The CHRISTIAN SUN

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME XCI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 5, 1939.

NUMBER 1.

The coming year offers us large things. It is to be one of the great years of God. We are entering upon a new era in the world's work and thought. Things will be said and done this year that may decide the destiny of this nation for a thousand years, and perhaps for the life-time of the world. Great problems have to be settled. Great reforms must be instituted. Old evils should be uprooted. Spiritual service must be rendered for and by the church.

Let me suggest three boon companions as you go out to face the great tasks of the coming year:

- I. Take faith with you.—You will need it. Things will go against you. It takes no prophet to foretell that you will meet with sorrows and troubles that will try you, but faith will help you fight your way through them all. Have faith in yourself. Have faith in others. Have faith in Jesus Christ. He never fails or forgets. Do your best to bring out the best that is in yourself. Help the other fellow to be a better man.
- II. Take hope with you.—Faith will start; hope will keep you going. Hope is at the bottom of nearly all the great things done for God and man. It is the mainspring of life. Hope will help you to wait until the clouds roll by.
- III. Take love with you.—Love has had a hard time for the past few years. Give extra measure this year. Pour it out on a bruised and bleeding world. There is nothing like love to heal the aches and pains of the human heart. There are bushels of love in your heart that you have never given out. Give it to others. It is too good to keep to yourself.—Exchange.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, of Jacksonville, Fla., spent Christmas with her people near Henderson, N. C.

requests for change of address, and materials for publication to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, at Elon College, N. C.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., student at Yale Divinity School, preached at Holland Christian Church on January 1.

Miss Edna Fulcher, office secretary of the Board of Christian Education, is still ill at her home, 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

Rev. and Mrs. A. R. VanCleave of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., spent Christmas visiting Mrs. VanCleave's people at and near Elon College, N. C.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is grateful for the Christmas bulletins received from our churches. Many of them were very attractive in appearance, adding much to the meaning of the Christmas services. Some idea of the Christmas activities can be gained from reading these bulletins:

WINCHESTER, VA.

The Christian Church at Winchester had two services on Christmas Day. The first was unusual in that it was a sunrise service, held at six o'clock in the morning, preceded by a trumpet call to worship. In his Christmas message on the bulletin, Rev. R. A. Whitten said, "It was a weary world into which Jesus was born. The centuries have passed since that silent night but countless millions of souls have found the Babe, the Savior of mankind. He is the hope of the world and we need to discover the manger cradle. May the birthday of our Christ bring you the gift of His love."

ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

The Christmas services at the Elon College Community Church were enjoyed for several weeks. On December 4 the College Choir, under the direction of Prof. Stuart Pratt, presented "The Messiah." On December 11 Dr. L. E. Smith brought his "Christmas Wishes" to the students. A Christmas offering was taken for Superannuation. That evening a pageant was presented by the students under the direction of Dr. D. J. Bowden. On Christmas Sunday Rev. I. I. Sears, graduate of Elon College who is studying at Andover Newton Theological Seminary, brought the Christmas message.

MASON CITY, IOWA.

The Christmas service was the first one following the installation service for the new pastor, Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein. The greetings from the new minister and his family were: "May this be the best Christmas you have ever known. May the angels sing anew in your hearts the music of joy, peace, and goodwill to all mankind. May this Christmas fill your souls with new love for God and His Church, new loyalty to the Christ whose birthday Christmas commemorates, and new hope for the days ahead. And may His Presence seem more real to you with each new day throughout the New Year."

SUFFOLK, VA.

In the last issue of this paper we shared with you Dr. Truitt's message, taken from the church bulletin. We are indeed sorry to learn that Dr. Truitt spent a week at Christmas time in the hospital, and that his father died during this time. We are glad that both Dr. and Mrs. Truitt are improving. Their many friends think of them often and remember them in their prayers.

TORRINGTON, CONN.

On Christmas Sunday the Church School, Junior Church, and Adults joined in one service. The program consisted of songs and presentation of White Gifts by the children; a Cantata, "Chimes of the Holy Night," by the Junior Choir; Senior Choir Music; and a story and poem by the pastor, Rev. Carl R. Key. The annual Church School Christmas tree and party was held on the preceding Thursday evening.

HANK'S CHAPEL, N. C.

Rev. W. J. Andes returned from his home in the Valley of Virginia for the Christmas services at Hank's Chapel Christian Church. The offering for Superannuation amounted to $11.00. It is reported that prospects are bright for progressive work in this good church.

SANFORD, N. C.

The Sanford and Shallow Well pastorate had fine Christmas services, with several additions to the churches during the Christmas season. The pastor, Rev. F. E. Hyde, will leave following the first Sunday in February for a new pastorate at Cortland, N. Y.

PORTSMOUTH, VA.

The First Christian Church, Portsmouth, had excellent Christmas services, with six additions to the church and a Christmas Gift of $93.00 to the church by the members.

WINTER PARK, FLA.

The Congregational and Christian Church had a splendid Christmas service on Sunday morning, under the direction of Rev. V. B. Chicoine. Twenty-seven members were received into the church, while two others who expected to join were unexpectedly absent that day. The morning collection amounted to $800.00. In the afternoon the young people had charge of a vesper service, presenting a Christmas play.

DANVILLE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Third Avenue Community Christian Church of Danville, Va., met November 16, 1938, with the pastor, Rev. M. T. Sorrell, presiding.

Encouraging reports were received from all the organizations. God is greatly blessing the efforts being put forth to carry on His work. About 150 souls have been added to the church in the past year. The following financial report was given of the work for the year:

Paid out of church treasury$ 6,201.58
Paid out of S. S. treasury 277.77
Paid to Missions 403.50
Paid for operation of Faith Home	2,604.00
Paid out through S. S. classes	... 765.00
Paid for radio broadcast 1,399.00

Total paid out$11,650.85

With all bills paid to date, the treasurer's report showed a balance of $1,331.41. Faith Home, which is a home for underprivileged children, has been in operation one year and has cared for an average of 14 children through the year. We solicit your prayers for this work.

The new gospel tabernacle, being built by the church, is near completion. It will seat a congregation of 1,200, with seats for 100 in the choir. Pray for us that we may grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and that this may be a soul-saving nation.

REPORTER.

"Think how many times thou hast been mistaken in thy own judgment; and learn by that experience, not to be positive and obstinate."

CHURCH PLANT TO BE ERECTED AT LITTLE CREEK.

A new Congregational - Christian Church is to be erected at Little Creek, in Princess Anne County. The recommendation for the new church, which came in the report of the committee of plans of the Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association, in whose province is the division and apportionment of money of the association, was adopted at the forty-seventh annual session of the association meeting at the Ocean View Congregational - Christian Church on December 6, 1938.

In the election which was the other principal business activity of the session, all officers were retained with the exception of the recording secretary. Rev. Robert Lee House, of Portsmouth, Va., was elected recording secretary to succeed Miss Edna Fulcher, formerly of Norfolk, and now of Elon College, N. C.

The Rev. J. H. Dollar of Newport News was reelected president; the Rev. T. Fred Wright, of Waverly, vice-president; J. C. Jones, of Holy Neck Christian Church, near Holland, treasurer; and the Rev. Joe A. French, of the Ocean View Church, financial secretary.

Congregational-Christians and others in the Little Creek section, whom the new church will house for services, have been holding services in an old building. The work for a church building was organized a little more than a week ago, and the C. M. A., adopting the report of the committee on plans given by Col. J. E. West, of Suffolk, made an appropriation toward it.

The principal addresses of the session were delivered by the Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary of the Southern Congregational - Christian Convention, with headquarters at Elon College, N. C., and the Rev. M. S. Poulson, D. D., pastor of the Shelton Church in Portsmouth. Mr. Lester spoke on "Past Contributions and Future Prospects of the Christian Missionary Association." Dr. Poulson spoke on "Home Missions and the Local Church," urging the home church to help with the work of the C. M. A., which is mainly interested in the building of new churches and helping the weak churches.

An open discussion on the subjects "Some Things to Think About" and "Prospects of New Churches in Eastern Virginia" was conducted by the Rev. J. F. Morgan of Portlock, and "The C. M. A. and Our Rural Churches" by Rev. H. E. Crutchfield of Windsor.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

A NEW YEAR IS OURS.

In the providence of God a new year has come to your home and mine. We have the richest heritage possible to any of God's creation—the privilege of life in a new day. The old year has passed away, and a new cycle of time dawns to draw us into new currents of life. From the far-away south comes the sun to warm the earth so flowers may bloom, crops grow, and life flows freely in the veins of all living things. We have passed the anniversary of the Birth of Jesus of Nazareth and find in our hearts a new assurance of spiritual grace sufficient for every moment of life. The same God that let humble shepherds hear angelic voices on Judean hills and led wise men from the east to worship at the borrowed cradle of a Baby will surely put music in our souls and lead us to the heights of worship and successful living, if we will let Him. The God who holds the stars in His hands and causes the sun to shine on the just and the unjust alike has given to us another year in which to receive His blessings and to do His work. Friends have given us excellent reminders of their friendship and love, but God has given us a Friend to walk with us down the days of a New Year.

What we do with the time before us depends upon us. We may bind ourselves about with the past and stumble as we walk around in circles. Those who gaze upon the beauties of things past are not safe drivers of cars and are equally as sure to wreck in the realm of ideas. There are some to be found in every church who feel that nothing should be undertaken that is different from the past. A church guided by such leaders has no future. It should have a funeral, for its past is perhaps worthy of grateful remembrance, and its future is likely to be worse than was the body of Lazarus when Jesus found that he had been dead four days. There are individuals who tell with a keen sense of delight what a wonderful experience of religious fervor and salvation they felt on a certain date many long years ago, but seldom, if ever, have they something to say of what God is helping them to do now to make the world a better place in which little children can live. The experiences of the past should help to guide in present activity and in plans for the future, but cords of the past bound about an individual or a group soon become like cords of iron that will not bend. Our New Year is fresh from the hand of God. In it is all the glorious coloring of the morning and evening sun, the freedom of life let loose, and the force of a mighty stream. Surely no one will want to bind himself with chains from the past and miss the changes of the future.

The New Year challenges us to forget, to break habits, to form new thoughts, to fashion new hopes, and to launch out on the sea of time with the expectation of landing on some new and unseen shore. God is doing His best to lead us on into new experiences that go deep in sympathy and high in appreciation. Around us surges life. Beyond the seas of doubt, fear, and failure, just beyond the human horizon lies the land of faith, and love, and success. God stands there in the distance, in the dim dawn, beckoning us to come. We will up and follow, nothing doubting, for the God who gives us a New Year will surely help us to make it worth the living.

THOSE RESOLUTIONS.

Perhaps it is a little old-fashioned to make New Year's resolutions, but there may still be real value in them. It is better to make them and break them than never to make them at all. Resolutions help to clear ideas, raise ideals, and strengthen the will. Why not try a few? Include some similar to these:

I Am Resolved—

To seek diligently by Bible study, prayer, and careful thought to know God's will for my life;

To obey the best impulses that come to me regardless of personal cost;

To be courteous and kind to everybody;

To do my share of the work of my church without complaining;

To give as God gives to me—freely and gladly;

To live like I think a Christian should at all times.

OUR CHURCH YEAR.

The Southern Convention has divided the year into periods for special emphasis. January and February are designated for education, and Elon College in particular. The next four months are for missionary emphasis. Then follows religious educational emphasis and stewardship and the Orphanage.

Within this month and next it is expected that every church will give serious consideration to the matter of educating young people. The work of our college at Elon should be studied, and an offering made for the support of the college. News of the college will appear in this paper from time to time in order that the members of the churches, who are the stockholders in this million dollar enterprise, may know what is being accomplished.

Some churches have put into their budget the amount the Convention asks for all enterprises and receive money through envelopes at every service. They will take no special offering, unless it is to give opportunity for those who wish to give an additional amount above the pledge. But many of our churches will receive special offerings for the various phases of our cooperative work. Those churches should make very definite and careful plans for the offering for Elon College, the offering to be received at the most convenient time during January or February.

Why the World Needs Religion

By JOHN B. HUTTON.

I want to speak on the practical value, the utility or usefulness of religion.

Maybe we have spent so much time thinking of the power and awfulness of God and the mystery of God and religion that we have failed to see the utility and beauty of religion. Maybe we have been so concerned in religion as a means to get us to heaven that we have failed to see that it is not to convey us to heaven but to show us how to live here on earth.

The pathway leads upon the earth, but it finally leads to heaven. It should not be considered strange that laymen are found discussing religions. Laymen discuss other matters—public health, education, social problems. Why should they not also discuss religion, really the most important subject of them all.

Does the world really need religion?

What do we mean by religion? There are many religions and many definitions of religion. The word means to bind or bind back. Some would say religion means praising God. It has been defined as "Any system of faith and worship," "The recognition of God as an object of worship, love, and obedience." A professional or theological definition is "Dedicating life in supreme devotion to that order of existence and possibility that provides the highest values that can ever be actualized." It has been defined in the Bible in the Book of James (James 1:27) as follows: "Pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father is to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world . . ."

Religion to be of value must be something practical. It is not a theory; it is not a philosophy only; it is more than a code of morals. In the New Testament and in the Old Testament both it has been described as a way of life. In the New Testament (Matthew 7:12): "Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them, for this is the fulfillment of the law and the prophets." In the Book of Micah (Micah 6:8), we find: "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God." This is the definition of religion which I choose to adopt for the purpose of this address.

Religion is not a matter for use only on special occasions. It is a way or program of life:

(a) To do justly. What is it to do justly? It is to do right and do justice between man and man, between nation and nation; it is to be just; to be fair and honest in our dealings with one another. To do unto others as we would have others do unto us. To do justly, to do right is the fulfillment of the law. He who does justly, who does right with his neighbors will do no wrong to them.

(b) In this program of life we are also to live mercy. Therefore, we are to be merciful. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. We must go further than being simply just, fair, and honest with our neighbors. We are to be kind and merciful that we may obtain kindness and mercy and may receive the rewards of kindness, blessedness and happiness.

(c) We are also to walk humbly with God. This way of life has no place for pride and arrogance. These are the fruits of the Christian religion—justice, kindness, and service. Does the world need these?

What do we mean by the world? By the term we would include society and mankind. It would also include man's various activities—business and industry, political life, national life. It would also include the nations of the world. Do these need religion—the way of life emphasizing and requiring justice, kindness and service? Surely something is needed. The world and society are far from the ideal program of life outlined in the text. Strife, and controversy, strikes and riots involving business and industry indicate that something is radically wrong in the social and economic world. Wars, threats of war, distrust, suspicion, hatred and ill will in national life indicate that the nations are removed from this way of life. The trouble is that in industry and in international relations, instead of justice and mercy motivating our activities, we find greed and selfishness as the dominating influence. In many of the nations we find an entire disregard of the commandments that say, "Thou shall not covet, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shall not kill." To the nations, as well as to industry and the individual, is applied the same requirement—"Thou shall do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly."

(Where are these qualities that the world so much needs to be acquired?) They are the teachings of the Christian religion. Without the teaching of the Christian religion, the world would be controlled by greed and selfish interests and ill will. It would be controlled by hate rather than peace and love. What a deplorable condition there is in the world today.

The only solution for the problems of business and social life which are disturbing business and the social life is found in the program of the text. The requirements of Christianity is Thou shall go justly and love mercy and walk humbly. "All things whatsoever you would that men should do unto you, do you even so to them."

The nations of Europe are seeking power, seeking a place in the sun. They act on the principle that might makes right—that the nation that can may take what it wants. How can a nation become truly great? Surely not by such a course. "Righteousness exalteth a nation." Justice, right, truth, honor, righteousness in the dealings of a nation with its people, with its neighbors will exalt any nation.

America may not be entitled to be called a Christian nation. Many Americans show little interest in matters of religion. But this nation was founded by men who believed in God, and certainly the teachings of religion find a more sympathetic chord in America than in other nations. Here there is given consideration of the problems of social and economic justice. Here is exhibited much of the quality of mercy. These are all fruits of religion. This is why America is great among the nations. The world needs religion to ultimately solve the problems of war or peace. Nothing but the application of the principles of the Christian religion can change human nature so that greed (Continued on page 15)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The old year is passing today. Accounts are being balanced. The books will soon be closed. Many people have been enriched by the experiences of this year; others have been disappointed, discouraged and distressed. Some have profits and gains to their credit; others have losses and failures to be entered upon the ledger.

In passing from the old year to the new, it may be well to keep in mind that life cannot be reduced to book-keeping and ledger accounts. Profits and losses are commercial terms, useful in business, but misleading in computing spiritual values. Too much emphasis is placed to day upon making profits. Financial losses are magnified beyond their relative importance. Consequently society has fallen into the habit of measuring individuals by the profit and loss method. On this basis, the person who makes money is successful; those who lose money, or fail to make it, are marked as failures.

The paramount question, at the end of the year, should not be: "What have I gained in material things?" but, "what have I gained in spiritual personality, and what have I done for the kingdom of God?" It is important that material things have proportionate place in planning a personal or social program. Man is responsible for the stewardship of money. But he is also accountable for the stewardship of his time and personal talents. It is a fearful thing to live for the space of one year, and not be able to record some spiritual advancement in character and in service.

It is not difficult to record financial transactions. Every school boy and girl should be taught to keep records of what they receive, give and spend. In the writer's desk there are records running back to his college days. For example from September 1, 1897, to June 6, 1898, expenses in the Senior Year at Elon College amounted to $176.00. That seems incredible to College students in this year, 1938. Strict accounts were kept and rigid economy was practiced. It is a simple matter, at the end of the year to take an inventory and make a record of gains or losses. Every person should try to earn, learn to save and rejoice to give.

It is not easy to make an accounting of our spiritual life and service. Looking back over the years, it seems difficult to remember many good deeds. One does not know the influence of words and personal living. The minister preaches a sermon, and goes back to his study unable to make any reliable estimate of his labor. It is better for him not to know. He is not laboring for himself, but for his Lord and Master. The Lord knows and keeps the account. And if the man of God is faithful to his task, and sincere in his ministry, he may cheerfully leave the harvest accounts in the hands of a gracious God, who will, one day, open the books and give adequate reward where it is deserved.

And so we come to the end of this old year. Gratitude fills our hearts when we remember how good the Lord has been to us. Remorse and penitence brings tears to our eyes when we recall our mistakes, our sins and our failures. We plead to be forgotten. We renew our vows of consecration. They may be broken again tomorrow. If so, we will try again, hoping and trusting that we shall some day be triumphant and victorious. We say "Good-bye old year. Happy New Year." May it be more than happy for you. May it be rich in fellowship, fruitful in character building and comprehensive in service.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS NOT GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

It is the official plan of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches to support her institutions largely by the apportionment plan. A budget for the Convention is determined. This budget is in turn apportioned to the various conferences composing the Convention. The conference in turn apportions its apportionment to the various local churches constituting that conference. Each interest of the Convention is given a share in the apportionments, and is assigned a period during the year in which these apportionments are supposed to be raised.

January and February is the college period. The total apportionment for the college is $12,500. This amount has been apportioned to the local churches of the several conferences. Each church, with the exception of the Western North Carolina Conference, is apprized of the amount it is expected to raise for the college. Earnest and honest efforts have been put forth by the college administration, hoping to induce every church to raise its apportionments in full. For the past five years, amounts contributed by the Sunday schools and churches for the college have increased gradually. This is most encouraging. However, indications are that the total amount received by the college from the churches for 1937-38 will be slightly less than that for 1936-37. The Eastern Virginia Conference and the North Carolina and Virginia Conference are the only ones that have reported to the college this year. The North Carolina and Virginia Conference shows a slight decrease. I am calling attention to these facts at the beginning of the College Period with the hope that the ministers, churches, and all who are interested may put forth special efforts to see that the college may receive its proper support from the churches. The college is in excellent condition financially and otherwise, which is the result of the faithful cooperation of pastors, churches and friends. I know all appreciate this fact and are willing to double their efforts that the college may be properly supported. I want to call attention, however, to the fact that at this particular time there are two campaigns on for the college. One is for the regular conference apportionments that go to the current funds for the support of the college. The other is the Golden Anniversary Campaign that is being conducted for funds with which to pay the remaining indebtedness of the college. These funds are for two separate purposes, and all contributions must be credited to the purpose for which they are given. The conference fund is a permanent and continuous plan for the support of the college. The Golden Anniversary Campaign is for a specific purpose and will terminate Commencement, 1940.

The purpose of this article is to call attention to the annual campaign for conference apportionments for the college and to urge ministers, churches, and all to cooperate in this one effort to raise the entire college apportionment. Heretofore we have raised barely half of the amount apportioned to the churches. The full amount is necessary if the college is to be properly supported.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Many times you have heard this fine phrase, "Happy New Year." What do you think it means? You know what New Year is, of course. It means the beginning again. It means a new start. It means that we have had Christmas, which finished up with rejoicing all the work of last year, and now we are beginning another year full of hope and joy.

"Happy New Year" means that all through the coming year the things we do are to be kindly, helpful, so that joy can come to those who live about us. There will be nothing mean, cruel, and hateful in what we do and say. To be really happy one must try to be like Jesus, whose birthday we have just celebrated. He was a happy boy and a happy man and brought much happiness to other people.

It is a Happy New Year that the editor of your church paper is wishing for each of you boys and girls who read this paper this week and every week throughout the year.

F. C. LESTER.

A NEW LESSON IN THE NEW YEAR.

The New Year was just a few days old, and all day long Paul had been teasing his sister, pulling her hair ribbon, hiding her doll and upsetting her blocks. She didn't cry. She only begged, "Please don't. I never treat you that way." Yet he went right on doing everything that he could think of to tease her.

"I've put your scrapbook in the goldfish pool," he taunted.

"Oh, Paul," the little girl ran to the pool. "I had pasted all my new post cards in it!"

She jerked the book out of the water. "All the colors have soaked out of the cards." She could hardly keep from crying while she spread the book out in the sun. "You can't have any of my cards," Paul boasted. "Now, I'll have more than you'll have."

"I'll give her some of mine," someone behind them spoke and surprised Paul. They turned and saw a neighbor boy coming toward the pool. "I heard you, Paul. I know you soaked her book."

Paul felt ashamed when he saw that his friend knew what he had done. He wouldn't let on, though, as if he cared. "I've seen you tease your sister," he began to quarrel with the boy.

"I used to do that," the neighbor said. "I don't any more. Once my sister was sick and I had to play by myself. I was so lonesome that I never did tease her again."

"Boys ought to be good to their sisters, oughtn't they?" Paul's sister spoke up. "I guess Paul will be when he is bigger."

"I'm almost seven now." Paul didn't want anyone to think that he wasn't big enough to take care of his sister.

"I'll come right back," the neighbor boy called as he ran home. In a very few minutes he returned. He brought with him a scrapbook pasted full of cards and pictures. He handed it to Paul's sister. "You can keep it. Sister and I fixed it. She said I could give it to you to keep."

"Give it back," Paul begged his sister. "You can have my book, because I spoiled yours." Paul was not going to let his friend pay for the wrong that he had done his own sister.

The little girl handed it back. "Mama always says that everyone must pay for his own naughtiness. If you gave me this book for what Paul did, that wouldn't be right."

"We'll fix more pictures in my book, do it together, won't we, sister?" Paul said was now going to see that his sister was treated fair. "Then we'll both own the book."

"Children!" Paul's Mother cried in alarm. "Whatever have you done to the goldfish? The fish are sick. All turned on their backs. Paul ran quickly to his mother. His fish sick, and how he had always enjoyed watching them. At first he thought that he'd not tell what had been done. "I dropped sister's—" his voice trembled. There were his sister and his neighbor looking him squarely in the face. He knew they'd not tell.

"What is it?" His mother's voice was firm.

"I put sister's scrapbook in the pool just to tease her."

"Run and bring a basin of fresh water," his mother told him. He quickly obeyed and helped put the fish in it, while his mother drained the colored water from the pool. It was almost half an hour before the fish were able to swim. Paul knew then that he had been punished for teasing his sister. He didn't say anything about it, though. He only thanked the neighbor boy for offering the book and he and his sister fixed their own book.—Evangelical Messenger.

THE BLESSED NEW YEAR.

Invest a little kindness
In someone's life today.
Scatter a little sunshine
Along some clouded way;
Drop a kind word, well-spoken,
Till some tired face has smiled;
Give an unlooked-for blessing
To some unfavored child.

Plant roses in some garden
That is unused to flowers;
Weave a song through the silence
Of some heart's songless hours;
Into the hands of longing
Some little tribute lay,
And you will long remember
One blessed New Year's Day.

—Grace Edwin Flynn.

A BOY'S FRIEND.

Aunt Julia thinks I ought to turn
A new leaf New Year's Day,
While Mother says with such a son
Her hair will soon be gray.
Poor Grandma claims my whistle
Is the cause of all her woe;
But Grandpa smiles—he used to be
A boy, too, long ago.

THE PERFECT TRIBUTE.

One wonders how many CHRISTIAN SUN readers are familiar with the incident which years ago in print bore the title given above: The Perfect Tribute. It is an incident worth knowing because of its far-reaching significance. Two days after President Abraham Lincoln had delivered his now famous Gettysburg speech (said to be the most perfect public address ever delivered before an audience in the history of our country and it was only three minutes in delivery) the President left the White House and went to the soldier's hospital in Washington to visit the wounded there. Entering a dark room where lay a soldier boy, blinded by a wound received on the battlefield, President Lincoln bent over him inquiring as to his condition. The soldier boy not knowing who it was said, "Mr., have you read, or has anyone read to you, the President's speech delivered at Gettysburg two days ago? It is in my opinion the best speech ever delivered on such an occasion and will live and is immortal." "Young man," said the President, "you are evidently mistaken for I was present on the occasion and when the orator of the day, the great Edward Everett, had finished his oration of an hour the applause was tremendous and continuous, and then when the President, following the great orator, arose and spoke his address of three minutes and sat down there was not even one handclap, or the first movement of applause, except that a great audience remained in absolute silence as if in sympathy with the President who had seemingly failed."

And then the young man forgetting his wounds and blindness said, "Mr., did you ever hear anybody applaud the Lord's Prayer? The perfect tribute is not in noise, but in the silence of and the deep emotions of the heart." It is told that the President quietly squeezed the soldier boy's hand and left the room in silence. This is called the Perfect Tribute.

One could but think of the Perfect Tribute now and then, especially during the happy Christmas Season now past. Thousands saw fit to express their feelings, their applause, their tribute with revelry. The explosion of fireworks even on the "Silent Night of the Child's Advent" into the world, and of course others so far forgot themselves and the occasion as to be boisterous in debauchery. At any rate Christmas was and remains the great event of the year. The children will have it no other way and after all in things that pertain to real life, "A little child shall lead them."

My good physician who still comes to me about once a week to discover, if he can, to what extent I am taking, or not taking his physic and other orders, called me over the telephone four days after Christmas stating that he himself was not very well and would not come unless I felt that his service was absolutely essential. I replied, saying that my grandchildren had spent the holidays with me and had just left, and if he would write and have them brought back for another week or two, my conviction was that I could dispense with his services altogether. Those precious children brought a joy and gladness into our home with their innocent and wholesome prattle and frolic that nothing else could give. The mother apologized on Christmas morning for their coming down so early to get their stockings and the toys and confectiionery that they knew Old Santa had put in those stockings hanging by the open fireplace. My reply to that mother was that her apology was all out of order, since the joy and innocent conversation of those three children over the contents of their stockings and the goodness of Santa Claus was sweeter than any Christmas Carols I had heard over the radio. It was even so. It takes children in the home to make real Christmas there.

And so the Christmas spirit lives in the world and is increasing in volume and in expression. This morning I have a real Christmas gift of a money order for $40 from a young lady who earns her money and makes this donation to missions that she may share the message of our Lord, the real genuine message of Christmas, with some who yet do not know the Christ Child. Her's, too, is something of a perfect tribute, since she will not allow her name to be given and wishes only that this Christmas gift of hers shall be sent to help carry the story of the Christ Child, in whose name we celebrate Christmas, to those who have never heard that blessed message the angels sang to the shepherds on the Judean hills on that first Christmas Eve.

Cordially and gratefully,

J. O. ATKINSON.

GOLDEN JUBILEE ANNIVERSARY.

The First Congregational Church, St. Petersburg, Fla., Rev. John P. Jockinsen, minister, celebrated its Golden Jubilee Anniversary on October 7, by dedicating a bronze memorial tablet to those members and friends who had given large and generous gifts, reducing the bonded indebtedness from $83,124.50 to $37,900.00. Another bronze tablet was dedicated to the memory of Rev. David Gillison Watt, the first pastor from 1885 to 1889, under whose ministry the church was organized in a railway coach on October 7, 1888. This tablet was presented by his son, David A. Watt. The women of the church had a memorial candle lighting service which netted $1,700 toward the church indebtedness.

On December 8, the church commemorated the fiftieth anniversary of the incorporation of the church. A large and enthusiastic congregation greeted Dr. Kerrison Juniper, a former pastor, at the Wednesday evening service, which was followed by a happy reception in the parlors. On Friday evening Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, superintendent of the Southeast area, was the guest speaker at a lovely banquet served by the young people. Four charter members were present, and all those who had united with the church before 1900 responded to toasts with their reminiscences.

In his anniversary sermon the Rev. Mr. Jockinsen pointed out that the St. Petersburg Church with less than one-fourth of the membership of the larger churches and a very limited staff ranked fourth among the Congregational Churches of the United States in attendance as recorded in the 1937 Year Book. That it was also entitled to some distinction for its evening services, averaging 457 during the season, and its multiple services, meetings, and activities, averaging from 28 to 32 per week with a total attendance of 99,729 people. He also pointed out that the people had contributed $576,187 to the building and maintenance of the church, $19,333 to local benevolences, and $32,303 to missions. During its half century of existence 1,517 members have been received, 2,170 children reached through the church school, and 790 youth in the young people's organizations. The St. Petersburg church seeks not only to minister to the large numbers of winter visitors who come from the north, but also to build a real church for the people who live there the year round.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor. Elon College, N. C.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

We hope that each of you will truly have a Happy New Year. By this we mean one that will be made up of things which will give you lasting happiness—not merely a "good time" and momentary freedom from all cares, but activities which will provide a firm foundation for happiness in the years to come. Each of you has a "philosophy of life"—even though you may not recognize it as such—which is made of your ideas and ideals for yourself. As you plan to make the coming year one of happiness, it will help if you will take "time out" to consider seriously the direction in which you are going. A truly happy year must be one filled with service for others as you attempt to follow the example of Jesus.

One poet has expressed his philosophy of life thus:

"My Creed."

This is my creed: To do some good,
To bear my ills without complaining,
To press on as a brave man should
For honors that are worth the gaining;
To seek no profits where I may,
By winning them, bring grief to others;
To do some service day by day
In helping on my toiling brothers.

This is my creed: To close my eyes
To little faults of those around me;
To strive to be when each day dies
Some better than the morning found me;
To ask for no unearned applause,
To cross no river until I reach it;
To see the merit of the cause
Before I follow those who preach it.

This is my creed: To try to shun
The sloughs in which the foolish wallow;
To lead where I may be the one
Whom weaker men should choose to follow.
To keep my standards always high,
To find my task and always do it;
This is my creed—I wish that I Could learn to shape my action to it.
—S. E. Kiser.

EASTERN VIRGINIA OFFICERS MEET.

The executive committee of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship meets at regular intervals to make plans for that group. At their recent meeting the officers began working on a plan whereby every church in the conference will have a young person as its representative on a sub-executive committee. It is hoped that this "Key-Workers' Council" can meet twice a year, in order to exchange ideals and make suggestions for the whole Fellowship.

Rev. Arnold Slater, pastor of the Holy Neck Christian Church, has been asked by the executive committee to serve as pastor-counselor, filling out the term of Rev. Carl R. Key, who has recently moved to Connecticut.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE NEW MEETING PLACE.

The young people's department of the Durham Christian Church has a

IN 1939 OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S GROUP RESOLVES—

1. To have planned programs.
2. To broaden our interests by securing program materials from various sources including "The Pilgrim Highroad."
3. To study about and help support some missionary project.
4. To devote some time during Lent to the development of "personal religious living."
5. To bring new young people into our group—those who are not connected with any other church.
6. To cooperate with young people of other churches in programs and projects.
7. To become interested in the community in which we live and do something to improve it.
8. To contribute in time, money, and talents to the local church of which we are a part.
9. To become more familiar with the working organization of our local church and of our denomination.
10. To cooperate with our Conference Pilgrim Fellowship officers by answering their letters and by using the material they send to us.
11. To carry on some special activities during Pilgrim Fellowship Week, January 29 - February 5.
12. To share with other young people our accomplishments and goals through sending a report of them to "The Christian Sun."

new "home." Our church in Durham recently purchased an adjoining brick building, which is used by the young people under the direction of Mr. J. L. Crumpton, department superintendent. It is interesting to know that this annex was used years ago by the Methodists for religious services, has been a rooming house for thirty-two years, and now is being used for its original purpose. It is well suited for this, containing six class rooms and an auditorium.

More than sixty are enrolled in this department. A 10-piece orchestra has been organized, which adds much to the opening program each Sunday. The officers of the young people's department are: Ollie Jones, president; Paul Moize, first vice-president; Geraldine Elder, second vice-president; Stephen Harward, secretary-treasurer.

FOR YOU.

[Especially for North Carolina and Virginia Conference Young People.]

No doubt you've been aware of the great activity of your officers of late! The materials which your local group has received, and the materials which are being prepared for you are the results of a great many hours of thought and work on someone's part. These people who have been so interested in You have made busy hours even busier by taking time to be of some service to your local group. In these days when time is at such a premium for everyone, don't you think the least we can do in appreciation of their interest is to spend some of our own busy moments in thought and work, so that well-rounded programs may be an actuality in our own groups? Booklets with suggestions for local Pilgrim Fellowship work have very recently been sent to each of our churches. Each of us can do his part toward seeing that these ideas are considered by the officers of our own group; and hence help our officers to make reality of that which is best in their dreams for Pilgrim Fellowship. Since a chain is only so strong as its weakest link, a great opportunity for service is YOURS!

If you would like to have material and information in addition to what you have already received, just call on your officers. They would like so much to be of real assistance to you.

THE NEW YEAR.

Who comes dancing over the snow,
His soft little feet all bare and rosy?
Open the door, though the wild winds blow,

Take the child in and make him cozy.
Take him in and hold him dear,
He is the wonderful, glad New Year.

—Dina Mulock.

REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

PETER COMMENDED AND REBUKED.

LESSON II—JANUARY 8, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matthew 16:16.

LESSON: Matthew 16:13-25.

The writer of these Notes missed last Sunday's lesson—he took a vacation from writing notes at Christmas—and thus he did not have the opportunity to make comments on the Call of Simon Peter. Suffice it to say that in response to the call of Christ, Peter forsook all and followed him. It was the beginning of a long and honorable discipleship, although it was marred by Peter's denial of his Lord. But Peter became one of the most dependable and illustrious disciples of Jesus, and he has become one of the world's immortals. It is the thrilling, and oft-repeated story of Christ's transforming power and influence, his ability gradually to make men grow into a new measure of the stature of His fullness.

Today's lesson takes place some two years after the call of Peter. They had been years of high privilege, for Peter and the other disciples had been intimately associated with Jesus, had heard His words, seen His works, and had come to feel that in some way He was different, that in Him God had come near, that in Him God had made himself known in a hitherto unequalled way. This had not come all at once; it had been a process of growth. And then they came one day to Caesarea Philippi, in the northern part of Galilee, in the foothills of Mt. Hermon. The time was ripe for the new advance of Christ and the new adventure for the disciples.

What Think Ye of Christ?

"Who do men say that the Son of Man is?" Men have given various answers as to who Christ is. Some look upon Him as a great Man, as a great Teacher, as a great Prophet—even the Mohammedans accept Him as a prophet, a great Philosopher, a great Example. He is all of these, but He is more. The denominations or divisions of Christianity which have taken the view that Jesus is anything less than the Christ, the Son of the living God, have never grown, or become vigorous factors in the religious life of the world.

The Christ, the Son of the Living God.

Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God—thus replied Peter. It was not snap judgment, although it was probably spoken spontaneously. It came as a flash of divine insight—Jesus Himself said that God had revealed it unto Peter. Here is the evidence of Jesus himself to His divine character and divine mission. There is no use to look for another—Jesus was God's Anointed, the One-Who-Should-Come.

Upon This Rock.

"Thou art Peter, and upon this rock, I will build my church; and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it." There is much division of opinion over the true interpretation of these words.

Here is one you can take or leave: It was not Peter upon whom the church was founded—Paul said the church was made up of the "apostles and prophets, Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone. It was upon that confession, that understanding of, and allegiance to Christ as the Son of the living God, that would give stability to the Church.

It is Christ's church. The word church was used only twice by Jesus. It means literally "the called out," and that is what it should mean, those who have been called out by Christ, who are in the world but not of it.

And Jesus says that the powers of death, of the unseen spiritual world shall not prevail against His church. The church is not dead and it is not going to die. God may have to purge it, punish it, purify it, but the church of Christ shall endure. It is His church. He is building it, the forces of death shall not prevail against it. Wherefore let us be of good courage.

The Keys of the Kingdom.

"I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." But not to keep men out, but rather to let men in. Nor in any exclusive sense. In the gospel of salvation which they were to preach, Peter and the other disciples as well, had the keys to the kingdom of heaven. There is no evidence that the keys which Peter received were transferable, and that he could or ever did give them to any supposed successor of his, as the Roman Catholic Church claims.

The Shadow of the Cross.

Already the shadow of the cross had fallen across his path. And He would have His disciples learn the deeper meaning of His Messiahship. "From that time began Jesus to show unto His disciples that He must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed." God's plan of redemption involved a Cross. Saviorship involved suffering. Christ could only save others by giving Himself. But it all seemed so far-fetched to Peter. He and the disciples thought that Jesus was going to establish an earthly kingdom. The thought that this One whom they had just hailed as the Christ was to be killed, just did not fit in with their scheme of the eternal fitness of things. But it is the divine plan. It has always been the divine plan—Christ was the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

The Thing of Men, Not the Things of God.

For the moment the Tempter came back again to turn Jesus from the divinely appointed plan. Peter's suggestion that it should never happen to Jesus was an insidious temptation. It was the wisdom of the world, "look out for Number One," "do not put yourself to any trouble for others," "realize yourself rather than sacrifice yourself." But Jesus knew it was the word of man and not the will of God. He promptly put the temptation—and how often temptations come from our inner circle of friends—behind Him, and with a kindly rebuke, he asserts again the divine plan and program.

The Condition of True Discipleship.

"If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." The true disciple makes Christ not self the center of His life. He turns from self to Christ. He seeks to give, not to get. He loses life, but to find it.

PITY THE POOR PREACHER.

The preacher has a great time. If his hair is gray, he is too old. If he is a young man, he has not had experience enough. If he has ten children, he has too many; if he has none, he is setting a bad example. If his wife sings in the choir, she is presuming; if she does not, she is not interested in her husband's work. If the preacher reads from notes, he is a bore; if he speaks extemporaneously, he isn't deep enough. If he stays at home in his study, he doesn't mix enough with the people; if he is seen around the streets, he ought to be at home getting up a good sermon. If he calls on the poor, he is playing to the grandstand; if he calls at the homes of the wealthy, he is an aristocrat. Whatever he does, some one could have told him how to do better.—Virginia Lutheran.

MONDAY.

WANTED.

"In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy path."—Psalm 3:6.

This text needs no explanation. Simple obedience will be a revelation. But like the saying of grace at the table, we wonder if this religious exercise is being forgotten. We attended a birthday party recently which reminded us of this. Usually birthday parties and such like are occasions of merriment and fun-making and with no color of spiritual acknowledgement. This one, also was a good time. But before the party began to break up, the hostess announced a little program. One of the party spoke religiously regarding the promise and power of youth. Another spoke on the force of parental training in youth, and prayers were said for the persons whom the party honored.

Prayer—Our Father, we beg forgiveness for our lack in acknowledging Thee in our ways. Help us to do better. Bless all who do. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE COMPASSION OF CHRIST TODAY.

"He was moved with compassion for them."—Luke 9:35-38.

Our text is merely a statement covering the reference given. The sheltering homes of our country for the homeless, the invalid, the aged, the crippled, are caring for thousands of men, women and children. Lodging them, feeding them, clothing them, entertaining them and training them. The astounding fact is the preponderance of young people being so cared for—only twenty-two per cent being over fifty. This work is the work of our Lord Jesus Christ, and Christian culture is at a very low ebb when it fails.

Prayer—O Shepherd of humanity, give unto us a great measure of Thy love for men. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHERE ARE WE GOING.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psalm 46.

The following comment is taken from William T. Ellis in the Christian Herald. He says, "As one watches the ceaseless movement of automobiles all over the land, the conviction grows that this is an age of motion, and we are moving at a thrilling pace. But where are we going?"

The Scriptures have nothing to say about "hustling for God." But it abounds in injunctions to "Rest," to "Wait," to "Abide," and specifically states that "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength."

Prayer—Our Father, we love our automobiles and we love life. It is the life that Thou hast given us. But teach us the lesson of quietness, and calm our hurried souls. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FAITH WITHOUT SIGHT.

"By patient continuance in well doing."—Rom. 2:7.

Faith is usually without sight, but we arrive at the object of our faith by the evidences along the way. We stand upon the peak of the mountain fifty miles away from the city, and we take one long look at its beauty and contemplate its interest. We descend the mountain to travel to the city knowing that we shall not see it again until we get close to it. Down in the valleys, winding midst the hills, we travel on. Over many difficult places, and around dangerous cliffs, we travel on knowing that we are closer and closer to the city.

Thus it is with the Christian life. There are mountain peaks where we have visions. But most of the time we are traveling the road of life in the valleys and midst the mountains that hide our objective. Difficult days come when there is nothing to lure us on. But still we are on our way. If we continue we shall get there.

Prayer—O God, for the dark and visionless stretches of life we pray that we may have the courage to continue. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"FRET NOT."

(Psalm 37:1.)

Forgetting heaven's viewpoint of life and the basic essentials of living, we are prone to fret over everything that does not click with our plans, and we exclaim, "You can't imagine the trouble I have."

When we pause to look at it aright, perhaps most of the cares that fret us look silly from the heavenly viewpoint. Sometimes it takes sorrows and the impression of major cares to reveal the triviality of the little things that worry us.

Prayer—O God, grant unto us a sense of humor that will disregard the little vexations of life. Open Thou our eyes to life's realities. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WE ALL BELONG.

"We have fellowship one with another."—I John 1:7.

William T. Ellis tells us of an effort of his to assist a widow woman in securing a job. At first she was received inhospitably. Then, the gentleman happened to notice her dress and the fraternity ring she wore, and managed to say, "I see, we both belong." She got the job.

It is good to belong to some organization that recommends us to others. On the other hand, we wish that every one could see others as man to man and soul to soul, and there recognize divine likeness and brotherly obligations.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for the helpful fellowship of friends. Help us to give more of ourselves to Thee and to them. Amen.

NONE OTHER NAME.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"This is the stone that was set at nought of you builders; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4: 11, 12.

Men have sought many ways to preserve their civilizations and themselves. By some other name than Jesus they have sought to be saved. Early in Genesis we hear men saying, "Go to it, let us build a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven." And so they build. They are seeking a shorter route to the city celestial. And how well they build! For Babel is the beginning of great Babylon, whose walls were eventually, according to Heroditus, fourteen miles in length, and at least seventy-five feet high; walls eighty-five feet thick, and with bronze gates. And their buildings were in keeping with their walls. Their hanging gardens became one of the seven wonders of the world. But one night in a mighty feast, of all their royalty, and their high and mighty men, they saw written on the walls of the court above their heads in letters of light: "Weighed in the balances, and found wanting." Great builders they were, but they had rejected the true corner-stone of lasting civilization. Ancient Babylon has long since been trampled under dust.

The great Egyptians sought to immortalize their civilization in the great pyramids. They sought to preserve it in tombs. And so they built pyramids, great and small, at least seventy-five of them, and we are told that the greatest of them are now but smoldering mounds of Egyptian mud-blocks, weathering down to the level of the ground. Some of them still stand, but they, too, are yielding to time. The great pyramid of the Cheops, once 482 feet high is now only 451 feet, and so it goes. So great are they as to be called one of the seven wonders of the world, and yet the civilization which they sought to preserve has long since perished. You builders, you have missed the chief corner-stone.

The Greeks took another tack toward preserving their civilization. Education will do it, they said. Culture, learning, truth (if indeed they had found the whole, real truth) will do it. And so they taught the world. They were great builders. Much of their learning still lives, but their ancient, and wonderful civilization is gone. They furnished the world with their Socrates, and his disciples, Plato and Aristotle. They furnished the world with their mathematics, logic, philosophies; with their history, poetry, music, painting, and sculpture. If culture of the mind alone could preserve a civilization they were fast on the road. There was something they lacked.

Rome would build not only on the seven hills of their beautiful southern peninsular, but also on the seven hills of past civilizations. They, great builders as they were, had all that had gone on before with which to work. They would surely succeed in making an eternal city set upon its seven hills. Here at last was the direct route to the city celestial. They made slaves of the Greeks, and commanded them to teach their children all the culture of the past civilizations. They armed their young men, built their navies, built great roads through their colonies, and by law and force took possession all about. It was in a despised corner of one of their puppet nations that Jesus Himself, the chief corner-stone was born. Jesus lives, but their empire has long since yielded to the ravages of conquest. The chief corner-stone was set at naught by their great builders.

In quite another realm it is illustrated that their is "none other name under heaven given." There were those who gather themselves at the foot of the hill of God, Mt. Sinai, and received in stone the ten commandments, and the laws that went with them, which laws and commandments are still imperishably great, not destroyed by Jesus, but fulfilled by Him, however, even these ten commandments were not the name by which the world might be saved. They are not abrogated, but the civilization of even the Chosen Race has been scattered to the ends of the earth. We know that perfect obedience to the great ten commandments must have fulfillment in love of Jesus.

Even the organized religion of those God-confessing Jews became a stumbling block. How Jesus scorched their Pharisaism! Great builders, but they drove Jesus out of their synagogues, and out of their great temple. Indeed, they are the very ones to whom Peter was speaking when our text was uttered: "This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." They had set at nought Jesus. It does look like a religion that worshipped the one true God, had the ten commandments, and the law and the prophets, and the organized worship of the Judistic religion should have survived.

But more startling still is the fact that the church itself may "set at nought" the true corner-stone! Witness the Dark Ages, work of the church. Witness the selling of religion like a food commodity at the corner store! Witness the burning of Christians, and Bibles, by the church. Witness the erection of crosses and the spilling of blood by the church. Yes, even the church, ah! but not the true church, lodged in the humble hearts of faithful men and women, even the ecclesiastical systems may reject the Christ, and become as decadent as Babylon.

Look now at the modern panaceas for the salvation of present civilization. What builders we have today! German nazism, Italian facism, Russian communism, Japan Emperor and empire worship, China ancestor worship, India's philosophy of Nirvana, the Western World's materialism, and its humanism, each one of these has its prophets, but none of them put their trust in the "only name under heaven given." We simply cannot escape it, the Name of Jesus is the Name for the world's salvation.

UP ABOVE THINGS.

"Seek those things which are above."—Col. 3: 1.

This Scripture is the secret of the new birth. This is the high day of the week for finding that secret.

I have a friend who says that when he goes to the city he loves to take a room on the top floor of the highest building, a room that is above the noise of the city and has a long view. "A little room on this floor is better than a suite down below."

Religion raises us above the disturbances of life and warms the heart to eternal things. Jesus found His expression in the elevation of the mountains or the desert retreats. Let us follow Him and live this day in trying to rise to the heights. Amen.

"If you would be somebody in the world begin being yourself."

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

This Christmas season was one of the happiest the children have had in a long time. The First Church, Norfolk, Va., and the Franklin Christian Church sent presents for each child. All of them got as many as two presents and different friends sent presents for some individual children also. All the buildings had a Christmas tree beautifully decorated. The children in each building had a really beautiful program of Christmas songs and readings, which added much joy and happiness to the occasion. Christmas Day here was clear and just cold enough to make it pleasant. All the children were well and able to enjoy it.

Different friends sent in candy, oranges, and apples so all could have plenty. We have some chickens that we did not use at Thanksgiving and we gave the children a good chicken dinner on Christmas Day. The behavior was almost perfect and nothing happened to mar the happy occasion.

We are grateful to the churches and individuals who had a part in making the Christmas season a happy one for all of our children. Our financial report this week did not push us up to our goal. We have one more report to make before we close our books for 1938. We hope our financial report will put us across the goal line.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS.

On Friday night before the Christmas holidays the Helen Keller Literary Society of Thorsby Institute, under the direction of Miss Kathryn Foss, gave a beautiful pageant: "Christmas Stars." The public was invited.

Mr. H. R. Maddox, Registrar at Thorsby Institute for fifteen years, has resigned to become County Superintendent of Education, beginning January 1. Mr. Maddox is a graduate of Thorsby Institute and Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga. He holds a Master's Degree from the University of North Carolina.

Miss Onita Klingelhoefer, teacher of Mathematics and Bible at Thorsby Institute for ten years, was married on December 12, at Lanett, Ala., by Rev. L. L. Stanley, formerly pastor of Thorsby Congregational Church. The church in Thorsby is still without a minister.

School closed December 21 for the Christmas vacation, and reopened on January 4.

WHY THE WORLD NEEDS RELIGION.

and selfishness shall be replaced by justice and mercy; and the application of justice and mercy alone can settle all the problems of business, social, industrial, and international life and the issue of war or peace.

When the Christian religion shall have been given a fair trial in the lives of men and nations, then it shall come to pass that this old world shall be changed to one great temple wherein shall dwell justice and righteousness and where peace and happiness shall be the possession of all.

It is in order to promote the peace and happiness of the world that the world needs religion.

Announcing the Convention's Educational Period

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches in preparing its calendar has designated January and February as the Convention's educational period, the period in which emphasis is placed upon Christian higher education. This program culminates in Elon College, the Convention's institution of higher learning. The college was established by the church. The church owns and controls the college. Through the years the local churches of the Convention have been asked to support the college. Each church is apportioned a definite amount to raise. January and February are the months in which the local church is asked to raise its apportionment for the college. The local church is to decide its own method by which the required amount is to be raised. Some churches raise by assessments; others raise through benevolent budgets; others raise through public offerings on special days.

January 22 has been designated as Elon College Day on which all churches are asked to put forth a conscientious and persistent effort to raise their college apportionments. There are decided advantages in raising the college apportionments during this designated period. First, the college will have its money when it is needed most. Second, this particular portion of the conference apportionments will be raised and will not necessarily be considered further during the year. Third, it will encourage the church to raise its apportionments for other causes which will be most helpful for the entire program of the church.

The college gladly offers its facilities in assisting any church that may desire help in an effort to raise its apportionments during this particular period. Please do not hesitate to send in your request.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1939.

NUMBER 2.

What Is the Coming Year?

It is a door
By which we reach new fields
Of service for our God and fellowman;
A door by which we may explore Wide spheres of usefulness our world to bless
And reap the sheaves of God's word of witness yields.

It is a task
Set by the Master of our souls;
A little part of our life's work below,
And so we ask the holy wisdom which alone controls
Our labor, teaching what and where to sow;
That the year, at its end,
May show God's glory and man's profit blend.

It is a book,
With many pages and yet all white,
On which to write
The history of thought and deed and word,
In this new group of days.
We pray Thee, Lord,
As Thou shalt look
Upon the book, when written o'er,
May all be to Thy praise.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

All ministers and church workers who can reasonably do so should attend the Convocation of Churches in Durham, N. C., January 17-19. Highlights from the program will be found in this paper.

The mid-winter meetings of Congregational and Christian Church officials will be held at Evanston, Ill., January 20-27. The Southern Convention will be represented by its Promotional Secretary.

Every church will surely want to do its part for Elon College. Some will need to take an offering in order to reach the quota. Others write it into their budget. It is our college and we ought to support it.

Our ministers of North Carolina held their regular monthly meeting at Elon College Monday morning of this week. The discussion centered around Evangelism and the Negro problem of the South. It was a good meeting, but the attendance was small.

The Publications Committee met on Tuesday of this week and spent considerable time considering the problems of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and other matters. The Conferences have voted to work for new subscriptions. Your committee is hoping that the churches will take this matter seriously and get the number of subscriptions apportioned to each church.

THANKS.

I wish to thank the members of the Baraca and Philathea classes of Holy Neck Church for the nice basket of fruit sent us for Christmas, assuring them that it was very much appreciated, and is being enjoyed. Also I wish to thank the Missionary Society for the beautiful Christmas card which was much appreciated, and hope that all have had a very merry Christmas and that the New Year will bring us a greater joy and prosperity.

J. T. Cross,
Holland, Va.

NEWPORT (SHENANDOAH), VA.

On the evening of December 23, the Newport Sunday school presented a Christmas pageant entitled "Seeking the Heart of Christmas," which was directed by Mrs. A. W. Andes, who came and worked so faithfully with us. We enjoyed having our former pastor, Billy Andes, to visit us with his mother.

Our new pastor, Rev. S. C. Scannell, of Fairfax, Va., arrived on the field January 1, preaching at Newport Sunday morning to a large audience.

We are hoping the work in this group of churches under Brother Scannell's leadership will prove a blessing to the building up of God's kingdom here on earth.

We reorganized our Sunday school December 25, 1938; we reelected Leonard Higgs for superintendent, Willie Smith for assistant, Mrs. Maggie Hitt for treasurer, and Miss Trilla Housden for secretary. We have over one hundred pupils on roll.

REPORTER.

AN APPRECIATION.

Just after Christmas Mr. E. A. Hillyard, his daughter, Miss Charlotte, and Mr. Ben Brannon, representing a group of friends of the Mayland community, visited us, bringing not only good will and friendship, but a quantity of good things for the pantry. As there were no names on the packages, we take this opportunity for thanking the donors. Words cannot express our appreciation of this showing of friendship.

We would also like to express our appreciation of every card received, as well as kind thoughts that we feel many of our friends have entertained.

We cannot see all our friends in the various communities in which we have lived. Nor can we write all of them, but we can hold them in kindly remembrance and remember them at the throne of grace. We pray that God may abundantly bless all of our friends (and everybody) during the year that will have dawned ere this is read, not only with temporal blessings, but with the richer spiritual gifts and blessings.

R. L. WILLIAMSON AND WIFE.

NEW PASTOR AT MT. OLIVET (R).

Some time has passed since there has been any news in THE CHRISTIAN SUN from Mt. Olivet (R), but we have been holding some very good news. For a time we thought we were very unfortunate in losing our former pastor, Rev. Roy D. Coulter, who has so faithfully served us. This was brought about by the grouping of the churches; but if we stick by this grouping, we will find that we have made the right step. It seemed hard to find a man capable of serving this group of churches of which Mt. Olivet is a member. After careful consideration we called Rev. Marvin

W. Mann, a former Methodist minister of Ocracoke, N. C. Both Rev. and Mrs. Mann are very consecrated and earnest in their work already begun and have won many friends in this section of the Valley. They are residing at Elkton, Va.

Looking back over our activities in 1938, we can report much progress. The exterior of the church has been painted, a new heatrola purchased for the church auditorium, and a bulletin board placed in front of the church.

On December 25 the entire Sunday school was given a Christmas treat. A splendid program was given before a packed house. Attendance was fine during 1938. More people were present the first Sunday of 1939 than the first Sunday of 1938. All organizations of the church have been re-organized for the present year.

We are taking the opportunity here to express our appreciation for the faithful efforts of Rev. and Mrs. Coulter in promoting this work, and we are looking forward to much spiritual gain with Rev. and Mrs. Mann as our leaders.

LEARNING AND SERVING.

Nothing affords us greater fellowship with life's higher ideals than the privilege of learning through active service. It seems that pioneers, with few books and limited advantages, in South Carolina as well as in many other states have not passed without leaving opportunities for the youth of our age who are objective. Our modern times with books and schools hold great advantages for the young men and young women of real purpose who have a desire to learn and serve.

Books are tools with which our minds and our hands are engaged with the definite end in view of mental and spiritual development for knowledge is not picked up—it must be sought. It is often said that we do not hear as much of self-made men and self-made women as was said in the days of our parents when practical learning and intelligence developed Christian character and inspired more whole-hearted service than we seem to have in these days of restless ambition.

Somebody has well said that ideas are born in hours of diligent study and mental growth, and that they yield their powers to those who coin them into personality and service. It is positively true that the doors of opportunity are never closed against the ambitious, deserving youth of our age who are acquainted with books and have the will to master the lessons they teach and to convert those lessons into Christian service. The fruitfulness of our lives is found in the paths of the just, that which sinneth more until the perfect day. Idle, undisciplined minds of this age have been a curse to the growth of our people in Christian righteousness. It is believeable that life has been robbed of its hardening up process to which former generations were subjected. What can our religious institutions do about it?—is the question that is being asked by people of all Christian brotherhood.

A Little Matter of Business

FOR THOSE INTERESTED

"The Christian Sun" will celebrate its 95th Birthday in February.

It is a child of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. The Convention loves it, and wants it to stay vigorous and active.

There are now 2,100 subscribers. Most of them are "paid in advance," but quite a number need to renew.

Last year there were 786 new and 892 renewal subscriptions, which gave the paper an income of $3,327.72.

It costs about $6,000 per year to publish the paper. The difference is paid by the Convention and its Boards.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

MAKING THE WHEELS GO ROUND.

Part of the business of the pastor and leaders of local churches is to make the wheels of church machinery turn. The same is true of Conference, Convention, and denominational leaders. Every fellow has his job to do, if the wheels move. Without the turning machinery there is no progress in the Church.

Sometimes this may become very mechanical, so much so that the real spirit passes from the organization. Then the turner of the wheel may continue to spin but nothing important happens. Church work becomes dull, drab, monotonous. It is stupid to continue to turn the wheels when we are going no place.

IS THERE VITALITY IN OUR CHURCH?

Have we reached the place in local churches or larger groups when we are content to watch the wheels go round? Is it possible for life to break forth at unexpected places in the church? Have we something to do and to be that is vital, that seems to be and is important? Is there a spark that flies when the wheels turn? Is there a sense of necessity, of stern reality, in the activities of our churches?

Unless there is something sparkling with life in the body of the Church, it is certain that soon the wheels of machinery will stop—and they should. If the missionary society has simply become a collecting agency for the Mission Board, the days are not far distant when the agency will fail. But if the society is following in thought and prayer the activities of the Church and the needs of humanity around the world, the best days of that society lie ahead. If the finance committee begs money to pay the bills of the Church, including the amounts asked by the Conference, then the chances are good that within a few years the income of the church will dwindle and the activities of the church will decrease. But if the Church is really striving to do things that call for money in order to do them, then the committee becomes a vital part of a growing organism. If a meeting is held simply to enlist more members to make the financial burden less on the present members, there will be no revival. But if members of the church become so interested in the welfare of their neighbors that they want to take time out of other business to bring the Christian message to bear on the hearts of their friends, then souls will be born into the Kingdom of God and the church will glow with spiritual grace.

FOR WHAT SHALL WE WORK?

All around us and all over the world things are happening so fast that it seems to be impossible for us to make sense out of them. People are born, they serve and pass on in what seems but the twinkling of an eye. Churches that once flourished because of their service now stand closed. Communities grow, diminish, and grow up again. Inventions bring luxuries to the homes of paupers. Nations rise and fall. Undeclared war makes over the map of the world in our day. Customs change faster than we can get adjusted.

In the midst of the turbulent world stands the Church. Bombs may blow buildings to pieces, but other buildings are erected. Liberty may vanish in one part of the world, but it springs up in another place. The Church of the living God stands steady in the midst of all storms.

Now seems to be the time when the Church should really become "a mighty army" that goes forth to conquer new territory. In a day like ours it is pathetic to see church buildings standing idle even through the week. With all the heart-ache and misery of our world the doors of the Church should stand open for all who wish to enter for prayer. The day for a "Sunday only" church has well-nigh passed. When the crowds didn't come to Jesus during the week, He went out after them. The activities of every church should run through all the currents of community life.

It is time for us to reconsider just what we expect to accomplish. Is the preacher to give out soothing syrup to those who want it, or is he to be the leader of a new crusade to make this world Christ-like? Are we to keep on doing exactly the same old things in the same old way, or can our eyes see new ways to meet the new needs of a new day? Do we want to simply have a lovely little service of worship and close up for the week, or do we want to get the message of Jesus into the life of the schools, business, politics, statecraft, and all the areas of personal, national, and international life? What we expect to accomplish makes a tremendous difference in the things we do and how we do them.

For instance. If the churches of the Southern Convention expect to close up when the older people are dead, then there is no need to make an offering for Elon College. There will be no need for more and better trained ministers or trained church workers. But if the churches expect to continue to serve, if new preachers will be needed, preachers alert to what is going on in the world and prepared to lead an "army of the Lord," and if the churches are to be leaders in thought and activity through the years as they have been in the past, then the College must grow and it will be a joy for the churches to contribute. The same may be said about every other enterprise of the Church.

The plea of your Church paper is that every church shall have in it a living, growing, vital, spirit like that which was in Jesus.

F. C. L.

The dear Christ dwells not afar,
The King of some remoter star;
But here amidst the poor and blind,
The bound and suffering of our kind;
In works we do, in prayers we pray,
Life of our life—He lives today.

—Whittier.

The Dangerous Opportunity in China

By WYNN C. FAIRFIELD.

The most dangerous opportunity in the history of missions in China confronts the Christian Church of the world today. Neither the court welcome to the early Nestorian missionaries nor the Mongol dynasty's invitation to the Pope compares in significance with the welcome which missionaries and Chinese Christian workers have won in the past year. The Boxer year and the 1927 revolution gave some magnificent opportunities for Christian witness of forgiveness and devotion even unto death, but even these do not compare with the opportunity now before us.

For the last year and a half, almost numberless Chinese communities have seen love in action. Christianity has been interpreted, not in words, but in deeds. There has been little or no time for "preaching." But every Chinese pastor who has stayed by his post in order to make his church yard a haven of refuge while shells burst overhead and machine guns chattered has preached a sermon more eloquent than words on the text "The Good Shepherd Layeth Down His Life for the Sheep." The missionary who has turned her own house into a dormitory for refugees until from cellar to garret there is hardly room to move has taught more effectively than through many a class-room hour the meaning of that second great commandment: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Thousands of Christian individuals such as these have borne witness to the reality of convictions stronger than fear and the natural desire to save one's own life. A recent letter received from a missionary on her way back to her station says: "Foochow is yet spared the worst features of invasion, but it is the opinion of most friends here in Hongkong that our time is coming very soon—hence our haste in getting started to our own mission where we can be of some help to the people if such a crisis really comes." This is characteristic of the spirit which has taken so many missionaries back to China to the amazement of their friends who have thought them almost crazy.

One of the most potent factors in this new appreciation of Christianity is that in so many places the missionaries, Protestant and Catholic alike, have been able to say: "This food which we are giving you is made possible by people in faraway America and Europe who are moved by Christ's love to give in order that you may live. It represents not only our goodwill, but also the characteristic attitude of Christians everywhere who try to follow their Lord's order to do unto others as they would that they should do unto themselves." Christianity is personified, not only by ministering individuals in the situation of need and danger, but by those behind them in the churches who make their ministry possible.

This is where the opportunity and the danger come together.—If the people of the Christian churches in America make possible in even greater measure the continuation of this ministry of goodwill, that ministry

A TRIBUTE TO THE CHURCH.

Being a lover of freedom, when the revolution came in Germany, I looked to the universities to defend it, knowing that they had always boasted of their devotion to the cause of truth; but no, the universities immediately were silenced. Then I looked to the great editors of the newspapers whose flaming editorials in days gone by had proclaimed their love of freedom; but they, like the universities, were silenced in a few short weeks. Then I looked to the individual writers, who, as literary guides of Germany, had written much and often concerning the place of freedom in modern life; but they, too, were mute. Only the Church stood squarely across the path of Hitler's campaign for suppressing truth. I never had any special interest in the Church before, but now I feel a great affection and admiration because the Church, alone, has had the courage and persistence to stand for intellectual truth and moral freedom.—Albert Einstein.

will be greatly strengthened. If we fail to provide the means by which the missionaries can meet at least the most urgent needs of those around them, the reality of our Christian living will rightly be questioned and with it the power of Christ to make men and women over into his own image of sacrificial love. The missionaries will appear to be not representative of a host of Christians like themselves, but simply noble individuals who themselves do their best to exemplify Christ's teachings, but who are utterly unrepresentative of the people who send them out to China. Dare we admit by our indifference here that such a conclusion is true?

We Christians here in America are faced with a situation of need in China today which has no precedent for centuries at least. War in its most awful form has changed the lives of tens of millions and left millions of them helpless victims of circumstances over which they had no more control than the people of New England had over last September's hurricane. Now winter is fully upon the great majority of the sufferers, adding the need for shelter and clothing to the need for food. The area of suffering is steadily widening with the spread of occupation.

More than any other people on earth we have the means to save a large part of the lives that will otherwise end by starvation and exposure. Only $12.00 will save one life for a year and there are very few Christian homes in America that cannot find a way to save and contribute that amount or much more if we will.

At its heart, this is a spiritual issue. Faced with a situation of this sort, can we pass by on the other side? The Church Committee for China Relief was formed because the Foreign Missions Conference of North America and the Federal Council of Churches believe that we cannot pass by and still remain Christians. A steadily growing number of states and communities have given the same answer and formed committees, from Boston to Los Angeles. More and more individuals have responded with gifts sent directly to the Church Committee at its headquarters at 105 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y. What is now needed is that in every church, a group of people make this their major responsibility for the coming months and use every means possible to keep this dangerous opportunity before their fellow-members. This ought we to do and not to leave our other duties undone.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

It may be of interest to write about ministers this week. They are human. People talk about them. Why not write about such people. Laymen express themselves very freely, sometimes adversely and at other times, favorably, when the name of the minister is mentioned. It is fine to hear a layman praise his pastor. And preachers have a way of talking about each other, and sometimes, they are not always complimentary. They should be sympathetic.

Well, a good man to begin with is Rev. R. E. Brittle. He is the Pastor of Bethlehem, Cypress Chapel and Union (Southampton) churches. He reported to the 1938 session of the Eastern Virginia Conference that he had preached 192 sermons, received 72 members, married 48 couples, baptized 51 persons, conducted 34 funerals, and made 1,748 pastoral visits. Now that is a great record. He stands at the head in the number of members received and the number of pastoral visits. One wonders about the classification of those "visits." He was married just a few weeks after Conference adjourned. When did he have time to "visit" his young lady friend? Or did he include those visits in the list reported to Conference? If he included these visits, no wonder he had such a fine record. At any rate he is very happily married, and his wife, who was formerly a Methodist, is well qualified and suited to be a preacher's wife. Congratulations to both. Brother Brittle is a hard working pastor who is very popular with his churches and congregations. His churches are growing under his consecrated and efficient leadership.

Dr. John G. Truitt, the popular pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, is another faithful minister of the Gospel. Having received his theological training at Princeton he is conservative in his views and evangelistic in his outlook. He has been a patient in Lakeview Hospital recently, suffering from an attack of "grip." His wife has been under treatment at the same hospital for the past eight weeks, suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia with other serious complications. It is a joy to report that Dr. Truitt is out again. And we are greatly relieved to know that Mrs. Truitt is able to be up in a rolling chair, and hopes to return to her home at an early date.

These have been anxious days for these consecrated workers and their many friends. When sickness, with its attendant suffering and expenses, strikes at the home of the minister it is a calamity. But in the after years of life may be enriched by the tenderness of friends and loved ones in such a crisis.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond and his good wife are new additions to the ministerial families of the Eastern Virginia Conference. They are located at Sunbury, N. C., where Dr. Raymond is serving Damascus, Oak Grove and Eure Churches as pastor. A great man is having a great opportunity in the open country. These churches offer a great opportunity for intensive development. Here is hoping that the churches will welcome their wise leadership.

Dr. N. G. Newman has been recuperating during the past six months. He has gained in weight and his normal strength is returning. He preached a great sermon at Liberty Spring Church the First Sunday in January. His wife is very feeble and is unable to attend church. They are very comfortably situated on their farm near Chuekatuck, Va. They appreciate the visits of their friends, and Dr. Newman is rendering a very fine service in assisting the writer and other pastors when his services are needed.

Space does not permit other references which might be made. The writer is happy to report that he continues to improve and is able to preach once every Sunday. Recovery is slow but the churches are very kind and patient with the limited services rendered under the present conditions.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHY GIVE MONEY TO ELON COLLEGE.

When a person is asked to invest his hard earned money, he weighs very carefully the proposed investment. Before he parts with his money, he wants to make sure that the investment is economically sound and legally safe. The income from the investment must be sufficient to make the deal attractive.

When a person is asked to lend his money, before lending it he wants to be assured that the borrower is honest and that he will return the principal together with interest.

When a person is asked to give his money, that is another question entirely. In all probability he has labored hard for what he has, and why should he be expected to part with it without value received?

It may be that the ones who are asked to give for the support of Elon College feel that they are giving their hard-earned money to that which has meant nothing to them and with no assurance that it will ever be of benefit to them. There are values, however, that are not material. Such values may be created partially by contributions of a material nature, even though such values are not material. Elon College has made invaluable contributions to this church that is ours since the day of its founding until this good hour. The fruits of the college in the ranks of the church have been the church's greatest asset. Without leadership the church cannot go forward. Unless the church progresses, it cannot create values.

Elon College was born out of the consciousness of a great need. The ones who had to do with its beginning gave out of their limited means that the college might execute a thorough curriculum of training for the young men and young women of the church under Christian leadership and in the midst of a Christian environment. From the campus of Elon College have gone the leadership of our church in all of its departments. From its original faculty went our Mission Secretary. Under his influence the church has become missionary conscious and has greatly strengthened the home base by enlarged programs, the organization, and the building of new churches. It has sent its light into different sections of the world that those who walk in darkness might see. From the Elon campus has gone ninety percent of our active ministers who stand in their pulpits and fearlessly proclaim the eternal gospel. Under the influence of our ministers, the church has enlarged her program, increased her holdings, and multiplied her efficiency and influence. From her campus have gone young men and young women into the local church and have assisted in organizing the membership of the local church for greater achievements in the name of Christ. There are many of us today preaching and laboring in the Southern Convention who never would have been here had it not been for our college. There are institutions of the church today receiving much larger financial support than is the college that perhaps would never have been launched had it not been for the leadership produced by the college and the inspiration resulting therefrom. It would be difficult indeed to determine to what degree the college and its fruits are responsible for the growth and development of the church to which it belongs. It would also be difficult to explain the church in its present state of development separate and apart from the college, nor can we easily think of the church continuing her progress in the future without the inspiration and assistance of the college itself.

It took money to launch the college and has required money to support it through the years. It is reasonable to expect that it shall require money for its continuance. We who constitute the church should count it a privilege to support that which is our own. When you are asked to give money to Elon College and the question is raised, "Why give it?" the answer might be, "After all, this is not a gift but the privilege of meeting an obligation incurred by the sacrificial service rendered the church by the college itself." Is it not possible that money sent to Elon College may be an investment that shall bear returns richer and far more satisfying than the gifts themselves? We give that which shall perish, and as a result of our giving there comes back to us that which shall never perish.

It is a fact also difficult of explanation that when we give generously and sincerely for the support of the church and her institutions, we rarely if ever miss what we give. In fact, we do not give. We simply invest, and the failure to invest means that we deny ourselves of the rich returns that would come from such investments.

The days and weeks of January and February offer golden opportunities for material investments that may result in spiritual blessings.

LANGDALE MAKES PROGRESS.

We began our work with the church at Langdale in October, 1937. The first year we gave only two Sundays per month to this work. The Lord blessed us and we had a very good year. Then the good people felt that our church must have full-time preaching. So we began in October, 1938, on full-time.

Last year we made some very much needed improvements in our church plant. We poured a concrete floor in the basement and made Sunday school rooms with a dining hall and kitchen.

Our Sunday school has grown from twenty-eight to one hundred and eight, and our church attendance has increased accordingly. During this time we have had forty-one additions to the church membership. Twenty of these have joined since the Association in October, 1938.

On Christmas Eve night we had a Christmas tree and a very impressive program and a wedding. Our second son, Leon Dollar, was married to Miss Doris Hill of Shawmut, Ala. On Sunday night we had a good service and baptized eight people. On New Year's Day, we had one hundred and eight in Sunday school and one hundred and fifty for preaching.

The paint has been purchased for the exterior of the building. The contract has been let, and as soon as the weather will permit the house will be painted. We are planning to seat our church house with new pews as soon as we can possibly raise the money. The purchase price of our pews will be $766.60. If some of our good friends want to make us happy in the beginning of this new year, just send us a nice contribution, and see if you don't feel better.

Our people at Langdale are not rich in houses and lands nor in money, but they are rich in spirit and they are loyal and willing, and it is a real joy to work with them.

To God be all the praise and glory for what has been done in the past year. We are trusting and praying that God may lead us and have His way with us through this new year of 1939.

I wish for all of you of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family a very happy and prosperous New Year. I need your prayers.

CHRISTMAS AT MT. OLIVET (G).

The most holy and sacred season of the church year has just passed and Mt. Olivet (G) Congregational-Christian Church considers it was well spent in its community.

The real Christmas Spirit was aroused when the pastor, Rev. M. W. Mann, preached a most inspiring Christmas sermon on December 18. If there is such a thing as a "new Christmas sermon," he preached it that morning, for he presented it in a very unusual, yet attractive way.

On the following Friday evening the Christmas Service was held, the main feature being the pageant: "The Greatest Gift," which was presented in a most worshipful and religious manner. It consisted of twenty-two characters, many voices in the choir, the pastor, pianist, and director. Everyone connected did his part in helping to make the service what it should be.

The choir had received a most cordial invitation to sing a Christmas Anthem at the Grace Episcopal Church during the mid-night service Christmas Eve. It was represented in the service most efficiently by a young lady and gentleman who sang a beautiful duet.

The worship service for Sunday school Christmas morning was most thoughtfully planned. It consisted entirely of carols and music—the Scripture being read to music and a prayer hymn being sung. It was a worship service that took one to Bethlehem along with the Shepherds and Wise Men.

While the classes were in session a tree was decorated and the "treats" were placed under it for the little tots when they came back to the auditorium. This surprise was enjoyed by the older ones as well as the younger, for the former were glad to see the children happy.

Sunday night, as there was no church service, a group of young people went caroling for the "shut-ins." If one thing during the holidays in the community could be said to be most effective and worthwhile, the caroling could be classed as No. 1.

The New Year came along and the first Sunday in January Mr. Mann preached an excellent New Year's sermon in which he urged that the things we had heard and seen during the celebration of our Lord's Birthday be remembered and that they ever keep us upon the mountain peaks in our spiritual lives as we enter upon a New Year.

While the young people were doing many of the things mentioned, the members of the ladies' aid were preparing baskets and gifts for the needy and a pounding for our new, yet beloved pastor and wife.

This was Christmas at Mt. Olivet—a little white church on a small hill in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

RESOLUTIONS.

As Edith Cavall said by patriotism "Resolutions are not enough." However, when made in the right direction they are helpful and if sustained by courage they become more than resolutions. Just as the merchant at the beginning of the year takes an inventory so all of us in our moral and spiritual activities do well to take periodic inventories. Here is one resolution that this writer could most heartily wish every non-church going member of our CHRISTIAN SUN family could and would make; namely, "During this good year of 1939 as for me and my house we shall attend church, regularly." Some recent writer pointed out that if one waited till Sunday morning to make up one's mind to attend church, or not to attend, there would certainly be an excuse, seemingly valid, not to attend. One has worked harder and later at nights the past week and wants to rest Sunday; or one plans to go visit friends for the day and take the family; or one is expecting visitors and must stay at home to prepare to receive the visitors cordially. All of these seem valid enough and will easily suffice as excuses, if one waits till Sunday morning to make the resolution, or not to make it, to go to church. If, however, one resolves at the beginning of the year that by the grace of God one is going to church every Sunday during the year, unless providentially hindered by causes that cannot be overcome, then the way is open for church going, otherwise it is largely closed before Sunday comes.

It is a strange thing, this matter and habit of church going. When one goes regularly, one feels all out of place on Sunday morning, and that the day is largely lost, unless one has gone in keeping with his custom to church. On the other hand, if one begins to find excuses for not going, the habit of not going is very quickly formed, and one overcomes the habit of not going only with great effort. Not going to church indeed is a habit and course of conduct easily acquired. However, with the habit of not going to church, something gradually begins to slip out of that life. Sooner or later that something will reveal itself, not at once, nor with any degree of violence, but it will tell in the long run, and tell mightily in the life and the conduct of the one pursuing such a course. When our Sacred Scriptures said "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together" it gave an injunction that all who care for the conduct of self and family should heed. We are not attempting to say that everyone who goes to church is better than everyone who does not go, but we are saying that everyone who goes to church is in line of receiving something and finding something that one who does not go is not in line to receive or to find. The habit of going to church is a most wholesome one, and very often those who neglect this habit are the very ones who need this helpfulness most.

Some years ago Dr. Fred B. Smith preached a powerful sermon to the graduating class of Elon. He pointed to two young men in the class and said, "Next Sunday when you get home, one of you will go to church and you will keep on going and twenty-five years hence when you return to your class reunion you will be strong in the faith and will have no doubts as to the worth and merit of the church and of the Bible and of religion. That other young man there by your side next Sunday on his return home will feel like taking a day off and not attending church and then he will find another excuse the following Sunday and for twenty-five years he will keep up that non-attendance, making all manner of excuses, if he cares to make any at all, and he will come back to his class reunion twenty-five years from now and in all probability he will be a skeptic, and will question the very validity of the church and the reality of God and of His Son Jesus Christ."

The way of church attendance is at least an open door to righteousness and salient habits; and the way of non-attendance opens up a wide area of possible activities without restraint and without proper guidance.

So we come back where we began by indulging the hope that one resolution backed and sustained by real courage that every member of our CHRISTIAN SUN family has made, or will make, at the beginning of this good year will be "As for me and my house we will attend church."

In our missionary enterprise we are trying to plant churches to give those who haven't the opportunity, the high and holy privilege of attending church and of sustaining churches where they have been planted so that people may have this privilege. Every dollar for missions goes for this purpose and every effort put forth for missions has this in view, that all may have a church to attend and that all may attend church. This is that for which our Lord gave His life and gives practical interpretation to His message "Go ye and teach in my name."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY.

Call to Worship—

Leader: In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.

Response: Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations.

Leader: Even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God.

Response: For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night.

Hymn—

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our Eternal home.

Under the shadow of thy throne,
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is thine arm alone,
And our defense is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her fame,
From everlasting thou art God,
To endless years the same.

A thousand ages in thy sight
Are like an evening gone,
Short as the watch that ends the night
Before the rising sun.

Time, like an ever rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly forgotten, as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be thou our guard while troubles last,
And our Eternal home.

Prayer—

We praise and thank thee, O God, for our heritage of faith in Thee as the Creator of every living thing; we thank Thee for the evidence of Thy guiding hand on all the generations of the faithful; we thank Thee for the revelation of Thyself as our Loving Heavenly Father through Thy Son and our Savior, Jesus Christ; we thank Thee for His teaching that Thou art the Father of us all; we pray for wise and eager impulses to share Thy love with all mankind. Amen.

India—Ancient, Mystic, Poetic.

Can you believe that India has a civilization at least 5,000 years old? Yet, it has! Recent excavations of ancient buried cities have proved it beyond doubt; cities built in rectangular blocks similar to our modern American plan, with a system of sanitation, with shops and taverns, with gold, silver and pottery vessels, with toys for children, and script for money.

India is rich in ancient literature! Some of the earliest literature of the world is to be found in Indian hymns of the Rig-Veda, compiled between 1500 and 1000 B. C., but sung even today. These hymns, poems, forms of praise and worship were composed by the priests and never written down, but taught to the people from one generation to another. A faithful Hindu mother would recite line after line to her children, and a favorite time was at bedtime. The mother felt that the thought left in the mind of the child as it fell asleep would dwell through the night and become a part of the little personality. And so she would recite something like this: "Who sees God in other beings, treating them as he treats himself, that man God loves." Sleep well, blessed child."

The great majority of Indians are Hindus, although there are millions of Moslems. A Hindu worships God as his Creator, the All-Wise, the All-Powerful. And to the average Hindu, who is an illiterate, God is very far off; so he makes for himself and worships a lesser God, or a little God, one he can see, to whom he can offer a visible sacrifice and so secure his favor. He has not learned to know him as a Loving Heavenly Father, as he is interpreted to Christians by Jesus Christ. Can we imagine how we would be worshipping God if we did not have Christ and the New Testament?

It is the ancient east system which gives form to the Hindu religion. The east in which a man is born holds him to his duty. Certain tasks are performed by certain easts. Miss Ruth Seabury tells of going into a cobbler's shop in India and seeing a boy sitting sullen and silent, asked through her interpreter the cause for the boy's unhappiness. His mother replied, "Oh, he wants to be a doctor and he makes us all miserable! Doesn't he know that our father is a cobbler? And our grandfather? And were not all our family cobblers? So why cannot he settle himself and become a cobbler!"

"The Christians Come to India."

(From "Dianbandhu" by Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury.)

"Many Indians believe, and students of history are inclined at least partially to agree, that one of Jesus' own disciples, Thomas, the "doubting Thomas" of the Scriptures, landed on the southwest coast of India and told the story of Christ there for the first time. Whether he took a company of Christians with him, or whether, like St. Paul, he traveled alone on a missionary journey, is not certain. At any rate, he is credited with having built churches, ordained two pastors, and converted many Brahmans to Christianity.

"Through all the centuries of the Christian era, therefore, there have been Christians in India who have called themselves St. Thomas Christians, or Mar Thoma Christians. Their scriptures are in Syriac, the literary language of the Palestine of Jesus' day. According to the belief of this group of Christians, Thomas died in India a martyr, A. D. 58, and the place where he is supposed to have been buried is shown at Mylapore near Madras.

In the year 345 the patriarch of Jerusalem, that is, the head of the Syrian Christian Church, sent to the weak and struggling Indian Christians a missionary bishop, many priests, and seventy families of Christians, providing a strong Syrian influence which shows to this day. For over a thousand years no other Christians came to India, and when Christians came again it was unfortunately not as missionaries to share a faith, as did Thomas, but as tradesmen and conquerors."

A study of India results in a new appreciation of that great country, of her antiquity, of her beauties of architecture, of her poets and philosophers, and of her spiritual leaders. It is inevitable. India has given great gifts to the world. May we remember these and be grateful as we share with her God's greatest Gift to His world! One Indian leader says, "The contact of Christianity with Hinduism has thrown a white light upon the worst features of Hinduism and quickened the search of educated India for God behind the Gods."

The following verses are from the pen of Tilak, a Christian Indian poet, who died in 1919:

As lyre and the musician,
As thought and spoken word.
As rose and fragrant odors,
As flute and breath accord;
So deep the bond that binds me
To Christ my Lord.

As mother and her baby,
As traveler lost and guide,
As oil and flickering lamp-flame
Are to each allied;
Life of my life,
Christ bindeth me to his side.

As lake and streaming rainfall,
As fish and water clear,
As sun and gladdening days
Spring in union close appear;
So Christ and I are holden
In bonds now dear!

*Prayer—*Our Father, we thank Thee for this beautiful expression of a life opened to the love of Christ. May it inspire in us a fuller consecration and a desire for greater spiritual attainment, that we may be ever broadening in effectiveness in our service for Thee. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

YOUTH WEEK.

The week of January 29 - February 5 is known as "Youth Week" in many denominations, specifically as "Pilgrim Fellowship Week" in Congregational and Christian Churches throughout the country. In many churches January 29 will be considered as "Denomination Day" and February 5 as "Christian Endeavor Day." During the week special activities will be carried on by and for the young people of the churches. It is hoped that the effect of this week will be to make the church more conscious of its young people, and the young people more conscious of the values of the church.

We hope that many of the churches in the Southern Convention will give their young people an opportunity to share in the regular services of the churches in some definite and special way. We hope that the young people in our churches will consider seriously during this week the things which their churches mean to them and the things which the young people can do for their churches. We also hope that churches which carry on such special activities during this week will send THE CHRISTIAN SUN a write-up of them, so that their experiences may be shared with others.

ACTIVITIES DURING YOUTH WEEK.

There are many activities which could fittingly be carried on by a church and its young people during "Youth Week." Only a few are listed below. You may be able to work out a program for your church which will more nearly fit your needs; these are merely suggestions. The Pilgrim Highroad for January has excellent helps and reports of activities during "Pilgrim Fellowship Week" in some of our churches last year. For materials for "Christian Endeavor Day," write to International Society of Christian Endeavor, 41 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Mass. These will be of great value as you plan your own activities.

We suggest that you try one or more of the following:

1. That you ask your minister to preach a sermon concerning youth and the church.

2. That the young people have charge of the worship service at Sunday school.

3. That the young people assist the minister in the Sunday morning service—read Scripture, pray, lead songs, etc.

4. That a young person or several young people give talks on Sunday, in place of the regular sermon by the minister.

5. That the young people have a candlelight consecration service on Sunday evening, to which the adults are invited.

6. That young people act as ushers for the church services.

7. That young people's choirs furnish music for the church services.

8. That the young people entertain the adults of the church at a "Family Night" party some evening during the week.

9. That the young people use as their topic: "We Believe in the Church!" (Program helps on this topic in January Pilgrim Highroad.)

10. That the young people learn about the history of both branches of our "united" church, study its principles, and renew their loyalty to it.

11. That the young people find out about the history and activities of their own local church—what contribution it is making and can make.

12. That the young people plan some specific contribution they can make to their own local church—hymn books, shrubbery, painting, pictures.

The Bible is primarily a spiritual book. It is an important way by which God speaks out of His heart to the hearts of men. It shows the way of salvation, and gives a plan for daily living.

The Bible can be read aloud by one person to a group. It can be read in unison. Responsive readings are common. Certain passages may be given from memory.

Reading the Bible without a plan is better than no reading at all, but there should be some system in our reading. The daily readings for Christian Endeavor topics or for Sunday school lessons are suggestive.

Certain printed helps as a concordance, Bible Dictionary, a Harmony of the Gospels and Bible Encyclopedia are fine in Bible study.

For Further Discussion—

1. Some individual should lead a discussion on "The Best Way to Observe the Quiet Hour."

2. How can we make our use of the Bible in Christian Endeavor meetings more inspiring?

3. How may leaders of Christian Endeavor meetings be trained so that the use of the Bible will be improved?

4. Ways to make personal Bible reading inspiring.

5. The use of printed helps.

6. Some one should be asked to report on some of the "living principles" which would help solve present-day problems.

7. Will the Bible influence our lives unless we determine to put its teachings into daily conduct?

Suggested Hymns—

"Lord, Speak to Me That I May Know."

"Sing Them Over Again to Me."

"Saviour, Like a Shepherd Lead Us."

S. E. M.

"To be a Christian one must believe in Christ. Christ is the foundation, or creed, of the church of Christ. A man can believe in other things and be a member of human institutions, but he must believe in Christ in order to be a Christian, a member of the church of Christ. Let us not try to add to the word of God. Christ is the creed, and we need no other."

"It is a poor compliment to anyone to say of him that he is no worse than someone that is bad."

WAYS OF USING THE BIBLE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JANUARY 22, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 4:16-21;

Psalms 119:97-104.

Daily Readings—

Monday—For Family Use—Gen. 18:19; Deut. 11:18-21.

Tuesday—Walking in the Light—Ps. 119:105, 130.

Wednesday—Searching for the Truth—Acts 17:10-12.

Thursday—Study for Correct Interpretation—II Tim. 2:14-16.

Friday—Showing the Way to Go—John 14:1-6.

Saturday—Applied to Daily Living—Matt. 7:24-27.

In many homes the Bible has decorated the table and become an ornament on the shelf to give an added appearance of religious fervor in the home life. The Book should be used not as a treasure for good luck, but to inspire and promote right living. In this meeting we should discover ways by which the Bible can be utilized.

REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

PETER SEES CHRIST'S GLORY.

LESSON III—JANUARY 15, 1938.

GOLDEN TEXT: We beheld his glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father.—John 1:14.

LESSON: Matthew 17:1-18;

II Peter 1:16-18.

Unforgettable Experiences.

John and Peter never forgot the memorable experiences of the Transfiguration. When each of them, years after the original event, sat down to write a letter to their fellow Christians, they referred to it. Peter made special reference to it. Read II Peter 1:16-18. Happy is the man who has some unforgettable experiences with Christ. How they steady and strengthen and stimulate one through the years.

Spiritual Things Are Spiritually Discredited.

"Jesus taketh with him Peter and James and John." Not because he was playing favorites, but because these men were better prepared to enter into this rich experience. They evidently were more aware of his true mission, more sensitive to his spiritual nature. God would reveal to us richer experiences if only we would keep our souls more sensitive to him.

Mystery and Majesty.

There is, of course, mystery about the Transfiguration. The simple account, "And he was transfigured before them, and his face did shine as the sun, and his garment became as white as light," is an attempt to describe the indescribable. It seems that Christ's body was transformed, transfigured until it became luminous with a heavenly light. His essential spiritual nature stood forth in a glowing beauty. For the moment he seemed to have shuffled off the body and to have stood in all the freedom and majesty of the spirit, a majesty that overpowered the disciples. The full transfiguration experience is beyond us. But if we keep our hearts sensitive to his spirit, we too shall be changed from glory unto glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord. And eventually we shall be changed into his likeness, according to his power to transform us, or to change us.

Fellowship with the Saints.

"And behold there appeared unto them Moses and Elijah talking with him." Were they there as representatives of the law and of the prophets? Were they there because each of them had had a unique translation? Perhaps for both reasons. But is it straining a point to suggest also that here is an earnest of the fact that we shall know and be known in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens? The fellowship of the saints on earth is bound to become a continuing fellowship with the saints in heaven.

Talking When One Does Not Know What to Say.

Peter as usual spoke without thinking. With characteristic good-heartedness as well as impulsiveness, he suggested that it would be good to stay there, and he proposed to build there three tabernacles, or booths, one for Jesus and one for Moses and one for Elijah. In Mark's Gospel, which is really a record of Peter's preaching in a way, Mark adds, "for he wist not (knew not) what to say." It is a good thing to say nothing when one has nothing to say. There are times when it is good just to be silent, especially in the presence of great spiritual experiences. But Peter's heart was in the right place, and one can forgive much in one who is sincere, even though he makes mistakes.

A Voice Out of a Cloud.

"A bright cloud overshadowed them; and behold a voice out of the cloud saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." God here again set his approval upon Jesus. Jesus was, as Peter later declared, "a man approved by God." Happy is the man who has the assurance that he is well-pleasing to the Father. Christ came into the world to do the Father's will, and to reveal the Father's character. In all this he was well pleasing to the Father. Never from the beginning of his life unto the very end of it, did he fail the Father in any respect. Surely this man was the Son of God.

"A voice out of a cloud"—here was mystery, but here was also certainty. It is one of the paradoxes of religion. There is much in it that we do not and cannot understand. But there is enough that we can understand to claim our highest moral endeavor and our spiritual allegiance. Whereunto a man has attained let him walk, and if in anything he is otherwise minded, God will reveal even this unto him.

No One, Save Jesus Only.

When the picture had been filled out in all its details, there was only one figure in it—Jesus. As always, he dominates the picture. Not by force, but by sheer power of character and spiritual power. And when Jesus is made central in life, all other things take their proper place.

Back to the Commonplace.

"And as they were coming down from the mountain . . . and when they came to the multitude." One cannot stay on the mountain top all the time. Sooner or later one has to turn back to the common-place. This is true after the Christmas season. It is true after special evangelistic services. It is true even after the regular services of worship. But happy is that man who can go back to the common-place with a new spirit. He serves best who truly worships.

Impotent Disciples.

"And I brought him—this epileptic boy—to thy disciples, and they could not cure him." How powerless we are to do anything of ourselves in the realm of the spiritual without the spirit of Christ. Perhaps our primary need is not to do so much for Christ as to allow him to do things through us. And this is usually the more difficult, and hence the less frequent thing.

PERFECT ATTENDANCE.

The following members of the Rosemont Christian Church Sunday school did not miss a single Sunday during the year, 1938:

Stanley Mills, O. S. Mills, C. L. Gibson, A. M. Pugh, Nelson Bondurant, Roy Spencer, Miss Doris Spencer, Luther Bondurant, Miss Sarah Nell Gibson, Miss Jackie Hollowell, Mrs. J. D. Swink, John Earl Swink, Bruce Swink, Miss Mae Brickhouse, Miss Evelyn Herrington, and Mrs. Sallie Roane.

Of the above Mr. Stanley Mills carries off the banner with an unbroken record of attendance for the past ten years.

Mrs. J. D. Swink and her two sons, John Earl and Bruce, have not missed a Sunday from Sunday school for seven and one-half years.

Miss Doris Spencer and her little brother, Roy Spencer, have not missed for four years.

The Rosemont Sunday school is proud of the fine record made by these, and extends to them sincerest congratulations.

J. F. MORGAN,

MONDAY.

UNKNOWN HELPERS.

"I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase."—I Cor. 3:6.

The thirteenth chapter of I Corinthians has been called the masterpiece of literature on love. This chapter is a masterpiece on egotism—or on thinking of one's self more highly than he ought to think. There are great achievements, but it takes a lot of folk to make them. The Captain of the ship may have glory, and his name reach the headlines, but it takes a crew of seven hundred men, maybe, to put it over. Unknown helpers are often responsible for obtaining the goal. There is great strength in reading this whole chapter with this in view.

Prayer—O Lord, our spirits are made stronger by the confidence we have in fellow laborers. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A HARD LESSON.

"Bear ye one another's burdens."—Gal. 6:1, 2.

One of the hardest lessons of Christianity is to "return good for evil." Another hard one is, when stricken with adversity, not to brood. The duty of bearing one another's burdens is not only doing something to help the other fellow, but to realize that in time of trouble it is good to mingle more with friends. In so doing we learn that they have troubles also; and this fellowship saves one from feeling that his friends have deserted him. Fellowship was never more needed than when tempted to desert it.

Prayer—Our Father, through Jesus Christ, may we find the blessed fellowship of friends. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

DIVINE HUMILITY.

"Patient in tribulation."—Rom. 12:12.

This is another chapter on egotism. It is also a blessing to read this chapter with a view of learning how humble we should be. Sorrows, trials and tribulations put something in one as well as take something from one. The word "tribulation" is derived from the classical word meaning "threshing instrument." If we would be what God would have us be, like Job, always blessing God's name, let come what will, we may say, "God has me on His threshing floor, clearing the good grain from the chaff."

Prayer—Our Father, teach us to recognize Thy comings to us in whatever form, and be glad. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU."

"A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."—Luke 12:15.

Our subject is the title of a motion picture which came out this year. It is a great sermon with our text as its text.

Life today seems to be a mad search for happiness, with so few evidences of its having been found. It teaches that life's realities are really apart from things; that inward peace is more satisfactory than wealth or entertainment. Happiness is a thing of the heart. All who seek happiness or satisfaction in possessions come to say with the wise man, "All is vanity and vexation of the spirit."

Prayer—O satisfy us early, O Lord, with Thy peace. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FINDING THE ROCK.

"Thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my church."—Matt. 16:18.

Another lesson from the picture: "You Can't Take It With You," is the "elevator" lesson. The elevator is used to take the man in his struggle for gold, but something happened to him and when the elevator reached the floor where he intended to do his dirty work and he said, "Down," and down he went to the life that was true to live in the hearts of men.

Peter was an "up and down man." But he finally became a man who could be counted upon. We also have the possibilities of Peter.

Prayer—Our Father, we are prone to be as changeable as the wind, yet Thou canst make us what we ought to be. We would be. Make us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

CHRIST'S IDEAL OF CHRISTIAN SERVICE.

"If I, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example."—John. 13:14, 15.

We have heard of a missionary by the name of Gilbert Bowles who when taking a trip in a rickshaw insists upon taking the coolie's place and let the coolie ride awhile.

It was after Jesus had done the servant's work that He said, "I have given you an example."

Prayer—Our Father, deliver us from all pride and make us helpful to our fellowman and right in Thy kingdom. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A PRAYER JUST FOR TODAY—O God, give me strength this day to fellowship Thee. I pray for strength today to help me in the difficulties of tomorrow. Keep me sweet and sound of heart, and to love honestly and fearlessly that no outward failure can dishearten men. Teach me to see the good in everything, and may the vision of Thy truth be ever before me. Make me strength to those who need help. In Christ's name I ask it. Amen.

"All journeys must some time end; all accounts must some time be settled. The greater the speed and the more sin one accumulates to his account the harder it will be to reform and the more certain he will not be able to escape punishment."

WHAT DO YOU EXPECT OF GOD?

By DR. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

"My soul, wait thou upon God, for my expectation is from Him."—P'salm 62:5.

There are two kinds of atheism in the world today. The first is that of communism which seeks to belittle religion, opposes religion without apology, and hopes ultimately to destroy every vestige of religion throughout the world.

But there is another kind of atheism which is far more threatening to American life and ideals than is the atheism of communism. It is the atheism of indifference, insincerity, and passivity of those who profess to believe in God but live and act as if there were no God. The atheism of honest doubt is the religion of an angel compared with the atheism of indifference, and insincerity which characterizes some professing Christians.

Hypocrisy is another name for this subtle atheism which is threatening the very life of the Church today and which is impelling the life of the nation itself—the atheism of indifference, insincerity, and inactivity. The Church of God has nothing to fear from those who boast that they do not believe there is a God. But the Church and the nation have everything to fear from those who claim to believe in God but do absolutely nothing about it.

No one has the right to expect God to do the impossible and there are many things that are impossible even for God. People cannot hope to break God's laws of health, spiritually and physically and expect God to bless with health no matter how much faith one may boast of having. Such profession is but blasphemous presumption.

As disciples of Jesus we have a right to expect great things from God if we meet the condition. We have a right to expect that God's laws will never fail and that the habits of the cosmic forces will not be changed. We have a right to expect that God will always be on the side of right and that the very stars in their courses and all the vanguards of heaven will always give defense to the person who is on the side of right with God.

We have a right to expect God's forgiveness if we make humble confession to Him and sincerely seek the good life. We have a right to expect God's guidance as we seek to find our way through the vicissitudes of our earthly life. He has promised never to leave us nor forsake us. We have a right to expect that if in all our ways we acknowledge God, He will direct our paths. That is His promise and He could not be God if He failed to keep His promise.—Globe Gazette, Mason City, Iowa.

WHAT I OWE MY PASTOR.

I owe him respect as the ambassador of God, sent to teach me a better way of living than the selfish, sordid existence I might be guilty of but for religious guidance.

I owe him trust, that he may be free to serve the church unhampered by criticism and fault-finding.

I owe my pastor prayer, that God may make his services a blessing to everyone with whom he comes in contact.

I owe my pastor the protection of kindly consideration by refraining from repeating in his presence the slander of unkind gossip that would worry him and prevent him from doing his best work.

I owe him enough of my time to help him in his work whenever he may need me.

I owe him encouragement when vexations and annoyances make his work difficult.

I owe my pastor my material support, so that his work will not be hindered by financial worry.

I owe him my loyal cooperation in his efforts to strengthen my church, and to promote the interests of the Kingdom of God in our midst.

I owe him my presence and close attention at the regular services of worship.

MY DUTY TO MY CHURCH.

My church represents Christ's best gift to me. I have united with it in solemn covenant that it shall have my best in attendance, in prayer, in service, in sacrifice, in zeal, in giving, in patience, and in love. To be loyal to God, I must be loyal to my church, for it is His church, too. I am duty-bound to help my church to do for others what she has done for me. To maintain my personal honor and the honor of my church, I must help her to keep aflame and aloft the Torch of the Living Faith in this community of which my church is a vital factor.

My church calls me to realize that the liberties I enjoy were in the mind and heart of Jesus. The best men and women in every generation have given their best to the church. Following their noble example, I pledge to my church my best.—In Program of Installation Services of First Congregational Church, Mason City, Iowa, for Dr. R. C. Helfenstein.

INSTITUTE AT FRANKLINTON COLLEGE.

Since Franklinton and Bricks Colleges closed some years ago the Negroes of Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southern Convention have had little opportunity for higher education. Recently there has been established a training school during the summer and an institute in January. The January Institute, now in session runs four days each week, beginning Tuesday mornings. It continues four weeks. This gives the pastors an opportunity to attend the Institute and carry on their regular church work.

The daily schedule of activities begins at 6:45 in the morning and closes at 9:30 at night. The first class period at 8 o'clock is "Christian Worship" taught by Miss Priscilla Chase of New York City. At 9:00 Rev. R. L. House, of Portsmouth, Va., teaches "The Old Testament—Its Contents and Values." Then follows a course on "Ways of Teaching" by Miss Phoebe L. Fraser of Atlanta, Ga., which is followed by a course on "The Christian Message for Our Present-Day World," taught by Rev. J. T. Stanley of Dudley, N. C. A twenty-minute worship period finishes the morning program. During the afternoon there is a course on "The Minister's English," taught by Rev. J. T. Dudley during the first week; and "The Church and Social Work" by Dr. M. Taylor Matthews of Raleigh, N. C., the second and third weeks. The fourth week there is a course on "Public Speaking," by Rev. R. L. House. The rest of the afternoon is filled with study and recreation. On Tuesday evenings there is a course taught by Rev. W. L. Lake, Graham, N. C., for students seeking licensure and ordination. On Wednesday and Thursday evenings there are feature programs.

The Institute costs the students $3.00 per week, which pays for board and room. Certificates of progress are awarded yearly. Attendance at three full-term Institutes and successful passing of a comprehensive examination makes one eligible for ordination.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

This week closes our report for the year 1938. Our financial report carries us up to $23,604.48. We did our best to get it up to $24,000.00, but did not quite make it. In closing our report for 1938, I want to thank each and every one for the part you played during the year 1938. Your interest, your contributions, your prayers, and your loyalty have stimulated us to do our best. Remember, your money that you have contributed to assist in this work has been invested in the little boys and girls in our care. It is the one desire in our heart that they may be trained into useful men and women. We sometimes visit business men in their office and find they have a girl that has been reared in the Christian Orphanage for a stenographer or a secretary, making good, knowing that one day she came to the orphanage, a little helpless tot without a chance in life, and you, through your offerings, made it possible for her to have training, care, and education, and now she is paying back in faithful service what the orphanage did for her. It is a worthwhile work, isn't it?

NEWS FROM THE SOUTH.

Dear Brother Editor:

I am giving you the rest of the report of my summer's activities.

We began our meeting at Mt. Zion the first Sunday in August. Brother Olin Ballard and the local talent furnished the music. Revs. Joe A. French and Staley Hunt preached one sermon each during the meeting. These sermons were greatly appreciated, and much good was accomplished by the meeting. No new members were added, but the old members were very much aroused to their responsibility. The pastor did the preaching.

Our next meeting was at Antioch Church beginning the second Sunday in August and continuing one week. Rev. G. S. Hunt, of Weeping Water, Neb., did the preaching. It was a great pleasure to have him and his family visit with us and preach to us during the meeting. Three new members were added to the membership—one by confession and two by letter. This church has a fine future. It is very well organized, has a good Sunday school, missionary, and Christian Endeavor Societies. It also has a prayer meeting on Friday night of each week. The pastor and his wife have moved into the community from Roanoke, Ala. We are very pleasantly located and will continue to serve a part of our same field for another year.

Our next meeting was with the church at State Line beginning the third Sunday in August. Rev. W. T. Meacham was with us here and did most of the preaching and led the song service. Four new members were received into fellowship—three by confession and one by letter.

The opportunity of this church and its influence have been gradually increasing since its reorganization. The road leading by the church, which has been closed for a number of years, is now being opened to the public, which will add greatly to the interest of the church and community. We have some very faithful members in this old church and they are devoted to the church and its interests.

The week following the fourth Sunday in August and the first week in September, I was with Rev. Joe French at Berea Church, Norfolk, Va. It was a great treat to me to have the opportunity of visiting this "old church." It has had on its roll the names of some of the most saintly men and women of our entire Church. As I stood in its pulpit I could but think of the great men who have served as pastor of this flock. The fellowship was sweet; their hospitality was all that could be desired. We had a great meeting. I had long desired to have a similar opportunity, but did not have the chance to go until this year. I am praying for God to richly bless the labors of Brother and Sister French in this historic church and community. Age has not impaired the usefulness of this church. Its possibilities are greater now than ever before. God help them to rise up in His strength and carry the program to success.

The week following the fourth Sunday in September I was with Rev. W. C. Carpenter at Vanceville, Ga. Here we had a great revival. I have rarely heard richer testimonies given and more fervent prayers offered than I heard among those people. Eight members were received to fellowship, all by confession. The meeting closed on Friday night. Rev. Mr. Carpenter has done and is doing now a great work for the Kingdom of God in that country. Many other things I should like to say, but this letter is already too long. I hope to write again.

G. D. HUNT.

CHURCH CELEBRATES TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF MINISTRY.

Sunday, November 20, was a great day at Reidsville Christian Church. There were three hundred and ninety present at Sunday school. The attendance at the morning worship service has been estimated at between six and seven hundred. The main auditorium was filled to capacity and there were many people in the balcony and Sunday school auditorium. The evening services were well attended also.

At the morning service Rev. J. L. Neese, who was celebrating his tenth anniversary as a minister in the Christian Church, gave a report of his ten years' service. This report revealed that Mr. Neese was licensed as a local preacher in the Methodist Church at High Point, on May 23, 1928. He preached his first sermon in the Palm Street Christian Church of Greensboro, November 11, 1928, using as a text "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give you a crown of life"—Revelation 2:10. On recommendation of the chairman of the Board of Deacons of the Palm Street Church and the pastors of the Methodist, Presbyterian, and Baptist Churches of Bessemer (N. C.), Mr. Neese was granted a license to preach for one year in the Christian Church. On November 13, 1929, he was ordained an elder.

Since that time he has served the following churches: Palm Street, Greensboro, 6 years; Hines Chapel, 5 years; Monticello, 3 years; Pleasant Ridge, 2 years; New Labanon, 7 years; and Reidsville, 4 years. Two hundred and seventy-five members have been added to the Reidsville Church in the four years of his ministry there.

At the morning service the pastor spoke briefly on each of ten qualities which he has tried to develop and which have been of great assistance to him in his ministry. Eleven candles were lighted, the first representing the words Love, Joy, Peace, Meekness, Faith, Long-suffering, Gentleness, Kindness, Obedience and Thankfulness. Young ladies assisting in this beautiful service included: Jane Coleman, Catherine Coleman, Viola Wray, Dorothy Watkins, Ruby Wright, Stella Chilton, Eloise Haizlip, Ruth Clapp, Matilda Stanley, and Rebecca Stanley.

