God so loved the world." For this we have our measure of freedom, for this we have our schools and colleges and churches. Our wealth is for this—that others might know and might be helped to the light of a better world. God has the world in his heart. If our country refuses his will, how can it expect to endure? If she selfishly seeks her own good regardless of others—if it is America alone that is in America's heart—she cannot hope to keep the gifts of God, who has the world in his heart. God so loved the world that he gave America to the world. Does America refuse to be given?

III.—Light in the Darkness.

God so loved the world that he gave the Christ, and God still loves the world. Sometimes it doesn't look that way. Sorrow and trouble come; selfishness and cruelty, prejudice and ignorance rule over many hearts. The Christian nations of the world let hell loose in a world war. Business methods and business institutions grind down their helpless dependents into poverty and want. But ever in the darkness God gives the light.

NOTE the bold-faced type, pronouncing text, center column references with chapter numbers in heavy type—unusual in Bibles, but a great aid to quick reference.

Synopsis at head of chapters—quite full—some Bibles have none.

The figures to the left of Chapter Head indicate the total number of chapters from the beginning of the Bible.

The headlines also are in bold type in keeping with the text.

The name of the book, on outside corner, makes the Bible practically self-indexed.

THE HELPS in the Teachers' edition are most important for consultation when reading the Bible, for in them one finds the explanation of much that otherwise would be obscure in the statements in the Bible text.

ceeds from his concert playing, he is showing forth the love of God in healing the bodies and souls of those who had no one else to care for them. God so loved the world that he gave Albert Schweitzer to Africa.

When the Christian world was under the dominion of superstition and the priesthood of the Roman Church, in the dark ages, God gave John Huss to stand forth for the truth though it brought him to his death at a stake. God so loved the world that he gave Martin Luther to witness for the truth in the face of danger, and be the herald of the Reformation.

God so loved the world that has given each of you to bring that love into some spot of his world. There is that place for you which none other can fill, that love of God which can come through you alone. It is because God so loved, not merely you, but the whole world, that he has placed you where you are—that there might be one in the person of you who, like God, has the world in his heart. Even now there is someone who is discouraged; there is trouble pressing upon someone; and because God so loves the world, he wants one whom he can send to carry his love. There is some truth that because it is new to the world or because it goes against the selfish interests, that the world does not want to hear. Because God so loves the world, he will give someone to stand for that truth. Who will it be?

Because God so loved this community, he put it into the hearts of some men and women fifty years ago to organize this church, Bethany Church. For fifty years it has been a light to brighten the lives of men, women and children. But it was not for this community alone. God so loved the World that he gave Bethany Church. God grant that you may ever have the world in your heart until men shall say, "How far this little candle sheds its beams."

The theme of this Association is "The Church at Work," and two Bible texts are given. One is that which the church is built, and I would remind you that that rock is not a piece of dead matter but a living stone. It is on Christ that we build.

At Niagara Falls what interested me is the mighty power of the cataract. There is beauty there, but it is the majesty of power that fascinates me. And there is a spot on the American of which I got a thrill. It is just a common building. There is nothing made there. There are whirling wheels and drive shafts but you see on articles of manufacture. It is the powerhouse into which goes the power of Niagara and from which goes the power that turns the wheels in factory after factory in the city of Buffalo and the cities of New York state. Streets and homes in those cities are lighted by it. Electric cars are moving by its power. There is power, tremendous power there. It is the place where power comes to birth. Niagara is working. They take me to see the wheel pits and down there at the foot of those shafts are the turbines through which Niagara sends its power. And they tell me that the force of the water does not fall on the turbines. That is a power that "on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder." At the bottom of these wheel-pits the force of the water is turned upward, and each turbine wheel rests not on bearings of steel but on the power that drives through it. It rests on the mighty power of the universe, the power that holds the earth on its orbit, the power that drives Mars and Jupiter and all the planets on their ceaseless, resistless flight. Sir Isaac Newton called it gravitation. As those turbines yield themselves to the will of the power that upholds them, as it flows through them, the mighty unseen force of the universe becomes possible for the help of mankind. There is light where before there was darkness, and the world is a better place in which to live.

Like the turbines at Niagara, the Church of Christ rests on the power of the Eternal. It is built on God's love for the world in Christ Jesus. Our strength and peace are not in motionless, resting on a dead fact. Like those turbines, we are upheld and find peace and strength as we yield ourselves in willing obedience to the purpose and power of the Eternal God. We rest on the love of God that through us seeks to give us to the world even as it gave the Christ. There is no worrying and no defeat to this love. They that yield themselves to it shall "mount up on wings like eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they walk and not faint." God so loved the world that he gave—the Christ, you and me. The Christ was willing! Are we?

FAMILY ALTAR.

let us learn to pray as He taught the Disciples and as He prayed Himself, "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." "Not my will but thine be done."

Prayer.—Our Father, teach us how to pray "Not my will but thine be done." Teach us how to subordinate our foolish longings, and teach us how to make our wishes those that are Thy wishes for us. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THEREFORE.

"We are verily guilty concerning our brother, therefore is this distress come upon us."—Read Genesis 42:18-25.

Joseph's wicked brothers were logical, and their logic led them to repentance. They saw at last the strict connection between their evil deeds and their misfortunes.

God's penalties are not recognized by us at once. Often we let them run on for a long time before we read their meaning. We are stupid in our sin, blind in our wickedness.

But the punishment is sure to fall on the wrongdoer. There is no escape from just retribution. We may fool ourselves to the utmost, but some day we shall realize that the Judge of all the earth will have justice done.

Before the penalty falls, O God, may we repent. Forgive our sins, we pray Thee, for the sake of Thy Son, our Saviour. Amen.

IT IS TIME FOR A FORWARD MOVEMENT

Our Contemporaries Are Busy

BISHOPS TO LEAD CRUSADE.

Beginning early in January, 1937, the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will lead a missionary and evangelistic crusade across Southern Methodism, according to a decision reached at a meeting held at Nashville, September 8, attended by more than fifty representative leaders, including the College of Bishops, a representative from each of the annual conferences and outstanding women missionary leaders.

Adoption of a plan for the go-forward missionary movement, which has as its avowed purpose "to stir the hearts of Methodism to its original evangelistic passion," featured the meeting. The plan, yet to be completed by Bishop Arthur J. Moore, who was selected by the College of Bishops to lead the movement, and members of the steering committee, is sponsored by the bishops, with whom the idea originated. The Board of Missions is to co-operate in working out details of the plan and pushing its operation.

Broad outlines of the plan include a series of forty-eight missionary rallies to be held at strategic centers throughout the connection—approximately 300 district missionary institutes, congregational cultivation by local pastors, and a series of anniversary dinners commemorating the sailing of the Church's first foreign missionaries.

CAMPAIGN OPENS IN JANUARY.

January 5-7, the date of the annual meeting of the General Missionary Council at New Orleans, La., was selected as the starting point for the movement, designed to enlist better financial support and increased interest in the Church's missionary program. April 25 was fixed as the culminating date.—The Richmond Christian Advocate.

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports; and let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion.

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

During recent years we have noted without much disturbance of soul a decline in our church attendance, gifts and membership. The blame could easily be placed on the depression. This is no longer true. Most of our people have as much money now as they have ever had.

Our boards and institutions are having a terrific struggle to render the needed and expected service. The strain on the leaders is too great. They should not carry it, and our churches can relieve this strain by increasing their contributions.

Our Mission Board, meeting recently, noted an increase in our contributions this year over last year. But figures from the same board indicate that only the most needy places within our own borders are being aided, that a little more than a thousand dollars goes to Puerto Rico, and that $5,461.83 was the amount sent to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions last year. Surely our gifts to world missions measure neither our ability to give nor our love for Christ's Kingdom abroad.

There never has been a time when the message of the Church was more needed than it is today. The Christian message can save civilization from destruction; apparently nothing else can.

The churches around us are beginning programs of definite advance. We do not wish to copy them, but we certainly do not want to be left behind when the Kingdom of God moves forward.

The Conferences soon to meet can plan for definite advance in all phases of our Church work, or they may hurry through with reports and pretty speeches and go home in pretty automobiles. If they do the former, then the records for next year will certainly surpass those for this. If they do the latter, then God pity us and the world of which we are a part.

The times demand a religious advance. Christ is calling us forward. Shall we heed the call? F. C. L.

N. C. BAPTIST BROTHERS LOOK FORWARD TO 1937.

OBJECTIVES: For Co-operative Program, $500,000.

For Orphanage, $150,000.

A general stewardship revival in each church some time during the fall months. In this revival, let discipleship, stewardship and missions be made a major with us. Let the revival culminate in a genuine every-member enrollment.

As a part of the enrollment, let a sustained effort be made to enroll at least 10 per cent of the church members as tithers. If it is at all possible, let the tither's test plan be inaugurated as a part of the general enrollment of all members in regular, systematic support of all Kingdom interests.

(Five ministers have been released from their work to carry on this campaign.—Ed.)

LET'S WORK TOGETHER.

Every index upon which man has learned to rely indicates that prosperity is rapidly returning; in fact, has returned to this country. The financial depression is behind us. Let's forget it!

We must not, however, forget the other depression which preceded the financial one. Thoughtful people agree that the financial depression was preceded by one that was spiritual and moral. We are out of the financial depression. The compelling question arises, namely, are we coming out of the spiritual and moral depressions?

Then we must manifest our appreciation for the bountiful blessings God has visited upon us. God has been good to our people in North Carolina. For the remainder of this year let us show our appreciation by increasing our gifts. Then as we face 1937 let us manifest our faith by undertaking to do the thing that deep in our souls we know we ought to do. What shall we render unto Him?

The time has come for a great advance. We can make it. We ought to make it. What we can do we ought to do.

Daily Bread

By AMOS WILDER.

This daily bread, these unexpected crumbs,
This sudden bounty here and there that comes
To anoint the eyes and to enlarge the heart:
O woo these gifts and choose the better part.

The inspired instant makes whole hours glow,
The genial impulse sends its overflow
Through arid stretches, and the flash of spirit
Irradiates the darkness we inherit.

This bread of life: some facet of a soul
Ingenuously displayed that shows the whole
Of human charm and poignancy; some spark
Of nascent understanding; or the stark
Rebuke of human anguish on earth's stage;
Some apparition of forlorn old age,
Infinite compunctions in our thoughts to breed
And stir us from the slumber to the deed.

Such daily bread of intimate communion
With hurt or joy or eagerness, this union
Of pilgrim beings in a veiled abyss,
These hails across the sea, the wilderness,
Enlighten the eyes and magnify the heart—
O woo these gifts and choose the better part!

—Advance.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

Howdy, folks! Here I am again. Guess I got pushed out the last two weeks, but that's all right, for the other people had something more important to say than I did.

Thank you, I will come right in and take this chair over there by the window where the sun shines in. These autumn days are getting a little cool, but the bright sunshine makes it a pretty world. The leaves in my section are just beginning to turn a little. There are some browns and yellows among the greens.

The season is a little later than last year, if I remember, but this time last year I was watching out the window of the hospital and saw the changes day by day of the leaves of the trees nearby. The growing green changed to a beautiful yellow, then the tree shed its coat and was left barren while I lay there waiting for life to flow back through my veins bringing color to my countenance. It is great to be alive in a world like ours where God has spread out His beauty upon the heavens and the earth and put joy into the hearts of those who seek to do right. I hope you, my friends, are finding this happiness of heart which God so graciously gives those who love Him.

ANOTHER REPORT

September was by far the best month for THE CHRISTIAN SUN since it has been my pleasure to be with the church paper. We report 129 new and renewal subscriptions with a total collection of $353.78. This is far better than either July or August. It gives me hope that we will be able yet to get our mailing list up to date with enough paid up subscribers to make the paper pay its way. We will need to receive 250 subscriptions each month before we can pay everything in full and take the paper off of the Convention expense account. You see, we have just about gone half way during September.

We are grateful to the Woman's Missionary Society, under the leadership of Miss Stella A. Stout, at Sanford, N. C., for sending us a paid up subscription list equal to 10 per cent of their church membership and were glad for them to have the 25 per cent commission on the money they sent in. We are grateful also to Newport News and Suffolk missionary societies for money they have sent and hope that they will soon be able to meet their 10 per cent list so they can get the 25 per cent commission.

Now that the farmers are selling their crops and getting their money, it is an ideal time for churches in rural sections particularly to put on their canvass and get new subscribers for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

IS IT WORTH IT?

Some people seem to think that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is not worth $2.00 a year. If it is not they should not subscribe for it. The paper undertakes to give help on Sunday school work, a sermon for those who want to read it, guidance for Christian Endeavor and young people's work, news of what is going on in our churches, institutions, boards and communities, and to present thoughtful articles on the Church and religion. The paper undertakes to build up a fellowship among the members of our church. If one can get all these things for less, then perhaps one should not take the paper.

Two dollars sounds like quite a bit of money to some, but it is only the price of ten gallons of gasoline. That's not much to pay for a year's subscription.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

THE CHRISTIAN SUN will have a new editor for next week. Be sure to get your paper and check up on how well he does his job.

Pastors are cordially invited to send in reports of their revival meetings and of the other things they have done recently in their church or are planning to do in the near future.

Plans are under way for a leadership training school to be held in Wakefield, Va., this fall, probably beginning the first Sunday in November. Rev. George A. Pearce is pastor of the Wakefield Church. Ten churches in that community are cooperating.

The whole creation is following my life, is involved in my triumph.... Every little calumny or temptation I overcome, every weakness I uproot, brightens the future of the world.

—Frederick Boone.

For the Children

Dear Uncle Fletcher,

I think it is a very good idea of having a Children's Page in THE SUN. I would like very much to have a story, some riddles, and some games on the page. I am ten years old, and in the fifth grade. I am enclosing a story for THE SUN.

Lots of love,
MELVIN BUNCH.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Melvin has given us a good letter for this week and sent a story for printing. Thank you, Melvin. The story is very much like one recently printed in the paper and may not get retold here, but I am grateful to you for sending it. Your teacher will probably give you a good mark if you turn it into school sometime when a story is required.

It is a fine thing for boys and girls to write stories. Someday you may be able to write those long stories that go into the magazine or make books. The time to begin is while you are young. Get an idea and write it out, send it to me, give it to your school teacher, get your friends to read it, read it in your play with the other children when you are playing school or whatever it is you play. This is the kind of thing that will help you to be of real service when you are older.

The material on the remainder of this page were selected by Miss Irene Cotten of Dendron, Virginia. I hope you boys and girls will like them. I am also hoping to hear from more of you. Send stories, puzzles, jokes, anything you like that you think other boys and girls would like. This is the only way to make this page your own.

Best wishes to each of you,
Sincerely,
UNCLE FLETCHER,
505 S. Main Street,
Norfolk, Va.

JESUS CHOOSES FOUR HELPERS

God made the world beautiful and full of good things. Everything that people need he seems to have hidden somewhere in the earth or seas or air. But men and women must be willing to work to get the things, even if they dig deep down in the earth, as they must do to get the coal for our cozy fires.

God hid his good things because he knew it would be well for boys and girls, men and women, to keep busy. They would be happier if they had things to learn, new things to find out. Their bodies would grow better, because of the exercise; their minds would grow better if used constantly to think. Best of all, they would get better acquainted with God, who made them and made all these other things if each day they worked among the things about them with their eyes and hearts open to their beauty. Oh, yes, God planned for his creatures to have plenty of useful, beautiful things to do! When sin came into the world, because of disobedience, it made so much to do. Work, too, that was not pleasant, for sickness came, and suffering of all kinds because of sin. People hurt each other in anger. They learned to be busy with cruel, selfish deeds, and the world grew sad. When Jesus came he wanted to help. He wanted to stir other people to help, too. Jesus longed to see the world good once more, freed from sin.

While he lived on earth he spent his time doing good, and in persuading others to do good, too. He knew he could not do all that needed to be done alone. He must persuade as many as he could to help. One day he was walking by the clear, blue waters of Galilee, when he saw two brothers fishing. Their names were Simon and Andrew, and it took them both to throw out their great, heavy net into the sea. Jesus said, "Come ye after me, and I will make you fishers of men." Now these men had seen Jesus when John baptized him in Jordan. They had heard him talk, and so they understood what Jesus meant. They knew he wanted them to help him turn the hearts of people to God. At once they dropped their nets to follow him. As they walked along they saw James and John, two other fishermen brothers, who were busy mending their nets. These men carried on a big fishing business, but at Jesus' call they left their boats, their nets, their hired men, and followed him. They, too, had been won by Jesus' words, and they wanted to help him in his work.—Frances T. Van Ness.

NOT JUST A HAPPY INVITATION.

[The following article was first written as an invitation to the members of Union Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., but a copy fell into the hands of The Sun's editor and is being passed on to its readers.]

As simple as it is, this cannot be just a happy invitation to "Come to Church Sunday." From the heights where the great thoughts of God control; and from the depths of our common human experiences; deep calls unto deep and life finds no goal, no worthy objective, no "Magnificent Obsession" until from long journeys and life's "Unresting seas" it returns, O Christ, to thee.

For us who have

"A sense of love and duty
And a face turned from the elod"

the return from the pleasures of vacation and the mingling with friendships of other days, means a greater desire to "Give of our best to the Master."

Before us stands a door, opened. For you and for me, it is the greatest instrument in the hands of the spirit of Jesus to be found in the whole city for doing things that God needs to have somebody do. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked." There are other churches to be sure, but for those of us who have eyes to see, not one can compare, for us, with our church. Here is our task—and your task nor mine can be accomplished by lax loyalty or more or less indifference mingling with the easy crowd—no matter where found. Your church needs men of honor; men whose word is as good in the church as it is in business or at the bank; men with inspired souls who seek to build the Kingdom of God on earth rather than the defense of and the adherence to a spurious theology and dogmas which the world has long since outgrown.

"Religion is not dead! Crucified by dogmatists and buried in the tomb of tradition, it has appeared unto friends and lovers!" In you and in your church, it is alive again.

To be sure we are but a handful of young and old people. But it was the crowd that crucified Jesus on Calvary, while his few faithful friends struggled on. It was to them that he revealed his presence and his future work. And he will reveal himself to those girded with enthusiasm who will stick together long enough to command the attention and the respect of good men who recognize true worth wherever found. It can be done!

Your church is the open door. It is offering that for which mankind is standing in great need. Will you enter and share with others the blessing of active, persistent, faithful cooperation?

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christiau is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR CONFERENCES.

For one hundred and fifteen years some of our conferences have been meeting annually. It has become a habit to hold conferences, and apparently it is a good habit.

The conference is composed of representatives from the local churches in a certain section. These representatives get together and plan for work which one church could not do alone. They report on accomplishments of the past year, hear inspirational addresses, and are supposed to make definite plans and recommendations for the coming year. In other words, the various churches confer with one another concerning the work of our churches.

The important thing in these conferences is the planning. There are many things which a local church can not do, but which several churches in cooperation can accomplish. Among these is the conduct of an orphanage, the running of a college, the aiding of weak churches and the building of new ones, the promotion of religious education, hospitals, churches and evangelism through all parts of the earth.

Since conference undertakes this type of thing, it is very important that representatives from all of the churches be present and that time be given not only to the making of reports and the pleas of the enterprises of the Church, but also to the development of definite plans which will be carried out through the coming year.

At the present time Elon College is uppermost in the thinking of many of our people. Elon needs our help, and the churches should plan definitely to come to the rescue of Dr. Smith and his co-workers so that Elon can continue to serve unhampered.

The Christian Orphanage has before it a wonderful opportunity to serve orphan children by giving them a home, training, and the cultivation of Christian personality. Mr. Johnston deserves the cooperation of our Church people.

The Board of Christian Education seeks to aid the churches of our various conferences in their religious educational programs. We are desperately in need of trained leaders in each of the conferences of the Southern Convention to aid in this work. This matter should claim the attention of our conference people.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Program of the Church is at the point where it needs to go forward rapidly. Many of our smaller churches need help, and new churches should be started, but most of all our plans need to include what we call foreign missions. There are individual churches within our bounds who might well pay the salary of a foreign missionary. Certainly the Convention ought to turn in enough to the treasury of our foreign board to carry on the work at several places. Actually, last year, the Southern Convention all told sent to our foreign board a little less money than two of our churches paid to their ministers. This ought not so to be. We can change it by making definite plans in our conferences for the increase of missionary giving.

Another very important phase of the work that needs pressing is what we usually call Evangelism. This is the day in which the Church should seek for converts to the Christian religion and establish them in the field so that they will be loyal through the years. A glance at our records will instantly indicate that we have not done so well on this phase of our work in recent years, but a survey in any community will indicate that the Church has room for expansion. The conferences may well plan for an aggressive campaign to reach new members for our churches.

OUR LOCAL CHURCHES.

The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN would like to make a sincere appeal to leaders of local churches for a serious reconsideration of the whole program of our Church. He is not saying that the present program is wrong. In fact, it may be largely, if not all together, right. He does believe that in many instances much improvement can be made in the plan of our local churches.

Officers and members should keep in mind the whole program of the Kingdom of God and not become absorbed too much in details concerning local activities. It is entirely possible for a church group to become so divided on how they shall serve a church dinner that they forget about the missionary enterprise which carries the message of the Master to the ends of the earth.

If the officers of a church will sit down with their pastor and think through the total program of their church, the chances are that new light will dawn and things that seem to be important may take a lesser place while certain other things will appear to be more important.

Before the report is sent to conference, it is important for the church to decide exactly what shall be done with the money and check up on what has been accomplished so that the report will be accurate. It is well for the church members to know what their church is doing concerning local, conference and missionary work.

The educational program of the local church may need to be revamped or new emphasis placed here and there. The evangelistic program may need to be emphasized or developed in a slightly different fashion. Perhaps something can be done to improve the financial status. Certainly, there should be a growing friendliness on the part of members and an ever broadening circle in the community because of service rendered. Whatever it is that needs to be done should be considered seriously in the light of the whole church, and not because of the interest of a few individuals. This is the way of growth for the local church, conferences, Convention, and General Council.

WHAT SHALL A MINISTER PREACH?

At one of our Ministers' Convocations I heard an excellent paper on the subject of preaching for these times by Rev. Orvis T. Anderson, pastor of the Community Church at Fort Myers, Florida. I was so impressed with the presentation that I borrowed the manuscript and have read it many times. It is worth many readings, and I reproduce a part of it here with Mr. Anderson's permission.

First of all a minister should see to it that his preaching has in it a note of comfort. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people," was Jehovah's command to the old prophets. Jesus centered much of his preaching around that idea, the idea of comfort. And he made much of the function of the Holy Spirit as a Comforter, indicating his idea of the importance of this note in preaching. People today, need a message of comfort in the midst of life's trials and perplexities. The note of comfort then is a part of the gospel and one of the things the preacher should never lose sight of.

Second. But comfort does not constitute the whole of the gospel, and it can be overdone. The preacher of today should preach courage, fortitude, moral stamina. Material conditions in America, until recently, have made life easy for the vast majority of Americans. The very life we have lived has tended to make us soft and flabby. It has made the masses of us moral and spiritual cowards. We are not inured to hardness. Our forbears were, as the early Christians were. We lost something well worth having when we lost the power to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. This power to endure hardness has made every generation which has had it a better people than we are. If it takes a little hardness to restore to us a courageous facing of life, we should welcome it. So I say this note of courage in our preaching is a part, and a very essential part of the gospel.

Third. But it isn't all. We should add, in our preaching today, a contemporary world view, not an obscurantist view, not a sentimental view, not a partial view. Of all men, the preacher's view should be world view. In the good sense, he should have a totalitarian view. We shall not gain a respect for the Christian religion and a respectful hearing for our message, at least among educated people, unless we as preachers make ourselves cognizant or informed along the line of contemporary thought.

We need not be scientists, but we must know some science. We need not be famed philosophers, but we need to know contemporary philosophy. We do not need to be the ablest economists in the country, but we must have at least a working knowledge of economics. Some business men may prefer to have us keep quiet on economics; but we dare not. But I hasten to add, "Don't go off half-cocked." Religion has something to say about how men make money and how wealth is used. God have mercy on the preacher of today, and tomorrow, who doesn't know economics and isn't able to match his knowledge with that of his contemporaries! The very times in which we live demand it.

But the preacher must be sane. He must not be a bleary-eyed radical, shooting off his mouth about things of which he has no knowledge. Such preachers make themselves ridiculous and hurt the cause of Christianity. The preacher may be, must be, as radical as Christianity. But that is not to follow every radical cult which raises its head out among the ignorant populace. In our message today, we must keep our religion and our economics balanced for the common good. Capital has some rights; labor has some rights. We must not exalt either to the hurt of the other.

Some people make a distinction between the social gospel and individual religion. I do not. Both are one, just different aspects of the same gospel. The preacher of today needs to keep in mind that there is one gospel, as there is one Lord, one faith and one baptism. That one gospel is all-inclusive in its content and application to human need. The world will never again be satisfied with an individualistic conception of the gospel, and it never has been satisfied merely with a social conception.

Fourth. This leads me, in closing, to say a word about the eternal verities of our religion. Some would begin at this point and stop with them. I have shown you that I would not. But though they do not constitute the whole of the gospel, they are fundamental and must forever remain close to the heart of our message. They are not merely an additional thing which must be added to our preaching. They are the thing itself. All we preach must be shot through with a right understanding of these fundamentals. What are they?

God;
Jesus Christ;
The Holy Spirit;
Personal salvation;
The Kingdom of God on earth.

Any gospel lacking these is no gospel. Any preaching not shot through with these Christian conceptions is adequate preaching for today. And the world never needed this kind of preaching more than today.

DR. P. J. KERNODLE.

Others who knew him longer and more intimately in his earlier years have written of his labors. It was my privilege to be his pastor for five years and to know him in his long period of suffering. It is during such a time that we really learn to know one's character.

Dr. Kernodle suffered for more than five years. His health gradually gave away, which added to his suffering and anxiety, but his mind remained alert until a short while before the end. His faith was always firm and steady. His faith in God, in the Church and the cause of righteousness never wavered. The real test of a person's optimism and faith in the cause of Christ is in a long period of illness.

The following quotation from the deceased to me a short while before he died, shows his belief in the life hereafter:

"Let me go where saints are going,
To the mansions of the blest,
Let me go where my Redeemer
Has prepared his people rest.

"I would gain the realms of brightness,
Where they dwell forevermore,
I would join the friends that wait me
Over on the other shore."

I never heard him complain of his illness nor express a doubt as to his future or that of any others who believed in and tried to follow Christ.

As his pastor and one who knew him intimately during his suffering, I could wish that we who are left could emulate his faith, his diligence in work, his optimism and his certainty in a future life with Christ and the saints.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

Let every dawn of morning be to you as the beginning of life and every setting sun be to you as its close; then let everyone of these short lives leave its sure record of some kindly thing done for others, some goodly strength or knowledge gained for yourselves.

Over against the treasury
He sits who gave Himself for me.
He sees the coppers that I give
Who gave His life that I might live,
He sees the silver that I withhold
Who left for me His throne of gold.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Twenty-fourth Annual Session of the Woman's Missionary Conference of the Christian Churches of Eastern Virginia, was held in the Suffolk Christian Church on Friday, October 2, 1936. Mrs. J. Monroe Harris of Norfolk, Va., presided; Mrs. Herbert Harrell of Driver, Va., was Secretary, and Mrs. J. M. Raby of Windsor, Va., was the treasurer.

The weather was ideal for such a conference. Between three and four hundred women, thirteen ministers, and a number of laymen were present. The reports from the local Societies gave evidence of growth and increased interest during the year. The report of the treasurer indicated that the total raised during the year amounted to $4,912.61, with a possibility that it will finally reach $5,000.00. This is a small gain over the year 1935. The goal set for 1937 is $5,500. This amount can be raised if every society will begin on the work at once and seek to cultivate the missionary spirit and encourage systematic giving on the tithing basis.

Plans were presented and discussed outlining the Silver Anniversary, to be celebrated in the Suffolk Christian Church in May, 1937. It is encouraging to learn what the women have accomplished in their work during the past twenty-five years. A number of new churches have been established as a result of their faithful work and loving service. Many lives have been spiritually enriched by the challenge of their missionary vision. The local churches from which these offerings have been sent, year by year, to carry on the work of the Master, have been strengthened and developed by this larger vision. It is much easier to pay the current expenses of the local church if members are interested in giving their financial and spiritual support to the general enterprises of the Kingdom of God in the earth.

In addition to the reports of the various departments, addresses were delivered as follows: "The Motive of Broadcasting," by Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, vice-president; "Twenty-five Years of Broadcasting," by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary; "Echoes from Eagles Mere," by Mrs. J. F. Morgan; "The Great Interrogation," by Mrs. H. C. Leonard of Philadelphia, Pa., and "Our Silver Anniversary," by Mrs. John G. Truitt, president of the Southern Convention Woman's Board. These addresses were all of a high order and challenged the members to greater loyalty, love, and sacrifice for the cause of missions.

From the opening devotional service, conducted by Mrs. B. D. Jones, to the closing prayer, there was a spiritual appeal in the conference. The work of the conference moved on the bosom of a rising tide of divine inspiration. And that is the great secret of strength in any spiritual movement. The church was founded on the hill where the cross supported the body of a crucified Lord. It was organized years afterward. But our Christian faith rests upon a rock—the solid foundation of a spiritual relation to Jesus Christ. Upon that rock the church must build for the future. Spiritual life should be the center in every meeting of the church. The local church will lose its power and conferences are empty, without the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

Such conferences as the one held in Suffolk on Friday are a blessing and a benediction to all who have the privilege of attending and sharing in the work. Why not plan to make the forthcoming session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference a place of increased spiritual power? It should be more than a business session. It should be an upper room of prayer and waiting for the endowment of increased spiritual power. A great spiritual revival should break forth from our Annual Conference.

THE COLLEGE CAMPAIGN.

Elon College has had a number of campaigns—campaigns for students, campaigns for good will, campaigns for money. The campaigns for students come annually, the campaigns for good will are continuous, year in and year out, and it would seem that campaigns for funds never end. However, we are particularly interested at this time in campaigns for funds—funds with which to complete the cancellation of our debts against the college and to provide against the annually recurring deficit.

We are not, at this time, inaugurating a new campaign, but merely continuing the one started last spring. It may be necessary to change certain plans and organizations, but the principles and the goal of the campaign will remain the same. After such tremendous reductions in our indebtedness, I know that everyone interested in Elon College will be anxious to see the undertaking completed and will be willing to do his part that such an achievement may be realized.

The goal for the campaign, as you will remember, is $250,000.00, this amount to provide for the settling of all financial claims against the college, to pay the expenses of making the campaign and collecting pledges, and to provide a certain amount for current funds so as to prevent deficits until we can rebuild our endowment to the place where the income from this source, added to the natural income of the college, will meet our annual financial demands and thus guarantee the balancing of our budget. This campaign was to be an intensive one, was to be begun and completed in the space of about nine weeks. The actual canvassing was to be done in ten days. The George W. Williams Company of Lebanon, Pennsylvania, was employed to direct the campaign. The campaign fell short of its goal by far. We had about $65,000 pledged. Since the Williams Company was settled with and dismissed, an additional $6,000 has been pledged, making a total of $71,000. This leaves us $179,000 short of our goal. This amount was not set up on an extravagant or a guess basis, but figured very carefully so that we might have the approximate amount needed to put the college on a safe basis.

The board of trustees requested that I turn as much of the administrative affairs as possible over to the faculty and that I give my time to the campaign in a continuous effort to raise the amount set for the campaign. Every day seems to make new inroads on my time and new exactions of my strength. I am anxious and willing to do everything that I possibly can, but, of course, it is a physical impossibility for me to see everyone personally or to visit every church in the convention. However, I shall be glad to visit churches on invitation or hold conferences with churches, alumni, officials, and friends of the college for the purpose of discussing our common problem and finding the way most likely to insure success.

It is the earnest hope of the college that the church and alumni may take this campaign seriously and individually may do their share that the necessary amounts may be raised. This is a tremendously worthwhile effort in behalf of the college. Really serious consequences are involved. As goes this campaign, so goes the college. There is no alternative. If the church and the alumni will move forward unitedly in this glorious undertaking, there can be no question as to the final results. No one person nor no one hundred persons can be expected to give the whole amount, but if everyone will give modestly, the grand total will be sufficient to meet existing requirements and to provide for our future needs. No one need impair his own fortune, however small or large, but everyone will do well to divide with the college—the source of instruction, inspiration and guidance for our youth in the field of higher education and the building of Christian character. Elon College is needed for the advancement of humanitarian interest, straightforward living, and common honesty in everyday transactions. They would take the fear out of religion today, but even so, they cannot rob the scripture of truth that is inevitably to become evident; nor can they hush the voice of conscience nor destroy the appeals of the spirit.

If Elon College stands for anything, it stands for an intelligent understanding of the scriptures and a complete presentation of the same to a lost world. I hope that the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will take time to spend a few moments each day in prayer—prayer for the college. If you cannot give it your money, you can give it your prayers, and if you will give it your prayers, you cannot withhold your gifts. Prevailing prayer prevails in the heart that offers the prayer, or it does not prevail at all.

God is our refuge and strength. He is also our help in the time of need.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The financial activities of the Christian Orphanage from now till the end of the year will be to reach our financial goal, and the hub in the wheel will center around the Thanksgiving Offering. Special emphasis will be in stressing this special offering.

The price of cotton, corn and tobacco are higher than in a number of years. We hope and trust that our churches will work to create an interest in the Thanksgiving Offering by seeing individual members and getting them interested in making a record offering in your church at this Thanksgiving season.

Don't wait till the day the offering is to be taken, but begin now to work up to it. Set your goal high and then do your best to reach it. Remember you are working to help little children who have been left dependent, and by your assistance they are being given a chance in life to become worthy citizens. I know you want to have a part.

I want to say to the good women of our church that if they have any good garments that have been laid aside but are in good condition—coats, dresses, suits for boys or girls, or shoes—will they be kind enough to get them up and send them to us. The girls can take old dresses and work them over to fit and make good dresses out of them. Sometimes they can take two old dresses and cut them and make one good one of the two. If colors do not match, they buy ten cents worth of "Rit" and make them match.

Remember that the little children here once had a mother, but death knocked at the door and she was taken, and her little children were left without a mother. You have been spared to yours, and yours have not been in need. Don't you think that the Master will be pleased if you, out of your many blessings He has given you, will contribute a part to help His little ones who have been afflicted in this way? Remember, the Master said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these . . . ye have done it unto me."

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

Antioch Christian Church, Mt. Carmel, Isle of Wight, and Windsor, having formed a pastorate, have called Rev. H. E. Crutehfield of Paces, Virginia, as pastor.

We, the members of Antioch, do hereby wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our present pastor, Rev. C. E. Gerringer, and his wife for such faithful services rendered us for the past two years. It has been pleasant as well as inspirational to cooperate with them.

We have found him to be a real Christian gentleman, friend and pastor. No matter when called, he was always ready to aid in any way he could. While we regret so much to have them leave us, we trust the Lord may bless them in their new field of labor. We take pleasure in recommending them to any church or group of churches desiring a pastor.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE MOTIVE OF BROADCASTING (CHRIST'S MESSAGE).

By MRS. R. T. BRADFORD,
R. F. D. 2, Suffolk, Va.

Others than Christians are broadcasting, and they, too, are saying, "We are changing the world." In the first century of the Christian era, it was declared of Paul and Silas, two of the world's outstanding missionaries, "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither" (Acts 17:6). Within a hundred years from the date of that accusation and thro' all the centuries since that day the followers of the Nazarene, our Redeemer have been and are saying, "We are changing the world". And now another group, the group of the godless, the youth of Russia who are taught that there is no God, are also broadcasting and declaring, "We are changing the world".

At the annual celebration of Peace Day in Moscow, thousands of boys and girls of the Communist Youth of Russia are massed in the "Park of Culture and Rest." They are addressed through loud speakers by Chinese, Japanese, American and other Communists from all over the world by declaring the missionary triumphs of the Bolshevie Revolution. Bugles sound. At this signal they chant in unison, "We are changing the world." Again and again the bugles sound and Russian youth, thrilled with the conviction of the eventual triumph of their cause around the earth, declare, "We are changing the world".

After this they file past the embalmed body of Lenin, who lived and died to build that new world. All this strangely recalls the missionary exhibition of the Christians in the early centuries. It may interest us to know that this movement coming out of Russia seems now to be the most formidable foe that Christianity has had to face since it is sweeping its torrent of godless propaganda into China, Japan, India and, if we will only open our eyes and ears, into this country also. This movement is nothing less than the new faith of Communism which we read about and hear broadcast so much now. One discovers as one looks across the nations of the world that the real competitors with Christianity for the control of the lives of youth are not the old pessimistic faiths of Hinduism and Buddhism, nor the gentle yet stern scheme of loyalties in Confucianism, but the scheme and great promise of universal salvation through godless Communism.

There are thousands of youth today in America, and adults also who are saying, both in word and deed that "Humanity is enough and that no God is needed since man alone is supreme, and when we help man as a human being we have done enough." I am not seeking to raise a cry of alarm, nor sound a note of despair, but the number is increasing of those who say that philanthropy, or benevolence, is enough, and all we need to do, and the best we can do, is to help some human being about us to have a little more intelligence, or to earn a little larger salary, or find some bigger job or better living conditions. They are crowding God out by preaching and teaching and broadcasting to the world that humanity is all and in all, and that man is sufficient in himself.

My conviction is that there is greater need for broadcasting Christ today than ever before and this I say for three reasons:

First: The enemies of the gospel of righteousness, and of Jesus Christ were never so numerous, so well organized, and so entrenched as they are today. Not till our day, since the Christian era began, has a whole nation of people as Russia has done, declared that there is no God and that Christianity and other religions thru godless Communism, are frauds and fakes—opiates for the people.

A recent careful survey calls attention to the fact that 4,700,000 young people between the ages of 16 and 24 years of age are out of school, unemployed and seeking employment. These young people are full of energy and enthusiasm. They have their ideals. Many are perplexed by religious doubts. What has the Christian religion to offer these frustrated millions of young people? What religion will help them through these trying days of indecision and despair? Will they accept Jesus, not the Christ of theological speculation, but the Man of Nazareth, Who understands and sympathizes with young people in their disappointment because He, too, was disappointed—or will they cast their lot with the thousands in Russia and in our own country, too, who are broadcasting, "We are changing the world"—not through Christ, but through the faith of Communism. Christian religion helps us realize that every individual is of supreme worth to God, and that every task is significant. Every individual makes his own peculiar contribution to the world. God does not want us to be like other individuals. He does not ask us to do great things. He asks us to do our best. The resources of religion to combat the enemies of the gospel of Jesus are a new purpose, a task that is challenging, a personal responsibility that removes the sense of inferiority, a forgiving God, an understanding Christ and the strength that comes from prayer and meditation.

The second motive for Broadcasting Christ is that our western civilization with its materialism, mechanism, and machines has gone into the uttermost parts of the earth to exploit other peoples of the nations and to show them the heartless, godless side of our civilizations' disregard for the teachings of Christ. We have exploited Africa, not only by leading thousands, yea, hundreds of thousands, to be our captives, slaves and servants, but we have pillaged their land to get our diamonds, our gold, our rubber and our copper at our own prices without consulting the peace and the welfare of those from whom these things were taken. It has been said that when the white man went to Africa he had the Bible and the African had the land; but soon the African had the Bible and the white man had the land. This of course is an exaggeration but there is just enough truth in it to make it sting. We have established factories and industrial activities in China, Japan, India where labor was cheap and have established an industrial system among helpless peoples that makes them wonder what sort of religion controls and governs us.

While there is great truth in these statements which have been given you to show the great need of Broadcasting for Christ we would have you know that wonderful results for good have come from Foreign Missions. In its outpouring of life and treasure, wholly unselfish, over the foreign missionary movement of the past 150 years is unequalled in magnitude by any other religious movement in the history of the human race.

Tens of thousands of men and women have given their lives as missionaries. They have gone to the icy waters of the arctic and to the enervating heat and the disease-infected jungles of the tropics. They have braved ill health, persecution, misunderstanding and separations from their families and have undertaken the difficult task of mastering alien languages and adapting themselves to unaccustomed and often uncomfortable able methods of living with no thought of personal gain. From the influence of such lives have come noble and wonderful characters, many of whom are familiar to you, as for instance, Kagawa, of Japan, who has just visited America and is considered one of the most distinguished men and Christians of the modern world; also the two best known and most influential Indians of our day, Mahatma Gandhi and Tagore, while not calling themselves Christians, are very different men because of Christian factors which have entered into their development. Many others from these and other pagan countries could be named whose lives and deeds are the results and fruits of earnest, loyal missionaries.

Then finally the third reason we should Broadcast Christ, we seem to have forgotten or ignored the word, obedience and the standards of ex-

NEWS FROM MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

MRS. W. M. JAY, News Editor.

Antioch.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Antioch Christian Church held its regular monthly meeting in the home of Mrs. G. T. Cobb on September 8th. Devotionals were conducted by the president.

After the business meeting convened, the following officers were elected for the coming year. President, Mrs. W. E. Garrison, Secretary, Verneda Carr, and Treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Godwin.

This society has raised its apportionment and also taken out a life membership for their pastor, Rev. C. E. Gerringer. They have enjoyed the year's work together as a missionary group, and the pastor's wife has been a source of inspiration to them. They are looking forward to doing a greater work for their Master's cause during the coming year.

Franklin.

The Willing Workers Society of the Franklin Church has closed a most successful year. The book studied was, "Mexico." The theme used was "Neighbors." The children were taught first to live as neighbors with those next door, the people in their home town, and with the people of America. From this thought, they crossed the border into Mexico and learned about the country and people of that land. An interest was shown from meeting to meeting in the subject studied.

At Christmas time the society sponsored a White Gift Service and as a result nearly a hundred gifts were sent to the orphanage at Elon.

In June a Children's Day was held under the direction of the superintendent of the Willing Workers. At that time a splendid program was given in which the love of Christ for children was forcefully told in song, story and verse.

The money apportionment has all been raised and all was given by free will offerings. All requirements were fully met, and from a small acorn, the great oak is growing.

Miss Dorothy Williams is the wide-awake superintendent of this wide-awake group of children.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

YOU AND YOUR "SUN."

You who are readers of THE SUN know of its value to people of all ages who are members of the Congregational-Christian Church in the Southeast. Doubtless you know of many people in your own church who would benefit by it, but who are not subscribers to it because they do not know of its value—or have not been sufficiently urged.

Doubtlessly, also, your young people's society could find a use for some extra money to use in purchasing much-needed materials, meeting missionary pledges, or for its regular running expenses.

Two and two still make four. Why not put the ideas given above together and get results? If ten per cent of the members of your church subscribe to THE CHRISTIAN SUN through your efforts, you can get a commission of twenty-five per cent from each subscription. Get a list of your church members, start working on your subscription list right away, and soon your society will be able to collect its commission—to say nothing of the church members who will be helped by reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HAVE YOU EVER TAKEN PART IN A MID-WEEK SERVICE?

Young people often criticize the older members of their church, because they feel that older people do not allow them enough freedom in their meetings at the church, or that they have a patronizing attitude toward attempts of the younger group to accomplish things. Generally speaking, however, the older members of our churches would be glad to see us taking a more active part in the affairs of the church, and we misunderstand their methods, when our aims are the same.

Why not offer to take charge of a mid-week service in your church sometime soon? Your minister will be glad to have you relieve him of this and to know that you are willing to help him at any time. The older members of your church will appreciate this service more than you can realize, for seeing you do something like this will give them new hope in the future of the church. Your own group will be benefitted, too, for you will gain rich experience in conducting and planning this meeting—and perhaps a new viewpoint toward the older members of your church.

Plan the whole meeting yourselves: the songs, the scripture, some special music if possible, an appropriate poem, periods of prayer, and a talk or a discussion program. You might use some topic, as one group did, like "How the Younger and Older People Can Cooperate in This Church," with both groups taking part. Who knows—perhaps the future of your church may be decided at a meeting like this!

YOU NEED THESE.

"THE PILGRIM HIGHROAD"—Our monthly Congregational-Christian youth magazine. It contains worthwhile articles and stories, a "forum" for youth discussions, prayers and poetry, much of which can be used in your local meetings, as well as for your personal enjoyment and benefit. Most important of all, for leaders, it contains the International Lessons for Senior Departments, the Christian Life Topics, and the Christian Endeavor Topics for each Sunday with explanations and plans for presenting each to your group. $1.25 for single subscription, $1.00 in clubs of two sent to one person, or five sent to separate addresses. Sample copy on request.

"THE EFFECTIVE YOUNG PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATION"—This gives in detail ten requirements for every young people's group which is really effective. You can use it to an advantage in checking up on your own group—in finding where and how to make improvements. Order Pilgrim Fellowship Bulletin No. 55, price 5 cents.

"CHRISTIAN YOUTH IN MISSIONARY ACTION"—This contains the missionary program for the Church in 1936-37, with materials and suggestions for use by young people. Sample meetings are given in detail together with a very valuable list of program materials which are available to us in the form of regular courses, plays, slides, movies and books. Price 10 cents.

"TO READ AND TALK ABOUT"—You will be surprised to find out how many things have been prepared—and are available for a small amount of money—for use in all types of young people's groups, for reading, study, and discussion. Single copy, free. Additional copies, 5 cents.

"AFTER LAKESIDE"—Presents the picture of that interdenominational conference and then gives the recommendations worked out by the Congregational-Christian group there for use by all of our young people. It should be studied carefully by both local and Fellowship leaders. Price, 5 cents.

"PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP FLASHES"—An informal report published occasionally, telling what our young people are doing all over the country, every young people's group. It is sent free of charge to Presidents and Counselors of City, Association, and State Fellowships of Congregational and Christian Young People. If you are qualified to receive this bulletin, but do not receive it, send the editor of this page your name and address.

How to order the above materials. All of them can be ordered direct from Young People's Department, Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, or by writing the editor of this page, who will be glad to order them for you.

TWO AT A FIRESIDE

I built a chimney for a comrade old,
I did the service for the hope of hire—

And then I traveled on in winter's cold,

Yet all the day I glowed before the fire.

—Edward Markham.

God has given us the instinct of prayer and, as Dr. Smith says: "The habit of prayer is fundamentally sound because it rests on an instinctive need of the human heart. . . We can no more live without fellowship with some other than we can live without food." We need to imitate the example of Jesus whose habit is described in the following lines:

"When He was over-weary He would go

Apart from all, to some high secret place

Where he could be alone with God awhile,

And there find full recharging of the soul

And heartening for the work God willed for Him."

Living for others is life's fullness; living for self is poverty, nakedness, starvation.—Theodore G. Weld.

BECOMING A CHRISTIAN.

LESSON II.—OCTOBER 11, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."—Acts 16:31.

LESSON: Acts 16:16-40; Philippians 3:7-14.

This lesson serves a very useful double purpose. First of all, it gives an instance of how one becomes a Christian, and that is important. It is necessary for one to be born again, or to be born from above, if he is to see or to enter into the kingdom. But it is not enough simply to become a Christian in the sense of beginning the Christian life; one must grow in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ. And this lesson shows how two Christians, Paul and Silas, acted like Christians under different circumstances, as well as how the Philippian jailer became a Christian under unusual circumstances. The writer of these notes feels that the one is as important as the other. Indeed, one of the greatest handicaps to Christianity is the fact that those who profess to have "become" Christians do not live as becoming Christians. People honor Christ with their lips but deny him with their lives.

Profits or Persons.

Paul and Silas got into trouble because they put persons above profits. When Paul exorcised the spirit from "the damsel possessed with a spirit of divination," and when "her masters saw that the hope of gain was gone," things began to happen. The damsel's masters and the magistrates held the philosophy that profits were supreme. It did not matter what happened to the damsel so long as the ledger showed a large balance in black. Personality did not count for much; profits counted for everything. Much of our modern life is founded upon this anti-Christian theory. Prostitution, the liquor traffic, slums, many forms of commercialized amusement, gambling, whole areas of industrial life, war, these and many other phases of modern life emphasize profits above persons. The Christian Church in the modern world needs more of the spirit of Paul and Silas as it faces this vital problem and issue. One of its most difficult tasks is to apply Christ's ideal of persons above profits. And it is quite certain that whenever and wherever it does it, there is going to be trouble. Vested interests resent what they call the intrusion of religion into business. It is rather interesting to note that the masters of the damsel "drew a red herring across the trail" or tried to throw dust into the eyes of the magistrates as to the real issue. Paul and Silas were accused of "troubling the city, and of teaching customs which it was not lawful for them to receive or to observe, being Romans." It was not love of city or of country that moved these men; it was love of lucre. Today as always, this love of money is the root of all evil.

Joy in Jail—Praise in Prison.

Paul and Silas were beaten—we may be sure it was no pink-tea affair—and then cast into prison, into the inner dungeon. Their outward fortunes were at a low ebb, but their inner spirit was at a high peak. They had inner resources of peace and power and joy that circumstances could not touch. That picture of Paul and Silas smarting from a sound beating, but singing in prison, is one of the most effective arguments for Christianity in the New Testament. Here was Christianity triumphant, radiant, irresistible. How they put us to shame for our self-pity, our ties! This same source of this secret peace and joy is available to us. Religion ought to help a man triumph over trouble. It can give him freedom even when fettered. You can lock a man like Paul up in prison, but you cannot bind his spirit. If the Son shall set you free, ye shall be free indeed.

Salvation through Surrender.

"What must I do to be saved?" was undoubtedly the cry of a man who was badly scared, but that did not make it any the less sincere in his case. As a matter of fact, it might be a good thing if somehow the modern pulpit could arouse in modern men and women some fear of the consequences, not only of deliberate wrong-doing, but of indifference and the neglect of the inner life. This does not mean that the emphasis in religion should be put only or primarily on fear. But the consequences of sin are so terrific that a sensible man should be afraid of the consequences.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." It was not a matter of intellectual belief. It was not a matter of believing something. It was a matter of trusting Someone. Believe on Him in the sense that you trust Him, that you surrender yourself to Him, that you receive Him as Saviour and as Lord in your life—this is the gist of Paul's reply. This Philippian jailer was saved by surrender. As William James, the noted psychologist once wrote, "The crisis of self-surrender has always been, and always must be, regarded as the vital turning point of the religious life." This surrender of self to Christ is essential to becoming a Christian. And it is essential to continuing as a Christian.

"And thy house"—because this man believed, he had the joy of seeing the members of his household also become believers. What a difference it would make in many homes if the father or the mother became professing Christians. A believing father and husband, and a believing mother and wife, may be the means of saving a whole household, by the contagion of a genuine religious life and Christian influence.

Salvation, Then Service.

"And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes . . . and set meat before them . . . and rejoiced." His first impulse was to do something for somebody. His love for Christ found expression through service to others. His religion transcended the barriers of race and position. Real religion changes folks inside. We are not saved by works, but we are saved for works.

THE LAW OF THE TEACHER.

There are seven general laws of teaching. For the next few weeks I shall give some of the details of these general laws. The first law is the Teacher:

Rules for Teachers.

1. Prepare each lesson by fresh study.
2. Find in the lesson its analogies to more familiar facts and principles.
3. Study the lesson until it takes shape in familiar language.
4. Find the relation of the lesson to the lives of the learners.
5. Use freely legitimate aids, but never rest until the real understanding is clearly before you.
6. Bear in mind that complete mastery of a few things is better than an ineffective smattering of many.
7. Have a definite time for the study of the lesson, in advance of teaching.
8. Have a plan of study, but do not hesitate to study beyond the plan when necessary. A helpful mnemonic device is to ask and answer three questions about the lesson: What? How? Why?
9. Do not deny yourself the help of good books on the subject of your lessons. Get the help of the best thinkers, but do your own thinking first.

MONDAY.

"LEARNING AND WALKING."

"He will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths."—Read Micah 4:1-5.

Strange as it may seem, the ways of God have to be revealed to us after life begins. No one knows of the ways of God instinctively. It is believed that Christian heredity has a lot to do with one's bent of mind, disposition to spiritual values and temperament in life's relations, but a baby, let alone, is more likely to go in the ways of the devil than into the ways of the Lord. God must show us His ways. And He shows us by Christian upbringing, by Christian environment, and by Christian instruction. One thing more, He shows by the blessing of His Holy Spirit which He bestows upon those who are in a receptive mood.

What does all this knowledge amount to after we have learned His ways? The normal outcome of learning is to head the life up in the way we know. If we are consistent, the normal life that follows knowledge of God and Christ is to follow Him.

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, teach us Thy ways every day, and give us the desire and the courage to withstand sin's every temptation, so that we may walk with Thee.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WEALTH WITHOUT SORROW."

"The blessings of the Lord, it maketh right; and he addeth no sorrow with it."—Prov. 10:22.

Probably there is nothing that meets with so much skepticism as warnings against the woes of wealth. Such admonitions are called "sour grapes." All of us would like to have a chance at a little wealth. "The more the merrier," they say.

But look at the rich and all that they have, all that they do in the name of happiness, pleasure and comfort, and count their woes. It is ventured that one can even count the happy faces among them. Then look at people of more moderate means, poorer people, and see how much contentment and radiance of joy you find, and stack this up against the woes of the rich. Which is the greater?

Then we ask, "Why is woe added to wealth?" It would take a book to tell. It lies back in the motives of everything, and it also lies in the objective of the use of money. Besides, much wealth is bought by sin, by injustice and corruption. When hearts are set on riches, they are self-centered and drawn away from heaven. History is enough in itself. The blessings of the Lord is the only true wealth, and woe, however, much can never mar it.

Prayer—O Lord, give us neither poverty nor riches, but just Thyself. In the name of Jesus we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"GOD IN EVERYTHING, EVERYTHING IN GOD."

All things were made through Him; and without Him was not anything made that hath been made.—Read Jno. 1:1-9.

Wherever we look, we may find God, from the flower of the field to the peak of the mountain-top; from the shores where the breakers roar to the interminable depths of the sea, there is God. It is His and He made it. It is His realm and He lives there. It is a very small part of it that we occupy, and it is a very short period of time in which we live. But this space and time has been given us to make it a blessing. If we can make conditions a little better as we go along, and if other people are happier because they know us, we shall be fulfilling God's purpose for us.

Prayer—We bless Thy name, O Lord, that Thou art all in all in the universe and in human life. Thy kingdom only is the enduring kingdom. Help us to live in Thee and in that kingdom now and forever.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"BEMOANING OUR FATE."

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

To bemoan our fate is to upgrade God. To feel ourselves deserted by Him is to doubt His word.

It is a mistaken idea that God has put sin in the world. Man alone has done this, and the sin which he has committed has perverted what God has made. The unperverted universe is good. Health, love and happiness are at the heart of creation. This is the realm of God and there He is found.

Below any crust of evil, back of any barrier of woe, beneath every sorrow, there is that which is fair and sweet. God.

Prayer—O Lord, we are looking for Thee. Grant us the vision to see Thee where Thou art and dedicate our hearts to Thee forever.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"SHADE AND REFUGE."

"There shall be a pavilion for a shade in the daytime from the heat, and for a refuge and for a covert from storm and from rain."—Read Isa. 4:16.

Our God is for His people, whatever they need. Reflecting the results of the droughts, the hurricanes and the floods, as they have swept parts of this country, it is almost impossible to see that the sufferers have been protected from the sun's rays, from the storm's rage, or been given a hiding place from the tempest. It is hard to understand always that He is there changing His helpfulness according to our varying needs, or to see that it is true that circumstances of peril never out-run Him.

The revelation of God to the human soul throughout history, despite the great sufferings that has come to people like as came upon Job has revealed that the Lord has a great plan and that the sufferings of man have contributed to that plan. We look back and see that sufferings have contributed to less sufferings and have actually been the fertile fields in which has grown a perfecting world and a perfecting manhood.

Therefore, let the children of God put far away from them all worry and fear. Let them not dread evil, but trust in God who doeth all things well to them that love Him.

Prayer—O Lord, bring us into the knowledge of Thy goodness, In Christ Thy Son, bring us unto Thy love and Thy fullness.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"HOW OLD ARE YOU?"

"And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How many are the days of the years of thy life?"—Gen. 47:1-10.

Reading from the writing of the late Amos R. Wells, he says that life is not measured solely by years. Some are older at twenty than others at eighty. Life is measured by deeds, and more than that by character. Sometimes we read of one who has passed the century mark. In most cases it is some one who has lived in the back country where life is stagnant. Is that really living?

Better one year lived unselfishly for the good of mankind than a long life of cold-hearted miserly existence. Christ's ministry was only three years long and He died at the age of thirty-

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

TO YOUTH ABOUT LIFE.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

—Rom. 6:23.

To youth and those interested in youth, I wish to address myself this morning. And I am going to talk about the most sacred of all trusts—Life. One poet has said, "This life is a hollow bubble . . . Just a painted piece of trouble, don't you know?" Paul is saying in this text that life is a gift of God. He is rather saying it more emphatically than that. He is saying life is the gift of God. The supreme thing that even God himself may give you is life! That is a far cry from saying that life is just a painted piece of trouble.

How would you like to live in a society that really believed that life is just a painted piece of trouble? How would you like to race across our country's busy traffic-burdened highways with one at the wheel who believed that life was only a painted piece of trouble? How would you like to live in a land where the judges believed that life was only a painted piece of trouble? Or where mothers and fathers believed it? Or where neighbors and friends believed it? Life is not trash; it is a trust. And every young person should look upon life as the most sacred trust in all the world.

Now a trust is a stewardship handed down from some one. Shall we look upon life as a stewardship handed down from sin and evil, or shall we look upon it as a trust handed down from God? "Ye are not your own, ye are bought with a price." Will we make ourselves the servants of sin, or will we make ourselves the servants of righteousness? This is the question Paul is placing in this chapter: "To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are"! And he adds, "Whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness."

And that brings me to say that I have chosen to bring to you one of the great old texts of the Bible, a text of the church through the past centuries, an old-fashioned text with the deepest warning and the highest encouragement that one may pass on to young people. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

You young people are not afraid to face the facts, and you will appreciate my honestly calling your attention to the deadliness of sin. Your preacher dares not let you go on unthinking and unwarned as to the awful consequences of sin. Sin has in the very word the hiss of the serpent, the seal of death. No clearer statement can be made of the facts than that which Paul has made when he says: "The wages of sin is death."

You may rest in the beautiful security of the precious idealism of your Christian homes today, but if you tamper with sin, death is on the track of your best hopes and your fairest dreams. They will not ripen if you indulge in sin. Paul asks, "What fruit have ye in those things whereof ye are ashamed?" The answer is inevitably none! The fruit of evil is bitterness, "the wages of sin is death"!

Judas was once a good fellow. He was given a place amongst the chosen twelve. He was given a trust beyond the most of them. God was not laughing at him when he gave him such sacred places, for with the willingness to follow the right he could have made good in his sacred trusts. God was not laughing but loving him, and laying the most sacred gift of abundant, joyous life at his door. He willfully betrayed those trusts, and consequently hanged himself with his own hands, for the "wages of sin is death."

Dives was given life and its luxuries, money and the mind to make money, and placed him at the crossroads of benevolence, and love, and pity, and mercy, and he sinned against those sacred trusts, and Jesus says, "He lifted up his eyes in torment." Could anything be worse? His lust for gold lost him a place among the best-beloved of earth. "When lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

It may not be one of the most pleasant subjects, but if one took as a text for a sermon every text in the Bible which treats of sin he could preach on the subject every Sunday in the year for ten years! It is one of the central themes of God's blessed Book! In Proverbs we are told: "Fools mock at sin"; in the Book of Numbers we are warned, "Be sure your sins will find you out." In Genesis, "If thou doest not well sin lieth at the door," and in the Psalms, "My sins are not hid from thee."

Martin Luther has said: "The recognition of sin is the beginning of salvation." There is no need as young people to seek to convince yourselves that there is no sin. There is no need to say this or that is not wrong if in any way it belittles your own self, or injures your neighbor. A pretty girl adds to her comeliness by pretty clothes and harmonizing colors. A color out of harmony, or a dress unfitting fails her and she say that is wrong. Do not think that life is less exacting. There are things which are out of harmony, and unfitting in life; things which are beneath your standard and out of harmony with what your sense of honor and rightness demands. Little by little they drag you down, and are your undoing. This is to miss the mark, which, by the way, is the meaning of the word we translate sin.

Twenty years from now will make a big difference in your lives. Will you have missed the mark? Some of you may, in the light of this holy place, and under the influence of this moment of searching and worship, feel that you have, spiritually speaking, a bad start already on the highway of life. If so, let me call your attention again to the words of our text: "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Especially, let me emphasize the phrase, "Eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Forget that this is a sermon, and that I am preaching to you. I am not marking time, I am seeking to give you a heartfelt message. I am seeking to give you one of the most vital things in all the world for your happiness and good success, namely, take Jesus Christ as your Friend. You will need Him so much. And He is able to do so much for you. Listen at Him saying, as you think of your sins, and your unworthiness, "The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins." Isn't that one of life's sweetest stories? Isn't that one of life's greatest blessings? Hear Him saying to a poor sinner brought by his friends before him, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." Hear John the Baptist saying of Him, "Behold, the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," and hear Paul saying, "I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures."

Therefore, if you will count this a message to youth about life, let me say here it is: Life is beset with sin, out before us are its ennobling and challenging goals, but we are helpless excellence which obedience to a High Command, established. There are those not only outside, but inside, the church even in this advanced age who are saying, "We don't believe in missions, but we do believe in feeding the hungry and clothing the needy and sheltering the homeless about us", all of which is a great and good thing to do. The godless Communists of Russia by the millions are saying and doing the same, but are going one step further and saying, "With this doctrine we are changing the world". It is high time that our youth were enlisted under the banner of the Cross and that we as adults and youths were once again declaring that through Jesus Christ we conquer and that thro' Him "we are changing the world." In the midst of our confused, bewildered, world Christ still stands unchanged and unafraid, and still invites men and women to follow His law of love, His way of life, the only way that will lead in the day that is to be, to brotherhood and good will throughout the earth.

The purpose of missions is to share with others the gospel of Christ. Dr. E. Stanley Jones tells us that we cannot remain Christians unless we accept what the Cross gives us and share with others the same spirit.

God has wrought mightily in our day. He has given us the radio, airship and quick communication with all the world. Verily one can now do what it required ten to do a century ago.

There is a fine touch in the old story of Jacob, when the patriarch is represented as returning to his native land. "And Jacob on his way and the angels of God met him". Ours may not be a distinguished way, one thrilling with adventure, or crowned with plaudits, but it represents our earthly chance for usefulness and for happiness. Along such a way one will find one's friends, make one's contribution to life, and work out one's salvation. Here the angels of God will meet us. Blessed is the one who has found his or her task and is faithful to it! That one can be trusted sooner or later, to discern the friendly smile on the face of Duty.

So our motive and our duty is Jesus Christ, to heed His command when He said, "Go ye into all the world and change this world in my name and in doing so I will be with you unto the end."

"Are ye able" still the Master whispers down eternity,
And heroic spirits answer now, as then in Galilee;

"Lord, we are able. Our spirits are thine;
Remold them, make us like Thee, divine,
Thy guiding radiance above us shall be
A beacon to God, to love, and loyalty."

to achieve them in our own strength, sin being ever present; God will give us life beautiful and eternal, through Jesus, who will, can and does forgive us our sins and empower us to live even nobler than we ever suspected that we could. Therefore, take Jesus as your Friend and make him your Lord, thus life shall be more than "just a painted piece of trouble," for it shall be the divine gift of God, abundant and eternal!

In Memoriam

BRINKLEY.

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Berea Church, Driver, Va., wish to express our appreciation of the life and sweet fellowship of our co-worker, Mrs. J. W. Brinkley, in the following resolutions:

1. We feel grateful God saw fit to let her live and work with us as long as she did, she having passed her four score years.
2. We are grateful that her mind was alert and she kept her vivacity, though her physical strength weakened.
3. We recognize that hers was a life of high ideals, of simple faith in God's word, and a Christ-like spirit which won the love of old and young.
4. That we extend our love and sympathy to her family, place a copy of these resolutions on our minutes, send a copy to her family and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

COMMITTEE.

BRITTLE.

Brother Charlie Brittle's body was laid to rest in the White Cemetery, near Manrey, Virginia, Friday afternoon, September 25, 1936. He was 71 years old, and had borne his afflictions patiently for about twelve years. In his going everyone he knew loses a friend, for he was a friend to all. He never murmured or complained. Although his afflictions did not permit him to attend church services, he was faithful in the support of the church. He was a member of Burton's Grove Church for many years.

He leaves his wife, one brother, three sisters and a host of other relatives and friends. We feel our loss very keenly. But our loss is his gain. The floral offering was immense and beautiful. The services were held at the grave by Revs. G. C. Crutchfield, C. E. Gerringer, R. E. Brittle and the writer.

GEO. A. PEARCE.

COX.

Sytha Jane Cox, wife of Deacon Virgil M. Cox, died July 20, 1936, at the age of 73 years, 7 months and 10 days. She united with Pleasant Ridge Christian Church, Randolph County, in early life, remained a faithful member and lived a Christian life till death.

She leaves to mourn their loss, three daughters, Mrs. C. E. Macon, Ramseur, N. C., Mrs. W. L. Brown, Winston-Salem, N. C., and Miss Kate Cox, Greensboro, N. C., also one brother, Emmette Cox of Ramseur and three grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted in her church by the writer, assisted by Revs. John M. Allred and Peter Cox.

A good woman has gone. May God bless the bereaved ones.

J. FRANK APPLE.

MAGEE

Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to call from our midst our dearly beloved member and deacon, Richard D. Magee.

We, the members of Barretts Christian Church, feel keenly the loss of our faithful co-worker. He gave generously of his time, his means, and was always ready to lend a helping hand to the needy and afflicted.

We pledge ourselves to nobler efforts in behalf of our church in furthering the cause of Christ, feeling that by so doing we best keep alive the efforts of him who gave the church and the church work a large place in his heart. Truly, be it said of him "He hath done what he could."

To his dear companion, loved ones and friends, we extend our heart-felt sympathy and commend to our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well. Resolved that a copy of this tribute be placed on the records of our church, a copy sent to his family, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

 Mrs. J. Q. HANCOCK,
 Mrs. ANNE HANCOCK, Committee.

POOL.

Mrs. C. P. Pool came to the end of life's journey in Lanett, Alabama, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Belcher, September 20, 1936, in the 88th year of her life. Her Husband preceded her in death some four years. Two of her daughters died in early womanhood and one son died while a young man. She leaves three sons and three daughters, a number of grandchildren, two brothers and four sisters, and a host of other relatives and friends.

She lived a beautiful life. She joined Pleasant Grove Christian Church as a charter member when the church was organized 65 years ago. She was a great servant of God, for she was a great servant of people. She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother and an affectionate friend, faithful to every trust, true to her faith in God and patient in tribulation. Truly our loss is her gain. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

Her body was brought back to the old church at Pleasant Grove and laid to rest by the side of her husband. The floral offering was very beautiful. The funeral was conducted by the writer.

G. D. HUNT.

four, but in real accomplishment, his was the longest life that was ever lived. What was Methuselah's nine hundred years? Nothing is recorded of him. Compare that life with Christ's.

Prayer—Lord, teach us how to live well, be it long or short. May we live so that our lives shall be a part of eternity, and then we know it will not matter about time.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"UNCONSCIOUS COVETING."

"Thou shalt not covet."—Ex. 20:17.

Paul said, "I covet no man's silver or gold, or apparel." It is believed that Paul was as free from covetousness as any one who ever lived. But when it comes to us mortals, it is probably true that this the Tenth Commandment is broken more often than any of the others, because we do not realize that we are breaking it.

Amos R. Wells once wrote, "When we admire the possession of others, and that admiration carries a sting with it, that sting is covetousness, or envy." He also said that "discontent is a form of covetousness." If these be true, and we think they are, how many of us are entirely free from covetousness?

God knows what is best for us, and the Christian is always ready to trust His judgment. We Christians must know more than this. We must know that if we undertake alone our God-given lot, we will plunge ourselves into misery. A Christian may live in poverty and have a lot of sickness, sorrows and misfortune. His may be a hard lot indeed, as many of them are. But he who knows God is happy all his days because he knows that they are God's days.

Prayer—Our Father, remove from our hearts all envy and strife. Establish us firmly in Thy love. Thy will be done in us as it is by the angels of heaven.—Amen.

“WE CAN CHANGE THE WORLD!”

(AN EDITORIAL.)

The Russian youth shouts to the tune of drum-beat and gun-fire, “We are changing the world.” They are right. They are changing the world. Their ideas of communistic economics and Godless religion are upsetting the economic order and robbing people of the knowledge and experience of God throughout the world.

It is time for Christians to begin changing the world in a more rapid way than they have done recently. We need to think again of the disciples, of Paul, and of Jesus, who literally upset the peoples of their time and began the foundations of a new Church whose influence has lived for nineteen centuries.

The “we” in the heading of this article is not an editorial we. It includes the ministers and laymen of Congregational and Christian Churches. There are enough ministers in our church to fill all important state and national offices. There are as many officials in most of our local churches as there are members of the Supreme Court of the United States. The million members of Congregational and Christian Churches can change the world whenever they make up their minds to do it.

One man controls Italy; a small group runs Russia; ten per cent of the Japanese nation dominates that empire; a paperhanger dictates the policy of Germany, and only a few are in the inner circle of the political parties of the United States. We have a sufficient number of people to change the thinking as well as the world in which we live.

All too long we have felt that we are weak, that we can not do things. The time has come when the Church of Jesus should arise in her might and become the leader of the world. If the world is not what we want it to be then we can change it.

Let it be remembered also that we will either change the world or the world will change us. The Christian influence will dominate in the policies of nations and in international relations, or the atheistic philosophy of Communism, the selfish greed for gain, and a thoughtless search for pleasure, will dominate the world.

This is the day for the Church of Jesus to let its light shine. “We can change the world.” We will change the world, or the world will change us!

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Only a few weeks more before your Conference meets. Has your church raised its apportionment and elected its quota of delegates?

Several articles that were received for publication this week must of necessity be carried over until next week. The "Editor for a Week" has done a good job at collecting material.

We give in this issue of THE SUN the program of the last session of the North Carolina Ministers' Convocation, which was sent in by H. Shelton Smith. Dr. Smith says: "The Congregational Christians are backing the convocation heartily."

The startling relation between liquor and crime is discussed by A. T. Lyman, Massachusetts Commissioner of Correction, in his annual report recently made public. Declaring that the $200,000,000 annual crime bill in his state amounts to more than three times the entire cost of the state government, and that "lack of food, clothing, and heat, ill treatment of children, broken homes and divorce" are "tied up in the use of alcoholic beverages to excess," he added, "Intemperance breeds the basic foundation for the future criminal.—Ex."

W. Millard Stevens, pastor of the Happy Home Church, Ruffin, N. C., writes that the new house of worship will be dedicated on Sunday, October 18th. He says: Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, will be the preacher at the 11 o'clock service. The Christian Orphanage will have charge of the afternoon program." All former pastors, former members and the public, are invited to attend the services. Dinner will be served on the church grounds. Rev. Millard Stevens is one of our outstanding young preachers, and he is doing a good work.

It is officially reported that Dr. Stanley High, head of the Good Neighbor League, designed to enlist the support of the ministers for President Roosevelt and the New Deal in the coming election, receives a salary of $15,000 a year for this labor of love.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

How are you, my friends, today? Hope you managed to get past the first page this week without too great a shock. Let me hasten to say that the wreckage on the front page was not my idea. That is what the editor for this week, Rev. H. S. Hardecastle, though should be there.

Are you wondering why there is a new editor this week? Well, I offered to teach in a Training School in Norfolk if some of the other fellows would edit the paper. Mr. Hardecastle took the challenge, and began at once to ask everyone in sight for something to go in THE SUN for this week. If he had good luck in getting responses, there should be enough material left over to fill the paper next week—and I hope that he had good success.

"beauty is only skin deep" as a man said to his friend about his new wife, to whom the friend replied: "Then for goodness sake skin her."

Rev. Mr. Hardecastle, or Hardy as he is known among his many friends, is a hard worker, a friendly gentleman, a good pastor, and a preacher who talks to the hearts of his hearers about things that are important. These are some of the reasons he holds a good pastorate.

The picture and this article were not the ideas of Mr. Hardecastle. As the darkey said to the pudge who had severely reprimanded him for being so brutal to his combattant: "Yes, Judge, I suppose the Devil did tell me to knock him down and tromp in his face, but that biting his ear off was my own idea." Thanks a lot I'll be seeing you.

Step right up, my friends, and gaze upon the likeness of the Rev. Hardecastle. There is not another in captivity (or out) just like him. He hails from Dover, Delaware, graduated at Elon College and the Divinity School of Yale University. Married Miss Mary Miller of Luray, Virginia, has a daughter and son, was pastor of Suffolk Christian Church for about ten years, and is now pastor of The Christian Temple, in Norfolk, Virginia.

You can see that he will likely never receive a prize for beauty although he and the editor might compete for a "booby" prize sometime. But that makes no difference, for

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

AN EDITOR FOR A WEEK.

One reads occasionally of an instance in which a group or an organization, such as a Class In Journalism or a Junior League, assumes responsibility for preparing and publishing an issue of a newspaper or a publication. This week's issue of THE SUN comes as a modification of such a venture, for the writer is Editor for a week, responsible for this week's issue of our Church paper. And thereby hangs a tale.

The Executive Committee of the Norf. Standard Training School was eager to have Rev. F. C. Lester the Editor as a member of the Faculty of the School which is being held this week. But Mr. Lester did not feel able to take on this extra work. He suggested that if some member of the Committee would assume responsibility for the material in THE SUN for the issue of October 15, he would teach the course for Young People. The writer was "appointed a volunteer." Thus he became "Editor for a Week." This week's issue of our paper comes as a result of the writer's interest in Leadership Training, and as an expression of his friendship for the regular Editor whom he holds in high regard and warm esteem.

OUR EDITOR.

This week THE SUN's cover page is adorned by the picture of its Editor, Rev. F. C. Lester. It is altogether fitting that it should be there. For although Mr. Lester is well known through our Southern Convention because of his varied activities, and although many of our people have seen him personally, it is quite likely that there are still a number of readers of THE SUN who would like to see what manner of young man this is who is making such a splendid job of editing our Church paper, but who have not had that privilege. Hence the picture. What the Editor himself, because of his modesty, felt he could not do, the Editor pro tem has done: he presents the kindly countenance of the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The Editor pro tem also felt that our readers would like to know something about Mr. Lester, and in an informal interview he secured some of the facts around which he has written this article. You have seen his picture; now for something about the man.

Rev. F. C. Lester was born near Summerfield, N. C. The fact that he was born a good "Tar Heel" and that he was born on Sunday afternoon ought to be sufficient information. But if any of our readers want to know further particulars as to the month and year they will have to ask Mr. Lester.

As a boy "Fletcher" received his education in a one-room school house which grew even as the boy grew, for when he was ready for High School the one-room school had become a High School. From High School, Lester went to Elon College where he spent one year in the Preparatory Department. He was obliged to work his way through college, and his first job was milking cows. That was the beginning of a long list of varied jobs, for Lester never turned down an offer to make honest money as a means of earning his education. He took the full college course at Elon, and graduated in the Class of '18. In addition to his college work he was a student pastor for three years, serving near-by churches in this capacity. As a member of the Philologist Society he distinguished himself as a speaker, winning the Orator's Medal on one occasion, and representing his college in Inter-collegiate debating. He was also a member of the Student Volunteer Band and his work both in college and in seminary was in preparation for missionary service abroad.

After graduation, this young man already an ordained minister accepted a call to the Graham Christian Church and served as pastor of that church for three years. Because he felt that the work of the ministry demanded thorough preparation he resigned his work at Graham and in 1921 entered Yale Divinity School where he took a B. D. degree in the Class of '24. As in college, Lester served as a student pastor, acting as pastor of the Christian Church in Schultsville, N. Y. for two years. When he graduated from Yale he found it impossible to carry out his plans to go to the mission field abroad and accordingly turned to Christian service at home.

He served as pastor of the Franklin, Virginia Church three years, as pastor of the Waverly, Virginia Church for six years, and in 1933 he was called to the First Christian Church of Norfolk where he has served as pastor for three years. His ministry has been characterized by sound and stimulating preaching, and by constructive programs. While at Waverly he led his church in the building of a modern Church School building, well-adapted to the needs of the church and the Sunday School.

Early in his ministry, and especially as a result of his studies at Yale, Lester became deeply interested in Christian Education in its more vital and sound aspects. As a result of his interest and his ability in this field, he has been closely and vitally associated with the program of Christian Education in his Conference and the Convention, and he has also served in the wider fellowship of State and General Convention and now General Council work. He has served as the chairman of the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention for eight years, and as such, as Dean of the annual Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. He has also served as Dean of many other training schools, and has often taught classes in these schools. It was only natural that the Youth Fellowship should claim his interest, and he has served as Pastor Counselor for three terms, i. e. six years. He was the moving spirit in making the Youth Fellowship Program an integral part of the work of the Convention. He gives freely of his time and his energy to all these organizations and movements. He has edited the Youth Fellowship page in the CHRISTIAN SUN for four years, and he has made this page both practical and inspiring.

Lester has also served the larger interests of our denomination. He has been a member of the Prudential Committee of the Commission on Missions, a member of the Committee on International Relations, and a member of the Committee on Nominations of the General Council for six years.

At the last session of the Southern Convention he was elected Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to succeed Dr. J. O. Atkinson. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that he was the man for the place. Reluctant to assume this responsibility, he was prevailed upon to accept the position. The First Christian Church of Norfolk, Virginia, of which he is pastor made this possible by graciously and generously voting to continue him as full-time pastor, although it knew that it would have to share his time and his energies with THE SUN. Thus on July first, Rev. F. C. Lester became editor of our Church Paper. He has already vindicated the judgment of the members of the committee which nominated him, and he has received the testimonials and congratulations of many readers of THE SUN, because of the mechanical make-up and the general arrangement, and the editorial policy of the paper. He gives promises of being a worthy successor in the list of those who have been successful editors of this important publication.

Back of this man's life there are factors which undergird his life with purpose and with power—the influence of a Christian home, the training and example of a consecrated Christian mother, a sense of mission, sound preparation, an indiscourageable purpose, a willingness and a capacity for work, and a spirit of consecration. He is the type of man who is needed for such a time as this. H. S. H.

THE PREACHING MISSION.

The, National Preaching Mission planned and promoted by the Federal Council of Churches, is now engaging the attention of Christian leaders in all denominations throughout the country. When this goes to press several of the cities will have been visited and the Mission will be well on its way. Three of our southern cities are included in the itinerary, Atlanta, Birmingham and Raleigh. The first two cities have already been visited and the Mission at Raleigh will be held November 26-29. A number of outstanding Christian preachers are listed in the movement, giving much time and unstinted labors. With such preachers as George W. Truett of Texas, George A. Buttrick of New York, Bishop Freeman of Washington, T. Z. Koo of China, and Stanly Jones of India among the messengers one would expect a great hearing and effective results.

The Mission is predominately evangelistic in its purpose, seeking to "bring about a reconsecration of individual life to God." In its statement of purpose, we quote: "No one who understands either the Christian gospel or the world in which we live, could desire to see the churches be less concerned with social and international problems. We may, however, well ask ourselves whether we are likely to get much further in making society Christian until we have gone much deeper in cultivating personal relationship with God and personal insight into the meaning of the Christian gospel. The strategy of advance for the national preaching mission is to strengthen the basic foundations of Christian faith. From such outcome the richest results will flow for every Christian task."

Some who have been most profoundly concerned about the social applications of the gospel to our National and world conditions and to human needs, have feared least this message should become reactionary in this important consideration. This may happen, but on the other hand, in the midst of so great concern about the social gospel there has been all evident a tendency to neglect the vital gospel for the individual. On a recent Sunday, Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, speaking over a nation-wide hookup, most effectively stressed the need of individuals of high moral power and spiritualized ideals to carry through to success every new social movement. He illustrated effectively this fact in history. Even in Soviet Russia there is an illustration in that most of those who started the Bolshevik Revolution have been put to death already, indicating a lack of compelling leadership. No effective social advances will be made without effectively spiritualizing leaders. After all, there is need for the fearless, consecrated, inspired men of God, breadth of vision, high Christian purpose, and adominating dedication to the Kingdom of God. We believe that the Preaching Mission will have a vitalizing effect on our churches; but, of course, it will not do so if it seems to be an escape from social obligations of Christians to meet the crisis in the world today.

In the program of the Preaching Mission there are great gatherings of the pastors and preachers in every region, with stirring messages and challenging discussions. At the opening Mission in Pittsburg there were eight hundred ministers attending these meetings. Undoubtedly these sessions for the ministers will be one of the most valuable results of the Preaching Mission. All who are interested in the spiritual vitalizing of our national life will be prayfully concerned for the success of this great undertaking, and also will be deeply grateful for those great leaders who have devoted their time, their energies and their spiritual resources in the undertaking. #### AND IT RAISES A QUESTION.

The governing body of a certain Protestant church is divided over what one communicant calls "New Deal" reorganization. This fact in itself has no news or editorial value, since all denominations have had and will continue to have their divisions in matters of their government.

One member of the denomination concerned with its "New Deal" reorganization, however, does raise a question of some importance. Writing to the official organ of his church, he points out that the sponsors of the new program, with the exception of three, are not readers of their denominational paper and proceeds with the argument that no man can be an intelligent leader of the church, locally or otherwise, who does not keep himself informed through press relations of his church. The statement made and question raised cannot be reasonably ignored, for they have a wider significance than church connection.

Can a man be an intelligent citizen and leader in his state who does not keep himself informed on state affairs as recorded daily in some representative press of his state? Can a local citizen be the best type of leader who fails to keep himself informed of the news and views, changes and developments of his local community?

Assuming that the answers to these questions are in the negative, and it seems reasonable that they should be, it devolves upon every citizen who accepts leadership directly or indirectly in the affairs of his state to keep himself informed on state affairs. It is likewise true that the local citizen who is responsible for or accepts leadership in any phase of life touching his fellow-citizens must be a reader of his local newspaper.

And write this down in your memory book: The man who keeps us with the news, whether it be national, state or local, is the man who keeps ahead with his views. C. B. R.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Conference will meet in annual session at South Norfolk Christian Church, Wednesday, October 28th to Friday the 30th. The churches have only two more weeks to finish the financial work of the year. Many rural churches wait until the last few weeks to collect the balances of the various Conference Apportionments. This method makes it difficult to pay up in full, and the church reports are hurriedly filled out and sent in for tabulation.

The Secretary of the Conference desires to take this method of appealing to the pastors and churches to send up the conference apportionments in full. Every item of the Conference and Convention work is important. Nothing should be overlooked nor neglected. But if any church is unable to send up the full amounts for conference apportionments, it should be the aim of such churches to provide for the full amount of the apportionments for the Conference and Convention Funds. These two funds are not more important than the other funds, but the actual expenses of the Conference and Convention should be met. If these two funds are not sent in there is no other means of securing money to pay the Conference and Convention expenses. The apportionments for these funds are barely adequate for the necessities of the case.

Pastors and church secretaries are urged to use the apportionment table printed in the Conference minutes of the 1935 Annual as a guide in dividing the funds and making out the report to Conference. Mission money collected by Sunday schools and churches during the year and sent to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, should be credited one half to Convention Home Missions and the other half to Foreign Missions. This credit does not apply to money raised by Women's Missionary Societies. Money raised and sent in for Ministerial Relief should be credited to the Superannuation Fund. Money that is sent to Dr. L. E. Smith for Elon College, should be credited to the Elon College Fund, except that raised for paying the College indebtedness in the Special Drive. Special offerings should be credited to that fund.

A blank form will be sent to church secretaries with the Church Report Blank for use in sending money to Conference. Please do not send cash to Conference. Use a check and attach this to the Conference Apportionment Blank and see that each item is properly credited on this slip. All totals on the church report should be carefully made out.

A word should be said concerning the reports of the committees. Several years ago the Conference adopted a motion requesting all committees to furnish the Conference Secretary with duplicate copies of the reports submitted. These reports should be written on a typewriter, and on one side of the paper. The reports should be signed before being submitted to Conference. Such matters are too important to be disregarded, and the reasons are too evident to be discussed here. It should not be necessary to use the space of the church paper to call attention to such matters. The standing committees of the Conference should make enough copies of their reports to supply the delegates attending the session, and the cost of this work should be paid for from the Conference Fund. Then every delegate would have an opportunity to study a report carefully while it is under consideration. Possibly each committee might be willing to bear the expense of printing respective report.

Put the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference on your calendar and pray for a glorious session.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHAT ARE THE FACTS?

The majority of our churches are nearing the close of another church year. At the beginning of the year there were certain goals to be reached: a new interest in the affairs of the church, high moral and social ideals, new spiritual power that would bring victory over self and over the world, an awakened church, and enlarged membership, and a more generous spirit that all financial obligations might be met. Maybe you had such goals for your church, or maybe you didn't. At any rate, we are coming to the time when we are asked to check up, see what we have accomplished, and put down in facts and figures our exact record. Our reports to our Conferences will embody such facts. These reports reflect two things: what the church has done or failed to do, and the present condition of the church.

Personally, I believe in goals. I believe in considering carefully the strength and the ability of the local church together with its opportunities and, in the counsel of its officials and members, determine on certain things to strive for during the year. Christ set goals for himself and for us. We were to live above the world, bear witness in season and out season, and win the world to Him. Perhaps the goals we set are not quite so inclusive or ideal, but we can adopt a program that will take us forward in all the phases of the church's life. If at the beginning of the year that is now coming to a close, our church had set goals similar to these:

1. Every member attending at least one worship service a month during a year.
2. Every member attending every communion service if possible.
3. Every member attending at least one mid-week service a month.
4. Every member a daily reader of the scriptures.
5. Every member bringing someone else to the services of the church every month during the year.
6. Every member winning at least one other to Christ and to membership in the church during the year.
7. Every member visiting at least one other member of the church every month during the year.
8. Every home represented in the Sunday School.
9. Every home a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.
10. Every member giving at least one-tenth of his income for the support of the church and the proclamation of the gospel—the chances are that our accomplishments for the year would have been more satisfactory, and the church, itself, would have been a greater spiritual force in our community.

When we start on a trip, the journey is made more easily and far more comfortably if we have smooth and straight highways on which to travel. If we are going to a certain city, as a rule, we will take the best highway. As a church and as a people, we have certain tasks to accomplish, certain goals to reach. These tasks will be much more easily completed and there will be much more joy in reaching our goals if, in the beginning, we will recognize the responsibilities that are ours, marshal our forces, unite our efforts, and begin the undertaking.

When we set goals to be accomplished, certain things enter into the setting of those goals—a careful survey of resources and abilities, a thorough organization of the forces at hand that all possible strength may be utilized in reaching that goal, a determined effort upon the part of all to attain what we set out to accomplish. To undertake the work of the church without goals means, many times, that we are undertaking without a definite sense of responsibility and an adequate organization with which to achieve. If, as a church, we could lift up our eyes and look on the fields and see that they are white unto the harvest, we would accomplish far more than if we open our eyes and look down on the fields and discover faults and failures and sins and follies. All these imperfections may be there, but I am not so sure but that we will free ourselves from such handicaps in the presence of a challenging task than we will in a determined effort to separate the sheep from the goats, pluck the tares from the wheat, and winnow the chaff from the grain. The Lord has promised to sit in judgment and make these separations in the final day.

As we come to fill out our reports to be presented to the church assembled in conference what are the facts? What have we accomplished? Have we acquainted ourselves more thoroughly with the will of God as recorded in the scriptures? Have we entered into fellowship with our brethren in the work of the kingdom? Have we done our best to bring another from the ways of the world into the ways of Christ? Have we divided our living that the institutions of the church might continue and that the gospel might go to the ends of the earth?

Would it not be a good thing to set goals, to form organizations and adopt programs for the reaching of those goals for the church year into which we are about to enter?

HELPING THE MINISTER.

"One thing helped me very much while I was preaching today," said a clergyman or minister.

"What was that?" inquired his friend.

"It was the attention of a little girl, who kept her eyes fixed on me and seemed to hear and understand every word I said. She was a great help to me."

Remember that, boys and girls. When you go to the services of worship in your church, try to understand what the minister is saying, for he is speaking to you as well as to the grown-up people. And you can help him very much by giving him your attention, and by trying to understand what he says.

A CHILD'S PRAYER.

Keep my little voice today;
Keep it gentle, while I pray;
Keep my hands from doing wrong;
Keep my feet the whole day long.
Keep me all, O Jesus mild;
Keep me ever, thy dear child.

GOD WANTS THE BOYS AND GIRLS.

God wants the boys, the merry,
merry boys,
The noisy boys, the funny boys.
The thoughtless boys—
God wants the boys, with all their joys,
That he as gold may make them pure,
And teach them trials to endure;
His heroes brave. He'd have them be,
Fighting for truth and purity.
God wants the boys.

God wants the happy-hearted girls,
The loving girls, the best of girls,
The worst of girls—
God wants to make the girls His pearls,
And to reflect His holy face,
And bring to mind His wondrous grace,
That beautiful the world may be,
And filled with love and purity.
God wants the girls.

A CHILD'S CREED.