At the close of the service J. L. Wray presented a surprise birthday cake to the pastor.

Special offerings for the benefit of the parsonage debt fund received in Sunday's services amounted to $349.48.—Reidsville Review.

Announcing the Elon College Issue

The value of the printed page has not yet been fully realized. Ideas, plans, and purposes are communicated to those who otherwise would not be informed. All progress is conditioned by information and instruction. Today the press becomes our medium to convey information, to give instructions, and to present plans.

The next issue of "The Christian Sun" will be a special Elon College issue. Officials of conferences and church representatives will express their own personal interest in the institution that is ours and will call upon every member of every local church in the Convention to express his interest in Elon College by personal contributions for the support of the institution. The paper will also carry certain photographic news of the church and campus, presenting cuts of some of our church leaders and some striking views of our beautiful campus.

We listen to instructions regarding other matters of interest to the church by those whom the church has placed in responsible positions. We shall not err greatly if we follow their suggestions in the matter of offerings from the churches for the support of our college. Such offerings have been authorized and apportioned by the Convention itself. Everyone should give careful attention to the contents of this special issue of our church paper and be governed accordingly.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. H. S. Hardecastle, pastor of the Christian Temple of Norfolk, Va., has recovered from a recent attack of influenza.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, was in the office of publication on Tuesday of this week, enroute to New York City, on business for the College.

Dr. William B. Neill of Moravia, N. Y., was the preacher at the Christian Church of Holland, Va., on last Sunday. He had large and appreciative audiences.

Dr. A. W. Palmer, President of Chicago Theological Seminary, will occupy the pulpit at Elon College on Sunday, January 22, in the absence of Dr. L. E. Smith.

Our church at Henderson, N. C., is in need of more space for Sunday school rooms and social activities. In the near future they hope to enlarge their plant so that they can do better work.

It seems good to see Dr. J. O. Atkinson walking about the town of Elon College, N. C., after a long siege of illness. His many friends rejoice with him in his returning health.

Dr. J. U. Newman fell in his home at Elon College, N. C., some weeks ago and hurt himself rather severely. We are glad to report that he seems to be on the road to complete recovery.

Rev. J. S. Johnson has resigned as pastor of Dendron (Va.) Christian Church. That church, New Lebanon and Union (Surrey) have been in a pastorate, and hope to be again in the near future.

The Christian Endeavor society of Mt. Olivet (Rockingham) gave their pastor, Rev. M. W. Mann, a year's subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for a Christmas present. "Go thou and do likewise."

The Franklin (Va.), Christian Church is holding vesper services Sunday afternoon at five o'clock during the winter. The editor, a former pastor, and his wife, enjoyed greeting friends there last Sunday. The pastor, Dr. Elwood W. Jones, makes a fine report of this good church.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training will be held June 19-24, 1939. Plan now to attend. Rev. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, N. C., the efficient Dean, announces a fine program in the making.

Dr. M. S. Poulson, pastor of Shelton Church, Portsmouth, Va., is in a hospital in Baltimore, Md. He had a heart attack while on his way to a sanitarium in Pocomo, Pa. His many friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

CAPTAIN OF BASKETBALL TEAM.

Pictured above is Ike Fesmire, senior and captain of the 1939 basketball squad. Ike is a native of Greensboro and the second member of his family to attend Elon. Standing 6 feet 5 1/2 inches in height, a hard worker and a good eye for the basket makes Ike a very valuable man.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN office, Elon College, N. C., has received two dollars from Burlington, N. C., with no name attached. The money was sent for a renewal subscription with the recent statement. The sender will please notify our office, so proper credit can be given.

Wouldn't it be fine if all the churches of the Southern Convention would really take seriously the matter of supporting our college? An offering from every church would certainly put new heart into those who make the college effective. Will your church be among the faithful?

During the Christmas holidays Dr. W. C. Wicker spent some time in Duke Hospital, Durham, N. C., and underwent a serious operation. We are glad to report that he is back on the job as a teacher of Elon College and is feeling fine.

ON RAISING THE COLLEGE APPORTIONMENT.

REV. J. EVERETTE NEESE.

Being a member of the Congregational-Christian Church means more to me than just having my name on some local church roll. It means a definite concern for, and an affiliation with, the various enterprises which our church supports. To be more specific it means definite allegiance to, and concern for Elon College, the educational institution of our Fellowship.

It seems to me that every pastor should feel that his work is incomplete unless he raises the apportionments allocated to his church or churches. The religion of Christ expects something of its followers and to the same degree the Church expects something of the ministers serving within its ranks. To me the raising of Conference Apportionments constitute a very definite contribution which one can make to the Fellowship in which one serves. No church or pastor should be satisfied with the raising of Conference Apportionments in part. They should labor at the task and exert every ounce of energy necessary until success is attained.

It is true that Superannuation, Missions, Christian Education, the Orphanage, the Convention and Conference enterprises, are important, but I believe above these should be the interests of our College. Without the College to train our ministers and laymen we could never centralize our interests into denominational activities. No other college is going to train our ministers to care for the interests of the Congregational-Christian Church.

About a month and a half ago I heard one of our energetic ministers say, "During the Conference year 1938-1939 I am going to raise the Conference Apportionments for my church as they come due." With this in mind I was anxious to see the first issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for the New Year to find out if he was keeping his promise. Sure enough, there it was, Superannuation overpaid.

Now that the College Period is at hand I am sure that the above mentioned minister will do equally as well for this prominent institution of our Church.

The College has made remarkable progress under the leadership of Dr. Smith—progress far beyond our expectation, but he needs our help and cooperation. Elon faces a new semester and this calls for additional funds. Let us put forth special effort during this period and herewith express our loyalty to him and the College. If the amount of each church's apportionment is raised now, there will not be that later anxiety and possible failure in raising it.

The clouds of the future, so far as Elon College is concerned, will have gilt edges and silver linings if more of our ministers and churches will get behind their College Apportionment during January and February and raise the entire amount. It can be done if we will work hard enough and trust God for the results.

UPPER ALAMANCE FELLOWSHIP.

The churches of the Upper Alamance Fellowship are called to meet with the Elon Community Church, Elon College, Sunday, January 29. The hour will be 3:30 o'clock and the session will adjourn at 5 o'clock.

The Ministers Association of Elon College will be asked to conduct the devotional service and the president will preside at the business period. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor of our church at Durham and president of the Southern Convention, will be the speaker of the afternoon and his subject will be "The Local Church and the Convention Program." Here is a timely subject presented by a pastor of a local church who is also the administrative head of the Convention. Dr. Harrell knows this problem from both ends and all angles. Following the address an open forum will be conducted on the subject presented and Dr. Harrell will endeavor to answer questions and solve problems.

Not since the first meeting of the Fellowship have we had every church represented. Attendance has increased and interest has grown, but could we have every church represented at Elon on the fifth Sunday.

The member churches are Bethlehem, Berea, Elon, Shallow Ford, Union, Burlington, Graham-Christian, Graham-Providence, Long's Chapel, Haw River, Carolina, Hopedale, Mebane, Bethel and Concord.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

WHY HAVE A CHURCH COLLEGE?

Is a Church college a necessity or a luxury? Should those give to the college who cannot attend? What does Elon College do especially for the churches? These are questions which fill the minds of those who are now called upon to consider the claims of Elon College.

Unless the State can produce Christian character in its colleges, it is necessary for churches to have colleges of their own. Because the State does not deal in religion, does not train church workers and ministers, it becomes necessary for the Church to do this training. Hence a Church college is a necessity rather than a luxury.

It is unfortunate that many people cannot attend college. There are some who perhaps could not do college work, but there are many who are quite capable and yet are not permitted to attend. Why should they give to the support of an institution of higher education? The answer is easy. They want to help those who are more fortunate to have the kind of a college that will give them the needed preparation for their life's work. Into the churches filled with people who are not college graduates go ministers with college and seminary training, who are—because of their schooling—more able to minister to the needs of the people in the Church. In like manner, there are lay-leaders who also contribute much to the happiness and well-being of churches, whose training comes from colleges supported in part by those who were never permitted to attend. Yes, every member of the Church—rich and poor alike—should contribute to the Church college.

The churches have a perfect right to expect a definite return from the institutions they support. What does Elon College do especially for Congregational and Christian Churches that no other institution does or may do? This answer could be lengthy, but space forbids it here. The primary aid that Elon College gives to the churches is a trained ministry. Ministerial students who live on the campus pay no tuition. Those who live off campus pay only half tuition. There are loan funds available at our college which help ministerial students. Courses are planned particularly for ministers and for those who are to be leaders in the Church. Every Freshman studies the Bible. A Leadership Training Conference is held at the college annually for young people and pastors. The college furnishes, without charge, office space, light, heat, and janitor service for the Mission Board, "The Christian Sun," the Board of Christian Education, and the Promotional Secretary.

At present it gives $500 a year to the support of "The Christian Sun." In these and other ways the college returns definite dividends to the churches.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

The present status of Elon College is good. There is a growing student body, which is likely to reach 600 before the end of the year. The faculty is commended by the Southern Association of Colleges as being of high quality. We have a plant worth approximately a million dollars with excellent equipment for studies in science, religious education, commercial work, home economics, art, and music. Class rooms and library facilities are adequate for all types of literary work. The reputation of the college is excellent. The debts have been greatly reduced and plans are under way for eliminating all indebtedness.

Two things are now badly needed. The college needs to have all the rights and privileges of an accredited institution. A recent survey shows that practically everything is in readiness for this accreditation except financial support.

The second great need of the college is increased support from the churches. During recent years the support has increased greatly. The Convention is obligated to the college for at least $10,000 per year. President Smith says that we failed by $3,000 during 1938. It is very important that we succeed in 1939. The contributions made within the next few weeks will largely determine whether we will succeed or fail. The church paper wishes to appeal to every pastor and the people of every church to see that the College Apportionment is paid in full. Use your own plan for securing this fund, but please be sure that this greatly-needed institution of our Church has the necessary financial support from the churches, so it may be properly accredited and take its place with the best colleges in the land.

DO NOT GET MIXED.

The fourth Sunday of January is designated as Elon College Day. On this day it is hoped that every church will have a program that presents the college and its claim for support. Most churches will need to receive an offering in order to raise the needed funds to meet Conference Apportionments for the college.

On the fifth Sunday of January the Sunday schools are expected to present a program and receive an offering for the college. This money will count on the Apportionment for the college.

Plans are in the making for paying off the college debts in 1940. This is called the Golden Anniversary. Contributors are expected to give (or get and give) fifty dollars—one dollar for each year of the college life. A thousand committees of three each are being formed. If this effort succeeds, and it must, the college will be free of debt, worth a million dollars, have considerable endowment, and be in the best shape it has ever been. Then it can really serve the Church in a fine way.

Do not get the offerings mixed. They are different. But all are necessary, and fit into the whole program of the Church as voted by the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

To Pastors, Sunday Schools, and Churches of the Southern Convention

January and February is our college period. Sunday, January 22, is the day set for information regarding the college and its program to be given to members of the Sunday churches the total amount of $12,500 to be raised for the college.

Second—$10,000 of the above amount is a legal obligation incurred by the Convention in the form of a note for $250,000 at 4 per cent interest, total $10,000. This note was authorized by the Southern Convention in session at Suffolk, Va., 1936, churches. Unless this amount is raised, the college cannot hope for favorable consideration by the Association.

Third—The entire amount sent to the college for the year 1937-38 is a little less than $7,000. This money came in from Sunday schools, Dollar-A-Month Club dues, church offerings, and Conference apportionments. This still leaves the amount of $3,000 to be raised. If the pastors, churches, church officials, and Sunday schools could realize what a serious situation this presents, I am sure that everyone

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The financial plans adopted by the Southern Convention for the guidance of the various Conferences and the local churches, includes two phases: First—A definite Apportionment for each department; and Second—A designated period for special emphasis of the specified department. This plan of finance and promotion has a number of advantages over the united budget formerly used by the Convention. Every church has an opportunity to contribute intelligently to the various causes, and to disseminate valuable information concerning the work of the Convention. The combined budget plan made it difficult for the various churches to know just how much support they were giving to each of the departments.

The Education Period is to be considered by the churches during the first few months of the year, 1939. Elon College is the center of this Period of Promotion. During these weeks every minister has the privilege of presenting the claims of Elon College, not only for the sake of raising the Conference Apportionment for the Elon College Fund, but also for enlisting the cooperation of parents and young people in patronizing the College. Elon College needs money—but it needs students as well as financial support.

The churches have different methods of raising the Conference Apportionments. Some churches include the Conference Apportionments in their general budget for the year. Other churches make an effort to raise their various Apportionments during the designated period of promotion. There is no arbitrary plan to compel any church to adopt a certain method. The important thing is to promote the interest of the various departments and attempt to raise the suggested apportionment. There is some difficulty in making a proportionate apportionment for the various churches. Some apportionments are relatively larger than others. But the great majority of churches can raise all the apportionments if they will begin in the early part of the year. Very few churches can raise all the apportionments if they wait until next October.

As a pastor the writer has not found it an easy task to raise the Conference Apportionments. But it is much easier now than it was thirty years ago. When the churches learn that the pastor is in earnest about this matter they respond more readily to his appeals. Liberty Spring and Oakland Churches have already raised their apportionment for Superannuation. Many other churches have done likewise. The Apportionment for the Elon College Fund is needed by that institution. During the Education Period every church should present the claims of Elon College in a definite way, and this promotional work will make it easier to raise the Apportionment regardless of the method used in securing the money.

REV. I. W. JOHNSON, D. D.

People will not give their money to any cause unless they are informed about the needs in a very definite way.

Education, as well as religion, has been drifting towards some dangerous rocks in recent years. Unless Christianity can turn the course and stem the tide, civilization is in danger. Atheistic and pagan influences have sought to undermine the very foundations of modern life. Irreligion has attempted to substitute pagan idols for God. There is an imperative need for institutions, such as Elon College, to keep the true light of liberty and life shining on a hill. This cannot be done without the moral and financial support of the church. The country is safe as long as education and religion are free and loyal to the truth. The kingdom of God rests upon truth and righteousness. The Church College has a large place in the advancement of religion and civilization.

I. W. JOHNSON.

TWO PASTORS EXPRESS THEMSELVES REGARDING THE QUESTION OF CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS FOR THE COLLEGE.

Recently I had the privilege of visiting two of our more active churches, both for the Sunday morning service. In both instances I found excellent congregations, fine spirit, and an excellent sermon. On both occasions I was asked to speak. I had gone for worship at these churches without invitation and unannounced. I did not desire to interfere with the regular program but preferred to sit quietly and worship with the congregations, which I did.

At the conclusion of the service I spoke to the minister of the church where I first attended and told him that I appreciated what his church had been doing but inquired if it would not be possible for his church to raise the college's part of the Conference apportionments this year as it had been raising apportionments for other interests of the church. He expressed himself as being greatly interested in the college and said that his people were becoming more interested in the college and that he had already made up his mind that he would do his best to have his church raise the entire apportionments for 1938-39.

At the close of the service of the other church in question, I had a long talk with the pastor. We had dinner together. I found him in fine spirits and anxious to do what he could for his church and denomination. He said very frankly that some of his people had not been particularly interested in the college but that he felt that the attitude in his congregation toward the college was becoming more favorable, that his people greatly appreciated my joining them in worship, that he would talk with them, and that he felt certain that sometime during the year they would pay their full college apportionments.

The attitude and assurances of these two pastors are encouraging. I appreciate their personal interest, and I am confident in my own mind that they will transmit that interest to their churches and that from these churches will come to the college the support that the Convention has planned.

I won't have the time to share the worship period with every pastor and congregation in the Convention, but I am privileged to take this opportunity to assure them of my personal interest, of my love for my church, of my high hopes for the college as an institution of the church, and my own belief that the constituency of the college, pastors, church people, and alumni, will at this time come to the assistance of the college that the church's obligation may be met so that the college in turn may be able to meet adequately its obligations. If the church could know for itself the healthy condition of the college, the fine spirit that is in evidence on the campus, the high grade of work that we do, and how exceedingly moderate

TO THE PASTORS AND CHURCHES OF THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Dear Fellow Pastors and Churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference:

As President of your Conference, I wish to call your attention to the fact that we are now in the Elon College Period of our church year. This is the time to do our best for Elon. January 22 is College Day in our churches. Let us observe, not only College Day, but the entire College Period this year in our announcements, programs, and especially by receiving an offering for Elon. It would be fine if each church could programs and finally, with an offering, each pastor is asked to keep the claims of the College before his members. Our Conference is asked for $3,779 and if the College pays its faculty and the running expenses, it is necessary that we raise that amount in full. The pastor is the one on whom the responsibility of putting this across in each local church rests. I am asking you, then, to come to the aid of the College, see that your church's part of the obligation is met, and thus speed the College on to greater achievements.

January 22 is designated as College Day. Some of our churches, perhaps, will not have worship on that Sunday, our requirements and how urgent are our needs, small though they be, I am sure that there would be a most hearty response upon the part of everybody. How happy and rejoiced we would all be if every church paid its entire apportionments which would greatly encourage the college and enable it to meet its obligations promptly to faculty and creditors alike. Here's expressing the hope that every pastor will feel his responsibility and not miss this privilege with his church and people during this Educational Period.

THE CHURCH COLLEGE.

It is impossible to over estimate the merit and the worth of Elon College to our Church. The one thought of the college, or the sole thought that should control the minds and hands of those in charge of the college, should not be what the church could, or should, do for the college, but what is the college doing for, and contributing to the church? In brief, what is the contribution of the college to the church? What has the college contributed to the church? To ask that question is to answer it.

From the beginning until this day the chief concern of those most deeply interested in the college has been that of making the right sort of contribu-

On this basis, church and college with us become one. In the Sunday school, as well as in the pulpit the school itself, or the class taught, evaluates the institution from which the superintendent, or teacher, if a graduate, has come. This is stated as a mere matter of fact well known to everyone. The church college, therefore, is always on trial and is being tested by, and through, the life, conduct, victories and defeats of those who have received their training at the church college.

Those in charge of the institution are well aware of these things, and this motive has been a predominate one on the part of the trustees as well as presidents and faculty of our Elon.

the gains and progress to the church from the conduct and the life of the college. So far our Elon has proven its worth and merit by the contribution it is making to the church and on this account, it behooves the church, to support and sustain the college by every means within its reach. If we wish, and are to have a strong church, then we must continue to have a strong and well supported Elon.

tion to the church. This is most apparent and obvious in the ministry. If a strong, capable and consecrated minister goes out from college and gives good account of himself his parishoners are ready to admit that here is a product of the college and he reflects honor and credit upon the institution. On the other hand, if he falls down in his ministry, has defects in the use of proper language in the pulpit, or in the social circles, or if his intellectual and moral standards are not without reproach, immediately the fault is laid to the college. The strong minister reflects credit upon the institution; the weak discredit. Thus showing from positive and negative side that the world evaluates the college through the individuals who have received their training or the lack of it, in their church college.

From its inception till this good hour, the contribution that Elon has made to the church cannot be estimated in terms of material, or spiritual values. While the church has tried to help Elon, the sole claim to the help on the part of the college is the fact that the college itself is helping to build the church, to make and build the church by working together in the spirit and fellowship of Him, Who said, "I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Only Christian men and women, or those professing to be so, are thought of in selecting a faculty as well as a Board of Trustees and others charged with the responsibility of conducting the college. So we shall evaluate the college and realize something of its worth and merit only as we make an inventory, more or less complete, of Washing dishes, cleaning out wash rooms, polishing windows, mopping floors, keeping the kitchen spotless, and making sure that the sleeping quarters are always neat, are considered by Madame Chiang to be important factors in the education of women. Not that she believes that the only place for women is in the home. She does not. In an interview today, Madame Chiang said, "These girls will doubtless have servants to take care of their homes, so it is all the more necessary that they know how to direct the servants. First of all they will go to the villages to improve the life of the women and girls. The more they know about the problems and drudgery of women, the better. They will then be able to do something about improving the livelihood of the masses."

ANNUAL PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP WEEK.

405 E. Whittington St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Pilgrim Fellowshipers:

January 29 to February 5 is Pilgrim Fellowship Week, and young people all over the nation will be observing the week in various ways. Each of us is a definite part of the Pilgrim Fellowship, and we will certainly want to give some special emphasis, during these days, to rethinking the purposes, plans, and activities of our national, state, and local work.

The two Christian Life Topics suggested for these two Sundays seek to strengthen the active loyalty of young people to the Church, and to give them a sense of the power of united Christian youth." The topic for January 29 is "We Believe in the Church," and the suggestions for this program have been prepared by Miss Lucy Eldredge and appear on page 52 of the January Pilgrim Highway. The topic for February 5 is "Ten Million Protestant Youth in America—What of It?" We really can make something of these topics!

It may be an excellent time to have a Fellowship Banquet of the young people in your church during the week. And perhaps you can get the Pilgrim Fellowship Wall Chart (25c) and pledge cards (35c per dozen) from the Young People's Department, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., for distribution and use. Whatever you do, write me about it, because it will be interesting to exchange experiences with other groups.

Next summer we are hoping to have nine representatives of Pilgrim Fellowship in Amsterdam, Holland, for the World Christian Youth Conference. Several can go and bear all expenses, but some may need help. The National Council is proposing that each local Pilgrim Fellowship group receive an offering on one of the Sundays during Pilgrim Fellowship Week to help towards this worthy cause. We are hoping that we may raise a fund of $1,000 from all over the United States. Every little bit will help. Miss Lucy Eldredge, 223 South Ludlow Street, Dayton, Ohio, will gladly receive your offering. Please mark it Amsterdam Fund, and from what church it comes.

Let's help as much as we can, and observe Pilgrim Fellowship Week in a noble and fine way!

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TRUITT, Ass't Sec'y,
National Pilgrim Fellowship.

OUR CHURCH.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
JANUARY 29, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Ephesians 5: 25-27.

In preparation for this meeting study the hymn book for materials on the Church and look up as many references as possible in the Bible concerning the Church. Get somebody to present these different materials. For instance, one person could well be prepared to discuss "The Church's One Foundation." Another could tell of Paul's idea concerning the Church as recorded in the fifth chapter of Ephesians.

The major purpose for this meeting is to become acquainted with our own Church. Your pastor can give you help along this line. Study about the beginning of Congregational churches, and the Christian Church as it was started in Virginia by Rev. James O'Kelly, in New England by Rev. Elias Smith, and in Kentucky by Rev. Barton W. Stone. But do not be content with origins. Think of the colleges, orphanages, and other institutions established. Find out about the home and foreign missionary work now being done by our united Church. Have someone tell about Pilgrim Fellowship, which is just getting started in our denomination. Think of the Conference organization and churches within the Conference of which you are a part. A member of the Women's Missionary Society would gladly tell you of the work they do. Think of the opportunities for service as presented in "Our Church."

Make a study of your own local church. A poster could be prepared giving the officials. Another poster might show the activities of your church, and still another the contri-

Vesper services are held each Sunday evening. One Sunday a month the music Department furnishes the program; another Sunday the members of the Ministerial Association present the program; the other Sundays are in the direct charge of the Student Christian Association. Many students take advantage of this opportunity for a half hour of worship on Sunday evenings.

PETER DENIES HIS LORD.

LESSON IV—JANUARY 22, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.—1 Cor. 10: 12.

LESSON: Luke 22: 31-34; 54-62.

The Man In the Making.

When Jesus first saw Simon he said that he should be called Peter, which meant a "rock." But Simon, the impulsive, impassioned fisherman was not to become the steadfast apostle overnight; it was to be a process of becoming. Thus, it is that in today's lesson Jesus calls him Simon. "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan asked to have you, that he might sift you as wheat." There were still elements of instability in his character; there was still dross to be refined as by fire. Let no man accept anything less than Christ Jesus as his ideal, and let him consistently and persistently refuse to compromise voluntarily his ideal. But let no man become discouraged if he does not reach his ideal at once. It is going to take a whole eternity to come to the measure of the fullness of the stature of Christ. We must keep this fact in mind, too, in dealing with children and young people. They are in the process of becoming, they are to be judged in terms of that rather than simply in terms of what they are. It is not primarily a question of how far they have come, but in what direction they are going.

The Arch Enemy.

"Satan asked for you, that he might sift as wheat." The devil looks upon every person as fair spoil for himself. He takes delight in wrecking every life and ruining every character. He goes up and down like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. Let no man think that he can go along blithely in life, unassailed or unassailable by the devil. Jesus, who knew the wiles of the devil warned us to watch and pray. Paul said we did not fight against flesh and blood, therefore we ought to take the whole armour of God.

The Divine Defender.

"But I have made supplication for thee, that thy faith fail not." No man and the devil himself, is not able to pluck us out of the Father's hand. They that be for us are more than they that are against us. It helps to know that in the hour of trial and temptation there is One who intercedes for us. He will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able to bear. He is able to deliver us. But not unless we yield ourselves to Him and let Him have His way with us.

That Thy Faith Fail Not.

"But I have made supplication for thee, that thy faith fail not." Not that he should not fail, not that his courage should not fail, not even that his love might not fail, but that his faith fail not. His faith in himself, his faith in God, his faith in the church—if these had failed Peter would have failed indeed. Alas for the man whose faith has died!

Too Much of a Good Thing.

It is a good thing, a necessary thing, for a man to have confidence in himself. Confidence is about seventy-five per cent in swimming, so teachers of swimming tell us, and it is perhaps seventy-five per cent of life, too. But it is possible to have too much of a good thing, or at least too much of the wrong kind of confidence. Peter felt too sure of himself. He asserted vehemently that he was willing to go to prison and even to die with Jesus. And he meant it, too. But he was blind to his own weaknesses. He was depending too much on his own strength. He was under-estimating the power of the enemy. Let every man who thinks that he stands take heed unto himself lest he fall. Pride too often goes before a fall.

Following Afar Off.

"And Peter followed afar off." These words are usually used as a text for half-hearted devotion or discipleship to Christ, and of course they lend themselves to that interpretation. Half-way discipleship is the hard way of discipleship indeed. But these words also bear witness to Peter's love for and loyalty to Jesus. He undoubtedly followed from afar, hoping against hope that even yet he could do something in behalf of Jesus, trying to show that when he, with the other disciples, forsook him and fled in the garden, it was not his best self. One has to keep near to Jesus if he is to be victorious.

But He Denied.

Three times Peter denied his Lord. And lied in the bargain. When later he comes to write about it in Mark's gospel—Mark's gospel is closely connected with Peter inasmuch as it is Mark's account of Peter's preaching—Mark makes no excuses on behalf of Peter. Whatever other weaknesses Peter had, he was not given to making alibis. He simply denied his Lord, that was all there was to it. This boasting, swaggering disciple who only a short while before had boldly declared that he would even die for Jesus, was completely bowled over by a servant girl, a little maid. How weak we sometimes are when we think we are strongest.

The Look of Jesus.

Immediately upon the third denial—accompanied by the way with an oath and a lie—the cock crew. Then it all came back to Peter—how Jesus had said it would happen just that way. He must have wondered if Jesus would remember. He looked up from the courtyard to the upper level on which Jesus stood, and lo, his Lord was looking at him. He did remember. But there was no scorn, no condemnation, no bitterness in the look of his Lord—only a great compassion, a great tenderness, a great yearning. That look broke Peter's heart.

Godly Sorrow.

With breaking heart, Peter rushed out and away from it all. With great sobs he wept bitterly. How ashamed of himself he was. His pride was broken. His boastfulness was gone. From that hour he was a different man. But what anguish he suffered in the process.

butions which you make for local expenses, local benevolences, Conference and missionary gifts. Compare what you are doing with opportunities as you see them. When the meeting closes try to be sure that your members know something of our own denomination and its place among other denominations. We have something to be proud of. Try to find out what this is. We have tasks to be shared. Become familiar with them and think of them as opportunities.

You may want to invite the pastor, the chairman of the deacons or official board, the treasurer, or some of the other officials of your church to be present for this meeting and present briefly the work which they do. Another way to get at this idea is to have young people themselves represent these various officials.

The Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., can furnish some helpful materials for this and other meetings. Be sure you use the Board whenever help is needed.

F. C. L.

"Why do people use money they haven't earned to buy things they don't need to impress people they don't like?"

MONDAY.

A DEVOURING MONSTER.

"Woe . . . to the drunkards . . . whose glorious beauty is a fading flower. . . . They shall be trodden under foot."

"In that day shall the Lord of Hosts be for a crown of glory, the residue of the people."—Isa. 28: 1-10.

And so the prophet tells us that drunkenness doth not inherit the kingdom of God, and that the glory of the Lord is to the residue who shall be advanced in the kingdom of Christ. He is the sure foundation which is promised from the foundation of the world.

Whenever we see a drunken man, we are reminded that he is a fine man made in the image of God, a child of God, a child of God being ruined, and our gorge rises anew against the devouring monster which ruins so many of our strongest men. Drink spells disaster.

Prayer—O, our Father, kindle in our hearts an ever-burning indignation against the curse of strong drink, which blights so many fair lives. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES IT MAKE?

"I have learned in whatever state to be content."—Phil. 4: 11.

"Having food and raiment, let us be content."—I Tim. 6: 8.

Contentment is another hard lesson among the Christian graces. Life offers so many glorious things to the mass of humanity that they who cannot have and they who are unfortunate feel the pinch and the comparison makes it hard. And yet the same old gospel of the ages that makes one content with what he has is still effective. Only look to Him who can do this.

A legless man used to count his blessings and thank God. He said,

"What are legs? They make no essential difference."

Prayer—O Father, what sinners we are is our own urge to be comfortable and to have what others have. Send us Thy Holy Spirit through Jesus Christ, to be more like Him. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE UNEXPLAINED MAN.

"Of whom the world was not worthy."—Heb. 11: 38.

The eleventh chapter of Hebrews is a catalog of Noble men of religious history whose strength was in their simple common sense and in their sincere human sympathy; and whose mission was to exemplify the might of Christian virtue. They lacked the polish of schools but they had the rugged strength of manhood whose strength was in their faith and their righteousness.

These qualities are our elemental Christian heritage, and open to us all. We, too, have faith, be true, be warm in sympathies, sincere in reverence and altogether righteous as they.

Prayer—Thank God for great men, and for our privilege to be like them, and like Christ. Amen.

THURSDAY.

TRUE PATRIOTISM.

"Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king."—Heb. 2: 17 (read 13-17).

The kingdom of God and the teachings of Jesus Christ require that we, his children, be tolerant of all people and of all faiths; but not to be apologists for our faith, derogatory to the Gospel, or lax in our convictions. There is a tendency to be liberal at the sacrifice of principle; but when we cease to be loyal we cease to be liberal.

Prayer—O Lord, give us the Christ's spirit of sympathy and tolerance; but give us, too, His unanswerable loyalty to truth and Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE GOOD OF CHURCH SUPPERS.

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together."—Heb. 10: 25.

Paul stirred up the followers of Christ to the spirit of taking upon themselves the fellowship of the ministering of the saints. This was the spirit of a big church dinner we attended recently at a club-house on the shores of a lake. They all knew one another well; they indulged a little badinage and horseplay; but it was all hearty happy Christian fellowship more impressive than a sermon.

Whatever might be said about the hard work of church suppers and other disadvantages one thing is certain, it develops social solidarity of members and friends. Brotherhood is real. It demonstrates that the best society is the company of those who have Christ for a common friend.

Prayer—We thank Thee, our Father, for the friends and the fellowship we have found in Thy church. May the brotherhood grow according to Thy will and pleasure. Amen.

SATURDAY.

EVERY MAN A PROPHET.

"Can ye not discern the sign of the times?"—Matt. 16: 3.

Our hearts have not kept pace with our intellects and hands. Science has made us mighty giants indeed, but we are pigmies in character still. The signs of the times is for something better. I was in a great Conference at Elon College recently; but the greatness of that conference was the inclusion of the great lay-force of the church.

When the rank and file of church members are sincerely concerned over the church life, something will happen. The Lord's work should be everyone's concern. You who read this may be a prophet of the Lord.

TO THE PASTORS AND CHURCHES OF THE EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

By F. ERVIN HYDE, President.

January 22, 1939, has been designated as College Day throughout the area of the Southern Convention. On that day we are asked to present the cause of Christian Education in general and the needs of Elon College in particular.

Yesterday.

For nearly a half-century, Elon College has served our Church and she has served well. More than 10,000 young people proudly call Elon their Alma Mater. She has prepared them for their chosen vocations and Today.

Elon is one of the gifts of a past generation to the present. "Men who builded wiser than they knew" have given us Elon with all its sacred traditions, its beautiful buildings and splendid equipment. But along with this heritage goes the responsibility of carrying on—the task of making a bigger and better Elon.

Today Elon College is still at work with the same noble purpose and high ideals for which her founders brought her into being. She is still at the task of preparing youth to take their place in the world of today. This year's enrollment far surpasses any previous year's record in the history of the institution. Its faculty is made up of

In a recent Bulletin sent out from the president's office, Dr. L. E. Smith states:

"She (Elon College) looks to the future with improved financial conditions, with increased prestige in the field of Christian higher education, and with a far more enthusiastic approval by the public. Her hopes are brighter and her field of service continues to widen."

In the days that lie just ahead there are plans to free Elon of its indebtedness and a program of development that will make Elon College the pride of our fellowship—the servant of the Church in its task of building the ELON COLLEGE BAND OF 1938.

The Elon College Band plays an important part in the life of the student body. With more than thirty members the Band furnishes music for inter-collegiate athletic games and other occasions throughout the year.

professions. She has trained them to take their places in society. She has sought to create an atmosphere where Christian character would become contagious. Not only has the college exerted its influence upon those who have gone out from her halls, but also upon a great number who have never been privileged to set foot upon her beautiful campus. A big percentage of her graduates have entered the teaching profession or the ministry, making it impossible to determine the influence of these graduates upon the lives of those with whom they have come into contact. Elon has also made it possible for a great number of the youth of our Church to secure leadership training during the Summer Conference that might have otherwise been lost to our Church. It has been the center of many of our denominational enterprises through the years.

men and women well qualified by educational advantages and experience to take their places as leaders in their chosen fields. Its equipment is unsurpassed by any small college in this area. The institution is rapidly taking its place among other educational institutions.

Today more is expected of a college than in the past. A certain financial rating is essential in order to secure and maintain membership as an accredited college in the Association of American Colleges and Universities. Elon is a Church-owned and Church-operated college. Naturally she looks to our constituency to provide the greater part of her support. So as we enter the College Period let us pledge anew our allegiance. We will support Elon College by our gifts, prayers, and good will. For what we do today determines largely the present and future welfare of our college.

Kingdom by helping youth into more abundant life.

The Appeal.

Surely such an institution is worthy of our heartiest support and friendly cooperation. As president of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, I call upon the ministers of that Conference to please present the cause of our college. Alumni, please, use your influence to create interest and good will in your Alma Mater. Churches please pay your Conference Apportionment for Elon College promptly. Mark January 22 on your calendar. Make it a day of inspiration by doing something for the cause of higher Christian Education and your own denominational college. Let us prepare the way for the greater days that are bound to open up for our college if we do our part. This is the hour of Elon's greatest need. We cannot—we must not—fail her!

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

With this report we are starting off on another year's journey. On this journey we hope to have lots of joy strewn along the way. We know that we will have some disappointments, but we hope they will be few in number. We had lots of joy in our work last year. The people throughout our entire brotherhood were kind, considerate, and cooperative and interested in our work here in behalf of our large family of children. It makes one happy to know that he has the loyal support of the people for whom he works.

The writer feels that he has the loyal support of our church people and appreciates it more than he can express in this letter. The writer loves people. He loves children. It is a real joy to meet and mingle with people and make friends. It is a joy to live with children and try to guide them along life's pathway and train them to be useful citizens. It is a great responsibility to train children, whether in an orphanage or in a home. Time changes things. Conditions change. Ideas change. We have to meet these changing conditions as they come.

We hope and pray that the churches and Sunday schools will stand by us during the year 1939. We feel sure they will. We are counting on them and we know we will not be disappointed. One of our goals for 1939 is to get every Sunday school on our monthly contributing list. Sunday schools that make monthly offerings get a real joy out of it. We are anxious that every Sunday school have this joy during the year 1939. Let us all pull together and cooperate in a fine way in behalf of the little children in your Christian Orphanage.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

AN EXPERIENCE OF GRATITUDE.

We folks here in the Valley try to show our appreciation and loyalty for the services of a consecrated young man, who set such a splendid example of sincere Christian living in more than verbal support. The Andes ministers, father and son, have faithfully served our congregation for a total of eighteen years, have helped our church grow from a small, rude building to the present modern edifice we now enjoy. We feel that the results of that great record of service cannot be expressed in mere church building or dollars and cents, but only in the sum of human hearts made over for the Master we all are supposed to serve.

With this little note as a preface, we offer the following resolutions for publication that the great family served by THE CHRISTIAN SUN may know how even young people feel about the reward of true worth as expressed in terms of Christian character:

September 11, 1938.

We, the Junior Choir and Young People's Choir of Bethel Church, realizing that we are about to lose our very good friend, counselor, and director, Rev. W. J. Andes, and whereas it grieves our hearts to part with one so dearly esteemed, we know that time brings changes to all of us. So we offer him our congratulations upon his opportunity for higher study. May the greater knowledge he may obtain be of service to his fellowmen and to the Kingdom of God. It is our sincere hope that he find success and happiness wherever he may go. Whereas it has been our privilege and honor to work together for the advancement of finer music in the church and in the homes, we do appreciate the unselfish efforts that have been made in our behalf, and we realize our good fortune to have been associated with one whose character and living example inspired us to follow in his footsteps as a builder for the Lord.

So, being grateful for the time and teachings he has given us so unselfishly and without stint, we offer the following:

Be it resolved that:

1. The choir and friends of the choir present to their leader and pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, a gift of $10.00 or more, as a "going-away gift," with the hope that the small amount we are able to give will help over some rough place in the new life before him.

2. The choirs express their heartfelt thanks for all the work which Rev. W. J. Andes has so faithfully done in their behalf by a rising vote.

(Note: The actual sum was a little over $11.00. At the vote of thanks both choirs came to their feet, singing a brief stanza of the sweet old negro spiritual, "Steel Away to Jesus." The choirs were very impressive in white vestments.)

ENJOYING "THE SUN."

A great Physical Culturist says that if we will look at the sun every day it will strengthen our vision. So has THE CHRISTIAN SUN strengthened my vision.

Scientists tell us: "There are spots on the sun," and to the effect of these spots are due drouth and famine, and dust, and rain and war, and unusual disturbances among men. Sometimes there are "spots" on THE CHRISTIAN SUN, too, that cause disturbances among men: Death notices, that make us say with sorrow of some gallant ambassador of the kingdom, "There, he's gone!" or such a wealth of interesting personal news items that the overcrowded devotional material leaves us hungry with drouth and famine and dust in our souls! Yet, even the "sun spots" lead eventually to the outworking of the glory of God and the purpose of his will.

Pythagoras, who shares with Thales and Xenophanes the high distinction of starting the problem of physical science, is said to have been the first who took the title of philosopher and the first to apply the term "cosmos" to the universe. He believed that "the universe is a harmonious whole (cosmos), the heavenly bodies by their motions causing sounds (music of the spheres)."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN, that official organ of the Congregational and Christian Churches, sings to me. Sometimes it's a song of sadness, sometimes a little lifting tune of happiness, sometimes a magnificently beautiful, haunting, oratorio, "the still sad music of humanity."

"If we're God's friends," someone has said, "we must come up to Him at night with the map of the whole world on our hearts." I love the Catholic Church; I love the Congregational and Christian Church. I have a little map, not so little either, that I carry on my heart, and on my wall. On it are the states and our Congregational-Christian Churches and pastors therein located (to the extent of my knowledge), and whenever a piece of news comes out in THE CHRISTIAN SUN I paste or write or pigeonhole it under or near that church where it belongs, thus keeping before my mind and eyes a birds-eye view of the whole, and so from SUN to SUN I think of those fields and of the work going on there side by side with another Church denomination—a bit of young people's work here, a fine revival there, a new pastor over yonder, new students, or another orphan; and when the quiet hour comes there's always time for a bit of thanksgiving here, a bit of petition there, a Doxology over yonder. Thus THE SUN brings warmth and growth and renewed vision and life, and with its matchless eternal truth shines more and more into the perfect day. This is what THE CHRISTIAN SUN means to me. This is why I wonder, as the expiration of my subscription draws near, how I can never afford not to afford THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

PERSONALS

Dr. H. S. Hardecastle, pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., is attending the Mid-Winter Meeting of Congregational - Christian Churches being held in Evanston, Ill., this week.

Please remember the fifth Sunday gatherings of the churches: at Danville, Va., at High Point, N. C., and at Elon College, N. C. These meetings can have much value. Be sure to attend the one in your section.

Dr. E. C. Gillette and Rev. W. T. Scott were among those from the Southeast attending the Superintendent's Conference held last week in Evanston, Illinois, preceding the missionary section of the Mid-Winter Meeting.

Miss Edna Fulcher, office secretary of the Board of Christian Education, has returned to her work after an absence of seven weeks due to illness. She is now ready to answer requests from Sunday schools and church leaders for materials.

Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Key are busy at work in their new pastorate at Torrington, Conn. An older young people's choir has just been organized and the men of the church are forming a men's club. Five members joined the church on New Year's Day.

On January 18 the members of the Missionary societies of Wakefield and Dendron Churches enjoyed slides about mission work in India, presented by Rev. J. L. Johnson. This was in connection with their study of "The Church Takes Root in India."

Does it make you happy to think that in these great days of need for international friendship the two hundred churches of the Southern Convention contribute to foreign missions about enough money to support four or five missionaries? Will we change this? When?

Some pastors are thinking that there are some small rural churches that should unite to make larger churches. In this way it is possible to preserve the present churches and do a much larger work, say the preachers. What do the laymen think of this?

Remember to give special emphasis at some time during January and February to the Elon College Apportionment from your church. Be able to feel that you have a share in supporting our institution of higher learning.

Are you content to be no better this year than last? Do you think the church should continue to do just as it has? Are you afraid of progress. Honestly, what do you think? If you want progress, are you willing to pay the price?

How about holding a training school in your church, or a group of near-by churches, soon? The Board of Christian Education is eager to help you, if you want the help. Write to the Board at Elon College, N. C., telling of your desires.

Dr. Frederick K. Stamm, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Community Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., will be the speaker at the Elon College Community Church Sunday. Dr. Stamm is a prominent minister and lecturer, and we are to have him in our area.

Our church in Suffolk, Va., still moves forward. Counted attendance at the church services show a gain last year over the previous year. Sixty-five members were received in 1938. The church now has more than 1,300 members. Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor, has a big job.

The Southern Convention has three fine sons graduating from university in June. They are: Aubrey C. Todd of South Norfolk, Va., at Chicago Theological School; Lanson Granger of Norfolk, Va., and Herbert G. Council, Jr., of Franklin, Va., at the Yale Divinity School.

The Promotional Secretary is not doing much advertising, but he is busy all the time trying to supply the needs of the churches. If you need any kind of help for your church, please feel free to write him at Elon College. He is eager to render the service needed by the churches.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes to express its gratitude to Dr. R. M. Andrews, editor of the Methodist Protestant Herald, for the loan of the cut used on the front page this week. This cut, which belongs to their Young People's Department, is a fitting tribute to the devotion and faith of the young people of the Church.

The Executive Committee of the Southern Convention was in session at Norlina on Friday of last week. Members of the committee are: Dr. S. C. Harrell, chairman; Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, secretary; Dr. H. S. Hardecastle, Dr. J. G. Truitt, and Dr. E. W. Jones. To this committee is committed the business of the Convention when the Convention is not in session.

Dr. C. A. Vincent writes of encouraging progress in the Miami Shores Community Church. During the last two months forty women have united with the Women's Auxiliary. At present a group of men are canvassing the six hundred homes in Miami Shores to tell them more about the church and to open an opportunity for all the residents to share in the services of the church.

Dr. Albert W. Palmer, of Chicago Theological Seminary was a visitor in Elon College, N. C., last week. During his stay, Mrs. L. E. Smith entertained informally in his honor. Guests were members of the Elon College Ministerial Association. Members of the Elon College Community Church regretted that Dr. Palmer was unexpectedly called north, so that he could not be their guest speaker last Sunday, as was planned.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

Heretofore offerings from the churches, Sunday schools, and individuals have not been published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. During this year all offerings will be published giving churches, Sunday schools or individuals, and amounts given. This will enable the membership of the church to see what is being contributed. I hope that this plan will meet with approval and that every church and Sunday school may be generous in its offerings.

PLEASANT RIDGE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Pleasant Ridge Christian Church of Guilford County, N. C., was organized at the Liberty School House, which was located about two miles southwest of the present site on the Colfax Road, in the year 1867. The membership and congregation were composed of the families that were living in the community at that time, who were as follows, to-wit: Elias Perkins, J. D. McGrady, W. M. Hunt, M. F. Nelson, Charles Mundy, David Huffines, William Highfill, Henry Barker, I. J. Brittian, James Adams, J. W. Knight, T. A. Stewart, Foster McCoin, R. M. Stafford, D. L. Stafford, I. E. Thorpe, and E. M. Suthard.

The first pastor called to serve the church was Rev. D. T. Dean, who served the church for a number of years, and he was followed by Rev.

The citizens of this neighborhood met at one o'clock, P. M., to organize a Sunday school. Opened by Foster McCoin reading the 14 Chapter of St. John and prayer, after which R. M. Stafford was called upon to preside over the meeting and hold the election which results as follows: Mary Stanley, superintendent; I. E. Thorpe, assistant; Elias Perkins, secretary; W. W. McCoin, librarian; Foster McCoin, Testament Teacher; R. M. Stafford, assistant; I. E. Thorpe, Reading Class; Foster McCoin, treasurer; Jennetta Knight, teacher; Sabina Perkins, Reading Class; C. Stanley, hearing heart lessons, after which the teachers gave the lesson, second chapter of Matthew, the school closed by Huffines, teacher of Young People's Class; Mrs. Carrie Lee Dowell, Intermediate Department; Mrs. S. F. Huffines, elementary teacher.

FIFTH SUNDAY.

The first month in the New Year starts us off with a fifth Sunday, and this right in the middle of the College Period. What a fine opportunity it afford the Sunday schools of the Convention to take an offering for the college as planned by the Convention and to do their share in raising Conference Apportionments. Is your Sunday school accustomed to take offerings on fifth Sundays for the college? If so, this is an opportunity to increase these offerings if possible. If your Sunday school has not been accustomed to take an offering for the college on fifth Sundays, this is a fine opportunity to begin. You certainly would encourage the writer and the college by joining with other schools and receiving this offering. May we depend on your cooperation on the fifth Sundays?

As soon as the offerings are received, pleased forward the same to the college that the results of your offerings may be published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Thank you for your cooperation.

L. E. SMITH.

SUPERANNUATION.

The Christmas Offering for Superannuation has come in from many churches and is very gratifying. Our Burlington, N. C., church seems to have led all others in their liberality which in a measure is explained by the fact that three members of the Board of Superannuation, who know the need and vote the grants, are members of our Burlington Church. If all knew the facts as some of us do there would be no difficulty in raising this fund. We acknowledged with gratitdue the following:

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

OUR EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM.

It is the purpose of the Church of which we are part to train all its members for effective Christian service. Beginning with infants and continuing as long as Grandpa lives, there is something in the educational program of the Church for those who want to learn. The Church undertakes to educate in Christian ideals and the skills for service.

Materials are furnished for the churches to use in the Cradle Roll, before the babies can attend the church services, and for every age group, including those who are too feeble to attend services. It is expected that the leaders in the churches will see to it that this literature is used.

Young people, pastors, teachers, missionary leaders, and other church workers come in for special helps in education. The local and district training schools, the summer conferences, institutes, correspondence courses, and college work are all offered by the Church for those who are eager to improve themselves. The Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor societies, missionary organizations, choir rehearsals, mid-week services, worship (preaching) services, conferences and conventions are all part of the educational program of the Church.

Now is a good time for pastors, superintendents, and officers of all kinds to make plans that will reach all the people connected with the church with an educational program that is effective. It is also a good time for them, and others, to decide that they will take advantage of the chances for development that the Church offers. This will include reading, attendance at services, and sharing in the work of the Church.

BE SURE THAT ELON WINS.

People in our section of America became greatly interested in a recent football game played on the West Coast. Why? Because Duke, a good school in our area, was representing us there. Those interested in athletics watch for returns concerning Elon when our own college meets another in some contest. We want our college to win.

Our college is now in contest with a more serious foe. She must face the rising tide of educational standards. Other schools constantly improving their workmanship. They join hands in cooperative work and in setting standards to which they must all attain. Our college needs to be in this class of the best. With a little more help from the churches she can be. Without this help she must lose out in the contest for high standards of education. We have so nearly reached the goal-line of success that it will be as disappointing as it was for Duke to lose the Rose Bowl game in the last fifty seconds of the game.

All Elon College lacks of winning is for all of our churches to pay their Conference Apportionments in full. This simple efficiency on the part of the churches will insure the success of our college. Let's Be Sure That Elon Wins.

A MESSAGE FROM CHICAGO.

Editorials for this week are being written in Chicago, Ill. It is the time of the Mid-Winter Meetings of officials of Congregational and Christian Churches. From every state in the Union come men and women to discuss our common problems and to exchange experiences. When the "sons of God" who are leaders of our Church come together for counsel, your editor, who is also Promotional Secretary, likes to be in the midst of them.

The first group to get together is the State Superintendents. These are the paid workers from the various states on whom rests the responsibility of directing all the activities of the churches. They are discussing here the problems related to getting good men into the pastorates, of getting sufficient pay for pastoral service, of plans for financing local, state and denominational enterprises, of overcoming difficulties that arise in local churches, or conferences, of directing young people's work, of creating more interest in the work of the Church on the part of men, of how literature can be created and used to advantage, and many other problems that face the Church all over the country. These are great and good men who are here. Some of them have served for many years, and some are here for the first time. No one knows all the answers to questions of promotion, but all are here to study and to share. It is the kind of company that delights one's soul, informs the mind, and sends one back to his own work with greater hope and a feeling of comradeship.

From the tenth floor of this great hotel in the midst of a great city, many miles from the Carolinas and Virginia, your editor tries to visualize both what our Southern Convention is now and what it can soon become. His heart throbs in unison with the fine group of ministers who preach the gospel of love and work with all their might for the success of the churches. He takes pride in the fact that most of the two hundred churches made some noticeable progress last year. He is happy to believe that most of the churches are served by the pastors they want, and that those now seeking a pastor will soon succeed. There are many beautiful lines in the picture before the mind's eye.

But there is much yet to be done. There are large communities in which no minister lives. Many churches have not yet experienced the joy of doing all they are expected by their Conference to do. Young people are eager to share in making a better world, but have not yet found the way to serve best. They would find keen delight in sending a missionary to China, or some other part of the world, but as yet no one has led them into this joy. Hundreds of teach- (Continued on page 13.)

I Saw Southern Convention

By THOMAS ALFRED TRIPP.

From the first of November to Thanksgiving it was my good fortune to work among our churches in Virginia and North Carolina. On the programs of four Conferences and in a considerable number of local churches I had the joy of making many new friends and of sharing in what proved to be a very lively and interesting series of events.

Between sermons, speeches and the several conferences there were many delightful excursions which gave most interesting side-lights on the environment of the churches and the people. Most unusual was the opportunity of visiting, for the first time, several tobacco warehouses where I met the auctioneers. One of them was the gentleman who has made the chant of his profession nationally famous on the radio. The neat cocks of peanuts in the fields of Eastern Virginia were also an impressive sight.

On a farm in Western North Carolina I tried my hand at grading tobacco but missed my guess on about three out of five leaves, much to the delight of the farmer and his sons who, of course, knew more about the subject than I.

There was less farm land devoted to cotton than I had expected in these two states, a sign that a wider diversification of farming is becoming a custom in Virginia and North Carolina. Our attention was attracted to the fact that numerous churches, homes and barns had been freshly painted. More of them are surrounded by good fences, well-hung gates, attractive lawns and net shrubbery plantings.

To one who works in every section of the Nation there are distinguishable differences in the attitudes of the people toward community and social righteousness. It was, therefore, a matter of considerable gratification to see that many Christians in the Old Dominion and Tar Heel states were well aware of their problems.

For one thing, some of the southern papers are "speaking out in meeting" about social reform in a manner such as is needed everywhere but unfortunately not always to be found. One of the disappointing elements of American life is the conservatism of wide sections of the press. North Carolina and Virginia have papers which hinder social and moral progress, of course, but certain of the leading dailies are actively preaching a gospel of clean life and social justice in a manner which is placing them among leaders of the Nation.

Through the courtesy of members of the faculty of the school of religion, I was privileged to attend a symposium at Duke University, November 17 and 18, on "The Economic Base of the South." All the speakers were southerners and they faced squarely up to the social and economic issues of the eleven southeastern states. If every section of the country, each of which has its own series of special problems, should engage in a similar self-study it would be a great thing for the whole country.

The symposium revealed a number of startling facts to the visitor. First, it seemed to be taken for granted that cotton does not have the importance for the South that it once did. This condition is largely due to the fact that foreign markets have fallen off as a result of tariff walls and the increase of cotton production in other parts of the world. A further reason for the decrease in the importance of cotton is the increased use of chemical fibers such as rayon. No one seemed to lament the cotton situation but all were interested in getting at the facts in order to meet the new conditions.

Of course, large quantities of cotton will be grown in the future because of the favorable climate and because southern farmers know how to raise it. But less cotton means more diversification of crops, more cattle and milk and better diet for the people, they said.

Forestry received a major place in the attention of the symposium since the Southeast has its splendid timber growths and because of the increasing need for wood products. Chemical uses of agricultural products was another emphasis and much interest was centered in the "million dollar" laboratory which the United States Department of Agriculture plans to erect at New Orleans for purposes of experimenting in the chemical uses for the farm crops of the South. Experiments by the colleges and private laboratories already have gone far, according to reports, in increasing the out-lets for agriculture, all of which suggests better conditions in rural areas as well as in cities.

The experience of studying the economics of the South was exciting but not more so than the work among the churches. There was the delight I had in working in the Western and Eastern North Carolina Conferences where the churches are nearly all rural and where the pastors and people are very faithful to the churches. In the Eastern Virginia and in the North Carolina and Virginia Conferences they set a good example of the way rural-urban relations can be carried on among Christians.

At Elon College I had the privilege of a guest room and the hospitality of President and Mrs. L. E. Smith for a number of days. Elon College is an enthusiasm of mine. This school is doing what a church college should do, it seems to be. There is close contact between the churches and the institution. The churches help support the College and the College serves the churches by training their Christian leadership, both lay and ministerial.

I visited the Orphanage and told Superintendent Johnston when I left, "If you are going to have an orphanage this is the way it should be run." Cleanliness and good cheer seems to abound. I was particularly pleased with the example of good farming methods in evidence on the farm which provides food and much needed work to occupy and train the young people.

Finally, to me the most important element in our fellowship in this area, as elsewhere, is the local church. For this reason, next to the significance of the work of the pastors themselves, I was impressed with the great worth of the missionary field work of the Southern Convention as represented in what Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Rev. F. C. Lester are doing. They are setting out in a renewed program which is sure to be more of help to the local parishes. Their work should be adequately supported. Mr. Lester's special emphasis on his desire to do field service for the churches as he spoke in the Conferences was most encouraging. Dr. Atkinson's rich experience drawn from long years of work and Mr. Lester's buoyant energy make them a fine team.

In the annual conference sessions at least six emphases were in evidence.

1. Perfecting the organization of the Southern Convention and making the merger effective.—This phase took the form of certain revisions in the constitution.

2. "Rural Pastorates."—Much discussion was heard regarding the possible benefits to small town and country churches in a given area which would join in a pastorate to employ a full-time pastor. Several persons expressed a desire for a minister who could live in their midst, call in the homes and share in the lives of the

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Deacon Robert Claud Norfleet of Holy Neck Christian Church, Holland, Va., passed to his eternal home on Sunday night, January 15, 1939, at the age of 77 years, 5 months and 6 days, having been born August 9, 1861. He was a son of the late John and Margaret Ann Lee Norfleet. He and Miss Mamie Rogers were united in marriage February 21, 1884. His funeral was conducted by Revs. Arnold Slater and W. H. Corbitt, at Holy Neck Church, on Tuesday, January 17, eight months after the death of his beloved wife. He is survived by three sons: Elmo J. and Murray Norfleet of Holland, Va.; Alva J. Norfleet of Washington, D. C.; and two daughters, Miss Alice Lee Norfleet and Mrs. Emmett Harrell of Holland, Va. Six grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews survive him.

Mr. Norfleet served Holy Neck Church as a deacon and teacher of the Men's Bible Class for a number of years. He was Commissioner of the Revenue for Nansemond County for a period of twenty-four years. He attended the sessions of the Eastern Virginia Conference for a period of fifty years. He served as one of the collectors of the Conference for thirty years. He was a regular attendant of the sessions of the Southern Convention for many years. These facts are cited to show that his interest in the church was not limited to his own local church. He probably attended more funerals than any other local resident of Nansemond County during the past twenty-five years.

He was related by blood ties and marriage to many of the families of Nansemond County. He was familiarly known as "Cousin Claude" throughout the county in which he lived. He was a man of quiet, retiring manner, friendly in his approach and kind in his attitude towards others. In his campaigns for election to public office he always held the esteem and goodwill of those who opposed him. It was a tribute to his fairness and integrity that he and his competitors remained warm friends in victory or defeat.

In his personal life he was spiritually minded, consecrated, sincere and faithful. His life was characterized by a conscientious loyalty to what he thought was right. There was no disposition to compromise in any field of right and truth. He was greatly beloved by a host of personal friends who appreciated his life, his character and his devoted service to the church and the community. His life found its greatest fellowship in the church of his choice. His obligation to the church and to his Lord always took first place in his heart and life. His saintly face, in the house of the Lord, shone brightly with a heavenly light which inspired others to worship with greater devotion. A good man has gone to his reward. He lived a victorious life and died a triumphant death. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." It is a blessed privilege to live a Christian life. And we should not permit our tears to blind our eyes to the glorious fact that it is also blessed to "die in the Lord." If we are faithful to our Lord, we shall be blessed in life and in death. Such a life deserves a place in a church paper. It should be an inspiration and a challenge to our faith.

JANUARY 22.

This day was designated as College Day—the day on which all churches and Sunday schools were expected to make offerings for Elon College. Because of the great need of the college, it is hoped that an offering was received in our churches. If your church and Sunday school did not receive an offering, please do not abandon the plan but give the members of your church and Sunday school an opportunity to express their interest in the college by making an offering. This offering when received at the college will count on Conference Apportionments.

The Convention has given to us a church year. In the mind of the Convention, this is the plan of organization for our work in interest of the institutions of the Convention. The churches will find it profitable to follow the plan. It is hoped that every church raised its full Apportionment for the Christian Orphanage. They now have an opportunity to express their interest in and concern for the development of the college. The church that raises its Apportionment for the college will find it much easier to raise its Apportionment for Missions. If these allotted amounts are raised during the periods assigned, there will be no great anxiety on the part of the church about raising Apportionments at the end of the year. It is always helpful and inspirational to discharge duties and meet obligations as they occur. We are much stronger and much more enthusiastic when we face the next task to be done.

The college needs its money from the Convention during the spring months. Your offerings now will mean a great deal more than if you make them later. What a fine thing it would be if the entire apportionment could be raised during the College Period. I know that many of the churches and Sunday schools will do their best.

ELKTON PASTORATE.

It is not my custom to do much writing for publication, but I do want to say a few words about this Elkton Pastorate. In fact, I am reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN every week because the Christian Endeavor of Mt. Olivet (R) sent in the money to cover my subscription for one year. They were so nice about it, they almost forgot to tell me about it.

From the first day I arrived in the field, I have felt perfectly at home among these good people. They have done everything possible to make for the comfort and happiness of my wife and me, even subscribing to a very old custom—"pounding the preacher."—Bethel led off, followed by Mt. Olivet (G), and then Mt. Olivet (R), and Antioch has made it a sort of habit. These "wealthy farmers" have everything there is that is good to eat, and to share with them means that one is faring well.

I am inspired with the work being done by the young people. A finer group I have never seen at work. They enter into the life of the church with real vigor and vitality. These young men and women will go far toward real success if they will keep and quicken the pace they have already set.

My wife and I are enjoying the use of an electric toaster, given us by the Pilgrim Fellowship group of Antioch Church. Thanks again, young people!

The work on this pastorate progresses nicely. Finances are coming up in good shape. Congregations are large. Sunday schools are doing well. Young people's organizations are vigorous and women's missionary societies are hard at work.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

If I have a field to plough, and the ground is in good condition, I like to plough it and get it finished and then go to the next job. I like to do the jobs as they come and finish one at a time. There is nothing like having some system about doing things. Have a plan and work the plan. Put some business principles in what you do. I have often thought if we could get our churches to adopt some workable plan and work the plan, they would be able to accomplish so much more in the Kingdom's work.

Several years ago the Southern Convention divided the church year into periods, allotting certain months for a designated institution of the church. It is also asked that a certain amount of money be raised by each Conference through its conference apportionments for the institution designated for that period. The apportionment committees of the several Conferences have given much time and consideration to making the apportionments in order to be fair to each church. It's quite a job. Some mistakes may have been made, but they can be corrected from year to year. Some will have to be increased and some lowered to get on a fair basis. I feel sure all the committee have done their best to make a fair distribution of the amounts to be raised.

Elon College has been assigned the months of January and February for its special period. The churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to raise for Elon College the sum of $12,500 through the Conference Apportionments. Suppose your church has been apportioned $100 of this amount and you raised this amount during January and February for Elon College. Then you have that much of your Conference Apportionment raised. That is behind you. Then you are ready to enter the next period which is missions and so on through the year as the several periods come. Someone in your church will say, "We can't do it," but you can if you try. If you could visit Elon College, your college, and see the beautiful buildings, the student body of fine boys and girls, you would be happy to do your part. If you could but realize what a wonderful work Dr. Smith, our beloved President, has done since he has been president, working night and day to save your college for your denomination, you would be so interested you would rejoice in doing more than your part. Let us all work and pray that we might raise the $12,500 for Elon College during January and February.

VIRGILINA LETTER.

The Christmas holidays passed quietly and pleasantly with us here. We were kindly remembered by our members and friends with substantial expressions of good will and friendship. One son, Charles, Jr., came expecting to spend a few days, but on account of a favorable change in the sale of oranges was called back to Orlando, Fla., the next day. Mrs. Newman, Ralph, Leon, and myself visited the oldest daughter, Mrs. Mason, and our four grandchildren at Elm City, N. C.

With the exception of special music only Hebron Church had Christmas exercises. At Hebron on Christmas Eve night a most delightful program was rendered, picturing the visit of the Magi to Bethlehem. This entertainment was prepared under the supervision of Miss Emma Gray Hayes and Mr. Wesley Williamson.

A good number was present and everybody seemed delighted.

The work of the New Year has begun with some encouraging features. Congregations have been encouraging. All the churches have taken the Christmas offering for Ministerial Relief. The Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage was better than in recent years. We are confidently expecting a year of delightful fellowship as we work together, as well as some forward steps.

people. The success of a few groups of churches already doing this speaks with favor regarding this proposal. Elsewhere, as in Georgia and Ohio, yoked fields or "pastorates" are the established custom and they work quite well, it was pointed out.

3. Field Service.—As suggested above, there was much interest in Mr. Lester's offer to be useful to the churches. His expressed aim to help churches, Sunday schools and youth groups through field work was well received.

4. Evangelism.—How to win the people to Christ and the church on the basis of a clear understanding of the Christian Gospel was most encouraging to those of us who are interested in evangelism. Reaching the people, the disadvantaged classes as well as the privileged, is a great need. An emphasis on real Christianity calls for a restudy of our faith in the light of modern society.

5. Support of the work of the churches.—There was noted an interest in Christian stewardship and the support of the missionary field service of the Convention and its institutions.

6. The Ministry.—Higher standards for the ministry were expressed in the best series of reports on ministerial ethics I have ever heard and by what appeared to be a very conscientious method of selecting and testing candidates for licensure and ordination.

One walks with reverence and humility along paths where such leaders as James O'Kelly trod and where the many present-day servants of God, both old and young, still travel so well. I am sure that I received more inspiration than I gave. Already I am hoping that again I may have the privilege to accept the invitation of Mr. Lester who said as I left, "Come again," and of Dr. Atkinson who wrote upon my return to the office, "We shall certainly welcome you again for a similar visit."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

A WONDERFUL STORY OF A WONDERFUL LIFE.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers will recall that your Mission Secretary wrote of the very thrilling experience and work of Mr. Charles S. Bates, Exter, N. H., just after Mr. Bates' death early last fall. Our acquaintance through several years with Mr. Bates reveals something but by no means all the good accomplished by this wonderful man. Verily truth is more thrilling than fiction as every one will admit who reads the following story of Mr. Bates' work, written by one who was for twenty-five years Secretary of the American Board and had first-hand information about Mr. Bates.

"YOU, SIR, HAVE THE HEART OF GOD."

By CORNELIUS HOWARD PATTON.

It was on a day in November, 1911, that a middle-aged man of sturdy build and with a benevolent face, hitherto unknown to me, walked into my office at 14 Beacon Street and said that he had been doing pretty well in his business of late and would like to make a special gift to the American Board.

He understood I had recently returned from an extended trip through Africa and thought I might be able to suggest some object in one of our African fields. I found that, as a result of a deep spiritual experience of conversion, he preferred to have his money applied in an evangelistic way.

"I am interested," he remarked, "in those who have never had a chance, the millions of people who have never even heard of Christ. I believe in education and medical work and all the practical things you are doing, but I feel that the real, deep-down need of these people is Christ; and I want my money to go in a way that will make Christ known and accepted to the largest possible number."

Needless to say, I was tremendously interested, and recognized that his point of view was as vital as it was unusual in an age so largely given over (so far, at least, as Christian business men are concerned) to the social and practical aspects of the Christian enterprise.

This was my introduction to Charles S. Bates, who for twenty-seven years I have known in the intimacy of a Christian fellowship which I cherish as one of the rich experiences of my life.

In this story I must confine myself to his remarkable achievement in the realm of giving—how, under the leadership of God and through the instrumentality of the American Board, he was enabled to transmute his hard-earned gains into the wealth of the Kingdom of Christ.

On the occasion mentioned above I learned that he was, in a small way, a manufacturer of shoes; but he gave me no clue as to the amount he wished to invest in our evangelistic work. I thought at once of the need of salaried native evangelists in our West Central Africa mission.

Only a few weeks before I had returned from that field which seemed to me ripe for the harvest. I had been accompanied on the trip by Dr. Frederick B. Bridgman, of Natal, one of the ablest men ever sent out by the American Board.

We had early come to the conclusion that the mission was making a serious mistake in depending mainly upon the voluntary and largely undirected and untrained witness of their lay converts for the spread of Christianity among the great Ovimbundu tribe, the theory being that if the converts were given the rudiments of education and taught some useful trade, they might be depended upon to settle in the villages, make themselves indispensable, and use their Sundays for preaching the Gospel.

I cannot go into the details of the argument, but the plain fact was that, after thirty years, little progress was being made, and that some of the Christian groups were in a sorry condition for lack of a trained minis-task. Dr. Bridgman and I urged the early employment of such workers as could be properly schooled, and the mission agreed to try the experiment should sufficient funds be forthcoming.

If ever in modern times there was a man sent from God it was Mr. Bates, as the truly remarkable growth of that mission attests.

I outlined the situation and asked him if he would like to put ten evangelists into the Angola field.

"How much would it cost?"

"Well," I replied, "money goes a long way out there in Africa, and I think $50.00 per annum per man would be enough—$500 in all; but you should understand," I added, "that you would need to keep this up year by year, as the Board has no funds for such a venture, and we should not take such a step unless we mean to keep on the march."

"I understand," he replied, "and I will gladly assume the entire expense. And now have you anything else in the same line?"

"Well, yes; Dr. Lawrence, in our East Africa Mission, is keen on starting new work across the Sabi River, an extensive area I traversed with him on this same trip; I think another $500 would make this possible."

About this time I began to realize that I was dealing with an unusual man. I told him of Dr. Bridgman's interest in the more than a hundred thousand "raw natives" in Johannesburg, of Maxwell's needs at Mapumulo, in Natal, of the wonderful success of Dr. Jeffery at Aruppukottai in South India.

He said he would like to put $500 in the hands of each of these men, and handed me a check already made out for $2,500. I should add that the

Again we are called upon to express our gratitude for these offerings for Missions, which sow the seed and cultivate the field whose fruits and harvests all the other enterprises and interests of the church gather and enjoy. We trust that during this year every Sunday school in every church of the Convention will adopt the plan and enjoy the blessings and the privileges of a once-a-month offering for missions. This helps and in no wise hurts any and every school that adopts and follows the plan. We share the gospel of our Lord with others in obedience to His command and in sharing that blessed message with no group is made the poorer, but the richer.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. H. S. HARDCASTLE,
Treasurer.

THE FIRST QUARTER'S WORK.

The first quarter of our year's work is done and just how well did we succeed? Did you meet the requirements for the quarter? Did you send in your report to your district superintendent and your money to the treasurer. How about a news item to THE CHRISTIAN SUN? We would appreciate the news and perhaps your activities might add stimulus to some society looking for a plan. Do you like the new report blanks?

The programs in THE CHRISTIAN SUN seem to be meeting with great nods of approval and many praises are being sung. Let this be the greatest year of our churches and may we as the women do our part by pushing the work with all our might. Don't forget the World Day of Prayer which will come in this quarter and begin planning now for the best district meeting ever. Note the change of your editor's address, which is now 2026 West Academy Street, Winston-Salem, N. C.

ELON COLLEGE.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Elon College Congregational-Christian Church has held splendid meetings since the beginning of the church year in October, with a good attendance at each meeting.

Since the society is divided into four circles, each group directs for three months the programs at the general meeting. Circle No. 1, of which Mrs. W. E. Lowe is leader, gave three programs as follows: October, Rev. Harry Storrs, an evangelist who was conducting a series of meetings at Burlington, visited the society and rendered the program, using for his topic Phillipians. The November meeting was centered upon Peace and Mrs. J. B. Brown gave a lovely talk, basing her views upon the same subject that Mr. Storrs had used—Phillipians. The December meeting, which was a Christmas meeting, was conducted in an impressive way by Rev. J. W. Patton. Carols were sung at the conclusion of his message.

Circle No. 2 also won each month the contribution prize of 50c for best attendance at the monthly meeting, which is given by the president, Mrs. J. L. Foster. Usually there is an average attendance at the monthly meeting of twenty-five or thirty, representing the four circles.

The society is studying Miss Seabury's book on India and each of the auxiliaries is making splendid progress also, with leaders from the woman's society.

Circle meetings usually have a small social feature, with refreshments and the lesson study and business, and the monthly meeting is given entirely to the devotion and various reports.

Each circle of the society gave a shower of useful gifts to Miss Josephine Farmer last month, who had recently lost many of her clothes and practically all of her kitchen furnishings in a fire that completely destroyed her home. She had lived in this green bungalow, owned by Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, for twenty-three years. Miss Farmer and her father, Mr. Joe Farmer, are now living in an apartment of the J. C. McAdam's residence at Elon College, where she is a member of the local school faculty.

Mrs. H. D. Lambeth, secretary of the North Carolina Woman's Conference, is corresponding Secretary of this society and sends us the above information.

A GREETING.

To the women of the various organizations in our Congregational and Christian Churches comes a greeting from Miss Aliee True, 23 Marsten Avenue, Portsmouth, N. H., in memory of our common friends in the missionary work. Miss True, it will be remembered, gave the best years of her life to the missionary work in Japan and is now happily situated in her home town engaged in the work of her beloved church there. What a benediction it must be to have the consecrated influence of a returned missionary in your church! She hears from Dr. and Mrs. Woodworth, who are spending the sunset of their lives at Merom, Ind., and also from Mr. Fry, who is in the home for missionaries at Anhorndale near Boston. All Saints would have been glad to spend the last years of their lives on the mission field and with those they have learned to love, but our Board knows they need to relax and are trying to make them comfortable and happy in their declining years. Three comfortable homes are provided for our missionaries and every effort made to show our appreciation of their work.

Miss True says she doesn't find anything monotonous living in Portsmouth and is truly interested and in love with her church, which is a very active one and whose members are fast becoming a Bible loving and Bible studying people. Rev. Mr. Sellevaag is the pastor and is doing a splendid work as leader and guide at this place.

An urgent invitation comes from Miss True to any of the Southern

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

EMILY CARLETON LESTER, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEK.

Our cover this week shows in a simple, yet striking way, the relation of young people to the Church. We hope that during the coming week we will rededicate our lives to the cause of Jesus Christ and seek to find ways in which we can best serve in our churches. Let us remember that Jesus was a young person, that His ideas and ideals are the thoughts of a young man, and that it was as a young man that He gave His life for us.

Many of our young people's groups have planned special programs and services during Youth Week. If you have not, we hope that you will at least take "time out" in your group to consider your relation to your church and your community. Find out where you can best make a contribution to your church, and then do something about it. On January 29 it has been suggested that you learn something about your denomination and your local church. On February 5 many of you will celebrate "Christian Endeavor Day" with appropriate services. We urge that Youth Week be observed in some fitting manner and are sure that the results will be beneficial to you and to your church.

IN APPRECIATION.

What could be any more beautiful or any more inspiring than true friendship? I think I can sufficiently answer this question with one word, "nothing." A recent occurrence has proved this to me.

About three weeks before the Christmas vacation there was a certain girl eight hundred miles from home, who was spending a great part of her time wondering. . . . She had been away from home since September and for the first time knew what real "home-sickness" was. She was thinking of how she would spend her Christmas vacation away from her devoted family and friends.

While she was thinking thus, a letter came bringing the good news that she was "to come home for Christmas." You could never imagine what true joy that brought to her heart. In a few days another letter came, with which was a round-trip ticket for home.

The long trip was made. Not only the meeting upon arrival, but the whole Christmas vacation, was one of the happiest that has ever been witnessed. Everything possible was done to make it a perfect holiday for her, including a banquet at the church in her honor.

The beautiful thought back of this is that friends made this possible. True, sympathetic friends, inspired by the conscientious pastor of the Christian Church, did this as a special Christmas project. I'm sure that there never was one which caused more real joy than this.

I happen to know all about this because I was the girl in the story, and the friends were the people in my church led by Rev. B. H. Watkins of the Wakefield (Va.) parish. Since it was impossible for me to see each individually, I'm taking this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to those who had a part in making for me the happiest Christmas ever. My heart is filled with thoughts of gratitude which cannot be expressed. It is through such an experience as this that one realizes the joy of Christian friendship.

Tuesday—Co-laborers With God—I Cor. 3: 5-11.

Wednesday—Color Line Ignored—Acts 8: 26-37.

Thursday—A Christian Social Order—Acts 2: 42-47.

Friday—Jesus Prayed for Unity—John 17: 18-23.

Saturday—One God Over All—I Cor. 8: 4-6.

Someone should give the purpose for Francis E. Clark's beginning the Christian Endeavor movement; how and where it was begun; any facts regarding the history of Christian Endeavor will be suitable for the occasion.

There is an attempt among churches for better cooperation in order to improve conditions. These agencies for cooperation between denominations need some consideration:

1. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ.
2. The Home Missions Council.

3. The International Council of Religious Education.

4. The American Bible Society.

5. The Laymen's Missionary Movement.

6. The Student Volunteer Movement.

Christian Endeavor has been a means for promoting denominational youth work and in developing cooperative activity among youth. Would a union of all our young people's societies be the best means of achieving real team work? Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of this method. List some national issues that might be much nearer solution, if cooperation of all groups could be secured.

Have a discussion on the following topic: "Some important responsibilities and tasks facing our church in our community." The society should seek the fellowship and united action of all the youth in the community. Check up to see how well the young people cooperate with the pastor and his program of the whole church.

Various members should give sentence prayers for the church and a greater cooperation of all its working forces. Pray especially for Christians in the churches of Europe, where persecution is prevailing.

Suggested Hymns—

"O Zion, Haste."

"The Church's One Foundation."

"Onward Christian Soldiers."

Ye servants of God, your Master proclaim,
And publish abroad His wonderful name;
The name, all victorious, of Jesus extol;
His Kingdom is glorious, and rules over all.

PETER DECLARES HIS LOVE.

LESSON V—JANUARY 29, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments.—John 14:15.

LESSON: John 21:11-19.

An Infallible Proof.

When Luke wrote the Acts of the Apostles to Theophilus he said that Jesus showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs. Today's lesson deals with one of those incidents or occasions. It was only one of many infallible proofs that Jesus gave to His friends that He was alive, that He had risen again from the dead. It was an occasion when they had actual fellowship with Him whom they had known in the flesh. And they had it in old, familiar settings.

In the Hour of Failure.

Seven of the disciples had gone fishing. They had fished hard all night but they had caught nothing. When morning came they were about to call it off, and return to their homes. As they approached the shore they saw a form standing on the beach, but they did not recognize the familiar figure of Jesus at first. Either because of his place of vantage, or by virtue of divine insight, he instructed them to cast their net on the right side of the ship and assured them that they would find a school of fish. In obedience to His command they thus cast the net, and lo, the net was weighed down with a tremendous haul of fish, so many that they were not able to haul it in the boat. Instead they had to drag it to shore. With the help of Simon Peter, who had jumped overboard when he learned that it was Jesus, they finally got the haul safely to shore. They found that they had one hundred and fifty-three great fishes. This was one time that all the big ones did not get away.

This incident is suggestive in that it shows how Jesus always appears in the hour of failure or need. "Just When I Need Him Most" goes the song, and it is true to life. He is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. He can turn defeat into victory, weakness into strength, failure into success, if we will obey Him and let Him have His way with us. And there will be abounding and abiding results if we do His bidding, and carry out His commands.

Among You As He That Serveth.

He that told them that he was among them that served. After His resurrection he had not changed His spirit although He had His form. The Eternal Christ, the Risen Lord had laid the fire, and had prepared a meal for the hungry, empty-handed disciples. He who is the Bread of Life humbled Himself and took upon Himself the form of a servant. He is the same yesterday, today and forever. He is still the Christ of lowly service, as well as of lordly stature.

When They Had Dined.

Jesus knew that it was hard to reason with folks with empty stomachs. It is from men with empty stomachs, and from men whose women and children are hungry that so much of the world's unrest and spirit of revolution springs. Our national relief certainly has some perplexing and perhaps very unsatisfactory aspects, but one wonders what might have happened in America if some provision had not been made for providing work for those who actually wanted work for providing food for those who could not provide it for themselves. Man cannot live by bread alone to be sure. But neither can he live without bread. Be sure of this—Jesus the Risen Lord is concerned that in a world where there is plenty for all that all shall have enough to eat and to wear. The present industrial and economic and social maladjustments are not the will of God.

"Lovest Thou Me?"

This is the most disturbing because it is the most searching question that Jesus could have asked Simon Peter, or us. He did not ask: Do you understand me? Or do you believe me? Or confess me? Or obey me? Or even serve me? But do you love me?

How searching that question is on the lips of Jesus! He who knows the hearts of men can pierce through the sham and hypocrisy of our lives and discern even the thoughts and motives of our hearts. We might profess our love for Christ to others, but we cannot look Him in the eye and say that we love Him unless we really love Him. And when we, as individuals, face this question of Christ how poor and paltry does our love, even if it is genuine, seem. In fact how little do most of us love Him anyway. For as He said, "If we love Him, we will keep His commandments." So much of our conduct and our meagerness of service is a denial of our love for Christ.

It is significant that these words were spoken by Jesus in His last interview with Simon Peter. That would indicate that Jesus thought this was the heart of the matter of discipleship. Faith in Christ, service for Christ were important, but love to and for Christ. Jesus would have us place him first in our affections. If we love Him supremely, all other things will fall into their proper places.

"Feed My Sheep."

In response to Peter's repeated and insistent affirmation of his love of Christ, Christ told him to feed his lambs or to tend his sheep. Love to God is shown, of course, by true worship. But mere faith without works is dead, and so is love. If we love Christ we will want to do something for Christ. And our love for Christ will be expressed in loving service to our fellowmen. By this shall all men know that we are His disciples if we have love one for another.

MONDAY.

BE ALL THERE.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."—Ecl. 9: 7-10.

There are, alas! rackets" in philanthropy; and their commonest method is to secure a list of names of eminent persons as their sponsors. So willing are flattered men and women to "lend their names" that they usually make no investigation of the organization, and pay no attention to its operations.

Henry Ward Beecher once said, "Where my name is, there I am." In other words, responsibility goes with one's signature. If one's name is on a church, or on the roster of any other organization, then one is under obligation to give personal interest and personal service.

Let us count for all that our name signifies. Where it goes, we go also.

Prayer—Forgive us, Father, that we have so often failed to measure up to the obligations to which we have subscribed. Make us better members of our churches. Amen.—W. T. Ellis, in "The Christian Herald."

TUESDAY.

A TIDE THAT NEEDS CHANGING.

"Be gentle unto all men."—II Tim. 2: 24.

There is a trend today of crass, raw, selfishness that is akin to the cattle of the stockyard. Watch the crowd at the entrance to the ballfield, or at the movies, when the gates are open. Consideration for the other fellow is at a premium. Good manners seems to have gone out.

Christianity demands unselfish thoughtfulness. D. L. Moody is quoted as once saying, "If religion has done nothing for your temper, it has done nothing for your soul." We think of good breeding as well-mannered, but those born from above should have the best of all.

Prayer—Our Father, give unto us the gentlemanliness of Thy son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A GREAT DESTRUCTIVE FORCE.

"But rather let him (a man) labour, working with his hands the thing which is good."—Eph. 4: 28.

This is a good text for our national relief precedures. Labor with one's own hands and the earning a living by the sweat of one's own brow is fundamental. Trying to live without earning it is life's mightiest destructive force to greatness. To have to work at something whether we feel like it or not is one of the greatest blessings of life. It has a steadying influence upon character. The greatest men the world has ever known have been men who learned through the school of pick and shovel and hard work. Hard work done in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ takes the sting out of life and fills it with sweetness.

Prayer—O God, sanctify us and our labors to the glory of good. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SONS OF GOD.

"But as many received Him, to them gave he the power to become the sons of God."—John 1: 12.

What greater right is there than to become children of God? Christ is the source of this high privilege, which comes not by faithlessness but by belief in and following Him.

Prayer—Our Father, we seek to know Thee more perfectly. We begin this day with the prayer that our lives may have the qualities of Thy life. Amen.

FRIDAY.

BEING IN EARNEST.

"He that sayeth that he abideth in him, ought himself also to walk, even as he walked."—I John 2: 6.

Sincerity and earnestness in Christian faith and service are absolutely necessary if we would enter into Christian experience. Hypocrisy is a barrier to experience and must be forsaken before we can enter into His life. Jesus requiring the rich young ruler to sell all he had was not intended to make him poor, but intended to teach that to follow Him, he must do away with the barriers. Only by following Jesus do we come to the heart of any matter.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to abandon every unworthy purpose that we may come into intimate fellowship with Thee. "Teach us Thy way, Lord, and we will walk in Thy truth." Amen.

SATURDAY.

HILLS OF BLESSING.

"I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing."—Ezk. 34: 26.

We are not to go through life just being glad that we have been forgiven of our sins. We are to be conservators of divine truth and be a blessing to all around us.

A dahlia bulb in the cellar can do nothing but retain the spark of life. But taken out and planted in the garden in spring it soon becomes a blessing. "God worketh in us."

Prayer—We thank Thee, our heavenly Father, that Thou art expecting us to do something? Make us a blessing about Thy Hill, and make us worthy, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise." Let Thy spirit commune with His spirit today. Go to church and kneel at the altar and lay thy gifts there. Wait for Him to take sin out of thy heart and to warm thee till thy soul beams in the glow of purity. Then partake of the bread and the wine and feel that thou art taking it from His hand, hearing Him say, "I drink with you."

THE POWER OF THE CROSS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God."—
I Cor. 1:18.

Are you among that large group that feels that the cross has lost its significance in our modern life? Do you think it is foolishness? Pray, do not say yes, for then you pronounce the judgment of "perish" upon yourself. The cross stands in history as the great fact of man's redemption, and the cross still stands in the world today sharing its sufferings, and heartache, and woe. Has the cross lost its power for you? Does it fail to cause you to bow your heart, and lift a quiet prayer to God for yourself? And a prayer of thanksgiving for his so great love for the world? My friend, do not take the cross out of your mind, nor out your heart, for "The cross is . . . the power of God."

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan has called our attention to the fact that there is a difference in the translation of this verse: "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us that are saved it is the power of God," between the King James' Version, and the Revised Version. In the King James' Version it is, "the preaching of the cross," and in the Revised Version it is, "the word of the cross." I have looked this text up in the original Greek, and find that the word upon which the difference in translation occurs is "logos" or rather the phrase "ho logos." Now in the first verse of John's gospel we find much use of that same phrase "ho logos." There it is translated, "the Word," with "word" spelled with a capital "w." "In the beginning was 'ho logos,' 'ho logos' was with God, and 'ho logos' was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life and the life was the light of men."

Now look at "ho logos." "Ho logos" was in the beginning, "ho logos" was with God, "ho logos" was God, all things were made by "ho logos," and in "ho logos" was life, and the life was the light of men. Are you keeping it in mind that this phrase, this article "ho" and this noun "logos" are identical, absolutely same markings, vowels, endings, all, as the phrase in our text: "For 'ho logos' of the cross is to them that perish foolishness." Now that phrase "ho logos" is translated in the King James' Version, "preaching"; in the Revised Version it is, "the word." I have looked it up in Moffatt's translation: "the story of the cross"; in Goodspeed's: "the story of the cross"; Weymouth's "the Message of the cross," message with a capital; and some have translated it "the discourse of the cross."

The word "logos" means, according to Thayer's Lexicon, "word," "a saying," "discourse," "doctrine," "narrative," "matter under discussion," "thing talked about," and there are also various shades of these seven definitions. It makes very interesting reading to place any one of these definitions, or translations, in the text and read it. But in verse twenty-four of this same chapter we read: "Christ the power of God," now with that in mind let us read our text: "'ho logos' the power of God." Then we may read our text: "The Christ, or Word, of the cross . . . is the power of God."

I hope I have not been too tedious, but if you follow me: The same "ho logos" which was with God from the beginning, and was God, and made all things that were made is the "ho logos" of the cross, and is the power of God. That One who created the worlds can also, and did, create and perfect the plan of redemption of the poor, fallen, human race. That One said on the cross ("knowing that all things were now accomplished" John 19:28), "It is finished," and that was before he died. In other words our redemption was planned, provided for, and perfected, and then Jesus himself gave up his life. It was the living Jesus that perfected our salvation, that bore our sins upon the cross, for "in him was life," and the principle of "death," sin ("the wages of sin is death," "dead in trespasses and sins"), was slain, or overcome by Jesus in his life, and then when "it was finished" he himself laid down his own life. "No man taketh from me, I lay it down of myself, this commandment I have received of the Father."

You cannot move away from the cross, and the Christ of the cross. It is, with all we may know about it, a mystery, and miracle of grace. I do not understand how all these things can be. They are marvelous, indeed. A deep darkness for three hours overshadowed the cross, but the Christ was there just the same. It may be overshadowed at times by our own poor understanding but the Christ is there, "the power of God," all the time. In this I trust. And a peace it gives which is great, and indescribable. And by it I can hear the Savior saying, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." I Peter 2:24: "Who His own self bare our sins in His body upon the tree, that we, having died unto sin, might live unto righteousness." He died, that we might live (in Him was life), and that we might live unto righteousness.

My Lord, my Savior, when I see Thee wearing Upon Thy bleeding brow the crown of thorns
Shall I for pleasure live, or shrink from bearing What'er my lot may be of pain or scorn?

O victim of Thy love! O pangs most healing!
O saving death! O wounds that I adore!
O shame most glorious Christ! Christ before Thee kneeling,
I pray Thee keep me Thine forever more. Amen.

ers could do a better job of training for Christian service if they were themselves better trained. Financial support that is adequate for our churches can become a real joy, and will when officers and members learn the lessons of stewardship, the every member canvass, and regular proportionate giving for all the enterprises of the Church. Thousands of people live in our communities who would delight in the fellowship of our churches, and will do so when they are won to an allegiance to Jesus and His Church. There are growing cities and rural places where there should be new churches.

But why go on with this enumeration of things to be done? These are only some of the things that lie before us. It will take work, hard work, and long work to accomplish even these things. Knowing the people as he does, your editor believes that the days that lie ahead will find the church people busily engaged in doing the things that need to be done, and in doing of them there will be discovered a new sense of spiritual reality and a new love for Christ and His children.

A WONDERFUL STORY OF A WONDERFUL LIFE.

same day he left a generous check at the office of each of the other mission boards having offices in the Congregational House.

This was but the beginning. Here was a clear-headed business man who of his own initiative proposed to expend $2,500 a year as long as he lived for the telling of the Good News in the far away places of the earth. The significance of the thing was not lost upon me.

The resulting correspondence opened a great new world to Mr. Bates' mind, and from that time on he determined to manufacture shoes primarily for the purpose of proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

And so it went, each year his gifts keeping pace with the growth of the work, and the new fields which were being entered. Once I expressed the fear that he was impoverishing himself by his generosity.

"You needn't worry about that," he said, "The more money I give to the American Board the more I seem to make."

Most of those who know about Mr. Bates' work think of him in connection with China and the Rev. Watts O. Pye, of Shansi. I had some difficulty in interesting him in that country, on account of a prejudice he had formed from observation of the Chinese in America.

But I gave him Bishop Bashford's book to read, and he finally said he would put $2,500 a year into that land. I suggested that we divide it into five equal portions and that he authorize me to write to as many missionaries, not promising the money but asking them what they would do with a $500 annual grant for new evangelistic work.

He consented, and I wrote that very day to five prominent missionaries scattered through our four China missions, including Dr. Pye.

Watts Pye told in glowing terms what he could do in Shansi with $500, and then, characteristically, added, "But let me tell you what I could do if I had $1,000 for new evangelistic work."

He then outlined a plan for occupying five cities in the northern half of the adjoining province of Shensi, where the Gospel never had been preached, aside from his own occasional explorings, and where he found the people extraordinarily well disposed toward Christianity.

Two months later, when Mr. Bates read these letters, he said: "Go ahead with the China plan, and give it to that man Pye."

That was the beginning of the notable evangelistic development in Shansi and Shensi, and it was the beginning of a correspondence between Dr. Pye and Mr. Bates which, for spiritual insight, missionary strategy, and ideal relationship between the man at the front and the giver at home, I have not seen equalled.

A few years later, when Mr. Pye returned on furlough, he presented Mr. Bates with a beautifully embroidered nine-foot silk banner, containing a message of gratitude from 680 men of Shansi and Shensi who had been brought to Christ and who had joined the Church as the result of his gifts.

It was this message which, in Chinese characters, contained the words: "You, Sir, have the heart of God." And this was but the beginning of the spiritual harvest reaped under the hand of Dr. Pye.

In all, Mr. Bates assumed the support of 262 native evangelists, working for the most part in virgin territory.

Once I ventured to remind him that he had materially increased the scope of the Board's operations, and that, in the event of his death, it might not be possible to include all he was doing in the regular budget.

"I have thought of all that," he replied, and in my will I have provided for the continuance of the work for a period of ten years." About that time I drew from him the fact that he was not spending more than $3,000 a year on himself.

In all my experience I have never known a giver like Mr. Bates. Nor have I known a happier Christian. The reports—letters from the missionaries who handled his Kingdom investments, and his meeting with the missionaries when they were home on furlough were an unending delight. His relations with Dr. Pye were of the tenderest sort.

The fact is, this quiet business man has been instrumental in bringing about a distinctly new emphasis upon direct evangelistic effort throughout the fields of the American Board.

Charles S. Bates was a world Christian in the truest sense. Simple in his faith, conservative in his theology, accurate in his business methods and ideas, when it came to the expression of Christian loyalty, gratitude, and love, he was a man of the broadest gauge. Those Chinese converts were exactly right when they said: "You, Sir, have the heart of God."

In Memoriam

A TRIBUTE TO MRS. B. J. GIBSON.

Just as receding from a majestic mountain helps us to see its outline and appreciate its beauty, so do the contributions of a great life stand out more forcibly after it is taken from our midst. Thus was Mrs. Gibson's life. As we think of her faith in God and devotion to His cause, as we think of the high principles which guided her life, we are sure that such an influence will continue to bless us. For a great life becomes the ladder by which we climb; it is our incentive to greater tasks. It becomes our heritage, inspiring and enriching our lives.

The cause of Missions was the greatest passion of her life. She pleaded for it, prayed for it, and gave to it. It was always on her heart. Her offering for each church responsibility was always ready. Paul said, "He that giveth, let him do it with simplicity," and this she did. Many of her friends never knew the extent of her good works, but God knew and blessed her with a long, useful life. Her name will not be called any more in our Missionary Society, but the memory of her years of service will speak even louder.

Her going will leave a vacant chair in the Betty Gibson Bible Class, which will ever remain sacred to her memory. She was a Sunday school teacher for more than fifty years. The teaching of her class was her greatest joy. The days of the week were largely spent in preparation for it. She loved her Bible and continually used it in her study, quoting passages from it and gleaned renewed inspiration and strength from its pages, which she shared with her group. Her teaching, together with her sincere, consecrated life, inspired the love and loyalty of her entire class.

Her contribution to the church was great. She had a part spiritually and financially in its every undertaking. It was due partly to her influence that Rosemont has always been a church supported entirely by free will offerings. She blessed every service with her presence until her serious illness. Sunday was the high point in her life. She had frequent visits with her pastor, in which she discussed and encouraged every phase of his work.

The sun of her earthly life has set. But in the words of the hymn she loved so much she is now enjoying, "Sunrise With Jesus in Eternity."

GIBSON.

Whereas, it is our sad duty at this time to record the death on November 4, 1938, of Mrs. Benjamin F. Gibson, who was the organizer of the Woman's Missionary Society of Rosemont Church, Portlock, Va., at the time of the earliest start of the Woman's Missionary movement of the Southern Convention, and who by her generous support of the society, and her hearty interest in all missions during her long life, contributed greatly to the growth of missions in the church; and whereas we deeply grieve the loss of helpful companionship, her kindly manners, her keen business insight in affairs of society and church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

That we submit to the will of God, who doeth all things well, grateful that she was spared for many years to give to us the wonderful example of her Godly life; and,

That the memory of her deeply religious character, of her constant devotion to her church and Sunday school, her firm faith in her Lord and Savior, shall ever be a source of inspiration toward better and more spiritual living to all who knew her; and,

That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy and prayers for a comforting sense of God's merciful kindness; and,

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to "The Christian Sun," a copy to her family, and a copy written in the minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society of Rosemont Church.

THOMPSON.

The United Congregational-Christian Church of Winston-Salem, N. C., suffered its first loss by death in the person of its oldest member, Mrs. Kate Thompson, on August 26, 1938. Mrs. Thompson had suffered a stroke of paralysis the last of February and after about six weeks of confinement to her bed she was removed to the Masonic and Eastern Star Home. Her condition slightly improved after entering the Home, but after a few months she began to weaken and gradually grew worse until she answered the final roll call.

Mrs. Thompson was also a charter member of the United Church and one of its most loyal and liberal supporters. When the church was open for any service she could be counted on to fill her seat beside the window. At the age of seventy-three she was active and attentive to her duties. She will be greatly missed by her church and her host of friends. She was an active member of the Eastern Star Lodge of Winston-Salem.

Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon, August 28, in the Burlington Congregational-Christian Church, conducted by the writer and assisted by Dr. J. H. Lightbourne. Interment was made in the family lot of the Burlington Cemetery.

A CORRECTION.

Two corrections should be made in the Program for Women's Missionary Societies for February, published in the issue of January 12. In the sentence, "And to the average Hindu, who is an illiterate, God is very far off; so he makes for himself and worships a lesser god, or a little god, one he can see, to whom he can offer a visible sacrifice and so secure his favor," capitals should not be used for "lesser god" and "little god." The idea is an image or an idol. In Miss Seabury's story of her visit to the cobbler's shop it should say, "His brother replied, 'Oh, he wants to be a doctor'" instead of "His mother replied." This program is designed to inform the members of our societies on India, and for this reason the corrections are important.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. John R. Scotford, associate editor of The Missionary Herald, will preach in the First Congregational-Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., on Sunday, February 5, at the eleven o'clock service.

Recently Rev. M. J. Sweet, pastor of Union Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., was honored at a party given on his 71st birthday by the Women's Guild of his church. His friends wish for him many more happy birthdays.

Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, South Norfolk, Va., has accepted a call to the Sanford and Shallow Well (N. C.) Churches. Mr. Todd will graduate from the Chicago Theological Seminary this spring and will begin his new pastorate the first of June.

Miss Marguerite Davison, extension worker in Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, and West Florida, was a visitor in Elon College, N. C. for part of a day last week. The Elon students from her area, as well as other friends, were delighted to see her.

On Friday of this week the Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., will conclude an interesting series of chapel talks at Elon College. The students are always glad to welcome him as their guest speaker.

Rev. William B. O'Neill of Moravia, N. Y., has accepted a call to the Holland Christian Church. He will begin his work as pastor there March 1. Mr. O'Neill has served as Pastor-at-Large in Florida and has held pastorates in Coral Gables, Fla.; Tryon, Ga.; Brooklyn and Moravia, N. Y.

News from Pleasant Hill (N. C.) Christian Church tells of the fine Sunday school there, with an attendance numbering two hundred. Christian Endeavor services are held each Sunday night, with a special service at least once a month. The Thank-giving offering for the Christian Orphanage amounted to $24.56.

Dr. William F. Frazier, Executive Vice-President of the Home Boards of Congregational and Christian Churches, will speak at the regular morning service at Elon College, N.

C., on Sunday, February 5. He will be the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Piedmont Ministerial Association there on the following morning.

The Executive Committee of the Southern Convention, meeting in Norlina, N. C., on January 20, appointed Rev. J. H. Dollar of Newport News, Va., as a member of the Board of Publications to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Rev. Carl R. Key. Rev. J. Everette Neese of Henderson, N. C., was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Rev. F. Ervin Hyde.

THE CONVOCATION OF CHURCHES.

It is easy for one to say that the last was the best, but in reference to the last session of the North Carolina Convocation of the Churches, to my way of thinking, it is correct to say that it was the best. At least, the thought or theme was very appealing to me: "The Living Church in a Wistful World." It is inspiring to think of thirteen of the leading denominations of the state coming together to discuss some of the most important subjects in the mind of the Church. The speakers were the very best that could be secured in their fields; men and women who knew their subjects and who were able to give their personal views with emphasis. I wish that all of our people could have heard the messages of that Convocation.

It was especially impressed with the ideas presented about Evangelism. This will give strength and influence to the Church as nothing else will. The Church was founded upon faith, and the dynamo that creates power for the Church is the Spirit of Christ.

Dr. John R. Cunningham of Winston-Salem said that the Church needs new emphasis placed on Pulpit Evangelism; that that will still move the congregation as it did in days gone by. His idea is not so much emphasis on Personal Evangelism, but on that which converts the soul and then the Church will function in its rightful purpose and place. I am looking for that condition to come to pass. For more than a year, it seems to me, there have been signs of it. I was impressed very much by a letter from Dr. L. E. Smith in THE CHRISTIAN SUN several months ago. He spoke of the importance of the revival spirit as we once had it. No one else has mentioned it; nevertheless there is a need for such and "The Lord will provide."

E. M. CARTER.

TO THE PASTORS AND SUPERINTENDENTS OF THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

Questions have arisen about offerings from Sunday schools and churches in the Western North Carolina Conference for the college. Some seem not to understand that all offerings sent to Elon College from Sunday schools and churches in this conference are to be counted on conference apportionments for 1938-39. This is to advise all that all such offerings sent to the college will count on their conference apportionments.

Under the plan that the Western North Carolina Conference is now working, definite amounts are apportioned to each local church, forty per cent of which comes to Elon College. For example, if a church is apportioned a total of $50.00, Elon College is due $20.00 of that amount. If the fifth Sunday offerings through the year amount to $20.00 and are sent to the college, the college apportionment for conference will have been paid and such church will get credit for the amount sent in. The college will receipt the Sunday school and church sending contributions which receipt should be attached to the church letter, and there will be no question about getting credit. This is a splendid way and a good opportunity for every church to raise a definite part of its conference apportionments in advance of a few weeks before conference.

A "HOME BASE" FOR DEVELOPING LEADERSHIP.

Every worthy project needs a "home base," a solidly built supply house and point of departure for its wider operations. The home base for missions is a world-minded, self-forgetting, sharing - until - it - hurts local church. The home base for social action is a church which practices in its own economic and social relations the principles it urges groups beyond the church to apply.

The church which seeks an adequate supply of consecrated and skilled educational leaders must also have a home base. Too long have our local churches looked solely to outside agencies to train their lay workers. Training schools, institutes, and conventions manned by specialists from afar have been trusted to work miracles which cannot be worked. Community schools have drawn a small percentage of present and prospective teachers and officers away from their own churches to learn things which applied more or less to their particular leadership jobs. Summer conferences, likewise removed from the local church, have many unique values, but cannot be expected to do all the training for a local church. Each of these extra-local-church agencies will continue to make its specific contribution. But, unless the local church itself can be made leadership-education conscious and accepts the primary responsibility for educating its workers, these other agencies will yield relatively small returns.

The home base for securing and training leaders is a local church plan which is looked upon as a natural part of its total educational program—as much to be accepted as is any plan of the department for the Christian education of childhood or youth.

Not only should a local church have a leadership education or personnel plan; it should conduct certain portions of this program of training within its own bounds. What are some of these home base activities which our Congregational and Christian Churches can use?

Every local church, small or large, can conduct a class for young people at the church school hour. For these leaders of tomorrow there are simple introductory courses in the Bible and in ways of teaching. There is a leader's guide for each course and the texts are very inexpensive and understandable.

There are courses a bit more advanced for the more mature workers now in service, with suitable guides and texts. The church building a home base for leadership development plans for one or more such courses at certain periods of the year—a fall class or school or a Lenten institute in which courses in the worker's personal religious life and in the Bible are particularly stressed.

Another part of such a home-base program is a series of well-planned workers' conferences. For putting this time-honored, but often neglected meeting on its feet there is an abundance of help which has stood the test of actual use. In addition to three widely circulated program booklets there is a new series, "Workers' Conference Programs Based On the Use of Leaflet Messages," six in all, which will be sent free to any church upon written request, together with a sample set of inspirational leaflets used.

To start building this home base it may be necessary to "sell" the idea to your workers and to the committee on Christian education. The cleverly devised "Teacher Training Primer," free for the asking, will make a good salesman's prospectus.

Why not start building that home base now by sending to the Department of Leadership Education, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., for these free materials and other literature describing the leadership courses?

GROUPED CHURCHES MAKE PROGRESS.

Group No. One of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches has had a little more than one year's experience with the present set-up and we feel that some progress has been made. We find ourselves in the midst of a great work with a much broader vision of the task, and a stronger determination to "press toward the mark for the prize."

A committee from each of the three churches has organized a group committee, of which Mr. A. W. Preston, Belew Creek, is chairman, and Miss Lucy Kate Strader, Walnut Cove, is secretary. We held our first meeting of this conference year at Salem Chapel on December 4. The next meeting will be held at Pleasant Ridge, March 5. At these meetings we discuss our problems and plans and report progress. Each church in the group has accomplished much in connection with a building program during the last twelve months, for which we are all thankful and happy.

Salem Chapel has completed an annex of three nice class rooms; has repainted the entire building inside and out; a new pulpit, choir loft with chairs, and electric lights have been installed. A great deal has been contributed for these improvements by friends of the church, who are not members. The Sunday school is making great progress under the leadership of the efficient superintendent, Mr. Vance Marshall. The Christian Endeavor is working hard at its task, with Miss Ruth Middleton as president. The Women's Missionary Society is also doing fine work under the direction of the president, Mrs. J. H. Crews. Someone has said, "a live missionary society is the right arm of the church." Almost any minister will agree.

The new building at Belew Creek is completed, with the exception of a little more work in the basement which is used for class rooms. Nice new pews have just been installed, with no debts to embarrass the membership. The building as it stands is a credit to the community. It is useless to say that great sacrifices have been made in order to secure it. The Sunday school superintendent, Mr. J. H. Self, is a truly consecrated man who carries the burden of it on his heart all the time. The Ladies' Aid Society, under the leadership of Mrs. I. P. Neal, is a great asset to the church.

Pleasant Ridge Church is building an annex consisting of three class rooms. The entire building has been painted on the outside and inside the main auditorium, most of which was done by free labor. This makes it possible to have enough money in the treasury to purchase new flooring, which will be put in right away. Within the last few years this church has lost practically all of her old "standbys" which causes the burden to be much greater for those who remain. In spite of this, great progress is being made. "They had a mind to work." The Women's Missionary Society is doing a great work under the consecrated leadership of Mrs. A. B. McFarland. It is a great inspiration to this pastor to attend the regular meetings. The Sunday school, too, is making progress under the leadership of Mr. J. H. Crutchfield, superintendent. The Christian Endeavor Society is not a large one, but is doing fine work. Mrs. Sallie McFarland is the president.

Each church held its first quarterly meeting with a fellowship supper in connection, and each has voted to continue the practice.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

MODERN YOUTH.

General statements about the youth of today are at best but partially true. One group is one thing and another is entirely different. In one country they drill for military service and shout hurrah for their ruler. In another they die for their country. In still another there are large groups on pleasure bent. But everywhere around the earth there are choice young people who are part of the Church of Jesus Christ and are glad to be known as His servants. It is about this latter group that we write.

In summer conferences, week-end retreats, vesper services, Sunday school classes, Christian Endeavor societies, and church worship services these fine young people have seen a vision of Jesus, that stalwart young man of Galilee who willingly walked to a cross as He sought to start processes of reformation that would bring peace and salvation to the world. They have believed with Him that this world can be made new through redemption. They are not willing that things continue as they are. They do not want economic, racial, social, and political barriers to make enemies of God's children. They dare to challenge long-established customs with the hope of putting into their place new ways of doing things that will bring joy into human relations where fear and suffering have been.

In our Conferences the young people are organized for service. There are missionary groups that consider only this one phase of our church program, Christian Endeavor groups that find excellent fellowship with similar groups of other denominations, and Pilgrim Fellowships that bring together all young people to make plans for all kinds of church work and to enjoy Christian fellowship. Our national organization is known as Pilgrim Fellowship because it is hoped that the young people of our churches will be as daring and constructive as Pilgrims and will find fellowship among widely separated groups and with God.