I believe in God above;
I believe in Jesus' love;
I believe His Spirit, too,
Comes to teach me what to do.
I believe that I must be,
True and good, dear Lord, like Thee.

DO YOUR BEST.

When I was a boy my mother used to repeat an old saying, "A whistling woman or a crowing hen always comes to some bad end." But times have changed, and girls as well as boys whistle. And why should not a girl whistle if she wants to? But this story is about a minister and a whistling boy.

This minister says that when he was a boy he was a great whistler. One day as he walked along the street he was whistling quite low to himself. A little boy who heard him said, "Is that the best you can whistle, Mister?"

"No," said the minister, "Can you beat it though?"

The boy said he could, and proceeded to whistle in a lusty manner. When he had finished, he asked the minister to try his luck again. When the minister had finished, the boy acknowledged that it was really good whistling, but as the minister started on his way the boy said, "Well, if you can whistle better, what were you whistling that way for?"

Surely enough, why should not anyone do his best, if he does anything? The world has so many people who do poor, slipshod, third-class work, people who could do better if they would only try. Let every boy and girl try to do his or her very best, whether in whistling, singing, working, studying, playing; and in whatever they do, let them do it heartily as unto the Lord—Adapted from a story in Doran's Minister's Manual.

AN EVENING OF FUN AND FELLOWSHIP.

The Christian Temple held the first of what will be a series of Church Socials during the Church year, on Wednesday night of last week. It was an evening of fun and fellowship, with the emphasis on the lighter phases of life. Community singing, stunts, games, and specialties in music featuring duets, an orchestra of guitars, harmonicas and a piano, and a mixed quartette singing old songs composed the program. Refreshments were served and the social closed with a brief devotional service. Two hundred and seventy-five members of the congregation were present. It was the general feeling that such an evening had a distinct contribution to make the life of the church.

MORNING, NOON AND NIGHT WITH A CENT-A-MEAL BOX.

The dedication of a Cent-a-Meal links your family with the wide fellowship of many thousands in our church who care for others.

It is neither one dollar nor ten, but the smallest coin minted by the government—a cent—that each family is asked to give. Here the privilege and opportunity of giving to the support of the greatest undertaking of the church is brought within the range of us all.

Our Lord set store by "the small things." "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."; "The giving of a cup of cold water"; "The widow's mite into the treasury box"; "The grain of mustard seed, smallest of all herbs"; even so, the copper cent, smallest of all our coins, will lead us forward with renewed faith and vision.

This box has great educational values. The giving of the cent frequently leads to some discussion of the work of the church in the various avenues of our national life and in the needy fields beyond the seas. The cent drops into the box and there follows a prayer, a thought, and a new interest in China, Japan, India, Africa, the Near East, the Philippines and the far-flung stretches of our United States.

It is the Family's recognition of God's Goodness. The very act of dropping a coin into the box for such a high purpose says: "We are thankful to God, the Giver of every good and perfect gift, who has blessed us with food, raiment, home, friends. We acknowledge it is not only blessed to receive but also it is a blessed thing to share what we have with others." It is indeed in very truth a "blessing box."

It brings joy. Any investment made in God's work is never lost. "What we give we have." All those who invest in the enrichment of the world's life have the assurance and joy that they have shared in the greatest undertaking in the world.

Ask your pastor for a box and literature, or they may be secured by sending 10 cents to the "Missions Council," 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y., or to

SHARING CHRIST WITH OTHERS.

By Mrs. JOHN G. TRUITT, President, Woman's Board of Home and Foreign Missions, Southern Convention.

My little boy and I were coming from the grocer's with a bag of fruit, and the little fellow pleased his mother very much when he said, "Mother, I am going to save this prettiest apple for Ann." Often times I have driven across the mountains which lie between here and Ohio, and at some entrancing beautiful spot I have said to my fellow traveller, "Oh, if only mother could see this beautiful view." Is not that just what happens when we have something very wonderful? Do we not wish to share it with others? Have you never baked a cake so pretty that you wished someone beyond your own family could share a bit of it? Or have you flowers never grown so gorgeously that you wished some friend far away could see them?

These may seem all too simple to illustrate what I have in mind, but they do bring a thought before you: We desire to share the best we have with others. This is especially true of those who have been trained in Christian homes, and known the Christian Gospel of Love.

To share implies that we have something to share. I like so much the exquisite beauty of that old crusader's hymn:

Fairest Lord Jesus, Ruler of all nature,
O Thou of God and Man the Son;
Thee will I cherish, Thee will I honor,
Thou my soul's glory, joy and crown.

Fair are the meadows, fairer still the woodlands,
Robed in the blooming garb of spring;
Jesus is fairer, Jesus is purer,
Who makes the woeful heart to sing.

Fair is the sunshine, fairer still the moon,
And all the twinkling, starry host;
Jesus shines brighter, Jesus shines purer
Than all the angels heaven can boast.

Yes, I like the hymn, but when I think of my attitude toward Missions I must ask myself the question: Do I love the Lord about Whom it is sung? It is one thing to sing about Jesus, it is another to set ourselves to the task of sharing Him with others.

As the missionary command was the final and crowning command of our Lord Jesus, so also should our Missionary work be the crowning joy of our church life and experience. We attend our well-organized Sunday schools and study in our adult classes, we attend our worship services, and enjoy the exaltation of beautiful music and worthwhile messages. We get already to begin to share Jesus with others, but if we stop there, it is sure proof that we love the worship rather than the work. Missions give the women of the church, yea the whole church, an opportunity to have their Christian faith bear fruit, and to enjoy in actual service the full expression of what they feel within.

As sharer of Christ with others of course we are hopeless unless we have Him to share. We are doing nothing new when we dole out a pittance to the poor and needy we can offer them Jesus Christ, and the sort of help He can give. Peter and John were going up to the Temple to pray. They were entering through the Gate Beautiful. A poor beggar lay there by begging his daily dole. All along he had been receiving something, sometimes more, sometimes less. If Peter and John had given him the same sort of alms he had been receiving there would have been nothing new about that,—no Good News in that—just the same old way of endless defeat. They did not even have this world's goods to give. But they said, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I unto thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." We are hopeless unless we have Jesus Christ of Nazareth as our very own Friend, unless He is our Lord, and unless we can offer Him to the halting, faltering, failing ones of the earth, having already experienced His help in our own lives.

When we think of Missions we should think of Jesus. The very word Missions implies that someone in authority has sent us with a task to perform. Is there Someone in authority over our lives? Have we made the One who wishes the salvation of the whole world our Lord? Have we come to understand the heart-hunger that pressed Him to the cross? Have we felt something of His compassion for the un-numbered multitudes of the earth's needy ones? Do we realize that to be His is in the very nature of the case to be about His business, as He was about His Father's business? It is not ours to offer to the begging, crippled peoples of the earth a dole, but to offer them our dear Saviour, to offer through Him new limbs with which to leap, new feet upon which to walk.

Unless we have shared in personal experience Jesus' mission on earth, and unless we see the saving of the races of men as His ultimate goal, very superficial indeed will be our work for world wide Missions. Then, and not until then, will we begin to give time to study of the great Missions field, wherein the modern church may serve its Master and its Lord. Then, and not until then, will we begin to see with His eyes, and to look upon the multitudes as sheep without a shepherd, real persons without spiritual light, and Christian love, such as we have is come to take so often for granted in our midst. Our light can fail us if we fail Him, as is becoming all too apparent in so many ways in our modern America. We should re-study the cause of our giving to Missions. And when we do we shall not give the extra pennies from the top of our purses, but we will give as if sharing the best we have from the bottom of our hearts!

When I remember all the way
My Saviour trod for me,
And all the weary paths that led
His feet up Calvary.
When I consider all the price
With which I have been brought,
I cannot render to my God
That which has cost me naught.

Thus far I have been trying to say we should share Christ with others for His sake, and for our own sake. Now I wish to say we should share Christ with others for others sake.

Doctor Dan Poling was recently asked: Will members of the tribes of interior Africa who die without hearing of Jesus be saved? To which he replied: "Yes. That question does not trouble me as much as this one: says Dr. Poling, "What will happen to me if I do not do my level best to bring Jesus Christ to these folks?" If it was imperative on the part of the small band of disciples whom Jesus left behind to "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" with their lack of modern equipment for going unto the uttermost parts, and their lack of our vast store of knowledge of other races and peoples, how much more is that command of our Christ imperative upon the modern church. If it was necessary in their day how much more is it necessary in our day! As someone has wisely said, "Modern scientific inventions have made us a neighborhood, the Gospel of Jesus Christ would make us a brotherhood." For us mothers to fight for peace without fighting for the Prince of Peace is futile. We shall never have peace in the nations of the earth until we have the Prince of Peace in the hearts of the people. We mothers of the little boys and girls of today can well afford to do our best to plant the Gospel of love in the hearts of the people of tomorrow!

I cannot imagine a Christian Church alive to the message of our Lord without a missionary program for the whole church. Is our message to be forever east at our own selves, in an effort to save our own souls, and let the rest of the world go by? Will the sermons in our pulpits fail to go beyond the doors of our churches? Will the lessons in our Sunday schools stop with the pupils in our classes? Will only the women of our churches work at Missions, and their work be only a mad scramble to meet the financial goals? Is that the extent of our knowledge of the mission of Jesus, and our love for Him as our Saviour? Is that as much as we care about that which is breaking His heart and holding Him to the Cross of Calvary for the wide world? Let us pray that the answer to these questions will be No, a thousand times No! And that the churches which we so dearly love, and the people whom we may influence in our house and our local organizations may arise in a noble way to the task of sharing Christ with others.

To do that we shall have to arise ourselves. The worship and devotional parts of our local missionary meetings will have to come to really mean something. It will be more than a song to settle the hubbub of our conversations, it will be a moment of real worship, well-planned by earnest and eager hearts, and participated in by every individual present. It will bring us love and devotion to the Christ whom we shall wish to share with others, and it will prepare us for a session of study under the guidance of His Holy Spirit. When the worship part of our monthly meetings is over we shall not begin an "open-house" on how to sell church brooms and steel sponges, and how to pay the first quarter of our apportionments to the conference treasurer; but we shall earnestly study some inscribed textbook, and eagerly report bits of interesting and informing news of Missions Fields.

We are handicapped by our lack of knowledge of others. Unless we know them we cannot love them, we cannot desire to share our best with them. They mean little to us, and we do less for them. But if we have knowledge of them, we love them, and are willing to help them when in distress. And are not peoples without Jesus Christ in distress, whether they realize it or not? Our program must be that of study rather than money-raising, of peoples rather than purses. Instead of seeing maps we must see men. Instead of seeing foes, with flags and fortresses and military forces, we must see friends from whom come many of our finest and dearest possessions! We must see God's people, fathers and mothers, and sons and daughters for whom our Lord Jesus gave His life, and whom our Lord Jesus sought to provide for when He said, "Feed my lambs, if you love Me, feed my sheep!". By that He meant that we should share Him with others, that we should share the True Bread which is come down from heaven with the hungry-hearted in every-land.

In conclusion let me say: Others tell us that we are doing well, and we appreciate their kind word. And we are doing a really great work, but let us look well to our laurels by studying every way in which we can best make our local programs mere vital to the spiritual development of our members, and more effective in the deepening of our understanding of what the missionary movement really is. Our success has been by the grace and goodness of Jesus Christ, let us so work and plan that we may ever have His guidance and blessings in this great business of sharing Christ with others. Jesus will be proud of us if we ever learn to say: "I will save this best for sister!"

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

A CODE FOR CHRISTIAN YOUTH.

The Congregational-Christian young people who were delegates to the Lakeside Conference met as a unit each evening. This group of one hundred and twenty-five was divided into several commissions to work on problems common to all young people of our Church. The commission on Personal Religion recommends that individual young people and classes and societies study the following statement drawn up by Earle G. Ward from Florida (one of our delegates from the Southeast) and Shirley Provost of Massachusetts.

"With firm faith in God and hope for the future, holding that there is in every human being some spark of a divine personality and latent potentialities to grow into a Christian personality, we venture our lives for Christ, dedicating our best to achieve the Kingdom of God on earth by:

"Making every effort to live the most abundant life, following the perfect example of Jesus, and "Endeavoring to persuade others by our deeds, thoughts, words, and prayers to consecrate themselves to this same high purpose.

"Toward that end we shall strive to develop and maintain our bodies as clean, well-disciplined, wholesome, and glorious temples of God, the dwelling place of His Holy Spirit, and fit for creative marriage and the building of a Christian home.

"To develop an individual as well as corporate very real prayer life, believing prayer to be the practice of the presence of God; to see God revealed in everything beautiful in nature and other people, and to keep always sensitive, receptive, and responsive to His spiritual communion.

"To understand with an alert mind and to promote the changes that are necessary in our economic order, our present international set-up, and inter-racial misunderstandings so that all members of the Family of God can share in the abundance that our machines could produce.

"To venture bravely and aggressively in our crusade, and to accept the penalties of loyalty to our convictions."

DO THESE TOPICS APPEAL TO YOU?

Last summer of the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training, the Rev. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro,

North Carolina, was the leader of a class studying the young people's organization in the church—its worship services, its programs, its social times. One of the things done in this class was the selection of topics for study and discussion, which would prove of value and interest to young people. Out of a list of sixty suggested topics (found in the bulletin "To Read and Talk About," which can be secured free of charge from No. 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts) the class chose the following seventeen as being of primary importance.

1. How can young people work for peace?

2. What standards shall we set for our good times?

3. How can we gain a better understanding of Jesus and power to live as he did?

4. What are the responsibilities of a Christian citizen?

5. How does God become real to one?

6. What does it mean to be a Christian in everyday living?

7. How can Christian young people serve their community?

8. How can I become a person worth knowing?

9. What do we need to know about prayer?

10. What does it mean to be a Christian at home?

11. What am I? What can I become? How can I achieve my goal?

12. How can one gain the most from a daily period of personal worship?

13. When do movies help and when do they hinder our being Christian?

14. Does it always pay to be honest? Can one be honest and succeed?

15. What are the facts which young people should know about alcohol?

16. What preparation does one need for a happy successful marriage?

17. What can a youth organization do to help the present situation?

Do any of these questions seem vital to you? If so, why not look for material on that particular subject—in the form of booklets, a drama, a speaker, a book. When you have planned and carried out a successful meeting in that manner, please write us about it so that others may share it with you.

If you think some important questions have been omitted from this list, let us know what your choices would have been. If you find no material on the ones you choose to use in your meetings, please write for help—we may know of something or someone to aid you.

THE SPOKEN AND WRITTEN WORD.

LESSON III.—OCTOBER 18, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The word of God is living and active and sharper than any two-edged sword."—Hebrews 4:12.

LESSON: Acts 17:1-15; I. Thess. 2:1-12.

The lesson text gives some information about the founding of the church at Thessalonica from two viewpoints, one by Luke in Acts, the other by Paul in I. Thessalonians.

Scriptural Preaching.

As was his custom, Paul resorted last to the synagogues on his preaching missions. He went into such a synagogue at Thessalonica and "reasoned with them out of the scriptures, opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead, and that this Jesus whom I preach unto you is Christ." These words suggest Paul's method. He reasoned—he was able to give an answer in calm and sane and reasonable words, words whose basis was the scriptures themselves. He opened and alleged—he set forth in order is what the words mean. Out of his deep knowledge of the Word of God, he presented his message. He emphasized the redemptive power of the suffering of Christ, seeing in the Old Testament this un-failing testimony to Christ's sufferings. He exalted Jesus as Christ, the risen Christ, God's Anointed, the Messiah, who had risen from the dead and was alive forever more. No wonder that Paul later wrote to the Thessalonians that his words were with assurance and with power of the Holy Spirit. Our modern world needs more scriptural preaching, not in the sense of simply quoting proof texts, but in the sense of an orderly unfolding of the contents of the Bible.

Jealousy.

The Jews could not bear the idea of having Paul gain a hearing and a following. They "were moved with envy" and stirred up a hornet's nest. How difficult it is for us to see another succeeding, to take second place gracefully, to rejoice in another's increase at the expense of our decrease. How much jealousy there is among members of the church of Christ, and between churches themselves. John was nowhere greater than when he said, "He must increase, but I must decrease."

Turning the World Upside Down.

"These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also"—was the charge the Jews made against Paul and Silas. It was more of truth than fiction, for those men were setting in motion forces and influences that would turn the world upside down. The New Testament contains dynamite—the word for power literally means that. As Christ's principles and spirit are applied to life, a revolution takes place. His standards are not our standards; His ways are not our ways. To apply literally Christ's ideals to our modern world of personal relationships, industry, education, national and international life, to say nothing of race relations, and class distinctions, would turn the world upside down.

An Open Mind.

When Paul and Silas left Thessalonica, they went to Berea, and as their custom was they went into the synagogue. These people of Berea were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily whether these things were so. The open mind—how rare it is, even among those who pride themselves upon their open-mindedness. We have our pet prejudices, our pet theories, our established opinions. There are countless people who would not dare to listen in to a presidential candidate of the opposing party, or to attend a meeting of Communists, or to consider carefully the teachings of another sect. This is a hard saying, but it is true. These men of Berea belong to God's aristocracy in that they had open minds, willing to follow the truth wherever it led them.

The Spoken Word and the Living Word.

Reference has already been made to the sanity and the power of Paul's spoken word. It must have been illuminating and inspiring, and perhaps disturbing to hear Paul preach. Combining, as he did, a thorough knowledge of the scriptures with an active mind and a readiness of speech, Paul's word came with power.

But the most vital factor in Paul's ministry was his success in translating the spoken word into the written word, written out in life itself. There was no gap between what he preached and what he practiced. Read the section of Thessalonians which is a part of today's lesson and make a note of some of his characteristics, some of his attitudes towards these people. "Affectionately desirous of you—he loved folks with a sincere love. "Well pleased to impart to you, not only the gospel, but our own souls, because you became very dear to us"—the spirit of sacrifice and service born of genuine love. "Working day and night that we might not be a burden to any of you"—conscientious and considerate, and free from all entangling alliances. "How holily and righteously and unblameably we behaved ourselves toward you that believe"—no man could honestly point an accusing finger at him because he was carefree in his daily living among them. "How we dealt with each one of you as a father"—a personal, loving interest. "Exhorting, encouraging, and testifying"—appealing to their best natures, abstaining from fussing and condemning. "To the end that ye should walk worthily of God"—his supreme passion was that in some measure God would use him to help others to find the way of Christ and to walk in it. The Written Word is powerful. The Spoken Word is powerful. But the Spoken Word becomes most powerful when it is written out in living letters. We are epistles known and read of all men. Let every man take heed what he says and how he writes.

THE LAW OF THE LEARNER.

The Law of the Learner, in brief, is as follows: The learner must attend with interest to the material to be learned." Out of this law come some rules for teachers.

1. Never begin a class until the attention of the class has been secured.
2. Pause when attention is interrupted or lost, and wait until it is regained.
3. Arouse attention by variety of presentation.
4. Kindle and maintain the highest possible interest—interest and attention go together.
5. Look for sources of distraction, and seek to reduce them to a minimum.
6. Prepare beforehand thought-provoking questions.
7. Be enthusiastic yourself—interest and attention beget attention.
8. Study the best use of the eye and hand. Your pupils will respond to your earnest gaze and your lifted hand.
9. Never exhaust the attention of your pupils.

THE BANNERED LIFE.

In the name of our God we will set our banners."—Psa. 20:5.

Reading this text, the first picture that comes to us is a procession announcing who they are and what they are for. Imagine a procession without banners. We would not go around the corner to see it. Why? Because it is spiritless and meaningless. If that is true, then we are to understand that banners mean more than the procession itself.

The christian procession may have many banners, but they all stand for some things in common: a belief in Christ for whom we stand and for whom we march. In the name of our God let us raise our banners.

But there are many christians who will not show their colors. Jesus spoke of these and referred to them as "hiding their light under a bushel." Shame upon us if God's fresh air which we breathe is received and no thanks, if we receive our strength from Him and do not thank Him for it; if we receive the benefits of all the goodness about us and refuse to acknowledge Him. Noble causes advance only as you and I advance them. "In the name of our God," means in His strength and for His cause. We cannot depend upon our own feebleness. "In the name of our God will we set up our banners."

Prayer.—Great God, Our leader, bid us go forward. Forward that we shall be ashamed of Thee, but to let our light shine always for Thee, that if possible, others may take knowledges of us and glorify Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY

BEGINNER AND FINISHER

"Looking unto Jesus the Author and Perfector of Our Faith." Read Hebrews 12:1-7.

If we had to initiate our faith in God, it would never be begun. Our faith starts from Christ, from His wonderful birth, from His marvelous words and miraculous deeds, from His heart of love, from His heroic sacrificial death, from His glorious resurrection and ascension. Where would be our faith without these?

And if we could not start our faith without Christ, still less could we carry it on to completion. The adversary is full of guile. The ways of the world are most alluring. Doubts beset us and fasten their arrows in us. The road is long and steep and we soon grow weary. Unless Christ, through the Holy Spirit, went with us every step of the way, we could never reach the journey's end of faith.

Prayer.—So we look to Thee for our faith, O Christ, Son of God, lend us to Thy Father. Great Elder Brother, take us by the hand, and never let us go. That our faith may not stand in our weakness but in Thy power. Amen.

WEDNESDAY

CITIZENS OF HEAVEN.

"For of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."—Mark 10:14.

What can these words mean. We know nothing better nor less than little children, and all who are like them, possess the essential qualities of Christianity and are members of the Kingdom. Anything else is not in harmony with the mind of Christ.

It is obvious that no one would wish grownups to act like children. There are graces children cannot exhibit; there are feelings they do not know; there are restraints they cannot understand; there are considerations they are not capable of. These things are reserved for older ones who must teach them the proper action in them. That children are born heathens, no doubt, is partly true, but at the same time their virtue, the possibility of their lives being an open field where God can work and be everything; the example of taking everything as it is; all make the child the example of the right spirit, and of taking God at his word. Thus, the child represents all the hidden powers of life both here and hereafter. Their soul life is that from which springs all that makes the Kingdom of God and Heaven.

Prayer.—

"Lord, forever at thy side
Let thy place and portion be;
Strip me of the robe of pride,
Clothe me with humility.
Humble as a little child,
Weaned from the mother's breast;
By no subtleties beguiled,
On thy faithful word I rest."
Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S POEMS.

"Lo, the children are an heritage of the Lord."—Ps. 27:3.

"The glory of the children are their fathers."—Prov. 17:6.

"Her children rise up and call her blessed."—Prov. 31:28.

"Be ye, therefore, followers of God as dear children."—Eph. 5:1.

Often we hear the exclamation, "Isn't nature grand?" How grand it is when we really appreciate its wonders! From the formation of the mineral of the earth's bosom, through all of its kingdoms, the vegetable, the animal and the celestial—they all tell of the glory of God. Almost anything you may select of this universe is not only a divine poem, but also an oratorio, full of celestial harmonies that inspire the soul to God. The precious stones have been called the poems of the mineral, the flowers the poems of the vegetable, the young the poems of the animals, and children the poems of God's Kingdom.

"Come to me, O ye children,

And whisper in my ear,
What the birds and the winds are singing,

In your sunny atmosphere.

"For what are all our contriving,
And the wisdom of our books,
When compared with your caresses,
And gladness of your looks.

"You are better than all the ballads,

That ever were sung or said;
For ye are living poems,
And all the rest are dead."

Prayer.—O Lord Jesus, may thy spirit abide in our lives and keep us living poems and heavenly harmonies until we are called to Thee eternally. Amen.

THURSDAY.

REALITY OF GODLINESS

"Draw nigh unto God and he will draw nigh unto you."—Jas 4:8.

What is godliness? How can I realize it? Godliness is godliness—character that is loving, helpful, beyond reproach, and inspiring to heavenly ends. Such a character we see in our Lord Jesus Christ.

We cannot attain this character without knowing him and fellowshiping him. If we would know somebody, we lose no time in cultivating their friendship and communion. This is necessary to knowing them.

If we are to know Jesus and be like him, we must lose no opportunity to be with him. He is found in meditation, his Word, at devotions, at his church, in the sacraments, in prayers, and in service to humanity.

Prayer.—O Lord, our God, give unto us daily a fresh baptism of thy love and a realization of thy divine help, that we may accomplish the miracle of newness of life as it is inspired by our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A PERSONAL SAVIOUR.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

Let us base our today's communion meditation upon the hymn which our choir has just sung as an anthem. "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" was written by Charles Wesley lacking only a little more than four years of being two hundred years ago. The tune we are familiar with is more than a hundred years old. This is one of the greatest hymns ever written. Many would vote it the greatest.

I. It Is Intensely Personal.—We do not often use it as a solo, but it has been sung in solitude many, many times. It strikes home nearer to the individual than hands and feet. "Jesus, lover of my soul!" Nothing can be more personal than one's own soul. That is the ultimate summing up of the eternal best that one is, or ever may come to be. "Jesus, lover of my soul." We must never forget that we have an eternal soul. There is no more staggering though in all the world than that our soul is eternal. And it is a comforting thought to know that Jesus loves us and wishes to save us eternally. It was Jesus who asked, "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" It was Jesus who further asked, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" While we are seeking to save, let us not forget that one thing we should save is our soul.

II. It Recognizes the Trials of Life. It expresses what we sometimes feel and cannot express. We do not know how many men and women, and sometimes very young people, feel that the burdens and trials of life are more than they can bear. Many give up completely, and end it in suicide. Life has its burdens. To those who look on they may seem little, but to those who suffer them they seem very large, and heavy indeed. In this song is the Gospel of refuge, the Gospel of comfort! "Hide me, O my Saviour hide, 'till the storm of life is past. . . . Other refuge have I none; hangs my helpless soul on Thee!" "Leave, oh, leave me not alone, still and support and comfort me." You may be missing the tough spots in life, and please God may you, but many of you will know that there are some places so dark you cannot see. This song has given light in dark places because it opens the pathway to a renewed faith in Jesus Christ.

III. It Confesses One's Own Weaknesses and Sins.—As we are gathered about this Communion table are not we all aware of our imperfections? Is it not a good thing to be aware of our own sins? To confess our sins to Jesus, one who loves us, and understands all about us, and knows why, and how, and what, we are is one of the blessings of worship. As we think here of the sinless Son of God, and of His great revelation of God to us, and as we think of our own sins are not the lines of this hymn beautiful: "Just and holy is thy name; I am all unrighteousness; False and full of sin I am, Thou art full of grace and truth". . . . And is it not wonderful to sing in another line, "Plenteous grace with Thee is found, grace to cover all my sin; Let the healing streams abound; make and keep me pure with." The song that sings that message deep into one's soul is a real song. The church that gives that message to its community is a real church. The pulpit that has that message to offer for a needy, hungry humanity is not out-moded. The life that lives that message is a benediction, and it is eternal.

IV. It Exalts Jesus Christ As Saviour.—It is a song of praise to Him! That is one of the reasons it is such a great song. In the most intensely religious moments of our lives we need some vehicle of praise to God. We wish some way of expressing that which is too great to express. How this hymn helps! "Thou, O Christ, art all I want; More than all in Thee I find. . . . Thou of life the fountain art, freely let me take of Thee; Spring Thou up within my heart! Rise to all eternity!" It offers no other name whereby men must be saved. "All my trust in Thee is stayed, All my help from Thee I bring; Cover my defenseless head with the shadow of Thy wing." All my trust. . . . It reminds me here of the Twentieth Psalm, "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God." In what are we trusting? There are so many things in which men put their trust today. Some trust in chariots, some in pleasures as a cure for the pain of unbelief, or of spiritual disobediencce; some trust in money, and find in after life that it is much of a make-believe; some trust in many other things, but the singers of this old song trust in the Lord: "Thou, O Christ, art all I want!"

Such was the sermon of Peter in the sermon from which our text is taken when he said, "Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which, was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given men whereby we must be saved." Such was Peter's sermon after he and John had been kept all night and had time to think it over. The day before he and John had healed the lame man at the Gate Beautiful of the Jerusalem temple, which resulted ultimately in their being thrown into prison for the night, for when they gathered about them Peter preached unto them saying, "Unto you first, God, having raised up His Son Jesus, sent Him to bless you, in turning away everyone of you from his iniquities."

V. This Old Hymn Rings True to the Scriptures.—The Scriptures exalt Jesus. They give Him a name above every name. By Him the worlds were created. He is Lord, the third person of the Holy Trinity. Unto Him prayers were made by the sick, the blind, the lame, and the sinning. He was all-sufficient for them all. And here in our text we read: "There is none other name under heaven given whereby we must be saved." It is that sort of Jesus this hymn exalts. It is that sort of Jesus you and I need. It is that sort of Saviour we remember today as we partake of the emblems which represent His broken body and his spilt blood. May this be a moment of great blessing to us. May it be a time of renewal of faith in Him, and resolution to better serve Him who is for each of us so wonderful, and personal a Saviour!

While we are working for international peace, let us not neglect the problems—and the essential conditions—of internal peace. Spain is an example of what happens when church and state neglect the basic problems of the people's welfare and the equally basic problems of building a national life in tolerance, good will, and brotherhood.—Advance.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We can plan our farm work at the Christian Orphanage and figure out when we will do certain things, but the weather man steps up and says "rain tomorrow and next day" and it rains, the ground gets wet, and our plans are all knocked out.

We had planned to get our oat crop sowed by the 20th and our wheat in the ground by the last of the month, but we had rain on the 8th, 9th, and 10th of the month. The ground will be hardly dry enough to work in a week's time.

We have the sweet potato crop to gather in and cure in our potato house.

You can readily see why we shall be busy for some weeks to come. You buy for nearly a hundred children. Think of fitting a hundred pairs of shoes on children's feet—quite a job, isn't it?

Sweaters for the girls—jackets and coats. Then the boys come in for zipper jackets, socks, shoes, etc. All this counts into dollars. We are badly in need of funds to meet our fall bills to keep our credit in good standing. We truly hope our church people will be liberal this year in their Thanksgiving Offerings and help us reach our goal of $18,000.00 for the year.

Tobacco and cotton are bringing good prices and corn is selling for the highest prices in many years. Many of our churches are country churches and in good farming sections, we are looking forward to these churches for a liberal offering this year.

With your many blessings that the Lord has given you, don't forget this year the little children in the Christian Orphanage. They are in need of your love and your help. Divide with them and give them a chance in life too. When your orphanage takes a little helpless child here and rears it to young manhood or womanhood as the case may be, and if a girl becomes a graduate nurse or an office girl or holds some other position of trust or if a boy becomes an electrical engineer or a civil engineer or a teacher or a business man, as most of them do, don't you just have a little joy down in your heart that you did not have before?

COX.

Virgil M. Cox died on August 11, 1936, at the age of 79 years, 2 months and 20 days. His wife died 22 days earlier.

He leaves to mourn their loss, with those mentioned elsewhere, one brother, Rev. Peter Cox of Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. John Alfred, in Pleasant Ridge Christian Church, of which he had been a member since early life, and had served as deacon for more than twenty-five years.

He was faithful to his God, his church, his family and his neighbors. May his good influence live on to bless those who follow after.
 J. FRANK APPLE.

DOVEL.

Mrs. Delilah J. Dovel was born July 17th, 1874, and died September 19th, 1936, making her age 62 years, 2 months and 2 days. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, 6 children, 24 grandchildren, 2 brothers, and 3 sisters.

Mrs. Dovel was a faithful and loving member of the Newport Christian Church, near Shenandoah, Virginia. Not only has she been a hard worker in the church, but she has worked to the very limit in her daily life. The home, community and the church will greatly miss her Christian influence. She worked while it was yet day for the night was coming when no man worketh. My God comfort those who mourn.

W. J. ANDES.

FRY.

John William Fry was born July 9th, 1872 and died September 10th, 1936, making his age 64 years, 2 months and 1 day. He is survived by two sisters and one brother.

Mr. Fry was a member of the Mt. Olivet (R) Church near McGaheysville, Virginia. He became well-known throughout Harrisouburg, Virginia and surrounding vicinity by selling magazines and papers. He never borrowed anything unless he payed the lender back in full. His work, though small it may have been in the sight of man, is worth something to God.

May God bless those who mourn this mortal loss of a friend.
 W. J. ANDES.

JENNINGS.

A. L. Jennings departed this life at the age of 67 years, after almost two years of declining health. He leaves quite a few nephews and nieces, and a host of friends, he being the last of the older heads of the Jennings family.

He was a faithful member of Christiana Church in Tallapoosa County, Alabama. He had no family of his own, but he served others with himself and what he had. I have rarely come in contact with a life more unselfish than that of Brother Jennings.

A great congregation assembled at Eagle Creek Baptist Church to pay respect to his memory. The floral offering was very beautiful. The funeral was conducted by the writer assisted by Rev. G. H. Veazey.

G. D. HUNT.

WEAVER.

Mrs. Louis Weaver departed this life at Lanett, Alabama, September 13, 1936, at the age of 42 years. She leaves a husband, one son, Carry, her mother, Mrs. Emma Lands of Alabama, two sisters, Mrs. Pauline Tatum of Abanda and Mrs. Berta Carter of Wadley, many other relatives and a host of friends.

Mrs. Weaver was a fine Christian character, energetic and industrious, kind and thoughtful to all who came her way. She was a faithful member of New Hope Christian Church.

Funeral was at Abanda Baptist Church by the writer assisted by Rev. Robert Lankford, pastor of the church, and the body was interred at the Old Concord Cemetery.

God rest her soul in peace and comfort the bereaved.
 G. D. HUNT.

WYATT.

Sallie Johnston Wyatt, wife of the late J. M. E. Wyatt, died on August 4, 1936, aged 68 years and one day.

She was a life-long member of Long's Chapel Christian Church. The funeral was conducted in her church by the writer.

She leaves the following children: Walter L. Wyatt, Mrs. W. L. Hester, and Mrs. W. D. King, all of Burlington, Route 3. Stepchildren: Mrs. Bertha Hays, Burlington, N. C., Mrs. Bessie Porterfield, Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Effie Foust, Graham, N. C., G. E. Wyatt, Mebane, N. C., and J. W. Wyatt, Akron, Ohio.

GODLINESS THE END OF LIFE

"He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works shall he do; because I go to my Father."—Jno. 14:22.

"Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit." Jno. 15:8.

We cannot follow the Gospels through without understanding that godliness is the objective of life; and just as righteousness springs from recognition of right, so godliness springs from recognition of God. All lessons of life lead up to this, and until this lesson is learned, all others must remain incomplete.

Man is not called upon to establish an inner harmony within himself, nor to make his soul calm, serene and sober merely; nor is it intended that he should abstain from violence and wrong merely; yea, to do his duty toward others and cultivate the exercise of benevolence. The true end of man is in the development of the spiritual faculties of his nature and in the concentration of life's actions upon the proper object. That object is God. This concentration is the habit of godliness.

It is obeying his Word, which says: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy mind."

Prayer.—May each of us do our best, our Lord, to know and to show love, and begin and live each day for God. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"Ye cannot bear fruit except ye abide in me."—Jno. 15:4.

Only the man who lives in habitual communion with God, earnestly relying on him and his grace, is able in any manner worthy to realize the glories of godliness. One would as soon build a farm in the middle of a swamp and expect a rich harvest, as attempt to produce in the waste of our baser selves the godly fruits of righteous living, without first establishing a living relation with the living God.

This is what we are called upon to do today as we go about our task, remembering that godliness must cover the whole life.

"Present your bodies a living sacrifice..."

Prayer.—Lord, our Lord, who art able to make of us anything thou wilt, make us willing, keep before us this day thy truth, thy life, and thy way, that we may live acceptably in thy sight.—Amen.

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME LXXXVIII.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1936.

NUMBER 43.

Is It Nothing To You?

(An Editorial.)

When Sunday comes, multitudes of children, young people and adults, do their religious duty by attending Sunday School, but have no notion that the Church service is for them or they for it. Is it nothing to you who worship the Christ that they never worship with the Church which He began?

Year after year more movies open, more games are played, and more places that buy and sell, do business on Sunday. The highways are lined with businesses that are busy on the day kept sacred by the Church for nineteen centuries for the honor of the resurrected Christ. Is it nothing to you that the sacred day is being turned into a holiday?

Millions of laborers have been without jobs so long that many of them are completely broken in spirit. A benevolent government has ministered to the needy until many have lost their initiative or desire, to plan for themselves. Is it nothing to you what may happen to them and to their children? A single turn of the political wheel can easily bring disaster or help to thousands of families. Then can Christians stand by at election time and say, "It means nothing to me who is elected"?

Perhaps neutrality is a fine policy for a nation to follow. But can we honestly say that war in or between other nations means nothing to us? Can we sit quietly as Christians and see other Christians crushed beneath the iron heel of a dictator or dictatorial government and say pharisaically, "It is nothing to me"?

The children, young people and adults of America are being taught by radio, magazine, and daily papers, the fine qualities of alcoholic beverages. And they are being skillfully persuaded to use the various brands. If statistics can be believed, our people are yielding to this persuasion and are going the way that leads to death. Is it nothing to you, all you that pass by wrecked cars and ruined people?

If church people "pass by on the other side," from whence will come the Samaritan to bind up the wounds of a wicked world? Human needs clamor for the attention and the helpful service of all who know the Lord, the one who said, "In as much as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not unto me."

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

We should be as generous with a man as we are with a picture, which we always give the benefit of the best possible light.—Emerson.

A leadership training school is in session at Suffolk, Virginia, this week, and another will be held at Wakefield, November 1st to 6th.

A recent issue of The LaGrange (Georgia) Daily News carries the picture of Rev. Jesse H. Dollar and a long article on the front page telling of his work in LaGrange and that he is to begin a pastorate at Newport News, Virginia, on November 1, 1936.

Rev. G. D. Hunt was unable to attend the East Alabama Association recently and Rev. C. W. Carter has been forced to give up his church work because of ill health. The many friends of these brethren will both wish and pray for their speedy recovery so they may continue to render service for the Master.

Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Virginia, is eager to have the name and address of those who expect to attend the Eastern Virginia Conference at his church and who may wish to spend the night. The South Norfolk Church will gladly entertain all who attend but they will appreciate the courtesy of being told in time to make necessary preparation. Just a card to Mr. Poythress is all that is necessary.

The following from the annual report of Dr. John G. Truitt, the pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church: "During the year your pastor made 1,205 calls, preached 105 sermons, made 40 addresses and 32 prayer-meeting addresses, attended 442 meetings, held 239 personal conferences performed 49 marriage ceremonies, conducted 42 funerals, read 52 books, received regularly 17 magazines and papers. He has also written 35 sermons for publication in THE CHRISTIAN SUN mailed 3,063 letters and postals, made more than 2,000 telephone calls, and received 83 new members during the year. During the year our church lost 18 members by death, and there were 8 other deaths in our Sunday School and congregation. During the three years of the present pastorate 182 new members have been added to the church roll."

WINSTON-SALEM.

United Church (Congregational-Christian), Winston-Salem, N. C. held a week of evangelistic meetings, beginning September 27th and closing on October 4th with two fine Sunday services. These services were preceded by a week of cottage prayer meetings which were well attended and a fine interest manifested on the part of the members.

The pastor conducted the meetings on the first Sunday, and Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of the Christain Church, South Norfolk, Va., came to us on Monday evening and did the preaching during the remainder of the meeting. Brother Poythress gripped our people from the first with his enthusiastic, forceful, and evangelistic message. They were delighted with his inspiring message in song as well. Almost the entire congregation came forward at the first invitation in consecration; one fine young man made confession of faith and has since united with the church. Several others have indicated their intention of uniting with the church in the near future.

Through the courtesy of the City Ministers' Union, Mr. Poythress was given the privilege of conducting the morning devotions at 8:00 o'clock over the radio during his stay here. This was much enjoyed, judging from the numerous comments that came to us. He spoke at chapel service one morning at the R. J. Reynolds High School before a student body of 1,600 and held their rapt attention nearly an hour.

Sunday was Rally and Promotion Day in the Sunday School with the same emphasis on the church services. The children under the direction of Mrs. W. M. Jay, rendered a fine program and received their certificates of promotion. The church was generous in its praise of the service rendered by Rev. Mr. Poythress. We invite our friends from our sister churches, when in Winston-Salem, to visit our Sunday services.

W. M. JAY.

WHY CHURCHES SHOULD CHANGE PASTORS, AND HOW.

There are very few reasons why a church should change pastors. In one respect a pastor and his pastorate may be likened unto a husband and wife—the longer they stay together, peaceably, the better. So it seems to me that the chief problem is not how to change, but how to avoid the necessity of changing.

The real pastor is more than a Sunday morning orator who delivers a thunderous discourse that he has pieced together at odd chances during the week; and fortunate indeed is the church having for its pastor a man like Dr. N. G. Newman, or Dr. I. W. Johnson, who makes himself so pleasant and so indispensable to the religious life of the community that nobody ever thinks of getting rid of him. There are times, however, when a church membership succumbs to the poisonous influence of a few vicious tongues and proceeds to make it necessary for a fine preacher to hunt for a healthier climate. When this condition develops, the best that he can do is to utter the same prayer that Christ did for His false accusers while on the cross; and make his departure as graciously as possible.

A few months ago the pastor of one of the larger churches in Washington, D. C., resigned to accept the pastorate of a New York church. When the time came for his farewell sermon the church was overflowing with members and friends, who were filled with mingled emotions of deep regret over his leaving and light-hearted rejoicing over his bigger opportunity. Among his remarks on that occasion were these words: "Twelve years God pointed me here; today He points me elsewhere. I am deeply and solemnly convinced that it is His will for me, and I cannot do otherwise. These years are and shall always remain among the happiest of my life, in which I have untold evidences of your good will and have been enriched by your friendship." That, in my opinion, is the proper way for a pastor to leave a church. GORDON W. HOLLAND.

A STRONG CONGREGATION

"Is it a strong congregation?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"How many members are there?"

"Thirty."

"Thirty! Are they so very wealthy?"

"No; many of them are poor."

"How, then, can you say it is a strong church?"

"Because they are earnest, devoted, at peace, loving each other, following the Word of God in all things, instant in prayer, striving together to do the Lord's work. Such a congregation is strong whether composed of thirty or three hundred members."—Lutheran Annual.

The most correct child cannot please his father unless he believes in his father and loves him. In the same way our Faith reaches out to our heavenly Father and binds us to Him.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

"LET THIS MIND BE IN YOU."

Saint Paul probably never studied psychology as such, but he knew something of minds, both human and divine. Most modern psychologists deal only with the human mind as if there were no other. They analyze it, discover laws by which it works and make suggestions that sometimes help one to live more easily and happily. This is a Christ-like service to mankind.

They can point out heritages from parents and grandparents to many generations; they can discover complexes, fears and phobias that destroy peace within and cause conflicts without, and they can help to relieve strain and restore the balance that means happiness. That is a fine thing to do, and surely the Master of men is pleased when his fellows are relieved of strain and are put at ease, for He Himself invited the weary to come to Him for rest.

But isn't it strange that so many psychologists forget that there is any mind except the human? They can describe quite accurately the conscious mind, the subconscious from which things may be brought to consciousness, and that deeper region of the mind where all the things lie buried that we have forgotten, but only a few seem to realize that there is a Super-mind, one that is above and superior to the human, that may influence and even direct (if invited to do so) the human mind.

Saint Paul was quite familiar with this Super-mind and said to his friends (Phil. 2:5), "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Multitudes since have sought for this "mind" described by St. Paul and have found it. The qualities of that mind of Christ have brought release from fear, dread, sin, and they have found the exaltation and happiness which the mind of man craves. The great need of our time is that men shall have the mind which was in Christ, and it is the business of the Church to show people of the world how the mind of Christ can minister to their needs.

ATTEND YOUR CONFERENCE.

During the next few weeks the remainder of our conferences in the Southeast will convene. Fine programs have been prepared, eloquent speakers will give their best thoughts, reports from churches will be read, committee reports will be adopted, and plans for the coming year will be laid out.

All of this will mean nothing to those who do not attend or who fail to hear the report that may be made in the church or to read what is given through the Church paper. The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, who is himself a man and a minister, would like to appeal to everyone who reads this item to attend their annual conference and share in its program.

There are none of us wise enough to live alone. We need the help, the strength, the guidance which comes from fellowship with other Christians. It may upset the business a little to be away for two or three days, but in a week the business will be running as usual if you take the time out to attend your church conference and the currents of your life will be running deeper. You will be a better person and the world will be a better place in which to live because you have sought and found inspiration and have shared in making your church conference worthwhile. Please do not take this as a minor matter, but whether you are elected as a delegate or not, plan to attend your conference. It needs you, and you need it.

GOING TO CHURCH.

Church going is a good habit to form because it means so much to every one concerned. It is beneficial to the person who goes and encourages countless others to do the same. If you were to ask why anyone should go to Church, I answer that the usual Church service is planned for the physical, mental and spiritual refreshment of the attendant. In the first place the auditorium is a quiet, restful place. One enters quietly, and soon settles down to restful mediation. In the majority of churches the appointments are artistic, attractive in appearance, pleasing to the eye, and suggestive of worship. Doubtlessly there are flowers for decorations, the notes of an organ and the sweet melody of a choir. Not all churches are so fortunate as to have all of these things, but every church does its best to provide a quiet, restful and pleasing atmosphere for those who attend. And then there is a pleasant minister to guide the congregation in the service of worship and to speak words of wisdom and helpfulness to all. These are external matters, to be sure, but they are very important, providing an attractive setting for a worshipping congregation. Vast numbers of people are drawn to the House of God because of its beauty and its stimulating atmosphere.

There is more than this to attract one to the church. There is a sense of fellowship in the church. The individual finds himself a part of a congregation, the feeling of loneliness disappears and a sense of solidarity wells up in the soul. It is encouraging and wonderfully helpful to feel the fellowship that is there. To be with other people who have similar needs with our own strengthens us. One feels in the spiritual pulse and atmosphere, so to speak, and is comforted. The individual is only one and he may easily become discouraged, he may have a sense of weakness and think he amounts to little, but in the congregation he is caught up with the mass, is lost as a single, unimportant person and is carried up in spirit to the heights of delight and worthwhile. The worshiper gets a new sensation and he goes away a better man.

It is sometimes said that the sermon is the chief part of the church service and in most churches it does have the central position and the most time. The great cathedrals were wonderful places for worship. They still produce a feeling of awe and reverence. In some of these ancient temples of worship great sermons were preached and down through the centuries preaching has been prominent and powerful. Not every preacher, however, can be great as a scholar or eloquent as a preacher, but it will be recognized, I am sure, that every preacher does his best to be interesting, informing and helpful. Outside of definitely divine inspiration the minister is the central force in a Church service. But the program of the morning period (which is usually the most important service on the Sabbath day) is arranged in such an order as to lead the attendant in a gradual ascent of worship through its prayers, its hymns, its scripture reading, and its chior numbers. Perhaps it is true in most programs of this kind, the sermon is the climax of the service. Thus it may be seen that one who attends a well-thought-out Church worship program subjects himself to an influence that can interest and benefit him.

The service of worship is intended to lead the worshiper into the presence of God and if one will open his heart to the Divine influences he will doubtlessly become a better person. There is an old saying that a seven-day clock needs winding once a week and so the human machine (man) needs to go to church for winding! Church going may become a most delightful experience if practiced freely without any sense of compulsion. A free, voluntary worshiping congregation is an inspiration and many more people would go to Church if they could see it this way. The presence of others, the sweet strains of good music, the aesthetic surroundings, the message of the minister and the friendly greetings of other worshipers encourage and inspire him and he goes out into the new week to live victoriously.

A PLANNED CHURCH PROGRAM.

THE SUN, in its issue of August 20th, carried on its front page an editorial with that title. The writer feels that it would be well to follow up that editorial with any illustration of successful church program planning. One such illustration, is Union Church in Jacksonville, of which Everett B. Leshner is the pastor. The following from the church calendar tells the story of the season's planning. In addition there is a fine framed small bulletin board in the lobby of the church with a blue print of all the church's activities for the month.

We quote the following:

"This year our church is undertaking to follow a correlated program,—a program which attempts to organize the thinking, feeling and actions of the entire church for the year.

"Briefly, this is how such a program works: A theme, text, hymn and scripture lesson are chosen for each month. During October, our theme is 'The Church,' our text is Psalm 122:1, our hymn, 'The Church's One Foundation,' and our scripture, Acts 1-18. The entire church will think upon that theme for the month. All departments will endeavor to build their weekly or monthly programs in harmony with it.

"All church activities during the months of the year will be planned in detail, in accordance with the theme. These detailed monthly programs will be posted on the bulletin board in the narthex for your observation.

"Moreover, each month there will be placed on the table in the narthex certain books and pamphlets dealing with the particular theme. They are for your use and edification.

"The list of themes for the months of the coming year are: October, 'The Church'; November, 'International Goodwill'; December, 'Sharing'; January, 'Missions'; February and March (Lent), 'Self-consecration'; April, our theme will be the same as that adopted for the State Conference.

"Obviously, such a program, to be effective, demands the loyal and constant support of each of us. Let us, therefore, individually, think upon the monthly themes, learn the monthly texts and hymns, read the suggested scripture and participate in all the planned activities."

The tenth annual Convocation for Florida Congregational and Christian ministers was held at Ponce de Leon Hotel, De Leon Springs, Florida. The meeting was well attended and the speaking and discussions were of a high order. Dr. John L. Lobingier gave a series of addresses on "The Pastor and the Educational Ideal." Several of the Florida ministers gave scholarly and interesting lectures.

Rev. O. T. Anderson of Fort Myers was head of the program committee and served as Convener, and Rev. Walter Metcalf of Tampa was elected Convener for the Convocation of 1937.

WHY ZERO CHURCHES?

We are disturbed at the recent report of Secretary Fagley that 2573 of our churches out of 6209, 41 per cent, have made no additions to their membership on confession of faith during 1935. Before we get unduly alarmed, we should realize that this is not a new or unusual condition. In 1927 it was discovered that 32 per cent of all the Presbyterian, Northern Baptist and Methodist churches failed to obtain a single convert. Yet these churches have continued to grow larger. Our Congregational and Christian churches actually received 58,832 new members last year which is more than any year since 1931. To be sure there was a net loss of 964, but in the year 1934, there was a net loss of 7569. We appear to be coming up from our lowest level, but still we must ask, what is the matter with us?

We do not feel moved to denounce the churches that have not grown in membership, 510 of them were pastorless. Some of them may be us. There are many churches whose gain while above zero may be too small to be any cause for boasting. The practical point is why are we not going forward? In a discussion of the subject at Atlanta by the Regional Committee on Missions it was suggested that a considerable number of ministers have lost the art of challenging the people directly to come to a decision, that we preach about subjects instead of coming to grips with persons, that personal evangelism is neglected because so many Christians have so little Christian experience of their own that they feel unable to bring a message to others.

In a thrilling sermon during the National Preaching Mission at Atlanta, E. Stanley Jones remarked, "Words must have scars, signs of our own suffering." I wonder if in this remark is not contained the secret of evangelistic preaching, that it must be sacrificial, a kind of preaching which carries in it the living echo of the preacher's own travail of soul. He has felt the Master's own passion to save the lost. He is vitally concerned for the men and women to whom he is preaching. His words carry with them the burden of his own unsatisfied longing for them. He has been through great tribulation himself in intercession for them. His words are scarred by what he has suffered. They come not from his own prayer life. Like Paul he can say, "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." Men of great evan-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Politics are in the air. The newspapers daily remind their readers of the political issues and solicit support of certain candidates and their platform. The voice of candidates and other political propagandists are being heard over the radio making appeals and counter charges. Meanwhile the people of the country are going about their daily tasks without any serious fears over the possible outcome of the present political campaign.

What should be the attitude of the minister in such an hour as this? Should he study the issues and take an active part in the political campaign? Should he advocate the election of certain candidates on the basis of party loyalty? Should he oppose other candidates whose views differ from his own convictions? What relation should a minister sustain to politics?

The minister is a citizen. He pays his taxes. He is compelled to pay a poll-tax which gives him the privilege of voting in many states. He has certain obligations to the state because of his citizenship. He derives benefits from the state on the same basis with other citizens. Other citizens take an active part in the political issues—why should he not do likewise? He may do so, but it is not wise for him to become partisan in his attitude toward members of his congregation?

At this point it should be said that the views expressed in this article are the personal opinions of the writer. They are offered for what they are worth. Personally, this writer is of the opinion that ministers should vote according to their convictions. But the various political groups may be represented in one church. When the minister, or pastor of a church, takes an aggressive part in a political campaign, he is forced into the position of supporting certain people in his congregation, and, therefore, he is opposing those of a different political belief. This activity marks him as a partisan, and will strengthen him, for the time being, with the people who agree with him; while it will weaken his influence with the opposition. He may be on the side of a safe majority. But the minister should not deal with majorities, alone, in his parish. The minority has the same spiritual importance, in proportion to numbers, as the majority. In the average political campaign, of this age, the moral issues are kept in the background. The average office-seeker has a primary interest in himself and his party. Political leaders will sometimes turn against their friends of yesterday, if they can, by this change, secure future political advantages and power. Political friends are the most uncertain of all friendships under changing conditions and political prospects. Therefore, when a minister makes friends on a political basis, he has no assurance that they will be loyal to him tomorrow.

No man should have any claim upon the political support of the minister. The minister should reserve the right to vote as he wishes, and his political affiliation or party is his own affair. No member of the church has any right to know what party receives the support of the minister. Of course any political vote is in favor of some person, or party, and against another. But that is a private matter, if that is the end of it; and the wise minister will not advertise his vote in any political conflict. The political activity of the minister should be limited to his vote, guarded as his own sacred trust. The minister should not be a politician. He should stay out of political strife of his congregation. He is a minister of the Gospel. He should have an open mind to the people of all political parties, and they should have an open mind for him and his message. He should not be blinded by political prejudice and his people should not be estranged by his political bias, nor drawn to him by political ties.

VIRGINIA CHURCH IS DEDICATED.

More than 100 years ago a small group of people under the leadership of Rev. Lewis Craven, organized Union Christian Church one mile west of Virgilina, Virginia. This church has grown until it is one of the most influential churches in our convention. It has a membership of nearly 400. Rev. C. E. Newman has served as pastor of this church for 29 years.

The first house of worship was a log house erected on land donated by James Sanford. Provision was made in the first structure for colored people also to worship. After the Civil War, a number of the colored people remained as members of Union Church. In 1900 the congregation moved to the town of Virgilina and built a house of worship on a lot donated by the late W. M. Pannebaker. In 1919 a large plot of ground nearer the center of the town was purchased and plans begun to erect a modern house of worship. The new church building was completed in 1927. The building is of brick veneer construction with a main auditorium, Sunday School rooms, and a pastor's study. The building and land cost $13,000.00 It was a worthwhile undertaking on the part of the congregation of Union Church to erect a building of this type and character. However, under the leadership of their pastor and with the cooperation of the congregation, this undertaking was carried through to completion. Today Union Church has a very beautiful and commodious house of worship, adequate for the demands of the present congregation. The present pastor, Rev. C. E. Newman, deserves much credit for the achievements made by Union Church.

Sunday, October 11th, according to previous plans, the congregation gathered for the dedication of their new church building. Dr. N. G. Newman, pastor of Holy Neck Christian Church and brother of the pastor, Rev. C. E. Newman, was invited to deliver the dedicatory sermon. Dr. Newman is always equal to the occasion when a sermon of any type is required. He gave a message to the congregation gathered, challenging them to greater faith, greater undertakings, and greater achievements, emphasizing the practical purpose of the church in changing human society. Following the sermon, Dr. Newman read the dedicatory formula used by the Christian Church. The large audience expressed its consent and cooperation by joining in the Amen and Amen.

A delicious dinner in great abundance was served on the ground. All members, friends, and visitors in attendance were cordially invited to remain and participate. At 2:30 in the afternoon the congregation assembled for a sermon by the writer. In this service the place and importance of the church in a community was emphasized. Music was furnished by the church choir, assisted by a quartet and other singers from South Boston.

Union Church has always attracted the attention of the citizens of the town and the surrounding community. It has been a growing church all through the years. In connection with the morning service, a family of three was received into the fellowship of the church.

With these improved facilities and a harmonious organization, greater things may justly be expected of Union Church. L. E. SMITH.

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL COMMITTEE HOLDS MEETING.

The Southeast Regional Committee at its meeting in Atlanta, Ga., September 30-October 1, reviewed the work of our united churches. As the entire work of our churches passes under review at this meeting of the Regional Committee, it is necessarily an inter-racial meeting. Dr. John L. Lobingier, one of the secretaries of the Congregational Education Society, gave the opening address, emphasizing the perils of sectionalism in religious affairs. He gave a glowing account of the Youth Conference at Lakewood, Ohio, and the Adult Conference at Lake Geneva. His second address concluded the morning session of the meeting with a discussion of "Missionary Education and Promotion" covering four points: (1) How to have a wider use of available materials, noting that 19 denominations are uniting in providing missionary material. (2) How to have an ampler use of our missionary projects of our own churches. (3) How we may improve our methods for raising funds for missionary promotion. (4) How we may help leaders in our churches to do their work better. The books and literature available to help in these ways were described. Churches may borrow travel libraries by writing to Dr. Lobingier, paying transportation charges one way. He reminded us that the gifts of our churches to missions from 1921 to 1930 averaged over three million dollars but feel there was a decrease since then so that in 1935 the total was only $1,488,161, a decrease of 52 per cent. The decrease in amounts for home expenses in the same period was only 31 per cent. He urged such a use of the Every Member Canvass as might check this serious loss in missionary giving.

The opening devotional service was an address by the Rev. George N. Edwards of Charlestown, S. C., who pled for a closer fellowship among our churches and urged a new enthusiasm for missions. There was a note of real expectancy and hope throughout the meeting. The reports of superintendents and secretaries were encouraging. This was especially true of the reports of summer conferences and student service. There was united approval of this type of work. The reports from our educational institutions invoked real enthusiasm. Only at such a meeting as this is it easy to realize how vast and significant is our educational program in the Southeast. Our Seminary Foundation at Vanderbilt University, Piedmont College in Georgia, Rollins College in Florida, Elon College in North Carolina, Southern Union College in Alabama, Ballard Normal School in Macon, Ga., Pleasant Hill Academy in Tennessee and Thorsby Academy in Alabama were reported upon by their friends. We were also reminded of the seven collegiate institutions for the education of Negroes founded in the south by our churches. Our colleges are our pride and deserve our loyal enthusiastic support.

The problems of the rural church were discussed with special reference to the difficulty of securing adequate support for educated ministers. The subject of "Evangelism and the Zero Churches" was the final topic for discussion and, while the statistics presented by any single year's report were felt to be insufficient for adequate conclusions, it was agreed that our churches and ministers must stress sane and efficient evangelism. The final session of the meeting was adjourned in time so that the members might attend the evening meeting of the National Preaching Mission then being held in Atlanta. The officers of the Regional Committee were re-elected for the ensuing year, Dr. C. Rexford of Southern Pines, N. C., Chairman, and Mrs. Eleanor Hite Rush of Charlotte, N. C., Secretary. The business of the meeting was planned and the program of the agenda was made by Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, of Jacksonville, Fla., Superintendent of the Southeast District.

ALABAMA LETTER.

I guess I had better hurry along with my revival reports or they will be too old to publish.

My fifth meeting was at Mt. Zion Church 3 miles west of Roanoke, Ala., in a fine community of intelligent people. This church has been without a regular pastor for a good portion of the year. We had a real, old time revival meeting at this church. People came to church in large numbers. They came on cars, trucks, wagons, buggies, and on foot. Good order and fine attention prevailed throughout the meeting. Much good was accomplished, and the people of God rejoiced together.

I have been preaching for these people since the revival, trying to assist them in winding up their Conference Year. They need some consecrated servant of God to lead them in their devotional life.

My sixth meeting was at State Line Congregational Church. This is the third year I have been with this church, since its reorganization. This church is in a fine community, has a good Sunday School, and a recently organized Christian Endeavor Society. We had a good meeting here, good attention, and good order. The church and community was greatly benefited by the meeting. The music here (and also at Mt. Zion) was fine. This church has a bright future before it; with the consecrated leadership, it will do a great work.

My seventh meeting was at Pleasant Grove Christian Church in Chambers County, Ala. This is one of our old and established churches. Many of our older members have died or moved away. Our congregations are practically new, and much of the old-time spirit has been lost; but it was an inspiring scene to see them come to church.

It was good to be there. The Lord was with us in great power, and the people enjoyed the fellowship together. Many lives were benefited during the revival and souls were made happy. Four young men and two young women were received upon confession of faith, and one was restored to fellowship.

My eighth and last meeting was with the Cragford Church. I enjoyed this meeting greatly. We had fine attendance and good order, good music, and everything was pleasant. I met many of my old friends, and quite a few new ones. I rejoiced to see and greet my old friend and brother, Neal Wilder, an aged pilgrim, who has been long on the way to a better home. Almost all of the old citizens have crossed the river. A few, however, are still on this side. It is a pleasure to meet them. God bless them! I have doubtlessly preached to and worshipped with many this summer whom I shall not meet again on earth, but will some sweet day strike hands with them on the other shore.

I did the preaching for seven of these revivals and kept my own appointments going also. I am praising God for my health and strength. I have been hale and hearty throughout the Campaign. This has been in many respects the greatest year of my life, the hardest year, and the happiest year—and I am ready to be used anywhere of the Lord, any way He thinks best.

God bless his Zion everywhere and save poor dying souls is my prayer.

A BOY AND HIS HEAVENLY VISION.

About eighteen years ago a baby boy named William was born into a drunkard's home near C—, New York. When the child was about eight weeks old his mother died. He was neglected, nearly starved to death, and was not strong enough to walk until he was three years old. After a time the father, who was left with five motherless children, married a widow who already had five children. At first they tried to live on a farm, but this property was soon lost through drink, and the father and mother separated.

The youngest boy, William was kept by his father, and was made to do the cooking, washing, and other chores. During this time William suffered much ill treatment. He often stayed where it was unfit for any one to live.

Finally, when William was thirteen years old, he was permitted to leave his father and shift for himself. He started working for a farmer who lived in the neighborhood where there was a Union Sunday school. The district school teacher used the Sunday-school song books in the daily morning exercises. The little Irish boy learned the gospel songs very readily and soon became the proud possessor of a copy of the book, "Favorite Hymns." Each night after the chores were finished, he would set out to learn the songs, playing the tunes from cover to cover on his harmonica.

The truth the gospel contained seemed to grip William, and when another boy invited him to attend the Sunday school and evening prayer meeting, he accepted the invitation. His interest in the services was evident, and one evening when the missionary gave a gospel message and invited any one who wished to accept Christ as his Saviour to step forward, William responded, and gave public testimony to his faith in Christ as his personal Saviour. Later William went to work for a farmer farther away, and often walked several miles to attend the Union Sunday school, prayer meetings and the young people's meetings. In the summer of 1935 William was taken by the missionary to attend the Young People's Bible Conference conducted by the American Sunday-School Union at Lime Lake. There he won many friends by his humble, earnest and faithful Christian character.

There he publicly consecrated his life wholly to the Lord's service.

One very cold night last February, William walked several miles through the deep snow to get to the missionary's home, that he might tell him how God had called him to prepare for His work. The missionary found other friends who were glad to help make it possible for William to attend the Dr. John A. Davis Memorial Bible School, where he is now being trained for Christian work. At the Bible school, William is doing so well that they have placed him on the "Junior Student's League of Many Nations and States." This is giving him opportunity to travel through several states, telling how God led him to be saved and helped by the ministry of the American Sunday-School Union.—C. C. Cagwin, in The Sunday-School Missionary.

INTO THE WOODS WITH CHRIST.

In the quest for the otherwise un-reached in the mountains of western North Carolina, I found hidden in the woods on the Pisgah National Forest Preserve, a little lumber camp made up of about a dozen families. The Government had sold the dead and dying chestnut timber to a contractor who had built little rough shacks and moved these families in for the purpose of cutting and moving the timber to market. Unlike many localities which we visit, access to this settlement is made easy, since the Government has constructed a splendid graded road for use in caring for the preserve and protecting it from fire. As we traveled this road, ever ascending higher and higher into the mountains, I could not help but note the beauty and tranquility of the scene.

In seeking his camp, I drove all the way through it before I was aware that I had reached my destination. Government officials had decreed that the beauty of the forest along the highway should not be marred by unsightly houses and, therefore every shack providing shelter for the lumbermen and their families, was built back from the road, most of them entirely hidden by the trees. As I explored the paths and roads that showed signs of habitation, I found the little homes. Where rattlesnakes and copperheads had once reigned unmolested, I now found hopeful parents who were glad for opportunity of honest work, even though they must be hidden back in the hills. There were also many bright-eyed children and babies.

When I mentioned a Sunday school, most of the parents and children expressed themselves as being glad for the opportunity. Many had moved from localities where they had had this privilege and were sadly missing the fellowship each Sunday. As I visited from home to home, distributing tracts and other Christian literature, an appointment was made to meet and organize a Sunday school. On the day of organization, a fine crowd of both young and old, met at the home of the contractor, and there in the shade of a great spreading oak, the Shady Oak Union Sunday School came into being, with a membership of thirty-five. A few Sundays later Mrs. Cady and I visited the school, set up our little folding organ, and for almost an hour the forest rang as their voices blended in hymns of praise and thanksgiving for the privileges they would not have had, if the Sunday-school missionary had not found them and organized them into a little band to study and learn of Christ.—C. N. Cady, in The Sunday-School Missionary.

MISSIONARY NEWS ITEMS.

The Woman's conferences are over and we are all planning and starting our new year's work. The reports at the conference were all good and showed an increase in membership, amount of money raised and in general interest and enthusiasm. What are we going to do this year? We must not stand still or go backward but remembering that this year marks the 25th anniversary of our organization let us all push forward as never before. This year's study course with all the wonderful and helpful materials should be a banner year as far as our programs are concerned. Some one has said "that through Christ we are citizens of the whole world, and that the people of every nation and race and class are our fellow citizens." Through these study books and leaflets we learn about the peoples of other lands and communities and we are brought close together as Christ's children. The study of Genesis should be one that will appeal to us and let each society look well to the spiritual side of its work.

Dont forget your news items for they are helpful to THE SUN, to your society and to others. Please read the item sent from the Burlington church and see if you won't be helped. This society is the first to send in material for this new year and may many others follow this splendid example. What a wonderful report they send and what good they will do other societies through their suggestions and ideas. So glad to get these news items from North Carolina too, and hope this is the starter for others. Congratulations Burlington.

REPORT OF CIRCLE NO. 5.

Circle No. 5 of First Church, Burlington, held its first meeting at the home of Mrs. T. A. Strader, September 9, 1921, with seven members present. Mrs. S. A. Horne was elected chairman. She has acted as chairman of this circle for 15 years. Today their membership is 23. During that time the following has been accomplished:

Total amount of money paid on goal, $2,279.08; paid to Elon building fund, $25.00; Mountain Work, $21.55; Orphanage, $21.00; paid on chapel in Porto Rico, $50.00; paid for flowers, $10.00; total, $2,406.63.

They gave to the Elon Orphanage food, clothing and other things too numerous to mention, valued altogether at $300.00.

They gave 4 or 5 poundings valued at $40.00.

They gave Dr. Lankford a memory quilt. Ten cents was received for each name, over 400 names were given and from this they received $43.79.

They have reached the financial goal of $200.00 a year for seven years. There are 22 active members, the oldest member being eighty-seven. 12 of the 23 members are widows. Over 3000 visits to sick and shutins were made.

This circle will disband at this time and mix with the other circles.

It is with regret and sadness that this circle shall give up its splendid and faithful leader, Mrs. S. A. Horne.
SECRETARY.

STILL SCATTER THE SEEDS.

"But they won't read the Advocate" some of the preachers say. Granted. Not much of the daily paper save the headlines and a few personals are read. The men perchance read the markets and the boys read the sports page. The Sunday school literature goes into many homes, but it is not read and studied to any remarkable extent. The Bible lies around without being read, yet we encourage its distribution.

Many preachers work hard making sermons, but these do not get across to all the folks—no, not to half that are in the pews. Having ears they hear not. They sit and wait for the benediction. Shall we stop making sermons? The parable of the Sower is still an up-to-date story. There is still such a thing as casting pearls. Shall we quit our efforts to do good because of the evident waste and indifference? We insist the church paper and the Bible, even though not much read, should have a place in the home.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

WHY ZERO CHURCHES?

gelistic and personal power like D. L. Moody, Theodore Cuyler and John R. Mott have been of exceptional prayer life. They have dwelt before God and carried the souls of men on their hearts. These men of the National Preaching Mission have been marked by the life history of others for whom they have gone down into the depths. Sometimes they have won but their souls have been scared by the battles they have lost as well as won. Sometimes the spiritual forces have been engaged too late but the battle has left its mark of suffering. But the man with a message has a note of expectancy. "If God be your partner make your plans large," said Moody. God is not going to be defeated in making the kingdom of God out of men.

So long as we live on the surface, lightly concerned for our people, little touched by their infirmities, not greatly wrestling for their salvation, and not dwelling in the secret places with God, we cannot expect to find our churches charged with power for changing lives and for building the kingdom of God.

SECRETARIAL VISITORS IN THE SOUTHEAST.

Two of our secretarial leaders are making tours in sections of the South. Rev. John L. Lobingier, D. D., Secretary of the Education Society for the Department of World Fellowship and Adult Education, has been making a tour in Florida and Georgia. Dr. Lobingier attended the Regional Committee meeting in Atlanta, and then gave a series of lectures before the Florida Ministers' Convocation at De Leon Springs. He followed this with a tour, visiting several of the leading centers in Florida, conducting conferences on educational programs in the local church, this series of conferences being under the direction of Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. In Georgia he attended a meeting of the officers of the Georgia State Woman's Association, which also was arranged by Miss Coghill; and after speaking at Piedmont College, LaGrange and Atlanta, he will attend the Georgia State Conference at Chipley, October 27-28.

Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury, one of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, having especially in charge missionary education and young people's work, is also making a visit to several southern states. Much to her regret she was prevented by engagements in New York from reaching this area in time to share in the Virginia and Carolina woman's meetings. She had been spending some time touring in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and West Florida, under the direction of Dr. Ensminger, attending Association and Conference meetings, visiting churches, schools and colleges. After attending the Georgia State Conference, she will attend the three Florida Association meetings. She will visit churches in Atlanta; Negro institutions under the direction of Rev. H. Barnwell, and Piedmont College, after which she will spend a few days visiting churches under the direction of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, beginning with the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at Greensboro, November 11th.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Miss Dorothy Truitt of Greensboro, North Carolina, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Youth Fellowship, reports that the executive committee of that Fellowship has chosen Superintendents to carry on the various phases of its work and has also made a list of goals for the year.

Besides Dorothy Truitt, the officers are: Vice President, Margaret Epps; Secretary, Elberta Murray; Treasurer, Roberta Murray.

The Superintendents for this year are: Devotional, Samuel Barber; Publication, Mary Armfield; Leadership Training, Rev. Millard Stevens.

The three Counselors for this group are: Rev. J. Everett Neese, Rev. J. L. Neese, Mrs. W. E. Wissemann.

The Goals chosen for this year were:

1. Every church visited by a member of the executive committee during the year.
2. Missionary project not to interfere with money contributions within the local churches.
3. Stress the use of the Pilgrim Highroad.
4. Increase the number of delegates from our conference to the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training 100 per cent.
5. Every church have each young people's organization send in $1.00 to the Youth Fellowship.
6. Try the publication of a quarterly bulletin to be used as the means by which ideas may be exchanged among the local churches.
7. Every local church aware of the willingness of the Youth Fellowship to help them get materials for their use.

With this fine group of leaders and advisers and with such very definite things to strive for, it seems evident that the North Carolina and Virginia Youth Fellowship will continue to go forward and do great things this year.

We appreciate very much this response to our request for interesting news from the various Fellowships. We hope that others of you who have something to share will immediately sit down and write us about it—let us know what you have done, what you are doing, and what you are planning to do in the near future.

THE PURPOSE OF PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

The Pilgrim Fellowship is the name given to the whole company of Congregational and Christian young people throughout this country. As the Southeast Youth Fellowship we are a part of this larger group and should be interested in the things it is trying to accomplish. Below you will find the Statement of Purpose which has been adopted by the National Pilgrim Fellowship. It was originally worked out by the Congregational young people's group at Yankton, South Dakota, and was submitted along with about fifty other statements which were worked out over a period of a year or so, by several groups throughout the country. This was selected by the staff members of the Congregational Education Society as one of the five to be referred to the summer conferences and to the members of the National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship for vote. The votes recorded this as a preferred one.

"The Pilgrim Fellowship unites the young people of Congregational and Christian churches in the purpose—

To achieve Christian personality after the pattern of Jesus.

To seek a fuller understanding, one of another, in the interest of happy relations in home and community.

To work for a united church, practicing Christian freedom and definitely promoting the program of Jesus.

To secure equal rights and opportunities for all classes and races as equally the children of God.

To practice a Christian patriotism which recognizes the authority of God in conscience as supreme.

To strive for justice in the social order which will afford an abundant life for all.

To work for such international organization of the nations as will preserve peace and security."

It is in its original form except for a few slight editorial changes which have been made by the staff members of the Education Society. It is recommended for consideration by local young people's groups.

THREE YEARS OF REPEAL.

C. E. TOPIC FOR NOVEMBER 1, 1936.

SCRIPTURE LESSON: PROV. 23: 29-32.
(Consecration Meeting.)

Soft Music—"Take Time To Be Holy."

Call to Worship—(To be given unannounced): Psalm 19: 14.

Hymn—"An Evening Prayer." ("If I Have Wounded Any Soul Today.")

Sentence Prayers—

Poem—"Be Strong."

To the Leader—

Careful preparation should be made at least a week before. Check up on your local situation through the judge of the traffic court. Find out how repeal has affected the traffic situation: find out the local income from liquor sales, and the local police costs, and compare statistics. Order "One Year of Repeal" from the Christian Century, S. Dearborn St., Chicago, fifteen cents, and "The Second Year of Repeal" in the Christian Century for December 4, 1935. Use this material as the basis of your program. From The Pilgrim Highroad, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass., come these facts: "We are slaughtering ten per cent more people with motor cars than in the corresponding period of 1933, and injuring one-fourth more." Those are "official figures for Massachusetts." The Travelers Insurance Company reports that "in fatal accidents, 6.8 per cent of the drivers were under the influence of liquor, or 118 per cent worse." In Washington, D. C., the cost of beer "for the first six months was $3,300,00 due to an increase of 2,111 arrests for drunkenness with 399 more than ever before for disorderly conduct." How is it with YOUR community? If the program is put on as a radio program these otherwise dry statistics could be very interesting as "News Flashes"... Why not try it? Or, the leader might be called the "Editor" of a paper, and the different findings could be brought in and reported to the "Editor," those taking part on the program being known as "News Reporters."

CHRISTIANITY AS LOVE.

LESSON IV—OCTOBER 25, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXTS "Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love."—I Cor. 13:13.

LESSON: Acts 18:1-17; Cor 13. Printed Text: Acts. 18: 1-4; I Cor. 13:1-13.

Love is the essence of Christianity. It is the central theme of the gospel. God's love for us, manifesting itself in Christ's love; our love for God and our love for man, manifesting itself in our service to man—this is the center of the gospel, the essence of Christianity itself. There can be no real Christianity without love. Today's lesson deals, therefore, with primary things.

The Primacy of Love.

Paul says love comes first. A man may be eloquent and brilliant,—he may speak with the tongues of men and of angels; he may have prophetic insight and be filled with all wisdom—he may understand all mysteries and all knowledge; he may be able to work miracles—he may be able by faith to remove mountains; he may even be filled with good works and go so far as to suffer martyrdom—he may give all all his goods to feed the poor and his body to be burned; he may have and do all these things but if he does not have love, if he lacks the loving heart, he lacks the one essential spirit of Christianity. The world's supreme lack today is not lack of material wealth or of knowledge; it is the lack of love. Not mere sentiment, not maudling sympathy, but intelligent, indiscoverable good will, which is the spirit of true love as revealed in Christ.

The Qualities of Love.

When I was a boy it was a source of delight to me to be able to get a prism—sometimes I would take one off the pretentious lamp that hung over the dining room table in our humble home—and to hold it in the sunlight and thus to break up the light into its primary colors. In this letter to the Corinthians Paul does something like unto that—he he takes love and passes it through his inspired intellect and his sympathetic and loving heart, and breaks it up into its component parts, summing up in short, suggestive words some of the qualities of love. We may be sure that the man who wrote this immortal hymn of love had first lived it.

Love is long suffering—love suffereth long. It will take a great deal. It is unwearied in patience. It is willing to suffer for the sake of others. It is unhurried, it believes that in time it will conquer by the sheer power of love.

Love is kind—"and is kind." It expresses itself in helpful and kindly ways. It is tender and forgiving. It goes about doing good.

Love is magnanimous—love envieth not. It does not look jealously upon the successes of others; it does not covet what others have. It is big-hearted. There is no spirit of discontent or grudging or malice in love.

Love is humble—love vaunteth not itself, it does not go around bragging about how much good it is or what it has done. It knows that it has nothing which it did not receive and in humble spirit it thanks God. There is no false desire to excel others.

Love is modest—it does not puff itself up. Love is retiring unostentatious, it refuses to parade itself before others. It is simple and sincere.

Love is polite or courteous—love does not behave itself unseemingly. Love may not know all the rules of Emily Post, but love will not behave itself in a rude manner in the sense that it will wrong others. Love gives one an innate sense of courtesy. It is usually a lack of love and not a lack of knowledge that causes bad manners and rudness.

Love is unselfish—love seeketh not its own. Love does not look out for No. One at the expense of others. Love lives for others. Love does for others. Love gives to others.

Love is patient and self-controlled, it can stand a great deal. It takes a great deal to wear its patience out. It is hard to discourage. It does not easily take offense. It is willing to forgive unto seventy times seventy.

Love is pure—love thinketh no evil. It is not suspicious of everybody and everything. It believes in the best. It thinks on the good side of life. It even thinks the best about the worst.

Love is gladdened by goodness—love rejoiceth not in iniquity but rejoiceth in the truth. There seems to be a queer quirk in folks that causes them to rejoice in misdeeds and moral failures of others, but this spirit has no place in the heart where the spirit of love rules.

Love is adequate it bears everything, hopes all things, believeth all things, endureth all things, it is a reserve for every emergency in life. It keeps alive the spirit of hope, it dares to believe in the best in the face of the worst, it accepts the things that come in the quiet confidence that eventually it shall triumph. Love never faileth.

The Permanency of Love.

Love abides. Other things may fail. Prophecy may cease, tongues shall cease, knowledge may conceivably vanish away, but love will remain. It is eternal because it is of God. All other things find their completion and their perfection in love.

The Supremacy of Love.

Faith, hope, love, a great triumvirate of words. And Paul as one who gave a great deal of emphasis to faith in its personal and moral aspects. He did not hesitate to say that the greatest thing in the world was love. It stands supreme. And herein shall all men know that we are His disciples if we have love one for another, and if that love expresses itself in service to others.

THE LAW OF THE LANGUAGE.

The third principle to be observed in effective teaching may be summed up as follows: "The language used in teaching must be common to teacher and learner." Put in other words it is the principle of "the point of contact." Growing out of this principle are several rules or suggestions as follows:

1. Study the language of the pupils to learn what words they use and what meanings they give to these words.

2. Express as far as possible in the language of your pupils.

3. Use the simplest and fewest words that will express your meaning.

4. Help the meaning of words by illustrations, taking these illustrations from the experiences of the members of the class if possible.

5. Make haste slowly, especially in teaching young children. Test frequently the understanding of the members of the class of the words you and they use.

It can readily be seen that these principles apply to ministers and teachers. We need to be sure that we do not talk in unknown tongue when we talk about religion.

Conviction, be it ever so excellent, is worthless till it converts itself into conduct. Doubt of any sort can be removed but by action. Do the duty which lies nearest thee; then thy second duty will seem clearer.

—Thomas Carlyle.

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

THE MOST KINDLY ACT.

"And Jonathan, Saul's son, arose, and went to David into the wood, and strengthened his hand in God."—I Sam. 23:9-18.

The beautiful friendship of David and Jonathan was doubly beautiful because it was not merely an earthly friendship, but in them both there was a sense of The Divine and a consciousness of brotherly relations. In their conversation they regarded themselves as a part of a great plan and talked about heavenly things. When they helped one another, that helpfulness was in the name of God.

It is the fault of mankind that the heavenly element is left out of our plans. We all feel it. It is a disastrous omission. Often when we bear our sympathies to the distressed and the bereaved, we fail to take the Lord with us. This does not comfort the sorrowing as it should because we have gone alone, had we gone with Christ, we would have the hosts of heaven to back us.

Prayer.—Dear heavenly Father, teach us, we pray Thee, how to be true friends on earth. We ask it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUR BIBLE.

"I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto them, God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in the book."—Rev. 22:17-21.

We find a great many people these days who like to make their own Bible. In their supreme conceit, through a kind of liberalism, they think they can put their own interpretation on the Word of God. They think that they are able to fashion their own ideals and that they can purify the human race. The thought is presumption and blasphemy. God's Word is complete. He has set His seal upon it. It is finished. All we need know is its meaning in our lives.

Prayer.—Our Father, make Thy Word a lamp to our feet and a light to our pathway. As it furnishes all our needs, teach us how to find that need. Break unto us its comforts, its direction and its inspiration. In Jesus's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE ART OF KEEPING YOUNG.

"And David longed and said, O that one would give me water to drink of the well of Bethelhem, which is by the gate."—II Sam. 23:13-17.

How to keep young. This is not a lecture on physical hygiene. You have that. We all are guilty of abusing our bodies in a way that shortens our life span. But this is a lecture on the life of one who did not forget the pure and the beautiful. His mind went back to his boyhood days and the hallowed places thereof, to the old spring by the gate, and there his soul drank and was refreshed.

There is a fountain at the gate of mother's love at the gate of our lives. There is a fountain at the gate of our souls where God has given us innocence and purity, happiness and contentment. It is sin that ages us, perhaps as much as improper eating and living. There is perpetual freshness and springtime in Christ. "The art of keeping young is the art of being a Christian."

Prayer.—O Lord, our God, flood our lives with Thy perennial youthfulness. We would hunger for the good, true and the beautiful. Be Thou within us a well of water, springing up into eternal life. In Jesus's name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"Ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood... a people for God's own possession, that he may show forth the excellencies of him who called you out of darkness into the marvelous light."—I Peter 2:1-10.

Life is not to get riches, or fame, or power. The purpose of our living is not for comfort and to have a good time. Although we believe that God wishes us to be as comfortable as possible and to enjoy ourselves. The purpose is not even to build a noble character and win eternal life. These things are all self-centered, and the purpose of life is not conceived to be for ourselves.

What do we live for? To show forth the excellence of God; to honor God in the world. This is stated in Matt. 5:1, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."

To shift our aims in life from ourselves to excellencies in God is nothing short of a miracle, yet a miracle that is wrought when Christ comes in and lives in the home inside of me.

Paryer.—O Lord, Thou dost honor those who honor Thee. Help us to forget ourselves and live unto Thee showing forth Thy excellencies unto others. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHEATING ONE'S SELF.

"Every way of a man is right in his own eyes, but the Lord weigheth the hearts."—Prov. 21:1-8.

It seems to be human nature to think that we are right. We listen to sermons and wonder why the other fellow doesn't do better than that. We listen to singers and criticise them up and down. We observe doings of others and berate their actions. It is so easy to criticise others. We seldom criticise ourselves even when we think we are. A proof of this is in the way we resent criticism from others. Our way is right in our own eyes.

Emerson says, "Every heart vibrates to that iron string." Suppose our hearts vibrated reversely. If it were a distrust in ourselves and a trust in God, it would not be an "iron string," but a golden string, and the vibration would be music unto eternity.

Prayer.—O Lord, weigh our hearts and see if Thou dost find wrong in us. Judge our paths and help us walk straight. Guide us and lead us in the way everlasting. Amen.

SATURDAY.

ABSORBED IN DYING.

"Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead."—Matt. 8:22.

These words sound harsh. But they came from the lips of the Master and the Master is loving and kind. His heart abounds with infinite love. We must find the explanation of His words not in how they sound to us but in the love of His heart. This explanation is found in the first two words of the text, "Follow me." To follow Him perfectly means to push everything else in the background. Even the most overwhelming events of life may be subordinated to His way. We are prone to think too much about superficial things.

Prayer.—Our Father, who art all in all to us, help us to give Thee such a place in our hearts and lives that life unto eternity will be our vision, and there will be no death in our life. Amen.

SUNDAY.

ESSENTIAL FAITH.

"Without faith it is impossible to please him."—Heb. 11:6.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A SUN-CROWNED LIFE.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"And as he passed over Penuel the sun rose upon him,"—
Gen. 32:31.

Jacob needed to have his life crowned with the sunlight of God's love and blessing, just as you and I need that our lives should be so crowned. It has been said by someone that Jacob was the worst and best man in the Old Testament. I do not think so. But surely Jacob did have his faults, and he did have his virtues. Jacob and Esau were twins. Esau was known as the first born and therefore the father's favorite. To him belonged the birthright. Jacob with the help of his mother outwitted Esau and fooled his father, and received against his father's wishes the birthright. He fled from the wrath of Esau, for he was guilty of fraud.

On his journey from home he dreamed of God. He perhaps dreamed of him whom he felt he had forsaken in his fraudulent act. He dreamed he saw God, and this was perhaps his desire. He had been born in line of those who loved and served God, and in his way he had been taught to walk. His burdened conscience increased his loneliness, and he was so surprised at his most beautiful dream that he set up an altar to God in thanksgiving, and declared that he had slept in the gateway of heaven! During his following twenty years of employment with Laban his kinsman in the land of Haran he was tried quite bitterly, and found his trickery failing him just about as often as it won for him.

Twenty years of his faithful old father's prayers and blessing, and the blessing of the birthright, and of his own hard work had won for him a fortune and a goodly family. He was proud of his prowess, and desired to return to his native land to present his good fortunes. But there was Esau. The head of a great tribe was waiting for him with taut bows and sharpened arrows. Fear filled his soul. Back to God he went. Back to the God of his grandfather Abraham, to the God of his father Isaac, back to the God of his childhood and youth, to the God of mercy, and love, and forgiveness. What a night he spent, not sleeping as formerly in the gateway of heaven, but wrestling in prayer with one of its personages. How our homes would be changed, our own families blessed, and our community re-made if there were more of this turning back to the God of our fathers, and to the teachings of our childhood. Loneliness, fear, cowardice, and sin were all swept away in a long night's wrestle with the angel of the Lord. Give us a people who know how to turn to God, a people who know how to pray. Do you fear, or feel the blight of sin? Do you lack courage to meet the world face to face? Are your burdens too heavy to bear? Prayer has a peace which the world cannot give, a power which the hauds of men cannot stay.

"Let me go, the day breaketh," said the angel. Folks will see you wrestling in prayer, they will know of your humbled heart. Up, begone in your own strength the day's struggles call you. But not so, Jacob would not let go of the angel. He was going to "take time to be holy." "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me." A few days ago I attended one of the most successful of all our conferences and meetings,—the Woman's Missionary Conference of Eastern Virginia. They began their day with a devotional service around the theme of "Time." To each of us there are twenty-four hours in a day, they said, and asked the question—What are you doing with your time?—and they pled that people should take time to be holy. One of their special pieces of music had the refrain, "Have you prayed until the answer came?" That is what Jacob did.

"And Jacob called the name of the place (Face of God), Penuel, for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved." It means something to really pray, to come into God's presence in the act of prayer. How I wish we could bring that to pass for our congregation every time we come here to worship. There is salvation in that: "I have seen God face to face, and my life is saved." It is the next verse that makes the text for our thought which I wish to leave with you: "And as he passed over Penuel the sun rose upon him," the sun-crowned life!

You will be ready for the day if you meet God first. You will be ready for a sun-crowned life if you bring it to God in prayer. You will be a good way on life's successful journey if you have respect unto the promises of God. After all that was the secret of Jacob's new name. God had blessed his grandfather Abraham, promising him blessings beyond all to compare, and these blessings were to be handed down through his generations. That was the birthright. Jacob had been taught from childhood that God had given special promises unto their family for keeping. Jacob had grown to see that Esau was likely to overlook the value of those promises. Esau, the short-sighted, thought of today, and the gratifying of today's desires only. Jacob thought of generations unborn. Esau thought of self first, Jacob thought of God's gifts and the custody of the same. Esau was ready to do today's task if it satisfied his selfish desires, Jacob was anxious to dream tomorrow's dreams whomever they should bless.

Are you making good use of your birthright to a noble life? In the days when Jacob so eagerly sought the birthright it meant the opportunity to serve all the other members of his household and tribe as high priest. That meant that whoever had that distinction was the ladder upon which the desires and needs of the people might mount upward to God, and likewise the ladder upon which the blessings of God might come down upon the people. The little boy that lived in Isaac's home held that hope in his heart. When he grew to manhood he sought it, and used deception as a part of his method of gaining it. We cannot condone that. But it was noble to hope for great things of his life! It was noble according to Paul to "covet earnestly the best gifts." That is a worthy coveteousness.

Jacob must have been pretty well undone that first night out as he fled from home, and felt that his dream had vanished, and that his hope was gone. He tried in his own wisdom and strength. God gave him a beautiful dream that night, and he saw the ladder again. For twenty years he worked with that dream unfulfilled,—the birthright held in obedience. He had prospered in this world's goods, but that is so fleeting. One arrow from Esau's bow could bring all that down in death like a house of cards. Too many men have staked all on material blessings and lost. Jacob became aware of that fact. He wrestled all night with God in prayer. And became a changed man, and instead of being a mere shepherd prince of the pasture lands of Palestine he became a prince of God,—Israel,—and a blessing for all

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The writer has two little boys in his home, twelve and fourteen years of age. One day last week was rainy and disagreeable, I asked the younger boy if he would build a fire in the living room in the afternoon to dry the dampness out so it would be comfortable that evening. When I reached home the fire was burning and the room was warm. This little fellow came in and said that building the fire for me was his good deed for the day—"his good deed for the day." It put me to thinking. A good deed for the day! What if everybody would try to do just one good deed each day? That would be 365 good deeds each year to make somebody happier, to lighten somebody's burden. Perhaps heal a heart that is crushed and broken or carry a little cheer to someone who is downcast and blue—So many things we can do, if nothing more than to speak a kind word, or give a word of cheer, or write a letter to someone shut in and let them know that you are thinking of them. A bunch of flowers to the sick to make them think that they are not forgotten.

So many little things all of us can do for a good deed for the day. But how many of us in this busy life even think of a good deed for the day?

When the day has come to a close and the evening shadows are gathering thick and fast, we can count our blessings one by one. We realize that the Lord has given us health, food, raiment. He has given us a home and world for us to live in. He has been good to us—But think back over the day and ask yourself the question, "What good deed for the day?"

Thanksgiving will soon be here. Nearly one hundred children in the Christian Orphanage are dependent upon you for food, clothes and care. Ask yourself this question: "What have I contributed this year to help them?" If you want to do a real good deed, begin now to lay aside something to swell the Thanksgiving Offering in your Sunday school and church. And when you make your offering, let that be your good deed for today. CHAS. D. JOHNSTON.

In Memoriam

ATKINSON.

On Mouday night, September 28th, Mrs. Alie McC. Atkinson, relict of the late George Washington Atkinson, quietly laid down the tasks of time and took up the delights of eternity. Two days later, Wednesday, P. M., September 30th, Rev. Carl Hermon Voss, pastor of United Church, Raleigh, and Rev. J. Lee Johnson, pastor of Catawba Springs and other churches, conducted the funeral at the home in Wake County, a few miles out from Raleigh from which the interment was made in the family burying ground, close by, amid banks of fragrant flowers and with every other token of esteem and devotion. The choir from the United Church, Raleigh, furnished the music, appropriate, comforting and sustaining. Her only son, by her first husband, my brother Charles H. Stephenson, Raleigh, North Carolina, survives and, two daughters, Mrs. Frank Smith of Wake County, and Mrs. D. I. Stephenson, with whom the deceased made her home. A brother and a sister, also many relatives, who will cherish with sacred joy the memory of this woman survive her. She was blessed with 86 years of an earthly pilgrimage, which by her graces, turned into manifold blessings to a host of others.

It is proverbial that stepmothers do not fit in, and add little, if any, to the peace and satisfaction of a home. This line is written to declare that this proverb is refuted in this instance. This good woman was my stepmother, and in the light of experiences and memories, which I now cherish, I do not see how a real mother could have been more considerate, loving, helpful, and compassionate than was this stepmother. With two children of her own, as a widow, she came into a family of eight, in marrying my father. Her good sense in directing the affairs of that household, her strong and willing hand in turning to every need of the house, her balanced judgment in dealing with situations, and her great heart of love for her adopted ones, as one with her very own. Indeed she brought balance, poise, and Christian graces to bear in governing well that house. We came to respect her, to admire and then to love and revere her, as good counselor and as a real mother. She sought with all her skill to fill well the delicate task to which she had been led by devotion of her heart.

I pay my respect to stepmother and in her death I have lost one who loved me as she did her own, and who made contributions to my life for no words of gratitude are equal.

I shall cherish her memory as that of a capable, competent, consecrated mother and Christian woman. She lived to a ripe age and with the passing years her soul became enriched more and more with spiritual graces. She sought and found counsel and comfort in reading, diligently, her Bible and her "Christian Sun," particularly its sermons and its Family Altar page and those contributions each week which were fraught with spiritual truth and comfort. She filled the place of mother and of grandmother as few, indeed, can fill it, because she sought first, the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and then she found these other needy things were added unto her. God bless her sacred memory and rest her noble soul.

J. O. ATKINSON.

WEBB.

Whereas, Almighty God in His wise Providence has called from our midst to the life beyond, Brother Frank M. Webb, on July 10, 1936, who was a member of the First Congregational-Christian Church and Superintendent of the Sunday-School for a number of years.

In his going the First Congregational-Christian Church of Richmond, Virginia, has lost a faithful and beloved member.

We realize that we are bereft indeed, for he was a loyal Christian, a loving father and a faithful friend, ever ready to lend a helping hand. Our loss is his gain, however, and we feel that he is peacefully resting in the sunlight of God's eternal love.

Be it resolved:

1. That we hold in loving remembrance his faithfulness as a friend to all, and that we pattern our lives after the goodness and brightness of his life in such a way that our lives may reflect the same Christian sunshine as did his. He was a Deacon of this Church and loved and respected by all that knew him.

2. That we extend to his family our deepest sympathy and love, realizing that they have lost a faithful, loving husband, and father, and the Church a loyal member.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" and one spread upon our records.

J. T. KERNODLE,
J. H. NEWMAN,
CHAS. E. SAVEDGE,
Committee.

KERNODLE.

Whereas, Almighty God in His wise Providence sent his death angels and claimed the spirit of our beloved Brother Peter Jefferson Kernodle, on September 12, 1936, who was Senior Deacon of the First Congregational-Christian Church, and also, a charter member of the Church.

That while we just cannot understand this act of Divine Providence in removing from us one who has done so great and badly needed work in the Christian Church, may we whose hearts are bleeding lift the hand of faith and feel for the Master's hand and walk with Him 'till we do understand.

He was a great lover of his church and was always present until feeble health did come in and keep him from attending the services, but his desires and wishes were always there.

Be it resolved:

1. That we express our great appreciation for his blameless life and character, his self-sacrificing service, unflinching devotion to duty, his Christian stewardship, and loyalty to the Kingdom of God.

2. That we recognize that his was a life of high ideals, great faith, optimistic spirit, loving friendship, wise counsel, trustworthy judgment, childlike tenderness, Christ-like spirit which won the confidence and appreciation of the poor and rich and made for him a trusted friend of all who knew him.

3. That we hold in loving remembrance his faithfulness as a friend to all, and that we pattern our lives after the goodness and brightness of his life in such a way that our lives reflect the same Christian sunshine as did his. He was loved and respected by all that knew him.

4. That we extend to his bereaved family our deep and abiding sympathy in this hour of gloom and sorrow and commend them to the loving care and comfort of the Heavenly Father who can all our sorrows heal. He leaves to mourn their loss, his wife and one son, John T. Kernodle.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, a copy sent to his family and one to be spread on the Church record.

sions, giving to charity, and leading an upright life may be all done by a godless person, though it may be hard to conceive that they would. Unless they who come to Him with these things believe that He is and that He is the rewarder of them that seek Him, His cause has not been served in the heart. The plea of the Gospel through the Lord Jesus Christ, is "Son, give me thy heart." It is not "give," and "do," etc...but it is "(You) follow me." It is the life He wants.

Prayer.—O God, help Thou our unbelief. Establish faith in us. May it abide forever. And may it ever increase unto Thy glory. Amen.

time to come. A man may gain without God and lose all, "for what shall it profit a man if he should gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Penuel was the point of greatness for Jacob. "And as he passed by Penuel the sun rose upon him!" From then on, his was a sun-crowned life! Have you a Penuel,—a place where you meet 'God face to face'? It is the secret of a sun-crowned life.

The Church and The Individual

As a result of world-wide economic changes during the past few years, millions are thinking back and thinking of going back somewhere, to something, while other millions who have borne heavier loads of economic and social changes are looking forward hopefully. To most of us it is "the land of beginning again."

As a nation we are turning from insecurity to security, from risk to reason, and from the fancy to the fundamentals. We have learned that riches have wings, that possessions vanish, and that only heart and soul when anchored to life's fundamental principles and imbedded in Christian character sustain us in the hour of adversity.

Whether our aim be to go backward or forward, we need to return to and cultivate Christian faith and devotion—two unfailing lights of the heart that have always guided and will continue to direct individuals to a happier, more contented life, and nations to a solid foundation of Christian civilization.

The best and safest avenue through which to return to this faith and devotion is the Church—an institution forsaken or neglected by millions, obviously leading to moral disintegration.

Our places of worship cannot be kept filled by drives and rallies. These claim attention for a period of short duration. The results of such efforts soon vanish. The reason: We fail to capture the heart and cultivate the soul.

All too long we have been content to sing, "Bring them in," without giving sufficient thought to keeping them in or to keeping ourselves in. To the other fellow only, not to ourselves, have we been a missionary.

We need to desist from stressing the claim that the Church loses members, for while it does, the real difficulty is that members lose the Church. They can find the Church easier than the Church can find them; and no man loses the Church whose thoughts are of the Church. C. B. R.

“Let Us Be Better Men”

Let us be better men!
Let us find things to do
Saner and sweeter than any yet,
Higher and nobler and true.

Let us be better men!
Let us begin again,
Trying all over the best we know
To climb and develop and grow.

Let us be better men!
Whether with pick or pen,
The labor we do is a work worth while
If our hearts are clean and our spirits smile,
And out of the ruck and rust and stain
We make some growth and we mark some gain.

Let us be better men!
In a world that needs so much—
The loftier spirit's touch
Let us grow upward toward the light
Wedded to “wanting to do the right,”
Rather than wedded to human might.”

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. N. G. Newman, Dr. John G. Truitt and others will share in the installation of Rev. Jesse H. Dollar at the Newport News Church next Sunday afternoon.

Mr. M. B. Madison route 4, Reidsville, N. C., writes that Happy Home Church is in need of a pastor for the coming year. He will be glad to correspond with any good man who wishes to secure work.

A new subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the present time will be able to get the reports on conferences which are being held at this season. Why not secure new subscribers at once?

The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN had a delightful visit in Winchester, Virginia, last Saturday and Sunday and was pleased to share in the installation service of Rev. R. A. Whitten as pastor of the Winchester and Timber Ridge churches. Prospects seem to be good for the progress of those churches.

Rev. George A. Pearce of Wakefield, Va., writes as follows: We are closing our second year of very successful ministry in the Wakefield charge. We have made many friends whom we shall miss very much. But we feel that it is the will of our Lord that we seek work elsewhere, so our work will close here with the close of this conference year. We shall be very glad to correspond with any church or group of churches that happen to be on the lookout for a pastor.

On Wednesday evening of last week Rev. and Mrs. Joe French held open house for their members at Ocean View, Virginia. They had just moved into their new home at 16 Elnora Street, and quite a number of the Ocean View members and their friends came in during the evening. Games were played and Mrs. French served refreshments. The pastor and his good wife seemed to have lost nothing in the deal because the members left a considerable amount of food in what is called a pounding. Congratulations to all concerned.

THE FRUITS OF REPEAL.

Mrs. E. Stanley Jones, upon returning from the foreign mission field, experienced these impressions, says an exchange:

Finding ourselves in a city where we had to go hungry because we could discover no place to eat which did not also sell beer.

Seeing miles of glaring advertising imploring us to drink, smoke or visit road houses.

Seeing men, women and girls, smoking, drinking, carousing in saloons and at cocktail bars.

Hearing oaths and vulgar expressions on the lips of high school and college girls of good families.

Finding so many churches closed on Sabbath evenings, but motion picture places open wide and busy.

Inability to find a mid-week prayer meeting, but rather forums, dramas, scouting, dancing, bridge in church parlors.

Finding churches being sold for debt, benevolent budgets cut, Christian work of all kinds due because of lack of funds, people unable to work and losing jobs, but at the same time, apparently, having plenty of money for sport, motor cars, luxuries and indulgences.

Finding the nastiness of the modern literature that was sampled.

Finding America running more and more to nudity, license and pagan paintings, while heathen people, when converted, tend to stop such practices and move toward modesty, chastity and restraint.

Finding crooning, which seemed at first like a sudden sickness, was really a recognized form of public entertainment.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

SCHEDULE OF MEETINGS IN THE SOUTHEAST, FALL OF 1936.

The effort is made to bring together all regularly scheduled Conferences, Conventions, Associations, etc., in both the white and the Negro churches of this area, the purpose being to afford superintendents, secretaries and others interested a convenient list for reference in arranging speaking itineraries, etc. It is not complete, as the dates of the Afro-Christian Conferences are not yet available. ### THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

AUTUMN—ITS MESSAGE TO GOD.

To those who look and listen, the various seasons of the year have their message for the human heart. Autumn speaks very definitely its message of God to peoples of the earth.

A view from any mountain top discloses a various variety of colors with which Nature clothes the hills. Even in the valley or down by the seaside one can see the gorgeous robes with which Nature wraps Mother Earth. Autumn speaks of beauty and tells us that God loves the beautiful. This beauty is the outgrowth of color and harmony. The many colors of earth's clothing never clash. There is excellent harmony which certainly indicates that God expects harmony in human life and in social relations.

Some of us may be too poor to purchase a painting by a master artist, but everyone can look up to the sky or out across the earth and see a beauty which no artist has been able to duplicate. This is God's gift to his children, and it is shared by all whose eyes are able to detect the beauty with which God has decked the earth.

Another message of the Autumn is that of abundance. Why so many flowers or so many colors or leaves or seeds or any other of the things which Nature produces? God's hand is lavish. He pours out His gifts in abundance. This would lead us to believe that God expects generosity on the part of the people of the earth. He loves a cheerful (free) giver because he gives freely himself.

A third message of Autumn is one of rest. The springtime of growth and the summer of development are gone, the harvest is gathered, the leaves fall, trees stand barren, and exposed to the weather. They are ready for the storms. They rest from their labors. So do men when their day is done and they come to the eventide. The Master said to His friends, "Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile" and to the weary workers, "Come unto me... and I will give you rest." As Nature wraps its white blanket over the earth at the season of rest so the good Master may wrap His robe of righteousness and love about those who have learned the way and have done service when the autumn of life comes. They can lie down in peace fearing no harm.

The Autumn speaks its message of God and lets those who have eyes to see and ears to hear, understand what God says for He speaks like a loving father to the heart of those who are His.

NEW PLANS.

When the annual report is made to conference and the figures are all in for the past year, it is time to begin for the coming year. Perhaps there have been mistakes, some things may have been left out, while others less significant have crept into the program of the Church. The ministers and his officials should look back over the years of work carefully and in the light of that plan definitely for the future.

It is certainly possible for us to do a higher grade of work than we have been doing. Figures given in the report of the Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association, given by Rev. J. F. Morgan elsewhere in this paper, indicate that in the peak of financial success in this country, the contributions to this organization decreased. A letter from denominational headquarters says that contributions for missions during the recent months have been on the down grade.

It is certainly time for us to change this situation. Indications are that prosperity is returning. It is a grave question as to whether generosity is coming with it. The world awaits the liberality of the Christian people and the cooperative work which they can do when they are generous.

COMPLETE IN GOODNESS.

By H. H. SMITH.

Weymouth's translation of the closing verses of the fifth chapter of Matthew reads: "You have heard that it was said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy. But I command you all, love your enemies, and pray for your persecutors; that so you may become true sons of your Father in Heaven; for He causes His sun to rise on the wicked as well as the good, and sends rain upon those who do right and those who do wrong. For if you love only those who love you, what reward have you earned? Do not even the tax-gatherers do that? And if you salute only your relatives, what praise is due to you? Do not even the Gentiles do the same? You, however, are to be complete in goodness, even as your Heavenly Father is complete."

The usual rendering, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," has been a stumbling-block to many. Weymouth makes it read: "You are to be complete in goodness, even as your Heavenly Father is complete." Jesus was trying to teach His followers that, as God the Father deals with all according to the principle of "grace and good-will," they should show the same spirit in all their intercourse with each other. It is not enough to help the worthy and the deserving. To be true children of God we must be like our Father, whose love reaches out to all who are in need of His grace and help, however undeserving they may be. To be complete in goodness, as the phrase is used here, means to be kind, sympathetic, and generous toward everyone—and that without measure.

Is not this the need of the world today? The population of the world is around two billion. Christians number upward of 500,000,000, or about one-fourth of the population of the earth. Does any one believe for a moment that, if these millions of professing Christians had always acted toward their fellow-men according to the principle of "grace and good-will," that the world would be in the condition it is today? President Mackay, of Princeton Theological Seminary, says that much of the distress of the world today has been brought about by "un-Christian economic policies, un-Christian religious policies, un-Christian international policies."

Jesus loved even the most repulsive human beings, because He knew the worth of the human soul; but the average Christian finds it hard to love the unlovely and the unattractive. Our un-Christian-likeness is the cause of our failure here. If we were "complete in goodness,"—that is if we were always controlled by the spirit of Christ, we should realize the worth of every soul, and take delight in ministering to all mankind. Dr. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelist, once said that he regarded Samuel H. Hadley as one of the most Christ-like men he had ever known. Hadley was a reclaimed drunkard. There was a time when he regarded a tramp with disgust,—as only a companion in his misery. But when he became converted and got the Christian view of the worth of a soul, he labored day and night at the Water Street Mission in behalf of outcasts and vagabonds. When he lay on his deathbed, he seemed to be struggling to speak; and as those about him drew near, they heard him whisper with deep feeling, "Oh, who will care for my poor bums now?"

Even among the nations considered the most Christian in spirit there is much deep-rooted prejudice, class-hatred and race-hatred. During the last century an Irish immigrant entered this country and was employed as a hod-carrier. He became a Christian, an active church-worker, a preacher, and finally a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Recalling the epithets he had heard hurled at foreigners in scorn, he wrote these lines:

Dago, Sheeny, and Chink,
Greaser, Nigger, and Jap;
The Devil invented these terms, I think,
To hurl at each hopeful chap
Who comes so far from over the foam
To this land of his heart's desire,
To rear his blood, to build his home,
And to kindle his hearthstone fire,
While the eyes with joy are blurred,
Lo, we make the strong man sink
And stab the soul with the hateful word,
Dago, Sheeny, and Chink.

Dago, Sheeny, and Chink,
These are the vipers that swarm
Up from the edge of perdition's brink,
To hurt and dishearten and harm;
O, shame when their Roman forbears walked
Where the first of the Caesars trod;
O, shame when their Hebrew fathers talked
With Moses and he with God.
These swartly sons of Japhet and Shem
Gave the goblet of life's sweet drink
To the thirsty world which now gives them
Dago, Sheeny, and Chink.

Dago, Sheeny, and Chink,
Greaser, Nigger, and Jap,
From none of these did Jehovah shrink,
He lifted them all to His lap;
And the Christ in His kingly grace,
When their sad sob he hears,
Puts His tender embrace around the race
As He kisses away its tears,
Saying, O, least of these, I link
Thee to me for whatever may hap,
Dago, Sheeny, and Chink,
Greaser, Nigger, and Jap.

BISHOP McINTYRE.

In a word, here is our great need, to become true children of the Father. True children of God are strangers to class prejudice and race-hatred. And the indwelling Christ makes us true children of God. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God."

BALANCING ANOTHER BUDGET.

We hear much these days about balancing the national budget. Important as that may seem, it is well that we take stock concerning another budget which many of us never balance—the budget of human kindness.

We rise early, work hard and late, and the next day go over the same routine. This is life; this is reality. Many are the opportunities from sun to sun we have to say something or do something to make another's drudgery or routine more than commonplace. It is these little opportunities we neglect that keep our budget of human kindness, of brotherly service, unbalanced.

More of us are good at heart than bad. Even in our missteps we mean to do well. It is often in our hurry and worry that we make our mistakes, or add to our neglects.

Some of the dearest and most cherished things in life are without a price tag. They are, in the language of an old poem:

"Little deeds of kindness,
Little words of love,
Make the earth an Eden,
Like the Heaven above."

Take an inventory, not of the deeds you have done and the kind words you have spoken, for they are never too many, but of the deeds you could have done and the words you could have spoken. Look at the list and see if your budget of human kindness is in balance. And make not the mistake of comparing the little or much that you have done by what others have not done for you or for others, for to so do would be to breathe the spirit of selfishness—that demon which prevents so many of us from keeping our budget of human kindness in balance.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF UNION CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

By R. W. GLASSCOCK.

Union Christian Church of Halifax County, Virginia, was organized in the year 1830 by Rev. Lewis Craven, in the home of Paul Tuck. The first building was on a tract of land given by James Sanford, one mile west of Virgilina. This was logs with a shed on one side for colored people.

About the year 1860, this was replaced by a frame structure, which was torn down in 1900 and rebuilt on lots in Virgilina donated by the late W. M. Pannebaker. In 1919 sixteen lots were purchased and plans begun to construct a new building. On account of financial conditions following, this was postponed until 1927 when plans were drawn and work begun on this house of worship. The present building and land cost $13,000.00. The first service was held in this building on the 8th of April, 1928, and the note for a debt on the property was burned the second Sunday in February, 1936.

The following have served as pastors: Lewis Craven, J. T. Allen, B. M. Hopkins, Solomon Apple, J. W. Wellons, Cornelius Apple, Alfred Apple, W. S. Long, E. T. Isley, M. L. Hurlley, S. B. Klapp, T. W. Shroud, (2 pastorates) J. W. Holt, J. W. Patton, C. E. Newman, (2 pastorates), J. U. Newman, J. F. Morgan, and R. F. Brown.

There are no minutes preserved from the organization to 1876. From that time to the present, records have been fairly well preserved. We regret that the list of charter members has been lost, but we have a record of the organization with the basis of the establishment and early rules by which the church was governed. After the war several colored people remained as members. The last of these, Absalom Sanford, died in the spring of 1906.

The greatest meeting of the church was in the year 1869 under the pastorage of the late J. W. Wellons. There were a hundred conversions and 49 immersed at one baptizing.

In the year 1886 there were a little over 200 members. The present membership is nearly 400. The present pastor, our beloved C. E. Newman, has served this church for 29 years. The records give twelve names who have served as secretaries and seventeen as deacons.

The present board of deacons consists of W. D. Gregory, H. J. V. Forlines, R. S. Royster, T. H. Elliott, W. H. Hill, W. L. Gregory, and W. W. Tuck.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The churches of Suffolk and Nansemond County were fortunate in having the annual Training School in the Suffolk Christian Church during the past week. The teachers were: Rev. Carl R. Key, Dean; Rev. Edwin B. Flory of Dayton, Ohio, Mrs. Fred Bullock of Ohio, Miss Priscilla Chase of New York, Dr. N. G. Newman, Mrs. Carl R. Key and Mrs. John G. Truitt. Forty persons enrolled for the courses offered, and twenty-four secured certificates on Friday night at the close of the School.

On Wednesday Revs. E. B. Flory, John G. Truitt, O. D. Poythress and the writer decided to have a little recreation by fishing on Lake Princee. In the contest Bro. Flory and this amateur scored a victory over Dr. Truitt and the South Norfolk singer. Bro. Flory claimed to know nothing about catching fish, but promised to cut wood and make the fire if we would take him fishing. He actually caught as many fish as Dr. Truitt landed, but was too tired to live up to his promise to cut wood for the fry. But he knows how to eat fish and Virginia corn-bread, and kept the coffee boy busy. We caught enough fish to feed ten persons, and gathered up fragments enough to feed another. It was a glorious outing, and a season of good fellowship, for Bro. Flory has found several new stories—and now has another fish story.

But to return to the Training School. The effort to offer training to our Sunday School and church workers is not having the support which our people might give to such a work. The Suffolk-Nansemond School should have an annual enrollment of at least one hundred young people. Every Sunday-school teacher and officer should attend this school. There should be a fine group of our younger people preparing themselves for teaching in the future. Other churches are doing this type of work and many churches require all their teachers to prepare themselves. Our people should appreciate the opportunity and should patronize the school.

Our churches should be aroused to see their need of this type of work. Teaching a Sunday School class is not an easy task. It requires time and training. The time is given alike to everyone. The training must be done by personal application and study, or by learning from others who are trained in their respective fields. One of the catch phrases today is: "The pastor is the key-man." Perhaps this is true. But the "key" is useless unless the "lock" is responsive. The pastor is blamed for all the failures in his church. He is powerless unless the layman will respond to his appeals and cooperate with his leadership. Some people regard the pastor as a servant, or "handy-man," who is to do "the chores" of the church. He is not a "boss." Neither should the layman aspire or assume to be "bosses" in their church. There is a need for trained leadership among the laymen. And these church schools for training meet the requirements as far as they go.

Attention is called to this matter in the hope that our various churches will respond to the appeal of the ministers for cooperation in trying to develop our training schools and train workers for the future. Our Sunday schools must face the necessity of planning a worth while program for the youth of tomorrow. This cannot be done without trained workers. Consecration is a vital factor. But it is not every thing. Knowledge of the Bible and familiarity with the best methods of teaching will help the situation.

THE MINISTERS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The program of the church requires a minister—one who is a Christian, consecrated and set apart for the ministry of holy things. God has called some to be his ministers, endowed them with special gifts, and sent them forth to bear the good news of the gospel. They are to go forth teaching and healing in His name. They are to go without script or purse. He has declared the laborer to be worthy of His hire.

The import of the gospel and the high calling of the ministry is that such a holy task is of such importance as to require all of a man's affection, time, strength, and energy. He who represents Christ in a civilization such as ours is, who preaches the gospel in a day like this, hasn't time to till the soil, to buy and sell, or otherwise seek to accumulate material holding. Jesus taught Peter and John that winning men was of far more importance than catching fish. He has taught us all that treasures on earth are far less enduring than treasures in Heaven.

The man who is truly called of God has a passion for righteousness. By this passion, he is swept on in his pursuit for souls and will not allow himself to be turned aside by the allurements of the world. God has given to our church some choice souls for the ministry of the gospel. Our church has had a great opportunity to make for itself a great ministry.

Some weeks ago I was present for a dedicatory service. Dr. N. G. Newman was the guest preacher. He said to his audience, "You have the opportunity of helping me preach a great sermon or you have the opportunity of helping me to fail. I am wondering which you will do." The church does have a responsibility to its ministers. We of the Christian church have a responsibility to the ministry of our church. The average minister among us is sincere and wants to put himself and all that he has on the altar for the service of the church and the coming of the kingdom; but if the generosity of the church is not sufficient to provide for him and his family the necessities of life, he is compelled to divide his time and dissipates his energies that there may be comfort and a sufficiency in his own home. When the church fails in its support, the minister is necessarily driven in part from his holy task. There may be some among us who congratulate themselves that they have been able to preach the word to their people and by the proper exercise of the abilities that God has given them, have been able to earn a support for themselves and have not been and are not now dependent on the churches for their support. These ministers have accomplished much, but how much more could they have accomplished for the church and for the kingdom had they used the moments, the ability, and the energy by which they have accumulated materials holdings for the accumulation of spiritual power. When we think about crops, investments, interest, and earnings, we are not thinking about the message of God or the salvation of the world. God has given to us one life, one strength, many desires, all of which He has meant to commandeer for the one purpose of saving the world when He calls that life into the Christian Ministry.

It is our Church's responsibility not only to provide for the immediate requirements of its ministry but

For the Children

Do you like to know the meaning of names? I do. Some time we may talk about the meaning of names, your name and mine.

But today, I am thinking of the meaning of the name of a city. It is the name of a city which you have heard all your life, the city of Jerusalem. The name means "City of Peace." Is that not a lovely name?

Strange to say, this city has never been a city of peace. It has seen, some of the hardest fighting, and most terrible battles of any city in the world. The Prince of Peace, Jesus, Himself, came to it for the last time about thirty-five years before it was entirely destroyed in a most terrible battle, which ended a siege that had lasted for three years.

Would you not like to see the City where Jesus lived and walked? It has a high wall all around it, and in the wall are many gates. One of these is called the Damascus Gate, because it opens on the road which leads to the city of Damascus. This gate is really quite new, only three hundred years old, but long before this gate was built another gate stood in the old wall which used to be in the same place as the present wall. Perhaps it was through this very gate Saul of Tarsus started on his way to Damascus to persecute the followers of Christ. If you would like to read this story, you will find it in Acts 9:1-4.

Long, long before the days of Saul of Tarsus, long before the time of Jesus, even, there was a city on these two hills. If you extend your thumb and first finger of your left hand, you will have a very tiny map of the land on which the city was built. The thumb represents the hill on which the "City of David" was built. At first this was only a fortress, and occupied a piece of ground which might be represented by your thumb nail. All around were deep valleys, and the city was so well fortified that it was said the blind and the lame could keep it safely. But Joab, the general of David's army found a very tiny pathway up the steep sides of the deep ravine, a place where water had run down. Up this he clambered with his men and captured the city for King David. Little by little the city grew, until the longer hill, represented by your first finger, was occupied as well. Then on the short hill was built a beautiful temple, built first by King Solomon with money and supplies his father, David, had gathered. When this temple was destroyed, it was rebuilt by a prince named Zerubbabel, and when Jesus came, this second temple was being rebuilt by King Herod: The Jews would not let him tear down the old temple, and rebuild all at once, so since he was building a larger temple, he built a piece at a time over the smaller, old temple, afterwards tearing out the old part. It had been building for forty-six years when Jesus came.

There are hills all around Jerusalem, and the view is beautiful, especially from the North. Sometimes, if you will take your Bibles, and look in the Psalms, you will be interested to find how many songs the people of the land wrote about the city of Jerusalem. Here is one lovely thing they liked to remember:

"As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever."

"Mount Zion" is another name for Jerusalem. Here are some of the songs about the City; Psalm 125, Psalm 126, Psalm 122, Psalm 133:3

MINISTERS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

to provide against physical and material needs as they advance toward the sunset of life. We have in our number, and may God bless them, those who have labored earnestly, unselfishly, and persistently, but who, today, are deprived of the privilege of preaching the gospel which would bring such joy to their hearts, because of physical disabilities. They have driven themselves into the thick of the fight with such strenuousness and exactions that the physical man has broken. Truly the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.

It is our church's responsibility to make ample provisions for such emergencies that might arise in the life and experience of its ministry. We may have failed in many things, but certainly we have not been diligent in this respect. It is sincerely and earnestly hoped that every local church will be impressed with its personal responsibility of doing its share for our aged and disabled ministers by contributing and designating what the different conferences have asked for the superannuation fund. Our churches should not only think of this responsibility but a great opportunity wherein they may express their appreciation to the ministry of our church, God's messengers to us, and gratitude for the holy privileges that have been theirs. I can think of but few things that are more important or that the churches should be more anxious to do than to provide for our ministers against the day of their possible need.

L. E. SMITH.

SHALL WE CONTINUE TO LIVE TOGETHER?

Apparently this is a burning question, clamoring to be solved in many a home of the present day. Let us analyze the situation. It is not confined to the marriage of a few years, but it is an all-important issue to those further advanced. Personally, we know of a couple, after forty years together, the husband told his wife one day that he desired his freedom. Much to her surprise, he told her that he no longer loved her. She granted him the request, and as soon as possible he married another. The wife felt heart-broken, but the children, established in their own homes, still gave her their loyal affection.

What shall be done when two people live in continual friction or some other peculiar situation causes them to drift apart? In every marriage there are danger signals flashing along the way that have never been noted at the time. Sometimes a little rift appears in the early part of married life. Something had been said or done by one or the other, causing a lack of confidence. In the future, why not try the plan of talking over the difficulty the very day this occurs? Then decide upon some plan of action that will prevent the annoyance being repeated. When such a course is designated, never allude to it again. Drop it entirely from your thought as well as action. Try to maintain a reasonable attitude toward each other. Learn to talk over your problems together without being angry. Neither must always expect to have his own way.

Also remember we often desire to get rid of any condition by departing from it when perhaps another situation would be even worse. Try and view ordinary differences of opinion with real charity and plenty of humor. The complete marriage is true understanding of the constant affection of each that is the foundation of all security. Remember, there is some difficulty in every condition that we do not understand until we occupy the very place we envy.

NEW TESTAMENT EXPERIENCE ON THE FOREIGN FIELD.

Missionaries and native Christian workers frequently experience in foreign lands conditions similar to those met by Christians of the first century.

The following are extracts from a letter from Pastor Li Teh-Chao, from far over in the northeastern reaches of Manchuria. Pastor Li is a son of old Pastor Li of Pindu, Shantung, famous for his endeavors for the saving of his people, the effectiveness of his work and the number of converts baptized by him.

"For a long time," Pastor Li writes, "I have wanted to visit a town, the name of which is Wine Distillery, to preach the gospel to the people there, but if it wasn't bandits, some other hindrance arose. I decided that the floods greatly reduced danger from bandits so determined to go during the recent floods.

"Leaving the city gate, I had to go ten 'li' (nearly four miles) by boat over flooded fields. The boat could then go no farther so I walked a few 'li' in mud and water, holding my clothes above my head much of the way.

"My interest in the people was rewarded when I found that a woman who had been converted at Misham had led her husband to the Lord and has been praying that I come to teach him and their neighbors. Five others had definitely accepted Christ. The harvest was seen to be white and ready.

"But no sooner had we begun meeting came and said we could do no more than the head officer of that dispreaching nor hold religious meetings. He rebuked me severely. I made every apology and plea known to man, but he refused to yield. Then later he did give permission.

"We held some meetings in the home of Mrs. Chao. In her house was a heathen woman who had burnt incense for thirty years. Even when she had no money for food, she burnt incense to her heathen gods. I preached against this and held up Christ. She was converted, rejoicing in the Lord.

"On my return to Misham some people there were moved to repentance on hearing of the conversion of others where I had been. Still others were accepted for baptism and were immersed. A Japanese man who speaks the Christian language attended these meetings, was moved, and became a Christian. Koreans are also coming and are impressed.

"After the baptismal service the Lord's Supper was observed. We were in session from 9.00 A. M. until 3:30 P. M. without intermission. No one seemed to be especially tired. At the close of the meeting Chinese, Japanese and Koreans all contributed to the church.

"My heart rejoices in the Lord, and I praise Him that you can now make it possible for me to go to my old home down in Shantung to bring my family here. Unless something hinders, you may expect me at the Bible Conference in Harbin on my way home."

In closing Pastor Li tells of a fine young man in the church who desires to go to the theological seminary to prepare for the ministry, and hopes that we can help him some on his schooling. He has a good middle school education, also sufficient English to read Christian books, even English, and gives much promise. We rejoice that God is calling young men and women for the ministry, but we have little money to help in their preparation. Not until the Foreign Mission Board is out of debt can we expect all such needs to be met.

NORTH CAROLINA WOMAN'S CONFERENCE.

A splendid delegation of members and visitors gathered for the 24th annual session of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference at the First Christian Church, Durham, Tuesday, October 6, 1936, with the president of the conference, Mrs. Stanley Harrell, presiding, in her usual efficient manner.

The meeting was called to order promptly at 10 o'clock, and the president announced the theme for the day: "The Spirit of God in Human Experience."—Romans 13:10. During the day in each address, invocation, or devotional, the theme was vividly portrayed.

The eighteen ministers present were introduced and district superintendents made reports from the following districts: Halifax; Mrs. T. W. Chandler: Guilford; Mrs. A. B. McFarland: Alamance; Mrs. C. M. Cannon: Randolph; Mrs. R. E. Caviness:

Lee-Chatham-Moore; Mrs. R. M. Rothgeb; and Vance-Warren; Miss Margaret Alston. Departmental reports were made by Mrs. C. H. Rowland who spoke on Literature and Mrs. Stanley Harrell gave a splendid review of many of the missionary books and literature that could be had for the asking to be used in societies. Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, gave a most interesting and impressive address: "Take Time To Be Holy" which portrayed deep interest in her department of "Spiritual Life."

Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, gave an accurate treasurer's report and announced that twenty-one of the woman's societies had gone over the top with their financial goal, two of the young people, two Willing Workers, two Junior Willing Workers, two Cradle Rolls and seven new societies organized during the year.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, gave a most interesting address: "Twenty-five Years of Broadcasting" in which he brought to the memory of many present the organization of The Woman's Missionary Conference twenty-five years ago, naming those who were on the executive board at that time and stressed the point of celebrating the "Silver Anniversary" of our Woman's work year.

Mrs. Waldo Boon, Durham, gave a violin solo, "Lament," accompanied by Miss Mary Todd at the piano. Mrs. John G. Truitt, pleasantly remembered, as Miss Amelia Jones, gave a most inspiring address: "Sharing Christ With Others." The devotionals were conducted and were impressively given by Mrs. Robert Smith, formerly, Miss Lucile Mulholland. She was assisted in this by Miss Mary Todd, pianist, and Mrs. H. E. Myers, soloist.

At the noon hour lunch was served in the spacious dining room of the Duke Memorial Church near by.

The afternoon session included reports from the Cradle Roll, Mrs. B. M. Newman; Young People, Miss Mary Fix; Life Membership, Miss Margaret Alston; Council for Social Action, Miss Alice Holmes. Dr. Shelton Smith, Durham, gave the afternoon address and this was followed with the Recommendations and Courtesy Committees' reporting: Place of meeting next year, Raleigh.

Mrs. John R. Foster, reported the names as officers for the coming year. They were voted upon and elected as follows: Mrs. O. H. Paris, Greensboro, president; Miss Margaret Alston, 1st vice-president, Henderson; Mrs. Seth Vining, 2nd vice-president, Tryon; Mrs. H. D. Lambeth, secretary, Elon College; Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, treasurer, Raleigh. Superintendents: Spiritual Life, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington; Young People, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Greensboro; Cradle Roll, Mrs. M. W. Hook, Elon College; Literature, Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham.

The day was greatly enjoyed, and the Durham Society, as hostess, did all that could be done to make the day memorable.

REPORT OF THE CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Christian Missionary Association of Eastern Virginia began its work in 1892, under the auspices of the Southern Christian Convention. It remained a part of the Convention for seventeen years, contributing during that time $14,862, or an average of $874 per year. The smallest amount was the first year, $155; and the largest amount was in 1904, which was $1,767.

In 1909, the Association became an organization of the Eastern Virginia Conference and has met every year since. The contributions since it has been a part of this conference have been as follows: 1909, $1,025; 1910, $990; 1911, $885; 1912, 1,180; 1913, $1,250; 1914, $1,085; 1915, $1,144; 1916, $1,015; 1917, $1,501; 1918, $1,670; 1919, $1,343; 1920, $1,990; 1921, $2,195; 1922, $1,455; 1923, $1,450; 1924, $2,060; 1925, $2,065; 1926, $1,780; 1927, $1,810; 1928, $1,825; 1929, $1,815; 1930, $1,616; 1931, $1,140; 1932, $820; 1933, $900; 1934, $900; 1935, $900. The grand total since the Association has been a part of this Conference is $36,625, an average per year of about $1,060. The smallest amount raised during this period was in 1933, $820, and the largest was $2,195 in 1921.

This money has gone to the aid of quite a number of churches in their times of greatest need, and has made it possible for home missionaries to do numerous pieces of helpful work.

The record of the C. M. A. is sufficient for approval, and deserves to be supported by all who are interested in the continuance of this Home Missionary work in our Conference.

The next meeting of the Association will be at the Liberty Springs Church on December 8, 1936 at 10:30 A. M. It is hoped that a large attendance of members will be there, and that our offering will be much larger than it was last year.

Sincerely,
J. F. MORGAN.

PROGRAM MATERIALS FOR ARMISTICE.

By now many of you have already made your plans for a fitting means of commemorating Armistice Day on Sunday, November 8. There is so much material available on this topic, and young people everywhere seem so much concerned with the subject of war, that you may decide to continue this subject on November 15.

The Pilgrim Highroad for November contains some excellent worship programs on this subject, as well as suitable discussion material. Here you will find hymns, poems, litanies and prayers, which will be helpful in planning your own programs, if you do not care to use the printed program in its entirety.

The November Pilgrim Highroad also contains the play "Pawns," by Percival Wilde, in the form of a play-reading. It can be used as such without the payment of a royalty for its use. This is a very dramatic play of pheasants in Russia, who learn for the first time what war means.

Another suitable play is "The Terrible Meek" by Charles Rann Kennedy. This play is now out of print, but may be secured from many libraries. It is suggested that someone in the group read the play and give a synopsis of it, with the exception of the long speeches (one by the Mother and the other by the Soldier) which are effective even when read without other parts of the play.

For a responsive reading Ernest Crosby's poem, "The Dream of the Nations" can be used effectively, since it is arranged in suitable form. "Above the Battle" by Romain Rolland can also be used in this way. These may be found in "Readings from Great Authors" compiled by John Haynes Holmes and Associates or in some similar book, as well as from the published works of these authors.

The poets have expressed—from Bible times to the present—a Christian's views on war and peace much more effectively than we can. Some suitable for the "celebration" of Armistice are; "A New Earth," "Peace" and "Valley of Decision" by John Oxenham; "Ultimatum" by Thomas Curtis Clark; "The Prince of Peace" by Harry Emerson Fosdick; "The New Patriot" by Frederic Lawrence Knowles; "The Fatherland" by James Russell Lowell; "Brotherhood" by John Greenleaf Whittier; "How Shall We Honor Them?" by Edwin Markham; "Is It A Dream?" by G. A. Studdert-Kennedy.

The above may all be found in the volume "One Hundred Poems of Peace" compiled by Thomas Curtis Clark and Winfred Ernest Garrison. Only a few of the many suitable ones have been listed, but most of the above can be found in various anthologies in high school libraries and high school English books.

"The Unknown Soldier Speaks" by John Haynes Holmes is the play suggested by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill for presentation in connection with Armistice Day. It has been given at the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training, but if you have seen it once it will only serve as a reason for giving it. It may be ordered from the Methodist Publishing House, Fifth and Grace Streets, Richmond, Virginia, for fifteen cents.

It is our duty as Christian youth to have a program for Armistice that will serve as a means of awakening to those who seem indifferent to the horrors and atrocities of war and the false patriotism often connected with it. Make your program for that occasion one that will long be remembered.

AMERICA FIRST.

By BISHOP G. ASHTON OLDHAM.

Not merely in matters material, but in things of the spirit.

Not merely in science, inventions, motors, and skyscrapers, but also in ideals, principles, character.

Not merely in the calm assertion of rights, but in the glad assumption of duties.

Not flaunting her strength as a giant, but bending in helpfulness over a sick and wounded world like a Good Samaritan.

Not in splendid isolation, but in courageous cooperation.

Not in pride, arrogance, and disdain of other races and peoples, but in sympathy, love, and understanding.

Not in treading again the old, worn, bloody pathway which ends inevitably in chaos and disaster, but in blazing a new trail, along which please God, other nations will follow, into the new Jerusalem where wars shall be no more.

Some day some nation must take that path—unless we are to lapse once again into utter barbarism—and that honor I covet for my beloved America.

And so, in that spirit and with these hopes, I say with all my heart and soul, "America First."

(The above is suggested as a suitable creed to be read at an Armistice Day Commemoration service.)

ANOTHER WORLD WAR.

As the weeks pass, all Europe seems to be verging on another war. Spain is now the center of conflict, certain nations siding and others disagreeing on Spain's troubles. Hitler remains ambitious. Mussolini having conquered Ethiopia, is greedy for more territory. His success has given him new ambitions and renewed confidence. France is suspicious; so is England. Japan is making strides in war preparation, while China is alert to any aggression. Russia, with her teeming millions, is a land of confusion and unrest. How all this seething and surging for more territory and more power will ultimately end is only a guess. Apparently the conflicts between these nations cannot be settled around a conference table. The apparent failure of the League of Nations justifies this statement.

Our concern is what part the United States would play in another European conflict. That, too, is a guess. Secretary of State Cordell Hull is handling the situation with a diplomatic hand. President Roosevelt is decidedly for peace at any price, not conflict with any nation. This nation is solidly behind him. Our price paid for participation in the World War was too great—350,000 corpses and a bunch of worthless notes.

Incidentally, along these lines of peace and non-conflict with other nations we would do well to ponder as we vote for the next administration. Balancing our national budget may yet prove to be one of our smallest problems. Only statesmen of the first order should be trusted with the delicate affairs of international policies. Nothing would please Europe more than to draw us into her conflicts. One misguided step could do it.

LAW, LOVE AND TEMPERANCE.

LESSON V—NOVEMBER 1, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth.—Romans 14:21.

LESSON: Romans 13:1-14.

Christians and Government.

Paul's words about the Christian in his relationship to government may have been written because of the Jewish Christians natural antipathy to government, or because there were rumors of rebellion against Roman government on the part of the Christians in that great city the seat of the greatest government that probably ever existed upon earth. But he deals with abiding principles. Government is ordained of God, there must be some central authority and power, and Christians are to be subject unto that power. Even when the power is evil, it is to be respected and obeyed. But not if it commands that which is contrary to the will of God. Essentially governments govern for the good of the governed. When this is not the case the governed are to seek by lawful processes to remedy the situation. Revolution is a last resort. Obedience to government is enjoined, not only in order to avoid punishment, but because the Christian for conscience's sake should be law-abiding.

"Tribute to whom tribute is due, custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor. Governments confer privileges and protection; they therefore deserve the support of the governed. Taxes simply represent, at least ideally, a charge for the service which the government renders. Even though the ruler, be he in large place or small, is not worthy of honor, his office must be held in honor. There can be no established social order unless there is recognized authority. There can be no social security unless there is respect for recognized authority—this in brief is Paul's position.

To be sure there are two sides to the matter. Public office is a public trust. All power is derived power—"there is no power but of God." Let every ruler from high to low use his power not for his own selfish good, but for the good of the governed.

Christians and Their Fellowship.

"Owe no man anything, save to love one another." A Christian has no right to buy anything that he cannot pay for, or which he knows he is not going to pay for when he buys it. Many a professing Christian needs to be very careful at this point. Religion often finds its acid test in such practical affairs.

"Love is the fulfilment of the law" because it works no ill to its neighbor. One does not have to be concerned about detailed rules of conduct if he is governed by the law of love, if he applies the Golden Rule in his relationships with others. This love is no mere vague sentiment, a weak, soft, wishful thing—it is inner and positive goodness going out in loving service to others. He who loves his neighbor in this spirit fulfils the law. Jesus made this law of love the law of His Kingdom. It is the mark of true discipleship—herby shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another.

Christian and Conduct.

The early Church evidently believed that Jesus was coming again soon. They lived in expectancy of that blessed event. Paul, therefore, appeals to them to walk as becoming those who bore the name of Christ. They were the sons of light, they were not to walk as those who were in darkness. They were to cast off "the works of darkness." "Reveling—riotous feasts and drinking parties, we moderns would call it "whoop-pee," drunkenness—the word literally means intoxication, liquor will make folks drunk regardless of when and where they live; chambering—debauchery, primarily sexual sins, a universal and timeless problem, and one that is assuming rather alarming proportions in our modern life; wantonness—not only licentiousness, but lawful insolence and riotous excess, how much of the spirit of lawlessness there is in America; strife—contention growing out of the above-mentioned sins and excesses, and also, growing out of the lack of the spirit of love in the human heart; and jealousy—the word originally meant nothing more than a zeal or honorable rivalry of emulation, but it has come to mean so much that is mean and ugly in the human spirit, even the desire to see a rival weakened or failing in an enterprise in which both are engaged—here they are, not by any means a complete list of the sins to which men are prone, but sins that have all too large a place in the lives of those who are members of the church of Christ. There has been in recent years. We need to face the strict and stringent demands of the gospel of Christ on our lives.

Christians In Christ.

"Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof." There is enough of unpremeditated sin always besetting us. But think of how much of our time and how much of our money often goes for making provision for indulging the flesh, for fulfilling the lusts of the flesh! The secret of victory is Christ. He alone can cleanse the thought, life, and strengthen the will, and purify the motive. He alone can give victory. We are not to be taken out of the world; we are to be conquerors even in the world.

THE LAW OF THE LESSON.

This series of brief articles has dealt thus far with three factors in the learning process, the teacher, the learner, and the language. This article deals with the Law of the Lesson. Briefly stated this law is as follows: The Truth to be taught must be learned through truth already known. Some rules growing out of this law are as follows:

1. Find out what your pupils know of the subject you wish to teach them.
2. Make the most of your pupils' knowledge and experience.
3. Begin with facts or ideals that lie near your pupils, something that is already familiar.
4. Find illustrations in the commonest and most familiar objects suitable to your purpose.
5. Try to have the pupils find illustrations for themselves from their own experiences.
6. Teach the new in terms of the old that is proceed from the known to the new or the unknown.
7. Explain the unknown by the known.

A CHILD'S THOUGHTS.

When Jesus was a little boy
In Nazareth, long years ago,
To have lived near and played with Him

Would have been wonderful, I know.
I'm sure the other children chose
Jesus for Leader of each game,
Knowing, no matter what they played,
To guide them right would be His aim.

I know that He was fair to see;
I wonder, was He grave or gay;
Oh, how I wish I might have lived
In Nazareth in Jesus' day!

—Elsa Gorham Baker.

What do we live for, if it is not to make life less difficult for each other?—George Elliot.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"INFIDEL."

"The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."—Psa. 53: 1.

"You air your unbelief,

And yet you watch your rose-bud
For a leaf?

You have no faith in God,
And yet you are planting seeds
Beneath the sod?"

—Marie M. Scott.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe, help Thou our unbelief. From the faith we have in our everyday work, increase our faith in Thee until we shall know Thee implicitly. Amen...

TUESDAY.

"FORGET."

"Forgetting those things that are behind, and reaching forth unto those things that are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the calling of God in Christ Jesus."—Phil. 3: 13, 14.

Try and be a good "forgetter,"

There is nothing gained by hate,
'Tis the wise course and better
Not on the wrong to mediate.

Just forget the past, don't worry,
It is easier to forgive

Than to be in constant flurry,
And in worriment to live.

There is more of joy than sorrow,
If you will but have it so,

Why each day some trouble borrow
As along through life you go.

Better gather up the sunbeams
That are cast athwart your way,
And have your day and night dreams

Bright and pleasant while you may.

Prayer—Our Father, we would be true. We would shine for life and for Thee. Make us so today, tomorrow and forever. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CHRIST'S ONLY WRITING.

"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."—Jno. 8: 1-11.

This text is the only record of Christ ever having written anything. And this he wrote in the sand. We wonder if that fact has any significance.

This writing was concerning a woman who was caught in the act of adultery. It was a silent answer to those who accused the woman. It is not even recorded what he wrote. What He said to the woman after the men had disappeared might reflect something of what was in His mind as He wrote in the sand. That reflection was a condemnation of those who were guilty of what they charged others and an urge upon them to clean their own house first. It also reflected that He knew what was in their hearts and knew their secrets. It reflected the little preachment that only the innocent are qualified to administer punishment.

Consciousness of one's own guilt is the mother of mercy, Pride means harshness, but humility means pardon.

Prayer—Dear heavenly Father, reveal our own sins unto us and make us humble. Show us the blackness of our own hearts and give us strength and courage to clean up. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WAITING ON THE LORD."

"And the Lord... said, Write the vision, and make it plain... Though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."—Hab. 2: 2, 3.

This is one of the many promises of God's word, promises of the certainty of the coming of the kingdom, and the assurance and courage He gives His children to "be steadfast, immovable always abounding in the work of the Lord, inasmuch as ye know that your labors are not in vain in the Lord."

God's visions do come to us slowly. How many thousands of years did the world wait for the visions of God in Jesus! But when He came, it was worth all the waiting.

Let us make sure of God's presence. That presence will bring us His visions. And those are in love, joy, peace, longsuffering gentleness and meekness,—visions of loneliness and power.

Prayer—Dwell with us, O God, and be Thou our continual inspiration. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"TELL IT."

"Return to thy house and declare how great things God hath done for thee."—Luke 8: 30-39.

When Christ healed anyone, usually he bade them tell their friends and neighbors about it. There were some instances in which He bade them not to tell anyone. It appears, however, that these instances were in circumstances in which the people were likely to think of His miracles rather than His teachings. Also there were enemies there, and He could see clear through them to the cross.

In all that Christ did, first of all, His desire was emphasis on His teachings. To follow Him, he would have us today place our emphasis there. If we are possessed by these, we know the glory of it, and He would have us tell it. How much time are we losing in grateful silence?

Prayer—O God, forbid that we shall keep Thy light hid under a bushel within our souls. We would not keep our thanksgiving churlishly to ourselves. Give the grace and the courage to proclaim Thy goodness to everyone. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"WHOLESOME UNCLEANLINESS."

"He (the leper) shall cover his upper lip, and shall cry, Unclean! Unclean!"—Lev. 13: 45-52.

Leprosy has been regarded as the worst of earth's diseases. Mosaic law prescribed that every man who is infected with it should allow no man to come near him, lest he also might be infected. Suppose sinners were required to declare their sinfulness to every one. Sin is just as loathsome, just as unclean and just as contagious. It is most difficult to live among people and not absorb something of their habits and qualities. If these habits and qualities happen to be vicious, their contagion is as infectious as leprosy. On the other hand loveliness of character is also contagious. O how much depends upon the company we keep.

Prayer—O Lord, if we will not be good and pure and true for our own sakes, make us good, pure and true for the sake of others. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE RICHES OF WISDOM.

"Riches and honor are with me; yea, durable wealth and righteousness."—Prv. 8: 12-21.

The world seems to be in a mad race for riches. Most folks are crazy for money and the things money can buy. This is being expressed most emphatically in these days. The other day we heard a man, who is conducting a form of public lottery, say, "America has gone crazy on the subject of trying to get something for nothing." The "Bank night," of the theaters with buildings jammed to the doors and the streets blocked

THE OPEN DOORS OF THE CHURCH. (An Every-Member Canvass Sermon.)

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"I had rather be a door keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness for a season."—Psa. 84:10.

You are all door keepers in the house of God. By you the doors close or open. You make a noble choice when you choose to be a door keeper in the house of God. Certain ones of you will seek to enter more than four hundred homes this afternoon, in order to secure nearly a thousand pledges if possible to the current budget of our church. Through these week by week and month by month contributions, the doors of our church are kept open and inviting to scores of people of all ages who need the comfort, strength, and blessing of the church. In this message I wish to leave three things with you:

I. You are door keepers in God's House. He who helps to keep the doors of the church open helps himself and his neighbor. He is a benefactor to his community, and his day; and is a builder in the making of a better world. How dear to the Lord Jesus is the work you do! "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts 20:28). Nothing can be more precious to Jesus than his church. For that he gave his life. He says, "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." When you help keep open the doors of the church you work with the Savior of men.

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in. Who is this King of glory? The Lord strong and mighty" (Psa. 24:7,8). We need the Lord strong and mighty in our homes, out of which comes our future generations which must have the goodness of heart as well as the skill of hand and wisdom of mind to solve the problems that will be set before them. I repeat, we need the Lord strong and mighty in our homes. Let us open the gates of God, and keep them open, everlasting doors, and let the King of glory come in! If our church is to be, as it ever has been, a comfort to many, and a guidance to still more,—and a place of peace for troubled hearts, and an altar of pardon for sinning souls,—it will need in it the King of glory, the Lord strong and mighty. Let us keep open its everlasting doors.

It has been an inspiration to see how the men, and women have given themselves to the task of getting ready for, and entering into, this church—wide effort to enlist every man, woman, and child as door keepers in the house of God. For when we speak of the "open doors of the Church" we use a figure of speech which means to open the hearts, and open the homes, and open the hands to the divine task of building a better world. The doors of the church are doors of daring,—daring to believe in mankind, that it is from God and can be made great and good. The doors of the church are doors of destiny,—for fate of a civilization hangs upon their hinges! That brings me to the second thing I wish to leave with you.

II. The Doors of the House of God Are Threatened. Jesus anticipated that. He as much as said, It will be doors against doors! "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it (the church)." Jesus knew that the doors of hell would open against the doors of the church; that the doors of darkness would open against the doors of light; that the doors of death would open against the doors of life. But they shall not prevail. And certainly not if we open the gates for the King of glory, for he is the Lord strong and mighty!

How are the doors threatened? You noticed as you passed the parsonage of flowers blooming beautifully and fulfilling well their mission. By a west window of the breakfast room is a small box of flowers that is now little more than a few perishing weeds. What is the difference. The one has been watered, enriched, tended; the other has suffered neglect. When you attend the house of God your very presence makes a contribution of the first rank. Without attendance the church would die. Do people attend church like they should? Are they not in many cases and in many places neglecting one of the most ennobling privileges of life? The Scriptures enjoin us to "Forsake not the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is" (Heb. 10:25). We are justly proud of the large attendance upon our morning church service, but with a membership as large as ours might it not be much larger?

How are the doors threatened? Too often other gods than Jehovah is being worshipped. This is an old problem. People have worshipped other Gods from the beginning of time. Today as ever many people put other thing first, and the Kingdom of God last. Whereas they should "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6:33). Let me show you one of the saddest pictures in the Old Testament. It is in Ezekiel the eighth chapter: "Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz." Weeping for the idols of a pagan god at the very door of God's house! What can be any sadder picture than that? The women weeping at the door of God's house for the idols of their heart. Yes, the doors of God's house are threatened. But we read further: "Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these. And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east."

What a picture, the men of the temple, with their backs toward the altar worshipping the pagan gods. A whole nation in your day and mine has turned the faces of their men from the altar of God and fastened them upon themselves. Yes, indeed, the doors of the church are threatened. But by such humble and devout Christians as enter our churches on the Holy Sabbath, and the help of our never-failing Christ, those doors shall never come down!

III. You May Have a Definite Part in keeping Open the Doors of God's House. By your presence. As I have already stated that is a very real contribution. By your help with the work of the church, and that too is a very necessary part in keeping the doors of the church open. More than two hundred persons are needed for some definite piece of work in this church for the church as such. And

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

This week begins the Active Thanksgivng Program for the Christian Orphanage. A letter has been mailed to every pastor of our churches asking that they urge our church people to take an active part in helping to swell its Thanksgiving offering to a larger amount than last year.

A letter has been mailed to each Sunday school Superintendent requesting that he or she get the Sunday school members, teachers and officers interested in making a banner offering this year. A letter has been mailed to each Sunday school, pleading for a hearty support in the special Thanksgiving Offering. A package or Thanksgiving envelopes has been mailed to the Superintendent of each Sunday school for its use.

If we can enlist each pastor, each Sunday school Superintendent, each teacher and all members of our churches and Sunday schools, what a list of workers we will have. If each church and each Sunday school will stress the importance of this offering, I feel sure we will receive a banner offering at this Thanksgiving Season.

I want to ask the Sunday school Superintendents to hand out the envelopes the Sunday before the offering are made and use each one to fill it up and have them returned on the day the offering is made in their church. Let everybody begin now to talk the Thanksgiving offering; and let us roll up a banner offering in each church and Sunday school. Let each one ask himself or herself this question: "Have I done my best in supporting the Orphanage this year?" The little children in the Christian Orphanage are God's little children. They are just as precious in His sight as any other children. It may be He has placed them here in their helplessness to reach your heart and make it just a little more tender. Will you make some sacrifice to help them at Thanksgiving?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

In Memoriam

GERRY.

Mrs. Thomas Henry Gerry was born January 19, 1869, died September 14, 1936, aged 67 years.

Mrs. Gerry accepted Christ as her personal Saviour and united with Salem Chapel Christian Church while a young girl and continued a faithful member for some fifty years. She was a devoted wife and mother.

She is survived by four children: Oscar T., Abraham J., and Theodore V. Gerry; Mrs. Howard Marshall also an adopted daughter, Dessie Shuskey Gerry, several grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral service was conducted at Salem Chapel Christian Church September 17, 1936 by the writer assisted by Rev. Mr. Ward of Walnut Cove N. C., and Rev. H. B. Johnson of Winslow-Salem, N. C.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

BENTON.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved brother and deacon, B. L. Benton.

We can realize to some extent the grief of his family at the loss of so noble a life therefore, be resolved:

1. That we recognize in his death the providence of God, and bow in humble submission to His will, finding comfort in the hope of meeting again "in the house not made by hands," eternal in the Heavens.

2. That the church acknowledge the loss of a faithful deacon and Christian Counselor, but rejoices that for so long a time his services were freely given to the church.

3. That sympathy is hereby tendered to the bereaved family, and the comfort of the Holy Scriptures and the hope of immortality are offered for consolation.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread on the church records and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

GUNTER.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford cherish the memory of Mrs. Jennie D. Gunter. Her life was as a shining light to all who knew her. With charity toward all and malice toward none, she carried her light so that the shadows fell behind and many flickering torches were rekindled by contact with her radiant life. She labored faithfully for the things of God. She was faithful to her church, generous with her gifts, loyal in her life. We recognize that it was through her zeal and untiring efforts that our society came into existence.

Therefore, in loving appreciation of her work, be it resolved:

1. That our society henceforth shall be known as the Jennie D. Gunter Missionary Society of the Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the Missionary Society, a copy sent to the Quarterly Conference of the church, a copy sent to Miss Ruth Gunter and a copy sent to the "Christian Sun" for publication.

on the outside, with a police squad to handle them, is an evidence of this.

But in all this man is learning, or he will learn, that riches take wings and fly away; that the need of mankind is a wealth that is durable, and such a wealth does not come through money or material things. These add to our sorrows unless accompanied by their spiritual values. Proverbs tell us that it is wisdom and love that enriches mankind and furnishes them something that can be taken to heaven. Rich in these today, we are rich in them forever, and it increases as the years go by.

Prayer—Lord of all wealth, make us right with Thy spirit. Amen.

by your regular contributions to its upkeep, and to its outgoing program of preaching to others. Not everyone feels he can lead a meeting, or make a speech, or be chairman of a committee, but everyone, as God has prospered him, whether it be much or little, can lay a definite portion of his daily earnings, or of his accrued income, or the little portion that is a very part of his living, upon the altar of consecration, and devotion. For by that, to a much greater degree than you can realize, you are helping to make God's house the blessing and power it ought to be. You are to that extent door keepers in the House of the Lord!

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Christian Churches in the Wakefield territory have made definite plans for a Leadership Training School to be held in the Wakefield Christian Church, beginning November 1st. 3:00 P.M. and each evening during the week at 7:30 P. M. Officers, teachers, leaders and Sunday School members are urged to attend these classes. Members of other denominations are also welcome.

The purpose of this school is to give your leaders an opportunity to study and refresh themselves along the lines of their work. Some of the best known church pastors and leaders have been selected to conduct this training course. It is a real privilege to have a school in this territory and something which has been desired by the denomination a number of years. Each person attending will find it most helpful to hear the fine messages which will be given by the following teachers: Rev. F. C. Lester, Chairman of the Board of Christian Education, pastor of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, will preside as dean; He will also teach a class, "Christian ways of Living for Young People"; Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, will teach a class for superintendents, executives and officials; Miss Priscilla Chase will teach a class on "Juniors" for teachers and mothers of small children; Rev. Carl R. Key, pastor of the Holland Christian Church, will conduct a class on "Worship in the Sunday School." It is for the benefit of the people in this area that these busy people are coming to conduct this school for us. Certainly we will put forth a special effort to attend. Any teacher, officer, and Sunday School member may attend. There will be a small charge for a book, and each school will be asked to make a contribution towards the expenses. The Burton's Grove, Barretts, Waverly, Ivor, Dendron, New Lebanon, Spring Hill, Union (Surry) Centerville and Wakefield churches will participate in this training school.

Open Up the Churches

Many letters have come in to me from ministers regarding my recent "Messages" relative to the need of more church services and shorter ones. These letters show that the space did not permit a full explanation of what laymen have in mind.

In appealing for "five services each Sunday," laymen do not ask for a return to old conditions. The Sunday evening service, as it then existed, was given up largely at the request of laymen—not ministers. But the old program then was based upon the idea that the same people would go to all the Sunday services. This petered out.

Laymen believe there now is an opportunity to open the churches all day again; but with the idea that the same person would attend only one service. Each person, however, would have his choice;—there is Communion, Worship, Instruction, Music, or Discussion. I am sure such a plan would raise the total of those "going to church" on Sunday. This is a goal for which we should all aim.

Ministers should not be troubled about numbers at any one service. Probably three of the services should be held in the church parlor. Never mind, if only five—or even one—attend some of those services. Often a bank or store will have no customers for some period each day; but this is no reason for them to close. They keep open just the same.

Laymen believe that no sermon should exceed twenty minutes; but that a minister can repeat the same sermon two or three times each Sunday. As to music, only a leader is needed. Most laymen prefer "congregational singing" to paid quartets. However, if a choir is desired for the regular preaching service, this can continue as is. The only change contemplated in this regular preaching service is to cut it down to one hour.

Laymen want to see the church property used more. They want to have a choice of services to attend and not all be forced to take the same "medicine" at the same hour. They want a choice of hours—from 8:00 A. M. to 8:00 P. M. Of course, this would make more work for some ministers; but this would not be more than their fathers and grandfathers carried when they were preachers. I am sure that such a program would increase interest in your church. Why not try it?

Effective Preaching

Miss Emily M Carleton
541 Osceola Ave 8-1-37

By Rev. ROBERT LEE HOUSTON

There are many contributing factors to effective preaching. Some of these essential factors must be supplied by the members of the church. Churches should create a demand for a trained ministry by calling to their pulpits the highest type of leadership and not merely the cheapest man available. An attentive, interested congregation makes a silent and unremitting demand on the minister for effective preaching. Happy is the minister who has a group of loyal people who steadily hold him to his best, and in whose presence he dare not stoop. The choir and organist may not only create the right atmosphere for the message, but may lift the soul of the minister as well as reinforce his message. Even the architecture and the pulpit should suggest the exalted office of the true minister. Consistent church attendance is an indispensable element for great preaching. Spasmodic attendance may satisfy a personal whim, but it can never be an essential ingredient in the highest preaching ministry. The happy minister who looks out from his pulpit upon one composite face is able to speak, not only to the ordinary man as a common denomination, but also to men raised to their highest collective power. Given such a majestic setting for preaching, some Moses may arise and speak to the children of men that they go forward.

The minister shares in the responsibility for effective preaching. His background and training cannot be ignored. His study should resemble the abiding place of a scholar rather than the accumulations of an attic. In his strategic visits he may gather from the common life of the people "the provision to replenish their rejoicing souls on the Lord's day." Men must match a high position with a high character. Regenerated manhood is the indispensable element in the pulpit, and there is no grander vocation than the redemption of men. God continues to save men through the "foolishness of preaching." So long as preaching is the proclamation of the Eternal Gospel, men will continue to return "from a far country," seeking the healing touch, the forgiving word.

To this end let us work and pray for a new birth of an ancient and holy art. The soil should be prepared in our churches for an exalted ministry. The pulpit should be the minister's throne as well as the altar where his life is laid down. Much preparation is necessary for the minister's auspicious hour. The day of great preaching is not past. We may witness the Transfiguration in every pulpit if ministry and laity are willing to pay the price.

PERSONALS
NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The major portion of the paper this week is given to the Eastern Virginia Conference with the hope that this information may help and inspire those who could not attend, as well as remind those who did attend of things that happened while there.

The conference will meet next year with the Congregational Christian Church in Holland, Virginia.

The collector reported having received $6,248.87 with which to carry forward the enterprises of the Church.

Letters of transfer were given to Rev. W. M. Jay and Rev. Carr E. Geringer to unite with the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

By vote the names of Rev. H. C. Caviness and Mrs. H. C. Caviness were dropped from the roll because they have united with the Baptist Church in North Carolina.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar and Rev. H. C. Hilliard were received as elders by the conference, the former coming from Georgia and the latter from the Eastern N. C. Conference.

Complete minutes of the conference, including committee reports, will be printed in the Annual for distribution in the churches. Excerpts are given from several reports because they seem to deserve immediate attention.

All officers of the conference were reelected to serve another term. They are: President, Rev. Robert Lee House; Vice-President, Dr. J. E. Rawles; Secretary, Dr. I. W. Johnson; Assistant Sec., Mr. W. H. Baker; Treasurer, Mr. W. E. MacClenny.

The conference was disappointed in not having Dr. Hugh Vernon White of New York as its guest speaker, but is glad to know that Miss Ruth Seabury is to visit the churches of the conference in November.

The conference greatly missed Dr. J. O. Atkinson, mission secretary. Mr. Chas. D. Johnston, superintendent, represented the Christian Orphanage, and Dr. L. E. Smith, president, told of the progress of Elon College.

RECOMMENDATIONS FROM COMMITTEE ON RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

1. That each pastor suggest to his church some method of regular Bible reading, keeping the congregation reminded of the plan;
2. That each church select a person whose duty it shall be to get subscriptions for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, The Pilgrim Highroad, and periodicals published by the Congregational Publishing Society;
3. That the pastors secure and distribute the "Handbook" to their people; provide and urge the use of devotional literature; and use the "The Fellowship of Prayer" during the Lenten period;
4. That pastors insist on our Sunday schools using the literature published by our own Church;
5. That our pastors acquaint themselves with the mass of worship materials and enrich their services of worship with the appropriate use of the materials.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Followers of the Christ in Eastern Virginia who believe with James O'Kelly, Rice Haggard, and others, that Christian is a sufficient name for the Church met in their 116th Annual Conference session at South Norfolk, Virginia, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week. There were some three hundred of them in the group over which Rev. Robert Lee House of Newport News presided. Their meeting was probably quite different from that held at Old Lebanon Church near Surry Court House, Virginia, in 1794, but these people are still eager for independence, personal piety and cooperative work in Christian fellowship. Business of many kinds claimed the attention of these church workers. They are interested in evangelism and found that the conference had made a small gain. They were interested in education and were glad to receive another candidate for the ministry and to be assured that the four now studying are doing well. They were interested in leadership training for local church leaders and were assured that training schools are available for all the churches of the conference.

The College and the Orphanage were presented by their leaders, and the conference was minded to support these institutions. Home and foreign missionary effort was in the mind of this group, and they were glad to know that some progress was made during the past year.

Religious literature came in for discussion, and the denominational papers were presented. The conference was in favor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and quite a number of new and renewal subscriptions were obtained.

It seems wise to the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to present information concerning the Eastern Virginia Conference as the major feature of this week's paper. He hopes that leaders within the conference and those without will find much that is suggestive and helpful. It was a joy to him to be present to share in the sessions of the conference, and all who visited or dined with the South Norfolk Church were delighted by the fine fellowship and entertainment given throughout the conference.

ITEMS FROM COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM.

The world stands in great need of God. Once it had on earth Jesus Christ to manifest Him to the world. Jesus established His Church to carry on His manifestation of God to the children of men. If the Church fails to show him forth it fails entirely. If it does not preach His Gospel both in word and deed it misses entirely the whole purpose for which it was founded. The heart of man hungers for God, and there is in the Gospel that which satisfies that hunger. As members of the Church and followers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ it is our duty to preach the Gospel. To do that is to evangelize our churches, our communities, by evangelizing the individuals therein. It is a big order. It is the humanly impossible task. But it is the order of the lowly Galilean. Never in the history of the human race has that order needed to be the consuming passion more than now.

Recommendations (selected items):

1. The reforming of a group in every church from among the laity who will make the winning of others a special concern of theirs during the year, and will make from time to time personal contacts with new prospects.
2. The adaptation of any and all methods best suited to a local church for the winning of others, such as: (a) an annual series of special evangelistic services in the church; (b) personal visitation and reception of new converts all along through the year; (c) special work by Sunday school teachers; (d) decision days in the Sunday school; (e) the pastors class; (f) and a special emphasis leading up to the Easter season.

3. That pastors and church officials take a greater interest in keeping up with every individual member on their church rolls, realizing that as a denomination we have lost measurably by not keeping up with the whereabouts of our members, attending to their church letters, and carefully recording and keeping up with the names of all who unite with our churches.

ITEMS FROM COMMITTEE ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

A leadership training school is now available for every church and Sunday school.

The Youth Fellowship is a vital factor in our religious work now throughout the whole of the Southeast. The Eastern Youth Fellowship is among the best. We commend the work they are doing toward Christian Education and urge a hearty support by our local churches.

The Elon Training School was well attended by pupils from Eastern Virginia last summer. The wholesome influence that it is exerting in our conference can be felt in most of the churches. No church will lose in the long run by investing in sending its young people there.

The Board of Christian Education under the direction of Rev. Joe French of Ocean View and Rev. F. C. Lester, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, stands ready to lend help and service in any way it possibly can. These brethren are anxious for you to use them in helping to promote the work of Christian Education.

Recommendations (in part):

1. That we launch a new campaign in the field of Christian Education, beginning with the home in trying to get a more systematic study of the Word of God, family worship, and Christian study groups,

2. That we use our influence to enlarge our enrollment in Sunday school, and encourage the whole family to attend the church worship service. If we can get the parents to start the children attending these services as soon as they are old enough to understand right from wrong, so much the better.

CHURCH FINANCE.

By HON. JACK W. NURNEY.

An address given at the Eastern Virginia Conference.

Properly approached, the financial problem of any church can be met in such a way as to increase the interest of the members in his church.

We often hear criticism, there is too much money talk heard in the church. If this is true, it is on account of the lack of organized procedure in an endeavor to meet the financial requirements. While every church must have money, no church with money alone will stand the test of time, and it is only with the proper use of the means available to a church that it can successfully operate.

Every church should have a Finance Committee, composed of men and women who are interested enough to meet regularly to attend to the financial affairs. I cannot too strongly stress the importance of carefully selecting the members to compose this important committee. If your church is fortunate enough to have a number of men representing large financial means, and they are willing to serve on this committee, by all means have them as members, but do not forget that the average church is carried on by contributions from members of moderate means and they should have representatives on the committee. And again you will find some of your most interested church members, and best workers, people of moderate circumstances.

If I were selecting a Finance Committee, the qualifications to be considered would be, willingness to work, first, and ability to give, second.

This committee is one that affords an opportunity of rendering a real service to the church. The chairman should not be kept in office any great length of time. He should be changed frequently in order that a number of members may be familiar with the financial problems, also this will avoid the possibility of having a one man board which always leads a church into difficulty at times. New members should be added to the committee. Young men and women preferably, in order that they may have the opportunity of preparing themselves for this place of church work in order that they may be able to carry on when the older members wish to be relieved of the work, or have passed away.

It is the duty of this committee to see that:

1. Every member is given an opportunity of making a pledge toward the expenses of the church.

2. That proper records are kept showing the individual amount of pledge, and credit when payments are made.

It is essential that a budget be prepared showing the actual operating expenses of the church and the estimated income. This information should be available to every member of the church in order that he may know just where his church dollar goes.

It is my belief that a well informed church member is far more interested in seeing his church expenses met than one who must inquire of the financial conditions.

The preparation of a budget should be as complete as possible, including your conference apportionment, thus limiting your special collections to a minimum. The number, approximate date and purposes of special collections should be indicated in the budget and strictly adhered to in order to reduce the money talk criticism and afford the member an opportunity to plan in advance just what part he expects to play in meeting the financial obligations of the church.

It is, at times, difficult for churches to borrow money, not because the lending institutions are afraid they will lose the money, but because of the fact that most church loans are known as slow loans and loaning institutions are afraid to have their money invested in a frozen asset, unable to secure payment of the loan when in need of funds to meet the demands of their creditors.

Therefore, it is necessary for churches to be more prompt in the payment of their just debts in order to overcome this handicap. This can be done by having a properly organized finance committee, and further, by encouraging your members to contribute weekly so that the church obligations may be promptly met.

In approaching a member, sufficient time should be spent in order to explain the budget and the necessity of giving regularly. The same amount of time should be spent in explaining the many items composing the budget to the member whose contribution amounts to only five cents a Sunday as to the member whose contribution is $5.00. Often the person who contributes five cents makes as great a sacrifice as the person who contributes the $5.00.

The pledge cards in an Every Member Canvass should be carefully selected. They should be worded in such a manner as to afford the member, in case of necessity, an opportunity without any embarrassment whatever to inform the church secretary, or chairman of the Finance Committee, of his or her wish to change the amount of the pledge. With this distinctly understood, you will find more members entirely willing to sign the card offered and thus give the committee something definite to work on when preparing the budget covering the expenditures of the church funds.

Occasionally a member in your church finds that he is unable to meet his church obligations, and having signed the usual pledge card, which carries no provision for a reduction, or cancellation of his weekly pledge, will grow indifferent in attendance to his church and soon he will find other attractions that keep him from the church entirely.

When you examine any church roll and find a person in arrears in the payment of his pledge, you will find a member of your church whose attendance is below the average, therefore, would it not be better, when you have a member who is hopelessly in arrears to compromise the payment of this debt, or cancel it entirely, suggesting that he make a new pledge in accordance with his ability to give?

While we hear to the contrary, I belong to the school that believes the majority of people are willing and anxious to pay their debts if given a half chance.

Now, may I add a word of caution about creating outside debts, such as a building fund debt, or remodeling expenses? Often we find a small group of members who are anxious to make certain improvements to their church building. This, of course, is an excellent spirit but the cost of certain improvements must be met, and the action should be taken only after the entire membership has had an opportunity of expressing itself as to the advisability of such a plan. Here again your Finance Committee should inform the membership of the cost of such improvements and suggest a plan of meeting the obligations in order that it may not interfere with the annual operating expenses.

In closing, I wish to say that the financial problems differ in each and every church, and the information that I have endeavored to give you may in no way fit your particular problem; however, there are several points that I wish to emphasize.

1. Selection of a representative Finance Committee.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mrs. Margaret Roberta Savage, daughter of the late William and Mary Elizabeth Rawles, was born in Nansemond County, Virginia, July 17, 1856 and died at her late home near Liberty Spring Christian Church, Friday A. M., October 23, 1936, at the age of 80 years, 3 months and 6 days. She was the widow of the late deacon A. H. Savage who was killed in an automobile accident a few years ago.

She is survived by five daughters: Mrs. J. R. Morgan of Suffolk, Va., Mrs. A. J. Rountree of Cypress Chapel, Va., Miss Eulalia Savage of Norfolk, Va., Miss Bertha Savage of Nansemond County, Va., and Miss Louise Savage, formerly Dean of Women at Elon College, now at the University of Virginia; one son, Mr. Horace E. Savage of Whaleyville, Va.; 14 grand children and five great grand children.

Mrs. Savage united with Liberty Spring Christian Church, July 20, 1872, and was a faithful member until her death. She was the last of the third generation of the Rawles family who were members of the Christian Church. Her grandfather died at the age of 99, her father at the age of 89. She was a woman whose neighbors and friends bear willing testimony to her sincerity, kindness, friendliness and integrity of character. She was as a summer breeze, but as steadfast as a great rock. She loved the church and the place of prayer brought joy to her soul. For several years her affliction and failing health prevented her from usual attendance upon services of her church. But her interest in the affairs of the church of her childhood never waned.

Her home was a center of social and religious culture. The Bible was to that family the Book of all books. Religion was the ruling factor and guiding force in every plan. Many friends have felt the touch of simplicity and devotion which pervaded the family circle. She had her share of sorrow and disappointment. But her faith in God did not waver, and she has waited patiently and submissively for the messenger of heaven to take her home. Her hope of salvation was as bright as the morning of her home-going.

The funeral service was conducted in Liberty Christian Church, by the pastor and Rev. R. E. Brittle. Beautiful flowers and a large congregation gave evidence of the esteem in which she was held in the community. The church has sustained a great loss, but Jesus came to make it possible for woman to live such a life and enter into a glorious rest. It is a glorious fact to know that Jesus saves, and gives power to reveal His glory, in the life of a faithful woman on the earth.

A LETTER OF INTEREST.

The influence of Elon College is continually widening. It is securing new friends from new sections.

Unsolicited the following letter is received:

Albion, Maine.
October 14, 1936.

Rev. L. E. Smith,
Elon, N. C.

My dear Mr. Smith:

I am wondering if a pledge of $25, to be paid in small installments, would help Elon College.

My income is small, and a continual call for help from worthwhile projects comes to us, but in the course of a year, maybe sooner, I can give that much, if I'm spared. I can keep the "littles" until I get that amount.

I'm interested in Elon, as I was a young woman and teaching at Franklinton in the years of its early life. I knew Prof. Long and was somewhat better acquainted with W. W. Staley, as he frequently called at Franklinton. I knew "Parson Wellons" well.

If that will help, I'll pledge that amount, to be paid in 1937, before Dec. 31 of that year.

Will you please send to our pastor, Rev. James Sawyer, Albion, Maine, the bulletin and catalogue of Elon, No. 1, Vol. XXXII, Feb., if not out of stock, and also to Everett V. Perkins, Prin. Cony High, Augusta, Maine, and to Prof. L. I. Haynes, Colby College, Waterville, Maine. Nothing may result, but it's possible. I'll send postage.

Sincerely,

OLIVE A. GOULD.

A few days later the following letter was received from Miss Gould:

Albion, Maine.
October 21, 1936.

Rev. L. E. Smith,
Elon, No. Carolina.

My Dear Mr. Smith:

"It's the unexpected that happens," is often true. The day I took your letter with my pledge to the post office, I received a letter with nearly the amount of my subscription, from an unlooked-for source. I have added enough to meet my obligation and am sending it now, as it will be easier for me to do so.

Would be only too glad to make it larger if I could.

Sincerely,

OLIVE A. GOULD.

I trust that God, in His own time and in His own way, may put it into the hearts of others to come to the assistance of the college in this time of need.

L. E. SMITH,
President.

ROSEMONT CHURCH.

Rosemont Christian Church is located in a small community known as Portlock, in the county of Norfolk. It is near the city of South Norfolk, and in the section known as "The South Side."

It is one of our small churches, and yet one that has made a record during the past year of which she may be proud. This record is as follows: She was the banner church at the recent session of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference, in that all three of her missionary societies raised their apportionments and went over the top for missions more than $50.00 and sent all the money in.

She also was a banner church at the recent sessions of the Eastern Virginia Conference, having raised all her apportionments for that conference, and went over the top in her offering to missions about $110.00.

Rosemont has a splendid Sunday School, under the leadership of Supt. H. R. Morrison, and his fine corps of teachers. The classes are all doing a very good work. The men's Bible class is at the present supporting a fine young lad at the Christian Orphanage, and is having interesting sessions every Sunday morning. The Ladies' Bible class, and Mrs. H. C. Heddy's class, are both contributing to special missionary projects each quarter.

The Church has started out in the new conference year with the hope of doing a good year's work, and to make as fine a record as the one made last year, and a better one if possible.

REPORTER.

Dr. N. G. Newman of Holland was elected as news editor for the conference. It will be his task to stimulate the local churches to send in news from their churches for publication in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The editor and those who read join in wishing him good luck in his new task.

A motion prevailed authorizing the Committee on Education to consider preparing a course of study on the history, principles, and background of the Christian and Congregational churches to be used in Sunday schools and Elon College.

CONGO CROSSES.

One of the foreign study books in our Missionary Societies for this year is "Congo Crosses. This is a discussion and description of Congo womanhood by an American woman, Julia Lake Kellersberger. There are six chapters which can be used at six consecutive monthly meetings. The first chapter is titled "The Cross in the Sky." The writer of the book, herself a missionary to the Congo, is deeply impressed with the significance of the fact that after you cross the equator, going east, the "Southern Cross" begins to shine, and is visible beyond the equator, just as our seven stars and other constellations are visible on this side of the equator. The author of our book is impressed with this fact and while yet on board ship (evidently returning from Africa, after having been there and learned the people), begins to meditate on the meaning of the sun, moon, and stars to the people of the Congo. It is a beautiful description she gives of her meditations and dreams on board ship as she faces Africa, with the deep desire to understand and help the people of the Congo. She gives as her reason for writing about the heavenly constellations in her opening chapter the fact that these heavenly bodies mean so much to the African mind, and that the African worship and manner of life cannot be understood apart from the forces and factors of nature, which they worship in reverence or dread as demons. She says that the sun is all powerful to the minds of the people of the Congo, since being the source of light and life, he is, therefore, the Creator of all things. The moon is his wife and the stars are his children. The young morning star runs before her father, the sun, calling to him to come on and rule the day, while her sister, the evening star, goes to rest with her mother, the moon. When a halo appears around the sun some wicked man has died and all the heavenly notables have gathered for his judgment and condemnation. The reflection of the sun on the sky after sunset means for the people of the Congo, that the departed spirits of the night have come from their cold haunts to catch a ray of warmth. The many colors on the sky at dawn and evening tide are,

ALABAMA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Woman's Missionary Conference of Alabama churches met in annual session October 10th at Langdale Christian Church. The theme for the day was "Winning Others." The reports of superintendents and societies were read. Two new societies had been organized during the year. Mrs. A. R. VanCleave gave an interesting talk on "Help for Missionary Problems." Roanoke took first place in attaining the Standard of Excellence.

In the afternoon the Lanett Young People presented a very entertaining play "Souls Saved" under the splendid supervision of their pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. George W. Penn. A talk, "The Winning of Youth to Missions" was given by Mrs. Mervin Harper of Roanoke, Alabama.

Miss Evelyn Hardy spoke on the subject, "Work and Methods of Mission Study." The treasurer's report showed that a total of $205.30 had been paid in during the year. We certainly appreciated the hospitality of the Langdale Church and were well pleased with the new church building they are in now. The next conference will meet with the Lowell Church at Roanoke.

The conference voted to keep the same officers for next year, as follows: Miss Vera VanCleave, president; Mrs. Otis Chase, vice-president; Mrs. Mervin Harper, secretary; Mrs. V. E. Kitchens, treasurer.

MRS. MERVIN HARPER.

BENEFIT TO MIDDLE ATLANTIC CONFERENCE.

I would like to have the people who read THE CHRISTIAN SUN know of the benefit that the Middle Atlantic Conference has received from a recent visit of Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Slater of Albermarle, North Carolina.

They are missionary workers supported by our Conference, and they have been in our area for the past three weeks, having spoken in 24 churches and in 3 group meetings.

They have brought a presentation to our churches of the work of the Home Mission Boards that is stimulating and which has struck a responsive note; and I feel that the work of the M. A. C. will be greatly benefited by the chance for so many people to know personally a man of Mr. Slater's devotion and intelligence.

MRS. D. E. BROWN, Supt.

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETS.

The North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference of the Congregational-Christian Churches, started its work for the year, Tuesday, October 27th, when Mrs. O. H. Paris, newly elected president of the conference, Greensboro, called a meeting of the Executive Board, at the First Christian Church, Burlington, with the following board members present: Mrs. O. H. Paris, president; Miss Margaret Alston, first vice-president; Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, superintendent Young People; Mrs. W. R. Sellers, superintendent Spiritual Life; Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, treasurer; Mrs. M. W. Hook, superintendent Cradle Roll; Mrs. Stanley Harrell, former president of the conference; Mrs. Mattie Parker, secretary to Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Mrs. H. D. Lambeth, secretary of the conference.

MRS. H. D. LAMBETH.

The women of the Nausemond-Franklin-Gates district of the Eastern Virginia Womans' Conference had the home and foreign mission study books reviewed on October 20th at Suffolk Christian Church. Three hundred women were present. The home book, "The Story of the American Negro" was reviewed by Mrs. B. D. Jones of Holland. The foreign book was reviewed by Mrs. John G. Truitt of Suffolk, Mrs. Herbert Harrell of Driver and Mrs. Edwin B. Flory of Dayton, Ohio.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND CHURCH CONFERENCES.

Many of you had during the past few weeks—or will have in the very near future—an opportunity to attend the Conference of which your church is a part. I hope that you will grasp just what is happening in church affairs in your locality.

Too often young people, even those belonging to the church in which the Conference is held, will avoid a meeting of this kind, when they will miss a great deal by doing so. The speakers are chosen with care and represent the best your Church has to offer—they will not talk "over your heads" and their inspirational addresses will be of help to you, also. Then when it comes to the actual business sessions, it is vital to the future of the Church that its young people become familiar with that side of Church affairs. The Church of ten years from now will be sadly lacking, if it is composed of young leaders who are not familiar with the necessary details of church management along that line.

In most Church Conferences or Church Association Meetings today we find one section of the program turned over to the young people, so that their contribution to the work of the church may be better understood. It is fine to have a representative gathering of young people at this Conference and much can be done at that time to interest the older people in the support of young people's work in their churches. However, it would be a fine thing, also, to have the young people showing an interest in the things being considered in the regular sessions of the Conference, aside from their own. Very often, at an occasion like this, young people will see for the first time the necessity of greater financial support of their church.

Very rarely, and this is fortunate, we find young people coming to meetings of this kind and then not acting as courteous and respectful Christian young people should. They may sit on the back rows and carry on their conversation, while a speaker is endeavoring to "put across" some important message. They may wander in and out during the sessions. They may show very plainly that their interest is not in the meeting, but in some person whom they have met there. All these things will do more damage, so far as furthering the cooperation between young people and their elders, than if the young people failed to attend the meetings.

Therefore, let us as young people resolve to attend Conferences and other meetings of our Church, whenever the opportunity appears. When we are able to attend, let us make the most of our opportunity and be able to carry back to our young people's group a new spirit of interest in the church and cooperation toward making it larger and better.

THE BULWARK OF LIBERTY.