It is sometimes difficult for those of us who are older to agree with this youth group concerning plans, programs, or ideals. It may be that they are wrong and need guidance, but it just may be that prejudices and customs have dimmed our eyes until we cannot see clearly the vision that is theirs. To sit with them as they consider seriously attempting to make human relations so happy that war will disappear, is a thrilling experience. War-makers think they are visionary, but churchmen must remember that Jesus staked his life on love, died on a cross in defense of that faith, and has more friends that all the war-lords of the world. Perhaps these young people in our midst will lead us to the fountains of life. It is to be devoutly hoped that they will not get discouraged and quit until they have tried the ways of loving service in the midst of a warring world.

"The Christian Sun" believes in the young people of our churches. It believes that they can give us a new and clearer vision of the Kingdom of God. It would urge them to undertake big things for God. It has no hesitancy in commending them to the churches and making a plea that the young people in every church be given a place for development and leadership.

This is Youth Week. Special programs will be in progress. If you have any doubt about the value of these programs, attend, take part, and help to make them better. If you are not sharing in a youth program this week, you can at least have a heart to heart talk with some fine boy or girl and give a bit of encouragement for the years that lie ahead. In so doing you may light a torch that will shine through eternity.

A CHALLENGE FOR 1939.

After attending the Mid-Winter Meetings at Evanston, Ill., where leaders of the Congregational and Christian Churches discussed for a week plans and programs for 1939, your editor has returned to his office with a clearer vision of opportunities within the Southern Convention. Friends from afar who have traveled our way helped to draw the lines of this picture. From Maine to California leaders exchanged ideas, plans, and ideals until the vision of a new Convention took form in the mind of the writer.

We should secure a thousand new members. Our churches need them. The people are plentiful. The program for securing at least five new members by Easter would revitalize each church. Surveys of communities will give work for present members and secure names of possible recruits. The Pastor's Class will train children and young people. Personal work will secure new consecration. And devotional services in Holy Week should lead many to a loyal devotion to our Master. Let's Get a Thousand New Members for Our Churches by Easter! This is the main business of the church. In this we must all be agreed. But we must have a church worth joining. Be sure that you have something to offer. And then go out to help get a thousand members by Easter!

All financial obligations met in full is another worthy goal for the year. This will begin with the local church. Clear up the debts, or see that they are met according to promise. There is no harm in a church owing money, but is a disgrace for it to owe without fulfilling its promise to pay. Obligations begin with the local church, but they reach out to the ends of the world. The Conference is merely the churches in cooperation. The Convention and the national Boards are merely larger groups of churches in cooperation. This should be the year to meet all obligations in full. While the nations prepare for war, the Church should strengthen its defense of peace.

A third challenge deals with education. Specifically it is that we secure three thousand subscriptions to "The Christian Sun." But it is (Continued on page 13.)

What Do We Believe?

By REV. JOHN H. KNIGHT, Norfolk, Virginia.

Do Protestants believe anything? If they do believe certain things, why are they so secretive about it, and reluctant to express themselves regarding their faith?

These are questions that one must face if he lives in a mixed community with Catholics and Jews as his neighbors. He sees constant evidence that these other religions have a definite and systematic set of beliefs, and they seem to be rather well informed about what their churches teach.

But not so the Protestants. We seem to lack a clear-cut system of thought, and basing our religions upon emotional appeal or sentimental attachment, we are at a loss to defend our position in terms of reason and logical thought.

The fault may all be traced back to the Protestant pulpit. We ministers are the teachers of religion, but how many of us are really exercising a teaching ministry? Read, if you will, the terrific indictment of the Protestant pulpit recently made by Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell in the October number of The Atlantic Monthly. Note the strong but sorely needed statements of Dr. Bell—"A great many preachers themselves do not know what the great agreed teachings of Christianity actually are." "Any preacher who forms his pulpit gives to the faithful, not the word of God, but his own speculations, is guilty of nothing less than sacrilege."

So concerned have some of our own leaders become about this sad condition of things, which pervades even the Congregational-Christian Church, that none other than Dr. Frederick L. Fagley, Associate Secretary of the General Council, has taken it upon himself to send copies of Dr. Bell's article to our ministers. So impressed is Dr. Fagley with the article that, speaking as the leader of a great Church, he says: "There is appalling illiteracy concerning the fundamentals of Christian belief . . . great multitudes of church people who have high ethical standards do not base these standards on religious convictions."

We may deny the charge of theological illiteracy, but there is no getting around it. It was conclusively proven at the World Conference on Faith and Order in Edinburgh last year that American Protestantism is nearer to theological illiteracy than any other section of the Christian world. The American churches have been much concerned about morality and the social and ethical implications of the Christian religion; but in many cases we have forgotten the foundations in the interests of the super-structure. "Life and work cannot proceed without faith and order."

All of the problems that are confronting American Protestantism today in the fields of evangelism and religious education—and they are many—can only be solved by a teaching ministry which possesses some conception of the metaphysic of Christianity, and which is not afraid to proclaim it. We must admit the failure of the Protestant Church to adequately train its young in any definite system of thought that commands loyalty and devotion. A very casual comparison of our churches with those of the Catholics and the Jews will show us that. Even in spite of the intensive emphasis on religious education during the past twenty years, we somehow have not accomplished that which these other faiths have for years so effectively produced—Belief In a Distinctive Faith. Perhaps it is because we do not know what it is all about, this Protestantism for whose doctrines the reformers gave their very lives. We evidently need to get to work doing some good hard bed-rock thinking in the realm of evangelical theology, if we would retrieve those dynamic principles which the reformers were able to grasp with such acumen and intellectual clarity.

If Christianity is anything, it is a system of thought, an organized body of knowledge which deals with fact and truth. Much has been said in the past about Christianity being a life to be lived. But certainly—and this has been sadly forgotten by our non-creedal churches—decency cannot be produced without principle.

The reason why Protestant people do not produce a quality of life that is much different from the rest of the world is because we are spiritually illiterate of divine principles and divine Revelation. Our "rule of faith and practise" is still an unknown and seldom used Book. With no sure base in reason and philosophy our religion has become a thin veneer for a shallow pragmatism. True Christianity is more than this. The celebrated Bishop Horne said, "To preach practical sermons, as they are called, that is, sermons upon virtues and vices, without menleating those great scripture truths of redemption which alone can incite and enable us to forsake sin and follow righteousness, is but to put together the wheels and set the hands of the watch, forgetting the spring which is to make them all move."

Human conduct, no matter how idealistic and beautiful it may be, is valueless before God unless it is produced under the influence of the great foundation facts of Christian belief—the sovereignty of God, the atonement of Christ, the indwelling of the Holy Ghost and the mission of the Church. Produced apart from these doctrinal principles, all human virtues are but "good works." Is not the Pauline teaching on grace still a part of the Rule of Faith? (Eph. 2:8, 9.)

These can be no life without doctrine; no ethics without dogma. Christianity, in the lazy analysis is more than the mere accretion of the experiences of men; it is the revelation of Divine Truth. The present tendency within Protestantism to minimize and undervalue truth is indeed unfortunate, and if persisted in will lead to the destruction of our cause. We must remember that truth and God are one. It is, therefore very, very important what a man believes.

Dr. John A. MacKay, in his inaugural address as president of Princeton Seminary last year, made this ringing and wholesome statement: "Theology is still the Queen of the Sciences, and always will be, for Theology is the Science of Divine Revelation."

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS TO ELON COLLEGE.

Last week's issue carried information concerning Sunday schools and churches sending in offerings for Elon College direct from their organizations. These offerings constitute a part of the individual church's apportionment to be sent to the annual conference at its next meeting. This is the college period, and we are hoping that a large number of Sunday schools and churches may find it possible to receive an offering and send to the college or send an offering out of their regular benevolent treasury. Let every church send an offering. Have you sent yours? If not won't you please do so?

Last week we reported offerings from the following churches: Tryon, Flint Hill, Antioch, Mt. Olivet (R), Palmyra, Bethlehem, Dendron, Suffolk, and Union (Southampton), amounting to $54.32. This week we report offerings, bringing the total to $112.22, as follows:

N. C. & Va. Conference:
Union Ridge Church	$ 25.00
Union Church	10.00
Albemarle	21.90
Mt. Zion	1.00
Total	$ 57.90

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Hypocrisy is the curse of humanity. In the days of Jesus of Nazareth spiritual hypocrisy was the predominant curse of Judaism. Against this form of deceit Jesus hurled His severest criticism and pronounced His most caustic judgment. He had compassion toward sinners. But His soul burned with indignation toward hypocrites.

Today hypocrisy makes its most deadly appearance in the greed for money. The situation can be summarized in a review of an interview with a young business man. He was employed by a large industrial corporation. He told of deception among the higher officials of his corporation as they made the contacts with other business men. In the office the men boldly revealed how, in different ways, they had taken advantage of ignorant and innocent customers, and laughed about their dishonesty and deception. To them it was a mark of business ability to be able to cheat and defraud their customers. He said: "When I see and hear about the things that I know are being done by employers and employees I become a pessimist, and I lose faith in my fellowman."

This young man had lost his grip on the church, and the church had lost its power over his life. He confessed that his only hope was in a return to the church. "But," he said, "when I see this hypocrisy in the lives of the people who are church members, it is hard to find my way back to the church with spiritual satisfaction." Was the attitude of this man distorted and abnormal? Does he represent a cross section of the average working man in his discoveries and interpretations of the underlying principles in the industrial and business world of today?

How can a man consistently defraud, deceive and cheat his fellowman six days of the week and sit in church on Sunday with a sanctimonious look and a hypocritical greeting? Only a hypocrite can do that, and such deception weakens the church in its effort to redeem lost humanity. Liberal giving to the church cannot compensate for the sin of financial dishonesty and industrial hypocrisy. And sanctimonious attitudes cannot camouflage an inner life which is a stench in the nostrils of decent humanity and an abomination in the sight of Almighty God. What is done in the office and at the workbench speaks much louder than the audible voices heard in the sanctuary.

Was this man right in his criticism, or was he wrong? His criticism was met with these words: "There are many honest people in business. Do not think every place is full of hypocrites. Honesty has its due reward. Dishonesty and hypocrisy will have just recompense in the final day of accounting. The trickster will reap the reward of his own trickery." The winner in a dishonest game will be the loser tomorrow. In the end he is the loser. He loses his gain, and he loses his integrity; he loses his profits, and he loses his own soul. Pity the poor deluded souls of this age who think that honesty and righteousness can be safely cast aside for some passing financial gain.

The church members should be models of sincerity and righteousness. When they fail, the church suffers. When they are faithful, in life and in service, the church grows and the kingdom of God advances. They are being tested in office and counting room. The principles of Christianity furnish the yardstick that will ultimately measure life for time and eternity. Every man is being measured every day. I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE CHURCHES.

The Upper Alamance Fellowship composed of the Christian Churches in Alamance County held its regular fifth Sunday meeting at Elon College this week. Dr. James H. Lightbourne, president of the fellowship, presided. Devotional services were conducted by the Ministerial Association of the college with Rev. Emanuel Hedgebeth directing. The principal speaker was Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, President of the Convention, who spoke on the Convention's program and the local church.

Dr. Harrell, as he always does, gave a very thoughtful and helpful address. During the course of his remarks he stated, "I do not know how it affects you, but whenever I come to Elon College, it always does something to me. To feel that I am here with young people who are developing for usefulness in life, I am inspired." If more of our people could come in touch with the college, they would in all probability have the same feeling and the same attitude.

My position requires my presence in many public gatherings of our church. I am greatly encouraged with the change of expressions and attitude regarding Elon College. Five years ago rarely if ever did anyone refer to the college in a public address or in discussion on conference floors who had not been specifically asked to do so, or if references were made, they were usually of a pessimistic and discouraging type. During the past year, I have not been present at a single gathering of our people in which one or more persons who had not been asked did not refer to the college in an encouraging and optimistic way. To me this fact is not only encouraging but tremendously significant. The minds of our people at large have been turned favorably toward our college. We are all encouraged by the progress that has been made and further progress that is in prospect. The college is beginning to grow up. Practically fifty years have passed since the first definite action was taken by the church looking toward the establishment of an institution of higher learning. Soon fifty years will have passed since the doors were first opened for students and our first commencement was held. Fifty years is quite a long time for a person to live, but an institution at that age has not reached its maturity. It is in the prime of life, on the threshold of great usefulness in the training of minds and the development of character. With Elon College, it is just beginning to open its mouth for instruction, encouragement and the trumpeting out of the eternal truths of our Christian faith and Christian doctrine. It shall continue to be as it always has been the voice of the church in the field of higher education and matters of religious instruction for the youth of our church and the needs of our day. The weight of years does not impair the usefulness of an inspiration but rather enriches it provided the cooperation and support of its natural constituents are timely and generous.

We, all of us, are greatly anticipating the Fiftieth Anniversary of the college and the opportunity that such an anniversary will offer us one and all to express our gratitudes, repay the college for the inspiration and encouragement given us in our days of preparation, and an added opportunity to secure the institution for all time that she may continue to inspire and guide the youth of the church during the days and years that are ahead. Your cooperation and contributions could not be given to a more needy or a more worthy cause. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

REDUCING A REVIVAL TO ITS SIMPLEST TERMS AND HIGHEST EFFICIENCY.

By MARNA S. POULSON, D. D.

Revivals are common. Here is a proposal for an unusual one.

Political-revivals are common whenever there is a ticket to be elected.

Business-revivals are common whenever merchants can devise a new scheme, or revamp an old one, for getting the people to spend on a larger scale.

Sports-revivals are common whenever the owners of baseball clubs, or other professional sports, can think of some new way to coax people to the box office.

Gambling-revivals are common whenever some scheming men can think of a novel way to make the gullible think they can get a lot for a little.

Revivals, of one sort or another, right and left of us until there is very little left for most of us in the realm of character-building and general-welfare.

I propose an up-to-date revival built around a plan that can be phrased in simple language and made to work like a house-a-fire.

Let every religious paper—the daily and weekly press, too, if they care to help the movement—do what they think best to persuade bad people to be good and good people to be better, while we all admit that far too many of us are very little better, if any, than the day we publicly became identified with the church.

Let every pulpit ring with the challenge: Are you ready and willing to do your level best to persuade, not compel, those closest to you to be better? (You may not know any really bad people.)

Look at those two words, bad and good.

A person is bad when morally wicked, or when exerting an unwholesome influence, or when seeking selfish ends without regard for the rights, privileges and comfort of other persons.

A person is good who has excellent moral qualities, or who exerts a wholesome influence, or who refuses to trample on the rights, privileges, and comforts of others to secure his own pleasure or profit.

Here is a proposal that goes to the very heart of the teachings of Jesus without using the conventional revival-language that has lost much of its charm and left much of its clatter.

Such a revival, officially sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches, and systematically followed by the various denominations, would produce a religious atmosphere in which many of our habits and customs as persons and peoples would wilt and die.

Napoleon once said something to the effect that conquering people was cloying, but that persuading people was the sport of kings.

Theodore Roosevelt put it differently. He said there was no sport equal to fighting for righteousness.

What a life a nation could lead if its most worthwhile citizens were trying to make bad people good and good people better, themselves included!

Have we the courage to simplify the message of the church in some such way? Is there anything the church can legitimately seek that would not be helped by such a plain speaking and direct action program?

It would remake wrecked homes and mend broken hearts.

It would empty prison cells and build clean cities.

It would remake, or unmake, corrupt political leaders.

It would promote peace! Renovate educational methods! Dissolve denominational lines—and add height to our ideals, depth to our convictions, and breadth to our sympathies. It would put the Sermon of the Mount into language everybody could appreciate and appropriate. None but the really wicked would oppose it even if far too many of the good would not heartily endorse it.

This is not proposed as an easy method of evangelizing the world—far from it! But in an age when men do not take time to consider words of involved meaning, and when conventional methods for getting attention no longer get results, this apparently simple plan may catch the eye, win the approval, and enlist the effort of slumbering thousands. This will lift Christ up so that all men would be drawn to Him.

*Bad people good—
Good people better—
None of us too good,
And none too bad,
To enlist.*

THE CHURCH AND ITS MISSION.

By RT. REV. V. S. AZARIAH,

Bishop of Dornakal, at Madras Conference.

A man who had been a Hindu seeker after truth told me this story of his experience. He had read the New Testament, the Gospels, had been fascinated by the life of Christ, and had been greatly stirred by the death of Christ. Then he had read on into the Book of Acts and felt that he had entered into a new world. In the Gospels it was Jesus, his works, and his suffering. In the Acts, the Christ seems to go into the background, and it is the multitude, the brethren, the church, the disciples that taken the place of Christ. What the disciples did and thought and taught had taken the place that Christ had occupied; the church continued where Jesus left off at his death. "Therefore," this man said to me, "I must belong to the church that carries on the life of Christ."

Do the younger and older churches realize that they exist to carry on what Jesus Christ came to do? The church exists to proclaim the revelation of God's love, to proclaim the redemption from sin. Every member of the church is expected to go forward in the army of those continuing what Christ came to do.

In baptisms, we dedicate a man, a woman, or a child as a soldier of Christ, faithful soldier and servant of life's end. Every person baptized should be a witness, not ashamed of Christ; otherwise he denies his baptism. "Every Christian a witness" is a slogan of our efforts at evangelism. We have been getting little groups of baptized persons together and training them to go about and answer the simple questions of the Indian villagers. One was asked by a villager, "Have you seen God?" And his answer was, "Sirs, you knew me two years ago. I was a drunkard. You know me know. I do not think I should have had all this change if I had not seen Jesus Christ." There is no better answer, and no better way of witnessing for God.

Often we find that the things that teach people are not the intellectual things but those that go straight to their hearts. I often learn from illiterate men how they answer the objections that men make to the Christian faith. To another illiterate man it was said, "It is nonsense that a person can rise from the dead." His reply was, "We bury a bag of rice in the field and it dies and a crop rises up to feed us. Surely if God plants a life, he can raise it again."

In the early church it was the common man who spread the Gospel of Christ. Christianity spread from slave to slave, from soldier to soldier, from artisan to artisan. Every convert talked to his fellowmen, the men of his own group. It is our duty to get every person who is attached to the church to go out as a witness for Christ. The sharing of experience

A MESSAGE TO ALL PEOPLE.

That indeed was a ringing message which went out from the great International Missionary Council, meeting in Madras, India, December 12-20, 1938. Dr. John R. Mott sponsored the message, which the Conference had adopted and sent it out to be read wherever it might be in churches, from pulpits and in groups who care to share. It was entitled "A Message To All People," with greetings to the peoples of all lands. We haven't the space to quote the message in its entirety, but it is a message of faith, hope and inspiration, which every pastor should have and every congregation should know about. It begins with the statement:

"We are four hundred and seventy delegates, gathered from seventy nations and from many races of the earth to consider how we may better make known to the world the love of the eternal God as He has revealed Himself in Jesus Christ."

Then two paragraphs reveal the problem and the burden that bore upon these delegates and readily explain the chaotic condition in which we now find ourselves.

"The reports that have been brought to us from every quarter of the globe have made us realize that the ancient pestilences which destroy mankind are abroad with a virulence unparalleled. In every country the fact of war or the fear of it casts its paralyzing shadow over human hope. Race hatred, the ugly parent of persecution, has been set up as a national idol in many a market place and increasingly becomes a household god. Everywhere the greed of money continues to separate those who have from those who have not, filling the latter with angry plans of revolution and the former with the nervousness of power.

"Again and again a sense of penitence has come over us as we have realized that these consuming evils are all of them man-made. They bear upon them the marks of human manufacture as clearly as the motor car or the airplane. Neither flood nor earthquake nor dark mysterious force outside of our control produces wars or economic tensions. We know that we live involved within a chaos which we ourselves have made."

However, these delegates were not content with sounding the alarm and noting the evils that brought us into this state of chaos, but with a clarity of vision that all must applaud they discover a way out for all peoples, faiths and nations who will share that vision and in faith embrace it and act upon it. This paragraph reveals the very heart and conscience of this ringing message to all people:

"It is clear that only God can save the peoples, and that the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ not only can but will. It must become clearer to us all, however, that the instruments He demands are not men and women of ideals as such, but those who constantly in prayer and worship verify those same ideals before His august will—verify and improve and never cease to re-verify them."

It is indeed a significant message from the Conference composed as it was of the most eminent and devout Christian statesmen, men and women, of seventy nations.

One of the rays of hope in our darkened and tragic era is that the church itself has real statesmen in its pulpits and in its pews who are giving their best thoughts and most devoted efforts to pointing the way out from the present chaos—that way being ever and always the same, namely; the way of Him, who said, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life."

AN EFFECT OF TITHING.

Whereas the total per capita gifts of American churches, for both outside benevolences and congregational expenses, averaged only $13.02 per member last year for twenty large Protestant denominations, the four leading churches of Long Beach, Cal., last year gave $13.47 per member to benevolences alone. The average benevolent gifts reported for all leading American churches was only one-sixth this amount, or $2.23 per member. At the same time the Long Beach churches are paying off their "Earthquake loans" and are engaged in building programs. One secret of the fine showing of the four Long Beach churches is that they are tithing churches. They give 40% of all their contributions to local home and foreign missions. Tithing evidently brings blessed results both to givers and to the work of Christ. The potential giving power for Protestant Christians in the United States is estimated at about $3,000,000,000 a year, or nearly ten times the present reported gifts.—Exchange.

We are profoundly grateful for these offerings, realizing as we do that they represent donations, for the most unselfish and divine cause that a donation can be given, namely; that of sharing the gospel with others. The church with its Sunday school and Missionary Society is the only institution that makes donations to missions. The world outside of the church and church membership has no interest, or concern, in the spread of the gospel and the winning of souls to Christ through the preaching of the gospel. Our Lord realized this and said to His disciples and followers, "Ye shall be witnesses of Me."

Cordially yours,

J. O. ATKINSON,

JEWISH NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS.

Though men may hate me and mine and wreak their enmity upon me, I shall not give them hatred for hatred. I shall not permit their dark intolerance, their depravity, their inhumanity, to take possession of my soul. I shall strive to see in them misguided children of God, and to pray for the day when they will return to reasonableness and brotherly love. I shall strive always to hate the sin but not the sinner. I shall never let the realization leave me that I am not alone in my problems. I shall strive to cooperate with all men of good will, and with all faiths.—Rabbi Heller.

YOUR CHRISTMAS CARDS.

Now that the Christmas season is over, and you have had time to enjoy the Christmas cards you received—what are you going to do with them? Some of you will throw them away, some of you will save them for years and years, others will keep them until next Christmas. Here is a plea for you to send them—along with any post cards you may have—to a missionary for further use. Rev. Raymond Dudley, who taught classes in all of our summer conferences in the Southeast in 1937, has written from India asking that we send our old Christmas cards to him. They are used by the mission schools in many ways, the ones with suitable pictures even being given out as "picture cards" to Sunday school classes. If you will send your cards to the Board of Christian Education at Elon College, we will see that they reach Mr. Dudley in Arruppukottai, India. This is such an easy way for you to participate in one phase of missionary work—if you have already disposed of your Christmas cards, begin saving picture post cards now and do your bit to aid one missionary.

FOR FEBRUARY 12, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: John 13:35; 15:12-17;
Acts 17:24-28.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Serving Foreign Captors—Dan. 5:13-17.

Tuesday—Deathless Love Between Aliens—Ruth 1:14-17.

Wednesday—Helpfulness, a Barrier Destroyer—Luke 10:30-37.

Thursday—God, No Respector of Races—Acts 10:34-38.

Friday—No Racial Barriers in Christ—Col. 3:10, 11.

Saturday—Jesus Christ, the Common Lord—Phil. 2:9-11.

Many churches in America are observing this Sunday as Race Relations Sunday. In this meeting seek to discover the causes of race problems and find a solution which is in keeping with the spirit of Jesus. Race hatred is a dominating evil throughout the world.

As a practical application, ask members of another race to visit this meeting when the topic is discussed. They may or may not be asked to take part on the program.

Encourage courses of mission study and courses in race problems. Go out of your way personally to show courtesy to a member of another race. Give much consideration to the daily Bible readings. Try to discover what some people of other races are doing in the realm of music, art, government, literature, education, etc.

Do not hate a whole race because you dislike a single individual. How much do we owe to all races? St. Paul was a Jew. Dante was an Italian. Kagawa is a Japanese. Albert Schweitzer is a German. Roland Hayes is a Negro. Dr. T. Z. Koo is a Chinese. Brief reports may be made on the contributions of these men.

What Christian Youth Says—

[Taken from the Christian Youth Council of North America, which met at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, in June, 1934. Is it the sentiment of your Christian Endeavor Society?]

"We are Christians. We give allegiance to the will of God as revealed in Jesus Christ.

"We are Americans, grateful for our heritage, conscious of the obligations of citizenship, proud of the possibilities as a nation in the family of nations, committed to the highest welfare of all of the people of America and of the world.

"True to our religion, and loyal to our nation, we are united in seeking to secure for all persons those larger liberties guaranteed by the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. We oppose, by every Christian method, any attempt to infringe the liberties of any part of our people through any form of dictatorship, whether of a person, or of a party, race, or class, even if it is our own."

PETER PREACHES AT PENTECOST.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 5, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts.—Zech. 4:6.

LESSON: Acts 2:5-18; 36-41.

A Great Occasion.

Pentecost was a great occasion. It was one of the three great feasts of the Hebrew people. It fell fifty days after the "feast of unleavened bread." It was a kind of "harvest home" festival, a day of good cheer, and a day of joy. The day was observed as a Sabbath Day, all labor was suspended, and all the people appeared before Jehovah to express gratitude. The central feature of the day was the presentation of two loaves of leavened, salted bread unto the Lord. It meant a great deal to the Jews in the time of Jesus.

But it means more to Christians. For it was on Pentecost that the Holy Spirit came, and the Church as an institution was born. The Holy Spirit descended in answer to the explicit promise of the glorified Lord, and in response to the obedient waiting and persistent praying of the disciples. The outstanding impression one gets of the day of Pentecost is that of fullness, abundance, over-plus, much more, exceeding greatness. God gave His Spirit without measure. It was a great occasion, the greatest occasion in the history of the Christian Church.

A Great Congregation.

Peter had a great congregation. There were Jews from all parts of the then known world present for the feast. Read verses 9, 10 and 11, and see how representative a group it was. And when one keeps in mind that thousands upon thousands of these people attended the feast, one realizes what an inspiring congregation—at least from size—Peter had. Numbers do help. A full church is an inspiration. A large class does engender enthusiasm.

A Great Supporting Cast.

The record reads "But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice . . ." Peter had eleven sympathetic, praying, consecrated men back of him. That in itself would fire him with zeal, and courage, and inspiration. Nothing so steadies, and strengthens, and sustains a minister like having a group of faithful people praying for him.

A Great Theme.

Peter had a great theme for his sermon. In essence it was simply and wholly Jesus Christ. It might be said in all truthfulness that Peter stood up and preached Christ unto them. Christ was the central theme, the center and the circumference of the message. Great themes help toward great preaching. Great texts help to inspire great preaching. Christ is the superlative theme for Christian preaching.

A Great Sermon.

This untutored and unlettered man—after the fashion of the schools—preached a great sermon. It was simple, as all great sermons are. It was grounded in scripture—study it and learn how much scripture Peter quotes and how many scriptural allusions he makes. It was direct—he told those people that they had crucified the Lord of glory, he spoke the truth in love. It was positive—Peter told what he believed instead of spending a lot of time telling what he did not believe. It was passionate—it throbs with life even as one reads it after all these years. It was spiritual—it strikes the deep places and the high places of the inner life of man. It was convincing and convicting—Peter's words made a tremendous impression on his hearers, and led them to decision and action. It was life-giving, for as a result of it three thousand souls were born into the Kingdom. Ministers both young and old can with profit study Peter's sermon at Pentecost. It is true spiritual preaching at its best. And think of it, it was preached by a man who a couple or more years ago was an humble, unknown, unschooled fisherman. The most brilliant man cannot be a great preacher without the Holy Spirit. The humblest man can be a great preacher with the aid of the Holy Spirit.

A Great Invitation or Promise.

In reply to their question as to what they should do, Peter says, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Repent, change your mind, be sorry enough to quit; give outward expression to this inner change of attitude and spirit by being baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of the sins which you have put away from you; and God will give his Holy Spirit. One cannot get it by good works; he can get it only as it comes as a gift from God, in response to the right spirit in man.

A Great Result.

"And the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Three thousand men and women, and probably young people were born into the Kingdom of God! God had set his seal upon the new movement in an unmistakable way. For three thousand people life had taken on a new meaning, God had become real, eternal spiritual life and become a present possession, and their hearts were filled with new joy, new peace, new power. If only somehow modern Christianity could recapture the radiance and the power of apostolic preaching!

THE CHURCH AND ITS MISSION.

with others adds to our joy and to our own Christian experience. Let some men just stand somewhere as Christians; let them just face a non-Christian crowd; let someone else do the preaching, and someone else the singing; the experience of just standing for Christ will drive them to their knees before Christ.

I used to go around among the churches and have the baptized members place their hands on their own heads (as in the act of baptism) and repeat after me: "I am a baptized Christian. Woe unto me if I preach not the Gospel!"

Not only the individual but the group must witness for Christ. Six men of caste came to me and asked for baptism. I asked them why they wanted to be baptized. They replied that they had been watching the outcasts in a certain village church, and had seen that since their becoming Christians they were getting ahead of the caste people. "They will be better than we are if we do not become Christians," they said.

That very day the pastor of that village church had been complaining to me of the sins among the members of that very congregation. So I said that these church members were not perfect. To which they replied, "Yes, there are black sheep in every flock. But we know what they were ten years ago and what they are now."

It is the church's duty to concentrate all its energies to do the work of Christ. It is not just to worship; but it is to continue to do Christ's work with the help and the strength that we get in worship. Too much of the energies of ministers and of churches is being spent in taking permanent care of hereditary Christians. The church exists not to save itself but to save others.

MONDAY.

THE MAGNETIC CHRIST.

"If I be lifted up, I will draw all men to me."—Jno. 12:32.

Evil is magnetic. It is made so by the spirit behind evil and by man who loves evil. Confirm this by taking a glance at the beauty and glory of signs and advertisements. Even a whiskey bottle is designed to attract and appeal to man's fancy. But it is the magnetism that Christ warns against and Christianity will not suffer us to be deluded by.

Goodness is magnetic. There is nothing so attractive as a character beyond reproach. Good character is not advertised. We do not see it plead for on the billboards, nor emblazoned in neon illusive signs. It is a thing just lived in life every day, and it is the thing that holds the world together. Christ came that ye might have this life. Follow Him.

Prayer—Dear Father, suffer us not to be mislead by the attractiveness of sin. Give us the life of Jesus always, and we will follow Him. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE HEART OF HUMANITY.

"Whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me."—Matt. 18:1-6 (V. 5).

Today I am at sea off coast of Mexico, enroute San Diego. The day is rainy and the sea is choppy. It is called "thick." But the inside of the ship is not gloomy. Everybody is cheerful and happy. There are twenty-five children on board. The most of them are playing and frolicking. Many of them are engaged in games, and the grown folks are helping them. One dear lady is specially interested in assisting them, putting on a little drama. The drama is David and Goliath. The children are happy.

Thus does the heart of humanity respond to the needs of the little ones. This was what Jesus said about it.

Would that we all could perceive the deep spiritual needs and dangers of the millions of children without the knowledge of their best friend, Jesus.

Prayer—We thank Thee, our Father, for the impulse that Thou hast stirred in our hearts, and we pray for wisdom to bring all childhood to a knowledge of Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE REFRESHING PAST.

"Remember the days of old."—Deut. 32:7.

Art Thou overborne, harrassed, or discouraged today? Think back over the past and count the number of times the Lord hath blessed thee. He who strengthened thy arm in the past is still beside thee. He who hath led will lead still." The past is a proof of His power now. When thou prayest, say, "O God, our help in the ages past."

Prayer—Hither to Thy help, I have come, O God. Hither hath Thou helped me in the past. Help me to make my altar of prayer an Ebenezer (a stone of help) token that Thou art still an unfailing friend. Amen.

THURSDAY.

IN TUNE WITH HEAVEN.

"If any man have ears to hear, let him hear."—Mark 7:16.

Each day in all the world without, lie hidden the voiceless messages of spiritual realities. Everything speaks; the flowers of the fields, the birds of the air, the vicissitudes of living. Jesus was constantly seeing these and liking man and the kingdom of God unto them.

They who are spiritually sensitive, like Jesus, are open-eared and open-eyed to these messages, and every voice is a silent influence that lifts them above the trifling.

Prayer—O Lord, open Thou our eyes that we may see Thy world, know Thy ways, and in everything may read Thy story. Amen.

FRIDAY.

RADIANT FRIENDSHIP.

"They that feared the Lord spake often one to another."—Mal. 3:16.

Not long ago a friend traveled all the way from Washington, D. C., to Norfolk, Va., and back again just to fellowship with a Christian brother. His stalwart character, his glowing words, his radiant face were and still are like cold water to a thirsty soul. It is grand to feel the help of a neighbor, and when friends say, "Be of good courage." It is easy to "Fear not, to believe that He is with us and that we need not be dismayed." Through these friends we feel His strength and His upholding hand. Read Isa. 41.

Prayer—Our hearts glow with gratitude, our Lord, for the fellowship of friends. Amen.

SATURDAY.

OUR GREATEST TROUBLES.

"The little foxes spoil the vines."—Son of Solomon.—2:15.

Life's greatest troubles are not the big ones—distresses and what-not. We need a faith to meet those, and if we can anticipate them we do. But is the petty annoyances, the irritations and bafflings and disappointments that come in the daily round of life, that get us down. We need a faith adequate for the little trials of every day.

Prayer—Save us, O Lord, from defeat by the little foxes of life. Suffer not our souls to be marred by the little worries. Amen.

SUNDAY.

The church, a place of the temple on earth where people worship, sacrifice, and make their vows to God—the road to travel where we are made conscious that He is with us, and will be with us till the great day of awakening.

THE SPIRIT OF PUBLIC SERVICE.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap."—Ezekiel 22: 30.

Upon this occasion of the firemen's anniversary service I choose to think with you on the spirit of public service. As we meditate together, let us think of public servants in general, as well as yourselves in particular. To render any public service is a high calling, that is, if it is really a service. We seldom pause to thank the public servant, whether he be postman, policeman, or president of the United States, for his services. We seldom think of the man of the army and navy as being public servants. But do not firemen, policemen, soldiers, and sailors "make up the hedge," and do not they "stand in the gap?" We seldom pause to think how much the public school teacher means in our land. Just think of the influence she has upon our coming generation. We seldom stop to thank the Sunday school teacher, the preacher, and the voluntary church worker for the great service which they render our civilization. Do not they "make up the hedge" of protection, and do not they "stand in the gap?"

I like to think of all such servants of the public good as "pinch-hitters" in our society. One morning I was sitting by a little crib, and my little baby girl was fast asleep. Presently several puffs of dense smoke began to rush forth from the slots into which the sliding doors were wont to slip. The house was on fire, and inside its very framework it was burning hotter and hotter. Quickly I carried the baby to the house next door and sounded the fire alarm. I wanted to put that fire out, and we might have begun frantically to do so, but before you could realize it, a crew of experienced, level-headed men stepped in and did the extinguishing of that fire for us. We wondered where it was burning, and how much, and how soon the house and furniture would be flooded with water, and with what result. But cool-headed men quickly located the fire inside the wall, and as quickly placed canvas on the floor, made a small hole in the plastering, and inserted chemicals and presently the fire was all gone. With their brooms they cleaned up, and were soon on their way. They did us a great service. We wanted to protect ourselves; they did it for us! They were "pinch hitters."

So we might go the round of many men and women who work for us in a better way than we can work for ourselves. We should be grateful to them, the doctor, the lawyer, the teacher, the city official, the minister, the soldier, the sailor, the government official, and ever-increasing list in our complex civilization, that help us better than we can help ourselves. We should be grateful to them.

God says in Ezekiel, "I sought for a man among them." God is seeking today for a man, for real men and real women, not pieces of men and women, but real men and women, real boys and girls, to do His work. It is our duty to be real, not to destroy our best selves, our best spirits, our best possible bodies, our best minds, but to build them up and strengthen and preserve them, so that when we are called upon to do real "pinch hitting," to really step into the hedge, or to fill up the gap, we are able for the emergency. Maybe sometime God will call upon us to do for somebody what they cannot do for themselves. To do that, my friend, is to answer God's call to stand in the broken down place in the hedge; to do that is to answer God's call to stand in the gap!

One day God sent His own man to fill up the hedge, to stand in the gap. He sent His own son, and equipped him with perfect manhood. The broken down hedge was filled up by him; he stood in the gap. What a beautiful picture that is of Jesus. How often we feel our own lives to be unable, unfit, incomplete! For the man who has come to know God through Christian worship and prayer and study and living, it is a joy to know that Jesus is our advocate, our mediator, our divine friend, who will step into the vacant place in the hedge, who will step into the gap for us. Somebody has to pay the price, so to speak, for our sins. Somebody has to suffer the consequences of them. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is everlasting life." Jesus died on the cross for us, and became, as Paul expressed it, "the unspeakable gift" for us. My friends, do not forget that. Let faith in that fact, or rather faith in Him as Savior, make your lives a living testimony to his grace and mercy toward us. Let that faith fashion our lives in beautiful, faithful service to Him and to our fellow-man.

It is He that has set the proper spirit of public service, which is, without thought of what we are or are not, going to get out of it, but to render the service as an answer to a divine call to duty. Society will pay you for the regular routine; only God can pay you for the spirit in which you do your duty. God expects every real man, or real woman, or real boy, or girl to his duty. God rewards that service and His blessings are manifold, and beyond measure. There is no thrill like the divine thrill of doing your duty, of stepping into the broken-down place, whether it be a burning house, or a drowning boy, and doing your duty regardless of the resulting consequences. That is real heroism. It can be done every day, in some way, by all of us. There are so many little unseen, and unsung ways to step into the broken-down hedge for God, to fill up the gap somewhere for God; to do something for somebody that they cannot do for themselves, and only for the joy of doing it. For that kind of men and women that great, eternal heart of God searches. May you be that sort of man! "I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap." The Christ was such a man; let us be his followers, indeed!

much more than that. The subscriptions are needed in order to inform the membership and undergird the churches. The paper will help greatly in the educational development of the churches, but there are other methods of education that should go along with this method. The paper hopes that all the other processes will be perfected, also. But the three thousand subscriptions will help.

The church paper (and the Promotional Secretary) challenges the churches for 1939 as follows:

One thousand (1,000) new members by Easter;

All financial obligations met in full;

Three thousand (3,000) subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Will the churches accept such a challenge? Will the pastors respond? What do deacons think of such a program? Will Sunday school superintendents and teachers share in such a program? Are young people interested? The future will give the answer.

In Memoriam

SMITH.

Mr. E. F. Smith passed to his reward on October 19, 1938. He was seventy-nine years old. Mr. Smith was an outstanding citizen of his community and well thought of by those who knew him. In early manhood he made a profession of faith and joined Hines' Chapel Christian Church. For fifty years he was a faithful member. He served as deacon over forty years; he was chairman of the Board of deacons at his death. He was treasurer of the church for forty years and taught a Sunday school class for several years. Mr. Smith taught the gospel both by word and example and was a spiritual leader. We miss his presence with us, but we feel that God has called him to a greater reward where he will be a shining star throughout eternity.

We commend his loved ones to God for comfort.

COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

HASKINS.

Mrs. Fanny Sanford Haskins, daughter of the late Dr. James and Rebecca Sanford, was born in Person County, N. C., on December 14, 1854, the oldest of a family of nine daughters, and died at her home near Virgilina, Va., October 11, 1938, at the age of eighty-three years. She joined Union Christian Church when she was young and lived a beautiful Christian life until death. She is survived by her husband, W. N. Haskins, whom she married in 1902; four step-children and ten step-grandchildren. There are also surviving her three sisters: Miss Ada Sanford and Mrs. Rosa Chandler, of Virgilina, Va., and Mrs. Cora Pond of Durham, N. C. Five sisters preceded her to the spirit land: Mrs. Ben Yancey, Mrs. W. D. Gregory, Mrs. Willie Haskins, Mrs. M. L. Hurley, and Mrs. S. B. Klapp.

The funeral was conducted in her church and burial was in the church cemetery. Sister Haskins suffered much in body for the past several years, but no one was ever more patient and brave suffering with a sweeter spirit of Christian bravery than she.

C. E. NEWMAN.

SMITH.

On September 30, 1938, it was God's will to call from our midst Mr. Jaunes Alvis Smith, a loyal and devoted member of Apple's Chapel Christian Church. We wish to pay tribute to the memory of one whose going has brought sorrow to us all. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, remembering that "He doeth all things well."

2. That in his death we have lost a noble Christian character, and one who loved his church and was devoted to his family.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his children and point them to God, whose grace is sufficient in the hour of sorrow.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon our church records in loving memory of our departed friend, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy to "The Christian Sun."

Mrs. VANNIE BROWN,
 Mrs. ORA SMITH,
 ETHEL McINTYRE,
 Committee.

BURKE.

The Dry Run Christian Church, near Woodstock, Va., lost one of its most Christ-like and valuable members in the death of Mr. R. A. Burke on October 7, 1938. At the time of his death he was 75 years old and for the last 30 years he had been a leader of the Dry Run Church. He had constantly upheld the cause of righteousness in his community. The entire community and church will feel the loss since Brother Burke has gone to his reward.

Four sons survive him: Loyd, William, Roscoe, and Quentin; three grandchildren and two sisters also mourn his passing.

A great Christian life has passed to its heavenly reward, but his Christian influence lives on in the hearts of those who knew him.

W. J. ANDES.

BRANTLEY.

In loving memory of Mrs. Josie Holt Brantley, whom God, in His infinite wisdom, removed from our midst on September 13, 1938, we, the members of Ivor Christian Church, Southampton County, Va., desire to express our devotion to her memory as a member of our church. While knowing that the place she filled in her church, home and community will always be vacant, we believe that our loss is her divine gain and that she has gone to that mansion which God has prepared for His own. We shall miss her kindly smile, her quiet manner and her steady devotion to her church. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will.

2. That we hold in remembrance her faithfulness to all.

3. That we extend anew our sympathy to the family.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun," for publication, and that we keep one to be made a part of our church record.

 Mrs. B. H. LANE,
 Miss DONA WILLIAMS,
 Committee.

HILLYARD.

Mrs. Ada Showalter Hillyard was born September 25, 1879. On January 4, 1939, she laid the last burden down and set sail for the haven of eternal rest. Only a few days before she had expressed her readiness and willingness to go. So there was "no moaning of the bar" when she departed. This blessed condition was made possible by a life lived in humble submission to Christ, and confident trust in His willingness and power to help and bless. She leaves four daughters, Mrs. Russell Stearn, Mrs. Earl Simmers, Mrs. Raymond Holsinger, Mrs. Galen Wampler; two sisters, Mrs. Dasie Layman and Miss Minnie Showalter; and three grandchildren. The large congregation that attended her funeral attested to the esteem in which she was held by her friends. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

TRUITT.

We, the members of Mt. Bethel Church and Sunday school, Sumnerfield, N. C., wish to pay tribute to a beloved member and friend, Mr. Harrison Lee Truitt, who died December 26, 1938. His going has left a pew that was seldom vacant.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, knowing our Heavenly Father doeth all things well, bow in humble submission to His will.

2. That we hold in remembrance his service, his willingness, and his quiet personality.

3. That we extend to his family our sympathy and commend them to God, whose grace is sufficient for them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the church records, a copy sent to the family, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

STEWART.

Mrs. Mary Eugenia Stewart was among the oldest, in fact next to the oldest, of the members of Berea (Norfolk) Christian Church. She was known as one of the most faithful followers of our Lord in our church, ever ready to do the work of her church when duty or necessity demanded. She was born, reared, and lived in the Great Bridge community all her life until about ten years ago when she went to live with her oldest daughter in Norfolk. While in Norfolk, she returned to her church for all Home Coming occasions, or when an aged member died whose funeral was held in the church. In childhood she and the writer lived about two and a half miles apart. We met for the first time when we were about eight or nine years of age in a private school, and there arose between us an appreciation that has been lasting. May her memory to those who loved her be an incentive for a nobler, worthwhile life.

M. W. HOLLOWELL.

THE WAY

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Names are usually given to religious, social, and political movements from some peculiar characteristic of their followers. The Puritans were named because of their emphasis on the purity of their teachings and lives; the Pilgrims because of their treks to Holland and to this new continent; John Wesley's converts, divided into groups of tens, Methodists; and the Congregationalists received their name from their form of government. The early Christians, because of their new way of living, were called "The Way" before they were named "Christians." What were the characteristics of their teachings and lives that gave them this name?

Inner Life.

The early followers of Jesus emphasized the inner life first; the commandments and truths, second. The Rich Young Man had kept outwardly the Ten Commandments; still he was a selfish, covetous, and self-satisfied man, and Jesus pointed out to him his lack—he had not the generous spirit. Jesus points out in every appeal in the Sermon on the Mount that all these outer qualities begin in the heart.

Organizations.

Religion was burdened and crushed under organization. It was a startling teaching when Jesus said that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath. Creeds, church governments, and even the State, are free-will expressions of the inner life and convictions of the people. The people are the source of authority. Jesus taught Nicodemus that physical birth is not the door into the Kingdom of God, but penitence and the work of the Spirit.

Brothers.

Jesus taught the woman at the well that Jews and Samaritans are spiritual brothers. As the followers of Jesus multiplied following his resurrection, converts from all races and nations were one in Christ Jesus. Paul went on his three missionary journeys to all men. Jew and Gentile, bond and free, are all one.

The Needy.

The followers of Jesus in those early days helped everyone in any need. They had sympathy and a message of life for the outcast, the self-righteous, the children, the women, the men, the slaves—everyone.

The Needy.

Is it any wonder that they were called "The Way" when in their teaching and conduct they placed life and experience above forms and organizations, loved all men as brothers, and had a word of hope and a deed of help for every needy person and group? Is not this the secret of the growth of the Church in numbers and influence during the first centuries? When the Church lives as Jesus did, it is the transforming life in the world.

CONGREGATIONAL - CHRISTIAN CHURCH.
Sanford, N. C.

Among the thirty charter members of this church who asked for membership in the Eastern North Carolina Conference on February 25, 1903, were two ministers, Rev. G. R. Underwood and Rev. J. D. Wicker.

The first building was dedicated in March, 1906, by Dr. Wm. S. Long. The building was remodeled in 1923 at a cost of $4,169.70. On February 17, 1924, the building was destroyed by fire, but in a short time it was restored.

Pastors who have served the church include the Reverends G. R. Underwood, E. L. Stack, W. S. Long, C. C. Peele, H. Shelton Smith, T. E. White, R. L. Williamson, T. Fred Wright, R. F. Brown, and F. Ervin Hyde.

The Sunday school has had six superintendents who have served it during its history of thirty-five years. They are S. J. Ellington, T. J. Bland, K. D. Way, J. U. Gunter, J. S. Truitt, and W. C. Farrell.

Only once in its history has the church had a full-time minister, and that for only one year (1928). The Rev. Mr. Williamson was pastor that year.

After a successful pastorate of three and one-half years, Rev. F. Ervin Hyde leaves Sanford and Shallow Well this week to begin work at Cortland, N. Y. Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, who graduates at Chicago Theological Seminary in June, will become pastor after graduation. From now until then the churches will be served by Cecil Thomas, a member of the Shallow Well Christian Church and a Freshman in Elon College.

Some churches are already making the survey and preparing for finding new members. Easter should be a great time of in-gathering.

Last month THE CHRISTIAN SUN received $365.00 for new and renewal subscriptions. Will you be among those who renew in February?

Next Monday is the time for our ministers in North Carolina to meet at Elon College. Here's hoping that all of them will be present for that morning session which can mean a great deal to our pastors and churches.

Somebody in Burlington, N. C., sent in $2.00 for a renewal subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN but did not give a name. The label for this person did not get changed. Please check your label and let us know if you are the one who sent the money.

The Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will meet in the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., May 9-11, 1939. It is expected that Moderator Oscar E. Maurer of New Haven, Conn., and Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, president of the Home Boards and pastor in Evanston, Ill., will be among the speakers.

The Promotional Secretary enjoyed speaking to the people of Salem Chapel Christian Church last Sunday morning and to the fine group at Pleasant Ridge in the afternoon. Both church buildings have recently been painted. Salem Chapel is using its new class rooms, and Pleasant Ridge hopes to be using new class rooms shortly. A new hardwood floor has recently been laid at Pleasant Ridge. Rev. G. H. Veazey is doing good work in this pastorate.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING AT DANVILLE.

About seventy-five people attended the Fifth Sunday Rally of the Dan River District at Danville, Va., on January 29. The group adopted a constitution and by-laws.

The program consisted mainly of music by the local choir composed of about fifty voices, an address by Dean J. D. Messick, of Elon College, in which he very clearly set forth the value and needs of our College, and an address by Rev. F. C. Lester on "Our Churches in 1939."

Rev. B. J. Earp is president of this group, and Miss Avis Dunn is the secretary-treasurer. The next meeting is to be held with Pleasant Grove Christian Church.

OLD COPIES OF "THE CHRISTIAN SUN" DESIRED.

A letter from Col. J. E. West of Suffolk, Va., referring us to an article appearing in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, July 20, 1883, revealed the fact that we do not have this issue in our library. Also, I find that there are a number of old copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN missing from our files. Should a reader of this article happen to have copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN prior to 1923 that he would like to have kept safely, if he will forward the same to me at the college, these copies will be filed in a fire-proof vault for safe keeping. At the same time they can be used for reference work as above requested. If you have such copies, we will appreciate the same greatly.

VANDERBILT RURAL CHURCH AND COMMUNITY CONFERENCE.

On April 17 to 21, the Rural Church and Community Conference will be held at Vanderbilt University. This succeeds the Rural Church School which for many years was attended by rural preachers from all over the South. This year the school is sponsored and directed by a committee of leading churchmen representing a number of denominations. On the program will be ministers from many churches including Methodist, Presbyterian, Disciples, Congregational-Christian, Baptist, Protestant, Episcopal, and Cumberland Presbyterian. The Cole Lectures will be delivered during the sessions of the Conference by Dr. Albert W. Beaven, President of Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, formerly Vice-President, Executive Committee of the Baptist World Alliance. Among the other lecturers will be Dr. William Adams Brown, Chairman of the Universal Christian Council, and Dr. Mark A. Dawber, Executive Secretary, Home Missions Council.

Since the Conference occupies only four days and very reasonable accommodations are being secured, the Conference itself will issue no scholarships. It is hoped that local churches may in some instances provide for their pastors.

Communications can be addressed to Rural Church and Community Conference, School of Religion, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The Executive Committee of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches met at the call of the president on Friday, January 20, 1939, at Norlina, N. C., with members Jones, Lightbourne, and Harrell present. Mr. Jones was bearer of regrets for their absence from Doctors Hardcastle and Truitt; the former by reason of his own illness, the latter due to the very serious illness of his wife.

Dr. Harrell called the meeting to order at 10:45 A. M., and after prayer by Dr. Jones, Dr. Lightbourne was asked to serve as secretary. The following matters in order were presented and after discussion acted upon:

1. The application of Circular Church, Charleston, S. C., through Rev. George Edwards, the pastor, for transfer from the Eastern North Carolina Conference of the Southern Convention to the Georgia State Conference. The application was approved and the transfer granted.

2. By reason of their removal from the bounds of the Southern Convention resignations were presented from Rev. Carl Key from the Board of Publications and from Rev. F. Ervin Hyde from the Board of Christian Education. The resignations were accepted.

Election was then had of Rev. Jesse H. Dollar to fill the vacancy created on the Board of Publications and of Rev. J. Everette Neese to fill the vacancy created on the Board of Christian Education.

3. A statement was made by Dr. Harrell relative to the status of the office and the work of the Promotional Secretary, and a letter from Secretary Lester to Dr. Harrell relating to this was read. After a careful consideration of the action of the Convention in creating the office of Promotional Secretary and the Advisory Committee, the following action was taken to clarify the relation of the one to the other.

We, the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, do hereby interpret the action of the Southern Convention in setting up the office of Promotional Secretary as empowering the Advisory Committee, established by said Convention, to have authority to outline, to plan, to direct, and to supervise the work of the Promotional Secretary with reference to objectives to be obtained, methods to be followed in their attainment and the general expenditures involved therein.

And furthermore, we authorize the Advisory Committee to carry on the work outlined above through such sub-committees as the Advisory Committee may elect to appoint; providing the Advisory Committee shall meet as a whole at least once each calendar year to review the activities of the year and to outline plans for the succeeding year.

The Committee adjourned at 2:30 P. M., with prayer and benediction by the president.

STANLEY C. HARRELL, Pres.,
ELWOOD W. JONES,

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, Secy.
N. B. Both Dr. Truitt and Dr. Hardcastle have approved, by mail, the above resolutions. J. H. L.

CONVENTION VOTE ON PROMOTIONAL OFFICE.

The Southern Convention, meeting in Portsmouth, Va., last April, in setting up the office of Promotional Secretary, voted as follows:

That the Convention elect a Promotional Secretary, who shall be charged with the responsibility of promoting all the enterprises of the Convention and the editing of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

That the Board of Christian Education and the Mission Board join with the Convention in fixing the salary of the Promotional Secretary, and providing for the payment of the same.

That the Convention appoint an advisory Committee of the chairmen of the Boards of the Convention; and the Presidents of the five Conferences constituting the Convention; said Committee to have general supervision of the work of the Promotional Secretary in making effective the objectives adopted by the Convention.

AN ACTIVE VIRGINIA VALLEY LAYMAN PASSES.

R. C. Myers, well known farmer of Tenth Legion, was born at Lacey Springs, Va., September 5, 1874, and was the son of the late E. P. Myers and Mollie E. Myers of that place and Tenth Legion. His sixty-four years of life were spent in helpful service to family, friends, church, and state. From his youth to about thirty years of age he belonged to the Methodist Church; since that time he has been an active member and worker of the Bethlehem Congregational-Christian Church at Tenth Legion.

His home was a true preacher's home, where hospitality reigned. In the community he identified himself with every project that helped to promote good will and the cause of Christ. He did not fear opposition when he believed the cause to be right and just, but rather he worked the harder to see the advancement of the Kingdom in every new idea and method. He was instrumental in bringing about the grouping of the Valley churches in the face of much opposition from those who could not see the vision. Being a little advanced in years did not mean that he could not see with much younger eyes the need for modern methods and thought. His activities were not confined to the local church. He was a member of the Executive Board of the Valley Conference. He was active in all Conference routine and served many times as a member of the Nominating Committee for the

REUBEN C. MYERS.

Valley Conference. To his church he was ever true and faithful. His love for Christ was well known.

Mr. R. C. Myers (better known among his friends as "Rube") is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jessie A. Wampler Myers, who attended Elon College in 1914 to 1916, and is a daughter of W. C. Wampler, also an active member of the Valley Conference; three sons: Richard, Leonard, and Miller Myers, who live at home. A sister and two brothers also survive—Mrs. Wade H. Lineweaver, W. O. Myers, and E. F. Myers of Tenth Legion.

The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

The college period is a little more than half gone. During this period we are supposed to raise $12,500 or to give publicity and set up organizations by which the amount will be raised before the annual conferences meet. A large number of Sunday schools received the fifth Sunday offering, and some churches have sent in contributions. This is most encouraging. You will not only help the college but will help yourself in meeting what your conference is asking. It is much easier and far more profitable to do things in season and on time.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

WHOSE CHURCH WILL THEY JOIN?

At a meeting of 1,500 Southern Baptists in Winston-Salem recently, it was stated that there are 25,000,000 people in the South who should be won to the church of Christ. Apparently Southern Baptists are out to get their share of them, since they built 23 churches and added 26,787 members in North Carolina, alone, last year. This gain is doubtless due in part to the fact that a year ago they released a half dozen or more of their best pastors to visit the churches and stimulate growth.

Our Methodist friends, who are uniting three denominations, are of the opinion, apparently, that many of these 25,000,000 non-churched people should become Methodists. They are planning for simultaneous campaigns between now and Easter in large areas. They believe that the Church should wield an influence in this world and are out to make that influence felt.

Congregational and Christian Churches are scattered in among these Baptist and Methodist Churches. We are all neighbors in the same communities and ultimately we are interested in the same things. There is no occasion to fight about whose church these unchurched people will join. But there is an urgency that all of us busy ourselves about winning them to the Christ and His Church.

In your community there are some who should be members of your church and who will become members of your church if you and the other members of your church use your best judgment in seeking to win them—first to Christ, and then to the Church.

Whose church will 25,000,000 southerners join? The Baptists want them. The Methodists want them. The Presbyterians are trying to get them. And we of the Congregational and Christian Churches need them. Will we also try to get them?

THOSE WHO PAY.

This article is intended primarily for North Carolinians. Reports coming from the state legislature now in session at Raleigh, indicate that legislators who are faced with the problem of more taxes are looking wistfully at wine, beer, and hard liquors as the answer to their prayer. In order to get more revenue, legislators are tempted to make legal the sale of alcoholic beverages all over the state, or at least to ask the people of the state to make this possible.

It is easy to show that revenue has been received from alcoholic beverages in those states where they have been sold by the state. It is not quite so easy to indicate who paid this revenue, but the answer to this question is very important.

Since the most of the people have small incomes or are on relief, it is only fair to guess that they buy most of the beverages. Hence most of the tax from this source comes from those who are least able to pay it. It hardly seems fair for women and children to suffer for food and clothes in order that the state may have more funds with which to carry on its business.

Balanced against the amount of money collected as tax on alcoholic beverages must be put the cost of drunken driving, with its many accidents; the increase of crime, caused by drinking; and the breakdown of moral standards, as represented by saloons served by girls who are in the employ of legal business. Those who count costs carefully say that the taxes received from alcoholic beverages are very expensive.

Church people who want their boys and girls to have a chance to live soberly, wholesomely, happily, may well tell their legislators that they are not willing to sell this opportunity in order to get a few dollars more in tax money for the operating of the state. The cost is too high. Such taxation comes at the expense of growing boys and girls and endangers the life of all our citizenship. It isn't worth the cost.

WHAT CAUSES YOUR ENTHUSIASM?

Some years ago a fine young Sunday school superintendent quit his job because he had lost his enthusiasm, so he said. Why had he lost it? That is difficult to answer. The old church still stood at the same place, and around it were numerous people who needed the message of the Bible. Consecrated workers met in the building week after week ready to lend a helping hand. Boys and girls and men and women gathered every Sunday to make their prayers and sing hymns of praise. Growing young men and women looked out on life with all of its challenge and wondered which way to go. In the midst of all this that fine young superintendent lost his enthusiasm.

At a recent basketball game which this writer attended, several hundred people yelled and whistled and cheered. They were enthusiastic. So were the ten men on the teams, who ran and jumped and dived in a desperate effort to win the game for their school. It was grand fun and a good game. The band played and the students cheered. Enthusiasm ran high.

What makes one enthusiastic? A simple answer, which may not be found in a book, is that one becomes enthusiastic about the thing in which he is interested. Those who had paid half a dollar to see the game were interested. Those who had practiced long hours in order to represent their college were interested. Wouldn't it be fine if pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers, deacons, members of finance committees, all types of church workers and church members, should become intensely interested in the Kingdom of God coming here on this earth? Then there would be songs in Zion, there would be cheers and joy, there would be labor and love and sacrifice. There would be enthusiasm.

Thoughts Words Cannot Express

By F. M. DUNAPHANT.

Edgar Allen Poe said that there are words in our language to express any thought one may think, but surely he was mistaken. It seems that many of one's thoughts are so far beyond the pale of words as to make it futile to try to give them utterance. At any attempt to convey them by verbal means they vanish like wisps of smoke in a gale. They doubtless never make themselves known outside the mind in which they are conceived. They remain there to arouse strong feelings, for it must be remembered that they are invariably never the product of ordinary, shallow thinking. Mostly they are the deep, soul-stirring, exceptional thoughts, such as are generally conceived in the apprehensive mind.

To say that the reason they cannot be expressed in words is because they are hazy, incomplete, and poorly conceived would be discussing them solely from a grammatical and rhetorical standpoint. The definitions of the thoughts in one question are broader and more inclusive than those given to groups of words grammatically and judiciously arranged to express thoughts.

Perhaps, in fairness to Poe, one should conclude that what he had in mind when he made the statement referred to above were words and thoughts as they are treated by grammarians and rhetoricians. Certainly, Charles Kingsley was thinking only of one's ability to use the right word with precision and judiciousness to express thoughts when he said: "If I am ever obscure in my expression, do not fancy that therefore I am deep. If I were really deep, all the world would understand." It is easy to see exactly what Kingsley was driving at. He was speaking of any tactic facts which are shown to be correct by accurate observation and thinking. But so far there is extant no scientific data to throw light on that inexplicable thought realm with which this article essays to deal.

Tennyson was thinking on this thought level when he looked out upon the sea and exclaimed:

Upon thy cold, grey stones, O! Sea,
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

Would it not be somewhat stupid and certainly unfair to say that Tennyson could have given utterance to the thoughts that arose in him? As the sea pounded the stones and he gazed upon it with his heart filled with grief over the loss of his friend,

Arthur Henry Hallam, he did give utterance to some beautiful thoughts, else the world would not have the melodious dirge of which the quotation above is the first stanza. But the deepest thoughts that arose in him he could give no utterance. In other words, he could not unlock the innermost chambers of his soul and divulge the thoughts contained therein.

Who can do this when he is stirred to his depths? Who, for instance, is so dull of mind and soul as to be able to gaze upon the face of a loved one cold in death and not think thoughts that lie too deep for words? Surely no one capable of thinking deeply would dare give these questions affirmative answers. And yet one's giving them negative answers is, of course, an admission that he knows a great deal which he does not know why he knows; for it is undeniable that his inexpressible thoughts are the means of his acquiring knowledge which reduces itself to indisputable facts, many of which he is as powerless to explain as he is the thoughts.

Poe purports to tell in his The Philosophy of Composition why and how he wrote The Raven but after one has read his dissertations on this subject, he is forced to fall upon the conclusion that the mental and emotional activities which prompted Poe to write The Raven are still enshrouded in that mysterious thought realm from which no explanations of any kind ever issue. That he failed to turn the spot light on all that took place behind the stage was to be expected, for there is no reciprocal relationship between causes and their consequent effects on the thought level on which The Raven was conceived. Therefore The Raven as it is set out in words is but a manifestation of the unutterable thoughts that made its projection possible.

All this is another way of saying that science, which is knowledge coordinated, arranged, and systemized with reference to general truths or laws, has so far made but a few inroads into the field of mental activities. In short, man's mind is still to him an enigma.

Perhaps when science advances to the point where it is able to throw light on the manifold workings of the mind, man will cease to see through a glass darkly. All things, both physical and spiritual, will then be revealed to him. He will then know himself as he is known by his Creator. He will then, no doubt, have words for all his thoughts, and full comprehension and clear understanding of his store of knowledge.

Until then, let not the prejudicial scientist and the pseudo-scientist disparage that which man knows explicitly, but can neither prove nor explain. For example, man knows that he has but a mere concept of God, and that God hears and answers his prayers; and for anyone to deny these things is as ridiculous as it is for one to say that a child does not know or love its mother because it cannot intelligently describe its mother or explain love.

than the world has ever known, surely those who are Christian should be interested. When men and women of mature years lose their ideals to such an extent that the younger generation hasn't the guidance it needs, then surely those who know the way of Christ should be intensely interested. When boys and girls are anxious enough doing the right to attend our Sunday schools and churches and young people's societies, surely those who are a bit older should think of this as a challenge, and become enthusiastic about directing the younger generation into the fellowship of God. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is hoping that there may be apparent real enthusiasm in the Congregational and Christian Churches because pastors and people are intensely interested in the tasks which lie before us. CAROLINA (N. C.) CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Carolina Christian Church, near Burlington, N. C., is growing, both in numbers and in things accomplished. Recently a new roof has been put on the church building and it has been papered and painted on the inside. A young people's Sunday school class has been organized and an effort is now being made to build a classroom for this group. If fifty people will give one dollar each, this can be accomplished. The ladies of the church are planning to give a play in the near future, in order to buy furnishings for the church.

The pastor, Rev. Melvin Dollar, student in Elon College, lives in the community. Church services are now being held every Sunday, with mid-week services on Wednesday nights. There is an attendance of between seventy-five and a hundred at Sunday school. The members seem very interested in the work of their church and its future looks bright.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"And all that believed were together, and had all things in common."—(Acts 2:44.) That situation in the early church was an incident and not a precedent. It reveals the tendency to take extreme views and set up unusual forms of service in a religious and social community. This example of social reform has been used as a basis of Communism and Socialism. But these people were willing to give that other people might have their needs supplied. "Communism" would take what others have that its devotees might have and use it for themselves.

"Commonism" is a better word for describing the social movement in the early church. This may not be a good word, in the judgment of the best writers of our language, but it expresses what is in the mind of the writer. "All things in common"—not in "commune." And therein lies the difference between Christianity and some of the modern, pagan, political and social movements which are seeking to overthrow Christianity by a false interpretation and application of a very fundamental principle of public welfare. If one may use the word "Commonism" to describe a great spiritual effort to share with others, one may begin by saying: "Commonism" gives, and "Communism" takes from others; "Commonism" builds and "Communism" destroys; "Commonism" lays up in store, and "Communism" confiscates; "Commonism" seeks to administer for the universal needs of mankind, and "Communism" seeks to lay hands upon the possessions of others for the satisfaction of a dictatorial aristocracy.

It is not the function of the church to propagate any of the political doctrines which dethrone God and make the state supreme. But it is the duty of Christian men and women to be able to discriminate between pagan and Christian ideology in modern society. Christianity should contend for proportionate opportunity, for all people, irrespective of racial or geographical background. Men do not have equal ability and they cannot have equal opportunity. "Every man according to his several ability" is the standard of Jesus, as revealed in the Parable of the Talents. That means proportionate opportunity. The man with one talent cannot have the opportunity of the man who has five talents. But he does have opportunity according to his ability, in a Christian conception of equitable social development.

Vast sums are being demanded of governmental agencies for relief of the unemployed. The tragedy of the present situation lies in the fact that millions of people find it much easier to be on the relief rolls than to be on the pay-rolls. They are fed and clothed from public funds while they spend their days and nights in leisure. Many of them say: "I do not want a job; I am on relief, and I do not want to lose that." The poor and the needy should be fed. But they should have an opportunity to work, and should be willing to accept that opportunity in the interest of the common good of others. Christianity defends the principle of relieving the needs of the poor. It also contends for cooperation between capital and labor in the office and at the workbench. The plowman in the field, the carpenter in the shop, the stenographer in the office, the industrialist and the commercial traveler should recognize that they have interests "in common" that deserve their mutual and careful consideration and loyal support. A better day is ahead for those who are more interested in work than in wages and who rejoice in the proper administration of government more than they covet the collection of taxes. Christianity has a message of hope for this age, and it is the message of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. "The common people heard Him gladly." They want His message for today.

NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY ALUMNI MEET AT BANQUET IN NEW YORK CITY.

On Tuesday evening, January 19, an enthusiastic group of Elon College alumni from New York and New Jersey met for a reunion and banquet at the Hotel Winthrop in New York City. Dr. William Horace Day, Pastor of the United Congregational Church of Bridgeport, Conn., and member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, and Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, were the principal speakers of the evening.

After the invocation had been pronounced by Rev. C. J. Felton, class of '12, Pastor of the Congregational Church of Irvington, N. J., the twenty-one alumni and guests who were present enjoyed a delicious dinner.

Following the dinner, a brief business session was conducted, with Mr. J. E. Massey, President of the New York-New Jersey Elon Alumni group, acting as chairman. Mr. Massey first welcomed the guests and alumni present, and spoke of his desire to see a bigger and better organization of Elon alumni in New York and New Jersey. Mr. Harold L. Barney, secretary and treasurer of the group, made a short report, chiefly on membership, and conveying regrets of those who could not be present. Mr. Massey and Mr. Barney were re-elected by acclamation to serve another year in their respective capacities.

Mr. Massey then turned the meeting over to Dr. Smith who acted as toastmaster for the remainder of the evening. Dr. Smith, in an interesting talk touching on Elon's history, present status, and prospects, pointed out that the college is showing a healthy growth and that with the support of her friends and alumni, can be expected to go forward to greater fields of service in education. The plans for the celebration of the Golden Anniversary were described, and the goal of freeing Elon of all debt by 1940 was outlined.

Dr. Smith then introduced Dr. William Horace Day who, in a brief but inspiring talk, told of his reasons for being interested in Elon College. "Elon College," said Dr. Day, "is a constructive force in the field of education because of the many teachers it has trained and is continuing to train with Christian ideals. A second reason for an interest in Elon is the contribution to well balanced and successful homes it is making in the training of the young men and women who are its loyal sons and daughters." The third reason for Dr. Day's interest in Elon is its contribution to our democracy and its traditions. Elon, and like colleges, have much to offer because of their more personalized relationships between professors and students, as contrasted with the "mass production" methods of education which seem necessary in larger institutions. By instilling in its graduates a religious outlook, Elon and similar colleges are helping in the solution of the problems which confront our democracy in these trying times.

Following Dr. Day's address, the alumni present expressed appreciation of Dr. Smith's faithful work as president of Elon, and hearty approval of his "Fifty Dollars for Fifty Years" plan for paying off the debt in a celebration of the 50th anniversary of the college. Dr. Jennings S. Lincoln, class of '11, and Mr. James

A. Vaughan, class of '09, spoke in particularly glowing eulogies of Dr. Smith and his administration at Elon. Others told of amusing reminiscences of their college days. All joined with Dr. Smith in his forecast of Elon's continued growth, and expressed willingness to do their share.

In addition to Dr. William Horace Day and Dr. L. E. Smith, the following attended the banquet: Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Felton, Mr. Joseph L. Hilgreen, Miss Marjorie Jamoneau, Dr. James Craig Joyner, Mr. Sidney F. Jackson, Dr. A. Lucius Lincoln, Dr. A. Liggett Lincoln, Dr. Jennings S. Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. MacCalman, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Massey, Mr. James G. Rising, Mr. Tuthill, Mr. James A. Vaughan, Miss Grace L. West, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Barney.

NORTH CAROLINA PASTOR MOVING TO NEW YORK.

On February 10, 1939, Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, who has served the Sanford and Shallow Well Churches since September, 1935, will move to Cortland, N. Y., to become the minister of the Cortland Larger Parish.

Mr. Hyde has been a busy minister. During his three and a half years he has made over 3,500 pastoral visits, preached 450 sermons (including revival meetings), performed 17 wedding ceremonies, conducted 78 funerals, delivered 63 special addresses, baptized 48 people, and received 69 new members into the churches that he served.

During his pastorate young people's groups were organized in both churches; a girls' club and a Y. P. C. S. class were organized in the Sanford Church. Both churches made many improvements to their church property. Sanford recently purchased and remodeled a six room parsonage, painting it within and without.

In addition to his pastoral work Mr. Hyde has been active in community affairs. For several years he has served as chaplain for the local Lion's Club of which he was a member. He also served as chairman of the Boys' and Girls' Work Committee. He was often the guest speaker for other civic and literary clubs of the town.

One of his major interests has been youth work. He was a frequent speaker at the local schools. During his stay in Sanford he has preached Baccalaureate sermons in five of Lee County schools. Yet his interest in youth is more than local. He has served for several years as counselor for the Pilgrim Fellowship of Eastern North Carolina, and has been one of the counselors for the young people of the Southeast. He has served as a member of the Elon Leadership Conference.

During the second year of his pastorate he was elected as Vice-President of the Eastern Conference. In 1937 he was elected to the office of President and was re-elected last fall to serve another year. As President of that body he represented that group in the North Carolina Council of Churches.

Mr. Hyde is a member of the Piedmont Ministerial Association, the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention, and of the REV. F. ERVIN HYDE.

Convention's Committee on Evangelism.

In addition to all his other activities he attended the School of Religion, Duke University and completed the required course for a B. D. degree which he received in June, 1938. During the past year he also took time off from his pastoral duties and scholastic pursuits to journey to Canada, where he married the former Miss Marguerite Hobson, of Toronto. Mrs. Hyde has already earned a place for herself among those who labor to build the Kingdom.

AT ELON.

Let us turn our eyes now upon Elon College and its activities during the past week. An outsider strolling through the halls of knowledge might overhear such a conversation as this between several students: "What did you make on French?" "I made C; what did you make? . . ." "I think I shall go up and see him about this grade; I should have gotten A." "Did you flunk Psychology, too?"

Such remarks as these could be heard all over the campus this week. Why? Reports!

We might call this "clean-up week" here on the campus. Trees on East Campus are being evacuated—as well as the shrubbery around all the buildings being trimmed. Say, it looks as if spring is definitely on its way.

In the line of sports, our basketball team is "going places." We've won both games played this week—these being with Western Carolina Teachers (score, 50-30) and with Catawba (score, 47-34). The thriller will come Saturday night, February 4, when Elon meets their biggest rival of that sport—High Point College at High Point. It doesn't look very good for us. (Oh! Oh! We lost 54-37.)

Turning to the more serious side of our college life at Elon, we have been fortunate to have had with us two well known ministers of this section. For our chapel Wednesday, Dr. Smith, a world traveled member of the Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church, spoke to us on "The Similarity of All People." Students acclaimed him as one of the best speakers who have been on our campus this year. Rev. W. E. Wisseman of the First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., delivered the Friday morning chapel sermon. The subject that Mr. Wisseman chose was "The Levels of Living." He brought out the fact that we ourselves must choose our own levels, and in return, we must expect exactly what that level gives.

A GIFT OR A WAY.

A most timely and very discriminating article is carried by February Advance, the same being contributed by Alden H. Clark, the title being "Christianity: Is It a 'Way of Life,' or a 'Gift of Life?'" Any endeavor to condense, or abbreviate Dr. Clark's searching analysis and the case he makes out for Christianity as a "gift of life" and not a "way of life" will do violence to both the thesis, the reasoning and the conclusion of this very timely contribution. The position taken is that very many Christian people with best of intentions have fallen into the habit, captivated as they are by the slogan of looking upon Christianity as "A Way of Life." While this habit, or process of belief may not result in immediate injury to the church and society, nothing but injury finally may be expected since regarding Christianity as a way of life turns the attention of the individual away from God to the individual himself. In brief to think of Christianity as "a way of life" is to think of Christianity as a man centered religion, whereas the unmistakable fact is revealed in our Sacred Scriptures, as well as in human experience, that the only religion worth striving for or having in experience is a religion whose dynamic is not man but God. Christianity is not in its essence a way of life. On the other hand it is the gift of life. This searching question with its comment brings the reader to the center of what the writer has in mind. "May it not be in part because liberal Christianity has lately been too much thinking of Christianity as a way of living and too little experiencing it as a gift that it has lacked transforming power over men? What we must recapture, if our modern world is to be saved, is not only or primarily Christ's wonderful program for applying the principle of love to all of life, it is more essentially the Divine power that flowed through Him because of His complete response to the call of the Father. From such response the Christian way of life had its origin. In such response it must still find its inspiration."

And this cogent phrase is added, "when we think with Paul of the inscrutable workings of God through the ages, there is something strangely arrogant in an emphasis on ourselves as the central factors in religion."

It is indeed the height of arrogance to make ourselves the center and source of religion, for in doing so we turn fatally from the religion of grace to the religion of works. The concluding statement from the article referred to must suffice, "The plea here made is that we return in our own experience and in our presentation to that which has been the primary source of Christian power of all the centuries—the emphasis on God's outreaching love to us and on our response to him in worship as well as in service. By grace are we saved through faith and that not of ourselves—it is the gift of God."

If one is willing to turn from reasoning to revelation one may be supported by Scriptures like these: "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; but he that obeyeth not the Son shall not see life." Then Peter's immortal declaration at Pentecost, "Repent ye, and be baptized everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." And then Paul's emphatic assertion in his letter to the Romans: "The free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord."—(Romans 6: 23.)

It is this free gift, this infinite love, emanating from God that is to prove ultimately the one saving power in this sinful and war-torn world. Through missions, preaching the gospel of the Son of God, this result by the grace of God is inevitable, and will come in God's own good time if we who profess to have received the gift shall remain faithful and push forward in the blessed task of being His witnesses. NORTHERN DISTRICT OF THE VALLEY OF VIRGINIA MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Northern District of the Women's Missionary Conference in the Valley of Virginia, consists of the following churches: Timber Ridge, Timber Mountain, and Winchester. It was decided by the leaders of this group to hold their rally in the fall, rather than wait until next spring. The rally was held in the Timber Ridge Church, Sunday, November 20, at 7: 30 P. M.

The service was in charge of Mrs. K. H. Sale, with Mrs. L. W. Chichester as secretary. The program consisted of a devotional service followed by a business session. Mrs. A. K. Sirbaugh was appointed as superintendent of this district and Mrs. Fay Brill was named secretary.

The program was closed with a most impressive pageant entitled: "Christ in America." This pageant was put on by about twenty-five young people from the Timber Ridge Missionary Society. This society deserves a lot of credit for the good work it is doing.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Winchester Church, under the leadership of Mrs. R. A. Whitten, has added a new member to the roll for each meeting held this year. Mrs. Whitten has also organized a young people's society in this church. The thank offering service for the group was held Sunday evening, November 27, with Mrs. R. A. Larrick in charge of the service. After the devotional an illustrated lecture entitled "Friend Meets Friend in India" was given by Mr. T. W. Mathews. This was a very helpful and enlightening lecture and will help the society to better understand the mission work in India.

Miss Helen Showalter is corresponding secretary of the Conference and sends the above information.

THE SOUTH IS NOT FORLORN.

By EPIE SMITH PLYLER.

Extending through many years, the South has been a victim of an exaggerated publicity until now it is flaunted in the press as "The Nation's Number One Economic Problem." Furthermore, who is able to define the South? How many have seen it? It is a case of the nursery rhyme—

"Who has seen the wind?
Neither you nor I."

Thinking people know that Virginia is not like Texas, that Tennessee differs from Louisiana, that neither are Florida and North Carolina similar, to say nothing of the vast adjacent regions, generally designated as "The South."

Yet, somehow, in computing the development of the nation such men as Washington, Jefferson, John Marshall, Henry Clay, Woodrow Wilson, Walter Hines Page, Cordell Hull and a host of others have to be accounted for.

Even today the South is not abashed in looking over her educational leaders, her scientists, her statesmen, and others who are contributing to the programs of our nation. It is true that there are conditions existing in the South that need to be remedied. Many of these conditions date back to England, since the settlers at Jamestown and along the Atlantic coast southward and westward adhered to the habits and customs of the old country and built a rural aristocracy that many have regarded as a major handicap. However, this rural aristocracy of the early period of our natural life has left its impress on the life of the nation, for today there is an increasing number of people who visit the landmarks of former generations and admire the courage and culture that built homes of beauty in a rugged wilderness.

There are ugly spots scattered over this entire region that are most repulsive to the students of sociology; there are limitless acres of land put to no good use; there are hundreds of families who have not the necessities for wholesome living, and yet similar conditions are found in other parts of the country.

The isolation of much of the population due largely to a rural life resulted in inferior educational opportunities and a dearth of public schools. Consequently the masses have not had proper training in the schools and the advantages derived from a habit of the daily reading of good literature. These conditions have been the cause of many neglected opportunities for material wealth.

However, the illiteracy and poverty of the South do not justify "Tobacco Road" or other output of its kind, which has been sternly dealt with in a recent article by Judge Robert W. Winston, who pronounces it "A Dishonest Work of Art."

Generally speaking, "The South" is not insufficient in an emergency, for it has always possessed brave men and noble women to defend her integrity, and these along with a great majority have no great financial holdings. But they learned to live well and to be content through the wise use of other assets.

The South is not poverty-stricken on account of an insufficiency. Food is no problem in the South. Sunshine is abundant. A nucleus of a great civilization is here since a high percentage of the population is of pure Anglo-Saxon stock. The climate, the soil, the raw materials, the minerals, waterways and highways are here awaiting a gigantic industrial development.

The South is a great land where men and women may find comfortable homes. Land is cheap and the climate is favorable. In the southern states there are crops that can be grown twelve months in the year. Most of the land is adapted to stock raising, poultry farming, or the growing of fruits and vegetables. Here men and women may build homes of beauty where they may nourish their families and bring them up to be healthy, happy and prosperous. Secondary schools, colleges and universities are scattered over the vast area comprising the southern states, and also there is a public school system operating. Some of the people have access to libraries, southern children often attend the movies, and Senator Josiah Bailey vouches for the fact that down South the horses even wear shoes.

The South today is a land of great opportunity and varied resources. It is a gigantic task to meet the demands of the present age; and yet the South is not forlorn; it is going on with energy and good cheer, looking to sound and wholesome living in a land wholly adapted to build a great civilization.—*N. MISSION MEETING IN WINSTON-SALEM.

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman will present the mission study book "Dinabandhu" by Ruth Seabury at the Winston-Salem Congregational - Christian Church, Sunday afternoon at 2:30, February 12. A special invitation has been sent to Salem Chapel, Belew's Creek, Pleasant Ridge and other nearby churches to be represented by a large delegation. This is a real opportunity to hear this wonderful book reviewed by one who is well prepared to give it in an interesting and forceful way. Let's all plan now to go to Winston-Salem, February 12, at 2:30 to enjoy this feast. All are welcome, men, women, and children, and we will be looking for you.

Mrs. W. M. JAY.

FORWARD IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

What has been achieved by the Christian Church in nineteen centuries of missionary work? The forces against Christ and His program of love and righteousness have been many and active. They have usually been foolish or diabolical. But the forces for good have been stronger, for God has marshalled and inspired them. As one result the Bible (in whole or in part) has been now translated in one thousand tongues so that nine-tenths of the earth's population, if they can read at all, can read God's message to man in their own language. In every land and to every race the Gospel of Christ has been proclaimed; and in practically every land the Church of Christ has been established and prepared to carry forward the work of evangelization. Hundreds of thousands of Christian witness of every race and tongue and nation testify to the grace of God—most of them for love and without any thought of personal gain from this service. The largest number of the earth's inhabitants now are called Christians—though they are divided into Protestants, Roman and Greek Catholics, Abyssinians, Copts, Gregorians, Nestorians and other sects. While they outnumber the Buddhists, Hindus, Moslems, Taoists and other non-Christian sects, many of them are still weak and ignorant and know not the power of God in their own lives. The amount done in fulfilment of our Lord's last command is vast, but the work is still incomplete.

We look backward to learn from experience; we look around in order that we may see the present needs, forces, enemies, and opportunities; we look up for guidance and strength; if we wish to go forward and make progress, we must look forward. Christians press on toward a definite goal in spite of difficulties and discouragements.—Exchange.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

EMILY CARLETON LESTER, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

OUR NEW LEADER.

Rev. Henry David Gray of South Hadley, Mass., has been chosen as the new Secretary of Young People's Work of the Division of Christian Education of the Board of Home Missions of Congregational and Christian Churches—all of which means that he is the director of young people's work in our denomination. He takes the place of Dr. Harry Thomas Stock, who resigned last year to become the head of the Division of Christian Education. Dr. Gray was born in Ireland, educated in California, Connecticut, and Scotland; has had successful pastoral and religious education experience; is a good speaker and very popular among youth groups, both in his local church and in summer conferences and other places where he has served. He will begin this new work after Easter. The Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship welcomes him as the new leader, and invites him to visit our area as soon as possible.

HOLLAND PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP LEADS CHURCH SERVICES.

The young people of the Holland (Va.) Christian Church had charge of the church services on January 29, observing Pilgrim Fellowship Day in this way. Rev. Arnold Slater, pastor of the Holy Neck Christian Church, preached the sermon for them at the evening service. Following is the program for their morning service:

NATIONAL PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP IS SEEKING AN EMBLEM.

At Rockford the desire for an emblem for the Pilgrim Fellowship came into being in a definite way. This emblem should be suitable for use on such things as stationery, pins, and summer conference credit cards. A committee at Rockford did some good work on a proposed emblem. But it was agreed that any emblem which would be worthy of representing the Pilgrim Fellowship idea and spirit must be one which came as a result of longer thought and work.

Any individual or group may submit drawings or ideas for the symbolism of the emblem for the National Pilgrim Fellowship. Local groups, state officers, or summer conference classes may work on the project. Drawings should be in ink, and should be sent to Miss Lucy Eldredge, 223 South Ludlow Street, Dayton, Ohio. Each drawing should be accompanied by a statement interpreting the symbolism used. Whenever the individual or group has used the proposed emblem in a worship service, the service should also be sent.

The young people of the Holland Christian Church are working on such an emblem. We hope that other young people throughout the Southeast will follow suit. The Southeast furnished the first national president—why not the winning emblem?

LENTEN DEVOTIONS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

During Lent, which begins on February 22, Christian people emphasize personal religious living. We hope that every young person in the Southeast will use some systematic plan for daily devotions during Lent—some time during each day set aside for quiet meditation with God. There are many excellent books and booklets that may be used for this devotional period. Our young people's department has provided such a booklet made up especially for youth. "Lenten Devotions for Young People" may be secured from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., for five cents (5c) per copy. We hope that some young people's societies will order copies for each member of their group. If this is not practicable, spend a nickel on yourself and your personal worship period and you will not regret it.

LOOKING AT POLITICS THROUGH CHRISTIAN EYES.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 19, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 5:13-20.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Jew and Gentile, One in Christ—Eph. 2:14-18.

Tuesday—Tribute to Whom Due—Matt. 22:15-21.

Wednesday—Jesus, a Victim of Intrigue—Luke 22:1-6.

Thursday—Unworthy Citizens—Luke 11:39-44.

Friday—An Unfailing Rule—Matt. 7:12.

Saturday—Christian Conduct, the Criterion—I Peter 2:9-20.

For a long time many have said that certain men were too good for the political office to which they were elected. This is certainly a blow at politics as it is managed. Politics should be as clean as the Church. If a person cannot be Christian in politics, then we need a clean-up method.

If you were a visitor to our country for the first time, what are some of the things you would notice and read about that would cause you to believe that there are many un-Christian practices?

These points may be used as a basis for discussion:

What a Christian Demands—

1. The public should be educated regarding the real issues at stake in any civic question.

2. Every citizen must be allowed to vote according to his well convictions without fear of reprisals.

3. A Christian citizen demands that men in public office be above suspicion in their personal and official morality.

4. In local elections it is not uncommon for less than half of the eligible voters to go to the polls. If each voter performed his duty regardless of pressure from outside forces would the political system be different?

Individuals may prepare for action and have an unbiased mind by the following method:

1. Keep up-to-date with trends.
2. Get the facts.
3. Look at all points of view.
4. Study the Bible.
5. Study church history.
6. Assemble your "platform" carefully.
7. Use effective publicity.

For this meeting use hymns of consecration.

PETER HEALS A LAME MAN.

LESSON VII—FEBRUARY 12, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: But Peter said, "Silver and gold have I none; but what I have, that give I thee.—Acts 3: 6.

LESSON: Acts 3: 1-4: 22.

Going to Church.

"Now Peter and John were going up into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour." These men were leaders in a new religious movement, but they did not feel that they could get along without that for which organized religion stood, and offered. There were some things in the old religion which they did not approve, but they did not throw everything overboard. They felt the need of, and saw the value of public worship. They went to the place of prayer. One wonders just how intelligent any modern man is, who does not make provision in his life for prayer and worship. There is that within man that cannot live by bread alone. The needs of the soul are just as real and just as demanding as the needs of the body. The modern world needs a revival of church going.

Human Need Outside the Church.

"And a certain man that was lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the door of the temple . . . to ask alms." That lame man, lying just outside the door of the temple is a symbol of human need everywhere surrounding the church of Christ. That need may be varied—it may be need for the sheer necessities of life, the need of healing, the need for enlightenment, the need for social privileges, the need for political freedom, the need for moral and spiritual redemption—but it is there. The church of Christ, if it is true to His spirit, is in the midst of human need. City churches may move to the suburbs but they usually leave human need in the place they left, and if wisely located, are re-established midst human need.

That man was true to human instinct, too, when he had himself placed at the door of the temple. Needy humanity has a right to look to the church for help. That is the purpose of the church. It simply represents the organized expression of the spirit of Christ.

An Unpleasant Interruption.

"Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked to receive an alms." It was probably a rude interruption. Perhaps it broke the spell of devotion. At any rate these calls for help often represent an unpleasant interruption. A minister told me not long ago that he enjoyed his work in his study, but he did not like to get out among folks and make calls. The knight in the classic story of the Vision of Sir Launfal, going forth to search for the Holy Grail, filled with enthusiasm and high devotion, was very much put out when the leper at the gate of the castle asked for alms. We would prefer to take our religion out in singing psalms and saying prayers, and not to be bothered with the calls of dirty, dispossessed, and discouraged people. But that brings religion to the acid test.

Doing the Best With What We Have.

"Silver and gold have I none; but what I have, that give I thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, walk." I heard a talented negro woman, who has done a remarkable piece of work in rehabilitating a run-down, unrecognized negro school in Texas, and who had to face and overcome tremendous handicaps and disappointments, say the other night in Chicago that perhaps the secret of what success she had—she was very modest and unassuming—was due to some words that her father had repeated again and again to his children: "Do the best you can with what you have." The world is full of people who miserable themselves, and liability to others, because they have not adopted this principle. Peter did not have alms—the fact that he did not have any money to give did not keep him away from church—but such as he had he gave. Use what you have for Christ. He will take even the smallest thing if given to and for Him.

The Better Thing.

"In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, walk. And he took him by the right hand and raised him up . . . and leaping up, he stood and began to walk." Peter did not give the man what he wanted, but he gave him something better. People often ask for one thing when they really need another. Many a man who asks for alms would rather have a job. Many a man who asks for alms would be the better profited if he got a few kind words. The story is told of how a poor, emancipated beggar asked an alms of him one freezing day. Tolstoj searched in vain in his pockets for even the smallest copper. Turning to the beggar he said, "Forgive me my brother, but I have nothing to give you." A strange light illumined the thin, drawn face of the beggar as he said, "Ah, but that is something, you called me brother." If you cannot give money, you can give friendship, encouragement, service, help, and in many cases these are the better things.

Exhibit Number One.

"And they took knowledge of him, that it was he that sat for alms at the Beautiful Gate of the temple . . ."

"And beholding the man who was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it."

The one verse refers to those who were friendly to the new movement and who were amazed and filled with wonder at what had happened. The other verse refers to the enemies of the movement who were filled with chagrin and dismay and anger. In either case the man constituted a stubborn fact. He could not be explained away. He was the same man, but he was different. Something actually had taken place, and there was no denying it. Here is the continuing source of wonder and amazement—the power of Christianity to change men, to make them anew. And here is the ultimate witness to a doubting or hostile world—a man standing in the midst who has had an experience, a man whom folks knew before and know after.

Just a Suggestion.

Perhaps the modern church has got to discover again the place of healing in its ministry to people. To be sure methods have changed, techniques differ, but perhaps we have lost something of the power of faith in the healing process.

Credit Where Credit Is Due.

The title of today's lesson is Peter Heals a Lame Man. The title is a mistake. Peter himself says so. When the people gathered around in amazement, and were disposed to think that Peter and John, by their own "power or holiness" had made this man to walk, Peter told them quickly and emphatically that he and John had not done anything. Jesus, through faith in His name, had effected the cure . . . "and his name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, yea the faith which is in him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all." Every honest physician knows that he never heals anybody. To be sure he is an instrument. God works through him. But he knows with the Psalmist of long ago that it is the Lord "who healeth all our diseases." God works through us, but it is God who works.

MONDAY.

CHOICE.

"This shall comfort us concerning our work."—Gen. 5:29.

If no one ever did a thing he didn't want to do,
I do not think that we would get a whole lot done, do you?
If no one ever did a thing that wasn't any fun,
There wouldn't be a lot of use on earth for any one.
And here's a most peculiar thing about the whole of it;
Although we often hate to do our little daily bit,
The things that ultimately bring us joy and profit, too,
Are generally the little things we didn't want to do!

—Anonymous.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to work and play every day in a way pleasing in Thy sight, and may it all count for something good to others and the world. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"JUST FOR TODAY."

"I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day."—John 9:4.

I go this way but once,
The trail I tread today;
Help me to blaze it clear
For those who pass this way.

Make me both strong and brave
To face the truth each day;
I want to walk Thy trail;
Make me a man, I pray.

Sometimes I may not see
Just the way may lead;
Give me the courage, Lord,
To trust in Thee, my need.

Face forward on the trails,
Striving for the right,
Never turning backward,
But onward toward the light.

This is my prayer each day,
As the lonely trail I blaze;
Make me Thy chosen man,
To follow all Thy ways.
—Clarence M. Angel.

WEDNESDAY.

"ALTAR WITHOUT FLAME."

"Fire shall be kept burning on the altar continually."—Lev. 6:13.

In order to do the things that we do not wish to do, and like it, and in order to be helpful each day along the way, the fires of the Holy Spirit must burn within continually. The central thing in the life of Israel was the tabernacle. The most prominent object in the tabernacle was the altar, and the significant truth about the altar was the flame thereon continually burning.

The most important altar we have is the heart. The grave danger is the neglect of it. Too often we are content to have it without a flame.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to be so in earnest about our Christianity that we shall see to it that the fires of the Holy Spirit in our hearts shall never go out. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE MOST THRILLING ADVENTURE.

"Be ye perfect even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."—Matt. 5:48.

Christ's teachings bear the stamp of perfection for all time. Christ of all men of the ages put into His life the perfection which He taught. If we believe that and will put His faith to a test in our lives, it is a thrilling adventure.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to take Thy hand and walk with Thee. Stir our souls to spiritual achievement, and teach us Christ-likeness. Amen.

FRIDAY.

LIFTED HANDS.

"Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."—John 6:68.

Father, I stretch my hands to Thee;
No other help I know;
If Thou withdraw Thyself from me,
Ah! whither shall I go?
—Charles Wesley.

SATURDAY.

THE FALLING OF THE NORTH STAR.

"None of us liveth unto himself."—Rom. 14:7.

Ezra said, "Take heed that ye fail not. Why should damage grow to the hurt of kings?" The Upper Room quotes Connor, "I should hate to see him fail. If he weakens, my north star will have dropped from the sky.

Every one of us has a north star, and we may be a north star for some one. If one fails or falls, the other is hurt. Whole we each must live our own life, we are our brother's keeper, we must keep the north shining.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to keep in mind that our victories bring joys to others and our failures may bring their downfall. Give us holy habits and keep us ever with Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." Keep it for the supreme things of life. Keep it in joy and peace. Put away all the cares of daily life that you can. Let the divine spirit of love abide in thy home. Let the day soften thy burdens and thy sorrows. Sanctify the Sabbath by the blessing of rest, in obedience to the commandment. Amen.

"Just as the human body grows and develops through the exercise of its members, so does the church. No member of the church can turn his work over to other members. The eye cannot hear nor the ear see."

"One who refuses to use the means God specifies shows a lack of faith in both his wisdom and promises. The obedient one trusts in God; the doubters are disobedient."

"The sense within me that I owe a debt convinces me that somewhere must be somebody waiting to have His due."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUTT, D. D., Pastor.

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUTT, D. D.

"He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?"— Matt. 16:15.

"What is your verdict?" says Jesus. It meant something to know what the people were saying about him. That would be worth something to him. He wanted to know what the folks said, and how they felt about him. So one day he asked his disciples: "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" And his disciples answered him. They told him that men were saying that he was a very strange one, with some quality about his life which reached beyond the ken of this world. They said he was John, the Baptist, who had been beheaded—a man from the dead, a man from other realms, and with a divine life within. Some said he was Elijah, and that would have to be a great prophet returned to this world from the dead. Others said Jeremiah, which was much the same, and still others said that he was one of the prophets. They all saw in him something they could not explain in natural terms. He was beyond them and above their way of thinking.

When the world stops long enough to see Jesus, it has to admit that there is none else like him. It is bound to confess that he is out beyond the world in his life, and love, and wisdom. To the world he is something beyond. He is from the world beyond. He is not a part of this world. He is too good for it. Some say he is impractical and impossible to be made to fit into our present world. But whatever they say, they must all admit that he has an other-worldliness about him. He is a prophet from a strange realm.

Now all that meant something to Jesus, but it meant little as he compared it to the next question which he put to his disciples. His next question was: "But whom say ye that I am?" That was the test of the whole matter. What do you think? What do you say? Yes, that is what others say, but what I want to know is what do you say? What is your faith. What do you believe? What others believe is something, but what you, the intimate followers of Jesus, believe is everything. Whom do you say that I am?

And they answered correctly:

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." That, my friends, is what you and I wish to know. Prove that to our satisfaction, and we have something which the world cannot destroy in our lives. The Christ had been promised. He had been looked for. He had been dreamed about, prophesied, sung about, and hoped for. Now, behold! One could stand before a certain person and say to him: "Thou art the Christ." Again the world had longed for a close-up of God. They had prayed and hoped to come near to Him. They had looked and longed for his own great presence, and power, and here, now, behold! One could stand in the presence of a particular person and say: "Thou art the Son of God." Mystery of mysteries, here, indeed, is God's Son. Prove that and the world is never the same.

To me here is a very satisfactory proof of it, established in the mouth of three witnesses. Jesus says Peter is correct; God says Peter is correct, because Jesus says God told it to Peter; and Peter says it, too! Who is Jesus? Peter says, "The Christ, the Son of the living God"; God says, "The Christ, the Son of the living God"; and Jesus says, "The Christ, the Son of the living God." Now here is a well authenticated portion of the Scriptures, a reliable and believable document, properly attested, and an established fact. A fact which Jesus wanted to be established in the hearts and minds of those near and dear to him. Upon that fact the Church was founded, an institution of which he is the head, an institution which is to be eternal, a kingdom without frontiers, a fellowship divine of loving and forgiving hearts. By all the tests that establish any fact, this fact of Jesus, as the Son of the living God, has been established in the course of the life, recorded word, and attested testimony concerning Jesus. All that is very well. But that is not all: the question still presses itself upon you and me: Whom say ye that I am? So far as we are concerned, all that has gone before in the answers of others is very well any good, but well nigh beside the point in comparison to the question directed straight from him to us: "Whom say ye that I am?"

What is your answer? What is mine? Can we have the approval of the Christ upon our replies, and can we, too, have the help of the heavenly Father in answering that question? Yes, we can. If we ask Him for His wisdom and help, humbly, and in faith believing, we shall have it. The right answer will be upon our lips and in our hearts. Is he an historical figure? Yes, and more. Is he a human being who lived in Nazareth nearly two thousand years ago? Yes, and more. Is he the Christ prophesied? The Christ of Peter and John and Paul? Yes, and more. Is he a friend, yes, a personal friend? Yes, he is that and more. We have talked about the friendship of Jesus, until we have almost beclouded the fact that he is far, far more than a friend. Thomas was not talking to a friend as a friend when he fell prostrate before Jesus saying, "My Lord, and my God." There is something beyond the common run of the meaning of friend here!

To me is Jesus more than a friend? Is he one who has power of life and death in his merciful, beautiful hands? Is he one who can say, "All power both in heaven and on earth has been given unto me?" Is he one that can say, "I am the resurrection and the life, and whosoever believeth in me shall never die?" Is he one who can say, "I go to prepare a place for you, and will come again and receive you unto myself that where I am ye may be also?" Does my heart yield before him all love, all allegiance, and cry with Thomas of old, "My Lord, and my God?" Then I, too, can say: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God!"

My dear friends, if you and I fail Jesus here, in this faith that we owe him, then his cause in our hearts, and in our midst is lost. Let us, looking up into the face of the Father, for His guidance and insight, and trusting in Him, say with all our heart, "Thou art the Christ; Thou art the Son of the living God." Let us accept him as our Redeemer, our Savior, and our eternal and divine Friend. To us who have done that there is a strength, a peace, and a joy which we cannot describe, but which stands us in good stead in every turn of life's road, and life itself has a radiance, a depth, and a meaning which brings a real thrill to our souls!

"The world offers many honors to those who accomplish things, but the highest honor known to this world is to 'glorify God' in the name 'Christian' that he may count us worthy of our calling."

"If Christian nations were nations of Christians, there would be no wars."

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The writer sometimes wonders how many of our people are deeply concerned about the little children who have been left fatherless and homeless. If you could be placed in the same position as the little child—with no father or mother, no home, no friends or relatives who cared for or wanted you, no friend to take you by the hand and say to you, "Come with me and I will give you a home"—how lonely! oh, how lonely! you would feel.

It is a fact that there are many children in this same plight today. Still we have the greatest and richest country in the world. Then we have mothers who have lost their companion and have been left with several little children with the bread-winner gone and no income. Oh! What a struggle she has and what a fight she makes to keep her children with her until health gives away and she loses the fight! Isn't it really Christian if your orphanage can come to the rescue and visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction and minister to them? James 1:27 tells us what pure religion is. Get your Bible and read what he says.

Your Christian Orphanage gives you an avenue through which you can carry out his suggestion. Oh! The great joy you will get out your visits to the orphanage with your contributions when you know it is to give a little child a home, food, and care! Doesn't it always make you happy when you help others who need your help? It is great to "live in the house by the side of the road and be a friend to man." A little kind deed here, a little kind deed there, to help someone in need brings real joy that nothing else can.

BANQUET OF ELON COLLEGE ALUMNI OF EASTERN VIRGINIA.

The Annual Banquet of Elon College Alumni Club of Eastern Virginia will be held at Hotel Elliott, Suffolk, Va., on Friday night, February 17th, at seven o'clock. Dr. Sidney B. Hall, Superintendent of Public Instruction of Virginia, from Richmond, Va., will be the speaker of the evening. Rev. H. S. Hardecastle, D. D., of Norfolk, Va., is president, and will preside.

If you have not made your reservation, send it to Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, Suffolk, Va., at once.

THINKING THINGS OVER.

It seems quite strange that we remember the little incidents in life, instead of the things which seem big at the moment. Now, as I reminisce, it comes to me that my most pleasant recollection of the past holidays is that of the few hours spent in the home of one of our church members. We arrived at the home during twilight, when the whole earth seemed hushed. It was such a tiny little house—I remember the hostess making the wish that she could have room to entertain her friends—but to me her tiny home held me spellbound. It was like a grand doll house; everything was in perfect order. I have often tired while visiting in some spacious rooms, but in this modest home there were no dull moments. Pictures, souvenirs—my imagination had a play house in which I should never have become bored.

During the evening, the lovely hostess took us from all our thoughts; I can see the vision now. The room in which we were entertained grew. Perhaps it was the charm of the married couple who took our thoughts from earthly surroundings. They knew so many good deeds that people had done. They seemed to have never met a bad person.

I was sorry when we had stayed over the proper time for departure. I left a home which contained all the elements necessary for Christian happiness—a home, small, but oh! so large.

In Memoriam

FRANKS.

Mrs. J. E. Franks was born Emma Frances Griffin, April 3, 1869, and departed this life January 24, 1938. Her home prior to her marriage was in Chatham County near Pittsboro and at the age of twelve she professed faith in Christ and united with our Hank's Chapel Christian Church. On April 28, 1892 she became the wife of Rev. Jesse E. Franks, a member and minister of our Catawba Springs Church and to this church after her marriage she moved her membership and remained a loyal and faithful member until her decease. Surviving her are her husband, Rev. J. E. Franks, and five children: W. B., D. M., and Bettie, all of Raleigh, Route No. 4; Mrs. Noma Jones of Gibsonville, N. C., and N. R. Franks of Goldsboro, N. C. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, assisted by Rev. J. C. Cummings, Rev. C. C. Wheeler and Rev. J. A. Denton. Interment was in Catawba Springs Cemetery, January 25th. The hymns used at the services were her favorites, "How Firm a Foundation," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," "Saved by Grace," "To a Land Where We Will Never Grow Old." A good woman indeed passes from the scenes of earth to the happy scenes and experiences of the heavenly home where neither sickness, nor sorrow, nor separation ever come. A most loyal and faithful wife, a most loving, self-sacrificing and devoted mother, as well as a good neighbor and friend, and a devout member of her church and an humble follower of our Lord has gone from us, but the memory of her good life will remain a blessing and a benediction to the bereaved husband and children. She cannot come to them, but they can, by the grace of God, go to her and know full well where to find her.

J. O. ATKINSON.

COMER.

Mrs. Susan Rebecca Comer was born September 12, 1856, in what is known as the Naked Creek section, near Elkton, Va. Her maiden name was Susan Rebecca Merica. When she was twenty-three years old, she married George Comer, and the same year united with the Christian Church (Mt. Lebanon) to which she belonged until her death.

It is noteworthy that she joined the church the same year she was married, considering Christian character and church membership as a prerequisite to successful and happy married life. She lived a life worthy of the profession. Her husband preceded her twenty-three years ago.

Saturday evening, January 28, 1939, Mother Comer, with her characteristic quietness, without disturbance or ado, peacefully slipped away and went to her Heavenly Home.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Bethel Church Monday afternoon, January 30. Burial was in the Comer cemetery, near Elkton.

Eight children remain to mourn the passing of Mother Comer: K. E. Comer, Elkton, Va.; Mrs. Nannie Monger, Elkton, Va.; T. O. Comer, Lewiston, Pa.; W. T. Comer, Paloi, Pa.; C. E. Comer, MeLean, Va.; M. S. Comer, Washington, D. C.; G. F. Comer, Washington, D. C.; and Mrs. Nettie F. Harris, Waynesboro, Va. Also there are twenty-five grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren.

May the memory of Mother Comer keep us close to the Lord who was her shield, defender, and Savior. M. W. MANN.

ANDREWS.

Inasmuch as our Heavenly Father in His great wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst Sister Nannie Andrews, a loyal member of the Wakefield Congregational-Christian Church and its organizations; and,

Whereas in her death this church has lost one of its most faithful members;

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn her departure, we bow in submission to the will of the all-wise Father.

2. That while the church has lost a loyal member, we feel our loss is her eternal gain.

3. That we hold in remembrance her faithfulness as a Christian.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be placed upon our church record.

MYERS.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father on December 22 1938, to remove from our midst our brother and friend, Reuben C. Myers, a member of Bethlehem Christian Church; and,

Whereas, by his going the church and Sunday school have sustained the loss of a faithful and consecrated Christian worker, who was always glad to be of service in the kingdom;

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the removal of such a useful life from our midst will leave a vacancy hard to fill.

2. That we humbly bow in submission to God's will, who doeth all things well.

3. That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to the companion and children and commend them to God, who alone can give comfort and consolation.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased brother, a copy be entered upon the records of our church, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. CLARENCE PHILLIPS,

ELLA PICKERING,

Mrs. H. G. BROWN.