What constitutes the bulwark of our own liberty and independence? It is not our frowning battlements, our bristling seacoast, our army and navy. Our reliance is in the love of liberty which God has planted in us. Our defense is in the spirit which prizes liberty as the heritage of all men in all lands everywhere. Destroy this spirit, and we have planted the seeds of despotism at our very doors.—Abraham Lincoln.

ARMISTICE.

We face the nations with one hand outstretched
In greeting, and with peace upon our lips;
But in our hearts a question, in our minds
The haunting echoes of the song of war,
The song that sets the world a-tremble still
And shakes the very pillars of our faith.
How long before the peace can pass
our lips.
Can claim our minds and drive out old distrust?
To doubt mankind is but to doubt ourselves.
When shall our fingers dare to drop the sword,
While with unquestioning eyes we reach two hands
In open comradeship to all the world?

AS A CHRISTIAN I DENOUNCE WAR.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC for NOVEMBER 8, 1936.

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 26:51-53, Matt. 5:3-13, Jno. 14:14-27, Jas. 4:1-10.

Prelude: "Wonderful Peace."

Call to Worship:

"O Christ the way, the truth, the life

Show me the living way,
That in the tumult and the strife,
I may not go astray."

Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

Scripture:

Prayer for Peace: (one notified ahead of time).

Hymn: "Lead On, O King Eternal."

Leader's Talk:

Eighteen years ago an armistice was signed between Germany and the Allies which stopped the war then in progress, but now we are making preparation for an even greater war.

War is wasteful in human life, justice, money, food, shelter and everything that goes to make civilization. The way to escape war is to understand its causes and seek to remove them; to seek the way of human kindness and justice; and to accept Jesus Christ and His way of life. The purpose of this meeting is to help young people decide to destroy war even though it may cost something.

Discussion:

1. What is gained by war?
2. Is the nation that wins a war in a better or worse condition?
3. What is the arming of the nations doing for taxes?
4. What did the Senate investigation of munitions industries reveal?
5. What can our young people do to bring about peace?

Poem: "Youth Prays for Peace."

"Lord, we are the Youth of every land today, pleading for peace;
We are the ones who will be sacrificed
Unless wars cease;
We are the ones elected, Lord, to pay
To pay a price too high.
You gave us life, and it is not your will
That we should die....
We would not be Killers of men—we want to walk the earth
Clean-handed, free
From war with all its horrors, lust, and greed,
Its dark despair.
Lord, may there never be another war—
This is our prayer."

Sentence Prayers:

Hymn: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Benediction.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

LESSON VI—NOVEMBER 8, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of his might."—Ephesians 6:10.

LESSON: Acts 6:10-20.

Printed Text: Acts 19:8-12, 18-20; Eph. 6:13-20.

Being good and being a Christian.

There is a difference between living a moral life and being a Christian. The one is a matter of obeying the law; the other is a matter of finding life. The disciples whom Paul found at Ephesus were good folks, but they did not have the joy of salvation in Christ. When they believed on the Lord Jesus Christ and when they were baptized Paul laid his hands upon them and they received the Holy Spirit. Then they had joy and power and peace. It was not a case of the "second blessing" or the second work of grace; it was the first blessing, the first work of grace. And as Dr. G. Campbell Morgan has said, "There are multitudes of people in church membership who are not Christian in the New Testament sense of the word, who have come to John's baptism, and have come no further." Too often we think of Christianity in terms of what it demands of us. We ought to think of it in terms of what Christ offers us. The New Testament offers us life, more abundant life in Christ.

Bringing Forth Fruits Worthy of Repentance.

Paul spent some time in Ephesus—the account in Acts indicates at least two years and three months. As usual his preaching was a divider of men. Some believed and received the blessings of the Gospel. Others disbelieved, and not only missed the blessings of the Gospel, but aroused opposition to it. Paul did not cast his pearls before swine. He turned aside from the synagogue and went into a school where he continued his preaching. People came from far and wide. Luke says all they that dwelt in Asia heard the word of God, both Jews and Greeks. And many signs and wonders gave evidence of God's approval of Paul's work. Many that were sick were healed, not simply by personal contact, but by having friends bring pieces of wearing apparel to him and have him touch these things to his body, so that they might be carried back to the sufferers. "And the diseases departed from them," and "the evil spirits went out." There was to be sure an element of superstition in it. But there was also an element of simple faith, and God honored the simple, sincere faith, in spite of the superstition.

Many of those who did profess gave striking evidence of their inner change of heart. They had books of magical art which they soon realized were not in keeping with the spirit of Jesus Christ. They forthwith brought these books, some of them very valuable, and burned them publicly. When a man is truly converted he will give up evil things, even at personal loss. One often shows the sincerity of an inner change by an outward and often public expression. "Bring forth works meet for repentance"—thus John the Baptist summoned men to give external evidence of inner changes. "So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed"—when men are truly converted the spirit quickens life, and the church grows.

An Appeal to Prejudice and Selfishness.

The growth of the Christian movement threatened to play havoc with a certain well-established business in Ephesus. The prevailing worship was the worship of Diana of the Ephesians, and silversmiths in the city did a flourishing business in making images or silver models of this goddess. It was inevitable that as the Christian movement grew, the idol or the image business would decline. It was only natural, too, that these silversmiths would be aroused when they saw their means of livelihood being steadily taken away from them. They therefore stirred up a riot that bade fair to assume disturbing proportions until cooler heads prevailed. It is significant to note, however, the basis of their appeal. First of all it was selfishness as embodied in personal profit. Then as now, when Christianity came into conflict with personal profit, it aroused opposition and persecution. One has to look no further than the liquor industry to see how that principle operates in life. But much of modern industrial life puts profits above persons, and the rule of gold above the rule of God. The second appeal was to religious prejudice. In the name of religion these silversmiths sought to stifle Christianity. They had no real concern for Diana of the Ephesians. But they knew the power of appeal to religious prejudice. Alas what a tragic and terrible force religious prejudice is. One sees an illustration of this in Hitler's attitude toward the Jews, but it appears in less pretentious but nevertheless no less deadly forms anywhere.

The Christian Warfare.

Paul knew from personal experience that the Christian life involved struggle and warfare. He did not mince words in the matter. To be sure he did not encourage the use of armed force, but he did try to arouse the Christians of his day to uncompromising warfare against evil in every form in every place. He emphasized the fact that this warfare was not against material forces, and hence it could not be fought with material weapons. In a classic and striking passage which forms a part of today's lesson, he urges his hearers to "put on the whole armor of God" that they might be able to withstand in the evil day. There comes a time, says Paul, when one must stand and fight. And there must be no vulnerable spots, no breaches in the armor. Twice he refers to "the whole armor of God." And then he goes into more detail, speaking in terms of the armor of a Roman soldier of that day. Loins are to be girded—one is to be ready for instant action; the breastplate of righteousness—one's heart is to be protected at all costs; the feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace—ready always for marching orders and for the long, long trail that winds unto the city of God; the shield of faith that the fiery darts of the evil one might be avoided or turned aside; the helmet of salvation—one's head was to be protected; the sword of the Spirit—we are not to be merely passively good, we are to overcome evil with good. And undergirding all these things there is to be the spirit of prayer, the reliance on spiritual forces and influences, the sense of being a partner with God in a campaign against the unseen forces both within and from without.

Christians are born for victory. They are not to follow the line of least resistance. They are to endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. They are to fight for faith, and to lay hold on eternal life.

People who are content to dwell in dirty and ill-kept surroundings are quite certain to be wanting in high spiritual ideals, and in deep religious sentiment. They cannot possibly be near to God either in their lives, or in their thoughts. God loves order and cleanliness. Poverty can never be pleaded as an excuse for dirt and disorder: for poverty ought to shun dirt as its worst enemy.—Anon.

MONDAY.

A WHOLESOME MAN.

"The law of truth was in his mouth."—Mal. 2: 1-7.

This saying is like that said of David, "A man after God's own heart." It is much to say of a man that "the law of truth is in his mouth." What a wonderful person it must be whose influence is such that all who see him and hear his voice are made to feel that he is a man who speaks the truth and whose heart spells righteousness. He certainly must be one who is "letting his light shine."

Yet to be a person of this kind is entirely possible to all. There is nothing that we do that does not challenge us to a decision of right or wrong, or "Shall I, or shall I not?" We do not even have a thought that does not challenge us this way. So then, at all times, we are either truthful or false. The truth is of God. The false is of the devil. We are not to think ourselves "more highly than we ought to think but to think soberly," and that means live divinely.

Prayer—O Lord, establish us in Thy truth. Fill our hearts with it, and then we know that our mouths shall speak it. Give us Thy hate for the false. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

REJOICING IN SALVATION.

"If he have not works, can faith save him?"—Jas. 2: 14.

"Faith without works is dead, being alone."—Jas 2:17.

Nobody will know what you mean by saying "God is Love," unless you act it as well, saith L. P. Jacks. One cannot make Christ known if one does not know Him.

"If thou speakest twice before thou speakest once, thou wilt speak twice the better for it." William Penn.

* * *

From scheme and creed the light goes out,

The saintly face survives;

The blessed Master none can doubt, Revealed in holy lives."

—Whittier.

Prayer—O Lord Jesus Christ, convince us of Thy spirit, thrill us with Thy divine passion, drown our selfishness in Thy invading love. Amen

WEDNESDAY.

BED-CARRIERS.

"Jesus saith unto him, arise take up thy bed and walk."—Jno. 5: 1-9.

This lame man taking up his bed and walking, stands for the experience of all Christians, for all time; raised from sin to righteousness and doing righteously,—walking; raised from death unto life, beaming with energy for His glory,—walking.

This restoration is the real seal of conversion and the token of heaven's approval. Living such a life: What freshness of vigor, what stimulus to energy and power, what consciousness in Christ!

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, be Thou the Healer of our souls from day to day that we may know no falling away. We bless Thy name forever and forever, and may never forget. Amen.

THURSDAY.

INFLUENCE.

"Your zeal hath stirred up very many of them."—II Cor. 9: 1-7.

The wise man said "Make no friendship with a man that is given to anger; . . . lest thou learn his ways, and get a snare to thy soul." "The apostle said, 'Ye are lights in the world,' that 'ye may, by your good works, which they behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.'"

There is a reason why we should associate with noble souls. Their nobility will inspire nobility in us.

Prayer—O Lord, God, may we love Thy children more and more. Help us to bring ourselves closer into fellowship that we may live closer to Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

REFUGE.

"O Lord my God, in Thee do I take refuge."—Psa. 7: 1-5.

Refuge is a daily need for us all. When one does not elect to take refuge in God, he suffers.

There are sorrows, fears and disappointments; temptations, doubts, and hatreds, and the myriads of sins that make inroads in our lives. These come upon us like a storm and we are defenseless against them. Of whom, Lord, shall we find refuge but of Thee? To whom shall we go for succor but of Thee?

God is a ready and sufficient refuge. To be hid under the shadow of His wings, trusting implicitly in Him, means to dread no foe for we shall have an Infinite and Divine stronghold for every temptation, trouble and trial.

SATURDAY.

HOW MUCH IS A CHRISTIAN A SINNER.

"Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief."—I Tim. 1: 15.

Paul was a saint yet he regarded himself as a sinner, and because he had been guilty of such a dastard deed he regarded himself as "Chief of sinners."

How much do we share such feelings. When we criticise others, let us examine ourselves closely. We may be guilty of the same thing. It is well to look at ourselves through the eyes of others, and try to determine what they think of us. We are sure to find room to mend our ways when we do this. Let us spare no pains to be all that we demand of others.

Prayer—Our Father, we come to Thee for help this day. We should see ourselves as Thou dost see us, even as well as others see us. Forbid that we shall minimize our own weaknesses and sins. We covet and may find Thy full salvation. In Jesus name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

OBEYING THE WORD OF GOD.

"If any man be a hearer of the word and not a doer, . . . he straightway forgeteth what manner of man he is."—Jas. 1: 23, 24.

In the Chronieles we read that the Lord spoke to Manasseh and the people and told them that they were failures and were lost because they paid no heed to the Word of God. We read a lot about the power of His word unto salvation. It is suggested that you take your Bibles, turn to the concordance in the back and look up all the references on the "Word" and "Word of God."

Our lesson means this: No one can hear God and the world at the same time. Like Manasseh, if we will not take ourselves, we have to be taken where we will have leisure enough to think and hear the voice of God, and repent of our sins. In the Bible we hear Him speaking, we hear there the echo of the thoughts of holy men, we visualized there the glory of the church, we find an interpretation of the sweetness of dear ones and companions, and most of all we find a knowledge of Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit. Shall we give heed?

Prayer—Dear Father in heaven, forgive our heedless ways, and create within us a right mind. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

By H. S. HARDCASTLE.

The matter of church attendance involves factors that are vital to the individual and to the church itself. When an individual's attendance at church stands at zero, his interest in the church is not likely to register at the Boiling Point. And unless members of the church attend public services of worship, how can the church have such services? A homely illustration is the relation between a coal fire and a glowing individual coal. Separated from the fire the coal soon loses its glow and its heat. Deprived of the living coals, the fire would cease to exist. The one needs the other.

There has been a gradual decline in church attendance in recent years. Statistics show that in Protestant churches this decline began about fifty years ago, became noticeable at the opening of this century, and is now very serious in many sections and churches, and unless checked may prove disastrous. In seeking for causes for this decline it is obvious that persecution, governmental repression, or organized hostility are not contributory factors. Neither should it, or can it be said, that the ministers themselves are to blame. There are other less spectacular but more pervasive and permanent factors. They can be only briefly touched upon, indeed only listed in this article.

Factors in the Decline of Church Attendance.

1. The loss of external pressure, such as the pressure of the authority of the union between church and state which existed during the early life of the Colonies; the pressure of parental authority when parents compelled their children to go to church; the pressure of public opinion, when it was considered "the thing" to go to church; the pressure of fear of divine displeasure, or punishment in the future world if one did not go to church. These pressures or aids have largely disappeared from modern life and church attendance has affected thereby.

2. The disappearance of what may be called secondary motives, such as the idea that attending church helped business or other personal interests; the satisfaction of leadership, the outlet for altruistic service, all of which can now be found in activities or organizations outside the church; the loss of the sense of duty and the call of conscience; and perhaps strongest of all, the loss of the sense of the importance of public worship.

3. Competing calls. Sunday or the Lord's Day used to have preeminence in the lives and on the time of the people. Now the newspapers, automobiles, excursions, week-end parties and trips, public resorts, athletic contests of all kinds, concerts, movies, lectures, dinners and dances, and the radio present their attractive and seemingly compelling appeal. In comparison with these things the services of the church sometimes seem very uninteresting and even dull.

4. What might be called the waiting mood. Modern business has sought people so consistently that now people wait to be sought. People wait for the church to come to them instead of going to the church. And the drifting mood has been a direct result of this waiting mood.

5. Indifference on the part of both the pulpit and the pew has been to some extent a contributing cause. People have not been roused to the seriousness and the significance of the decline in church attendance.

6. The spirit of independence which is characteristic of our time has caused some people to revolt against some of the doctrines or dogmas of the church, or to remain away because they did not think the services of worship were vital.

7. The unchristian character of so many members of the church, which has caused some people to absent themselves from the church. By the way this is often used as a reason when it is only a poor excuse.

These and other factors have entered into the situation which has arisen concerning attendance at public places of worship.

Some Suggested Ways Out.

1. More services of worship. It is suggested that perhaps Protestants ought to follow the example of Catholics in having more services of worship on the Lord's Day, and thus make a wider appeal to the members of the church. Some who suggest this plan emphasize the matter of attendance at any kind of service rather than emphasizing the type and spirit of the service. They would count all who attended any service during the week. The writer feels, however, there are values in a formal service of worship, that is in a definitely religious service of worship which cannot be found in a forum or a supper conference or some such meeting.

2. More varied services of worship. Others suggest that the services of worship be made more varied in order to appeal to the various motives and interests of the people. There is, of course, sound principle in this suggestion. Religion can be made more interesting by presenting it in churches must take on new forms if it is to be continued in coming years.

3. More vital service of worship. Every effort should be made to make the services vital, to give significance and power to them. In the final analysis the service of worship should minister to the spiritual nature and needs of men and women; boys and girls. If people find something in a service of worship that helps them to find God and to live for Him, they will be more likely to come regularly and with greater profit. The church makes a mistake when it attempts to compete with secular agencies. The church has a pretty wide and open field when it comes to ministering to the deeper, spiritual needs of folks through a service of worship. Ministers should seek to be so Spirit-filled and to make their services of worship so vital, that hungry men and women are fed. One may get a crowd by catch-penny devices, he may even build a congregation; but he will not build a church nor will he build men and women. As Dean Brown says in one of his books, make your service interesting, make them religious, make them vital and spiritual.

4. More vivid sense of duty and privilege. Many people do not like the word duty. They like to think or religion in terms of privilege. There are to be sure privileges in religion. But as a rule privileges are the rewards of duty. Ministers have been too apologetic about the matter of church attendance. They need to put a new emphasis upon the duty of attending public services of worship. They need to develop in their people a conscience in the matter. It is more than a privilege to go to church; it is a duty, a sacred duty. It is one of the most effective expressions of church loyalty. The Scriptures enjoin us not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together. Children are not

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Let us suppose two things—First, suppose you had been unfortunate when you were a little child and lost your father and mother and you had been left without home or food, clothing or friends who could take you and give you a home, don't you think you would have been happy and grateful if your orphanage had taken you in?

Second, suppose you were left a father or mother as the case may be in destitute circumstances with a number of little children and it would be impossible for you under the circumstances, to give them bread, don't you think you would be happy for the Orphanage to come to your rescue?

If you should be called to the other side and leave little children without a home and the church through its orphanage, should take them in and give them a home, food, clothing and care, don't you think it would make your joy just a little more to know.

One Sunday in the near future, your church and Sunday School will make a special offering, as a Thanksgiving offering, toward the support of the Christian Orphanage. If the mothers now in glory can look down from above and see you contributing to the Christian Orphanage, don't you think,—if it were possible, a smile of appreciation would light up their faces. When the offering is taken, what part will you have in it? Don't you feel that you will get a great deal of joy in giving to help some mother's child in the Christian Orphanage?

likely to take seriously the matter of church attendance unless the parents give them a good example. We need to exalt the place and power of worship, the public worship of God.

The problem of church attendance is ultimately a spiritual one. There are devils of indifference which can be cast out only through the power of the living Spirit, for this kind cometh not out save prayer and fasting. The victory of securing greater church attendance is reserved for those who are willing to pay the price.

As you learn, teach; as you get, give; as you receive, distribute.—

CONGO CROSSES.

in the minds of these savages, the blood of pygmies, or else they are brilliant designs given them in the sky for the decoration of their bright and native cloth. The author continues her explanation of these heavenly bodies, all of which are interpreted by the savages, as full of deep significance and meaning. The spirit of the Southern Cross is visible over the whole of the Congo and is clearly seen amid the other constellations and outshines the monsters with which it is surrounded.
Now over against this Southern Cross in the sky, our author puts another Cross, the Cross of the Christ, which was set upon a hill 1900 years ago and from which Cross and its sufferings gleam the light which alone can lighten the benighted minds of Africa and the Congo and which light she, herself, and the other missionaries have been sent to carry to these people, suffering from a thousand superstitions and bound down with an unspeakable fear of demons and evil spirits that surround them on every hand as well as the sky above and the earth beneath them. We are called upon as those who have had light to share it with God's creatures who do not have it and who are bound in superstition, savagery and fear until we give them light. Then our author sketches, very briefly, the dimensions and marvelous resources of Africa. Did the reader know that Africa is as large as all of the United States, all of China, all of Europe, all of India, more than half of Australia with still enough room to crowd in a few other countries the size of Japan. This Belgian Congo colony alone, that we the to study, located as it is, a small blue blotch, a little south of the center of Africa, this colony alone contains 918,000 square miles with a population of 9,402,604 souls and is 80 times as large as far off Belgium, the country which owns and governs it. We must bear in mind that all of Africa, great as it is, as a continent, has been partitioned among the other nations of the earth who now govern various portions which they have taken by war, or acquired by theft and trickery. The great continent of Africa has been, and still is, the world's great storehouse of rich merchandise which has attracted and suffered from the greed, the thefts and exploitations of other countries. From Africa we get the larger portion of our diamonds, of our gold, of our rubber and of oil and of other rich treasure beyond measure. Well does our author point to Africa and Congo as the continent of God's adventure and of God's unspeakable riches and resources. One cannot in a brief outline give any adequate idea of this marvelous book, but I ask you to read this book and try to realize how many helpless people have been enslaved, pillaged, plundered, murdered, and in whose benighted land the most disastrously deeds have been committed. No wonder David Livingstone the great explorer declared, "Africa is the open sore of the world" and no wonder that great man of the ages and of God died on his knees in the heart of Africa praying the blessings of God upon any and all everywhere who would come to help Africa and the poor African. These people of Africa were made, as we ourselves were, in the image of God and because of our sin against Him we suffered four years of a bloody conflict in our Civil War, our country engaging in a struggle of death from which we have not recovered. Other nations have suffered equally, both for their sins and afflictions, and will continue to suffer until we expiate sin and atone that crime by giving to Africa the light and life of Him who said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men into me," and of whom it was said, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

MRS. J. O. ATKINSON.

day P. M., November 2, 1936, at Elon College.)

CHURCH FINANCE.

2. Carefully prepared budget.
3. Restriction of your special collections to as few as possible.
4. Adequate record of the church income and disbursements.
5. Complete individual record of the member's pledge and payment toward fulfilling this pledge.
6. Annual report of the church treasurer and the proper recording of this report by the church secretary.
7. At the beginning of each and every church year give information to your church membership about the estimated income and expenses.

You are here tonight because you are interested in your church, and by attending this conference you are rendering your church a real service as well as bettering yourself. Every person is indebted to his church and should respond when called to service for it is through such service, even though it deals with finances, that we are brought closer to our church and to the better and finer things of life.

Mrs. Ellis Clark of Waverly Church was admitted to the Biblical class, and the conference was reminded by the Educational committee that Mr.
Emmanuel Hedgepeth of Holland is a ministerial student in Elon College, that Rev. Aubrey C. Todd is studying in Chicago Theological University and that Revs. Herbert G. Council and A. Lanson Granger, Jr. are students in the Divinity school of Yale University.

The Home Mission Committee recommend that $1,000.00 be paid on the indebtedness of the South Norfolk Church and the remainder of the conference mission money be paid on the indebtedness of our church at Newport News.

You Are God's Opportunity

By Rev. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

It was my privilege once to see a statue of one of my college professors before it was completed. It was a striking likeness of his virile personality. When I made a suggestive criticism, the artist replied: "When the statue is finished, those weaknesses will be moulded out."

Paul had gone far in character and spiritual insight, but he wrote: "I count not myself to have apprehended, but I press toward the mark." He realized that he was the workmanship of God, the great Artist.

The personality of everyone of us is the result of centuries of building. The bad and the weak are the inheritances from our ancestry or the wilfulness of our own work. The good in us has come because our ancestors and we ourselves have responded to the directing mind and the shaping hand of God, the patient, tireless Builder. From the beginnings of creation God, with infinite wisdom and patience and tenderness, has sought to mold into goodness and unselfishness the characters of our ancestors, that through them there should come to every one of us a clean and fair inheritance.

What versatility the Artist has! Every person, through the centuries, is more or less the personality that God has molded. No two persons in all the millions of time are alike. God works through different temperaments and minds to develop free men and women, with varieties of thoughts, emotions and expressions in life, but one in faith, purpose and ideals.

Some one has said: "You are God's opportunity in your day. He has waited ages for a person like you. If you are yielded to Him and His will is being performed through you, then God is having His opportunity. If you refuse Him, then God loses His opportunity" to shape you and through you to shape other personalities.

God is building a human mosaic. Through the varied talents of men, He is building a world of variety, charm and goodness. One paints a picture, another writes a poem or a book, transacts business honestly and unselfishly, teaches with appreciation his pupils, preaches his sermons, or heals the sick. So every disciple does his part, and together they build a fine and friendly world.

What an appeal to Youth! God has worked in your ancestors to make you clean and fresh and reliable as you face life. He has worked for ages to produce you. You are God's opportunity. Through you He would help your companions and generations yet unborn.

A life without faith narrows as the years come and go. As one completes the ambitions and tasks of life, the zest of the struggle for things temporal dies. Your courage weakens; your feet grow weary; you lose confidence in the triumph of social justice. As citizens of our country and of the world, without a belief in a God of goodness and wisdom, how can one become, in the present tangles, less than hopeless?

In painting a picture, one must not only see the things near at hand clearly, but must have in his mind and put upon the canvass, a long perspective. England has almost no great paintings of the natural world, because she has no mountains. In life, one must see the things near at hand—the good and the bad—but in the far distance ideals, like misty mountains, stretch out on the horizon of Time into the endless realms of Eternity.

The past has produced you; the future depends upon you. Such outreaches of life keep the spiritual zest growing in richness and power. Such persons never really grow old. "By the grace of God I am what I am."

The New Patriot.

Who is the patriot? He who lights
The torch of war from hill to hill?
Or he who kindles on the heights
The beacon of a world's good will?

Who is the patriot? He who sends
A boastful challenge o'er the sea?
Or he who sows the earth with friends,
And reaps world-wide fraternity?

Who is the patriot? It is he
Who knows no boundary, race, or creed,
Whose nation is humanity,
Whose countrymen all souls that need;

Whose first allegiance is vowed
To the fair land that gave him birth,
Yet serves among the doubting crowd
The broader interests of the earth.

The soil that bred the pioneers,
He loves and guards, yet loves the more
The larger land without frontiers,
Those wider seas without a shore.

Who is the patriot? Only he
Whose business is the general good,
Whose keenest sword is sympathy,
Whose dearest flag is brotherhood.

—Frederic L. Knowles.

Dean Luther A. Weigle of Yale Divinity School, Yale University, was our chapel speaker Monday morning at 10 o'clock. It was a great privilege to have Dean Weigle on the campus and to have him address our faculty and students.

Dr. Rawlinson, editor of "The Chinese Recorder" and serving under the American board, was a recent visitor at Elon College and addressed the Woman's Missionary Society while there. Dr. Rawlinson has been visiting a number of churches in the Southern Convention.

EAST ALABAMA MEETING.

The East Alabama Association of Congregational-Christian Churches met October 14th-15th, with Bethany Church, Phenix City, Alabama, with second day's session with the United Church.

Rev. J. P. Bean was moderator and presided throughout the entire session. Most of the thirty-three churches were represented, and the apportionments were quite a bit more than last year. A unified, enthusiastic spirit prevailed throughout, and there was evidence of greater undertakings for next conference year. Rev. A. R. Van Cleave preached a very able sermon at eleven o'clock the first day, comparing the church to "children playing in the market place."

A most bounteous feast was spread which was enjoyed by all present.

Among the outstanding addresses of the afternoon was one by Prof. W. C. Edge on "Some Vital Problems of This Association." Prof. Edge is one of our farsighted, consecrated laymen.

The session of the young peoples group, led by Miss Marguerite Davison, was very inspirational, a very important part of which was an address by Miss Ruth Seabury.

Devotionals by the local church opened the evening session. Then Rev. G. W. Penn brought a report on moral reform which clearly showed that he had been doing deep vital thinking. Rev. A. R. Van Cleave delivered a message on "Better Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Societies." Probably the most outstanding feature was an address on "The Missionary's Task and Opportunities," by Miss Seabury.

The Association resumed labor the second day at 9:30 A. M. motivated by the same spirit of yesterday. The report on Education presented by Rev. A. R. Van Cleave was outstanding and thought provoking. After discussion and adoption of same, Rev. G. H. Veazey delivered a sermon on "The Present Day Challenge to the Church." Another feast was spread which clearly proved that the good ladies of Phenix City are vitally interested in the work of the church that they so much love and appreciate. The work of the afternoon was finished in fine shape and we went away feeling that it was good to have been there.

Rev. Sidney Bunker, professor of religion at Talladega, Rev. G. W. Penn pastor of Lanett Church, and Rev. N. A. Long, pastor of United Church, Phenix City, were received into the fellowship of this association.

The following officers were elected: President, Rev. G. H. Veazey; Vice-President, Rev. George W. Penn; Secretary, H. P. Beard; Treasurer, John W. Payne.

The next session will be held with Dinglers Chapel.

NEWPORT NEWS INSTALLS PASTOR.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar was installed as pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News, Va., Sunday, November 1st at 3:00 P. M. Scripture lesson was read and prayer offered by Rev. J. W. Dixon of Chestnut Avenue Church. The installation ceremony was conducted by the writer. The charge to the church was delivered by the retiring pastor, Rev. R. L. House, and the charge to the minister by Dr. J. G. Truitt.

Welcome on behalf of the ministerial union was given by Dr. E. T. Welford of the First Presbyterian Church, and on behalf of the church by W. H. Baker.

Mr. Dollar is a native of Alabama, the son of a minister, and comes to Newport News from LaGrange, Georgia, where he served the First Congregational-Christian Church for five years. Mr. House is closing a very successful pastorate of five years.

This is an active church of good people. We congratulate the new pastor on his large opportunity for service.

N. G. NEWMAN, News Editor.

NEWS FROM HOLLAND.

The Holland Christian Church recently had an annual fellowship supper which was greatly enjoyed by the half-hundred people who were there. Following the supper a quarterly conference was held. Reports showed that the church had met all obligations including conference apportionments. The Ladies Aid Society and the finance committee deserve special mention for the fine work done.

The church and Sunday School observed Rally Day and the pastor preached on "Bewildered Youth" using as his text, I Timothy 4:12.

We have recently installed a heating system costing $1,290.00. It purifies the air as it circulates, giving warmth in the winter and keeping the house cool in summer.

Our young people are working out a unified program under the name of Youth Fellowship. Both the missionary society and Christian Endeavor are included and Mrs. E. T. Batten is the superintendent for the year.

We gladly welcome Mrs. Edwin Daughtery as a member of the church.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A SHATTERED DREAM.

The day before publication of this paper is known as Armistice Day. It will long be remembered by millions of people around the earth. Some of us will never forget the joy that came when an armistice was signed and fighting ceased in the World War. We thought that our dream had come true.

Homes had given their best men, money and talents to fight for democracy and that war should cease. We even prayed that the great God of all the earth would give us victory so the dream of the prophet (Isaiah 2: 4) would be fulfilled and implements of war could be used for peaceful pursuits and people would learn war no more.

But that fine dream has been shattered again. Democracies are almost gone from the earth. Dictators have taken their places. War-clouds hover over the earth, and every nation seems to be madly intent on arming to the limit. Nine billion dollars went into armaments last year. Probably more than that will be spent this year, and much more next year. The dream of the prophet is turned around. We are making implements of war out of materials that should be used in peaceful pursuits.

We cannot blame Europe or Asia. Our own country seeks to lead them all. No country must have more battleships than we. Our increase in armaments is simply astounding, and the limit is not yet. The churches say we are too poor to send missionaries of peace, but the government knows nothing of our poverty when war is considered.

Our present armed peace is a denial of our religion. Jesus said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you." (Matt. 5: 44). Our preparations are not for love. When Jesus met the test in his own experience, when soldiers came to take him by force, a friend drew a sword and began to fight. Jesus told him to put up the sword, for those who fight with the sword get killed by the sword, and that God could send sixty thousand angels at once to intervene and protect him, if He wanted them. (See Matt. 26: 51-53.) For him to fight was to deny His faith in the Father, God. It is no less for us.

Our dream of peace at the close of the World War may have been shattered a bit; we may not have gained our goals; another war more terrible than the last, may sweep the earth and rid it of its present civilization; but in the mind of the prophet will still dwell the hope for permanent peace, and to that end the Church should zealously work. The voices of those who value themselves and their loved ones, who cherish no hatred in their hearts, and who believe in Jesus Christ should be heard by the leaders of the nations. They should speak peace, prepare for peace, and guide their government in the paths of peace. This, we think, is the reason for wearing a forget-me-not prepared by cripples from the last war, and for observing Armistice Day.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

More than two hundred people representing the churches of the Western North Carolina Conference met at Needham's Grove last week to transact business for the Lord and His Church. Rev. T. E. White presided, Mr. Geo. T. Gunter kept the records, and Mr. O. D. Lawrence handled the money. It was the privilege of the editor to sit in these councils of the churches and he enjoyed the fellowship. He is glad to pass along to readers some of the things that were given in that Conference. The meeting next year will be with the Big Oaks Church near Eagle Springs, N. C.

An interesting feature of the Conference was the program that was given by the young people of the Big Oaks Church. Representatives of the group spoke on the different verses of the twenty-third psalm. The minister, Rev. Mr. Talley, gave the first talk, which was good, of course. The young people have furnished copies of their talks which will be given here for your joy as soon as space permits.

REV. CARL H. VOSS INSTALLED.

Rev. Carl Hermann Voss was installed pastor of the United Church in Raleigh on the evening of October 21st. The installation sermon was preached by Rev. Carl August Voss, D. D., father of the Raleigh pastor, and pastor of the Smithfield Congregational Church at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. The formal installation service was conducted by Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Superintendent of the Extension Boards for the District of the Southeast. The installing prayer was by Dr. H. Shelton Smith of the Duke School of Religion. Others participating in the service were Dr. Leon E. Smith, President of Elon College; Dr. C. Rexford Raymond of Southern Pines; Dean Elbert Russell of the Duke School of Religion; Professor L. L. Vaughan of State College, Raleigh; Dr. Stanley Harrell, speaking on behalf of the Southern Convention; and Dr. Eugene C. Few, pastor of the Edenton Street Methodist Church, Raleigh.

Rev. Carl H. Voss was ordained last year by his father in the old Smithfield Church, his father having been previously ordained by his own father in that church. Mr. Voss is the fourth in the line of ministers in his family. He graduated from the University of Pittsburg, studied at Chicago Theological Seminary, at the International People's College in Elsmore, Denmark, and the University of Geneva in Switzerland. He completed his work at Union Theological Seminary in New York.

One year ago, Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, who had been pastor of this church for several years, was granted a leave of absence to do Government work in Washington, and Mr. Voss was called as supply pastor. In the spring Dr. Kirbye resigned and Mr. Voss was called as pastor of the church.

THE HILLS IN THEIR TRUE COLORS.

Perhaps one reason why hills are so hard to understand is because there are so many colors and ever-changing shadows over them.

One person comes over the winding trail into the heart of the hills and finds a whole family of children who have never been to school a day and who can neither read nor write. That gives one a sad and gloomy view of mountain life.

The Chairman of our Mission Board came over The National Highway through Carroll County, which is one of the most picturesque roads in the country; he stops at Hillsville, meets the lawyers dressed in their finest feathers, and Carroll lawyers are just like most people in many respects, so they make as good an impression as they possibly can. Then our good Chairman passes on and can't understand why we need a mission in Carroll County. And then, our whole church rises up and wants to know how people get so many, and so different opinions and views of the hills. The question comes up—Why do these people who have means in our hills not help finance this work here? To that I want to say that it is just as it is in many of your towns out there, in that respect. I saw reports on various places in our paper. There are people in Winston-Salem, N. C., who could finance that church but I see they have not done so. I do see that the big church at Norfolk could use some more money, and I know Norfolk is a rich city, but just how can you get the money in the right place? That question has never been answered.

However, as long as I find large families among these hills who have never been to school a day, I will say we need the mission in Carroll County. The State claims there is no way to force these people to go to school. They are leaving such people for the church and Sunday Schools to work on. The church here is still trying to reach, and teach, those who would not be taught otherwise.

There is a pride, known only to the hills, that is poison. It is found in abundance in the mountaineer who has climbed out of a rugged part of the hills, has acquired a reasonable amount of education. Such a person generally goes to a nearby town, gets into business, polishes himself up, gets the new-ground dirt from under his finger nails, puts "stay comb" on his hair, and a flower in his button hole, and—then—ah, then! He won't speak to his poor kinfolks from

"Coon Hollow." And he will hit you if you tell him you know his Uncle Jake who lives over on Squirrel Spur. So you can hardly expect a man like this to feel the need of a mission in Carroll County. He is hard on the underdog. Such a pride helps one to start, and to keep climbing, but it keeps him from enjoying what little success he has and the fruits of his labor. It keeps one from being able to look back with a smile at the old log hut, that was his birth place, as Abe Lincoln was able to do. Ah yes, if these people could have had a little Christian training along as they made their climb, what a change it would have made! So they should not be blamed for their narrow views of such things. It is, in most cases, not their fault. But it is hard on our churches here. Their pride makes them ashamed of our mission here and they fight it rather than support it.

Naturally people do not set any value on a training they have never had, nor do they care for a Christ they have never known. That, and that alone, is what prevents people of our hills from giving support to our church here. I am speaking of those who do have a little money and could give some. If this place was a gold mine, a bank, a railroad, or anything like that, all hands would help, but a Christian Training School sounds like a disgrace and very unnecessary. It is only natural, if one comes to think seriously on the subject. Everyone wants to be born in a high and fine place. I would have dearly loved to have been born in a palace, but I missed it a long way. Don't blame me though, for it was not my fault. I was born in a log hut without my consent or my approval. I am trying to think. This is a part of God's great plan and to make the best of it all. However, I dare not forget that there are others who must come after me. It is for these coming generations that I would like to speak. "God has no hands but ours." It is up to those who have the light to set that light on those hills.

Autumn is coming to our hills now and I see the first red leaves on the maple. The first chilly breeze of fall brings a dread to the hills of another cold winter. Our Elmore's are making a desperate effort to keep the Sunday School going through the cold weather, and so far, people have come out better than usual.

I hope this letter will lend some light on this subject of hilly missions. I have given you an inside story this time and this is something no real mountaineer is supposed to do, no matter how small a child is in the hills he never tells where the still is—not to a "furriner."

IN APPRECIATION.

We, the undersigned Officers and Deacons of Union Christian Church, of Union Ridge, N. C., acting in behalf of the membership of this church, wish to hereby express our high regard and appreciation of Reverend P. H. Fleming, who for eighteen years has been a faithful pastor of our church.

We thank God for sending him among us and for enabling him to preach the Gospel so effectively. During this long period of service he has ministered to his flock, sharing their joys and sorrows with real sympathy, thus endearing himself to the hearts of his congregation.

We thank God for the growth of the church under Dr. Fleming's leadership. Improvements have been marked and during his ministry to this church he has baptized and received over two hundred souls into the service of the Master. We thank God for the beautiful example of a life lived in Goodness and Service, such as our Pastor has ever exemplified.

The church has been called upon to give up its Pastor, on account of his declining health. We wish him to carry our love and fellowship in his heart from day to day. Our constant prayer shall be that his latter days may be filled with the Sunshine of God's Mercy and Love, reflecting the good he has ever striven to accomplish in the Master's name.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"The minister is the key man." That is a hackneyed statement which has been so often repeated it has lost its significance. A layman evidently coined that sentence as a defence of his inactivity and unwillingness to accept personal responsibility. The minister should be a leader but he is not always the key man. If the success of the kingdom depends entirely upon the minister, the problems of the church would be solved by raising the standard of ministry and finding a suitable minister for every church.

There are some churches which will antagonize any minister and make it impossible to advance. Any minister who has served more than one church as pastor will bear witness to the statement that churches are different and there is no fixed policy or plan of procedure that is workable in every church. Sometimes the minister is a misfit and his judgment is not free from error. But the laymen of our churches hold the key to spiritual success in any program of the local church or the denomination. The women of the church are usually willing to cooperate unless a spirit of rivalry or envy enters the field. When envy is aroused and jealousy is kindled, the devil comes into his own. But the laymen (the men) of the church are not awake to their responsibility and opportunity. As a rule the men have persuaded themselves that they are too busy to enter into the active work of the church. Of course they are willing (in many cases) to draw a check for their financial obligations, but that seems to satisfy their consciences, and they leave the promotional and inspirational work to the women. God bless the women for their loyalty and sacrifice. But the men need an earthquake to call them to prayer and deep solicitude.

Too busy to give heart and soul to the work of the kingdom of God. Too busy to attend business meetings in the local church. Too busy to attend church Conferences and Associations. Too busy to read the Bible and the church paper. Too busy to visit men in the interest of the church. Too busy to attend revival services. Too busy to attend prayer meetings. Too busy to die. What can be done about this matter of working overtime for self and no time for God? Where are all the men who are out of work? Where are the unemployed? Why cannot they attend church and find time to do work for God? Now all this is said to come to this point in our observations: the men who think they are too busy are deceiving themselves and are not giving the right answer for their inactivity. Busy people can find time for the things they want to do.

If the laymen of all the churches, in the territory of the Southern Convention, will go to church every Sunday for the next month and seek to answer the challenge for personal enlistment given them by their respective pastors, there will be a great spiritual revival in our churches during the year. Ministers are fighting with their backs to the wall behind which indifferent laymen are hiding in spiritual idleness. God is waiting for our laymen to cease from their secular labor, indulgences and pleasures on the Lord's Day, and march in martial spirit, to the Lord's House and have fellowship with heaven. Laymen the challenge is given you by our Lord Jesus Christ. Will you enlist for service today?

THE BY-PRODUCTS OF AN ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

It is the custom of our denomination for local churches within a given radius to hold meetings annually in which each church is represented by its minister and at least two laymen. We designate such meetings as conferences. The program for such occasions calls for sermons, addresses, reports, discussions, resolutions, etc. All items of business having to do with the local church and with the churches as a whole are considered and actions of various kinds are taken by the representative body. These gatherings are of much value to the program of the church and are of benefit and inspiration to the individuals attending. In addition to the regular routine of business, there are other benefits to be derived from these annual gatherings that are never tabulated and cannot be adequately set forth in facts and figures.

The program committee makes no mention of fellowship, nor does it provide space for such a privilege; and yet fellowship is one of the chief assets of an annual conference. The continuance of the Christian religion is conditioned by the association of its adherents. Christian experiences are enriched by contact between Christians themselves. Christian achievements are conceived and planned for in the communion of believers. In communion with each other, we have a foretaste of the blessedness of communion with God. Paul knew the value of conferring in the interest of the kingdom when he cautioned, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together."

In the fellowship of an annual conference where dozens of local churches are represented, there is also a widening of acquaintance. Christian people who have not, heretofore, known each other personally are introduced, and they recognize each other as laborers together in a common cause. The reach of a man's life is determined in part by the extent of his acquaintance and the number of his friends. The potential possibilities of a Christian's life is decidedly enhanced by the extent of his fellowship in Christian service. His fellowship is determined largely by the extent of his acquaintance. If an annual conference did nothing more than to multiply one's acquaintances and increase his fellowship, it would be worth the time and effort required to attend. Personally, I am in favor of unrestricted delegations from local churches to the annual conference. If the entire membership of the conference just closed, our Eastern Virginia Conference, could have been brought together for the program of the conference, no one would be able to estimate the value of such a gathering. If we know each other and are associated with each other, we become acquainted with each other's problems and together we seek diligently for the solution of the same. A conference of the whole would more quickly discover the needs of our church and remedies for the same than will a conference of a few. If we could all come together in one place and in one accord as of old, we could be baptized with the Holy Spirit.

Out of such gatherings will of necessity come new ideas. Ideas are never born in static minds or lifeless gatherings. They are generated in the warmth of fellowship and the heat of discussion. This is a fine time for somebody to have a new idea for our conference sessions—we have been in the old ruts about long enough—to have a new idea about our missionary work, how to arouse the membership of the church and enlist its energies and resources in a program and a policy to carry the

HARVESTS—PAST, FUTURE AND PRESENT.

No Christian need apologize for the missionary enterprise of the Church. Its harvests have been great and real. In spite of mistakes and crudities, it has made an enormous contribution to the progress of the human race. We can well feel grateful for even a humble part of it.

No movement has gone deeper into life, built more enduring foundations for society, or done more to create constructive forces for world unity. None has shown better adaptability to the conditions of the era now passing or exhibited more remarkable vitality for the future.

As Professor Latourette says in his latest book, Missions Tomorrow, the enterprise has been "one of the most amazing features of an amazing age. . . . the most notable outpouring of life, in the main unselfish, in the service of alien peoples, which the world has ever seen."

And has there been any movement of any kind—political, social or religious—which has been supported by the voluntary gifts of so many individuals scattered in so many different lands?

Missions Will Go On Reaping.

But—what of the future? Will the Christian missionary enterprise make an equally large contribution to the era that is opening?

It should. It is essentially a movement born and bred in Christ. It is an instrument of God. It expresses the heart of the Church at its best. And it has an underlying gospel peculiarly suited to all men and conditions of men—and for all times.

Humans everywhere are going to continue to weep and grow weary, get lonely, despairing, depraved. They are to know hate and anger, fear and defeat. They are to think and live selfishly, fighting and exploiting one another, making of earth a hell of unhappiness.

Communists and Facists, National-Socialists and The Popular Front will in the days ahead struggle for the mastery. Such social forces will be let loose as will threaten to destroy all that has been won through the centuries. Is there, can there be any more certain call for God's Gospel, for God's Love and Power, than that which the human race is bound to utter in its desperate need?

And Missions will go on garnering because the evils of today and tomorrow are world-wide and must be overcome on a world-wide front. "To seek to combat them in only one section is to court disaster. Our western experience with excessive nationalism, with high tariffs which throttle trade, with war, with industry, with such a traffic as that in opium and in arms, has taught us that wise strategy demands," to quote Dr. Latourette, "that the Christian forces be strengthened in those lands where they are now weak, so that the battle against wrong and injustice may be pressed with vigor in all nations wherever wrong and injustice appear."

Yes, the New Day will have a place, and a large place, for Christian Missions. Good harvests are in store. We can count on this truth as certainly as God is Love and His Field is the World.—In Missionary Herald.

STEWARDSHIP CONFERENCE.

A revival of the stewardship movement in Protestant churches appears to be developing.

Under the pressure of religious opinion the United Stewardship Council, composed of representatives of twenty-four evangelical bodies, is projecting a conference on stewardship to be held in Dayton, Ohio, Monday and Tuesday, November 23rd and 24th.

The theme of the five sessions will be "The Stewardship Approach." Bishop Cushman of the Denver area of the M. E. Church will discuss "The Stewardship Approach to Religion."

Bishop McConnell, whose new volume, "Christian Materialism," presents a philosophic discussion of the Christian's relation to things, will speak on "The Stewardship Approach to a Christian Social Order."

Roswell C. Long, former secretary for Southern Presbyterian Church, will address himself to "The Stewardship Approach to Religion for Young People."

"The Stewardship Approach to Valid Philanthropy and Sound Church Finance," will be the subject of addresses by Acting Pres. Marts of Bucknell, Drs. Agar, Weber, Williams, Clarke, Morrill and other specialists in stewardship and canvassing.

The closing session will be devoted to the theme, "The Stewardship Approach to Personal Religion." The Rev. Joseph A. Vance, former moderator of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., will speak.

In addition to these main addresses, Dr. David McConaughy will report the stewardship situation in France and Great Britain, as well as in some of the churches of the mission field.

Dr. H. C. Weber, the president of the Council, in a recent address, stated, "The great growth of gambling, estimated by the Chicago Tribune, as involving five billion dollars a year; the intensification of the 'something-for-nothing' psychology that has grown out of ill-advised or badly-managed national or local relief measures; the restlessness due to pressures here and there against the traditional thrift mind-set of the American people that the principles of stewardship are absolutely essential in the rebuilding of the national spirit and national recovery. This conviction we hope will become coherent and implemented in the Conference at Dayton.

THE WINNING OF YOUTH TO MISSIONS.

The church is the recipient of the most priceless heritage, since to it Christ gave His life and the Cross. To make a supreme contribution to the development of the life of its youth should be its greatest mission. The young people are its most sacred trust.

We, as young people should be missionary-minded, because the call of Christ was that of youth to youth. The mission program presents a challenge to our energy, our enthusiasm, and our hope. Youth can meet this challenge.

The story of Robert Arthington is probably unique in Missionary history. Born to riches, he voluntarily accepted poverty. Reared in a cultured environment and given a university education, he deliberately centered his interests and cut down his wants. Accustomed to the luxuries of a well appointed home, he lived in one room, dining on a red-herring and a crust of bread. All the while his wealth mounted up, and he died a millionaire.

But Robert Arthington did not miserly seek to keep money. He was consumed with a passion, and could give himself no ease till, as he said, "every tribe in every land shall have the gospel." "God has called me to care for the heathen."

It was the eager evangelistic zeal of the Baptist Missionary Society and the characteristic "forward trend" of the London Missionary Society that drew him to leave the bulk of his fortune to them. The slogan, "Preach and press on," practically summed up his view.

How can we win youth to missions? Our young people to share in the program of worship for the church by cultivating their own devotional life. Young people can sponsor a Junior Choir, and by having a young people's choir they might do pageants, responses, pantomimes, offertory and preludes. Prepare a missionary worship service for your Sunday School, Christian Endeavor prayer meetings or Church service.

Do you know how one Treasurer got the Missionary idea over to her Society? This is a story true to everyone's response when asking for pledges from the members to make up the quota of their Young People's Society. This particular treasurer was very disappointed in the pledge she received from a very special friend of hers, who, she knew, was able to give liberally. When she picked up the paper the next day after asking for her pledge, the treasurer noticed an account of a luncheon being given at the Country Club by this same girl friend. The treasurer was so worried with her friend and felt that she knew her so well, she made up a bill for everything she would have needed in giving her luncheon, making the total expenses twenty-five dollars—underneath it she put her small pledge of twenty-five cents per month for Missions and sent it to her friend. When the girl friend read it she was touched and sat down and made out a check for Missions equally as large as the one for the luncheon and sent it to the treasurer. This helped the spirit of the whole society. Why can't we try this on our young people?

Now the supreme and most emphatic command our Lord ever gave to His followers was, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every nation." It was His command. It is ours to obey.

Missions—seeking the conversion of Christ—personal witness for Christ by word and deed—the Son of man coming to seek and to save that which is lost.

We must tackle the youth of the church, because the church is the only institution on earth that undertakes the missionary task, does the missionary work. Missions is a shining mark because it is a work of faith, Our Lord instituted missions and only through Him are Missions carried on, and yet there are those in the world and in the church to whom He is saying: "Oh, ye of little faith." People still want to walk and work solely by sight, in spite of the fact that Paul, through inspiration, declared: "We walk by faith and not by sight." Missionary work is the most unselfish and Christ-like work ever done in this world.

For a member of the church to say that he or she does not believe in Missions, is for that member to say that he or she does not believe in the one work which the church alone of all institutions on earth, undertakes and does. Missions were born of our Lord.

Our task becomes easy if we go to God in prayer. We have faith that these forces of evil can be conquered in the youth and by the people. Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth and the life." A real Christian looks for a hard job. Study the characters in the Bible and these that contributed to Christianity endured hardships. Jesus endured the cross. He was rich, but He became poor that we might become rich. Columbus had no easy job when he discovered America and all through the ages the men and women who have contributed most to the world endured most suffering. The world today needs more men like Kagawa. If the world is to be saved for Jesus, the youth of today have no time to waste.

I am convinced that God's message to us is that we let His light shine through us. Some may have more riches, more education, more leadership, more personality, but whatever we have, no matter how small, if it is dedicated to His work, the scale of justice will balance some day and the weight of our work in Him and for Him will count.

In summer conferences young people often find God. The experience at an eastern college is typical; only one of the dozen girls at a dinner table gave evidence of knowing the two great commandments. Much less did they know the agony of soul through which Jesus passed in meeting the daily situations of life. It seems strange to say that Sunday School young people need to be told the story of Jesus. But that is the tragic truth.

Are we grateful beyond mere words, for our daily bread? Would we like to register our gratitude to the Father who feeds us? Would we prove that we mean it when we say Grace at meal-time? Then the Cent-a-Meal-Box is a blessing, and not a bane, a joy and not a disturbance. Thousands, yes, more than fifty thousand of these beautiful reminders, now grace the dining table of those who seek to show their faith by their works. It seems little? Yes, very little. Little atoms make up the body, and little grains of sand make up the seashore and the great earth. A penny each meal of the day for the family? Not much, but these pennies consecrated to God are carrying the Bread of Life, spiritual food, to the ends of the earth.

The "one good deed a day" of the Scouts becomes a habit in the scouts and in all sincere Christians. But obstacles loom that seem to hinder one from effective service. "I have only one talent," says one; "I haven't an education," says another, but Dwight L. Moody is proof that there is an education that comes from a familiarity with the Scriptures and a passionate love for others.

Use what you have and your life will be a blessing to others and your deeds will help build the kingdom. We have love, "The love of Christ constraineth us." Paul and Drummond were right, "Love is the great-

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

HOW DO YOU CHOOSE TOPICS FOR YOUR MEETINGS?

Various methods are used in young people's groups for preparing and carrying out programs for the Sunday evening meetings. We have that old and all-too-familiar group, whose leader passes around "clipping" on the Christian Endeavor topic to the other members, who usually manage to "rise to the occasion" enough to read them at the meeting. Sometimes variety is introduced by giving out questions to be answered instead of clippings to be read or memorized—such question having been secured from a discussion of the "topic" in some paper. These societies accept without thought of change the regular topic for that Sunday evening—whether they follow the Christian Endeavor Topics, the Christian Life Topics (which are those prepared by the Young People's Department of the Congregational-Christian Church), or those of some other series.

All of these above mentioned sets of "topics" are splendid, but it is impossible for a certain series of topics chosen by an organization of national scope to be the very thing needed on a certain Sunday in all rural and urban young people's groups throughout the country. They are the best available to fit the interests of the majority, but you cannot expect each one to be the best one you could find for your particular group.

Therefore, there are some societies where the programs are planned by a special committee for one month—or for several months—in advance, using all the available materials and combining them with their knowledge of the needs and interests of their particular local group. In a group of this type, the program committee would secure a list of the Christian Endeavor Topics, the Christian Life Topics, and any other topics available. To this list they would add certain topics which have been suggested by members of their local groups. Out of all these they would select those topics best suited to the age level, interest and need of their own group at that particular time.

With this planning done in advance, it is possible to secure materials about any subjects chosen for future discussion or presentation. With this type of selection of particular topics, it is also possible to have readers who will be qualified to direct your thinking along these lines, since you have the members of your group in mind when you do the selection of the subjects. Furthermore, you will be developing a better type of leader, for in many cases they will be required to look up material on their subject and plan in detail their own meeting from various sources, instead of merely cutting some clippings from a paper.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME—A PATHWAY TO BETTER LIVING.

"Nineteen hundred years ago there lived upon this earth, One who touched the depths of the human soul and reached the heights of spiritual experience as no other has ever done." That person caused the beginning of what we know as the Christian home. Of course, there were religious homes before Jesus, but He came so we might build Christian homes that would be as a pathway to better living.

I think Christ had a vision of the Christian home as being the starting place which leads to future life and paves the way over the rugged places. He realized the need for guidance to people who undertake this pathway, so he gave us parents, prayer, and the Bible as sources for this guidance.

If the home be Christian then we have, because of wider experience, the parents wisdom; we will know the uses and the blessings received from prayer by the contact and daily use; we can learn right from wrong and receive many other helpful facts from the daily use of the Bible. These, if for no other reason, are enough to challenge us to think and try and build new Christian homes.

In the home children receive the first training of any kind. This training, whether it be good or bad, lingers throughout life; so why not make these first teachings the teachings and principles of Christ.

When a home becomes Christian and the Christian home leads the pathway to better lives, then we are going forward.

Introductory Talk.

The things we see are much easier to remember and stay with us longer than do the things we hear. Many minds are of the photographic type. Vision absorbs what the ear cannot. This makes it important to study the movies.

Each individual should face the morals of the movies with an open mind. Just because one likes the movies is no reason to cause one to fail to condemn that which is bad for them. The movies are here to stay. And, since they are, let us make them the best possible.

Imagine the number of lives that are influenced by moving pictures, when "seventy-seven million people attend the picture theatres each week. . . . Eleven million of these are under fourteen years of age."

It may be well for this meeting to select one popular picture and analyze it. Any young person should be able to discuss with fairness the scenes in a picture which have a good or bad effect upon the mind.

There are four evils in regard to administration which we should oppose as Christians: (a) "Block booking," the contract system which forces a theatre operator to take all the shows in the deal; (b) "Double features," the showing of a good picture with a vile one; (c) Lotteries and gambling schemes to increase the attendance; and (d) Sunday movies.

For Discussion.

1. What is a "good" picture?
2. Are all pictures suitable for children? Why?
3. What are Christian standards for movies?
4. Do the modern movies develop a good culture? If so, what is it?
5. What is the "Legion of Decency?"
6. What can our society do to help create better movies?

THE HEROISM OF CHRISTIAN FAITH.

LESSON VII—NOVEMBER 15, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."—John 15:13.

LESSON TEXT: Acts 21:12-23,30; Romans 9:1-5.

Foes in Friends.

The Christian life is a constant warfare. One has to fight against enemies which would keep him from living at his best. And one often has to fight against friends who, unwittingly or selfishly, would keep him from doing his best. Today's lesson illustrates that truth. Paul on his way to Jerusalem, stopped at Caesarea Philippi where he visited Philip, the evangelist. A prophet from Jerusalem named Agabus with prophetic insight foretold that if Paul went on to Jerusalem, bonds and persecutions awaited him. His friends immediately besought him not to go up to Jerusalem. They were, of course, doing what they thought was right. As a matter of fact they were trying to keep Paul from doing his duty and fulfilling the will of God. How often this is true. A man's foes are often those of his own household. Many a mother in her selfish love for her child keeps him from the best. How many there are who have listened to the advice of friends as they have faced some stern demand of the Gospel, and who have been turned aside from the path of God's purpose because of the short-sighted advice or action of a loved one or friend.

Moral Heroism.

But Paul was made of sterner stuff. He refused to be turned aside from what he knew was the will of God. He rises to great heights of moral heroism when he says "I am ready not only to be bound, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." So insistent was he that his friends finally said, "The will of the Lord be done." It takes a mighty purpose to steady and strengthen a man like that. It takes more—it takes a great love. That was the secret of Paul's heroism. He loved Jesus supremely. He counted not his own life dear unto himself. He sought in all things to please Christ, no matter what the cost. It helps to stiffen one's moral backbone to read something about this man Paul, and to catch something of his spirit.

Moral Compromise.

And yet this same man, Paul, because involved in what amounted to a compromise when he did go to Jerusalem. He responded to the suggestion made by the brethren in Jerusalem that he take upon himself a Jewish vow in order to demonstrate that he was not trying to abrogate Mosaic legislation. It was apparently a harmless suggestion, but it represented a compromise—it was a strange sight to see this man who taught deliverance from the law, and union with Christ, submitting once more to elementary things. It is always dangerous to act on the theory that the end justifies the means.

Supposing.

Paul brought some Greek friends up to Jerusalem with him, and was seen in the city with them. Later, of course, Paul went into the temple, but as a matter of fact, his Greek friends did not enter into the temple proper with him for it was against the Jewish law for Gentiles to go beyond the Court of Gentiles. But these Jews in their vindictiveness did not take the trouble to get the facts in the case. They "supposed that Paul had brought Trophimus into the temple," and things began to happen. There was a riot in the city, and Paul was about to be killed—all because they "supposed." What tragedies are written in life because people "suppose." They hear some rumor and they take it for granted that it is true. They jump to conclusions. They put two and two together and make five. As Dr. Henry Clay Trumbull once wrote, "A large share of all the misrepresentation and all the injustice in the world comes from people "supposing."

The Sanctity of Property and the Sanctity of People.

The Jews were determined to kill Paul, but they did not want to do it in the temple—they did not want to pollute the sacred building with human blood. A building was more sacred to them than a man. There are many evidences in modern life property is more sacred than persons. But it is caricature on the religion of Jesus that this is so.

Pride in Citizenship.

They were about to manhandle Paul in an effort to get at the truth—they thought that if they scourged him they would know what lay back of all the confusion he had caused in Jerusalem. But Paul calls attention to the fact that he was a Roman citizen, that he was born a Roman citizen, and that as such he was entitled to fair treatment. Heretofore, he had emphasized the fact that he was a Jew—he wanted to be one with his people for whom he felt a great yearning. But he did not purpose to stand by and allow them ruthlessly to carry out their evil purpose concerning him without due recourse to law. It was not cowardice that prompted him to do this; it was common sense. Like Jesus, Paul, did not presume upon divine providence. He was not afraid of any suffering that came in the line of duty, in obedience to the divine will, but he did not believe in allowing the forces of evil to carry out their lawless desires as concerning him in defiance of the divinely appointed means.

THE LAW OF THE TEACHING PROCESS.

The law of the teaching process, both for the public school and for the Sunday School, is as follows; Excite and direct the self-activities of the members of the class. This law is based on the principle that self-activity is essential to the learning process. "Wake up the minds of your pupils," "Set the members of the class to thinking," "Arouse the spirit of inquiry," "Get your class to work" are other ways of stating this principle. True teaching is not that which gives knowledge, but that which stimulates members of the class to gain it.

Growing out of this general principle, there are several rules for teachers as guides to effective teaching:

1. Consider the subject and the lesson to be taught, and find the point of contact with the lives of the members of your class.
2. Try to excite the interest of the members of the class by some statement or some question that will awaken the spirit of inquiry.
3. Put yourself in the place of the members of the class.
4. Teach members of the class to ask the questions What? Why? and How? also Where? When? By Whom? and What Of It?
5. Remember always that knowing comes by thinking, not by being told.
6. Respect the thinking of the members of the class, even though it is not always correct.

Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"THE GREAT CLEANSING."

"Whose fan is in his hand, he will thoroughly cleanse his threshing floor and he will gather his wheat into the garner, but the chaff he will burn up with unquenchable fire."—Matt. 3:4-12.

What a joy it is to believe that there will come a time some day when the world will be cleaned of its dirt and uncleanness, and the good and the beautiful will stand forth forever!

What a mess the world is in! What trash, and filth, and dirt, and the unseemingly, have piled up in all the far corners of the globe. But midst it all we know our God as a God of purity and a God of order, and He who never fails has promised to make the cleansing.

Let us look well to ourselves lest we be tempted and be found wanting when He comes. Let us not be satisfied selfishly, but let us reach out as far as we can and help others.

Prayer—O dear Father, Thou hast given us life for the purpose of gathering with Thee in Thy garner. Teach us how to regard Thy will in all pertaining to life. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"LIVING STORAGE."

"Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee."—Ps. 119:9-16.

What a storage is the heart! It is piled up with pleasures and fears, hopes and loves; hatreds, suspicions, envies and jealousies. Our observation has been that the majority know very little about the word. Prevalent ignorance of the Word of God is pathetic. The most precious of our possessions seems to have no room in the heart. The most potent influence of the world to make the life happy and to direct it aright, is neglected. That power that will outlast all time, we have no time for.

We commend the Word of God to you. Store it in the mind. It is the most profitable of all memories. It meets every need. It enriches beyond our utmost dreams.

Prayer—O God help us, that we may love Thee more deeply and obey Thee more truly. In Jesus' name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"CHRISTIANS WITH CORNERS."

"This hath been done in a corner."
—Acts 26:24-32.

Paul stood before King Agrippa and beared his heart and life to him, so clear was his conscience in the sight of God and man. In this particular he was like Christ. Where ever Jesus was found and whatever He did, His was an open, and abundant, and overflowing life. No one was ever able to successfully accuse Him of wrong. He had no secrets from man. It is said of Him. "He cannot be hid." No one need be a corner Christian.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, through Jesus our Savior, draw us out of ourselves, and exalt our spirits to where we will be ashamed to have dark corners in our lives.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

IT IS MUTUAL.

"Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts."—Mal. 3:7-12.

One of the happiest thoughts man ever had about God is the absolute mutual spirit between man and God, and that thought is born of such texts as we have for our memory today. So prominent was this thought in the mind of Jesus, and so much did He wish it understood, that He used the illustration of the Prodigal Son to make it understood. When the Prodigal returned the Father ran to meet him. The spirit of the language used in this story leads us to believe that the father was eagerly watching for the return of the boy, and at the first glimpse of that ashamed figure the father leaped to his feet and rushed toward him.

Does this mean anything to us? Only let us remember that the longer we postpone the coming the harder it is to come. God is waiting not only for us, but for the world to come to Him, and He is waiting with a heart full of mercy, compassion and forgiveness.

Prayer—O God, open Thou our ears to Thy voice this day, and forbid that we shall harden our hearts.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

POWER TO PRAISE.

"Have mercy upon me, O Lord; . . . Thou that lifted me up from the gates of death:

That I may show forth Thy praise in the gates of the daughters of Zion."—Psa. 9:13, 14.

Space will not admit quotations of scriptures on "The Power to Praise" the Lord. It is suggested that as a little Bible study, you take a concordance and look up the references on the word "Praise," both as a noun and as a verb.

Praise of people and things has a great place in life. The rich and beautiful, the wise and the unlearned, honors, memorials, books, art, and literature. At last, we do not praise enough. What impetus and courage there are in words of appreciation.

Has God this exalted place in our hearts? Or are we neglecting it 'till some convenient season? As we can praise one another while we go about our business each day, so can we praise Him as we go about that business.

Prayer—O Lord of Hosts: Whatever we may exalt, help us to give Thee the highest. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?"—Psa. 13:4.

Speaking of singing the praises of the Lord and giving such praise first place in the heart, we have known folks to be so depressed by circumstances or misfortune that they had lost all power to praise. All song had gone from their soul. Tho' one believes in the Lord and may know mentally that praise is due Him, when they come to such misfortune as this what can they do about it? One can praise God for prosperity and victories. He can sing songs when he enjoys His comforts and joys, but how can he do so in misfortune, poverty and want? We wonder just how much we would sing a song and be glad if we were in such dire circumstances.

There is one way. It must come from that note of heroism in the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. We must emphasize the sterner virtues and put iron in the blood of our faith. We must practice Christian realities even when the clouds hang low over us. We must keep in mind the reality of the better world for which we are striving; and coupled with that the love of humanity, we shall find it possible to sing in all the experiences of life.

Prayer—Grant us, O Lord, to keep on singing when the shadows fall. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"BE STRONG."

"Be strong, yea, be strong."—Dan. 10:10-19.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE COMFORT OF RELIGION.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 40:1.

The Christian religion chiefly emphasizes the glorious work of Jesus Christ. We learn from the Blessed Book that He is our Leader and Guide, our Friend and Counsellor, our example in Faith and Service. He came into the world to lift fallen mankind out of sin, to make us heirs of heaven. We are citizens of the Kingdom at the price of His life. What a sacrifice for a careless world.

We profess to believe in Jesus Christ. We accept the Christian religion. We discover that it offers an outstanding blessing. It is a message of comfort.

Long ago the Divine Voice spoke through the prophet Isaiah proclaiming this Christ and this Gospel of comfort. "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people, saith the Lord." . . . . . "And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. . . . The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever."

God tells the prophet to comfort the people. Christ brought comfort to all. In religion we find the chief source of comfort today. "There is no one who so readily listens to the Gospel as those who have sorrows and tears, grief and pain. In the crucial moments of life, we need more than anything else, the comfort of the Gospel." We always find the comfort we need by waiting patiently upon the Lord. They that wait upon the Lord discover the wisdom and power of God that is willingly imparted to His weary children. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

Religion Comforts Us When Sin Haunts and Distresses the Human Soul.

Our conscience can't be silenced by being told to forget about sin. Neither is it satisfied in the long run by doing a good turn each day. One kind deed does not undo the past. Our religion offers something far greater. As the conscience accuses us, we are told that Jesus forgives all sin. We are assured that not one blot remains. This really comforts, for it tells us that our sin has been paid for as our conscience demands. In Christ we have forgiveness and can be certain that every sin is blotted out.

Religion Comforts Us Likewise in the Hour of Trouble.

Faith does not exempt us from sorrows, pains and tears. Into homes come sickness, misfortunes and losses. Into some homes come life-long afflictions. These are things that try our faith. Doubts arise in the heart. We question the goodness and mercy of the Lord. We are keenly aware that the ungodly flourish. So we begin to question the justice of God. In such crucial moments, God's Word bids us believe that He moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform. He promises to be with us, so that we need not battle with the problems and hardships single-handed and alone. Through His word He shows us how He has been a very present help in trouble to many of His people and will be to us. This encourages us and comforts us.

The Guardian God will hear our petition. We may "lift up our eyes unto the hills from whence cometh our help. Our help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy feet to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper: The Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul. The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even forever."

Such a Religion Leads Us to a Discovery to be Found in the Scripture.

"Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." The Bible tells us of the greatness of God. It tells us of the Matchless Love of Christ for God and for man. It promises to us the Comfort of the Holy Spirit. From its pages we read of the comfort of love. Finally, we are told that we may discover comfort in one another.

"Come, holy Comforter,
Thy sacred witness bear
In this glad hour:

Thou who almighty art,
Now rule in every heart,
And ne'er from us depart,
Spirit of power."

Paul encouraged the Corinthian Church against earthly troubles. He took occasion to reveal this comfort to them. He drew a word picture of Our Father, God, that surpasses any yet conceived. To Paul He is "the Father of all Mercies, and the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." It is the sort that brings cheer. It is contagious. The God of all comfort helps us in time of trouble. When our fellowmen are beset with evil, we may minister to them in His name. God shares with us. We share our cheer with them. They share with others. Soon this bursts forth as a mighty hope that sustains and consoles mankind.

How can God comfort so many of His children the world over at one time? It is the same as with prayer. We find it hard to conceive of God answering so many prayers at one and the same time. "Our trouble here is in thinking of God in terms as we think of men. A man can attend to only one thing at a time, because his capacities and abilities are limited: but God, who is unlimited in capacity and ability, can look after any number of things. We have radios in our homes operated by the energy sent out from the particular station to which we are tuned, but in all probability there are thousands of other sets operated by this same station and at the same time with our set. And as others are tuned in, they, too, are operated just as efficiently as ours. If this impersonal force radiated from the broadcasting station can thus successfully operate thousands of radio sets located in all parts of the world, is there any need for us to doubt that God, who is not only a mighty force but a Person, can cheer and hope, can hear and answer prayers that cultivate the same?

Paul also found comfort in the Son of the Living God. He exhorted the Philippians to unity and humility after the manner of Christ. Everyone who follows the Christ shares his comfort. "If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any tender mercies and compassion, fulfill ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind."

There is unity in the Trinity. In the Trinity there is Love. In all three there is comfort. This universal pringospel to the ends of the earth and save the world for Christ. It is a fine time for somebody to have a new idea about education—Christian education—about how the church and the state can be made to realize the absolute necessity of Christian principles in the educational procedures of society. An individual mind, highly and technically trained, without the moral and devotional restraints of religion is not likely to be constructive in his efforts for society. The whole of life must be trained and developed if it is to make its maximum contribution to the church of his day. The Bible was closed in the first century, but the mind of God has never closed. Daily and constantly, He is thinking for us if we could only discover His thoughts. If the individual will put himself at the disposal of the spirit, he will know the inspiration of new ideas and new purposes in life.

When a new idea comes to an individual, there is a certain amount of inspiration that likewise comes. With a new idea, new opportunities, new fields of endeavor, and new possibilities are evident. In the midst of such a creative atmosphere, one is inspired to greater undertakings. He is determined to undertake what previously has appeared to be impossible. Undertakings that have meant power and progress to the church have been dared under the spell of impelling inspiration received in the fellowship of believers as they face the future in the light of the commands of God and the promises of Christ.

The by-products of our annual conferences may be tabulated in part as fellowship, the widening of acquaintances, new ideas, new revelations, and divine inspirations. No church should fail to be represented in these annual gatherings.

est thing in the world." The second Mrs. Lyman Beecher had a difficult task when she took upon herself the responsibility of rearing the motherless children. Her heart was full of Christian love for them. Note the results: Edward, the scholar; Charles, the educator; Thomas, the original pastor; Harriet, the writer of hymns and "Unele Tom's Cabin"; and Henry Ward, the preacher and patriot.

The dimensions and organization of the church have undoubtedly been beneficial in the past and may have a value for the future, but Scripturally speaking, the sum total of Christianity is missionary. The whole church should be missionary. In order to win the youth of the church to Missions, intelligent leadership is necessary. In order to project into sections without Christ, comprehensive organizations are necessary. In order to carry out the purpose of these organizations within the church, capable leaders are necessary. The spiritual life of the church is no deeper and no higher than its spirit of Missions.

Life becomes worthwhile when youth works for a cause.

May God rift the clouds, dissipate the shadows, enlarge our vision that we may behold Him, and in the splendor of the vision may be become new creatures—a new youth in a new church, working for Missions—and may we have the Grace to offer ourselves as servants; and as servants of the living God, may we have the courage to obey the royal command—Go ye, Go ye and find! Go ye and administer, Go ye and teach, Go ye and save, Go ye and serve, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you."

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

eiple is a source of blessing to all of God's children. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

In the consolation of Christ, we experience the Comforting Father. In the comfort of the Holy Ghost, we become partakers of His justice and mercy. Through Christ we share God's love. Through the Holy Spirit, we cultivate it in our own experience. We grow in grace. We grow in knowledge of God and His Kingdom. We grow in love for our brothers around the earth. John G. Whittier is one who could express this experience in language which we can understand:

"Immortal love, forever full,

Forever flowing Free,

Forever shared, Forever Whole,

A never ebbing sea!

"Our outward lips confess the name

All other names above;

But love alone knows whence it came,

And comprehendeth love."

Paul writes to the Colossian church that his fellowworkers have been a comfort to him. In his letter to the Thessalonians, he exhorts them to Godliness, to love one another, to sorrow moderately for the dead, the resurrection and the coming of Christ. He concludes his plea for them to "comfort one another." "Comfort yourselves together and build each other up." "Warn them that are unruly, comfort the fainthearted, support the weak, be patient toward all men."

Through this process of growth and understanding as experienced by Whittier and Paul, we may find a way to comfort each other. If we grow in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man that is a source of comfort to the community and the church. Some are unruly. Others are fainthearted. Still others are weak and unjust. By the concerted efforts of all, we may reclaim for Christ the prodigal characters. It is also possible to grow in character and personality. Through the greatness and goodness of the Lord, we may inherit a crown of life.

Reynold B. Boden gives us a complete picture of our thought for the day. "Poor, wearied soul and blind! Do you not see, has it not been made clear to you that religion is not an extra that you have to support, but Something that will support you? It is like a mighty ocean that will hold you up if only you will allow it to do so. So far from being an extra, it is an essential; it is not a luxury, it is a necessity. You cannot buy it but you can claim it for your own, without money and without price. It will give you poise; it will give you peace, courage, hope and a mighty outlook. And if you embrace it, it will give to your children the sort of parents they deserve and which they need more than anything else in these formative years. In fact, I do not see how you can possibly earn the eternal gratitude of your children unless your whole life is subject to the continual inpouring of the love and grace of God.

"Think of it, if only you will you can become a miniature Christ; you can become like the shadow of a great rock in a thirsty land. You can become a constant source of comfort and inspiration to those among whom you live; you can become the master of your fate and the captain of your soul—if only you will."

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

These are the words of the Lord to Daniel. Daniel was greatly beloved by God. Read the book of Daniel with the thought in mind that we also may be greatly beloved by God, and that we will be, if we are like Daniel in obedience to His Word.

If we can have this consciousness of God's love for us, there will be no question about our courage and fortitude. From cover to cover, the Bible reveals this to us. His strength is always available. His peace rests upon us. His confidence is a continual inspiration. The secret of our courage, then, rests with us alone.

Prayer—O Lord, we would abide in Thy love. Be Thou our strong tower and our rock of defense. In circumstances of comfort may we not forget. Or if we are in need, may we likewise strengthen our courage to see through and remember. Amen.

THE MAJOR MESSAGE OF A MINOR PROPHET.

(Message of President T. E. White at Western N. C. Conference.)

The prophet Haggai was a minor prophet to the Jewish remnant because he was old when he began, spoke short messages, and prophesied for only four months. His message was major because he had for it a "Thus saith Jehovah of Hosts." Any preacher's message is major when he speaks God's message.

The key word of his prophesy is, "Consider your ways."

Human nature has made little change since the days of Haggai, and the voice of God is the same today as then, if we had an ear to hear it.

Conditions today are very similar to the conditions prevailing in the days of Haggai. They had drought, and so have we; they had blasting, mildew and the palmer worm, and we have boll weevil and bean beetle; they had politicians, and so have we. What they suffered, we have suffered; and, finally, they had minor prophets, and so have we. They had the voice of the people and the voice of God, and so have we.

Their great trouble was putting first things last. They were building houses and ceiling them for themselves, and neglecting entirely the House of God. They admitted the Lord's house needed to be built, but they said, "The time is not come to do it."

There is no harm or sin in things. All things are good. Sin can only occur when we take God's good things and put them in the wrong place.

Man can create nothing, we can only move things in their right or wrong places. Adam might have had an automobile, if he had known how to have taken the things that were here and put them together. Every inch of progress that has come about, or that will ever come about, is due and will be due to the discovery of how to put God's good things in the right place.

The right time must be considered in putting right things together, or our efforts will result in failure. A good farmer may move a good axe into a good forest, move out the good wood, the good stumps and stone, move along a good plow, and move in the best seed of corn in the good month of November, but he will not reap a single seed. He has ignored the time.

The first commandment, the law of the first fruits, the first of the flocks, the first cake of the prophet, when there was only a handful of meal and a little oil, and the words of our Lord, "First the Kingdom of God," all indicate that in all things God must be first.

When I look over the length and breadth of this conference, with its towns and cities, fertile fields and splendid houses, good roads and automobiles, schools that surpass a college of a generation ago, and then behold our churches with pastors so poorly paid, and the great command of our Master almost entirely ignored, I cannot help but exclaim: "Oh, if our people would put first things first!"

I shall be an optimist in spite of everything. There is a blessing in being small—even down. We have the opportunity of getting large, of rising up.

The difference I find between Haggai and myself is that the people obeyed the voice of the prophet, and I do not seem to get my message across.

The Annual is proof as to whether we are putting first things first or last.

There are holes in the bags into which we are putting our money, and the breath of God is upon the products of our fields. The future of this conference is in our pockets.

If we will stop and consider our ways, go up to the mountain, get wood and build, put first things first, we will be hearing the minor prophets proclaiming the major message: "'I am with you,' saith Jehovah of Hosts."

A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, in the Providence of God, our land has been blessed with Peace and a return of Prosperity, we do invite all Churches in our Congregational and Christian fellowship to observe Sunday, November 22, 1936, as a Holy Sabbath set apart for the Giving of Thanks to the Giver of all Good Gifts.

REMEMBERING that the bountiful possessions and manifold pleasures which we enjoy in our day are ours only because Our Fathers lived sacrificially and built enduring foundations for our Heritage, we do recognize our responsibility as Custodians of the Pilgrim Spirit and in this Season of Thanksgiving do rededicate ourselves and our churches to the task of making a Christian America and sharing with all nations our experience of God made known unto men through Jesus Christ our Lord.

THUS FOR THE SAKE OF Little Children who are deprived of health and shorn of opportunity of education, for the sake of Youth who seek a Nobler Way, for the sake of Churches in drought afflicted areas of our land and in isolated places of our nation, for the sake of Men and Women in Other Lands, who do not know that our fathers' God is their Father also, and for the sake of the Ambassadors of the Christ, our missionaries, who with sacrificial love by word and deed do show the Love of Jesus at the crossroads of the world.

THEREFORE, BE IT DECLARED that this year the most appropriate expression of Thanksgiving is the giving. Thus mindful of the urgent needs in our Home and Foreign Mission Fields, we do urge all members of our Fellowship to give a Special Offering for Missions and Benevolences on Sunday, November 22d, as a service of Thanks with Giving to our God of Love and thus to rededicate anew our faith in the transforming power of Jesus Christ our Lord in the lives of men in all nations throughout the world.

RESOLVED, that this special Thank Offering for Missions and Benevolences is to be counted on the apportionment goal of each church, to be divided among the State Conferences and Home and Foreign Mission agencies in accord with the apportionment percentages. Authorized by the Missions Council of Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States of America in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-six.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The Board of Christian Education will gladly help you with suggestions concerning that Christmas program in your church if you will write to 505 South Main Strrt, Norfolk, Virginia telling what you need.

On last Sunday, Rev. Robert Lee House became the pastor of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Virginia. His many friends, and friends of the church, wish for the new minister and his new wife a very happy successful stay with the good people of Portsmouth.

A word of praise was fitly spoken in the resolutions of the various Conferences concerning the entertainment given conference delegates. This is wise and well, for the Good Master said that the servant is the greatest of all, and those who entertained certainly did an excellent job.

Attendance at the N. C. and Va. Conference last week in Greensboro, N. C., was larger than for some years. This fact gave an impetus to the work that will likely show when the records are completed for the coming year. It is a fine thing for people to get together in the interest of the Church.

Our church at Burlington, N. C. has transfered its membership from the Western North Carolina Conference to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, subject to the approval of the Southern Convention. Rev. James H. Lighthourne is pastor.

Announcement is being made of the Eastern Virginia C. M. A. meeting at Liberty Springs Christian Church on December 8th. Rev. J. F. Morgan is the president, and the other appearing on the program include Revs. Joe A. French, Carl R. Key, O. D. Poythress, N. G. Newman, J. G. Truitt, H. S. Hardeastle and E. W. Jones.

Rev. Carl R. Key, pastor of Holland Christian Church, attended Sunday School the first Sunday in November, preached at 11:00 A. M., drove out into the country and preached an anniversary sermon at Zion Colored Church, drove fifty miles and met his teacher training class at Wakefield, drove back and preached again to his own congregation. Do all preachers have an easy time?

The proclamation on the front page should appeal to members of our churches, and we should put the "giving" into our Thanksgiving. It must be remembered that in the Southern Convention the offering is expected to be made for the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, N. C. Every child of the church should share in this fine work. The special Missionary offering will be made in the Carolinas and Virginia at Easter.

The Eastern Virginia ministers held a very happy and profitable session on Monday of this week at Suffolk. It was the regular monthly meeting. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, the new pastor of the Newport News church was received into the fellowship; Rev. Joe French read a paper concerning the observance of Christmas; and Dr. Elwood W. Jones of Franklin discussed the second chapter of I Thessalonians. The ladies of the Suffolk church served a delicious turkey dinner.

Apples Chapel Christian Church, near Gibonsville, N. C. has recently sent in a long list of subscribers to THE SUN. They kept their commission of twenty-five per cent (sending a list equal to ten per cent of the church membership) and paid to the paper forty-eight dollars. This is the largest amount yet sent in by any church at one time. You should have heard the office force rejoice when the letter was received. And think of the joy that will go into the homes of that church for the next year. We are eagerly awaiting a report from some other church.

Rev. A. R. Van Cleave of Wadley, Alabama says: "It may be a bit late to report revivals. However, since it is customary to report them, I desire to report the excellent results at both Antioch and New Hope. Rev. Ramsey Swain, of Vanderbilt University assisted in the meeting at New Hope. There were a total of eleven additions to the church, eight of them being on confession of faith. Rev. Millard Stevens, of Elon College, did the preaching in the Antioch revival. It was an exceptionally good meeting, the membership of the church being increased by five members, all on confession of faith. "No revival was held this year in the Wadley Church, but it assisted in other revivals in town. The work there is going forward. The church has just finished putting a new roof on its building, and will have its building painted within the next few days."

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

The Elon College band is progressing nicely. We have twenty boys in uniform—college colors. They are fine musicians and provide music at the college for various occasions. They play for all home football games and others that may be reached without too great an expense.

Rev. J. H. Jones of the class of 1894 and now of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, was a visitor at the college Thursday of last week.

The North Carolina College conference convened at the O'Henry Hotel, Greensboro, last week. Elon was represented by Dean Messick, Dean Simmons, Registrar Hook, Professor D. J. Bowden, and President Smith.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference, to which the Elon Community Church belongs, met at our Greensboro Church, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week. Delegates from Elon were C. D. Johnston, J. C. McAdams, Mrs. W. P. Lawrence, and Mrs. J. P. Barrett.

MORE THAN SYMPATHY.

It is a fine thing to be in sympathy with the fatherless and motherless boys and girls in our Christian Orphanage, and these children have the genuine sympathy of many and should have the sympathy of all our people. It is also a good thing to sympathize with Superintendent Charles D. Johnson in his efforts and struggle to provide for the many needs of the children committed to his care. But it takes more than sympathy to provide a home, necessary care and training for a hundred children. It requires cash to buy food and clothing, shoes and wraps, school supplies and medicine, and the many other things that have to be supplied. It takes money and a lot of it to buy these things. Sympathy is good, but sympathy plus cash is far better. It is that kind of sympathy that can be felt when the real needs of our Orphanage family are to be met.

As the time for our Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage is at hand, everyone should do all he can at this time in making this offering what it should be. Winter is not far away, and with the coming of cold weather the expenses of the institution are necessarily greatly increased. Let us see to it that the needs of our orphanage children are amply met this winter. The Thanksgiving season brings to you the opportunity of showing your interest in this most worthy cause. Let none fail to do his best, for the need is most urgent.

G. O. LANKFORD.

To My Friends

By THE EDITOR.

Come with me, my friends, for a little journey at this Thanksgiving time. Bring both eyes and a heart that feels. Forget yourself for a moment. See some friends of ours.

It is Thanksgiving Day. In a little hovel which should be a home in Anybody's Town some children gather about their dinner table. Mother is there, but father is gone, never to return. The children are small, hungry, ragged, but bright. The little bit of food is shared, but none have enough. The mother aches for her children, but she cannot keep them and work for their food. What is to become of them? Why should they say, "Thank you" to the world, or to God?

Another Thanksgiving Day. Visit the Big House on the Happy Hill. There are nearly a hundred children there. They have come from broken homes, poverty places, and deserted door-steps. But the years have made them forget. New ideas have crowded out the old. Now they are clean, comfortable, happy, and bow reverently in thanks to the Christ and the Church because they have a home, friends, love and care.

This time visit a little country church. Farmers have come to worship. But they have brought corn, wheat, chickens, eggs, butter, potatoes, and many other things that people eat. They have plenty at home and have brought some to share. They have money, too, and some of that they have brought. With thanks to God, they give for the Christian Orphanage so the homeless and helpless boys and girls may have that which they need. Let's join in the Doxology with those who not only sing, "Praise God from all blessings flow" but also give that His blessings may go to those who need.

Worshippers in city churches will surely remember the boys and girls in the one Home of the Church that we call our own. Let every person who worships in our churches have a chance to share with the children in our Orphanage at Thanksgiving time. Be grateful and give.

I am bigger than anything that can happen to me. All these things, sorrow, misfortune and suffering, are outside my door. I am in the house and I have the key.—Charles F. Lummis.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL SERVICE.

We, your committee on Social Service, recommend the following convictions:

1. That we believe in a social order in human life here that Jesus calls "The Kingdom of God." We believe that this order will bring peace, and a sense of rest and security, and enough of material goods to supply the needs of all;

2. That every Christian man and woman ought to think and act in terms of the social order called the "Kingdom of God" in order to achieve the highest type of living;

3. That the Church ought to be the living and dynamic exponent of such a social order, and work to achieve the incarnation of such a spiritual order in the earthly life of man;

4. We recognize the urgent need of a moral reform among our Church members, as a basis for the coming of Christ's Kingdom among us. It is urgent, therefore, that we do all in our power in public, and private life, to teach and uphold Christ's brief, but comprehensive law of His Kingdom; namely, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart . . . and thy neighbor as thyself."

To keep this commandment and prove our love and allegiance, we offer the following resolutions:

a. That the Sabbath Day be kept holy and used to strengthen our religious life, and not commercialized by sport and amusements;

b. That Church members not let social life and amusements crowd out their spiritual life;

c. That older members realize and accept their responsibility in guiding young Christians in the true way.

d. That excessive movie attendance be discouraged;

e. That we think thoughts of love and peace toward our neighbor and so aid in bringing world peace;

f. That attendance at all Church services be urged, and financial support of all church enterprises be loyally given;

g. That we align ourselves with the forces of Temperance.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ has, of course, an individual and personal application. Its message and its mission is to the individual. But it also has a social application. "None liveth unto himself, and no man dieth upon himself. We are members one of another. Whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it." We may deny this in theory, but we must face it as a fact in life. The Church, therefore, must be concerned not only with saving individuals; it must be concerned with redeeming society. It must see to it that the principles and the spirit of Jesus are applied to life in all its social contacts. The increasing complexity of modern life demands that the social contacts be brought under the sovereignty of Christ;

5. The Board of Christian Education seeks to aid churches in their religious educational programs, therefore, we recommend that this conference, with the cooperation of the pastors, group the churches into workable pastorates, with not more than four churches in any group, for better and more efficient service.

6. We recommend the study of ministerial church ethics by the pastors of this conference.

God bless all words of kindness

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WE HAVE RESOLVED.

This week closes the Conferences in the Southeast for this year. We have met as representatives from the various churches, made our reports, considered our future, and passed our resolutions. Now what shall we do? It was a good thing to meet, to have fellowship, to think together of our united work, to resolve. But if that is all, then the beautiful flower has indeed bloomed to waste its beauty and fragrance on the desert air.

Officers of the Conferences may think they have been honored by their election. Perhaps they have. But if they do nothing about their jobs until next fall, they will have brought disgrace upon themselves. They have been elected to carry on the work that has been planned by the Conference. Now is the time for the members to get together, go over the records, see what was anticipated and make definite plans for doing the things voted by the Conference.

It was a fine thing for the president of the conference to appoint committees, but if the committees are to do nothing until the next conference meets, it would have been far better to have saved the printer's ink and then appointed the committees next year. But if the committees will get together, consider what the Conference resolved to do in the field covered by their committee, and will seek to help the churches do these tasks, then there will be good success in our Conference work the coming year.

Most of the resolutions concerned local churches. Things were to be done in local churches along certain lines. Most of the ministers were present in the Conferences, and so were representatives from the churches. But they will not be able to remember all the resolutions. This makes it necessary for the reports to be printed and distributed to the churches, which will be done, and should be done at once. Next year is too late to begin on this year's resolutions. "The King's business demands haste." Minutes should go to the printer at once, and the printer should certainly, and we believe will, return the printed matter to the churches soon. The editor of THE SUN is very anxious to see this matter carried through this year in such fashion as to give the churches a chance to grow and to bring happiness to all concerned.

We have resolved well. But they do say that the road to the place where none of us want to go is paved with good resolutions. Why not use our good resolutions for a much more noble purpose? Pavement is a good thing, but churches are far better. Our resolutions should build our churches. Now that we have resolved, let us arise and be doing.

THE FLORIDA ASSOCIATION.

The three Florida Associations held their annual meeting in the first week of November. The South East Coast Association was held with the Church at Jupiter, Rev. R. E. Newton, pastor; the East Coast Association at New Smyrna, Dr. Trevor Mordecai, pastor; and the South Association, at Mount Dora, Dr. Andrew M. Brodie, pastor. These Associations this year were unusually well attended and the interest and spirit were fine. The sermons and addresses were of unusual quality and the whole tone of each meeting was inspiring and spiritually stimulating. The topics of the three associations indicated the line of thought. They were: "Going Forward," "Great Purposes," and "Next Steps Toward a Christian World."

One of the outstanding features of the Association, was the participation by Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury of the American Board. In each Association, Miss Seabury brought inspiring missionary addresses. These addresses were not merely informing or challenging but they raised the spiritual level of the meeting and gave those present a sense of the great Christian fellowship and the significance of Christ for the whole world, and the sense of Christian world-mindedness that thrilled and inspired those who heard her speak. At each of the Association meetings, also, the pastor-at-large, Rev. William T. Scott, brought a message which was a fine interpretation of the real essentials of Christian life and service. In each of the Associations, also, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, with a group of young people conducted a Panel Discussion on "Christian Youth in Action."

In view of the fact that there were no churches of the Christian fellowship in Florida, the Associations have been somewhat slow about changing the name, but at each Association this year, the change was made to "Association of Congregational-Christian Churches."

At each of the Associations, the announcement was made that the Southeast Convention would probably meet with the State Conference at Jacksonville in April and this announcement was received with great interest and enthusiasm.

These Association meetings gave to all attending a feeling that the long continuing period of depression in the Florida churches was passing and, there was a new spirit of hope and assurance and a determination to go forward.

THE UPWARD LOOK.

Seeing the rose, I saw a vine
About a mighty trunk entwined,
And found the trunk to be a pine.
And looking up, to see how high
The tree above me, then my eye
Beheld beyond the tree the sky.
And yet we think some holy deed
Of ours the world will never heed,
So small the matter, great the need.
Yet I, who first beheld the rose,
The vine, and then the tree that grows,
Saw heaven itself its gates unclose.
So has some little deed sufficed
To lift some soul by sin entranced,
Until it looked, and saw the Christ.
—Douglas Malloch.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters."—Verse 2.

We have in this verse two of the most precious promises of the Bible. The discipling care of the Shepherd for the sheep, and the guiding of the sheep into paths of blessedness and soul quiet. It would be incorrect to read the first portion of the verse as follows: "He lets me lie down," for back of the work "maketh" is the idea of impelling force. Lie down we must. If we neglect voluntarily to lie down beside the waters, still in prayerful waiting before God, or if we become too busy to sit unhurriedly at the feet of Jesus and learn of Him, then the Good Shepherd who desires ever and always the good of the sheep, will make us lie down for soul-refreshing, and spiritual vision, that we might run with patience the race that is set before us. Was it not thus that the Shepherd dealt with David? Yea, for he said, "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now have I kept Thy Word." "It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn Thy statutes."

"It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps," but is it not comforting to know that the Lord shall guide thee continually? If we claim the promise, "I will guide thee with mine eyes," we must ever take to heart the word of warning: "Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule (balky and stubborn), which have no understanding; whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, lest they come nigh unto thee."

"Guide me, I Thou great Jehovah
Pilgrim through this barren land,
I am weak, but Thou are mighty,
Hold me with Thy powerful hand."

ARTHUR FREEMAN.

"He restoreth my souls He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake."—Verse 3.

"Did you ever stop to think that almost every Scripture in the Bible could be read in a reverse quotation?" You would be surprised to find how often the reverse quotation applies to our lives more truly than the correct reading of the Scriptures. Let us reverse the above Scripture and see if it doesn't apply to our lives more truly in the reverse quotation than it does in the correct way it is written.

"He restoreth not my soul;

"He does not lead me in the paths of righteousness;

"Not for His name's sake."

He restoreth not my soul. Why? Because we will not let Him. We haven't time to let the Lord lead us in the path of righteousness. It is not His name's sake we are living to uphold.

First, to let any Scripture fit into our lives we must let the Lord come into them. The Lord is not going to lead any one and restore his soul until he answers the call: "Follow me." When we take up the cross and turn from the world and its treasures, then the Lord is going to lead us.

The Lord wants to restore your soul, yes, He is calling to us to come and seek His righteousness.

If we are to know and have the blessings of our God, we must give Him full control of our lives. When we have said, "Lord, I will follow, I will go all the way," then He can have His way and lead us.

So when you read a verse of Scripture, study it and see if it applies to your life correctly, or reversed. Are you willing to let it be a part of your life, will you so fit your life that all of God's promises will be yours? If so then He will restore your soul and lead you in the path of righteousness for His name's sake.

THELMA THOMAS.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."—Verse 4.

Mark with what exquisite simplicity the valley is introduced. It is the Psalmist's forecast and provision. The Godly man never forgets that man was born to die; for it is appointed unto all men once to die and then the judgment. But the anticipation, while it keeps us mindful, is not one that discomforts or even troubles the mind, but adds a certain solemnity, and pathos. It disenchant's earthly life of its allusion and aids the soul in detaching itself from all created things. It teaches every period from youth to extreme age, to remember the hours of darkness. It teaches even the youngest life that someday the monster, Death, is going to approach, grip the body and free the soul for its eternal and perhaps celestial flight. It must be traveled; the darkest part of it must be experienced alone. Times and seasons come and go. Laughter and madness have their day of triumph and riot, but still that dark, silent, gloomy valley is waiting for us all. There is no escape from it. Our heads are bowed, our hearts are cold with fear. Yea, even the proud, boastful man may well let the valley come within sight and then be sobered with consideration. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil."

This perilous boast is a sanctuary built upon a rock. Notice how the singer has sung himself into the valley which he knew was his own. The Psalmist will be without fear, simply because God is with him. Nor has he an over-awing thought of Deity or an intellectual conception. There is something he can see, handle and enjoy. Even the rod and the staff, and in many other ways will he receive aid in traveling the valley of the shadow of death. We have the promise of the written word, the sympathy of friends, and the knowledge that our Redeemer liveth and intercedeth for us. These thoughts come as the clouds descend and as the day expires.

The peculiarity of the Christian religion is that it is the most to us when we need it most. Darkness holds no fright for it, the storm has no effect upon it. Death owns its sovereignty and retires at its approach. This is true because God is in religion. God hath no fear, and to be in God is to be like God.

ERNEST MCKENSIE.

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over."—Verse 5.

This verse brings before us a banquet scene. The valley is over; "The winter is past; the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle dove is heard in our land." We, the sheep of His pasture, are serving the Shepherd's guests at His table. What a feast of good things. But how sad it is that the experience of the starving prodigal is too often the experience of many of God's dear children. We remember the prodigal son who had strayed from his father's home and was starving for the good. "How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger." It is well enough for the prodigal to weep over his sin; but it is better for him to know the father's kiss of forgiveness.

"Behold, I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready; Come unto the marriage."

"Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money: come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without

SUFFOLK LETTER.

For the Conference year 1935-1936, eleven churches of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference paid their Apportionments in full, as follows: Berea (Nans.), Christian Temple, Dendron, Liberty Spring, Oakland, Rosemont, Franklin, Holland, Holy Neck, First Richmond, and Sarem. Eight paid in full for the year 1934-1935. It was not an easy matter for these churches to reach this goal. They are to be commended and congratulated for their faithfulness. Those who failed should not be censured but encouraged. If the churches will begin in time, and work faithfully during the year, the number of banner churches can be doubled for 1936-37.

There has been an insistent demand, at intervals, to increase the Apportionments for the various Boards and Institutions of the Convention. Consequently, the Conference Apportionments have been almost doubled during the last ten years. There has not been a corresponding increase in the membership and financial ability of many of the churches. Many churches hesitate to undertake to raise all the Apportionments because they believe it would mean an increased Apportionment. It is one thing to make an Apportionment; it is another to raise the money. Naturally, some Boards are disappointed when the Apportionment is not paid in full. But plans should be projected on the basis of actual receipts and not on anticipated income. The churches are not measuring up to their full capacity in financial support, but this situation calls for patience rather than fault-finding and criticism. Persuasion is better than autocratic compulsion.

Carrying out the request of the Southern Convention, the Eastern Virginia Conference designated definite goals for the several churches to raise for the Orphanage for the ensuing year. These goals are included in the Apportionment table with the other Conference Apportionments, but are designated as Goals instead of apportionments. That may seem to be play upon words, but it is in line with the action of the Convention. Thanksgiving offerings this year and the regular monthly Sunday School offerings will be credited on these Orphanage goals. Heretofore, there has been no definite suggestion as to how much each church should raise for the Orphanage. The Orphanage should be supported on the same basis, relatively, as the other departments of the Convention. No department of the church should be a competitor with another department; they are all members of one body, and should cooperate in the effort to carry on the program of the kingdom of God.

Statistical figures are not encouraging for the church, at present, but the outlook is optimistic. Figures do not tell all the truth about the work of the kingdom of God. Other measurements should be applied in making an appraisal of the church of Jesus Christ. Church reports, however, can be improved a year hence, but that improvement should begin within the church today. Survey your field and attack your problems and tasks while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work.

WHO SHOULD?

Elon College is here. It is engaged in the business of building character through instruction and guidance. It has been in this commendable task for nearly one-half of a century. The college was conceived and founded by men and women interested in the Christian Church and for the purpose of training the youth of our church. It cost money to begin the college. It has cost money to keep it going through the years. The cost of maintaining an institution of higher learning is continuous; that is, you cannot meet this year's expenses and declare the obligation completed. The budget must be balanced annually. It is hardly possible for an individual who is a Christian and a member of the Christian Church to discharge his full responsibility to the college and wash his hands of further demands unless the Lord's blessings to him are discontinued.

The question, "Who Should?" at Elon has always waited for an answer. Should men of large means in the church and outside, take full responsibility for an answer of this question? Should the alumni take this responsibility? Or should the entire membership of the church from the poorest to the richest, have a share in the support of the college? It would seem that the three groups suggested should, together, shoulder this responsibility and undertake the task with thoroughness and determination. The question of the value of the college to the church and to the nation and its need for support are granted. Surely men of means should be glad to share their holdings for the support of an institution whose very purpose is to develop and create a citizenship that will make secure their own fortunes and insure the progress and happiness of society of which they are a part. Certainly the alumnus of an institution, who received freely what the college had to give at the combined expense of others and himself, should count it a privilege to make possible the continuance of the institution that has meant much to him that others who come after him might share in like privileges. But the question arises as to the responsibility of the rank and file of the church to support the college, which is the church's own institution. Recently a man said to me, "I did not go to college. I am not able to send my own children to college. Why should I pay to keep a college open for others more able to send their children to?" At a recent session of one of our conferences, one of the first graduates of the college, one of the best ministers of the Christian Church, and one of the strongest friends of Elon College said in a public statement: "I am frank to say that I do not think that we will ever get the rank and file of our people to support Elon College. I do not know whether a person who never went to college and who is unable to send his own children to college should support the college or not." This sounds like good logic. It sounds like common sense, but does it sound like religion—the Christian religion. The church seems to be pondering this question.

Let's look at the problem raised. Are we to contribute only to those things from which we receive direct and personal benefit. Do we give to the Christian Orphanage at Elon College because some day we hope to be an inmate of that institution, or do we give because we expect that some day our children will become inmates of that institution? Do we give to the cause of missions because we hope that either we or our children will become missionaries? Do we support our pastor because some day we hope that either we or our children will be ministers? But our reader will perhaps answer that the Orphanage is helpless or dependent. Can you, by any force of reasoning, put the college in any other category? Also the reader may answer that to give to missions is a command of the scriptures. Can you think of efficient missionaries without college training? Somebody must train our missionaries. Would we be presumptuous enough to put this responsibility on someone else rather than shoulder it ourselves? The reader will perhaps also answer that we pay for the pastors' services, that we may have the gospel preached to us. Do we have any responsibility in helping and training those who are to administer to us in religious things. We provide a building in which to worship. Are we not equally responsible to help to provide for the preparation of the one who is to administer to us. If it is benefits that we are expecting from the question. "What value has Elon College been to the rank and file of our church in the South?" And in answering this question, I should like for our informant to consider the cultural, the mental, the spiritual, and the financial growth of our church in the light of the contributions made by Elon College to the leadership of our denomination. When we face the question, "Who Should?" without prejudice, it would seem that by every course of reasoning, every force of logic, and every rule or right, that every individual member of our church is duty bound to take his share of the support of the institution that undertakes to serve the whole membership of the church. The results of such an undertaking are evident in practically every organization within the church, and the individual's responsibility for the support of that institution should be without question. The man of means, the man who is able to send his children to school, the man who never went to college and who is unable to send his own children to college, alike have responsibilities to the institution that seeks to serve all freely and without prejudice. Every member of the Christian Church must share in the benefits of Elon College if Elon College continues true to the high purpose for which it was created.

POUNDED.

Since boyhood, I have read in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of poundings for pastors and wondered what there was in such an event as that to "write home" about. Recently, I have had occasion to learn that a pounding makes a pastor and his wife so happy that they have to tell others about it.

Friday night, November 6th, we had open house at No. 16 Elnora Street for Berea Christian Church. It rained all day and night and was chilly but that did not keep the Berea

For the Children

Dear Boys and Girls:

I hope you will like the puzzle this week. See how many Names you know. There are ten questions. You may give yourselves 10 for each name you know. Will you take the paper with you to Sunday School, and ask the teacher to use it? Then write and tell us what your class rating was. Here are the questions.

1. What was the name of the first man?
2. Who built the ark?
3. What man was hidden in a tiny basket boat when he was a baby?
4. Whose name begins with two "A's"?
5. Who was the first King of Israel?
6. Who was the first of the Patriarchs?
7. Who was given "Israel" for a second name? (Gen. 32:28, will help you.)
8. What was the name of the first woman?
9. What was the name of the first baby born into the world?
10. What were the names of the first twins named in the Bible?

Be sure to do all the work next week, when the names will be printed.

JESUS OUR GOOD SHEPHERD.

As Jesus and his disciples walked through the country they often saw shepherds with their sheep. Perhaps they stopped to watch the shepherds and to talk. They liked to see the shepherd lead his sheep late in the evening into the safe walled-up place called the fold. The shepherd sat by the door as the sheep went in. He laid his hand gently on each sheep as he passed and called his name.

"Pretty Fluff! Good old Long-Nose! Bad little Baa-baa! You ran into the briars today. Wait 'till I pour some oil on your scratches." That is the way the shepherd talked people from filling the parsonage to its capacity. Games, fellowship, and refreshments made the evening a pleasant one. But that which made the pastor and his wife happiest was the liberal amount of food of all kinds that the visitors left in the kitchen. It is a joy to work with such a group of people.

JOE A. FRENCH.

to his sheep. They knew their names. They knew the shepherd's voice. They would not follow a stranger even if he called them by their right names.

In the morning the shepherd would say, "Come Baa-baa! How are those scratches? Come Long-Nose, lead out!" He would pick up his shepherd's crook, open the door and call, "Coo-sheep, coo-sheep." Then the sheep followed him. He led them to fields of green grass. And at noon he found a clear still stream where they could drink.

Sometimes a bear or a wolf would try to get some of the sheep. But the shepherd would risk his life to save his sheep. David did that, you remember. The shepherd really loved his sheep and his sheep loved him.

David thought that God was like a shepherd, taking care of his people just as a shepherd takes care of his sheep.

Jesus said almost the same thing about himself. He said, "I am like a good shepherd. And you who love me are like my sheep. I know you by name and love you and keep you safe."

The disciples must have smiled and said, "Jesus is like his Father, Jehovah God." Then perhaps they repeated together David's Shepherd Psalm. (Repeat together the twenty-third Psalm.)—Myrtle O. Looney.

A GAME TO PLAY

Snake of the Trails.

Here is a game that children in the Congo play. It is played a great deal by boys. The boys form a long line, each holding fast to the one in front of him. The long line twists and curves around over the ground. The one in front chants as the players twist around:

"Snake of the trails," and the rest of the players chant this reply to the leader:

"He's a twister,

Heigh oh, my boys, heigh oh!"

As the leader says his words and the others answer, he gives a sudden twist or two in one direction or the other, and all the boys must go that way. The game is like "Snap the Whip," for the leader curves so suddenly and quickly that sometimes the long snake breaks in the middle.—Esma Rideout Booth.

- Not personal reforms, but liberation from sin.
- Not laws of progress, but forgiveness for sin.
- Not social reform, but spiritual salvation.

REPORT ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

(Western N. C. Conference.)

“No Christian need apologize for the missionary enterprise of the Church. Its harvests have been great and real. In spite of mistakes and crudities, it has made an enormous contribution to the progress of the human race. We can well feel grateful for even an humble part in it.

“No movement has gone deeper into life, built more enduring foundations for society, or done more to create constructive forces for the world. None has shown better adaptability to the conditions of the era now passing or exhibited more remarkable vitality for the future.”

But what of the future? Will the missionary zeal of the Church enable it to keep pace with the present and future era?

Since this is Christ's work, it should not be allowed to lag behind. The new day will have a place for Christian missions. The harvest is plenteous, for God is love and the world is His field.

But laborers as well as finances are still needed. “Men and women with generations of Christian tradition and training behind them are called forth to help by counsel and life to overcome the demoralizing movie and radio; to remove degrading poverty due to industrial exploitation; to meet the moral and material needs of a vast rural population, underprivileged, inert, yet capable of the more abundant life; to lessen that nationalism that feeds on fears and false hopes and finds its fullest expression in wars of conquest.”

India's depressed classes appeal to the best in each of us. Fifty million men, women and children are regarded as social outcasts. The poor people live on the barest necessities of life. Their liberties are taken away by the iron hand. They are often regarded as less than human. Yet they find hope in the missionaries. Leaders of these outcasts have decided to leave the Hindu religion. Where will their quest lead them? Will we have missionaries to point them the right way when they come to the parting of the ways? We have missionaries there but they are all too few. Many will go from Hinduism to other isms.

The same or identical conditions are found in many a distant clime. Therefore, let us face some facts:

Our Congregational-Christian churches have a membership of 1,028,038, and gave an average of only $1.44 per member in 1935, through the apportionment for the support of our total missionary work. Of course, many of our people gave much more than that while many gave nothing. Where was your church? Where were you? The people in this conference averaged less than $.25 per member this past year for both home and foreign missions.

In view of this deplorable condition, we reiterate the recommendations last year as follows:

1. That all Sunday schools be urged by pastor and superintendent to take the once a month offering for missions;
2. That all our churches give Dr. Atkinson their wholehearted support in his drive for missions;
3. That the pastor honestly seek to interest the church or churches which he serves in missions;
4. That at or near Easter each church take an offering for missions;
5. That we offer whatever assistance at our command to the women in their missionary social work;
6. That the goal for missions for next year be at least one-third as much as pastor's salary.

A. L. LUCUS.
E. CARL BRADY.

REPORT ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

(N. C. & Va. Conference.)

The Church must needs realize that Missions constitute a continuing task. Missions originated not as an ideal, or objective formulated by men. They were divinely appointed by our Lord Jesus Christ. The history of Missions is coincident with the history of the Christian Church. We need remember that Christianity, in its origin, is an Asiatic religion; that it was first carried to Europe by St. Paul; and that the zeal, loyalty and devotion of the missionaries who succeeded Paul, made Christianity as indigenous to Western culture; but that is only because of the universality of the Christian message.

Missions constitute an enterprise which requires centuries for its completed growth. The modern missionary movement required just about a century for the completion of its initial stage. In this initial stage, the missionary goes in, learns the language, begins teaching and preaching the gospel message, gathers small groups of believers and organizes them into churches. The completion of this initial stage is reached when the churches have gained such proportion and strength as to enable them to become a real factor in the life of the whole people; and when they begin to function in their own name and right.

The completion of this initial stage in Missions is comparable to the beginning of adolescence in the life of youth. It is the strategic stage that may very easily and quickly become a period of crisis. On the mission fields, the native churches are just beginning to assume the control and direction of their church life. They need the very best which the mother churches can give in the way of example, encouragement and support. They have come to the day of opportunity; but they are lacking in resources, wisdom, and experience with which to meet and measure up to this opportunity. To withdraw support now is to seriously cripple the missionary enterprise just as it is beginning to bear the larger fruit. And that is exactly what the churches in America seem to be doing at the present time. We are beginning to retreat just when we have begun to seriously come to grips with the non-Christian forces on the mission fields.

In the light of the aforementioned facts, what is our duty as Christians of today to our missionaries, the mission field, and our Lord? We would suggest and recommend:

1. That we should seek to know to appreciate and to experience in our lives the Spirit of Jesus Christ, who is the origin, guidance and power of the missionary enterprise;

2. That we pursue a diligent and prayerful study of the Scriptures which reveal the Spirit of Christ, and how His Spirit guided and strengthened the first missionaries as they gave themselves to their task;

3. That we study the wealth of mission literature, which reveals the accomplishments that have already been attained, and which sets forth the possibilities of the future;

4. That we support the mission cause with our prayers, our enlightened interest, and our regular and systematic gifts;

5. That we seek to definitely relate the missionary message to the teaching of the Church through Sunday School and pulpit, and that we set a definite goal for Missions as a part of the regular budget of the Church.

money and without price." You will starve except you come. So many, it is sad to say, are trying to satisfy their spiritual cravings as did the prodigal son who ate the husks which the swine do eat, when Jesus, the "Bread of Life" may be had for the asking.

"Break Thou the Bread of Life,

Dear Lord, to me,

As Thou didst break the loaves

Beside the sea;

Beyond the sacred page

I seek Thee, Lord;

My spirit pants for Thee,

O living Word."

The valley of sorrow and discipline must merge, in His own good time, with scenes of merriment and rejoicing.

"Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

"Chastening is necessary, but after we learn needed lessons in the school of sorrow, isn't it heartening to know that afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them who are exercised thereby?"

MARY FREEMAN.

"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."—Verse 6.

What a protection the followers of Jesus have! What encouragement this should be to every child of God! To know that to the front there is the all-powerful Shepherd ready to guide those who are willing to follow. When he putteth forth His own sheep he goeth before them. This promise should be a source of power and comfort to the Christian. How often this same promise should help us as we follow after Jesus who is our friend and guide. We should remember during times of trials and difficulties that when we are following Jesus, He is going before us each step of the way, and He will lead us in the way.

"And the sheep follow him for they know his voice; but a stranger they will not follow, for they know not the voice of a stranger."

"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." "The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms." "He shall thrust out the enemy before thee; and shall say, destroy them."

I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another comforter, even the spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him, but ye know him; for he dwelleth in you."

How safe for time and eternity are the obedient sheep of His fold. Nothing can permanently harm them, for they hear his voice and follow Him. "My sheep hear my voice and I know them and they follow me." Therefore, if we desire happiness, we must be willing to follow Jesus wherever He may lead us.

Remember the promise that when He puts forth his own sheep, He goes before them. Remember that he will never leave nor forsake us, and that He will guide us each step of the way.

"OPENING ROADS."

Is the title of a new book of "Addresses for Young People" by Dr. Archibald Black, minister of the First Congregational Church in Montclair, N. J. Strictly speaking it is "A Book of Talks to Youth."

There have been many books of Talks to Children and Young People, but comparatively few books of Talks to Youth, which group, coming between the other two groups, is much more difficult to talk to. So many preachers, in dealing with any one of the three groups, leave the impression that they are "talking down" to the ones they address. But Dr. Black in this new book, which is distinctly different from most books of its kind, "talks up" or rather "talks out" to his audience of youth. He makes the members of the youth group to feel that he is with them in a cooperative search for understanding. Such is the stroke of a master in dealing with youth.

Pastors of all evangelical denominations will welcome this volume which is just off the press, because every pastor is interested in how best to present great truths to youth. This book shows how it ought to be done. Moreover, the book is rich in illustrative material.

The author is a brother of D. Hugh Black, Professor in Union Theological Seminary; and a brother of the Rev. Dr. James Black, minister of Free St. George's Church of Edinburgh, Scotland, Dr. Archibald Black being the youngest of the three distinguished Scotch clergymen.

This neatly bound volume, published by the MacMillan Company, sells for $1.75 at any book store. Any pastor purchasing the book, and starting to read it, will not likely lay it down until he has read every one of the forty-one worthwhile talks it contains.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

YOUR WORSHIP SERVICE.

The period of worship in a young people's meeting should be as carefully planned as the discussion program, and too often is sadly neglected. Sometimes we see meetings where the worship service is omitted entirely and a business meeting—reading of minute, announcements, etc.—takes place, so far as the time consumed is concerned. In still other meetings, we find that the so-called worship period consists of some hastily chosen hymns and a scripture reading, which serve as a time-filler for the leader (who uses that time to "catch up" on his preparation for the regular meeting) and for the people who always are late (they feel that they aren't really late for the meeting, if hymns are still being sung).

While it is not necessary to have the same person lead the worship and the discussion periods, it is usually vital that the two have one central theme. Have the leader for your worship service thoroughly understand the topic for the evening, so that he can plan his hymns and Scriptures, his special music, his prayers, and perhaps some poetry, that will lead right into the spirit of the latter part of the meeting. If you prefer, however, you can have your worship service for a month built around one central theme and develop different phases of it each week, rather than having them unified with the discussion on each Sunday evening.

At this particular period there is so much material available for use in your worship service—appropriate poetry, dramas, and hymns can be easily secured. Armistice, Thanksgiving, Christmas, and the beginning of a New Year are all subjects around which worship services and discussion periods may be built.

While the actual planning of your worship service should be in the hands of a competent leader or committee, usually with the advice of some adult who has had experience in building beautiful services, still it provides an opportunity to make use of many members of your society. Perhaps someone who is too timid to ever lead a meeting, so he thinks, may be persuaded to read the Scripture or some other selection, and then find that he is ready to take the next step in leadership. It is always advisable to explain the part you want a person to take in a meeting long before the meeting actually takes place—do not leave it until five minutes before you want a person to do a thing. By letting them know ahead of time, it will make them feel that they have an important part in your service—which they do—and by reading it over before the meeting they will be able to read it more effectively there.

In planning our worship programs, let us always remember that by all true worship we should be led to a sense of the reality of God; that our aim in any worship service should be to try to make God real to those present. According to Harry Thomas Stock, young people's director for our church, "an ultimate objective of worship is so to fix the mind upon God, and to direct and give power to the will that impulses will be guided, desires be purged, habits of rectitude be established, and the whole being made responsive to the will of God."

"Stepping in the Light."

"Open My Eyes that I May See"

We are to discuss a modern problem of a social nature. The radio has caused a close contact with all nations and people of the world. A "Turning of the Dials" connects us in a very mysterious way, with customs and habits of those who become our entertainers. The radio may be, and often is, a powerful force for good. It, along with the press, has been a primary force in molding the public mind. Let this topic be discussed freely. Search for the possibilities of radio in helping to make a better world.

Points for Discussion—

1. How is the radio a force for good?
2. Have radio corporations any responsibility for molding the public mind?
3. Do some chains take more responsibility than others?
4. How do you feel about beer advertizing, recently introduced on one of the great chains?

5. On this same chain, a popular reporter recently went out of her way to make an approving comment on those Americans who had invested in the sweepstakes and won. In the same talk, she happened to mispronounce the name of an American town. Protests poured in by mail. These were duly acknowledged in her next talk; but if there were any protests against her approval of gambling, she did not mention them. Was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt right when she said that the responsibility for such matters as this, lies with the public? What can the public do about it?

6. What are good standards for a radio program?

7. Give a list of suggestions for people who say they do not know what to do about making radio programs better.

8. Send in a protest on a program which destroys the standards of good taste, truthfulness, and reverence.

9. Do standards in a blurred state count for anything?

10. What difference does it make whether you do or do not carry your Christian Standards into this field?

If any societies have suggestions by which they have made improvement, send them to S. E. Madren, Henderson, N. C. We shall be glad to let others know of your success.

THE LAW OF THE LEARNING PROCESS.

The teacher's work consists essentially in arousing and guiding the self activities of the members of the class. The responsibility of the members of the class is to use these self activities. The teacher seeks to awaken, the learner seeks to use self activities. The law of the learning process then is: The pupil must reproduce in his own mind the truth to be learned. This means that teaching a Sunday School Class is after all serious and difficult business, that is if it is done at all efficiently. To present truth in such a way that the member of the class will be aroused to self-activity—well that does demand skill in teaching.

Several practical rules follow from this law:

1. Try to have the pupil express in his own words, the meaning of the lesson to him.

AN AMBASSADOR IN CHAINS.

LESSON VIII—NOVEMBER 22, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: I can do all things that strengtheneth me.—Phil. 4:13.

LESSON: Acts 25:1-12; 28:16-31; Romans 5:1-11; Phil. 1:12-14; 4:6-11.

Sticking Up for One's Rights.

One of the glories of the Christian spirit is that it does not always insist upon its rights. Because its essential spirit is love, it often and usually foregoes its rights. But there are times when it is not right to forego rights, there are times when a Christian must stick up for his rights. Today's lesson is an instance in point. Festus, "willing to do the Jews a pleasure"—how many men in public life are governed by political expediency rather than conscience or conviction—suggested to Paul that he go up to Jerusalem to stand trial there. Paul knew what that meant—it meant certain death. But Paul knew, also, that God still had work for him to do—God had promised him that he should witness for him in Rome. Paul, therefore, stood by his rights as a Roman citizen and appealed to Caesar. "I appeal unto Caesar"—in these words Paul took his case out of the hands of the Jews and of dishonest provincial governors, and put it into the hands of the highest court of the Roman empire. In doing this, he was no coward, nor was he taking an unfair course; he was being true to his Lord, true to his conscience, true to his rights. To give up one's rights when no principle is involved is one thing; to stand by one's rights when one is standing for his Lord is quite another thing. It needs to be said, however, that the Christian emphasis is always upon duties and privileges rather than rights.

Rome.

Rome was the center of the world as no other city has ever been the center of the world. It had been the goal of Paul's desire for many years. To him it represented the last stronghold of the pagan world which he must capture for his Lord. "After I have been there (Jerusalem) I must see Rome" he told his friends in Asia. "As thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome" said the Lord to him in a vision (Acts. 23:11). And at last the aged apostle came to Rome. He came as a prisoner chained perhaps to a Roman soldier as he walked through the gates of the imperial city. And certainly he was a prisoner after he entered the city, although he was allowed to dwell in his own house, being closely guarded by a squad of soldiers who one by one were chained to him day and night. God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. Little did Paul dream that when he went to Rome he would go as a prisoner. But God can make all things to work together for good to those who love him, to those who are the called according to his purpose. And in a sense Paul went as a conqueror rather than as a prisoner. That little man, now well along in years, set in motion in that proud and mighty city, forces that were destined to break to pieces her paganism, and to establish on the ruins a universal and eternal empire with Jesus, the King of kings and Lord of lords.

An Ambassador in Chains.

An ambassador is a representative of a ruler or a government. In many cases he not only represents his ruler, but acts for him. Paul thought of himself as the personal ambassador of Christ. He had been called into Christ's service, he was to look out for Christ's interests, he was to act for Christ in the things that concerned the establishment of His Kingdom, even in Rome. Paul thought of himself as Christ's ambassador.

While in Rome, he was an ambassador in chains. Day and night, he was a prisoner, chained to soldiers all the time. But he still looked out for the interests of his Lord. He called to his informal prison-house leaders of the Jews and spoke to them concerning the kingdom. He "received all that came in unto him," preaching the kingdom of God "and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with all confidence." He was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, even in mighty Rome. And so zealous was he in the interests of the kingdom that later he writes that his imprisonment had fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel, that its message had gone throughout the imperial household, i. e. among those who lived in the imperial residence. Paul demonstrated that a man can testify for Christ and serve Christ wherever he is.

The Good News.

In his letter to the Romans, written before he ever visited Rome, Paul sets forth in orderly fashion, the central doctrines of the Christian religion. In the brief portion of that letter which is embodied as a part of today's lesson, he sets forth in language that sets the heart to beating faster, some of that good news. Men who are in sin, and who cannot of themselves or through the law be saved or set free from that sin, can be saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. Being justified by faith, being brought into right relations by faith, they find a deep and abiding peace. By faith they find access to grace and are made to rejoice in the new hope that grace makes possible. They are strengthened against trials and tribulations, and they find their hearts filled with the love of God which is the gift of God's own Holy Spirit. The wonder of it all is that Christ did this not for men who were good or his friends, but for all, for those were sinners and who were his enemies. God commended His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. And if we were reconciled to God—notice that Paul does not say that God was reconciled to us for Christ, by His spirit in our lives. A great joy fills the heart because we have received the atonement, which really means the at-one-with-God. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift.

Pertinent Points for Teaching.

1. All things work together for good to those who love God.
2. Sometimes it is a privilege to give up rights; sometimes it is right to stick up for rights.
3. The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord.
4. A man may witness for Christ wherever he is.
5. The courage of one may inspire the many.
6. The gospel can grow rapidly if it has faithful personal witnesses.

THE LAW OF LEARNING.

2. Keep the question Why constantly before the members of the class.
3. Try to stimulate the members of the class to do their own investigating—give them definite assignments whenever possible.
4. Try to develop in members of the class a profound respect for truth as something noble and enduring.
5. Try to teach members of the class to hate shams and shun them.

"Always learning but never able to come to a knowledge of the truth" tells the sad story of many a Sunday School class, because of violations of the law of the learning process. Pupils are not stimulated or encouraged to think, no reasons are asked for the statements in the lesson, the practical applications of the lesson are often neglected.—Adapted from The Seven Laws of Teaching. H. ## FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

THANK GOD EVERY MORNING.

"And stand every morning to thank and praise the Lord, and likewise at even'."—I Chron. 23:30.

"Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and an hundred virtues which the idle never know."—Charles Kingsley.

Prayer—Lord, Thou hast been good to us year long and life long and we would thank Thee and sing Thee praise this day and every day. In all that we do and say we would honor Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER.

For All These.

By JULIET WILBOR TOMPKINS.

"I thank Thee, Lord, that I am straight and strong,

With wit to work and hope to keep me brave,

That two score years, unfathomed still belong,

To the allotted life Thy bounty Gave.

"I thank Thee that the sight of sunlit lands

And dipping hills, the breath of evening grass—

That wet, dark rocks and flowers in my hands

Can give me daily gladness as I pass.

"I thank Thee that I love the things of earth—

Ripe fruits and laughter, lying down to sleep,

The shine of lighted towns, the graver worth

Of beating human hearts that laugh and weep.

"I thank Thee that as yet I need not know,

Yet need not fear the mystery of end:

But more than all, and though these things should go—

Dear Lord, 'tis on my knees!—I thank thee for my friend."

WEDNESDAY.

"THANKSGIVING."

—Adventures in Understanding.

"No holiday in all the calendar is comparable to Thanksgiving.

"There is no holiday quite like it anywhere in all the world. It celebrates no battle, no fall of a Bastille, no bank or business holiday, the birthday of no great man, no political revolution, no church ritual. It is the great holiday of common people who have worked all the year and now thank God humbly for good harvests. We are not celebrating Washington or Columbus or the Declaration of Independence but just the true good things, the simple blessings of the soil and the common life.

"Most holidays are somewhat pagan and if traced back are rooted in the dull and bloody stories of some old war; but Thanksgiving is the holiday of peace, the celebration of work and the simple life. You must go back to the old Greeks for anything to compare with it—a true folk festival that speaks the poetry of the turn of the seasons, the beauty of the harvest, the ripe product of the year, and the deep, deep connection of all these things with God."

THURSDAY.

GIVE THANKS.

(Thanksgiving Day.)

LESSON—Psalms 65.

"Give thanks unto Him and bless His name, for the Lord is good."—Psalms 100:1-5.

No one can be happy who is discontented. We can be happy without money and without a fine house, without fame and power, and without beauty and charm, but we cannot be happy without contentment. A grateful heart is one of the first, if not the first, indication of an humble spirit and a contented soul. It is an assurance in our hearts that God is good. When life at its center is kind, one is not bothered about the exterior and material things. It is the assurance of everything working out right, that is essential. And it is for it, therefore, we bless God. Therefore, we give thanks to Him. This is a perpetual duty and a constant privilege, and our special Thanksgiving day is a reminder that every day is a Christian's Thanksgiving day.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou art great and good. Light our souls into the perpetual spirit of gratitude and contentment.

"We are very thankful—

For the friends who have forgiven us,
For the enemies who have kept us cautious,

For the emergencies that have made us think,

For the difficulties that have made us struggle,

For the hardships that have made us strong,

For the disappointments that have made us try harder.

For the doubts that have made us study."

FRIDAY.

DO I KNOW GOD?

"He that loveth not knoweth not God."—V. 8. Read I Jno. 4:7-21.

Here is scripture worth memorizing. Here is a book worth studying. Here is a trade worth practicing. Here is an art that makes man perfect. Here is an occupation that fills a lifetime and an eternity. Love is the essence of all knowledge and without it life is not worth anything. Here is God.

Prayer—Our Father, enable us to know where we fail to love and give us the strength and the courage to fill in that lack. May it be said of us all along life's way, that we love. Amen.

SATURDAY.

READY EARS.

"Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth."—I Sam. 3:9. Read 1-10.
"Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice."—Jno. 18:37.

Ears come first in godly living. It is impossible to do God's will or to know anything about Him very definitely if we do not hear His voice. It is impossible to hear His voice unless we listen for it, and to listen means that we have to take heed according to His work and thereby we grow in His grace and His love.

There is another angle to hearing God's voice, we must not be too much concerned in what He has to say to us. Like Him who did His Father's will, we are to do His will, and that may mean to send us where we may not want to go, or to bid us do something from which we would like to shrink. This is one of the lessons hard to learn, the essential of a godly life is humility and submission and readiness to hear and do; then we can gird up our loins and do it.

Prayer—Quicken our souls, O God, that we may listen to Thee, and as Thou dost speak to us, may we hear Thy word every day and every hour. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE LORD'S DISCIPLINE.

By REV. CARL R. KEY.

"My son do not think lightly of the Lord's discipline, or give up when he corrects you. For it is those whom the Lord loves that he disciplines and he chastises every son that he acknowledges."—Heb. 12: 5-6.

"A stern discipline," (Spenser), "pervades all nature, which is a little cruel that it may be kind." The Lord's discipline pervades nature, and the lives of men. It smacks of the same meaning and force as when we say that God is the Creator and Ruler of all things, of nature. The Creative Force back of the Universe and Man cannot afford to neglect his masterpiece. It requires the same discipline as an obstreperous child. Few men are conscious of God as a master disciplinarian.

Long before Spenser and modern man discovered the presence of a disciplinary power pervaded all things the writer of Hebrews recognized this existing principle. He exhorts the "wishy-washy" Hebrew Christians of the time to be patient, faithful and live Holy lives. He must have been a compassionate, loving father. Certainly he was acquainted with God's word. He knew the tendency to men to forget the presence of God. Hear him as he speaks in measured tones of warning to God's perverse sons, a part of which words is our text.

Often we hear someone exclaim that human nature is the same everywhere. We dare not dispute this at length. We know that nature, God, and His iron discipline of His prodigal sons has not changed since Hebrews was written. We still have God's promise, "My presence shall go with thee." He is here. Jesus taught us to call him "Father."

It is sweet to know that we are His children, His sons, though prodigals we be. We like to hear Him calling in the quiet. We are cheered when above the storm and stress of life, His calm, clear, quieting voice whispers to our souls. His is a comforting presence.

We have become a generation of wanderers and prodigals seeking our fortune in another land. We have forgotten the stern discipline of Our Father and our God. "He is tenderly calling today": "My son."

There is a warning in His voice. With fear and trembling the wayward children hear His Messenger ask: "Why think lightly of the Lord's discipline?" Most turn away with a meaningless retort. Some turn unto the Lord penitently. They know that it is folly to lightly turn aside the rules and regulations of abundant living. They know that he steels the soul against the ravages of sin. They welcome His fatherly interest and love. They realize that burdens, sickness, and sorrow come to fit them for life. Through these he develops faith and character and saves the soul.

God sends trouble into our lives to chasten or correct us. He does this as our Heavenly Father. When a father or a mother corrects his child, this is done because the parent wants the son to grow up as a gentleman.

The correcting is not prompted by hatred or dislike. The mother will take time to teach her boy table manners. The father will insist that the lad come home at certain hours in the evening. If he fails to do so, he will be corrected. If he does not listen to the admonition, he will not be permitted to go out for the time being.

Our Lord corrects us because he wants us to "grow in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." Why "give up when He corrects you?" Such correction brings untold happiness, satisfaction and security. "Happy is the man whom God correcteth." Perhaps this is the solution to so much unhappiness around us. Men give up too easily. They put up a feeble fight. They find these corrections irksome and irritating. Like the pouting child, they make life unpleasant for themselves and others. They become irrevrent. They seek the pleasures of this world.

But there is greater profit in the things of the spirit. Our Father offers us a life of Holiness under his protecting wings. When God appeared to Isaiah in the temple, it was for the purpose of correction and discipline. He knew that he had sinned. He felt the cleansing power in the coals of fire placed upon his lips. He happily gave up the ways of sin and graciously accepted the way of the Lord. Keenly conscious of his unworthiness and reluctant to accept such a holy challenge, he answered the call: "Who will come and who will go for us?" with complete dedication in the words, "Here am I, send me." The paths of holiness were made straight and plain to him.

Never before had he recognized so clearly the discipline and correction of the Lord. This vision of God never escaped him. In all his work to reclaim the lost souls of His people, God was with him. He was reverent. He knew that it was better to be subjected to the Father of spirits and live. He learned the unforgettable lesson that "the Lord disciplines those whom he loves."

Few people today feel God's disciplinary hand guiding their lives. The distracting and disturbing elements in the world hold first place. Sadly enough some do not realize their plight. It is good for us and for civilization that there are a few prophets left, who like Isaiah, have not forgotten the heavenly vision. Kirby Page issues a warning here:

"The tallest peaks of spiritual experiences cannot be reached until the climber has become disciplined and seasoned. But the journey can be begun and steady progress can be made by anyone who desires to dwell on higher ground."

God rebukes us and chastens us because of His infinite love. It behooves us then to "be zealous and repent." God will instruct us in the Christian way. He will make known His truth. He will reveal the beauties of this life. He will "strengthen the weak hands." By His words He upholds those that are falling. By His power He will strengthen the feeble knees.

Sooner or later parents learn the necessity of disciplining their children. By experience they feel that every child must be chastised at times. Our Father "chastises every son." In due time the son comes to appreciate the fact that his parents had presence of mind and strength of will to punish him for disobedience. He does not despise them for it. He is grateful. He recounts instances where his whole life had been changed because of the parents and the love of the parents for the child. The same is true with our Father in Heaven. "Despise not thou the hastening of the Almighty." "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised them that love him."

We must discipline ourselves and our children for their sake, for the sake of posterity. Our children imitate us. This places a tremendous responsibility upon the parents. The

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Sometimes the income to the Orphanage is so small, we cannot see our way clear to meet our bills at the end of the month, and we almost get blue.

Then too, we have so many pressing calls to take children and have to turn them away on account of lack of funds.

We have so many churches that don't seem to realize that to care for a hundred children takes money.

Prices of all the things we have had to buy this year have been high. If our church people could or would visit the Orphanage and see these little boys and girls who are here and dependent on our church people for a change in life, I feel sure they would be more willing to give freely.

I sometimes receive letters that bring cheer to my heart and give me encouragement. I want to quote a part of three letters I received this week:

"I realize that we must take care of the fatherless and motherless children, and due to the fact I have implicit confidence in your good judgment to spend this money in a judicious way, I am herewith handing you my check for $50.00."

Another letter—"In recognition of the truly good work you are doing and in appreciation of the sacrifice you have made in order to do this work, I feel it a privilege to inclose my check for $100.00 as a Thanksgiving contribution to the Orphanage."

Another letter—"As a token of my love for the institution I herewith hand you my check for $500.00."

Such letters as these give one inspiration and new energies to do ones best. We have reached and passed the eleventh ring in our financial ladder for the year. Seven more to reach. It is my hope and prayer that the Sunday schools and churches through the Thanksgiving offerings and by individual donations will permit us to reach and pass our goal.

Superintendent.

In Memoriam

WRENN.

On August 6, 1936, the missionary society of Burton's Grove Church lost one of its members, Mrs. Julia Lanier Wrenn.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Wrenn we have lost a faithful member and a true friend. That we seek to emulate her worthy example in all walks of life.

2. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her companion, and point him to God whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her husband, a copy be inscribed on the minutes of our missionary society, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun."

Mrs. NELLIE BURTON,
Miss LOUISE PITTMAN,
Miss GUSSIE CARROLL.

BALLARD.

With deep sadness, we, the members of the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church, record the passing of our associate member, Mr. Walter W. Ballard.

Even with the conviction that our loss is His eternal gain, it is but natural that we mourn the separation from our friend and co-worker. Mr. Ballard had long and continuous connection with this organization, his sainted mother having been one of its organizers.

He was a man of sterling integrity, and one who gave liberally not only of his material substance but of his time and talent to literally thousands of the saddened and bereaved who were comforted by his voice of song and praise.

Resolved, that we emulate the good in his life.

Miss JULIA A. BRINKLEY,
Mrs. JOHN KING,
Mrs. ANNIE STALEY CALHOUN.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

experience of Robert E. Lee, the winter of 1859 made this fact very clear to him. By an act of his youthful son Curtis he became keenly aware of the moral responsibility on his shoulders. "Lee took Curtis out for a walk one snowy day, and when they had ploughed along together awhile, Curtis dropped behind. After a few minutes Lee looked back and found that his little boy was behind him, imitating his every move and walking in the tracks the father had made in the snow. 'When I saw this,' Lee told one of his friends long afterwards, 'I said to myself, it behooves me to walk very straight when this fellow is already following in my tracks.'"

Through the Lord's discipline men come to realize that there is a high degree of holiness to be attained in this life. It comes only from our contact with Our Father. "Ye shall be holy; for I am holy." There is the renewal of His promise. A man by the name of Blair must have known this when he wrote that "The discipline which corrects the baseness of worldly passions, fortifies the heart with virtuous principles, enlightens the mind with useful knowledge, and furnishes it with enjoyment from felicity, than all the provisions we can make of goods of fortune."

Twice in this generation the world has been disciplined and purged with resultant suffering and pain—once in 1914, again in 1929. In 1914 the world reaped the whirlwind which it had sown. No nation wanted war. All nations wanted that they could not get without bloodshed. All suffered because they had selfishly blundered. They had coveted their neighbor's property and rights. "Thou shalt not covet."

In 1929 discipline and judgment of a dicerent order came upon us. "We had been living as if, economically, we could do as we pleased. Consequently we built up our productive machine of industry. We tended almost entirely to ignore that aspect of the problem. Produce, produce, produce—that was our motto. Meanwhile, we permitted wealth to accumulate in the hands of a powerful few, while the masses of people were denied adequate purchasing power. This created an unbalanced economic structure which might easily totter. It did totter and crash!"

It is never wise for us to refuse to discipline our children and ourselves. It is never good judgment to think lightly of the Lord's discipline, correction or chastisement.

Professor Goodspeed summarizes this magnificent thought in an excellent fashion in the following way:

"You must submit to it as discipline. God is dealing with you as sons. For where is there a son whom his father does not discipline? But if you have none of that discipline which all sons undergo, you are illegitimate children, and not true sons. When our earthly fathers disciplined us, we treated them with respect; should we not far more submit to the Father of spirits, and so have life? For they disciplined us for a short time and as they thought proper, but he does it for our good, to make us share his holiness. Discipline is never pleasant at the time; it is painful; but to those who are trained by it, it afterward yields the peace of character. So tighten your loosening hold! Stiffen your wavering stand! And keep your feet in straight paths, so that limbs that are lame may not be dislocated but, instead, be cured."

HEAVENLY LIGHT AND SPIRITUAL BLINDNESS.

"I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life."—Read Jno. 8:12-20.

Blindness is the major disaster of man. Eyesight is the chief of physical possessions.

But there is a blindness far worse than the physical. It is blindness of the soul. And yet there are so few who dread it, so few who try to prevent it, and so few that grieve over it after they have lost it.

Spiritual eyesight is found only in Jesus Christ who is the "light of the world." Without Him we must suffer blindness of soul forever, and forever be void of the loveliness of celestial ideals, and go down at last into the blackness of the pit.

Prayer—Dear Lord, open our eyes as well as our ears. Flood our little world with the beautiful things that lift the soul. Be Thou our light until at last we shall be brought into the glories of eternal bliss. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

A Proclamation

I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the 26th day of November, 1936, as a day of National Thanksgiving.

The observance of a day of general thanksgiving by all the people is a practice peculiarly our own, hallowed by usage in the days before we were a Nation and sanctioned through succeeding years.

Having safely passed through troubled waters, it is our right to express our gratitude that Divine Providence has vouchsafed us wisdom and courage to overcome adversity. Our free institutions have been maintained with no abatement of our faith in them.

In our relations with other people, we stand aloof, but make resolute efforts to promote international friendship and to further world peace, prosperity and happiness.

Coupled with our grateful acknowledgement of the blessings it has been our high privilege to enjoy, we have a deepening sense of our solemn responsibility to assure for ourselves and our descendants a future more abundant in faith and security.

LET US THEREFORE, on the day appointed, each in his own way, but together as a whole people, make due expression of our Thanksgiving and humbly endeavor to follow in the footsteps of Almighty God.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 12th day of November, in the Year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and thirty-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the one hundred and sixty-first.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

"O give thanks unto Jehovah, for he is good."

Rev. Carr E. Gerringer has accepted the pastorate of the Palm Street Church, Greensboro, N. C.

Howard's Chapel Christian Church near Reidsville, N. C., has secured Rev. J. L. Foster as their pastor.

Rev. B. J. Earp has recently moved from Greensboro N. C. to Paces, where he has become pastor of the Ingram Christian Church.

The Eastern N. C. Conference met at Liberty (Vance) last week. It was well attended, and progress was indicated. A report will appear in an early issue.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes for all its readers, a very happy Thanksgiving season. The editor has found much pleasure in working with the paper during the past few months.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield changes his address from Paces, Virginia, to Windsor, Virginia, and becomes pastor of Windsor, Antioch, Isle of Wight, and Mt. Carmel Churches.

The working force in the office of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is grateful that 620 people subscribed for or renewed their subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN between July 1st and November 19th.

The Preaching Mission will be in Raleigh, N. C., Thursday to Saturday of this week. All who can attend will be richly rewarded by hearing Rev. E. Stanley Jones, Dr. F. L. Fagley, and other leaders of world thought.

In a personal letter from Rev. W. J. Andes of Harrisonburg, Va., is the following: "I am closing my fifth revival, each being two weeks long, this coming Sunday. The meetings have all been well attended and much interest has been shown. The winter weather is here, with snow yesterday and wind howling around the house, and I want to be near the fireside. So this will be my last revival for the winter. We are working on our Thanksgiving services now, holding four in one day—Thanksgiving Day. Then there will be Christmas services to attend and produce."

This paper has been giving a schedule for fall meetings in the Southeast. It is desired to continue this schedule for the winter and spring and even summer appointments as far as possible. Those who are responsible for various meetings are urged to send the dates of conferences association meetings, woman's state or missionary meetings, young people's conferences, etc., to Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Florida. Dr. Fred P. Ensminger and Miss Marguerite Davison have completed the schedule for all conferences in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and West Florida until November of next year. Will not others follow this good example and send the information in, that it may be published as soon as possible?

A GRATEFUL SONG.

I am so grateful, Lord, today,
I must kneel down to pray,
To thank Thee, not alone for bread,
And for my sheltering roof, my bed,
But for a thousand splendid things
My glad heart lifts and sings;
For eyes to see the sun's good light;
For ears to hear the swift-winged bright Voice of the birds, and the wind through trees,
The fragrance upon the breeze,
The velvet touch of leaf and flower;
Thy care about me, hour by hour;
Thy hand, unseen, that guides me through
The day's length with its work to do,
And gently, tenderly the while
Down every straight or crooked mile.
Thy Word, its promises that grow
To guide me as I go.
I am so grateful, Lord, for these,
I thank Thee on my knees.

tional Church of Chattanooga, Tenn. Rev. M. J. Sweet, pastor, reads thus: "Your trustees have been studying the work at Union Church. They find it wide awake. We have a growing Sunday School; a sturdy group of Boy Scouts; a Men's Club well organized; a woman's organization with a strong set of efficient officers; a volunteer choir, which furnishes suitable music at every service; a program that commends itself to thoughtful people; a gratifying spirit of cooperation." The letter says there will be no annual Every Member Canvass, but that instead there will be a "THANKS with GIVING VOLUNTEER DAY, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER, 22." On this date, every person will make a pledge for the year's work.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Ruth Seabury, Educational Secretary of the Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, was a welcome visitor at the college last Friday. She spoke to chapel. Miss Seabury's message to the students was most unusual and greatly appreciated.

The ministers of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference held their monthly meeting at the college, Monday, November 9th. We are always glad to have the ministers of our church visit the college.

Sunday, November 15th was observed as "Go to Church Sunday" at the Elon College Community Church. An inspiring congregation was present for the service. Four members were received into the fellowship of the church, two by letter and two on confession of faith.

Professor L. C. Dickinson of our History Department has transferred his church membership from the Methodist Episcopal Church in Washington, D. C., to the Elon College Community Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton T. West of High Point, North Carolina, were visitors at the college recently. Mr. West is a former business manager of the college. We are always delighted to have him and Mrs. West visit us.

THE EASTERN CONFERENCE HAS A VISION.

The writer of this article has had the flu. He was incapacitated for about two weeks. It was impossible for him to attend the annual session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. He was unable to attend the first day of the Eastern North Carolina Conference but did attend the closing day's session. Those who attended the first day's session, declared it to be the largest attendance of this conference in years. There was a good attendance on the second day.

The ones who planned the program, gave the college consideration in providing for the presentation of the interest of the college at an opportune time. Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, Chairman of the Committee on Education, read a very splendid report. This committee recognized the responsibility of the church to provide for the needs of Elon College and without hesitation or apology called on the church to come to its rescue in these critical days. In speaking of the report, Mr. George T. Whitaker, asked a number of pointed questions and then declared that the church was missing the greatest opportunity that had come to it in years and called upon the members of conference and the churches represented to arise and do their share in paying off the remaining $160,700 indebtedness. Rev. J. E. Franks, a member of the conference, spoke eloquently and feelingly in the interest of the college and declared that the churches of the conference were ready to do their part, and that they were simply awaiting orders from the ones in authority to move and provide their share. A number of others spoke in the interest of the college.

The ministers and laymen representing the churches were called together at the noon hour. Dr. C. Rexford Raymond was made chairman of this meeting. It was decided to present a recommendation to the conference in the afternoon session, calling upon the ministers and at least one representative from each church in the conference to meet in Raleigh, North Carolina, December 3rd at 10 A. M. for the purpose of formulating a plan whereby the churches of the Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches would be induced to subscribe their share toward the $250,000 campaign now being conducted for the college. The quota for this conference is $20,522. Judging from the spirit and evident determination of the conference in session at Liberty Church, the Eastern Conference will soon set itself to the task of discharging its obligation for the present to the college.

It is hoped that at the Raleigh meeting, every minister will be present and every church will be represented, and that out of this meeting there will grow a plan and an organization that will not only secure the allotted amount from the churches in this conference, but that the same may serve as a stimulus and an example to the other conferences of the convention and that the entire amount now asked for the college will be pledged, which will make the position of the college secure.

All power to the ministers and churches of the Eastern North Carolina Conference as they set their faces toward this undertaking!

L. E. SMITH.

THANKS.

For all things beautiful, and good, and true;
For things that seemed not good yet turned to good;

For all the sweet compulsions of Thy will
That chastened, tried and wrought to us Thy shape;

For things unnumbered that we take of right,
And value first, when they are withheld;
For light and air; sweet of sound and smell;
For ears to hear the heavenly harmonies;
For eyes to see the unseen in the seen;
For vision of the Worker in the work;
For hearts to apprehend Thee everywhere;
We thank Thee, Lord.

RANDLEMAN CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

This little church has a consecrated membership. About thirteen years ago, we rebuilt the house of worship and paid as we built. Then we had some great revivals. Later we built some Sunday School rooms and paid for them.

When the depression came, the mills in the town shut down and we had no pay-roll, but the church kept out of debt. About two years ago, we bought a parsonage with an acre of land adjoining the church. That is paid for.

The past year, we repaired the building inside at a cost of about three hundred dollars. We also met our Conference requirements this year, and it is all paid. We never have asked the Conference for a cent.

This makes us wonder why so many churches are always asking the Home Mission Board for help. Some even ask help on the pastor's salary. I think that if churches would do as Randleman has, be willing to sacrifice, the most of them could do more.

Thank God for His love, and His gift to us, His son, Jesus Christ.

J. M. ALLRED.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE GRACE OF GRATITUDE.

Every child is born as a helpless infant. It cannot secure food, clothes, or shelter. Left alone, death is inevitable. Sometimes adults forget that, and act as if they had always been able to secure for themselves all the desires of their hearts.

There are other needs besides food, clothes, and shelter. We need ideas, ideals, understanding, sympathy, love, hope, joy, salvation. Our needs are new with every day. Most of the things that mean most to us, we cannot secure for ourselves alone. Sometimes people forget that, and act as if they are not dependent upon either man nor God.

The farmer can plant and cultivate, under the blessings of Him who gives life, but he cannot harvest unless God gives the increase. Men may plan and promote their schemes for personal progress, but unless there is much cooperation by many people and the Giver of all good gifts, the schemes fail. Sometimes people become so busy they forget this, and act as if they could mold the world to suit their own notion.

The Pilgrim Fathers lived through a very hard winter and a summer filled with real hardships. Then came the harvests with its prospect of food for the winter. There was no abundance like we have, but there would be food, some for every day if they were not too extravagant. Then they set apart a day for Thanksgiving to Almighty God for His blessings upon their colony. They did not forget that alone, they could do nothing, that God alone, could give them life, and liberty, and the chance to pursue happiness.

The grace of Gratitude grew in their hearts. They made many blunders, but they never failed here. They did not forget to give thanks to the Giver. This grace made the world call them great, and gave to America, a heritage for which all of us may well thank the Father God.

This grace of gratitude needs a

THANKSGIVING.

What is it I should be thankful for?

First, and abundance of good in store;
Happiness, freedom, and peace, and wealth,
Comfort and well being, joy and wealth.
Comrades and friends with their loving care,
Faithful to help all my burdens share.
Children about me to cheer my heart,
Wisdom that ages of growth impart.
Sunlight and shadow, and leaves and grass,
Moments that linger, and days that pass.
Faith that can help me to pierce the gloom,
Beauty of blossom and sweet perfume.
Courage to venture and strength to dare,
Sunrise, and water, and fragrant air.
All of them, gifts from a loving God,
Making my life more rich and broad.
These have I mentioned, and countless more,
These are the things I am thankful for.

FRANCIS J. GABLE.

chance to grow in our hearts. We have our homes, friends, schools, states, nations, and international friendships. We live in luxury the like of which the world has never known until our generation. But we are liable to forget the Giver of our gifts and to act as if we could serve ourselves for time and eternity. It is easy to let the grace of gratitude die within our personal and group life. The development of it will bring rich rewards to all who cultivate it.

What shall church people do on Thanksgiving Day? Will they heed the call of the President of the nation and enter into their places of worship and give thanks to God, or will they spend the day feasting? The soul needs a feast, and it can best get that feast by taking time to think of the many things for which one has to be grateful. Say "thank you" to some of those who have brought you joy, who have served you, who have made life happier and more wholesome; bring a blessing to some who need friendship, food, clothes or shelter from the cold. Try growing the grace of gratitude within your soul and see what happens. When the next Thanksgiving Day comes you will be well on towards the development of a Christian character, for gratitude is a Christian virtue.

THE GEORGIA CONFERENCE.

The 1936 session of the Congregational-Christian churches of Georgia held one of its business meetings at Oak Grove Church, Chipley, Georgia, October 27-28. The session was well attended and a keen interest was evident throughout the session. Reports indicated a recovery from the financial slump and from the state of defeatism which has characterized so many churches in the last few years. Financial reports showed that a large number of the churches have already met their financial goals for this year, and it is expected that Georgia will come up with 100 per cent payment of apportionment and per capita dues by December 31st.

Under the direction of Miss Pattie Lee Coghill a meeting of the officers of the "Congregational-Christian women of Georgia" met prior to the Conference and planned goals for the new year. These goals were presented to the women in their special session during the Conference and new goals were accepted for the coming year.

An outstanding event of the session was the meeting of the men, when more than forty laymen and ministers assembled for a special session. Men's relations to the work of the whole church, business, finance, evangelism, were discussed, and it was voted that a committee of four be appointed to contact men of the local churches during the year and to make recommendations for a state organization at the next annual session of the Conference.

Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury of the American Board, Dr. John L. Lobingier, secretary of the Department of World Friendship, Dr. Fred P. Ensminger and Rev. F. C. Lester, were among the out of state speakers. Their messages and counsel were greatly appreciated. Rev. F. C. Lester presented THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and through the assistance of Rev. Warner C. Carpenter about twenty-five subscriptions were secured for THE SUN. Professor C. Lisle Percy of Demorest was Moderator of the Session. The officers for the coming year are: Rev. David W. Shepherd, Zebluon, Moderator; Mr. D. S. Hogg, Richland, Assistant Moderator; Rev. William T. Scott, Superintendent, Registrar and Treasurer; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Director of Religious Education and Women's Work; Mr. Herschell Williamson, Bristol, Auditor; Mrs. Alan T. Jones, Braselton, President of the "Congregational-Christian Women of Georgia."

The Conference regretted the loss of Rev. Jesse H. Dollar who has recently gone to Newport News, Virginia, but was glad to welcome into the Conference, his successor at United Church, LaGrange, Rev. John Henry Knight.

There are thirty-five churches in the Georgia Conference, and they are divided into fifteen pastoral units; four of the thirty-five churches are inactive; of the fifteen pastoral units, five are individual churches which maintain full time service; five pastoral units represents groups of churches which have part time services of the minister. For the later group it should be said that there is a growing conviction among their laymen that the time will soon come when each church shall maintain its own full time service. Where an individual church cannot maintain its own full time service, it must constitute a part of pastorates or parishes which can have a full time minister for their leader. With this growing consciousness, we believe that the Georgia work will go steadily forward.

The Conference will meet with the Ambrose Church, in Saint Georgia, next year. E. C. G.

SUMMER STUDENT REPORT.

Many interesting reports have come from Student Summer Service workers,—all of them interesting,—but the following is an extract of a report that has been printed in the Schauffier Quarterly, by one of the Schauffier School girls who worked in Georgia. It shows something of the significance of the student work and also of the spirit of the workers.

"The S. S. S. workers took full charge of the Bible Schools and then also helped in the revivals, women's meetings, young people's organizations, and Sunday School.

"Then there are young people's conferences where young leaders are planning definite progress in race relationships, education, economic adjustments, and rural church organizations.

"While staying in the community we boarded among the people. Sometimes we even slept at a different place each night, but always we took our meals at different places. We tried to visit as many homes as possible because many people were eager to have the "sisters" in their homes.

"Through the societies, at church, and more particularly in the intimate contact of the home calling we had a very wonderful opportunity to generally acquainted with the people. It has often been written and it is true that in many parishes there is poverty and lack of education, as there is in all sections of the United States. But there is something more important than this, there is kindness, love, and hospitality. There is a group of people to whom religion means more than conventions and Sunday duties; it means a real part of

NOVEMBER.

Our God be praised for harvest yield
Of furrowed acres in sun and showers,
For faithful toil in each grown field,
For ripened plenty to meet the hours,
For Nature's balance in generous store
Of luscious fruit down orchard ways
Our hearts bow down as we adore
The Giver of these Autumn days.

But there are those who do not know
The sweet assurance of tomorrow's bread
That keeps alive the conscious glow
Which we call Life. They must be fed.
If God be praised, we must remember
Some have no harvest in November.

life and something to be talked about in a natural and sincere manner. As one old man said, "I ain't never been to school. I can't read and I can't write. I don't know nothing about Roosevelt and Landon and them guys and don't wanta. But talk to me about Jesus Christ. I know that man and I've knowed him for a long time." That may not be social minded it's true, but it has the element of something basic and needed in American life. It makes one realize how much the Bible School really means to these people. For example, you find in many homes framed Bible School diplomas on otherwise bare board walls and are told all about the S. S. S. workers who have been there before. But even so, it has often been said, and truly, that the Student Summer Service Worker receives more from the experience than she could possibly have given in service, for it gives to one a vision of a much larger field of service to be found in mutual sharing and cooperation."

A QUESTIONNAIRE.

Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, D. D., pastor of our Burlington Church was on the program of the recent session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at Greensboro under the general topic of Missions to discuss; "How to Formulate and Promote a Mission Program for the Local Church." In lieu of a discussion by Dr. Lightbourne, he submitted to members of the Conference, the following questions, various members of the Conference being called upon to respond to a question given. The questions are submitted as other groups, or Societies, may wish to discuss in open session the same topic. The questions are printed as submitted by Dr. Lightbourne:

1. Is our Christianity inherently Missionary?
2. What is the Missionary Motive?
3. Is the Missionary Enterprise the chief function of the local church?
4. In what way can the missionary function of the Church be correlated with the other interests and functions of the Church?
5. Where does the work of Missions begin?
6. What is the out-reach of Missions?
7. Can Missions be thought of as an instrument for Goodwill and Peace?
8. Is the Elon Orphanage a missionary enterprise?
9. Should the Southern Convention reorganize its missionary work to conform to the organization of the General Council?
10. Is the Project Plan practicable for our smaller churches?
11. How can a church be organized for missionary instruction and support?
12. What is the relation of the Woman's Missionary Society to the local church?
13. Is recovery being realized in our missionary enterprise?
14. What is the relationship of the Council for Social Action to our missionary enterprise?

GOD'S FAVORS.

Love always craves for fellowship, and love for Christ inevitably presses on to fellowship with him. Nothing strengthens our moral fiber like a fellowship with those who are stronger than ourselves. The mightiest moral dynamic in the world is fellowship with the all-conquering personality of Christ.—H. Maldwyn Hughes.

Help thy brother's boat across, and lo! thine own has reached the shore.—Hindu Proverb.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Thursday evening, November 19th, 1936, Col. J. E. West was host to the members and guests of the Philathea Sunday School Class of the Suffolk Christian Church. This banquet was given in celebration of the twenty-third anniversary of the organization of the class. Col. West has been the faithful and efficient teacher since the class was organized. The growth of the class and the extent of its missionary and charitable work give strong testimony to the vision of the teacher.

The banquet was prepared by a group of the Woman's Missionary Society of which Mrs. Ray Gordon is leader. A turkey dinner with all the accessories suggestive of Thanksgiving was served. About eighty persons were served. Mr. John E. Martin, City Superintendent of Suffolk Public Schools was the guest speaker. Informal talks were made by Col. J. E. West, Col. E. E. Holland, Dr. J. E. Rawles, Miss Daisy Nurney, Mr. W. C. Johnston, editor of the Suffolk News-Herald, Dr. John G. Truitt and the writer. A musical program was presented by Mrs. C. W. Harrell, Mrs. Ethel Chapman, Mrs. R. H. Jacobs and Mrs. I. W. Johnson.

It was ascertained that about 90 per cent of those present were formerly members of a country church. This fact emphasizes the importance of the country church as a contributor to the city church; and furthermore suggests the opportunity of the city church to enlist the cooperation of members of country churches when they move to the city. The denominations do not grow by transferring members from one church to another but efficiency is involved in this method of conserving the resources of the church within the community. Actual growth comes by winning new converts and enlisting them in the membership and work of the church. When members are transferred, strength is added to one church and subtracted from another.

There is a place for the cultivation and expression of social life in the church. Man cannot live by bread alone and he cannot live by spirit alone. There is a place for bread and there is a place for the spirit. The body—the physical—has needs which must be supplied. Happy is the man who can identify both body and soul with the kingdom of God. And thrice blessed is the church where the social life finds some expression in the activities of its program and life. The old fashioned revival meetings, with dinner, brought hundreds of people to church in a day when they would not have been reached. Many of them came to eat, but found joy in hearing a message which fed their souls upon the bread of life. People who have normal appetites, enjoy a good meal. And the church, through its various organizations, has an opportunity to interest people through their stomachs—and a season of good fellowship. Col West is to be congratulated for his years of service and for his spiritual vision. And the Sunday School Class is to be congratulated for having such a good teacher. Together they are doing great service. The Sunday School Class

A PRAYER FOR THANKSGIVING.

We thank Thee for the golden corn
That fills the bursting bin,
The rosy apples safely stored,
The hay we carried in.
The brown nuts from the windy wood,
The pumpkins from the field,
The fragrant herbs and juicy roots,
And all the garden's yield.
We thank Thee for the feast we spread
In honor of the day,
The plenty that has crowned the year
So soon to pass away,
We thank Thee for the peace that marks
The month as it departs,
And most of all we render thanks,
Dear Lord, for thankful hearts.

has great opportunity, in every Sunday School, to win people to the church and interest them in the program of the kingdom of God.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving is an excellent Christian virtue. It may have been practiced prior to the Christian era, but, if so, there is but little or no reference to the practice. It was used more or less frequently in New Testament days. Christ himself set the example by giving thanks unto His Father for daily bread, for the revelation of the secrets of the Heavenly Kingdom, for the divine hearing of prayer, for the bread and wine of the Holy Supper, and for all the spiritual blessings which they connote, the object being always to express gratitude to the Father for gifts and blessings received.

Since the days of Governor Bradford, at the beginning of our country, the high political authorities of the land have called upon the citizens of the United States, usually on the last Thursday in November, to repair to their places of worship to express gratitude unto Almighty God for the blessings upon land and people during the year. These services have been more civil than religious; that is, they are regarded not particularly as a function of the church but as provided for by the state. Sometimes they are held on the Sabbath, but the day set apart for such a service is on Thursday. From a religious point of view, no day is a day of thanks above another, but the Christians entire life is a sincere song of gratitude and thanksgiving unto God for His goodness and mercy. From the standpoint of the state, this period of thanksgiving comes as the crowning festival of harvest time, when the fruits of field and forests are ripened and have been gathered in. The example set by our forefathers on the occasion of thanksgiving, calls for the sharing of our possessions with those who have been less fortunate through the year than we. And a fine custom it is. We cannot all be prosperous, but the ones of us who are, should find great joy in helping to meet the needs of those who have labored and failed.

There be many agencies of the church that stand in need today. Our Board of Superannuation, our Board of Missions, our Board of Christian Education, the College; but as our custom is, we are to think of and share with the unfortunate children of our church and the states, gathered at the Christian Orphanage at Elon College. We have a certain definite obligation to support these children, to see that they are provided with food and shelter and clothing. There are something like one hundred of them. The convention has provided for and elected a Board of Trustees to look after the conduct of the institution. Mr. C. D. Johnston, known to the entire church for his thrift and efficiency in the interest of the Orphanage, is the very capable superintendent. It is not his responsibility to provide for the wants of the children. It is our responsibility to provide for the satisfaction of these wants and his responsibility to see that what we provide is rightly and judiciously administered. At this season of the year, he is issuing his annual and most earnest appeal to Sunday Schools, churches, and generous-hearted individuals to give out of what they have that the requirements of the children at the orphanage may be adequately met. These agencies and individuals have always responded to this call, and surely in this year of comparative bounty, the gifts will be generous and more numerous than usual. If all will make their thanksgiving offering generous and forward the same promptly, the hearts of Mr. Johnston, his associates, and the inmates of the orphanage will be delighted and their experiences enriched.

May God bless the givers and the receivers.
L. E. SMITH.

THANKSGIVING.

The value of an institution or organization is determined by the service it renders to humanity. This service may be economic, moral, or spiritual. The first is in terms of dollars and cents; the others cannot be reckoned in commercial terms.

The support we give an institution is determined by our interest in it or that for which the institution stands. During the past few months, a vast amount of money has been spent by political parties to secure the election of the party nominee. A few days ago, 35,000 people witnessed a football game. The people were interested in these things; hence, the moral and financial support.

But we are not writing in the interests of political parties, nor football games, but in the interest of boys and girls who do not have anyone to care for them. The Christian Orphanage was established for this purpose. It is not merely in the money-making business, it is concerned with those principles, characteristics, and tendencies which money cannot buy.

For many years, we have been in position to observe and to know the type of work the Christian Orphanage is doing. Children who have been in this institution, receiving the care and training which it gives, have gone out into the world giving credit to the institution and to those who have contributed, financially, to enable them to "carry on."

If you want to see a well-behaved group of boys and girls, see these children at church services, and you will see the type of training that these children are receiving. Mr. Johnston, the superintendent, is a man who thinks there is something in life worth more than money, and it is his desire that the children under his care shall receive the desired training, but it takes money to do this.

At this season of the year, we begin to take inventory to see what we have to be thankful for, and to see how we can express our appreciation and gratitude for the many blessings that we have received during the year. When you are planning your Thanksgiving Dinner, why not add the Christian Orphanage to your menu, not to be eaten, but to be served with a Thanksgiving offering? By doing this, you will have a part in helping unfortunate boys and girls to take their places in a competitive world.

O. W. JOHNSON.

THANKSGIVING OFFERING.

When you make your Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage, you are "doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." The apostle St. James also emphasizes that "faith without works is dead," and certainly there is no better work than caring for fatherless children and training them in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

J. E. WEST.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, in session at Liberty church last week, called a meeting of the ministers and leading laymen of the conference to assemble at the United Church, in Raleigh, December 3rd, at ten o'clock, to devise plans and means for cooperation with the management of Elon College in furthering the Campaign in the churches of the conference toward the completion of our quota in liquidating the indebtedness of our college.

In union and cooperation, there is strength. The spirit of interest shown in the conference session for our church college was never finer and we are anxious that every church in the conference will select and send to this meeting, two or three of its most interested members, and that all the ministers serving churches in the conference will be present and take part in the meeting.

W. C. WICKER,
President.

THANKSGIVING.

As the year comes to an end our hearts turn to Thanksgiving. Thanksgiving springs from within. There must be some recognition of good things before there can be any real and meaningful Thanksgiving. When we get right down to clear thinking, who can find nothing but leaves in his whole inner being? There must be something for genuine Thanksgiving. Let us count our blessings—then thank God for them all.—Rev. M. J. Sweet, in Union Congregational Church Bulletin, Tenn.

For the Children

Dear Boys and Girls:

The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is wishing for each of you a happy Thanksgiving season. He remembers how glad he used to be when there was no school and he could visit with relatives and friends perhaps go hunting, and have a wonderful Thanksgiving dinner.

If you have turkey, cranberry sauce and all the fixin's, please just take one bite for your friend, the editor, and rejoice with him that he also has something to eat, even if it is not turkey.

Perhaps you will have time the day after Thanksgiving, to write me a letter and tell me about your happy day, the big dinner, your friends who came to see you, or whom you went to see, and about your church services which centered about Thanksgiving.

And be sure that your offering goes into the Sunday School and church offering for the Orphanage so that the boys and girls at Elon in our Church Home can have good food, clothes, and school things like you have. Tell your mothers and fathers that you want to give enough so some boy or girl can have pencils, a book, or maybe it is a tie or a dress or something that you can think of.

Sincerely,
F. C. LESTER.

THANKFUL.

I'm thankful for good things to eat,
And pleasant things to drink;
For love that makes my living sweet,
For lovely things to think.

I'm thankful for the friends long tried,

For new friends that will come;
I keep a place for them inside
My heart and happy home.

I'm thankful for the air and light,
For winds, and rain, and sun;
For cozy dreams that bless the night,
For nonsense and for fun.

I'm thankful, for I live
To feel the joy of living.
God gives it all, so I will give
My life in true thanksgiving.

—John Martin.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

MISSION STUDY BOOKS.

The theme of mission study this year is Africa. There are several, well prepared, books adapted to study, both of Africa and the African. No Missionary Society, or group, will go amiss in ordering and studying together one, or more, of these splendid volumes;

"Out of Africa" by Emory Ross. A gripping description of the changing life of the African peoples in this generation, and the story of Christian missions among them. Here are indicated the future tasks which the churches of Africa and the West must face together. Cloth $1; paper 60 cents.

"A Course on Africa for Adults" by T. H. P. Sailer. A booklet of suggestions and teaching aids for leaders of groups using "Out of Africa." Price 25 cents.

"Congo Crosses" by Julia L. Kellersberger. Prepared especially for use by women by a distinguished missionary of the Belgian Congo. Cloth $1; paper 50 cents.

"Consider Africa" by Basil Mathews. Here Mr. Mathews gives in a very vivid way the present situation in Africa, racial, industrial, spiritual, cultural. Cloth $1; paper 60 cents.

"A Course on Africa for Young People" by Margaret H. Tuck. Based mainly on "Consider Africa," this pamphlet outlines for leaders of youth, a vital and comprehensive course on Africa today, emphasizing Christianity's part in the solution of African problems. Paper 25 cents.

For Intermediates.

"African Bridge Builders" edited by William C. Bell, one of our own West Central Africa missionaries. Here is provided the setting in life, customs, peoples for the "Little Books of Africa," stories of folklore, daily life and heroes of Africa and the Christian Church of Africa. These are from a series printed for use in the schools of Africa with those of Intermediate age. Cloth $1; paper 60 cents.

Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Superintendent of literature for the North Carolina Conference, recommended "Congo Crosses" and many Societies have already ordered and are studying this thrilling story of African life.

Our Congregational-Christian work in Africa, is in three sections of that huge continent, all of them below the equator. The East Africa Mission is located in Portuguese East Africa; the West Africa Mission in Angola. The South Africa Mission has two branches located in Natal near the southern tip and in Southern Rhodesia north of Natal.

Evangelistic, Educational, Medical, and Social Work are carried on in these three Missions by 81 missionaries and 1800 African leaders.

When we speak of Evangelistic Work, we think of the work of the organized church. Some of the missionaries have as their special task, the supervision of the many churches scattered in villages and cities. The ministers of these churches are Africans, trained for the most part in our schools. More and more of these churches are attaining self-support.

A CHURCH THAT GIVES AND LIKES IT.

Many churches give grudgingly and some, indeed, give very little on any account. We commend the following from the pen of Rev. George C. Southwill, in the Missionary Review of the World for November, which certainly is worthy of careful and prayerful reading, not only by our pastors, but by many laymen as well.

When the Rev. Herbert Mackenzie had been pastor of the Gospel Church of Cleveland, Ohio, only six weeks, the church organist, a beautiful Christian girl, died suddenly. The young people's society, the Bible School, the churches trustees, and several groups started funds to purchase floral remembrances for the funeral, but the pastor felt that a living gift would be better than flowers that perish.

With the consent of the family, the announcement was made that "flowers should be omitted" and, at the pastors suggestion, "The Hazel Cain Fund" for the support of a Bible woman in China, was soon subscribed.

That was the first missionary project of the Gospel Church, and it has been maintained for many years.

The pastor's first missionary vision came to him in London, Ontario, where he was a mission church pastor, serving without stated salary. The first week he received $2.00, and the first year, $225.00; but when clothes were needed, or food, they came unsolicited, just as they were needed and not before. Pastor Mackenzie was reminded of Job, who said: "Have (I) eaten my morsel alone, and the fatherless have not eaten thereof." He desired to share his spiritual bread with the multitudes who were famishing. A missionary day was appointed, with a goal of $50.00 for missions. This seemed a large amount for his small and poor mission church. Prayer days were appointed and the gifts amounted to $296.00. In twelve months they raised $1,200.00 for missions, and the pastor's support was adequate for his needs. Next the mission moved out of the old building, and purchased a fine abandoned church structure.

From this fruitful Canadian pastorate, Mr. Mackenzie was called to the Gospel (undenominational) Church in Cleveland, Ohio. There, too, mission days and goals were set, preceded by days of prayer—not incidental prayers at a crowded mid-week meeting, but all-day prayer meetings with men and women attending. Gifts to missions increased to such an extent that the pastor, being human, expressed his satisfaction to Dr. David McConaughy, one time as they walked together.

Dr. McConaughy asked him what the church spent on its local expenses, and he found that, generous as the missionary gifts had been, the amount was much smaller than that contributed for local expenses. Mr. Mackenzie felt a real jolt, when Dr. McConaughy said: "I don't believe you ought to boast about your missionary giving until you spend more on 'others' than upon yourselves."

A short time after this, Dr. Henry W. Frost, of the China Inland Mission, remarked to Pastor Mackenzie that "a spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures would make a church missionary conscious more quickly than the telling of thrilling missionary stories."

The missionary cause is always before the people, for prominently displayed in the front of the church is a world map with little burning electric lights, each representing a missionary and his or her field of service. Here is a literal vision of the words: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Some one of the many missionaries of this church is always home on furlough, and is invited into the homes of the members, so that the children grow up in a missionary atmosphere.

The church holds a missionary conference each year, in addition to cooperating in the Erieside Bible Conferences, founded by our pastor. A four-page folder, containing pictures of its missionaries and interesting facts about their work, is published by the church.

On invitation of the mission boards, Pastor Mackenzie has made visits to Africa and South America and his personal reminiscences add to the missionary flame.

The Gospel Church has continued to grow and is occupying its third building in thirty years. Two other churches in, or near Cleveland, have grown out of it.

Dr. Mackenzie has never had a stated salary, but depends on the free will offerings of his people. There are only 200 members but the pastor believes that for every ten members, there should be one missionary on the foreign field and the church is now supporting eighteen. Four other young people are in training for mission work. Gifts to missions have increased from $200.00 to $10,000 per year. During the past twenty-six years these people, none of them rich, have contributed $200,000.00 for missionary work.

When Dr. Mackenzie was asked for the secret of the missionary achievements of this church he replied, "Consecration, vision, prayer, and faith." The Scriptures are the lamp that lights his leadership. In a recent issue of the Church Bulletin we read:

"'If ye shall ask . . . I will do'" (John 14).

"Man, in his own strength, can do nothing constructive—'Power belongeth unto God.' Our part is to ask. How? In faith (James 1:6). In great faith? No. Faith is more precious than gold that perisheth, and Christ said, 'If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place and it shall remove' (Mat. 17:21). Let us ask daily."

BIG OAKS MISSION SOCIETY.

We organized our society October, 1935, with ten members, and increased the membership to 23 at the end of the year. We met every month but one and had a called meeting at my home that month. In the winter the roads were muddy, but the average attendance was about two-thirds of the membership.

We met our quota of $15.00 and added seventy-five cents to it. We paid five dollars on curtains for Sunday School classes, $2.50 to a family whose house was burned, gave flowers to a sick lady in the hospital, gave a sunshine box consisting of $1.50 cash, 28 packages of useful articles, and 14 quarts of canned goods, to a shut in lady we gave a week's nursing, and numbers of trays and flowers to the sick. We made 175 sick calls.

Miss Olive Green, a returned missionary, spoke to our society. We gave a missionary play in our church and also at Park's Cross Roads and Seagrove.

Our society is increasing in spiritual interest. We do not use the words "I can't" but we put "I'll do the best I can" in its place. I am pleased to say that our young people remember our pastor and our missionaries in their prayers.

We appreciate the great interest Dr. J. O. Atkinson and our state leaders have taken in us, and earnestly request the prayers of the Conference in the coming year so we may do more for missions and for our Master than we have done in the past.

MRS. J. B. COLE,
President.

THAT LOVE IS IMMORTAL.

She hath done what she could. Wheresoever this Gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be told for a memorial to her.—Mk. 14:8.

THE WORK OF THE CHURCH MISSIONARY COMMITTEE.

Every church fixes responsibility for what it regards as important. It is important that bills be paid; hence, we have a finance committee. Music is important; we, therefore, appoint a music committee. It is important that the building be kept in repair; a house committee, thus, becomes a necessity. To decide whether we need a missionary committee, we must first decide whether or not the activities which it implies are important.

Look over the list of committees in your church. How many have to do with efficiency and development of the religious life within the walls of the church? How many have to do with the out reach of the church beyond its own walls? Surely, there should be a committee in this second group!

Whatever its name, this will be a standing committee (not temporary), responsible to the church (not to one of the church's organizations). Because the church exists to help build the Kingdom of God outside as well as inside its own walls, it needs to charge some committee with the responsibility of planning how this may best be done.

I—COMMITTEE AND ITS RELATIONSHIPS.

1. Membership—As a committee of the church, it will include both men and women, at least one member being a young person. Otherwise, it will not represent the whole church. Its personnel ought to be fairly representative of the various interests, organizations, and age-groups.

2. Qualifications—For such a working group, we need people who are interested in the cause, willing to work, openminded to new ideas possessed of some educational ability, those whose personality, will not prejudice others against their cause, capable of leadership.

3. Relationship to Other Groups and Committees—This is sometimes a sub-committee of the Religious Education Committee; if such a plan brings results, it is satisfactory. In some churches, this is separate from the Religious Education Committee and also from a Social Action Committee; do not judge by some one's "ideal" scheme but "by their fruits."

If there is a Pastor's Council, one of its members should be a representative of the Missionary Committee. If the Finance Committee deals with the benevolence budget, the Missionary Committee ought to cooperate as it makes its plans,—not simply know

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.

The Pilgrim Fathers who landed on the rock-bound coast of New England were not the first to set apart a day for thanksgiving. In First Chronicles 16, there is a record of a thanksgiving day, established by King David. The Ark of the Covenant was brought back home, and the people of Israel were delighted beyond words. Why not read this record on Thanksgiving Day? Only a part of it is given here.

THE RECORD.

"So they brought the ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tent that David had pitched for it; and they offered burnt sacrifices and peace offerings before God. And when David had made an end of offering the burnt offerings and the peace offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the Lord. And he dealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, to every loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine. And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister before the ark of the Lord, and to record, and to thank and praise the Lord God of Israel." (Then follows the names of the musicians.)

THE THANKSGIVING SONG.

Give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name,
 Make known his deeds among the people.
 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him,
 Talk ye of all his wondrous works.
 Glory ye in his holy name:
 Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord.
 Seek the Lord and his strength,
 Seek his face continually.
 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done,
 His wonders, and the judgments of his mouth;
 O ye seed of Israel his servant,
 Ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones.
 He is the Lord our God;
 His judgments are in all the earth.
 Be ye mindful always of his covenant;
 The word which he commanded to a thousand generations.
 Sing unto the Lord, all the earth
 Show forth from day to day his salvation.
 Declare his glory among the heathen;
 His marvellous works among all nations.
 For great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised;
 He also is to be feared above all gods.
 For all the gods of the people are idols:
 But the Lord made the heavens.
 Glory and honour are in his presence;
 Strength and gladness are in his place.
 Give unto the Lord, ye kindreds of the people,

Give unto the Lord glory and strength.
 Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name:
 Bring an offering, and come before him;
 Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness.
 Fear before him, all the earth:
 The world also shall be stable, that it be not moved.
 Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice:
 And let men say among the nations, The Lord Reigneth.
 Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof:
 Let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein.
 Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the Lord,
 Because he cometh to judge the earth.
 O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good;
 For his mercy endureth forever.
 * * *
 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for ever and ever.
 And all the people said, Amen, and praised the Lord.

—I Chron. 16: 8-36.

NOVEMBER.

What a lovely month! A month of harvest and thanksgiving. A month of the first bracing sting of winter, and yet not too cold for comfort. A month of home and long evenings. A month when students at home and away in college are making their stride for the year. A month of social activities, and good fellowship.

November is a month when sunshiny days are glorious days, the woods are not only brilliant with color but sweet with fragrance! In the forests, brown acorns fall, and the furry folk gather their food. Children in the hills hunt chestnuts and chinkapins, while their parents make provision for the coming winter.

The wheels of industry whirl, and shopping hits a new high mark, a buoyancy is felt in business, and the streets are gay with new clothes.

It is a good time to show gratitude to our Heavenly Father, to gather in our meeting houses and sing praises unto God who giveth all, and to develop within ourselves, the best impulses that ever stir our souls.