WATKINS.

Mrs. Frank L. Watkins, member of Beulah Christian Church, Eastern North Carolina Conference, died Wednesday, December 21, 1938. Had she lived until the 28th of January, she would have been fifty years old. She united with the Beulah church some fifteen years ago. The Rev. J. E. Franks, former pastor, conducted the service and was assisted by the Rev. H. O. Baker, pastor of the Rolesville Baptist Church, Rolesville, N. C.

Mrs. Watkins leaves behind her husband, two daughters, and one son; two grandchildren, one brother, and her beloved mother. Interment was in the family plot in the vicinity. E. M. POWELL.

FRANKS.

On January 24, 1939, Mrs. Emma Griffin Franks, wife of our beloved brother, Rev. J. E. Franks, fell asleep to awake, we are assured, in the presence of her Lord. While she was much loved here and seemed to be so much needed, yet "to depart and be with Christ is far better." She was a most faithful wife for a pastor-husband, a loving and true mother, and a blessing to the church and to all who knew her.

She was a member of Catawba Springs Christian Church with her beloved husband, having united soon after their marriage some forty-seven years ago. They were looking forward to their fiftieth wedding anniversary, expecting to celebrate their golden wedding, but God had even better things for them.

The funeral services were held in her home church. The singing was conducted by Rev. J. A. Denton. Rev. J. C. Cummings and Rev. C. C. Wheeler assisted the writer in the pulpit services, bringing helpful expositions from the Word of God for such an occasion. The body was laid to rest in the church cemetery, waiting for the return of the Lord Jesus Christ, at whose second coming the bodies of the dead saints shall be raised in glory.

It was one of the most victorious funerals I ever attended. May God's blessing be upon the husband and children and comfort all who mourn. J. LEE JOHNSON.

GENERALISSIMO AND MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK.
Leaders of China.

On Sunday, October 16, the Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-Shek attended a sunset service held in a private park on the outskirts of Hankow. In addition to a few friends, one hundred college students and high school graduates who attend Madame Chiang's training course, were present. Earlier in the afternoon these girls marched out from their center at the Yokohama Specie Bank on the Bund, where they are in training for service in rural districts. Dr. Y. Y. Tu led the gathering in prayer, the company sang China's National Hymn, and Dr. W. Y. Chen, General Secretary of the National Christian Council preached the sermon on, "Why I Am a Christian."

Following the service Madame Chiang invited the girls to a Western style dinner served on a lawn nearby. One table had been set as a demonstration of how guests may be entertained, and Madame Chiang herself spent thirty minutes instructing the girls on Western forms and etiquette.

During the interval between the service and dinner, the Generalissimo retired to his study and spent the time in reading the Bible and chanting hymns. Later he and Madame Chiang joined the girls at dinner.

The City of Hankow was captured by the Japanese on Tuesday, October 25.

THIRD AVENUE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

In 1914 the Christian Church began active efforts looking toward the organization of a church in Danville, Va. A lot on Third Avenue was finally purchased and a building erected under the auspices and labors of the late Rev. S. B. Clapp. A number of ministers supplied the pulpit and served as pastor. In 1926 the congregation called the Rev. M. T. Sorrell as pastor. The church was organized with nine charter members in 1914. It has had a constant and continuous growth. Its greatest period of growth and development has come under the unusual pastorate of its present pastor, Rev. M. T. Sorrell. The present membership, active and inactive, number approximately 900. It has a Sunday school of 700. The Sunday school is growing rapidly. Because of the unusual growth of the congregation and Sunday school, it was necessary to have larger quarters in which to teach and worship. In faith and hope a new auditorium was erected. It is built in tabernacle style and has a seating capacity of 1,400. The building was opened for services Sunday, December 18, 1938. Rev. M. T. Sorrell, pastor, spoke at the morning service. On invitation of the pastor and congregation it was my privilege and pleasure to worship with them in their new building for the evening service and deliver the sermon. A great congregation gathered early. Every seat in the large auditorium was taken. The choir of seventy voices with visiting singers provided the music. It was a very unusual service and a most inspirational meeting.

The Rev. Mr. Sorrell is an evangelist pastor and has the ability to associate with men and women interested in evangelistic services. Their worship service included inspirational gospel singing, a fervent gospel message, opportunity for requests for prayers, decision for Christ, application for membership in the church, and an opportunity for all who will to bear witness of the saving grace of God experienced in their own lives. The early church gained its fervor, increased its power, and launched its program to win the world to Christ by witnessing, bearing testimony. It was the Master's injunction that they tell what great things the Lord had done for them. It may be that the failure to witness means the failure to receive consciously the power that Christ promised unto His people.

It was a pleasure to worship with the Danville people. They are doing a most unusual work and should receive the encouragement and cooperation of all of us who are interested in the enrichment of Christian experience and the coming of the Kingdom of God in the hearts of men.

L. E. SMITH.

FORSYTH-GUILFORD ASSOCIATION.

The Forsyth-Guilford Association of churches met Sunday afternoon, January 29, at High Point Congregational-Christian Church.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Rev. D. M. Spence, and a devotional service followed with singing by the congregation and Scripture lesson read by W. R. Bray of the High Point Church. Rev. M. A. Pollard led in prayer. A quartette from High Point sang a very beautiful selection.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman talked on "How to Run a Large Sunday School." Since we have only a few large schools, Rev. Mr. Wisseman described the proper organization of any school regardless of size which is organized for effective service. He stressed the imperative need of proper facilities such as sufficient room for departmental work and literature of a type to aid in forming worship programs. Questions were asked and answered in the discussion following this talk.

Rev. M. A. Pollard addressed the meeting on "Evangelism in the Church School." He emphasized the need of bringing the Gospel to discouraged and needy people within the bounds of our churches. This aim, which is often lost sight of by churches, should, on the contrary, be kept constantly in mind. Christ is to be presented as a living reality in life and the word of God be applied in lives of teachers and pupils alike.

Miss Dorothy Truitt spoke on Young People's Work, mentioning especially the Youth Fellowship movement. She explained that one does not join the Youth Fellowship, but all members of Christian Endeavor societies, Sunday school classes, clubs, etc., are at the same time members of the large organization. The purpose of the Fellowship with some of the things it has accomplished in the past were discussed by Miss Truitt together with questions which were asked at this time.

A roll call of churches disclosed that nine of the ten churches of this district were represented at the meeting with seven ministers, seven superintendents, and twenty-one teachers present.

Dr. W. M. Jay presented a constitution which was adopted. As stated in the constitution, "The purpose of this association shall be to foster a closer fellowship of the churches of this area, promote a mutual exchange of ideas and methods of Religious Education among the leaders and workers of these churches and to to discuss our mutual problems together for the furtherance of the cause of the Kingdom."

The association is scheduled to meet next quarter at Monticello Church.

Who Said It, Washington or Lincoln?

[Test your ability to judge which of the following are statements of Washington, and which are statements of Lincoln. The correct answers will be found on page 15.]

1. Labor to keep alive in your heart that little spark of celestial fire called conscience.
2. The consideration that human happiness and moral duty are inseparably connected, will always continue to prompt me to promote the former by inculcating the practice of the latter.
3. This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.
4. Gambling is the child of avarice, the brother of iniquity, and the father of mischief.
5. With the fearful strain that is on me night and day, if I did not laugh I should die.
6. It is impossible to govern the world without God. He must be worse than an infidel that lacks faith, and more than wicked that has not gratitude enough to acknowledge his obligation.
7. While just government protects all in their religious rites, true religion affords government its surest support.
8. I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue enough to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles, the character of an honest man.
9. All that I am, or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother.
10. I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go. My own wisdom, and that of all about me, seemed insufficient for the day.
11. Let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.
12. We ought not to look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors, and for the purpose of profiting by dear bought experience.
13. The foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing is a vice so mean and low, that every person of sense and character detests and despises it.
14. Honest statesmanship is the employment of individual meanesses for the public good.
15. Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports.
16. It has been my experience that folks who have no vices have very few virtues.
17. Religion is necessary to reason as reason is to religion. The one cannot exist without the other.
18. I can only say that there is not a man living who wishes more sincerely than I do to see a plan adopted for the abolition of slavery.
19. Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith, let us to the end, dare to do our duty, as we understand it.
20. Associate with men of good quality, if you esteem your own reputation; it is better to be alone than in bad company.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

"MORAL FORCE IS MANKIND'S BEST WEAPON."

The title to this article is the contention of David Lawrence, the noted newspaper writer, in a full page article in the December 12 issue of "The United States News." When newspaper writers begin preaching such doctrine it is time for the Church to take notice and to check on what it has been preaching.

Mr. Lawrence points out the fact that physical force cannot protect, and that economic pressure must be used very intelligently or it will become war. Only Moral Force can save the world of today, he contends. Moral Force can speak through the radio, etc., to the hearts of people everywhere. If it is to bring new freedom to people in totalitarian states, it must renounce selfishness, greed, and hatred in democracies also. There must be given to all peoples a chance to live without regard to color, creeds, or nationality.

"It will take courage and an unparalleled skill in statesmanship, frankness and a challenging honesty on the part of the British and American and French governments to lay before the world a program that will unite mankind in the biggest crusade of all time," says Mr. Lawrence. Furthermore, he says, the people of these countries "must be soldiers in the armies of Moral Force which can be mobilized wherever men, women, and children express allegiance to the greatest of all powers—the living God."

"Moral Force has before it dramatic opportunities in mass prayer." In this realm it is suggested that five minutes be set aside at noon daily for a week around the world for prayer for oppressed peoples and those who oppress them. "What would the German people . . . think if they knew the whole world was praying for Herr Hitler?" They could then have greater confidence in proposals made by leaders of the nations, says Mr. Lawrence.

"There are unquestionably many ways of reaching the heart and conscience of another nation, many ways to convert hostility or antagonism into friendliness and fellowship. We may be cynical about such devices but it is only because we have never used them. Moral Force is a new force, a new weapon, though it be forged out of age-old philosophies and out of the unlimited power of mass psychology."

"We have tried bloodshed and have brought forth only fear and more bloodshed.

"We have tried nationalism and have brought forth only worse forms of nationalism.

"We have tried brutality and we have only brought forth worse forms of human torture.

"Is it not time to try something else?"

It is in keeping with this idea of Moral Force that the Mid-Winter Meetings of Congregational and Christian Church officials suggested a conference of church leaders from around the world to consider the causes of war and to see what can be done so that people everywhere may have an equal chance to live happily and peacefully. Doubtless those of us who profess to be Christians have not yet experimented thoroughly with the power of prayer in developing international friendship and good-will. The Lenten period, beginning February 22, is a good time for us to cooperate in praying, not alone for our personal development, but for the peace of the world. In these prayers it is important for us to remember that peace can really come when righteousness prevails.

WHY GET NEW MEMBERS.

This question is not as silly as it may seem. There are several incentives for trying to secure new members for our churches.

We have grown so slowly in recent years, while other churches around us made rapid strides, that pride may demand that we increase our membership. This motive is neither totally good nor totally bad, but it certainly is not the best. The fact that other denominations secure new members is an indication that it is possible for us to do the same. Most of us like to be members of a growing organization and not one that is declining.

Another motive that spurs us on is the need for increased financial income. Undoubtedly, our Boards need more money with which to work and so do our local churches. It sometimes happens that when new members begin to contribute the older ones decrease their contributions. This means nothing to the churches financially, but does show a very poor spirit of consecration on the part of those church members who give less than before. No one would have the nerve to go to a sinner and say, "I want you to join my church so you will help to pay our bills." Evidently this is not a good reason for asking new members to join, even though the financial support of the church does need to be greatly increased and will be if we can win people to loyalty to Christ and His Church.

When the Easter day dawns, and people gather in their churches for worship of Him who brought new life to the earth on Easter, we want a thousand new converts to stand up and pledge their allegiance to Jesus Christ and His Church. We want them not merely that our pride may be satisfied, or our giving increased, but because these children of the Heavenly Father need to know the fellowship both of the Father and the other members of the Father's family. We want them to join with us because they can help to bring joy and gladness to the tragic world in which we live. We want them to be able to sing hymns of praise to the Christ of the Cross and the Father of all those who bear the cross gladly. Because we have something in our hearts that we want to share with others like us, plan definitely to win to Jesus Christ and His Church at least a thousand new recruits by the time we sing "Halleluiah, Christ Arose."

A Joint Christmas Message to the People of the United States of America

By the GENERALISSIMO and MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK.

On Christmas Day this year the soldiers and citizens of our country are still struggling against aggression in the midst of bloodshed and misery. There lies upon us, and, we presume, upon you also, our fellow-Christian readers, a great weight of care which religion alone can teach us to bear worthily.

A holocaust of raging violence and horror has enveloped a great part of our country, a country where for thousands of years our statesmen, philosophers, and artists have all cherished and expressed the ideal of "peace and prosperity under heaven." Even the commonly temperamental character of the poets has, in our land, been rendered subservient to that ideal. All our poetry is indeed "emotion recollected in tranquillity." This love of peace is akin to our love of hearth and home, and when you read this those two emotions will also be fused for you in the spirit of Christmas.

The sage Lao-tzu: "To know one's weakness is strength." This aphorism applies in two senses to the present state of our country. We know, and declare without shame, in what lies our weakness as against the enemy. Nor should we be ashamed that our people are unwarlike, unwilling and to that degree unprepared to wage war when it comes of a quality of a soul naturally Christian. We have not racked our brains for thirty years to secure the sharpest weapons and the craftiest tricks of warfare, and we do not regret it. In the second sense Lao-tzu's words express the fact that our self-knowledge gives us a strength over which a tissue of wiles and lies cannot eventually triumph.

Our religion teaches us that sin is immeasurably a greater evil than suffering; and we value above all the confidence that our people, far from being whirled into the turbid sea of bitterness that often engulfs any two nations at war, are on the contrary, being purified and uplifted by their present trials. That which we have dared to call the innately Christian soul of our people contains a vast reservoir of what some call tolerance, but which we prefer to call a forgiving spirit. It is capable of comprehending even the Japanese from whom we have received nothing but insult added to untold injury. You will find today an unparalleled patriotism sweeping the rank and file of our Chinese citizenry, but you will not hear hymns of hate.

The frontiers of nations have no place in the Kingdom of Christ. He was born into the world; his peace he gave to the world. We are striving to deal with the paradox divinely propounded and divinely solved in the life of him who from birth to death loved peace and taught it, but who warned his followers that they must protect it, if need be. We seek to share with you the positive task of achieving a world peace which is lasting Peace and high moral standards are inseparable; and when they become an accomplished fact in the lives of all the peoples of the East and West, there will be no more war. War is brutal, but it will ever be powerless to rob any of us of the transcendent peace of men who are at peace with themselves.—

News Bureau of National Lutheran Council.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are two current fallacies extant today. First: It is always a blessing to be rich. Second: It is a handicap to be poor. These opinions are so deep-seated they cannot be changed by brief argument. Every normal person desires at some time to be rich. It is unnatural to wish to be poor. The words "rich" and "poor" have a variable meaning. There is no fixed point that marks the distinction between being "rich" and "poor." Some people think $1,000.00 would make them rich. Others would set the standard as high as $1,000,000.00.

Regardless of the standard of classification people regard the acquisition and possession of wealth as a blessing. But it is a strange fact that riches do not satisfy. A late wealthy friend said: "When I started out to make a living I wanted to make $10,000.00. When I reached that figure I wanted $25,000.00, and I finally reached $300,000.00, and found that my first $100.00 brought more happiness than all the rest."

Riches do not abide. They sometimes fly away like swift birds of the air. Business conditions change. Industries rise under the magic touch of man and collapse with alarming depressions. Money has no fixed purchasing power. Profitable investments become worthless. The man who is rich today may be bankrupt within a brief decade. The transitoriness of wealth causes one to ask: "Is possession worth the cost of the pursuit?"

People who have a super-abundance have little incentive to real initiative. Life loses much of the spirit of the pioneer. There is a tendency to trust in the purchasing power of riches. And there is a danger that wealth will become the master of the possessor. Men who sit in swivel chairs, behind desks, in luxurious offices, may become slaves to their business. They cannot find time for leisure, for reading, for soul culture and religious devotion. "I have a fortune and I cannot come," is the answer they might give to the call of Savior of men. Jesus repeatedly warned of the two-fold danger of trusting in riches: it is hard for such people to enter the kingdom; and it is hard for them to stay in the kingdom of God. There is a difference between a man having great possessions, and great possessions having a man. Is a man master or a slave?

The other fallacy looks with pity upon the poor. Jesus had compassion. They suffer. He suffered with them. But the rich are, in many instances, to be pitied as much as the poor—who dwell in the tenant houses. There is a challenge in dire necessity. The carpenter's lot may be more desirable than the place of the man who employs him. Hunger and want have their compensation. Bare walls and unpainted cottages may stimulate many minds to adventure. Social betterment is not always handed down; it sometimes grows up like a white lily in a stagnant pool.

The two greatest persons in the New Testament were Jesus and Paul. Jesus said: "The Son of Man hath not where to lay His head." Paul said of himself: "Having nothing." "Nowhere." "Nothing." It could not be much worse than that. Yet Jesus and Paul, in spite of their poverty, made the greatest impression, on human history, of all the people who have lived during the past two thousand years. They were poor, and their poverty was not a handicap. Many of the world's greatest inventors, writers, industrialists and statesmen have arisen from the ranks of the poor.

This writer has no desire to criticize the acquisition or possession of wealth. God intended that man should profit by the work of his hands. Nature has been lavish in providing for the comfort of man. But the poor need a word of encouragement in these trying days. Christianity opens a door of opportunity for the poor. Despise not the poor. Envy not the rich.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

There is something about Elon that seems to get hold of those who become a part of it. Students coming here imbibe a spirit that they seldom if even lose. They go in different directions, dedicate their abilities to different undertakings, but sometime, somewhere, the tug of the Elon spirit is felt. The Alumni are not alone in this lasting interest in the college. The Christian Church loves the college. It was conceived and brought into being by the church. No more can a true mother turn her back upon her child than the Christian Church can turn its back upon her college. Many hundreds and thousands of the members of our church never came to Elon to college, and many of them never will. Yet, there is an abiding affection for the institution. It is ours. It bears our image and superscription. It breathes our spirit. It holds our hopes and claims our loyalty. Sometimes there are those among us who allow themselves to be persuaded that they are not interested in the college, that they would just as soon have it close its doors as not, that its days of service are about over, that about all it has ever done is to ask them for money with which to run. But all such questions are superficial and all such feelings are on the surface. When we come down to reality and touch the depths of our souls, we find that the college is a part of us and that in the giving out of our affections the college, because it is our own, must have its share. It has had its hardships, its difficulties, its battles, its wounds, and its heartaches. These unpleasant and unfortunate experiences by no means kill our affection but in reality they purify them and make them more noble. In our happier and more optimistic moments, we forget the college's hardships and handicaps, and we think of its success, its joys, its triumphs, and the magnificent fruit that it has borne in Christian character and its lasting contribution to the church and the kingdom in consecrated leadership for pew and pulpit alike. When we think for a moment what the church would be today without contributions made by the college, our admiration for and pride in her take over the reins of our purses and our hearts, and drive us on toward greater triumphs and final victory.

In recent years the clouds have been heavy and lowering, the darkness intense and forbidding, but today there are rifts in the clouds and the darkness would turn to morning. On the horizon the constituency of the college—church, alumni, and friends—sees a ray of hope and a great opportunity comes to the throne. It is our opportunity. The load has been lightened far more than we had hoped this early. Nevertheless, so long as there is the burden of debt, sailing will not be unhampered. We have been standing on deck long enough, standing looking for the shore with its golden opportunities. Now we need to go down into the hull and with our purses cast out the last dollar of indebtedness that this good ship of Christian Education of ours may turn her sails to the winds and start toward the destiny that her architects and builders purposed her

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

"I will and bequeath to the Christian Orphanage, located at Elon College, N. C., the sum of $..... for its general uses and purposes."

I wonder how many friends of the Christian Orphanage have thought to put a clause something like the above in that very important document. God blesses many of us with plenty and to spare. We have all the comforts of life and something to spare. We may be able to lay up thousands of dollars that we shall not be able to use. Then a question arises in our minds and we ask ourselves the question, "What shall we do with it so that it will be the greatest blessing to humanity after we are gone?" There are two outstanding facts that confront us, both rich and poor alike.

First—Death is sure to come to each of us. It is no respecter of persons, rich or poor. It is no respecter of age. Both old and young are called to meet it. Jesus said, "Be ye therefore ready also; for the Son of man cometh at an hour when you think not."—(Luke 12: 40.)

Second—It makes no difference how much of this world's goods you have been able to accumulate and store up; it is a sure fact that when the summons comes, whether you are ready or not, all of your wealth will be useless to you. The sinking of the great ship Titanic is a good illustration. People who would have gladly given their millions for a rescue boat went down on that ship. But how useless their millions when they were on a sinking ship in mid-ocean with no help in sight.

The mission of the Christian Orphanage is to take, care for, and train for good citizenship little children who have been unfortunate and left helpless and homeless. If you leave a few hundred or a few thousand dollars to the Christian Orphanage, how do you know but that it will be the means of giving some boy or girl a chance in life so that he can go out to be of great service to humanity. You will be living through them. The Orphanage, in its more than thirty years of service, has cared for 451 children and has sent out boys and girls who have reflected credit upon the institution that mothered them when they were in need.

Will you remember the Christian Orphanage when you write that important document?

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

to reach. The day has come when this is possible.

I know that there are many faithful sons and daughters of the college and of the church who will be glad for the first opportunity to forward their membership fee, $50.00, for a place on the roster of the Golden Anniversary Club that the task that is now ours may be done, and done completely. There are many of you who will want to give more than $50.00, and you will. You will not wait for some high pressure canvasser to knock at your door and tell you how much you should give, for the love in your hearts and the consciousness of blessings upon your lives have already told you, and you will respond generously and quickly. There are many others whose love will be as great, whose hopes will be as high, and whose spirits will be as willing, but who cannot with honor and due consideration give one dollar a year for every year of the college's existence, a total of $50.00, but they can and will express their love and interest by contributions.

This institution conceived in love, founded in faith, and supported by devotion and sacrifice, is looking to us, the ones of us who have benefited and been blessed directly by the fruitage of the college, for help in this time of need. We cannot be less loyal, less devoted, or less sacrificial than were those who came before us. Contrary voices will be telling you many things. Turn a deaf ear and hear the call of opportunity, of duty, and of love. In the answering of this call, rewards glorious and abundantly waiting will not be wanting. L. E. SMITH.

"A GIFT"—A BEGINNING.

In last week's CHRISTIAN SUN this writer had a piece titled "A Gift or a Way?" We were commenting on a very timely article in Advance by Dr. Alden H. Clark, his piece being titled, "Christianity: Is It a 'Way of Life,' or a 'Gift of Life.'" In contrasting the two and in re-reading our contribution in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN it occurs to the writer to add that the Gift of Life is not all, but only a beginning—a beginning, however, which leads inevitably, if followed, to a Way, or better, to the Way. Conversion, or regeneration, is not all by any means, but is only a beginning and should ever be considered as such. The writers of our Scriptures emphasize this fact again and again. The Apostle Paul in Romans 12:2, enjoins, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." Thus one who has had the Gift needs constant renewing that the transformation may be complete throughout the years as trials and temptations come and go. Then the writer of I Chronicles 16:23 says, "Sing unto Jehovah; show forth his salvation from day to day. Declare his glory among the nations, his marvelous works among all the peoples." Thus we have this early writer revealing the fact that if we could make sure of the Gift we must declare and continue to declare that saving grace, which has come to us from Jehovah. And then coming directly to the point Paul enjoins the saints in the church at Philippi, "My beloved, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."—(Phil. 2:12.) Thus is emphasized the fact that while salvation is a gift, as a beginning, it is only a beginning, since it is to be worked out by constant daily living and exercise of faith. You can only work out that which is "your own," and thus having the Gift through grace one is to take this blessed Gift and with it grow in grace and in the fear and admonition of the Lord. The Gift is that glad and glorious beginning of the Way that leads from death to life, but to walk in that Way requires constant renewing that the Gift may be revealed in all its worth and weight through our character and conduct in our contacts with and our service to our fellow-man.

We gratefully acknowledge the above with sincere appreciation to everyone who contributed. There is certainly no call, or cause of the church more worthy and more in keeping with that for which Christ is building His Church than that for which these donations were made. The church and those who constitute the church will do the missionary work or it will not be done. No state, county, or civic club may be looked to to make any contribution to missions, since missions is purely a spiritual task sponsored by and carried on through the church in obedience to the command of the Founder and Head of the church, Christ our Lord. And the contributions to missions are used to help and to relieve the most needy people at home and fields afar, namely; in giving them the gospel which is the bread of life.

Gratefully yours,

Mission Secretary.

A POST MADRAS CONFERENCE.

Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Whitten of our Winchester, Va., Church; Bro. Roy A. Larrick, President of the Valley Conference; and Mrs. Larrick and Mrs. K. H. Sale, all of Winchester, had the high privilege of attending the, what is known to be, the first Post Madras Conference held in the United States since that International Conference in India. This Post Madras Conference was held in the First Baptist Church in Washington, D. C., February 7, 8, 1939 and was presided over by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Foundry M. E. Church, and was sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches. From this Washington Conference Pastor Whitten of Winchester kindly sends us the following:

ECHOES FROM THE MADRAS CONFERENCE.

This Conference in Washington, D. C., met in less than sixty days from the time of the World's Missionary Conference, held in Madras Christian College, Tambaram, India, near the City of Madras, where four hundred and seventy delegates representing sixty-four nations of the world assembled.

Dr. Leslie B. Moss, Secretary of the Foreign Missionary Conference of North America presided and presented the speakers. One thing, said Dr. Moss of the Madras Conference was the fact that the whole Conference was young looking. An unusual and perhaps a significant thing for such a gathering. He gave as one reason for this the fact that more of the younger churches from various parts of the world were represented in the group than ever before. Dr. Moss stated that the Conference was divided into sixteen groups of study and each delegate could attend two groups. The opening service began on Monday evening, December 12, 1938, when Dr. John R. Mott delivered an address. Tuesday was featured a "Quit Day" when one of the Native Bishops conducted the devotional period preceding the time of meditation, prayer, and seeking for the presence of God.

According to Dr. Moss the problems of the Conference were the same problems confronting the church nearly two thousand years ago and since. He gave as the reason why the Conference was held was that since the Jerusalem Conference in 1928, the world had undergone, at least in part, a revolution with upheavels here and there, with economic disorders throughout the world and that the church needed to reaffirm its faith, renew its inner life, bear witness of the Gospel with its power, cement its unity and secure cooperation in the task before us. Little groups held meetings in various places for two years to discuss such a meeting, and the Madras Conference was the result of their findings and recommendations, said Dr. Moss.

In this "Post Madras Conference" held in Washington, D. C., the following, outstanding Christian leaders made addresses: Miss Ila Sircar, Associate General Secretary of the Students Christian Movement in India; Dr. Baez Carmargo, Secretary of the Evangelical Church Council of Mexico; and Prof. P. C. Hsu, Professor of

From among all the interesting and inspiring truths we can learn in our study about India, the most important to us is knowing what is the Indian's response to Christianity. Many are the thrilling, courageous, and challenging stories from the experiences of the missionaries, to whom history pays full tribute down through the centuries. The following is a paragraph from Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury's book Dinabandhu:

"The Christian Church in India has been through many experiences in its centuries of existence. It has suffered persecution and plague, and growing pains, and has been betrayed by its friends. It has been in and out of favor with the government, and with the people; but it has more than survived. Although for the first century progress was slow, more recently Christianity has gone forward by leaps and bounds. Today Indian Christians are able to say with confidence that Christ is at home in India, and a new church is in the making, rooted right in the soil of India herself. This does not mean that its difficulties are all past. But today there is a strong body of Christians who are ready to take their share in the solving of the problems."

Today Christians in India proper number about six million—about one in every sixty of the total population. They are the fourth largest community in India, exceeded only by the Hindus, Moslems, and members of primitive tribes classed as animists. They are to be found in nearly every profession and in responsible positions of trust. Says Stephen Neill: "In almost every corner of the country the Christian Church has gained a footing, and has touched every stratum of society. The Brahman convert, now a respected minister of the Church, comes to England to important conferences, and delights English congregations by his perfect mastery of the English tongue. Outcaste Christians meet to praise God under the shade of ancient trees. There is now a great solid middle class of Christians all over India, teachers, government servants, clerks, lawyers, and doctors. There are few towns in which there is not at least one Christian family. The Church is increasing rapidly."

In the last chapter of her book Miss Seabury rather sums up, through our young Christian Indian, Dinabandhu, and says: "The Christ may be presented to India in three ways: through the Bible, through Christian Churches and schools, and through Christ-filled personalities."

The response of the low caste and the outcaste has been so enthusiastic as to prove embarrassing to the local pastors because so many wanted to "move into" Christianity at one time. Does that cause us to wonder that anyone could care so for them, how they live, and whether they learn, and what the future holds for them is almost too good for them to believe.

If the pastor hesitates before such numbers, it is to impress them with the importance of the step they are about to take. So certain conduct and a few accomplishments are required for a period of probation. Then arrives the day when they are ready to be received into the Church, and the pastor takes them to the river side and baptizes them—the symbol of a new life begun.

A Christian Church in India carries on in much the same way as the church at home. There is a surprising similarity in activities. Did you know there is a National Missionary Society, carried on entirely by Indians and financed by Indians? The budget is about $20,000 a year. But the group in this story carries on in a different way. An Indian pastor is in charge of a "larger parish," which consists of about 140 villages within a radius of 50 miles. While he is the only completely trained and ordained pastor, he has the enthusiastic help of his Christian congregation, for they are organized into young men's preaching bands, singing songs bands, dramatic bands, story-telling bands, and they assist their pastor in visiting the villages and holding services. Occasionally the whole congregation from the 140 villages gathers together under the blue sky and around a platform where the church property is kept, and they sing the "Golden Song" which contains the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer, the Twenty-Third Psalm, and all the parables of Jesus. Many cannot read and write and so they sing their faith, at work, at play, in the home, in the field. It goes "from heart to heart and from life to life."

Sundar Singh—A Twentieth Century Saint.

Sundar Singh was born less than fifty years ago of Hindu parents of considerable wealth, and even as a boy was deeply religious. When about fourteen years old, the death of his mother and then his brother, caused him grief, doubt, and despair, and his father was also comfortless. Not knowing what else to do, the father sent the boy to a Christian mission school to get more "book education." The boy rebelled at being required to study the New Testament, and gave expression to his grief and rebellion in many kinds of misconduct. Finally, in a frenzy of anger he publicly burned a copy of the New Testament. Shocked and despairing because of loss of self-control, he determined to pray to God that if there be a God he reveal Himself and save him from his ways.

Then Sundar Singh tells of an experience much like Paul's on the road to Damascus—of a light, a vision, and a voice. From then on he followed the Christ. His life was filled with sacrifice of self and devotion to his fellowmen. It became his habit to journey over into Tibet to tell the story of Jesus. It was an arduous journey over the dangerous passes of the Himalayas, and his health was never robust. Finally his friends began to persuade him not to go, but he begged to go once more to help his people find his Master. Sometime in the year 1929, probably in May or June, he lost his life, it is felt, in his Master's service, for he never returned from the journey. It is from a life like this that the spirit of Christ is "more often caught than taught."

Closing Meditation—

[The following translation of the Twenty-Third Psalm was made by a Moslem girl in India and was published in the "World Call." It is included in missionary program material of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, and was given me by a member.]

"God is my shepherd; to me there is no need. He sits in the place of green grass. He, taking me, makes me arrive to the side of springs of rest. He leads my life and for the sake of his name, and in the road of truth-taking, he leads. But when in the valley of the shade of death I walk, to me no fear will be because you are with me. Your rod and stick, they are the reason of my comfort. You, before my enemy's face, before me put the dinner table. You rub oil in my head. My cup, filled, is flowing over. Certainly goodness and mercy my full life, with my feet will stay attached and I, always, in the house of God will be living."

YOUTH WORSHIPS.

By LUCY M. ELDRIDGE.

"It is our firm conviction that the roots of religion lie in the cultivation of the art of personal religious living."

"We believe that prayer is one of the highest forms of expression of a wholesome Christian life."

These words were from Rockford, where young people from Congregational and Christian Churches of thirty-six states gathered last June. It is because thousands of other young people share such convictions that Lenten Devotions for Young People has been issued again this year.

The writer for 1939 is Dr. Claton S. Rice, superintendent of the Washington Conference. He has shared his rich experience to help those who are ready to learn and to worship. Many of the devotions were written where, clouds permitting, one could see The Mountain. The author says, "Because 'The Man' spent so much of His life out of doors, it has seemed fitting to choose illustrations from the desert, the hills, and the sea—places He appreciated and loved." The pages reveal the spirit of the West, and every page carries thoughts worth cherishing through life.

From Ash Wednesday (February 22), when the call is "Lift up your eyes unto the hills," to "The Glad Day," Easter Sunday, the meditations direct one's thought to "The Man." "Through the centuries there has been just one 'The Man.' Like 'The Mountain' he towers far above all others . . . Jesus, in those qualities we call God-like, stands supreme, high above all others, for all time. At our best, we pray that we may be like Him." There are meditations revealing the highest moments of the life of Jesus. There are days when the thought centers about great truths which he taught and exemplified. Each day presents a Scripture passage, some thoughts for meditation and a prayer.

Lenten Devotions for Young People will be used by thousands of young people of the Pilgrim Fellowship. They will help the fellowship to be more real. Since Rockford, friendships among Congregational and Christian youth are nation-wide. This Lenten Fellowship of Prayer will have added meaning for many for that reason.

The booklet has been issued by the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life in cooperation with the Young People's Department of the Division of Christian Education. Copies may be secured from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., for 5c each.

Many pastors will arrange for each young person in the congregation to have his own copy. Sunday school classes and young people's clubs and societies will secure copies for their members. Individuals will purchase them. While the material is for personal use, many groups will find in the booklet thoughts for Lenten worship services. Lenten Devotions for Young People is recommended to all who would take seriously the emphasis upon personal religious growth which is at the very heart of the program of the Pilgrim Fellowship.

WHERE ARE OUR MODERN FRONTIERS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 26, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Numbers 13:17-21, 25, 30-35.

Daily Readings—

- Monday—Possessing the Land—Josh. 1:10-18.
 Tuesday—Restoring Jehovah Worship—II Kings 23:21-25.
 Wednesday—Purifying God's House—Matt. 21:12-17.
 Thursday—The Twelve Commissioned—Matt. 10:1-11.
 Friday—The Obligation of the Rich—I Tim. 6:17-19.
 Saturday—Impartiality Enjoined—Jas. 2:1-9.

This topic is an excellent one for panel discussion. The leader should serve as chairman and invite other persons to sit on the panel to consider with the chairman various new frontiers.

There are no more geographical frontiers in our country, but our modern frontiers are more challenging. Many things need to be done in a different way, or done better. Youth can experience a thrill by opening up new ways of making life more loving and more Christian.

Here is a partial list of frontiers today:

1. The health frontier.
2. The democracy frontier: we need a high type of citizenship and consecrated leaders.
3. The poverty frontier.
4. The liquor frontier.
5. The home frontier.
6. The war frontier.
7. The effective church frontier.

These qualities should be used in open discussion:

1. The Christian frontiersman is willing to work quietly and unobtrusively. He will be satisfied to do

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND ITS SOCIAL PERILS.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 19, 1939.

(A SOCIAL ASPECT OF THE LIQUOR PROBLEM.)

GOLDEN TEXT: It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth.—Romans 14:21.

LESSON: Amos 6:1-6; I Peter 2:11, 12; 4:1-5.

The Peril of Privilege.

“Woe to them that are at ease in Zion, to them that are secure in the mountain of Samaria . . . that lie upon beds of ivory, and stretch themselves upon their couches, and eat the lambs out of the flock, and calves out of the midst of the stall.” Wealth and ease are not necessarily devilish, but they are dangerous. One has only to read the words of Jesus to see how perilous wealth is. It has a tendency to develop a sense of self-sufficiency, to stimulate to self-indulgence, to make one self-complacent, to make one lazy and to love ease, to separate one from his fellowmen, and what is worse to make him unmindful of, or unsympathetic with his fellowmen. Amos, with discerning insight saw the danger to those who were at ease in his day. He denounced the luxury and the love of ease in biting language. We think of the woes of those who are poor. But rich men have their woes, too.

Putting Off the Evil Day.

“Ye put off far away the evil day, and cause the seat of violence to come near.” Men instinctively feel that some day they must face the consequences of their deeds done in the flesh, that sometime, somewhere there is a day of judgment and reckoning. But they put far off the evil day. They either think that “it cannot happen to them” or that it will be long delayed in coming. The miser, the drinker, the libertine, the glutton, the sinner of any kind—all of us are prone to believe that we can get away with it; we refuse to face the ultimate and inevitable consequences of our sin. But we shall not be deceived. God is not mocked. Whatsoever we sow, that shall we reap. Everyone of us must give an account of himself to God. We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ. And if a man is ever going to reform, to repent, now is the accepted time.

Idle Songs.

“That sing idle songs to the sound of the viol; that invent for themselves instruments of music like David.” “Debased music is a mark of a nation’s decay, and promotes it.” To be sure there is a place for the lighter things of life. But one wonders if much of our modern trash that passes for music does not reflect the emptiness and shallowness of much of our modern life. Listen for a whole day to the music that comes over the radio and see how much of it is cheap and shallow and artificial.

Wine in Bowls.

“That drink wine in bowls.” Wine ordinarily is drunk from glasses, and small glasses at that. But alcohol is a habit-forming poison. One drink calls for another, and that for another. Thus it is that often a man starts by taking a drink and ends up by having the drink take him. Where there is no restraint by law there will always be an increase in drinking. The breweries and distillers today are trying in every possible way to increase their sales of liquor and wines and beer. The worst feature about it is the fact that they are doing it with the permission and even the help of the government. The more one thinks about the matter of liquor the more one realizes what fools men and women can be.

Not Grieved for the Affliction of Joseph.

“But they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.” Here was the crowning indictment against these privileged people. They rolled in luxury, they lolled at ease, but they did not care about the afflictions of their fellowmen. They had become careless and callous. Here is one of the most insidious perils of riches. The humane spirit, the care for others, concern for all people—these are the tests by which ultimately we shall be judged. Even those of us who do not have wealth need to take care lest we “are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.”

Sojourners and Pilgrims.

“This world is not our home.” Our citizenship is in heaven. Life is a pilgrimage. Let no man become enamored with the world for it is transient. It passes away, and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever. We have a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

Abstinence.

“Abstain from fleshly lusts that war against the soul.” Abstinence is the best policy in anything that is questionable. One should not dabble in self-indulgence. Especially is this true as concerning alcoholic beverages. It is true, however, of all other “fleshly lusts.” As Christians we are not to see how much we can get by with. We are not to see how far we can go. We are to seek complete victory, without compromise. The flesh lusteth against, warreth against the soul. The wise man brings his body into subjection, and makes all things subject to the spirit.

The Eloquence of Good Works.

Peter suggests that Christians should “have their behavior seemly among the Gentiles” so that although people may make fun of us and speak against us, that they will not be able to disregard our good works. A man cannot produce an argument against good works. The worldly man who may scoff at the arguments of religion will pay homage to the good life and the good works of a Christian man.

Living . . . to the Will of God.

“That ye no longer should live the rest of your time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.” “We may live either to satisfy the desire of the body or to serve the will of God, but we cannot live for both of them at the same time. And the longer we continue to live for the former, the less inclined shall we be to desire the latter. On the other hand, the more continually and eagerly we submit to the will of God, the less powerful will be the fascination of the things of the flesh.” Men may ridicule us, but in their hearts they envy us, and usually honor us.

MONDAY.

HEAVENLY FORETASTES.

"A cloud of witnesses."—Heb. 12: 12.

It was my pleasure to attend two family reunions recently. One of them was my own family, the other was that of my wife's family. We met some of the circle whom we had not seen for years. We missed others who could not get there, and some who had passed on from earthly circles.

These love feasts give us a bit of foretastes of glory. There we shall share memories with all those who love we once shared on this earth. The warm embrace of brothers and the tender kiss of sisters and loved ones remind us of the reunion in heaven and the fellowship we will have there.

Prayer—Dear Father, we are grateful for the memory of all those whose lives have been and are linked with ours. Amen.

TUESDAY.

KNOWING GOD.

"He that hath seen me, hath seen the father."—Jno. 14: 9.

It is well to remember the simple truth which Jesus often stressed, that God is our Father, and that He sent forth His Son to make known His character to us. It is in Christ that we find all that we need to know about God.

Prayer—So, our Father, help us to understand that in Christ dwells the fulness of the Godhead, and help us to plant our hope and our faith in that. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

OUR HARDEST LESSON.

"Father, forgive them."—Luke 23: 34.

According to our observation, our hardest lesson is to refrain from hating. Our natural impulse is to hate that which is not to our liking.

But this is wrong. If we are to count for anything in Christian character, in influencing others to Christian living, as citizens in bringing in a new and better order, we must do it without hate. Jesus says, "I have given you an example.

Prayer—O God, in the presence of Thy great love, we pray that our hearts may be purged of all hatred and bitterness. Amen.

THURSDAY.

TRUSTING GOD.

"Believe me for the very works' sake."—John 14: 11.

Our God is an eternal Christ,
Unchangeable, unchanged,
His love is still as warm and true
As when life's common way He ranged Beneath the Syrian blue . . .

Our God is an eternal Christ,
All tender, wide and true;
As once He was to those of old,
So is He now to me and you,
Till all the tale is told.

Prayer—Dear Father, we would see Jesus. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ARE WE DUMB?

"All we like sheep have gone astray."—Isaiah 53: 6.

This seems to be a very polite way of reminding the people that they are dumb. Sheep are regarded as silly. They follow the crowd. It is believed that the most of us go astray this way. The old song said, "Everybody's Doing it, Doing it, Doing it." That is a modern excuse for much of our follies. Dr. William T. Ellis says that it is better to be original in sinning because your judgment tells you to do so, than it is to sin because others do so.

Prayer—Our Father, deliver us from slavishness to the crowd and from blind folly. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"PLAYING JESUS."

"God . . . grant you to be like-minded one toward another according to Christ Jesus."—Rom. 15: 5.

"Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things."—Heb. 8: 5.

We have a sea-going Sunday school on this ship. It consists of three classes: Primaries, Intermediates and adults. Every Sunday afternoon from three thirty to four thirty at sea we are in session. It is one of the most delightful experiences of the week.

Willingly or not, we older ones must "be Jesus" to these little ones. They learn Him from us. You and I must realize this. We represent Christ to others.

Prayer—Our Father, we are awed by the consciousness that we must represent Christ to others. Grant us His spirit to do so. Amen.

SUNDAY.

NO LET UP.

"Go thou and do likewise."—Lk. 10: 37.

Whatever we do or whatever we do not do, we can never escape the responsibility of helpfulness to others. Read this Good Samaritan story again. The great saints of God through the ages have won because they did not let up. Without them today the statement of the Bishop of England, "civilization is not worth saving. Civilization is worse than it was a thousand years ago," would be really true. Christians are the strength of all society and will be the salvation of civilization. You and I are in the ranks and are responsible for our part.

Prayer—O God, Father of us all, make us able to do the work of Jesus Christ in this world. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

GOLDEN JUBILEE SERMON.

By REV. JOHN P. JOCKINSEN.

[This sermon was preached at the First Congregational Church, St. Petersburg, Fla., on December 4, 1938. Editor.]

We begin our thought with the opening verse of the fifty-first chapter of Isaiah, "Look to the rock whence ye were hewn and to the hole of the pit whence ye were digged." Whenever the Hebrew prophet wanted to stir the emotions of his people, arouse their courage and move them to action, he reminded them of their bondage in Egypt and their wandering in the wilderness. The heroic deeds of the fathers always thrilled the Hebrew, awakened him to new loyalty and aroused his courage to service and sacrifice.

The Christian Church has followed the example of the prophet. The author of Hebrews devotes a whole chapter to the heroes of the faith. Memories of the early apostles and martyrs, Peter, James, Paul, and all the rest, have created a spiritual flame. In modern times our own imaginations have been stirred and thrilled by the names of John Finney, Dwight L. Moody, Phillips Brooks, Henry Ward Beecher, S. Parks Cadman, Charles Edward Jefferson, and others. And what should I say more of the great host of missionaries, prophets, teachers, and martyrs of the faith who have been shining lights in the Christian Church this past half century.

And so we look back at the history of our own Church, which was incorporated fifty years ago on December 8. What remarkable changes have taken place! From a few scattering houses in the Big Bayou and Lake Avenue sections we have grown to a city of 50,000 people with approximately an additional 100,000 people in the winter season. Instead of dragging ourselves through the heavy sand for miles, we now come to church in high-powered motor cars over well paved roads. Instead of that tasteless, insipid water, which was peddled around, or drawn from a well a half mile away, we now have cool, wholesome, fresh running water in our homes. Instead of being dependent on a sail boat that sailed to Tampa once or twice a week, or a horse and buggy that took more than half a day to drive through the sand to Clearwater, we now have ships which come into harbor, great highways, bus lines, and railways with their terminals, which bring hundreds of people into our city daily. Even airplanes take our passengers and mail to the ends of the earth. So from a tiny hamlet we have developed into a modern city, dynamic with life and the spirit of progress.

In conjunction with the progress of this community, the Church has grown. Since others have built where I stand, I do not think it immodest to look through the windows of the past and portray the achievements of the past fifty years. Not in vain glory but in gratitude we speak of these accomplishments. As a Church we have not stressed denominationalism. We began as "The United Church of Christ," under which we continued for thirty-five years, and not until our Church began selling bonds did it assume its incorporated name. I wish we might again return to our former name, "The United Church of Christ—Congregational," on this anniversary occasion; for our membership is made up of all classes, types, and conditions of people, and we welcome people of every faith.

What are some of the high lights of this half century of progress of which we may well feel proud?

Growth of the Church.

First of all, there is the growth in the membership of our Church. Fifty years ago on the eighth day of October, twenty-four people met in a narrow-gauge railway coach on the Orange Belt Line. After listening to a sermon by the Rev. David Gillison Watt, the pastor, twenty-four people signed a covenant, organizing the United Church of Christ. Little did they dream that the little church started half a century ago would minister to thousands of people in the years ahead.

In those early days the attendance averaged between twenty-five and fifty a Sunday. But last year our Church stood at the very forefront of the Congregational Churches in America. There is not a church listed in the 1937 Congregational Year Book in Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, or in any of those great Congregational states, whose average morning attendance exceeds ours, which was 794 per Sunday. There are only three Congregational Churches recorded which exceed ours: Plymouth in Seattle, with a membership of 1,900 averaged 1,092; First Congregational Church in Long Beach, California, with a membership of 2,200 averaged 868, and the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles with 2,400 members and a full-time staff of thirty-six paid workers, including four ordained ministers, and having three morning services throughout the year had an average of 1,464. Our Church is to be congratulated on its services to this community.

Consider also the various activities which center in our Church. Last year 624 different services and meetings were held in our church with a total attendance of 99,729 people. Think of the responsibility which this entails, with 28 to 32 meetings a week, upon a limited staff and a group of volunteer workers!

There are very few Congregational Churches in the north which have an evening service. Even Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, so I am told, with one of the loveliest churches to be found anywhere, with a superb organ and choir, has given up his evening service. And yet, from October to May our evening attendance has averaged 457. Would that every church had successful evening and mid-week services! We have reason for deep gratitude for this opportunity of Christian service and we should take courage in trying to undergird this great work in an adequate and effective way.

Then, too, we have witnessed a growth in membership, not altogether commensurate with our attendance, or the growth of this city, but nevertheless a number of which we may well feel proud. Altogether, we have received 1,517 members. The largest number ever received in a single year was 114 in 1926. Dr. Hoyt did a splendid piece of work in building up the quality and character of our membership and received 233 people during his ministry; Dr. Juniper received 791 and Dr. Beale, assisted by Mr. Gedeke, received 142. To make a spiritual home for these people and to nurture their inward lives, as well as to serve other hundreds and thousands of people who gather here, merits our praise and gratitude.

Witness also the evolution of the tiny building in which our people first worshipped to this commodious, lovely, and worshipful church auditorium with one of the finest organs in Florida! Altogether, these properties represent an investment of about a quarter of a million dollars, although reality values have declined

A POST MADRAS CONFERENCE.

Philosophy, University of Shanghai China, on leave of absence to visit America in the interest of the Mission cause. Prof. Hsu spoke on the subject, "What Madras Means to the Christian Movement in China." He said "We are too near the scene of the Madras Conference to describe or to estimate the value of its accomplishments. Time will be required to work out its full meaning, but as time goes on the difficulty to forget will become a problem. The historical perspective must be considered in the light of Oxford, Edinburg, Jerusalem and other such Conferences, of which Madras is but 'One, but is One.' These Conferences are like mile stones and we are to make history under the grace of God." The Church in China has witnessed in the last decade a tremendous opposition, suffering and persecution, especially in Manchuria, but despite the trying circumstances, Dr. Hsu declared the churches in China have made rapid strides during that period.

He called our attention to the fact that the Church of God is not exempt from difficulties. He stated that more recently, educational Institutions had been converted into hospitals, being bombed, along with the hospitals and other institutions, making relief work necessary. He reported more than one thousand students in the University at present. He reported a 23 per cent increase in church membership in China during the last decade. It came, said he, "Because of difficulties." He told how the Chinese dollar is worth now but one-sixth of our American dollar, making the financial difficulty a real problem. One thing of special interest was the charitable way in which Dr. Hsu spoke of the Japanese delegates at Madras. He said a very fine feeling of restraint was manifest, controversial subjects were avoided, but that informal interviews were exchanged between some of the delegates from China and those from Japan. Despite conditions, he said a mystical fellowship prevailed and the years to come would reveal, he hoped, a bond of brotherhood between the two Nations. He gave the following condensed report in a marvelous address before the congregation numbering perhaps more than 500 persons:

First—"We went away with a common Christian faith in the supremacy of God."

Second—"We must serve in a common task under God's grace and power."

Third—"With a re-assured sense of a common bond, fellowship, and brotherhood."

Fourth—"With a common hope" (not dependent upon frail humanity, God's power limitless).

Fifth—"With a common act of dedication."

Time and space forbids more now. I shall be glad to report echoes from the other speakers later.

Dr. Moss stated to the writer that he was on the boat with our Dr. Russell Henry Stafford and Miss Ruth Seabury and would be with Dr. Stafford next week in New York.

Fraternally,
ROBERT A. WHITTEN.

considerably since the church was remodeled and the parish house built, But it is interesting to know that out of their love, the people have contributed to the building and maintenance of this church $576,187 and they have given to local charity $19,333. The largest amount raised in a single year was in 1925 when $79,825 was reported and in 1923, $52,720. We are now trying to redeem some of the bonds sold at that time, and within the past one and one-half years the church has reduced its bonded indebtedness from $83,142.50 to $37,900. We hope some day to wipe out this debt altogether. However, we are grateful for this lovely church building, which has been a spiritual home and a sanctuary of inspiration to multitudes of people.

This church has also been a leader in the religious education of its youth and children. When we deal with life we deal with intangible values which we can neither measure nor weigh. Approximately 2,170 children and 790 youths have been touched, guided, inspired, and influenced for good by this church. Scout troops and kindred organizations are supplementary to the church school and are accomplishing definite results in character building. These youths are now scattered to the four corners of the earth, serving through their various professions and businesses, with some of them in definite Christian service, and I feel that every one is a better citizen because of his contacts with this church.

We have also taken an interest in the larger work of the Kingdom, and have contributed to the missionary work at home and abroad $32,308, besides other local projects which we have aided here in the South.

There is still a deeper element which we are trying to make central in our church: Jesus of Nazareth is here. Here we are trying to think through what His character means for our lives. Through our fellowship and communion we seek to come into contact with the truest, the noblest, the most divine personality the world has ever known. Jesus has been and should continue to be central in our church, in the sermon, in the prayer and in the music.

Through the church we are also, I hope, developing an adequate philosophy of life which makes us say, "Our Father, who art in heaven." Such philosophy has held men steady through days of trial and sorrow. The kingdom of God is in our hearts and in our lives.

Then, too, this church has touched the life of this community. St. Petersburg is a better city because this church has stood on this corner and also where the Post Office now stands for nearly fifty years, and has not only ministered to the spiritual needs of men but has also held aloft the torch of Christian idealism and good Christian citizenship. The city's moral life is cleaner and more wholesome because this church stands here and has tried to minister to the enrichment and deepening of life and character. You, my friends, are the successors to these heroes of the faith, and it is to you they throw the torch to carry forward its light in these darkening days, and make this a spiritual home for yourselves and those who follow us.

The warmth of our fellowship and the cordiality of our friendship are also important. "Love the brotherhood," says Peter. "Love ye one another as I have loved you," says the Master. May this church adopt for its slogan, "Let no man be a stranger here," or as the Apostle Paul says, "Teach everyone, exhort everyone," and bring them into the house of the Lord by the warmth of your fellowship.

We have looked back through the windows of the past fifty years, but we cannot live on the past. However, it ought to inspire us for the present and help us to build for the future. I feel that the ground whereon we are now standing is holy ground. It is for you and me to redeem the time and make our own lives count for God and mankind. Our fathers consecrated themselves; let us consecrate ourselves to the church and to the building of the Kingdom of God. This is the house of the Lord. Here we have seen visions and dreamed dreams. Here new hope has been born in our hearts, new purposes formed and new consecrations made. Here we christened our children, here youth plighted his troth to his beloved, and fathers and mothers gave their allegiance to God. Here in this beautiful sanctuary through reverence, prayer and devotion we come up to the very gates of heaven into the presence of God and with Isaiah we say, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of hosts."

Prayer.

Eternal and Gracious God, we thank Thee for the faith of our fathers, their vision, their hope of an eternal destiny, their love for their children, their expectation of the future and their sacrificial giving. May we, their children, be good soldiers of the cross, and before we fall on sleep do great good, render some real, worth while service and thus bequeath to our children and others who gather a great heritage and faith that shall bless their lives, and make our city a more lovely, holy and Christian place in which to live. We ask in Christ's spirit. Amen.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

When this report through THE CHRISTIAN SUN is read, there will be one more Sunday in the College Period. Has your Sunday school taken an offering for the college? Has your church made its offering for the college? These offerings are asked for by our Convention, and they are counted on your Conference apportionments. In this way we help to support the college that was founded by our fathers and that has been faithful to the ideals of the church for nearly half a century. It is the one institution that makes a definite contribution to the church in every department of its life and work. If we raise our Conference apportionments during this period, our work for the remainder of the year outside of our local needs will be made that much lighter, and we will be encouraged to undertake the next task that is ours.

A larger number of Sunday schools have responded this year than usual. The amounts have not been large, but if all would contribute, the total would be surprising and the college would be greatly encouraged. If you have not sent your offering, won't you please do so that your Sunday school and church may be reported in next week's CHRISTIAN SUN?

The following amounts have been received this week:

HAW RIVER CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The picture above shows the Haw River, N. C., Christian Church building as it appears after being repaired following a fire that destroyed the roof and spoiled much of the furniture last October.

The doors of the church swung open last Sunday morning to welcome a large group who came for the dedicatory service which was in charge of Rev. E. J. Sanderson, pastor. (The morning program is given in detail on the inside pages of this paper.) The church now is very attractive inside. The auditorium is restful and worshipful.

In dedicating the new rug, Pastor Sanderson called attention to the fact that the rug was made of the rugs and old clothes of the church and its members. In like manner as these worn and dirty old things were transformed into a thing of beauty, so human life may be transformed by the thoughts of God.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. Marna S. Poulson, D. D., is now recuperating at his home, 105 Leekie St., Portsmouth, Va., after a serious attack of angina.

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Morgan rejoice in the prospect of living in the new parsonage which Rosemont is now in the process of building for them. The house is to be built of brick veneer. Congratulations to pastor and people.

Congratulations to Pleasant Ridge Christian Church on the fine parsonage which has just been completed there. Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Stevens are enjoying living in their lovely new home, built of brick and located near the church.

The daily newspaper has announced that the North Carolina Rural Church Institute at Duke University will be held this year June 5-10. Our pastors will do well to put this date on their calendars and plan to attend. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell is Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors for the Institute.

Duke University of Durham, N. C., is becoming a center for Christian Church pastors who wish to study. Rev. J. Everette Neese of Henderson, and Rev. S. E. Madren of R. F. D., Henderson, are now students at Duke. They go back and forth three times a week, while they carry their regular church work.

Thirteen active ministers and four others attended the Piedmont Ministerial Association meeting at Elon College on Monday morning of last week. Dr. J. H. Lightbourne of Burlington, N. C., gave a fine discussion of the second chapter of Philippians and Rev. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, N. C., led a discussion on Evangelism. All pastors present reported that their churches are planning for an increase in membership by Easter. The total goals of the churches represented amounts to one hundred and fifty-five new members by Easter.

AT ELON.

After two weeks of much excitement, the students can turn to a more serious line of college activity—books—for within a month our mid-semester tests will be upon us—and how we welcome that week of rest which follows. Spring holidays.

The week beginning the 5th of February was quite a week on the campus. Why? Well, it was "rush week." The Sororities and Fraternities were busy with their parties, teas . . . etc., and then the climax—Saturday night at midnight. . . Oh! . . . "Bid night." The sororities and frats were filled to capacity, and we find a new sorority, Phi Kappa Tau, organized by thirteen girls with the aid of the "Alpha Pi Delta fraternity. (This sorority was discontinued in 1933.) Sunday, February 12, was set aside for these organizations. The fraternities and their sister sororities dined together and attended church on the campus. The sermon was delivered by Millard Stevens, an alumnus of the college.

We were honored to have on our campus Tuesday of last week the members of the Board of Trustees who were in session all day. It was certainly a rainy day for them.

On Thursday, February 16, the Freshmen honored the Sophomores by giving them their annual Valentine Party in the gym. Music was rendered by that ever-going Charlie Hamrick and his swingsters.

We also find the Dramatic Club sponsoring Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset," a play which starred on Broadway for five years. It was highly praised by all who attended—including the Carolina Playmakers from Chapel Hill.

Elon's mighty basketball team played its last home game of the season with High Point College last Saturday night. Elon defeated Appalachian College and Guilford College earlier in the week, but lost to High Point 45-30, thus giving High Point the Conference title.

Well, folks, that's all from the old campus for this time. Until week after next then, good-bye!

EASTERN VIRGINIA ELON ALUMNI MEET.

The 1939 Annual Banquet of the Elon College Eastern Virginia Alumni was held in the Elliot Hotel, Suffolk, Va., on Friday evening, February 17, at 7 o'clock. The banquet hall was decorated with pine and potted plants, and shaded lights.

Mrs. Joshua C. West, of Suffolk, acted as hostess of the occasion; and Mesdames J. P. Cross, H. L. Cross, and J. Lewis Rawles, served as the committee on decorations. The College colors, maroon and gold, were carried out in flowers, while on the speaker's table was a silver bowl of calendulas, carnations and ferns.

At the speaker's table were: Dr.

H. S. Harcastle, president of the club, and Mrs. Harcastle, of Norfolk; President and Mrs. Leon E. Smith, of Elon College, Dr. and Mrs. Sidney B. Hall, and Mr. and Mrs. John T. Kernodle, of Richmond; and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. West and Col. J. E. West, of Suffolk.

President Harcastle presided and acted as toast master. The group joined in singing various college songs, being led by Rev. J. Frank Morgan of Norfolk, and accompanied by Mrs. Russell T. Bradford.

After thanks were returned by Rev. Elwood Jones, of Franklin, a most delightful banquet was served, including turkey and all the fixings that usually accompany it. After the inner man was satisfied, the club went into a short business session. In the absence of Dr. I. W. Johnson, the chairman, Dr. John G. Truitt, read the report of the Committee on Condolence, in which resolutions of respect were offered for Dr. J. E. Rawles, the late president of the General Alumni Association, and most beloved physician of Suffolk; for Mr. A. T. Holland, Trustee of Elon College, and Mrs. Jamie Carr Bowen, who was a former teacher in the music department of Elon. The Secretary-Treasurer made her report. The Nominating Committee, composed of Dr. Darden W. Jones, Mrs. E. B. Bryant and Mr. Vance Vaughan, reported, as follows: For president, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar; for vice-president, Mrs. J. C. West, and for secretary-treasurer, the present incumbent, Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun. The report was adopted.

At the close of the business session, President Leon E. Smith, was introduced, and spoke on the Golden Anniversary of Elon College, which is to be celebrated in 1940. Dr. Smith made a most impressive appeal for the college, which was well received.

The main speaker of the evening, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was then introduced. Dr. Hall spoke most impressively, using as his subject, "The Most Pressing Need of Today." Dr. Hall said that there was need for art, music, science, invention, production, distribution, and certainly for education; but he stressed the fact that the pressing need of the present was an absolute faith in the supremacy of God, and the building of character that cannot be impeached.

At the conclusion of Dr. Hall's address the Club sang, "Here's to Dear Old Elon," and was then dismissed with prayer by Rev. F. C. Lester.

ANNIE STALEY CALHOUN.

ELON ALUMNI MEET.

The Mid-Winter Session of the Elon College Alumni Association met at Elon on Saturday afternoon, February 11, with Prof. L. J. Perry of Reidsville, presiding. Among the speakers were Miss Margaret Rowland of Greensboro; Mr. C. G. Elder of Burlington; and President L. E. Smith.

The Eastern Virginia Alumni Club met in Suffolk on Friday evening, February 17. Dr. S. B. Hall, Superintendent of Public Instruction for the state of Virginia, gave the principal address. President L. E. Smith brought greetings from the college. Dr. H. S. Harcastle, presided and acted as toastmaster. Rev. J. F. Morgan was the song leader and Mrs. Russell T. Bradford presided at the piano. Dr. J. G. Truitt had written a song for the occasion, which was sung by Jimmie Darden, a Suffolk High School student. Officers for the coming year are: Rev. J. H. Dollar, President; Mrs. J. C. West, Vice-President; Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, Secretary and Treasurer.

The Alamance County Alumni Club will meet at Burlington, N. C., at the Alamance Hotel on Tuesday evening, February 28. Dr. W. H. Boone, of Durham, a former president of the Alumni Association, will be the principal speaker. A large attendance of graduates, former students, and friends of Elon is expected for this meeting.

EASTERN VIRGINIA MISSION RALLIES.

The Missionary Rallies of our Eastern Virginia Conference are to be held at the following dates and places: March 15, Norfolk District, Rosemont Church; March 16, Nausemond and Suffolk District, Cypress Chapel Church; March 17, Waverly District, New Lebanon Church.

Wonderful to say, Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, D. D., world traveler and one of the most inspiring missionary speakers of our day is to deliver the chief address at each of these three Rallies. Surely the women and people of our Eastern Virginia Conference have something to look forward to, and these Rallies should this year attract not only the women of the churches in the districts, but others as well. Dr. Eddy may always be counted on to inspire his audience and instruct them with a great message. We most heartily congratulate the good women of Eastern Virginia in securing the services of this distinguished man of God.

A LENTEN DEVOTION.

"Lent is the Christian period of self-denial," states a recent communication from the Church Committee for China Relief of 105 East 22nd Street, New York City. "Why not make your self-denial count by helping save a million babies, boys and girls, men and women in China—who need food, clothing, medical attention, shelter, and help to become self-supporting again?" the committee's statement adds. "Enlist your family, friends, church school classes, young people's groups, women's and men's organizations in this Christ-like ministry."

Children — Young People — Adults

A DIME A DAY
DURING LENT

February 22 to April 9
WILL SAVE ONE LIFE IN CHINA

From MAY UNTIL SEPTEMBER
HARVEST

HOW MANY LIVES WILL YOU SAVE?

Time is short and the need is great in China. Three cents a day will support a life in China. And for just one dime a day during the forty-five days of Lent from February 22, to April 9, a small sacrificial contribution that will bear rich rewards in satisfaction and blessing, you can help to make the difference between life and death for a man, woman, or child in war-stricken China, from now until the September harvest. Can you think of a better or more soul-satisfying investment of your dime?

In making this Lenten appeal to the press and public, the Church Committee for China Relief called attention to their recognition of the fact that many churches and entire denominations make use of Lent annually for benevolence offerings of various kinds. The committee states that the "Dime - A - Day Lenten appeal for China was made as a suggestion to individuals and to churches, where such a humanitarian appeal could be made without interference with other stated offering, or, if possible, in addition to them. Churches and individuals are urged to send for the Lenten labels, "Save a Life" envelopes, and other helpful literature.

One million American friends to save the lives of at least one million Chinese civilian victims of war, famine, and flood, is the present goal of the Church Committee for China Relief. Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield is the representative of Congregational and Christian Churches on this committee.

Relief work in China by this organization is non-sectarian and non-political. Relief funds in China are distributed by the American Advisory Committee in Shanghai, an experienced and able group of American business men and missionary executives resident in Shanghai, serving without compensation, and making allocations to relief organizations and union committees in all parts of China where need exists and where relief can be administered dependably. Relief is administered by Chinese and foreigners, working under the direction of the local committees. Most of this work is done by missionaries, Protestant and Catholic, of many countries, assisted by their Christian Chinese associates, but relief is administered on the basis of need, without regard to religious beliefs. Their general policy is first to provide the required minimum for existence in food, shelter, clothing, and medical care. As soon as possible those receiving relief are encouraged to resume self-support and, where necessary, are taught a simple trade or given a few dollars' worth of goods as capital.

The work of the Church Committee for China Relief is heartily approved by the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches and any response to this appeal will be appreciated.

"FORTY DAYS WITH THE MASTER."

Rev. John H. Knight, pastor of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., began on February 19, a series of Lenten Sermons entitled "Forty Days With the Master." The sermons are based on events in the life of Christ leading up to the Crucifixion and Resurrection. The sermons are announced as follows:

February 19—"The Christian Year"—(Ecd. 3:1).

February 26—"What Does Lent Mean?"—(Jas. 4:8).

March 5—"The Forty Days' Wilderness Fast"—(Matt. 4:1).

March 12—"Facing the Cross"—(Luke 9:51).

March 19—"The Sinlessness of Jesus"—(John 8:46).

March 26—PASSION SUNDAY—"The Christ of Gethsemane"—Isaiah 53:3).

April 2—PALM SUNDAY—"Christ the King"—(Luke 19:38).

April 9—EASTER DAY—"The Empty Tomb"—(Matt. 28:6).

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

LAST CALL FOR THE ELON OFFERING.

Representatives of Congregational and Christian Churches in the Carolinas and Virginia, sitting as a Southern Convention, told Elon College that it might expect to receive at least $10,000 annually from these churches. Last year the churches failed by $3,000 to make good on this promise. The Southern Association of Colleges says that if Elon is to have proper accreditation the Convention's pledge should be met in full.

During January and February the college presents its claim to the churches and asks for a response. Quite a number of churches have received an offering, and others have sent money from their regular budget. Next Sunday is the last opportunity for the churches to make this special offering, if they make it within the College Period as outlined by the Convention. It is greatly to be hoped that every church will send in some contribution for the college by the first of March. This will mean more than words can tell. All pastors and the leaders of all churches are asked to consider seriously this important matter. The college will serve on the basis of the contributions from the churches.

TRAINING CHILDREN FOR THE CHURCH.

Reports from Germany indicate that children there are trained for the State. They are prepared for war. Mr. Hitler has said that the young people of Germany are not free and never will be. They are to take orders from and serve the State, at whatever sacrifice it may mean to them.

In America we believe in training, but we also believe in freedom. Our training in the home, public schools, and churches is expected to prepare people for intelligent choices which they are at liberty to make according to their best judgment.

Pastors and Sunday school teachers, in cooperation with parents, are expected to train children so they can become intelligent members of the Church. The period leading up to Easter is the time used by most churches for this special emphasis. It is a good time for it. We are thinking about the last days of the life of Jesus; about his cross, his resurrection, and the new life which followed. It is the time when he made his decision—a decision that challenges the rest of us to decide what our attitude shall be. Out of his choice of death came new life, and out of our decision to follow the Master comes new life to us.

Pastors and Sunday school workers should consider it their highest joy to train children for the Church which was established by Jesus of Nazareth. Boys and girls have to learn what it means to be a member of the Church. Each week from now until Easter the pastor may well join his teachers in giving to the children of proper age the necessary information, together with a definite challenge for a decision, which will make it possible for these boys and girls to become members of our churches at Easter—and members that will bring credit to those who have trained them and the Church of which they become a part. Materials for the pastor's class can be secured either from the Commission on Evangelism, New York, or the Board of Christian Education, Elon College. Parents will do well to insist on the pastor taking this special and additional labor so the children will be ready intelligently to accept the responsibilities of church membership at the time when the whole world rejoices at the Resurrection.

THE WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

According to a custom of many years, people in all branches of the Christian Church will meet in their places of worship on Friday of this week to join in prayer. It is called the World Day of Prayer. If you join in such a gathering, or if alone you lift up your heart in prayer to God, on that day you can be assured that you are meeting with people around the world at the throne of Grace in prayer for the needs of the world in which we live.

There certainly is need for prayer this year. Some countries are being destroyed by war. Leaders in other countries are making frantic preparations for what likely be another world war, worse, by far, than the one which some of us remember with much sorrow. Mission boards are struggling desperately to sustain their work around the world. Multitudes of people who want to work can find no job. The Jewish people, who gave us our religion, are being driven from their homes with no place to go. There is tremendous need for the Grace of God in the life of our day. This Divine Grace can best be released through the processes of prayer, with the attendant humiliation of spirit which is necessary for sincere prayer.

Whether you go to church service or not on Friday of this week, will you please join with your Christian friends around the world in praying for a new-birth of intelligence, righteousness, and peace.

A NEW POPE.

At this writing leaders of Catholic Churches around the world are gathering in Rome to elect a new Pope of the Roman Catholic Church. Their great leader, Pope Pius, has recently passed away and a new head for the Church must be selected.

Since there are more members of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States than the total membership of the seven largest Protestant denominations, it will not be surprising if the American delegation to Rome is very influential in selecting the next head of the Roman Church. Pope Pius is said to have suggested that the next Pope should be an American. Christians around the world will watch with interest the election of this Church leader and will doubtless pray to the Christ, the great Head of all the Churches, for the selection of a proper leader to direct the affairs of this branch of His earthly Church.

By MRS. R. E. LEWIS.

In Leviticus, 10th chapter, 9th verse, we have this command, “Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy son with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die; it shall be a statute forever throughout your generations.”

In Proverbs, 23rd chapter, verses 29-32, we read, “Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes?”

“They that tarry at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine.

“Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright.

“At last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.”

The evil of drinking liquor has been a problem almost ever since the beginning of time. The people of Old Testament times were admonished to be temperate, sober, and total abstainers, and were told what would happen to them if they heeded not these warnings and commands.

Paul in his letters to Titus in the New Testament days especially admonished the aged men to be sober and the young men to be sober-minded; so this is really an old problem.

Nations have fallen, homes wrecked, lives destroyed, souls lost as the result of the abuse of alcohol.

Many years ago the Christian women of our land became aroused at the evil conditions existing and so banded themselves together to fight for God and home and native land and called themselves the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. These women have never faltered; they are increasing in numbers and Christian influence.

In 1883 Frances E. Willard, president of the National W. C. T. U., had a vision. For years she had seen the need in the U. S. for this organization of consecrated Christian women who were teaching by precept and example the ideals of Christian living and total abstinence. She knew that if such an organization was good for the U. S., it would be good for the world. She said, “But for the intervention of the sea, the shores of the Far East would be part and parcel of our land. We are one world of tempted humanity. We must declare as our watchword, ‘The whole world is my parish and to do good my religion.’”

As a result of this vision the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organized. From the beginning the idea was total abstinence as a personal responsibility, and again in the words of Miss Willard we find this expression: “Temperance is moderation in the use of things harmless and total abstinence from things that are harmful.”

There are two schools of thought on the subject of alcohol. Both condemn its abuse. One group supports total abstinence and the other moderation. The total abstinence group finds in the use of alcohol as a beverage the way to its abuse. The others counsel the use of alcohol in moderation, but take no account of the nature of alcohol and of the fact that the use is the forerunner of the abuse.

Not every one who is a moderate drinker drinks to excess, but some do, and the evidence is conclusive that moderate drinking contributes to drunkenness and the degeneracy which follows as surely as night follows day.

The women of fifty-three countries realize that something must be done to save men and women, yes, boys and girls from self-destruction through the abuse of alcohol; so this world band of women is working toward that glad day when no distillery, no saloon shall under God's heaven make it hard for any human being to develop the Kingdom of God within himself.

We hang our heads in shame when we realize that Uncle Sam is in the liquor business. Where were all the Christian people on that day of days when we were to cast our vote either for God or the Devil; a dry or a wet nation? If the Christian people had not been asleep, careless, indifferent, the pages in our history would tell a different story.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes in bringing greetings from the churches to the World's W. C. T. U. Convention recently said, “The men who told us that the saloon must not come back are now either utterly silent or are hiding themselves behind general statements made purposely vague as a mechanism of escape.”

The alcohol problem is world wide. The effects of alcoholic beverages are the same everywhere. International news service carried the story of Repeal around the world. Newspapers advertising freely circulated among nations proclaims the so-called virtues of every kind of liquor. The financial returns to the trade and the money turned into the treasuries to be added to the budget blind the public to the consequences of alcoholic beverages.

The fallacies of moderation as a cure for excess must be exposed. What alcohol is and what it does has been proved by science.

We are all disturbed over the increase of crime, especially, among the youth. Crime commissions are appointed to investigate and bring in long reports. Hear what one judge of the General Sessions in New York City says after fourteen years hearing only felony cases: “In fully 90% of the cases that came before me in that time, the crime would not have been committed but for the use of alcohol—not that in all those cases the defendant was under the influence of liquor, but that at some point in the commission of it for use of liquor was a deciding factor.”

Dr. Herman A. Heise, of Milwaukee, says, “The drinking and drunken driver is responsible for at least 50% of the automobile accidents. Those who use it, who promote its sale, and who are financially interested, all contribute to its evil effects.

“It matters not that the driver of an automobile who has been drinking thinks he can drive better after a social glass or two; no matter what amount was taken, even the fifth of a second in responding to a signal will cause or advert an accident.”

“The drinking driver never thinks, The thinking driver never drinks.”

For decades before National Prohibition in the U. S., employers of labor in many lines discriminated against those who drank. This particularly true of our railroads.

A recent survey made with respect to the attitude of air transport lines showed that all the companies seem to require total abstinence of pilots while on duty and also for at least twenty-four hours immediately preceding scheduled trips. Most of them specify that they do not serve liquors on planes to passengers.

Since 1920 Senator Morris Shepard, whom we like to call the Father of Prohibition, has delivered a yearly address in the U. S. Senate on January 16, the date on which prohibition became operative in the U. S. The 17th address in which he cited many indictments against beverage alcohol was given this year. In a recent address he said, “As to beverage alcohol, a terrible indictment stands against it in every country on the globe. Among almost every people it is one of the principal sources of the murders, the suicides, the debaucheries of body and of mind. Every moment it destroys some and breaks

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Suffolk Christian Church sustained a great loss in the death of Deacon Abram Thomas Holland, on Friday, February 10, 1939. He was born in Nansemond County, Va., May 1, 1860, the son of the late Edward and Martha Parker Holland. He and Miss Annie Cobb of Southampton County, Va., were married in July, 1881. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Cobb Holland; four daughters: Mrs. Mamie H. Leathers, Mrs. Goldie H. Britt, Mrs. Virgie H. McClenny and Miss Thomas Holland, all of Suffolk, Va.; three grandchildren: Thomas Holland Britt, Misses Anne and Virginia McClenny, and several nephews and nieces.

The funeral service was conducted in the Suffolk Christian Church by Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor, assisted by Revs. H. S. Hardeastle, I. W. Johnson and Herbert N. Tucker. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Holland served as Supervisor in Nansemond County and as a member of the City Council of Suffolk. For a few years after his marriage he lived on a farm where he became successful in his community. He became interested in buying and selling peanuts and after a few years moved to Holland where he was the General Manager of the Holland and Lee Company. At that time he was a member of Holy Neck Christian Church. The development of the Holland and Lee Company induced him later to move to Suffolk where he continued as head of that Company and was also associated with the Suffolk Peanut Company. He was regarded by all leaders in the Peanut Industry as a man of excellent business judgment. His advice was sought by many people. He was successful in his chosen field.

Space will not permit a full account of his active life. The church paper is more directly interested in some account of his service as a member of the church. That would make an interesting story. In Holy Neck Christian Church and the Suffolk Christian Church he served as a beloved deacon for a number of years. He was modest and usually avoided entering into the public discussions in the church meetings. But he was faithful in attendance and loyal in his support of his local church. And his life was so sincere and devoted that no one questioned his integrity. He was honest in his dealings with his fellowman. He sought to do right in religion as well as in business.

He served as an honored trustee of Elon College for a number of years. When his health failed several years ago he retired from that position. He was a loyal supporter of Elon College not only by substantial financial gifts, but by sending his daughters there for their collegiate education. He was also a loyal supporter of the Christian Orphanage. Every Department of the denomination, of which he was a member, found a faithful supporter in this devoted man of God.

Release came to him after months of illness. He was prepared to go. His life had been filled with consecrated living and useful service. His Christian character withstood all the tests of modern business temptations. He conducted his business on sound principles of justice. He lived his life on a high plane above suspicion. He was a model of sincerity and integrity. His life was above reproach. Simple in his faith, quiet and unassuming in his manner, he made an impression upon his friends and associates. His life speaks for itself, in its message of peace and goodwill.

ELON COLLEGE CONTINUES.

Below is the reprint of an article by Col. J. E. West, of Suffolk, Va., which appeared in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, July 20, 1883, six years before the founding of Elon College. In this article is given an inspiring vision of what an educational institution would mean to the Christian Church in the future. It is a magnificent appeal to the constituency of the Christian Church to enter the field of higher education that the church might have a trained leadership for both pulpit and pew and thereby be able to cope favorably with other denominations. Such achievements would add significance to the broad position taken by the Christian Church and would further exemplify the name Christian as scriptural and sufficient for the followers of Christ.

The college was located at Mill Point, now Elon College, and has by the support of the church and friends experienced commendable growth. Elon College had her needs. She has them now. If the present constituency of the college had the same vision, the same devotion, the same willingness to sacrifice, and the same spirit of cooperation, we could now clear the college of its debts much more easily than the church at that time founded the college. I hope that the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will take time to read Col. West's letter. I think it is getting time for him to write another letter regarding the present and future of the church as related to the college.

July 20, 1883—Newspaper Article:

In surveying the Southern States, we find that nearly all denominations except ours have erected colleges. The question naturally arises: Why have the Christians not established some institution of equal grade? Our people say that they are too poor. Has not God in His goodness bestowed blessings upon us equal to those of other denominations? Certainly He has. Then, the excuse is not a valid one. When Bro. Long visits you, do not detain him long, as he has a large field to canvass, remembering that all you receive comes from God.

Brethren, do not hesitate to take stock, fearing that it will not be situated in your state, county or community. Remember it is for the advancement of the Christian Church and that the college will be situated in a place convenient and accessible from all points in the bounds of the General Christian Convention.

It will be an advertisement for us as a people.

We need an educated ministry; we need ministers who can plant our banner in every land, who can hold up the gospel in its true light, who can cope with their adversaries. Nations are judged by their representatives or ambassadors. So it is with churches. Therefore, our divines should be equal to those of other churches, or else our banner will never be planted in every place, which our Name demands. For we believe that if ever the denominations of earth shall be united, they will wear the name of Christian.

We desire:

That party names no more
The Christian world o'erspread,
Gentiles and Jew, and bond and free,
Be one in Christ their head.

If a person is gifted with the eloquence of Demosthenes, he cannot speak unless he has something to say. Then, the preacher cannot expound the gospel unless he understands it.

Our laity ought to be educated. The preachers will not be able to accomplish much without the assistance of the laymen. We wish our laymen to take an active part in all the affairs of the church, and especially in educational affairs; for they are expected to endow and support institutions of this kind.

Our children should be sent to schools of our own denominations. We have now some good high schools in our limits; but anyone can evidently see the necessity of a college. If a person attends a church regularly, he becomes somewhat attached to it. So that when our children go to college, there being no church of their choice convenient, they wander off, as it were, from the Christian Church, and conclude that it does not matter to which denomination they belong. No doubt some men are led off from our church while at college.

May God speed the day when an educational edifice shall be erected, whose spire shall tip the rainbows of the heavens, and shed its brilliancy in the benighted bosom of the world; and then the Christian Church will have begun a new era.

CHARGE.

MADE TO REV. CARL R. KEY, AT THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, TORRINGTON, CONNECTICUT.
Service of Recognition.
January 8, 1939.

Carl Key, this is my first opportunity to give a charge to another minister. I have been charged and recharged and almost discharged by ministers and laymen alike, and now I am the sophomore who would make sure that the freshman pays due attention. I am one of the newly rich about to waste my substance; I am an irresponsible steward of unaccustomed power; and so, Mr. Key, you are in danger. One who has always been on the receiving end of advice leaps now at the chance of giving it.

I understand that you intend to continue your academic studies while serving this church. Do you know, sir, that you attempt the impossible? God help you to remember, however, that your church comes first! One thing above all others you will not neglect: You will visit your people faithfully, and seeing more people than books, you will learn things not known in academic walls. You will stand not minutes but hours by the bed of sick, helpless, yet helpful still. You will live where your people live, stopping long enough for a cup of tea, listening to the accumulated grievances of unforgiving souls, and hearing carefully concealed slander intended to set you straight. These things you will hear, but never know. You will visit first and repeatedly those on the outside of your fellowship, those whose hearts are cold, and whose minds are filled with bitterness. Others have despaired of these people, but you will not, even as Jesus did not, for you are God's man in this community. And as you are thus a Doctor of Humanity, Carl Key, you will also become a Doctor of Philosophy, for through experience you will have heard "the reproof of life," and will have become wise.

The charge must go on! By all the saints, sir, you will answer your mail promptly. You will even read your second-class mail, for you will want your people to read your church bulletins. Furthermore, you are not a minister who leaves all the telephoning and letter writing to his wife. You will remember that you need more social graces than most men, for you have more social responsibilities. You will be at ease anywhere. You will know your way about. You will learn not to approach small babies too quickly; you will play children's games on your hands and knees; you will know when a boy is a boy and when to treat him as a man; you will fathom the hopes and dreams of the girl who tells you that you are to be her minister when she is married; you will be the invaluable adviser in the establishment of Christian homes without number; men will call you "a regular fellow" and will even venture their jokes in your presence; the Ladies Missionary Society will brighten up at your arrival; you will be all things to all people, so that grandmother and grandchild alike will waddle to the front door and cry out gladly at your coming, "The minister is here," and even mother will be glad to get up from her nap. And now, my friend, when you become too stiff and too busy to do these things, I shall be the first to ask a pension for you, and will, personally, buy you a fishing pole so that you can sit by a quiet lake, for you will no longer be a worthy fisher of men in a turbulent world.

Friend and fellow-minister, you serve not only the church here in this community but a continuous enterprise more than nineteen hundred years old, the greatest institution on earth. You will be counted a faithful supporter of every denominational and inter-church effort, and your interest will be as wide as the Kingdom of God in the world. How can you do all these things? Only by the grace of God, sir, can man do anything.

Full of this grace and sustained by a deep love for your people you will be able, Carl Key, first to live the pioneering faith of Jesus Christ, and then to preach it. Thus you will do what I have not done in making this Charge. I have not lived these things which I have said. When my wife and mother, the two who know me best, heard that I was to say some of these things, they said, "We want to be there to hear you say them." You see, they knew that I was speaking not only to you, my friend, but to my own soul as well. At least one of us needed this Charge desperately. God help us both to live by it.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

A VISION WORTHWHILE.

It is well worth all the effort made and all the money spent for missions to get a vision, inadequate and blurred as it may seem, of the world-wide work of the church. "Where there is no vision," says the Word, "the people perish." That which gives life, power and growth to the church is the magnitude of its task and the real part it is playing in the world drama of activity and achievement. My little effort isn't much. Your little effort isn't much. However, your little effort with my little effort as co-workers together with Christ in building His Church inspires both of us to a lively hope in Him and in our work through the church for Him. Every missionary-minded church and person realizes full well that they are a part, a vital part of an enterprise that is changing the world, making it a better place in which to live, and making the kingdoms and the powers, the nations and the peoples of this earth the kingdom of heaven, whose King and power is the Son of God. "The light that shines furthest from home, shines brightest at home." On this account every missionary church and society with true missionary zeal are always found to be ready helpers to all the benevolences and needs of communities of which they are a part. Only the non-missionary church turns a blind eye and a deaf ear to the call of the world, and desires to be left alone to go its own way, its own way being that of the world, confining its efforts and benevolences to home and community needs and enterprises. Only as a church or a denomination discovers and brings home to its own heart the salient fact that the world is its field does it sow the seeds and give the promise of growth and power. Only the missionary church grows and goes and glows and sheds its beams of light and life in its own community and unto the uttermost parts. After all Christ is building His church and we are only co-workers together with Him and as we follow His leadership and adopt His program and obey His commands can we hope to have a growing church and enjoy the light and the life of a world-wide vision.

Our report for this week, to say the least, is not very encouraging. We show our real love for the church and for Him, who is building the church, by what we do for missions. His last and most emphatic command was that we be missionary and the church grows only as it obeys that command. We need not wonder, therefore, that our church grows slowly, or does not grow at all, when we look at what we do for missions. There is no surer index of what a church is doing, or a truer sign of progress, or the lack of it, than its offerings and work for missions. We are grateful for every dollar contributed to missions because we know that the missionary offering is a sign of real life and real love and devotion for our Lord, who is Himself the Builder of the church and the founder of missions.

COMES A MESSAGE FROM MADRAS.

[Our Executive Secretary, Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, returning from the World Christian Conference at Madras, India, writes us the following exceedingly interesting letter, which we wish to share with all "Christian Sun" readers. J. O. A.]

S. S. Conte Rosso,

The Red Sea,

Sunday, January 22, 1939.

Dear Friend:

I have just come from our morning service of worship and Communion. Bishop Hobson of Cincinnati, one of the delegates to the Madras Conference, two days ago suggested that we have such a service this morning, and invited Rev. Ronald Rees of China and myself to take part with him.

There are a number of Madras delegates and friends returning either to England or to America on this ship which goes as far as Venice. They are, Jack McMichael, a student from Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Hobson, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Davis, Rev. Ronald Rees, a secretary of the National Christian Council of China; Mr. P. C. Hsu of China; Mrs. Himmelschwand, a Swedish missionary from India. These, together with a number of other friends, made up our group who gathered for worship at 8 o'clock. Bishop Hobson very beautifully led the Communion Service. He is a staunch believer in Christian Unity and feels that inter-communion helps toward the realization of such unity.

You will think it entirely natural for me to summon you to prayer for the follow-up of the Madras Conference. My last letter was written on the eve of that gathering. I cannot begin to put into this letter all that I feel as to the significance and possible results of the meeting lasting seventeen days in such inspiring surroundings and under such thrilling circumstances. Let me say here that I feel very deeply that God can use with mighty effect for lasting good such delegates as knew their complete devotion to His will in life and service. It was a remarkable experience of fellowship (470 delegates from 60 or more nations), a thrilling glimpse of the Church Universal, a great opportunity for unhurried conference on important themes, and an unparalleled occasion for re-establishing faith and courage in the face of current denials and challenges. After all, it was not so much in what was said, as in what was experienced that the significance of the meeting will be found to lie. And yet, I hope you will secure the two little volumes of description and findings soon to be published. (They may be secured either from Dr. A. L. Warnshuis, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., or Rev. Wm. Paton, 2 Eaton Gate, Edinburg House, London.) These preliminary reports will be followed by seven or eight volumes which will aim to be a complete record of important addresses and discussions.

I would therefore lay on your hearts and minds specifically in connection with the follow-up of the Madras meeting the following objects for prayer:

1. Pray for the delegates as they return to their different tasks that they may reflect the radiance of reaffirmed faith, new courage, and wider friendships.

2. Pray for the national Christians among the delegates (they made up somewhat over one-half of all present) that they may be true to their new sense of the world-wide fellowship of the Christian Community.

3. Pray for the delegates from Europe and America that they may share with their great groups of Christian people their "new sense of mission" as Christian people in our modern secular world.

4. Pray for our American Board group who were present at Madras. Pray that they may each one be an anointed messenger of good tidings, able to enlist and mobilize new strength and wisdom for the overseas work of our Congregational and Christian Churches.

5. Pray for the efforts to be put forth interdenominationally in the United States and Canada to interpret the significance of the World Christian Movement symbolized by the Madras meeting.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

EMILY CARLETON LESTER, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

DEEPER LOYALTIES.

In our better moments, we still have visions of perfection, even in this somewhat matter-of-fact age! Occasionally, such a dream grows unthwarted to the point where we have an urge that's keen enough to set our pens in motion—for better or worse, we know not. But at least, there is a shallow surge of satisfaction that we have, for the moment, done our best; and there is a great hope that our own deep enthusiasm may be shared by others who can further such an ideal with their constructive ideas and efforts.

At this season we can only wonder just how devout we are as followers of the Christ. During the greatest weeks in the year on our Church calendar, how loyal are we to the ideals which form the basis of our living? If we are weak then, how loyal are we during the lesser days?

The North Carolina-Virginia Department of Personal Religious Living is rather concerned over the comparative laxity of some of our Protestant Churches in the observance of the Lenten Season. This concern is rooted primarily in the realization of what our unwavering devotion—even during these days—would do towards the building of a new world. It is our earnest desire that you will seek to make your own Christian life greater during the weeks between February 22 and Easter Sunday. In the strength of this desire, we have sent to every minister in this Conference booklets for his young people which contain a week of daily meditations. This devotional material was selected with great care, and with the belief that you might profit by a change from your routine devotions.

As you continue a morning meditation of your own choosing throughout the remaining weeks of the Lenten Season, a thought on the separate parts of our Pilgrim Fellowship Statement of Purpose will be presented briefly on the Young People's Page of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We are setting aside Thursday nights before retiring for the consideration of this thought; and we would be glad if you could arrange some such definite schedule. For as we grow in understanding we will be better able to share the joy of our Christian fellowship.

At this Lenten Season you have the very best wishes of your Executive Committee in the quest of making your life more abundant as you surrender it more fully to the Master.

FRANCES FOSTER, Sup't,
Personal Religious Living,
N. C. & Va. Pilgrim Fellowship.

FOR YOU.

As stated above, each week during Lent you will find material provided for a period of mediation. We urge you to set aside some period each day when you will draw apart from the ordinary round of your busy life and

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

Father, we would have our lives completely rooted in Thy love, for we have seen in the life of Thy Son the abundance of such a life. Even as He did, we would give our lives whole-heartedly to Thy service. URBAN AMERICA—A NEW FRONTIER.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MARCH 5, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Genesis 18: 20-33;
19: 24, 25.

(A CONSECRATION MEETING.)

At least fifty per cent of the American people live in urban centers. Some of the greatest powers of the country are controlled by influence which have their centers in urban civilization. The topics for the next two meetings will give us an opportunity to discover places for real service in both urban and rural America.

Make a poster representing the city sky-scrapers with a cross hanging above it. Below this print: "Where Can the Cross Find a Way to the Heart of the City? Come to Christian Endeavor Tonight!"

The members of the society should select some needy place in a nearby urban center and make a practical application of the discussion brought out in the meeting.

Points for Discussion—

1. Home life in urban centers. Upon investigation one will discover that interests outside the home separate the members of the family. Children often are left to themselves to stroll about the streets, or be cared for by servants while the mother attends to her society affairs. Motherly care is neglected.

2. The social life of urban centers becomes cold, formal and selfish. Close friendships are not formed with next door neighbors. Clubs, card parties, dance halls, etc., afford contacts for the social world. Those of "the gang" are best known to us.

3. Amusements of urban life are furnished by persons and groups who have only their own commercial gains at heart. Punch boards, slot machines, and "jack pot" devices are popular and afford a great interest to "suckers" and others who are being misled. Young people should provide for themselves wholesome recreation and amusements rather than pay out large amounts of money to a commercial concern as is the present custom. Money thus spent may be used to raise the standards of living, to promote the interest of the Church,

PETER IN SAMARIA.

LESSON IX—FEBRUARY 26, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.—Isaiah 55:1.

LESSON: Acts 8:4-25.

God Works in Mysterious Ways.

Jesus had said that the disciples were to preach the gospel in Jerusalem and in Judea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. It was literally fulfilled. But it took a persecution to get the movement out of Jerusalem. "At that time there was a great persecution against the Church which was at Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria." God works in mysterious and devious ways to fulfill his purposes. He did not, of course, send the persecution, but He did use it. One wonders how long the Christian movement would have been local had it not been for persecution. Perhaps it is going to take the fires of persecution again to kindle the fire of missionary zeal in the modern church.

A Layman's Movement.

Christianity began its larger ministry as a layman's movement. "They were all scattered abroad . . . except the apostles." Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." It was the laymen who went everywhere preaching the word. They did not do formal preaching. They probably could not do it. But they had had an experience of Christ and they wanted to share it with others. There is no eloquence to be compared with the eloquence of Christian experience. Even the humblest man can warm the hearts of others if he has had a heart-warming experience himself. To be sure this does not mean that a man ought not to try to put his message in an acceptable form. But it does mean that the message is the essential thing. Beauty of diction is no substitute for reality of experience. The modern church is moving in the right direction when it sets its laymen and laywomen to the task of evangelization.

One Fire — Many Fires.

There had been one large fire in Jerusalem. But when the persecution arose and the followers of Jesus were scattered there were a hundred fires. Everywhere these folks went they started another fire. A service of worship ought to do that. The minister himself ought to be on fire so that he can set others on fire to go out to start fires wherever they are.

Across the Barriers of Race Prejudice.

"Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them." Jews ordinarily had no dealings with the Samaritans. Indeed a Jew felt himself defiled if he came in contact with a Samaritan, or even went through Samaria. But in Christ Jesus there is no Jew or Samaritan. The Holy Spirit breaks over the false barriers of race. When He comes into the heart in His fullness there is no room for race prejudice. Philip went to preach Christ to Samaritans. From the beginning the servants of Christ have gone across all racial lines in ministering to others in His name.

Great Joy in the City.

"And there was great joy in that city." Philip preached Christ to the people, God moved upon the hearts of the people so that they heeded unto his preaching, and things happened. Unclean spirits were driven out of people, the lame, and the palsied were made whole. Naturally there was great joy. What, after all, can bring more joy to a city than a great regenerating revival. Think of the joy that comes to the individual heart, into the home, into the church, and into the community when folks really "get religion."

Profession Without Possession.

Among those who professed to believe was one Simon, a kind of charlatan, one who had wielded his occult powers over the people, and who had them under a spell. He, too, became a believer. He professed, but he did not possess. Like so many people since that day, he did not have a genuine, transforming experience. The man may have been sincere. He got religion in a sense, but religion did not get him. Reformation is good, but it is no substitute for regeneration. People may have a belief about the power of a new faith, but not an acceptance of its holiness. And this in spite of the fact that one has been baptized. Baptism in itself is no means of securing remission of sins, unless one has been baptized by the Holy Spirit.

Trying to Buy the Unbuyable.

"Simon offered them money, saying, Give me this power that on whomsoever I lay my hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost." Simon thought that the power to do things in the spiritual realm could be bought with money. But it is not for sale at any price of gold. It is, of course, only one of the many things that cannot be bought for money. God does give the Holy Spirit to His children, but it is given to those who meet the divine condition. There are many people today who think that they can buy the things of the Spirit. If one's heart is not right with God, there will be no Holy Spirit in the heart, for the Holy Spirit is the spirit of holiness, and He will not dwell where there is no holiness.

Plain Speech.

There was a time when Simon Peter was a coward; even a little maid caused him to deny his Lord. But the Holy Spirit had come in fullness into his heart, and he was not afraid of the face of man now. Thus he denounced Simon the sorcerer soundly. He warned him of the fate that awaited him unless he had a change of heart. Ministers and Sunday school teachers should not be afraid to speak the truth. But the truth can be spoken in love, even when spoken boldly.

Frightened, But Not Penitent.

"Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me." He was not disturbed about the heinousness of his sin; he was concerned only with escaping judgment or penalty. Alas, that this is so often the case with all of us. Much of our penitence is based on fear and not on shame for sin.

or to supplement funds needed by charitable institutions.

4. Business life needs the inspiration of Christian practices. "Cut-throat" competitors should get out of business. "To live and let live" should be the motto of business.

5. The Church of the urban center has a task. It should employ the first interest of life. Its purpose is to make life new and fill the hearts of men with the spirit of brotherly love. Support its program of work. Be loyal to Christ.

S. E. M.

"One result of the unbelief of our day is the tragedy of trying to live a maximum life on a minimum faith. How strange: in an age which will have no inhibitions, many are actually inhibiting the finest faculty of human nature. What we need is not faith in more things, but more faith in a few profound things."

MONDAY.

HOW FAR RIGHT ARE WE?

"Preach the word."—I Tim. 4:3.

It is said that some politicians are very clever in their speeches these days quoting the Scriptures as the basic interest of the people. "While the preachers are turning to politics, economics and social problems, the politicians are stressing increasingly the spiritual.

Prayer—O Lord, save us, Thy children, from distraction. Would that all of God's people preached the word. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WELL NOURISHED CHRISTIANS.

"The sum of the word is truth."—Psalm 119:160.

This "Quiet Hour" page is intended for guidance in your devotions at home. Are you satisfied with the mere reading of this text and its comment each day? Would you be satisfied with your meals if they consisted of only one item of food and a little dressing to go with it?

Well nourished Christians will read a lot of the Bible, sometimes a whole chapter, sometimes a whole book. As you read on, every verse gathers interest and meaning. "It both satisfies and makes hungry."

Prayer—O Lord, increase our desire for Thy Word. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SATISFIED IN WRONG.

"Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness."—Rom. 13:13.

In the cities of our country, every day brings us scenes of drunken and riotous living. There are men, women, boys and girls, and bums. The rest of us pass by and liquor increases its ravages. We wonder what we think about. Youth, youth of the future; broken-hearted parents and broken down homes. The most saddening of it all is the increasing number of those who think it is all right, and thereby the perverted mind of Christian civilization permitting this instrument of destruction. What do you think?

Prayer—O God, forgive us, and help us to do our duty. Amen.

THURSDAY.

EQUIPPED TO TEACH.

"Abide in me and my words abide in you."—John 15:7.

It is assumed that a great many of the readers of this page are Sunday school teachers. Are you prepared? Are you equipped well? The best preparation is to have His word in your heart. His word gives you choice english, elevated thoughts, makes Jesus a real and accessible standard of life. Gives you a true picture of Him. Enables you to impart this to your pupils.

Prayer—O Lord, as we would fill our lives with Thy graces, so would we Thy Word. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WHAT MOSES DIDN'T SEE.

"I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes."—Deut. 34:4.

Moses never saw Jerusalem. But he did meet God in what he did see. On Mt. Nebo, his soul met God. There they called unto each other, and then they went on together, like Enoch of old walking with God, walking together until the transfiguration. Have you met God? Have you heard His call, and have you called unto Him? Let us try to do that and make each day a walking along with Him.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us to say, "Not my will but thine be done. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"ALL THINGS ARE YOURS."

"Because ye are sons."—Gal. 4:6.

It is not easy to accept the fact that everything is going to work out well and that we have nothing to worry about. We are too human for that. We cannot always see that the Lord has made ample provision for us. But He has, and here is where faith is a big thing in our lives. The proof of this in history challenges us to believe it.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to trust Thee more, love and serve Thee better. Give unto us a consciousness that we are members of Thy family and of Thy household. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"STRONG OR WEAK."

"Quit you like men, be strong."—I Cor. 16:13.

There is a mighty meaning in the command "Be strong." I am afraid that we are very weak at times in our convictions, purposes and actions. Wherever such characteristics exist they are a menace to the individual. In moments of uncertainty, we will fail. If our Christianity does not produce strong character, there is something wrong with our understanding of it. A man can never understand quite so well, nor is he ever so much a man as when he stands in the fellowship of Christ.

Prayer—O Father, help us to understand Christ and Thee, and to walk uprightly and fearlessly as Thy true children. Amen.

"No one should allow himself to be deluded by the thought that it is a condescension on his part to become a member of the church. The church will continue to exist without him, but he cannot be saved without the church."

TRY JESUS.

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE, D. D.

"The Pharisees followed Him and began to dispute with Him, asking Him for a sign from heaven to make trial of Him."—Mark 8:11 (Weymouth).

The Pharisees were continually desiring to make trial of Jesus concerning unimportant matters. One cannot recall a single occasion when they sought a demonstration from Jesus for a high purpose. We do know that Jesus refused them more than once when they requested a display of his extraordinary powers. One wonders if Jesus, on such occasions, did not reason something like this: "If these people are too blind to see that common, everyday deeds of mercy are heavenly demonstrations just as much as the spectacular, then they never will see my point of view." The fact is, of course, that they were on trial and not Jesus. But this thought never occurred to that group. How could it? Was he not a nobody, unquestionably with some power, but still a nobody, out of Nazareth? And were they not the leaders of the people, born to this office, and descendants of the best families?

I.

There are times when we have the right to ask a person to prove himself or herself. We are perfectly within our rights when we ask a mechanic, a house painter, or an apothecary to prove that what they say they are, they truly are. One has the right to ask the person who conducts the ritual in the sanctuary, the one who speaks in the name of Christ, or those who listen and approve of what is being said and done, to also prove themselves, not by words and more words, or even attendance in the sanctuary, but by the tasks, the very same tasks, that Christ did!

We need not be concerned about intricacies of worship, ritual, or oratory, or signs from heaven in our houses of worship. A charlatan with clever tricks, the magic of words, the uses of color, sounds, and rhythm might completely mislead multitudes. Let the test be out in the world facing and dealing with ignorance, prejudices, entrenched evils, as Christ did.

A real test to which the Pharisees might have subjected Jesus could have been something like this: "Do you get exorbitant prices for your carpentry because you have control of the labor market in Nazareth? After all your speaking, do you care to go on record and say that you are willing to face any group, or leader, that is mistreating the people? Will you continue to practice what you preach when you are not in the presence of people who know you?" Then if Jesus had evaded these questions with carefully chosen words, they might well have turned away from him, for even signs from heaven would have been meaningless.

II.

Men are still making trials of many theories that involve the risking of their lives. Almost from the first written records in history it has been found that one heroic story follows another telling of men and women who had hard trials and experiments in which their lives were lost. In much of this striving and investigating men made trial so often of much lesser things than Christ.

But all of us have done that. Some among us would undoubtedly be very much ashamed if the world knew of those things of which we once made trial. How few of all these other things of which men make trial have eased human woe, simplified life, created more joy, brought men nearer God?

Yet a trial of Christ, which is within the reach of us all, if carried out by all of us, would end this night of sorrows in which uncounted millions now are. There is a trial of Christ, which if done in deadly earnest would mean the bringing in of the very Kingdom of God for which our Lord died.

Everybody is waiting for the other fellow to make the first trial of generosity, or forgiveness, or of out and out disarmament. That was not our Lord's way. If men would not be strictly honest, he would. If men would not show love to their enemies, he would. The building of the Kingdom must begin somewhere. So he made the trial. The world will not remould, remake itself, into the glorious pattern that was in the mind of Jesus on some beautiful Christmas, Easter, or New Year's Sunday morning, when men and women are momentarily filled with high and great emotions. But the building of the Kingdom can begin in you and me. We can make a real trial of Jesus, and that would be a start. There is needed, as some unknown poet has sung, for someone to venture first again, as Christ once did.

Thank God for fools—for men who dare to dream

Beyond the lean horizons of their days;
Men not too timid to pursue the gleam
To unguessed lands of wonder and amaze.

Thank God for fools! The trials that ring the world

Are dark with blood and sweat where they have passed.

There are flags on every crag unfurled;
Theirs—ashes and oblivion at last.

Thank God for fools—abused, of low estate.
We rear our temples on the stones they laid;

Our is the prize their souls might not await;
Theirs—the requiem of the unafraid.

This making of a full trial of Jesus involves more than most of us care to think about. We have made a bit of a trial of his ideas of kindness, of cups of cold water, and the binding up of wounds after the damage has been done. But we have not yet attempted to make trial of his deepest and most important teachings. These still evade us, or rather we evade them. They are considered to be in the realm of the impracticable. They are being discussed well and ably, both in the Church and on the outside. The result is that men and women everywhere are saying that it would be wonderful if they could only be carried out into life. The world is in agony, dying, for the very cure that is on its front door steps.

It would be so much easier if being sweet and affable, and building hospitals, and saying good morning to the colored help, the news boy, or the policeman, would bring in the Kingdom. It would be much easier if only the Kingdom would come in by some cataclysmic advent, with our Lord in the heavens, smiting his enemies, the very ones we should have won over, or faced long ago.

It is my deep conviction, however, that there is no other way for the Kingdom of God to be ushered in except by folk who have yielded themselves, completely and fully, in spirit and in truth, to God's Son. Trial is yet to be made of Him, not only by the Pharisees, but by His Church!

"Two elders fell out with each other; members took sides and fell out with each other; unity fell out of the congregation; Christ fell out because no one would hold him and his Spirit; and soon the congregation fell out of the Lord. What a fall because two elders fell!"

"The most dangerous people are not the stupid and the low, but the astute and brilliant."

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

If you are the head of a family, you know that there is always something needed. It's a pair of shoes, a shirt, a dress, or some other article. It is naturally so in a family of children. The need of dresses is what I want to write about in this letter. In a large family like we have here with nearly fifty girls, it takes lots of dresses. Our children attend Sunday school and church at the college. They attend the consolidated public school in our community, and it is necessary for us to dress our children in keeping with other children in the community—not expensive clothing, but neat and in keeping with the other children.

We are almost entirely out of dresses at this time. By having a few made we are trying to bridge over till Easter. It has been the custom of the good women in our churches for a number of years to make and send to the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C., dresses for Easter so our children can have a new dress for the Easter occasion. These dresses are generally made and sent in by the Women's Missionary Societies, the Ladies Aid Societies, and a number of individuals. We hope and pray that the good women will be good to us at the approaching Easter season.

We have girls of all ages from four to seventeen years. All of them need dresses for church and school. The church organizations seem to get much pleasure out of doing this kind deed to make the girls here happy on Easter Sunday.