Every boy and girl in our church will want to join in the big church service, and open his or her mouth and sing as is their right to do. Every young person wants to seek divine blessing upon their lives, and a religious ennobling of all their hopes and dreams. All of us will wait in our beautiful church for His blessings.

—DR. J. G. TRUITT in Suffolk Church Bulletin.

PLANNING MY CHRISTMAS GIVING.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
 DECEMBER 6, 1936.

(Consecration meeting.)

SCRIPTURE: PROVERBS 19: 17.

Daily Bible Readings—

Monday—"Gifts of Daily Bread"—
 Psa. 136: 1-9.
 Tuesday—"Gift of His Son"—II Cor.
 9: 15; John 3: 16.
 Wednesday—"Gift of Grace"—II Cor.
 12: 7-10.
 Thursday—"Duty of Thankfulness"—
 Psa. 103: 1-5.
 Friday—"Duty of Benevolence"—I.
 John 3: 16-19.
 Saturday—"Duty of Consecration"—
 Rom. 12: 1-2.

This service should be one in which we shall do some serious thinking about those gifts which we hope to make at Christmas. Much money is wasted each year upon useless gifts. We need to bring about reform. Ask a number of people to express some opinion concerning the subject. Four million Endeavorers are thinking upon this subject tonight.

Jesus said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Do we as earnest Endeavorers, seeking a solution to this problem, believe the truth of this statement? Does not true giving call for sacrifice? The giving of ourselves is the important thing in a gift, for "The gift without the giver, is bare."

For Discussion—

1. Why should we give at Christmas?
2. What makes a gift real?
3. How much money should be invested in our gifts?
4. What are the good and bad points to the Christmas mailing card in helping to solve the Christmas-gift problem?
5. Should our gifts cease with Christmas?
6. What is the supreme Gift that men everywhere need?

CHRISTIAN BROTHERHOOD.

LESSON IX—NOVEMBER 29, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: There can be neither bond nor free . . . for ye are all one man in Christ Jesus.—Galatians 3: 28.

LESSON: Philemon. (Entire epistle.)

Paul's letter to Philemon is his most beautiful, and most human letter. There is something about it that tugs at the heart as one reads it. That is, if one understands the background of the letter. Briefly this is the background: Philemon, a well-to-do man of Colossae, a man known for his hospitality, a member of the church at Colossae, and the head of a Christian family composed of himself and wife and son, owned a slave named Onesimus. Onesimus had evidently stolen from his master and had run away to Rome. While at Rome he came in contact with Paul and was converted, and showed signs of ability and usefulness. Paul would have liked to have kept him, but he was unwilling to do that unless he had Philemon's permission. He therefore sends Onesimus back to Philemon, sending along with him this letter in behalf of the converted slave. We do not know what reception Onesimus received but it is not difficult to make a guess after one reads this letter, for it would be a hard-hearted man indeed who could turn down such an appeal as Paul made in this letter.

Giving Flowers While One is Living.

Paul starts off his letter by commending Philemon on his good life, his Christian hospitality, and his fruitful service for Christ. It was not a lot of blarney or "baloney"—it came from the heart. It was Paul's policy to tell folks how much he thought of them, and how much he appreciated what they were doing. Even when he had occasion to criticize or censure folks, he usually found something good to say, or something for which he gave thanks. It is good policy, but is more; it is the Christian spirit. We have too many knockers in the world. We need boosters. We need to give folks flowers while they are living, to say the good things about them while they can hear them, to exalt their virtues and forget their vices.

For Love's Sake.

Paul might have made his appeal simply on the basis of convenience. But he chooses rather to base it on love. In a simple, unaffected way he reminds Philemon that he is "Paul the aged, and now a prisoner of Jesus Christ." There is sound sentiment here. There are legitimate appeals that go beyond mere convenience or mere business dealings. Friendships may be used if they are not abused.

An Unselfish Spirit.

Paul knew that Onesimus could be very helpful to him in his ministry. He knew that Philemon would have been glad to allow the converted slave to remain in Rome to minister in his stead. But Paul refused to be selfish in the matter. "But without thy mind would I do nothing"—he wanted to play fair in the matter. This little incident reveals something of the great heart and the fine spirit of Paul. No wonder he could write Corinthians 13.

Not as a Servant but as a Brother.

Receive him, "not now as a servant, but above a servant, a brother beloved, specially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the flesh, and in the Lord?" Paul loved this man, he was his spiritual son. He knew that Philemon held him in high esteem. But there was a new, a higher, a holier relationship now than ever before. They may be master and servant in human relationship, but they were brothers in Christ in spiritual relationship. God does not see men as bond and free, black and white, rich and poor, but as his children and hence as brothers all. Paul not only preached brotherhood; he practiced it. And he insisted that those who named the name of Christ practice it also. "Receive him as myself"—treat him just as you would treat me, said Paul.

Bearing One Another's Burdens.

"If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account." Here was the aged apostle, a prisoner, standing good for anything that Onesimus, a slave, had done. Perhaps Paul remembered how Barnabas had stood by him when the going was rough. Here again is another insight into the man's bigness of heart and largeness of soul. He left no stone unturned that would help to establish Onesimus again in friendly relations with his master. We approach nearer to Christ when we take upon ourselves the troubles and burdens of others.

Christian Tact.

Paul uses a little tact at this point. He reminds Philemon that he could base his case on how much he owed Paul. He intimates that Philemon owed all unto him—perhaps he too was one of Paul's converts. But he waives this appeal. He states that he is sure that Philemon would do even more than Paul had suggested. It was sound psychology. Expect things of men, make men believe in themselves, appeal to the highest motives. Often they'll do more than we expect.

Unquenchable Hope.

Paul was a supreme optimist. He was old. He was in prison. But he told Philemon to reserve a room for him, for he hoped that "through your prayers, I shall be given unto you." There is something magnificent about this man's spirit. He believed the gospel and he could preach it effectively because he knew that it was adequate to every human need and emergency. They could keep Paul's body in prison but they could not imprison his spirit. The odds might be against him but he would not surrender. We need more of the flaming spirit of this man, more of his quiet confidence in difficulties, more of his indomitable spirit, more of his indomitable hopefulness.

Greetings to Friends.

"There salute thee Epaphras, my fellow-prisoner in Christ Jesus, Mark, Aristarchus, Demas, Luke, my fellow-laborers." Paul had a genius for friendship. And his letters, even to churches, abound in references and greetings to his numerous friends. As he said on one occasion, he had them "in his heart."

THE SEVEN LAWS OF TEACHING

We have been giving a brief summary of the seven laws of teaching as embodied in a little book of that name by Gregory-Bagly-Layton. They are again summed up here by way of emphasis and review. First, the true teacher, equipped with the knowledge he wishes to communicate; second, the pupil, with attention fixed and interest aroused, eager to pursue his studies or to learn; third, the true medium of communication between the two, language, clear, simple, and easily understood by both; fourth, the true lesson, the knowledge or experience to be communicated. These are the actors and the machinery of the learning process. The teaching process involves the matter of the teacher arousing and directing, the self-activities of the pupils, and the learning process involves the matter of having the pupils reproduce in their own thought, the lesson to be learned. The final factor in successful teaching and successful learning, is the matter of true review, testing, correcting, completing, connecting, confirming and applying the subject studied.

MONDAY.

THE DEEPS OF SOULS.

"Trouble not the Master."

"But when Jesus heard it, he answered him saying, fear not: . . . And . . . He came into the house, . . . And he took her by the hand, . . . And her spirit came again."—Read Luke 8: 49-56.

He who knows folks best knows that there is a lot more to people that is good than is usually accredited them. Jesus is an example of it.

The daughter of Jairus was dead. Jairus sent word to Jesus "You need not bother." How little Jairus understood Jesus. How little any one did for that matter. Jesus was in the world to do good, and to Him it was never too late to do good, and He did not stop when opportunity presented itself simply because one was courteous enough to favor him and would save him trouble. If only we have faith, in Him is nothing lacking.

There is a lot in humanity like Jesus. When we understand some people, they will go a lot further than we think they will, to do a favor. And this trait is a part of His likeness that He would have us fan with His spirit that we may grow more like Him until that perfect day.

Prayer—Dear Father, help us to bring to Thee our smaller troubles as well as the greater ones. Nothing is beneath Thy care. And in knowing Thy matchless love and blessing, may we become more like Jesus and find more like Jesus in mankind. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DIVINE HATRED.

"Abhor that which is evil: cleave to that which is good."—Rom. 12: 9.

We are told sometimes, never to hate. He who stops there forgets, perhaps, that all wickedness comes under God's stern condemnation, and if He did not hate sin, He could not love us.

Again we have before us, a trait, in which we are to become like Him. We cannot become a power for good until we have separated ourselves from evil with a hatred that knows no compromise with it. For instance, whatever good may be said of strong drink (and some speak good of it, with emphasis on the "speak"), pales into nothingness in the presence of the horrors it wreaks upon our fellowman. Radio advertisers should be ashamed of themselves to say what they do of the good of strong drink. I hate the Devil. I hate strong drink as I do the Devil. Do you?

Prayer—Dear Father, cleanse our minds of all its foul traces and evil affections, and fire our souls with a hatred for the things that Thou dost hate. O Lord, we crave to be pure in heart. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE MOST INSPIRING VERSE IN THE BIBLE.

"As Jesus passed by . . . He saith unto him, follow me . . . and he followed him."—Matt. 9: 9.

Jesus passing by and taking us with Him. The union of the soul of man and God. Can you find a better verse? Let us have it.

Nothing about miracles. Nothing about feasts. Nothing about sermons. Nothing about leaving home and loved ones. Matthew had a new life, a new friend and a new job. Think of his place in the sun as we think of the book bearing his name. "He arose and followed him."

Ever since that time, the Master has been passing by. Every day He passes by. He has often called unto us. Our following is our highest privilege in life. How is it with you?

Prayer—O Lord, would we leave all things and follow Thee? Call us to any service Thou hast for us. We come to Thee. That is all that matters. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NOTHING IN THE WAY.

"And he cut down a stick and cast it in thither, and made the iron to swim."

Elisha's miracle of making the axe swim represents God. When the honor and peace of God's people is involved, God even defers the law of gravitation to save them. With Him nothing stands in the way of good repute and happiness.

Prayer—Our Father, we bless Thy name that Thou dost come to the aid of Thy people at all times. Thou dost remove obstacles as big as mountains from before us. We thank Thee and we glorify Thee forever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE HIGHEST FUNCTION OF MAN.

"Men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit."—II Peter 1: 21.

We are great talkers and we say a lot of things. Much of life consists of speech. Is it our own speech, or is it seasoned with salt and has it saving power? When others hear us speak, what do they think of? Is the influence of our speech wholesome? Do our hearers call us good? We pray for the Holy Spirit in a lot of things, but there are but few things in which we need the Holy Spirit more than in our speech. O, the power of words!

Prayer—Teach us, Lord, always what to say. May we have the mind of Christ, and then we shall have speech Christlike. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HOW MUCH GOD'S?

"The silver is mine, and the gold is mine."—Haggai 2: 8.

In this material and troublous age the world thinks in terms of riches and those who have it not, envy those who have it. Everybody is striving to gain riches and are grieving if they lose it. It would be a most wholesome thing if humanity could become conscious of the fact, that, after all, it is God's wealth and that none of it belongs to man. He is only lending it to us awhile.

There is a wealth which is our own, a wealth that we may keep throughout eternity, Viz.—Character, honor, purity, love, peace, and strength of soul. These are ours forever.

Prayer—O Lord, deal with us as Thou seest best. Give us a character in Christ that lives in serene independence of this world's goods. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE SUMMIT OF ALL KNOWLEDGE.

"He that loveth not knoweth not God."—Read I Jno. 4: 7-21.

It has been said that to "know God is to know all that is worth knowing." That is the source of all other knowledge. That is the depths and the heights of all joy and power. That is the supremest aim and ambition that any life can hold. If this be so, then to know God is the chiefest importance of the world's knowledge.

This knowledge takes us into all the vicissitudes of life. There is not a decision we make in which we are not called upon to show forth His knowledge, it matters not how insignificant. Perhaps it is a book we would read, or a trade we would learn, or a pleasure we would take, or the mere reply to an unkind word some unthinking person has hurled at us. Here is life. Here are the seeds of eternal life. Here is our riches.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to fill up all the acts of our lives by filling our lives with Thy love. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

QUESTIONING JESUS.

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE,
First Congregational Church, Winter Park, Florida.

"No man after that durst ask him any question."—Mark. 12:34.

Jesus was questioned many times. His own immediate family questioned the wisdom of His travelling about the country with His nondescript comrades. The Pharisees questioned His right to oppose them. The elite questioned the rating of His town Nazareth. The hypocrites questioned His goodness and sincerity. Peter questioned His judgement in going to Jerusalem in the face of the aroused opposition. Pilate questioned whether He was worth more or less to him than Barabbas, and decided in favor of the criminal. His enemies questioned His lordship on the cross. And everybody questioned His power to rise again after the crucifixion. He answered all of them.

On this particular occasion of which Mark speaks, with the wily questioners about Him, Jesus gave to His inquisitors such an answer that they were stopped short. That is why we read: "No man after that durst ask any question."

It was not that Jesus wanted them silenced. He invited their questions. He encouraged the questioning spirit. He had no desire to stultify; nor to make the questioning people about Him appear foolish; nor to cause Himself to appear unapproachable, so that men would cease questioning Him. That day when they ceased to question Him further, He had put them to shame.

Suppose, in imagination, we gather on some hillside, and listen to a returned Jesus, as the crowd about Him calls out searching questions.

From the multitude, we hear a voice crying out: "Master, with conditions as they are today, what would you advise in the way of a system of government?"

Do you think Jesus would be trapped by a question like that? Do you think that He would give His unswerving allegiance for all time to any political party? Do you not think that His answer would be something like this?

"I look about and I see intrigue in high and low places! I see greed, hypocrisy, lust, drunkenness! I see parasites, and I hear liars! I see cheats, little ones and big ones! I see the white race exploiting the white race; the black exploiting the black race; the yellow race exploiting the yellow race! I see men and women, some who bear my name, eager for personal advancement, but not regarding those on whom they may trample! And you ask me what system of government will work with all this and more happening! There is no system of government that will function smoothly and bring the abundant life, no matter how excellently that system of government is organized, until men and women have come to the place in their deepest convictions, where they desire justice for all—integrity of soul—love of brotherhood—the idea of high purpose to dominate them! Gentlemen, I am pessimistic over the idea that men and women who are not changed in heart and purpose, can produce a great and lasting civilization!"

But there is another voice calling out. "Teacher, with mankind as it is, after 1900 years of hearing of your name and words, would you still advocate the Beatitudes, and the spirit of the Beatitudes?"

Ah! That is a good question! You see what this questioner wants to know is this. Would Jesus say after 1900 years of the Beatitudes—and such little progress made—that it was still best to meet insults with courtesy; to meet lies with only truth; to forgive and pray for a persecutor?

Men and women in some places have ceased questioning Jesus along these lines. They no longer read the Gospels where such passages are to be found. Or if they do they give these words only lip service. They salute them as high, but impossible ideals. They have practically closed the New Testament at this most vital place, and no longer consider it as an adequate guide to life. They will no longer allow it to assault their consciences. They have withdrawn from conflict with it. They have done this, not that the words of Jesus, or the book is not a worthy opponent, or that they have subdued it, but because the answers that they want to their questions are not there.

Our Lord's answers are no more to be changed than are mathematical formulas, or the laws that govern the Universe. His words are a portion of the Universe!

I believe that His answer would be: "I still believe the Beatitudes are the only practicable laws of life. I still say: 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.'"

There is a pause. Then an eager voice asks: "Master, how can we become your companions as the men of Galilee were your companions?"

Well, what was it that made the first, outwardly nondescript group, His companions? Some reeked of fish; some smelled of the earth; some were loud-spoken; some were gentle; some were booky. Can we find the reason?

Inwardly, they were not nondescript! They all had latent possibilities of true greatness. They all, with few exceptions, were willing to adventure with Him. They were kindred spirits! That is the answer.

Jesus did not choose His comrades because they were good looking men. They may have been. At least, Jesus did not let that stand in the way. He did not choose them because they came from the so-called best families. They may have. He did not choose them because they had mighty biceps. Probably some of them were Herculean.

I believe that Jesus would answer that last voice something like this: "Will you take hard tasks as well as easy ones in the building of the Kingdom? Will you promise, not to settle the problems of life superficially, but to keep at them until they fit in with things eternal? Have you a price? Will you do good and not prate about it? Are you willing, as I once asked James and John, to drink the same cup that I drink? If you are—if you will try to do these things—then you can be my disciples!"

But now at last a voice cries out. This voice asks a terrible question: "Master would you go to the Cross again? Would you go again, now that you know how the multitudes have spurned you, and ignored you since Cavalry?"

What do suppose His answer would be? What could His answer be? It would be "Yes!" And that word would be spoken in the deepest intensity, yet calmly and deliberately. And they who hear Him will know it is the truth. The careless, the indifferent, the sinners, yes the hypocrites, will know it is the truth! This Man would go again to Golgotha! They would know when they heard that one word: "Yes," that He believed in them, even them! He would go!

And after that no man would durst ask Him any question!

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

At this beautiful Thanksgiving Season, we should be filled with a Spirit of Thanksgiving. God has been good to all of us. Times are much better than for several years. The farmers have been blessed with good crops in most sections and prices of things they have to sell are good. When farmers are prosperous, it makes better times for those who live in the towns and cities. One helps the other. We all live in the same great country and are neighbors one to the other.

Those who have been richly blessed with plenty and to spare should not forget those who have not fared so well. Ah this Thanksgiving season. I want you to remember the ninety little children at the Christian Orphanage, who are dependent upon you for a home and a chance in life. When the Thanksgiving offering is taken in your church, are you going to be thankful enough, for the many blessings the Lord has given you this year, to be liberal in your contribution to help swell the offering in your church to help the little children here.

Have you thought it through and decided how much you feel down in your heart that you want to give—and will give? Are you going to do your part? Will you ask the Lord to guide you?

The Christian Orphanage is an institution of the Congregational-Christian Church now and deserves the loyal support of all our churches, Sunday Schools and friends. Let's make the Thanksgiving offering a Banner offering this year.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

SEVEN LAWS OF TEACHING. (Continued from page 11.)

The study of these laws may not make every reader a perfect teacher, but if the laws are observed, they will produce their effects with the same certainty and the same success as the laws of life produce the growth of the body. It will richly repay any teacher to buy the book referred to above, for although it is written primarily for teachers in the public school, it is equally applicable to Sunday School teachers, and the book, though an old one, deals with unchanging factors in the teaching and learning process.

In Memoriam

BRITTLE.

Through divine and infinite wisdom, which we often fail to comprehend, the all-wise Father has seen fit to take from this scene of his earthly labors, our beloved friend and faithful co-worker, Mr. Charles A. Brittle, a true member of this, the missionary society, and Burton's Grove Congregational Christian Church.

We wish to pay tribute to the memory of one whose going has brought sorrow to us all.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That his example of loyalty and devotion to the church, and every enterprise of the church, be an inspiration to us all.
2. That we hold in loving remembrance his faithfulness as a friend to all, and that we pattern our lives after the goodness and brightness of his life in such a way that our lives reflect the same Christian sunshine as did his. He was loved and respected by all who knew him.
3. That we extend our love and sympathy to his beloved wife, please a copy of these resolutions in our minutes, send a copy to his wife and a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. NELLIE BURTON,
 Miss LOUISE PITTMAN,
 Miss GUSSIE CARROLL.

FREEMAN.

Whereas, our heavenly Father, in His infinite love and wisdom, has seen fit to call to her eternal reward, Mrs. Rosa Andrews Freeman, one of our faithful and loyal members of Burton's Grove Christian Church, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we humbly submit to God's will, knowing that "He doeth all things well."
2. That we emulate her many noble virtues, while cherishing her beloved memory and faithfulness, and seek to carry on the work of Christ which was so dear to her heart.
3. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father. We are grateful that God saw that it was well for her to live and work with us as long as she did.
4. That we extend to the family, the Comforter whose grace is sufficient for every need.
5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication and another placed on the church records.

Mrs. E. W. CARROLL,
 Mrs. ROBERT GOODRICH,
 Mrs. J. H. STEPHENSON.

A LETTER FROM ALABAMA.

Since retiring as extension worker for Georgia and Alabama I have spent the past five years working in my church, and am at present acting as Sunday school superintendent, Superintendent Junior C. E. Society, and what might be called Director of Religious Education of the church.

Blackwoods Church has only 70 members, but with the aid of New Hope and Christian Hill, two other churches in our parish, we have this year built a parsonage which was dedicated on August 3 with Dr. Fred P. Ensminger and Miss Marguerite Davison aiding in the beautiful dedication service.

In December 1935 a ladies aid society was organized, since then the ladies have been actively engaged in the work of the church. They meet twice each month, and during the past summer sponsored four socials for the people of the community. They have aided in painting the parsonage and in paying the apportionment for missions.

We very much regret that this summer we could not have our leadership school camp, or Sealcon, on account of the Infantile Paralysis epidemic. Seven of our group were very happy in attending Grandview Training School in Tennessee. We have both junior and young people's C. E. societies, as well as an active Sunday school. Our pastor, Rev. A. C. Nelson, is a busy man and is well liked by the people of the community.

I am enjoying THE CHRISTIAN SUN and do not see how our family could do without it. Especially do I like the editorials, and I sometimes use extracts from them in Sunday school. Wish so much that more of the churches in this section would send in news to the church paper.

THE WORK OF THE CHURCH MISSIONARY COMMITTEE.

what these plans are. To avoid duplication, the Missionary Committee will need to keep in close contact with the Missionary Committee of the Woman's Association, the young people's organization, and the church school.

II—THE COMMITTEE SEES ITS WORK AS A WHOLE.

Before getting down to details, it will decide on its job in the large. This may include:

1. Cultivating the missionary mind, so that the church is increasingly concerned for the spread of the spirit of Christ in every geographical area and in every relationship of life.
2. Increasing the amount of knowledge of people and races and groups and situations; of human needs; and of manifestations of the spirit of Christ in meeting such needs.
3. Financing the enterprises that express the church's larger sense of mission. For the whole work of the church includes more than the maintenance of the church itself.
4. The men of the Church need the committee's help. It may suggest speakers for meetings of the men's club, enlist men in the Every-Member Canvass, or cooperate in the organization of a men's study group on "Men and Missions."
5. The Women of the Church are increasingly building a well-rounded program in which they include missions and social relations.
6. Young People are finding a place for study, discussion, and activities in the field of world fellowship.
7. Children are missing a vital element in their Christian education if missions is omitted. The church school furnishes an opportunity for a world-friendship program of study, worship, fellowship, giving, and service.—World Friendship Bulletin.

When you find yourself, as I dare say you sometimes do, overpowered as it were by melancholy, the best way is to go out and do something kind to somebody or other.—John Keble.

THANKSGIVING

---

When pumpkins turn to gleaming gold
And the Frost-king rules the air,
When fruits and grains are ripening
Under skies so blue and fair,
When the earth abounds in good things,
All our hearts should fill with cheer
As the wonder and the fulness
Of the harvest days appear.

For the glad Thanksgiving season
Brings us hope and casts out fear,
Makes us know the Wonder Worker,
Speaks this message firm and clear;
That all faith and love and labor,
Held in keeping to God's will Bring a sure reward at harvest,
For His hand is with us still.

In this happy time of reaping
Earth just floods us with her best,
And we thrill with true thanksgiving
When Dame Nature seeks a rest
From her million love-born labors,
Bringing gifts surpassing gold,
As the marvel and the magic
Of the harvest days unfold.

E. L. DAUGHTREY.

A Prayer-Poem

Make me too brave to lie or be unkind,
Make me too understanding, too, to mind
The little hurts companions give and friends,
The little careless hurts that no one quite intends,

Make me too thoughtful to hurt others so.
Help me to know the inmost hearts of those for whom I care;

Their secret wishes, all the loads they bear,
That I may add my courage to their own.

May I make lonely folks feel less alone,
And happier ones a little happier yet.

May I forget

What ought to be forgotten and recall

Unfailing, all

That ought to be recalled, each kindly thing,
Forgetting what might sting.

To all upon my way

Day after day

Let me be joy, be hope, let my life sing.

Amen.

NEWS FROM TIFTON GEORGIA.

As I was elected reporter from the Vanceville Christian Church, I shall tell you what little we are accomplishing.

Everyone will be sorry to hear that we had to dismiss Sunday School and preaching Sunday, November 22nd, because of the quarantine placed upon all children under the age of 16, because of a case of Infantile Paralysis in Tift County. All schools and public gatherings were closed. We are very sorry, but may God help us, as He knows best for each and every one.

I think everyone was very thoughtful and gave some money to send to the Christian Orphanage for their Thanksgiving. A splendid Golden Rule to follow is: "Remember others as well as thyself, especially the little orphans.

PASTOR WELCOMED.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield and family arrived in Windsor, Virginia, Tuesday the 17th, and were given a welcome service Wednesday night at the Windsor Christian Church. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Morris, pastor of the Methodist Church. The writer welcomed brother Crutchfield in behalf of the Windsor Church and the other churches constituting the charge and in behalf of the ministers of the Eastern Virginia Conference. Mr. Morris spoke in behalf of the Methodists, Supt. of Public Instruction, L. T. Hall, spoke for the Baptists, and Mr. Crawley Joyner, mayor, spoke for the town. Mr. Crutchfield responded in a few fitting remarks and made a favorable impression on all by his sincerity and humility of spirit.

Mr. Crutchfield is an A. B. and A. M. graduate of Elon College, and completed his seminary course at Duke. He has had ten years experience in the pastorate. He married Miss Agnes Whitt of Nathalie, Virginia, who is an Elon graduate of the class of '23. They have four children. Mr. Crutchfield will be a strong addition to our conference.

SUNDAY MORNING AT ELON COLLEGE.

I wish that a delegation from each of our churches in North Carolina and Virginia might attend a Sunday morning service at Elon College. What a joy, what an inspiration! The service is of the highest order. The music is a benediction. Here the students of the College are brought into a most impressive religious service. This supplies an indispensable element in education at Elon.

Our young people need the influence of Elon. Our churches need the training Elon has to offer. No parent need hesitate or be ashamed to send son or daughter to our College.

I think what a difference there would be with a few Elon graduates in each church. I think what an investment for any parent or church to have a young person to receive training and experience in the Elon College choir. This is the way to solve the problem of music in our local churches. Before you send your son or daughter to college, just attend a Sunday morning service at Elon.

PREACHING MISSION IN LAGRANGE.

By REV. JOHN H. WRIGHT.

Fired with enthusiasm by the Preaching Mission which they attended in Atlanta on October 1-4, a group of preachers in LaGrange, Georgia, came home and organized a city-wide Preaching Mission for LaGrange. The spirit spread until all of Troup County, together with five of the surrounding counties, were included in the effort.

Over twenty churches in LaGrange, and over fifty in the six counties in all, participated in a united drive to win people to Christ. The plan that was followed in most instances was for each pastor to do his own preaching. The results reported show a deepening of the spiritual life of Christian people. Especially apparent was the wholesome spirit of interdenominational unity and fellowship with which the whole movement was fostered.

The schools of the city were not neglected by the committee, and speakers appeared in the consolidated schools, the high school, and LaGrange College at special chapel services. Special union services were also held each morning during the week in three different sections of the city, with different ministers sharing in the preaching.

By vote of the Fellowship Forum, a minister's association in the city, the Mission Committee was commended for its efforts and requested to continue its organization until Lent when it is hoped that another concerted and united effort can be made by all denominations.

The United Congregational Christian Church of LaGrange was glad to cooperate in the City Preaching Mission, and feels that its spiritual and corporate life was greatly strengthened by its wholehearted participation. It is the renewed conviction of all who have had a part in the Preaching Mission that God is still speaking to the world through His Church.

A COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM.

(Questions for Discussion.)

By DR. H. S. HARRELL.

1. What is Evangelism?
2. Is it necessary that every Christian have a definite Conversion Experience?
3. Which should be the major evangelistic motive, increasing church membership or meeting the spiritual needs of people?
4. Why has the average church member so little interest in Evangelism?
5. What is the church's evangelistic responsibility to its community?
6. Can the church know its community other than by making a religious survey?
7. Does the old-fashioned revival still offer real possibilities?
8. If revivalism is to be continued should it be supplemented? And How?
9. What are the weaknesses of Visitation Evangelism?
10. Are we warranted in depending solely upon the Conversion Experience to make good church members?
11. How should the evangelistic appeal be related to the teaching of the Sunday School?
12. Ought the evangelistic appeal to be adapted to varying ages, in some way as Sunday School lessons are graded?
13. Should the pastor offer a class for new church members either before or after they are received into the church?
14. Should the evangelistic appeal stress the challenge of Christian service?

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference became greatly interested in promoting plans to aid Elon College and authorized a meeting of ministers and at least one representative from each church, to be held at the Raleigh Christian Church on the morning of December 3, 1936. This meeting is intended to aid the churches in deciding on their goal and how the money is to be secured. This is a very important meeting, and should be attended by all ministers and as many laymen as possible.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE EDITOR IS GRATEFUL.

It has been the privilege of the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to attend all of our conferences in the Southern Convention and also the Georgia Conference. It is his first time to attend all of them and it has been a rare privilege.

From the mountains and valleys both young and old came to attend the Virginia Valley Central Conference in August. The Youth Fellowship gave an excellent program at the evening session, and the business of the conference was transacted in a business way.

The Western North Carolina Conference lost its one large city church, Burlington, by transfer to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. But this may be a sort of stimulus which will make the rural churches in that conference more conscious of their importance and responsibility. Again the young people shared in the program and did their part well.

The editor was at home among his kinspeople at the North Carolina and Virginia Conference which met in Greensboro. It was an excellent conference with business and inspirational addresses interspersed in delightful fashion.

Georgia and Virginia are removed far from each other, but the editor felt something of the thrill that must have come to fraternal delegates from Virginia to Georgia, nearly half a century ago, when he had the joy of looking in for a short time on the proceedings of the Georgia Conference and sharing the fellowship of Congregationalists and Christians who were gathered to transact business for the Kingdom.

Unfortunately for him the Eastern Virginia Conference met the same week as the Georgia, and he could not get all of both conferences. Under the leadership of Rev. Robert Lee House the Eastern Virginia Conference held one of its best sessions in recent years.

The Eastern North Carolina Congregational and Christian people met in larger numbers than usual this year and manifested considerable interest in the enterprises of the church. Especially was this true concerning Elon College. Representatives from their churches were authorized to meet on December 3rd., in Raleigh, to consider and carry forward the conference work concerning Elon College.

The editor is deeply grateful for this opportunity to attend the various conferences. In each of them he found busy people eagerly engaged in church work, a fine fellowship and a sense of responsibility which is strengthening.

WE ARE CLIMBING.

The statisticians will give us the figures of what has been accomplished during the past year in our various churches and conferences. The editor does not know these figures, but is sure that our churches have started on the up grade in a very definite way. How far we have gone the reports when tabulated will tell.

The one thing that is most outstanding is that people are beginning to attend conference sessions in larger numbers, and that they have a hopeful outlook as to the future. This new spirit gives some assurance that the coming year will be far better than the years that have gone. There are definite signs of a dawning new day.

Among these signs is the increased interest of young people. In all the conferences they were there and shared in the program. In most of the conferences at least one session was under their leadership and they never failed to present a good program when given the opportunity.

A second indication is that the churches are becoming more interested in evangelism. People are wanting to know the way to win others so they will become a working part of the church. This is more than enrolling new members; it is enlisting Christian workers. It is more than revivalism; it includes revivals Christmas and Easter classes and ingatherings, and a year round program of enlistments.

A third indication that we are headed for a new day is the increasing interest in what some call social service or social action. The committee reports adopted by the conferences this year on this phase of church work are certainly worthy of study and application by local churches. If these ideals are lived out in the local churches there will be a rebirth of enthusiasm in the church.

A fourth indication that we are on the upgrade is a growing sense of fellowship. In recent years it may be that we may have been a bit afraid of what the merger might mean in our churches. Christians did not know Congregationalists, and Congregationalists knew as little about the Christian Church people. We are getting beyond that stage and are finding that both groups are friendly and willing to cooperate. There is growing also, it seems to this writer, a fine fellowship among the leaders in the church who are responsible for various of our church work. The writer also believes that local churches are becoming more interested in the various enterprises of the church and has high hope that within the next few years there will be a very noticeable difference in the attitude of churches toward the enterprises of the denomination.

The editor does not pretend to be a prophet, but he does sincerely believe that our churches stand on the threshold of a new day and that we can make it bright and beautiful.

THE MINISTER AND CHRISTMAS.

By REV. JOE A. FRENCH.

Read before the Eastern Virginia Conference.

Christmas! The one day that towers, like Mt. Everest among the mountains of India, above all the holidays and holydays of the year. Two months before the day, merchants are making more extensive and expensive preparations than are those millions to whom the day should be the most sublimely holy day. Merchants make millions out of the celebration while ministers join with the throngs in commercializing a day that of all days ought to be furthest from defilement by the money changers. May God help us to recognize Christmas as a sacred event that may be used to the glory of God, the exalting of the King of Kings, and the winning of souls to Him who came to bring peace and goodwill to earth.

The minister may turn the Christmas holiday to a holiday in his church with the use of the right materials and the proper preparation. The background for the Christmas message may be built up by the use in either the Church or Sunday School of proper worship services. The services may follow any theme that is apropos to the Christmas message. For instance, a series of worship services on giving would be appropriate. Or if the worship services are not practical, a series of stories on peace, goodwill, or some other Christmas theme may be used either in the Sunday School or Junior Church. Again the pastor might tell the story of some of the great Christmas Hymns and carols and teach the congregation to sing them. Yet another background may be prepared by the sermon themes used by the pastor previous to Christmas. The mid-week services may be used to create a proper Christmas attitude.

For the actual celebration of Christmas there is a large variety of available services. There are any number of plays depicting the Christmas story from various angles and this is one of the most popular methods of presenting the Christmas story. For this method of presenting the Christmas story there is a rich storehouse of materials from which to draw so that it is possible to get any kind of play to present any angle under almost any local circumstance. The pageant is probably as popular as the play at Christmas time and, as with plays, there is an abundance of material in this field also.

The pantomime is not so popular but may be just as effective as the play or pageant. It offers opportu-ity to dramatize some of the select passages of scripture, the great poetry, and the great hymns. Many of these rich sources of literature cannot be better presented than through pantomimes. Some of the Christmas hymns lend themselves readily to pantomime. A few hymns pantomimed along with other appropriate material makes a beautiful service.

Henry Van Dyke's "The Other Wiseman" and Charles Dickens' "The Christmas Carol" and others of this type are excellent material for Christmas and if not repeated too often, people like to see them again and again.

With large prints of the great Master pieces available at such reasonable prices, it is possible to prepare an impressive service with the use of pictures. A service centered around some of the great pictures that can be exhibited before the congregation in which the story of the pictures are told, makes a very worshipful service. If a stereopticon is available, such a service will be less trouble and probably more effective if the mechanics are so handled that the service is not marred by them.

Poetry, hymns, or scripture may form the basis for a Christmas service. The use of any one or more of these source materials will find ready response in the congregation. Any phase of the Christmas message may be used for such a service. Along with this may be a suitable scene about the altar. Here is a picturesque passage; "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people; for there is born to you in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel, a multitude of heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and goodwill among men." This passage lends itself readily and easily to the use of poetry and hymns. Each phrase may suggest a poem or hymn.

Those who have used a candle light service, need no argument to convince them of its beauty and effectiveness. The services already mentioned, use only a comparatively few people in their production and they reach the audience largely through sight and sound. If not rightly directed, these services may be merely entertainments. A candle light service gives everyone present an active part in the worship service. There is a message and impression one gets from lighting a candle at the sacred altar that is not gotten elsewhere. A candle light service may be used at any time but probably an effective one may be a Christmas Morning Day-break service. Still another beautiful service on Christmas day may be a communion service at some convenient time for the parish. The Church may be lighted only with candles and decorated with some Christmas scene and the Communion service. For an hour the Christmas hymns, prayer hymns, and communion hymns may be played and people allowed to come and go at their pleasure while the minister remains at the table to serve those who come.

If the Church has a Christmas gift service, it should be on the Sunday before Christmas so that the groceries, canned goods, boxes and gifts can be distributed to the needy families before Christmas day.

The pastor would do a good service by urging his parishioners to have a home service on Christmas eve with the entire family participating. Suggestions for such can be made from the pulpit or in the bulletin.

The Minister may make use of Christmas greeting cards or letters to announce his special services.

No one should overlook the Christmas offering for superannuation.

It is to be hoped that the minister does not allow the mistake of a Christmas worship service and Christmas tree at the same time. Why not make this Christmas the dignified and exalted holyday that it deserves to be and a day of ingathering of souls for Jesus Christ whose birth we celebrate.

IS IT A DREAM?

Is it a dream—and nothing more—this faith
That nerves our brains to thought—our hands to work
For that great day when wars shall cease, and men
Shall live as brothers in a unity
Of love—live in a world made splendid?
Is it a dream—this faith of ours—that pleads
And pulses in our hearts—and bids us look,
Through mists of tears and time, to that great day
When wars shall cease upon the earth, and men
As brothers bound by Love of Man and God,
Shall build a world as gloriously fair
As sunset skies, or mountains when they catch
The farewell kiss of evening on their heights?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The suggestion was recently made to the writer: "Why not have a mass meeting of the deacons of the churches in our Conference, and have a real workers conference concerning their work?" There are forty-two active churches in the eastern Virginia Conference. An average of four deacons for each church would make a total of 168. If they could be assembled in a Sunday afternoon conference, in some central church, it would be a very representative group of laymen; and the possibilities of such a meeting, under wise guidance, cannot be easily estimated.

The deacons hold a very responsible office in the local church. Many churches have not adequately magnified the office; and the deacons have not carefully prepared themselves for their opportunities and tasks. Consequently the deacons have no regular meetings and have no fixed objective, except to assist in administering the communion. The importance of the Lord's Supper should be emphasized, but that is only one of the opportunities of the deacons. In the development of the church and the administration of the work of the various organizations and departments, the deacons should find other tasks of equal importance to the regular communion service.

Under the old order—the writer refers to a period thirty or forty years ago—the deacons assumed the responsibility of reporting to the quarterly conference, any persons guilty of any misconduct or any violation of the church's rules. This method of procedure, as revealed in the church records of that period, and earlier, gave the quarterly conference the atmosphere of a police court. Little attention was given to corrective instruction and brotherly counsel, but punishment for any offense was regarded as a very important part of church discipline. This observation of that period is not given here as a criticism, but as a fact. In that period that method was, in a measure, effective in holding up certain standards of morals for church members.

Many years of experience and observation have brought changes in the methods of churches. In this day public sentiment has moved far in the opposite direction. Churches today have fewer rules; and little effort is made to enforce them. The quarterly conference of the local church is no longer a moral police court for the membership. The old-fashioned type of deacon has lost his place of importance as a prosecutor or defender of his fellow-members. It is unfortunate if he cannot find work except at the communion table. To the credit of many deacons it should be said that they have vision of their work, and they try to meet their opportunities with consecration and common sense. As a pastor, this writer can bear testimony to their value and helpfulness. There are churches whose deacons meet regularly a few days before the quarterly conference and carefully discuss the problems of the church, and the possibilities of helping, here and there, in the building of a better fellowship. Quietly, these men go about their work with a constructive program in their minds, and a deepening of the spiritual life of the church upon their hearts.

There are a number of churches in the denomination in need of such wisdom and careful planning. Some of the havoc wrought by thoughtless and unbusinesslike methods of church administration could be avoided by common sense and consecration. Deacons should be organized for cooperation in the local church, and their work should be carefully planned and prayerfully executed. A great deacons conference of all the deacons in our several Conferences could work wonders in developing more efficiency among our deacons in the local church.

NEWS FROM NEWPORT NEWS.

We have been on the field one month. In that time a number of things have taken place and we have moved from one to the other with great haste. Our first task was to find a place to live. With the great activity throughout this section, we had some trouble getting a suitable place. We have lodged for a while but will move to a more convenient place the first of the year.

There has been a period of getting acquainted, which will project itself into the next several months, that is a challenge to the mind as well as physical energies. Every courtesy has been extended and we are coming fast to know those with whom we are to work in these next months. We have found here a well organized church with leaders who are capable and constituency that is ready to go on toward the possibilities which seem attainable. The church as a whole, as best as we can judge from our short stay, is in fine working order. For this condition due credit should be given Rev. Robert Lee House, whom I succeeded. Most any of us can leave a field in great confusion, but it takes a good pastor to leave a people who desired that he remain their leader and his successor find warm hearts and willing hands extended in expression of their loyalty to their church. There are many signs here of a noble work on the part of Mr. House. He has done many things which will make our work easier and his work more lasting. He received us with a warmth which is becoming to old friends and characterizes the man himself. The people love him, as well they should, but he has made them love their church more and they have given us their pledge of cooperation. To him and to them I am truly grateful.

At present this pastor has more to eat in the pantry than he has ever had at one time. It makes one feel that the depression really is over. These comforts came through the ladies (Ladies Aid and W. M. U.), of the church. It was not a "pounding," it was an avalanche of groceries. It was not given out in the spirit of "Take this before you starve," but rather in the spirit of, "We want you to know we welcome you and in this way we say it concretely." After we had loaded the car and started home, Mrs. Dollar said to me, "I have never felt such a fine spirit as seemed to come with this abundant pantry shower. There was more behind it than groceries, wasn't there?" An so it is that we are finding the people of Newport News. It was so in the reception given in our honor.

Two special days, Armistice and Thanksgiving, have rushed in upon us in the first month. We had splendid services with many visitors on both Sundays. While we are working up to the greatest day of all days, Christmas, we are also busy planning the program of the church for 1937. By January 1st we expect to have it ready to present to the congregation. We will have in it a place for all the enterprises of our church at large and a vision for world service.

We desire the prayers of the fellowship that we may render an acceptable service and that His may be the glory.

JESSE H. DOLLAR.

Praise loudly; blame softly.—Catherine II.

For the Children

"YIELD NOT TO TEMPTATION."

This song has helped thousands of boys and girls and men and women over the hard places in life, perhaps because the last lines told them to "look ever to Jesus, He'll carry you through." Sometimes people lose wonderful blessings in life because they do not look to Jesus for help.

One time a boy who had learned the words of this hymn lay very sick. The doctor said he must die. The boy kept saying over and over the words, "He'll carry me through." His mother sat by his bedside and wondered what he meant. The boy was too sick to tell her, but after a while a minister came to see her. He heard the boy, and asked the mother if she knew what he meant. When the boy's mother told him she did not, the minister said: "It is part of a song he learned in Sunday School, and it means that Jesus is carrying your little boy in His arms through the dark valley, and He will carry you through your trouble, my good woman, if you will only trust Him. He will take you home to your boy sometime, by and by."

People everywhere love this hymn and sing it. The words and tune were written by H. R. Palmer.

Good Mr. Sankey tells us that one time the women in a New York prison were having a dispute. They were all angry at each other, and they were causing no end of trouble. All at once some one started to sing the words:

"Yield not to temptation,
For yielding is sin;
Each viet'ry will help you
Some other to win.
Fight manfully onward,
Dark passions subdue;
Look ever to Jesus,
He'll carry you through."

Every one stopped being cross, joined in the hymn and marched back to their cells in good order.

If you will learn the words to this song and sing them often, they will help you, too.—Lillie A. Faris.

WHEN OLGA NEEDED A FRIEND.

It was to be Olga's first day at school in America. Only two months before she had come with her parents from Russia. Now her father had bought a farm and had moved his family there. Olga loved the pretty hills. It was springtime and she found great delight in hunting the first wild flowers of the season.

However, when her father told her that she must start to school a great fear began to grow in her heart. There would not be a single familiar face to smile at her. Perhaps even the strangers would not want her there. These thoughts were terrible enough to make little Olga shed many tears. Yet she knew the hardest part of all would be that she could not say a single word to the teacher or any of the boys and girls. For she could not speak at all in the English language. "Oh, I don't want to go to school," she sobbed.

The mother could only pat her little Olga's shoulder and coax her not to cry. For she could not tell her English to speak. Nor could she promise that the American children would smile at her and want her to be with them.

Now this first morning had arrived! There was a pain in Olga's heart as she started down the road toward the bars alone. She knew the way to the little white schoolhouse that stood beside a small happy brook. For every day since she had lived in her new home she had picked flowers on top of the hill in the back part of her father's farm where she could look down on the building with its playgrounds.

So now Olga went through the bars, down the lane, then climbed the hill through the fields. She was afraid to go the way the other children went, for fear someone might laugh at her.

When she came to where she could look down at the schoolhouse the children were all outdoors playing games. Olga wished she might be as happy as they were joining in their fun.

At the same time she wished that she might run home to her mother and never go down to be with children to whom she could not talk.

Suddenly an idea flashed into her mind. She could tell her mother every morning that she was going to school, and then come only this far and stay until the others went home at night. Yet a queer feeling came with this thought. She had always told her mother the truth. Besides she could not go home and tell what she had learned that day if she not go to the school.

At that moment the bell on top of the building began to ring. Instantly the children left their play. Olga watched them form in line. As they marched in she noticed that one girl about her own age stayed outside with the teacher after the others had disappeared. It looked to Olga as if this girl was pointing up towards the hill. Then almost at once the girl ran down to the brook and disappeared in a clump of bushes that grew beside it at the foot of the hill.

What should she do? Oh, she knew she must go on down. She would have to go in the room all by herself! And she couldn't say a word! Because she felt so bad Olga sat down on the bank of the brook which was covered with spring violets and began to cry.

In fact she sobbed so loud that she did not hear the footsteps of someone coming until they were quite close. Then all at once she lifted her tear-stained face to look up at the girl who a few minutes before had been pointing up at the hill.

The girl was smiling at her. Olga's heart began to flutter in a strange, happy way. The girl was talking, but Olga could not understand a word she said. So she shook her head sadly.

Then much to Olga's surprise the girl stooped over and kissed her right on her tear-stained cheek. Olga's heart began to beat rapidly and little tingling thrills swept through her now. The next moment the girl was helping her to feet and pointing to the little white building below them. Then at once she began to leading her down the hill.

When they came to the schoolhouse the girl paused. She pointed to herself and said over and over "Laura." At first Olga could not understand. Then all at once it flashed upon her that the girl was saying her own name. So Olga repeated the single word "Laura." Immediately the idea came to her to do the same.

Right away the other girl repeated the name after her, "Olga." Then she laughed merrily. And because there wasn't the tiniest bit of pain in Olga's heart now she laughed too. What fun she was going to have. But best of all she had found a friend, and Laura, she told her mother that night, was the prettiest name she had ever heard.—Gladys M. Gearheart.

A PRAYER FOR MY COUNTRY.

Dear God of every living thing;
Dear God of every place;
Oh, loving God of every man,
Of every creed and race!
Please bless and guide my native land
With purpose high and pure.
Oh, make it strong in noble plans
And safe in honor sure.
God, make our people brave and calm,
And guide each heart and hand
That shapes the future hope and life
And goodness of our land.
Oh, God, teach me, a little child,
To do my honest part
To make My Country great and good
With all my mind and heart. Amen.

MISS OLIVE GREEN WRITES US.

[Many Sun readers, our good women in particular, will recall with delight the visit of Miss Olive Green, Missionary on furlough from Turkey, last spring, speaking at the "Rallies" in several of our churches and also at the Southern Convention. It will be recalled that Miss Green, deeply to her regret and ours also, was taken ill in Durham and was unable to meet, and had to cancel, several engagements. All of us who heard Miss Green were delighted with her messages and her work. This letter comes to all who met and heard her and to all others who may be interested in our mission work in Turkey. I trust several who read this will write Miss Green in reply to her very interesting letter. Her address in full is given following her name, but any letter going to her should have a 5 cent stamp instead of a 3 cent stamp. Now by all means read her letter. J. O. A.]

Dear Everybody:

I want so much to write you individual letters, but I can not, for letter writing is so much like school work that when the dictations and compositions are all corrected and the various interruptions involved in living in a household of twenty-five are over for the day, bed is the only thing possible. I want you to know that there is an unwritten paragraph at the end for each one of you and that sometime before June, I hope to get it written. I had a good trip over with Miss Mills and several others coming to Athens and found everyone and everything here prospering and hopeful.

I sailed on the "Manhattan" September 9th. We usually travel via Venice but the Italian boat was booked up, so we had several days in Paris waiting for the "City of Cairo" sailing from Marseilles. I called up Cecilia McKinnon, a Wellesley classmate who is an artist and has a charming establishment an hour out of Paris. I do not know the French country at all and the three days with her in her lovely old garden and driving through forests, farmland and villages were delightful. I had found France from the train always rather monotonous, but the Valley of Chevreuse and the country about are charming.

On the "City of Cairo," we ran into Lynda Goodsell Blake and her family bound for Merzifon, so we were quite a party to Piraeus. I got a terrible little Greek boat out of there, for the "Turkish Mail" is suspended and the Italian boat goes by way of Rhodes. I arrived in Smyrna the twenty-sixth day of September.

Although I was ill much of the time while on furlough, I have been very well since my return. Work, or the air of Turkey seems to have done wonders. Everyone finds me looking ten years younger and extraordinarily well. I walked for eight hours yesterday and am all the better for it, so I think I can put a good round period to my tale of woe. But when I have never been ill, to have it all pile up as it did during my furlough did seem awfully bad luck.

Our yesterday's hike was fine. Harriet Yarrow, Nevzat Bey, twenty-four of our girls and three English friends, hired a city bus for the day and drove to a village in the foothills of Nifdagh. We got out in a lane bordered by fresh new grass, violet leaves and small pink wild eyelamen. The stone walls were covered with ivy and soon we were in a wood carpeted with pine needles and eyelamen. We followed a tumbling stream up through a canyon. Soon the oleander plane, myrtle and pomegranate gardens gave way to a young pine forest. By noon we were well up on the shoulders of "Tahtali" and had our luncheon at a cold spring bowered in maidenhair ferns. I wish you could have seen the pale copper of the Yamanlar Range and the blue of Smyrna Gulf as we saw it and the great pale-veined crocuses along the path and the clear blue shadows on the opposite slopes. And I wish you could have heard the nightingales in the canyon in the dusk of evening. As our girls piled into the waiting bus, they sang in both English and Turkish, making all the noise they could, on the way to Smyrna. This seems to be the accepted Turkish school-girl way of ending a perfect day.

We have almost twice as many boarders as last year—in fact we have all we can take without some drastic rearranging. The entering class is the largest for years—thirty. Practically every girl was back the first day and deep in lessons the second. There is a fine spirit. We hear great reports of our girls studying in Ankara, Istanbul and Berlin. Zekiye has gone back to Yale on a government scholarship. Some are teaching and some are "getting" engaged. When I face my classes I forget homesickness, Maine, Utah and Massachusetts, my family and friends, libraries, music and pictures, the fun of driving the car and of going to a good show, grapefruit and American ice-cream. There is an intensity about our clutch at America in the few months that are ours that gives us something that you dwellers at home seldom possess, I fancy. At any rate, though I was rebellious at leaving home this time I am over it now and quite content to be back at work and to be having fall roses instead of snow.

Some of you do not know that I was back at Wellesley for Commencement and our informal reunion; that I had a short visit with Ann in Michigan; a fortnight in Luey's cabin in Gold Hill, Colorado, and that she and I had a wonderful week in her new Studebaker visiting Ogden, where I was brought up, Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon, and the cliff-dwellers in Mesa Verda. That and my week in the south before I was taken ill were the high spots of my furlough; I shall never forget either. I saw Washington at last, on my way south, and Williamsburg with Betty on my way home, and this summer, I got in two weeks of painting at Mr. Woodbury's at Ogunquit,—a thing I have wanted to do all my life. So first and last I did some of the things I wanted to do.

Every one here is well, and the young Turkish Republic is one place on earth that seems to know what it wants and to be well on the road to accomplishing it. Do write me.

Sincerely yours,

OLIVE GREENE.

DAMASCUS.

(Eastern Virginia Conference.)

The Woman's Missionary Society of Damascus Christian Church held its regular monthly meeting at the church Wednesday, November 3, 1936. There were twenty members present and also visitors. We had a very interesting program. The topic was "Striving for Peace." Each one on the program responded nicely.

New officers have been elected for another term: Mrs. B. L. White, president; Mrs. Ocil Winslow, secretary; and Miss Annie Lassiter, treasurer.

Committee.

SUGGESTIONS FOR WORSHIPPERS.

Our church service would be improved if our worshippers followed these suggestions: (1) Get to the church before the service begins. (2) Leave the three rear pews for late comers. (3) Fill up the middle part of the pew first, leaving the ends of the pew for those who come later. (4) Take your cue from the minister and the choir. If they whisper, you may. The children will not whisper if the adults do not. (5) If the service has begun, wait in one of the rear rooms until there is a break in the service. (6) Join with the choir and congregation in the hymns and responses. (7) When the service is over exchange greetings with those who have been seated near you. Do this whether you know them or not.—Anon.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

MISS LUCY ELDRIDGE—GUEST EDITOR!

Miss Lucy Eldredge of the Young People's Department of our Church, with headquarters in Dayton, Ohio, is a very busy person with innumerable calls made upon her time. We appreciate very much the prompt answer she gave in reply to our request for suggestions for this page and material concerning other young people's groups to share with you. She has even been good enough to take "time out" between trips which are connected with her position to write for us the inspiring message given below. Each of you should read it carefully and share it with your friends, who do not take THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Miss Eldredge—perhaps "Miss Luey" to some of you—is a person with whom you should become familiar, for she is certainly a "personage" in the work of our Church connected with young people. And, as some of you may know, she is a graduate of Elon College and very much interested in the work of the Southeast Youth Fellowship.

If any of you are in need of material for your local meetings, or of help in planning for a young people's conference, or any similar suggestions, write to Miss Eldredge and she will respond readily. We know, because we have tried it!

"WE WOULD BE BUILDING."

"We Would Be Building." These were the words sung over and over, at Lakeside. They are heard now in all parts of the country, along with "I Would Be True" and "Follow, the Gleam." They express a deep, genuine longing of Christian youth. "We Would Be Building" . . . A New World.

And then we meet with young people, or read letters, and find . . .

A week-end institute or retreat of the young people of two churches, located six miles apart. The purpose is to plan the program for the next six months. A Social Action leader is one of the resource persons to help the group find something to do . . . some action which may grow out of their discussion and study. There are the people on relief. ("Let's not get into politics" and "We don't really want to know such people"—just two comments, and then rather polite silence.)

A group of ninth and tenth grade boys and girls organize a new club. "Phi Epsilon" (Friendship Club) is the name they choose. They come from three suburban sections of a large city and from every social strata. They are going to try to find out what friendship really means, right there in their own group, and then perhaps beyond. How far can they go? . . .

"Christian Youth—So What?" The conference theme was first used in California, then Rhode Island, then Ohio where five hundred young people sat listening—"You are Christian Youth" . . . "What does that mean to you?" The challenge to think, and to act, was unmistakable. What will it all mean? . . .

A young man came from California to Lakeside. He did not miss its message. "I felt about two inches tall" he said "after seeing Kagawa, Mrs. Induk Pak and Art Cassidy." And he went home to a Summer Conference and enlisted the interest of a small group ready to go with him. They were talking peace. They are creating a new public opinion. They have paid the price of preparation in study and effort . . .

Jack had a good job. He needed every cent if he stayed in college through the year. But it was a restaurant, with a license to sell liquor, and he was committed to the task of building a better world. Not an easy problem to face, is it? But the ideal won, the job was sacrificed for one which took more hours for less pay. He is still in school though he is not sure how long he can stay. And he is thrilled with the possibilities of building a new world! . . .

These are just incidents here and there. Individuals and groups are being brought face to face with issues of our day in countless ways. Some are failing to measure up, others are magnificent. Each must decide where he will stand, and pay the price for his decision.

These are glimpses of our Pilgrim Program possibilities. "Christian Youth Building a New World" is its goal. Congregational-Christian young people are committed to it with the youth of many denominations. "Worship and study issuing in action" is the method. Countless youth conferences are being held all over the land. Many new Pilgrim Fellowship plans are being reported. Youth is moving—where?

Increasingly one tendency seems to be evident. There must be a greater emphasis on personal religious living. (Continued on page 15.)

MY APPRECIATION OF THE JEW.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR

DECEMBER 13, 1936.

SCRIPTURE: ISA 9:6;

LUKE I: 68-79.

Daily Bible Readings—

This meeting is one in which we should develop a deeper appreciation for the Jew. Sacred history reveals the Jewish race as the people who sought after the One Supreme God who could rule His people. In ancient days the Jews passed through persecution for their faith. In many nations today they are passing through an era of persecution.

There is a feeling of resentment on the part of the Gentiles against the Jews. Is there any reason for such marked discrimination? Many professions are slow to admit the Jew to their ranks. He is human and loved by "Our Heavenly Father" as much as the Gentile world. The problem for the Christian is to prove to the Jew that he is willing to practice the spirit of brotherhood as is represented in the Christian religion. As Christians let us give honor to whom honor is due.

For Discussion—

1. What blessings have come through God's people, the Jew?
2. Does the Christian spirit know any racial bounds?
3. What challenge does the Jew present to Christianity?
4. How did the Jew safeguard the Scriptures?
5. Why have they as a race not accepted Christ?
6. How would you go about converting a Jew to Christ?
7. What is the world's greatest problem concerning the Jew?
8. How can this be solved?

Quotable Poetry—

Amazing race! deprived of land and laws,

PAUL'S PARTING COUNSELS.

LESSON X—DECEMBER 6 1936.

GOLDEN TEXTS I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept faith.—II Tim. 4:7.

LESSON: I. Timothy 6; II. Timothy 4; Titus 2.

When Paul wrote these letters to Timothy and to Titus, he never dreamed that they would become a permanent part of the world's greatest literature, and that centuries after they were written, they would be the inspiration of Christian ministers and teachers and laymen. Thus it is that often the things which we do unconsciously are some of the most influential things we do. The world would be so much poorer if Paul had not taken the time and the trouble to write those letters. One can accomplish a great deal by personal letters. Perhaps there is some student away from home at school to whom you could write, some friend on the mission field, some person out of Christ—a letter from a Christian friend helps so much.

Godliness with Contentment.

The true riches of life are within. One cannot enrich life from without, that is, by wearing fine clothes or by possessing fine things. True gain is godly character, content with the necessities of life. Paul does not say, of course, that contentment is to be found with one's self, but with godliness. Man can be ultimately satisfied only with God, therefore devotion to God is the first condition of true satisfaction, and contentment with earthly lot is the second.

Leaving All We Have.

We brought nothing into the world, and we can take nothing out. A man comes into the world without even clothes. He can take nothing out of the world with him. The mortician—that is a fancy name for what we used to call the undertaker—may dress him up in fine clothes, and loved ones may put jewels and valuables in the coffin, but no man can take anything with him when he leaves this world. "How much did he leave?" we sometimes ask about a man who is supposed to have money. The answer should be "He left everything he had." The essential wealth of a man is not in things—Jesus said that a man's life did not consist in the abundance of the things he possessed. A man cannot take anything out of this world with him. That fact ought to cause thoughtful men to think about the true place of riches in human life.

But the man himself goes out into this world. Character is essentially spiritual. The challenge of life is not to see how much we can accumulate, but how much growth in character we can make. And one of the tests of character is the way in which one uses what he has.

The Danger of Riches.

Paul, like Jesus, did not say it was a sin to be rich. He said it was dangerous. Riches constitute a delusion and a snare, they are subtle temptations. It is not a sin to be rich. God undoubtedly has decreed that some men be rich. God has given some men the ability to be rich and at the same time to be Christian. But they that are minded to be rich, those who set their hearts on being rich, on making money at any cost, they fall into a temptation and a snare and many foolish and hurtful lusts, such as drown men in destruction and perdition.

The Love of Money.

"For the love of money is the root of all kinds of evils." Men have tried to soften the translation by using the words "a root" of all kinds of evil. But the former translation is perhaps the more nearly correct one. Trace the sins of the world back to their sources and usually there is the spirit of covetousness or greed or selfishness which is the essential spirit of the love of money. And as Paul says, this love of money has led many astray from the faith, and has caused many to pierce themselves through with many sorrows. We often think of the poor people as the unhappy people. As a matter of fact, some of the most desperately unhappy people in the world are the rich people. Many a well-to-do man longs for the simple, happy days which he had when he was leading a simpler life. Riches have a tendency to crowd out so many of the abiding values of life.

Fighting the Good Fight of Faith.

"Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on the eternal life." The Christian life is a warfare. It calls for resolute action, for stern moral measures, for courage and heroism, for suffering and sacrifice. Character is not a gift; it is an achievement. Paul had been a valiant warrior. He had felt the stress and strain of what was involved in following the ideals of Christ. One does not "get to heaven" on a bed of roses. A man must constantly be on his guard, be vigilant, be vigorous.

A Solemn Charge.

"I charge thee in the sight of God

. . . and of Christ Jesus . . . that thou keep the commandments, without spot, with out reproach, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ, which in his own times He shall show." Life is a serious business—Paul reminded Timothy of that. No one knew when Christ was to appear; that was not the important thing anyway. The important thing was that Timothy and every man should live in the light of the finest possibilities of life and be ready to give an account of himself if and when Christ does appear. "Keeping the commandment" meant the entire conduct becoming a Christian, the law of love, the things a Christian ought always to be found doing.

Quiet Confidence.

"The Lord will deliver me from every evil work, and save me unto his heavenly kingdom." To some of Paul's contemporaries that would seem blasphemous. To others it would sound like presumption. But to him it was simply the creed of any sincere Christian. Paul knew that God's grace was adequate to every human experience. He did not think that he would be saved by his works. Nor did he believe that he would be spared from dangers and even death. But in quiet confidence he stated simply that God in Christ would deliver him from every evil work, that God's grace was stronger than man's sin. Real faith in Christ steadies and sustains.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT FOR THE KING.

Folks do their Christmas shopping earlier than in former years, so it is not too early to talk about a Christmas present for our King. What do you suppose He would like to have? What gift would make His heart glad? Well, there is first of all the gift of ourselves, the dedication of our lives wholly to Him. This would be a choice gift for us to make to Him at the Christmas season.

But what about the gift of some member of your Sunday School Class for Him? Why not make this Christmas season memorable for yourself and for somebody else by winning someone to Christ. What an inspiring sight it would be to have our boys and girls and young people and adults to give themselves to Christ, and to unite with the Church at the Christmas season. Start now to pray for someone, seek an opportunity to speak to him or her about Christ, try to win at least one to Christ. You will make your heart glad, the heart of your friend glad, and His heart glad.

MONDAY.

WHAT CHRISTIANITY DOES FOR ME.

"O Lord, Thou hast searched me and known me."—Ps. 139:1-3.

It is rightly said that "religion is far from being an opiate," as some would have us believe. It makes a man search for God and search himself, and it makes him call upon God from the very depths of his soul.

Religion also has curative value. It puts something into his life that brings about moral and spiritual recovery. It is a stimulant. With its coming into life, there comes an inner force that drives one to undertake, endure and achieve. Mabel K. Howell says, "Opiates enslave and deaden men. Religion makes alive, delivers and frees for action."

Prayer—Our Father, forbid that we should ever desire to conceal the sins that may be in our hearts. Turn the search-light of heaven upon us. Make us conscious of wrong. Forgive us and set our feet in new paths. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GIVING HIM THE OPPORTUNITY.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."
—Mk. 16:15.

"Go thou and preach the kingdom of God."—Lk. 9:60.

God does not ask us to save anybody, or to make our home or community better than it is; but He does ask us to give Him the opportunity to do these things. Christian living is a continual challenge to us to do these things. Do this and He will add sacramental value to every undertaking.

Prayer—O Lord, Jesus Christ, we pray Thee that we may be, and be known of men to be, children of Thine. This we ask for Jesus's sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

RELEASING GOD.

"There he could not do many miracles, owing to their lack of faith."
Matt. 13:58.

It is said, "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these, it might have been."

There is another saddest of things, the saddest that the world has ever known. It is divine power blocked by human ignorance, wilfulness and impotence. God depends upon the human race to provide the opportunity to bring heaven on earth and we block it.

The greatest characters for Jesus the world has ever known, have been those who gave God a chance. In his young days, a friend said to Dwight L. Moody, "God is waiting to show the world what He can do with a man in whom His power is fully released." Moody replied, we are told, "By the grace of God, I will be that man." One only has to reflect on the life of Moody for the answer. Wherever God is released, there we have heaven on earth.

Prayer—Our Father, as science releases the forces of nature for the service of man, we seek the power of Christ to release us for Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

MORAL STRABISMUS.

"If thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light, but if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness."—Matt. 6:22-23

"Strabismus" means cross-eyed. Cross-eyes reflect mal-action of the controlling muscles of the eyes. Straight eyes reflect formation, balance and control. There can be no doubt as to Christ's meaning. He said when you prayest "Be not as the hypocrites are who pray standing upon the street corner thinking they will be heard for their much speaking." This is another way of saying "When you pray and give alms or whatever else you may undertake for good, avoid the stupidity and sin of fixing one eye upon the crowd to see what impressions you are going to make upon them, and making as though you are trying to keep one eye upon the Lord." It is another way of saying, "You cannot serve two masters." It is another way of saying that when moral vision is divided, heaven and earth is blurred.

Prayer—O Lord, enable us to forget our worth, to cease from looking for applause of men, and give us purity of motive, power of action and the heavenly spirit. This we ask for Jesus's sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE ONE THING.

"This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Jesus Christ."—Phil. 3:13,14.

"He who seeks one thing and only one,
May hope to obtain it ere life's work be done;

But he who seeks all things wherever he goes, . . .

A harvest of barren regrets."

Prayer—O Lord, Our God, Giver of every good gift, give singleness of eye in all we do and say. In Jesus name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE APPEAL OF THE GOODNESS OF GOD.

"Despiseth thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long-suffering not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance."—Romans 2:4.

The forgiveness of God was the thing that impressed Paul, and, having been the man that he was before his conversion, it is certain that no one has more reason to put God's forgiveness first. Paul having been such a sinner, he must also have realized that it is the goodness of God that extends that forgiveness.

When everything is analyzed rightly, it is seen that in the background of it all, there are the riches of His kindness, His forbearance and patience, and it is His love, "so amazing, so divine," that sends us to our knees.

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, the Giver of every good gift, impart to us, we pray Thee, the blessing of realizing Thy goodness toward us. Forbid that we shall ever lose sight of this, and that we shall always be found humble and thankful. Amen.

SUNDAY.

OUR DISCIPLESHIP.

"As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world . . . that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."
Jno. 17:18, 21.

There is really but one way to acknowledge God's goodness toward us, and that is by the giving of our best to others in sharing with them His loving-kindness, and thus make available our Savior to them. He who yearned after Judas, and believed in Peter; He who pursued His enemies with relentless love, and on the cross prayed, "Father forgive them," is our example. It was He who said, "The works that I do shall ye do also."

Have we enemies, have we crosses? Suppose we try the method of Jesus. Life, no matter how long the day, is too brief for bitterness.

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, make us rich in the sharing of the blessings we have received. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

A PRISONER OF THE LORD.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments."

—II. Tim. 4:13.

Many are the ministers who have pondered this little verse. They have felt something of the anguish of soul expressed in it. They have felt here a kinship with the greatest preacher of the Christian movement. They have seen here something of his suffering, something of his greatness, and at the same time felt that he is just a man much like themselves, whom they would like to see and converse with, and comfort a bit if possible. Looking on this verse, they have buttoned their thread-bear coats about them, and thanked God for the privilege of being a servant of His. Paul has helped to make many a poor man a great preacher,—and thus a great man.

This verse which seems at first glance so very common and ordinary, opens up a vista into the very center of the earth's most celebrated dungeon, and throws a path of light upon one of the greatest souls ever set to the task of blessing the nations of the earth. It is a line out of a personal letter. It is about personal matters. It is just a letter to a friend. It might have been read by him, and found itself on the way to the wastebasket, as having finished its mission. But it had not finished its mission, and we are so grateful that it did not find its way into the wastebasket. Instead, it found its way into the Holy Scriptures, and into the imperishable hopes of the hearts of men.

"The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus." That old worn out cloak which had been with me on so many hazardous journeys, so much in the way that hot day I spent in Troas with a friend, which I left with him, how I wish I had it now! This old dungeon is so dark, and damp, and cold. It is so different from the fine, warm quarters of my first imprisonment, and the friends have forsaken me too. All that is in the letter to Timothy. The slave's girdle and perhaps an old sack that Paul wore in that prison, left legs and arms bare. Winter was coming, too. And as the wind whipped around the corner of that old castle of death, there was little comfort for his poor, old, beaten body found in irons and chains bound about his ankles and wrists. In the very last lines of that letter, he says to Timothy, "Do your best to come before winter!"

It is a parable of the needs of the body. Paul knew it. Preached it. His body had never been too strong. Always there had been some thorn in the flesh. Yet Paul had said, "Know ye not that your body is the temple of God!" In our own town, there are poor little bodies hungry, and half-clothed, across the world, there are millions more. Jesus never wished it so. Jesus who knew of the bounty of God would not have our world wasting its millions upon the vanities of life, much less the very engines of war and death while poor little children perish and their mothers sell their souls for bread. How may you help? Why by being a Christian man, or woman, and sharing what God has blessed you with, and by using every influence you have to promulgate the principles of Christianity. Your presence and loyalty to the church is a very fine beginning.

But here are other words in this line from Timothy's letter which he received from Paul. It is as though Paul had a second thought. Mind is more than body. While I need the cloak so badly, and as winter presses on I shall need it much more, but my mind starves as I sit here bound all day long to these bare walls! Think of that. Here was in that dungeon, a man acquainted with books, writer of some of the most precious and celebrated books the world has ever seen, a student of the books of the ages past in three cultures, and back there in Troas was his little old ragged collection of books. How far away they seemed! How his mind hungered for them! How they would comfort him and cheer him if he only had them now!

Some people do not seem to know what to do with their minds. They have used them for almost nothing at all for so long, they have become woozy or worse. One of the most wonderful things in all the world is the human mind. Out of it empires are built, and civilizations are fashioned; by it a friend may sit at his fireside and converse with a neighbor anywhere beyond the seven seas; and by it the same song may at a given moment fill every hamlet and town beneath the stars. Suppose Paul had been able to radio Timothy about the cloak he needed from Troas, Carpus might have mounted a plane and in a few hours, placed it in his hands, and about his shivering shoulders. Suppose the shepherds outside Bethlehem had had a broadcasting machine when the angels sang their "Peace on Earth" program of music, it might have filled every home, as it by now ought to fill every heart. The mind of man has followed the paths of light across thousands of light-years and furnished us with a knowledge that is vast indeed, but there is still so much ignorance, poverty and downright wickedness in the world. We have not loved God with all the strength of our mind. God has given us our minds to use for Him. Would to God many of the fine young people present here this morning, might covenant themselves that they are going to use their minds for God and for humanity.

Paul used his great mind for God. How he desired his books! But there are still other words in this line from his letter to Timothy. It is as though he was thinking but I am loading Timothy up with too much of a burden. Maybe he cannot bring the cloak, and the books, and everything he may himself wish to bring. Then he adds these precious words: "But especially the parchments." Timothy will know what they are, and Timothy will know how Paul loves them! Timothy bring me that old cloak I left at Troas with my friend Carpus when you come,—and do hasten to come to me, I long so much to see you,—but, Timothy, if you cannot bring the cloak and the books, bring the books; and Timothy, by all means, whatever you must leave behind, be sure to bring the parchments,—those time-honored rolls of Holy Writ!

This only goes to show how highly Paul valued the Holy Scriptures. How comforting they would be to him now, to him who knew so much of them from memory, to him who did not realize that the very lines he was even then writing a friend, begging him to hasten to him with the parchments, would become a portion of the Holy Bible. It is a parable of our need of God's revelation for our own lives. Jesus says, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." Again he says, "Search the Scriptures . . . they are they which testify of me." Again two of the disciples speaking of Jesus says, "He expounded unto us all the Scriptures." Long since Paul had learned the Scriptures. By them his soul was fed.

Much as he needed it, of least im-

In Memoriam

SUMMERS.

During the month of October, 1936, the Ladies Aid Society of Apples Chapel Church, N. C. and Virginia Conference lost one of its loyal members, Mrs. G. A. Summers. Mrs. Summers was one of our charter members and a regular attendant. Therefore be resolved:

1. That by the death of Mrs. Summers, the society has lost a faithful member and an ever ready helper;

2. That we extend to her companions and children our heart-felt sympathy that God's richest blessings might abide with them and that they might find shelter within his fold;

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy be inscribed in the minutes of the society, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. E. P. MURRIEL,
 Mrs. E. W. BROWN,
 Mrs. L. E. SUMMERS.

VICK.

On August 31, 1936, our Father called our beloved sister, Mrs. Annie F. Vick.

Her life was spent in the service of the master, and His will was always her desire. In her presence was always the sunshine of good cheer. Therefore be resolved:

1. That in the passing of Mrs. Vick, Johnson's Grove Christian Church of Sedly, Va. has lost a valuable leader, a loyal friend and a good woman;

2. That to her dear companion, loved ones and friends, we extend our heart-felt sympathy;

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

portance to Paul was his cloak, and most important to him was the care of his soul's relationship to God. Many things are of importance, my friends, but most important of all is God, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Neglect of religion, neglect of communion with God in worship both public and private, neglect of our Lord Jesus Christ,—in short the neglect of God is the supreme disaster of life, for according to Jesus, "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent."

"WE WOULD BE BUILDING."

Inner conviction grows in quiet moments. Beliefs direct actions. "I must live daily that which I long to see." is a true statement. Peace, economic justice, inter-racial friendship, all center in personal attitudes. They will be realized when the lives of Christians bring them to pass.

The Pilgrim Fellowship binds together the youth of the Congregational and Christian churches so that their inspired moments may be multiplied and thus their usefulness in the world extended.

This is the opportunity of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Southeast and each Conference and local group of youth. This multiplication of inspired moments is the purpose of the Young People's Department whose privilege it is to prepare material and suggestions and to provide a medium for exchange of ideas. And thus the building goes on and true fellowship grows.

LUCY M. ELDREDGE.

The editor is thoroughly convinced that THE CHRISTIAN SUN has a mission to fulfill in our Church fellowship and that it can be sold to our people in sufficient numbers to justify its publication. It will take work all up and down the line among pastors and churches, but it is well worth the effort.

Why "Either - - Or"?

By ROGER W. BABSON.

I recently attended a conference of ministers. There were present some of the ablest men of Protestant churches. One session of this conference was given to a discussion of whether the Sunday services should be "instructional" or "liturgical." At the close of the discussion, Robbins W. Barstow, President of Hartford Theological Seminary, asked, why "either—or?" He suggested that the laymen could be given "both—and."

Protestant ministers are a fine group of men—no better ever grew; but laymen feel that most of them are very poor merchants. Instead of trying to discover what we laymen need, they seem determined to give us laymen only what they, the ministers, want. Furthermore, many ministers do not even ask what they themselves want, but are content to carry on along the same lines as did their predecessors. As a result, churches have not kept pace with educational institutions and industrial research, while the ministry has been lagging behind the other processions.

If you went into a department store to ask for some woolen goods and were told that you must buy an equal amount of cotton goods, in order to get these woolen goods, you would not like it. Yet this is the way ministers treat us laymen. Many a tired layman goes to church for the uplift which would come from a well planned service of worship. He gets the unlift until the sermon comes! This often distracts him—so that he completely loses the good which he received from the service of worship. Contrary-wise, most young people would like to hear a passionate, social gospel sermon, but are so bored by the worship service that they fail to attend church. I agree that both laymen and young people may be unreasonable in asking for such a separation; but were I a minister, they would get it.

Laymen, in fact, believe it is wrong for ministers to say "either—or"; rather it should be "both—and." The regular morning service might well be divided into two services not exceeding thirty to forty minutes each, with an intermission of five minutes. Those who enjoy the present combined service can continue to remain for both as at present; but those who, according to their mood on a certain day, want either worship or a sermon, can have what they want.

In short, laymen wish to be able to go to an early communion at 8:30 A. M.; or to an exclusive service of worship at 10:45 A. M.; or to an exclusive preaching service at 11:30 A. M.; or to a discussion group or song service, later in the day, in accordance with their specific needs. Furthermore, they believe ministers should supply these different services at different hours. They could be furnished without increasing the church budget. Such an increased program would require a greater effort by the ministers; but ministers should be glad to make this sacrifice to serve their communities. Most ministers are willing to do anything, within reason, to make their churches more helpful.

This is not an appeal to change church doctrines or to "modernize" the Church. No question of principle is involved. Let the creed, the prayers, the hymns, the sermon and the order of service remain as is. I am appealing only that the churches be open from 8:30 A. M. to 8:30 P. M. on Sundays; that the different kinds of service be made into separate services; and that everyone who attends any of these Sunday services, be considered as "attending church." Let us cease thinking only of the regular morning service as "church."

Those Little Churches

In all the little villages,
The winding road goes through,
There always is a steepled church
Concentering the view.
As if the highway understood
Where countless feet have trod—
To mark a path for those who seek Eternally for God.
Uphill and down, along the way,
In every sort of place
These little churches join their prayers,
“God bless the human race.”
Each pointing spire uplifted there
Against the azure sky,
Still bids us leave the low and base
To serve the fine and high.
A benediction to our land
These little churches are,
And those who tend their altar fires
Deserve our love and care.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. Robert Lee House, formerly of Newport News, Virginia, is now located in the Arlington Apartments, Portsmouth, Virginia, and is beginning his pastorate with First Christian Church, Portsmouth. On Thursday of last week the church gave him a reception, and he was officially installed the past Sunday.

Rev. Joe Fix has recently celebrated his Fifth Anniversary as pastor of the Congregational-Christian Church, Urbana, Illinois. The church gave him a reception, and the newspaper gave him a write up of his work since he has been in Urbana. He will be remembered as a former pastor of Franklin, Virginia, a graduate of Elon College, and a member of the Burlington, North Carolina, Christian Church.

The editor regrets that the program of the N. C. and Va. C. M. A. did not arrive in time for publication before the meeting of that organization on Tuesday of this week. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield was the president, and among those to share in the program were: Rev. Millard Stevens, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, treasurer; Dr. James H. Lightbourne; Mrs. W. M. Jay; and Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter, a graduate of Elon College and Pastor of nearby churches, has recently moved to New Market, Virginia, and has become pastor of six rural churches in that section. The Southern Mission Board is helping these churches, in securing the services of a minister. This is a fine field of work, and CHRISTIAN SUN readers will doubtless breathe a prayer for success of pastor and churches.

The Church of Wide Fellowship, Dr. Elisha A King, minister, Beach, Florida, sends out a delightful announcement of its services. Several pictures show the building and the grounds and Sunday School classes scattered among the beautiful shrubbery surrounding the church. It is the kind of announcement that makes one want to join the group in worship and Christian activity. On the front page is this statement: "This Church is a Church of the open door, the open mind, the friendly spirit and the community heart. This Church is not narrow, exclusive or keenly denominational. It opens its doors and its heart generously and sincerely to all Christian people without regard to sect, creed or party."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN acknowledges with gratitude the following announcement: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hurley announce the marriage of their daughter, Ethel, to Mr. Giles Perry Hafer on Saturday, November 28th, 1936, Chicago. At home, Apartment 3-A, 823 East 49th Street, Mrs. Hafer will be remembered by many as a former assistant in Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia, and will have their best wishes for a long and happy life, in which wish THE CHRISTIAN SUN joins heartily.

Dr. F. P. Ensminger of Birmingham, Alabama, says in a letter that the Alabama Conference elected Rev. G. D. Hunt, to secure funds for the rebuilding of the dormitory at Southern Union College, Wadley, Alabama. Brother Hunt was to begin this campaign on November 26th, and it is hoped that $3,000 can be secured by the first of January, 1937. THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes Brother Hunt and the college the best of success and has backed up this wish with a dormitory dollar. It is hoped that others will do likewise. Money should be sent to President Ross Ensminger, Wadley, Alabama.

Dr. John G. Truitt of Suffolk, Virginia, prints a weekly church bulletin and gives some helpful material in it each week. In a recent number he gave the names of the finance committee and says that the committee meets every month, goes over the work of their committee, and plans for the financial side of the church work. "This is a very faithful and business-like committee, and their work is genuinely appreciated by the whole church." Such a committee is needed and would be appreciated by every church. Dr. Truitt also gives the attendance of the various departments in the Sunday School and church services for five weeks. This makes an interesting chart for the members to read. THE CHRISTIAN SUN recommends such bulletin for every church as a means of advertising the church and as an aid in the worship service.

THE EVOLUTION OF SERVICE.

The surest way I know to unity with God is through service to others. The fact that there was no room in the Inn for the new born King is typical of the minds of many men today. No room in their minds for the teachings of the wonderful Counsellor on whose shoulders rests the fate of nations.

Many remarkable men and women have been produced through the past. Men and women whose gifts of service to humanity are remembered through the ages. Many of these inspired leaders have left rich legacies in the field of literature, science, art, education and religion. Each of them played his or her part on the stage of action and then passed on to a richer experience as a reward for their service on earth. Some of those immortal personalities would have been forgotten but for the fact that their achievements lived after them. Some however are more vaguely known than others but all are known and evaluated by the measure of their service to humanity. Jesus humbly and lowly engaged in a brief but most effective ministry, which was terminated, tragically, in His ignominious death on the cross, but His teachings were more potent than His enemies; and today men universally pay Him homage and govern their lives by His precepts and admonitions.

A. R. FLOWERS.

PASTOR VS. PREACHER.

The pastor is the shepherd of his sheep. Religion is applicable in all sorts of circumstances of trouble, sickness, sorrow. The richest ministers are not those of lofty utterance from high pulpit to huge throng—they are the intimate conversations with souls that seek God with whom Religion really comes to grips with life's practical problems.

The preacher's influence increases geometrically, by multiplication, and the pastor's, arithmetically by mere addition. However, the true pastoral influence is never forgotten—eternal, while the words of the preacher often are erased by words more attractive or events more compelling.

The ideal minister of the Christ is a unique combination of the two—Pastor and Preacher. The Priestly functions of the sacraments are a high calling, the utterance from the pulpit has noble traditions and tremendous challenge, the ministries in the parish are a crowning glory for the "Ideal Minister"—and of course if he has a certain amount of executive ability, etc., that does not come amiss. Would that the church had better ministers—and being a minister, knowing personally the shortcomings, the mistakes, inadequacies, I speak with real conviction.

THE GREAT CHRISTMAS FUND.

By DR. LEWIS T. REID.

The Christmas Fund of the Board of Ministerial Relief will bless the aged, the disabled, the widowed and the fatherless on Christmas Day. It will meet crises of sickness, death, unemployment and acute distress. It will aid in relieving pastors in drouth-stricken areas. More than a thousand families receive aid from the Boards of Relief every year.

To last year's Christmas Fund, 6,379 donors, representing 1,973 Congregational and Christian churches in every state of the Union except Mississippi, gave a total of $65,327. On Christmas Day 850 checks were distributed by the national and state Boards of Relief, 741 to those on the regular rolls and 109 to other ministers and widows suffering because of illness, unemployment or sheer destitution.

During the first ten months of 1936, 391 additional checks were sent out by the national Board alone from the Christmas Emergency Fund to meet cases of acute distress.

The average regular grant is now $256 to a minister and $201 to a widow, the lowest level for at least fifteen years. When the maximum grants, even in cases of chronic illness, hardly exceed a dollar a day, it is difficult to see how the pensioners of the Boards could exist at all if it were not for the help of the Christmas Fund.

Whatever the size of your gift, some aged saint or overburdened minister and his wife will ask God's blessing upon you for your remembrance. Regular donors to the Fund are asked to add one-third to their usual gifts this year to aid distressed pastors in the drouth areas; new donors, to make their contribution as generous in view of this emergency need.

Lift the thirty-fifth Fund to $80,000!

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE AND ELON COLLEGE.

A group of ministers and laymen of the Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches met in Raleigh, N. C., December 3rd, to lay plans for the continuation of the Elon College Development program in the Eastern N. C. Conference. Dr. W. C. Wicker acted as chairman. Visitors outside the conference were: Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Rev. J. L. Foster, C. D. Johnston and George Colclough. The members of the Eastern Conference present were: Ministers, J. Lee Johnson, Carl H. Voss, R. T. Grissom, S. E. Madren, E. M. Carter, W. C. Wicker, J. Everette Neese. Laymen, N. H. Ayseue, George Whitaker, Mrs. W. S. Ayseue, Miss Margaret Alston, A. M. House, John House, H. G. Holmes, A. R. Perry, and L. L. Vaughan.

Following the opening prayer the meeting was open for discussion as to the plan by which we should proceed in the Development Program. After considerable discussion it was moved and carried that we accept the plan outlined by the Williams Company with any necessary modifications in order to make it work in the local church.

The officers elected for the conference were as follows:

Conference Chairman, Rev. J. Everette Neese; Assistant Conference Chairman, Miss Margaret Alston; Secretary, Miss Willie Haywood Kimball; Publicity Chairman, Rev. Carl H. Voss.

Additional Members of Executive Committee:

A. H. McIver, Rev. Alfonso Grissom, J. A. Kimball.

MORNING MAIL.

Interesting letters about Elon College continue to come in. It is a great joy to realize that old friends are beginning to turn back toward the college and new friends are being discovered. The following letter was received today. Its contents speak for themselves.

Franklinton, N. C.
November 8th, 1936.

Dear Dr. Smith:

Inclosed find five ($5.00) dollars for the fund for the college. I want to send you five more in February. I hope to give more next year if my rents improve, for my heart has been with you in such a great undertaking to clear our college of the indebtedness, and put it on a sound basis.

With best wishes and a prayerful heart for you.

Very truly,
(Signed) Mrs. H. E. PEARCE.

I cannot see everyone. There are hundreds who read THE CHRISTIAN SUN who have not made a contribution to the college. Won't you write me a letter and make your contribution? Make it as generous as you can.

I am indeed grateful for the letter.
L. E. SMITH.

Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true:
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellow-men sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in God and heaven securely.
—Henry Van Dyke.

ALCOHOL.

SOURCE.—The source of ethyl alcohol is in the decomposition or breaking up of sugar in thin, sweet juices. The process is called fermentation.

NATURE.—There are many members of the alcohol family, designated by scientists as the "family of alcohol poisons." The best-known are methyl (wood) and ethyl. Ethyl alcohol is used in intoxicating beverages, such as beer, wine, whiskey, rum, etc.

CHARACTERISTIC ACTIONS.—Comparing ethyl alcohol with water, which is necessary to all life and growth, one finds that alcohol will dissolve some fatty substances—resin, camphor, etc., which water will not dissolve, and is therefore designated a solvent. It will also extract water from substances and coagulate white of egg. It is therefore designated a dehydrant.

Because of these two actions as solvent and dehydrant, ethyl alcohol is useful in industry and in the laboratory. But outside the body these two actions are on inanimate substances. Inside the body, alcohol acts on living tissue. It does not undergo any digestive process and enters the blood as alcohol. In the blood it circulates through the body, bathing every nerve and tissue, and bathing the nerves and tissues it exercises its two characteristic actions as solvent and dehydrant. It dissolves or disturbs the fatty-like protection of the nerve cells, and acts as a narcotic, slowing down all the functions of the nervous system—seeing, hearing, moving, thinking, etc. The injury done is in proportion to the amount concentrated in the blood at any one time.

Even small amounts of alcohol, which affect the optic nerve and slow down muscular reaction, make a drinker less efficient in every area of life, especially in athletics, in driving an automobile and in all sorts of work requiring co-ordination of muscles and quick reactions.

The first effects of alcohol are upon the higher faculties of the brain which differentiate a man from an animal—ambition, conscience, will, reason, self-criticism, judgment and self-control. Very small amounts narcotize these faculties, remove the contents and reduce a man to behavior on a lower plan than that upon which God meant man to function. Larger amounts reduce him to the level of an animal, and excessive and continued drinking may even kill.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

GETTING READY FOR CHRISTMAS.

The streets are lined; the stores are packed. People are busy, rushed. Business is booming. Advertising is plentiful. Money flows through the currents of economic life as it has not done for month, or years.

What does it all mean? We are getting ready for Christmas, Santa Claus, the good old fellow who brings good cheer to children, will be loaded as he has not been in America for years. In some places he will carry not only fire-crackers, dangerous as they are for children, but liquid fire for young people and adults to drink and make of themselves—well, spare the thought and the word.

Christmas, the Mass of Christ. A celebration of the Birthday of the Babe of Bethlehem. What a day it should be! A day for childhood joys, for youthful dreams, for adult humility. Scholars can never explain the hidden mystery of life connected with Christmas. It is beyond the ken of men. And yet even a child can rejoice in its reality.

It is the business of the Church to make a memorial for Jesus and not just a holiday with pagan celebrations. Of course, it is a busy season, but the big business of the season should center around the message of God to the world in the birth of His son, our Saviour. Children need to know this divine message, young people should be guided in singing and telling it to others, and adults will do well to meditate on the meaning of Christmas rather than drown themselves in drink or business. Christmas is God's great holiday (happy day) for his people. Let us rejoice and be glad in it.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is hoping that every church will have fine programs at the Christmas season, programs that will impress the community with the meaning of Christmas.

THE KING MUST LOSE.

As this is being written, the world is awaiting anxiously the outcome of the conflict between King Edward VIII of England and his government. The King was a popular Prince. His father was a well-beloved King. His mother has the love of the world, for she shared with her husband the throne for a quarter of a century and still manifests the qualities of a Queen.

The British people want their King to be happily married. They seem to reverence the King in a way that most Americans cannot understand. But they seem not to be in the mood for him to marry a commoner who has been divorced once and is in the process of getting another divorce. Both the Church and the Government are opposed to such a marriage. And well they may be. The fight is for the sacredness of the home. Both Church and State in England seem to be ready to defend that sacredness even at the cost of a King.

Whatever the outcome of the matter may be, the King is destined to lose. If he keeps the throne, he will have lost many of the greatest statesmen from his government, and will live without the blessings of his Church. Much of the respect and reverence of the British subjects throughout the earth will have faded. If he renounces the throne and flees with his lover, what will he have left for the years to come?

It certainly is to be regretted that the noble young man who holds the most responsible position of anyone on earth should have become involved in such a great difficulty. He cannot win. He must lose. It is just a matter of choice as to what he shall lose. His experience should be a lesson to other young people, and older, throughout the world. The easiest time to get out of trouble is before one gets into it.

SUGGESTIONS OF LAYMEN.

Laymen have recently been making suggestions through THE CHRISTIAN SUN concerning the Church program and ministerial activity. The editor believes this is a wholesome thing and is delighted to have communications from laymen. He is of the opinion that God has given to laymen wisdom concerning the Church and that they are responsible for passing on this information to others just as God has given some ability to ministers and requires faithful stewardship on their part.

The articles from Mr. Babson, who is Moderator of the General Council of our Church, indicate that he is not familiar with the Church program in the Southeast, or else that he is not writing especially for us. He is thinking largely in terms of New England where he lives and is only being true to a human characteristic by so doing. He is pleading for more services and a wide variety. The exact detail concerning this interests him not a great deal.

The article from Mr. Rountree in this week's paper should give us ministers occasion to check up on our methods of work. Perhaps we have not been quite careful enough as to the final decision of our prospects.

It is much easier to resent criticism than to turn it to advantage. It is even easier to give advice rather than take it. It is the hope of the editor that the stimulating articles may continue to come in, not as criticism of the past but as a dream of what the future can be, and that all those who read will be inspired to undertake in a new and nobler fashion to do the work of the Kingdom. It may be necessary on occasions to change our methods, but certainly there is an essential at the heart of the Christian message which must never be lost. Religion must come to the heart of all experiences and be worked out wherever people live. Let the laymen advise concerning the technique of Church work and then join with the minister in trying to make it a reality.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL COVERS THE WORLD.

It was just 156 years ago, namely in 1780, when Robert Raikes gathered a few children in a small room at Gloucester, England, and thus formed the first Sunday School class which resulted in founding the first modern Sunday School. We have come a long way since that day. The church, always on the alert for the best, took up the work of Raikes and today there are Sunday Schools in every nation under the sun. Into them, millions of youth and adults gather for Bible study, moral and spiritual instruction and worship every Sunday. The twelfth World's Sunday School Convention met in Oslo, Norway, this past summer. From Oslo the Convention adjourned to meet in 1940 in South Africa: thus indicating the worldwide scope of the Sunday School, and the interest it has developed in all lands. Four years ago, the world Convention met in Rio de Janeiro. As a result of this meeting in Rio de Janeiro, Capitol of Brazil, during the quadrennial following, the total enrollment in the Sunday Schools in Latin America increased from 126,506 to 180,996; a gain of 43 percent. Already plans are on foot for the program and meeting of the World's Convention in South Africa in 1940. Those of us who go Sunday after Sunday to our local church school, with its small attendance, seeming indifference and negligible results, little think of the great work of which we are a part, and the progress made through the Sunday School for world friendship, for peace and for righteousness. It is quite common now to knock the church, to criticize the ministry and discredit, if not ignore, the Sunday services. We forget that the church has given us the best that the world has, that our community has, that our homes have, and that we individuals have. Verily did our Saviour truthfully declare, "I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The Church with its Sunday School and Societies is not dead: it is the biggest, best, and most powerful institution in this earth.

A MESSAGE TO MINISTERS.

I have had occasion to study successful men in many walks of life recently and I find that without exception they are each and every one model salesmen with their hearts firmly fixed on their subject, their minds thoroughly prepared for response and actual acceptance.

The most striking examples are in the field of religion. The Gospel of Jesus Christ should be in every heart and motivate every life, but it does not do this because the sales force is comprised of poor salesmen. Nine out of ten ministers commit the same faults that a poor salesman, even as I, commit.

1. They do not maintain a list of prospects.

2. They acquire comfortable habits of spending time where no prospects are and where no new conversions may be obtained.

3. When they do come face to face with prospects, instead of preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ, they preach technicalities—church membership, moral reforms, ethical codes, behaviorism, contrasting political and national doctrines. (If you make a comparison in my business you lose a sale because the prospect will take time to investigate the other viewpoint and never get back. Is it not true in religion? I am curious about communism, not because I expect to deal with it, but because a preacher said it is evil and destructive, when I do know that the end for which communists strive is the same end for which Christians wait. And wait is the word. If Christians fought as valiantly for Christ as communists fight for civil rights, we would be nearer now the Great White Throne than ever before.)

4. Assuming that the minister passes the first three faults blameless: he has found new prospects; he has wasted no time; he has presented his Gospel faithfully—here at this point ninety-nine of one hundred pronounce a benediction and dash to main exit to be congratulated by people who wouldn't walk fifty feet out of their way to say a good word for anyone. (Some salesmen present a superior idea in a blameless manner and then lean back satisfied that they at least have caused someone to think.)

Such salesmen are destroyed by their own folly or are carried on the company's books as "advertising" at a poor rate of reward.

Such ministers shall surely see the wrath of a just master or if they are ignorant of God's will, may be carried on the "roll up yonder" as "advertising matter." However, predication is not my line.

The outstanding successes in the field of religion are men who seek to close the case for God by insisting upon acceptance of Jesus Christ then and there. I have never heard a successful evangelist extend one invitation and quit.

Evangelism is not specialization, it is the ultimate test of Christian discipleship. It is the acceptance and signature that counts for salvation of representative and prospect alike.

How many new acceptances have you had this month? How many lapses? Call in a certified spiritual accountant and keep your books straight, lest He come.

LABOR'S CONSIDERATION.

While many industries are increasing wages without imposing any conditions, the steel industry proposes to tie up future wages with fluctuating costs of living. On the surface, this proposal appears to be sound and reasonable. However, there are other aspects to consider.

The Census Bureau recently completed a study of payrolls in 19 industrial states. In 1933 the report shows factory employees, numbering 4,733,817, earned an average wage of $927. In 1935, 5,541,092 workers of the same class and in the same factories were paid an average of $1,091. This was an increase of $164 per worker and has the appearance that workers were being favored. They were, and were not. Here is why:

In 1933, the value of products turned out averaged $5,406 per worker. The average value of products per worker in 1935 was $6,365, or a gain of $959 per worker. The output per worker in 1935 was 83 per cent more than the output per worker in 1933, while the increase in wages amounted to only 17 per cent. This means that for every $7.00 of wealth created and sold, $1.00 went to the producer, the employee, and $6.00 to the employer.

The question is, therefore, are employees' wages to be reckoned by the cost of living or by the employees' ability to create wealth for employers?

If it is right and reasonable that workers should be called upon to accept reduced wages when business conditions are bad, and in many instances deprived of any employment through no fault of their own, it seems right and reasonable that workers should share proportionately in the profits derived from the wealth they produce, and not necessarily, or arbitrarily, on generally accepted wage standards.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A review of the church reports to the last session of the Eastern Virginia Conference reveals the following facts: members reported (1935) 9,887; members reported (1936) 9,864; members received (1935) 456; members received (1936) 492. A net loss of 23 members for the year 1936; a gain of 36 in number of members received during the past year. The net loss in membership is accounted for by revision and correction of church rolls during the year. The following churches report a net loss for the year: Burton's Grove, Centerville, Ivor, Johnson's Grove, Newport News, Old Zion, Suffolk, South Norfolk, Union (Southampton), Union (Surry), Waverly and Windsor. The following churches report the same number of members as for 1935: Eure, Elm Avenue, New Lebanon, Oakland, Liberty Spring, Spring Hill and Sarem. The other churches of the Conference showed a net gain in membership. Thirty-one churches reported members received on confession; twenty-three churches received members by letter or transfer. One hundred and twenty-three members were removed by death during the year. The following churches did not report any members received during the past year: Burton's Grove, Centerville, Ivor, Johnson's Grove, Mt. Zion, New Lebanon, Sarem, Union (Southampton), and Union (Surry).

The financial statement shows an increase in the amount sent to the Conference. However, the records show that the amounts sent by the Conference for Convention Fund, Convention Home Missions, Foreign Missions were less than for 1935; while there was an increase in the amounts sent by the Conference for Superannuation, Christian Education and Elon College. There was a decided decrease in the amount paid for the Convention Fund. If this support of the Convention continues to decrease, and the calls upon the Convention continue to increase, it is easy to forecast the impending deficit and financial embarrassment faced by the Board of Publications and the Executive Board of the Convention. But that problem is not up for consideration in this review. The constituency of the Convention will be compelled to deal with this matter at a later date.

After working for days over these reports and Conference minutes, this impression prevails in the mind of the writer: it is time for ministers and laymen to seek a way of greater growth and achievement for our people and our churches. Incidentally, the slight variation in the statistical tables from year to year are not as significant as they appear to be. Some of the losses can be easily accounted for; and some of the gains are only on paper. Figures and dollar marks cannot measure all the spiritual forces at work in the Church of Jesus Christ. Numbers have a place, however, and the work of the statistician cannot be overlooked. We must not depend too much upon adding machines and bank books. Lay the Bible upon the bank book and convert the counting room into a sanctuary. Tear down the places of idleness and idol worship, and build stately altars where prayer is the key to power, and the call of a kingdom of another world rings in our ears. Jesus said: "My kingdom is not of this world." There is the secret of His program and power. He did not think less of this world, but gave all for it. We may become citizens of a spiritual kingdom. That is our need. Here is our opportunity. The church began in a place of prayer. It will go forward when it returns to the closet and the upper room, and comes forth to match its strength with a challenging task of winning the world for Jesus Christ.

THE EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE FOLLOWS ITS VISION.

On the closing day of the annual session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, the conference passed a resolution calling for the ministers of the conference and representatives of each church in the conference to meet in Raleigh, North Carolina, on Tuesday, December 3rd, for the purpose of devising ways and means by which the churches of the conference might meet in full their part of the present indebtedness of Elon College.

The day arrived. The skies were overcast. The roads and highways were wet and muddy, but certain great spirits of that conference had had a vision and were determined to follow that vision. Not a large company gathered, but a group of individuals with love for the church and for the college met in the pastor's study. Dr. W. C. Wicker, president of the conference, presided. Rev. E. M. Carter, secretary of the conference took the minutes. Dr. Wicker presented pamphlets carrying a brief statement of what had been accomplished during the past four years and stated something of the task that is yet to be done. It contained also a list of the churches in the conference, showing the amounts that had been apportioned to the local church under the Williams Company organization, also the amounts that had been pledged when the campaign was made last spring. The pamphlet concluded with a suggested plan of organization as follows: Conference Chairman, Assistant Conference Chairman, Secretary, and Publicity Director. The suggested plan for the local church called for the appointment of a committee of 100 to be allocated to the different churches according to the amounts to be raised. Each committeeman would be assigned four additional members from his own church who were able to help. These groups of five members, each to be held responsible for raising $200 over a term of four years, which amounts to $10 each for the four years. On this basis, the apportionment for this conference, $20,522, would be raised in full.

After considerable discussion, the group adjourned to the dining room where the ladies of the United Church served a most delicious luncheon. Following the luncheon, the group was called to order a second time and proceeded to set up the organization. The plan of organization as presented was adopted, allowing for necessary changes that might be required through the local church. Rev. J. Everette Neese of the class of 1936 was elected chairman. Miss Margaret Alston of Liberty Church was elected assistant chairman. Rev. Carl Herman Voss, pastor of the United Church, Raleigh, N. C., was elected publicity agent. By vote, the chairman, assistant chairman, and the publicity agent were given authority to elect a secretary and three additional members who, together with themselves, would constitute the Executive Committee.

In accepting the position as chairman, Mr. Neese stated that he was busy and that it would take time to do this job, but that he was willing to give his time and efforts in behalf of the institution that gave him a chance in life, and in this announcement, he expressed a high ideal and a noble purpose. FRIENDSHIP PARISH.

The Fifth Sunday meeting of "Friendship Parish" of Georgia was held at Union Hill Church, Pearson, on November 29th. There were approximately 150 members of the four churches of the parish present, and a program of interest and inspiration was enjoyed by all.

"Friendship Parish" is composed of Union Hill, Pearson; Williams Chapel, Waycross; Antioch, Bristol; and Friendship, Baxley. Rev. W. Carl Parker is the pastor. This Parish has been operating for about four years now and its growing strength is an evidence of what cooperation will do for individual rural churches. Before the formation of the Parish, none of these churches could have the full time services of a minister but with the other three cooperating, a pastor is on the field all the time. Four other such parishes are formed or being formed in Georgia.

The fifth Sunday meetings are designed to help the parish in organization and inspiration, and its services are built around some theme. The morning is usually given over to inspiration and worship while the afternoon is filled with business and special talent programs.

Rev. and Mrs. Alan T. Jones, the leaders of the "Friendship Parish" when it was formed but now of "Macedonia Parish" in North Georgia, were present for the Union Hill meeting and shared in the morning program. Rev. William T. Scott, Conference Superintendent, delivered the sermon. A bountiful dinner was served on the Church grounds at noon.

A very significant action was taken at the afternoon session when it was voted unanimously to erect a parsonage at Waycross. Each of the Churches has already appointed its committeeman to push this endeavor. Nothing will help a group of churches more than a parsonage as a common task. The next meeting will be held with Antioch Church, Bristol

WINSTON-SALEM.

A very impressive thankoffering service was held Sunday night November 22nd at the United Congregational-Christian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C. Mrs. C. E. Zeiger, president of the Woman's Association which sponsored the program, presided at the meeting.

The theme of the service was "Entire Consecration" based on the hymn "Take My Life and Let It Be." The president told the story of the hymn, a group of twelve boys and girls, wearing suitable emblems, recited the Scripture verses especially bearing on the subject. This was followed by the singing of the hymn by the congregation.

A special feature of the service was the rendering of several selections by the Christian Endeavor Glee Club of fifteen voices which was recently organized by Mrs. Corinna Melville.

The pastor, Dr. W. M. Jay, spoke briefly on the subject "Why Have a Thankoffering Service" and offered the consecration prayer.

Mrs. J. A. May read very effectively a selection "The Thankoffering at the Master's Feet," and Betty Ray and Betty McCall gave the dialogue "Whose Box Am I?"

Just before the offering, Mrs. Zeiger read the poem "How Much Am I Thankful?"

A closing number by the Glee Club and the benediction by the pastor closed a most effective and much enjoyed service.

This is one of a series of special programs on Sunday nights to be given by special groups of the church this winter.

MRS. W. M. JAY.

HENDERSON, N. C.

The writer has recently begun his work at the Henderson Congregational-Christian Church, and he has found the folks here to be a pleasant and cooperative group. He, with the members of his church, looks forward to a successful year in the Master's work. The writer feels that there are great possibilities for this work in this locality and asks for your prayers and interest.

The Worker's Council of the church had an open meeting about a week ago and concluded the evening's program with a gift of appreciation to their pastor and family. This gift included many necessities connected with the kitchen and the preparation of a good meal. The pastor greatly appreciates their kindness and prays that as a group, we may go a little farther and give ourselves to the upbuilding of God's kingdom and the carrying on of His work.

J. EVERETTE NEESE.

MONEY WORKS.

Thanksgiving and Christmas envelopes furnished by our Mission boards in New York have some challenging statements printed on them. Apparently money does more than talk. Note the following:

"The deep needs of humanity may be reckoned in terms of money. Money is health, money is opportunity, money is salvation. The world never was in more desperate need of things that money can furnish and that cannot be furnished without money.

"Multitudes of the sick in many lands are asking for the enlightened physician, whom only money can furnish. Host of handicapped, ignorant and poverty-blighted lives are seeking for an education and a chance, which only money can give. Destitute communities are suffering from lack of ideals, which money could help foster and maintain. Children are going out into life from many a congested or isolated region to fall into sin and ruin for lack of the saving institutions that money could set up."

The men of Israel pursued the Philistines and smote them. Then Samuel took a stone and set it between Mizpah and Shem, and called the name of it Ebenezer, saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.—Sam. 7: 12.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

NOTES FROM FIELDS AT HOME.

Rev. J. Howard Smith, Elon and Yale graduate, from Newport News, Virginia, but who has been pastor of Second Congregational Church, Hartford, Vermont since his graduation from Yale two years ago, has accepted the pastorate of our Lynchburg church and is now happily located in Lynchburg. His address for the time being is Y. M. C. A. Building, Lynchburg, Va.

Rev. W. M. Jay, D. D., Pastor of our Winston-Salem church reports, "We have had as good a month (November) as we have had since our coming here. We paid $400.00 due the Church Building Society, which under our new financial plan makes us square with them and we hope to be able to meet our obligations as they come due. We are planning our Christmas services, the children are quite anxious about that."

Rev. Roy D. Coulter, an Elon graduate and former pastor of our Haw River and other near by churches, also graduate from Vanderbilt School of Religion, is now located at New Market, Virginia, and is the pastor of our Mt. Olivet (R), Beulah, St. Peter's, Dry Run, Joppa and Palmyra churches. Brother Coulter has been with the work now through October and November and is finding increasing congregations at each of his churches and is enjoying the great task afforded him in the service of this pastorate. He is a busy man in this large field and greatly enjoys his work.

Rev. O. A. Elmore, Pastor of our Elk Spur, Rocky Ford and Ivy Hill churches of Carroll County, Virginia, reports a very happy and well attended Thanksgiving service, the people coming in larger numbers than had been anticipated for their first Thanksgiving service on a Thanksgiving day. The Sunday Schools in all three churches have largely increased in enrollment during the past summer and at present the schools are well organized and show signs of permanency and progress at all three churches. All are preparing for an appropriate observance of the Christmas season, when the pastor will hold services with the schools and congregations in all three churches.

The Christmas offering for our Superannuated ministers and widows should be, and let us hope it will be, taken in each and every one of our Churches this year at the service held nearest to Christmas day. The number of our superannuates increases every year, and unless there is an increase in offerings for this most worthy benevolence, there will have to be a decrease in the deplorably small pensions we now pay. Our Convention has voted and urged that churches all take this Christmas offering and we hope that all the churches will cooperate. Offerings should be sent to J. O. Atkinson, Chairman Board of Superannuations, Elon College, North Carolina.

COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM.

At the recent session of the Western North Carolina Conference a Commission on Evangelism was established and its members were appointed by Bishop Kern. The idea back of the commission is that during this year we shall pay special attention to evangelism and that we shall seek to restore to our Methodist churches the Methodist fervor for saving souls. The idea is not simply that of holding meetings in strategic centers, although this enters into the plan; but the central thought is that we shall direct the effort of our ministers, as far as they need our direction, so that our whole conference may be reached by the evangelistic fires. The conference decided that in order that this work could be carried out, we should have a director of evangelism. It was not the thought that the man selected should be a conference evangelist in the usual accepted term, but that all evangelistic effort in the conference might turn to him for help, both as to methods and plans and sources of assistance for pastors who are in need of some one to help them.

Note—The above from the North Carolina Christian Advocate of last week is in keeping with the spirit of our Southern Convention in its last session, when it adopted a progressive and dynamic report from the Committee on Evangelism and named Dr. John G. Truitt, Suffolk, as Chairman of the Committee on Evangelism for the coming two years. The churches not only of our faith and fellowship, but of others, are fully aware that to recover our zeal for an instructive kingdom work, the evangelistic note must be sounded and in no uncertain tones.

ANNUAL DAY OF MISSION STUDY.

Just now our minds are so occupied with thoughts and plans for the Christmas season that it is hard to realize the time for our "Day of Mission Study" is near. The book chosen for this year's study is the one on Home Missions, "The Story of the American Negro," by Miss Ina Corinne Brown, a Southern woman from the state of Texas. We are peculiarly fortunate in securing the services of Dr. H. Shelton Smith, head of the Department of Religious Education of Duke University, to lead this discussion, both at Elon College and at Suffolk. We know of no one so uniquely fitted for this service. He is a Southern man with a Southern view-point and understanding, yet few people, North or South, have had the cause of the Negro so much at heart or have made such an extensive study of his condition and achievements.

Dr. Smith needs no introduction to our women of the Southern Convention. Whenever he appears on a program, we are eager for his message. We count ourselves fortunate that his interest in our cause and in the subject for discussion have induced him to give us these two days out of his already over-crowded life! He will give us much to think about; none of us will want to miss this meeting.

The "Day of Mission Study" for those of this section will be held at Elon College, Thursday, January the twenty-first; the one for Eastern Virginia, the following day, Friday, January the twenty-second at Suffolk. This special day in our mission work, so successfully begun two years ago under Dr. A. W. Palmer, surpassed our expectations. We are hoping that every society will send as many representatives as possible that our attendance may be even larger and that our local churches may have this much needed inspiration in their study groups

ELLA B. SMITH,
Elon College, N. C.

WOMAN'S BOARD TO MEET.

The Woman's Board of the Southern Convention has been called to meet January 9th at ten o'clock in the Suffolk Christian Church. The Board has very important business and it is hoped that every member will be present.

MRS. JOHN G. TRUITT,
President.

WHERE HISTORY WAS MADE.

Did you know that the session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Christian Churches held in 1883 was a history-making session? Did you know that it was at the conference that the Foreign Missionary enterprise of our Southern Convention was launched? Did you know that in the same session (according to information from Dr. Atkinson and the Annals) resolutions were adopted calling upon the Southern Convention to set up a theological school for students in the boundaries of the Southern Convention, "which resolutions finally culminated in aggressive work for, in the beginning of, the building of Elon College in 1889?" And did you know that this session of conference was held at Popular Branch Church in what was then Moore County, N. C., but it is now Lee County, N. C.?

But time has dealt cruelly with the church. It is in a bad state of affairs. A few years ago the state built a new highway and left the church between one-fourth and one-half mile from the highway. And many of the original members of this church have moved away or died. The building is sorely in need of some plastering and paint within and without. Every Sunday afternoon a half-hundred or more people gather for Sunday School. During several years without a pastor, the Sunday School went on. Since last February the writer of this article has been preaching for this church without salary to see if he could not rekindle some enthusiasm for this work. I have done it solely for the cause of the Kingdom. Since I have learned of the historical significance of this church, I am more interested than ever. Don't you think that it would be nice to fix up this property and place a marker on it in order to preserve the place where such great things took place in the year of 1883? The local congregation is not in a position to do this repair work and would appreciate donations to help make this church a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." We covet your prayers and interest in preserving this piece of property for the sake of Christ and because of its historic significance.

F. ERVIN HYDE.

THANKSGIVING IN THE HILLS.

Our pastor, Rev. O. A. Elmore, arranged for us to have a Thanksgiving service this year. This was our first service on Thanksgiving, that I know of since our church has been here. It is always pretty cold here in November and we had a cold snap for Thanksgiving this time. However, quite a few came out to the service in spite of the cold. Our Church building is hard to heat, in fact, it is never warm in winter, so it was quite a task, I know, for our preachers and their wives to go through the service in our building. They had just come from Elon and felt the sudden change more than we did. Although I am almost never warm here in winter, I felt warmer than they looked that day. Nevertheless, we had a Thanksgiving service and the faithful few came out hoping to hear Pastor Elmore preach. Dear old grandmothers, wearing about all the clothes they possessed, mountain fashion—and old grandfathers—whiskers, and all. Well it made a picture that reminded one of the first Thanksgiving in 1621 which we read about in history. The only thing to spoil the picture was the younger people. They didn't fit. A few young teachers fit as oddly into this picture as did those first girls who came to America to become the wives of the early settlers. I saw plainly that a new day had dawned for our hills, but we still have a glimpse of the old. You can still find life as it was when John Fox, Jr. wrote "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," in some parts of our hills; and just on the other side of the hill you can find the new life. Our part of the mountains is at that age of change so it makes an odd picture.

However, the hills hold to an age-old rule it seems—if they don't like you it is simply "Good bye;" but if they do like you, the hills are yours. And so I saw on Thanksgiving day that the hills belong to Elmore. The look on the faces told me that people here liked to hear Elmore preach, and were plainly disappointed because he had brought a new man to speak.

Though we were not to be disappointed long for Rev. E. J. Sanderson brought a beautiful and stirring message on Thanksgiving. He pointed out to us the blessings of being poor. He showed us God's great riches all about us and made us feel that we were really not poor after all. He brought out the fact that we had a greater opportunity to feel the need of God than people do who live in cities. They turn a spigot to get water, and press a button to get light, while we live closer to nature and see God's hand in all things.

And as I saw God's great light fade at the close of Thanksgiving day, felt the peaceful night envelope our hills, and heard no sound save the whispering of the wind; I got the full meaning of Pastor Sanderson's message. God truly is mindful of us all. The key note of the service was simply—"Praise God from whom all blessings flow." It felt clear and sweet on the mountain air, and lingers still. God grant that this message may sink deep into hearts among our hills and bring forth fruit through the coming years. An offering was made for The Christian Orphanage and people gave gladly what little they could, and seemed to enjoy helping to give those children training that these people of our hills never had. That is truly the spirit of Thanksgiving—being glad for the other fellow to have the things you needed and never had.

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

U. S. FARMERS SPILL THE BEANS.

We mean the soya beans. When Unele Sam's farmers started raising soya beans in the Mississippi Valley, they competed with the Manchurian market for sales in Europe. They sold better beans for less money. Companies like Messrs. Louis Dreyfus and the Eastern Asiatic Company cancelled contracts in Manchuria for some 10,000 tons of beans and substituted American cargoes. The China Weekly Review wonders if the appearance of so strong a competitor on the world's soya bean market will not "undermine the whole economic system of the puppet empire." A Japanese economist feels it will mean that Manchuria will have to introduce machinery in harvesting the beans. In turn the China Weekly Review is frankly skeptical, feeling that such action would involve a tremendous outlay of money, new legislation and an appalling problem of rural employment. About beans we don't know beans, but the subject "gives one to think."

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

On Sunday afternoon November 22, the executive committee of Youth Fellowship of Eastern Virginia met at the Suffolk Christian Church. Nine members of the committee attended. The President, Mr. W. B. Williams, led in the discussion of plans for the ensuing year. The goals adopted at the Annual Summer meeting were discussed and it was decided to use the goals as a basis for the program of the Mid-Year Meeting, which will be in the Suffolk Christian Church on Saturday, January 16th. Plans were made for publishing a hand-book stating the purpose and activities of the Youth Fellowship. The committee thought the hand-book would meet a need expressed by many throughout the conference. The pastor counselors urged the president to visit as far as possible the young people's groups. The committee decided that the Mid-Year Meeting will take the place of the Spring Rally.

VALLEY OF VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

An interesting letter telling about the work of the Valley of Virginia Youth Fellowship group has been received from the president, Thelma Morris, of Dyke, Virginia. The Valley section is divided into districts for the purpose of better carrying out the Fellowship work and there is a Key Worker for each local church.

Following the annual meeting held in August, a Bulletin was sent out containing a resume of that meeting, a list of the officers and key workers for the coming year, the report of the committee on goals and standards, the treasurer's report, and valuable information concerning available books and pamphlets. It is planned to have this Bulletin issued quarterly.

Other Youth Fellowship groups would do well to follow the example of this group and send a bulletin to their members at intervals. It will keep the young people interested, if you let them know what is being done throughout your Fellowship; it will produce a feeling of comradeship among your various members, for they will be hearing about the work of others and sharing what they are doing with others; and if they feel that something concrete is being accomplished by the group as a whole, they will be more eager to cooperate in the work of your Youth Fellowship.

Officers.

Goals for 1936-1937.

1. That a concentrated effort be made to have a young people's group organized in every church.
2. That the young people use their influence in the promotion of a Daily Vacation Bible School in each church next year.
3. That the young people of this Conference work for a young people's week at Massanetta Springs in cooperation with some other denomination.
4. That ten representatives of this Fellowship attend the Elon Summer School, every church sending at least one young person.
5. That this Fellowship be represented by at least one of the officers at the Holiday Conference.

That happy state of mind, so rarely possessed, in which we can say, "I have enough," is the highest attainment of philosophy. Happiness consists, not in possessing much, but in being content with what we possess. He who wants little always has enough.—Zimmerman.

Get out and do something—work, sweat, hike, hump yourself—starve if need be—but dig on and deliver. Then talk if you want to, but the chances are you won't feel so much like it.—James Howard Kehler.

Sunday—"The spirit of praise"—Luke 2: 15-20.

Christmas is just around the corner. The question which each individual faces is, "How shall I observe it? We find ourselves asking these questions, Where shall I go? What shall I do? Such is life throughout the land.

The American mind is destroying the real meaning of Christmas when it teaches, with so much emphasis, that it is the time when Santa Claus fills the stockings. We should deepen the impression that a Saviour was born to bring "peace on earth, good will toward men." It is not fair to God to let Christ be crowded out of our lives. Even though there was no room for Him in the inn, let each individual make room for Him in the heart. It would be a happy Christmas, indeed, if each individual helped to spread the true Christmas cheer and "glad tidings" to each person about him.

For Discussion—

What is there about great Christmas literature that makes it live? Consider hymns, poems and stories. Have some one tell the story of Dickens's Christmas Carol: Use this as a round table discussion.

Suggested Hymns—

"O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Joy to the World," "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," "Silent Night, Holy Night."

JOHN'S VISION ON PATMOS.

LESSON XI—DECEMBER 13, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: Fear not; I am the first and the last, and the living one.—Revelation 1:17, 18.

LESSON: Revelation 1:1-3; 22.

By Way of Introduction.

What we call the "book of Revelation" was written by John, one of the twelve disciples, and the last of the disciples to die. He had spent a number of years in or around Ephesus and because of his preaching activities, was exiled to the isle of Patmos, a rocky, lonely island about twenty-five miles off the coast. It was out of this experience that John wrote his majestic and also mysterious book. It came to him, as he says, in the form of a vision. He writes down what he sees and hears. He distinctly states that it is "the revelation of Jesus Christ."

The book has as its background, a time of persecution and severe trial, and in the foreground, there is the shadow of even more severe times of testing. The book is designed to give comfort and courage and cheer to the church of John's day, and of every day when the church falls on hard times, or when it demands sacrifice and suffering to be a Christian. The key words of the book are be faithful and fear not. Back of, and giving meaning to all the imagery and the mystery of the book, there is this central message. The book shows the final triumph of righteousness, the overthrow of evil, the vindication of the saints, the triumph of the Church, the coming of the kingdom, the glory of the new Jerusalem. It closes with a redeemed humanity through Jesus Christ Who reigns supreme and eternal. It is the kind of book designed to strengthen and encourage and sustain.

Some Simple Teachings.

The writer does not profess to understand all the mysteries of the book of Revelation. Alas for him, he cannot make every verse fit in with some ingenious scheme so that one verse refers to the Kaiser and another to Hitler and another to Mussolini and another to the Pope, and another to Communism. But there are some simple and plain truths embodied in today's lesson which even an untutored man may see if he approaches the book in a sincere and open-minded way. They can be only suggested in the brief compass of this article.

One truth stands out—the Supremacy and the Eternity of Christ. He is the one who was and is and is to be forevermore, the one who was dead and is alive forevermore, and He is the prince or the king of the kings of the earth. Dominating the scene, and giving meaning to every page of the book is this lofty conception of Jesus Christ. John was not afraid—he had too much confidence in Christ to fear for the ultimate outcome of the struggle.

"Kings and priests unto God"—that is one of the glories of the Christian religion. Through Christ we have immediate and ready access unto God our Father. No man can keep us from Christ. We need not depend upon any man to bring us to Christ. We are priests unto God.

"In the Spirit on the Lord's day"—the vision came to John while he was in the Spirit on the Lord's day. It was to a heart and mind spiritually prepared that this great vision came. But for many modern men and women the Lord's day brings no vision because people are not in the right spirit. Life would be richer, and religion would have more power if we would use the Lord's day for the high purpose for which it was ordained.

"The voice that spake unto me"—it was a voice as the sound of many waters, there was that in the Son of man which spoke of strength and power, out of his mouth there proceeded a two-edged sword—the word of God is just that—His eyes were as fire, they discerned the inmost thoughts and even the motives of the heart.

"Your brother and partaker with you in tribulation"—that gave John sympathy, and the right to speak. He had tasted the cup of persecution and suffering, he therefore knew how to sympathize with his fellow-Christians and he could write to them in an understanding way.

"In the midst of the candlesticks one like unto the Son of Man"—the candlesticks represented the churches, and Christ was in the midst of the churches. He was not an absentee landlord, one far removed from the sufferings of his people—he was in their midst. That thought helped very much.

"And he had in his right hand seven stars." The right hand was the hand of power. In it the Son of Man held the seven stars, the seven representatives of the seven churches. He had not left His spokesmen at the mercy of the persecutors. He was upholding and sustaining them by His hand of power.

"And he said Fear not." He would have us respect Him and stand in awe of Him, but He would not have us afraid of Him. The message of the angels at His birth was "Fear not." The message in the book which depicts His triumph is "Fear not."

"I have the keys of death and Hades." He had the power to unlock the gates of the unseen world, even the abode of the dead was not beyond His power or His purpose. It was confirmation of the words He had spoken to the effect that the gates of Hades should not prevail against His church.

The Message to the Churches.

It is to be noted that Christ praised the good points in the churches, that he gave them credit for every virtue and encouraged them in every good endeavor. He always believes in the best in us, He is constructive rather than destructive in His criticism. But on the other hand He will not gloss over our faults and our failures. He puts His finger unerringly on our weaknesses and our sins. He is very firm in His dealings with us, very uncompromising in His demands upon us.

And as has been suggested earlier in these Notes, His message is Fear not, and Be Thou Faithful. The great word is "overcome." There is no note of defeatism in His message. He speaks calmly and confidently of the ultimate triumph of His cause and of the vindication of His saints.

And he would do the same with the church today. There are many good things about the church today and Jesus Christ would speak a good word to it. But He would not be blind to its faults and its failures and its sins, and He would purge it even if by fire to the end that it might bear more fruit.

Do not keep the alabaster box of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier. The kind things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffin, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them.

Let us learn to anoint our friends while they are yet among the living. Post-mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened heart; flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.—George W. Childs.

MONDAY.

"SWEARING DECEITFULLY."

"Who shall ascend unto the hill of the Lord? Or who shall stand in his holy place?"

He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully."—Ps. 24:3-4.

This scripture has its setting in a most triumphant soul. The ark is being removed to the temple at Jerusalem. David is marching at the head of the concourse, and as they approach the entrance of the city, they sing the praises of the Lord in psalms. This Psalm, we are told, marks the entrance of the ark into the citadel of Zion. Only they who had clean hands and a pure heart participated in the singing, only they who had not lifted their souls unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully, were permitted to stand in the holy place. This chorus was followed by the grand refrain:

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates,
And be ye lifted up ye everlasting doors,
And the king of glory shall come in . . ."

This represents the zeal of David for the house of God and his determination that nothing should enter there that defileth or maketh ashamed.

In Malachi "swearing deceitfully" is described, for instance: "A son honoreth his father and a servant, his master. If I am a father, where is my honor? If I am a master, where is my fear? . . . Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar." He would say, ye offer the lame, the blind and the sick for sacrifices. Ye would not offer such things to your governor, or to your friend. Ye would not go into their presence like ye come before me.

Prayer—Dear Lord and longed for Father, make us clean every whit, and as we come to Thee, and as we go on at our work, make us clean and acceptable in Thy sight. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE ENTRANCE AND THE EXIT.

"Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable unto Thee, O Lord, my Strength and my Redeemer."—Ps. 19:1.

Last week we were told of the efficacy of self-examination. The thought comes up again today in this scripture.

One part of that examination consists of a very rigid scrutiny of our motives, for there is no way by which evil creeps upon us so unobserved as when it slips in at the back door, or steals out at the front. It is easy to content ourselves by avoiding evil actions, but it is not so easy to keep out every kind of motive coming in and out of the mind unexamined. It takes the habit of examination to keep clear. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." After all, the good or evil of anything we do is determined by motives by which we do them.—And we are very apt to deceive ourselves unless we watch those motives and pray for them constantly.

Prayer—O Lord, set a watch at the door of our lips, our minds and our souls. Give us that guardian angel of watchfulness. In this spirit, we offer ourselves upon thine altar for service. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF A CHRISTIAN.

Lesson: Read Romans 8:33-39.

A Christian comes into a consciousness of triumph over accusing voices; into a sense of freedom from and victory over sin; into a sense of dominion over Satan's powers and the world's weaknesses, yea, more than these: into a sense of victory over "tribulations, distresses, persecutions, famine, nakedness, peril, or sword." These things kill us, but in their presence there is opportunity of being more than conquerors through Him who loves us and gave Himself for us. The love of God is the ultimate of all our living. Nothing better can be urged than the following:

"I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come.

"Nor height, nor depth, nor any living creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, sanctify our souls in the new birth of Christ Jesus, our Lord, and help us to turn our lives into account every day and every hour for Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

DEATH AND LIFE.

"Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life: he that cometh unto me, though he die, yet shall he live; and he that believeth on me shall never die."—Jno. 11:25-26.

"It doth not appear what we shall be, but this we know, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."—I. Jno. 3:2.

Death means ruin of the whole personality. Life means a triumphant continuance of that personality beyond the barriers of earth and time, in the form and in the nature of the glorified Christ, who is the image of the invisible God.

It is the purpose of Christianity through Jesus Christ to conquer death, and to impart life, so that death to the body may be a friendly act liberating life from its prison walls of the flesh and setting it free in the realm of the Spirit of God. And it is a privilege of "Whosoever will,"—all—to forsake sin and death and take him for that untrammelled life. "I am the life, No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

Prayer—O dear Lord, we feel so helpless within ourselves. But thanks be to Thee that we may lean on Thee and have this life of thine. That we seek this day. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"NO SECRET."

"The thing that is hid bringeth forth to light."—Job 28:1-11.

This is a universe of glass. Expect no concealment behind the most apparent solid, in the seeming deepest pit, on the height that is thought most inaccessible. All lives are naked, all souls are bare. There are no secrets to God, and really there are no secrets to man.

Would we have it otherwise? Does not a true soul rejoice in the publicity of truth? Does the beautiful spirit wish a veil for its beauty? And where is the wisdom that would hide itself?

Prayer—We are glad, O God, that all things are open to Thee, for that means that Thou art in all things open to us. May we never wish for concealment from one another. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

SATURDAY.

"EXAGGERATED PIETY."

"Be not righteous overmuch."—Eecl. 7:15-22.

Is it possible to be too good? Yes, the Bible tells us so. Yes, and we have seen it often. But how is it possible?

LIVING ON THE LINES OF THE ETERNAL!

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE,
Winter Park, Florida.

"He made it His ambition to live on the lines of the Eternal."

—II. Chron. 17:6.

Jehoshaphat, the man who determined to live his life on this new plane, was a king of Judah. It is not recorded just why the king took this high position. But we do know that while the king's life, was not always lived on these lines, that for once he lifted his soul in a mighty effort to do that which would please God.

When the king made this great decision, he also began to promote justice throughout his kingdom, by establishing judges in the "fenced cities." We know that he charged these judges to administer their offices as if the Eternal was sitting beside them.

Concerning Jesus of Nazareth there is also a scant record, yet through it there is one attitude that dominates all others. It is that our Lord was certain He was about the Father's business and that it was a labor of eternal significance.

In taking this position was Jesus off on a tangent? Did He waste His life in meaningless sympathy, and finally in useless death? Might He not as well have lived a number of years longer in physical satisfaction and personal enjoyment? How did He know what He was doing had eternal significance? Was it not because He desired to see deep into life, and thus was able to look at life more steadfastly than other men? And is it not a fact that because He made himself more sensitive to His Father's will, and less sensitive to His own, He came into the way that leads to the Eternal?

At the very moment in Jesus' life when this position was reached there was a battle line marked out between the world and Him. Almost at once, as unscrupulous and crafty men discovered this ambition in Jesus, they tried to destroy it. Once they offered Him a crown. Surely this should satisfy one's ambition! They tried to despoil it with the pressure of cynical laughter, and taunts, as to His fitness for such an undertaking. Once outside of a synagogue, on the brink of a high hill, they tried to bully Him into giving up His ambition.

Eventually there had to be a decisive clash to the death between Jesus and His enemies. There was no other way. There never is another way in such cases. The men who opposed Jesus then, as in this day, had their little, but vicious, ambitions. Jesus had ones that were eternal. Neither side would capitulate to the other. Neither side would relent. Both were fully aware that two diametrically opposing ambitions could not be at peace side by side in the world. One or the other must perish. Both sides took different tactics in order to carry the day. The men who hated Jesus took the method of nailing Him to the cross. He who loved, took the way of truth, kindness and sacrifice.

Before they nailed Him to the cross they denied Him justice and physical rest. They lashed His body with cruel whips. They allowed His few, personal belongings, to be scattered. In every possible way they annoyed, hurt and tortured Him. But they never got beyond the outer man! That is probably what angered them most! Deep down in the soul of Jesus, too deep for any weapon to reach, or any manner of torment to pry loose, was the ambition! They crushed His body, but not His determination to live along the lines of the Eternal. It was because of His ambition that His enemies struck Him down, but it was also because of His ambition that they never really slew Him, why He lives today!

There are those who can be inspired to say: "Henceforth I will live on the lines of the Eternal." But what they actually do is to dwell in the clouds of dreamland and they contemplate the lines of the Eternal in sunsets and mountain views. They live apart from life. They will have nothing to do with sweat, toil, dust, or grime! They will not even join forces with struggling bands of truth-seeking people. And the problem of teaching Sunday school classes is too low for them. Then there are those who have many talents and could do much, if they would, to extend the Kingdom of God. And under the spell of some thrilling experience they too say: "I will live my life on lines of the Eternal." With rapturous glow on their countenances, they look up from the counting of gold; step out from some sheltered place; or turn from the shallow thinking of the crowds. But all too soon living on the lines of the Eternal becomes too exacting, and takes too much of their time. Then the unexpected and startling discovery is made that these same lines lead to unknown and dangerous heights. So a change once more comes over their countenances, the light in the eye becomes dull again and different. There is a slumping of shoulders and spirit. They are done with the great adventure! But all are not like that. There was the woman who brought the choice perfume to anoint Jesus. She knew what it was to live, not on the lines of the Eternal, but on the lines of a sty! Yet her heart hungered, and her soul cried out for that which was beautiful and eternal! Then one day it came to her, that if in the presence of Jesus she courageously and honestly made the break with the past, she too could live on lines of the Eternal. She accepted the challenge of her soul, went out from that hard and difficult place into a mocking world, where men and women sneered at dreams that were nobler than theirs.

Shall we do so in our day? Certainly only a few have set their feet in the path that leads to the Eternal. We may be groping, but we have not arrived. First all of us should look very candidly at the little round of life that we have been living—about which we have been so active and feverish—and see what it has to do with the long and upward lines that lead to the Eternal. A determination to live on these lines will force us to keep company with strange and breath-taking thoughts.

Then very deliberately we must begin to feel afresh with all the unsettled problems of sin that have been glossed over by custom and time. Our new attitude will obligate us to wrestle with thoughts that will stagger us. There will be the question regarding the treatment of other races; other religions; drinking; war—and the newer ones on child labor; nationalism; civil liberty; and . . . It will be no sinecure for anyone. If Jesus should appear in our midst He would still be vitally interested in personal religious living, but He would not rest until these other problems were settled in justice for all! I have read that in the Alps there is a monument to a guide who died while attempting to climb those lofty peaks. His epitaph: "He Died Climbing," would also be a fitting one for the ancient king of Judah, who must have discovered soon after he had determined on his great ambition, that the lines of the Eternal lead upward. But he would live on these lines!

A British preacher, James Reid, once said: "Life has to be lived somehow." That is it! Life does have to be lived somehow! Then why not spend it climbing, climbing and living—living on lines of the Eternal!

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We have reached and passed the fourteenth mile post in our financial race this year.

We are still $3742.24 from our goal. Will your church do its part to see to it that we reach it? We do not want to miss it. If every church and each individual will do its or his full duty, we will not fall short.

Let everybody push a little and the load will be lighter. May your heart be happier by being liberal when you make your offering this year. Let us all cooperate together in the undertaking and all of us will be happier when the books close the first of the year—if we reach our goal.

Remember the little children here are appealing to you for a chance in life. Will you turn to them with a smile and a gift—or will you pass by on the other side?

MINOR.

We, the members of Concord Christian Church, wish to pay tribute to the memory of our sister, Mrs. Catherine Minor, who died at the home of her son, W. B. Minor, July 14, 1936. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we humbly bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things according to His loving kindness and tender mercy;
2. That we hold in loving remembrance her undaunted faith in God, her purity of character, her kind and cheerful disposition, her friendly personality, her unselfish and wholehearted service to her loved ones;
3. That we extend our sympathy and love to the family, and commend them to our Heavenly Father;
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be entered on the church records.

Mrs. JOHN P. UNDERWOOD,
Mrs. A. Y. ALLRED,
Mrs. W. R. SIMMONS,

Committee.

EVANS.

On January 13, 1936, the death angel entered the home of Mrs. Mary Lovelace and bore the spirit of her loving 103 year old mother, Mrs. Adeline Evans, to her eternal home. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That Sister Evans was a faithful member of Concord Christian Church and we believe that she is now happy in her Heavenly Home, because she loved God supremely and often said that she was ready to go any time He called her home;
2. That it was an inspiration to visit our sister in her home and hear her tell her Christian experience and tell us how happy she was;
3. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and commend them to God who can comfort and heal all sorrow;

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be entered on the church records.

Mrs. SALLIE TATE,
Mrs. ROSA TATE,
IDA ANDERSON,

Committee.

FAMILY ALTAR.

Of course, we do not refer to true goodness,—true righteousness. But we refer to that kind of goodness and righteousness pointed out by Jesus in the scribes and Pharisees, the hypocrites whom He condemned,—people who loved to do good and appear righteous in public places that they might be thought of by the crowd to be good,—to professionalize goodness for personal favor,—religious piety run to seed because of ignorance, uncontrolled emotions and unwarranted enthusiasm. Have we not all at some time been disgusted with such sanctimonious holiness?

The genuinely good person is genuinely modest, he lives true to principles of truth. He is manly and his conversation has the tone of sincerity and is not oily. He takes Jesus for his model in life and finds Him the supreme example of nobility.

Prayer—Dear Father, make our religion commend itself to all people with whom we come in contact. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE WINEPRESS.

"He treadeth the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of God. The Almighty."—Read Revelation 19:11-16.

A terrible picture of an angry God is given in the Revelation. His garment sprinkled with blood. His eyes are a flame of fire. Out of His mouth leaps a sharp sword. His armies follow Him. He rules the nations with a rod of iron. He treads fiercely the winepress of divine wrath.

God is love, but it is impossible to think so much of His love that we forget His just indignation. God forgives sin, but not unless the sinner repents. God pities the oppressed, but He hates the oppressor.

All sinners are subject to the wrath of God, and all men are sinners.

Prayer—Almighty Father, let us never, in trusting Thy Fatherhood, fail to remember Thy Almightyness. Forgive our sins, we pray Thee, for Christ's sake. Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

My Interests as a Preacher

By Rev. ROBERT LEE HOUSE.

As I take my place in the ministerial succession of this Church, I am reminded of a slogan to the effect that "nothing succeeds like successors." Only time can tell. At any rate, ministers come and go while the Church remains.

I begin my work here with a four-fold interest. For one thing, I am interested in the civic and cultural interests of the community. For the civic and cultural background of a city are to the churches as rich soil is to the farmer. Without these advantages many words sown by the Church will fall among thorns or on stony ground. Therefore no cultural or humanitarian project will be foreign to my interest. I expect to be no less a citizen of the community by being a minister of the Gospel.

Again, I am vitally interested in the general church life of Portsmouth. I always count it a privilege to visit other churches and am glad for my own people to do likewise (provided they don't do it too often). I am not here in competition with other churches and ministers. I thoroughly detest religion when conducted as a racket, and proselyting is a vice that should never be allowed to appear. I can say with the late S. Parkes Cadman that I believe in the Holy Catholic Church, and I regret that it does not exist. The Ministerial Union is worthy. It offers opportunity for the ministers to practice what they preach and to pioneer in Christian brotherhood. I welcome the opportunity for membership in this body and like to think of it as a "Colony of Heaven."

Moreover, I find myself increasingly interested in the larger fellowship and organization of our own denomination, especially since it has become Congregational-Christian. The best members I have had have been those interested in the larger program of the Church. Those churches which have prospered most have been those willing to assume denominational responsibilities. I am persuaded that the same thing is true of the minister. I expect to be busy. My father saw to it that I was kept busy in my younger days, and now I have come to realize that truly, "the King's business requireth haste." And yet, by practicing the strict economy of time, I expect to find time to attend the various conferences and conventions of the Church. Such is my avowed purpose lest I encourage this Church to be self-centered and self-sufficient.

And now I come to my primary interest—this local Church. Here is my Zion. "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth." Here we hope to raise our Ebenezer.

I am here to be your pastor. My services are available seven days to the week, if I may be of help to you in your problems, strength to you in your temptations, or comfort to you in the time of sorrow.

I am here to be your minister, your preacher. It is my purpose to hold up, as best I can, the high traditions of the gospel ministry, and to bring to the task a clear mind and a warm heart. Every effort will be made to so study and so preach that this pulpit may abundantly deserve the centrality of its position. I must, of course, depend upon your presence and prayers to feed the fires of inspiration.

And certainly there must be an opportunity here. With this group of consecrated people in this splendid church as God's elect, we may with John Wesley reasonably expect and attempt great things for Jesus Christ.

So may the Church continue her ministry on this corner and ever stand as the "shadow of a great rock in the weary land," pointing those who come and go to the "Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world."

Christmas Is Coming

SAYS ISAIAH

* * *

I.—THE NEED.

Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken; I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me.

The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider.

Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers, children that are corrupters: they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward.

Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint.

Your country is desolate, your cities are burned with fire: your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate, as overthrown by strangers.

Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting.

And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood.

II.—THE PERSON.

The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shall be called

WONDERFUL

COUNCELLOR

THE MIGHTY GOD

THE EVERLASTING FATHER

THE PRINCE OF PEACE

Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Next week's paper will be the last until January, 1937.

Rev. H. S. Hardeastle pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., is holding vesper services every Sunday at 5:00 P. M.

Dr. J. G. Truitt, pastor, received into the fellowship of the Suffolk Christian Church three members on the fifth Sunday in November and two on the first Sunday in December.

In the absence of the pastor, Dr. J. G. Truitt, the pulpit of Suffolk Christian Church was filled Sunday night of the 6th by Rev. William H. Corbitt, pastor of Holland Baptist Church.

The Thanksgiving offering for the Christian Orphanage taken at Holy Neck Christian Church, Nansemond County, the 3rd Sunday in November and reported $84.52 has since been raised to $112.72.

The Southeast Youth Fellowship officers expect to be in session for a few days during the Christmas holidays. No definite announcement has yet been made, but in all probability, the meeting will be in Norfolk, Va.

By the vote of the Southern Convention at its last session in Burlington, N. C., all boards and boards of trustees of institutions in the Southern Convention are to meet at Elon College during the month of February.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Key conducted a mid-week service of unusual interest at Holland Christian Church the 2nd, Inst.,—a slide lecture, "Open Doors to World Culture," by Dr. Brownley of the American Missionary Association.

The influence of the nation-wide preaching mission was felt at Holland, Va., Sunday the 6th. Dr. P. Rowland Wagner spoke at the Baptist Church at 3:00 P. M. on "Christ and the Church," and Dr. J. G. Truitt spoke at the Christian Church on "The Value of the Sanctuary."

Rev. E. T. Cotten, pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Cincinnati, Ohio, issues a monthly bulletin called "The Plymouth Herald" in which he gives up to date news concerning what is going on in the local church and some good ideas from the pen of the pastor. He is planning to have an 8 o'clock service on Christmas Day, and quite a number of other interesting events are noted in "The Plymouth Herald."

The Christmas offering for Ministerial Relief will bring happiness to many minister's homes, if it is sufficiently large to make a real difference in the homes where money is needed. When you are thinking of Christmas presents, do not forget the men who have served the Church and now need to be served by the Church.

The Woman's Missionary rallies in the Valley of Virginia Conference were December 1st to 4th at Bethel, Linville, Palmyra and Timber Ridge. Mrs. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, N. C., was the visiting speaker and did her job well, according to reports which have come to the editor. Rain, snow and sleet made the attendance small, but the spirit of the meetings was good.

The Senior Girl's Class of First Church, has recently begun holding evening sessions in addition to the Sunday School Class. They have found quite a number of young people who were not busy in Church work and have had delightful programs considering Thanksgiving and Christmas. Last Sunday they were thinking of Christmas in poetry, song and Scripture.

Congratulations to Mrs. S. H. Crews and the Woman's Missionary Society of Fuller's Chapel Church, Eastern N. C. Conference. They have sent in a list of CHRISTIAN SUN subscribers equal to 10 percent of their church membership and have received the 25 commission. This is a help, both to the society and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Who will be the next to send in such a list?

"The Board of Ministerial Relief is the corporate expression of Christian love. It is the hand of Christ outstretched in compassion. It is the arm of strength that bears up weakness. It is the loyal host of noble men and gentle women who are resolved that those who have given themselves to the service of Christ and His Church shall be comforted in their time of need." Be sure to give a Christmas offering for Ministerial Relief.

Sunday, December 6th, the Senior Department of the Congregational-Christian Church of Durham, N. C., presented a debate before the church on War. The query was "Resolved that by Christian Principles the United States could remain neutral in the next war." The negative side was decided the winner. This side was upheld by Harrell Boone Perry and Preston Oakley, and the affirmative side by Mae Tunstall Riddick and Geraldine Elder. The Social Action Magazine was a great help in getting material for this debate.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter, New Market, Va., quotes Mr. Roger W. Babson, the Mayor of New York City, the Marguess of Salisbury in the House of Lords, London, and the President of the United States to the effect that they believe a revival of religion is needed. Mr. Coulter suggests the possibility of sending out evangelists who will conduct revivals in places where the churches could not have them without support from the outside. This may be a thought worthy of consideration by the leaders of the Church.

At the Installation service for the Rev. Robert Lee House, First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., on December 6th, Dr. I. W. Johnson presided and led in the installation service and consecration prayers. Dr. John G. Truitt gave a charge to the church, and Rev. H. S. Hardeastle charged the minister to be a faithful shepherd. Welcome addresses were given by Dr. R. Clarke English, president of the ministerial association of the city and Mr. G. W. Hamer, member of the church. Miss Edna Faney sang a solo. Fifty-two people from Newport News, the former pastorate of Mr. House, attended the service.

An article from Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein of Dover, Delaware, too late for publication, tells of two very important books for pastors, teachers, and those interested in Christmas. They are Christmas Traditions and Christmas Tidings by William Muir Auld. Both books are in very readable type and supplement each other. They contain a fine collection of Christmas carols. Much historic data concerning Christmas and Christmas customs and traditions is given. Dr. Helfenstein recommends the books very highly, and especially as gifts to ministers and Sunday School teachers. The books can be found at most book stores, and at reasonable price.

Please look at your label unless you are sure that you are paid up to date. There are some ministers and some leading laymen to whom this is important. The Convention says not to carry those who are more than a year in arrears. It will be the duty of the editor and business manager to check the list before January 1, 1937, and see that this order is carried out with the beginning of the new year. We are trying to check up on it by the month, but for various reasons, some names have been carried. If you are behind and can not pay at present, please write a card or a letter to the editor, if you want the paper to continue coming. He is eager to cooperate in every possible way and hopes that you want the paper to come to your home. Please read your label now while you think of it, and, if necessary, write at once to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 505 South Main St., Norfolk, Va. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.

LETTERS TO YOU.

"I am eighty-one years old, hard of hearing, stork-sighted and very weak. My right hand and arm are paralyzed, and it is hard for me to write. My wife suffers greatly with rheumatism. It is a hard time for us both."

"Our total income last year, with the grant of the Board, was $317.80. You can judge for yourself, after paying rent, fuel and light, how much there is left for living and extras."

"We depend entirely on the Board for our living. Nevertheless, I am happy and I trust in Him whom I endeavored to serve in a humble way for almost forty-five years. Our fare is scant at times, but I rejoice in the midst of it all."

"I had hoped to be able to get on without being a burden, but it seems only a question of months when the little I now earn will no longer come in. My ability to see grows less and less, and nothing can be done."

These letters were sent to the Board of Ministerial Relief, but the answer is with you and others who can give at Christmas.

A WOMAN who creates and sustains a home, and under whose hands children grow up to be strong and pure men and women, is a creator second only to God.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

"IF EVERYBODY WERE LIKE HIM" THINK OF IT!

He was a prominent member of the Church. He had a great deal of influence, and he had financial power in the Church, but he did not take his Church paper. "He either could not spare the small sum per year to pay for the paper, or he was too big a man to fool with taking a paper like that." Anyhow, he never took the Church paper. If every member in the church had been like him, there could have been no Church paper.

His first act upon coming downstairs in the morning was to read the local newspaper. He would have thought it awful not to read the daily paper. But he never gave a thought to the Church paper! He paid about ten dollars a year for the daily paper and read it, but he couldn't afford to pay $2.00 a year for the Church paper with its clean, inspiring, strengthening news. His son was a minister, doing a fine piece of work in a neighboring church field. The Church paper gave a generous account of the young man's splendid work, but the young man's father never even knew it. A fellow deacon's daughter also received favorable attention in the Church paper columns for her noble work in the Home Mission field. Of that, too, he was unaware. His pastor was a prominent contributor to the Church paper, and his church frequently had bits of interesting news in the Church paper, and yet he never knew it. If everyone had been like him, there would have been no Church paper.

He was a high official in the church. By the very fact that he was a church member and a church officer, one would have thought that he would have been interested in the work of his Church, yet the Church paper printed weekly vital facts from the mission fields and soul-stirring sermons designed to do one's soul good—and he had it in his power to read them and he chose—literally, deliberately chose—to remain an ignoramus about spiritual things, and his soul starved while he chucked his eyes and ears and mind with accounts of murders and wrecks and war and divorce. If everyone were like him there could have been no Church paper.

He died—finally—and the Church paper was sent an obituary to be printed free, giving his "the final 'write-up' that a man of his standing deserved." But if everyone had been like him, there could have been no Church paper.

Sometimes the Church wonders how prominent and valuable a church member can be when year after year he will fail to have his name on the mailing list of the Church paper, but expects that the Church mean as much to him as it does to a Church paper subscriber and that it look up to him and honor him and "cater to his slightest wish."

AN ELON COLLEGE CLUB IN EVERY CHURCH.

Why not have an Elon College Club in each local church? Very few of our churches could have a substantial Alumni club, but every church could have an Elon College Club. Graduates, those having received academic training at Elon, those having attended the Elon Leadership Training schools, prospective students, and all those interested in the college would be eligible for membership.

These clubs might hold monthly or quarterly meetings. From time to time the clubs of churches in the neighborhood might have joint meetings. Varied programs might be planned in the interest of Christian Education in general and Elon College in particular. The president and members of the faculty should be used as speakers from time to time. In that way the faculty would have a definite part in advertising the college and extending the sphere of its influence. An occasional "open meeting" might create new interest and increase the membership.

Such clubs would do much to generate and cultivate denominational loyalty and should educate our people in the educational ideals of our Church. They would promote a better acquaintance among the leaders of our local churches.

The clubs would have various aims and goals. It would, of course, be vigilant for young people who might attend Elon. Plans might be devised for raising funds. The club should have charge of the Sunday School service for at least two of the fifth Sundays in the year when the needs and opportunities of the college might receive due consideration. An annual trip to Elon for a football classic, to attend a Sunday morning service of worship, or to be present at Homecoming and Commencement would furnish an incentive for the entire membership, and such anticipation would certainly become contagious. Yes, an Elon College Club would not only be a blessing to the college, but would constitute a vital unit in any local church.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR CHRISTMAS OFFERING.

For years it has been the custom of our Southern churches to make special offerings at Thanksgiving and Easter. We are now asked to make one at Christmas, also. Why shouldn't we, for it is the Birthday of Him who said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive?"

Your editor is also a minister. The front page of his church bulletin last Sunday carried the picture of an aged man and woman with clasped hands and underneath a letter from one of our ministers as follows:

"We depend entirely on the Board for our living. Nevertheless, we are happy and we trust in Him whom we endeavored to serve in a humble way for almost forty-five years. Our fare is scant at times, but we rejoice in the midst of it all."

For nearly half a century, they served the Church that never let them "lay up in store" for a rainy day. Now they are entirely dependent upon that Church they have loved and served. There are many of them who can tell a similar story. Our Christmas offering for Ministerial Relief will bring comfort and cheer to these valliant soldiers of the Cross. Don't forget them!

DUTY VS. LOVE.

King Edward VIII of England is not the only man that has felt the conflict of duty and love, but he is the world's most startling example of one who forgot duty to follow love. His final words to the people of his empire are pathetic not because he had missed the blessings of home and family, but because he did not have the stamina to resist a great love in order to carry the duties of a crown. He needed the kingly quality of the great Britton who said: "England expects every man to do his duty."

Happy are those who find that love, home and family are in the path of duty. They are thrice blessed. But to some earth grants no such benediction. Fortunate are they if they know the beauty, sweetness, sacredness, and heart-ache of a great love. Ever after life is richer, for its skies are bluer, its music deeper and more vibrant, and its sacrifice surer. King Edward had his chance to share with those who suffer in silence and sacrifice gladly and serve nobly, but he would not go that way. Now in seclusion, with no duty to do, he must await the coming of his lover, who may never arrive.

The King is the Defender of the Faith as well as the King of the English. He is the head of the Anglican Church. At great sacrifice this privilege was bestowed upon the Crown. The peoples of the Empire have a faith to defend. They believe in a God of love and duty and right. They believe in nobleness purity and truth. They believe in Home and State and Church. It appears that King George VI will make a better Defender of the Faith than his brother, now David Windsor, the world's greatest advertised lover, could ever have become. Because of this, many in America and other parts of the earth will reverently say, "God save the King."

A TEMPERANCE TALK.

Sam Powell and Sam Anderson, 26-year-old cousins, were electrocuted at Columbia, South Carolina, on December 11, 1936, for the slaying of W. A. Daniel, an Anderson taxi driver eleven months ago, says the Virginian Pilot of Norfolk, Virginia.

Powell is quoted as saying to the fifty spectators crowded into the death chamber: "I want everybody not to fool with liquor. I want all to lead a Christian life. Liquor leads to destruction. I want everybody to know I'm saved. I'm going to heaven. I hope I meet you all in heaven. I'm not afraid to go.

"I hope this electrocution will be a warning to stay away from liquor and the rough life. I know there are young men here who drink liquor, and I hope you will pay attention to what I say."

This speech was not made by a paid temperance worker. It was made by one who experimented with liquor and knew what the results are. His plea should be heard by all who plan egg-nog parties, cocktail parties, or other drinking parties at Christmas time in celebration of the Birthday of the Lord Jesus. It should be heard by every mother or father who offers a drop to a son or daughter. It should be heard by every young man and woman who goes out for a good time and thinks it smart to liven up the party with liquor. It should be heard by every would-be statesman who thinks it shrewd for the government to collect taxes on a deadly poison which it sells to all who will buy. And—pardon me for being so discourteous a fellow-editor—but the plea of a young man in his death chamber where the state did him to death should be heard by the newspapers who sell liquor advertisements in order to get more drinkers for those who pay for advertisements.

"I hope you will pay attention to what I say." These are the words of a dead man, dead because liquor leads to destruction. It always does in one way or another. The time to leave it alone is while you can, not after it gets you down. "Liquor leads to destruction."

HER BEST GIFT.

A little ten year old girl came to her minister, the editor, last Sunday and said, "Can I join the church at Christmas?" Of course she can! Both her minister and mother are delighted. That is her best Christmas gift to the One whose Birthday we celebrate.

Perhaps there are those in your community who want to give themselves to Jesus on His Birthday. Be sure to give them a chance—for His sake, and theirs.

THE HOUSEHOLD OF GOD.
(A CHRISTMAS MEDITATION.)

By REV. H. H. SMITH.

In spiritual discernment John surpassed all the other followers of the Master in the days of His flesh. Matthew, Mark, and Luke tell us what Jesus did and said, John tells us what He was and is. This great interpreter of the Master plainly states his purpose in writing his Gospel: "that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye may have life in His name." He also says: "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God." Receiving Christ as Lord and Savior, one is born again, born of the Spirit,—“not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God,” and thus becomes a child of God.

A writer calls attention to the fact that both John and Paul insist on the fundamental fact that the relation of believers to God is a filial one. John gives us the fact on the human side, man "must be born again," Paul gives us the divine side, God by adoption "makes us sons." Accordingly, John teaches that we have salvation only when we become children of God by believing on Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world. Blessed privilege, to be known as children of God! Dwelling upon this glorious thought in his old age, John cried out: "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called children of God!"

To be a child of God one must be like God in certain respects. Jesus said: "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God." When one loves peace and strives to heal dissensions in others, it is evidence of kinship with Him who is the God of peace. When the Master said His followers should love their enemies and return blessings for cursing, He meant to teach that such an attitude should be regarded as the natural conduct of those who belong to the family of God: "that ye may be the children of your Father who is in heaven: for He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." Who can meet this high requirement except those who have experienced a complete transformation of character through the regenerating influences of the Holy Spirit?

The transformation of Saul the persecutor into Paul the apostle, is a conspicuous example of what happens to one who becomes a child of God, through faith in Jesus Christ. This bigoted "Hebrew of the Hebrews" breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, and "made havoc of the Church, entering into house after house, and dragging away men and women, committed them to prison." Stalker says: "Some appear to have been put to death, and, darkest trait of all, others were compelled to blaspheme the name of the Saviour." But when the bigoted persecutor met Christ on the Damascus road and surrendered to Him, what a change took place! He is no longer Saul the proud bigot, but Paul the humble follower of Jesus Christ. Before, he hated the Gentiles, whom he considered outcasts and enemies of God; but now he considers them "fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God," and loves them with such an intensity of spirit that he is willing to go to prison and to death for the privilege of telling them of God's redeeming love in Jesus Christ. Turn to Philemon and read that heart-moving story of the aged Paul in a Roman prison, writing the master of a run-a-way slave, who had been converted through the apostle's influence. Dr. C. H. Dodd paraphrases Paul's letter thus: "I beg you for my son, Onesimus, born to me in my prison. O 'good-for-nothing' he was once, but now he is good for much both to me and to you. I have sent him back to you as though I sent you my heart . . . It may be that he was separated from you for a time for this reason that you might get him back no longer as a slave but something better than a slave a dear brother—dear certainly to me and surely dearer far to you, both by natural relations and in (communion with) the Lord." Commenting on this, Dr. Dodd says: "There is here a transforming power which goes deeper than even the splendid humanism of the Stoics. We may recall that even Epictetus, one of the noblest of them, could dissuade a man from punishing his slave in the words, "It is better for your slave to be bad than for you to make yourself unhappy."

Alas, for the best word that the best of the moralist could give concerning the relation of a master to his slave: "Don't make yourself unhappy by punishing your slave." But Paul, possessed of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, had a better word for both master and slave: "Treat your slave as a human brother for whom Christ died; teach him that he too can become a child of God; then shall both master and slave enter into a Christian brotherhood of unspeakable joy and love." With such a spirit pervading all mankind, there would be no need of an "emancipation proclamation"; for, in the face of such spirit, slavery could never exist. The household of God! All nations and kindred and peoples a brotherhood of believers in and followers of the Lord Jesus Christ! How attained? "As many as received Him, to them He gave power to become children of God."

A LOVELY SERVICE.

Dear fellow editor:

The "John Milton Magazine" is going out in Braille to blind adults in all States and possessions of the United States and eighteen countries in all six continents, its circulation built up chiefly by one blind reader telling another or sending the magazine to another. "Discovery" for boys and girls, is sent in Braille to individual children, blind parents, teachers of young people, and, mostly to State Schools for the blind and to Public Schools which have classes for the blind. Half of each magazine is devoted to Sunday School Bible study,—the rest to general articles generally taken from religious papers, thus giving the blind the cream of what the sighted have.

Over 2,500 copies of these magazines are issued monthly, reaching some 10,000 blind people. Analysis of 400 letters received from readers in the last six weeks reveals 52 different Churches or religious groups represented. Over one hundred of the four hundred are Sunday School teachers. Ministers are numerous. But so many readers are so alone and poor. All greatly prize and beg for continuance of the magazines, which occupy a distinct field. The service is a joyous one.

Printing in Braille is expensive. Most of our expense has been met by interested friends of the blind, and benevolent Boards of various denominations. The blind who are able, give surprisingly. But $2,240 must be raised in the next few weeks that this work may be carried on. Here is the hard time!

Among your readers doubtless many are interested in the Blind. Doubtless some would like to share in this gracious service if they learn of it. Even if able to give only a few dollars, it will help greatly.

Full information can be had from the John Milton Foundation for the Blind, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. All contributions will be gratefully acknowledged.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference met in the Forty-fifth session at Liberty Spring Christian Church, Tuesday, December 8th, 1936, and was called to order at 10:30 A. M. by Rev. J. F. Morgan, President. Rev. O. D. Poythress served as Recording Secretary. Rev. Carl R. Key conducted the opening service of worship. The payment of membership fees amounted to a total of $940.00, a slight increase over last year.

Dr. N. G. Newman delivered a very instructive and helpful address on, "The Historic Value and Future Hope of the Association." This organization has made a worth while contribution to the cultivation of a missionary spirit and the development of giving to the support of missions. About one third of the churches of the Conference are represented in the membership of the Association. Every church should be represented. It was the concensus of opinion that an aggressive effort should be made during the ensuing year to increase the membership of the Association and awaken an increased interest in the development of our Home Mission work.

The following officers were elected and appointed for the next year: President, J. F. Morgan; Vice-President, Rev. J. H. Dollar; Recording Secretary, Rev. Carl R. Key; Financial Secretary, Rev. Joe A. French; Treasurer, Mr. B. D. Jones. Executive Committee, Revs. J. F. Morgan, Jesse H. Dollar, Carl R. Key, Joe A. French; Committee on Plans, Col. J. E. West, Mrs. Joel E. Harrell, Rev. H. S. Harcastle, Mrs. I. W. Johnson; Committee on Finance, Revs. Joe A. French, O. D. Poythress, F. C. Lester.

Appropriations for the present year were made as follows: Hopewell on Pastor's Salary, $100.00; Elm Avenue for interest on Parsonage Debt, $100.00; Newport News for mortgage debt, $300.00; Ocean View, on mortgage debt, $125.00; South Norfolk on mortgage debt, $315.00.

Rev. F. C. Lester conducted a Round Table Conference on "Making The Christian Missionary Association Go." This was a very timely discussion and many helpful suggestions were presented by the various speakers.

No invitations were received for entertaining the next session of the Association. The place for the next session will be determined by the Executive Committee.

There is a need and a place for the Association in our Conference. Our churches are not measuring up to their opportunity in supporting weak churches and building new churches. If we are to grow there must be co-operation among the churches in the work of building churches. Mistakes have been made in building churches too large for present needs, and, in making debts, so large they cannot be paid by the local congregations. But in spite of all these mistakes, the churches are seeking to go forward, and they should be encouraged and assisted. Next year the membership fees paid into the Treasury of this Association should total at least $2,000.00. With concerted action this is possible. Let's make it a reality. Get ready to join.

I. W. JOHNSON.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

There are two theories for the support of the Christian ministry. One is that a minister should earn his own living in ways other than the actual fact of preaching the gospel and pastoring his people. The other is that the minister is chosen of God, separated and set apart for the definite task of proclaiming the gospel and otherwise administering to the needs of his people, and that those to whom he ministers should, out of their own earnings, take care of his material needs and comforts in life. Both these theories may be sustained by references to the Scripture.

Supporters of the first, to sustain their views, point to the practice of Saint Paul, calling attention to the fact that while he preached the Gospel, he likewise earned his own living by his own hands, following his profession as a tentmaker. They also contend that a minister as well as anyone else should eat bread by the sweat of his brow. That as other Christian people are compelled to earn their own living, that they, likewise, should, and that preaching the Gospel should be a pleasure and a delight and not a livelihood.

The supporters of the second theory contend that Christ sent out the seventy saying, "Go your ways. Behold I send you forth as lambs among wolves, carrying neither purse nor script nor shoes, and salute no man by the way. And into whatsoever house you enter . . . remain, eating and drinking such things they give, for the laborer is worthy of his hire."

In the practice of the Christian church through the years, the second theory has gained in favor. It is generally conceded now that all men called of God to preach His Gospel should be set apart for the peculiar and specific task and that the task is of sufficient requirements as to demand his time, his strength, his life, his all. It is evident that a minister has material needs—needs that must be met. If he is to give his entire time and thought to the Gospel ministry, then certainly he cannot give his abilities in the pursuit of material values necessary to meet his natural demands. If he is faithful to his duties as a minister, the people who receive direct benefits from his ministry will gladly give for the support of himself and family. Unfortunately it seems that many ministers of the Christian Church, I mean the Christian denomination, have received salaries sufficient only for present needs, thus making it impossible for them in any way to provide against the demands of incapacity or old age, and when such of our brethren have been forced to retire from the active pastorate either because of the failure of health or the decline of strength because of old age, that they find themselves dependent upon the mercy and the generosity of the church to which they have given their lives.

Now, unfortunately, we as a church have not provided for retirement, allowances or grants to our ministry who may find themselves in economic straits. If, for the past one hundred years, our churches had given a minimum amount annually, we would have quite a sum today, but this has not been done, and now we as a church face the responsibility of providing for our needy, dependent ministers and their families. Such a task should be considered by the laymen of our churches as a joyful privilege, and at this particular season of the year they should, with all willingness, bring their gifts that the hearts of those who have spent the springtime and the noonday of their lives in the ministry of the church, might, in the eveningtime have the necessities and comforts of life from the beneficent hand of the church. We are now face to face with a privilege of making our Christmas offering for the

OUR PICTURE ABOVE.

You boys and girls who read this page may like to know that the picture above was made just for you. It was not bought like you buy things from the store for Christmas. It was made by one of the girls in THE CHRISTIAN SUN office where all the things for the paper are written or collected. Miss Shirley Powell, a member of my church in Norfolk, Virginia, keeps the records of who subscribes to the paper, and draws pictures for fun. She wanted to make one for your page. Maybe you will want to write her a Christmas card or letter to say thank you for this picture. She might make another if you like this one. Now read her story about the people in the picture.

WHAT BETTIE LEARNED ABOUT CHRISTMAS.

Christmas was just two weeks away. The Junior Class of Hillwell Church was holding its weekly meeting at Betty Reed's home. Excitement was in the air! Christmas plans were being discussed.

"I make a motion that we draw names for our 'Polyannas' tonight," exclaimed Betty. "It is such fun. I wonder whose name I'll get." ("Polyanna," you know, is a system in which slips of paper are passed around with names of class members written on them. You must give a present to the person whose name you draw.)

"I believe I have a better plan in mind," suggested the teacher. "A new family has moved in our neighborhood. There are four small children and two of them go to school. They often pass our house and it is pathetic to see how their little bodies, covered only with thin sweaters, shiver with cold. Their mother is a poor widow who takes in sewing. I think it would be fine to give them something to bring them cheer on Christmas."

It was agreed that this was a grand idea. Everyone joined in the plan with enthusiasm. During the following day movie trips and other pleasures were sacrificed in order to share in this work of helping others.

Early on Christmas morning a group of bright-faced children tramped up to the door of an old house. A pale-faced mother answered the knock at the door. Shouts of "Merry Christmas" greeted her.

"Wont't you come in?" asked the mother. "We aren't having very much of a Christmas this year."

"Just wait a few minutes and see," smiled Betty. "Where are the children?"

They were led through a narrow hallway to a small room. Inside, huddled about a small, worn-out stove, sat four tiny, unhappy children. Soon amid eager exclamations of the children, packages were taken from a basket and unwrapped. There were new coats and hats for the girls, suits for the boys, and a pretty new dress for mother. Of course, there were toys and candy and fruit. In a small parcel at the bottom some crisp, new dollar bills were discovered. No one knew quite who had put them there, but the look in the teacher's eyes revealed an unmistakable gleam of satisfaction.

As the class turned to leave, Betty took one last look at the group in the doorway. On the mother's face was a calm expression of happiness and gratitude. The children's faces were beaming with delight over their new presents.

"To give rather than to receive," said Betty, as they moved on down the street. "That is the way to spend a real Christmas."

CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS.

How would you boys and girls like to take a trip around the world at Christmas time? Wouldn't it be fun to see what other people do?

Maybe you would like to go sleighing with the people in the north of our own country. I did. It's great fun to get in a buggy (they call it a cutter) with runners on rather than wheels, and slide along through the snow behind two nice horses.

Of course we would like to spend a Christmas in England where they bring in a big log of wood and keep in burning in the big fire-place from Christmas Eve until New Year's. Then they have such big Christmas trees, and there are so many presents. It would be fun going with those who sing carols on Christmas Eve. Then we would enjoy the lovely church service Christmas Day. It was in England that Sir Henry Cole started the custom of sending Christmas cards, ninety years ago this Christmas.

"Away in a Manger" is the pretty way Martin Luther of Germany sang about the birth of Jesus. It is said that he started the custom of having Christmas trees in Germany, and until recent years every home had a lovely tree. The homes are all beautifully decorated, but the churches are not.

In Switzerland it is thought that gifts are brought to children by a radiant angel driving six reindeer. In Poland the people eat a Peace Wafer and wish each other happiness. France makes much of the Christmas carols. They think it is bad luck for a cat to meow on Christmas so they feed the cat well. In Norway, Denmark, and Sweden the people feed the birds at Christmas. Italy has no Santa Claus, but they do have fine church services.

Wish we could travel more, but we must hurry to our own celebration of Jesus' Birthday. Merry Christmas!

Have you had a kindness shown?

Pass it on!

'Twas not given to you alone!

Pass it on!

Let it travel down the years,

Let it wipe another's tears,

Till in Heaven the deed appears;

Pass it on!

CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION MEETS.

This Association, of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, met in annual session at Bethlehem Church, Alamance County, December 8th. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield is pastor of this church, and also President of the Association. Rev. Millard Stevens, pastor of Union Ridge and Providence-Memorial churches, conducted a devotional service, pointing out that in the parable of the good Samaritan, three different attitudes toward and philosophies of, life were revealed. First; That of the robber, who acted on the theory that what is yours is mine, and I will have it. Second; That of the Levite, who passed the needy one by without helping him on the theory that what is mine belongs to me and I will do with it what I wish. Third; That of the good Samaritan, who acted on the theory of what is mine is thine, and with it you shall be helped. This last is the Christian basis and is the supreme spirit of missions; that of sharing with others that human love, which becomes divine when directed and dedicated to the relief and the benefit of our fellow-man. Mrs. C. H. Rowland is the Treasurer of the Association and her report showed something over $500. as the amount collected from various sources and paid out to our Winston-Salem and Reidsville churches in their efforts in building and at Palm Street, a donation on the parsonage. The outstanding address of the day was delivered by Dr. James T. Lightbourne, whose analysis revealed that our church must adopt a program of helping to save the weaker churches that are dying, but which are needed, and of directing our energies and efforts to the task of a more complete and active program for the rural churches, especially, since ours is very largely a rural Church. Some of these churches are well able to have preaching every Sunday and to support a pastor, giving his whole time to the work of the church and community. There were other groups that might easily be formed of one, or two, stronger churches associating themselves with a weak church and thus build the weak into the strong by such a cooperative effort. Every rural church, as well as the city church, need services and divine worship every Sunday in the month and by cooperative effort can have it. District and group meetings, according to Dr. Lightbourne, should be held to emphasize the whole program of the church throughout the whole Conference. In the afternoon, Rev. W. E. Wissemann of Greensboro, conducted a discussion period in which questions of practical import were asked and answered. In fact the program of the day took a practical turn that dealt with the real problems at the home base. Such group meetings can not fail of far reaching results. Dr. W. M. Jay, of Winston-Salem, conducted an afternoon devotional session in which attention was called to the fact that the Psalmist David had a very keen sense and full realization of a very personal and omnipotent God, Who, while ruling over all, may be at all times approached as great Jehovah, and as a loving Father. The Psalms of David clearly reveal that which our time needs to emphasize; namely, the power, the presence and the personality of God and a realization of the fact that God is ever present and may be approached by the least, as well as the largest, of His children at any, and all times.

The church spread an abundant luncheon, which all enjoyed, and the day was a happy one for the Association and the group that gathered. The next annual meeting is to be with Palm Street, Greensboro. Dr. James H. Lightbourne, of our Burlington church, was elected Financial Secretary, with Rev. Millard Stevens as Recording Secretary, these with the officers of the past year constituting the official staff for the coming year.

AMONG THE ISLES OF SAN BLASS.

I have just completed a rather difficult trip, difficult because of the very inconvenient method of travel. Leaving Colon, Panama, at 9:30 p. m. on a fifty foot trading boat loaded with bananas for exchange for coconuts, with a crew of very dark West Indians and a furious looking captain, we slid into the tropical lagoon and past France field and on until we could nearly trace the outline of the foothills. The deck over the hold was of two-inch plank which served as the bed for ten Indians and myself with nothing to soften the plank. After a night during which the small boat pitched rather badly we reached Puerta Viener, the first of the islands.

The next stop was at noon on the island where a very fine work had thrived under a very brave little woman, Ann Coop, from whom we first heard of the San Blass. Ann became a very close friend of Mrs. Wiley and myself while pastor of a church in Miami, Florida. Long before I met her, I had read her book, Ann Coop, Sky-pilot to the San Blass. I think this was the wording of the title. I looked upon those buildings that represented the sacrifice of many humble people in the States and the life work of Ann Coop, now the stronghold of Roman Catholicism. Then at almost the same time, I saw a living monument of the work of this woman and her helper, Miss Purdey, in the person of Peter Miller. Peter is a pure San Blass Indian who was educated in the States, speaking perfect English, working among his people, but probably a little afraid, in his unfriendly setting, to do what he might. Peter took me about and introduced me to his parents and friends. All the time we were walking we could hear, not chanting but yelling at the tops of their voices, the priests.

These people literally pick their money from the trees, or rather it falls from them, in the form of coconuts. I observed the children come up to the little stores with coconuts and throw them down upon the large pile in the corner, take up their purchases and be off. The following morning we were off, headed for Ali-gande, an island on which my friends were working.

I recognized my Indian friend as he stood surrounded by a horde of little naked brown boys, all the little boys up to 12 are unacquainted with clothing, while the little girls are very much dressed up and so picturesque. Each of the girls and women wear a solid ring in the nose, increasing in thickness as they grow older. The face is painted and down the nose a fine black stripe is painted, reaching the length of the nose. Around the neck various beads are worn, and some of the women wear an immense disk in each ear with small disks attached all around the larger one. They have the finest system of sanitation known to man and are very clean, not permitting any refuse to accumulate and they bathe often, being great lovers of the sea.

I had hoped by going to San Blass, that I might fully ascertain the possibilities of a work among these wonderful people. I was led to the home of this young educated Indian and his wife who were class mates of Mrs. Willey in Naysack, New York. After a dinner of native rice, smoked fish and lemonade, we went about the village, followed by a large horde of these little naked boys. The elders of the village would stop us with a series of questions: What is his name, where is he, how long did it take for him to get here, how old is he, how old is his wife, how many children does he have, how long will he stay, etc.? That evening the village fathers visited us and we talked for many hours. I was unusually fortunate since I had an interpreter, one who had been born and reared on these islands. So I inquired about the traditions of these people. I had always been interested in the white Indian, Alibenos, and there are many. I wanted their explanation, for the birth of a white child, extremely fair with yellow hair. When they had given me their explanation, then they wanted to know about the the Indians of the Amazonia. One Indian who had been accustomed to go to sleep in the presence of company kept wide awake. One of the missionaries remarked about this, and another very old Indian spoke up and said, "We have heard very strange things of distant lands, and we have been learning something new that makes us forget our coconuts. This is the reason he sleeps not."

This young Indian and his wife hold the key of opportunity among his people. I was disappointed to learn, however, that no foreigner would be permitted to work among them, being prohibited by the government of Panama. The reason for this is that some years ago while Ann Coop was on Anagana, an American adventurer by the name of Marsh lived among them, and he thought much of them as he studied their traditions and language. Since at that time they were being abused by the government, Marsh proceeded to declare a revolution against the present Panamanian government with the result that numbers of the soldiers were killed as well as the Indians. The result was that Marsh was deported to the States, Ann Coop was taken from Anagana by a British cutter, and the property of Ann which was valued at $6,000 dollars was confiscated. - Fortunately $3,000 dollars was paid to Miss Coop, and a ruling was then made, stating that the San Blass Indians were in the charge of the Catholic church. It is understood that there is a bit of fear that should Americans go among them, (they do love the Americans) they would in time of trouble, if it should come, be on the side of the United States. This young man, A. Iglesias and his wife have no visible means of support only as funds come in from friends. The soldiers on the Canal send in a small sum. The Union Church of Colon, Panama have helped greatly Rev. Morgan, an old student at Ashbury College, has been indispensable as a helper. They are carrying on most nobly on limited funds.

I desired to get some pictures but as soon as the women would see a camera, they would all run for shelter. I did manage to get some, concealing myself below and taking them through the port holes. I finally hit on a happy idea. My camera has an attachment that makes it possible for me to get in the picture myself, and to take pictures without any assistance. So I planned that my friends should be talking with the natives while I set my camera up, snapped it, and joined them. Thus they were unaware that the thing could work alone. So with motion pictures, I took one reel the same way, setting it off and they were unaware of what was taking place.

That evening the young men came over to play games. For some foolish reason, I was led to cackle like a hen after she lays an egg. This amused them so greatly that the following day I found that the news had spread that the white man could make a noise like a chicken. As we went about in search of pictures, the women would say, "Make a noise like a chicken and you can have my picture." I cackled all the afternoon like a happy old hen with the result that I have a few good pictures.

After a day and two nights, I said good-by to my dear friends of Ali-ganai and made the hard-trip back to Cristobal, Panama. I am planning now to get into the interior of the Ithmus on another scouting trip, hoping that we might find just the place the Lord would have us work.—

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP NIGHT OF NORTH CAROLINA-VIRGINIA CHURCH CONFERENCE.

Following the request of a minister of our North Carolina-Virginia Conference, I will try to explain to you the purpose and goals of our Youth Fellowship organization.

Our conference group is a part of two larger fellowships—the Southeast Youth Fellowship and the National Pilgrim Fellowship. A functioning national council was set up this summer by the Congregational-Christian young people who met in Lakeside, Ohio. The purpose which has been drawn up for the Pilgrim Fellowship, and which, it is hoped, will be adopted by each Fellowship runs as follows:

"The Pilgrim Fellowship unites the young people of the Congregational-Christian Church in the purpose:

To achieve Christian personality after the pattern of Jesus;

To seek a fuller understanding, one of another, in the interest of happy relations in home and community;

To work for a united church, practicing Christian freedom and definitely promoting the program of Jesus;

To secure equal rights and opportunities for all classes and races as equally the children of God;

To practice a Christian patriotism which recognizes the authority of God in conscience as supreme;

To strive for justice in the social order which will afford an abundant life for all;

To work for such international organization of the nations as will preserve peace and security."

We realize the value of organized cooperative work, for united efforts are so much more effective than small group plans—especially when the initial purpose is the same. The Pilgrim Fellowship Flashes, the national bulletin, is issued as a quarterly report wherein ideas are suggested and exchanged.

Realizing that we are a part of a larger group, let us delve into the realm of the make-up of our conference group. The question may have been asked, "Who belongs to the Youth Fellowship organization?" Every young person who belongs to a local young people's organization is a member; every pastor of the conference is an official member; and every youth leader is a member. Besides the executive officers, the executive committee is made up of a Superintendent of Missions, Leadership Training, Worship, and Publications, and three adult counselors.

At an executive committee meeting a list of goals for the year were drawn up. We hope that through these goals our work may become more effective, will interest the young people in the churches more and will be more helpful to them in their local program.