If you could be here on Easter Sunday morning and see the children going to church and Sunday school all dressed up in new Easter dresses, you would be happy that you had had a part. If you will take a part and help make and send us a box of dresses from your church, don't you believe the sun will shine a little brighter and the birds sing a little sweeter for you on Easter Sunday morning?

“WHY THE WORLD NEEDS RELIGION.”

some heart. It arrests the physical and mental growth of children. It leads to the wreck of happiness and to the betrayal of sacred vows. It multiplies the hazzards of the streets and highways. It ought to be outlawed, disowned, destroyed in every nation of the world.”

The problem of control of the liquor traffic was not ended by repeal. The Federal budget is not balanced and liquor taxes last year contributed only $500,000,000 to that objective instead of the $1,000,000,000 that was promised. Liquor revenues in the past three years have paid less than 1-5 of the Federal expenditures that have been necessary for relief. The liquor traffic has a stranglehold on our nation through the magic of revenue, but in social, moral, and economic values the liquor revenue is the most expensive item of taxes ever collected. What other business is ashamed of its finished product?

Crime has not diminished, but rather is more rampant. Commitments to Federal prisons this last year reached an all time high.

We must admit that no solution to this problem has been found, or rather we might say the real and only solution—the power of Jesus Christ within each individual—has not been realized nor practiced. As each individual comes to the conclusion that there is more joy in living without alcohol the problem for him will be no more.

The keener joy of Christian living is the only final argument for a different way of life. Conversion and not compulsion is the teaching of Jesus Christ.

As nations we cannot depend on political parties, but must look to God for help.

Repealing of the 18th Amendment changed the policy of the government toward the liquor traffic from that of opposition to that of legislation and protection.

The Federal Government has invested $2,500,000 of tax payers' money in rum distilling in the Virgin Islands. This government-manufactured rum has been shipped recently to the U. S. for sale. This is the first instance in our country where Federal Government has gone into the business of manufacturing liquor.

We build schools so that the youth may secure mental good, build churches that they may receive spiritual food, and give them liquor to destroy their minds and damn their souls. It just does not make sense.

I have never been able to understand why a wealthy citizen of our state, who is so interested in our boys and girls that he has spent millions of dollars in building schools, at the same time spent millions to give them all the liquor they can drink.

Until Repeal barmaids were practically unknown in the U. S. Many states have laws forbidding women selling liquor. Last winter the Philadelphia Enquirer made a survey and reported that under a conservative estimate there are today 1,350,000 young women engaged in liquor selling places, some as barmaids and others as hostesses, enticing people to drink. In 1935 there were three times as many young women educated in the barrooms as in our colleges.

In the old wet days not only were there no women behind the bars, but there were no women standing in front of the bars drinking. Now the sight of young and older women drinking at bars is not unusual.

Nations which have been destroyed through drink went down because the men of the nation used alcohol. Today America is concerned with the problem of both men and women drinking.

The liquor interests are spending millions of dollars to lure the youth. All, however, are not deceived as opinions expressed by two young people at the World's W. C. T. U. Con-

Miss Henshaw of the University of Oklahoma, in her address said in part, "Today Youth is beset by liquor lures and evils on every side. Newspapers, magazines, radio, posters, billboards, moving pictures, the grocery, saloon, cafeteria, department stores, drug stores, tavern, inn, and liquor stores apparently are trying to out-do each other in bidding for Youth as the future market for the breweries and other liquor interests.

"The young people of America resent being played for suckers. We resent and object to 'being made the goat' in a game of highly lucrative swindling—a traffic not only of merchandise and money, but of lives and souls of men and women, boys and girls.

"But youth is alert. Youth is learning the truth."

Mr. Marriott, a young man of New York, said, "We rejoice at the strong bonds of friendship tying many nations together as we work side by side, shoulder to shoulder, for a warless, liquorless, and Christian world. There is today a challenge to the youth of the world. Christian America has behaved rather strangely as a youth in this family of nations.

"What greater challenge could youth find even than today's opportunity to have a part in restoring a safe and sane Christian America—a Christian World?"

Yes, hosts of Christian young people have accepted that challenge. The same challenge faces every Christian in the world.

We are commanded, "Look not upon the wine when it is red."

God never commands us to do the impossible and whenever He gives us a command, He also gives us a promise.

He asks the question, "Have I not commanded thee? Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

So we must pray for the disillusioned, teach the children in the home, the school, the Sunday school, the church, the effects of alcohol on the body, mind, and soul—teach them to live sober, Christian lives.

This world can be saved only through Jesus Christ working in the lives of men and women, boys and girls.

"Wherefore seeing we are also compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

"Looking unto Jesus the author and finishing of our faith."

"For this God is our God forever and ever; he will be our guide unto death."

Armed with these promises may we each make our daily life our religion and so help to hasten the day when His Kingdom shall come, His will shall be done on earth as it is in Heaven.

Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory throughout our Lord Jesus Christ." M. W. MANN, WINBORNE.

Miss Annie Lee Winborne, for more than fifty years a member of the first Christian Church of Norfolk, Va., passed away on December 23, 1938, after a long illness.

Miss Winborne was born in Nansmond County, January 23, 1872, the daughter of the late Elisha James and Margaret Eliza Winborne. She was especially interested in Christian education, and for more than forty-five years was a teacher in the Sunday school of the First Christian Church of Norfolk, Va.

She is survived by her twin sister, Mrs. O. A. Marwitz, with whom she made her home; and also by two other sisters, Mrs. C. B. Divers, Norfolk, and Mrs. Elmo Norfleet, Holland, Va., and two brothers, Wallis Winborne, Conway, S. C.; W. E. Winborne, Staunton, Va.

"For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in in Jesus will God bring with him."—(I Thess. 4: 14.) J. H. KNIGHT.

UPTON.

Ida Gertrude Upton (nee Leggett), member of First Christian Church, Berkeley, Va., departed this earthly life on January 10, 1939, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Upton had been an active member of First Christian Church for fifteen years, and was a faithful member of the church choir. She was born in Martin County, N. C., moving to Norfolk as a small child.

Her loss is mourned by her devoted husband, Hubert Chandler Upton, and her father, Mr. J. B. Leggett. Her mother preceded her in death in 1933.

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—(II Cor. 5: 1.) JOHN H. KNIGHT.

SMITH.

We, the members of the Ladies' Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church, find it our sad duty to record the passing of our beloved member, Mrs. C. E. Smith, on December 14, 1938.

Mrs. Smith was a noble Christian woman, and a devoted wife and mother. She being dead, yet speaketh.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn her departure, we bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

2. That we extend sympathy to her husband and all members of the family.

3. That we strive to be more loyal, and put the work of the church first in our lives as she did.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our records, one sent to the family, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Things That Stand In Our Way

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Religion is an essential to a true, kindly, poised, and useful life. Statistics show that only 2 per cent of the divorces in the United States come from the membership of the Christian Church, 98 per cent from outside the Church. Link, in his book "My Return To Religion," found that an insignificant few of the patients that came to him with fears and frazzled nerves were members of a church.

Disguised Selfishness.

Selfishness or self-will keeps one from the full fruitage of faith. We do not give the convictions and opinions of others sufficient patience. It is a trying job to live together. The deepest spiritual needs of ourselves and others should stand side by side in our prayers and activities. We often become opinionated in our beliefs and thus close the door to an advance in real life. Christ makes an intelligent follower true to established essentials and open-minded to new truth and its applications. In a church or a community the merging of self into the welfare of all is absolutely necessary.

Fear of Others.

The fear of what others will say often gets in our way. It is well to desire the good-will of others, but this desire must not stand in the way of our duty nor keep us from doing the right. "Everybody does it, so I do it" is a dangerous motto. We are "to be in the world, but not of it." Covet the good-will of others, but be sure that you are worthy of that good-will.

A Better Time.

The feeling that the worldly person is having a better time than we are sometimes gets in our way. The satisfactions deep and abiding in life, come only to the one who builds a good character, lives honorably, and plays his part in world welfare. Some springs run dry in drought, but other springs are inexhaustible. The true and fearless life is always satisfying and influential. Shakespeare declares, "Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful."

Discipline.

We dislike discipline and it takes discipline to enter into Jesus' world. His will must shape our wills, his emotions purify and enrich ours, and we must think his thoughts after him. We must re-adjust our lives frequently—I almost wrote continually. Revelation is progressive both in the world and in the individual, and, as one receives it, changes must be made in thinking and living. Fixed habits and customs do not change readily. We remain as we are rather than change our ways. New light, followed, caused the Pilgrim fathers to journey to Holland and to this continent and suffer hardships. So has it been with every leader. In all true living and growth there is a cross.

Formalism.

Formalism shrivels up life. In many lives the Bible becomes a formal factor in life. We would fight for it, but in us the life and love that flow through its noble characters have become stagnant pools. One may become so intense in defending the Bible that he loses the life and spirit of it. An open Bible has destroyed many tyrannies. As we live the messages that the Holy Spirit brings to the Church through the Bible, the Church and the universe, so will the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of God.

Our New Paper

AN EDITORIAL

With this issue "The Christian Sun" puts on a new spring dress. The personality of the paper, the heart and soul of it, is the same, but the arrangement and make-up are different. Since its beginning on February 17, 1844, this little paper has changed its form, its place of publication, and its editorship many times, but it still maintains its youth sufficiently to desire such changes as necessary in order to be modern in appearance.

When the Christian Church as a denomination was founded in 1794 at Old Lebanon Church, near Surry, Va., it was decided by those present that (1) "The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church," (2) "Christian is a sufficient name for the Church," and (3) "The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice." "The Christian Sun" presents these ideas in word and symbolism on its front page, and hopes to be able to maintain these ideals in all of its pages.

The Church is based on the teachings of the Holy Bible. Without the Bible, there could be no Church, and without the Church there soon would be no Bible. It is the business of the Church Paper to present the teachings of the Bible in such fashion as to build up the Church.

"The Christian Sun" has the Southern Christian Convention as its historic background, but is glad to represent the united Congregational and Christian Church movement in the Southeast.

Members of the Church who believe that "The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice" rejoice in unity concerning essentials, offer liberty in non-essentials, and wrap about all peoples the robe of charity (love).

It is hoped that the symbolism on this page, and the ideas presented within, will be pleasing to the eye, stimulating to the mind, and helpful to the soul of those who read.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

The mid-year session of the Virginia Valley Conference will be held at Bethlehem Christian Church on March 30, 1939.

Men and young people will find it worthwhile to attend the Woman's Missionary Rallies. Fine programs are in the making.

Dr. F. L. Fagley of New York City will preach in the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., on Sunday, April 2, at the morning service.

Remember, the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., can furnish you with program materials for Easter plays, pageants, etc.

Dr. G. C. Bellingrath has resigned as president of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., to become president of Rabun Gap Presbyterian College.

Rev. Robert Lee House and others from Eastern Virginia expect to attend the Symposium on Modern Religious Problems at Duke University March 20-21.

News from Mt. Olivet (G) says that they are planning a meeting for the week before Easter. This is the first time this church has ever had such a series of services at that season.

On Thursday evening of this week the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, will hold a banquet for all the young people of the church.

Rev. Milo J. Sweet, pastor of Union Congregational Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., brought good news of his church when at Elon College recently as a member of the Board of Trustees of the College.

Dr. L. E. Smith was the preacher at the evening service of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., on last Sunday. Following the regular service he spoke to the group in the interests of Elon College.

Dr. Edwin C. Gillette of Jacksonville, Fla., Superintendent of the Southeast and Associate Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, made a constructive visit to the Editor's office recently. He attended the mid-year meeting of the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

Last summer Rev. Melvin Dollar became pastor of our Carolina Church near Burlington, N. C. At that time the church was paying about $8.00 per month for pastor's salary. Now they are paying $10.00 a week and room and board, and are buying a parsonage for the use of the pastor.

President L. E. Smith spoke at the morning worship and the afternoon vesper services at Newport News, Va., on last Sunday. The pastor, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, says that his church expects to go over the top with subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, as they have done with all items of the budget this year.

Mrs. J. W. Patton, the wife of one of our ministers at Elon College, who had been seriously ill of pneumonia, passed away on Wednesday of this week. The funeral services will be in the Whitley Memorial Auditorium on Friday at 2:30 o'clock. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the members of her family.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers who knew her will learn with deep regret of the death, last Sunday, of Mrs. G. D. Hunt, of Roanoke, Ala. The funeral services were held Tuesday at Antioch Church. Our deepest sympathy is extended to her husband, our veteran leader in Alabama, and to others to whom she was near and dear.

We learn with regret of the serious illness of Dr. C. C. Ryan. Latest reports were that he was to be operated on on Tuesday of this week. Dr. Ryan, who was formerly pastor of Christian Memorial Temple in Norfolk, Va., and later pastor of the First Christian Church in Richmond, Va., has for the past five years been pastor of the Christian Church at Vaughnsville, Ohio.

Reverends E. J. Sanderson, Melvin Dollar, and Emmanuel Hedgebeth will graduate from Elon College next May. Reverends A. L. Granger, Jr., and Herbert Council, Jr., will graduate from the Divinity School of Yale University in June. Rev. Aubrey C. Todd will graduate from Chicago Theological Seminary in June. The latter will become pastor of Sanford and Shallow Well Churches immediately after graduation. Churches in the Southern Convention will be fortunate to secure these well-trained young men for their pastors.

THE MOUNTAIN WORK.

We have met every appointment promptly at Elk Spur and Rocky Ford. Ivy Hill has to be closed in winter because of road conditions. Quarterly meetings and communion services have been observed. Six members have been received at Elk Spur, and two at Rocky Ford since Conference. Christmas treats were provided at all three churches with interesting programs rendered at Elk Spur and Rocky Ford. Palm Street (Greensboro), Pleasant Ridge, Waverly, and Winston-Salem have sent boxes of clothing for which we are very grateful. The mountain work is difficult. We are putting our best into it; friends are praying for us; and God is blessing our efforts.

B. J. EARP.

COMING SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

The Southeast Convention—Florida, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia—will meet at the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., May 9-11. The program committee, Revs. H. S. Harcastle, R. L. House, and John G. Truitt, in a recent session, began to map out the details of the program. Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, president of the Home Board of Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches, and Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, Moderator of the General Council, will be among the speakers.

Representative speakers from each of the eight states will be on the program. On Tuesday evening there will be a fellowship supper with a program at the table. On Wednesday evening there will be a banquet and speeches. On Tuesday after the fellowship supper Dr. Maurer will preach the Convention sermon in the beautiful auditorium of the Christian Temple, and Rev. Victor B. Chicoine assisted by the Christian Temple choir will have charge of the worship program of that evening. The Moderator's address will come on Tuesday afternoon at the opening session.

Wednesday will be a full day, with inspirational addresses from church leaders throughout the Southeast, and a closing session will be held Thursday morning. It is hoped that large delegations of ministers and their church members will be present from all our conferences and states within the bounds of the Southeast Convention. Let us make it a time of inspiration, study, and consecration. Plan now to visit Norfolk, the Christian Temple, and share in this great inspirational gathering.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Moderator.

OUR EASTER SEASON.

Increasingly Christian Churches are joining with other denominations in observing the period leading up to Easter as a sacred season. The fact that some have seemingly put too much emphasis on this period known as "Lent" is no reason why we should ignore it. Much of the gospel story centers around the last days of the life of our Lord. We are therefore certainly justified in seeking to re-double our efforts as we approach Easter.

Those who seek to follow the Master may well study again the story of Jesus as He climbed to Calvary, and brought new life by His resurrection. This will deepen the spiritual life, give a new conception of what it means to be a Christian, and fire the soul with a new enthusiasm for righteousness. This is the first goal of our Easter program—the spiritual renewal of ourselves, members of the churches.

The flowering of this new life will mean the bringing of new members into the Church. Winning new converts to Christ and His Church is a test of the validity of our Christian experience. Unless we can win others to the Christ there may be a serious doubt concerning our own inner experience. Only those work for recruits who have faith in Christ and know something of His inner presence. Hence we need not be afraid of receiving those who are recommended for membership at the Easter season. Part of our Easter program should certainly be the winning to the Christian the way those who know not the fellowship of Christ, and welcoming of them into the Church, which is the mystical body of our Lord.

It is the custom of our churches in the Southern Convention to make an offering for Missions at Easter. Certainly this custom will not be broken this year. It should become more universal because the money is badly needed and because we need to give for our development. Like the women who went early to the tomb of the Master that first Easter morning bearing sweet spices, costly and rare, so we will go to our churches next Easter with an offering to the Master, an offering composed of those we have won to his fellowship and money for which we have worked. The money will help to win others in far away places around the world. This contribution of money for Missions is our third goal for the Easter season. Every church may well set a high standard for itself and seek to enlist every member in the world-wide program which is represented by the Easter offering for Missions.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

The Board of Publications recently decided to change the regulations concerning printing obituary notices and resolutions. It is easy to see that most of the paper could be filled each week with such notices. This is the reason why a limit must be set on the length of such items. The Board says that we may print without charge an obituary sent by the pastor, and one set of resolutions from the church or church organization, provided these do not include more than 150 words each. More words must be paid for at the rate of 2c each, money to accompany article. (A detailed statement of this will be found regularly on page 15.)

"The Christian Sun" is eager to cooperate with the churches in every possible way. Pastors and church leaders are urgently requested to carefully consider this matter and comply with the wisdom of the Board of Publications. If more than one organization writes resolutions, they should agree among themselves as to which should be printed. All your editor can do is to print the first resolutions that come to him.

We hope to print all obituaries and resolutions which comply with these requests in the issue of "The Christian Sun" following their receipt. If the articles are too long, and without accompanying payment for extra words, publication must necessarily be delayed, either for editorial revision or until the money is received.

TRAINING FOR LEADERSHIP.

As the standard for public school teaching rises and the general knowledge of the people increases, it is necessary for those who would be church leaders to continue their preparation for leadership. This is so evidently true that no proof is necessary.

How can those who are now leaders continue to grow so they can continue to lead? And how can others prepare to take their places in the church as leaders and workers? The answer to these questions is important.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training is one answer. This year the school will be held June 19-24. There will be profitable courses for superintendents, teachers, missionary leaders, directors of young people's work, pastors, and all types of church workers.

It is possible for any group of churches to conduct their own leadership training schools. Several such schools are held annually and others can be held at any place where two or more churches will get together on such a program.

There are dozens of textbooks which can be used either at the Sunday sessions of the church school, or at mid-week sessions that will be very helpful in training present and future teachers, leaders, and officials in the churches. Such lists are available to those who inquire.

The Board of Christian Education with office at Elon College, N. C., can help with either of these projects and can also lend books and other materials to those who want to read for themselves. The Promotional Secretary usually carries with him a suitcase full of religious educational material, and will welcome inquiries from any who are interested. All of this service is free for the asking, and your leaders are eager for your requests.

The First "Christian Sun" Editorial

By REV. DANIEL W. KERR.

[The following article was the first editorial appearing in "The Christian Sun" in the first issue of that paper dated February 17, 1844. The article was taken from "Lives of Christian Ministers" by Dr. P. J. Kernodle.]

The meaning of the word "Christian" is a follower of Christ. They who embrace the opinions and sentiments of others, and look up to them for direction and instruction in any of the arts and sciences, or in any of the systems of religion which have obtained a footing in the world, are properly their disciples; and are generally distinguished by certain distinctive and appropriate names, descriptive of such discipleship and adherence to particular systems. Hence, the followers of Pythagoras and Plato are denominated Pythagoreans and Platonists, and the followers of Mahomet, Mahometans, after their several masters. And hence the followers of Christ are called Christians, after Christ their Master. And it should be considered a matter of no little importance to the followers of Christ, to be distinguished by no other title than that of Christian as the name in every way suitable to their holy profession, and as entirely adapted to their peculiar circumstances, as being the disciples of him who has said his kingdom is not of this world. If this name, as we believe, be of Divine appointment, it very forcibly occurs that no option is left to the disciple of Christ as to the choice of names. He must take that name which the Master has given, and with his consent be called by no other. His enemies, by way of derision, may stigmatize him by any epithet they may think proper to use. But for himself, let him rejoice and not be ashamed to suffer as a Christian. There is something strange in the idea that the disciples of Christ should consent to be called by other names, even by those of other eminent disciples, such as Luther, Calvin, Wesley, etc. It might be asked in the language of the Apostle, were those eminent saints and reformers crucified for you? Or were you baptized in their names? And if you were not baptized in their names, how can you with consistency be denominated after them? I know that many pious and holy persons attach little importance to names; and conceive that if they possess the thing signified by the name, it is a matter of no importance by what name they be called. In this indifference about names many errors have been committed. The name Christian, with the things signified thereby, constitutes the sum of religion. It is always proper and correct to call things by their appropriate names. If we are Christians, why not be called by that title and no other? A rigid adherence to this course would long since have ended those divisions and subdivisions which most painfully harass and perplex the church of Christ. But there are some who contend that the name Christian was first bestowed upon the disciples at Antioch by their enemies, as an appellation of reproach. For this opinion I can find no evidence, either in the word of God or elsewhere. We may therefore conclude it to be mere assumption. In opposition, however, to the notion that the name Christian was first applied to the disciples by their enemies in the way of reproach, we will first adduce two witnesses, whose authority in such matters will not be called in question. The first is Dr. Adam Clark, who, in his criticism upon the original word rendered in Acts 11:26, were called, expresses himself thus: "It signifies in the New Testament, to appoint, warn, or nominate by Divine direction. In this sense the word is used, Matt. 2:12; Luke 2:26; Acts 10:22. If, therefore, the name was given by Divine appointment, it is most likely that Saul and Barnabas were directed to give it; and therefore, the name Christian is from God, as well as that grace and holiness which are essentially required and implied in the character." The Doctor continues, "A Christian, therefore, is the highest character which any human being can bear upon earth; and to receive it from God, as those appear to have done, how glorious the title!" The next is the pious and learned Mr. Davis, who wrote a sermon expressly upon this subject, and in which he uses this language: "The original, which is here rendered called, seems to intimate that they were called Christians by Divine appointment, for it generally signifies an oracular nomination, or declaration from God; and to this purpose it is generally translated. Hence, it follows that the very name Christian, as well as the thing, was a divine original; assumed not by private agreement of the disciples among themselves, but by the appointment of God. In this view, it is a remarkable accomplishment of an old prophecy of Isaiah 62:2."

These views have been submitted, not with a design of impugning others, but for the purpose of exhibiting some of the reasons which influence us firmly and strictly to adhere to the Christian name. This rigid adherence to a name may be a subject of sport or derision to some, and of contempt and scorn to others. But still, experience and observation unitedly conspire to satisfy our minds completely, that too great particularity, in religious matters, even in external things themselves, can hardly be used. The Bible is the only criterion for regulating and guiding our course in relation to all religious concerns. No Christian man can esteem a strict and rigid conformity to its requisitions of little importance. What that book inculcates must bind the consciences of all true believers; and as we make this the standard of our religious opinions and faith, we dare not depart from it even in the selection of a name. Who but must wish that all the party names, which the circumstances of the church from time to time have given rise to, and the strife and contention which have accompanied them, were entirely obliterated and their effects forgotten forever. The religion of the New Testament when divested of mysticism, is a beautiful and most interesting scheme entirely adapted to the man. Its peculiar excellency consists in the simplicity of the means exhibited and insisted upon for his recovery and restoration. These means are repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Here no complexity is presented. The conditions are plain and simple; and imply just what the awakening sinner feels to be the case—an utter inadequacy to save himself. When, by the grace of God, which is freely offered to all, the sinner feels the force and power of the divine truth freeing him from guilt and sin, and renewing him in the spirit of his mind, and enabling him to cry, Abba, Father; it will then be his duty to make a profession of his faith in Christ, and his subjection to him. Now, in scripture language, he has put on Christ, and as he has thus received Christ Jesus the Lord, so should he walk in him, and he is exhorted by the Apostle not to return again to the weak and beggarly elements of the world. How incongruous that such a one should take upon himself any other appellation besides the one descriptive of his connection with Christ as a follower and disciple.

"It does not matter so much who we are, nor matter so much where we are, but it makes a lot of difference what we are where we are."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"The Quiet Hour" is the title of a little booklet which came in the mail today. The title is arresting. The booklet is interesting. It is not a new name. The idea is old. Many denominations are issuing such books from their Publishing Houses for use throughout the year. Through the study of Psychology the value of the "Quiet Hour" in worship has been re-discovered. The Friends or Quakers have taught other denominations how to worship in silence. "Be still and know that I am God."

The increasing use of "Quiet Hour" literature in private devotions is encouraging. It is a step in the right direction. This is an age of noise. Highways and streets are notable for noisy automobiles. Airplanes roar in the air above cities and country-sides. The radio makes its contribution in stores, offices and homes. Social life crowds homes and public places with its vocal confusion. Young and old rush from their homes to their daily tasks where the same confusion increases the nervous tension. It is not surprising that so many people have heart disease and nervous break-down. In the hospitals skilled doctors say: "Be quiet, relax, and rest." If rest will cure the sick patients, it will prevent sickness. A season of quiet worship each day will relax tired nerves and develop spiritual strength for the sin-sick soul.

There is increasing use of the quiet hour in public worship. And there is a great need for special emphasis on this point. So many churches have neglected the cultivation of the quiet type of worship. Country churches have not kept pace with the city churches in this respect. One reason for this is—the church auditorium is frequently used for Sunday school purposes. The transfer from the Sunday school session to the preaching service is not easily made without some noise and audible conversation. In the large city churches it is much easier to teach the people to enter and be seated quietly, and to abstain from audible conversation. Whispering can be dispensed with by systematic teaching. But the country churches can become great in the quiet worship period by persistent emphasis and living example. Worship should begin when one enters the church door. A brief period of silence—quiet worship—should precede the first strains of music. How it enriches the soul to sit down in a quiet room—a stately church—and listen to the still small voice of God. "The Lord is in His holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before Him." In the stillness, the quiet, the silence—the heart can pour out its love to the Lord and Savior; the soul can have sweet fellowship with the Holy Spirit.

Passing along the street recently the writer saw the following sign which was nailed to several telephone poles and trees: "Quiet—Sick Zone." That was placed there by order of the Police Department. In a nearby home a dear wife and mother was ill. Unnecessary noises were prohibited by this order. Sometimes the quiet rest is the best method for restoring lost health. And the church can do much to bring relief to tired souls by the quiet worship method. In the home it is helpful to have a personal quiet worship period when one is alone. Just a few moments alone with God will help. Read or repeat some passage of Scripture. Spend a few moments in silent meditation. Make a brief prayer. It will help you. It may help others.

THE COLLEGE PERIOD CLOSES.

Elon College is a child of the Convention. The Convention in providing for the support of Elon College gave its note for $250,000 with interest at four per cent, the same to constitute legally a part of the endowment funds of the college. The Convention in the instrument disclaims any responsibility for payment of the principal sum of the note but obligates itself quite definitely to pay interest on the note annually at the rate of four per cent. This amount, together with an additional $2,500, total $12,500, is apportioned to the local churches of the several conferences constituting the Convention with the request that these amounts be paid and transmitted to the college. In order that this obligation may be brought definitely to every church and to every individual, the Convention set aside January and February as the college period in which a campaign of information should be carried on, solicitations made, and funds raised to meet this obligation. A larger number of Sunday schools and churches than usual have responded this year. Many churches use this period for educational purposes and raise their college funds through the year and send the same to the annual conference together with other funds.

March, April, and May, however, are lean months for us. If you have raised all or a part of your college apportionments, it would be of great help to the college if you would send your contributions in immediately. If the offering for the college has not been received in your church and you have not adopted a plan whereby your apportionment is to be raised, won't you please take the offering at the earliest possible moment that the same may be reported through THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The college wishes to thank all who have cooperated and to express its appreciation of contributions made.

L. E. SMITH.

MR. A. T. HOLLAND.

The entire membership of our church, those who knew him and those who did not know him, will be shocked to learn of the death of Mr. A. T. Holland, of Suffolk, Va., Those who knew him were aware of his faith and contributions to the church. Those who did not know him benefited from his life and living indirectly as they shared the fellowship and blessing of their church.

Mr. Holland was a very splendid character and a successful business man, but first of all he was a consecrated Christian, loved his church and its institutions, gave generously of his counsel and means that his church might go forward in its God-given mission, seeking to save that which was lost. He was a great friend of Elon College. For a number of years he was an honored trustee of the institution, and one of the most loyal patrons that the college ever had. He sent his four daughters to Elon. For a number of years he had two in school at the same time. His loyalty to the institution, together with other families, was and is a contributing factor to the institution's growth and development. He instilled his loyalty into the hearts and souls of the members of his family, and they will find great joy in taking up where he left off that the influence of his noble life may continue to live and be a benediction to the causes that were dear to his heart.

Elon College in expressing its appreciation of the faithfulness and services of our good friend and brother, also expresses its sincere sympathy to the members of the bereaved family and takes this occasion to express the hope that they may find continuous consolation in the life so nobly lived by their devoted husband and father.

L. E. SMITH.

AN UNFORTUNATE BOY.

By ROY L. SMITH.

She was well groomed, a little past forty years of age, and carried with her a certain air of refinement. Her ear, which stood just outside the preacher's study, identified her as one who came out of rather comfortable circumstances. It was very evident from her manner that she was very intent upon the errand that had brought her to the church this morning.

"I have come to see you about my boy," she said, as the preacher motioned her to a chair. "He is just seventeen, and has never given us any trouble until lately. He seems to have started running with the wrong crowd, and I am greatly worried about what may happen. I would like to see someone to get him into Sunday school, and I have come to see if you have some young men who would try to show an interest in him. It would not do, of course, to let him know that I have been in to see you about the matter, but there must be some bright boys who can get next to him some way."

"We will be glad to try," replied the pastor, reaching for a pad of paper upon which to write down the name and address. He was not entirely unaccustomed to such an appeal. In fact, there was scarcely a week in which he did not hear it in some form or another.

"Do you and your husband come here to church?" the preacher asked innocently enough, for the woman was a total stranger to him, and he knew his people pretty well.

"No," the mother answered, shifting about in her chair a bit, "but we live here in the neighborhood, and the boy knows some of the boys in your Sunday school."

"I just thought it might be easier to get him into the Sunday school where his parents belong," the preacher went on with a guileless expression on his face.

"Well, you see, my husband is in business and away from town a good deal. When he gets in on Saturday, we like to have our Sundays together to ourselves. It is our only chance. Besides he belonged to one church and I belonged to another when we were married, and we just never went into any church. I know we ought to have done so, but then we did not know whether we were permanent in the city—his business is so uncertain, you know."

"I think I have a plan, then, that will get your boy into Sunday school class. We have a splendid men's class of business men that your husband will greatly enjoy. We also have a class of mothers, under the leadership of a very intelligent woman, that would mean a good deal to you. Now, why not, next Sunday morning, all of you come to Sunday school together? I will meet you here and introduce you to the leaders of the classes and take your son, myself, down to the young men's class."

"That is very kind of you, I am sure, and I appreciate the invitation, but I do not believe we could, this Sunday at least. My husband and I have made some other plans." And there was just a trace of restlessness in her manner as she spoke.

As the preacher looked out of the study window and watched her drive away, he said to himself, "Yes, I would like to see someone get that boy into Sunday school, with the example in the home like that of those two parents."—The Michigan Christian Advocate.

ECHOES FROM MADRAS.

All across the country conferences are being held in which leaders who were in the world Mission Conference at Madras, India, last December are telling of what was said and done there. Rev. J. E. McCauley tells us that plans are definitely under way for such a meeting in Richmond on March 30-31, and he extends an invitation to the pastors and leaders of our churches to be present. Watch your daily papers for announcements of such meetings near you, and plan to attend, if possible.

BABOO.

(A TRUE STORY OF INDIA.)

“How much will we have to give the police this time, Grandmother?” asked Baboo, aged ten, as he put down stolen fruit by the door of their hut.

“Who knows?” answered the old woman with a sigh as she looked across the field where a group of Indian men in police uniform could be seen.

“On the honor of our ‘God of Thieves,’ we will swear we have nothing left,” she continued, as she patted the cake of brown flour and then put it against the mud fireplace to bake.

Baboo was now squatting cross-legged on the ground ready to eat his meal. His black eyes flashed. It was an exciting life—this stealing of big sums and then lying and deceiving the Indian police. His grandmother told him that he would one day be the leader of his tribe.

Two months had passed since the big raid on the Great Temple had been made. Seventy-five people had had to be killed while they were doing it, but that was part of the game. They had split up into bands that went in different directions, traveling night after night.

Some of them had been caught, but they were not the ones with the jewels. Those were given to the women and children. They had been hidden in secret places.

Wild barking of the dogs announced the police. They said that the whole gang must come with them, for a great Officer of the Government had commanded that all, men and women and children, belonging to the tribe committing crime should be brought to live in the Jail City.

At first they begged the police not to take them, but when the police would not listen, they began breaking up their homes. It didn't take long. Soon their lines of bullock carts were trailing over dusty roads, the dogs panting in the terrible heat. Some men walked beside the carts. Baboo walked with them, listening.

“Why,” said one, “there are hundreds of us and hundreds more of six other tribes of Thieves! We will soon be free to live our own lives again.”

Five days later they entered the city of Sholapur and were taken to an open space closed about with a wire fence. Each family was given a piece of ground large enough for a hut, which they were told to build.

At night the gates were locked, and people had to answer to roll-call, and the police stayed on guard. In the day time men, women and children over fifteen worked in the cotton mills. Children of twelve could work half a day but they must go to school the other half. Children under twelve must go to school all day.

“School? What is school?” asked Baboo.

No one seemed to know—except that you had to sit and sit—and read

DADDY IS OUT FOR DINNER.

By JOHN GALLOWAY TRUITT.

[Upon the complaint of a six-year-old son of a minister to his eight-year-old sister.]

*Daddy is out for dinner
Mother is out for supper,
The maid is here with sister and with me;
The telephone is calling,
The doorbell is ringing,
And everybody's busy as they can be.*

*“Hello there, little laddie,
Let me speak to Daddy.”
They are saying so glibly on the 'phone;
And at the door it's “Brother,
Let me see your Mother;”
And we are here with Florence all alone.*

*Now can you tell the reason
Why in and out of season
Sister and I must always run this place?
Daddy is at a meeting,
And Mother bears a greeting,
And everybody's in a steady pace!*

*And so a girl and laddie
Without their “Mom” or Daddy,
Have to go to bed most every night,
Without their hugs and kisses,
And lovely little caresses,
And I am telling you: it isn't right!*

out of a book and be beaten by the teacher if you made mistakes!

“I won't be shut up in there,” said Baboo. “I'll hide.”

So he did for a while. But one morning he was pulled out from under the pile of rags in the corner of the hut and taken off to school. He did not like school—not at first—but after a time he learned to play a queer drum and to beat cymbals while the children sang. He liked that. He liked to play games, too. He also like to make things with his hands out of wood and tin and cane.

He even found he liked to learn to read and write. His grandmother's eyes grew wide with wonder when he read to her from a book! He ceased to steal. Boys in the city who were Scouts didn't steal. Baboo was a scout. Then he became a Patrol Leader, then a Scout Master's Assistant.

He heard of a Great Teacher who said there was only one God for all peoples and that He cared for all boys and girls and wanted them to be good scouts all the time and never steal. It did seem the best way after all.

Twelve years have passed. Baboo is a young man now. He is in training for police duty. He speaks a little English. He is trusted to do many important jobs. His grandmother is very proud of him. She, too, has a position where she is trusted. Many of the tribe have been acting honestly for so many years that they are now allowed to live outside the Walled City. The name of that city is “The City of Hope,” and the people who live in it find out after a while, as Baboo has done, that it pays to do honest work.

Baboo will be a leader of his tribe, but in a better sense than his grandmother predicted many years ago.—

A CRYPTOGRAM.

Fortunately we live where the Bible is an open book, and if we do not read it as much as we should, it is not because we do not have free access to it. But there have been times when “the work of God was precious,” when to own or read a Bible was to be in danger of persecution. No such time is likely to return, but if Bibles were suppressed, we might have to express its great religious truths in secret codes. Here is a great truth in a simple, secret code. Can you solve it?

PRACTICING UNITY.

This line comes by way of the North Carolina Christian Advocate—

“An enduring word of the late Bishop Charles H. Brent of the Episcopal Church in his opening sermon at the World Conference on Faith and Order ran thus: ‘Let us keep the purpose of unity in our hearts and look on all Christians as brothers beloved. It is by practicing unity that we shall gain unity.’”

Volumes could be written on this statement of Bishop Brent. Suffice it to say here that the longest recorded prayer of our Lord (17th Chapter of John) has this as its central theme and thought, the oneness, the unity, the brotherly love of all who believe in Him. We may preach unity, but we can and do show our belief in Christian unity by practicing it; first and foremost of all with the brethren and churches of our denomination, and then through tolerance with the brethren of other churches and denominations than that of our own. Loyalty to the church and loyalty to our Lord are and should be one, since Lord Jesus, and not we ourselves, is building the church and we are invited as His followers to have a part with Him in this divine task.

HAVE YOU READ IT?

Have you read what? Why the recent and truly great book by Dr. Hugh Vernon White. The book is titled, A Working Faith for the World. It is a well bound, neatly printed volume with index, covering 213 pages, every page filled with food for thought as the writer brings the reader constantly face to face with that faith which alone can reach and save this world, namely; faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, through whose life and death on the Cross, and resurrection this world is to be saved. Rev. G. H. Veazey, Belew Creek, N. C., who has just read the book says:

My Dear Dr. Atkinson:

I have just finished reading Dr. Hugh Vernon White's great book, "A Working Faith for the World." I appreciate the book, especially, because of its thoroughness and simplicity. The author is certainly an open minded and broad minded man. He presents missions in a somewhat different manner from any that I have read before, yet to me a very reasonable manner. I gained more information of the real work of a missionary than I had ever had before. I think he was very wise in mentioning the old religions, showing their strength and weakness that he might bring to light the great fundamental facts of Christianity. He shows very plainly that Christianity is the only religion that can produce "a working faith for the world."

I would gladly recommend this book to all our ministers and as many laymen as are interested in the Kingdom of God on earth.

(Signed) GUY H. VEAZEY.

The book is published by Harper and Brothers, New York, the price being $2.00.

Another writes of the book as follows:

This stirring exposition of the Christian faith shows clearly the uniqueness of Christianity and its tremendous potentialities for realizing in all lands the ends of Christian Truth, Christian Prosperity, and Christian Community.

Dr. White's book is the expression of an American outlook on the whole missionary enterprise, written out of a background of years of service as secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. It deserves wide reading and discussion by all interested in missions and the development of a world faith.

Dr. White has been for some years a Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and as such has had the privilege of studying the faiths and the facts which draw one to the inevitable conclusion that only faith in the Lord Jesus Christ can and ultimately will prove sufficient for the salvation of all nations and all peoples.

Again our deepest gratitude is evoked by the contributions for missions acknowledged above. "The gospel" is the good news, even the good news that Jesus the Christ has come into the world to give His life for the ransom of many, and to save all who believe in Him, and confess that He is the Christ. OUR INSTITUTIONS

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage has a nice farm of 230 acres. Twenty years ago it was poor land, and thus gave poor production. But by rotating crops and taking good care of the soil, it now produces good crops, if we have proper seasons.

This farm is a good asset to the orphanage. It gives an outlet for the boys energy. The boys are taught how to cultivate the soil so that it will in turn give back something worthy of the time and labor spent.

Much of our farm is rolling. In case of heavy rains, when the terraces would break, it would wash down. During the last few years, Mr. Wagoner, my assistant, and manager of the farm, has terraced all our farm and laid the terraces off with the proper fall. Now, when we have what we call washing rains, our terraces carry the water and we have no breaks. Thus the soil is preserved and built up from year to year.

I often think it a pity that every boy cannot have a few years on the farm. Many of our greatest men have come from the farm. The experience on the farm seems to put something into a boy that he gets no other way. He lives close to nature; he develops a strong body and a clear mind; he sees the grain grow; he sees the fields of grain ripening into harvest; he sees God's way of doing things. Farming is hard work; there are no easy jobs on the farm, but since farm machinery has been much improved, the farm is more inviting to a young man than a few years ago.

The orphanage has built up a splendid dairy herd that furnishes milk for the orphanage family, and also for the college. We are trying to work in a registered herd of Holstein cattle. It will take a few years to do this, but it will be worthwhile, for in a few years we can have a herd of cattle of which we will be proud.

Our dairy furnishes us "A" grade milk, clean and wholesome. Our boys and girls made an average gain in weight last year of more than eight pounds.

whom they have not heard; and how can they hear without a preacher, and how can they preach unless they be sent?" So our missionary command and effort are that we send the gospel to those here in the home land who are not favored as we ourselves are with the gospel, and also those in foreign lands who do not know our Christ and the power of His life, death and resurrection. "The joy of the Lord," says the Word, "is your strength." We shall then bear in mind that it is not "our joy" that we seek, but "the joy of the Lord" in giving to missions and sharing with others the Bread of heaven; the Bread that came down from heaven on which if souls feed they shall never hunger. Through missions we are seeking to supply that hunger, not with the bread of earth and of time, but with the bread of heaven, and of eternity. Come with your offerings and let's share with others that for which a world in chaos and confusion today hungers and thirsts.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

It is encouraging to note that a larger number of our Sunday schools has received offerings for Elon College and has forwarded the same. These offerings have not been very large, but they do represent a real interest.

The plan for our Sunday schools to give the fifth Sunday offering to the college affords the young people of the church and Sunday school an opportunity to learn definitely something about the college. The college was built specifically for our young people. Every young person connected with our church should know the interesting facts about the college so that after graduation from high school, should they attend college, they would be able to decide intelligently regarding their own institution.

If our college is to be improved, we are the ones who should do the improving. We have as good folks as anyone, and we hope just as good college as others. Our college needs and deserves our support.

FLASHES!

Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship announces its Annual Spring Rally which is to be held this year at First Christian Church, Portsmouth, on Saturday afternoon and evening, March 25. The Fellowship Supper will be a feature of the program.

This group has recently sent to key-workers in that conference a mimeographed bulletin which gives up-to-minute facts about the plan and program of the National Pilgrim Fellowship as well as that of the conference group.

The young people in the Valley of Virginia churches are working faithfully at their duties. One good example comes from the Mt. Olivet (G) young people who have been holding their meetings in the homes of members during the cold weather. As a special project, they have planned and presented programs in the homes of the aged and sick people of the community who were unable to attend church.

FRIENDSHIP.

Meditate upon these things;
Give thyself wholly to them;
That thy profiting may appear to all.
—I Timothy 4: 15.

"Seek a fuller understanding one of another in the interest of happy relations in home and community."—Statement of Purpose.

"This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." The world has not learned friendship's meaning yet,

Little indeed is all thou hast to give,
If it is but thine own; but bid me live Largeness of life beyond thee, and my debt

Eternally uncanceled will remain,
And we, though strangers, have not met in vain.

For friendship is not ours to lock away

In stifling chests, for fear of thievish hands;

It is a generous sun-warmth, that expands

The soul it flows through, turning night to day;

Light given to us to give abroad
again,

Till none in unblest darkness shall remain.

A friend—it is another name for God,
Whose love inspires all love, is all in all:

Profane it not, lest lowest shame befall!

Worship no idol, whether star or clod!
Nor think that any friend is truly thine,

Save as life's closest link with Love divine.

—Lucy Larcom.

Prayer.

Dear Father, who hast called us friends, we would dedicate more of our efforts to being good friends. In the final analysis, we believe that the peace of the world will depend upon our capacity for friendship, and so we would pray for a greater growth of friendliness. For we find that as our friendships in home and community grow we are better able to comprehend the great love of Thy Son. Even as He loved us, help us to love our neighbors. Amen.

RURAL AMERICA—A NEW FRONTIER.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 12, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Proverbs 24: 27-32.

Monday—Messiah's Earthly Blessing—
Ps. 72: 1-8.

Tuesday—Sharing With God—Prov.
3: 9, 10.

Wednesday—A Lesson from Lilies and Birds—Matt. 6: 25-34.

Thursday—Fate of a Rich Farmer—
Luke 12: 16-21.

Friday—Parable of the Sower—Matt.
13: 1-9.

Saturday—Spiritual Sowing and Reaping—Gal. 6: 7, 8.

This meeting should make Christian Endeavorers conscious of real problems in rural life. Rural life is honorable. Abel was a tiller of the soil. He was accepted in the sight of God. His offering was honored. America, through most of its history, has been a rural nation.

America's largest city during Revolutionary days was Philadelphia, with a population of 30,000. In 1880 over 70 per cent of our population was on farms or in villages. The 1920 census showed that the rural population for the first time had become a minority with 48.6 per cent. Since 1930 there has been a trend back to the farm.

These questions are important:

1. How much food could we have without the farmer?

2. To what extent do we depend upon rural people for our clothing, furniture, and other daily necessities?

3. How can Christian Endeavor help to break down the barriers of denominational bitterness which keep the rural church divided, poor, and inefficient?

4. What can Christian Endeavor do to create a spirit of friendship between rural youth and city youth?

5. If rural youth in large numbers would think of farming as a career, what would this do to youth as well as to rural communities?

6. To meet rural problems is it necessary to have a particularly trained leadership? What type of training is needed?

A number of persons may tell what they owe to Rural Life. (This may include gratitude for food, for nature's beauty, for some relative or friend who was reared in the country, etc.)

Consider the number of agencies and clubs which are meant to develop rural life.

Consider the next steps for the Church if it is help meet the needs of rural America.

Suggested hymns—

"O Worship the King."

"For the Beauty of the Earth."

PETER PREACHES TO GENTILES.

LESSON X—MARCH 5, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else.—Isaiah 45:22.

LESSON: Acts 10:1-48.

Here is another of the most interesting, and most inspiring chapters in the whole Bible. Here indeed is "the romance of righteousness" to use a term that Dr. Atkinson once coined. Let us try to get at the meaning of this thrilling story.

Here was a devout man, a Roman centurion, who had a hunger and thirst after righteousness, and who had long been praying for more light. As yet it seemed as if his prayers were unanswered. But one day as he was praying God spoke unto him, and assured him that his prayers and alms had not been unnoticed, and would not go unrewarded. He was instructed to send to Joppa for Simon Peter, who could tell him "what he oughtest to do." With characteristic soldierly obedience, Cornelius forthwith dispatched two servants and a soldier to Joppa for Simon. Blessed are they who understand what the will of the Lord is to do it.

Then here was Peter, at Joppa, stopping at the home of Simon a tanner, and therefore a man according to the strict Jewish law, "unclean," that is ceremonially unclean. Peter still thought of Christianity in narrow, provincial, and largely racial terms. He had not yet been laid hold on by the universal sweep of the gospel, and especially of its ministry to the Gentiles. And God in a strange and gripping way prepares him for this wider ministry. Coming home for dinner, and finding it not quite ready, Peter goes up on the flat roof of his host's home and falls asleep. While asleep he had a vision. A sheet, held by the four corners was let down from heaven. In it were all manner of beasts and creeping things and fowls, things unclean from the Jewish standpoint. Bidden to rise, kill and eat, Peter, promptly and perhaps passionately asserted that he did not break the ceremonial law—he did not eat things common or unclean. Thrice was Peter commanded to rise, kill and eat. Then the vision vanished after a voice had told Peter that he was not to call common or unclean what God had cleansed.

As he mused later on what the vision could mean, behold the delegation from Cornelius arrived at the door. They said they had been instructed by their master to bring Peter home with them. Peter put two and two together and the thing began to make sense. The next day he went with them.

When he reached Cornelius' home he found Cornelius and his family and a group of friends gathered there. Cornelius evidently had faith to believe that the Lord would perform what he had promised. After making somewhat of an apology for entering into a Gentile home, Peter asked, "what it was all about." When he heard the story from Cornelius, it not only made sense, it made the best kind of sense. It was the Lord at work, and it was marvelous in their eyes. One's heart thrills as he reads how God in His mysterious ways had brought this thing to pass.

Cornelius' words to Peter are significant. "Now, therefore, we are all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." That is the ideal of a service of worship—to be present in the Spirit, conscious that one is in the presence of God, and ready to hear a message from God. And the minister ought to have some word from God for those who thus gather.

Peter as usual took as his main theme, Jesus Christ. The record is brief, but it indicates that he gave an account of his life, and ministry, but emphasized especially his death and resurrection. He declared that through him there was remission of sins to those who believed. And even as Peter spoke, the Holy Spirit came in power upon those who heard the word. Those of the circumcision were astonished that God should give the Holy Spirit to the Gentiles, to those who had not first become Jews in their religious views. But there was the stubborn fact that had to be faced. There was nothing to do but to recognize it. Thus it was that Peter commanded them to be baptized and thus they were admitted into the household of faith. When the issue of admitting Gentiles into the church without circumcision later came up, Peter used this instance as the final argument. Thus did God witness to the fact that in His Son He had broken down the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile. Alas that there are still so many whose religion does not carry them across racial and social and national lines.

Tucked away in these forty-eight verses there are so many teaching truths that it is impossible to deal with them in this brief space. Here are a few typical ones that can be used with profit:

1. Prayer is effective, even where another does not know one is praying.
2. The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man is answered, but there may be a long delay before it is answered, and it may be answered in ways that he does not expect.
3. Spare moments rightly used often pay handsome dividends in the things of the spirit.
4. He that does the truth comes to the light.
5. The Holy Spirit breaks down the barriers of race and class and creed and color.
6. God is no respecter of persons. He does not judge a man by the color of his skin, or by the social position which he occupies.
7. Those who attend services of worship ought to go to hear what God has to say to them.
8. Those who preach should have something to say from God.
9. The baptism of the Holy Spirit ought to be the condition on which one is baptized.
10. Those who are willing to be led, will be led.

MONDAY.

IN PEACE OR WAR.

"Glory, honor and peace to every man that worketh good."—Rom. 2:10.

Things are not so good in our country, neither in the world. The political, social and industrial conditions disturb us. War clouds in other countries are ominous. What is a Christian to do? What is his duty? This is a question that confronts the most of us. It does not settle it to ignore it. We have a duty.

Let every one think peace and definitely and intelligently give thought to the whole subject.

Let everyone pray for and work for peace. God still answers prayer.

Let everybody promote peace. It is possible.

Let everybody work righteousness. You and I can do this.

Prayer—O Lord, send peace to our times. Only Thou canst still the passions of man and turn them to good. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE SCENE OF LIFE'S BATTLES.

"With the heart man believeth unto righteousness."—Rom. 10:10.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life."—Prov. 4:23.

*"The mind is its own place
And of itself can make
A heaven of hell."*—Milton.

It is hard for us to realize that it is not events nor circumstances that make up our lives; but that it is our minds—the things that are going on inside of us. Edward Young said, "Guard well thy thoughts; our thoughts are heard in heaven." Paul said, "Whatsoever things are honest, just, etc. . . . think on these things." In other words master your meditations. Direct your thoughts. This makes the man.

Prayer—O Lord, we would think Thy thoughts—thoughts of truth, love, beauty and service. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SMALLNESS.

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

We are at sea today. As I look out at its wide interminable expanse, the great circle gives me some idea of the bigness of the globe, and is a constant reminder that I am living in a big world and that I am a part of its entire make-up. It also reminds me how small I am, and that if I were to pass out I would not be missed. And yet in this smallness of myself lies all the possibilities of sin. God so loved me that this might not be so and that the bigness of the world and man and God might be one.

Prayer—Pray as you feel. Say the Lord's Prayer.

THURSDAY.

SUFFERING SAINTS.

"They looked unto him and were radiant."—Ps. 34:5.

Some of the bravest, cheeriest, and sanest souls I have ever known, souls whose inspiration have helped me to be steadfast and immovable in the Lord, have been life, or long time, prisoners of pain and suffering. In that prison they caught and breathed the spirit and wisdom of God. Some of the finest converts I have ever witnessed have been those who meditated upon their bed in their sufferings. They found themselves and arose in His name to become spiritual giants and unlimited souls.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for the sick and the suffering and may the light of their hearts shine for Thee unto a perfect day. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE BIBLE IS TRUE.

"Testimonies are very sure."—Ps. 93:1-5.

"Just when a whole aggregation of pseudo-scholars had convinced themselves, and were busy convincing the present generation of pupils, that the Bible is largely a collection of fables and folktales, written long after the events described, along come the men with the spades to dig up contemporary records of Scriptural personages, places and events, proving that the Bible is valid historically.

"Hebrew writings of a period when the 'scholars' said the Jews couldn't write; dated seals and pottery of the days when Israel was a kingdom.

"Take down the old Bible and read it in confident faith."—W. T. Ellis, in Christian Herald.

Prayer—Thy Word is forever true, we thank Thee, Lord. "Thy testimonies are very sure." Amen.

SATURDAY.

A SIN OF TODAY.

"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever."—Heb. 13:8.

"Telling to the generations to come the praise of the Lord."—Ps. 78:4.

The Bible is remarkable in its references to its own history showing the dealings of God with His people. Past performances are taken as a pledge of truth and present power. Our sin is to think of truth in the light of present events, forgetting the whole, of which the present is but a part. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away," saith the Lord. Let us remember that God will always be what he has been.

Prayer—O Father, give us the faith to believe that Thou art with us still and will ever be, world without end. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE ONLY SALVATION.

(Read Acts 4:12.)

His name in us, in business, in society, in politics, is being tabooed. It must be accepted. We need a herald of God to all the people to say, "Jesus saves."

THE PREACHER FOR THE WEEK IS
REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.,
SUFFOLK, VA.

AN OLD FASHIONED PREACHER.

"I was no prophet, neither was I the son of a prophet; but I was a herdsman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit; and the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel; now, therefore, hear thou the word of the Lord."—Amos 7: 14-16.

These are the words of an old fashioned preacher from one of the first volumes of sermons ever written. A volume of short sermons several centuries old, and yet they are fresh and timely for our present day. I like to take this little volume of great sermons in my hand and study them. They inspire me. I wish I could preach them to you in the spirit of love, and in the spirit of the Christ who came many centuries after these sermons were written. Amos never had the advantage of knowing Jesus as you and I may know him. But he knew justice and goodness as he learned it from God, and many of his lines sound mightily like the lines of our Lord. There is a sense in which Jesus could say he was not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, for he was a carpenter and reared in a carpenter's shop. Jesus could say the Lord took him from the carpenter's bench, and said unto him, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel (He said he was sent to the house of Israel), and like Amos, only more so, he could say, Hear ye, therefore, the word of the Lord.

Amos made a plea for social justice. Fair play cut a big part in the preaching of that old-fashioned preacher. Speaking for God, he said that the Lord said, "Take thou away from the noise of thy songs . . . but let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." Judgment is one of the sweet words of the Old Testament. Judgment is almost comparable to mercy, and love, and protection. When God speaks of judging for the widow, or the poor, or the helpless, it is not a sort of condemnation he is meaning. When he asks us to love judgment and justice, he is thinking of the fair play which every righteous man admires. Without fair play between all, and justice and judgment for all, pretty songs, and sweet stringed music meant nothing. Amos recounts many of their evil practices, their bribes and their selfish barter, and tells them that they cannot buy their way into the heart of God, and commands them to let "judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." We need such preaching in ten thousand pulpits today, just as we have always needed it from since long before the day of Amos.

Amos also warned them that since God had given them great opportunities and privileges, that he would expect in return that they accept the responsibility which privilege always implies. "You only have I known of all the earth, therefore, will I punish you for all your iniquities." Because you have been given the blessings of a Chosen People you should have been that much better, and nobler in all your ways. Have you had blessings from God? Know then, that responsibility is laid upon you. Do you like to think of the fine name you have inherited? The social position you may hold? The opportunities you are having? Then, remember that for all these things you must give a just and proper accounting.

Again Amos warned of the worthlessness of worship that was hollow, on account of the lack of sincerity, and the lack of good life to back it up. Remember he was prophesying to a nation that was powerful, and rich in its luxury. Israel had not often known such a condition. Theirs had usually been a hard lot, but when Amos prophesied, they were living in comparative ease. They had turned to themselves rather than to God, and counted on their own strength rather than his. They kept up a semblance of worship, but God says to them, "I hate, I despise your feast days, and I will not dwell in your solemn assemblies: though you offer me burnt offerings of your beasts." The Lord honors true worship, and calls us to it. He says, "A broken and a contrite spirit" he will not despise. That is, he will honor those who come humbly and sincerely to worship him. I know of nothing so strengthening, and helpful as the worship of God in his holy sanctuary. It is so vital it should never be overlooked.

Amos gives to his hearers the purpose of the "depression" which they had had: "I also have given you cleanness of teeth in all your cities, and want of bread in all your places; yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the Lord." Their poverty, adversity, their testings were to cause them to "return" to God. This they had not done. Many answers have been given to our "depression," and our "repression." May it not be a good thing if we turn to the prophet Amos for his answer? God is trying to lead us into the right way, and to keep us from the wrong way. Wealth in materials is often a great blessing. It is quite human to seek it. But wealth is not everything. Much of the leadership of the world has come from the poor. Amos was a poor man, and yet his great prophecies still bless civilization. Jesus had "no place," Paul had "nothing" ("having nothing, yet possessing all things"—II Cor. 6:10), many are the poor people whose rich lives have made others rich ("yet making many rich"—II Cor. 6:10).

Have you had trouble? Let it draw you nearer to God. Have you had adversity? Let it become a blessing. Have you had sorrow? Let it lead you into the closer presence of the Man of sorrow. Let all these things do exactly what Amos cried out for his people to do: "Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel." The words need not be looked upon as a condemning utterance, but rather as a challenging one. They need not drive us, but rather lead us. "Prepare to meet thy God," in the day's duties; "prepare to meet thy God" as youth in the call of life investment; prepare to meet thy God" to bless thee, and help thee, in the hour of temptation; and "prepare to meet thy God" as he shall call for thy complete consecration of life and all to him.

So the message of Amos is a message for us: social justice; privilege means responsibility in direct ratio thereto; worship without corresponding living daily devotion is of little avail; adversity a challenge to return to God; and the everlasting fact that we are all sure to meet God, and that we should learn to walk with him, and meet him in peace.

"There is no royal road to anything. One thing at a time, all things in succession. That which grows fast withers rapidly; that which grows slowly endures."

"Stewardship puts the Golden Rule in business in place of the rule of gold."

NEWS AND VIEWS

INGRAM CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

At Ingram Christian Church every service has been conducted as usual except one Saturday preaching service which was called off because of a funeral. On February 2, Virginia Dare Linens, one of our young members who was received last year, was called to her reward. Our church and community were greatly saddened, for Virginia was such a sweet and loveable character.

Our Sunday school, under J. K. Landrum's leadership, has averaged sixty during January. All bills were paid last year at Conference. The church indebtedness has been reduced two-thirds during the two years of our pastorate, and we plan to pay off the remaining one-third by 1940. The Deacons report the church working well and harmoniously. Plans have been made for a special Easter program.

HOLY NECK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

On Christmas night, the young people of the Holy Neck Christian Church presented a play, "Where the Child Lay." This was directed by Rev. Arnold Slater and Mrs. H. V. Holland. The choir made its first appearance in vestments at this service and the audience commented very favorably on them.

The young people of our church also had charge of the worship service on Sunday, February 5, in observance of Youth Week.

On February 7, our pastor, Rev. Slater, reviewed the study book, "The Church Takes Root in India" for the Woman's Missionary Society. This was an all-day meeting and the whole program was greatly enjoyed—including the pot-luck lunch.

The Baracca Class presented the church with a mimeograph in the early fall and we now have our church bulletin each Sunday—and wonder how we ever got along without it.

A MEMBER.

WE SING.

A few Sudays ago, while in Shanghai, China, it was our privilege and pleasure to sing a concert to an audience of over fifteen hundred people. This congregation was at the Metropole Theater and represented the great Mission and Good Will of the Fourth Marines of the United States

Marine Corps on duty there. Chaplain R. R. Marken of the United States Navy has charge of that work and attracts vast congregations of people. The audience of this occasion consisted of nearly every nationality in the world, and yet there was not one present who did not understand English.

As the Psalmist asked, "How could we sing the Lord's songs in a strange land?" And yet it was the inspiration of the strange land and the strange audience that seemed to sing in our listening ears and round us rang the music of radiant souls. God was very near and there was a sense of His power there. It gave us great joy. It was an opportunity and privilege of a life-time, and one which we shall not soon forget. Oh, that we might sing the songs of Zion everywhere and to all people.

FALSE TEACHERS.

The modern doctrine of no endless hell or eternal punishment is a licentious doctrine which the man of the world will accept too readily. If it were a spiritual doctrine, the natural man and carnal mind would reject it. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit."—I Cor. 1:14. If Universalism and Russellism were true, all the entire race would be children of God and there would be no children of the devil. Jesus says: "The tares are the children of the wicked one." He again said to some: "Ye are of your father, the devil, the lust of your father ye will do."—John 8:43.

It is to be deplored that Russellites and Universalists will scatter their spurious literature all through the country and poison the minds of many little children of God by their false teachings of no hell, no resurrection, no election, and that everyone makes his own atonement.

Jesus speaking of the wicked goats says: "These shall go away into everlasting (aiovion) punishment; but the righteous into life eternal (aiovion). Everlasting and eternal from the same Greek word "aiovion," both having the same meaning—endless in deviation. Matt. 25:46. Jesus also said, "Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Matt. 25:41.

To deny that there is an endless punishment for the wicked denies the endless consequence of sin, denies Bible election, special atonement or redemption, grace, salvation, and the resurrection of the just and the unjust. It denies the experience of the child of God who saw the justice of God in his eternal condemnation. It would make Judas (a devil and son of perdition) and wicked Herod, all children of God. Jesus taught the resurrection of the just and unjust—one to the resurrection of life; the unjust to the resurrection of damnation. John 5:28, 29. Paul taught the resurrection of the just and the unjust. Acts 24:15. "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." Psalms 103:14; 16:6. Luke 10:20. Rev. 13:8; 17:8. Rev. 20:10-15; 21:10. "They shall be tormented day and night forever and ever." Rev. 21:10.

BOOK REVIEWS.

THREE GOOD BOOKS FOR YOUR LIBRARY.

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

Every minister who is worthy of the title is naturally interested in good books recently coming from the press. Here are three that I would like to recommend to my brother ministers:

The Rocky Road to Dublin by Seumas MacManus. The book is a most interesting story of Irish life. Mr. MacManus is one of the leading Irish authors of our day. It was my happy privilege to spend the summer of 1930 with Mr. MacManus in Donegal, Ireland, along with Dr. L. E. Smith, after we attended the World Council of Congregational Churches at Bournemouth, England. Mr. MacManus is one of the most interesting characters I have ever met. His books are unusually illuminating. This book which has just come from the press is the story of his life, and his interesting experiences in Ireland. I have never seen a book that portrayed the life of a country and its people more vividly and entrancingly. The name Seumas MacManus is all the recommendation any of his books need to one who has read any of his writings or to one who is a student of English literature. The book reads like a thrilling romance, presenting some of the most beautiful and intimate life touches one has ever been privileged to read. It is an interesting book as a story of a life that has been a great benediction to our generation; and the fact that the book portrays the experiences of an individual's life in its daily contact with true Irish life makes the book of unusual interest to people who want to know more about Ireland and the Irish folk. You will want to include this book in your list of 1939 selections. It is published by MacMillan Publishing Company, and can be procured at any standard book store for the sum of $2.50. Both ministers and laymen will enjoy this book.

New Frontiers of Religion by Professor Arthur L. Swift, Jr., of Union Theological Seminary is another book of interest to laymen as well as to ministers. I have known Dr. Swift for several years, and he is one of the practical leaders in religious thought and life among the younger generation of writers. Dr. Swift, in this thought-provoking volume, gives a comprehensive survey of the Church in its origin, history, and objectives. The book shows most careful study on the part of the author, as he brings data that is invaluable from his wide reading upon the rural church, the village church, and the city church. The New Frontiers of Religion which he brings to your attention in this book must be recognized by any minister who wishes to enter into the new and larger opportunities of service which the church must assume in the days ahead. Dr. Swift has a very clear style of presentation and marshals invaluable material in every chapter in such a way that the reader feels when he has finished the book that he has been spending days in some university library. It is a book which every pastor should read. It is also published by the MacMillan Publishing Company and can be secured from any standard book store for $2.00.

The Making of a Minister by Dr. William H. Leach, editor of "Church Management," is the title of a book which every pastor and every ministerial student should read without fail. The book is published by the Cokesbury Press of Nashville, Tenn. Few books come to the minister's desk which are more rewarding. It is a book that will be widely read and greatly appreciated because of its practical common sense as the author deals with such subjects as "The Background of the Minister," "The Education of the Minister," "The First Years of Disillusionment in the Minister's Life," "The Minister's Economic Security," "The Productive Years," "The Ethics of the Parsonage," "The Minister and His Community," "The Minister as a Leader in His Church," "The Minister as a Pastor," "The Minister as a Personal Evangelist," "The Minister in His Pulpit," "Ministerial Ethics," "The Destruction that Wasteth at Noon Day," and "When a Minister Retires." There isn't a minister in the country who wouldn't find that this book will throw light on life's ways for him. The style is clear, the illustrations true to life, the logic convincing, and the message from a minister to ministers is most timely. This very interesting book for ministers can be procured in any standard book store for $1.50.

In Memoriam

IVES.

On December 5, 1938, First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., lost its oldest member in the person of Lewis Cass Ives. Mr. Ives was nearly ninety-one years of age, having been born in Old Berkley, Va., March 30, 1848.

As a young man he united with Old Providence Christian Church, and maintained his membership there until the merger of Old Providence with the Christian Temple. Subsequently he transferred to First Church, and has been a devoted member and a generous giver ever since.

Bro. Ives was especially interested in the Orphanage at Elon College and was a liberal supporter of that worthy cause. He is survived by a sister, Miss Luna Ives, the last of a large family of twelve children.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."—(Rev. 14: 13.)

JOHN H. KNIGHT.

ATKINS.

Whereas, God, in His infinite love has seen fit to call to his reward our brother, George Shirley Atkins on May 2, 1938, we, as a church and as individuals, desire to record our appreciation and our sorrow in our loss. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Isle of Wight Christian Church, of which he was a member has lost one for whom they mourn.

2. That we extend to the family our warmest sympathy and earnest prayers; that God's promises may fall soothingly upon their sad hearts, and when life's work is done, they may form an unbroken circle around His throne.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one spread upon the church records, and one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

McLENNON.

Damascus Christian Church near Chapel Hill, N. C., lost one of its most loyal members, Mr. Dock Allen McLennon, on January 19, 1939.

Whereas, in his death this church has lost one of its most faithful members. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we give thanks to God for the great blessings of his life and the association that we have had with him.

2. That we strive to live as true and loyal to our Master as did this brother.

3. That we extend love and sympathy to the family.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded on our minutes, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

By vote of the committee representing the Board of Trustees and the committee representing the Alumni Association in joint session, the plan to form an Elon College Anniversary Club with a membership fee of $50.00 was authorized. We arrive at $50.00 by asking for $1.00 each year for every year of the college's existence. "Fifty Dollars—Fifty Years—Three Thousand Volunteers" is the slogan. Surely there are as many as three thousand individuals in our church, among the alumni and friends of the college who are able and will contribute $50.00 to clear the college of its debts if they are properly approached. There certainly should be at least one person in every local church together with the pastor who would take this campaign to heart and use his influence in helping to make this undertaking a success.

Beginning this week we are publishing herewith the names of all who have joined the Club, indicating the amount of their pledge and the amount paid. These facts are to be graphically presented by means of the accompanying thermometer. As pledges and payments come in the thermometer will mount up.

Courage, Conflict, Victory

By HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK.

God of grace and God of glory,
On Thy people pour Thy power;
Crown Thine ancient church's story
Bring her bud to glorious flower.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage
For the facing of this hour.

Lo! the hosts of evil round us
Scorn Thy Christ; assail His ways!
From the fears that long have bound us,
Free our hearts to faith and praise;
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
For the living of these days.

Cure Thy children's warring madness
Bend our pride to Thy control;
Shame our wanton, selfish gladness
Rich in things and poor in soul.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
Lest we miss Thy kingdom's goal.

Set our feet on lofty places;
Gird our lives that they may be
Armored with all Christ-like graces
In the fight to set men free.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage,
That we fail not man nor Thee!

Save us from weak resignation
To the evils we deplore;
Let the search for Thy salvation
Be our glory evermore.
Grant us wisdom, grant us courage
Serving Thee whom we adore.

[May be sung to the tune of Regent Square—"Angels from the Realms of Glory."]

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

The Woman's Missionary Society of Burlington, N. C., spent a day recently studying "The City Church." Mrs. P. D. Rudd, nee Alice Barrett, daughter of our missionary to Porto Rico, was the leader.

On next Sunday morning Mrs. Ruby Manora Manikam of India will speak at Elon College at the eleven o'clock service. Mrs. Manikam is connected with the National Christian Council of India, located at Nagpur.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor of First Church, Greensboro, N. C., has a class of 65 boys and girls who are preparing for church membership. Many of them will doubtless unite with the church at the coming Easter season.

The young people of the First Church, Greensboro, enjoyed a banquet on last Thursday evening. Nearly fifty young people enjoyed the meal, the "toastmastering" of "Buttermilk" (Loudermilk), and the talk by Rev. F. C. Lester.

The Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies brought inspiration to many of our churches in that state. Among the speakers was our own Dr. Walter Judd, a returned medical missionary from China. While in Florida, Dr. Judd preached in the First Congregational - Christian Church, Winter Park.

Rev. J. Frank Apple of Elon College, N. C., says that some of his churches expect to get their picture in THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the near future. THE CHRISTIAN SUN welcomes such cooperation and hopes that many other churches will send a cut or a picture, together with a write-up of what is going on.

Rev. J. E. McCauley of Richmond, Va., has announced sermon topics as follows: Theme: "Six Days With Jesus." March 5—"A Day of Fellowship," March 12—"A Day at Noon Day," March 19—"A Day at Evening Tide," March 26—"A Day of Night," April 2—"A Day of Afternoons," April 9—"A Day at Sunrise."

Rev. J. H. Knight, pastor of First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., was the speaker at the World Day of Prayer at Holy Neck Christian Church on February 24. Others taking part in the program were: Mrs. E. L. Rawles, Mrs. A. L. Jolly, Mrs. E. T. Holland, Mrs. Nell Langston, Miss Frances Everett, Mrs. H. Everett, Mrs. H. L. Worrell, Mrs. J. O. Davidson, and Rev. Arnold Slater, pastor. Members of the Holland Christian Church rendered special music.

Our Burlington, N. C., Church is planning for a fine Easter program, with services on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings during Holy Week. The adult choir will render appropriate music, which will be followed by the Communion on Thursday evening. The boys and girls will probably have Communion on Friday afternoon. The three choirs will join in a processional for the Easter morning service, and the Youth Fellowship will present a pageant Easter Sunday night.

"THE COLLEGE SHOULD BE SELF-SUPPORTING."

The above remark was made to me by an interested member of our church and an alumnus of Elon College. We were discussing the matter of the Fiftieth Anniversary and the expected support of the college by the churches. My question of him was "How is the college to be supported? How is it to earn its own money? Do you feel that way about state institutions? Should a part of our taxes go for education? Should our public schools be self-supporting? Should our state universities be self-supporting?" Of course we all understand that if there were not public funds, there could be no public education, only the wealthy would have the opportunities of education. It is a great blessing to our country that schools are made available for our children. State schools must be supported by the state. The church needs its schools. The state and society need the type of character as leaders that is the fruit of our church school. I would regret to be forced to contemplate a citizenry without the leavening influence through training of our church institution. Certainly I cannot think of our own church separate and apart from our own college.

If the church is to have a school, it must of necessity assume some financial responsibilities in connection therewith. The families of our church who have children to educate are not financially able to pay the entire cost of their education, and our church has never expected them to. Liberal souls among us from the first made sacrificial gifts that we might have an institution of higher learning for our church. All through the years the church has generously supported her college. Now is the time for every interested individual to express his interest and rally to the support of the institution that has been provided out of the generosity and affection of a loyal constituency.

No individual who attends Elon College is asked to pay more than 50 per cent of the cost of his education. We have a million and a quarter dollars invested. The dividends on this investment consist of character and personality, trained and directed for fruitful living in a needy world. Your contributions for the continuance of this essential task will be greatly appreciated.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE ANNI-VERSARY SERVICE.

The Christian Temple was opened and the first service of worship was held in it on Sunday, March 16, 1924. It was a great occasion, with great congregations, inspiring music and sermons, and a generous out-pouring of pledges and money. The church itself is a lovely expression of the work of artists and artisans, wrought out in wood and stone and glass. Under the able leadership of Dr. L. E. Smith, the Christian Temple became a vital factor in the work of our denomination, both at home and abroad.

A special Anniversary Service in honor of the fifteenth year of the opening of the Temple will be held on Sunday, March 19. Dr. Smith will be the guest preacher on that occasion. Members of the Temple Choir will render special music, one number of which will be "Open the Gates of the Temple," which was sung at the service fifteen years ago. A number of new members will be received at the morning service of worship. Members of the church and congregation will be given an opportunity to make an offering at the services, although no pressure will be brought to bear on anyone and those who cannot give will not be embarrassed. A cordial invitation is hereby extended to friends of the Temple to attend the morning and evening services, if possible.

H. S. HARDCASTLE,
Pastor.

A MEMBERSHIP GOAL.

At the February meeting of our ministers in North Carolina the discussion of evangelism led to the statement of each pastor present concerning a goal of new members to be received by Easter. No church was listed for fewer than five new members, and the total membership goal for the thirteen pastors present was one hundred and sixty.

Since that time this method of evangelism has been called in question by a young minister. He feels that setting a goal for new members is liable to make churchmen forget the real motive for securing membership, and think only of reaching the goal set.

Until our churches really begin to increase in membership, there is no apparent danger from this source. Of course it is possible that one could become so absorbed in reaching the goal that he would forget that church members should be born of the spirit of Christ, but it is not likely that those who are aflame with the zeal of the Lord will ever forget the type of character needed on the part of those who take upon themselves the responsibility of church work.

On the other hand it does seem that church workers may well decide on what they are going to undertake in the name of the Lord. If it is all right to decide to try to win one person to allegiance to Christ and the Church, it is equally as all right to try to win ten, twenty, or a hundred. This writer would urge that each individual, and each church decide upon a goal for new members, and then go out with all diligence and humility to win them to the Christian way of life and to membership in the Church. If the suffering, death and resurrection of our Lord Christ means anything to us, it is important to try to make it worth the same to our friends.

EASTER AND THE MISSIONARY MESSAGE.

When the full meaning of Easter burst upon the minds of the Disciples, they began to preach to all who would hear that God had raised Jesus from the dead, and that in like manner God would give new life to all who would repent of sin and walk in His way. It was out of the Easter experience that the Disciples found their message for the world. Fear banished like the mist of the morning, for it mattered no longer what men might do to those who loved God. Death was swallowed up with victory. Life was more powerful than cross or sword or prison. Persons crushed to earth would rise again. God is at work in His world trying to make new creatures of all his created people. The message of Easter is the message of God's love and power, and it belongs to all the world.

We readily agree with the followers of Jesus as to the beauty and significance of the Easter story, but it sometimes seems to be a bit difficult for us to spread the message with the same enthusiasm they had. It costs us money.

If we can visualize like they did, then we can share their joyous enthusiasm. If we can see God's children being crucified on the crosses of greed, selfishness, hatred, and war as the Disciples saw Jesus hanging on Calvary's cross, then we may become eager to tell of God's love that will keep men from a cross if given a chance. If the problems of the poor, the sick, the ignorant, the sin-sick can become our own heart-problems, then we will begin to feel that something should be done about it at once. If we can see how money given in our churches will send ministers, doctors, nurses, teachers, and artisans of many kinds out to the needy places of the earth to minister and to bring new life that flows from the heart of God to all His people as it did to Jesus in Joseph's garden on that first Easter Morning, then we will give with gladness of heart.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN AND THE SOUTHEAST.

On another page is a very thought-provoking article called "A Different Point of View" and signed "A Reader." This is part of a greatly appreciated letter to the editor, and was printed for its worth without permission from the writer. No name is signed for this reason, and not because the writer of the letter is incapable or unwilling to defend his statements.

The editor of the "The Christian Sun" is willing to admit that this paper does not represent the ideas of our people throughout the Southeast. He doubts seriously that one paper can do so successfully. The ideas of our people are so varied that the only possible way to represent all is for all to speak their minds. It just happens that most of those who write for this paper have similar ideas. But that does not mean that other ideas are purposely left out. On the contrary, the editor welcomes all constructive ideas. He has no desire that all articles in this paper reflect his own notion of what is correct. He simply desires that those who write for publication have a message that is true to fact and helpful to those who read.

"The Christian Sun" is not unconscious of the sufferings of the people in our Southeast or any other place. The editor has spent considerable time in a hospital where he was acutely conscious of pain, but most of his thought and conversation were given to the beautiful things roundabout. Flowers, friendships, sacrificial service of nurses, doctors and those who carried on the work that he could not do—these were the things that brought the desire to fight off disease and be well again. It is the nobility and beauty of ideals that lift. The reading public surely is keenly conscious of the sordidness of the world in which we live. Those who preach in print and pulpit need to lift thoughts above sordid things, if possible.

This certainly does not mean that we should close our eyes to human needs about us. It is probably true this this paper should do more (Continued on page 9.)

A LAYMAN LOOKS AT MISSIONS

[The following letter was written by a layman to laymen and is used by permission. Mr. Fairbanks is president of the Central States Life Insurance Co., St. Louis, Mo. Ed.]

Dear Fellow Congregationalists:

Last spring I was asked to become a member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions. Recently I attended the Fall Meeting of the Committee in Boston which lasted two days, and I was so impressed with the work of this Committee and of the American Board that I want to share my impressions with some of the men and women in our Congregational Churches in Missouri. This I am attempting to do in this letter.

The American Board has carried on since 1810. Although it has of necessity greatly reduced the extent of its work during the depression, it is today supporting 467 missionaries in active service in the Near East, Africa, India, China, Japan, the Philippines, Micronesia, and Mexico. These missionaries are directing 6,608 National Christian Workers in 13 missions and 2,813 places of worship. They work in 765 churches with a membership of 107,596 people and in 1,304 Sunday schools with 85,286 pupils. The Board has responsibility for 23 hospitals and 40 dispensaries which last year provided 404,000 in-patient days and gave 617,717 out-patient treatments. In education it helps support and direct the work of 10 colleges, 41 theological and training schools and over 1,000 lower schools with a total enrollment of nearly 100,000 students.

The Prudential Committee, which consists of 36 members, twelve of whom must be women, is really an Executive Committee. Its Chairman, Rev. Russell Henry Stafford, D. D., of Boston, was formerly of Pilgrim Church in St. Louis. Its members include many of the ablest men and women in our denomination.

The purpose of the Fall Meeting was to hear reports from the Department heads on the progress of the work and to adopt a budget for 1939. In thrilling, graphic word pictures Miss Mabel E. Emerson presented the work in the Near East and Africa; Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield in Japan; Rev. Robert E. Chandler in China; Rev. Alden H. Clark in the Philippines, Mexico, Spain, and India. The work abroad requires able, efficient, and thoughtful leadership and direction at home and we Congregationalists and Christians are most fortunate to have a staff of wonderful leaders at the home base in Boston. As each of the speakers told of the work under his direction, one was filled with pride that he had a small part in it, and with deep regret that pressing and promising appeals for enlargement of the work could not be granted.

You will be proud to learn that every one of our stations in North China is in operation serving these bewildered and terror-stricken people, particularly in the hospitals and dispensaries. The example of your missionaries, staying on the job at the risk of their lives and health, has made a profound impression on the people. Schools and colleges, together with the students, have been moved into the interiors and classes resumed. In a world torn with so many warring factions at so many points, the unselfish service of our missionaries is most inspiring. Many of them have given their best years to this work for exceedingly modest compensation and during the depression over $700,000 of the Board's budget was contributed by the Foreign Missions themselves. The Board adopted a balanced budget of $933,308 for 1938-1939, which compares with one of $1,780,624 in 1929-30. The Church's giving to the American Board in that period dropped from $934,489 to $426,100, which is very drastic cutting and I feel it is much more drastic in percentage than the reduction of our own individual church expense. The remainder of the budget is to made up of gifts from individuals ($90,000) and from income from legacies, endowments, and so on. The present budget is the lowest adopted in ten years, while the need for the work done by the representatives of the Board is the greatest in twenty-five years.

You can be proud of your American Board. The direction of the work is in able hands. Through it you are holding out a helping hand to hundreds of thousands of helpless and unfortunate people. You can increase your gift to its work with full assurance that the money is greatly needed.

We, here in the Middle West, can show our appreciation of the fine work of the American Board for more than one hundred and twenty-eight years by increasing our gifts and urging others in our churches to increase theirs, so that the Board may have in hand funds to meet a few of the pressing needs facing it.

Sincerely,
ALFRED FAIRBANK.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Millions of church members are thinking about the observance of Lent. The various churches have their adopted method of emphasizing this season in their private devotions and public worship. One should remember those families who have a deep interest in a new mound in a near-by cemetery. Yes, there are some flowers on that mound, faded, but silent reminders of that day when the minister stood in their midst and read a solemn committal "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," while their hearts felt a fresh break. And there are older mounds covered with grass, but loved ones return now and then with fresh flowers and fresher memories of other days—and a voice, now silent, seems to speak of comfort and eternal life.

And during the Lenten Season, when there is an emphasis upon self-denial and positive consecration, bereaved hearts should find some note of comfort in song and meditation. Death is always a test of faith for the living. The burial of the dead is heart-breaking. The return home is so disturbing. There is an empty room. The chair at the dining table is taken away. There is a vacant chair in the living room. Vacant chairs. Empty spaces. Silence.

There are many things to think over: the long sickness—the failing strength, last words. When dear friends—very dear friends—come in there is a moving of the chairs into a little semi-circle around the open fire-side, for a little heart-to-heart talk, over some of these precious things—memories now—with some new tears. These tears will come, but they will make the vision clearer afterwards. In spite of that empty chair and the broken family circle, faith insists that the number of the family remains the same. Father is absent, but he is still a member of the family. His photograph is snugly fitted in a little frame on the mantle. Mother has gone back to live with her Savior. But her name is counted in the family list. In another home a son, the pride of his parents and the hope of loving hearts, slipped away to enter another school with the Master Teacher. A loving daughter fell a victim to merciless disease. And thus the story might be continued. In every instance there are perplexed minds and troubled hearts which need help.

And when such a trial comes it is blessed to know that there is comfort for Christian people. There is only one source of help. That help comes from One who understands. Jesus was a man of sorrows. He died of a broken heart. He wept with His friends, Mary and Martha. He has a message. But He offers more. He comes as a blessed Presence. "I am with you." "Let not your heart be troubled—believe in Me." He speaks through His word. Open your Bible. Read His words. They will help. Talk to Him. Listen for His message for your heart.

Bereaved people should remember that this month is not the last month, and this day is not God's last day of time. Other days will come. And these other days will bring to trusting faith a sweeter fellowship and a better understanding of our Father's will. The future does not end when youth yields to the demands of death. There is a future for young people, who "die in the Lord," far surpassing any plans loving parents could devise. And there is a future for those who remain. Death changes many of our plans, but it should not destroy them. If we will be content to leave our plans in the hands of the Wise Architect, our bereavements may become a blessing, for, by them, our hearts may be made better. "Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted."

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF OUR CHURCH.

Years ago the Christian Church in response to the demands of the future founded Elon College and thereby laid the foundations for a greater and a more useful church. The college stands as the church's contribution to the young people of our constituency. The planning, the building, the support, and the sacrifices of the church for the training and development of the youth of our church are all in vain unless parents and young people cooperate in placing our young people in our own school for training.

Great care has been taken to see that the needs of modern youth in their efforts to prepare themselves adequately for life may be met on the campus of our own school. Preliminary training in all professions is provided for. Courses leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree are equal to those of larger and more influential institutions. There is no educational need for our young people to go elsewhere for their training. Our standards are high, our work is thorough, and our graduates achieve in whatever field they elect to serve. At Elon College there is a wholesome blending of educational advantages, cultural opportunities, and spiritual inspiration. The needs of our students are carefully considered and conscientiously cared for.

During these months young men and women graduating from high school will be considering college. "Where shall I go?" is the big question. In selecting a college certain fundamental questions must be faced—location of the institution, equipment, faculty, student body, curriculum, standing, and atmosphere. The readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN almost without exception know something of these questions as related to their own institution, but unless you have been closely in touch with the college in recent years, your knowledge is inadequate. A request for current catalogue and other materials will bring you present day facts that will be convincing.

In all probability we will have more applications than we can accept. Elon College, however, was built principally for our young people. This is an appeal to pastors, parents, and alumni to cooperate with us in directing the attention of our own prospective college students to our own college. Won't you please take time now to send us names and addresses of those who should enter Elon College in September. A special appeal has been mailed to all pastors in the Southern Convention. To date we have had but few, I shall not say how few, replies from our pastors. We are encouraged by the increase from our own young people in Elon College during the past year. We should continue to make progress.

LITTLE CREEK.

After the Christian Missionary Association in November, we bought a lot for our new church at Little Creek, east of Ocean View, Norfolk, Va. As soon as it was generally known, the gentleman we were renting from asked for his hall. That necessitated our building a new hall on our church lot. We have all the church furniture installed and are holding Sunday school and preaching services every Sunday. We will appreciate a visit from any of our church friends.

OUR INSTITUTIONS

The Orphanage

Elon College

Dear Friends:

I am very grateful for the splendid loyalty that the Sunday schools and churches gave me in 1938. Their loyalty was beautiful and encouraging. We keep a special record book in which all offerings are recorded monthly as they come in. This record is so ruled that each offering shows for the month it is received beginning with January and so on across the page for each month. We have quite a number of Sunday schools that have a credit for each month, and when each monthly space is filled it looks really nice.

In looking over this monthly record book for last year, I thought perhaps it would be interesting to you to know that every Sunday school in the Western North Carolina made an offering except one. Not all of them made monthly offerings, but sometime during the year they made an offering. The Eastern North Carolina Conference had five that made no offering; Eastern Virginia, two; North Carolina and Virginia, one; Valley of Virginia, three. We hope this year to get all of them on our list.

The writer wants to call the attention of our good women to the fact that we are very short in dresses for the girls. It has been the custom of the Ladies Aid Societies, the Women's Societies, and many individuals to make and send us dresses for Easter. We are counting on you this year. We know that you will not fail us. The little boys under ten years of age need little spring suits. This will give each one an opportunity to show a little love to a little helpless child. If you had a flock of sheep and a little lamb's mother should die, you would not let it perish; you would feed it with warm, sweet milk. If the weather were cold, you would see that it had a warm, comfortable place to sleep where it would be protected from the cold. How much better is a little motherless child.

Superintendent.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

I am sure that more Sunday schools and churches participated in the College period than have reported. Many Sunday schools took fifth Sunday offerings for the college in January that have not heretofore received such offerings. We are grateful for this increased interest. Fewer churches, however, have sent in contributions than heretofore during the college period. Surely there are many who have not yet reported. We should raise at least half of our apportionments during the college period. To date, however, we have received only a little more than $1,000.00. If you have not taken your offering for the college, won't you please do so as early as it is convenient, and if you have received the offering, won't you please send it in. The spring and summer months are our lean periods, and we need the help of the church most. We are getting along fine at the college, but it will require diligent efforts and faithful cooperation to continue in the way of progress. We are grateful for your help and encouragement.

FOR THE CHILDREN

CHRISTMAS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

[One of our preachers from Eastern Virginia, Rev. H. E. Rountree, Chaplain in the U. S. Navy, spent last Christmas in the Philippine Islands. He sent us this article telling about Christmas there. Ed.]

In the Philippines Christmas is a much different day than it is in the United States. In the first place there is the vast difference in climate. For while Christmas for the greater part of the U. S. A. is a day of snow and cold, in the Philippines it is just another hot day. But even aside from the climate, there are yet more differences in the celebration of this feast. For while in America the children are anxiously awaiting the arrival of good old jolly Santa Claus with his sleigh and reindeer, here in the Islands the children know very little of giving and receiving of presents and gifts. Here it is rather a big fiesta and as such is a day of eating and excitement. There will be bands playing and candles burning and church bells ringing, processions and parades, and everybody will be dressed in his best clothes and going to church.

Yes, Christmas is a feast day meaning different things to the Filipino child and the American child. For in America, Santa Claus comes to the jingle of sleigh bells, whereas in the Philippines, the Savior comes to the clamour of church bells. But the joy is the same since Christmas here as well as anywhere in the world means the Birthday of the Savior.

Lacking fir trees and the tinsel that usually are symbols of this season in America, the natives have with nimble brown fingers devised other decorations to symbolize this happy day. Paper lanterns in the shape of stars, suns, moons, and even fish, are to be seen everywhere decorating homes and streets and churches. It is a day of universal fiesta, and pigs that have been fattened for the occasion are being roasted. Sauces have been spiced, even the daily rice has taken new forms in the way of cakes and sweetened tidbits. There is dancing and fun-making and the swains and the lassies do a little courting. Calesa and pony and driver are all in festive attire. The poorest of the poor will have something in the way of dress or eats or drinks to help them to celebrate the Feast Day of our Savior. For a week or more at the early hour of three in the morning every man and woman has gone to church to take part in the Holy Mass of the Cockcrow, chanted in the native tagalog. The Padre has been up early and late.

The little boys have serenaded and paraded through the village with homemade instruments of shell and bamboo, rendering a doleful dirge intended to put everyone in an expective mood. The village school has been tutoring the children in native dance steps and the adults have practiced for the century-old Christmas

WINTER.

By ALFRED TENNYSON.

The frost is here,
And fuel is dear,
And woods are sear,
And fires burn clear,
And frost is here
And has bitten the heel of the going year.

Bite, frost, bite!
You roll away from the light
The blue wood-louse, and the pump doormouse,
And the bees are still'd, and the flies are kill'd,
And you bite far into the heart of the house,
But not into mine.

Bite, frost, bite!
The woods are the searer,
The fuel is all the dearer,
The fires are all the clearer,
My spring is all the nearer.
You have bitten into the heart of the earth,
But not into mine.

Day. There will be no siesta today. And even though the heat is just intense as on any other day, even though the flies and the bugs are just as pestiferous as ever, and the chickens and pigs are still scampering around annoyingly in every street, it is Christmas. The little boy naked save for his undershirt and at play in the carabou bath is well aware that this is an occasion, his little tummy is round with an unusual rundness of much rice and special dishes, and besides, everybody is in rare good humor. Incessantly the air is rent with the blasts of thundering, exploding fire-crackers. There is a rout of unusual noises; the smoke of cocoonut fires is a little more acrid as many dinners are being prepared; even the faithful carabou is allowed to wallow unmolested in his bath. It is truly a day of fiesta, for it is Christmas in the Philippines.

INTERESTING BROADCAST.

On March 29, at 12:30 Eastern Standard Time on the National Farm and Home hour of the National Broadcasting Company, the Brownhelm Congregational Church in Lorraine County, Ohio, will conduct an informal discussion group on the subject, "Problems of Church and State Relations in Rural Life." Mr. Henry Leimbach, a layman and former chairman of the rural life commission of Ohio Conference, will have charge.

REVIVAL AT BETHEL.

I have just closed a revival meeting at Bethel Church on the Elkton Pastorate. This meeting began Monday night, February 20 and closed the night of the 28. I did the preaching myself at each service and was assisted otherwise only by the devout people who are members of the church. As is always the case when pastor and people work together harmoniously, giving what they have to Christ for his blessing, the results are favorable. The meeting was a blessing to the entire community with ten accessions to the church on profession of faith. M. W. MANN, Pastor.

THE GREATEST EVENT.

Just one month from the date of this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, namely; April 9th, comes Easter Sunday. On that day the Christian world will, we trust, properly celebrate the most momentous single event in history, namely; the Resurrection of our Lord. Ancient Job, claimed by some to be the earliest writer in the Old Testament, asked the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" (Job 14:14.) Centuries later our Lord Himself answered that question by coming forth in His own strength, the first fruits of them that slept, and proved not by word, but by deed that if a man die he shall live again. Jesus Himself said, "I am the resurrection and the life, whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." This He also proved by coming forth from the grave on the first day of the week following His crucifixion. This event changed the day of worship from the seventh to the first day of the week, because it completed that plan of salvation for man, in the mind of the Father and the Son from the beginning. Thus instead of observing the seventh day of the week and celebrating the act of creation, the first day of the week began to be observed as a day of worship that the mind and heart of man might be centered in the eternal fact and hope of the Resurrection.

Thus at Easter once a year we observe with gladness and rejoicing the great single event in history and proclaim to the world that He is risen indeed and teach to all the world the divine and eternal truth in John 3:16, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Our churches here in the Southern Convention very fittingly and appropriately include the Easter period in their missionary period, in order that along with our worship service on Easter we may render a service of praise and gratitude by making our self-denial offerings at or about Easter for missions that through these offerings we may declare our belief in the resurrection of our Lord and at the same time share that belief and that fact with others who have not had the opportunity of knowing the power of the Resurrection as we ourselves have had. March, April, May and June constitute our missionary period in all our churches, a period in which pastor and people may turn their mind and their hearts along with their dimes and dollars for service in winning souls to Christ and making known the gospel of our Lord to the less favored in our own land and to those who do not know our Lord, nor the power of His Resurrection in other lands. It is hoped and believed that our churches during this period with our faithful pastors, Sunday school superintendents and leaders of Missionary Societies and groups will emphasize the opportunity afforded by our missionary appeal and thus obey the most emphatic command our Lord gave after His Resurrection, namely; "Go ye and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Master, Son and the Holy Ghost, and Lo! I am with you unto the end." If we wish to practice and realize the presence of our Lord we will embrace the opportunity afforded at this season of the year through the emphasis on missions as to well and wisely designated by our Convention, our Conferences, and our churches. To this end may God direct our minds and hearts and thus enrich our lives with His blessed power and presence as we seek to share that power and presence, that love and life, with others.

The above indicates that there are individuals, churches and Sunday school who care to share the gospel of the Prince of Peace with others. We are living in a time of upheaval and change with threatens and fears of wars and rumors of wars. This condition in world affairs may be expected to obtain as long as even so called Christian nations will contribute millions and billions for armament and weapons of death and destruction, while they only contribute hundreds or thousands to make known the love and life of Him, who said, "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: Not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—(John 14:27.)

It may be a long time coming, but the way and the will of God will be accomplished. God is patient and abides with mercy, the short-sightedness and folly of man. But in the end justice and righteousness prevail and one day as sure as the earth and the heavens are, our Lord's Prayer will be answered: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Our gifts to missions mean simply that we have the faith to believe that our Lord's Prayer will be answered and that we ourselves are willing to do our part to hasten the day when war shall be no more and peace on earth and good will among men shall prevail. On this account our hearts are grateful for every dime and dollar contributed to the cause of missions, the sharing with others the gospel of our Lord, the Bread of heaven.

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

"The longer I live the more highly do I estimate the Christian Sabbath, and the more grateful do I feel towards those who impress its importance on the community."

OUR CHURCH YEAR.

Our Southern Convention and the Conference have for convenience and helpfulness divided the year into periods, during which periods the various enterprises and institutions of the church may be emphasized.

January and February are College months, during which time attention is called to the contribution that the college is making to the church and the necessity and the privilege of the churches to support the college with contributions and patronage.

March, April, May and June constitute the Mission period, both Home and Foreign. This period embraces Easter and was chosen for missions for this very reason that evangelism, one phase of missions, may be emphasized in all the churches and that the glad event of the Resurrection may be heralded throughout the earth and that the churches through their missionary contributions may have a part in this glorious task. During this period all our churches are earnestly solicited to stress the subject of winning souls to Christ at home and abroad and during the period at, or about, Easter with the ingathering of members such as shall be saved into the church an offering of substance may be given that there may be an ingathering in churches beyond our sight and the range of our voices.

July, August and September constitute the Christian Education period, during which time our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions are held and also the Leadership Training Schools for religious workers, particularly for our Young People. These Conventions and Schools meet, calling together hundreds of our young people and of those interested in improving the methods of our young people's work through the auxiliaries of the church.

Then October, November and December, embracing the Thanksgiving Day and season are designated as Orphanage period in which the churches are called upon to make their annual donations for this benevolence and the good work that the Orphanage is doing. It is a most fitting season, Thanksgiving, to emphasize this worthy benevolence and enterprise that the dependents of the churches, the fatherless and the motherless may be cared for.

Then at the glad Christmas Season when we give our gifts in the name of the Christ Child to make others happy we are called upon to make a Christmas offering for the support and relief of our aged and retired ministers, and the widows who, through the years, shared the self-denial, life and service of their husbands.

All this is familiar to our ministers and readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and is only repeated here, "Lest we forget, lest we forget."

This writer naturally indulges the hope and has the faith to believe that our faithful pastors and loyal churches will bear these things in mind and that now as we look to Easter and enter our Mission period we will emphasize in every church and Sunday school the missionary message which embraces its kindred and allied topic of evangelism. The real object of all missionary enterprise is to deliver the great evangel and emphasize it in such a way that those who hear may accept and bear witness of Him, who said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

to point the way to a better economic, social, racial, and political order for our nation and the world. The present conditions are certainly unhealthy and unhappy. Poor people on farms and millions without jobs are worthy of the consideration needed to change conditions so they will get their share of the good things of earth. It is not right for people to go hungry in a land of plenty. Sickness is perfectly obvious to a layman, but it takes a wise and skilled physician to care for the patient. The big reason why this writer does not say more about the sick condition of our country and certain areas in particular is that he is not the physician to prescribe. Others much wiser than he are working at the job, and often they make the conditions worse rather than better.

If rich and poor, wise and ignorant, will seriously try to put into operation the Golden Rule, which is the back-ground of the writings in this paper as well as the Christian religion, then conditions will change.

The real need of the Southeast, of our country, of the world, is for people who dare to do the right regardless of what others think of them. If THE CHRISTIAN SUN is in any crusade, it is for the development of that kind of character.

March is "Youth - At - Church Month" in the Suffolk Christian Church. Last Sunday Dr. Truitt spoke on "Christian Youth at the Table of the Lord Jesus" and many young people were present to share in this communion meditation. The topics for the other Sundays will be: "Christian Youth Preparing Earnestly," "Christian Youth Choosing Wisely," and "Christian Youth Serving Heroically." Dr. Truitt is teaching a class of boys and girls each Friday afternoon on the fundamentals of the Christian faith, and the meaning of Church membership. Other churches would gain much by following the lead of Suffolk and emphasizing the relationship of young people to the Church.

Burlington Christian Church has a "Youth Council," composed of the presidents of the young people's classes and of the young people's societies, and other youth leaders. This Council is to plan for the fourth Sunday evening church service each month. At the last such service the sermon was given by J. H. Waugh, Jr., a blind boy studying at Elon College. The Youth Council members were installed at an impressive candlelight service, brought back from Rockford by Walter Cooper, a member of the Burlington group. The music was furnished by the young people's choir.

I WOULD BE TRUE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
 FOR MARCH 19, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Deut. 5: 19, 20; I Sam. 18: 1-4; Ruth 1: 16-18.

Daily Readings—

- Monday—True to Her Duty—Esther 4: 12-5: 2.
- Tuesday—Respect for Parents—Eph. 6: 1-3.
- Wednesday—True Friendship—John 12: 1-8.
- Thursday—Hearing and Doing—James 1: 22-25.
- Friday—Love and Good Works—Rom. 12: 9-16.
- Saturday—True to God's Will—Acts 4: 18-21.

In this meeting let us exalt honesty and loyalty. In a day when graft and deception are practiced in business and politics, it is very important to keep our ideals and actions undefiled. St. Francis de Sales tells of a woman who had to meet the temptations of the French court. She lived in the atmosphere of luxury and sensuality: yet she wanted to be a Christian. He said to her, "Often-times when a man goes for a walk in the garden he plucks a little bouquet of flowers so that their fragrance goes with him the rest of the day." What a suggestion for Christians! Each morning when we start out, recall the choicest friends, the highest ideals, the most sacred memories, and we will inevitably respond to their fragrances.

To Think About—

The Christian Endeavor pledge is full of words and phrases signifying a desire to be true, loyal, and devoted.

Search newspapers for clippings of news items dealing with divorce, juvenile delinquency, crime, quarreling between parents and children, dishonesty, international spying, arrests for treacherous conduct. Use these to describe the results of being disloyal and untrue.

What sin causes most disloyalty and dishonesty? The sin of selfishness, the sin of cowardice, the sin of forgetfulness, or what?

What examples of untruth and deceit have appeared in your neighborhood, or in your own personal experience?

Ruth and Jonathan are Biblical examples of what it means to be "true." Have someone tell their stories.

What are common ways in which we are untrue and disloyal to our friends? Consider the harm done by gossip.

Suggested Hymns—

- "He Leadeth Me."
- "True-hearted, Whole-hearted."
- "I Would Be True."

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON.

LESSON XI—MARCH 12, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Prayer was earnestly made of the church unto God for him.—Acts 12:5.

LESSON: Acts 12:5-17.

Disturbing the Status Quo.

"Now about that time Herod the king put forth his hands to afflict certain of the church." As long as the church goes along quietly, approving and blessing the "status quo," or at least not bothering the "status quo" it fares well. But let the church become vocal and militant against the evils of the social order, the principles of industry that are un-Christian, the liquor traffic, discrimination against races, militarism, and so forth, pressure and persecution begin to be felt. Vested interests and privileged groups and individuals begin to talk about the church "sticking to the gospel." One wonders if the modern church is not too complacent in the face of the un-Christian social factors in our modern world. One thing is certain—the church has risen to new heights under persecution. Herod thought the church was becoming too influential, too much a menace to his power and his influence, and he made up his mind to snuff out its young life.

The Futility of Force.

"Herod . . . killed James the brother of John with the sword . . . and proceeded to seize Peter also. And when he had taken him he put him in prison." Herod, like many others did not know that although you can bind a man and put him in prison, you cannot bind an idea. He thought he could crush the truth with force, that might would triumph over right. This futile policy is seen not only in Germany; it raises its menacing head in America. There are organizations that would deny the right of free speech, and a free press to those who differ from them on political and social and economic policies. Priding themselves on their Americanism they are most un-American. Truth cannot be imprisoned. Ideas cannot be put in chain. Spiritual ideals cannot be killed.

Calling Upon Him in the Day of Trouble.

The Church was in dire trouble. And because they had no one else to whom to go, they called upon the Lord. "Prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God for him." Here is a treatise on prayer in a few words. It was united, corporate, intercessory prayer—Prayer was made by the church. It was sincere and earnest—the word translated earnestly is the same word which is used in describing Jesus' prayer in Gethsemane. It was reverent and spiritual—prayer was made of the church "unto God." And it was specific and definite—"for him." One suspects that the modern church has certain advantages of organization and programs, certain mechanics that the early church did not have. But it seems to lack the dynamic quality of that early church. And perhaps this lack of power is due in large measure to lack of prayer.

The Zero Hour.

On the morrow Peter was to be brought forth, undoubtedly to be killed. And Peter knew that. But in simple, serene faith, he lay down and slept. He knew whom he had believed and was persuaded that He was able to keep that which he had committed unto his hands. Faith for him was personal trust.

God sometimes runs on close schedule. The church had been praying for Peter, but the time was fast running out. It had come almost to the "zero hour" so far as he was concerned. But God keeps his appointments. He is not slack concerning his promises as some men count slackness. Jesus himself said that when we pray we are to believe.

Divine and Human Cooperation.

Peter's deliverance from prison is a striking illustration of the blending of the divine and the human factors. There were some things that Peter could not do for himself—he could not for instance strike off his chains. God did that for him. But he could get up, and dress himself, and he had to do that. Peter could not break down, or get through the prison doors so God did that for him. But Peter could walk out on his own feet, and he had to do it. Furthermore when he got out on the street, he knew his way about, so the angel straightway left him. A man need not pray God to do for him what he can do for himself. God helps us to do what we could not otherwise do. A young man or young woman might pray forever for a college education but unless he or she was willing to study and work, the prayer would be blasphemy. Sometimes we waste our time praying God for a revival, for we need to get out and in God's spirit try to win someone for Him. In God's plan, God and man are both needed.

Deliverance.

Thus Peter became again a free man. And thus may many of us find new freedom in the liberty wherewith Christ can set us free. If we will obey the divine promptings, and follow the divine suggestions, we shall be delivered from our fears and our follies.

Unexpected Answer to Prayer.

Once freed, Peter went to the place where he would most likely find kindred spirits. He went to John Mark's mother's home. And behold they were still praying for Peter. But when Peter actually appeared at the door of the home, and the maid, recognizing him, rushed in to tell the others that he was there, they promptly said "Thou art mad"—"Nuts to you" in modern slang. But she knew what she was talking about, and finally they said "It is his angel." How often do our prayers come to us answered in strange form and under strange circumstances. We often continue to pray for something that we have already received. And how often, with these people are we "amazed" when we do get an answer to our prayers.

Let the Redeemed of the Lord Say So.

"But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him forth out of the prison." It helps others, and it helps us, to tell in a simple, sincere way, what God has done for us. If we believe, let us speak.

MONDAY.

UNEXPECTED RICHES.

"All these things shall be added unto you."—Luke 12:31.

I have always dreamed of a time when I would have a little home of my own. That dream located it somewhere on a beautiful river under the shade of some large trees, with a boat at my back door. The dream has given us the home with its palm trees circled around, its garden of fruit-trees and flowers. Returning for a day, I feast in its pleasures which bring me undreamed of fascinations.

Such, also, is the Christian life. We may not get what we have dreamed would come, but we get perhaps a happiness undreamed of. "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard what God hath in store for them that love Him."

Prayer—Our Father, Thou art better to us than all our dreams. For this we give Thee thanks. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BE HONEST.

"Do that which is honest."—II Cor. 13:7.

Reading advertisements, billboards, and listening to the advertisements over the radio, starts a spirit of resentment in our souls. Not that there is anything wrong with the advertisements, except that they do not tell the truth. What they need to do is to make their wares come up to their claims.

Some people become Christians apparently for the purpose of advertising. It recommends them at their best. But alas! Christians, too, fail to come up to their advertisement.

Prayer—O God, help us to be honest. May we not wear Thy name in vain. May it be that those who see us may take knowledge of us that we live with Jesus. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

YOUR HELPERS.

"I have left me seven thousand in Israel."—I Kings 19:18.

Are you having any trouble living a Christian? If so, why? Think of all your friends who are ready to help you. Think of all the church friends, Sunday school teachers, scouts, genuine club friends, and many others—a host of people devoted to helping others and will help you.

Prayer—O Lord, forgive us. We forget and depend upon ourselves. We thank Thee for Jesus, for friends and helpers. We will try to do better. Amen.

THURSDAY.

UGLINESS HOLDS BEAUTY.