We hope that the local churches will learn to call on us for help. We (executive committee) don't know much, but we know of places where helpful materials can be obtained. The program of the Youth Fellowship will be as broad as you can help it to be. We realize that our work is far from what we would like it to be. Write to us and tell us what your local group is doing. We want just such material for the occasional bulletin we hope to put out and for the Youth Fellowship page of THE SUN. You may help some group a great deal with your ideas.

Let's make a go of our North Carolina-Virginia Youth Fellowship as a unit of larger youth groups and as a group of Christ's workers.

"We are not here to play, to dream, drift,

We have hard work to do and loads to lift,

Shun not the struggle, face it
'Tis God's gift."

DOROTHY TRUITT,
President, N. C.-Va. Youth Fellowship.

AN INTERESTING GREENSBORO PROJECT.

Alexander Woolcott, in a character sketch of Paul Robeson, the great negro singer, has very adeptly said: "I am proud of belonging to his race. For of course we both are members of the one sometimes fulsomely described as human." After a summer of study, a majority of the young people of the First Church in Greensboro would say to the negro, in the terms of Mr. Woolcott: "We are proud of belonging to the same race."

With materials contained in, and suggested by, Christian Youth in Mis- sionary Action, we formulated a program which proved to revolutionize our former misconception of a group of people who have always been our neighbor. We found the negro to be a group of people who have among their number men and women who are able to conquer the greatest of obstacles—prejudice—and rise to an outstandingly high level in our selfish American civilization; a group of people with a common and contagious spirit of cheerfulness and good sportsmanship.

We studied in particular their characteristics; their educational advantages; their economic situation; and their contributions to the world in the fields of science, literature, and music. The biographies of great negro personalities were reviewed, the literature of great negro authors read, and the songs of great negro composers sung.

We enjoyed hours spent in reading and hearing of the struggles of such men as Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Geo. Washington Carver, Booker T. Washington, and Paul Robeson. We were swayed from gaiety to depths of deep feeling as lyrics and poems of negro authors were read to us. And probably none of us can adequately express the good time we had on the night when we studied the origin of a selected group of negro spirituals, and sang them individually and as a group. To our friend, the negro, we are indebted for the American folk song; for in their spirituals we have our only characteristic musical theme which, like Topsy in Uncle Tom's Cabin, "just grewed." "Because his music is spiritual, it, like the stars, will be 'forever and ever.'"

The very happy culmination of our study was a Sunday evening meeting when the Congregational-Christian negro young people in our city were invited to meet with us to hear Miss Kate Lassiter, a student at Schauflyer College. We are deeply grateful to this outstanding young negro woman for her stirring revelation of the ideas, thoughts, and ambitions of her race; and for her plea, on their behalf, for a unified effort of the youth of the universe to build a more cooperative and a happier world.

Sunday School

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

I want to use this space to extend to all readers of my Notes on the Sunday School Lessons, warm greetings and all good wishes for the Christmas Season. May every one of you have such a Christmas Season that your hearts and your homes will be filled with wholesome joy and peace. And may your lives be permanently enriched by the abiding presence of the Spirit of the Christ Child in whose name we observe this sacred season. As Tiny Tim says "God bless you all."

THE SUPREME GIFT OF LOVE (CHRISTMAS LESSON).

GOLDEN TEXT: Glory to God in the highest, And on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased.—Luke 2:14.

LESSON: I. John 4:7-19.

We need to put the Christ in Christmas and keep it there. For the emphasis in modern life is upon Santa Claus rather than upon Christ. Christmas has become a holiday instead of a holy day. Indeed it is a question as to whether the average person thinks much about Christ on Christmas. The day has been so commercialized that it has become despiritualized to an alarming degree. We need a re-emphasis upon the meaning and significance of Christmas.

For what is Christmas if it is not primarily and essentially the anniversary of the birthday of Jesus Christ! It was because Christ was born that we celebrate Christmas. This is the central fact of Christmas. Perhaps it was to emphasize that fact that the Lesson Committee chose the lesson from John's general epistle for the Christmas Lesson this year. Practically everybody knows about Christmas, but only a comparatively few know what it means.

God's Love For Us.

Christmas is an ever recurring reminder of God's love to us. "Herein was the love of God manifested in us, that God hath sent His only begotten Son into the world that we might live through Him." Christ was, and is, God's eternal Christmas gift to us. Because God loved us He gave Christ His only begotten Son, and because Christ loved us, He gave Himself for us—that is essentially the message of Christmas. No one can doubt the love of God in the light of that fact. As John says, "And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us." God commended His love to us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us, for all of us, for every one of us. God is love—that was the heart of Dwight L. Moody's preaching. That is the Gospel. God loved us first, before we ever loved Him. God loves us whether we love Him or not. Because God loved He gave. As Paul says in one of his letters, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift." There never would have been any Christmas if God had not loved us, and if He had not expressed that love in the gift of His Son. Let Christmas be a reminder of this love of God for you.

Our Love For God.

"We love Him because He first loved us." Because John had experienced the love of God, because he was able to comprehend at least something of this satisfying and sacrificial love of God, his own heart responded in love. How could he do otherwise. Because God so loved him, his whole nature responded in love to God. It was the normal and natural thing to do. A dog responds to tokens of friendliness and kindness. And when any human being really understands and comprehends God's love for him, his heart responds to that love. Indeed we can know God ultimately only through love. God cannot be found in cold and logical formulas; He can be found only through a warm and responsive heart. Why should men love God and try to serve Him? Because God loves them with an individual, overwhelming, constant, sacrificial love. Brethren because God loves us, we ought to love God. And God is lovable. Christ, the image of the invisible God, is winsome and lovable. At Christmas, when so many people are eager to get gifts, they ought to ask for the gift of love—that is the supreme gift.

God's Love for Others.

To be sure if God loves us, He also loves others. Unless He is a God who can love everybody, He is not a God who can really love anybody. If God arbitrarily loves only a few select persons, people of a certain culture or class or color or creed, if He loves with respect to persons, He is not the kind of God any intelligent man wants or can worship. There is no more stirring or overwhelming truth in the world than the consciousness that God loves a man. When a man really understands and experiences that truth, something leaps up within him. But this stirring and stimulating truth is also a sobering and solemn truth. For if God loves you and me, he loves everybody else. God took pains to make sure that the missionary emphasis was proclaimed on that first Christmas Eve. "Good tidings of great joy unto all peoples"—Christmas tells us not only that God loves us; it tells us that He loves everybody else.

Our Love For Others.

"Beloved if God so loved us, we ought to love one another." Beloved let us love one another, for love is of God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God. This fellow John is disturbingly logical and outspoken. He has the disconcerting way of bringing love down out of the realm of a vague sentiment, and making it a practical thing. How does one know that he really loves God? The answer is simple—does he love his fellowman? How does one show his love for God? The answer is just as simple—by doing a service of love to his fellowman. God is love. Love seeks to express itself. If we have God in our hearts, we will have love in our hearts and that love will express itself in loving attitudes and actions toward God and toward others. If we have love in our hearts, we have God in our hearts, for God is love. Rather simple, isn't it? But profound. And absolutely fundamental.

It can readily be seen that all of this is closely related to the Christmas season. One reason why there is so much giving at Christmas is that the spirit of Christ is more powerfully operative at the Christmas season. But a great deal of our giving is not always the expression of love. And the essential thing is that one makes as a permanent part of his life and as a permanent temper of his spirit the spirit of love which in season and out of season, seeks to minister unto others rather than to be ministered unto.

This then is the message of Christmas. God loves us. God loves all. We ought to love all.

PRAYER AT EVENING.

The service of the day is over, and the hour come to rest. We resign into Thy hands our sleeping bodies, our cold hearths and open doors. Give us to awake with smiles, give us to labor smiling. As the sun returns in the east, so let our patience be renewed with dawn; as the sun lightens the world, so let our loving-kindness make bright this house of our habitations.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

MONDAY.

CHRISTMAS WEEK.

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—Jno. 3:16.

The all-engrossing thought of this week is Christmas and Christmas means our celebration of the birth of Lord Jesus Christ. There is encompassed in this thought the entire love of God and His purpose to redeem humanity. The predominating idea is that the whole plan of redemption is based on love, and that out of this love will come the peace of the world; and there will be no peace until this love obtains.

Remember, then, that the celebration of Christmas-time is to represent our faith in Christ; that this faith is not a mere formula, but an experience which lifts us daily from what we are to what we ought to be.

Prayer—Our Father, grant unto us, all the love of Jesus that we can appropriate. May we never disappoint Thee by lack of gratitude, or by faithlessness, or in service. This we ask for Jesus's sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HE BRINGETH PEACE.

"My peace I give unto you."—Jno. 14:27.

On the night that Jesus was born, the peace that He was to bring to the world was announced by the angels of heaven. This was the morning of Jesus' life. At the even-tide of His life, as He approached the cross, He breathed peace upon the souls of the apostles and sent them unto the world with that peace. His life was a message of peace. And the message of the Gospel ever since has been peace, and there is to be no peace save as He abides in the hearts of men.

One of the greatest consolations of Christmas is that life so full of storms and confusion, may have peace and quiet. No life was ever more storm-tossed that our Lord's, and yet He maintained peace and quiet throughout His ministry. Hidden in Him, our souls ride upon the storms of life with the security of the Master's presence. He who never lost His poise and calm, even in the shadow of the cross, said, "My peace I give unto you." That is a legacy which the world cannot give or take away.

Prayer—O God, help us to cast our care upon Thee. Help us to trust Thee in a way that brings unto us Thy love and all Thy blessings, at least all that we are capable of appreciating and appropriating. May we find His peace this Christmas time. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE WONDERFUL NAME.

"And his name shall be called Wonderful."—Isa. 9:6.

"There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

In the name of this name, Jesus Christ, our Lord, "arise and walk," said the apostle. At the mention of this name, the maniac is silent, the fishermen drop their nets and follow Him, the tax-collector leaves his lucrative calling and becomes an apostle, the funeral stops and the dead is raised to life, when He enters the door the sick rise up and are well, when the soul hungers and thirsts, He gives the living water, and at His command sins are forgiven and sinners are saved.

"Jesus, the name that charms our fears,

That bids our sorrow cease,

'Tis music in the sinner's ear,

'Tis life, and health, and peace."

Prayer—Our Father, we want Christ in our souls every day. We want Him in our plans and purposes. We want Him in all our thoughts. We want to acknowledge Him in all our ways. Drive sin and Satan from our midst and may we see Thee so clearly in all our ways we will follow Thee without wavering. This we ask for Jesus's sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

YULE-TIDE'S SWEETEST SONG.

"Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord."—Luke 1:46.

We read the other day these words, "A radiant, happy Christian is worth more to the church of Christ than a dozen ardent defenders." Mary was radiant with glorious song in the coming of the babe, Jesus the Son of God. That song started the angels of heaven singing and the chorus of that night has not ceased reverberating in the hearts of mankind, until today heaven and earth join in the sublime symphony.

So Christmas, like all other great events, comes with a tide of jubilant song. The great song of the angels of the first Yule-tide has been picked up by the assembly of the saints in all their gatherings, and these songs have produced volumes of sacred music. As its melodies find response in the hearts of sinful men, they join the great awakening, and with clean hearts and liberated souls rejoice in the great choruses.

Prayer—O God, fill our hearts with the Holy Ghost this Yule-tide, and fill us so that we shall always feel that "In our hearts there rings the melody" of peace and salvation. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE GREATEST DISCOVERY.

"When they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary, his mother."—Matt. 2:11.

To those who first saw the child Jesus on the first birth day, there came a joyous sense of personal responsibility for the world. That responsibility was that man is a part of the plan of God for a perfect world. The commission of our Lord Jesus Christ in after years to "Go ye into all the world and make Christians of every nation," was not first thought of at the time of His utterance. It was born in the hearts of these men now bowed over the manger worshipping the child.

Also there came to these men a joyous sense of giving themselves to the world. The Father had given His only begotten Son. Jesus was to give His life, and His followers and worshippers are to give themselves. Thus the message for you and me today is that which is as old as Christmas itself. We are to think of others and do everything possible to see that Jesus is with them too. As we celebrate today, let us lift up our eyes and see Christ in the oncoming days and in all the work which we have to do.

Prayer—Almighty God, Thou hast led us through another year to this blessed season. Once more are we permitted to look upon the greatest miracle of the ages—Jesus, our Saviour. May we see Him aright. May we celebrate aright in honor of Him. May we see our own responsibility to carry Him to all people whom we meet, and to all circumstances in which we may find ourselves. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MAN'S MOST WORTHY LONGING.

"Sirs, we would see Jesus."—Jno. 12:21.

Christmas day is gone and like the golden minutes just past, it is gone forever. If it has left us with somewhat of its true meaning, we will

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

"XMAS" OR THE UNKNOWN JESUS.

By REV. ALFRED W. HURST,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

It has long been the custom, in the interest of brevity, not to write out the word "Christmas" in full, but to abbreviate it by spelling it "Xmas." This comes from substituting the Greek letter "chi," which is the same as the English letter "x," for "Christ." "X," or "Chi," is the first letter of "Kristos" which is the Greek for Christ. Therefore, we have "Xmas" instead of "Christmas."

But we are reminded that "X" in algebra stands for an unknown quantity, which makes one wonder if there is not an unstudied appropriateness in the use of "Xmas" by much of our modern world. Is Jesus not the unknown one within and without Christian circles? It was this conviction some years ago that led Bruce Barton to write "The Man Nobody Knows," a book which met with unusual response from the public and which ran serially in a number of American dailies. Although Mr. Barton, in his attempt to humanize and reconstruct the person of Jesus, did him the disservice of tearing him out of his first century environment and dressing him up as a modern citizen of our modern world, his book did help to release Jesus from the bonds of inherited tradition and portrayed him as a real person living his life in the midst of an extremely practical world.

Christ is "X," an unknown quantity, to much of the modern world. This is true, not only because tradition has obscured him from our view, but even more because of the infinite richness of his personality. The Apostle Paul spoke of the unsearchable riches of Christ, by which he meant the inexhaustable riches of the Master. On another occasion, Paul indicates his firm conviction that it is no mean accomplishment to be able to grasp the meaning of the love of Christ in all its breadth and height and length and depth. Parenthetically he ventures to suggest that in other words, Paul is convinced that in Christ's character is the summation of the highest potentialities, the the deepest conviction and devotion, the widest and most inclusive sympathy and fellowship, the most far-reaching thrust of a life in tune with the infinite purposes of God. The four dimensions, with the word "fulness," are echoes of a current religious language in mystical circles of Paul's day. But it was their way of saying that in Christ, life had its most complete embodiment and expression, that his was the world's most inclusive and most completely furnished personality.

It is this impression that Jesus always makes upon reverent and earnest students. It is what one writer calls the "almost infinite suggestiveness which seems to belong to the very nature of his genius. No student, even after he has done his best, will claim to have done Jesus more than relative justice." But it is a most stimulating fact that there is a growing willingness to attempt to recover Jesus in order to see him as he was even if such a recovery upsets some of our traditional notions about him.

When one pauses to think about it, it is surprising that we know anything about him. The sources of information are so limited, and none of the information we have was written by Jesus Himself. We have from Jesus no journals, diaries, correspondence or notes which might give us immediate and intimate access to the very pulse of His personality. Our literary knowledge of Jesus is second hand, coming through the memory of the early Christians and which communicates their faith in Jesus rather than the detailed facts of His life. Of course Jesus had no occasion to carry on correspondence after the manner of His later apostle and champion, Paul, and it is natural since He was primarily a teacher who met His people by chance rather than by appointment, that His spoken words should be free and informal, the spontaneous expression of an inspired prophetic personality.

The records concerning Jesus are, therefore, the work of other men, reminiscences collected at least a generation after the time of Jesus. And even the best sources leave the first thirty years of His life shrouded in darkness. We feel that if we knew more about Jesus the boy and youth we could understand Him better, but these are unknown except as reverent imagination can reconstruct them.

Doubtless Jesus would be the first to remind us that it is not the external facts of His life which are important or they would certainly have been preserved. The great religious values to which He committed His life had the power of survival and are crystal clear. Although it would satisfy curiosity to know more of the facts of His life, it is enough that we may know what those religious values were, see them, sense them and share them.

Perhaps it is just here most people have failed to understand Jesus. In this deeper sense He is the unknown Jesus, the "X" of "Xmas." For many sincere Christians believe that the essence of Christianity is contained in a series of theological affirmations about Jesus which found definite expression in the Apostle's Creed. But we need to decide whether these doctrines were an integral part of Jesus' own religion. When a certain lawyer asked Him concerning the greatest commandment, Jesus answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord Thy God . . . Thou shalt love Thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." This is one of the best attested incidents in the Gospels and therefore it seems clear that the core of Jesus' religion was very simple: "a devoted love toward God, and an unflinching kindness toward people." The doctrines which came into existence later would likely have surprised and mystified Jesus if He had seen them.

Now, if the professed followers of Jesus realized that a Christian is not the person who subscribes to the Apostle's Creed but one who accepts as true Jesus' teachings concerning God's love and care, the infinite worth of human personality, and the duty to be unflinching kind to one's fellowmen, and accepted as the primary task of the church, the teaching that these simple essentials are the core of Christianity, Jesus would be less the unknown and more the known and loved and followed.

If at this Christmastide we would venture along the road of the few simple essentials of Jesus' own faith, we and God would inevitably find each other; and that would no longer be "Xmas" but Christmas."

"Any one can carry his burden, however heavy, till nightfall. Any one can do his work, however hard, for one day. Any one can live sweetly, lovingly, purely, till the sun goes down. And this is all that life really means."

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The first of this year we set for our goal for the Orphanage, the sum of $18,000.00. The Congregational-Christian denomination should be willing to contribute this much toward the cause of the dependent children in our care. When we invest in bonds and stocks, we have many chances to lose, but when you invest in a little child with a strong body and a sound mind, (though dependent) it is generally a wise investment. We point with pride to many boys and girls who have been reared here and now occupy splendid positions. The money you donated to help support this work was used to give them a chance and they have not disappointed you.

We have passed the sixteenth mile post in our financial race. We still lack $1437.00 of our goal. Are you going to see to it that we reach it? Many of our churches, by their offerings and keen interest, have made my heart rejoice—some have disappointed me. I will be greatly disappointed if we fail to reach the goal we set. We have many members in our denomination who could mail us checks for five or ten dollars, and be the richer, and help us reach the goal for the year. Will you do it?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

In Memoriam

KING.

Brother John Berry King was called away from his earthly home Friday morning, October 16, 1936. Brother King was born in the year 1847, making him 89 years old.
 The greater part of his life was spent in loyal service of New Hope Christian Church.
 He was the last charter member of this church.

Brother King was married to Sarah Ann Richards, December 28, 1869. She died July 3, 1922. Surviving are five children: W.
 M. King, F. F. King, P. J. King, M. K. King and Mrs. Nancy Pattie Minga. There are forty grand-children and fifty-two great-grand-children, three half brothers, and a large number of nieces and nephews.

A host of friends and relatives mourn the departure of Brother King. New Hope Church has lost a leader of the Gospel in music. Brother King was faithful unto the end.

May the Master comfort the bereaved.

 one's self.—Sir Arthur Helps.

discover that that meaning is a longing within us to see Him always. It is with a longing to put Jesus in the center of our thinking and in our ac-thing we do shall be for His glory.

When men see Jesus, they see God, and that is a consciousness of Him in all our senses. Pray for that sense in everything you undertake.

Prayer—O Lord God, we see as

 In Jesus's name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"RETURNING TO EARTH."

"They went back to their own country by a different road."—Matt.
 2:12.

We heard the Don Cossacks Russian choir the other evening. It is easy to say that they are the greatest singers in the world; great because, as one said who listened to them on one occasion: "I was lifted up by their music into another world, so much so that when they stopped, I was not conscious of it. That was not the least of it. Everybody else seemed to be entranced in silence.
 And there the choir stood awaiting applause feeling that they had failed.
 In a moment the whole house as one man came back to earth and arose as one man and gave the prolonged applause which these singers so much deserved."

The visit of the Magi to the manger is still the record of an incident which turned their feet in another direction.
 A recent writer says most aptly:
 "They came the road of uncertainty, but they returned by the road of satisfaction. They came by the road of doubt; They returned by the road of faith." They came from ordinary common-place life to ecstasy. They returned from this ecstasy with a new vision and a new job for the world.

What difference has Christmas made to you? If it is to the road of new resolutions for the new year, in home, office, farm, school and street, and in all our activities, then our journey will be with a different spirit and with a greater faith in the goodness of God.

Prayer—O God, cause the world to stand back for a moment and let us pray. "Guide me, O Thou Jehovah, Pilgrim through this barren land."
Amen.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

Board of Superannuation. Will the laymen, men and women of our churches stop and consider: Here is a man called of God to preach the Gospel. In obedience to that call, he has given himself without reserve.
 The passion of his life has been for the church, taking no thought of his own needs or those of his family in the future. He has put himself on the altar for Christ. Now he needs sorely the small contribution that comes from his church, and too often the contribution is pitifully small.

Count your blessings, and if you have prospered even though in a small way, won't you make as generous an offering as possible this Christmas season in order that our ministers on the superannuated list may have a bit of Christmas joy and the further comforts of life? Think of the joy and gratitude of their hearts and of the gratifying pleasure of our Board of Ministerial Relief if, by our offerings and the offerings of others, these Christmas checks may be made larger. I wish that our Board of Ministerial Relief would make up a list of from four to five thousand individuals in our convention and send to everyone on this list a personal letter asking for $1 or more that the Christmas offering for our superannuated ministers and their families might be what it ought to be. There are certainly four or five thousand people in our entire membership who could spare at least $1 for this worthy cause, and, my dear reader, as you read this article, won't you set aside your contribution then and there, and if the opportunity will not afford for you to send it to your local church before Christmas, send the same to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, North Carolina, stating the church to be credited with your donation, that you yourself may be blessed and that the hearts of our superannuated ministers may be rejoiced.

“Good Will Toward Men”

By the late Dr. GEORGE A. GORDON.

[From a Christmas Message, delivered twelve years ago from the pulpit of the Old South Church in Boston. Reprinted from the December issue of Advance.]

In the distracted thought and wild struggles of mankind today, as always, there is one great unifying idea, and that is the idea of the good. The idea of the good is the golden thread on which the pearls of human life are strung, those that are true and truly beautiful and those that only appear so. No man ever pursued evil believing it to be evil. That is axiomatic. If there be in all the universe such a soul as Milton has described in his Satan who says, “Evil, be thou my good,” you will observe that before even the Devil could pursue evil, he must first convert it into good. The whole passion and the whole endeavor of mankind, from the beginning and all over the world today, is for good, and good only. The division, the strife, the tragedy, and the woe come when we try to define what good is; but be it noted again, that all the instincts of man perpetually cry out for good, and that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is in league with the fundamental and permanent nature of man, for it brings good tidings to all the people. . . .

Good will is in society at large what the force of gravity is in the physical world. All bodies, from the minutest to the mightiest, all worlds, from the smallest to the greatest, are brought into unity, harmony, and peace, through the presence of the mysterious power that we call gravity. And in society good will rules out all friction, all clash of interests, all collision of personalities, all cruelty, all inhumanity, and brings in peace. Men are preaching peace today, wise men everywhere, but they very seldom discover the ground, and the only ground, of the aversion of war in the future. To avert war we must turn the evil will into a good will, bring into existence among the peoples of the earth good will among men. There is no other ground of hope; without that good will prevailing among the peoples of the earth, no device to avert war worth the paper on which it is written. The fundamental guaranty, the ultimate power in the whole business is good will among men. . . .

There is one more thing about good will. As the philosopher Kant said more than a century ago, it is the only unconditional good in the world, Genius is a good, fame is a good, wealth is a good, position, power, and influence are goods, but all these are conditional goods; they are good only and in so far as they are properly and righteously used. But good will is good this moment, good the next moment, good the next year, good today, good tomorrow and good forever. It is the only unconditional and absolute good in the world, in the Universe. It is, therefore, from the economic world onward to the highest form of our spiritual life, a self-evident and supreme value for mankind.

Good will is what this old world needs today in a sovereign sense. We need better business and more of it, we need surer, steadier, permanent employment; we need more knowledge and we need more wealth, . . . we need loftier wisdom, and we need a deeper appreciation of beauty in art and in nature; but above all things else, we need good will, good will that is not a mere fleeting mood among men, but one inspired by the constitution of our nature as social beings, and endorsed and supported by the Eternal Good Will. . . .

The humanity of man at its best is the trumpet through which Christ speaks today, and the humanity of the Lord Jesus Christ is God's trumpet whereby He rings out the reality and the coming triumph of the Eternal Good Will. Take Christmas home, as one of the most precious of all our church festivals, because it celebrates the birth of the authentic Revealer of the Eternal Good Will of God.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

THERE IS NO NEWS TONIGHT.

[Written December 24, 1894, by the late Harvey L. Wilson, when Washington correspondent of "The Richmond Times."].

'Tis the night before Christmas and from the neighboring church the grand hymn, "'Tis the Birthday of the King," comes up from the rehearsing choir and reaches the office of The Times with its sacred melody. There is no news tonight, for the story of the people today began while the shepherds watched their flocks by night and the angelic chorus of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men" made music for the years, and, happily for us, both rest tonight beyond the inspiration of man, too pure for the touch of a word and too sacredly sweet for the point of a pen.

There is no news tonight, for 'tis the throbbing of the heart and not the intellectual grandeur of the head upon the throne tomorrow. The future is guided by one golden thread which connects life to its loved ones gone before, while the past is linked to a thousand strings which vibrate as the harp and flood the soul with melody not new to any heart, yet unheard by any other.

There is no news tonight, for the din and confusion of the noisy world beyond is lost in the tumult which recollection recalls and upon which reminiscences ride to the guarded doors of the heart.

There is no news tonight, for the fancied scenes of the future and of toil and endeavor are clouded by the brilliant floods of the past, which pours its light upon the pictured gallery which Time has hung upon the sainted walls of memory.

There is no news tonight, for this is the only day in the year when the bugle call of duty is lost in the discordant notes of the tin horn in the hands of the boy; lost in the labor of love as the altar is built in our homes and lost in the laughter of Joy as he gilds the shrine for the passing of the holy day.

'Tis the misletoe, the evergreen and the holly whose banners are hung above the people today, and while the flag of the country floats dearest for such days, there is no news tonight for it is "The Birthday of the King."

There is no news this week and no paper next week. It is Christmas, and THE CHRISTIAN SUN celebrates the Birthday of Jesus.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

By REV. R. C. HELEENSTEIN, D. D.

It isn't hard to say "Merry Christmas," and yet if one says it as a sincere expression of his heart's desire for another, it means a lot. Christmas is God's wish for happiness to all mankind. It tells of "good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

The Christmas Spirit is the sincere wish of the heart for the joy of others. And when this spirit fills one's heart, he cannot think evil of another. He cannot harbor a grudge in his heart against another. He cannot be envious of another. He cannot be selfish. He cannot be un-

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

I heard the bells on Christmas Day,
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

And thought, how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along
The unbroken song
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

Till, ringing, singing on its way,
The world, revolved from day to night,
A voice, a chime,
A chant sublime
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

Then from each black, accursed mouth,
The cannon thundered in the South,
And with the sound
The carols drowned
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

It was as if the earthquake rent
The hearthstones of a continent,
And made forlorn
The households born
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

And in despair I bowed my head;
"There is no peace on earth," I said;
For hate is strong,
And mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

Then pealed the bells more loud and deep;
"God is not dead, nor doth He sleep;
And Wrong shall fail,
And Right prevail
Of peace on earth, good will to men!"

LONGFELLOW.

brotherly toward anyone. The Christmas spirit creates the beautiful harmony of life. It fills the soul with the melody of love. It makes one forget "the discords of humdrum life." It brings to earth the blessing of heaven,—"peace and good will to men."

A Spirit so powerful, a Spirit so helpful, a Spirit so divine, must be the Spirit of God himself. The many expressions of human love coming from the hearts of men and women and little children during the Christmas season are the evidence of God's Spirit in human life. Love is always wanting to give. Love always wants to bring joy to other hearts. Love always wants to serve, always wants to help, always wants to cheer. And God is Love. So whatever desire we have to bring joy to some other life,—the life of a sister or brother, a mother or husband, a son or daughter, a friend or neighbor—whatever desire we have to bring joy to any life is evidence of that much of the Spirit of God in our lives.

Christmas is God's declaration that we ought to have His Spirit, the Christmas Spirit, in our lives every day of the year. The Christmas Spirit should not die in our hearts with the passing of Christmas, for the Christmas Spirit is the spirit of love and good will to both friend and foe—the spirit that can make every day a day of "glory to God and peace, fraternity, and good will to men."—The Herald of Gospel Liberty for December 24, 1925.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT IN MEMORY.

A friend once said that when Christmas came around she always wanted to give father and mother something as she had always done in the past; but father and mother were gone. So in recent years she has been sending each year a Christmas gift to the Christmas Fund in memory of father and mother. Father had been in missionary service for many years and she felt that he would be happy to think that her Christmas gift to him was helping to bring happiness to some aged minister and his wife, or to some minister's widow, or some minister in distressful circumstances. It was a fine thought and the writer adopted it and passes it on to others as a suggestion for a memory Christmas gift in honor of the father and mother who have gone to their reward.

This Christmas Fund of the Board of Ministerial Relief enables the Board to meet emergency conditions, to add a bit to the small checks that go from the Board to ministers who have served faithfully in their day and have reached the age of retirement. These Christmas checks are the Christmas gifts from the denomination, carrying the love of unknown friends, and warming the hearts of the recipients. May this year's Christmas Fund be larger than ever. Send checks to Dr. Lewis T. Reid, Secretary of the Board of Ministerial Relief, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City or Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C.

THE INNKEEPER.

He missed it all—
The keeper of that Syrian inn.
He did not mean to,
But the crowds were great, rooms few,
And many guests had gold to give.
Had he not heard "a man must live"?
There was no room for Nazareth folk.
He missed it all—
Though angels sang his lullaby,
And listening shepherds praised,
Though wise men came by starlit ways.
He was too busy for the angel's song;
He saw no star; he planned no wrong
Against these Nazareth folk.

We too may miss it all—
The wonder of His coming.
We may not mean to,
But tasks are many, hours seem few,
Life rushes us with hurrying feet,
While song and star we fail to greet—
May we not slight the Nazareth Guest.
ARTHUR E. COWLEY.

STAR OF THE EAST.

Star of the East, that long ago
Brought wise men on their way
Where, angels singing to and fro,
The Child of Bethlehem lay—
Above that Syrian hill afar
Thou shineth out to night, O Star!
Star of the East, the night were drear
But for the tender grace
That with Thy glory comes to cheer,
Earth's loneliest, darkest place,
For by that charity, we see
Where there is hope for all and me.
Star of the East! show us the way
In wisdom undefiled
To seek that Manger out and lay
Our gifts before the Child—
To bring our hearts and offer them
Unto our King in Bethlehem.

EUGENE FIELD.

CHRISTMAS CAROL.

The earth has grown old with its burden of care,
But at Christmas it always is young,
The heart of the jewel burns lustrous and fair,
And its soul full of music burst forth on the air
When the song of the angels is sung.
It is coming, Old Earth, it is coming tonight!
On the snowflakes which cover thy sod
The feet of the Christ-child fall gentle and white,
And the voice of the Christ-child tells out with delight
That mankind are the children of God.
On the sad and the lowly, the wretched and poor,
The voice of the Christ-child shall fall;
And to every blind wanderer open the door
Of hope that he dared not to dream of before,
With a sunshine of welcome for all.
The feet of the humblest may walk in the field
Where the feet of the Holiest trod,
This, then, is the marvel to mortals revealed
When the silvery triumphs of Christmas have pealed,
That mankind are the children of God.

PHILLIPS BROOKS

THE WISE MEN'S QUEST.

God's guiding star is over us,
If we but lift our eyes,
And wise men still, who seek His will,
Find many a glad surprise.
To pilgrim seeking holy quest—
The goal at last in view—
Like stars at night, heaven's tapers bright
Shall gleam a welcome true.
Then let us fare upon our way,
While our best gifts we bring;
The journey past, we'll share at last
The glory of our King.

EDMUND L. SMILEY

CHRISTMAS NOW.

The humble shepherds heard angelic songs;
The Wise Men saw a star; a Child was born.
What now shall Christmas mean to men forlorn,
Who now beneath the burden of their wrongs,
Embittered by their fetters and their thongs?
Have done today with trash and tinsel,—torn
And tattered stuff that clutters
Christmas morn.
This Christmas bring the gifts for which man longs.
Be brothers; build a commonwealth for all
Where peace, goodwill, and courage rule the State.
Make life secure that none may need to fall
Beneath the crushing blows of adverse fate.
Obey the Angel Song. Get rid of war.
Destroy race hatred. Follow now the Star.

—C. Rexford Raymond.

HOLY CHRISTMAS.

Oh, wonderful star of Bethlehem,
By faith we see it now;
We follow in its path
In the starry realm,
And in adoration bow.
The Heavenly Child in beauty lies,
Calm on its mother's breast;
The angels choir
With harps and lyres,
Sing anthems to the Blest.
Away from the din and strife of life,
Three Kings of Orient ride;
They follow the star,
So near, so far,
The Christlike Child to find.
Now the star is still, and its light sublime
Flows down o'er the manged Child.
The Shepherds see
And in rapture flee
To worship the Babe divine.
Oh Star! Oh Spirit! Oh Holy Life!
All Heavenly Messengers here.
Sent down by God
To men of strife—
Let grateful souls revere.

MARY BRADLEY.

A CHRISTMAS SONG.

At the break of Christmas Day,
Through the frosty starlight ringing,
Faint and sweet and far away
Comes the sound of children, singing,
Chanting, singing,
"Cease to mourn,
For Christ is born,
Peace and joy to all men bringing!"
Careless that the chill winds blow,
Growing stronger, sweeter, clearer,
Noiseless footfalls in the snow
Bring the happy voices nearer.
Hear them singing,
"Winter's drear,
But Christ is here,
Mirth and gladness with Him bringing!"
"Merry Christmas!" hear them say,
As the East is growing lighter,
"May the joy of Christmas Day
Make your whole year gladder, brighter!"
Join in their singing,
"To each home
Our Christ has come
All love's treasures with Him bringing!"
MARGARET DELAND.

CHRISTMAS TIME.

At Christmas time the heart grows young;
Kind words slip gently from the tongue;
Fingers fly busily to make
Gifts beautiful, or just to bake
Delicious things to cheer and bless
The year's great day of happiness—
The Christmas time.
At Christmas time we give a thought
To others' comfort, we ought;
We pause from sordid, selfish things
And lo, our better selves take wings
And flit about quite seriously,
On missions, veiled mysteriously.
At Christmas time.
At Christmas time heart speaks to heart,
Tho' friends be many miles apart;
The loving Christmas spirit sends E'en to the earth's remotest ends
Its penetrating warmth and light,
And friendship's fires burn ever bright
At Christmas time.
At Christmas time home is so sweet,
Especially if little feet
Go pit-a-pat about the place.
For thus the Christ-child comes to grace
Our hearthstones—room for Him we make,
And love all children for His sake
At Christmas time.
Mrs. A. H. CARTER.

THERE CHRIST IS BORN AGAIN.
Wherever one repenting soul
Prays in its agonies of pain,
By God's sweet grace to be made whole—
There Christ is born again.
Wherever, bond of ancient thrall
A strong soul bursts its shackling chain,
And upward strains to meet the Call—
There Christ is born again.
Wherever vision of the Light
Disturbs the sleeping souls of men,
Night trails away its shadowy flight—
And Christ is born again,
Wherever a soul in travail turns,
And climbs the barriers that constrain,
With steady cheer Hope's sweet lamp burns,
And Christ is born again.
Wherever one foul thing is purged away,
And life delivered of one stain,
Love rims with gold the coming day—
And Christ is born again.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

While the mails are loaded with Christmas Greetings from friend to friend, the Editor wishes to add his greetings to those who are members of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family. An editorial may not be as personal as a card like those first used by Sir Henry Cole of England in 1846, but it certainly is just as sincere.

When the Southern Convention elected a new Editor for this paper, it gave the present editor an opportunity to try a new, and what has proved to be, a happy experience. He is deeply grateful for the chance to serve the Church in this new field. Life has been much richer, and Christmas will be happier because of this additional work for the Christ whose Birthday we celebrate.

To each of you who have given the editor his chance to serve, to you who have said complimentary things about the paper, and to every reader, the editor and all those who are responsible for THE CHRISTIAN SUN wish happiness and good success during the Christmas season and all through the New Year.

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

The Christmas story is the same today as it has been for nearly two thousand years. Churches that present the message in pageantry have the scenes as they were centuries ago. They read the records of Dr. Luke concerning the birth of a Baby in Bethlehem on a wonderful night when shepherds watched their flocks and derstand all the mystery concerning Mary, the star, or the angels. Neither do we know all the meaning of birth, life, or love. As we accept the latter, so let us receive the former and bow in adoration before the Christ whose birth brings us joy and the God who gave, and gives. We do not wish a new story of Christmas, but rather we do wish to share in the marvel of the old, old story as given to us in the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Luke.

THE NEW.

And yet there must be something new about every recurring Christmas. People crowd into the churches at Christmas time not merely to be entertained by the repetition of that which is already familiar. They go with the secret hope that something new may come to life. For once in the busy long year they seek to find fulfillment of the heart-hunger. Many of them could not put into words the thing they crave, but in truth they wish to come nearer to the God who lives in human flesh.

The newness of Christmas is what happens within the human soul as it seeks the humility and trust of childhood, the humanity of God, and the Deity of man. Some call this a new birth. At least it is a new burst of life, real life, within the spirit of man.

It is this new up-surge of life that makes gifts abound and peace possible. It is this new life that brings good will among men. The quality and quantity of this new life depends upon the response of those who worship at the manger where the Christ Child was born. God has given His best, and is giving still. The Christ was born, and is living still among his earthly friends. Life is within reach of all. Peace is possible for all who wish to walk in the path of the Prince. Christmas is new when and wherever any individual gives himself to the God of love and seeks to develop good will among men.

THE CHRISTMAS GUEST.

Have you kept St. Francis' words, Shared your cupboard with the birds?

Is your lutestring ready, too,
So the children may come through?
And your heart aglow with cheer
For the hungry that draw near?
Is your pilgrim bed made neat
For a mother of the street?

Then sure as Christmas dreams come true,
The Christ Child comes to sup with you.
—Edmundson.

A CHRISTMAS PRAYER.

O thou God, who art our Father, and who didst reveal unto us the depths of Thy love in the mystery of the manger of Bethlehem, we are grateful for the spirit of Christmastide, when the world is listening to the song of peace. We beseech Thee, in this season of Nativity, to reclothe us with a new simplicity and a genuine humility. Grant unto us singleness of devotion and consecrated lives! Let not our hearts be as busy inns, where there is no room for the Master, but let them offer a fit resting-place for His holy presence! While we acknowledge the chasm that separates us from likeness to Him, yet may we ever strive to incarnate the divine pattern in our lives, so that others may know Him.

Teach us, O loving Father, to see that Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever, and is sufficient for the manifold needs of a burdened world! May the light of His Spirit brighten every home that is bereft of human comfort, and strengthen every hand and heart that is weak with care or worn with toil! May the rulers of the world learn to worship at the manger, where love is revealed in weakness, and may the star of a new vision and a new inspiration lead men and nations ever forward, as were led the Wise men of old, unto a blessed hour of triumph for the gospel of good will and peace.

And grant, O God, that everywhere the gates of men's souls may be flung wide open, as never before, to the in-dwelling of the Spirit of the Master, and that His Spirit may reign anew unto the uttermost parts of the earth! Grant this, O Father, in the name and for the sake of Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Savior! Amen.

angels sang praises to God and brought good will to men. They marvel with the historian Matthew concerning Wise Men from the east who followed a star until it stood over the house where the young child lay, and who brought marvelous gifts of gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

The story is the same as that lived out among common people in Palestine long ago. It is told today as it has been told hundreds of times before. The message is the same that it always has been—the message of God's love to the human family, of love that gives, and is never satisfied until it gives itself.

No one wishes to change the story or the message. We can never un-

GIFTS THAT THE WISE MEN GAVE.

By MRS. ETHEL S. RAYMOND.

Reverent silence as music of "Holy Night" is played once, then the leader repeats quietly and thoughtfully verses 3 and 4:

"Holy Night, peaceful night,
Guiding Star, lend thy light!
See the eastern wise men bring
Gifts and homage to our King;
Jesus, the Saviour, is born.

"Holy Night, peaceful night,
Wondrous Star, lend thy light!
With the angels let us sing
Alleluiah to our King!
Jesus, the Saviour, is born."

Dear Father of all mankind, at this Christmas season we offer our love and devotion to Thee. Let our love be shown in thoughtfulness and tenderness to those about us. Some of them need material gifts. Grant that our hearts and our purses may be open wide to such of Thy children as we can help in that way. Some of them need spiritual gifts of courage to overcome the sense of failure, to meet the trials of ill health or broken homes. Thou knowest what their needs are. Grant that with understanding hearts we may give words of cheer and comfort to those of Thy children who need the spiritual gifts. Fill our hearts with the sense of Thy everlasting presence and teach us ways to reveal Thy presence in our lives, to those around us.

We ask it in the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

We choose for our Christmas reading the story of the "Three Wise Men" who came to worship the infant Jesus—Matt. 2:1-12: "And they fell down and worshipped Him; and opening their treasures, they offered unto Him gifts, gold, and frankincense and myrrh."

I think there is a great significance in the story that Matthew has handed down to us. It is in the gifts that were a part of the worship that the wise men rendered. In the record of Jesus' life which is found in the four gospels, there are so few gifts which He received, so much that He gave. Nearly all who came to Him came to get something, not to give something. Even the alabaster cruse of ointment was the expression of gratitude for what Jesus had done for a sinful woman. But the story of this little baby, born in a manger, with none of the pomp that attends the birth of kings, is lifted to the plane of a royal setting because His wise and rich visitors not only fell down before Him in an attitude of worship, but opened their treasures and offered Him as gifts the most precious contents of their stores.

Someone has interpreted the meaning of these gifts as symbols of what all worshippers of God must offer if we truly follow the star of spiritual light and insight and are aware of the eternal values in the world of life.

Gold—the symbol of our labor, of our striving for material possessions, wherever it represents the industrial world, commerce, laboratories, business of any kind, this gift symbolizing our struggle for material success can only be consecrated to the

O WONDROUS CHILD.

O Wondrous Child! The lowing kine
Have never gazed on face like Thine;
The light of stars was never shed
On cradle like Thy mangerbed;
The wise have found no greater joy
Than comes from Thee, Thou blessed boy.

Do now the rugged shepherds press
Their worship on Thy helplessness?
Thou dost not in Thy weakness cry,
Hushed by Thy mother's lullaby;
Yet earth is bringing Thee surprise,
The wonder deepens in Thine eyes.

The mysteries of Thy life begin
Here in this stable of an inn;
The paths Thy tender feet must tread
Reach out from this, Thy humble bed;
Thy outstretched hand, so soft, so wee,
Must know the Cross's agony.

O Wondrous Child! Where angels sing,
Where wise men richest treasures bring,
Where shepherds worship, can there be
A place of Thy nativity
For us whose hearts in eager quest
Are seeking joy and peace and rest?

The love of God which lived in Thee
Was nurtured at Thy mother's knee;
Thy kinship with the world of men
Was deepened, stirred, and strengthened then;

We, too, come near Thee. Wilt Thou take
The lives we give, "for Jesus' sake"?

'Tis joy to have the joy Thou hast.
'Tis peace when sin and shame are past,
'Tis love to have Thee in the heart.
'Tis power to know the Christ Thou art.
O Wondrous Child! our light, our Guide,
We worship Thee this Christmas tide.

Master's use when we feel ourselves to be His stewards and use our money for the abundant life of all His children.

Frankincense—the sign of thought, the emblem of man's quest for knowledge and beauty. Of what use is our intelligence or our talents unless we give them wholeheartedly to the acquiring of truth, to the abolishing of ignorance and prejudice, to the solving of problems created by the forces of the natural world in which we live and even more the baffling problems created by the human relationships around us? Frankincense—symbol of intelligence dedicated to the Christ child on that first gift-day of our Lord.

And finally myrrh—token of love and the service of love, shown whenever and wherever hearts are touched with a generosity that is uncalculating: the love in our family life; the affection between friends; the charity that sees God and our Neighbor in one person and gladly feeds him, clothes him, visits him in prison, serves him in whatever way we can. Our hospitals for the sick in body and in mind; our schools not only in the public school system but those for the defective in sight and hearing; our parks and libraries, have grown out of the love we have learned to feel for our Neighbor. We need to feel that love much more keenly than we have ever felt before, but gradually the social conscience is awakening and the myrrh of our love expressed in kindly service to all who need help is permeating the Christian church of all denominations.

Dear Jesus, Thou to whom the wise men brought their choicest gifts in adoration and worship. Give us also the will and the strength to dedicate to Thee the gifts of our labor, of our intelligence and thoughtful planning, and most of all, of our loving consecrated hearts. Use them for making a more heavenly earth for us all to live in. Amen.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of the people who are growing old; to stop asking whether your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough to bear in mind the things that other people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you, really want without waiting for them to tell you; to trim your lamp so that it will give you more light and less smoke, to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts, a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

And if you can keep it for a day, why not always?

But you can never keep it alone.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The center of interest in Christmas is a New Life. That New Life was a baby in a manger. No other baby ever uttered his first cry under such hopes and fears. Shepherds on the Judean hills heard the angels sing, and left their flocks to look upon His tiny face and worship Him. Wise men came from the East to offer their gifts and pay their homage to the King. Mary and Joseph pondered these things in their hearts, and failed to understand these strange, these unusual manifestations and evidences of heavenly recognition of their baby. To them He was their first born son. He was a new life. Every baby is a new life.

Christian people all over the world unite in celebrating Christmas as the anniversary of the birth of Jesus. Something of His importance and promised power can be gleaned from the message of the angels concerning Him. "Peace on earth" is a new type of life for the earth. That is within the scope of this baby's influence and power. Looking at the world as a whole the spirit of war, or unrest, or hate, is in evidence somewhere—or among some people on the earth. War seems to have been an ever present factor in the history of the human race. What a blessing to learn that it is possible that war may be ended, and that peace may someday be upon the earth. That is the hope expressed in the song of the angels. That hope resided in the life of the baby about whom the angels sang.

"Goodwill toward men." That is better and more important than peace. It is unselfish. It is positive. It is aggressive. It is missionary. It is benevolent. How could any one hope that this baby could ever overcome the hate and caste of His age, and inspire the world to sing of "Goodwill?" The world hated Him. It hates Him today. He was crowded out of the Inn in Bethlehem, and He has been crowded out of many homes, inns, hotels, towns, cities and other places during these intervening years. He needs neither sword nor gun to defend him, or to fight for His spirit of "Goodwill." He marches on quietly to ultimate triumph and sure victory. The spirit of "Goodwill" is an unflinching principle upon which He rests His case and builds for the future.

"Thou shalt call His name Jesus; for He shall save His people from their sins." There was no quibbling about the name of the baby. The mother had no choice. The angel settled that question. The name indicates the mission of the baby. The Man—the Son of Man—the Son of God—is a Saviour. Those who believe in Him, and follow Him, are born again. They become new creatures. They have a new life. Think of the blessings of this new life. Think of the happy hearts, and happy homes, made possible by the presence of Je-

HIS STAR.

I see the light of Christmas glow
 Along the wintry skies,
 And fair above our hills of snow
 The star of Bethlehem rise.
 Bright herald of the world's great Hope,
 The star to childhood dear,
 It hangs between our living babes
 And those no longer here.

The children that still bless our earth
 Laugh in its happy ray,
 And those of the celestial birth
 No more are dead today.
 Beyond the star the song begins
 Of peace, Good Will, and Cheer
 We listen on this darker side
 For those no longer here.

I hear the angelic music die
 Along the throbbing string.
 And through the tuneful hush on high
 The Children's voices ring;
 And lo! from out his Father's throne,
 Won by the sweet refrain,
 The Christ of Bethlehem comes down
 And is a child again.

Then loud from all the blessed throng
 A Christmas anthem swells;
 The morning stars the notes prolong
 And all heaven's pealing bells;
 For on the morn of Christmas Day
 Earth swings to heaven so near,
 Who listens sure may catch the song
 Of those no longer here.

CHRISTMAS, 1936.

Again time brings us near the Christmas season. The Christmas season is in celebration of the birth of Christ. Christ is God's gift to a needy people and a wayward world. In the gift of Christ, He meant to beget within us a spirit of unselfishness and of helpful generosity, and to offer to us the way of life on the highest possible principle. Christ came to be and live with people. Wherever there were human needs, human suffering, or human loneliness, He was always delighted to be present. Only when He was conscious of physical exhaustion or the need of communion with His Father did He seek to be alone. He delighted to serve rather than be served. He found joy in sacrificing and wished that no one would sacrifice for His personal benefit. Because He gave His life literally, He lives today triumphantly. Only as man catches the vision of the Christ and is able to translate that vision into everybody living is he, in reality, a follower of Christ. What a different world we would have today if all men, like He, lived unselfish lives—lived for the comfort, the encouragement, the healing, and the helping of others—if they could find real joy in serving rather than personal satisfaction in being served—if they could find greater happiness in giving rather than seeing their own possessions increase. It would seem at times that there are those in present society who feel that the Christmas season is an opportunity for getting rather than giving. Every device and enticement known to man seems to be employed to induce people who have money to make purchases that those who have to sell may multiply their volume of business and increase their personal gain. Many merchants can scarcely wait until the songs of Thanksgiving have died away before they decorate their store windows with glaring colors, string all kinds of lights and decorations across streets and thoroughfares, stage elaborate parades with prizes offered to induce the prospective purchasers to come in great numbers. Telephones, radios, newspapers, bill boards, and every agency of publicity, every agency of advertisement known to man are pressed into service. While the Christmas season is here, they must sell; they must sell in quantities that may increase their personal holdings.

Instead of writing Christmas, many of the people have begun to write X-mas, and perhaps if they wrote $mas it would more correctly portray their ideal and expectation of Christmas. In the glare of lights, the array of colors, and the volume of business, the real purpose of Christmas seems to have been lost. In the search for material values, so many seem to have lost their way and no longer do they

THE WISE MEN.

When Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen His star in the East and are come to worship Him."

The priest said, "In Bethlehem of Judea, for the prophet has written, Out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people, Israel."

And behold the star which they saw in the East went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was. And they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary, His mother, and fell down and worshipped Him. And when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto Him gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh.

CRADLE HYMN.

Away in a manger, no crib for a bed,
The little Lord Jesus laid down His sweet head.

The stars in the bright sky looked down where He lay—

The little Lord Jesus asleep on the hay.

The cattle are lowing, the baby awakes
But little Lord Jesus, no crying He makes.

I love Thee, Lord Jesus! look down form the sky,

And stay by my cradle till morning is nigh.

BUDDY'S BEST CHRISTMAS.

Buddy Andrews jumped into bed and kissed his mother good-night. "Only seven days before Christmas, mother. You ought to hear what the boys are going to give me. Johnny's going to give me an agate marble—Jimmy, a new top—and Bill, a water pistol. Mom, what are you going to give me?"

"Dear, it seems to me you won't need much more," answered his mother.

"Sure, I will. I need some skates and that electric train I showed you. Remember?"

"Yes, dear. But what are you going to give others? How about the Community Tree and the box we're to pack in Sunday School for the orphan's?" asked his mother.

"But, Mom, I need that money I earned from Dad for myself," replied Buddy. "Maybe next year I can give something to the others, but not this year."

Buddy's mother turned to go out of the room. "My little boy had better think over what he just said. Suppose his little friends felt the same way about their money?"

Buddy didn't answer, but he did some thinking. Before he knew it, it was the day before Christmas Eve.

A CHRISTMAS SECRET.

Christmas is the time of secrets,

So I'll whisper one to you;

Grandpa says that all who try it

Find that every word is true:

"Would you have a happy day?

Give some happiness away."

Grandpa says this little secret

Should be carried through the year

And if all would try to head it

Earth would soon be full of cheer.

"Would you have a happy day?

Give some happiness away."

—Selected.

The teacher was having a Christmas party. There was a huge Christmas tree laden with presents. There were signs all over the tree with the names of boys and girls on them. Buddy looked for a sign that bore his name, but he couldn't find it. His teacher handed a stocking filled with goodies to each child, but continued to leave Buddy out.

"I'm sorry we have nothing for Buddy this year, but, perhaps next year there will be something for him," she said.

Then all of a sudden he rubbed his eyes and opened them. It had all been a dream!

"Buddy," his mother called, "breakfast is ready. Hurry or you will be late."

"Yes, mother," answered Buddy, "I'll be down in a minute."

Somehow Buddy couldn't get the dream out of his head. It had made him a different boy.

"Mom, want to go Christmas shopping with me after school today?" asked Buddy presently. "I think I'll give the boys something after all and then give the rest to the Sunday School for the Community Tree."

That will be nice, Buddy," answered his mother, as she kissed him good-bye.

THE ROAD TO CHRISTMAS.

There is one road to Christmas. It is called Seeking-not-your-own. We can travel it with our Best Friend who knows the way, for he was a baby, a boy, a worker, a teacher, and a leader over the World Road. Keep him in sight. If you get off the road, call him and he has promised to start you right again. The best way is for all to take hands, boys and girls in every land alike and all starting together on "The Road to Christmas"

The old road to Bethlehem

Alight with a star,

The road of the shepherds

And Wise Men from far;

The road to the manger

For you and for me;

The road we must follow

If Christ we would see;

The road that leads skyward

And on to the end;

The road of the children

To childhood's best Friend

The road of the angels

Of peace and goodwill;

The old road to Christmas,

We travel it still.

GREETINGS.

All your friends are wishing for you a very happy Christmas Season. This includes those you know and some that you do not know, for it includes those who are writing this note. We hope Santa Claus will be good to you and that you will also find the joy that comes to those who give and to those who worship the Christ who was born at Christmas.

CHRISTMAS JOY.

An observant brother recently remarked that even the Christian world was inclined to substitute Santa Claus for Christ; that our most significant and sublime season and occasion had been commercialized. But back of all our trade and commerce, beneath all our giving and sharing, at this season of the year, there still abides the comforting fact that we now celebrate the Birth of a Child born in a manger over nineteen centuries ago. That, at least is something. Somehow the song of the heavenly hosts that thrilled and amazed the shepherds who minded their flocks on the Hills of Judea, has found its way into the voices and into the song of earthly choirs, who now chant the same melody. Whether we sing like the angels, or not, millions of hearts are chanting, and thousands of choirs are singing,

"Joy to the world! the Lord is come:
Let earth receive her King;
Let every heart prepare Him room,
And heav'n and nature sing.

"Joy to the world; the Saviour reigns:
Let men their songs employ,
While fields and floods, rocks, hills, and plains,
Repeat the sounding joy."

That is just it. Myriads of homes and hearts are seeking at this Christmas time in their own way, some becomingly; some unbecomingly, to "Repeat the sounding joy."

Critics tell us that the most classic and expressive Christmas carol so far written in our English language is that written by Charles Dickens. Some one has well advised that in preparing for Christmas, or during every Christmas, should read Dickens's "Christmas Carol." This writer has made it a rule to do this very thing for many seasons now and finds it quite worth while and always interesting. Old "Scrooge" was a hard boiled business man. The singing of Christmas songs, and the shouts of "Merry Christmas" vexed this old shriveled soul who was wholly absorbed in this world's affairs. Scrooge declared again and again that Christmas was a "humbug" and that the very folks who made the most of it needed most to be at work. Well, one Christmas night old Scrooge learned better. The spirit of Christmas haunted his chambers; disturbed his sleep; spoke to him out of the past and frightened the poor, shrunken soul into agony and then to repentance. When "The Spirit of Christmas" as a Ghost in the night with the sounding of doleful bells, the clanging of chains, the floating through the air and all the rest of the ghastly experiences got through with old Scrooge, having shown him what he had been as a boy; what he was now as a heartless, commercialized, lonely man, and then revealed to him what he might be, if he would repent before it was too late—when the Ghost of the night and the spirit of Christmas got through with old Scrooge he decided that he was about the meanest man and the biggest fool on this earth and that the joy of poor, crippled, Tiny Tim, even in his want and poverty, was far and away,

CHRIST COMES AGAIN.

Lo! Christ comes even to the least,
For each the angels grandly sing;
His star hangs ever in the east,
And each His tribute still may bring.

Life's common ways exalted are,
Life's common work is made sublime,
By light which falls from Christmas star,
And melody of Christmas chime.

Because by sea and winding stream,
The Lord Christ's footsteps still are pressed,
Earth keeps the glory of a dream,
The World and all that is are blest.

The Lord is here, not far away;
He comes to bide from realms above;
And life is one long Christmas Day
That binds us to immortal Love.

JOHN McFARLAND.

greater than his own joy, such as it was, in gloating over his gain and bank account. Then old Scrooge decided to change his life, and he did change. So poor old Scrooge of one Christmas, came to be before another, one of the happiest of men and his care for Tiny Tim and his interest in the needs, and the joys of those about him revealed to him a new world and a real reason for living.

One simply cannot call Christmas "a humbug" and get by with it. It just isn't that. It is the season of joy, of peace, and of happiness. God in Heaven intended it so; and through the gift of His Son, He is making it so; and having given His Son to this very end that there will be no let up, or surcease, until all the nations and all the peoples of the nations shall take up the glorious refrain of the Heavenly Host, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." A joyful Christmas to every reader of this page and these lines, and in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us all."

J. O. A.

SO LET US PRAY.

For the Christmas celebrations around the world that there may not be this year so much empty show in it, but more joy, more consciousness of good news to be shared, "for unto us is born a Savior."

For Christmas in all lands that day by day throughout this year the joy of the Lord may be in their faces, that men may see it, that the abundance of this joy "may abound to their liberality," as they try to share with others their good news.

For the area where Jesus Himself lived on earth, Palestine, that strife may cease there, that the groups living now in so terrible dissonance may learn instead the joy of our Lord and express Him better in their lives.

For all missionaries who are trying day by day to live in joy the message of Jesus to their fellow men. More specifically, for any one missionary whom you know personally, that Christ's joy may be in him—full, overflowing, to bless the lives about him.

For your own church that there the joy of the Lord may be increasingly known and told and shared.

For peace on earth, good will among men.

THE CHRISTIAN MESSAGE OF PEACE.

Thousands of sermons will be preached in Christian pulpits on Christmas Sunday, advocating "Peace on earth, goodwill among men." But while God is the God of Peace, and the Gospel is the Gospel of Peace, Christ distinctly said, "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword." This startling statement has been proved true, for strife has characterized national life during the whole Christian era—though war is contrary to Christ's mission of peace.

Look over the world. Never were nations so feverishly arming themselves and preparing for war as they are today; never was so much spent on armaments and war materials; never have there been so many wars and rumors of war—political, economic, social and religious. This is in spite of the influence and ideals of Christ and the peace propaganda and pacifist movements. There can be no doubt that Christ desires peace, but if He came to establish general peace among men and nations, there does not seem to have been much progress toward reaching His objective. Nevertheless God is the God of Peace; Christ preached peace and bequeathed His peace to His disciples, and they "preached peace by Jesus Christ." (Acts 10:36.)

What, then, is the answer to the present problem of disunity and strife in the world? The answer is that there is only one basis of human peace and that is "peace with God." The reason for the "sword" that divided households as the result of Christ's coming to earth over nineteen hundred years ago—and that still divides families and nations—is the fact that men are out of harmony with God. We have neglected the one necessary basis of unity. As long as we—as individuals or as nations—are each seeking selfish ends, so long will we fear one another and put our trust in armaments. No one form of government is responsible for the war spirit. Russia, the communistic Union of Soviet Republics, denies God's authority and ideals and depends on armaments to maintain peace with neighbor's and within her own borders. Japan, the militaristic monarchy, seeks to attain her ends by regimentation and force of arms. Germany and Italy, the fascist totalitarian states, declare for an "armed peace," with their armaments able to defy all antagonists. Even England and America are joining in the race. There may be an armed truce, and a restraint from active warfare, but it is due to fear of force and not the spirit of friendly harmony which underlies all true peace.

What then is the Christmas message of peace? It is that Christ came to proclaim God's love and His desire that men should cease from rebellion against His will and should be at peace with Him. This is the only effective basis of "peace among men." The sword of strife will be sheathed, or turned into a plowshare of peace, when men join in allegiance to Christ and yield their wills and their lives and their possessions to the Will of God. There is no other way; all peace movements promoted on any other basis are futile. As long as

HOW FAR TO BETHLEHEM?

How far is it to Bethlehem town?
Just over Jerusalem hills adown,
Past lovely Rachel's white-domed tomb—
Sweet shrine of motherhood's young doom.

"It isn't far to Bethlehem town—
Just over the dusty roads adown,
Past wise men's well, still offering
Cool draughts from welcome wayside spring;
Past shepherds with flutes of reed
That charm the woolly sheep they lead;
Past boys with kites on hilltops flying,
And soon you're there where Bethlehem's lying,
Sunned white and sweet on olived slopes,
Gold-lighted still with Judah's hopes."

And so we find the shepherds' field
And plain that gave rich Boaz yield;
And look where Herod's villa stood.
We thrill that earthly parenthood
Could foster Christ who was all-good;
And thrill that Bethlehem town today
Looks down on Christian homes that pray.

It isn't far to Bethlehem town!
It's anywhere that Christ comes down
And finds in people's friendly face
A welcome and abiding place.
The road to Bethlehem runs right through
The homes of folks like me and you.

men fight against God they will also fight against one another, if they can and dare. "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." God and the State cannot both rule supreme over men's wills; neither can both God and self be supreme.

The most effective emissaries and promoters of peace on earth today are not "pacifists" who deery all conflict, or social workers who merely seek to bring about better living conditions, they are the peacemakers who are recognized as "children of God"; they are the Christian missionaries and others who are seeking to win men to Christ and to a life in harmony with God's will. Christ came primarily to save men from sin—the sin of disobedience to the Will of God. He proclaimed forgiveness and peace by His sacrifice on the Cross and so opened the Way of Life in God.

Christmas is a time to preach peace, but only the peace of God based on loving obedience to His revealed will and manifested by love to our fellow men. It is love that brings peace because love works no ill to one's neighbor. The Star of Bethlehem and the Cross of Calvary are both the Christian symbols of peace.

FOOLED YOU, DIDN'T WE?

"Promise the people . . . that the Government will give them a new deal in party, political and financial affairs . . . necessity of eradicating political corruption, suppression of gambling evils . . . avoiding of Government competition with private enterprise under the name of monopoly." Extracts from recent political speeches in the U. S. A.? No—from a speech by the Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek of China as he administered the oath of office for the Central Government in Kwangtung Province. Provincial monopolies formed by corrupt officials must go, said the General. A sample is the way valuable Tungsten mines were controlled by Canton politicians. The General stressed the need of restoring the traditional spirit of China through the four ancient virtues—discipline, unselfishness, integrity and conscientiousness. These are the principles of the New Life Movement which is gaining wide influence in China today.

A "K O" FOR OLD NICK.

Nestled at the foot of Cheng Hsu Shan, a sacred mountain in China, is the village of Tea Leaves. At given times you ascend the mountain and burn incense before the idols. If you don't, aches and pains will come from the Devil. Unless each day you burn incense, sweet stuff bought by selling the food out of your mouth, if necessary, misfortune will dog the footsteps of you and yours. Witches resided in Tea Leaves, too, whining and weaving spells. Then Christianity came to Tea Leaves. The Devil took a back seat. When the harassed folks felt his evil presence, they called for the Christian leader or those who found peace in the New Faith. The house used for worship was once rented by the Devil. Out of 36 families hardly four are now left non-Christian and out of deference to them, the Christians are waiting a bit before they tear down the three or four temples to build a church and wipe out the last vestige of the rule of Satan.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS TO YOU!

Dear Friends:

Since it would be impossible for me to send personal greetings to all of you, many of whose names and addresses are unknown to me, I am taking advantage of this method of reaching you.

Christmas is a season of the year which we all love—I know that it means a great deal to me and I am sure that it does to each of you. It is a time when families and friends are united and when we remember some whom we have not thought of for a long time. It is a time of the year when we like to give gifts to those we love, to those who are near and dear to us. We also like to think of some who are less fortunate than we are—and how easy it is to find many who are in that condition. At this season we like especially to do as much as possible for children, to make this period a memorable time for them.

However, there is always the danger that our Christmas celebration will not be "Christ-centered." Amid days of rushing frantically from store to store on shopping expeditions, of celebrating the holiday season by means of parties, and trying to decide what we ought to give Aunt Mary or Cousin Jim, we often lose sight of the true meaning of the day itself. "Christmas dances" somehow seem out of place to me, though not so disgusting as "Christmas cocktail parties"! What ways some of us choose to celebrate the birth of Jesus Christ!

In recent years, it has appeared to me that it is much better to tell children the true story of Christmas, rather than playing up the idea of a real Santa Claus. In one family, with which I am quite intimate, the children have always had the idea that they were celebrating Christ's Birthday during the Christmas season; that we give gifts at that time as our way of appreciating the great gift which has come to us from God in the birth of a Saviour. To them Santa Claus has always been an incidental "added attraction" who has never detracted from their understanding of the real meaning of Christmas.

Several days ago, in one of our current fiction magazines, I read a story which contained some interesting thoughts on the subject of Christmas.

The idea was advanced that our world couldn't survive for even five years if Christmas were not celebrated during that time! That the world needs a "breathing spell" when good-will is so prominent that even professional warmakers do not advocate war. That many valuable friendships would be lost without it, because now for about a month during each year we are thinking more of our friends than we are of ourselves. Perhaps there is more truth than fiction in that.

I hope that each one of you will have some part, no matter how small, in making this Christmas season one which will be remembered by the members of your church. Often it is up to the young people to present programs and pageants, to arrange for the Christmas tree, to distribute baskets to the needy. It will help each of us if we can have a part in doing something for somebody else.

My wish for you all is a very Merry Christmas.

EMILY M. CARLETON.

WHAT TO GIVE AT CHRISTMAS.

Give ear to those who cry for crumbs—and heap their homely larders high, for Lo! the Joyous Season's here—and Christmas comes!

Give hand to those that need a guide, nor cast a thought of race or creed, since Brotherhood is all worth while at Christmastide.

Give steps to those who cannot plod on their own errands to and fro above the crisp December sod as others go.

Give thought to what you best can do to cheer the heart and soothe the mind and make the world seem good and kind to those less fortunate than you.

Give smiles to all whose weary load brings gloom and pain and gray despair, and bends them low o'er life's steep road; for smiles with them are rare.

Give knowledge to the dull untaught, for some there are who do not know with what our Christmastide is fraught; and speak of Him, the Mangerborn beneath the Eastern Star's pale glow.

Give courage to the fearing band that needs the clasp of a friendly hand, and cheerful smile and all good will; give courage, then, to such as they this day.

Give heed to others and their need. They know, they feel, they have desire; nor is it what you think is best, but rather what they most desire, that you should give and do and say on Christmas Day

Give laughter—not the scornful sort, but laughter that abounds with happy, wholesome, merry sounds, and so infectious as to bring a like re-tort

Give heart—the heart that beats for all upon this day; the heart that greets the lowly and the high, the heart that glows with sympathy and knows but love for those who pass you by

Give Joy to all—it may be bread for one, or just a smile, or yet a simple toy, or even gold—but give them all and you will give but joy.

THE SON BECOMES A MAN.

LESSON I—JANUARY 3, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: The word became flesh, and dwelt among us.—John I: 14.

LESSON: John 1: 1-15.

By Way of Introduction.

The lessons for the first quarter of the New Year are to be taken from the gospel according to John. The aim as stated by the Lesson Committee is "To encourage the student to seek an understanding of the deeply spiritual message of the Gospel of John and to enter into loving fellowship with the Father and His Son Jesus Christ." The material selected is well adapted to the aim proposed. For as Clement of Alexandria wrote "Last of all, John perceiving that the external facts had been made plain in the gospel (he refers to the gospels which had already been written) being urged by his friends and inspired by the Spirit, composed A Spiritual Gospel." John was well qualified to write such a gospel, for he had keen spiritual insight and perception, and he had been most intimate with Jesus. And John himself says that he had written his gospel "that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life through his name," (John 20: 31.)

When John wrote his gospel, two specific dangers threatened the Church. One was that Christianity would lose its creative power and become simply a narrative of certain events of history, coupled with a belief that Jesus would come again at some future hour. The other was that Christianity would become simply one of the many religions of the time and that the life of Jesus would gradually lose its reality and become more and more a sacred myth. John declares in his gospel that Christianity is primarily a present power, not a past history, and he emphasizes the continuing presence of Christ in the hearts and lives of His followers. His object was to convey a religious and spiritual message about Jesus rather than to record the facts of His life.

It is desirable for us to know these facts as we enter upon a study of these lessons. That is the reason why so much space has been given to this introduction, rather than to devote all this space to the Notes themselves. So much for introduction.

Concerning the Lesson.

It will help us to understand the lesson better if we understand what John means when he uses the term "Word" or "Logos" which appears so often in the opening verses of his gospel. The Logos or Word was a term that was familiar to educated minds of John's day. It was used in philosophic thought to refer to the divine reason or mind immanent in and explaining all natural phenomena. When John used this term he was using the highest terms available in the Gentile rather than the Jewish world. What John is trying to do, therefore, is to show to the Gentile world or to unbelieving Jews, that Christ was this Logos, or Word, and that this Word or Logos actually found incarnation in Christ. To put the matter another way Christ or the Word was the way in which God made known His thought of and His love toward the world. I convey to you by a word the idea I have in mind. Christ was the Word of God, the thought of God revealed in time and space. But the Word was more than that which was revealed in time and space. The Word was eternal. He had existed before He was revealed in human form; He continued to exist after he shuffled off His human form. Christ was simply God made manifest in the flesh. The Word became flesh and dwelt among us. To be sure all of God was not in Jesus Christ when Christ was here on earth. But the fullness of God was in Christ—Paul says it pleased the Father that in Him should all the fullness of the Godhead dwell bodily, (Col. 11: 19 and 2: 9.) As Dr. Moore says "The Word was our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. He became flesh in the person of the Babe of Bethlehem, being born of the Virgin Mary. He dwelt among men for more than thirty-three years, the one sinless being among the sons of men. His followers beheld his glory and saw in him the effulgence of the Father. His life overflowed with goodness and grace. And his character was crystalized, incarnate truth."

The Son of God Our Saviour and Lord.

His Eternity—In the beginning, go back as far as you can in imagination, beyond creation itself, and there was the Word.

His Deity—The Word was God. Again and again he is called God. Jesus was more than a man. He was more than divine, He was Deity.

His Power—All things were made by Him. What John is trying to say is that Christ was the creative power, He spoke the word, and that brought the universe into being. He was co-worker with God from the beginning.

His Self-Existence—In Him was life, and that life is the source of all life.

His Mercy—He was the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. Christ came to give men light which is to give them life.

His Glory—"He became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten Son of God." God is lighted up with a new glory since Jesus came to reveal Him. If God is like Christ, we have a God full of grace and goodness.

His Grace—"Of his fullness we have all received, and grace for grace." Grace means unmerited favor, and this grace of God was given in Jesus without measure or stint.

His Revelation—"No man hath seen God at any time, but the only begotten Son hath declared Him." In Jesus Christ we see God revealed. He is the image of the invisible God.

His Rejection—He came unto His own and His own received Him not. That is one of the most tragic sentences in history. Men loved darkness rather than light. They shut their hearts against His grace and His love.

His Acceptance—But as many as received Him to them gave He power or the right to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name. This Word of God becomes the Saviour of those who repent and believe.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The writer of these Notes takes this means of expressing to the readers of this page his sincere wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year. A Happy New Year because you grow in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ, because you give yourself to something big outside yourself, because you lose your life to find it in Christ's larger life. And a Prosperous New Year, not primarily because you may possess, or may amass money or material things, but because you become increasingly rich in those qualities of mind and heart which constitute the true riches, and the abiding riches of life. There are many things of which we could be afraid as we face the New Year, but there is nothing that we need to fear if we yield our lives to Him and trust wholly in Him. He is able to supply all of our needs according to His riches in glory in Jesus Christ.

MONDAY.

BLESSED ARE THE SEEKERS.

"The Lord is good . . . to the soul that seeketh him."—Read Lam. 3: 25, 26 and Psa. 24: 3-10.

"People usually get about what they want when they want it bad enough." This is what we often hear. It seems to be true? Of course, there are qualifications, but it happens often enough to justify repetition of the saying. Just as often as one fails to get what he wants, it seems to be due to an unwillingness to pay the price for it.

There is no truth of the Scriptures more plainly taught than this, "he who seeketh findeth." "Knock and the door shall be opened." But like everything else, it has its price. We pay in coin of the realm for anything we get. In nothing do we get something for nothing. What price does man pay for lying, stealing, drunkenness, etc. . . . - What is the price of health, or of sickness? What is the price of happiness, or sorrow? Success, or failure? Read the text. Look up your concordance on the words "seek" and "search."

Prayer—O Lord, Thyself alone, we love and we would seek today. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SURFEITING BANQUET.

"Man cannot live by bread alone."—Read Matt. 1-4.

We often sit at banquet with public men and we note how little they eat and then of the simplest foods. They are able to afford anything they might covet, but experience has taught them that rich foods are a surfeit. They have come to believe that the world would be better off if there were no such foods.

In our later years we come to learn that so much of life is a surfeit and life would be happier without it. There is a hunger of the immortal spirit that cannot be satisfied with material things. They who so hunger take less of the material and covet more of the spiritual. For only in the realm of the spiritual are found enduring values, something that we can tie to as this mortal coil weakens and slips away and we move out into that "bourne of time and space."

Prayer—O Thou shepherd of our souls, our hungry hearts look up to Thee this morning for the living bread and waters of eternal life from Thine own fountain. In Jesus's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE ANCHOR THAT HOLDS.

"Your father knoweth that ye have need of these things."—Read Luke 12: 22-31.

A great number of people are pushing God off the map in their daily life. They would banish Him and make Him a needless and a heedless force. But devout and hungry hearts for God know better. And thank God that there are a host of these stretching down through the ages existing still and carrying on for Him. They live in intimacy with the heavenly Father, and they know that He who takes note of the sparrow's fall, watches over and blesses His children. Let us give God thanks that we find ourselves in this fellowship.

Prayer—Our Father, we know that Thou dost care. As little children we are unable to plan for ourselves, but Thou dost plan for us, and we rest our lives upon Thy Fatherly Providence. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOOD-BYE, OLD 1936.

"Old things are passed away; behold, they are become new."—Read II. Cor. 5: 11-19.

Probably 1936 and 1937 will go down as a turning point in history. Humanity is trying to get its feet on the earth somewhere and somehow. We all all praying that this may happen.

But we believe that there is no hope for this security in the new year except upon the basis of the magna charter of the Kingdom of God. That says "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." It also says that "righteousness exalteth a nation but sin is a reproach unto any people." It also says, "The nation that will not serve Him shall perish." It also says, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." When will our people turn to the Lord for its security instead of to men and money?

We are not sorry to say good-bye to the old year, for we are gladdened by the fresh hopes for a better life in the new. Let us enter it with a clear loyalty to our Heavenly Father.

Prayer—O God, with the passing of the old year, we leave our old sins, fears and woes; and with the entrance of the new year, the fresh gift of Thy hand to the world, we enter trusting for many beautiful surprises awaiting us. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"Former things are passed away . . . behold, I make all things new." Read Rev. 21: 1-6.

Said the poet:
"Every day is a fresh beginning Every day is the world made new."

A new day, a new year, a new beginning, with new hopes and with new determinations for the higher and the better way in all things. This is the way, saith He, "I am the way the truth, and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me." All hail the new year 1937!

To realize the fulness of this newness of life, it must be a time of newness in the hearts of each individual. "Is thy heart right with God?" If so, with thoughtfulness, patience, good will and fortitude, and most of all, a loyalty to the beautiful as it is in Jesus Christ our Saviour, we shall succeed.

Prayer—Our Father, we would be new in our loyalty, obedience and fellowship with Thee. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MAKING READY FOR THE VOYAGE.

"And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations unto it."—Rev. 21: 22-27.

As we begin our voyage for the new year, let us, like a good ship about to begin a voyage, lay in a store of all provisions necessary for the cruise. Our provision for this journey of the soul is first an humble and teachable mind, that we may be able to see, learn and know the truth as we go along.

It consists of a kindly and tolerant attitude toward other travelers and observing the rules of the road, adding to that every courtesy needful. We must have an eye of singleness and loyalty to the dearest things of our hearts, such as our family and friends, home and work, country and church. It consists of a diet of devotion and prayer for the beginning of each day. It consists of service for Christ every day.

Prayer—O Lord, we are unable of ourselves to measure up to Thy standard, but we believe, help Thou our unbelief, that by Thy help we can. We pray that we may have the courage to dare, and the fortitude to stand

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

WHERE IS HE?

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Where is he that is born king of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the East, and are come to worship him."—Matt. 2:2.

Where is he? That is the question a child asks his mother. That is the question the church member asks his minister: Where is he? That is an oft repeated question in business, politics, on the street, in the home, everywhere: Where is he? It is a church's holy day we are approaching. In the hurry, and oftentimes worry, that fills the days before that church holy day, one may ask the question: Where is he? This is not to say he cannot be found on the busy street, or shop. He may be. In all the gift buying, selecting, and swapping: Where is he? Again this is not to say he is not there, for he may be there! In the toys that will make happy an unnumbered host of little folk, in the pleasant memories and appreciations expressed in multitudinous ways, giving a lift to the heavy-laden, and light to the darkened lives of loved ones, acquaintances, and friends, in all this he may be found. But nevertheless in all this, it is right and proper that the question should persist: Where is he?

It is Christmas. Where is the Christ? It is a church holy day. Where is the church? Business and industry, and every commercial enterprise has found its place up front. Where is the church? Again this is not to say it is not there also, for greatly it is! Congregations are larger. The offerings are better. New members are won. Extra programs are planned. But unless pastor and people think about these things the church is likely to be pushed into a secondary place, if not almost forgotten entirely. The schools, clubs, lodges, and various other organizations press their claims for the Christmas season. It is a parable, if rightly approached,—the Christ has burst all bounds. He touches life everywhere abundantly. Therefore, let us everyone be thoughtful, and reverent, and keep out of Christmas all that keeps out Christ, in all our Christmas thinking and activity.

I. The Wise Men Ask: Where is He? And even the king did not know the answer! The scribes and pharisees knew only the prophecies. They had not seen, nor known the Christ. He was right in their midst and yet they had not seen him! He was a part of their own, and yet they had not known him. "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." Who is it that leaves the Christ out of Christmas today? Is it only the outsider and stranger? Or is it not oftentimes those who are supposed to know and love Him best?

In our text today we see some of the very best and finest of earth coming to those intrusted with the true oracles of God and are asking them: Where is He? And so are they coming to us as Christians, and so are they coming to the Church, asking today: Where is He? That is a question that still haunts the hearts and hopes of men. That is a question that you and I are supposed to be able to answer. God grant that we may!

"We have seen his star," they said. The evidences of the Christ still exist. We see His churches. We see His kindness shown. We see noble living. We see unselfish service, and Christian praise and prayer. These are real evidences, just as real are they as the evidences seen by the Wise Men. But it is one thing to see these things, and it is quite another thing to know and feel the radiant influence of the Christ in our own hearts. They saw the star, they heard the prophecies which were quoted to them, but that was not enough, they wanted to stand in His presence, to look upon His face, to bring to Him their gifts, and pay homage unto Him.

II. An Answer Was Given. The Scriptures were searched. And they were directed toward Bethlehem. To the capital of the country had they come to look for the king. They would. Jerusalem, city of God, and seat of the kingdom, in it might they wisely look for the new born ruler of the realm. But in a lowly place He was found. In Bethlehem, "though thou be least among the thousands of Judah" it was not too little for the Christ, nor too lowly. The Wise Men learned this from the Old Testament Scriptures. Their study of the stars had led them at the right time to the right country; their study of the Scriptures under the direction of the teachers thereof had led them to the right town. There was no conflict between science and the Bible. If there was anything wrong it was in the hearts of men (Herod) and not in the Bible, nor the laws of nature. Half-truths in prejudiced minds have sought on both sides to make an issue, but when the real truth is discovered either in the Bible or the scientific laboratory, there has been only harmony. Ignorance is bad enough anywhere, but ignorance in action is worse.

They wanted to find Jesus, and they found Him. They tried to find Him, and they found Him. They used the knowledge they had, and went in search of Him. More knowledge was found, and eventually a light from Heaven itself led them to Him. Thus they had their answer: They stood in His presence. What the king had never seen, nor the prophets and bards that foretold it, they had seen. Is there a heart-hunger in these vigorous days, days in which so much is happening, days in which the "news" is told before even the morning paper can be delivered to your doors, days in which so much that is seen seems all too temporal, is there a heart-hunger for the Christ? Seek Him, and He will be found.

III. What Shall I Do With Jesus? The Wise Men said, ". . . and are come to worship Him." What a blessed testimony! May we not say that these Wise Men represented both kings and scholars from lands afar! They come to worship Jesus. Let us give that word worship its full and rightful meaning. And to worship Jesus in its fullest and correct sense will set him entirely apart, and place Him on a throne within, for we shall hear Him saying to Satan, "Thou shalt worship the Lord, thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." To give Him our supreme affection is to serve Him also. Let us re-echo the words of the Wise Men: "We are come to worship him." They lay at His feet their costliest gifts, and paid to Him their supreme homage,—they worshipped Him.

The wicked king Herod wanted to find Him also. What did he want with Him? Not all the people who take the name of Jesus upon their lips, or in their minds wish to worship Him. Herod wanted to slay Him. This very wish cost the lives of unnumbered children. It hurts to kick against God. It hurts not only ourselves but others who are entirely innocent also. There is a peace and harmony that blesses all when we walk in God's way. We have taken the name of Jesus upon our lips. The

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Christmas is one event that the children at the Christian orphanage at Elon College look forward to with a great deal of delight. Of course they expect to be remembered by some one with a little gift of something, and for a number of years now, none have been disappointed. We have two churches that for several years have made this possible. Then friends send us candy, oranges and apples, so if we are remembered again this year the children will have a happy Christmas.

Christmas is a time when we should remember others to make them happy. It is an occasion when many fathers and mothers invite all the children back home and they look forward to the day with much joy in having the children gather around the dining room table as in days gone by. It is an opportunity that every child should appreciate to make father and mother happy. When you go take them a little gift. It need not be costly, but the gift within itself will cause a smile of appreciation to play on their faces. There are so many little things we can do that would fill their hearts with joy. The writer well remembers when father and mother would invite all the children home for Christmas dinner and they were always disappointed if one was absent. And for a number of years the family circle was not broken. We had a good day together. Are you going to make somebody happy at the Christmas season?

FEDERAL COUNCIL LOOKS FOR SPIRITUAL ADVANCE.

Coming just at the end of the National Preaching Mission, the Biennial Meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, held in Asbury Park, N. J., December 9-11, reflected a decisive spiritual advance. The review and appraisal of the Mission, which constituted one of the main features of the meeting, disclosed evidences of a revival of vital religion in many parts of the country. The Mission has reached directly about 2,000,000 people, including 25,000 ministers, in addition to still greater numbers touched by the extension program. The results of the Mission were characterized in such terms as these by those who had had the best opportunity for observation:

"It has put evangelism back into the heart of the Christian movement."

"It has been the most vivid demonstration of Christian unity that our generation has seen—a natural expression of our oneness in Christ."

"The ministers of the churches have been lifted out of a spirit of defeatism and their faith and devotion rekindled."

"The falsity of the division between the individual and the social message has been disclosed; the two emphases have been proclaimed as parts of one Gospel embracing the whole of life."

"It showed that Protestantism is not as divided as is often alleged, and that it really has a common basic message."

All felt that the Preaching Mission is not the end but the beginning of a movement of advance. Hugh T. Kerr, at whose suggestion the Mission first came into being, expressed the desire for going further and deeper in the teaching of the Christian message. E. Stanley Jones felt especially the need for a mission which would help both workers and employers to consider what the Kingdom of God would mean in our industrial life. Muriel Lester made a plea for a larger participation of youth in future plans. There was a consciousness of special need for a mission to schools, colleges and universities. The Federal Council's Department of Evangelism was authorized both to plan a new united mission to such groups as these, probably in 1938, and meanwhile to carry the present Preaching Mission to additional cities between Easter and Pentecost of 1937.

CHRISTMAS, 1936.

see the star in the East and never again do they come to worship Him and offer Him gifts—gifts that represent the most valuable of their possessions. If again the angels would sing their songs, shepherds tell their stories, perhaps the people might turn again in search of Him who is born of a virgin, whose name is Jesus, and who will save the people from their sins. In the light of truth, may we be able to discover real values and be able to give ourselves to Him and to the world, that all men everywhere may hear and believe.

and reach up until we shall have attained unto the perfect man, and unto the likeness of Jesus. This we ask for Jesus's sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SAILING, SAILING, SAILING.

"He said unto Simon, launch out into the deep."—Lk. 5:4.

"Let us go over, and they launched forth"—Lk. 8:22.

"Oh, it's good to be out on the sea of life,

Embarked one knows not whither, or why,

On the deck of the good ship Fortune.

Under a free and blue sky.

Our cargo's health, contentment, Fellowship and good cheer,

No thought for the storms of yesterday,

For the gales of tomorrow, no fear.

Sharing many a merry yarn,

With a laughing fellow-rover,

And a heaven of peace steer for,

When the long, long trip is over."

—Anon.

Prayer—Forgive us, O Lord, for our timidity and our shirking and our failures in the provisions of life. Forgive us in our failures to witness for Thee. Nerve our hearts to be good sailors on life's voyage, until we shall come to Thy haven of rest and peace forever. Amen.

world is asking of us: Where is He? What shall we do with Jesus? What do we want with Him? The Wise Men wanted to worship, which included the bringing of their gifts to Him.

Mary wanted Him. What did she want with Jesus. All that a heart of love could possibly do! And, please God, there were a few brave followers who wanted to love Him and serve Him so supremely that they gave their lives for Him. In His own life, immaculately beautiful, and the lives of such brave followers He lives until this very day. Where is He? He is in the her millions who love and serve

The Babe of Bethlehem

By the late REV. W. W. STALEY, D. D.

[From The Herald of Gospel Liberty, Issue of December 25, 1924.]

The manger-cradle is the domestic throne of the world. Babyhood found its rights in the Babe of Bethlehem. There was no Christmas for four thousand years before Christ was born. Even babyhood was serious and sad until Mary brought forth her first-born child. Ages had waited for the fulfillment of the promise that a virgin should bring forth a son. He was the only child promised for centuries before he was born. The world waited for him; and, in the fullness of time, he was born. He covers two vast periods; one of prophecy, the other of history. He was in the womb of eternity, and of his Kingdom there will be no end. His coming changed the calendar of time. He fulfilled all prophecy and all righteousness. He humbled himself to be born of a woman, though he was conceived by the Holy Ghost. He sanctified suffering, set prisoners free, and "robbed death of its sting and the grave of its victory."

His birth is celebrated by what is called Christmas.

That was a quiet December night in Bethlehem, when Joseph and Mary occupied a stall, because there was no room for them in the inn. There were no rockers on his cradle, though his gospel has put rockers on the cradles of Christendom. The little town did not know that night his birth would make it famous for all time; but the shepherds, watching their flocks on the hillside, heard the angel say: "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." The working people of the world are closest to angels and their songs. Of course, they went in haste and found it as the angel had said—Mary, Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger. His bed was a bed of straw, but he has cushioned the beds of infants throughout the world.

Later came the wise men to worship him and to present their gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. The slaughter of the Innocents, the flight into Egypt, and the return to Nazareth, interrupted the family joy for a brief period, but did not interrupt the Father's loving care.

Christmas is the tenderest of days. It is filled with love, gifts, and song. Childhood is full of joy. Age looks on with inexpressible delight. Maternity reaches its highest point in life by the babe. A halo gathers around the cabin and turns it into a palace. Christmas morning opens with a flood of joy. The year has poured its tide of love and thought into the gifts whether great or small. Greetings as sweet as angel songs fill the home, the street, and the field. Heaven opens her lap and pours her treasures into the hearts of men. No wonder angels came down to announce the coming of the Babe and the good will he would bring. The Babe has softened many a crusty temper, sweetened many a sour spirit, and built many beautiful homes, churches and schools.

Christmas is more than the celebration of a holiday, the keeping of a Christian festival, or a time for a good will. It is the crystallization of a divine purpose, the entrance of the reign of peace, the rescue of a lost world, the entrance of light into the night of despair. The toy world, book world, card world, music, furniture, and banking world, the school and the nation—all pause under the compulsion of a spiritual force and listen again to the song of angels and the shout of children. Yes, a little child shall lead, and age with trembling lips and tear filled eyes will be thrilled again with sensations of youthful joy. Parents, grand-parents, brothers, sisters, babies, and friends, will all unite in the Christmas joy. The angels went away into heaven, the shepherds verified the message, and made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child. Jesus came closest to man in his childhood, and man keeps closest to him in the babies of the world.