"Adorn the doctrine of God."—Titus 2:10.

In the Canal Zone the other day a friend took me to visit a large orchid garden. I was amazed at the incongruous containers that these beautiful flowers grow in. I was further amazed to learn that they do not grow from earth. They feed upon the air. Ugliness holding beauty. The inconsistency violated the unity of beauty. And yet the beautiful was all engrossing. Life is incongruous in many of its aspects, but when set in Christian faith becomes most beautiful, it matters not how unseemly the temple in which it dwells.

Prayer—O Father, we pray for the gospel of Christ in our inner life, that life itself may be seen as beautiful. Amen.

FRIDAY.

RADIANT PEOPLE.

"The last shall be first."—Matt. 19:30.

We took a long drive the other day out into the country. We stopped at a country farm house, one we had known in our former days. The ravages of time have left their imprint there. The friends who abide there, though weak physically and finding life hard to carry on, are radiant with peace and good will written upon their faces. They led us to the old scuppernong grape vine where we feasted upon this luscious fruit. They are content with their small place in life. Their faith in God is simple but sufficient. They gave us a fresh impulse to Christian values.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for all Thy children who love and serve Thee, for of such is the kingdom of heaven. Amen.

SATURDAY.

BROTHERS IN CHRIST.

"And he fashioned it with a graven tool."—Exodus 32:4.

We were visiting in the home of a friend whose business occupied him only from nine in the morning till four in the afternoon—five days a week. The rest of his time, he spent with his tools making furniture, or creating something worth more than amusement or the writing of books.

Jesus was a craftsman. Craftsmen are that much like their Master.

Prayer—Our Father, make us sensible of the worthiness of our fellow-laborers. May we all serve Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Our Father, today is Sunday, the day which Thou hast set apart for the enrichment and uplift of Thy children in the world. Forbid that we shall deny ourselves the experience and enrichment of soul to be found in worship and service at the Sanctuary and at the altar. Help us to remember the days of old which the Sabbath has served, the life it has engendered and the permanency it has given the Kingdom of God. Fill us with all its joys. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WHAT PRAYER MEANS TO THE CHURCH MEMBER.

By REV. J. EVERETTE NEESE.

Prayer is more than a mere repetition of unorganized and meaningless words. It matters little who offers the prayer—whether he be rich or poor, learned or unlearned, black or white, bond or free—unless that prayer is an earnest and sincere petition, it is meaningless to both the individual and God. The Westminster Catechism says, "Prayer is an offering up of our desires unto God for things agreeable to His will, in the name of Christ, with confession of our sins, and thankful acknowledgement of His mercies."

Phillips Brooks says, "A prayer, in its simplest definition, is merely a sincere wish turned heavenward."

Prayer is and shall always be an important factor in everyone's life. The more often one engages in prayer the more real God becomes to that individual. To the earnest and sincere church member prayer means much—much more than the average individual can express.

If we should bring together in a concise form the real meaning or meanings of prayer to the church member, I think we would be confronted with at least the following four facts:

To the church member prayer means intercession with a compassionate Heavenly Father. Intercession with the one who is the one and only guide and provider of life. It is He who loves us and is with us every passing day. There is to be found no finer illustration of this than the following notation from the life of David Livingstone. When Livingstone returned to Scotland after an absence of sixteen years in Africa, the University of Glasgow desired to honor him by conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Laws. On such occasions candidates for honorary degrees usually expect an embarrassing reception at the hands of the young collegians who are present in full force, bubbling over with boyish fun. But when Dr. Livingstone appeared on the platform they received him with silent respect and reverence. He was gaunt and weary from exposure to sixteen years of African sun and twenty-seven attacks of African fever; one arm, having been rendered useless by the bite of a lion, hung helpless at his side. There stood a real hero who had fought many a battle for humanity, and his presence inspired a feeling of awe in the minds of all present. He told them that he was going back to Africa, partly to open new fields for the preaching of the gospel. But the sentiment which stirred all hearts most was this: "Shall I tell you what supported me through these years of exile among a people whose language I could not understand, and whose attitude toward me was always uncertain and often hostile? It was this, 'Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.'"

Yes, this Heavenly Father is one who is constantly with us; therefore, when we pray it is in reality an intercession with a compassionate Heavenly Father who is with us "always."

To the church member prayer should mean an opportunity for thanksgiving for the many blessings received from the hand of God.

Did you ever think of the reason why the Psalms of David have come, like winged angels, down across all the realms of ages—why they make the key-note of grateful pity in every Christian's soul, wherever he lives? Why? Because they are so full of gratitude; "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men." It is said that Beethoven had his piano placed in the middle of a field, and then "under the smiling sky, with birds singing around him, flowers shining, and grain glistening in the sun, the master musician composed some of his great sacred musical compositions." So we shall do better work and accomplish sublimer ends if we are constantly surrounded with the atmosphere of gratitude and thankfulness. The hands will have a more skillful touch, the eye a keener sense of vision, the tongue a more compelling eloquence, and the soul will feel the stirrings of newly unfolding power when praise is given to God for His blessings and provisions.

Prayer to the church member should mean, in no small measure, a petition for divine assistance in the accumulation of material things.

When there is divine assistance embodied in the accumulation of material things there will be no material gain for selfish or egotistical purposes. Material gain and prosperity will then mean a medium by which the gospel of Christ can be advanced to new territories. Often we need God's help in the execution of a particular task; often we need material things for the sustenance of life. Often we feel alone and helpless in the face of physical pain; in such hours as these we need to turn quite unhesitatingly to God in prayer. For He alone can supply all our needs, not our wants or our desires, but our needs.

We need to turn to God quite often for strength to be honest and upright. The Earl of Hopetoun, in Scotland, has an old brass-bound, leather-covered ledger which he prizes very highly. It belongs to John Hope, the founder of the family, who kept a shop in Edinburg some 200 years ago. The first entry in that ledger reads as follows: "O Lord, keep me and this book honest." If every merchant since had adopted John Hope's practice there would certainly be a much higher standard of commercial morality than at present exists in the business world.

Prayer to the church member means an exercising and thereby an enlargement of one's faith. A poet and an artist once examined a painting by Poussin representing the healing of the two blind men of Jericho.

The artist asked, "What seems to you the most remarkable thing in this painting?" The poet said: "Everything in the painting is excellently given, the form of Christ, the grouping of the individuals, the expression in the faces of the leading characters, etc." The artist seemed to find the most significant touch elsewhere. He said to his friend, pointing to the steps of a house in the corner of the picture, "Do you see that discarded cane lying there?" Yes, but what does that signify?" "Why, my friend, on those steps the blind man sat with the cane in his hand, but when he heard that Christ had come, he was so sure that he would be healed that he let his cane lie there, since he should need it no more, and hastened to the Lord as if he could already see. Is that not a wonderful conception of the confidence of faith?"

He was right, for too often we hold on to canes and crutches and other means of self-help instead of going to the Savior, the Helper Divine!

Man maintains his spiritual life and faith in God by constant prayer. Prevent animals from rising to the surface and they die for want of breath; prevent man from rising to God and he dies spiritually from want of prayer. "Let me breathe," says a man, gasping, "or else I die." "Let

A DIFFERENT POINT OF VIEW.

As I see our Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southeast, we have a church of radically differing points of view with regard to social action. In Virginia and the Carolinas perhaps the predominating point of view is that which you represent with your paper, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, namely, that there is no Negro or tenant problem in the South. At least one could read issue after issue and never dream that such problems existed.

As one swings south from the Carolinas into Georgia and Alabama, he meets more of the socially-minded group. Thus, for some of us who in rural-pastorates have intimately lived with share-cropper families, it is almost incomprehensible that you should select for reprint in THE CHRISTIAN SUN that article in the February 9 issue by Eppie Plyler in which it is stated that there is no food problem in the South, that the N. E. C. report is exaggerated publicity, etc.

Swinging back northward into Kentucky and Tennessee one finds such folk as Howard and Alice Kester who have gone out to be with the homeless share-croppers of Missouri, folks who hold annual inter-racial ministerial convocations. They have carried brotherhood across race and poverty lines to an extent not reached in other areas.

Now my objection is not that you are not entitled to your view-point presented in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. You certainly are. But I do feel strongly that any assumption that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is representative of conviction in the entire Southeast is decidedly mistaken. Some day I hope that we shall have a paper in which all points of view may be freely expressed. And meanwhile it is my prayer that through our interpretations of what real Christianity is all about greatly differ, we may find common ground as Christians and that this ground may grow in extent.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE RECEIVES NEW PULPIT BIBLE.

The pulpit of the Christian Temple is now adorned by a splendid Pulpit Bible which was presented to it by the Twiddy Bible Class at the morning service of worship on Sunday, February 26. The Bible was presented on behalf of the class by Mrs. Mallard, president, and was received on behalf of the church by the pastor. An appropriate and impressive service of dedication in which the congregation took part was then held.

The Bible is a sturdily constructed and handsomely finished volume, and adds dignity and beauty to the appointments of the pulpit and the church in general. It is suitably engraved with the following inscription:

Presented to
The Christian Temple

The Twiddy Bible Class
Mrs. Robert B. Wood, Teacher
1939

Mrs. J. W. Manning served as chairman to solicit funds for the purchase of the Bible, and received a hearty and generous response from the members of the class. The Temple deeply appreciates this beautiful and useful gift and the spirit in which it was given.

Dear Lester:

The enclosed is a brief report of an incident experienced on my recent visit in Shanghai, China. If it is of any interest to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, use it as you see fit.

I miss greatly the weekly visits of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Of course, they go to my home in San Diego and I expect to have a "Read-Fest" after I get under way from that port.

Susie Elder Walker, sister of Chaplain Elder, Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va., of Manila, P. I., is still interested in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the people it represents and I am to take my copies to her on my next visit. She is happy in her marriage and has a charming baby. Her husband is the manager of the Underwood Elliott Typewriter Co., of Manila and is doing well.

I expect to be in Norfolk fifteen days during Easter and, I repeat, if there is anything I can do for my church at any time, I invite the suggestion.

With personal regards to you and yours, and to the friends of Elon, especially the Smiths, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

THE PERSONAL AND SOCIAL GOSPEL.

We hear quite a bit about the personal gospel and the social gospel. And men who can see only one little thing at a time or who suffer from the mental defect of attempting to applaud one thing by attacking some other, regard the personal and the social gospel as antagonistic. It may be that E. Stanley Jones can help to remove this bogey. Listen to him: "The social gospel without the personal gospel is a body without a soul and the personal gospel without the social application is a soul without a body. One is a corpse and the other is a ghost. Put them together and you have a living personality. The great moment is now come when we should heal up this breach and bring together the Christian Church on a great frontal attack on all evil, whether it is in the individual or in the collective will."—*N. In Memoriam

ATKINS.

Whereas, God, in His infinite love has seen fit to call to his reward our brother, John Hurley Atkins, on June 26, 1938, we, as a church and as individuals, desire to record our appreciation and our sorrow in our loss. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Isle of Wight Christian Church, of which he was a member has lost one for whom they mourn.
2. That we extend to the family our warmest sympathy and earnest prayers; that God's promises may fall soothingly upon their sad hearts, and when life's work is done, they may form an unbroken circle around His throne.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one spread upon the church records, and one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. W. C. LUTER,
Mrs. B. B. BARKER,
Mrs. W. E. WILLS, Committee.

FOUSHEE.

We, the members of Providence Memorial Christian Church, offer this tribute of love and respect to the memory of Miss Bertha Eleanor Foushee, one of our most loved and loyal members. She passed away on January 23, 1939.

She was a kind, cheerful, and helpful person who devoted her life to bringing happiness to others. Her untiring efforts to make life sweeter for her friends will ever be remembered. An outstanding trait of her character was the devotion and attention she showed to the aged and the children, and her earthly reward was their deep love for her. Her death has left a vacancy in our church that can never be filled, and has brought genuine sorrow to each member.

Therefore be it resolved by the members of Providence Memorial Christian Church:

First, that the mother, sister, and the brothers have lost a loving daughter and sister, and a sweet Christian influence in their home.

Second, that we humbly bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, knowing "That all things work together for good to them that love the Lord."

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be recorded in our minutes, a copy sent to the bereaved family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. W. H. HOLT,
Mrs. AUSTIN ISLEY,
MARY TOME HUGHES,
Committee.

NORFLEET.

Few men have contributed more to their home, church, and community than Brother Claud Norfleet, who peacefully passed to his eternal reward on Sunday, January 15, 1939, at the age of 77 years. His was a long, useful, and good life; truly he fought a good fight in the Faith.

Mr. Norfleet was a man of wide interests, yet ever mindful to make his home life one of spiritual emphasis and an even open door to friends both near and far. The church he served and loved so well, Holy Neck, of which he was a life-long member, readily accepted him as a leader who inspired confidence. He had been a deacon for years, was Senior deacon at his death, was a Sunday school teacher, constant in his loyalty, sincere in his friendships, and generous both in the spiritual and material aspects of life. Although engaged in public life, being Commissioner of Revenue for Nansemond County twenty-four years, he found time to attend the Eastern Virginia Conference regular for fifty years and was the Collector for the Conference for thirty years, and every worthy enterprise sponsored by the church was given his whole-hearted support.

Whether in church, civic, or political life, his integrity and conscientious loyalty to the principles of the Master won the confidence and esteem of all. He faced death with the same quiet confidence and trust that he showed in life. The heavenly Father who doeth all things well called, and he answered.

Blessed are those who die in the Lord.

the poorer on account of our loss. Many faithful sons and daughters of Elon have lived their lives, fought their battles, made their records, and have gone on to reap their rewards.

On the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the institution, the ones of us who live remember with affection those who have been called from our midst. We have not forgotten them. We want our friends and their friends to know that we have not forgotten them, and in order that coming generations may not forget them, we wish to place their names on the register, together with ours, so that they, together with us, may live on through the generations that are to come.

What is true of the alumni of Elon College is equally true of the members of the church and friends of the college; that is, those who were not at any time matriculated students of the college but were members of the church and friends of the institution, who have been called from our midst are eligible to be placed on the honor roll as are others. Our friends are invited to establish memorial memberships in their honor.

The following memorials have already been established:

me pray," says the Christian, "or else I die."

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Unuttered or expressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The upward glancing of the eye,
When none but God is near.

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air;
His watchword at the gates of death:
He enters heaven with prayer.

O Thou, by whom we come to God,
The Life, the Truth, the Way!
The path of prayer Thyself hast trod;
Lord, teach us how to pray.

ART IN THE CHURCH

By AUBREY C. TODD.

The Symbolism of Holy Week.

Our Church Year centers around two great festivals—Christ and Easter. In our Congregational and Christian Churches we have taken advantage of these two holy days to emphasize evangelism and devotion to the Church. The seasons around these days have been devoted to reflection and penitential fervor. Just as the Advent season determined to a great extent the kind of Christmas you enjoyed, so the Lenten season will determine the sort of Easter you will have.

Our churches of the Southeast have increasingly dared to magnify the significance of Holy Week. The old-fashioned meeting house that was as prosaic as a drygoods box on Easter is hard to find now. It is interesting and illuminating to notice how many Congregational and Christian Churches of the Southeast have added Maundy Thursday, Good Friday, and Holy Saturday to their calendars. This can mean only that our prejudices and intolerance are giving way to a renewed symbolism. With that thought in mind, I should like to review with you the symbolism that the historic Church has connected with Holy Week, and see if it has any value for us today.

Maundy Thursday gets its name from the word “mundare,” to cleanse, and reminds us of the night when Christ met with his disciples and washed their feet. We do not observe feet washing in our churches, but usually use this service for the celebration of Holy Communion. The first part of the service resembles that of a joyful festival, when suddenly there is a change and the deepest sorrow and desolation are expressed by the remainder of the service. This expression continues until the Resurrection Morning.

Good Friday has been characterized by the expressions of sorrow and self-abasement. The habit of holding three-hour services on this day is becoming increasingly popular. The three hours, of course, are the hours from noon, corresponding to the hours that our Lord hung on the cross. On this day there should be no flowers or decorations of any sort. It is a traditional custom to read St. John's narrative of the Passion of our Lord at this service, and to emphasize the plan of redeeming love as symbolized by the Cross.

The service of Holy Saturday was originally a midnight service, but our liberal churches do not observe it as such. It is properly a “vigil” of Easter, at which service the Church wishes to anticipate the celebration of the Resurrection of our Lord. Churches that have been having a Confirmation Class meet during Lent, may want to use this opportunity to prepare the class for the Easter services.

So much has already been said about Easter that there is very little use of repeating. The Church's joy on the happy day of our Lord's Resurrection is expressed by the ringing of bells, the pealing of the organ, the profusion of flowers, and the glad singing of Allelujahs.

The solemn ceremonies and the beautiful symbolism of the liturgy of Holy Week have developed during many centuries. They express the feelings which the Church wishes to impart to its members—penance and sorrow, reaching its climax on Good Friday, and triumph and exultation on Easter Day. That church is poorer who fails to observe these historic and beautiful rites.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Rev. G. M. Tally of Carabonton, N. C., was sick last week but is able to be at work again.

Rev. G. H. Veazey makes a report that the ladies at Belew Creek Church have organized an Aid Society.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson helped Rev. J. L. Mann in a Baptist revival meeting last week near Carthage, N. C.

Any church having pews and pulpit furniture for sale may serve themselves and a needy church by writing to the Promotional Secretary at Elon College, N. C.

Rev. John Q. Pugh of Franklinville, N. C., preached at Smithwood last Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Harold Loman, who was holding a revival in Draper, N. C.

The article on the last page entitled "The Church Is Working for You," was taken from a fine little pamphlet issued by Dr. Marna S. Poulson of Shelton Congregational Church, Portsmouth, Va.

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of First Christian Church, Reidsville, N. C., is conducting a revival in the Community at Blair, Va. Large crowds are attending the services, it is reported, and the results are most encouraging.

President L. E. Smith, Dr. W. C. Wicker, and Dr. N. F. Brannock have recently been sick but are improving. Last week Dr. Brannock missed his first day from class on account of sickness in his many years as teacher in Elon College.

Rev. Carl R. Key reports the installation of a new organ, the purchase of new hymnals, the robing of four choirs, and the reception of three church members recently. He is pastor at Torrington, Conn., and a student at Yale Divinity School.

On Sunday, May 7, the First Congregational-Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., will have a memorial service in memory of Dr. Charles H. Rowland, D. D., at which time chimes for the organ will be dedicated as a memorial to Dr. Rowland. A list of all donors to this memorial will be kept as a permanent record of the church.

Twelve books and five dollars was the immediate response to the announcement, concerning the needs of the Elon library, made by Mrs. Oma Johnson at the Mid-Year Alumni meeting. We hope the response to her letter in this issue will be as prompt and as generous.

Dr. James R. Clinton spent the past week with our people in Henderson, N. C. He reports having enjoyed the fellowship there. In the community he spoke to the Kiwanis Club and the high school. The pastor, Rev. J. Everette Neese, expects to receive at least ten new members by Easter.

Concord Church (Virginia Valley Conference) reports having a wonderful attendance at the Mid-Week Bible Study, which is held every Friday night. We are now studying the Book of Revelations. Keen interest and willing minds on the part of the people are evident throughout the study hour.

Rev. J. T. Stanley of Dudley, N. C., has been appointed as a field worker among our Negro churches in North Carolina and Virginia. He has done excellent work in the rural churches and will be a valuable helper to other pastors who may secure his counsel and aid. This ought to be a real help, especially to rural churches.

The Christian Church at Seagrove, N. C., is in the process of securing funds with which to erect a new church building. The pastor, Rev. George M. Talley, or any member of the building committee, composed of R. R. Auman, Chairman; R. J. Lawrence, B. S. Lawrence, June Farlow, D. A. Cornelison, Mrs. J. B. Cox and Miss Oberia Leach, will appreciate any contributions which may be made.

Rev. Wm. D. Oliver of 38 Arlington Street, Cambridge, Mass., is available for Preaching Missions in this area. He was for nine years pastor of First Church, Lynn, Mass., the oldest Congregational Church in the U. S., and has been doing evangelistic work for several years. Two years ago he spent eight weeks with Bishop Phol and the Moravians in North Carolina. He is a personal friend of Rev. John H. Knight of Norfolk, Va., and is highly recommended by many who have worked with him.

The Berea Christian Church at Great Bridge, in Norfolk County, Va., sustained a great loss in the death, on Wednesday of last week, of Mrs. Laura V. Hall. The funeral service was held in Berea Church by the pastor, Rev. Joe A. French, assisted by her former pastor, Rev. J. Frank Morgan, on Friday at three o'clock. Mrs. Hall is survived by three sons: Victor W. Hall, A. Guy Hall, and Sidney B. Hall who is State Superintendent of Public Instruction; by three daughters: Mrs. Ernest Waterfield, Mrs. B. S. Eason, and Mrs. Fletcher Sawyer. Her husband, Martin Wesley Hall, preceded her to the grave by about four years. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved.

AN APPRECIATION.

We wish to express our thanks to our many friends throughout this whole country for their sympathy, friendship, and abiding love shown us at the time of the death of our beloved wife and mother. The expressions of this kind have been substantial and sweet. The flowers were abundant. All of this makes our grief easier to bear. May God bless everyone who had any part in these expressions of sympathy to us. We are praying for you.

REV. G. D. HUNT, CHILDREN, AND GRANDCHILDREN.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Rev. and Mrs. Fagley of New York, will be the guests of Rev. and Mrs. Roy D. Coulter at the Lee-Jackson Hotel, New Market, Va., April 5 and 6.

All ministers in the Valley Conference are invited to meet Dr. Fagley at the hotel on the afternoon of April 6 (Thursday) at two o'clock for friendly discussion of rural church problems and our Valley problems in particular. Dr. Fagley is the Associate Secretary of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA MINISTERS.

On Thursday afternoon of last week the ministers of the Eastern North Carolina Conference met with the vice-president, Rev. J. Everette Neese, who now becomes the acting president in the absence of Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, to discuss problems of the Conference. Among other things it was decided that a fifth Sunday fellowship meeting would be held by the churches north of Raleigh. Dr. James R. Clinton was present and enriched the meeting with his wisdom and fellowship.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

If you were one of fourteen missionaries among a million people most of whom knew nothing about Christianity, what would you do? That is the case of our missionaries in India.

If you tried to tell undeveloped natives concerning the high values of Christianity and other white people taught them to drink, gamble, and enter into all kinds of vice, what would you do? That is the case of our missionaries in parts of Africa.

If your hospital was destroyed by bombs, your compound (church grounds) filled with hundreds of homeless people, and your community thronged by an alien army that was none too friendly to your undertaking to establishing Christianity, what would you do? That is the case of many of our missionaries in China.

If you had given your life's best efforts to establish churches, schools, hospitals, homes for the helpless, and in other ways to develop Christian communities where none had ever been before and just as you were beginning to see the work progress your helpers were called away and you were left with extra work and less pay, what would you do? That is the case of most of our missionaries around the world.

If you were a member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and you knew that the strain on the missionaries is more than any human can bear for long, that more workers are desperately needed to maintain the work already undertaken, that greater chances for service and growth face the Church today than during the past century, and that the church people are giving less and less money for the support of the Church around the world, what would you do? That is the case of those who meet in Boston this week (among whom your editor should be since he is a member of that Board).

If you were a Christian with money in your hand to be spent as you like and you could see millions of hungry people who need rice to sustain physical life and the knowledge of Christ to maintain the life of the soul, what would you do? That is the position in which you now find yourself.

If you were a good citizen and a good member of a church and you should ride to church on Easter in a lovely automobile that cost hundreds of dollars with the hope of worshipping the Christ of the Cross and you knew that in many corners of the earth those for whom Christ died had never heard of His life and death and resurrection, what would you do? Well, it is not possible for me to say just what you will do. But that is doubtless the case in which you will be when the choirs sing praise to the resurrected Christ. Some of you will put real money into the collection plate and make that your song of praise and prayer for the world that needs to know of Jesus and His love. What will you do? Will it be an offering of dimes, or will it be dollars?

WE ARE LEARNING.

This Church of ours here in the Southeast is learning. Newspapers, radios, movies, conferences, schools, and churches are trying to teach us. And we are learning.

We are learning that it is important to be still and listen for the voice of God. All too often our prayers tell God how to run His world, and especially that part that has something to do with us. But we are learning, all too slowly, that is important for us to listen for the still small voice that speaks within the human heart. Both in private life and in the church services there is the time of quiet on the part of those who worship.

We are learning that it is possible to work happily with those whose ideas differ from our own. Those who sit about the Communion Table and eat bread and drink from a cup may be millions of miles apart in their intellectual ideas, but they find sweet fellowship as they bow before Him whose body was broken and blood spilled on Calvary that terrible day which is now known as Good Friday. We are learning, slowly but surely, that our little minds cannot compass the full meaning of God, Christ, or the Kingdom, and that others may have something of truth in their philosophy which is very different from our own. In the Church of Christ there is room for the wise and untaught, the rich and the poor, the socially correct and those who know nothing of Emily Post. We are learning that the Church is the home of those who love and are willing to serve, and is not merely the meeting place of friends who enjoy a certain type of emotional and intellectual stimulation.

We are learning that God is always present and can redeem people at any season of the year, that the birthday of the Christ, the Resurrection Day, and the birthday of the Church are greater events than the Fourth of July, Memorial Day, and Thanksgiving. We are beginning to see that a fitting gift for our Master on the day of His Resurrection is a new-born soul won in His name, and a gift of gold that will tell His story around the world.

We are learning. The process may be both slow and painful, but we are learning. And Christ is the Great Teacher.

THE MISSIONARY RALLIES.

This week, next, and the next is the time for the annual Mission Rallies for the women in Carolina and Eastern Virginia. Usually women attend in large numbers. It is a good time for them to learn of what the rest of God's family around the world are doing. It is an opportunity to learn what is being accomplished, and to plan for greater activities. These meetings should really prove to be a rally for the cause of missionary effort. That kind of a rally is what the world needs today. Attend the meetings and join in the rally. It is the way of peace. It is the way of love and life.

THE TECHNIQUE OF LENT.

A NEWSPAPER MAN'S SERMON.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psalms 46:10.

Some years ago one of the most pious of Protestant papers wrote of the Lenten Lutherans and Episcopalians that their seasonal worship was unworthy of great, free communions, such as theirs, and that any good student of history, particularly of church lore, could tell those Lent devotees that the whole business is without scriptural standing, in fact an accretion on Christianity.

To be sure Christmas, Thanksgiving, Lent, Sunday, Sunday school and most of the ceremonials are accretions. There is no Biblical Sunday; there is such a Sabbath. The canonical writings of Old and New Testaments say nothing about Lent. But there are significant movements in all times of the Christian economy. The stillness of Lent is one of them.

About the same time it was written that in New York City, in one brief Lenten period, there had gone in from those sinfully busy streets more than 75,000 men and women for mid-day prayer in that graceful sanctuary. And if anybody on the outside of Lent is inclined to lowrate the penitential season because it runs to what they flippantly, if not irreverently, call "canned prayers," just tip him off to that New York church. More than 75,000 people in Little Old New York dropped in, off the streets, and said their prayers during the latter days of February, all through March and into April.

In upper Rowan where little country churches of the Episcopal faith used to congregate for the good old Methodistical "conference," there were given speaking assignments for the up and coming Christian. "Why am I a Churchman?" went the theme like a motif in grand opera. One of the speakers had this subject: Because the church neglects none of the means of grace," or because "the church employs all the means of grace." Believe it or not, a good degree of stillness, as one of the great Protestant figures of two and a half centuries ago had it, is an immense help to worship.

Say what you will about modernism, preach it all that you can, take it to your bosom as bearing the technique which satisfies your hearts and minds; still if you are fair to yourself you will come to doubt the efficacy of modernism when you see the number of the graces that it neglects. When excited Christians express fear over what goes on in the world, when they utter beliefs that Christianity is breaking down, you may be sure that they are not concerned so deeply over the grotesque apostasies such as disbelief in revealed religion; but their concern is over Christians who do believe. In his radio hour Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick confesses that modernism does not do the job; that it is not arrant, though possibly honest unbelief, which worries him, but the shoddy and low-grade lives which he sees in professing Christians can do concern him greatly. The habit of prayer has gone, there is little or no solitary reading, there is no apparent thought toward religious ends.

You have heard, all of you, of great religious movements. The magazines have had a great deal about the Oxford groups, the Anglo-Catholic movement, the Christian Science rising tide. Well, they have been coming along at the same time, but in very diverse directions. They may be going in opposite ways, in fact they are. The Anglo-Catholic activism is a renaissance of ritualism. Many of you do not like that. It is your quarrel with Lent. You do not like Christian Science, for it asks nothing of medicine. And the Oxford movement? It is very difficult to define. But it has a deep and abiding belief in the divine childhood of the race, in the divine parentage of human family. And you will find any one of these religionists recommending almost any time the cultivation in solitude of all these means of grace; repeating the Psalmist's exhortation, "Be still and know that I am God."

For in a world such as this, with all of us either singing and dancing to raucous music, or standing by the whirring machinery of the age, there is definite need for that stillness. It is next to impossible to hear the voice of God if the jitterbugs and the mechanics take the world. There isn't much argument about this praying business, this devotion in seasons; but find the most intellectual among us who have tried it and you find something that he has which the world cannot give, and certainly cannot take away.

In ritualistic worship there is of course the ever present peril of superficiality in meaning and hypocrisy in the employment. The average Protestant cares little for it. Isaiah inveighed against the multitude of sacrifices as meaning nothing to the Lord. Amos declared his hatred of those ceremonies and Micah's formula had required only that one do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with his God. Jesus detested the man of long prayers, the pious pirate who devoured the widows' houses.

But seriously cast up the account and see how many of your friends or enemies there are who are overdoing ritualism in religion? To be very sure you have seen in the choirs psalm-singing vultures, and you have been appalled at the genuflections of neighbors who would not think of entering a church without an obsequious bow before the altar. But for one of these you can think of a hundred who apparently have emptied their lives of every method designed to promote spiritual culture. There is much ritualism; there are meaningless prayers in the books. There are pious people parroting these forms all over the planet. But that is not the serious ailment of current Christianity. It is neglect of all the forms of worship, of both the spirit and the letter of it.

And nobody else, except us in the realm of organized Christianity, thinks of ignoring this practice. Last Sunday you heard Paderewski play. He is 79 years old now. Some bogus musicians fancied that the old man's hands have stiffened, that he has played out. Not so. The Polish pianist never has neglected his means of grace. Once he said that if he failed for one day to practice at his instrument, he noticed the difference; that if he neglected practice two days, his family detected the difference; three days and his friends felt it; one whole week and the very fools could detect the lost excellence. If neglect hurts the pianist that way, how it must work toward the destruction of the Christian who does not seek God through stillness in the worship.

The truth is that in no other realm would we take such risks with ourselves as in religion. Paderewski feels the loss of a day. The insensate public feels it if practice is neglected a week. There is a righteous self-discipline in the musician's life. He knows that to save his life he must lose it in the cultivation of his art. He must practice painfully every day. But we deal haphazardly, clumsily, illogically, irrationally, with our inner lives and expect spiritual symphonies to come from them. In every profession of the world we are careful, thoughtful, methodical, even scientific; but in the most important relationships of the world, in the promotion of our happiness, our influence, our destiny, we actually hallow our habits which are without the spiritual techniques. Neglect those means of grace and grace itself soon will be gone.

It is yet good religion, not seasonal, not Lenten meditations alone, to be still and learn that God is—An Editorial in Greensboro Daily News, March 5, 1939.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Christianity is more than a formal creed. Theological dogmas and definitions cannot be comprehensive enough to include its scope and power. Every believer is a potential book on Christianity, and interprets the gospel message, "Ye are the light of the world."

The papers today announced the passing of one of God's rare saints. Mrs. Berthania S. Winner, widow of the late B. Frank Winner, passed away March 10, 1939, after a brief illness, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. B. Odom, near Driver, Va. Her husband was a beloved deacon and superintendent of the Sunday school of Berea (Nansemond County) Church. She was born in Camden, N. J., November 30, 1857, and was the daughter of the late William and Margaret Cox. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. R. B. Odom, two sons, Walter R. Winner, of Suffolk, Va., and Maurice Winner, of Charlotte, N. C., eleven grand children, fourteen great grand children, one sister, Mrs. Victoria Berdeman, and one brother, S. G. Cox, both of Camden, N. J.

It was the privilege of the writer to be her pastor for the past thirty-two years. She was the teacher of a class of boys in the Sunday school at the time of her death. A woman of small stature and having the appearance of being frail, she was industrious and had great physical endurance. More than eighty-one years old, she was busy with house-cleaning when she was suddenly stricken by complete paralysis just a few hours before her death.

She usually occupied a seat in the second pew from the front directly before the pulpit. Her face had many lines—traced by the years—but not one imprint of bitterness and disappointment. She had her share of affliction in the family. Every day brought its contribution of care, work and anxiety, for many years. But she was patient, resigned, prayerful and steadfast in her faith. Her prayers were not all answered according to her wishes. She often said: "The Good Lord knows best, and maybe what He gives is better than the thing I prayed for; if so, I thank Him and trust Him."

She had a radiant face. So many times has her pastor seen the light of spiritual joy beam from her dark brown eyes during a service at church. She was an inspiration to this preacher. She was patient, attentive and consecrated. She had been refined like pure gold. A remarkable Christian character has gone to her reward. Her sweet face, her lovely personality, her friendly spirit will be missed in the church and community. Her beautiful life was a demonstration of the sustaining power of Jesus Christ. She is at rest.

Her prayers have been answered. Her journey has ended. Her days of toil have passed. She has seen the face of the Pilot. She is at home. Happy meeting after patient waiting. She will wait and watch for the others to come home. Going home. A radiant face. Undisturbed faith. A crown of eternal life. Blessed living by faith here. Blessed reward in the presence of Jesus.

THE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

A series of three letters has been mailed to a large number of the alumni, church people, and friends of the college. The first two letters carried important information regarding the actual condition of the college, the announcement of the Golden Anniversary, and plans for the observance of the same. The third letter carried a statement of the plans and purposes for the campaign. The ones to whom these letters have gone have been separated into committees of three. Each committee is asked to become responsible for $50.00 each, a total of $150.00. To many this will seem like a large sum of money, and it is. To others who are perfectly able to pay, it will seem very small amounts if we are to receive the amount necessary to pay the indebtedness of the college. There are, of course, many who have received the letters who would find it difficult to pay the $50.00 themselves. It may be, however, that such individuals know of friends to whom they could appeal to help them with their $50.00. A little time, a little effort, a little faith, and a little determination will result in great results. We know not what we can do until we try. There are others who are perfectly able to pay and who will be glad to make their contribution of $50.00, but when they pay their membership dues, their responsibility has not been completely discharged. There are two others associated with them to whom they are to appeal and encourage either to contribute or to solicit their membership dues of $50.00 each in order that that committee may be complete. There are still others who can and will give more than the $50.00, and when they have made their contributions, they will still be confronted with the opportunity of being of service to the college by inducing others to follow in their footsteps and make their contributions.

The plan proposed and being put into operation affords an opportunity for everybody to contribute and to serve. If the entire constituency of the college could realize convincingly that this is our job, one that must be done, that the time has come when we cannot expect others to do it for us, but that we are to have the joy of doing it ourselves, we are perfectly able if only we will use the ability that God has given us. When we shall have accomplished this task, there isn't any question but that others will join with us in plans to make Elon College more secure, of greater service, and more far reaching in its influence and inspiration.

I would like to appeal to all to put themselves into this great opportunity without hesitancy that the program may move with greater rapidity and more significant achievements. Together we can accomplish the task that is ours. Separately we will become discouraged and dismayed. Let us move forward together in the accomplishment of the task that is ours for our institution.

IS A GREAT REVIVAL POSSIBLE?

By REV. C. G. SCANNELL.

[Rev. Mr. Scannell is pastor of a group of our churches in the Valley of Virginia, Editor.]

Evangelism is the bulwark of civilization, the motivating force of Christianity, the dream of the ages, God's first concern for humanity, without which the Church is impotent, helpless and undone.

Christ, standing between two great religious economies—the one hoary with age and ready to vanish away, the other the child of his love, new, young and untried—looked down through the centuries and saw the need and gave to his followers the first Christian evangelistic command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

Deep down in the hearts of the human race, however glossed over and hidden by materialism, is the inherent hunger of the soul for God. Yet we, who are called His servants, and are supposed to do His work and will, have fallen down on the job. We

Membership in the Golden Anniversary Club continues to increase. Two weeks ago we reported a total of ninety memberships. This was our first report through THE CHRISTIAN SUN. In addition to these memberships, a number who had unpaid balances on their pledges to the Development Program had made payments since the beginning of the Golden Anniversary Campaign. These campaigns are for one and the same purpose; namely, the cancellation of our debts. The amount that we are endeavoring to raise, $150,000 will retire our debt, and we hope take care of all expenses incident to the campaign. As a result of these payments we have been able to pay a total of $4,000. This week I am mailing a check of $1,000 to the Virginia Trust Company as an additional payment which will leave us owing $139,000. I am glad to see the debt break below the $140,000 mark. It will be fine when we can drop the three and take up the two. Your contributions will make this possible. Every time you give a dollar a saving in interest is effected as well as reduction in debt. We want to be able to keep the thermometer before the people. If you have not sent in your subscription, won't you do so at once. Every subscription sent in during March will have a double significance.

FOR THE CHILDREN

LIVINGSTONE'S BIRTHDAY.

On March 19 we celebrate the birthday of a great missionary and explorer, David Livingstone, who was born in 1813 in Scotland. When David was 10 years old he went to work in a cotton mill. Although he could not go to school, he read many books and even studied Latin. By the time he was 23 he was able to enter the University of Glasgow and study medicine. When he was 27 he was sent by the London Missionary Society as a missionary to Africa. He had his heart set on going to China, and was disappointed when he was sent to Africa.

Livingstone soon decided that the most important contribution he could make as a missionary would be to pioneer in opening up new territory and leave native converts to carry out the details, rather than settling down in one place and sending to London each year a long list of doubtful converts he had made there. On one of his first trips up the Limpopo River a lion crushed his left arm, and ever after he suffered because of it. As a result of Livingstone's first trip across Africa, which took two and a half years, the map of Africa was completely remade. He discovered rivers and lakes, made careful notes regarding vegetation and animal life, and made observations of the stars. He returned to England in 1856, and while there wrote a book telling of his travels.

In 1858 the King of England appointed Livingstone as a British consul to Africa and he went back there to continue his travels and explorations. He became interested in trying to do something about the slave traffic, which was very bad. At one time he was not heard of for several years and the New York Herald sent a man from New York to Africa to try to find him. This man, Stanley, finally succeeded in locating Livingstone. He found him way in the interior of Africa at Lake Bangweolo, and left him there to continue his work of exploration.

On May 1, 1873 his native helpers found Livingstone kneeling by the side of his bed, dead. They carefully preserved the body of "the great master—as the natives called him—as and carried it, along with his papers and instruments, across Africa to Zanzibar. He was buried in Westminster Abbey in London, where many of the great men of England are buried.

This great explorer and missionary who had to work in a mill when he was young rather than go to school, who was sent to do his work in a place where he did not want to go, became the man who is known for opening up the continent of Africa to civilization. His motto is a good one for us, "Fear God, and work hard."

We hope that each of you read the Bible often. If you do not have a copy of the New Testament (which contains the life and teachings of Jesus) for your very own, and if you cannot get one, write to the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., and they will see that you receive one.

Today read at least one verse in the New Testament in the Book of Mark, the sixteenth chapter and the fifteenth verse.

I believe in God above;
I believe in Jesus' love.
I believe His Spirit, too,
Comes to tell me what to do.
I believe that I can be True and loving, Lord, like Thee.

QUESTION BOX.

HOW DID THE UNITED STATES GET THE NAME OF UNCLE SAM?"

During the war of 1812 our government had a contract with Elbert Anderson to furnish army supplies, and the inspector appointed to pass on the goods was a jolly man known as "Uncle Sam," his name being Samuel Wilson. He inspected all the boxes, and if they were all right marked on them the letters "E. A. — U. S.," the initials of the contractor and the United States. When he was asked one day what these letters stood for, he jokingly replied, "For Elbert Anderson and Uncle Sam." This was spread as a good joke, and it became common to refer to all packages marked U. S. as belonging to Uncle Sam.

EVER AND EVER BEYOND.

As we approach the Easter Season we are indeed compelled to think of that which ever and always lies beyond. Easter itself is beyond the sad and tragic event out of which it came. Our Lord Christ, because of His teaching, daily living and preaching compelled them to crucify Him. He did not put off this sad and tragic event until He had spent, as He might have done, many, many years in His earthly ministry and career. Instead He saw fit with the wisdom of the Father to plant the Cross at the very center of His early life and that, too, only after a public ministry of three years. But this sad event, the world's one tragic event, because it enables us to look beyond and penetrate the darkness and gloom of death itself we have turned into a symbol of joy and gladness. So in our common speech we term it "Good Friday" instead of tragic Friday, or bad Friday, that Friday which precedes the Sunday following the resurrection—glad Easter Day itself.

Moreover, the Cross has been itself glorified and is worn as a symbol of adornment in gold by unnumbered thousands of our good women; and Catholic friends make the sign of the Cross before the act of prayer and adoration.

Good Friday has enabled us to lift up our eyes to that which is beyond, enabling us in our sorrow, over the decease of our loved ones, to look through our tears and see something more than death beyond the gloom. We are permitted in our defeats and difficulties, by the grace of God, to look beyond and to see the silver lining to the clouds that lower.

The professed Christians of this day need indeed to look beyond in order to get new hope, fresh courage and a daily faith. Wars and rumors of wars threaten the world. Divisions, prejudices and isms, pitiable and tragic indeed, divide the family of God and prevent the church of our day from presenting a united front in an effort to save a sinning world. The disloyalties in the church must indeed bring grief to the heart of our Lord, but He bids the faithful to look beyond, realizing that He Himself is building His church and thus He will not fail. In our missionary effort we are seeking the loyalty and the devotion of every member of every church to that only cause which our Lord established after His resurrection, and commanded us to carry on in His name.

In the above there are names of two, or three Sunday schools just beginning through their once a month offering for missions to prove their loyalty and devotion to the cause that our Lord Himself established and commanded His followers to carry on. We are grateful beyond measure for each and every school and individual who helps in this wholly divine task. In addition to the above we were gratified the past week to get letters from one, or two, other schools stating that they had voted to take the monthly offering. Let the good work continue till all our schools shall unite with all our churches in working together to help reach and save with the blessed gospel of our Lord those who throughout the world cannot be saved without Him and His blessed love and life.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR APRIL.

By MRS. R. T. BRADFORD,
Easter—The Resurrection.

Leader:

Once more the Heavenly Power
Makes all things new,
And domes the red plowed hills
With loving blue.

—Tennyson.

Leader: The Lord is risen.

Response (all): The Lord is risen indeed.

Scripture Reading: Luke 24: 1-12.

Prayer:

Our gracious Heavenly Father, give to us Thy children a sense of Thy presence as we contemplate the glorious triumph of Thy Son, our Lord and Savior. May our hearts be filled with joy and gladness as we celebrate his victory over death and the grave, bringing to us the assurance of the immortal life. Grant that we may be raised to walk with Him in newness of life. May our interest in and devotion to His Kingdom be greatly increased, revealing itself in unselfish service and in sacrifice and gifts in behalf of His cause. May our love for our fellowmen be intensified as we come to love Thee more. Grant to us thine own good time an abundant entrance into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

Hymn: "We Would See Jesus."

Brief Talk by Leader or Someone Appointed:

The most important single event in history is the Resurrection. This it was that changed the history of the world, the attitude and the thinking of mankind. If Jesus had been born and lived and taught as He did, His would have only been a great life among other great world teachers. But He compelled them to crucify Him while He was yet a young man in the very vigor of life and only after three years of preaching and teaching. But even if the crucifixion had ended His life, He would be only unique and a hero to be admired, a martyr to His belief as was Socrates and hundreds of other men of high ideals. But the life of Jesus differs from all other great and good men in that even death, hell, and the grave did not and could not conquer and hold Him. He arose from the dead and thus became the first fruits of them that slept. His resurrection is a historical fact. "Aud if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching in vain, and your faith is also vain." "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." (I Cor. 15: 14, 19.) The simple fact is that whereas we celebrate the birth of Christ at one season of the year (December 25) we really celebrate the Resurrection every Sunday when we worship, since under the old dispensation the believers in God rested and worshipped on the seventh day of the week; but after the resurrection of our Lord, which was on the first day of the week, the day of rest and worship was changed from the seventh to the first. There are many Christians and churches today who do

OUR INSTITUTIONS

The Orphanage

Elon College

Dear Friends:

I often think that if our people could know or come face to face with cases of poverty and real need as this writer often does, the income to the orphanage from our churches and Sunday schools would be must larger. I have always found our people ready and willing to respond when a real need is called to their attention.

The writer was in a Sunday school class sometime ago. The attention of the class was called to the fact that a family in the community had met with a misfortune. It was suggested that the class make a special offering to help in the financial burden. Without any special plea the collection plate was passed and, if my memory serves me correctly, more than $25.00 was contributed and everybody was the happier.

The writer was called to a home recently. A father had passed away several months before. The mother was left with several children. She was appealing to the Christian Orphanage to take two little boys. They seemed to be bright little fellows. They said they wanted to come to the Orphanage to live. The writer fully believes that if our church people could have been present and voted as to whether or not we should take them, there would have been a unanimous vote to take them in. It is an opportunity to help those in need. It is an opportunity to visit the fatherless and widow in their affliction.

Because children are unfortunate and are in poverty is no reason why they should not have bright minds. We often see that demonstrated here in this work. It is so pathetic when a child has a bright mind and is anxious to develop it and on account of poverty is denied the opportunity.

I was in conversation with a high school teacher sometime ago. She said she had a little girl in her school that was the brightest student she had. Her work was almost perfect. She wanted to have everything in her school work as nearly perfect as she could make it. She worked daily to that end. But she said this little girl lived in a home of poverty where the blessings of life are few.

We have had that to be the case here in this work a number of times—children have come to the Orphanage homeless and destitute; but they had bright minds and while here made good use of the opportunities offered them and have gone out to fill responsible positions in life. The orphanage does a worthy work when it visits the fatherless in this way. The child is given an opportunity. The givers are made better by the giving and richer in spirit. The child repays in good citizenship and living a life of service.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR APRIL.

not particularly celebrate Easter because they celebrate the resurrection fifty-two Sundays of each year, the Resurrection being the events that shifted the emphasis from creation to redemption. According to the Old Testament, and even while our Lord was on earth as recorded in the New Testament, the Sabbath, which was the seventh day of the week, was kept in celebration of the completion of creation. Now the Christian world for the most part rests and worships on the first day of the week, by which act they celebrate and emphasize the completion, not of a material world, but the completion of the plan of salvation, a plan held in the mind of God with His Son, which plan was completed through the Resurrection of His Son on the first day of the week. Thus at Easter time once per year and in a less conscious, but none the less true manner, we celebrate this most important of the world's events every Sunday through the year, when we meet in our houses of worship to sing praises to our Lord and seek on that day to worship Him in spirit and truth.

Registration—10c. Supper—30c.

FLASHES!

The young people of First Church, Norfolk, have the opportunity to enter an unusual and beneficial contest. Rev. John H. Knight is offering a prize for the best paper written by a young person on "What the Cross Means to Me." Three members of the church will judge the entries, and the best one will be read from the pulpit on Easter-Sunday.

Many young people's groups are planning splendid programs for Easter. Some are going to have sunrise services, others are to give pageants or plays. Plan to make Easter a specific day, a joyful day, in your young people's group. If you need help in working out a program, write to the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

A JUST SOCIETY.

Meditate upon these things;
Give thyself wholly to them;
That thy profiting may appear to all.
—I Timothy 4: 15.

"To secure equal rights and opportunities for all classes and races as equally the children of God."—Statement of Purpose.

"For the Son of Man himself has not come to be waited on but to wait on other people, and to give his life to free many others."—Mark 10: 45. (American Translation.)

"A just society can be built only on the foundation of human solidarity. The classification of human beings into categories, with graded and contrasted attitudes toward various groups, has produced appalling misery and wreckage . . . Jesus places supreme valuation upon every person and recognizes in every other individual a beloved kinsman, a child of his Father. No wall of race or nationality or class is permitted to shut out a single person from the family circle, the Kingdom of God on Earth."—(Kirby Page.)

PRAYER.

We beseech thee, teach mankind to live together in peace
No man exploiting the weak, no man hating the strong,
Each race working out its own destiny.
Unfettered, self-respecting, fearless.
Teach us to be worthy of freedom,
Free from social wrong, free from individual oppression and contempt.
Pure of heart and hand, despising none, defrauding none,
Giving to all men in all the dealings of life
The honor we owe to those who are thy children, Whatever their color, their race, or their caste.

I WOULD BE PURE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MARCH 26, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 23: 23-28; Daniel 1: 8-16.

Daily Readings—

- Monday—Purity of God's Law—Ps. 19: 7-10.
- Tuesday—Purified Lips—Isa. 6: 1-8.
- Wednesday—Purity of Thought—Phil. 4: 8, 9.
- Thursday—Purity in Conversation and Conduct—Eph. 4: 17-29.
- Friday—Purity in Living—Titus 1: 15, 16.
- Saturday—Purity As of Christ—I John 3: 1-3.

The leader for this meeting should be a consecrated person. Give considerable time for the topic to change your own life, then you will be prepared to lead the meeting. It should be the ultimate aim of the meeting to influence and change the lives of those you lead.

There are three realms of life in which it is necessary to live pure. These may be discussed by three or four in a panel.

1. We must be clean physically. The outward appearance should be clean. We should not strive to live above our means, but practice clean living. Those things which defile the body should be omitted. The body must not be weakened because of petty indulgences.

2. Mentally we should be pure. Our thinking needs right direction. Can one read all types of literature and magazines and yet have a clean mind? It is a fact that we are influenced, and our minds are governed by our contact with literature.

3. Spiritually we should be wholesome. A strong body and a clean mind are not the only essentials in the spiritual life. Devotion, consecration, and reverence should be added, and to this allegiance to Christ.

Make a special study of the life of Daniel with regard to his habits of thought and action. How may these principles be applied to the lives of young people today?

Why did Jesus rebuke the Pharisees?

Discuss together frankly "What is expected of young Christians."

At the close of the meeting have a period of dedication. The group may engage in sentence prayers after which may be sung:

Just as I am, Thine own to be,
Friend of the young, Who lovest me,
To consecrate myself to Thee,
O Jesus Christ, I come.

Suggested Hymns—

- "Yield Not to Temptation."
- "I Would Be True."

PETER EXHORTS TO CHRISTIAN LIVING.

LESSON XII—MARCH 19, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Like as he who called you is holy, be ye yourselves holy in all manner of living.—I Peter 1: 15.

LESSON: I Peter 3: 8-18.

A Way of Life.

Christianity is primarily "a way of life." To be sure, it has its creeds and dogmas, its ideas and ideals, its institutions and organizations. But its ultimate fruitage and its ultimate test is its "way of life." In the final analysis Christianity seeks to reproduce the character of Christ and to express the spirit of Christ. The Christ-like life, for the individual and for society, is the goal of Christianity. This is the emphasis in the letter which Peter wrote to his fellow-Christians.

A Sensitive Heart.

"Finally, be ye like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded"—it is a plea for a sensitive heart. The word compassion really means to "feel with," to put one's self in another's place, to suffer with another. There are so many things in modern life to make one careless and callous. One of the worst things that can happen to one is to lose his sensitiveness of heart, his sense of concern for others, his compassion for others, his tender-heartedness—the spirit of affection. Nothing keeps the heart sensitive like keeping in touch with Christ. No man who has the spirit of Christ in his heart can be callous or careless.

The Currency of Life.

One can use two coins or standards of exchange in life. He can pay others back in their own coin—he can do to others as they do to him. Many do this. Being struck, they strike back. Being wronged, they seek revenge. Being mistreated, they try to get even. They return evil for evil. It is the natural way, but it is not the ideal way, or the divine way.

The other way is the Christ-like way, to return good for evil, blessing for reviling, justice for injustice, love for hate. To do unto others as you would have others do unto you—this is Christ's law. "Not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling, but contrariwise, blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye should inherit a blessing." One may get some satisfaction if he "gets even" with another, but he will get far more satisfaction if he returns good for evil. To return evil for good is beastly. To return good for good is human. To return good for evil is divine.

The Secret of the Good Life.

"For he that would love life, and see good days":

1. "Let him refrain his tongue from evil." Strange that Peter should put that first, but Peter knew how much of the world's trouble and unhappiness came from the tongue. James in bold language says that the tongue is "an unruly evil, full of deadly poison, a fire, a world of iniquity, and is set on fire of hell." The Psalmist prayed that God might set a watch and a guard on his tongue and his lips. Evil words are a boomerang.

2. "And his lips that they speak no guile." It is not enough that one refrain from speaking evil; there must be sincerity. The words of the mouth must be matched by the purity of the heart. The hypocrite does not know and cannot know the true love of life, or see good days.

3. "Let him turn away from evil, and do good." The way of the transgressor is hard. The wicked are like the sea whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, unto the wicked. There is no abiding satisfaction in sin. As strange as it may seem to some people, goodness is the secret of a happy life. It is not enough, either, simply to turn from evil. One must turn to the good. We are to overcome evil with good. We are to give ourselves so diligently to the good that the evil is crowded out.

4. "Let him seek peace and pursue." Blessed are the peacemakers, happy are those who try to live in such a way that they are centers of serenity and not of dissention, who lubricate rather than irritate, who reduce friction rather than engender fusses, who give themselves diligently to seeking peace, and who pursue it.

Encouragement in Well-Doing.

"For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplications." We have not been left to bear our burdens alone or to fight our battles single-handed. When we set ourselves to do the right, we put ourselves in harmony with His purposes and qualify ourselves to receive His power.

Suffering for Righteousness' Sake.

This letter was written to Christians who were beginning to be persecuted for righteousness' sake. The world, alas, is so constituted that men sometimes, indeed often, have to suffer because they do right and do good. But let no man be afraid or ashamed, or troubled. Let him rejoice and be exceeding glad, for so persecuted they the prophets; and Jesus himself.

A Reason Concerning the Hope That Is in Us.

"Being ready always to give answer to every man that asketh you a reason concerning the hope that is in you, yet with meekness and fear." A Christian should know what he believes and why he believes it. He should not be apologetic for his faith. Christianity asks us to love God with all our minds as well as our hearts. Believe something, know what you believe, and why you believe it. But do not flaunt it or boast about it. Thank God that you know whom you have believed, and humbly tell others about it.

The Unanswerable Argument.

"Having a good conscience; that wherein ye are spoken against, that they may be put to shame who revile your good manner of life in Christ." Folks may be able to answer your inadequate intellectual defense of your faith. They may be able to make fun of your arguments. But there is one unanswerable argument—the argument of a good life and good works.

MONDAY.

HEAVENLY SIMPLICITY.

"Mind not high things."—Rom. 12:16.

It was our privilege the other day to be the guests of a doctor friend and his lady. It was in a simple summer cottage back in the woods by the banks of a lake. There one can have the pleasure of sitting by the kitchen stove while dinner is being prepared, and might even turn a hand to serving it. Or one may sit on the back porch, or out under the trees listening to the birds sing, or to the lap of rippling waves against the bank, and smoke his pipe. Or he may even step into a boat midst fishing gear, etc., and go out and cast about, not caring particularly whether he caught a fish or not. Just fishing is good.

Folks who live in chubs, hotels, apartments, trains or mansions, miss the simplest and most satisfactory joys of life. A great many of us have gotten too far away from life's ultimate simplicities. The essentials of life, after all, are very few. None of our modern and scientific achievements can offer a substitute for them.

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, we are glad that Jesus lived the simple life of the common people, and that He could build a fire and fry the fish that He Himself had caught. O, may we share some of His greatness. Amen.

TUESDAY.

LIFE'S REAL VALUES.

"We have fellowship one with another."—I John 1:3-7.

"John, you should go to Florida for part of the winter," I remarked to a bachelor friend, now getting old, who has grown rich.

His reply carried a homily. "It is all right for you to go Florida, for you have Mrs. Ellis with you. But what would I do there, alone among strangers? Here in my store I meet the best people in the world every day. They have a smile and a greeting for me, and often we have a little chat. They are my friends. Without them I would be unhappy."

My friend had sensed life's real values. The society of those amidst whom we are Providentially placed is one of the true rewards of living.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou hast cast our lot amidst Thine other children, our neighbors. Help us to value, to enjoy and to serve them to the full. Amen.—W. T. Ellis in Christian Herald.

WEDNESDAY.

MAKING IT FIT.

"Try the spirits whether they are of God."—I John 4:1.

As Entertainment Officer it is a part of my job to furnish a recording concert every day from twelve to one and from five to six-thirty. There are usually about fifteen hundred souls to please, in taste, ranging all the way from none to all to the educated and the cultured. The most of them are our young men who care for little more than the incongruous, nervous, flat-footed, rag-throated, banal music, which is an affront to our sensibilities. Such music is out of tune with peace and harmony. But we have to please. Do you want my job?

Prayer—Our Father, give us courage to take into our lives those things which make for peace and strength, and character. Amen.

THURSDAY.

POSSESSION BY GIVING.

"Give and it shall be given to you."—Luke 6:38.

A friend used to say "The oftener you shear a sheep the more and the better the wool." If you would have more abundant and more beautiful flowers, cut them often. If you would live in hearts and have the riches of friendship, give to your neighbor. Every life is enriched by its own giving.

Prayer—O Giver of all gifts, and Thou who didst share Thyself, we pray for more of Thy nature. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ALERT TO THE BEAUTIFUL.

"Think on these things."—Phil. 4:4-9.

A wise overseer commends for qualities and actions that are praiseworthy, and he observes discreet silence over mistakes and shortcomings.

Likewise, to live alert to that which is beautiful, true and pure and to dwell upon such as the real, furnishes the highest inspiration known to man. It only takes an effort of the will and the cultivation of habits to fill the mind with good things.

Prayer—O Lord, be Thou our minds, in purity, beauty and truth. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE GREAT OBJECTIVE.

"It yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness."—Heb. 12:11.

A preacher once said, "Train up a child in the way he should go and train him twenty years before birth." It is a rare thing for a young woman to plan to be a good grandmother; for a young man to order his life for the best rewards at full maturity. Nevertheless, the Bible says do that. Character and eternity is given as the thing to be sought for from the beginning of a man's life. If all did this, what a different world!

Prayer—O, our Father, teach us how to pay less heed to present returns, and more to the permanent values of life. Give us practical sense. Amen.

SUNDAY.

O FOR QUIET!

"Study to be quiet."—I Thess. 4:11.

At sea there are two types of passengers, the restless and the quiet.

THE PROOF OF FAITH.

“For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.”—Jas. 2: 26.

Faith is a bigger thing than doctrines. Faith without works is dead.

Jesus was continually emphasizing the need of giving proof of the faith which one professed.

Jesus said, “Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I command you?” Again our Master said, “Not everyone that calleth me Lord, Lord, shall inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.” And again our Lord challenged His disciples and all who today claim to love and follow Him, “Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.” The only proof of Christian faith in Jesus’ day and in our day is Christian living and Christian service.

The world is little concerned about, and God is little honored by a faith that is confined to mere profession. Doctrines are important, but no amount of doctrines can take place of Christian living. Faith is a bigger thing than doctrines. Faith is life—life in touch with God whose manner and being the doctrines seek to explain. A road map regardless of how beautiful the country it covers can never be a substitute for a journey through the country.

No matter how elaborate the doctrines, they never can be a substitute for Christian living. A person might declare with great emotion that he believes in all the doctrines of the Church, but such declaration would not prove that he was a Christian. The proof of Christian faith is Christ-like living.

The proof of faith is the possession of courage to face life and see it through, to take whatever comes—to take it as the boys say: “take it on the chin,” and be the better because it’s hard to take. The proof of faith is the refusal to lower one’s moral standards regardless of what rebuff, embarrassment, or discomfort, that fidelity to Christian principles of conduct may cost. The proof of faith is not argument, oftentimes arguments in defense of faith, because of the spirit expressed, are a flat denial of faith.

The proof of faith is not intellectual assent to the teachings of the Church about Christ and God, but the proof of faith is a heart response to God as the author of life, the giver of every good and perfect gift, and the Savior of our souls. The proof of faith is not the creed to which one subscribes, but the life which one lives.

Our lives either deny or prove the faith which we profess. The proof of faith is the desire to live right, the desire and strength to resist temptations, the determination not to give up in the conquest for truth, for honor, for character, and for God. Jesus proved his faith by “going about doing good.” His disciples can prove their faith only in that way.

IS A GREAT REVIVAL POSSIBLE?

stand indicted at the bar of God for our lethargy and indifference.

Looking back over the years, we find that the “Golden Age” did not exist in the past or any other century. That age is the one in which we are living. Great problems are confronting the world, which would seem to presage the overthrow of civilization and the present order of things. A great spiritual declension has come into being and is striking at the very foundation of existing order, and because nations have cast God out of their calculations and have enthroned the gods of force and greed, the future appears dark and sinister.

The great increase of wealth and the production of luxuries unknown in the past have greatly contributed to the stern problem which faces the Church today. With increase of wealth, which enables the laborer to enjoy luxuries which even kings of the past could not have, has come a denial of God and repudiation of the spiritual restraint imposed by Christian living.

Social evils threaten the very fabric of life. The wiles and lures of the courtesan are everywhere in evidence. If an old Roman was to pass along our streets today, would he believe that the worship of Venus was extinct? The stage—with its counterfeit portrayal of life, the motion pictures—with their impure sex appeal and glorification of crime, the news stands—loaded with books and magazines which inflame the passions and lusts of the adolescent youth, are in evidence everywhere. These are some of the problems the Church—our Church—is called upon to face.

Not only does our Church face these foes from without, but it is at death grips with a deadly philosophy from within. Modernism, Rationalism, Higher Criticism, and even Atheism are to be found within, and even welcomed to the communion of the Church. Some are preaching and teaching doctrines which a few years ago would have been called heresy. Today an easy way is desired and accepted.

In this day and age when the hosts of hell are encamped about us, the fires of evangelism must be re-kindled. We must carry the warfare to the gates. If ever there was a time when the banner of our God should be thrown to the breeze, that time is now. If ever men were needed, sun-crowned with the light of truth in their eyes and the love of God and souls in their hearts, that time is now.

Men and brethren, let us swing out to new conquests. A sin-sick world is before us. Let us this year major in evangelistic effort in our churches. Let us sink self in the grave of Christ, that we may know the glory of His resurrection. Let us go on, and on, into the light of a perfect day until sin and error shall be sunk in the boundless ocean of God’s love; until human pride shall bow, and kneeling kiss the scepter of the King of Kings.

FAMILY ALTAR.

The quiet sort are the victors. They rest, they sleep, they read, they eat, they play, and they eat and rest again.

Life is like that. The restless, seeking something they know not what and quite dissatisfied with it after they get it, go on restless. Others are content with what they have, in fact some think themselves rich even in the little that they have. They know that a heart at peace is better than amusement.

Prayer—O Lord, forgive us of our nervous malcontent souls. Teach us how to live serenely. Amen.

The Memorial Tablets erected in memory of the Rev. William Brock Wellons, D. D., and the Rev. William Wesley Staley, D. D., LL. D., will be appropriately dedicated at the morning service of worship at the Suffolk Christian Church on March 19, at eleven o'clock. Dr. Wellons was founder of our Suffolk Church, and served as its first pastor for sixteen years. Dr. Staley served the church as pastor and pastor emeritus for fifty years. Brief sketches of the lives of these two great men of God will be given as a part of the dedicatory services.

A CHURCH MEMBER SPEAKS.

I am a member of Dr. Harrell's church in Durham, N. C., and a member of Dr. W. H. Boone's class in the Sunday school there.

I am wondering if there isn't something lacking in the churches and Sunday schools of our day. It seems to me there is a lack of appreciation. I should like to ask the membership of our Sunday school and church this question—"Do you as an individual member ever say to your superintendent, 'You are doing a wonderful job. I really enjoy your programs each Sunday?'" This same thing should apply to your class president and teacher. Are you satisfied to enjoy a wonderful presentation of the Sunday school lesson, and listen to a beautiful program of music, and hear a fine sermon—then get up and go home and never speak a word of appreciation to anyone for what you have enjoyed? I think we have a splendid choir and the members deserve more credit and appreciation than we give them. Our good pastor, Dr. Harrell, always has a wonderful spiritual message for us. Many of us do not go to church on Sunday nights when I think he preaches some of his most inspiring sermons.

Dear Friends:

When we are separated from our friends and loved ones, especially our mothers, our thoughts are continually going back to them. How often, and how naturally, we wish that we knew of some little something that we could do for them to let them know that we are thinking of them and appreciate what they have done for us. All former students of Elon think of her as Alma Mater, and many others, to whom she is dear for other reasons, think of her as a real friend. To all of these this letter is a suggestion of something that can be done for Elon right now that will bring great joy.

Because of the stress of the past five years, Elon has not been able to add to the book collection in the library as she knew that she should, and now knows that she must. The committee from the Southern Association of Colleges, while on its recent visit to Elon, recommended that we add at least one thousand dollars' worth of books to the library between now and the end of this school year. It would make President Smith very happy to be able to report to the Association when it meets the latter part of March that the books have been added to the library.

We feel sure that you have books—at least one—lying idle that you will be glad to send to the library. You have a good idea as to what books will be valuable additions to the Elon library, but if you have any doubt send them along and let us decide.

By sending us books immediately you will not only be furnishing needy books for the students of the college, and helping Elon to meet the requirements of the Southern Association of Colleges, but you will become a member of the permanent organization which is in the process of being formed in connection with the celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary. You will hear more about this later, but right now you can help us greatly by sending us some useful books.

Anxiously and expectantly awaiting the joy of receiving books from you right away, I remain,

Most sincerely yours,

(Mrs.) OMA U. JOHNSON,
Librarian, Elon College.

Let's all try to remember to speak a word of encouragement to someone who is helping to carry out the work of the Master.

E. L. JONES.

MRS. J. W. PATTON.

Aside from the college there is at Elon a very quiet, wholesome community, not a very large population but a very fine group of people, many of whom have been here for years and years. They are perfectly identified with the community and with the college.

Since the writer's student days at Elon College, Rev. J. W. Patton and family have lived here. Mrs. Patton has been a very helpful citizen, never fully contented without serving to the extent of her ability. Aside from making a home for the family, a great part of her time has been devoted to teaching in public schools in different places in the state. Mrs. Patton had been in failing health for more than a year, yet she continued to work so long as she could stand on her feet, patient and submissive under the hand of affliction. The end finally came on March 1. The funeral services were conducted from the college chapel on Friday afternoon at 2:30 by the writer, assisted by Dr. G. O. Lankford. Burial was in Magnolia Cemetery at Elon College.

In the death of Mrs. Patton the community loses a highly respected citizen, the college a friend, the church a faithful worker, and the family a faithful wife and a devoted mother. Sympathy is expressed to the bereaved.

In Memoriam

SHARPE.

Since it hath pleased God in His wise providence to take from our midst our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Sallie Riggan Sharpe, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we shall greatly miss her cheerfulness, her friendliness, and her neighborliness among us.
2. That we shall strive to follow her example in spreading good cheer about us and to be better neighbors and more loyal friends.
3. That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy in their sorrow.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy to "The Christian Sun," and a copy be placed upon our minutes.

GODSEY.

In the death of Lilliau Talley Godsey, church, home, and community have lost one who was faithful in all life's duties. She was born April 18, 1904, and departed this life February 14, 1939, at her home, Buffalo Junction, Va. Prior to her marriage in June, 1925, she was in training for two years at the Chase City Hospital. Besides her husband, Mr. Claude Godsey, and two children, Gladys and Bobby, she is survived by her father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Talley, and the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. William Webb, Mrs. Frank Pittard, Mrs. W. N. Shepherd, Miss Selma Talley, Harrell, Chillie, and Marvin Talley.

Mrs. Godsey had been a member of Hebron Church for about twenty years.

The funeral and burial were at Gravel Hill Church near Buffalo Springs. Floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. A large crowd was present.

C. E. NEWMAN.

SMITH.

Again the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church has sustained a great loss in the death of our faithful friend and co-worker, Mrs. C. E. Smith, who passed away on December 14, 1938.

We cannot understand why one so good, quiet, and unassuming in her manner, yet always so ready and willing to do her part in the work she loved, was called away in the midst of her usefulness.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That, while we most sincerely mourn her loss, we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well, knowing our loss is her gain.
2. That we extend to her husband and children our heartfelt sympathy in this great sorrow.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be placed on the records of the Society, and a copy be published in "The Christian Sun."

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

"The Whirlwind" based on alcohol education, after an interesting program of music was given by the Hungerford singers from a nearby Negro school.

On Saturday morning a comedy "How Not To Conduct Meetings" was put on by members of the various churches. Pattie Lee Coghill led a discussion on "The Well Rounded Young People's Program" which included the following subjects introduced by various young people: The Pilgrim Highroad, Alcohol Education, Recreations and Socials, Play-Readings, International Relations. On Saturday afternoon the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship Goals were discussed, an explanation was made concerning the scholarship to the Summer Conference given for the best review of Dinabandhu, and Easter plays and devotional materials were presented to the group. On Saturday night Henry Witte, president of the Florida young people, was the toastmaster at the banquet. The speaker was Robert Lado, Spanish student at Rollins College. The Winter Park young people gave a play entitled "Peace I Give Unto you."

On Sunday morning the Daytona Beach young people conducted the worship program. Following this the Sunday school class was taught by Dr. Feurstein, professor of German at Rollins: Dr. V. B. Chicoine preached the morning sermon.

This is the second group of churches in Florida to hold such a week-end conference for young people. Betty Chicoine of Winter Park is the chairman of this district and presided over the meetings.

The Real Mission of the Church Is to Make Christ-Like People In All the World

The Church Is Working For You

The Church is the ally of everything that is good and the enemy of everything that is bad.

1. The elimination of evil and the teaching of righteousness make the world a better place in which you may live.
2. The Church is the sole institution which has for its chief business the inculcation of the principles of honesty and right dealing. This helps you.
3. Churches induce law and order. Law and order must precede the safety of business. Better business conditions help you.
4. The Church in your community enhances the value of your property.
5. Because honesty, integrity, fair dealing—all taught by the Church—are stronger than steel doors, time locks, courts, and brawny officers, the Church is working for you.

BUT—ARE YOU WORKING FOR THE CHURCH?

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Dr. L. E. Smith was the speaker at the Fifteenth Anniversary of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., on last Sunday.

Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, secretary of the Southern Convention, recently made a brief trip to New York in the interest of our work.

The Valley Virginia Conference meets at Bethlehem Church on Friday of next week. A good delegation from each church is expected.

Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Garman, missionaries of the Christian Church, are spending this month of their furlough in Rogersville, Tennessee. Churches wishing a visit from them should write to the Promotional Secretary, Elon College, N. C.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN has recently been notified that Mrs. J. A. Troutman has been appointed its representative at Apple's Chapel, and Mrs. Tommie C. Farrell at Hank's Chapel Christian Churches. These ladies have already started sending in subscriptions.

Beautiful bulletins for Easter aid greatly in making the services valuable. Several publishing companies furnish these at a fairly reasonable rate. The Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., can give information concerning these bulletins, and can also furnish other materials for Easter programs.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree was relieved of duty on the United States Ship Henderson on the 13th of this month in San Diego, Cal., because of heart trouble. The readers of The Quiet Hour which he furnishes, and his many other friends will wish and pray that within a comparatively short time he may return to the post of duty which he loves so much.

One subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN writes that he has been sick for a long while and will not be able to continue his subscription, although he likes to read the paper. An elderly lady in the mountains of Virginia who lives around with her children cannot subscribe to the paper even though she wants it. There are some other such subscribers who report to THE CHRISTIAN SUN occasionally. It would be a fine thing if the paper could have a small fund contributed by interested readers for the benefit of such persons. The response for individuals like these has always been excellent. Thank you kindly, friends.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA MINISTERS MEET.

On Saturday afternoon of last week the Western North Carolina ministers met in conference with the Promotional Secretary of the Southern Convention at Sophia Congregational Church. For four hours they discussed informally problems affecting the churches in our Western North Carolina Conference. Out of the discussion came the united agreement to undertake three definite things: (1) Make a survey of Ashboro to see if a Congregational-Christian Church is needed there; (2) Plan for stewardship institutes, probably during the summer; and (3) Plan leadership training institutes for next fall. Pastors present included Revs. E. Carl Brady, J. C. Cummings, O. A. Elmore, T. J. Green, M. A. Pollard, J. Q. Pugh, D. M. Spence, and Geo. M. Talley.

At the same time and place young people met to consider their work in the conference. Walter Cooper of Burlington, president of the North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship, led the discussion. Other officials from outside the conference included Miss Alberta Murray, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship; Miss Frances Foster, Superintendent of devotional life in the same conference; Miss Edna Fulcher, from the Board of Christian Education; and Mrs. F. C. Lester, secretary of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. Plans were made for another meeting in May. Definite announcements of this will be made later.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS.

Miss Elizabeth Robinson, who was a teacher at Thorsby Institute for several years, died recently at a Birmingham hospital. For the past several years Miss Robinson has been living with her sister, Mrs. King, in North Birmingham. She was buried in Elmwood Cemetery. Miss Robinson was a fine Christian woman, an excellent teacher, and a woman of culture and scholarship. She will be greatly missed.

Miss Imogene Warder, lecturer, and world traveler, will speak in the Thorsby Institute Auditorium on Friday night, March 24, at 7:30. Admission will be 20c. Miss Warder is an American girl who has observed the Spanish Revolution at first hand. Her other extensive travels include a 2,000 mile bicycle trip through Ireland; a 9,000-foot climb through the Alps; a 700-mile trip from the Arctic Ocean down the rivers and lakes through the wilds of Russian Lapland.

PORTSMOUTH, VA.

Due to the illness of Rev. Marna S. Poulson, D. D., the Shelton Church (First Congregational), Portsmouth, Va., has secured the services of Mr. James Roy Smith, a ministerial student at Randolph-Macon College, Ashland. Mr. Smith, in cooperation with the young people in the Christian Endeavor Societies, presented a Happiness Program Sunday night, March 19. Mr. Smith is rendering the church a very helpful service. One Sunday Mr. Robert Walker, Christian Temple, Norfolk, conducted the morning service and another Sunday the members of the Shelton Church worshipped with Rev. Robert L. House and his people at the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Virginia. Dr. Poulson is convalescing at the parsonage, 1057 Leekie Street, Portsmouth, Va.

WM. F. LAWRENCE.

MOUNT OLIVET (R).

We have just closed a meeting at Mount Olivet (R) which ran eight days. The interest and attention given to all the services were most marked. The attendance was large, with a fine spirit of cooperation from many of our sister denominations.

The preaching was done by the pastor. The singing was led by Professor Good, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, and he was assisted by Mr. A. P. Liskey, who is a Methodist, with duet work done by the "Morris Sisters," who are members of the United Brethren Church. Every one entered into the meeting with much enthusiasm and all in all we feel that it has been a gracious blessing to the community.

There were four additions to the church. Mount Olivet is progressing and with her unique location the opportunities are great. We trust and pray that the same fine spirit (the Christ Spirit) will continue to manifest itself so that great things will be done there in His name.

LOVE IN A WORLD OF WAR.

As these lines are being written soldiers are on the march, and before this goes to press the doors to a new Hell may open in Europe, a Hell into which millions of soldiers and civilians may be plunged never to return. In the olden days it was called War, and in more recent days it has been called an "incident." But one cannot look at the flashing explosions, smell the smoke, look upon the death and destruction caused by bursting bombs from the air and guns from the ground without knowing that the blasts of a burning Hell are let loose on earth. However necessary and plausible war may seem, the fact still remains that it is fiendish. It comes because the basest elements in human nature are allowed to dominate in international relations.

Your editor knows all too little to comment with intelligence on what is happening in Europe. The causes of present conflicts run back through centuries. Why things have come to the point they have is beyond his ken—he knows not, although some things seem to be evident. It appears that the Hitler regime is insanely mad, that all reason and decency have disappeared from much of the leadership of what has for centuries been the great German people. There appears to be no valid excuses for Germany taking over other nations, and there seems to be no end to this process of grabbing territory unless stopped by the stern reality of armed force.

The Church preaches and stands for Love in human relations. What chance has love in a world at war? In Germany and Japan the Church has been, and is being repressed and silenced. For more than a year Rev. Martin Niemoller, the vocal and fearless leader of Protestantism in Germany, has been kept in a concentration camp. This is not because he has committed a crime. It is because he will not bow to the power of the Government. Martin Niemoller is a fair sample of what happens to Love in a world at war.

In recent weeks 100 leading clergymen of the United States, among whom are our own Allen Knight Chalmers of New York, and Dr. Harry E. Fosdick, have signed covenant not to support the Government in war. They believe that war is contrary to the teachings of Jesus and cannot be reconciled with the principle of love. These are good men and true. Their judgment is excellent. Should the rest of us follow their example and tell our Government that war is senseless, that it is Hell brought to earth, and that we will have no part in it? This sounds like good sense, but the truth is not all on this side of the situation.

When strong men stand by and see women and children crushed by a bully, they are considered cowards, not heroes. Love is an active thing, not always quiescent. "Love suffereth long, and is kind," but it is not expected to stand idly by while millions are crushed beneath an iron heel, never to rise again. The kindest thing a surgeon can do sometimes is to cut off a leg or an arm. It is painful and may seem to be cruel. But it may be the only way to save the life of the person. If life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness are essentials for human well-being, then it may sometimes become necessary to operate on the body politic in order that dangerous infection may be removed before civilization itself dies.

Whatever may happen to the world in which we live, it is the business of the Church to seek in every possible way to preserve peace and give love a chance to live among men. Patience, caution, careful thinking are needed this week and in the weeks that lie ahead of us. If we let hatred fill our hearts, love will be dead, the Church will be useless, and the world at last will be sunk into the depths of despair. Watch out for the war propaganda. Be careful to submerge the emotions that arise from war scare. War is not the way to settle anything. It can only destroy. The only hope in its use is that false ideas may be killed, that dangerous leaders may be dethroned, and that after the conflict reason and love may have a chance to correct evils.

These are tragic days for Love in our world. Jesus did His best to give it a chance. We are to be followers of Him. Now is the time for us to work harder than ever for love to have a place in human relations.

DIGGING DEEPER.

Shallow wells sometimes have been dug deeper in order to get a supply of water. Farmers have learned that it pays to dig into the sub-soil sometimes so there will be a better supply of moisture for the crop during the year. Students in school may pass their work without delving very deep into the subject, but those who are eager for information dig deep and try to discover for themselves what there is to be known in their field of knowledge.

This principle applies to church work. The progress of the Southern Convention churches depends upon digging deeper. We have scattered abroad and found the harvest not too rewarding. Our next job is to dig down into the subsoil so there will be a better supply of food for the churches.

Many young ministers (and some older ones) have sought to increase their income by taking more churches. They have tried to spread themselves out over four, six, eight, or ten communities in order that they may have a sufficient income to support their families. In this we have been mistaken. The way to increase the income for the family is to decrease expense and develop better churches. We can decrease the expense by cutting down on travel, and can increase the income of the local church by more personal contacts and better programs in the local churches. This seems to be one of the necessary changes for most of our rural churches. It may be a bit difficult for pastors and people at the beginning, but it will undoubtedly work (Continued on page 7.)

The Children of China Appeal to You

THERE ARE MILLIONS OF THEM

The pictures below by Rev. Hugh W. Hubbard of Paotingfu gives a glimpse of what our 114 missionaries in China are trying to do. Literally millions of children await our help.

(Right) It is hard not to look forlorn when you are cold, hungry, and frightened—with perhaps mother and dad dead, possibly killed before your own eyes.

(Left) But food and fun, and a kindly teacher—and, my, what a change!

(Right) First "yearers" go to school. This may be their only chance. Still a bit scared. Hats can stay on because it is cold.

Last year members and friends of our Southern Convention churches gave $23,600 to support 100 children in our Orphanage at Elon College, N. C. The same people gave about $1,400 for the 11,000,000 children, young people, and adults of China for whom our Church is directly responsible.

A dollar in our money means five in China. Now is the time to help!

CONTRIBUTIONS

THE MISSION PERIOD.

When the Southern Christian Convention adopted a missionary program for the church, it entered then upon a program of progress. A non-missionary church is retroactive. A missionary church is progressive and challenging. The church expands by widening the scope of its mission which always results in an increased constituency.

The beginning of the Kingdom has been compared with a mustard seed. Its mission, however, is world wide. Christ commanded His disciples to carry His message to the ends of the earth. Since His days in the flesh on the earth, there have been many genuine followers of Him who themselves have had a vision and a passion to bring the world to Christ. In our earnestness to obey His command, we often times confuse His purpose. There is a danger in feeling that the church here has to do only with churches and countries far away, and in our zeal to plant the Kingdom in what we term "foreign fields," there is a danger that we miss our greatest opportunity at our own door. The question of missions is all inclusive. It is the command of Christ and the mission of the church that Christ be given to all peoples everywhere. We of the Congregational-Christian Church cannot escape our responsibility in this regard.

Our Mission Board through our Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and our Secretary of Promotion, Rev. F. C. Lester, is endeavoring to bring to the attention of every member of every church our opportunities in the field of Missions and our responsibility in the work of the Kingdom. They represent us officially. Our missionaries at home and abroad represent us practically. We have set up our organizations and assumed our responsibilities. The organizations cannot continue to carry out the program of the church without financial assistance. The churches of the Southern Convention are asked for $10,000 for missions. Considering our membership and our opportunities, this is a small amount. We should contribute it gladly, freely, and readily. The months of March, April, May, and June have been designated as Mission Period for our churches. Each local church has been apportioned a definite amount and is asked earnestly to do something about it during this period. There isn't a better time for us as Christians to express our gratitude and interest through our gifts than the Easter season. Christ gave Himself for the world and for us. Our earnings are definitely a part of us. We can give a part of what He has lent us that the world may be convinced of our sincerity and of the efficacy of the gospel itself. When we give for missions, we make an investment in kingdom values. We do not impoverish ourselves, but we add to our holdings. In our love for money and our anxiety to provide ourselves against the possibility of want in the years that lie ahead, we often deny ourselves of life's rarest privileges and richest blessings. If we will bring our tithes unto God's treasury, we as a church will receive a blessing that will multiply our resources over and over again.

May God increase our faith and multiply our generosity.

L. E. SMITH.

PROTESTANTISM AND THE NEW POPE.

The International Sunday School Lesson for today is on the deliverance of Peter from prison, where he had been cast by Herod Agrippa and condemned to death. The first verse of the lesson reads ". . . but prayer was made earnestly of the Church unto God for him." On this same day what the Roman Catholics are pleased to call the successor to Peter, the new vicar of Christ on earth, has been crowned as Pius XII.

By the time this article gets to THE CHRISTIAN SUN the crowds will have left the Vatican, the pomp and ceremony of the coronation will be over, and the new Pope will turn to the critical problems that confront him as leader of his church. First of all, there are abuses within the Church itself, superstitions and uncritical dogmatism, of which the Pope is well aware. Then there are the opposing forces of totalitarianism. The election of the Pope was openly opposed by the governments of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany. Not least of his problems is the mistreatment of the Church by governments that would get rid of religion by destroying property and intimidating members of the Church. Truly the Church faces one of the darkest eras in her history, and the new Pope is undoubtedly behind "prison bars."

We, as Protestants, disagree with a great deal in the Roman Catholic Church. Yet we have enough in common to make us anxious about the outcome of that great branch of Christendom, and to enter sympathetically into the problems it faces. May we all enter earnestly into prayer unto God for him who shall lead that Church in the critical years that lie ahead.

AUBREY TODD.

HIGHER CRITICISM.

The issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for March 16 carries an article by Rev. C. G. Scammell on the subject "Is a Great Revival Possible?" The article is timely and brings to our attention many things of which we should be reminded. It is true that the Church is threatened by social evils, wealth, luxury, the gods of force and greed. Then the writer pictures the Church "at death grips with a deadly philosophy from within. Modernism, Rationalism, Higher Criticism, and even Atheism are to be found within." Surely there must be a mistake here. Is it true that Modernism and Higher Criticism are on the same level with Rationalism and Atheism? Should one be led to believe that Modernism and Higher Criticism are enemies rather than allies of a revival? Every sensitive Christian must be disturbed by the prevalence of a practical Atheism in our churches. This is truly a barrier to any great revival. But to face higher criticism as a liability rather than an asset on our Christian ledger represents a point of view which is, to me, disturbing and dangerous.

Dr. J. Paterson Smith defines Higher Criticism as "the scientific investigation into the authorship, dates, sources, and composition of the books of the Bible, and into the special circumstances, if any, which called them forth. It is called Higher Criticism to distinguish it from the lower and older textual criticism." He adds, "The reason for examining Scripture is reverence for the Books of God, and the desire to throw all the light possible upon them. The books gain largely by being placed in their right historical setting, and by the knowledge of the time and circumstances and the reasons which, humanly speaking, called them forth." Dr. Washington Gladden, author of the hymn "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," defines Higher Criticism as "A careful study of the language of the books, of the manners and customs referred to in them, of the historical facts mentioned by them. It has not been unwilling to look at the facts." Is this a philosophy?

DEAFNESS AND CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

Should those whose hearing is so impaired that they cannot hear a sermon, even with the help of a hearing-aid, attend church services? I should like to give my experience in attending church services since I have become entirely deaf.

Although I do not hear a single sound during the whole service, I attend church regularly and find it uplifting. We are social beings and feel the inspiration of fellow worshippers, whether we hear their voices or not. I also receive inspiration from meeting my friends at church. And, incidentally, it should be observed that it is often an inspiration to others to see deaf persons attending church services regularly.

When the hymn is announced, I get the number from the bulletin board or from a fellow worshipper, if lip-reading fails me. Glancing occasionally at someone who is singing I read his lips and follow the words with the congregation, mentally, and try to enter into the spirit and sentiment of the hymn—though I do not attempt to sing, since I cannot hear my own voice. Sometimes I feel that the hymn means more to me than it did when I could hear it sung, because I concentrate my thoughts more intently upon it and often discover impressive sentiments hitherto undisclosed. As the Scripture lessons are usually from familiar sections, I can generally follow the minister by lip-reading. I make a special effort to get the text or subject, since that will greatly help in following the speaker by lip-reading. Sometimes it is necessary to call on a fellow worshipper to write the text for me. Even the best of lip-readers find it difficult to understand a speech or sermon, but usually one can understand enough to follow the main thought of the discourse. Even when it is impossible to follow the speaker, one can always find some helpful thought from the hymn or Scripture lesson for profitable meditation.

After all, we go to church to worship God, and we may worship Him "in spirit and in truth," though we hear not a word. When a devout Scotchman, hard of hearing, was invited to come nearer the front so that he could hear, he replied, "I dinna want to hear." He had learned the secret of true worship, and human voices were a distraction to him. During the pioneer days, an Indian who knew hardly a word of English attended a camp meeting and was converted. Somehow he caught the spirit of the service without understanding the language of the leader.

No minister can do the praying for his congregation. He may lead them in prayer, but every one must do his own praying—and here deafness is no barrier. And remember, ears or no ears, everyone may take part in the offering.

Those who are deaf are excluded from many of the activities of life and they feel this keenly. But if they join their fellowmen in the church services, they feel that they are adjusting themselves to the world about them and, to some extent, living normally. This is a great help to their morale. If you are not in the habit of attending church services, on account of deafness, let me suggest that you begin by attending with a sympathetic friend who may help you, at first, by writing a few notes to guide you in the service. We should not give up, but should remember the slogan of the hard of hearing: "Cultivate the will to overcome."

(The American Society for the Hard of Hearing, Washington, D. C., will furnish information for those who are interested in lip-reading, and other helps for the deaf.)

AT A BUDDHIST FUNERAL.

We were sight-seeing last Sunday afternoon in Shanghai, China, and we chanced upon a Buddhist temple. As it happened, a Buddhist funeral was being held and we joined them as spectators. It appeared to be the funeral of a prominent Chinese.

The temple itself covers the greater portion of a block. At one time it was in the country, but the city has overgrown it and business has crowded in until now one can hardly know which is temple and which is business; even the entrance is so obscured that one has to know where it is to be able to locate it. Just inside the entrance there are two mammoth images on either side guarding the temple, and before each image is a small candle-lighted altar, where devotees who enter there turn and do obeisance. There are many rooms on either side of the temple area, each having its altar and images, but these rooms are not limited to devotional services alone. All sorts of social activities are in operation there. A gambling tournament was on in one of them at this time.

In the center of the temple area is the main court, which is as large as any ordinary church. In the center of this court is a pagoda, a tower-like storied structure, and at the far end of the court is the throne room, which is an extensive enclosure encompassing the mammoth image of Buddha (and many other lesser gods) facing the open court. Here candles burn and devotees come and bow down.

The funeral in process was being conducted in this court. Immediately before the pagoda opposite the altar, there had been erected a replica of the home of the deceased, and also one of his boat. This replica was constructed of paper built on bamboo twigs, and inside of it there were a few things which the deceased possessed in life, some paper images and other fantastic designs (the meaning of which was not known to the spectators), a great deal of paper money (silver colored), all of which was intended to be sent on with the deceased into the spirit world.

Eighteen Buddhist priests were marching around the premises, circling the pagoda and this little paper house, some beating weird drums and all chanting weird incantations—a ceremony that is said to drive the evil spirits away. When the ceremonies were over, the priests assembled before the great Buddha and faced the pagoda still chanting and gesticulating. An acolyte stepped forward and with a match set fire to the paper structures. They burned quickly, of course, but as they did so members of the family and others who were standing in a group in one corner of the court stepped forward and threw trinkets into the blaze. These contributions to the funeral pyre were that which would supply the deceased with the things he needed in the spirit world. It was thus that the possessions of the deceased were transformed into smoke and ashes, which, in ascending to the skies, were transferred to him in the Great Beyond. The ceremonies were concluded.

BAPTIST CHURCHES IN ROUMANIA ORDERED TO BE RE-OPENED.

An Associated Press news dispatch from Bucharest of February 14, says that the Roumanian Vice-Premier ordered all Baptist Churches in Bucharest re-opened under a decree abandoning old regulation. It was thought that Baptist churches in the provinces might also be opened shortly. Baptist churches were closed last fall because of government requirements which they could not meet. Many protests have been made to the government by churches in Britain and in the United States. The Southern Baptist Convention urged President Roosevelt to protest the closing of their churches in Roumania.—Christian Advocate.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A MUSICIAN IN AFRICA.

We hope that you looked up the verse in the Bible we suggested that you read last week. If you did, you found Jesus' command to go into all the world and preach the gospel to all creatures. Last week you read on this page about David Livingstone, who went far away from home to tell others of the story of Jesus. This is a time of the year when we think especially of our missionaries. You will find pictures in this paper during the next few weeks of some of our missionaries and the work they are doing. At Easter an offering will be taken in your church for these missionaries. One Sunday a month your Sunday school offering goes to help those who are spending their lives in telling others of Jesus and His way of life. This week we want you to learn of a great man who is a missionary today in Africa.

Albert Schweitzer began to play the big organ (it had three keyboards and over sixty stops) in his father's church in Mulhausen, Alsace (which is in Europe) when he was only fifteen years old. Every fourth Sunday Albert's father would hold a missionary service in his church, and Albert became interested in people of other lands, particularly those in Africa.

Albert went to universities in Strassburg, Berlin, and Paris—the most famous schools in the world. He became a famous musician and composer of music; people came from all over Europe to hear him play the organ and the piano; he even played for kings and queens. And then, when he was thirty years old, he decided to study medicine, and become a doctor. Many of his friends thought that he was crazy to give up his musical career and position in order to become a medical missionary to Africa.

On the Friday before Easter in 1913 he and his wife left home for a mission station in Lamberene, Africa. Besides all his medical equipment, he had a piano that his friends had given him—one that was especially built to stand the climate of Africa! He is still working there today. The work that he has done and is doing is almost unbelievable. Taking but little sleep, he often works night and day in operations that are the only hope of saving lives. Thousands of pitiful, helpless natives are given health. He has made the blind see, and the lame walk. Slowly he has broken through their ignorance and superstition, and has won their confidence. Skilled helpers have joined him, and young negroes are being trained to follow in his footsteps.

He still finds time to practice his music, and when he returns to Europe great crowds of people gather to hear him play. He is eager that the people will be interested enough to share with him in the work in Africa, by giving money for him to use there.

Albert Schweitzer gave up money, position, and his musical career, but he has found greater happiness in helping others in the name of Jesus Christ. What can we do to help, too?

WORDS.

There may be some words in the articles on this page whose meaning you do not know. If you do not have a dictionary at home in which to look them up (you can buy one for 10c), do so when you get to school. Some people try to learn a new word every day, and that is a good rule to follow. Whenever you hear people use words you do not understand, or when you read those words, try to find out what they mean, so that you can use them, too.

Do you know the meaning of "heathen," "ignorance," "superstition," "missionary," "university," "composer," "career?" If not, try to find out what they mean. In the poem "The Apple Pie" you will find one word that many people will not know the meaning of—which one is it? You are right, it is "amper-sand" and it means this sign "&," which we use often for the word "and."

QUESTION BOX.

WHERE DID THE DAYS GET THEIR NAMES?

We name one city Chicago; another Richmond; another Greensboro, so that we may know about what city people are talking. For the same reason the seven days of the week are given names. If you say, "I went fishing last Monday," everyone knows what day you mean. All the great nations have adopted names for the days. The names are not quite the same, because, you know, people use different languages, but they generally are similar in sound. In this country we use the English names of the days, which are somewhat the same over all Europe, for we all form one large family of people. Since the names go back to very old times and had to be names well-known, people took for that purpose the names of some of the gods of heathen times. The sun and the moon being worshipped, we have a Sun's day and a Moon's day, which become the first two days of the week. Then there was a war god of the early Germans called Tiu, and Tuesday was named after him. Wednesday is named after Woden, Thursday after Thor, and Friday after Frigga; these were gods of the people in the north of Europe. Saturday is named after Saturn, one of the Greek gods. Now you can tell the heathen god in honor of whom the day on which you read this was named.

out to good advantage to all concerned within a comparatively short time.

This is no mere theory. Some churches have tried it and found it to work. One church in North Carolina that was paying $8.00 per month salary a year ago is now paying $10.00 per week, furnishing a home for the pastor, buying a parsonage, and improving the church property. Needless to say the church itself is doing a much more successful work in every way. The Promotional Secretary is eager to aid churches in getting more service and to aid pastors in doing a better work by serving fewer churches and "digging deeper."

the various conferences of the Convention is 30,289. We have often stated that a Conference grows by adding churches and congregations just as a church grows by adding individual members. There is little variation from this fact from year to year. Local and well established churches seem to do well if they hold their own, varying, of course, from year to year, but over a period of years doing little more than this. That which is the hope of the Conference and the Convention, therefore, is the addition of new churches and new congregations. We are not building and extending our borders as is our challenge and our privilege. With these numbers there should be added to the Conference year by year new churches and congregations and this can be done only by the consecrated and devoted efforts of pastors and laymen who have a vision of their task and cultivate a spirit of loyalty and devotion to the church, of which they are a part. We have a message and a distinct work to do and this we can do as we unite our efforts and forces in building up the cause intrusted to us by our Lord and to which cause we pledged our loyalty and devotion when we united with the the loyalty, as well as the devotion and cooperative effort of our entire fellowship. J. O. A.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

The plan of organization for securing memberships in the Golden Anniversary Club is ideal. The plan, however, will not work itself. Its effectiveness depends upon the members of the committees. If the members of these committees will take this matter seriously, there is no question about results. Every alumnus and every loyal member of our church should be sufficiently interested in the college to do his share. If he cannot give $50.00, he certainly can contact some of his acquaintances and persuade them to help him. Then, too, he can certainly put the matter before the other two members of his committee. This plan will fail or succeed according to the amount of thought, effort, and money that the members of the several committees are willing to put into it. We must face the fact that this is our job, that others are not likely to do it for us, and after that if it is done at all, we must do it. We cannot afford to fail after having come within sight of success.

The following is a letter written by Rev. Archie Hook, of Troy, Ohio, to the other members of his committee:

February 21, 1939.

Dear Friends:

A week or ten days ago I received Dr. Smith's Elon College Golden Anniversary letter. I really gave it serious thought, even going into a family discussion on the question. The first point of view was that it was just another of many things which was worthy, but could not be added to the already stretched budget; particularly when I still had several hundred dollars of college and seminary notes, on which to date I have been able to pay little more than interest. This point of view could be argued at length, and it does have logic in it.

The second point of view was that I would lay it aside in the hope that I would be able to do something before June, 1940 arrived.

The third point of view won the decision, and after a week's reflection I am still very happy over it. I believe very definitely that the small denominational college has a contribution to make which the state university does not and probably could not contribute. Elon College made one of the most important contributions to me educationally. Of course, had Elon not existed, I might have secured similar advantages elsewhere, but one might as easily reason that had his parents not been born, he might still have existed as much the same personality under a different name. The real point is that Archie Hook is, that Elon College made a contribution to me.

It was truly out of the question for me to give Elon $50.00 cash, but it was possible for me to postpone a payment on a coal bill and send them my $50.00 pledge, an initial payment of $5.00 to be followed by monthly payments of $2.50.

This is not a persuasion letter and I do not get $50.00 or 5c for writing it, but since our three names were pooled together, I thought it only fair to let you know my thinking on this matter.

I have not been back to Elon since I graduated in 1924 and have no assurance that I can get there in 1940, but I know we are all for Elon and the splendid progress she is making.

I am convinced that whatever help we can give, if given now, early in the campaign, will be of decidedly more value than what we might do in a year or sixteen months from now.

Most sincerely,

(Signed) ARCHIE H. HOOK.

This letter is applicable to every alumnus of Elon College. It is my guess that the other two members of Mr. Hook's committee will respond favorably. If you have not contacted the other two members of your committee, won't you do so at once?

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

REIDSVILLE YOUNG PEOPLE.

The young people's missionary society of the Reidsville Church is planting shrubbery on the church grounds as their project to help their local church. The beautification of the church building and grounds can be undertaken by the young people in many of our churches, and we hope to see reports of similar projects in other places.

Mrs. D. E. Mitchell is superintendent of the society and has done splendid work. Miss Geraldine Thornton is president. There are thirty-five members on roll, the majority of whom are very active and enthusiastic.

I would like to urge young people's groups in each of our churches to do something for a home project for missions, and do not forget to mail your Christmas cards to Mrs. Lester, so they may be sent to our work in India.

PROGRAM USED IN A CITY CHURCH.

The Young People's Service League of our Central Congregational Church in Atlanta, Ga., plans their program several months in advance. At each service one young person leads the devotion at the beginning of the meeting, and this is followed by a discussion or talk. The programs for this season are as follows:

- February 26—"Why Do Men Drink?"
 March 5—Round Table Discussion on "We Believe in God, but What Do We Believe?"
 March 12—Panel Discussion composed of five young people. Subject: "What Loyalty to Jesus Requires of Present-Day Christians."
 March 26—"What Does It Mean to be Converted"—Dr. J. A. Aldrich.
 April 2—Play Reading—"The Money-Changers."
 April 9—Easter Vespers—led by Rev. Wiley Scott.
 April 16—"Penal Institutions"—Rev. Tilston, pastor of Unitarian Universalist Church.
 April 23—"Some Indian Leaders of Today" (Jawaharlal Nehru, Tagore, Gandhi, Bishop Azariah; Ambedkar).
 April 30—Panel Discussion on "Good Times that Bring No Regrets."

PROGRAMS FOR RURAL CHURCH.

Young people at William's Chapel, a rural church in Georgia, have worked out an excellent list of programs for several months which is

CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM.

 Give thyself wholly to them;
 That thy profiting may appear to all.

—John Oxenham.

"There is therefore now on condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

given below. This shows what a well-rounded program can be developed when meetings are planned far in advance. And what an excellent opportunity it gives for the leaders, who may know several months in advance just what they are to be responsible for! If each young people's group would follow this example and plan

CONSECRATION MEETING.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Strength in God's Presence—
 Ps. 46: 1-7.

Tuesday—Strength in Leadership—
 Josh. 1: 2-9.

Wednesday—Strength in Weakness—
 II Cor. 12: 7-10.

Thursday—Strength in Inner Conflict—
 Rom. 8: 12-18.

Friday—Strength in God's Armor—
 Eph. 6: 10-17.

Saturday—Strength of Christ in Suffering—
 I Peter 2: 21-25.

In this meeting call attention to Christian courage. Somewhere in the meeting a definite period should be given to consider the tasks which should be done by Christian Endeavorers in community and world needs. Christian leaders and workers in this country have enjoyable and comparatively easy conditions to face. Let us identify ourselves with those of other lands who undergo severe hardships for Christ's sake.

In Germany 1,300 Christian pastors are in concentration camps under the ironclad rule of Hitler. They suffer all kinds of cruelties. In Russia many church leaders have been brought into submission to civil authorities. In Japan there will be an increased difficulty in teaching the love of Christ and His gospel of good will. If one would dare, one must suffer. Christians should not lack a sense of suffering.

To Think About—

1. During these days that shall follow our minds are turned to one who went to the cross to save a lost world. Do we emphasize cross-bearing for Christ? Doesn't it take strong, courageous Christians to bear crosses? Was Christ a weak, frail character who lacked courage?

2. In your estimation, who was the strongest man or woman intellectually in American history? How was this intellectual strength gained and revealed?

3. In your estimation, what man or woman possessed the greatest spiritual strength in the history of the Church (this does not include Jesus, Paul, or any of the disciples)? How was this spiritual strength developed?

In the Consecration Service use the hymn, "I Would Be True"—note especially the thought of the first stanza.

Other Hymns—

"A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

"True-hearted, Whole-hearted."

"Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

PETER INTERPRETS CHRIST'S SUFFERING AND DEATH.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 26, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God.—I Peter 3:18.

LESSON: I Peter 1:17-23; 2:20-25.

Creed and Conduct.

Peter believed that creed should express itself in conduct. If men called God "Father" in any real sense, they ought to behave like children of God. The basis of that obedience should not be fear of punishment, but fear lest we should grieve the Father's heart. A man should not be deterred from sin because the penalty of sin will hurt him, but because his sin will hurt his Father.

Redeemed and Reconciled.

Peter reminded his friends and fellow-Christians that they had been redeemed, not with cheap and common things like silver and gold, things that would perish with the using, but with the precious blood, even the blood of Christ. Any man and every man who has found redemption in any true sense has found it because Christ Jesus loved him and gave himself for him, and for every other man. Christ suffered for us. Christ died for us. In every instance the New Testament refers to salvation or redemption as something done for us, and not by us. This redemption had been planned even from the foundation of the world. His followers were fortunate because it had been manifested in Christ in their own time.

The purpose in Christ's suffering and death was "that he might bring us to God" to use the words of the Golden Text. Not that God needed to be made friendly toward men. He has loved man with an everlasting love, from everlasting to everlasting. But man needed to be reconciled to God. This reconciliation, this atonement was made possible by, and done through the Cross. Atonement really means "at-one-ment" or "at one." God commended His love to us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us.

Your Faith and Hope in God.

"So that your faith and hope might be in God." A great many people are distressed and discouraged during these days. All of us might well be thus, if we were depending on human resources and human plans. But those whose faith and hope are in God are not in despair, even though they may be distressed. He shall not fail. His kingdom will come. His will will be done. He shall see the travail of His soul and be satisfied. Our faith and our hope should be, and must be in him. If it is, we will not fear nor be dismayed. Wherefore be of good cheer and let thine heart take courage.

Love for the Brethren.

"Seeing you have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren, love one another from the heart fervently." Obedience brings the blessing. Obedience cleanses. Obedience to God's word issues in love to God's children. And this love is genuine, it is "from the heart." It is also warm, and dynamic, "fervently." One of the best ways, indeed, the only way in which we can show love for God whom we have not seen is to show love to our fellowmen whom we can see.

Patience Under Affliction.

Peter gives us some words hard to be practiced here. He says that a person has no redress or rebuttal if he sins and has to suffer for it. But there are times when it seems as if God has "let us down." There are times when "we do well, and suffer for it." How many people there are who are troubled and baffled because in spite of the fact that they have done right and tried to do good, they suffer and are evil entreated. But it is out of just such experiences that God is glorified. The soul that can raise triumphantly out of and above trouble and persecution truly glorifies God. Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, who when they are hated, bless; who when they are reviled, revile not; when they are cursed, bless; when they are despitefully used, pray and persecute not. It is not humanly possible to do this. But His grace is sufficient. Nothing so eloquently bears witness to the spirit of Christ in us than to do this very thing.

Our Example.

"For hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps." One of the most amazing and most trustworthy facts from the life of Christ was his attitude toward those who reviled him and persecuted him and prosecuted him. His quiet dignity, his willingness to forgive, his patient suffering awe us and shame us and challenge us.

Christ is nowhere seen more clearly as to the Son of God than here. Here is the acid test.

Our Saviour.

"Who his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree . . . by whose stripes ye are healed." The disciples and Peter believed that Jesus had done something vital and personal for them. He was more than teacher and physician and even Lord. He was Saviour. In him and through him they had found salvation from the penalty and the power of sin. In him they saw the fulfilment of the prophecy that he should be called Jesus because he should save his people from their sins.

Our Shepherd.

"For ye were going astray like sheep; but now ye are returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls." No other word perhaps, includes so much of the various phases of Christ's ministry as the word "Shepherd." He was indeed the Good Shepherd, who knew his sheep, who loved his sheep, who laid down his life for his sheep. To know him as a Shepherd is helpful. But to know him as your Shepherd is life's crowning joy.

THE LENTEN SEASON.

MONDAY.

THE MEANING OF LENT.

"Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief."—Heb. 14: 11.

We are now approaching Easter. These days are Lenten days. Lenten days are days of abstention, self-denial, thinking of God, of Christ and along spiritual lines. It is the study of God's word and a spiritual refreshing. It is a season of prayer and the practice of God's presence in the life. It is a period of drawing from the things of the world as far as possible, in order to be still and know God.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to reclaim and build up our souls in the likeness of Jesus Christ. Amen.

TUESDAY.

NATURE'S AND HEAVEN'S REWARD
FOR BEING QUIET.

"If any do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."—Jno. 7: 17.

Discipline is not popular. Spiritual discipline is less so. Yet, nature, heaven, God, Jesus Christ, and the workings of spiritual discipline insists upon its benefits. It is the reward that comes through curbing rebellious passions; it is the health that comes through checking excesses; it is the reward that comes through ruling one's self. We are not to think of Lent as God imposing upon us miseries, but giving us a freedom of life, beauty and abundance, more than can be had any other way. Better to be a John in prison than a Herod in a palace.

Nature's way with life is "Be quiet and rest a plenty." So does nature bless our souls in Christ Jesus, if we will let it.

Prayer—Our Father, we would not miss Thee, nor the great spiritual verities. Help us to live as we would live did we know that we would be called unto eternity tonight. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

IT IS GOOD.

"Jesus . . . went about doing good, healing all that were oppressed . . . for God was with him."—Acts 10: 38.

It is good to be last, not first,
Pending the present distress,
It is good to hunger and thirst,
So it be for righteousness.

It is good to spend and be spent,
It is good to watch and pray,
Life and death make a goodly Lent,
So it leads to Easter day.

—Unknown.

Prayer—Our Father, we would be like Jesus, always doing good, helping the distressed. Cleanse our souls and make us fit. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE CHALLENGE OF LENT.

"Create within me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."—Ps. 51: 10.

Lent is a challenge to an honest inner inspection; to know thyself; to check and correct that which is wrong; to see that we are in agreement with Jesus, for two cannot walk together lest they be agreed. It is a challenge to look to and comprehend the meaning and value of the greatest sacrifice that was ever made. It is a challenge to contemplate the value of the church and just how much of our lives we should give to it. It is a challenge that we clean up our lives.

Prayer—O our Father, we would be like Jesus. Help us to be so in earnest about Christian living that we will dedicate our lives to Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

LENTEN MELODIES.

"Not by might nor by power."—Zech. 4: 6.

Life has been likened unto a musical instrument whose strings in tune played together produces beautiful harmonies that man likes. There are harmonies in religious culture that make man worth while. To be like Jesus, one must be humble-minded; he must take up the cross and follow; it means practice the traffic of His example. We do not expect to be a musician without practicing; we do not expect to succeed without working. Can we expect to be good Christians without working at it?

Prayer—Dear Father, blesser of our souls, grant unto us the spirit of unselfishness and the complete harmonies of life that make life beautiful. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GIVE.

"Give and it shall be given to you."—Luke 6: 38.

The food that I share with others
Is the food that nourishes me.
The strength that I spend for others
Is the strength that I retain.
The freedom that I seek for others
Shall take away my pain.
The load that I lift for others
Makes my load disappear.
The good that I see in others
My greatest good shall be.
The love that I feel for others
Comes back my life to cheer
The path that I walk with others
Is the path God walks with me. Amen.

SUNDAY.

HOW EASY IT IS TO LOVE.

"Let love be without dissimulation."—Rom. 12: 9.

One day the preacher in his study was interrupted by the visit of a lady who told him of the delight and the tears of gratitude which she had witnessed in a poor girl to whom he had given a kind look and a word of encouragement as she passed out of church one Sunday. How inexpensive is happiness! How easy it is to rise to the work of an angel! Our capacity for this kind of life is infinite.

Prayer—Our Father, we would be faithful till death. We will work for the "well done," benediction. Amen.

OUR PREACHER FOR THE WEEK IS
 REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE, D. D.,
 WINTER PARK, FLORIDA.

“He had this testimony that he pleased God.”—Hebrews 11:5.

There are few texts in the Bible that are any more direct or rugged than this one. It exudes strength and virility. It seems to say, “There may be easier ways to win the crown of life, but I do not know about them.” It also refers to a testimony that any person can offer for himself. For in the court where this testimony is heard witnesses cannot be bought nor judges flattered. The testimony, even by the cleverest, cannot be twisted or falsely presented, for God Himself is not only the Judge, but He has the final word.

I.

I do not minimize the danger that might be brought about if such a text were seized exclusively by fanatics. But in spite of that danger, grave as it is, I still maintain that there is no other way for the followers of Jesus Christ to attempt to live.

To make the text stand out in a clear light, suppose we read it a number of times, but in each case substituting some revealing words in the place of “God,” and in the place of “He” substitute the word “I.” For example: “I had this testimony that I pleased myself”; or “I had this testimony that I pleased my political party”; or “I had this testimony that I pleased a low ambition”; or “I had this testimony that I tried to please everybody.”

Substitute such words; then, with strict mental honesty, work the thought out to its final ultimate conclusions. If you do, I am sure that you will be flung with violence upon the truth and the eternal righteousness of the text.

II.

No person ever lived who had a better chance for personal gain, or preferment, or ease, than did our Lord. It does appear that He could have avoided the cross if He had decided to please men. But because

He did make the choice of the cross, in the end, He became, and still is, the Saviour of the world.

Another way, beside the above, to discover whether we are pleasing God or man is to observe how close we are to Christ’s way of life. The man of Galilee is the only true and complete revealer of God for men. As every artisan has tools and instruments available that can reveal to him the minutest straying from his plans, so the world has Christ for life. Now, then, think what could happen in this old world if the men and women who are the followers of Jesus Christ should quietly and, in the depths of their souls say, “We are determined to live so close to Christ that when life is over it shall be said of us that our testimony pleased God.” I mean that we should at some time in our lives arrive at that same place the Master did when He, pleasing not man, not Himself, but God, set His face steadfastly toward Jerusalem.

Such an attitude would help all those who have been tortured mentally and spiritually about other decisions; and those who have been sorely tempted to sell their souls, honor, bodies, to take this long, long look into eternity.

It was this very idea in the text that finally made determined men out of the disciples. When at last they made it their aim to please God and not man, then great events began to happen that were to affect the whole world for all time. It was that same attitude years later that sent many of the Christian martyrs into the arena with a song upon their lips; that still later sent the Pilgrims across the seas; that sent Roger Williams to Rhode Island; that still sends men to the far corners of the earth to serve the ignorant, unwashed peoples; to bind up wounds and stop exploitation of the less fortunate who can never hope to pay them back.

III.

But most of us, it appears, are always trying to please someone higher up, but less higher than God. How many are there among us who try very hard to please the deep needs of those lower down in that artificial social scale of life that has been so cruelly and unwisely arranged by man? On the other hand, watch people all about you trying to please the superficial wants of those who are in high and important positions and ignoring those not in places of prestige and without influence. These are hard, uncomfortable facts, that we of the Church ought to face. How different this all is from the way of our Lord? It has always seemed to me that He went out of His way to do the kindly thing for those who were having the hardest time—including sinners. The idea of being pleasing to others is good. The idea of pleasing some one higher than we are is also good. But to get the Christian balance, which we all need so badly, we need first of all to please God, who is the highest.

IV.

You may be saying to yourself as you read this: “If I should take this text literally and please only the highest and the best first, meaning God, think of the results. Look at the enemies that I would most certainly make.” And I answer: “But look at the friends you would make.” You say: “If I follow this text, I know, this being the kind of world that it is, that I would probably lose my life.” And I answer: “Did not Jesus say that he who loseth his life for my sake shall find it?” And you say: “But if I follow this text, I know it will create for me certain very difficult situations.” And I answer: “Yes, that is probably true, but it will also make other situations much easier for you—situations of vast and eternal significance.” And you answer: “I know that if I take this text just as it is that I will be poorer.” And I answer again: “No, you will not. In many ways you will be enriched far beyond your greatest dreams.” But you say: “I am very sure that in taking this text and carrying it out I will be made a very lonely person, and I must have companionship.” And I answer to you finally: “No, that is not true. For the greatest souls of the ages will be your companions.”

HIGHER CRITICISM.

Modernism naturally utilizes the findings of Higher Criticism. It does not fear that the Bible will be shaken if the facts are known. It is the belief that the truth is the safest thing in the world, and that the things which cannot be shaken will remain after it is all told.

There have been examples of a sophisticated and superficial Higher Criticism and varieties of Modernism have been found to be practically synonymous with Humanism. But this is not generally true. Modernism and Rationalism are not the only danger points. Irrationalism, scholarless criticism, and ultra-fundamentalism have been known to pose as the sole custodians of the Gospel. Modernism and Higher Criticism are the handmaidens of a virile religion and are indispensable to a Relevant Revival.

NEWS AND VIEWS

FLORIDA NEWS.

A very profitable session of the Florida State Officers was held in Winter Park the last of February, when the officers and chairmen of standing committees met from Wednesday noon to Thursday noon. Rev. Everett B. Leshner, Moderator of the State Conference, presided over the meeting.

Matters discussed included the program for the Florida State Conference to be held at Coral Gables, April 18-20, 1939.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Director of Religious Education, reported fine progress of the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship and the success of their district week-end conferences. She announced the plans for the Florida Summer Conference at Camp O'Leno, June 10-17, and introduced the proposal of establishing conferences for boys and girls of the Intermediate ages.

Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, Chairman of the Department of Evangelism, stressed the importance of more effective evangelistic work among the churches, stressing Training Classes, Preaching Missions, and more extensive uses of devotional material. It was recommended by this body that the Department of Evangelism suggest to the State Conference that evangelistic teams be elected for 1939 and 1940 and that the work be subsidized by the State Conference.

Mrs. Robert G. Williams, President of the Florida Women's Federation of Congregational and Christian Churches, reported on the work of the Federation, stating that the State Meeting at Avon Park last November had been well received and plans were being made for the annual fall meeting of this group. The Missionary Committee report was made by Rev. John P. Jockinsen, of St. Petersburg. Mr. Jockinsen outlined the new plan of Pledged Work outlined by the Mission Board and following a thorough consideration of various fields, goals were recommended for the churches of Florida. The committee voted to recommend that, if possible, Florida and Georgia cooperate in missionary promotion. To facilitate the matter of missionary promotion it was recommended that Florida and Georgia publish a joint monthly periodical in cooperation with the Missions Council.

Other committees to report were the Program Committee, by Dr. C. A. Vincent, Miami, and the Committee on Laymen's Work, by Mr. Robert G.

Williams, Lake Worth. The group voted its approval of such an annual meeting of state officers.

The Executive Board of the Florida Federation of Congregational and Christian Women held its annual meeting at Melbourne, March 8 and 9. Mrs. Robert G. Williams, Lake Worth, is President.

In Memoriam

HUNT.

Mrs. Winnie A. Hunt was born October 3, 1872, and died February 25, 1939. She was married to Rev. G. D. Hunt on December 25, 1893. To this union there were born six children—three girls and three boys. Two of these died in infancy. Four of them survive their mother: Mrs. Tinie May McGuity, of Riverview, Ala.; Mrs. Iola Walker of Wadley, Ala.; Rev. George S. Hunt, of Weeping Water, Neb.; and James A. Hunt, of Lanett, Ala. Her husband also survives her. She was the only daughter of the late J. K. P. Vickers and his wife, Rhoda Vickers.

Mrs. Hunt was always a very devoted Christian. She joined the church in her early life and remained faithful to it until her death. She rejoiced in all its victories and mourned over its failures. She was devotedly attached to her husband and her home. She loved her children and her friends as truly as was possible for her to love them. She was a true and trusted helpmate to her husband. Never once in her life did she seek to hinder the progress of his ministerial work and she loved his churches as he loved them, laboring as hard for their success as did he. She was ever thoughtful for the success of every church of which her husband was pastor and never failed to inquire as to the interest of the service if she failed to attend. Above all, Mrs. Hunt was willing and ready to go. She slipped quietly away on Sunday, the 25th day of February, while talking pleasantly with her husband and daughter, Mrs. Walker. Without a struggle—even as a lamp was snuffed out—so easily did she die. She was always more thoughtful of others than of herself. This is how she lived and this is how she died.

Mrs. Hunt's son, George Staly, and his family came through storm and snow to attend the funeral of his mother. Eleven hundred and twenty-seven miles they came without an accident or even a puncture.

Mrs. Hunt's body lay in stately form from Sunday until Thursday P. M., when it was buried in the cemetery at Antioch Christian Church. The people of the community and country round about have shown great sympathy to the family, all of which has been greatly appreciated.

"Her children rise up and call her blessed;
Her husband also praiseth her."

"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ—
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

Rev. J. D. Dollar, pastor of the Langdale Christian Church, and Rev. G. E. Steeley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Roanoke, had charge of the funeral rites.

Great and wonderful were the expressions of sympathy, and abundant and beautiful were the flowers. God bless everyone who has contributed to our comfort.

THE FAMILY.

HUNT.

It has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom and mercy to remove from our midst our dearly beloved sister, Mrs. G. D. Hunt, who departed from this life Sunday, February 26, 1939, in the 64th year of her life. From the tree of life the buds and blossoms fall with the ripened fruit. Some lives are so full of usefulness that they adorn the world and bring blessings to those around them. Such a life was that of our dearly beloved sister.

Mrs. Hunt was one of those who walk the trail of life and leave lovely memories along the path. True and faithful in character, she drew friends to her. Her place in our church is vacant and our hearts are sad, but while we as friends mourn our loss, our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to the husband and children.

ANTIOCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

ROYSTON.

Mrs. Josie Kitchens Royston was born July 20, 1902, and died December 20, 1938. She was married March 29, 1928, to G. B. Royston, and to this union there were born three children—two girls and one boy. In addition to these she leaves a father and mother, three brothers: Dr. Festus Kitchens and George Kitchens of Miami, Fla., and John Kitchens of Roanoke, Ala.; also three sisters: Ethel of Langdale, Ala.; Dovie of Glenn, Ga.; and Nina of Miami, Fla.; and a host of other relatives and friends.

Sister Royston was a sweet-spirited Christian wife and mother, a loyal member of Antioch Christian Church, a devoted member of the Woman's Missionary Society, and a true friend to all who came her way. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved. It is God alone who comforts and cares for them. May He sustain them in this sad hour.

Funeral services were conducted by the pastor at Antioch Church.

G. D. HUNT.

TUCK.

Mrs. Carrie Rutledge Tuck, wife of C. B. Tuck, died at her home at Mayo, Va., February 20, 1939, after several months of illness. The funeral and burial were conducted by the writer and Rev. E. S. Smith at Shady Grove M. E. Church of which she was a member. She is survived by her husband, five sisters, one brother, six children, and two grandchildren. Sister Tuck had been a very industrious woman. She was of a friendly disposition and very appreciative for what people did for her during her declining health. A few days before her passing she expressed her faith in her hope of entering into rest.

THE JOY OF CHRISTIAN SERVICE.

When Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Dille set sail last October for Africa by way of Portugal, where they are now doing language study, they found the fulfillment of life's greatest desire—to serve Christ overseas. They are well trained, and are happy to represent us and our Savior among the people of Africa.

The Dilles served the Christian Church at Everett, Pennsylvania, where Robert Kimball of North Carolina is now pastor.

The American Board expects to send 75 young missionaries within five years, and would like to send many more.

Would you like to be one? Will you help send them?

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

President L. E. Smith is on a two-week's trip to Washington, St. Louis, and Memphis in the interest of our college.

Rev. G. H. Veazey, pastor, is holding pre-Easter services at Salem Chapel this week and at Belew's Creek next week.

Reports are that Dr. Brewer Eddy brought stirring messages to the Missionary Rallies in Eastern Virginia, recently, and that these Rallies were well attended.

Copies of The Christian Annual, carrying the minutes of the Southern Convention and Conferences last year, have recently been mailed to pastors and churches.

On last Sunday the Promotional Secretary enjoyed speaking to fine audiences at Dendron, Va., in the morning, and at Hopewell, Va., at the evening hour.

Rev. R. A. Whitten, Winchester, Va., was confined to his home with influenza during the time that Rev. Howard Anderson of Washington, D. C., was preaching in his church.

Pastor's attending the young people's meeting at Portsmouth, Va., last Saturday included: Revs. J. A. French, H. S. Hardeastle, R. L. House, F. C. Lester, J. F. Morgan, W. B. O'Neill, Arnold Slater, and J. G. Truitt.

LYNCHBURG.

We began a revival in the Congregational-Christian Church in Lynchburg, Va., on March 13, with Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Va., doing the preaching. It continued through Sunday night, March 19. Rev. Mr. Poythress preached great sermons and our whole church has been stimulated and challenged with his messages. A feature of each service was a solo and message in song which were especially enjoyed. The local radio station, WLVA, granted us the use of the facilities. It was a joy and privilege to have him with us, and our church is looking forward to the time when he can return. Nine of our boys and girls in the Sunday school and one adult made a profession of faith and two were received by transfer of letter.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS.

Our front page this week carries the picture of a fine family of the Christian Church who are beginning to find the fulfilment of a life-long desire. They wanted to be missionaries and now their opportunity has come.

Scattered through our churches are numbers of other people who have wanted to be missionaries, but to whom no opportunity has come and no opportunity ever will come. They have offered themselves for service in non-Christian countries where Christian workers are desperately needed, but the Church has not made it possible for them to go. All their lives they must carry in their hearts this disappointment.

In our generation the Church has been calling home missionaries, rather than sending them out. Why? The answer to that is complicated, but the major reason doubtless is that we have not been sufficiently interested to make the necessary contributions. This is no compliment to our Christian profession.

A new generation of young people is now considering what they can do to make a new world, fashioned on the basis of Christian principles. They may refer to this as world friendship, international goodwill, etc., rather than calling it missions, but it means the same thing. Will the Church disappoint this new generation of ambitious, aspiring young people? The answer to this question lies largely in the definite plans made by pastors and church leaders for the education of the church membership that will insure an increasing contribution to Missions. The success of the offering at Easter for Missions will largely determine whether we will send more or fewer missionaries so far as the Southern Convention is concerned. For the sake of the young people whose hearts are stirred with the desire to serve non-Christian peoples, prepare to make your offering liberal at Easter.

HOLY WEEK.

All reasonable people know that one space of time is no more sacred than any other. All time was made by the Holy God, and all time is holy.

But we also know that certain events stand out in our minds and the memory of them tends to make us holy. Such events occurred in the last week of the earthly life of Jesus of Nazareth, one we have come to call Lord and Master.

Next week is the anniversary of the last week of Jesus as leader of a group in Palestine who became the first Christian Church. It will do us good to review what Jesus said and did that last week.

Many churches will hold special services each evening during the week. In these services the Scriptures will be read which tell of those events. All church members will try to relive those fateful days. They will follow Him to Jerusalem on the day of His triumphal entry (Sunday), listen to Him as he talks on Monday and Tuesday, seek the secret of His power as he rests on Wednesday, dine with Him on Thursday, stand by His cross on Friday, suffer because of our sins on Saturday, and search for His redeeming grace on the day of His Resurrection.

You can find these Scriptures in the last part of each of the Gospels—Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. Why not read it for yourself until you can feel the heart-throb of the Master as He went the way of suffering and death to new life on Easter Morn? If you do, there will come a new up-surge of spiritual grace in your own life.

THE WAY TO VICTORY.

"What is the way of victory?" Politically it is not the way of greater armies, navies and air battalions; it is not by accepting the supremacy of communistic, fascist, or socialistic leaders; it is not even through pacifism or a peaceful struggle for political control. Christ and the apostles lived in a time of political oppression and the dependence on armed force, but they sought peace by obedience to laws that did not defy the laws of God, by love that suffer long and is kind and by preaching Christ as the Savior and Lord of all. "When the foundations are destroyed, what can the righteous do?" They can still be righteous, trust God and stand true to Him—even unto death.

Socially and economically the way of victory is not by a new social setup or through the adoption of certain economic principles—for self-seeking men to disregard. In the time of Christ, social injustice was everywhere apparent, slavery and poverty prevailed and there was a great gulf between the rich and the poor. Christians met the crisis not by advocating a redistribution of wealth, or even the immediate liberation of slaves, but by proclaiming the law of love, by preaching and practicing justice and by showing that God is no respecter of persons. They revealed the truth that riches consist not in accumulated wealth but that character and contentment come from honest toil, brotherly dealings and an unselfish, wise stewardship of time, talents and possessions.

The educational and spiritual needs were seen in the days of the early Church. These needs were met, not by great united campaigns or by the establishment of institutions, they were met by uplifting Christ and by teaching His truth to all so that new desires and ambitions were awakened, new life and power were imparted and the call of God was heard for the establishment of a new order.

The secret of meeting every crisis effectively—be it political, social, economic, educational, spiritual, national missionary or personal—is to take God into account; it is to bring men and women into such vital relation to God through Christ, that new life will come to them, with new aims and energy, new intelligence and a keen desire for knowledge; a new sense of justice; new love for God and man and new power to carry out His program.—"Missionary Review of the World."

Wellons and Staley Memorials

The members of the Suffolk Christian Church, at a called conference in February, 1938, decided to place in the church suitable tablets honoring the memory of its founder, Rev. William Brock Wellons, D. D., and of its pastor for fifty years, Rev. William Wesley Staley, D. D., LL. D.

A committee was appointed to carry out the wishes of the Conference, and on March 3, 1939, bronze tablets were erected in the foyer of the church bearing the following inscriptions:

Truly an Apostle of Christ,
A Faithful Minister, a Friend
Of the Rich and Poor Alike,
And a Wise Builder in God's Kingdom
1939.

William Brock Wellons, son of Hartwell and Mary W. Wellons, was born in Sussex County, Va., November 9, 1821. At the age of seven he was placed in a private school where he learned to read and write. His schooling covered only a period of seven years. He became a Christian at the age of thirteen, and on November 4, 1834, was received into the church.

From his autobiography we learn that in 1838, when seventeen years of age, he was deeply impressed with the idea of entering the ministry, and for seven years he struggled between the calls of the flesh and the spirit. Finally in 1845, after applying himself to the study of the Bible and its teachings, he was licensed to preach and immediately began his labors in the great cause of Christianity. Thirty years later, in 1875, Rutherford College, N. C., conferred on him the title of Doctor of Divinity.

It seems there was a special need for him at the time he entered the ministry. The call for Christian union and liberal Christianity was at hand. His gentle disposition, his large soul, his progressive spirit, his broad visions of Christian fellowship, and his love for God's people, happily fitted him for the demands of the age in which he lived. The world needed such a reformer, the Church universal needed him, and his own Christian Church, which he honored with his life's labors, needed him.

There were many good and faithful ministers in the Christian Church, yet there was a lack of administrative ability, and Dr. Wellons not only possessed this gift, but he was progressive, and foresaw the need of more system, better organization, more general cooperation, and a greater realization of the strength and power that needed only a leading spirit to awaken these qualities. Dr. Wellons was possessed of a magnetic personality, and his influence was broad and commanding. Some one said of him that he put in motion a tidal wave that still rolls on.

Dr. Wellons' activities were varied. He was interested in and became a part of all the church enterprises, and was recognized as the representative man of the denomination in the South.

As editor and publisher of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for more than twenty years, he spread a deeply religious influence, and watched with vigilance the best interests of the Church, and its official Church Paper. Through the columns of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, as in his daily life, he was an ardent defender of Christian faith and principles.

As president of the Suffolk Collegiate Institute, he contributed largely to the cause of education, and especially to Christian education. Out of this institution which flourished for a number of years, sprang the idea which laid the foundation for that greater institution, Elon College in North Carolina, whose influence for good has been far reaching for a period of fifty years.

Dr. Wellons was a great advocate of temperance, and served as Secretary of the State Council of the Friends of Temperance, and Secretary of the Supreme Council of the Friends of Temperance of the United States. He was also for a time Corresponding Secretary of the Union Christian Church of America. These activities, together with his pastorate of several of the Christian Churches, and various benevolences of a more private nature, made him an outstanding figure in the life of the Christian Church, South.

In his early ministry, while serving as an itinerant preacher, Dr. Wellons visited, from time to time, all the Christian Churches in Eastern Virginia and North Carolina, and accomplished much good. In three years he traveled more than 3,000 miles on horse back. Seeing the great need for other places of worship, he was instrumental in organizing and building many of the Christian Churches that have lived and flourished throughout the years, and in reviving and re-organizing others that had become inactive, and almost dormant, and this work also prospered in his hands.

In 1850, after his marriage, Dr. Wellons established a residence in Suffolk. The idea of building a Christian Church here took root, and grew, and in 1859, with the aid of a few friends an effort was made by him to raise an amount necessary to erect a suitable building. A building committee was appointed and the work was soon under way. In 1861 the church was completed, and at its first meeting Dr. Wellons was elected pastor, and served in that capacity 16 years, resigning in 1876 on account of ill health.

During his pastorate in Suffolk he did a noble work, though he suffered many handicaps. Early in his ministry here the religious life of the town was torn by the ravages of the Civil War, and the doors of the church were closed for a time. It was no small undertaking to repair the damage and set in order the work he had so hopefully begun a few years before. But the undaunted will of this great builder in God's Kingdom never failed him, and through his zealous efforts and earnest endeavor a new day dawned for this church, and its progress has been continuous.

In 1876, Dr. Wellons' multiplying cares and anxieties were more than

FOR THE CHILDREN

THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

One day a King who was much beloved by the people stopped in a small village to have his carriage repaired.

Meanwhile he stepped into the little school to see the children at their tasks. The King listened attentively to the reading, the singing, and other exercises, and then asked permission of the teacher to put a few questions to the pupils. "Certainly, your majesty," answered the old teacher, making a deep bow.

"Now, children," said the King in a kindly tone, "since you have answered the questions of your teacher so well, I am sure you will be able to answer my questions." He then took an apple from his pocket and said, "To which kingdom does this apple belong?"

The children hesitated, for they were a little in awe of their great King. The King, however, waited patiently for an answer. Looking around the room, he saw a little girl with bright blue eyes and said to her, "Can you tell me, little girl, to which kingdom this apple belongs?"

The little girl answered promptly, "It belongs to the vegetable kingdom, my Lord." "That is the correct answer, and you have done well." Taking a gold piece out of his pocket and holding it up before the pupils, he said, "Can anyone tell me to which kingdom this gold piece belongs?"

For a time no one answered, but finally the little girl with the blue eyes said timidly, "To the mineral kingdom, Lord King." "You have again answered correctly," the King called out joyously. "I have only one more question to ask. To what kingdom do I belong?" The King waited a long time, but no one tried to answer his question. He repeated the question, but still no answer. Finally his eyes again rested on the little girl, and he said to her in a kindly manner, "Now, my child, you have answered the other questions and I am sure you can answer this one also. Won't you try?"

"I know the answer, Lord King," replied the girl, and then she blushed and was silent. "Well, then," continued the King. "What is it?"

The little girl hesitated because she did not like to say her King belonged to the animal kingdom. That would be impolite, she thought. Suddenly she looked up and said in a clear voice, "You belong to the kingdom of heaven, O King."

This unexpected answer so affected the King that, with tears in his eyes, he said, "Let us hope, my child, I may sometime be worthy of that kingdom."—The Source Book.

SIGNS OF SPRING.

In the heart of a seed, buried deep, so deep
A dear little plant lay fast asleep.

"Wake," said the voice of the rain-drops bright.

The little plant heard and rose to see What the wonderful outside world might be.

—Selected.

How can you tell when Spring is here? By the calendar? Did you hear teacher say so? Mother Nature is very changeable. This year she may let her plants and animals snuggle down asleep in Mother Earth's embrace a little longer than usual; or she may arouse them earlier and call them forth, one by one. Why not let's go out and look for ourselves?

Spring announces her arrival before she really quite gets here. We will take a little walk out on the hillside and down the woodpath and see what we can find. What was that tiny, shrill note chirping over there by the log? Why, the tree frog. This courageous little fellow is one of the first to venture out and start his song. He will soon be joined by other voices of his band—the soft croak of the leopard frog, the sad, wavering note of the toad, and the deep, strong bass of the great bullfrog.

Now, we will see if we can find any birds. In winter some of the wealthier birds take a trip south and remain there in ease and comfort until they know that it is warm here. Some of the birds have now ventured back from the Southland. Is that a nest over on that limb? Yes, it is the same one that was there last year, but it has been repaired. Mr. and Mrs. Warbler have returned. He immediately set to work to remodel their home. Mrs. Warbler, having approved of his work, took up her domestic duties of laying eggs and rearing a family.

Most of the birds we shall see have a new spring suit. Did you see that mixture of black, white, and buff that just flew by? Who was that stylish fellow? None other than Bob o' Link. Mrs. Bob o' Link must wear the same dull, yellowish brown dress all the season, but in the spring her husband changes from his suit of the same color to one more fashionable.

Now that we are on the woods path, let us watch for flowers. One little flower, you already know. He is so friendly that he springs up all over your back yard, his little golden head pressing very near the earth. He is the dandelion, spreading his sunshine quite early. If you look carefully, you may see little purple petals peeping forth timidly from among the leaves. The violet, unlike the dandelion, does not like to show itself boldly, but waits to be sought.

Did you know that the wind has a playmate among the flowers? That is "Wind Flower." It is just a tiny blossom on a long stem, but it rocks to and fro so that you have to look at it. Sometimes the wind seems to be rough, bending it down to the ground, but it does not seem to mind at all.

Now we are beyond the woods out on the edge of a field. All around us are clouds of pink and white blossoms that seem to have descended down on the trees. Over here are the pear trees garbed in white; across there are the peach trees, just beginning to show forth their delicate pink. What a pretty contrast with the new green of the leaves you saw in the old lane!

There are other signs that Spring sends to tell us that she is near. But there are many that we cannot see today, for we must remember:

The Spring comes slowly up this way,
Slowly, slowly!
A little nearer every day.
She hath delicious things to say,
But will not answer yea or nay,
Nor haste her secrets to display.

THE QUESTION BOX.

HOW DO ANIMALS SLEEP?

All animals sleep, but many of them in ways so curious that they seem to be awake. Ducks sleep on open water, and to keep from drifting ashore paddle with one foot continually, thus traveling in a slow circle. Bats sleep head downward, hanging by their hind claws. Some birds sleep with their heads turned backward and tucked under their wings. In addition to their eyelids, owls have a curtain which they draw sidewise over their eyes. Many animals of the cat family sleep with wide-open, staring eyes. Elephants sleep standing up, their heads slowly swinging as if they were awake. It is these and other curious ways of sleeping that give rise to the stories that some animals do not sleep.

MISS ULINE.

Miss Mary D. Uline, of Boston, is the Project Secretary for the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. She served in France during the World War, has traveled extensively, is familiar with our Church work around the world, and is a charming speaker. The Woman's Board of the Southern Convention is glad to announce that Miss Uline will be one of the speakers at their session at Elon College, N. C., on April 18th and 19th.

small indeed in comparison with the miracle of the Man Himself. How can anyone doubt in the light of nearly 2,000 years of history that this is indeed Him of whom the prophets of old wrote, the unique, the uncomparable, the marvelous and only begotten Son of the living God. No pen can portray, no history can record the wonders and the influences flowing out of the life of the thirty-three years of sojourn on this earth of the man of Galilee. Phillip Brooks, one of the most eminent American preachers, gave this thought provoking statement with which all who think for a moment will agree:

"Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone; today He is the center piece of the human race and the leader of the column of progress.

"I am far within the mark when I say that all the armies that ever marched, and all the navies that ever were built, and all the parliaments that ever sat, and all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man upon this earth as powerfully as has that one solitary Life."

William T. Ellis, the eminent Sunday School Lesson Commentator, adds this:

"This most powerful leader of mankind, Jesus of Nazareth, was not a dictator, but a shepherd, a leader, an overseer. He so respected individual personality and liberty that He made it a matter of free choice with every man, whether or not he should follow in the Way. It is every man's perilous privilege to disregard the Saviour's invitation to the new life.

"But the hope of the country, and of the world, lies in that vast multitude—a clear majority of the population in North America—who have definitely aligned themselves as followers of Christ."

The object of all our missionary effort and donations is to give all people everywhere a knowledge of this Man, the world's incomparable Won-coming, but the Book of books teaches us forbearance and patience and gives us the promise that faith in Him is the victory that overcometh the world. Our missionary endeavor to build churches in the home land and to share the gospel of the love and life of our Lord with the less favored in foreign lands may seem slow growth and small of power, but if we are collaborators together with God in building His church we are assured of a victory that is ever-lasting and eternal.

EASTER OFFERING ENVELOPES.

The envelopes for the Easter Offering for missions have been sent to all the churches of the Convention, either to the church secretaries or to the pastors. It is to be hoped that these envelopes will be distributed among the members and in the congregations so that all who are willing to make an offering shall be supplied. Just as we take an offering at or about Thanksgiving for the Orphanage so at or about Easter we take the offering for Missions. No more fitting season could be chosen for a missionary offering than Easter, since the event celebrates the Resurrection of our Lord and the one emphatic command He gave after His Resurrection was, "Go ye and teach all nations whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you unto the end."

THEY WORSHIPPED TOGETHER.

der so that all who will, may surrender their lives to Him and thus become a part of that army, an ever-increasing army, whose battle is for peace on earth among all the nations and all the isms that divide mankind into so many contending groups and conflicts. It may be a long time in

So in making our offering to missions we obey the last command of our Lord and at the same time become co-workers with Him in building His church and sharing His love and life with those less favored than ourselves. The world waits for this message and there will be strife and wars and rumors of wars until this message is given to the world. It is written for our edification, "How can they hear without a preacher, and how can they preach unless they be sent." J. O. A.

nations. They are made for the one purpose of giving to the greatest need known to man, that of the saving and redeeming gospel of our Lord. When we make a donation for this purpose we have the satisfaction of knowing that we are carrying out His greatest and most emphatic command, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me unto the uttermost parts." Witness bearing in the name of our Lord is indeed a high and holy privilege.

CHOOSE YE.

Over against the prejudice and religious bigotry that would exclude those who do not believe all the detached and distorted teachings of Scripture as they do how it helps one to place the earnest prayer of our Lord recorded in the 17th Chapter of John, and also the following from that great Christian poet, Edwin Markham:

He drew a circle to keep me out—
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout;
But Love and I had the wit to win;
We drew a circle that took him in.

Markham's philosophy and our Lord's longest recorded prayer should help us to "love one another even as I have loved you."

to make you think that he is stronger and mightier in his speech and conduct than he really is. Swearing, using curse words is an acknowledgement that one is weak and looking around for a crutch to hobble on and besides committing a sin he is betraying his own inherent weakness.

Great men and good have never had to resort to such folly, weakness and sin. Here is a very thought provoking General Order, issued to his

GENERAL ORDER

Issued by General George Washington in New York, July, 1776:

"The General is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known in an American army, is growing into fashion. He hopes the officers will, by example as well as influence, endeavor to check it, and that both they and the men will reflect, that we can have little hope of the blessing of Heaven on our arms, if we insult it by our impiety and folly. Added to this, it is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it. G. Washington."

The above is worthy of consideration indeed by some of the little lights who try under the cloak of curse words to appear big and brave.

WHAT THE CROSS MEANS TO ME. (A GOOD FRIDAY MEDITATION.)

By MOZELLE COLE, La Grange, Ga.

[Miss Cole is the Southeast representative on the National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship. This paper was read in our La Grange (Ga.) Church last Easter. Ed.]

And all through life I see a Cross, Where sons of men yield up their breath.

There is no gain except by loss;
There is no life except by death.

When some people think of the Cross, they see just a huge rugged Cross. Sometimes so do I, but I think there is also a brilliant light which surrounds it. To me the Cross is a sacred and holy thing because Jesus died on it for me.

Must Jesus bear His Cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there's a Cross for every one,
And there's a Cross for me.

I feel just that way. I have a Cross to carry. It is a Cross that Jesus has asked me to carry, and I am happy and willing to carry it all the way for Him.

Although I was not there at the time of Jesus' trial and during His journey along the weary way to Calvary, to help Him bear His Cross, I can do so now. I can do so by helping my fellowmen in the walk of life and by seeking to lift their burdens.

What a true believer Simon must have been. He slipped out from a mob of angry men. He stooped down to help our Lord pick up His Cross and carried it for Him. Indeed Simon was a real man. He may have had a cross of his own to bear, but he was willing to help our Savior carry His.

I love Christ more deeply because of the Cross. Perhaps you are wondering why. Because my Savior was willing to let a Crown of Thorns be placed upon His holy head. He was willing to carry a heavy cross all the way to Golgotha. He was willing to be placed on it, and then to let cruel nails be driven through His precious hands and feet. And as if that wasn't enough of pain, the soldiers plunged a spear through His body, piercing His side. Jesus, our Lord and Savior, was willing to suffer all this pain and agony for you and me.

Jesus, I my Cross have taken,
All to leave and follow Thee.

Only through Christ and the Cross can we come to the fullness of life. Oh, if I could but tell you how I feel about the Cross—of the joy and blessing it can give.

And liveried chauffeur gliding glittering past;
While on the street a man of gray drawn face Goes cowering, coatless in the sleety blast.
—Stanton A. Coblentz.

"At the heart of the Lord's Prayer there is a petition which guarantees the 'materialism' of Christianity: 'Give us this day our daily bread.' That petition has become meaningless to those whose daily bread is assured. It would gain new meaning which would be true to its original spirit if we allowed a commentary to run through our minds as we pray that prayer. It would run in this way: 'Give us this day the brains and the conscience so to organize our economic life that the bread which thou hast already given us in abundance may not rot, but may be distributed to meet the needs of all people.'—John C. Bennett.

Prayer.

"Guide us in Thy way, O Lord, and mercifully show the fountain of wisdom to our thirsting minds; that we may be free from sorrowful heaviness, and may drink in the sweetness of life eternal. Amen.

"It is the task of this generation of Christians to translate the idea of love in its relation to the economic problem from terms of philanthropy into terms of justice."

When I gave myself to Jesus, when I professed faith and love for God, I laid my heart at the foot of the Cross. There I received a baptism of cleansing and a new strength to carry on. On Easter Day there will be others

THE GREATEST VICTORY OF ALL TIME.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR APRIL 9, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: I Corinthians 15: 1-20.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Victorious in Temptation—Matt. 4: 1-11.

Tuesday—Victorious in Testing—Matt. 22: 41-46.

Wednesday—Victorious Over Demons—Luke 4: 31-37.

Thursday—Victorious Over Nature's Fury—Mark 4: 35-41.

Friday—Victorious Over Persecution—Luke 4: 28-30.

Saturday—Victorious Over Another's Death—John 11: 38-44.

Christianity today is facing a struggle because of the pressure of pagan and secular forces. Through this Easter Season there should come to all Christians a new realization that victory comes through Christ. He was victorious over temptation, over those who were plotting against him, and finally victorious over death and the grave. As a result of these victories the Church has grown as a spiritual brotherhood, the human conscience has been aroused against brutality and cruelty, and the world becomes more enlightened.

Give more attention in this meeting to the worshipful elements than to the discussion. "The blessings and privileges I enjoy following a living Christ" may be the central thought around which the testimonies are offered.

Questions for Discussion—

1. What examples of a victorious Christ have you noted in the history of the past?

2. What examples of a victorious Christ do you notice in the world around you?

3. If Christ is victorious, why is it that so many un-Christian practices are prevalent in the world?

A number of individuals should prepare to offer prayers on such topics as: gratitude for flowers, gratitude for sunshine which is symbolic of the "Light of the World," gratitude for Christian fellowship, gratitude for hope in a future life.

Suggested Hymns—

"Jesus Christ Is Risen Today."
"Lift Up Your Voices Now."
"Crown Him With Many Crowns."

I know that my Redeemer lives,
What joy the blessed assurance gives;
Though dead, He rose and lives again;
He lives eternal in His reign.

He lives my hungry soul to feed;
He lives to help in times of need;
He lives to grant me daily breath;
He lives—and I shall conquer death.

SAUL BECOMES A NEW MAN.

LESSON I—APRIL 2, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature; the old things are passed away; behold they are become new.—II Corinthians 5:17.

LESSON: Acts 9:1-30.

Paul was the greatest man that Christianity has ever produced. He was, of course, a talented, capable, influential man before Christ laid hold on him. But when he yielded himself to Christ on the Damascus road, he set his feet in a path that led him to the first place in the roll call of great Christians. The secret of it all was that when he did hear the call of Christ, he gave himself completely, absolutely, with utter abandon and enthusiasm to Christ. The lesson for today deals with that momentous incident, momentous not only for Paul, but for Christianity itself. This man Paul was called of God. He came into the Kingdom at such a time as was pivotal.

A Fire-Brand.

This man Saul was a fire-brand. He did not do things by halves. He was zealous for the Lord. His whole being was whipped up to white heat against those whom he thought were enemies of his religion. In Jerusalem he went from house to house seeking out those who had espoused the new religion, and had them arrested and put in prison. When he heard that in far-off Damascus there were those like them, he set out "breathing out threatening and slaughter" against these disciples of the Lord. He was burning up. To be sure he had a zeal that was misguided. But one sometimes wishes that folks had a little more zeal for their Lord even if at times it did cause them to make some mistakes. Our modern world needs nothing so much as folks with "hot hearts."

Of This Way.

"If he found any of this way" . . . thus were the first century Christians called. They got his title, not so much from what they believed, but from the way they lived. Essentially Christianity is just that—a way of life—Christ's way of life.

A Vision and a Voice.

"And suddenly there shined about him a light from heaven" . . . "and he heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" Many fanciful explanations have been given of this experience especially by those who like to rule out the supernatural element in religion. But why not take the story as it is recorded by an honest and sober historian who had investigated the facts, and what is still more to the point, from Paul himself? There shined a light from heaven, brighter even than the mid-day sun; it was the light of the Sun of Righteousness—and there was a voice—the voice of the Son of God. Paul saw, and heard something real, even though it was spiritual. A great deal was at stake that day on the Damascus Road. God needed this man desperately. He saw to it that Paul had an experience that would serve as a touch-stone for all of his later experiences. It is foolish to tone the thing down. And, of course, it is just as foolish to expect everybody to have an experience exactly like Paul had on the Damascus Road. It is not too much to expect, however, that one should experience reality when he meets Christ and yields to Him.

Bravado, But a Hungry Heart.

This fellow Paul was brave enough. But he was desperately unsettled and hungry in heart. Perhaps it all started when he saw Stephen die with such light in his eyes and such a spirit in his heart. With all of his meticulous devotion to the law, and all of his zeal in persecution Paul did not have anything like that. The figures which Jesus used is suggestive—"It is hard for thee to kick against the goads"—the picture of an ox, obstreperous and stubborn, going along kicking against the goading of the driver, and thus making matters worse for himself all the time. Ah, how many hungry hearts there are under some of the outer shows which men put on. There is an instinctive hunger in the heart for God. Joy and peace and hope come not through the law, but through the grace of Christ.

Groping for the Light.

In Paul's case at least he did not see the light all at once. Only later could he put it all together and make it add up sense. But in his darkness he kept praying and he came to the light. In his willingness to obey the best he knew, he came to the truth.

God works in mysterious ways, his wonders to perform. The vision and the voice came from heaven. Man could not do some of the things that needed to be done to change this man. But there was an important and indeed a vital place for human co-operation, even in the conversion of Saul. God sent Ananias into Damascus to lead Saul to the light. The divine and the human factor are present in every true conversion. When D. L. Moody returned from his world evangelistic tour he said that of all the thousands that he had seen converted under his preaching, he never knew of but one man who had not been converted as a result of some personal work. Those of you who read these notes ought to realize that that there are some folks who are never going to be won to Christ unless you win them. In this supreme business, God works through men.

Scales From Our Eyes.

"And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales." Things look so different when we look at them through eyes that have been opened by Christ. Life itself looks different, material things look different, folks look different, trouble appears in a new guise, suffering takes on new meaning, death itself is changed. Christ gives a new perspective, a new sense of values, a new and truer view of everything.

Saved to Serve.

"And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God." In the thrill of his experience of Christ he told others of Christ. Because Christ had done something for him he wanted to do something for Christ. And it was no diluted gospel, or compromised Christ which he preached—he preached Jesus as the Son of God.

A Chosen Vessel.

Paul was just that. He had a great mind, a great heart, a great soul.

PASSION WEEK.
MONDAY.

BRUNER'S PRAYER.

Our Father, we stand in wonder and awe before the spectacle of the death of Jesus Christ upon the cross. Although the world has never been able to understand the mystery of the cross, it has never been able to get away from it. We would not satisfy our own intellects, but we would appreciate the cross that we may be able to appropriate to ourselves some of the wealth and spiritual power that Jesus let loose on humanity when he bowed His head and said, "It is finished." To the world at that time the cross seemed to be a colossal defeat, but we know today that it was the world's most victorious power unto an "Endless life."

Prayer—We thank Thee for the apostolic portrait of Jesus set steadfastly to go to Jerusalem. We thank Thee for the unyielding purpose of His life to make salvation complete. As we contemplate this each day this week, may we understand actually what it means. Save us from the temptation of yielding to the temptation to come down from the cross and attempting to make Christian life easier. May genuine cross-bearing become the distinguishing mark of Thy true disciples. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHAT WOULD HE SAY TODAY?

"Weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and for your children."—Luke 28: 28.

If Jesus had something to say each day of His passion week to His disciples, He certainly must have something to say to us. We believe that He would remind us of our own sins and tell us to stop raving so much about the sins of others. We believe that He would remind us of our patience toward His enemies, make us realize His love more than we do, and send us out in the world to do as He does. We believe that He would call our attention to little children and tell us to give more time in training them in the way they should go. We believe that He would tell us to read our Bibles and pray more, and weep copious tears Himself that we are so neglectful?

Prayer—Our Father, whose love embraces the whole world, may our souls encompass the Christ's spirit and the will to do His will. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"Jesus' day of rest and silence in Bethlehem." "Be still and know that I am God."

THURSDAY.

A PERPETUAL MEMORIAL.

"This do in remembrance of me."
—Luke 22: 19.

This is the scene of the last supper just before the betrayal. We are to remember Christ, what He said, what He did, how He lives, and how He died. To remember Him thus is to enter the purified life: it is to take Him bodily into our lives and absorb spiritual mysteries to a satisfying extent: it is to live in the Kingdom of God.

Prayer—Our Father, we know that Thou dost forget no one and in Thee every one finds a Father and a home forever. May we not forget Thee. Grant unto us complete oneness with Thee, and thus we come to Thy table praying for strength to live life in a manner pleasing to Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE END.

"Father into Thy hand I commend my spirit."—Luke 23: 46.

It was early in the morning. Jesus was on the cross. He leans on God. It is as simple as a child leaning at his mother's knee. He leans on God's goodness, and says, "All is well."

Out of the darkness of this death there shines the great light of His eternal love. At the end of every thought, and at the end of every road we travel, there is God, His arms outstretched to receive us; and we need to be able to say, "Father, into Thy hands we commend our spirit."

Without this cross no man could have union with the Father. On it depends our every hope. In it a sinner beholds a Saviour who died to save him, and in Him he can realize the fullness of the joy of forgiveness. The cross is the highest place a man can attain.

Prayer—O Jesus, Thou hast accomplished that which Thou camest to do. Goodness is maintained despite all evil. The love of heaven is enshrined in Thee forever, and there is no condemnation upon us. We thank Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MEMORIES AND TEARS.

"And there came also Nicodemus."
—John 19: 39.

Nicodemus, and Joseph of Arimathea, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary, Peter and John and many others, came to the tomb of Jesus weeping? They did not find Him, but they found something else. They saw the angel, they found the risen Lord; they heard His admonition against their grief; they felt His holy breath of peace upon them; and they received His commission to go into the world and teach and save.

Lenski suggests that perhaps Nicodemus helped Joseph of Arimathea, and as they walked away from the tomb, Joseph slipped his arm through his friend's and said, O Nicodemus, you were a friend, too, why did you not take the last step and join us?

This sad hour is no time to admire Jesus. Any decent man can do that. But it is a time of consecration, and YOUTH AT THE LORD'S TABLE.

"He sat down with the twelve."

—Matthew 26: 20.

Young people, you have come with your elders to the table of the Lord. What a high and holy moment this ought to be in each of your young lives. I wish your minds could go back across the centuries to that night in the upper room in old Jerusalem when a young Man sat down with His twelve. I wish you could see how young they all were. There are those who believe every one of them was in his twenties or thirties. Jesus Himself was a very fine young man, and some of them no doubt younger than He. Dr. Lucecock of Yale, says, "In its high hours the Church of Christ has always been a youth movement. That was true in the very beginning when a company of young men under thirty stood in those Galilean hills and listened to another young Man under thirty, and as they came under His spell they went out to do nothing less than to turn the world upside down."

That night there in old Jerusalem was not to be forgotten. It was the last night before the tragedy of the cross on tomorrow. It ended a fellowship the like of which had never been seen before. It brought the end of a life of one that had become far more than a teacher, a friend, and a leader. It was the separation apparently of one who had brought a group of young men face to face with life's greatest reality, namely, God. A teacher that had brought them their greatest hopes, and aspirations, and their sweetest fellowships. Jesus had taught them to think not merely of themselves, but in terms of the whole world, and of all time and eternity. He had stretched their horizons to hitherto unimaginable limits. Now He was taking leave of them in the saddest possible way, or so it would seem to them.

But they must not forget, and those who would dare share their fellowship after them must not forget. So Jesus established the simple ritual of the supper. At the close of their religious passover meal He took a bit of bread and broke it, telling them as He brake it that it represented His broken body.

He asked them each to eat of it. Then He took the cup and supped from it, and having given thanks, He asked them each one to sup of it. What a tie! What a feasting! What a symbol of fellowship! Could they ever forget, these young men there in that upper room? He told them that whensoever again they should partake of this meal they should do it in remembrance of Him. They were to feed upon Him; to gain something of His strength, His goodness, His mercy, and His love. An idealism fit for the redemption of the world was to be relayed through them to the ends of the earth. Such a noble task! And how divine strength would be needed. It was promised, and the world knows it was given!

You follow in that line. You are here today to do the same things; to take of the broken bread, and of the cup, and to thus acknowledge your fidelity to Him, and your determination to be a part of that redemptive process of the times. How the world needs young men and young women who understand that, and gather about the Lord's table! As you come let us ask ourselves the question: Why do you come? Well, you come in the first place because Jesus has bidden you. You are impelled out of love for Him. You have heard His call, and you come because He is the fairest of ten thousand, and the bright and morning star; because you find none like Him, simply because He demands your heartfelt allegiance out of your love for Him and greater still His love for you. I like to think we are here because He loves us and because we love Him. Let that be a first great all-impelling reason.

Again you come because you need the purification that this high and holy moment can give. We all need it. We look forward to it. We are in a wicked and sinning world. We find ourselves far below our ideals for ourselves. We simply confess that we are before Him unworthy sinners in need of His pardon and purification. We confess our sins and implore His forgiveness. We come because we need to be washed with hyssop and made clean. Our hearts feel it. It feels so good to be near Him in His forgiving, cleansing love, and although we may say we are innocent youth, when we come up to this Lord's table somehow we know that our righteousness is but filthy rags, and we come to Him for cleansing. As Paul, another young man says, "We examine ourselves," and when we do we realize our need of Him.

Again, we come for spiritual food, or for edification. We need not only to have the cleansing, but we desire to grow, develop, and become strong in Him. We need the spiritual food that this high and holy moment gives. We need it desperately. So much calls us away from the Christ, so much causes us to neglect our souls within us, so much drives us to the humdrum of daily affairs, we grow impoverished of soul and poor. We need rebuilding spiritually. This is edification. Jesus knew full well it would be so. And so He established this fountain of strength and blessing; this high and holy hour when in a way so intimate and personal we might every one come with one another to Him, and thus partake of a time to pledge ourselves to be faithful unto death.

Prayer—Our Father, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, as the hours of this day run on, speak to our wayward hearts and let our appreciations become consecration, and consecration a loyalty unto an eternal day. Amen.

EASTER SUNDAY.

WHEN GOD GAVE US EASTER.

"Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—1 Cor. 15: 57.

In the resurrection of Jesus we have all that He was in life, in death and in the life to come. It is a life that goes on and on revealing that what He was He still is; what He did He still does, healing, forgiving, walking with us, loving us—and that is what He gave us when He gave us Easter. It is a gloomy Sabbath transformed into a joyous day, because it is the certain hope of a new life which we are to share with Him in heaven. Death shall have no part in that life. For this happy consumation we all wait, knowing whom we have believed, and that He is able to keep that which we have committed unto Him against that day.

Prayer—O God, of the Easter morning splendor, enter Thou this day into the rule of the world, and may more people of this world crown Thee this day than ever before. Upon every lip let Thy praise be sung, "Glory and power, and honor, and dominion, be Thine, Lord of Lords, King of Kings, now and forever." Amen.

NEWS AND VIEWS

LENTEN SERVICES AT WINCHESTER.

A series of Lenten Services was held in Winchester Church from March 5 to March 10, with the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Washington, D. C., as our guest speaker. Dr. Anderson is a graduate of the University of Omaha and of the Chicago Theological Seminary. The church of which he is now pastor is the one in which the late President Coolidge and his family worshipped in Washington.

This series opened with a 5 o'clock vesper service on Sunday, March 5, when the Rev. Mr. Anderson spoke concerning "Four Unconventional Wishes." His topics for the succeeding evening services were: "Forty Wrestlers for Thee," "The Unique and the Universal," "Be a Plum Tree," "The Menace of Religion," and "The Only Sermon I Know." The Winchester had the following to say of Dr. Anderson: "He is active in denominational and interdenominational activities in Washington where he is considered one of the outstanding pastors of the National Capitol." "Dr. Anderson's magnetic personality held the congregation spellbound." "While in Winchester, Dr. Anderson won many friends through his sincere and forceful messages."

The music for the Vesper service was furnished by "The Chanters" under the direction of Floyd W. Haines. Mr. Haines directed the music for all the services of the week.

The spiritual life of the church has been quickened. The challenge brought to us through the Gospel messages of Dr. Anderson will live in our hearts and inspire us for service. Our pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten, is following these services with Pre-Easter meetings and the training through the Pastor's Class. REPORTER.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS ACTIVE.

(FIRST CHURCH, NORFOLK, VA.)

We have started to do things in the class now, and the interest has worked up to almost fever heat. We have started to have debates in the class; we plan to have one debate each month, and we have already had one. The question for that one was: "Resolved that the Invasion of China by the Japanese Is Justified." The affirmative side was upheld by the writer and the negative side was upheld by Surry Kight, Sr. We had a full house and had a lot of fun. We have another one for March 12. The question is: "Resolved that There Should Be Military Training in the Public Schools of America." The affirmative side will be upheld by Paul Kagey and the negative by V. D. Divers. Mr. Divers is president of the class.

We also have a contest for membership going on that is really good. This contest is known as the "San Francisco or Bust." We have a large map of the United States on the wall in the class room and the sides are divided up into Fords and Packards; each side is supplied with pins with the picture of the cars on them. Each new member counts one inch movement on the map and every five members present on a Sunday for either side counts one inch. The cars start at Norfolk and go to San Francisco and back. The losing side has to give the other side a supper. This contest has been going on for three weeks. Last Sunday we had thirty-nine present. Our goal is one hundred members.

We also are forming a quartet composed of members of the class. You ought to hear them sing! We have offered a prize for the most suitable name submitted for the Bible Class. We are trying to change the name we now have to one that will stick when you hear it. We are having regular monthly meetings, and these meetings are now held at the different members' homes. We spend about an hour on business and another hour in social entertainment, such as playing games and serving refreshments. This has proved to be a great help. So far, the attendance has been almost 100 per cent of the members, the only ones not coming being those who have to work.

We have made arrangements to have a visiting speaker once a month. This seems to help keep interest revived and also helps the attendance.

When Easter comes will you bring to the church a new member? This is important work and will bring you rich rewards.

In Memoriam

HALL.

Mrs. Laura Victoria Hall, another member of Berea (Norfolk) Christian Church, has left us. She passed away March 9, 1939, at 3:00 A. M. She was the wife of Deacon Martin Wesley Hall, who preceded her to the grave five years, having died about this time of the year, 1934.

Mrs. Hall was a resident of this community all of her life and a member of her church fifty-six years; a very faithful member was she—greatly beloved and honored by all who knew her. She was the mother of seven children, six of whom are now living, and one having died in early childhood. Those six children are some of the finest the writer has ever known. They were raised in this section and their mother trained them all in the choir. All of them are faithful in their Master's service. Mrs. Hall was the mother of Dr. Sidney B. Hall, of Richmond, Va., who is Superintendent of Public Instruction of our State. May her friends and members of her church left behind ever cherish and honor her memory. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

GREETINGS.

the Suffolk Christian Church. I pay tribute to this great and good man. In honoring him, you honor yourselves and your church.

I did know Dr. Staley, not only personally, but intimately. Associated with him as I was for nine years in a very close way, I came to know him in a very intimate way. That intimate association with him shows the fallacy of the old adage "Familiarity breeds contempt." The longer I knew him, and the more intimately I became acquainted with him, the more I respected and admired him. And passing years have but increased my appreciation of both his goodness and his greatness.

I pay humble and heart-felt tribute to his unquestioned integrity and character, his profound wisdom, and his sanctified common sense, his sound philosophy of life, his genuine interest in people, his friendly spirit, his gift of humor, his ability to develop others, his wise leadership, his constant devotion to Christ and his cause, his insight and vision, his spirit of sacrifice in giving himself and his substance, his breadth of vision and interest, his gifts as a writer, his mastery of the art of simplicity in teaching and preaching, his unexcelled ability as a pastor, his sound scholarship, and his genuine character. Especially do I pay tribute to his attitude toward me in our relations as pastors of the great church which he had built and to which he gave himself with the last full measure of devotion. I join with you this day in rising up and calling him blessed.

As you dedicate these memorials to these saints and servants of God, may you dedicate yourselves anew to this church which they loved and made great, and to the Christ who loved and gave himself for you.

And may a double portion of their spirit come upon your present beloved pastor, that under his leadership your great church may grow in grace and be fruitful in every good work.

Sincerely yours,
 H. S. HARDCASTLE.

SUN'S PULPIT.

His strength. He even called it eating of His flesh, and drinking of His blood, and said it was meat and drink, indeed. Do we not find it so? We should so wait and worship as we partake of this supper that we should feel that a new strength had been given us for the business of living.

And that brings me to another reason for coming to the Lord's table—not only for purification and edification, but also for consecration. The young, valiant, and brave disciples needed it, an ever-recurring renewal of consecration. He knew they needed it, and He knew also that we would need it, and in our heart of hearts long for it. Taking a towel and girding Himself, He took a basin of water and began to do the menial tasks of a servant to demonstrate the depth of their expected consecration. He taught that they were to serve and to serve in His name. He taught them that they were to think last of self, and first of others. He taught a depth of consecration which they were given the grace to honor in later years as they obediently laid down their lives, one by one, in due season for Him and for His kingdom. Every time they partook of this meal they were the better prepared for every crisis. Crises were many in those days, even as they are today.

My young friends, we are made in the image of God; there is a spark of divinity within each of us, and unless we are willing to belie the best which we can possibly be, we all want to consecrate our lives to noble serving of others. We all want to give our lives in useful devotion to Him. How vain, and weak, an insipid life without God! How worthless unless we can feel with Jesus that we are a part of the great plan to redeem the world and thus bring every man home to the very best that he can be! As we partake of these emblems today, let us think of the broken body of Jesus, and of His spilled blood, and let us pray for a consecration that is worthy of Him, and of us. Let us see that life may be full and joyous and real if we give Him His proper place in our hearts. It may lead us to the cross, but only a few years ago ten million of your fellows laid down their lives in a cause that now seems almost lost. Will not you and I seek a consecration here, and in other such hours as this that will cause us to offer our lives in loving service to the Lord Jesus in making the kind of world that his loving heart foresaw? He is listening, He is willing, He is near; let us give our answer to Him!

MEET YOUR FRIENDS OF THE MOUNTAINS.

Among the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia are to be found some of America's original stock of fine people. In the southern part of the state is a section where highways and schools have been neglected until recent years. This means that the people have missed many advantages enjoyed by people elsewhere.

The Christian Church, not many years ago began work in Carroll County, and today we have three growing churches there. The investment is small, but the rewards are great in educational interest, heightened moral ideals, and fine personality development.

time in "The Annual" for 1924. At that time Rev. M. T. Sorrell had charge of this newly started mountain work. Two years later, we find that Rev. J. A. Ledbetter is in charge, and he in turn is succeeded by Rev. S. E. Madren, who took charge of the work in 1927 or '28. Rev. R. T. Grissom and Rev. O. A. Elmore, in turn had charge of this work. More recently is was taken over by Rev. B. J. Earp, who is at present caring for the three mountain churches: Elk Spur, Ivy Hill, and Rocky Ford, in addition to his pastorate at Ingram, Va. Mr. Earp is doing a good work in this mountain section, and our Mission Board deserves the support of our entire constituency in helping these good people to help themselves.

He Is Not Dead

I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away.
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.
And you—oh, you, who the wildest yearn
For an old-time step, and the glad return,
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here.
Think of him still as the same. I say,
He is not dead—he is just away.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

First Church, Greensboro, is having three special services during Holy Week with communion on Thursday evening. The Sunday services begin with a six o'clock sunrise service.

Dr. and Mrs. F. L. Fagley were visitors in Richmond, Va., this week. Dr. Fagley, Associate Secretary of the General Council, was the speaker at both morning and evening services of our Richmond Church last Sunday.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN regrets that inadvertently the name of Miss Julia Brinkley did not appear as the author of the historical articles concerning Drs. W. B. Wellons and W. W. Staley, which appeared in last week's issue.

For a number of years Mr. Geo. M. McCullers was the song leader in the Sunday School Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Conference. On March 6, 1939, he left his old home, near Catawba Springs, N. C., and went to another home where music is a part of the daily experience.

Mt. Olivet (G) Christian Church, Dyke, Va., is holding a series of Holy Week services under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. M. W. Mann. Special music is provided by members of the church, including a children's choir. Much benefit to church and community is derived from this type of meditation together.

The Shelton Memorial Church (Portsmouth, Va.) and parsonage have recently been re-decorated, the former by the Ladies' Auxiliary and the latter by the pastor, Dr. Marna S. Poulson, as a memorial to his wife. Although confined to his bed for at least two more weeks, Dr. Poulson still has his fine, happy spirit and keeps the work going progressively.

A ten-day revival at Antioch Church in the Valley of Virginia has just come to a close. These services were preceded by prayer meetings. Visible results are three accessions on profession of faith, and one by letter. The preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. M. W. Mann, and music was furnished by the congregation with Mr. Elmer Roller of Harrisonburg directing the music and Mrs. M. W. Mann at the piano. "We hope the church is strengthened and that the closing of this revival marks the day of great beginnings."

Rev. Veto A. Venesia is the new superintendent of our Latin American Institute and pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church in West Tampa, Fla. He began work on March 1, and was well received by the community. The Rev. Mr. Venezia comes to Tampa from Kansas City, Mo., where he has been an assistant pastor and director of boy's work in an Italian Mission. Prospects for our Mission in Tampa are good and visitors will be welcomed by Mr. Venezia and his charming wife at the parsonage, 2326 Green St., Tampa, Fla.

REV. WM. B. O'NEILL.

On March 1, 1939, Rev. William B. O'Neill became pastor of our fine church of 389 members at Holland, Va., succeeding Rev. Carl R. Key. The Rev. Mr. O'Neill is a native of Ireland. He has served pastorates in Florida, North Carolina, and New York. "The Christian Sun" wishes for him a successful and happy pastorate in Holland.

ginning of a new era, with death no longer a blank door closing upon human existence, opening upon only uncertainty or fear beyond; with sin no longer interposing a dense veil between mankind and an offended Creator.

Instead, it tells of life as the Spring-time of a glorious summer, illumined by the beauty of a gracious Father reconciled to mankind—of death as but the entrance to a fuller life in another sphere.

A new life-blessing Sun issued from the garden tomb on Easter morning, and ever since that day of the opened grave we have called the same first day of the week Sunday and made it a happy and should-be holy rest day as a weekly memorial of the most beneficient and most revolutionary event this earth has ever witnessed since upon it light was first made to shine.

APPRECIATION OF REV. C. W. CARTER.

The Rev. C. W. Carter as I knew him was an humble, consecrated servant of a living Savior. Although he attained his allotted days of three score years and ten, and for the last three years was unable to carry on the work that was dearest to his heart, yet his zeal for the work continued to grow. He felt a divine call to the gospel ministry and gave it first place in his life. He was ever ready to be of service to his fellowman, never seeking high or easy places, but ever serving in his humble, efficient way with no thought of financial remuneration, trusting all to his God who was able to do more than we think or ask. He was true to the trust that was reposed in him. He very greatly appreciated his friends, his family, and his church, all of whom will miss his wise counsel, but greatly appreciate the fact that it was our happy privilege to have been associated with this mighty prince of Israel who has fallen. His God is able to comfort the bereaved and raise up another to take up the work that he has laid down.

This writer never had a better friend in the ministry, and shall always appreciate the opportunity of having been a co-laborer with this great man of God. G. H. VEAZEY.

NOTICE.

Elon Church and community are anticipating a very happy time on April 18 and 19, when the Woman's Missionary Convention will convene for the first time apart from the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

Delegates, we trust, will arrive in time for the opening at 2 o'clock, Tuesday, April 18. At 6:35 a fellowship banquet will be served, 65c per plate in the College Dining Hall. Preceding the banquet Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith will receive, informally, in West Dormitory.

THE EASTER STORY.

The story of Easter is very simple. Women went early in the morning to the tomb in a garden where they had buried their best-loved Friend. They took an offering of sweet spices, according to the custom of their day. Instead of finding soldiers on guard as they expected, they found angels that said: "You seek Jesus. He is risen; He is not here." Peter and John came to the tomb and found it empty. Mary Magdelene saw Jesus in the garden near where He had been buried.

Two disciples walked with Jesus along the road to Emmaus on Easter Evening. Ten of the disciples saw Jesus in the room with them on that first Sunday night. It is a simple story.

But it is filled with awe and amazement. It is overflowing with the divine. Buried people seldom arise and mingle with their friends. Angels do not often talk with human beings. Only once in history has God come in physical form to walk the highways with those who mourn and are perplexed. Out of death came life for Jesus, for the disciples of Jesus, and for the world that believed on Jesus.

We may not understand all the story of Easter, but those who accept it as it is recorded in the Bible find for themselves a new spring-time of life. They are renewed in mind and spirit. Courage comes to face life's sternest realities unafraid. Death no longer terrifies. It becomes the opening door to a new and more abundant life. With hastening feet those who believe the story of Easter go to tell its message. With assurance they tell that which they know, that Jesus arose from the dead and is the leader of all who love Him.

THE EASTER CALL.

To those who knew the Master, Easter became a magnet that held their hearts to His divine purpose. Even the ancient Sabbath Day was gradually forgotten as the day of resurrection became the day for worship. A new love for the Christ cast out all fear of what might happen to self. Beyond the river of Death they saw Jesus standing, beckoning them to come. The old call to follow Him was renewed, and with self-abandon that has seldom been equaled, they gave themselves to the Cause that came to life on Easter Morn.

The Call to New Life.

In our day, as in theirs, the Easter Call is to New Life. Old things are passing away. God is calling us to make the new things right. In the light of Easter, we know that hate should have no place in the human heart. Love walked in the garden where women wept and sacrificed. It still does. Love revealed itself in the breaking of bread and in conference with those who cared that first Easter Evening. It still does. Easter calls us to life that is filled with love. The old crusty shells need to be broken so the new person can emerge. Narrowness, selfishness, and greed must be forgotten, or we lose the vision of Easter.

Around the world there is needed a new and spiritual birth that is as transforming as was the first Easter. Those of us who are workers in the Church, those who are members but do not work, and those who are not members need to find this new life springing up within the soul. And we can find it. That is the call of Easter to us.

The Call to Service.

To be good is all right, but to be good for something is far better. The first message of the Master on Easter sent those who loved Him running to do His work. Leisure was forgotten that day for they had a message to deliver. We have heard the message, but sometimes loiter in its delivery.

Into the churches at sunrise this year will come multitudes to sing the praise of God and to tell again of the resurrected Christ. At morning, noon and night around the world people will meet in the Master's name. Choirs will sing, and an innumerable throng will join with them in the hallelujahs to the risen King. Preachers young and old, ordained and without benefit of clergy, will tell the wondrous story. In homes and hamlets and magnificent temples people will worship and serve.

Among the faithful will come some who are new in the Father's family. They will be those who have heard the Call of Christ and are joining the Church. Happy will be those who through their efforts have won new recruits for the army of the Lord. The path of service leads straight from the garden of Easter Day. A despairing world awaits the message of hope that those who walk with the Master can give.

The Call to Sacrifice.

Without death there can be no resurrection. Without sacrifice there can be no Easter Dawn. Jesus never called men to plenty and pleasure. He still calls to sacrifice of self in the service of men.

Forty-four million people around the world await the Easter message as it is told by people of Congregational and Christian Churches. How long shall they wait? Until we have all the luxuries we want? Shall they wait until they are dead and we face the Christ of Calvary and Easter having no gift worthy of His presence?

Easter is the appropriate time for our sacrificial gifts that will send the Gospel of the Crucified and Resurrected to people of all races and nations around the earth. The call of Easter comes to all of us to give to the Church, the body of Christ, an offering of love so the people of the world may know the glory of the Easter Day.

WHY DO REVIVAL MEETINGS FAIL?

By REV. C. G. SCANNELL.

Fully eighty per cent of evangelistic meetings are failures before being started. Because this is true, evangelism has, in some quarters fallen into disrepute. A church desires to increase its membership; so a meeting of the Board is called and the Rev. Mr. X is invited to do the preaching. Rev. Mr. X is highly recommended and the pastor and congregation congratulate themselves when the call is accepted. "The last evangelist was no good; only a couple of children came to Christ. But here is a man . . ."

A week later Rev. Mr. X came to the field and commenced services. His theology left nothing to be desired; his sermons were well thought out and delivered; his subjects were well chosen; his illustrations were painted in wonderful word pictures; his calls for decisions were masterpieces of evangelistic appeal; yet at the close of the meeting two weeks later apparently little had been accomplished for the Master. The aged were passing into the Valley of the Shadow, and the young were unsaved. The pastor asked himself these questions: "What was the matter?" His hurt and disappointed soul sent forth the cry: "Why have we failed to have a genuine revival?"

Dear Brother, that I may lay hold of your conscience, may I say that the failure was not on God's part. Neither did the evangelist fall down in his spiritual message. In all love and kindness may I say that the failure Rests Upon You and Your Congregation.

Let me explain: Men can plan and hold meetings, but revivals can come only from God. They must be prayed down. They come only in answer to prayer. Dear pastor, what preparation did you and your people make before you called the evangelist into the field? Did you make any, or did you expect your evangelist to assault single-handed the Storehouse of the Eternal God and wrest therefrom the blessings you desired? He could have done this, but only when your heart and the hearts of your people were humbled, chastened and purged by prayer and made ready to receive it.

Revivals come only in answer to prayer. At least six months to a year of intensive prayer is none too much to precede a meeting. Prayer bands should be organized in each church, pressing the young people and every member into the service. Then this band should be divided into small groups, and cottage prayer meetings should be held in the community to which the friends and neighbors should be invited.

The church should decide just what results it desires to have, and pray for these things. The pastor should teach the prayer bands how to pray and then send them out to their appointed work. Then as the time for the meeting draws near, the pastor

A mystic word,

Jesus is Lord.

A victim, He the victor proved—

That He might thus proclaim Him King
In every land.

And many nations, then unborn,
Have heard the news

Alas! the Jew still hesitates should train his workers in the fundamentals of soul-winning. Then the church should clean house. All differences between members should be made right. All wrongs should be confessed and forgiven. Only when this preparation has been made should an evangelist be called. The pastor should explain to the evangelist just what the church desires to accomplish before starting the meetings.

PALM STREET, GREENSBORO, N. C.

Since taking up the work here at Palm Street Church last June, we have been doing all we could to increase the confidence and to secure the cooperation of the people of the community. We feel that at least something has been accomplished that will in years to come add to the spiritual life of the community we are trying to serve. We are trying to lead this church into its inspirational and spiritual work of winning souls into the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. I feel that the faith we have in Christ Jesus our Lord is now as ever the hope of the church. We have done our best to assure all that Christ has not failed. We may go wrong and fail to be obedient to God, but yet all the time He is endeavoring to lead into green pastures and from victory to victory. We are not using any high pressure methods, but we present Jesus who took upon Himself our sorrows and iniquities that we might be free to do a great work for Him.

We feel that we have one of the greatest opportunities for a real spiritual work to be developed and carried on that we have ever faced. The whole church seems to have taken on new life, and is doing everything possible to encourage and strengthen the spiritual life of the entire community. The board of deacons reported at its last meeting that the work in general seemed to be in the best condition it has been in some time. How our hearts rejoiced at this report. Words fail to express my appreciation for fine cooperation of the members and friends. We feel that none of us has done any too much to uplift, encourage, strengthen and establish the ideals of our Master in the hearts and lives of people.

The Sunday school under the efficient leadership of Mrs. S. C. Brady as superintendent is encouraging, the membership has increased and attendance is good. We are hoping for a much larger school as there are many people in reach of the church that are not in Sunday school anywhere.

The teachers are all working hard with their classes and trying to give them something worthwhile in Christian training, many charitable deeds have been done through these classes for many sick and needy families. All the officers seem to be alert to the needs and more efficient work of the school in general and are cooperating in every way to make it a better Sunday school. The work among the young people with Mrs. Harrison Hussey as leader of the seniors, and Mrs. W. B. Lumley leader of the juniors is doing work worthy of the support of the entire church. Boxes and a quilt by our juniors for our mountain work have been given. Services for sick and shut-ins have been given by the seniors.

The Ladie's Missionary Society has met all requirements so far in the standard of excellence set by the convention, and has contributed to many worthwhile projects during the year. Mrs. Viola Cockman is the president.

The People's Auxiliary has been working on a project to place rest rooms in the church for some time, and have raised more than $400.00 for this purpose, and have just finished a quilt on which each one who contributed to this work has their name. This will be sold to the highest bidder and the proceeds turned into the treasury. Mrs. A. J. Harris is the president of the Auxiliary.

Our mid-week prayer service has increased in attendance and in interest. Also we have a six o'clock prayer service each Sunday morning. We are hoping to get a building program on foot in the near future, a committee has been appointed to work out and present plans from which will be selected one that we think will best suit our needs.

We want anyone who can visit us to feel that a hearty welcome awaits them. We are always glad to have visitors. Pray for us that we may do our best for the upbuilding of the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. May His blessings rest on you all is our prayer.

M. A. POLLARD.

AT ELON.

As election day draws near each fraternity and sorority is fighting throat to throat in order to have officers from its organization. We are expecting quite a bit of excitement on the campus during the next few weeks—maybe a fight or so—who knows?

While the college choir is quite busy with its commencement music, the Senior Class itself is already preparing for their final "go-around." Her majesty, the Queen, the King, and the Court—who were recently chosen by the class—will rule in May. Miss Mildred Craven, Ramseur, N. C., was elected Queen, while Elon's most handsome bachelor, Galloway Walker, Elon College, N. C., was acclaimed King. The attendants of the court are: Misses Juanita Waugh, Burlington, N. C.; Mary Frances Walker, Burlington, N. C.; Ruth Page Clark, Raleigh, N. C.; and Messrs. Henry Satterfield, Prospect Hill, N. C.; Floyd West, Enfield, N. C.; and Walter Fonville, Burlington, N. C.

Miss Melvin James, a Senior on our campus, presented an expression recital Wednesday, March 15, in the Little Chapel. Melvin, who is always running around taking temperatures and giving pills (she is the college nurse), is definitely an asset to our college campus. Miss James is talented not only in expression but also in other fields.

As the series of lyceums on the campus came to a close, we were quite fortunate in having the Chicago Little Philharmonic Orchestra Monday, March 13.

It's twelve midnight (Tuesday, March 14). All is still—except the rumble of radios. In each room boys are gathered on the beds and every available sitting place is taken. "Say, what's going on in there?" an outsider exclaims. "Fellow, it's the Golden Glove Tournament." Yes, it is the Golden Glove Tournament being held in New York City. Our own Joe Golumbek is in that tournament. Joe has won several matches on previous days—but lost in the finals.

SIMON THE CYRENEAN SPEAKS.

He never spoke a word to me,
And yet He called my name;
He never gave a sign to me,
And yet I knew, and came.

At first I said, "I will not bear
His cross upon my back;
He only seeks to place it there
Because my skin is black."

But He was dying for a dream,
And He was very meek,
And in His eyes there shone a gleam
Men journey far to seek.

It was Himself my pity bought;
I did for Christ alone
What all Rome could not have wrought
With bruise of lash or stone.

Countee Cullen.

Elon's tennis team started on their Southern tour Sunday, March 19. They are going to Florida—meeting colleges in South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. Good luck to the boys!

During the past several weeks, the campus has welcomed speakers from India and Germany. Dr. Harry Meyer from Berlin, Germany, spoke on March 8 in chapel. Dr. Meyer is a native of Germany who spent sixteen years in the diplomatic service of his country, and who resigned two years ago because he did not agree with Herr Hitler's policies. He spoke on "National Socialism in Germany." He stated that Hitler's policies were disapproved by millions and millions in Germany; thus Hitler is favored by the minority rather than the majority.

"Where is Dean Oxford?" "Is she hurt badly? Oh, I'm so sorry." Yes, our Dean of women is quite ill; in fact, she is now in a hospital. It happened one afternoon while she was horseback riding. We are all hoping that her recovery will be soon.

Elon is a dull place—no laughter—no yelling. Say, everybody is away for the spring holidays. Here's hoping that they have fun, and here's where I stop!

"WET" SENATOR THROWS "BOMB" IN UNITED STATES SENATE.

The big surprise in the United States Senate on February 16, the anniversary of the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, was not Senator Morris Sheppard's dry speech, which was expected, but a Dry speech from one the Wettest senators in Washington—Senator R. R. Reynolds of North Carolina! We want to call your attention to some of his startling remarks:

"Liquor is God's worst enemy. Liquor is the devil's best friend.

"There is nothing so thoroughly detrimental to the physical being as is liquor itself.

"I have indulged in drink in the past; but I do not drink now. I have learned better. I know that in the end it stupifies and dulls the mind.

"I am not standing here today in an attempt by words to place myself upon a pedestal of ivory, or clothe myself in raiment of white. I am merely here speaking in terms of questions, asking myself and my fellow citizens and colleagues what is Best for the boys and girls, the sons and daughters, the children of America's fathers and mothers. Thank God I am not a hypocrite!

"I say as a warning to the liquor interests of this country that if they do not watch their step they are going to have upon their hands here the hardest fight they have ever had . . . Over the radio and in every magazine and newspaper they are advertising their liquor—"God's Worst Enemy and the Devil's Best Friend—to the children of America."

"We Democrats have pledged temperance to the American people, and it is up to us to warn the liquor men and let them know the eyes of the American fathers and the American mothers are focused on them."—The National Voice.

TO BRING AN EASTER SMILE.

In northern Europe many peasants still greet one another with the cry, "Christ is risen." The answer comes, "He is risen, indeed." Then colored Easter eggs are exchanged. Sometimes jokes are told to induce an "Easter smile."

OUR INSTITUTIONS

The Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The weather cleared up a few days and the ground got dry enough to give us an opportunity to "make garden." For a few days quite an effort was made to plant Irish potatoes and all early vegetables. Then we had heavy rains again. We also sowed twenty or more acres in Lespedezia, and put top dressing on our oat crop. Work never gives out at the Christian Orphanage. If the weather is too bad to work on the outside, we can paint and mend locks and doors or chairs on the inside. If the ground is too wet to work we can cut and split stove wood and do many other things. Always work ahead.

Our pneumonia patient is better except she has now developed pleurisy and will be confined to her bed for several weeks yet at the best.

Measles is raging in the nearby schools, but as yet no cases are at Elon. We are very uneasy for fear we will have that affliction, too. When a child takes measles it makes no difference how careful we are, it seems that all the children that have not had it contract it.

The children are looking forward to Easter. Of course, they expect baked hens and eggs for the occasion. Our friends have been very kind to us in the past few years and have made it possible for the children not to be disappointed. Any country church could easily furnish an Easter dinner for the children and no one would miss it. Suppose fifteen ladies would furnish one hen each and two dozen eggs—the dinner would be assured. The fifteen good women would experience a new joy in their hearts and a hundred children would be made happy. No one would be the poorer, but richer in spirit. I pity a person who does not love a little child and especially an orphan child, a most helpless being.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

It is encouraging that some of our churches continue to send in contributions on conference apportionments for the college. If the churches of our Convention could realize fully how badly the college needs their assistance and how much even small offerings are appreciated, I am sure that those that have not responded would be glad to do so.

If your church or Sunday school has not sent a contribution this year, won't you please see that the same is done within the next few weeks. During the spring and summer months we need outside assistance more than at any other time. We greatly appreciate what has been given and are happy in anticipating other assistance in the future.

FOR THE CHILDREN

AN EASTER OFFERING.

By BLANCHE J. DEARBORN.

The wind sounded cold and cruel as it blew down the narrow streets of the little town of Lonetree, North Dakota. It howled at the windows of the little brown parsonage as if it knew it was already March and its time was limited.

Inside a fire crackled and snapped and the little iron stove sent out shimmering rays of heat. Rita, the minister's only child, sat in her low straight chair and looked frowningly at the display before her. There were a few books, all worn and somewhat soiled. Rita picked them up one by one, and then lay each down with a little sigh.

"I wish once in a great while," she murmured to herself, "someone would put in a fresh new book; then after I had read it I would have something nice to give away."

Then she picked up a puzzle only to lay it down regretfully. "I can't give that," she said; "I remember how dreadfully I felt after I had worked and worked most two hours, and then found two middle pieces missing. It left such a big hole you couldn't tell whether the little girl was eating strawberries and cream or taking a dose of castor oil," and she gave a crooked little smile at the remembrance. She glanced at the game of jackstraws, but shook her head. "More than half gone," she said.

She picked up the game of "Past and Living Presidents." "You are all nice and fresh," she said. "I wonder if you wouldn't do." Then she said with a little shake of her head, "No, that's why you are so new looking. No one ever played with you because you are no fun."

There was but one thing left now—a bright blue pencil which a visiting minister had given her—brand new. Rita caressed it lovingly. "You are the only really new thing I ever had," she said, "but I guess you'll have to go, for father says an Easter offering calls for the best one has." Lonetree

Church itself was a mission church, but it always sent out a goodwill offering to the Grenfell Mission on Easter. Rita ran to her father's study and tenderly dropped the pencil into the Grenfell box.

At that moment in an Eastern city, Mrs. Van Der Heyden was planning to attend her afternoon bridge. "Toinette," she said to her daughter's maid, our church is packing a mission box to send for an Easter

WHEN WHITE BUDS OPEN.

My Lady Spring is here again!
I heard the herald birds proclaim.
The oaks flung out their earliest leaves,
And all the tall elms did the same.
With emerald fire and cups of gold,
The meadow is a glorious thing,
And we forget the earth is old,
When first the darling feet of Spring
Come dancing over the glad hills
With snow drops and with daffodils;
With buds and blossoms in her train—
My Lady Spring is here again!

The sweetest time of all the year!
April shower and April sun,
Oh, the fragrance of orchard ways
When the white buds open, one by one!
Winter is over, Winter is past,
And all the snow to be seen is now
The white foam flecking the ragged thorn—
The clustered bloom on the orchard bough!

offering. Pick out some of Gertrude's toys that she no longer plays with now and take them down."

"What are you doing, 'Toinette?'" asked Gertrude, who had wandered into the room.

"Oh, picking up some things you won't want any more to send to a church out west."

"My Sunday school teacher told us about a girl out there just my age," Gertrude said thoughtfully. "She wouldn't like those old things. Give her something nice."

Toinette told her impatiently, "She isn't used to nice things. She will like these all right." She hurried away. Gertrude looked thoughtful a few moments. Suddenly she jumped up and rushed over to see Barbara, one of her friends.

It was the Saturday before Easter; a big barrel had just arrived at the parsonage at Lonetree. Rita was excited while her father opened the barrel. "Don't expect too much," said her father tiredly. "But father," Rita exclaimed, "you said yourself that at Easter everyone must give her best. I gave my new pencil, you know." As her father came to the last article, Rita's mouth quivered. Many of the things were serviceable, but there was not a thing really new. Rita threw herself down on the couch mournfully. "Wait," said her father. "What is this at the bottom? It says 'For a little girl'—" Rita, jumping up from the couch, finished the sentence—just our age. Gertrude and Barbara. Slowly she unrolled the package. The next instant a beautiful doll burst into view. "The tag is still on her," whispered Rita. "She is brand new." There is something else at the bottom of the barrel. As the papers fell away, Rita gave a gasp—a new desk set! There was a soft blue blotter and inside the blue box a new blue pencil and pen set—lovelier than she had ever dreamed of.

"Oh father," cried Rita, her eyes shining like the morning sun. "Gertrude and Barbara really understand Easter. They gave their very best."

THE QUESTION BOX.

WHY DOES EASTER COME ON DIFFERENT DAYS?

You all know that we celebrate the birth of Jesus on December 25; that Christmas always comes on the same day of the same month, year after year. So it is with most of our "holidays." Easter, however, is different. Sometimes it comes in March, sometimes in April. One thing about it is always the same—it always comes on a Sunday. Easter is the first Sunday after the first full moon after the 21st of March—that sounds hard to figure out, doesn't it? If you have a calendar or an almanac which shows when the full moon comes each time, you can see why Easter comes on the ninth day of April this year. There was a full moon on the fifth of March and not another one until the third of April. Therefore, the "First Sunday after the first full moon after March 21" is next Sunday, April 9. Easter can never come before the 22nd of March or after the 25th of April. In 1818 it fell on March 22, and in 1943 it will fall on the 25th of April.

THE GREATEST ADVERSARY.

Few, if any of us, can imagine, much less visualize, the dangers and difficulties under which our missionaries now work, particularly in China, Japan, Korea and other war-torn, or war-threatened areas. In face of these difficulties and dangers of imminent death these missionaries, like the converts to the church in Paul's day, are standing true to their post and to their calling. There are some of us who are thoughtless and ignorant enough to say that there are missionaries who go out for the money, or the adventure, or for the desire to go places and see people. Fact is nothing has proven so conclusively that there are those yet whose lives are so dedicated and consecrated to the service of their Lord that they fear not even unto death, and with Paul are ready to be offered up, when and if it is God's will. Not one of our Congregational and Christian missionaries on the foreign field up to date has requested to be relieved and allowed to return home from the danger zone, their only plea being that they be allowed to stay and if God wills to offer their lives in the name and for the sake of their dear Lord, for Whom they are giving all.

That which discourages these missionaries, as nothing else does, is the indifference of us here in the churches to the cause they have espoused and that to which they have dedicated their lives with unflinching zeal and truly Christian courage.

Rev. C. D. Fulton, D. D., Executive Secretary of Foreign Missions Committee, Nashville, Tenn., has this striking paragraph, worthy of our deepest and most prayerful consideration, in The Missionary Review for April:

"But the greatest 'adversary' to missions, the only one we really need fear, is the hindrance we ourselves can be through thoughtlessness and neglect. Opposition without, our missionaries expect; indifference within the Church all but breaks their hearts. The test of carrying on with inadequate support, unable to touch the needs around them, and wondering whether the Church has forgotten, brings them their sorest trial. They return on furlough and find us living in elegant homes. They see our streets choked with shining cars. They watch the throngs that jam our athletic fields, and reflect that the price of one football ticket would pay the salary of a native evangelist in Africa for two months. They read that a thrill-crazed crowd has paid in one night to see a prizefight more than our whole Church ever gave in a year to foreign missions, and they wonder why they are asked to operate hospitals on $380.51 a year and schools on $31.12 a year! They are not complaining; puzzled, that is all. They wonder if Christ has lost first place in the hearts of American Christians."

The above indicates what is true in our own and other communions as has been often related by our missionaries. They invariably declare that that which is most hurtful to them is the indifference of the church at home, and that which they feel deepest need of is the continued prayers of people in the home churches who really care to share.

A FUTURE EDITOR.

In the home town of St. Paul, Tarsus, this young Turk learns to print on the only printing press in that city. The printed page helps greatly to give the Christian message to the people of modern Turkey. American College, which we support and in which this press is located is a leader in Christian education.

In a dozen other countries the Congregational and Christian Churches are serving people and aiding the nations in developing Christian character.

Our gratitude is expressed to all who had a part in the above offerings, since they indicate a desire to share with others the very best that is given us in this life to share, namely; a knowledge of Him, whom to know aright is life eternal. We trust that as the glad Easter season approaches all our churches and Sunday schools will have a liberal part in this high and holy privilege.

SERVICE ON WHEELS.

In this new Plymouth truck given by American friends, especially the Second Congregational Church of Waterbury, Connecticut, Mr. Raymond A. Dudley takes his workers and movie machine to village gatherings, sick people to the hospitals, and in many ways serves the people of India. Young people in the South remember that Mr. Dudley served in our training conferences in 1937. A fine box of Christmas cards has recently been sent to him by readers of this paper.

Your Easter offering for missions will help Mr. Dudley serve Christ in India.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN MISSION PLANNED FOR 1940.

Preliminary plans for a National Christian Mission to begin October 1, 1940, and continue until April 13, 1941, were recently formulated by a special committee appointed last December by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America at its biennial meeting recently held in Buffalo.

Essentially similar to the National Preaching Mission of 1936, the new mission, according to the committee, will exert a special effort toward reaching the whole community, not only through church gatherings, but in high schools, parent-teachers' associations, women's meetings, luncheon clubs, shops and factories, labor headquarters, chambers of commerce, etc.

The committee also hopes to initiate plans looking to the development of a World Christian Mission by means of invitations extended to the churches of other lands through the Provisional Committee of the World Council of Churches.

Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, former Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., is chairman of the special committee.—Christian Advocate.

EASTER.

We hope that your young people's group is planning to have a program which will make next Sunday seem set apart, and different, something which will make you realize again the true meaning of Easter. It seems that our young people are coming more and more to feel that Easter is not simply a time to go to church in new clothes, or to see other people's new outfits, but to go to worship God with the feeling of triumph that comes from knowing that life wins over death, that love triumphs over hatred, and that a young man suffered for the sins of mankind and rose again that we might have eternal life.

Many of our young people's groups are studying the meaning of the days of Holy Week, are trying to relive those days which preceded the Cross and the Resurrection. This is a splendid way to really capture the meaning of the Easter season. If you did not

Some of our young people's groups are planning to hold sunrise services early next Sunday morning. There is a thrill that comes at an early morning service like that that cannot be found in any other service of the day. Many young people's Sunday school classes or societies are planning to present in dramatic form the spirit of the Easter message—often a play or a pageant can express the true meaning of a great day better than we can give it in a talk or sermon. Young people in most of our churches will feel and reveal the true joy of Easter through the music they will sing on Easter day.

Whatever your group is planning to do, let it be done in the real spirit of the Easter season, with a joy and a deep consecration. We hope you will share with others your method of making Easter a special day, by sending a write-up or program to this paper.

WHY SHOULD A CHURCH MEMBER BELIEVE?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR APRIL 16, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Exodus 20: 13-17;
Matthew 5: 1-12.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Brotherly Love—I John 4: 20, 21.

Tuesday—Prayer to a Common Father—Matt. 6: 9-13.

Wednesday—Power of God's Word—Heb. 4: 12, 13.

Thursday—Mystery of Godliness—I Tim. 3: 16.

Friday—Jesus Christ, the Foundation—Matt. 16: 15-18; I Cor. 3: 11.

Saturday—World Evangelism—Mark 16: 15-20.

This meeting gives a great opportunity to expression of belief of church members. If there is not a logical foundation for our belief we may discover the reason in the discussion.

After the worship program let someone talk on "The Place of Creeds and Confessions of Faith." Following this the pastor or some experienced person should read or state the principles of the Church. The remainder of the time may be used in open discussion of these principles.

Another procedure: Start with these bare statements and add your own convictions or experiences.

We believe in God.—(John 3: 1.)

We believe in Christ.—(Isa. 63: 9.)

We believe in the Holy Spirit.—(John 14: 16, 17.)

We believe in the supremacy of love.—(John 13: 35.)

We believe in the brotherhood of man.—(John 15: 12, 13.)

We believe in the Church.—(Eph. 5: 25-27.)

We believe in the World Mission of Christianity.—Matt. 28: 19, 20.)

We believe in the ultimate victory of Christ.

We believe in eternal life.

Something to Think About—

What are we asked to do when we join the church? What can Christian Endeavor do to help its members have clearer beliefs and firmer convictions? What beliefs seem common to all branches or denominations of the Christian Church? What is the difference between "indoctrinating" others and helping others to believe? Do creeds many times obscure true faith? What do you understand by the phrase, "Out of the heart are the issues of life"?

Suggested Hymns—

"O Worship the King."

"I Would Be True."

"Jesus Calls Us."

PAUL PREACHES THE RISEN CHRIST.

(EASTER LESSON)

GOLDEN TEXT: But now is Christ risen from the dead, the first fruits of them that slept.—I Cor. 15: 20.

LESSON: Acts 13 and I Cor. 15.

The folks in Corinth had gone off on a tangent; they had gotten some foolish notions in their heads since Paul had founded the church there a few years previously, and he had to write a letter to them to straighten them out. Among other things some of them were saying that there was no resurrection of the dead, no continued personal existence. The fifteenth chapter of I Corinthians is Paul's answer to their question, which is undoubtedly one of the most exalted works of literary art ever written. It is a combination of beauty and power. It appeals to the head and to the heart. It throbs with life and pulsates with power. It leaves nothing unsaid, even though it embodies only a little over one page in an average sized book. It comes to a materialistic age as a breath of cool breeze from the great sea of spiritual realities. Any man who reads it in an honest and prayerful spirit will find his fears allayed and his confidence strengthened.

The Central Fact of the Resurrection in Paul's Preaching.

"For I delivered unto first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures." Thus do we learn that the resurrection of Christ was one of the central and major themes of Paul's preaching. And a reading of the story of the beginning of his missionary activity as recorded in today's lesson shows how true this is. Christ died for our sins—that was one of the great foundation stones of Paul's sermons. Christ rose again from the dead—that was the other. A suffering Savior, a Living Christ—these were the great themes of Paul's great preaching. Again and again in Paul's writings and preaching we find this emphasis on Christ's resurrection. That gives some idea of how important he thought it was, how vital it was for practical Christian living.

"If Christ be not risen!"—Paul's mind must have reeled at the thought of such a thing. If Christ be not risen the whole structure of life would come tumbling down upon his head. If Christ be not risen, there certainly would be no resurrection for anybody else; if such a one as Christ had been blotted out there was no grounds for the believing that anybody else would fare any better. If Christ be not risen, then was Paul's preaching in vain, for that had been one of his central themes. If Christ be not risen, then their faith was in vain, for it was through faith in the risen Lord that they had been saved. If Christ be not risen, then Paul and the other apostles were liars, for they had borne unqualified witness to the fact that Christ had risen. If Christ be not risen, then those who had fallen asleep in Christ had perished indeed. If Christ be not risen, then they were still in their sins, for there was no remission of sins in one who was an impostor. For if Christ be not risen, he was an impostor—had he not again and again predicted that he would rise again? If Christ be not risen, then they were of all men most miserable, for what kind of world or universe was it indeed that had no more regard for personality than to allow it to be snuffed out and ended by the thing called death? If Christ be not risen, God himself stood convicted and condemned before the bar of humanity. What kind of God indeed that would allow the grave to keep a spirit so rare as Christ's? Paul was willing to stake everything at this point. Indeed everything was at stake at this point. Let no one fool himself as to the central place of the resurrection in Christianity.

The Fact of the Resurrection.

"But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." This is the unqualified declaration of Christianity for all time. Paul marshals some evidence that is too convincing to be put aside. God had showed by too many infallible proofs that Christ was alive from the dead. Too many people had seen him alive. He had appeared on too many occasions for it to be a mere accident. Indeed there were men still alive when he wrote this letter who

At Easter Time

How joyful the music of Easter is falling,
What promise and hope lie in every glad strain,
In garden and woodland the songbirds are calling,
Spring with its sunshine has come back again.
All of the gloom and the darkness of winter,
All of its doubting, its chill, and its fear,
Has vanished, and now over meadow and mountain
Vistas of wonder and beauty appear.

Great trees are bursting with buds and with blossoms,
Exquisite blueness is tinting the skies,
All of the joy and the wonder of living
Brushes the wings of each creature that flies.
All things unite to make Easter more lovely,
To tell us that winter and sadness are fled;
All things unite to pay homage and glory
To One who in triumph has come from the dead.

How joyful the music of Easter is falling,
All things of nature in unison sing,
Death has been conquered, the long night is ended,
Over the meadows the glad tidings ring.
And just as the darkness of winter is conquered,
So, too, the One that death held in thrall,
Has broken the fetters and come forth in glory,
Bringing new promise and hope to us all.

MONDAY.

DESPITE EVERYTHING.

"This one thing I do . . ."—
Phil. 3:13.

We were told of a fishing party. A young lady was doing her bit. She became sea-sick, but she kept on fishing. Finally she hooked one, and in her excitement she arose from her chair which another of the party removed in order to give her room. Immediately without looking around, she sat down again but landed on the deck. She never stopped reeling in.

This is a little sermon on stick-to-it-iveness, despite misadventures. This was Paul's way.

Prayer—Our Father, make us more like the Master, who steadfastly set His face to his purpose in life and never wavered. Amen.

TUESDAY.

CUSTOM RIDDEN CHRISTIANS.

"Walk in newness of life."—Rom. 4:4.

Customs change rapidly and many of us oldersters find ourselves traveling the old paths of years ago, sometimes to our misunderstanding and discomfiture; for conditions have changed and to follow the old path is out of step with present day life.

Life challenges us to be alert to the living present; to be alive in our own time and meet the challenges of today.

Prayer—Thy blessings, O Lord, are as fresh as the daily mercies of heaven. Save us from staleness of habit and of soul. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HIS ONE DESIRE.

"One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire into His temple."—Ps. 27:4.

Little Jackie is a passenger with us. Just now he said, "When is Sunday?" I counted the days off and told him, and asked him "Why?" He replied by saying that he wanted to go to Sunday school again and listen to the story of Jesus.

That is an inspiration to the fellow trying to have a Sunday school, and it is also an inspiration to simple faith and love for Jesus. "And a little child shall lead them."

Prayer—Dear Father, we seek to walk the way of Jesus and know Him. Amen.

THURSDAY.

ROTTEN AT HEART.

"Every man's work shall be made manifest."—I Cor. 3:13.

He was a woodsman cutting timber for building purposes. Occasionally a tree would be left to lie where it had fallen, there to rot or to be converted to firewood. What was the matter? It was rotten at the heart and would not pass muster.

There are lives that fail to fulfill their possibilities because they have cherished sin in their hearts and it has undermined their stability; outwardly fair, but inwardly rotten. They must ultimately crash because of moral and spiritual decay.

Prayer—O God, forbid that we should yield to sin in our hearts. We would rise above it. O God, help us. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A NEW FRIEND.

"Faith without works is dead."—
James 2:20.

His heart was of gold all right, but he was a strange creature, and few people paid him little attention. He was grouchy and was said to never smile. He lived to himself and sowered upon everybody.

Says the picture, one day a relative sought him out and left a homeless girl with him. This girl brought sunshine in his life and there was nothing he would not do for her. She led him to the church and there he found the people were good. He entered into service and became radiant. In return the kindness of the community overwhelmed him and he was a new man.

Prayer—O Lord, make us kind and help us to find the good that is in others. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOODNESS ON THE ROAD.

"Let us do good unto all men."—
Gal. 6:10.

Driving an automobile over the highways gives a fine opportunity to observe human nature. We have found that a Christian makes a good driver.

There is a lot of talk about safety. There are a lot of safety measures, all of which have done some good. Why doesn't some one start a movement for Christian driving? The whole element of safety lies in unselfish consideration. It is thinking of the welfare of the other fellow. If our driving is controlled by own selfish rights, we cannot help expressing it in relation to others. That spells trouble. If it is selfless like Jesus was, we cannot help displaying that. Let us be Christians behind the wheel.

Prayer—Dear Lord, we would be good enough to embody the whole element of safety in our own conduct always. Be thou the Sovereign of our lives. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE DAY OF GOD'S WORD.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet."—Ps. 119:105.

"Thy word have I hid in my heart."—Ps. 119:11.

TRIUMPH OF EASTER.

Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified; he is risen.
—(Mark 16: 16.)

*It is Jesus you are looking for —the Nazarene, the crucified one.
He has come back to life.*—(Weymouth.)

Easter emphasizes a great fact, the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. In accepting an historical fact, we exercise both faith and reason. We have faith in the historian who has recorded the fact. God wants us to use our reason as well as our faith. If we can properly settle for ourselves the fact of Easter, all other matters pertaining to Christ will take care of themselves, because the Resurrection of Jesus is in many respects the most important fact in history.

It is the foundation stone of Christian evidence and the waterloo of infidelity. If it can be proven that Jesus rose from the dead, then Christianity rests upon an impregnable foundation. If the Resurrection stands, every essential doctrine of Christianity stands. Let us apply our powers of reason and faith to the life, death, and the Resurrection of Jesus Christ for our own satisfaction, for the sake of others, and the salvation of our own souls.

That Jesus really lived and is not a mythological personality no longer needs to be proven to the intelligent mind. Flavius Josephus, the celebrated Jewish historian, says: "Now there was about this time Jesus, a wise man, if it be lawful to call him a man, for he was a doer of wonderful works, a teacher of such men as receive the truth with pleasure. He drew over to him both many of the Jews and many of the Gentiles. He was Christ. And when Pilate, at the suggestion of the principal man amongst us, had condemned him to the cross (April 3, 33 A. D.), those that loved him did not forsake him; for he appeared to them alive again the third day (April 5, 33 A. D.), as the divine prophets foretold these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him." Here we have the testimony of a recognized historian of Christ's own day. The life of Jesus has compelled the attention of the greatest minds of all history.

Now we are told that this Jesus, the Christ, after teaching and preaching in Palestine for three years, was apprehended by a motley mob, tried before the Jewish Sanhedrin, then by the Roman governor, Pontius Pilate, and condemned to die on the cross. He was nailed to the cross. He hung his head and gave up the ghost.

Then Joseph of Arimathea, being a disciple of Jesus, secretly for fear of the Jews, besought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus. Pilate granted his request. Nicodemus, a man of high repute among his people, came and brought a mixture of myrrh, and aloes about 100 pounds weight. They wound the body in linen clothes with spices according to the custom of the Jews. A guard of four Roman soldiers was placed before the tomb. We have every reason to believe that Christ was dead.

On the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene and Mary, the mother of Jesus, came to the tomb very early in the morning and saw that the great stone was rolled away. Then entered the tomb and found the linen. Just as angels proclaimed his birth, so angels proclaimed his Resurrection. "He is not here, He is risen." After that Christ appeared to Mary, who called him Rabboni, Master, but did not dare touch him. Five hundred other witnesses testified in one way. Here we have the testimony of reliable witnesses—eye witnesses—testifying to the fact which has ever since been confessed; "The third day he arose again from the dead."

We are told that in collecting evidence much weight is placed on the character of the witnesses. Let us remember this, that the character of the Apostles has never been attacked by friend or foe. Hence we are dealing with reliable witnesses whose testimony we can fully accept. Something tremendous happened and was accepted as fact.

We further note that before the crucifixion these witnesses were weak, fear-filled men. They followed afar off. Only one was near; that is John. But after the Resurrection when Christ demonstrated his amazing claims, a moral transformation took place in these men who knew him best. It is unreasonable to believe that men like Peter, Thomas, Matthew, and all the rest would allow themselves to be tortured, persecuted, burned at the stake, crucified, thrown to the wild beasts in the arena for something which they half believed.

St. Paul would never have suffered all that he did for something that was not based upon the highest and best evidence. The only way to account for the moral transformation of the disciples of our Lord is to believe that Jesus truly arose from the dead. Let friend and foe weigh the evidence. "Jesus Christ is risen today" to the glory of God and for the comfort of all who believe.

him a lantern and set it between his feet, and wrapped a blanket around his legs. He was then comfortable.

He comments the lantern is made not only to guide us through darkness but it may be used to warm us. So is the word of God.

Every day may be a day of God's Word, as we put it into practice in our lives. But today, the Lord's day, is the day of His Word at home and at the church. Have you failed?

Prayer—O Lord, we praise Thee for Thy Word. May it ever be our light and our comfort through life. Amen.

LOVE IS SUPREME.

Love not only fulfils the law by doing no harm; it fulfils it by doing every possible good. Love is that springtime of the soul that must give expression to itself in deeds of service. God cannot hide springtime in that bit of earth in the back yard and expect it to keep it a secret. It will tell the world. It will tell through the green of the grass and through the color and perfume of the flowers. And this springtime of love, once it gets into a human heart, must also express itself. Love is restless and inventive. It will do the big thing if possible. If not, it will do the small thing grandly. It will beautify a palace if it has an opportunity. If not, it will transform a cottage. Love thus fulfils the law, not only by working no ill, but by doing every possible good.

Love is supreme because it is the mightiest force on earth. It sends men on the most heroic and daring missions. It keeps them at their post when nothing else will. It even has power to change indifference into friendship. It has power to change hate into love. And that, I take it, is the most amazing power in all the world.—Selected from "Ten Rules for Living" by Clovis G. Chappell, in The Christian Advocate.

A third feature of each morning program will be a series of talks by Dr. William Adams Brown of New York City on "What the Proposed World Council of Churches May Mean for the Life of the American Church," including its relation to preaching, world-wide evangelism, Christian teaching and worship, and the Church as an organized body.

things they are doing. Miss Ruth Strickler of Mt. Olivet (R) read a paper on "Youth's Responsibility to the Church," and Miss Louise Bowman of Concord presented a paper on "The Responsibility of our Church to Youth." Mr. Loy H. Hook, of Winchester, gave an interesting talk on "Our Financial Obligations to our Church." The theme of the conference was "The Church for our Generation" and Rev. F. C. Lester, the Promotional Secretary of the Southern Convention, spoke on this theme.

had seen the living Christ. And Paul himself had seen him. In that memorable experience on the road to Damascus Paul had been convinced that the living Christ had appeared to him. And he had had fellowship with that same Christ many times since that. Indeed Christ was then a living presence in his life.

One need not depend only upon Paul for evidence. Let him read the closing chapters of the gospels and see how every one of the evangelists bears sober witness to this historical fact. Let him read the sermons and discourses in the Acts of the Apostles and see how large this fact loomed in their preaching and their teaching. The indisputable, inconvertible fact is that Jesus Christ rose from the dead, that He is alive today and forevermore.

The Mystery of the Resurrection.

Paul admits that the how of the resurrection is mysterious. But he draws an analogy from nature. A man plants seed, but those seed are not quickened except they die. A man sows bare grain, it may chance be of wheat, or some other grain, but God gives it a body as it hath pleased him. In like manner the resurrection body comes in newness of life from the physical body. Sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; sown in weakness, it is raised in power; sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. And as we bear the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. We are, of course, in the presence of mystery. But let no man's inability to understand the "how of resurrection" keep him from claiming for himself the benefits of "the fact of the resurrection."

The "Wherefore" of the Resurrection.

"The resurrection is true, is a fact," says Paul. Christ is alive forevermore. Because he lives we also shall live. Personality persists. And all of this has tremendous significance and implications for us here and now. We are to live as if we believed it. We are to work as if it were so. We are to be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. For our labor in the Lord is not in vain. Every good deed, every element of character is caught up and conserved in the on-going processes of the universe. The meaning of life at its best can be seen only in the light of immortality.

In Memoriam

HUNT.

In loving memory of Mrs. Winnie Vickers Hunt, wife of our beloved, Rev. G. D. Hunt, whom God removed from our midst on February 26, 1939, we the members of the First Christian Church, Roanoke, Ala., desire to express our devotion to her memory as a member of our church. While knowing that the place she filled in her church, home, and community will always be vacant, we believe that our loss is her divine gain and that she has gone to that mansion which God has prepared for His own. We shall miss her kindly smile, her quiet manner, and her steady devotion to her church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will.
2. That we hold in remembrance her faithfulness to all.
3. That we extend anew our sympathy to the family.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and that we keep one to be made a part of our church record.

BALLARD.

On February 19, 1939, God, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to remove from our midst one of our faithful members, Mrs. E. W. Ballard. She was ill for several months, but bore her affliction patiently and without complaint.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Mt. Carmel Christian Church, desire to express our appreciation of her worthy life.

Therefore, be it resolved, that:

1. We bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, who "doeth all things well."
2. In her going our church and society have lost a consecrated member, and her home a loving mother.

3. We extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy and may their memory of their sainted dead be a blessed inspiration.

4. These resolutions be made a part of our minutes and a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

ELOISE LITTLE FAISON.

On February 26, 1939, the Sarah Johnson Class of the Waverly Christian Church lost its first member by death, in the person of Eloise Little Faison. We, as a class desire to record our sorrow in our loss.

Therefore, be it resolved:

That the Waverly Christian Church, of which she was a member and the Sarah Johnson Class, have lost one of its faithful and devoted members.

That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy and prayers.

INGRAM.

Mrs. R. L. Ingram, a charter member of Ingram Christian Church, was called home in the early morning of March 15, 1939. She was the daughter of William J. and Sallie Farmer Dunn, and is survived by her husband, one son, Billy L., a daughter, Mrs. E. M. Walton of Washington, D. C.; two brothers and one sister, E. D. Dunn, Vernon Hill; W. C. Dunn, Rocky Mount, N. C.; and Mrs. Ida Adams of South Boston. Funeral services were conducted at her church, and interment was in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Ingram was always at her post of duty, and her youthful mind and encouraging words were a help to the many people who loved her.

MORE CONFSSIONAL PASTORS SUSPENDED BY REICH.

Recent news from Berlin says that Rev. Fritz Mueller, who has been the leader in Dr. Martin Niemöller's church at Dahlem, Berlin, since the imprisonment of the latter, was last week permanently suspended from his office by the consistory of the Evangelical Church. With him were suspended two other pastors of the Confessional Church. The trial of the three pastors was conducted with utmost secrecy. Action was taken against them, it is believed, because they wrote and distributed a pastoral letter on the eve of the Munich Conference, urging the members to beseech Providence not to punish Germany with war "because of the sins of our people."

Pessimism is expressed in Dr. Niemöller's church over rumor of his eventual release from concentration camp, since Hitler's recent statement to the Reichstag that the Nazis would destroy those who oppose the Third Reich. At a service of intercession in Dahlem it was said that Dr. Niemöller has been much braver than others, but his courage is now broken by loneliness. The rigors of his imprisonment have been increased, and his health is failing. He is forbidden to write or receive letters and to receive visitors. Even his wife is debarred. The Manchester Guardian, speaking editorially, says: "It is important that we do not, in the press of interests today, forget Dr. Niemöller and the other imprisoned pastors any more than Herr Schuschnigg and the multitudes of men who suffer in camps because they believed in something strongly and cannot deny it at the will of politicians. Their only effect on the world now lies in our minds, for they can no longer preach their different gospels in words, but only in their suffering."—Christian Advocate.

Stopping the Leak in the Dike

Do you remember the tale of the brave Dutch boy who held his hand in the breaking dike until help could reach him?

Today not only in Europe and Asia but also in America, the waters of the world's confusion are washing high against the dikes Christians have been building for nearly two thousand years. At the crossroads of the world today our churches have placed minute men at danger spots. Missionaries are men and women of high strength and courage and they are there, just as the Dutch lad was, trying to stop the leak, waiting for help.

You can help. Give part of your daily earnings. Your church will send it to the needy places where it will be transformed into life. Missionary work is being conducted by Congregational and Christian Churches in over a thousand centers of our American life, in densely populated cities, in wide open spaces, among the minorities in our midst and among our youth. This work is conducted by the Board of Home Missions and the Southern Convention.

In foreign lands we are at work under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. 443 of our missionaries work in close cooperation with nearly 6,000 national Christian leaders in 2,813 places of service at the crossroads and colleges, serving suffering humanity in 64 hospitals and dispensaries, and caring for the needy in 40 social service centers.

Forty-four million people, four for each member of our churches, await our message of new life as it is found in the resurrected Christ.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Suffolk Christian Church received twenty-one new members on Palm Sunday, and fifteen were baptized.

Five new members were received at Ingram (Va.) Christian Church on Easter morning. Rev. B. J. Earp, pastor, expects to receive others soon.

A pageant was presented at Happy Home Christian Church, near Reidsville, N. C., on Easter Sunday night. Rev. W. J. Andes, a student at Duke University, is pastor of this good church.

The young people of Shallow Well Christian Church presented an Easter pageant last Sunday night. The morning service was led by the acting pastor, Mr. Cecil Thomas, who is a member of that church.

Rev. and Mrs. G. C. Crutchfield announce the marriage of their daughter, Regina Elizabeth, to Mr. Daniel E. Leath on Saturday, April 8, 1939, at Burlington, N. C. THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends good wishes.

Wakefield (Va.) Christian Church is just completing three Sunday school rooms. The pastor, Rev. B. H. Watkins, is happy over this event and because church attendance in Wakefield has increased some 25 per cent within the last year.

About one hundred people greeted the pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, at a sunrise service in Hank's Chapel Christian Church last Sunday. The Promotional Secretary spoke. Two of the young people had a share in the program, and the choir brought good music.

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Winter Park, Fla., is in the process of raising thirty thousand dollars with which to build a new and much needed educational plant. Pastor Victor B. Chicoine and his good people will appreciate your prayers, your good wishes, and—if you just want to do it—your contribution.

Our church at Sanford, N. C., is doing well under the leadership of Mr. Cecil Thomas, a ministerial student at Elon College. About twenty-five young people were in the choir that brought excellent music for the Easter morning service which was led by the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

One new member was received into the church, and the communion service was administered.

Dr. Vaughan Dabney, Dean of Andover-Newton Seminary, will preach at Elon College on next Sunday morning and will speak to the North Carolina ministers at the college Monday morning at ten o'clock. It is hoped that all ministers will be present. Visitors at the college church service will be welcome, and will be edified by hearing this great preacher.

The Damascus Church at Sunbury, N. C., held a sunrise service Easter morning with the pastor, Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, assisted by the Methodist and Baptist pastors. The Fidelis Class of the church furnished beautiful bulletins for Palm Sunday and Easter. In the Palm Sunday bulletin appears a poem by Dr. Raymond. The church building has recently been painted.

Four new members have been received at Rocky Ford and six at Elk Spur since last conference. This is fine for our mountain churches. Rev. B. J. Earp, pastor, hopes to increase the membership steadily. Plans are under way for Vacation Bible Schools and revivals in each of the three churches in the mountains of Carroll County, Va., next August. Services are held the first and third Sundays at Elk Spur, 10:00 A. M.; Ivy Hill, 11:30 A. M.; and Rocky Ford, 2:30 P. M. Visitors are always welcomed gladly in these mission churches.

ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY AT CHRISTIAN TEMPLE.

Sunday, March 19, was a great day at the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va. It was the occasion of the Fifteenth Anniversary of the opening of the Temple and was fittingly celebrated at the morning service of worship. Dr. L. E. Smith, under whose leadership the Temple was built, and who developed the church into such an influential and fruitful factor in the work of the Kingdom, was the guest preacher and delivered an inspiring sermon on the theme, "The House of God." The Junior Choir and the Temple Choir rendered special music in keeping with the occasion. The impressive sanctuary was crowded with a large congregation. An offering of nearly four hundred dollars was received to be devoted to the parsonage debt fund. At the close of the service thirty-two persons presented themselves for membership in the church. At the evening service five more persons united with the church. The majority of these new members were adults, and quite a few of them came on profession of faith. For all these things we thank God and take courage. Evidence indicates that there will be quite a number of new members to come into the church on Easter Sunday. Open doors to service beckon to the church from every side. May this great church live up to the high traditions of the past.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

News from the churches that has arrived in time for this issue indicates that a new sense of earnestness is growing in our churches. Both city and rural churches have joined in the Pre-Easter and Holy Week services. Pastors who had never been in such services have read the Bible and other books about Easter, and have brought new and fresh messages to their churches.

The old custom of receiving members only in the summer when a revival is held is breaking, and new members are presented to the Christ at the time of His birth, and His resurrection. Quite a large number of churches have received members at Easter. What the total may be is not so important as is the fact that pastors and people are becoming aware that the Resurrection Day is a fine time to receive members who have just received a new birth.

All churches have been furnished envelopes by the Mission Secretary so all the members could make a personal offering for the work of the Church around the world. Many pastors have sent envelopes with an urgent letter to the members of the church. The amount of the offering will in some sense limit the ability of the Church to carry on its world-wide program, but it is also important that the members of the church have a share in this work for the sake of their own souls. Reports prior to Easter are that most of our churches will share in this important phase of the Church work.

Within a month your editor has talked with forty-six of our ministers about their churches. In every case he has found optimism, and a fine spirit of cooperation. With this spirit on the part of the leaders, it is certain that the work of the Congregational and Christian Churches in this area will grow.

ATTEND THE MEETINGS.

With but very few exceptions, the ministers of our churches in North Carolina attended the missionary rallies recently held by the women. Some of them attended more than one rally. The women were always proud to present the ministers, and one fears that those women present whose ministers were absent were not too well pleased.

There are very good reasons for attending meetings. There is usually a good reason for holding the meeting—there is some object in view. The purpose can be realized only if people are present. The program is likely to be helpful in one or more ways. The fellowship is fine. It is good to know what others are doing and thinking. A view from the distance makes our own work seem clearer in outline. Often there are excellent suggestions for improvement in methods of living and work.

Only those should miss Church meetings to which they are supposed to go who are content with themselves and the work they are doing, who have no desire to improve, who care not for the friendship of others, and who are unwilling to share their knowledge and friendship.

It pays big dividends to be present when the sons and daughters of God get together. Those who expect to be leaders in the Church of today must get together for counsel and to renew their courage and strength. Attend the meetings of your church, conference, convention, denomination, and such interdenominational meetings as time and money will permit. It will make you a better Christian and a better servant of Him who condemned the faithless servant for hiding his talent.

IN THE TWILIGHT OF EASTER.

The glory of Easter shines a bit brighter than the light of the ordinary day, and the even-tide lingers longer. The disciples who saw the Master on the first day of the week were together again eight days later, and even doubting Thomas, the absent member of the church on the Sunday before, was present. Jesus met with them. Days later they saw Him among the familiar places, and always they knew Him, and He blessed them. Among the lingering shadows of Easter there grew up in the hearts of His beloved a determination to live for Him even if it cost life itself.

When the organ plays, the minister preaches, and the multitude join in songs of triumph amid the flowers that fill the sanctuary on Easter Day it is easy to feel the surge of emotion that drives on in the direction of the heavenly. But when the music is gone, the sermon forgotten, and the crowd and the flowers fled, the story is different. There may linger a memory, but the emotional surge has subsided and a quiet calm comes in its place.

Sometimes doubts arise at such a time. The child who has joined the church may wonder just what it all means. The youth will face the same old temptations. And the adult may easily slide back into old habits and be no better than before. Like Simon Peter, they go afishing again.

These are dangerous days. In the twilight-time one may miss the way, stumble, fall. In such a time there is need of help. It is well to keep in the company of those who care. Jesus met with the disciples on the Sea of Galilee, and He will meet with any others who toil faithfully through the night and look for Him in the morning. Older Christians should be careful to give the needed help to those who are just starting on the Way.

OUR GREATEST NEED.

The greatest need of our Church (and of the world) is for men and women who think clearly, care much, and act courageously. Less than this will wreck the Church and the State. With such people progress can be made. Will you be among this growing group?

Elon College Golden Anniversary

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

MORE PLEDGES AND PAYMENTS.

From the thermometer appearing in THE CHRISTIAN SUN last week, one would judge that the campaign has gone into the reverse. The thermometer was lower last week than at its last appearance. I am happy to say, however, that this was ink and not pledges and payments.

The thermometer this week, I hope, will indicate the real status of the campaign. The facts are that we have in cash and pledges $12,900, which is more than one-fifteenth of the entire amount required. This is encouraging but not as encouraging as it should be. There are literally hundreds of church members, alumni, and friends of the college who have already made up their minds to join the Elon College Golden Anniversary Club, but they just have not sent in their pledges. We are working for three thousand. We want to reach one thousand before Commencement 1939 is over. This would put us one-third of the way.

If you have a pledge card, sign it and send it in. The fee for membership in the Golden Anniversary Club is $50.00—$1.00 a year for each year of the college's existence. If you do not have a pledge card, sit down and write me your pledge. We are trying to make this campaign without so much overhead expense. I know that you are delighted with this effort. It is encouraging to know that every dollar that you give goes for the purpose for which it is given. Please do not make it necessary for someone to come to see you about this pledge, but make up your mind and send it now. It certainly would be encouraging if we could have one hundred pledges in one day. Scarcely a day passes without a pledge. Two came in yesterday, one in the morning mail, and the fine thing is that occasionally one includes a check with the pledge.

By the way, we need about $400.00 more that we may make our March payment to the Virginia Trust Company, thus reducing our debt to $138,000. I know you will let me hear from you through the mail.

OMA U. JOHNSON,
Librarian.

The women of the Elon Community Church are anxious to have a large delegation from each of our churches attending the Southern Convention Woman's Missionary Conference on April 18 and 19. Delegates will be entertained in the homes of the community. It will be a help if those desiring entertainment will notify Mrs. J. L. Foster, Elon College, N. C.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

For five weeks I have been in bed with flu. It was a genuine case, true to type. It is a bad bed-fellow. At first there is a fear of death, and sometimes we wonder in our delirium if it would not be better to die.

Some people speak of pain as "misery." Well, the flu really gives one "misery." Nothing can add to the "misery"—and nothing but an "Elixer of Time" seems to be able to take it away. At any rate, I am able to sit up for brief periods.

It will be a great blessing when Jesus sets up a Kingdom over the whole world, and this earth becomes a "sickless" place of habitation. One craves to live in a "sickless" world. Would that such a time might come in our day! There are so many sick people, and so many diseases. More and more this writer adheres to the conviction that sickness, like sin, is of the devil. This may not be sound theology, but it seems to be more sensible than blaming God for our afflictions.

If we lived in a "sickless" world, what would become of the doctors, nurses, hospitals and drug stores? The doctors could become chemists or preachers, according to their taste. They would have better jobs and more pay. Doctors and nurses are over-worked and poorly paid. For the world would need a new supply of preachers, if the Kingdom of God abolished disease and sickness. Whenever the Kingdom of God reaches that stage on the earth people will go to church on Sunday. Where is a city with enough churches to accommodate the population? The average church is not large enough to furnish seating capacity for its own members. It would require twenty years to build enough churches to make possible for all the people of the earth to hear the gospel. It might not be done in a lifetime, if great churches were erected. There would be room for the doctors and nurses to preach and teach in such a world.

What about the hospitals, drug stores and chemical laboratories? Hospitals could be converted into churches, or schools, to study science and religion in a sickless, warless, sinless world. Drug stores and chemical laboratories could be transformed almost over-night for adjustment to the Kingdom of God in such a world." They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks." More plows would be needed. Think how population would increase! Think of the babies who never reach their first birthday anniversary! Think of the babies who were not born because of sickness or sin in the bodies of people who should be parents!

Then war would end and young men might live. Sin would be driven from this old earth and righteousness would be established. The Hitlers, Mussolinis, and Stalins and Japanese War Lords are all behind the times. They would take us back to the days of the Caesars. There is no place for them or their dreams in the Kingdom of God. Their policies are doomed and their destinies are sealed. Maybe not in our day. But in some day yet to come. And in that day the history of their conquests will not even be read. Their pride will perish.

Now this may be fantastic, for it comes from the mind of one who has not recovered from the flu. Jesus saw such a kingdom coming out of that little group around a cross. On Easter day—Resurrection Day—such a conquest of sin and war and sickness began anew—and it shall—it will—triumph. I. W. JOHNSON.

WHAT MEANETH THIS?

Today centuries ago the believers in Christ were overwhelmed with disappointment, fear, and forebodings. The One whom they had learned to love and delighted to serve had been nailed to the cross and lay in the tomb. For the time being their hopes were in the grave with Him. It seemed that they had lived in vain and that all their expectations had been cut off. The world was cold, unfriendly, and murderous. Clouds of the future hung heavy, and there was no light at all in their darkness. They remembered that He had said that He would be crucified, dead, and buried, but that on the third day He would rise. But how could they believe? Humanly speaking, this seemed impossible. On the third day when He did arise, at first they could not believe. After bodily demonstrations, however, they knew that it was He, that He had come forth from the grave.

Today, materialism, skepticism, doubts, fears within the church are lashing away at the foundations of our religion. The age-long question put on the air first by Job, "If a man die, shall he live again," is today injected into our personal and corporate Christian faith. Totalitarian states multiplying over night and sweeping the world bid fair to threaten life itself. Under the totalitarian state there is no personal liberty, no personal freedom, the state is the soul authority, freedom in religion is prohibited, and Christ is crucified anew. After nearly two thousand years, this determined uprising against freedom and religion demands a serious and fearless appraisal of the principles of life and of living.

What meaneth this tide of tyranny that threatens to sweep the face of the earth today? Could it be the forces of evil that war against the Spirit, or could it be evidences of displeasure of God because of the intentions and practices of man? Whatever may be the occasion of this universal disturbance and threat to human freedom, civil, political, and religious, and to civilization itself, it constitutes a challenge to our courage and faith and demands a personal and universal investigation as to the real causes of such disturbances. The world must not lose sight of the fact that the church is God's mouthpiece to the world. The ministers must be Christlike, faithful and fearless in the proclamation of the truth.

We walk by faith and not by sight. It is still true that "Five of you shall chase a hundred, and a hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight."

Union Christian Church

By MILLARD W. STEVENS, Pastor.

In the year 1815 James Watson, blacksmith, deeded a small tract of land to the Christian denomination for the purpose of erecting a church building for the use of that denomination at Union Ridge, N. C., in north Alamance County. This was the beginning of what is now Union Christian Church. Prior to this date there was a house of worship here used by all denominations, which was known as Union Meeting House. This gave way to Union Chapel Christian Church, which was later re-named Union Christian Church.

Reverends Thomas Reeves, George Walker, Daniel Kerr, Jesse K. Cole, and James Turner seem to have been among the first ministers who served this church. Reverends A. G. Anderson, E. W. Beal, Alfred Isley, W. T. Herndon, C. C. Peel, W. S. Long, D. D., J. W. Holt, W. C. Wicker, D. D., and P. H. Fleming, D. D., served the church as pastors at one time or another in the last fifty or seventy-five years. Most of these enjoyed rather long and successful pastorates.

The physical property of the church at the present time consists of about nine acres of land, a house of worship built of cement blocks, a Sunday school hut built of pine logs, and a brick veneer parsonage. The house of worship was built in 1908-9 under the ministry of Rev. J. W. Holt. The hut was built some four or five years ago under the ministry of Dr. P. H. Fleming. The parsonage was occupied the last of January of this year by the present pastor. Because of the fine cooperation of W. A. Foster, a building contractor of Burlington and a member of Union Church, in the construction work of the parsonage, and Mr. Roy King, head of the King Brick Co., of Graham, in furnishing the brick at cost, and the help of the many men in the community in giving work, we were able to construct an up-to-date parsonage, with modern sewerage and water facilities, at cost of just a little more than $3,200, all of which has been paid except about $1,000, which will be paid this year.

The church is in its one hundred and twenty-fourth year as a Christian Church, and in its second year as a full-time pastorate. It has at present about 340 members. Five members have already been received during this Lenten Season. The average attendance for the Sunday morning worship services for last year was 194.

The church has a woman's missionary society which is very active. The Missionary Society meets once each month for worship, study, and fellowship. There is, also, a Christian Endeavor Society, whose membership is composed of about forty high school boys and girls. This group meets each Sunday night. The young married people of the church have an organization which they call the Hustlers Class. This group meets on the second Monday night of each month for worship service, Bible study, and a social period. This class does charity work in the community and is a vital part of the church program. The Sunday school is not as large as it should be, but is a very efficient organization under the leadership of Mr. J. Horace Rascoe, Superintendent, ably assisted by fine, loyal teachers.

Music is furnished for the Sunday morning worship services by a fine vested choir of sixteen voices. The choir is under the direction of Mrs. L. L. Hooper and Mrs. C. W. Blackwelder.

This fine old country church has made some small contributions to the history of the Southern Convention, as it was at this church that the Convention was organized. THE CHRISTIAN SUN was projected at a special meeting of the Convention, which was held at this church. This church has given two of its sons to the ministry of the Christian Church, namely, Rev. J. L. Foster, Elon College, N. C., and the late Rev. A. G. Anderson.

The cemetery of the church holds the remains of the late Rev. Daniel Kerr, first editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, as well as other outstanding personalities of the early Christian Church in the South.

The past history of Union Christian Church has been a glorious one, but it has not reached the limit of its possibilities as yet. There are still undeveloped resources. There are still people in the community who have not accepted Christ; there are many who have professed belief in Him who have not yet paid their vow to Him. The future looks bright and by the grace of God this church will reach new and greater heights in the years to come.

This church extends a very cordial invitation to any who will to visit with us at any time. You will find a welcome at our Sunday services. If you do not belong to the Congregational-Christian Church you will still feel at home, as we are very proud of the fact that our congregation for each Sunday morning service is composed of not only members of this church, but members of the Methodist, Missionary Baptist, and Old School Baptist Churches. These may be found present most any Sunday morning, but this is as it should be, because it is Union Christian Church.

DANGEROUS CHRISTIANS.

[This article appeared in "The Christian Sun" for March 31, 1927, and is reprinted by request because of its significance today. Editor.]

Apparently some folks in Washington and elsewhere are alarmed at the spread of the spirit of Christian unity and the increasing influence of the gospel of peace.

Representative Free, of California, has introduced a resolution in the House calling for an investigation of the propaganda activities of the Federal Council of the Churches. Accusations are hurled that the organization is radical and subversive. It is charged with being pacifistic. It is portrayed as controlling a system whereby, on pressing a button, it can deluge Congress with resolutions from every State in the Union. It is credited with obtaining the unanimous support of the Senate for the resolution calling for arbitration of our dispute with Mexico.

The Federal Council of Churches should feel complimented by this display of interest in its work. It means that the influence of a united Christianity is beginning to be felt upon the life of the country. For many years the devout have hoped for the day when the divided ranks of Christian faith would close up the gaps and present a solid front on the great issues which have to do with the welfare of mankind and the coming of the kingdom of God. If that day has been brought nearer through the efforts of the Federal Council, then there is occasion for men of faith to rejoice.

The same forces which in the days of imperial Rome cried out against the Christians because they preached a gospel subversive of selfishness and greed and violence will again cry out whenever that preaching begins seriously to threaten the mammon of unrighteousness and the moloch of war. It is but a renewal of the protest of paganism against the message of Bethlehem.

The Federal Council of Churches is an organization to which twenty-nine denominations send delegates. It is an organization designed to represent the community of interest which exists among differing creeds and differing politics; to voice the

THE OLD FASHIONED PIN CUSHION.

By EMILY R. GOLIGHTLY.

"Bess, what a funny old machine." Nell eyed the quaint old sewing machine curiously. It was raining outside, and they had decided to make doll clothes.

"It was grandmother's machine," answered Bess. "And mother lets me sew on it since she got her new electric."

Nell sat down on the old fashioned top which was used as a stool.

"How do you thread it?"

"Like this," Bess said, running the thread through different places.

"Oh, Bess, what a cunning pin cushion." Nell's big eyes opened wide with curiosity. The small, round cushion was tied to the arm of the machine.

"Isn't it cute? Let me take it off."

"No, don't do that. It was my great aunt's who died when she was a little girl, and mother said never to take it off. It might get lost, and she wouldn't have that happen for anything."

Nell looked at the cushion with renewed interest.

"I feel something hard inside," she squeezed the cushion.

"I know it; I wish I knew what it is. Mother says it's nothing, and for me to let the cushion alone."

Bess's gray Persian kitten mewed by the side of her chair. "I can't hold you, Kitty Wits; I want to sew."

Bess took her lady doll from out the shoe box and smoothed her dark, short bob. They spent the afternoon cutting and fitting numerous garments for the obliging lady dolls who seemed to enjoy the creation of their dainty spring outfits as much as the girls liked making them.

"Just a moment, dear," called Bess' mother, "can you come downstairs?"

After Bess had gone, Nell again examined the cushion.

"I'll take it off only to look at it," she excused herself, untying the string. "I can't hurt it." She held the cushion, fat like a little old tea kettle, in her hand. It had scalloped edges, the covers held together with buttonhole stitch.

"It must be awfully old," Nell thought, examining it more closely. "And it's stuffed with wool; how funny."

She laid it aside for a moment, and picked up her lady doll to adjust a pin in the green silk blouse she had just finished. She put the doll on the machine to look into her box of buttons, and in doing so did not notice that she knocked the cushion off the machine. Bess came running back, and the girls took up their sewing again.

"I must have a pin," Bess reached for the cushion. "Why, auntie's pincushion is gone." Her eyes grew frightened, as she looked at Nell questioningly. Nell flushed uncomfortably, dropped her eyes and then looked away.

"Why, where can it be? It was tied on so tight. What will mother think?" Bess said on the verge of tears. They looked the machine over, examining their boxes of doll clothes, then stooped and hunted about the floor again and again, but the cushion was not to be found.

"I'm going home," Nell spoke in a scared voice. "I'm sorry about the cushion." She got up.

"Oh, don't go yet."

"Yes, I have to. Mother will be expecting me."

Nell got her things together, and Bess went downstairs with her, and left her at the front door.

Nell went flying home. Oh, how bad she felt! Why had she ever taken the cushion off, when Bess, her best friend, had asked her not to? And she hadn't even been brave enough to tell her about it. Miserable, she crept into her house and went to her room. Maybe she could do something for Bess. Then the comforting thought came. "Bess might find the cushion." But no, they had looked everywhere for it. She raved over her treasures. The necklace her brother, Ted, had given her on her birthday! Bess had been longing for one like it.

Nell dried her eyes, went to the apple green dressing table, and lifted the necklace from its box. What would Ted think? And she couldn't bear to give it up. But it couldn't be helped; it was her dearest treasure, and she owed it to Bess.

She ran all the way to Bess' home and breathlessly called to Bess coming down the steps.

"Here, Bess, I have something for you." She held out the box. "I lost the cushion and was ashamed to tell you."

Bess bubbled joyously. "But I found it."

"Where?" Nell cried happily.

"That bad Kitty Wits had it way back under the old sofa beneath the dormer window. It was so far back of the machine we didn't think to look there. I found her playing with it. I suppose she thought she had caught a mouse. And Nell, you'd never guess what was in that cushion. Kitty Wits had torn it apart."

"Tell me quick," Nell cried excitedly.

"A tiny gold thimble. Mother says Aunt Bess must have hidden it during the war, when they were expecting the soldiers to raid the house. Here's your box. I wouldn't have taken it any way. And now let me show you the thimble."

Their eyes bright with excitement, the girls rushed into the house to look at the thimble.

"Oh, isn't it darling?" Nell slipped it on her fingers. "I'll never touch anything again that doesn't belong to me."

"Oh, but I would never have found it if it hadn't been for you. And am I glad!" Bess turned a handspring. —The Better Home.

THE QUESTION BOX.

HOW CAN YOU TELL THE AGE OF A TREE.

We are learning that a tree has many things about it that remind us of animals. It breathes, feeds, sleeps, and its sap reminds us of the blood in animals. But animals grow from within. Probably all the trees that you are acquainted with grow by adding circular layers of material to their trunks and main branches. But there is a resting time of some months when most of our trees have no leaves, and each of these layers is quite distinct from the others. You can then tell roughly the age of a tree by the number of rings shown in a cross section of its trunk. Look at the next tree stump you come upon and notice these rings. Since the main branches are often nearly as old as the trunk, the approximate age can be determined by the number of rings shown in a cross section of a main branch. In trees like the pine, the age can also be found by counting the rows of branches along the trunk, for one of these grows out each year.

Next Week: How Long Do Trees Live?

"I am sentencing you to twenty years at hard labor in the penitentiary," said the stern old judge. "Have you any request to make?"

"Yes, your honor, I have," replied the hen-pecked prisoner. "Please call my wife on the telephone and tell her I won't be home for dinner."

"OF HONORABLE WOMEN."

Again and again it is written, either of those who believed the gospel, by Luke in The Acts or by Paul, where churches established, that of those who believed the gospel there were "Honorable women not a few." This indeed is quite significant in face of the fact that the women in Paul's day had to take a back seat and keep quiet and let the men do the speaking and have first place. However, love stirred in the hearts of the women of that day, even as it does at the present time.

Next week, April 18 and 19, there are to come together at Elon College in biennial session honorable women not a few. It takes neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet to say it will be a great Convention for these women of honorable estate do not know how to put on any other than a great and good Convention. Someone has said that nothing is as powerful as an idea come to its time. Well, an idea came to its time when the women of our churches, and of other churches, were moved to organize missionary societies. In passing it may be said that no pastor is as blind and indifferent to the best for his church and its spiritual life as that pastor who is blind and indifferent to the work and the worship of the women in their missionary societies. These pastors remind one of that first pastor in America in whose church the women decided to have a missionary society. In their modest way, as is their custom, they called it the "One Cent Society," and this pastor hearing that his women were to meet in his church for the purpose of helping share the gospel with others, appointed one of the Elders of his church to be present for the meeting in order that when the women were ready to have a prayer they might have a man to lead the prayer, for said he, "If a women ever leads in public prayer, Heaven only knows what the consequences will be." That pastor said more wisely than he knew for things have certainly come to pass in the church and in the name of the Lord since the women began to organize their missionary societies, that they might meet periodically and give expression to the one idea of devotion to their Lord, womanly, motherly devotion, such as man himself cannot quite comprehend.

So the honorable women not a few will meet at Elon next week and they will take counsel together and one of their number will preside, some of their number will lead the prayer and worship service, and others will make reports and offer suggestions. It will be a love feast, a joy for the eye to look upon and for the heart to feel, knowing that these honorable women come together with no thought of earthly gain, prestige or power, but with the sole thought of honoring their Lord and sharing His love and life with others. They are not coming together to preach, but to practice; not to read, but to be read; not to judge, but to be judged showing, as the Apostle James said, "Show me your faith without your works and I will show you my faith by my works." This has always been the way of the women in their missionary societies. They have gone ahead in their monthly, or bi-monthly meetings following their monthly dues, whether a dime or a dollar, with their prayers and their consecration. These honorable women coming together in biennial session next week will prove an inspiration, a blessing and a benefit in ways that they themselves will not know and to hundreds whom they cannot see, nor number.

NOTED SPEAKER AT WOMAN'S CONVENTION.

With an unusual international background based on residence in the Near East and on the continent, as well as extensive world travel, Miss Mary D. Uline of the American Board of Foreign Missions, Boston, Mass., will speak at the meeting of the Woman's Mission Board of the Southern Convention at Elon College, April 18 and 19.

Miss Uline spent five years in Eastern Turkey as a teacher in the girls' school at Erzroom and in Mt. Holyoke Seminary at Bitlis, witnessing in 1915 the deportations of Armenians and living in the midst of the great typhus epidemic which swept over that section in 1914-1915. During four of her five years in the Near East, Turkey was at war with Italy in England and France until 1921, returning then to her former post as Home Secretary of the Woman's Board of Missions where she remained until she joined the American Board in 1927, with which the Women's Boards were then merged.

Miss Uline's world tours have included the Holy Land and Egypt during the Christmas season and India and Japan, where she visited most of the American Board stations. In 1930 she was an unofficial delegate to the Millennial Celebration of the Icelandic Parliament and included Norway and Sweden in her itinerary. In 1935 she spent the summer in Mexico doing special cultural research and visiting the work of the American Board.

Miss Uline was born in Dell Rapids, South Dakota, a daughter of early Monticello, Pleasant Ridge, Reidsville, Salem Chapel, and Winston-Salem. A new society has been organized at Belews Creek. Rev. G. H. Veazey, the pastor, is to be commended.

In the absence of Dr. J. O. Atkinson his address, "The Old and the New," was read by Rev. W. E. Wisseman. Greetings from the rally were extended Dr. Atkinson by the rally secretary.

The superintendent's message, "Awakening to New Opportunities," was most inspirational. The period of devotion was conducted impressively by Mrs. C. L. Moody. The soloist for the occasion was Mrs. Cecil Duncan, rendering the solo, "Are Ye Able?"

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman led the discussion on "Our Standard of Excellence."

Officers elected were: superintendent, Miss Frankye Marshall, Walnut Cove; assistant superintendent, Mrs. D. E. Mitchell, Reidsville; secretary, Miss Vera Geringer, Brown Summit; assistant secretary, Mrs. Fred Rudd, Greensboro.

Following a discussion of the use of the Staley Memorial Fund, it was discovered that the sentiment of the rally is to use the fund to establish a living memorial to further the cause of missions in some foreign field, such as building some type of building (church, school, etc.) in Dr. Staley's name, as the Mission Board deems advisable.

The rally accepted an invitation to meet with the First Church of Greensboro for the next annual meeting.

and Greece (in the Balkan War) and then the World War.

Returning from Turkey, Miss Uline became Field Secretary of the Woman's Board of Missions of the Interior with headquarters in Chicago. In 1918 she went to France under the International Committee of the Y. W. C. A. Until the evacuation of troops in June, 1918, she served under the A. E. F., at a base hospital near Verdun.

Miss Uline remained in France for nearly three years, founding a Foyer for girls (similar to a metropolitan Y. W. C. A.) at Strasbourg, Alsace-Lorraine, France. This Foyer is one of the few institutions started by Americans to meet a post-war need which has continued to this day. In 1939 it will celebrate its 20th anniversary to which Miss Uline has been invited as guest of honor.

In addition to her war and post-war work Miss Uline traveled and studied settlers in that state, and is a graduate of Oberlin College. Before going to Turkey under the American Board she taught in the high schools of South Dakota and Minnesota.

GUILFORD DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLY.

The Guilford District Rally of the North Carolina Woman's Conference met in annual session with the Winston-Salem Church on March 22, with Mrs. Viola Cockman of Greensboro, as district leader.

There was a splendid delegation of approximately seventy, including visitors and ministers. Ministers present were Dr. W. M. Jay of the entertaining church, Revs. J. L. Neese, M. A. Pollard, G. H. Veazey, W. E. Wisseman, and F. C. Lester.

Societies represented were Greensboro First, Palm Street, Hines Chapel, Belews Creek, New Lebanon,

NORFOLK DISTRICT RALLY.

The Nineteenth Annual Session of the Norfolk District of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference met at Rosemont on March 15, 1939, with the superintendent, Mrs. J. A. French, presiding. The theme for the day was "Are Ye Able?"

Mrs. A. B. Jarvis, spiritual life superintendent of the Conference, conducted a very beautiful and inspiring worship service.

The superintendent's message, "Are Ye Able to Follow Me?" brought us a challenge to do great deeds for the Master in this world of troubled affairs.

Dr. Brewer Eddy, Secretary of the American Mission Board, brought us a story, told in his dynamic and forceful manner, of conditions in the religious life of India, Japan, and China. We were indeed fortunate to

NORTH CAROLINA SPRING RALLY.

The young people of Congregational and Christian Churches in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference will meet at Union Ridge Christian Church on Saturday afternoon and evening, April 15, 1939. A program of fun and fellowship has been planned, and during the time given for discussion, groups will think about Youth and Religion, Youth and Others, Youth and Our Community, and Youth and Recreation in the Church. It would be fine to have representatives from every one of the forty-five churches in this Conference present for this rally.

EASTERN VIRGINIA RALLY.

One hundred and five young people of Eastern Virginia met at First Christian Church in Portsmouth, on Saturday, March 25, for their annual Spring Rally. The theme was "Pilgrim Fellowship at Work." Talks were given by the Reverends Joe A. French on Work in the Sunday School; and B. F. Morgan, on Value of Young People's Organizations in the Church.

The Department of Social Action, Mrs. Robert Lee House, superintendent, presented the Rev. Garland E. Hopkins, pastor of Leekies Memorial Methodist Church of Norfolk, at the 7:30 service. He spoke on The Church in the Great American Revolution. At this service the devotionals were conducted by Miss Ann Daughtrey of Suffolk Christian Church.

Six o'clock saw the assemblage of the Fellowship supper, prepared and served by the ladies of the Portsmouth Church. The program was supervised by Christian Endeavorer's Ed Warrington as toastmaster. He in turn introduced Mr. Morgan who outlined these points: that a young people's group in the church (1) tends to train tomorrow's leaders; (2) helps to get things done. "What with the cooperation of young and old, our problems can easily be overcome. . . . Jesus was interested in the young people, even in children during a sermon." Mr. Morgan quoted Jesus' incident with the young man of the Sanhedrin wherein Jesus told the youth to "go, sell, give, and come follow me."

The question of "Missions in the Local Society" arose at a mission discussion period during the afternoon. Dr. William B. O'Neill, new pastor of Holland Christian Church, and his young people thrashed out plausible reasons for missions being included in the young people's program.

The afternoon worship service was conducted by Miss Elsie Darden, superintendent of Devotional Life.

One hour, from five to six, games, songs, fellowship, and fun was led by Dr. H. S. Harcastle of Norfolk's Christian Temple.

The Publications department of the conference instituted a lending library of books belonging to the Board of Christian Education. Anyone interested in securing books listed on the "Publication for Youth" sheet may do so by sending to Elon College, N. C., and the book will be sent with the request that the subscriber send it to someone else who has asked for the book.

DIRECT FROM OUR JAPANESE MISSION WORK.

Miss Lucy M. Eldridge of our Young People's Department, whom we of the South have often met and heard in public address to our profit and who was sent by individual contributions from our young people on a missionary tour of our work in foreign fields, sends the following to Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Being of more than personal interest he gladly passes it on to CHRISTIAN SUN readers:

"Tyiri, Japan, in the Me-Knight's new home near Sendai, seeing pioneer missionary work in a new center, and the results of years of service. Have visited Azabu, Shibuya and Oji churches in Tokyo, heard Matsumo-san preach, visited Utsynomyia, going to Sendai Saturday. Reminded often of your interest in Japan as I see places and people here. The people are most friendly and generous in their welcome. Angie Crew met me and I shall be with her at Kobe next week.

"Lucy."

WHAT SHOULD A CHURCH MEMBER DO?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR APRIL 23, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Romans 12:1-21.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Leave the Past Behind—Phil 3:12-14.

Tuesday—Live in the Spirit—Gal. 5:22-26.

Wednesday—Love His Church—Ps. 122.

Thursday—Labor Whole-Heartedly—Col. 3:23, 24.

Friday—Live Up Against the Devil—I Peter 5:8-11.

Saturday—Look Unto Jesus—Hebrew 12:1, 2.

This is a broad topic. It is the central thought in the minds of many today. In order to better understand what church members should do, we need to determine the purpose of the Church.

Each person may be given a slip of paper and asked to write upon it what he believes to be the three main purposes of the Church. Use a blackboard to note the various suggestions.

Keep the above suggestions as a background for the discussion of the question, "What An Ideal Church Member Does." Divide the question into seven sections: (1) In his or her own church, (2) In his denominational relationships, (3) In his interdenominational relationships, (4) For missions in America and abroad, (7) In his own home with parents or brothers and sisters, or wife, or husband, or children.

Individuals may be given the privilege of looking up the following passages on what a church member does:

1. He dedicates his life to God.—(Matt. 22:35-40.)
2. He gives public testimony that the cause of righteousness claims his devotion.—(Matt. 5:13-16.)
3. He gives the church a large place in his budget of time and money.—(1 Cor. 2:14-17; 12:12-27.)
4. He pledges to grow more Christ-like.—(Phil. 3:12-16.)
5. He seeks earnestly to understand more fully what Jesus actually taught and lived.—(Matt. 5:1-21; John 15:1-20.)
6. He strives to be pure in heart, clean in his thinking, victorious over alluring temptation.—(Phil. 4:8, 9; Eph. 6:10-18.)
7. He gives himself courageously to the building of a Christian world.—(Matt. 7:12; Luke 10:35-37.)
8. He attends church regularly to worship.—(Luke 4:16; 9:18.)

Suggested Hymns—

"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

"Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

"Forward Through the Ages."

PAUL ESTABLISHES CHURCHES.

LESSON III—APRIL 16, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: As a wise master-builder I laid a foundation; and another buildeth thereon.—I Corinthians 3: 10.

LESSON: Acts 14.

Unto the Uttermost Parts.

The gospel had been preached in Jerusalem and Judea and in Samaria. Paul and Barnabas, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, now start out to preach it unto the uttermost parts of the world. Today's lesson finds them in far-off Asia Minor. The gospel is for the whole world. The world has not yet been evangelized. There is a more desperate need for mission work than ever before. The world is the field. Christ is the only answer to the world's need. Christian nations are under divine obligations to share the gospel with non-Christian people's. Because we have so freely received, we must freely give. It is not so much a question as to what will happen to the heathen if we do not take the gospel to them as it is a question of what will happen to us if we do not obey the divine commission. The modern church needs to consider anew its missionary responsibility to our modern world.

Persuasive Preaching.

"Then entered together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake that a great multitude both of Jews and Gentiles (Greeks) believed." Paul must have been a convincing speaker. He had a well-stocked and a well-trained mind; he had a warm heart; he had a moral earnestness and enthusiasm; and most effective of all he had a fresh and continuing experience of Christ. And he sought not to display his powers but to help men to share that experience. He wanted their faith to stand not in the enticing words of man's wisdom, but in the power of God. There is still power in the spoken word. Let no minister of teaching, however humble, become discouraged, even in our modern world where there is so much competition from the world itself. A true and sincere word, spoken in love will not return void. Preaching will always have a place in the church of Christ.

Opposition.

"But the Jews that were disobedient (another translation has it "unbelieving") stirred up the souls of the Gentiles and made them evil affected against the brethren." Truth does not have an easy, smooth path into men's minds and hearts. There are always those who would hinder it and hamper it. The devil hates truth, and he does everything in his power to cripple and kill it. And usually he works through folks whose hearts are hard. They do not believe themselves and they try to keep everybody else from believing.

Moral Courage.

"Long time therefore they tarried there, speaking boldly in the Lord." Later it was recorded of these men that they had "hazarded their lives for the Lord Jesus." They did just that. Indeed in today's lesson we have the account of how Paul was stoned and left for dead, but when he revived he got up and went immediately into the city again. And in spite of the fact that he was driven out of Iconium, he returned there on his way back to Antioch. This was more than mere bravado or physical courage; this was moral heroism, spiritual courage. It takes courage to preach the truth in modern pulpits. It takes courage to witness for Christ in modern life. One of the outstanding traits of the early apostles was their boldness—it was thus that men took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus.

Giving God the Glory.

When Paul left Iconium he went to Lystra, and there performed a miraculous cure on a helpless cripple. Amazed at this manifestation of powers of healing, the people concluded that the gods had come down to them in the likeness of men. Forthwith they made ready to honor them by doing sacrifice to them. But Paul and Barnabas promptly disclaimed any special credit or glory. They as promptly gave God the glory. With true humility and honesty they declared that they were but instruments through which the work had been done. Many of us have a tendency to talk about what we have done. As a matter of fact what we do does not amount to much. But what we allow God to do through us does count. Every honest man knows that he has not anything that he did not receive, that he has not done anything worthwhile that has not been done by the grace of God. The more one magnifies Christ the more he minimizes self. As Christ increases, we must decrease.

Into the Kingdom Through Tribulation.

"Exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that through many tribulations, we must enter into the kingdom of God." Where do we get the idea that being a Christian is a guarantee against hardship and trouble? Certainly not from Paul, for he says that we shall enter the kingdom only through tribulations. Nor from Jesus, for He said that in the world we should have tribulation. At this time of the year (as these notes are being written) churches will be enlisting new members. Many a minister in his desire to have a good report will make it easy for people to join his church. But he cannot make it easy for them to get into the kingdom of God. That can be won only through great tribulation, through discipline of soul, through self-denial, through suffering and sacrifice.

Knowing Whom they Had Believed.

"And when they had appointed elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they had believed." Paul built churches, not congregations. He did not try to win men to himself, but to Christ. He did not want men to believe him, but to believe on the Lord. He wanted them to have an experience so real and so vital that after he had gone, they would know whom they had believed, and so that they would be faithful and fruitful in every good work. For after all it is not so much a question of what we believe, but Whom.

MONDAY.

FINAL TRIUMPHS.

"What shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled?"—Mark 3:4.

Christ is foretelling the destruction of the temple; the persecutions of the gospel; the manner of His own coming to judgment, and is exhorting His apostles to watch and pray. The apostles, purely human, wanted to know something more definite about it. And Jesus answered them plainly.

This chapter makes difficult reading for those who would think that everything is lovely. It does explain that through troubles unimaginable, such as a large part of the world is now experiencing, the kingdom is to come to final triumph. Who knows that all the horrifying things of the world which we now regard so tragic and devilish, is but a process of prophetic fulfillment, and a preparation for His day.

Prayer—O God, save us from small conceptions of Thy will and grant unto us the larger vision of it, and humble us with a sense of Thy Majesty. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WATCH AND PRAY.

"Watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is. . . . Watch . . . lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping. . . . I say unto all watch."—Mark 13:33-37.

We watched for two days for the arrival of a guest who was expected by automobile. We kept busy at our tasks, but we watched, nevertheless.

The counsel of Jesus is: Make your task well done, but watch for His coming. Has he ever come to you yet? Maybe you were not watching. Spiritual vigilance is hard. We all are prone to slump. But he comes—in the whispers of His spirit, in the providences of everyday happenings, in our prayers and in our thinking. In these things our work may be well done, and one day He will call us to His judgment.

Prayer—O heavenly Father, through Jesus our Lord, we would love and live Thy spirit in life, and we would look for Thy call. Help us to do well and be ready. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

AN EVERYDAY TRAGEDY.

"And Judas . . . one of the twelve, went . . . to betray him unto them."—Mark 14:10.

A good man gone wrong. For the sake of money and a very small amount of money at that, blinded by his lack of faith and consequent loss of hope, and allured by material gain, it would seem, this good man fell into the blackest crime ever committed—the murder of the Son of God.

It does not seem possible that such could happen every day, does it? Yet, it does. Falsehood, murder, deception, disloyalties, all for the sake of money, are being committed. And the world grows black because of it. It is astonishing how little it takes to make one turn his back upon love, upon family, upon righteousness. What are we going to do about it when temptations come to us, as they will?

Prayer—O Lord, give us faith and courage to withstand temptations and make Thee Sovereign in our lives. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE GREATEST FACT IN RELIGION.

"And he said unto them, This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many. . . . Take ye, this is my body."—Mark 14:24, 22.

Next Sunday on the high seas between Hawaii and Guam, in the Southern Pacific, it will be Holy Communion Day on board ship. There are approximately sixteen hundred souls on board. We are expecting about two hundred at communion.

A long time ago Jesus established this Feast of Memory that we should keep it until He comes again. This day, on battle fields, in cathedrals, in country churches, on the high seas, all over the world, these same words are being said. It is heaven's feast for the soul of faith. The masses are watering down the conception of the importance of this feast. Nevertheless, it still stands as the Lord's institution of His broken body and shed blood, and it reminds us that no one can accept Jesus in any way save as one accepts Him as the Christ.

Prayer—O Lord, we would share in Thy feast, and we thank Thee for its sustaining grace. Amen.

FRIDAY.

AS MUCH AS THESE.

"Truly this man was the Son of God."—Mark 15:39.

Though they condemned Jesus, crowned Him with thorns and crucified Him between two thieves, He was still acclaimed the "Son of God." Roman secular history acclaimed this as a fact. Eye witnesses wrote books about it and we still have their testimony.

The modern tragedy is that there are so many who deny it, who are trying to acclaim him as a super man and denying that He was the Son of God. The whole Christian world would be in vain and collapse if He were not the Son of God.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe, help Thou our unbelief. Help us to take Jesus as the fixed star of our lives and ever keep our eyes on Him and His glory. Amen.

NORFOLK DISTRICT RALLY.

have such a magnetic personality in our group for the day.

Mrs. J. F. Morgan read a message from Dr. J. O. Atkinson, our beloved Mission Secretary. We could feel his spirit, though he were absent from us.

Mrs. Hendrick Jones gave the Vesper Call, bringing to a close a very worthwhile day, a day filled with mountain top experiences. May we use these experiences to help bring about the fulfilment of the Master's plan for mankind.

HAZEL H. PULLEY,
Secretary.

HALIFAX DISTRICT RALLY.

Although the morning brought unfavorable weather, and no doubt kept some away, we had a splendid day with the Lynchburg Church when the District Rally met there on April 30.

Three churches, Lynchburg, Ingram, and Union (Va.) were represented. Two ministers, Revs. B. J. Earp and J. H. Smith, were present.

Due to a previous engagement, the Promotional Secretary, Rev. F. C. Lester, was unable to be present, and his message was given by Mrs. F. C. Lester. She said that we had just the same number of missionaries on the field now as we had in 1885, although there is a greater need for more workers. She also said that our apportionment for the year means only 35c for each member. Mrs. Lester's address was both engaging and convincing.

Miss Tora Rudd of Burlington, N. C., was the leader for our Standard of Excellence Round Table period, the inspiration note being, "It's not so much what we do, but rather that we try."

Mrs. Earp announced that the Woman's Convention would be held at Elon College on April 18 and 19, and that the Woman's Annual Conference would convene with the Ingram Church in October.

Rev. B. J. Earp conducted the devotionals, reading from Psalm 40 and Philippians 3: 12, 13, 14.

The offering amounted to $6.03.

After a bountiful lunch, the Staley Memorial Fund was discussed.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson's address, "The Old and the New," was given to us by Rev. J. Howard Smith.

An invitation was extended by Liberty (Nathalie) for the next rally. Mrs. B. J. Earp was re-elected president, and Mrs. T. W. Chandler was elected secretary-treasurer.

After the Resolution Committee's report, in which they expressed appreciation for the hospitality of the Lynchburg Church for the contribution of Mrs. Lester and Miss Rudd, for Dr. Atkinson's message, with regret that he could not attend, the meeting adjourned. Those present were grateful for the fine, inspirational day together.

MRS. B. J. EARP, President.
MRS. S. R. GAY, Secretary.

OUR INSTITUTIONS

The Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Easter Sunday was a beautiful, ideal day. The weather was clear, cool, and pleasant. The beautiful sunshine after the rain made everyone happy. The children at the Christian Orphanage had a happy day. The good women of the missionary and ladies' aid societies made and sent in many beautiful dresses for the girls so all could have a new dress for Easter Sunday. The little boys were not left out either because some mothers in the societies thought of the little boys and made some little suits for them. They, too, have little new suits. It is the custom, and has been for a number of years, to buy the Sunday oxfords and slippers for Easter. The buying of oxfords and slippers happens once each year and comes at Easter time. We work it so that the new Easter clothes and Sunday shoes come at the same time so all will feel dressed up once each year. The good women have been extra good to us this season and the dresses have been many and beautiful. We pray God's richest blessing on all of them.

On Sunday afternoon before Easter Mrs. T. H. Hussey of our Palm Street Christian Sunday school with her Sunday school class of more than thirty members visited the Orphanage in a body and each one brought a dress for a little girl and presented it to the superintendent of the Orphanage. It was a unique occasion and all were happy to have a part. We were delighted to show them to the Orphanage plant and all seemed to enjoy the visit. We were delighted to have them. We are always delighted to have visitors at any time. We find that when people visit the Orphanage and see the beautiful plant the church has here and the little children and the opportunity that everyone has to do a good deed, they are more interested than before. We invite Sunday schools to visit the Orphanage and see first hand what they have here.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

We are encouraged to know that some of our Sunday schools and churches have not forgotten the college. A few contributions continue to come in. Has your church or Sunday school made its contribution? Remember that these contributions count on your conference apportionments. In making your payments now you are helping the college greatly and at the same time helping yourself. You will have that much less to raise on your apportionments in the fall. Of course you expect that your church shall raise the entire amount asked for by the conference. Every contribution made counts on the total amount.

Don't forget your fifth Sunday offering April 30.

In Memoriam

WILKINS.

The Ladies Aid Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church (Eastern Virginia) find it their sad duty to record the passing of Mrs. Mary C. Wilkins, their oldest and one of the best beloved members, who departed this life on January 4, 1939. She was a kind, cheerful, and helpful person who devoted her life to bring happiness to her home and community. Known as "Aunt Mary" by many, she spared no effort to make life sweeter for her family and friends.

"Aunt Mary" was one of those who walked the trail of life leaving only lovely memories along the path. The worth of her life as a shining light of Christianity cannot be measured. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn her departure, we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

2. That we extend sympathy to her son and daughters.

3. That we strive to be more loyal and put Christ first in our lives as she did.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our records, one sent to the family, and one to "The Christian Sun."

OVERMAN.

Mrs. Martha Ann Overman departed this life on April 1, 1939, after having been a faithful and true Christian for many years. She was seventy-seven years of age, and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Alice Cook and Mrs. R. L. Jones of Liberty; one son, Ed Overman also of Liberty, and eighteen grandchildren.

Mrs. Overman lived a life of great inspiration to those with whom she came in contact. For many years she was a member of Liberty Christian Church from which place the funeral was conducted on Sunday afternoon, April 2, at 3 o'clock by her pastor, the writer, assisted by Rev. R. W.

Finlator, pastor of the Liberty Baptist Church. Interment followed in the cemetery at Liberty.

The many floral designs and the large attendance at the funeral expressed the high esteem in which Mrs. Overman was held.
HAROLD LOMAN.

WINNER.

Mrs. Berthania Cox Winner, daughter of the late William and Margaret Cox and widow of Frank Winner, died at her home near Driver, Va., March 10, 1939, at the age of 81 years. The funeral services were conducted at Berea (Nausemon) Christian Church by the writer, and the burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk.

Mrs. Winner leaves three children: Maurice, Charlotte, N. C.; Walter, Suffolk, Va.; Mrs. R. B. Odom, Driver, Va.; ten grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren. She was a native of Camden, N. J., but had lived in Virginia for 62 years. For more than a half century she had been a member of Berea church, faithful and active to the last, a teacher in the Sunday school, and identified with the women's work. She was a chosen vessel to bear the message of a Christ-like life—a life of loving kindness to men and of absolute loyalty and faith in God.
N. G. NEWMAN.

MARWITZ.

Charles August Marwitz, a prominent member of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., departed this earthly life on the morning of March 21, 1939, after an illness of several months.

Mr. Marwitz was born in the year 1870 in Chesterfield County, Va., but had resided in Norfolk since youth. He had been a member of First Christian Church for over forty years. For years he was a member of the church choir.

His passing is mourned by his devoted wife, Mrs. Susie Marwitz, three sisters, two brothers, and three children, together with a multitude of friends in Norfolk and the Navy Yard where he was employed as a skilled machinist.

faith of the churches on agreed essentials and fundamental principles.

Of course, the accusation that it is an instrument of propaganda is wholly true. Propaganda is the business of the Christian religion. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel," was the marching order of its Founder. To charge the Federal Council with efficiency in propaganda is to pay it high tribute. The trouble is that some people are necessarily disturbed whenever the gospel is preached with practical application to human problems. If these Christians would confine their exercises to praying, singing, and sermonizing in the abstract, nobody would object. It is when they begin to put in practice what they preach that they become dangerous.—Chicago Evening Post.

asked for the body of Jesus. And Pilate . . . gave the body to Joseph."

All crises suddenly bring into relief hitherto unknown characters. Men who have wavered suddenly confront and make a great decision. The pity in Joseph's case is that he had not come out before. What Jesus might have made of him, had he done so! We often send flowers too late. We cannot estimate what good the world has lost because of this. And we?

Prayer—O Lord, forbid that we shall be slack in our love, and our service for Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

CARRYING SPICES TO A CORPSE.

"He is risen. He is not here."—Mark 16: 6.

These faithful women were carrying spices for a corpse. That they did not find Him overwhelmed them and everybody else. This, despite the fact that Jesus had told them so explicitly. But they came to. They were convinced, and henceforth His believers are apostles into all the world; a kingdom mightier than any empire. It is spread everywhere and is enlarging. This is divine power.

Sunday is His resurrection day. The day for us to show our faith. What do we carry to offer Him there? Fine clothes, social desire, mercenary motives? What do we go to church for? We may be carrying spices to a corpse. Let's worship the living Christ.

Prayer—Our Father search our souls. We would find Christ. We would rise to newness of life. Help us. Amen.

REVELATIONS OF A MICROSCOPE

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

Dr. David Fairchild recently expressed his surprise that so few persons use the microscope. It would reveal the most interesting things that are everywhere around us and under our foot and hidden to the natural eye. A drop of water from a roadside pool under a lense shows an army of living things, swimming, fighting, reproducing their kind, and carrying on a world of their own. The dirt under our foot, the pebble, and the boulder, the plants and even the atmosphere are storehouses of wonders. So faith reveals new worlds and wonders in old worlds that the intellect, unaided, cannot disclose. It gives a new scope and richness to life and all its contacts.

Faith Opens Doors.

Robert Koch was a plodding, restless physician. He had ambitions to be a ship physician. To attract his mind to something else, Mrs. Koch gave him a microscope. The lense brought new worlds to him. In these searches he discovered the bacilli of tuberculosis and later of cholera.

So faith awakens one and reveals worlds before unknown. It assures its possessor that the material world and all living things are made by a God of wisdom and power, and this is a world of order and purpose, and that one's own life and resources must be used to carry out the Divine purpose in creation and history. It makes one's faculties tingle with eagerness to fill one's place and do his part. The elders of a Presbyterian church in Scotland informed the pastor that the only one received into membership during his seven years' pastorate was Robert, and that he was a dull lad, and that they felt that he should resign and a new minister take the position. The pastor walked over to Robert who had come early to the service and said, "Robert, they say that you are the only member received during my seven year's pastorate. Robert, you must be a host." This appeal aroused the lad and Robert Moffit's name and work are well known.

Faith Reveals a Home.

When one of five families are broken up, it is time to discover the causes, or rather the spirit and principles that will insure a good and happy family. Faith breathes a spiritual purpose into the family life. It makes the relationships of the family sacred. It recognizes the rights of every member and enhances the value of personality. Faith cultivates patience and gives forgiveness. Faith changed the persecuting bigot, Saul of Tarsus, to Paul who wrote, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."

A word of grace at the table, a verse or more from the Scriptures, and a prayer, silent or vocal, in the morning enrich the whole day. A small percent of the divorces come from the families of the Church. Faith helps one to bear the irritation of life and keeps alive in one the rich experiences of life.

Microscope and Telescope.

Faith reveals the things near at hand, as does the microscope, and the things far away, as does the telescope, as one world. It makes real to one the first and second Commandments as one motive—love.

Koch's discovery became a factor in the cure of disease. When it was known that tuberculosis and cholera are germ diseases, doctors and scientists could search effectively for remedies. So faith breathes love into the heart which leads men and women to dedicate their lives to the services of others. It led Sir Edward Carson, the greatest lawyer in England in his day, to give his time and abilities to prove innocent a lad who was wrongfully accused of cashing a small money order, and whom the Admiralty of that great nation would give no chance to prove himself innocent. In so doing Sir Edward Carson awakened the people of England to a realization of the harm of such a system, and forced the Admiralty at last to admit the wrong and pay the costs of the case.

Jesus emphasized that the humblest life or gift used for others are mighty forces in social redemption. Two mites are still moving the world.

THERE'S A SUNRISE

By JOHN GALLOWAY TRUITT.

There's a sunrise beyond the sorrow of our waiting,
There's a morning that is calling you and me;
There's a glowing, daring dawning we are rating,
When the sun shall shine again so gloriously.

There's a patience only bred in anxious serving,
There's a freedom only felt by those who care
To face the life that they've been given without swerving,
And take the cup that they've been handed for their share.

More is learned in leaden skies than in the shining,
More is left to help another on life's way
By the humble songs that are sung without the whining
Of those who never bore the burdens of their day.

You and I will take with gratitude the giving
Of a little extra testing for our steel,
For we shall know a deeper meaning for our living
When the anguish of another we can feel.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Most of the editing for this week has been done in bed where the Editor is entertaining a light case of the flu.

If you need help for your Mother's Day Program on May 14, write to the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

Large crowds gathered at Concord on Monday after Easter Sunday for the Easter Program under the direction of Miss Vada Golladay. Offering for Missions was made and much interest was shown.

About seventy-five young people from ten churches met at Union Christian Church last Saturday for the annual meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

Suffolk Christian Church has received forty-three members since last Conference. This is a fine increase. Dr. J. G. Truitt, pastor, and his wife have both been sick much of the time, but he is still on the winning side.

The Randleman (N. C.) Christian Church will begin a spring revival on the fourth Sunday in April with the pastor, Rev. Harold Loman, doing the preaching. The church expects to have a parsonage ready for the pastor in the near future.

Rev. E. M. Powell, Henderson, N. C., reports a fine recent service at Beulah Christian Church. Six new members have been received, and he is expecting to receive others on the second Sunday in May. An offering for missions was made on Easter Sunday.

The Rev. Duane Vore prepared a beautiful Easter bulletin for his church at Providence Memorial, Graham, N. C. On that day four new members were received into the church. The young people of that church have recently raised $112.64 for the Building Fund.

The Mayland Church building was full on Easter Sunday evening for the Easter Pageant and songs under the direction of Mrs. Alexander. Much interest was shown and the offering for Missions was taken. The Mayland Church appears to be moving on to higher ground. The attendance is increasing at almost every service.

A great revival which lasted eight nights—no day services—just closed at Whistler's Chapel. There were visible results—18 members by profession of faith and 2 seeking re-consecration and baptism. The building was almost full to capacity every evening and much interest was shown in a revival of the entire church body.

In cancelling her subscription to this paper, Mrs. Frances Osburn of Alabama, aged seventy, and crippled from youth, sends four dollars for two other subscriptions (new). She lives with her people, and all of them take the paper. Here's wishing that all subscribers would be as thoughtful and cooperative. Thank you, Mrs. Osburn.

Beautiful Easter bulletins were given to the Lynnhburg Church by a local funeral director. The pastor, Rev. J. Howard Smith reports a fine Easter service with five new members and twelve baptisms. Eleven new members had already been received as a result of the revival meeting conducted by Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Va.

First Christian Church of Burlington, N. C., held a beautiful and impressive sunrise service, composed mostly of music, on Easter Sunday. The house was filled to capacity at the morning service. In the evening the young people presented the Easter idea in dramatic form. There were seventy-two in the men's class at Sunday school. Six were received into church membership, which makes twelve this Conference year.

ATTENTION, PLEASE!

The Christian Temple is going to try to furnish lodging and breakfast for the out-of-town delegates who attend the Southeastern Convention in Norfolk, May 9-11. It will help the Entertainment Committee so much if those who desire such entertainment will notify the Committee to that effect. If you plan, even tentatively, to come to the Convention, and if you want lodging and breakfast, will you please notify me at once, so that I can in turn notify my Committee. Thank you for your courtesy.

Those who prefer to stay at hotels will find very comfortable rooms at very reasonable rates. I shall be glad to make reservations.

DAILY BIBLE READINGS.

By DR. J. H. LIGHTBOURNE.

Asked by Editor Lester to outline Bible Readings for CHRISTIAN SUN readers I agreed after a considerable hesitancy. In the first place what seems a very simple task is not so simple after all, if time and thought are to be given it and the readings are to be selected to some purpose. And then, too, there is the question as to whether or not CHRISTIAN SUN readers feel a need for such a thing as outlined Bible readings.

But here is a matter which lies close to my heart, for I am interested in and concerned about Bible reading and study. In a Church which declares against man-made creeds and presents the Bible as the sufficient creed there should be consecrated loyalty to the reading and study of the Bible. But how much daily Bible reading and study is there?

The readings to be outlined week after week will not be on a basis of uniformity as to daily material. Frequently readings will be long necessarily; again readings will seem too brief. But through all the selections a plan will be followed closely and I feel the plan will justify the varying lengths of the daily readings.

We will begin with a week of reading under the caption "After Easter, What?" And then we will be introduced to a prophet of the Old Testament and spend some while with him. It is my feeling that this prophet is not generally read after, and we are hoping through our choices of subjects and our plan of presentation to bring before us one of the great patriotic men of God of all times—lovable, loyal, lofty.

"AS IT BEGAN TO DAWN."

In the wonderful story of the Resurrection, Saint Matthew says that "As it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre." It hadn't then begun to dawn on them that Jesus would rise from the dead. Neither had it dawned on the disciples. The women came to bring sweet spices and to weep, for the light of God's love and grace had not fully dawned upon them. When the news of the Resurrection began to dawn upon the deserting disciples, they were reunited and tarried in Jerusalem. After a brief trip to Galilee they were endured with the spirit of God and went forth to conquer the world for righteousness, love and peace.

The Congregational Church had served itself for a long time before it began to dawn on the members of that great body that the rest of the world should have the knowledge of Christ and that this Church should send the messengers to tell of the redeeming love of God in Christ Jesus. The Christian Church let nearly a century pass before it began to dawn on its members that Japan and Puerto Rico needed the story of Christ and that this Church could send messengers there to make known the eternal truth. Only twenty-five years ago it began to dawn on the women of the Southern Convention that they could unite in a great missionary enterprise and make their influence for good worldwide. This week they are meeting at Elon College in their first convention session separate from the Southern Convention itself. It is beginning to dawn on the good women of the Southern Convention that they not only have responsibilities but that they can carry responsibilities for sending the gospel to the far away places of the earth.

It began to dawn on the leaders of our Church less than a quarter of a century ago that the young people should be trained and should be given opportunities of leadership and directed in the paths of service in a larger way than had ever been done. The Board of Christian Education was organized, and Miss Lucy Eldredge began the work as a field secretary who went from church to church stimulating and enthusing leaders and young people. Today it is beginning to dawn on the young people in our Convention that they, too, can have a share in the world-wide program of Christianity. The way is not altogether clear, but the light is shining and the young people are responding. It may be that within a very few years these young people of ours will be supporting their own missionaries at home and abroad. Of course, this will be done through regular channels and in cooperation with others, but it will be their own work supported by their own prayers and gifts.

Reports from many churches indicate that when the Easter season came this year new light began to dawn in the minds and hearts of many who worshipped in our churches. A few here and more there have gone to the altar of the church and accepted in their own right the way of the Lord Jesus Christ and have become a part of His Church. They have not as yet seen all of the glories that are to be revealed, but as light began to dawn in their hearts they walked in the way. Doubtless as the full light of day comes they will see more clearly. They may be able to do things that those of us who are older have not yet accomplished. Let us hope so.

As it begins to dawn upon the Church that God is expecting more than we have yet given and that he will do for us more than we have asked, let us, like the women, go straight to the place where we may meet him and from which we may be directed into the paths of eternal service. As truth begins to dawn, we must arise and do or else the vision fades and we become less than we were.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

On May 9 to 11 representative leaders from Congregational and Christian Churches throughout the Southeast will meet at Norfolk, Va., for fellowship and inspiration. When the merger was taking place several years ago it was difficult to tell just what direction organizations might travel. At that time some thought that the Southeast Convention would be the old Southern Convention area, which included Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, and Alabama. When Georgia and Alabama withdrew from the Southern Convention and set up state conferences, the Southern Convention became less in area but equally as strong as it had been in membership. The purpose of the Southeast Convention is not to transact business but rather to consider mutual problems, share experiences, and enjoy friendships.

Two of our denominational leaders are to be with us in Norfolk. Many of our own people in the Southeast will appear on the program. The problems of the whole territory will be presented. The place of the Church in the modern world will be discussed. Out of this session should come a new impulse for Christian service and new information which can be transformed into success.

It is to be hoped that leaders from over all of the Southeast will be present at the Christian Temple in Norfolk to share in this great Convention.

A "CHRISTIAN SUN" CAMPAIGN.

Last spring the Southern Convention voted to increase the subscription list of "The Christian Sun" to at least 3,000 within the Southern Convention. Definite quotas were given to the five conferences. Each conference voted to apportion the subscriptions to the local churches and undertake to secure them. The Board of Publications has designated May as the month in which this work is to be done. No other campaign for the Church will be on at time.

There are two fundamental reasons for this campaign. One is to increase the income so the work can be carried on. The present subscription income is far below what it costs to publish the paper, and the Convention faces the necessity of securing this money from other sources. A subscription list of 3,000 will still leave a deficit on the paper but the difference between the cost of publication and the income will be very much less than it is at present.

The second reason is far more important. In such a time as this the Church needs to speak its mind. There are two ways of doing this. One is through the spoken word in personal contacts, classroom, and pulpit. The other is through the printed page. There are those who believe that Congregational and Christian Churches have a message that is needed for our day and that the churches in this area should have a paper through which they can express their own minds. It is the business of the Church Paper to present the message of the Church, which we hope is the message of the Christ, to all who will read. It is a medium of education for our membership and for those who should be members of our churches. Unless our people know what is being done and what is being undertaken, there is little hope of cooperative work among our churches. Unless we can feel that we are not alone, that we are a part of the great body of Christ, we may lose our enthusiasm and become despondent.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the tie that binds together Congregational and Christian people in our churches and makes them a working unit in the Kingdom of God. It is for this reason that pastors and people are asked during the month of May to secure renewal and new subscriptions for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The cooperation of every reader is desired and expected. We believe you want the paper, and we believe that you want it to be as useful as possible. For this reason we are expecting every church to put on a canvass and secure the needed subscriptions.

The Promotional Secretary of the Southern Convention Reports

When the Southern Convention of Congregational - Christian Churches met in Portsmouth, Va., last spring they began a new adventure. They set up an office of Promotional Secretary whose business it should be to promote all of the enterprises of the Southern Convention and the work in the local churches. In addition to this he was to edit THE CHRISTIAN SUN and become business manager thereof. Never before had the Convention established such an office, and in large measure it was a venture in the dark, but with the hope of seeing the dawn of a new and brighter day.

The Convention elected me to perform these duties, and delegated to a committee, composed of the chairman of each Board and institution, the president of the Southern Convention, and the conference presidents, the responsibility of outlining the work to be accomplished and of financing. This committee met in Norlina, N. C., on July 29, 1938, considered the work to be done for each department, and elected a sub-committee of three to counsel with the Promotional Secretary concerning further details. Financial agreement had already been entered into by the Secretary on the one hand, the Mission Board, the Board of Christian Education and the Southern Convention on the other. On September 1, 1938, I moved to Elon College, N. C., and began the work, leaving behind a very desirable pastorate.

Work Undertaken.

Elon College graciously furnished one large room and one small room for office space. Two school girls do the office work. One keeps the accounts for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, copies material, and otherwise aids. The other is responsible for the work of the Board of Christian Education, aids in the work of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and acts as stenographer for the Promotional Secretary.

Every week during the year except two THE CHRISTIAN SUN must come from the press. It is my business to see that materials are furnished to the printer and that subscriptions are secured from as many people as possible. This is work enough for any one man.

Last fall it was my pleasure to attend and share in all five conferences within the Convention, as well as the two Christian Missionary Association meetings. I have tried to attend all public meetings of our conferences and to present as fully and faithfully as possible the entire program of the Church.

Considerable effort has been made and some success attained in organizing pastorates and securing pastoral service. Much more needs to be done in this field, and the Secretary's services are at the disposal of both pastors and churches for this type of work.

Numerous leaders in local churches have been aided with their problems and a large amount of materials for use have been supplied. I usually carry books, pamphlets, Sunday school literature, and New Testaments (these are for free distribution) wherever I go.

It has been my purpose to stay in the field and out of the office as much as possible. Very few general letters have been sent, but a multitude of personal letters have been written. Personal interviews have been emphasized.

Much Work Needed.

Your Secretary has had to experiment and has doubtless made many blunders. If nothing else had been accomplished, he has been able to discover an unlimited amount of work that needs to be done.

There are closed churches in each conference. Some of these certainly should be opened and become active. There are other churches on the decline which should be redeemed and started on the upgrade. There is much waste of money by pastors having churches far apart and having too many churches to serve. We need more full-time pastors with fewer churches in a pastorate so better work can be accomplished. Our institutions and Boards need greater income so they can serve more effectively. They can get this only when we have more effective churches. For this reason your Secretary is anxious to aid pastors in developing better religious education programs, missionary programs, and financial programs in the local church.

Near many of our churches are multitudes who do not share in any church program. Your Secretary is trying to arouse interest that will win these people to our Church. We should begin a new work and build new churches. There are many opportunities awaiting us. One church has been organized and others are contemplated.

The Churches Can Help.

During these eight months I have put into the work all that I have in the way of judgment, energy, Christian spirit and finance. Both day and night to the limit of my endurance I have gone where duty called and have found a keen sense of delight in sharing with the Church people our mutual problems.

The churches can help the Secretary to be successful by pointing out things that need to be done and making suggestions as to how they can be accomplished. Do not be afraid to ask for the service which you need in any phase of Church work. Your request will be met as quickly and as

SUFFOLK LETTER.

God has a great plan for the human race. Glimpses of it are revealed in the first chapters of Genesis. Incomplete revelations, of course, and not fully understood—but sufficient to indicate something of His plan. The so-called inaccuracies of Genesis are greatly modified by the grim inability of the human mind to understand the message and revelation of God.

Genesis gives us a glimpse of intimate fellowship, sweet innocence, holy communion and clear revelation of the Divine presence and plan. Adam and Eve were innocent but not perfect. That is a distinction which must not be overlooked. Innocence is sometimes ignorant. Adam and Eve were imperfect in knowledge and spiritual development. They were sinless but not perfect. It was a part of God's plan to walk with them, talk with them and teach them the way of human happiness upon this earth. Their home was to be a place of peace, joy, righteousness and beautiful living.

But God's plan was interrupted. An enemy of God and man came into the scene. A struggle between spiritual powers was introduced. A battle for supremacy began. The contender won a victory and man lost a battle. Man always loses the battle when he undertakes to question God's wisdom and yields to the suggestion of evil. God did not lose the battle. He never loses in a contest with unrighteousness. The victory was delayed. But the battle has not ended. God has not changed His plans. The old plans of Genesis are lying upon the table of the Divine Architect. Some new methods have been introduced, a new Leader is directing the present campaign—and final victory is assured.

What are the plans? Righteousness on earth. A sinless world. Yes, that is God's plan today. All people of the earth should be good seven days in the week. They should be religious. Spiritual fellowship should be an increasing delight to their souls. All people should be honest, free from all desire or effort to defraud others for their own profit. People should love each other. Hate is both inhuman and ungodly. Humanity should see life in its proper setting. The tramp who steals a ride on a freight train should have the same social recognition as the man who steals enough money, by dishonest methods, to buy a palatial home on Fifth Avenue and rides to his office in a high-powered, high-priced automobile. A thief is a thief wherever he lives, and should be branded as such in every phase of life. Social, economic, political and industrial injustices are an abomination in the sight of a just God. This world should be a safe, clean, holy place for the people of God. Every hypocrite and vile sinner should become a true follower of Jesus Christ. That is a part of the Divine plan.

God prepared a plan for all people of the earth to have eternal life. Jesus came to give people abundant life. He is the Prince of Peace. Why should a Christian carry a gun to take the life of an innocent neighbor? Why should the choice young men of the nations be under arms, with a strong probability that millions of them will be slain to satisfy human greed and sordid selfishness? There is no reasonable answer to these questions. The answer of Christianity should be: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men." An intelligent understanding of God's plan would make every Christian glad to have a part in the missionary program of the church. Eternal life on earth. Perhaps a better place later. But this would be good enough—if all the people would be obedient followers of Him who makes the plans. Righteousness here! Eternal life here! Good plans! "Thy kingdom come."

THE MEANING OF EDUCATION.

There is a wide-spread interest in education today. Federal, state, and municipal governments are emphasizing the need of education. Large sums of money have been appropriated to encourage and advance programs of education for all ages and all classes. The democracies of the world are interested in a type of education that will emphasize personal freedom and accentuate and develop individual personality to its highest degree. They envision a free state made up of free and cultured individuals. Their aim is not necessarily for collective security but for individual and collective advancement.

The dictator or totalitarian states of the world have another view of education, that education is not for the world or for the individual but for the state. Information and education that does not contribute to the solidarity and absolute power of the state is denied the individual. The individual becomes a part of a machine. Whatever fits him best for his part in that machine is given him. Whatever may create dissatisfaction or cause friction within the machinery of the state is denied him. In this race for power among the nations of the world must also be the race for the development of personality which, after all, is the groundwork and should be the fruitage of any system of education.

A quarter of a century ago the emphasis was placed on buildings, equipment, and an adopted, uniform curriculum. Courses of study leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree meant about the same in every school, with a wide variation in the ability and efficiency of instructors but a more or less uniformity in subjects. We went through the steps for a diploma with about the same regularity and precision as a musician fingers the keyboard of a piano. Education meant largely the acquisition of knowledge. The individual was left to test his aptitudes in the application of the information acquired to the problems of life after school days.

Today the emphasis has shifted to the development of personality, recognizing fully the part that acquired information may play in such achievement. The theory of education is that the individual must be completely discovered as to talents, temperaments, and mental, social and spiritual possibilities. Information must be acquired not simply for information's sake but for the bearing that that information may have upon the enrichment and development of individual personality. The test of his education is the evidence of his ability to translate the information acquired into the proper and satisfactory solution of the problems of the society and of the world of which he may be a part. Present day trends in education by no means discredit the value of information. They recognize the necessity of knowing, but education that ends with information and knowing falls far short of the mark in this progressive age. The individual acquires information for the purpose of the larger contribution that he feels impelled to make to his day and generation. Information is the storing of facts in the human mind. Education is the application of those facts in the creation of new values in the realm of human personality and social realities. In this race for a wider curriculum in secondary and higher education, it is a pity that the church, the religious forces of the world, are

Elon College Golden Anniversary

The mercury continues to climb, not as rapidly as we would like, but nevertheless it moves upward. The weather has been unusually cold this week. At this season of the year, however, we may expect the temperature to rise more rapidly in a few days. Let us hope that this may be true with the mercury in our Golden Anniversary thermometer.

We have had eleven subscriptions during the week, a total of $625.00 in cash and pledges.

The report of last week should have carried cash payments made as follows: W. R. Sellars, $50; H. L. Neal, $15; W. T. Scott, $5; Mrs. W. T. Scott, $5. These payments enable us to make our regular monthly payments on our debt. There are a large number of the alumni, church members, and friends who have made up their minds to join the Golden Anniversary Club. If you will take the time to sign your pledge and send it in, you will greatly encourage the ones of us who are conducting the campaign and influence others who are undecided to make their pledges. Any payment that you can make will be greatly appreciated.

not keeping pace with civil and political units. The viewpoint of the state schools and that of the church is different. Their curriculums are different, and finished products differ in the finer things of society. It is a great blessing when the hand of the church and of the religious home carries on through college and university education where religion is not permitted to the curriculum.

Education in this country was inspired by a vision of a prepared, prophetic ministry. That type of education set the ship of state to sail on safe seas, uncharted though they were, for the laying of a foundation of a great nation; and if this ship is to sail successfully in the troubled seas that spread before her today, there must be somehow, somewhere, the guiding hand of an unseen Providence.

Recently an eminent statesman made the declaration publicly that if there had been a half-dozen strong Christian colleges in Germany, the things that are happening to the world today could never have come to pass. The Christian religion stands for the redemption and the freedom of the individual within the realm of right and of righteousness. For the sake of tomorrow and future generations, it is earnestly hoped that the church will remain in the field of higher education and that she will not withhold her devotional or financial support that the type of education may be available for the youth of today that will bear fruitage in the whole field of individual personality. A complete education cannot be compartmentalized. A thoroughly educated man cannot simply be educated for business or any other kind of profession exclusive of the education of his spiritual and religious self. Education that educates must reach and develop the whole of life. The church school of today proceeds with such a curriculum.

L. E. SMITH.

Elon College Church received two new members on Easter Sunday morning.

Dr. Robbins Wolcott Barstow, President of Hartford Seminary Foundation, Hartford, Conn., will be the speaker at Elon College on next Sunday morning. Dr. Barstow is one of the great preachers of our day.

Rev. C. P. Garman is spending some days in the Southern Convention. For thirty-three years he has been a missionary of the Christian Church in Japan. He has visited Greensboro (First Church), New Lebanon, Union (N. C.), Elon College, Haw River, Wake Chapel, and will likely visit other places.

FOR THE CHILDREN

JANE'S DIPLOMA.

By THELMA E. PRICE.

"Tomorrow night!" repeated Jane to her mother as she was busy preparing the Sunday dinner of fried chicken. "You're going to let me go, aren't you?" the little one persisted.

"Now, Jane," said her mother, "you're only six. You will get tired walking that far. Stop your questions."

At last Monday night came. Even Pop wanted to go to hear those ladies. There was an early supper, and the family hurried to walk the five miles to meeting.

Just one lady was there! Jack whispered that the other was sick. They sang, and then the lady told a story, but Jane fell asleep before she finished. Best of all, though, the lady said that a Vacation Bible School was to be held up at the other church. What fun they would have singing songs, playing new games, and hearing stories. The lady talked to Jane after the meeting.

The next morning Jane started out. She remembered all the things she was to tell mother. That night at supper, she told all that had happened.

"After we had been at the church for a little while we heard the funniest whistle. The teachers came and we all marched inside and everything began just as Sunday school does. Mom, we are to have a motto: 'Friends With Jesus.' The teacher said that meant that we are to be good and kind and then Jesus would have us as His friend. She told us a story of a Chinese boy. They gave us some pencils, too, and we could make some pretty marks. And she took our pictures."

"How awful it would be if I had to stay at home and miss all that," sighed Jane as she went to bed.

The next morning it was so dark that Mom had to call her. It was raining. At breakfast Mother said, "You can't go to the School today for it's raining too hard. Tears filled Jane's eyes. The day was going to be so long; there was nothing to do. In child-like faith Jane went and knelt by her bed. "God, send out the sun for just five minutes so we can go."

Mother broke in on this, "It seems to be clearing up—if you hurry you can go, for it is to be held at our church today." Jane smiled again and smoothed her hair vigorously.

That night Jane had a lot to tell mother. "It's just the biggest fun. We learned a new song and the teacher said we could sing it Sunday night. You all are supposed to come and hear us. We are to get a diploma if we come out when we are supposed to. And we're going to give a play, too. Mother listened to this with a face beaming with joy. It was good to have the children hear and talk about God.

Each day of school brought something new. Jane was to take the part of Benjamin in the Joseph story. They were really going to dress up for their parts.

Sunday came, the day for the closing exercises. Jane was happy, yet a bit worried. She must get a diploma, but Teacher said you had to be present every day—she hadn't been. One day she had pulled Vera's curls and Teacher had had to speak to her. Oh, if she had only been good! Then she could have had that printed piece of paper with a star on it.

The plays were over and the songs were sung when Teacher got up and said she was going to give a reward to those who had come to the Bible School. Jane's little heart went all wrong. "Would she?" The names were called. Oh, so many, but not "Jane Wheeler." Only six left! Yes, Teacher was really saying "Jane Wheeler." Somehow she got the little roll. For the rest of the evening she sat perfectly still, her eyes shining and the coveted diploma clasped tightly in her sticky little hand. Jane had won her first diploma.

THE QUESTION BOX.

HOW LONG DO TREES LIVE?

Trees, like animals and all living things, pass through a life cycle, that is to say, a series of regular changes. They are born (sprout from the seed); during some years they grow (like young animals); then, when they have reached their growth, old age comes on and they die. Some trees may go through these changes much more rapidly than others. Hardwood trees generally grow more slowly and live longer than those whose wood is soft. Trees that have stood for centuries are not uncommon. There is a tree still standing in Maryland that two hundred and fifty years ago was a large, handsome tree, and a treaty with the Indians was made under its branches. But all other trees are young in comparison with some of the monster big trees in California, which were just in the prime of their life when the Christian Era began, and that, you know, was more than nineteen hundred years ago. They are probably the oldest living things in the world.

You and the little tree in the yard both increase in size year to year, but mention some ways in which your growth differs from that of the tree.

EASTER AT WIDE FELLOWSHIP.

The Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C., found it necessary to use three Sundays for the presentation of their Easter program. On Palm Sunday evening the young people gave the dramatization, Simon the Leper. Easter Sunday began with a sunrise service in the Church Garden; at the Church school two playlets were given; in the evening the Spring Music Festival of the Sandhills Kiwanis Club for the benefit of underprivileged children, was presented. On last Sunday the young people of the church rendered the cantata, The Story of Easter. The pastor, Rev. Voight O. Taylor, reports an Easter morning attendance of 400 people, and at the evening hour more than 800 were present, DOING BIG THINGS.

Some wise one is quoted as saying: "Christianity plans the doing of big things." It does. Building the kingdom of heaven on earth is the biggest thing ever undertaken through the agency and efforts of man. But it should ever be borne in mind that our Lord Christ, who is the one un-failing example and leader in this humanly impossible task, likened the kingdom of heaven always to that which had a very, very small beginning, but resulted in the manifestation of great power. He likened the kingdom of heaven to a grain of mustard seed; to a merchant man seeking pearls and finding just one of great price sold all he had and bought it. It was ever and always the same in the mind and teaching of our Lord Christ looking patiently and with confidence for great achievements, by and through the most careful attention to and emphasis upon the small things. He who looks only at doing the big things, especially in the service of the Lord and humanity, is headed sooner, or later, for disappointment and defeat. Genius has been defined and we think rightfully as the capacity for infinite detail. The men and women of real genius whose names are secure on the pages of history are those who had an infinite capacity for detail and were able to see that big things come only by and through doing the little things well. One following logic and reason might have thought that Lord Christ would have chosen to announce His Messiahship to a great audience and with considerable fanfare. However, it was not the way of our Lord. He announced His Messiahship to an audience of one, that one being a woman who at the time was living in sin and not with one of the five husbands she had had. His Resurrection was not announced before a congress, or a parliament, but to a lonely woman, who stood weeping at His tomb on that first Easter morning.

If one will follow the missionary journeys of Paul, one will see that while he made it a rule to go into the synagogues and proclaim the gospel he did not wait to gather great audiences there, nor did he cease to sing praises to his Lord at midnight while bound in prison. He resorted to quiet places as well and remote places seeking ever and always to preach the gospel to one, or to many, doing his best as occasion might present and leaving results to God.

It was not a question of converting the whole Chinese nation that carried the first missionary to China and kept him there, for history tells us that he preached and wrought for seven years before his first convert was won. No, he could not convert China to Christianity, but he could at least do that for which he was called and sent and do it in an humble way, content to do the day's work as an humble servant and leave results to God.

The men who occupy positions of responsibility in church as well as in state today are those who carried all the energy and consecration they had into the doing the very best of which they were capable, even in that which seemed to be at the time a very small thing.

It was the great Phillip Brooks who said that, "Jesus Christ, the man of Nazareth, had done more to change the current of human events and do the work needful to be done in this world than all the armies and all the navies and all the parliaments from the time of Christ down to this day." Paul well and wisely said, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content." That is to say that when he had done his best in his daily task as he saw it in the light of the Divine teaching he was content to leave results to God. If we in faith do our best and carry all we have into that which seems to be the small task we may depend upon God to give results in His own good way and time. The man was right, who said: "Christianity plans big things," but every Christian must do his part in the various minor tasks of helping humanity and making his contribution and building up the kingdom of heaven on earth. To this end may God help us to be faithful and true.

PROGRAM OF WORSHIP FOR THE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Prepared by

MRS. J. EVERETTE NEESE,
Henderson, N. C.

THEME: "To Face the Challenge."

Musical Prelude.

Call to Worship:

LEADER—When John, the beloved disciple, wanted to give his followers a picture of heaven, he chose the town to illustrate it; a city free from pain and sorrow and fear, where men of "the nations" dwelt together in love and harmony. Lift up your hearts and see the challenge before.

RESPONSE—We lift them up and ask His guidance.

LEADER—O God, open Thou our lips and help us to speak against un-Christian conditions.

RESPONSE—Yea, Lord, help us to do our part in making the world Christian.

Hymn—"The Fathers Built This City"—Pilgrim Hymnal.

Scripture Lesson—Revelation 21: 2-4, 26, 27.

Prayer—

O Thou loving and tender Father in Heaven, we confess before Thee, in sorrow, how hard and unsympathetic are our hearts. How often we have sinned against our neighbors by want of compassion and tenderness. How often we have felt no true pity for their trials and sorrows, and have neglected to comfort, help, and visit them. Father, forgive this our sin, and lay it not to our charge. Give us grace ever to alleviate the crosses and difficulties of those around us, and never to add to them. Teach us to be consolers in sorrow, to take thought for the stranger, the widow, and the orphan. Let our charity show itself not in words only, but in deed and truth. For the sake of Jesus Christ, Thy Son, who loved us and gave Himself for us. Amen.

Poem—"O Holy City Seen of John" by W. Russell Bowie.

O Holy City seen of John,
Where Christ, the Lamb, doth reign,
Within whose four-square walls shall come
No night, nor need, nor pain,
And where the tears are wiped from eyes
That shall not weep again.

O shame to us who rest content
While cruel greed for gain
In street or shop or tenement
Wrings gold from human pain,
And bitter lips in blind despair
Cry—"Christ hath died in vain."

Give us, O God, the strength to build
The City that hath stood
Too long a dream, whose laws are love,
Whose ways are brotherhood,
And where the sun that shineth is God's grace for human good.

Dr. Kinchloe in his book The American City and Its Church proceeds on the assumption that such matters as housing, health, crime, and economic conditions are the concern of the Church and constitute a vital part of

Mother Love
In Action
In China

Fleeing from the horror behind to the uncertainty ahead, and carrying all they possessed in packs on their backs, mothers with babies in arms and children of all ages, trudging along with bruised, weary feet, joined the tragic human trek across China, seeking safety and life. Hundreds of thousands of these wandering, homeless family groups are now in refugee camps and rehabilitation centers, or sleeping in shattered streets or along war-torn roads, dependent upon human sympathy for the daily bowl of rice and cup of tea that saves them from starvation and death.

Devoted workers in mission stations, hospitals, and schools are giving without measure, of their substance, service, and strength, but food, clothing, and medical and surgical supplies are desperately needed to alleviate the sufferings of China's destitute millions.

The Church Committee for China Relief, with national headquarters at 105 East 22nd Street, New York City, and regional offices in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Kansas City, and Los Angeles, and local committees functioning throughout the United States and Hawaii, is now urging Americans everywhere to make contributions and pledges to help relieve this tremendous human need among Chinese civilian sufferers.

Three cents a day, or just one American dollar a month, will save a life in China, the Committee states. Its present goal is "One Million American Friends to Save One Million Lives in China" until the next harvest. Contributions of any amount are urgently needed to help meet this emergency.

the soul-saving and life-transforming function of the Church. He says: "No soul exists in a vacuum. The character and personality of the individual are affected by his environment. It does make a difference to a man's religious life whether or not he has a job and a living wage, whether or not he has adequate shelter and food and clothing for himself and his family. That 'man does not live by bread alone' is true enough, but it is also true that without bread men cannot even exist. Our city slums are breeding places of disease, bitterness, crime, and despair. To be sure individual souls can and do rise superior to the downward pull of such an environment, but they are exceptional cases. The trend of much of our urban life is not only anti-social; it is anti-Christian as well. The city is indeed a difficult place for a man to be a Christian. It is therefore a difficult field for the work of the Church and we must frankly face its difficulties and problems and set ourselves to overcome them if we are to reach the individual city man. The good life must have an adequate physical base. "A change in the externalities of life, to be sure, will not complete the work of the Church. We must never lose sight of this fact. As Josiah Strong pointed it out years ago, it is possible for people to be 'well housed, well clad, well fed, and well rotted.' From the standpoint of the Christian Gospel there is as much paganism among the rich as among the poor, as much godliness in the suburbs as in the slums. We are all sinners—privileged, and underprivileged alike. "But it should also be pointed out that if it is important to study the political, social, economic background life of a land like India in order to understand the task of Christian Missions in that country, it is certainly equally important to study the characteristics of life in the American City if the Church is to proceed with its work with any degree of intelligence and statesmanship." So the task is before every Christian to serve in the name of his Christ.

Leader—

It is your task. If Christ dwells in the hearts of many city people, it is your task; your task to tell of his love and power, and your task to serve whenever and wherever an opportunity presents itself.

Hymn—"Rise Up, O Men of God"—Pilgrim Hymnal.

Closing Prayer—

Oh, God, as we think of the many opportunities before us in the city, make us willing to face the challenge and in the name of our Christ, do something about it. Amen.

"Youth at Work in the Church"

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

SOUTHEAST PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP TO MEET.

The regular biennial meeting of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship will be held in connection with the Southeast Convention, meeting at Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., May 9-11. The business meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship will be held on Wednesday afternoon, May 10, followed by a young people's supper, after which the young people will join the convention to hear Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown of Evanston, Ill., president of the Home Boards of our denomination. The young people will be welcome at all the sessions of the Convention, of course.

Every young person in a Congregational or Christian Church in the Southeast is automatically a member of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship—so you ought to be "among those present" for this regular meeting. Pastors and church leaders from all over this area will be attending the Southeast Convention, which ought to help solve your transportation problem.

The present officers of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship are: President—Earle Ward, Winter Park, Fla.; Vice-President—W. B. Williams, Newport News, Va.; Secretary—Emily Carleton Lester, Elon College, N. C.; Assistant Secretary—Frances Foster, Greensboro, N. C.; Treasurer—Emmanuel Hedgebeth, Elon College, N. C.; Editor—Emily Carleton Lester, Elon College, N. C.

Superintendents: Devotional Life—Dorothy French, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Missions—Irene Cotten, Dendron, Va.; Social Action—Dorothy Truitt, Greensboro, N. C.; Leadership Training—Billy (Rev. W. J.) Andes, Durham, N. C.; Publications—Rev. J. E. Neese, Henderson, N. C.

Counselors: Rev. F. C. Lester, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. W. B. Williams, Newport News, Va.; Miss Annie Campbell, Phenix City, Ala.; Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, Cortland, N. Y.

At the session in Norfolk new officers for the next two years are to be elected. Reports will be given by the present officers. Plans will be made for the work of the Fellowship during the next two years. Other business will be transacted, about which you will want to have your "say," so plan to attend the meeting.

It has been suggested that Article VI of the Constitution of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship, regarding meetings, and Article IV, section 3-a, regarding time of electing officers, be changed so that the regular biennial meeting will be a Holiday Conference, rather than in conjunction with the Southeast Convention. Some feel that under the present set-up very few young people can be present for the regular business sessions, and more could be "on hand" during the Christmas holidays. Be thinking about this and come prepared to vote on it.

Begin planning now to attend the 1939 session of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship in Norfolk, May 10!

YOUTH'S RESPONSIBILITY TO THE CHURCH.

By MISS RUTH STRICKLER.

[Read at Valley of Virginia Conference, March 30.]

Future leadership largely depends on present responsibility given youth in the Church today. One writer has stressed the need of youth in the Church at the present time by saying:

He needs young hearts, young minds,
young hands,

To fashion out the world that is to be.

The present-day Church cannot wash its hands of the responsibility of the Church of tomorrow. Solomon said: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

The youth of today has the same yearning for "something that will truly satisfy" that young people of every age have had; but the present generation with its frankness wants no sham religion, but the real thing with plenty of enthusiasm about it.

Young people are being given more responsibility and more attention every year by our churches. The whole membership centers its interest in Sunday school and other organizations around the needs of youth.

How young people can share in the program of worship:

1. By cultivating our own devotional life. This can be done through Friday—Give Proportionately—I Cor. 16:1, 2.

Saturday—Give His All—Mk. 10:23-30.

If all the members of the churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches gave as they should, there would not be any weak churches. All churches could either have a full time pastor or be yoked in groups of three or four which could employ a pastor. Missions would not suffer, the Orphanage and Elon College would be well financed; Christian Education THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and other enterprises of our beloved Church would not suffer financial embarrassment.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling says: "A religion that does nothing, gives nothing, that costs nothing, that suffers nothing, is worth nothing."

It is said that three-fourths of the parables and teachings of Jesus deal with man's relationship to money and possessions. How many references in the New Testament can you name?

Let some individual speak on Stewardship. Leaflets on Stewardship may be secured from the denominational headquarters and distributed.

Someone should talk on the tithe. Secure tithes for a given period of time (six weeks, three months). If every person in your church gave a tithe, think how much it would increase your church's financial resources!

What place in the Christian time and financial budget should the church receive? These are appropriate for talks:

1 Christian Gives—

1. Because God is creator and owner.

2. Because he wishes to acknowledge God's ownership.

3. Because he wishes to give himself to the service of God.

4. A definite proportion of his income to God's Cause (not less than the tithe).

Suggested Hymns—

"Come, Thou Almighty King."

"Take My Life and Let It Be."

"Have Thine Own Way, Lord."

PAUL WINS RECOGNITION FOR GENTILE CHRISTIANS.

LESSON IV—APRIL 23, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: A man is not justified by the works of the law, but through faith in Jesus Christ.—Galatians 2:16.

LESSON: Acts 15:1-35; Gal. 2:1-10.

A Critical Issue.

Early Christianity faced a critical issue. We can hardly realize the far-reaching implications involved, or the importance of the final decision which was made. Let us try to get the background of today's lesson.

Paul and Barnabas had been off on a missionary tour. Upon their return to Antioch they remained there for some time, preaching and teaching. Word of their work reached Jerusalem, and some of the strict Judaists, conscientiously zealous for the faith of their fathers, but with mistaken ideas of the true nature of the new faith, came down to Antioch and began to teach the Greek-speaking Jews and other Gentiles, that they could not be saved, unless they were circumcised. In short they were making salvation a matter of rite and ceremony. They were saying that Christianity was a matter of a rite rather than of a life. If they had won their point—it is impossible to imagine just what would have been the ultimate effect on Christianity.

A Sensible Course.

The matter was argued at length, and perhaps with some heat. But no progress was being made. The church at Antioch thereupon made a very wise decision. It decided to send Paul and Barnabas, and other representatives of the church up to Jerusalem to submit the whole matter to the apostles and elders. Here in a wholesome atmosphere, and in friendly conference, they could come to a more sensible and same conclusion. The way of arbitration is always so much better than the way of conflict. Nations, classes, churches might well profit by the example of these men of that far-off day.

An Epoch-Making Council.

There have been many important church councils through the centuries, but this first council at Jerusalem was perhaps the most important. As has been said, its decision had far-reaching consequences. It forever set Christianity free from Jewish swaddling clothes. It proclaimed once and for all the liberty which is in Christ Jesus. It established the doctrine that salvation is by faith and not by rite.

Each side was given an opportunity to present its case. The Pharisees, strict adherents to the letter of the law, insisted that it was necessary for a man to be circumcised to become a Christian, and to keep the law of Moses to continue as one. Their position brought on "much disputing." Then Peter dropped a bomb-shell into the ranks of the opposition. He told about the experiences he had had while preaching among the Gentiles. In spite of the fact that they had not been circumcised, in spite of the fact that they had not first become proselytes or come into Christianity through Judaism, God had borne witness to them that he had accepted them, and that they had come into the saving grace of Christ, by giving to them the Holy Spirit, even as he had given it to those who had been Jews born and bred. God had made no differences between Jews and Gentiles as concerning the salvation which is in Jesus Christ. "But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved even as they."

All that happened after that was a kind of anti-climax. To be sure Paul and Barnabas told what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them. It was another indisputable evidence of the fact that a man comes directly into salvation through faith by the grace of God in Jesus Christ. Gentiles come into the household of faith not through circumcision but through the Cross.

James also had something to say, appealing to the Jewish Scriptures themselves to show that God had made provision for the Gentiles in His plan of salvation, and that without recourse to first becoming Jews in faith. There was nothing else that could be said. The victory had been decisively won. A basic principle of Christianity had been announced and vindicated.

A Historic Decision.

By unanimous vote the apostles and elders upheld Paul and Barnabas. And they wrote a letter to the churches in what we would call the mission lands to that effect. They felt that they had been guided by the Holy Spirit—"for it seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us"—which was after all the final vindication of their decision. But even at that they used some sanctified common-sense, and they made some concessions that involved no moral compromise, and which showed their sympathetic understanding and their Christian handling of the problem.

Shall a Christian be bound by the law of Moses? Not in the sense that he cannot become a Christian except by obeying the law of Moses. A man can become a Christian whether he is circumcised or not. That makes no difference in his standing before God. But there are certain amenities which even those who are above the law must observe. The suggestions about abstaining from meats offered to idols, from blood, from things strangled, and from fornication, concern practices which should have no part in the lives of the people of that day. Here were things that were an offense to Jewish Christians. Here were things, that if practiced by the Gentile Christians, would cause the Jewish Christians "to stumble." In the true spirit of Christianity, those who were strong in the faith were to be considerate of those who were weak in the faith. A Christian might be free from the law in one sense, but he was not free to do as he pleased.

A Continuing Problem.

There are still those who would make Christianity a matter of rite and creed and ceremony. Today as always there are those who would bring people into bondage of the law, rather than lead them into the liberty of the spirit. And today, it needs to be emphasized that as the Golden Text says: "A man is not justified by the works of the law, but through faith in Jesus Christ."

AN EVER PRESENT PERIL.

"Master, Master, we perish."—
Luke 8:24.

Like a ship at sea tossing about at the mercy of the waves, or like a swimmer suddenly caught in a swift current and carried away and has to be rescued, life has its currents and tides that sweep into danger the most confident and faithful Christian. Nobody knows when temptations will exert its almost irresistible force. Our only hope is not to wait until the emergency comes, but to build into the life the Christ who is able to keep us from falling.

Prayer—O Divine Helper and Deliverer, we will truly cry to Thee when in trouble, but save Thou us now from these perils and be Thou always in us an ever present help in time of need. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THIS IS WHAT LIFE IS FOR.

"Be kindly affectioned one to another."—Roman 12:10.

It was a family reunion; children, young people and adults were there. All day long they frolicked, and talked and had a good time. We all felt that it was a little foretaste of heaven, and that this is what life is for.

Education, business, profession, money, achievement, nor anything else expresses the true meaning of life; only personal relationships. It is the living with one another in the fulness of happiness and service.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou art our present help in happiness, and we pray Thee for wisdom to fill each day with life's richest meanings. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CONSTANT LOYALTY TO JESUS.

"Ye shall be witnesses unto me."—
Acts 1:8.

Ye are my witnesses was a constant injunction of our Lord. How much do we fail?

Dr. William T. Ellis tells us of an experience of his in a pullman ear. A man spoke sneeringly of Jesus. One of the group spoke up and said, "You speak sneeringly of Jesus. Do you know that Jesus never dodged a single crisis?" This outspoken conviction brought instant apology and gave courage to the entire group, for every one of them, he says, affirmed their faith in Jesus. One cannot estimate the power of speaking up for the truth.

Prayer—Our Father, we are too often weaklings. Forgive us. We are too often silent when we should speak. Help our weakness. Help us to be instant in season and out of season. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NOT WRONG BUT CAST OUT.

"If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch."—John 15:6.

It was a tree Dahlia, rather beautiful, if you looked high enough. But it grew higher than the house. No one scarcely ever saw it. It littered the garden with its falling petals and made work. Besides it encumbered the earth, for nothing would grow close to it. We threw it out, for we felt flowers that can be seen are better than something like that. So a bunch of Petunias now adorns the spot, and every one stops aghast, and exclaims "O how beautiful!"

Life is like that, too. The smile into other's faces, the friendly word straight to other's shoulders, the friendly deed square on the level with those who need, is better than great accomplishments.

Prayer—O, our Father, make us flowers of usefulness along life's way, and make us a blessing. Amen.

FRIDAY.

MODERN ROCK-BASED HOUSE.

"I will liken him unto the man who built his house on a rock."—Matt. 7:24.

It is the summer cottage of a friend, located out on the crest of a cliff by the side of a little mountain. It is built of and on solid granite. All sorts of difficulties had to be overcome in order to find a level for the entire building. But it is a haven of rest from the toil and heat of the day, or for a restful week-end.

How much our Lord must have meant in this parable! It takes a lot of work to build a house like that. It is easier to build with timbers upon dirt. Therein lies the difference between the two lives pictured by Jesus. One is the cheap and easy way, which goeth to destruction. The other is the more difficult but safe way. Good character stands the storms of the ages.

Prayer—Our Father, inspire us to take pains to build for eternity. Help us to make every day a sure foundation. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"MARRIED MOUNTAINS."

"Praise the Lord . . . mountains and all hills."—Ps. 148:7, 9.

There is a growing custom these days to plaster the mountain side with the advertisement of something. To do so should be enough to make us boycott that business. Because it shows a lack of the finer sensibilities. To mar a mountain marks the absence of quality that discerns nature and life's true values.

Yet there are other mountains that are marred. A good man with a bad temper; a good woman in dowdy dress; a splendid young man having his fling; a Christian gentleman indulging vulgarity; the list is long.

Prayer—O Lord, we are in Thy image. We would be without spot and blemish. Forbid that we shall deface our lives or anything that is thine. Amen.

SUNDAY.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life."—
Prov. 4:23.

THE PREACHER FOR THIS WEEK IS
 REV. J. E. McCAULEY, RICHMOND, VA.

THE WAY TO GROW IN CHRIST.

[Preached to the new members of the Richmond, Va., Church, Sunday, April 16, 1939.]

“Add to your faith virtue; and to your virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity (love).”—II Peter 1: 5, 6, 7.

The Christian Way should appeal to this generation more than it did in any other age in all the world's history. This is so because we pride ourselves on being specific. Modern Americanism demands exactness. At great expense to the public and to the individual we try to satisfy this demand. At great cost, our city's streets, our public highways and thoroughfares are marked so that we can read the way and not break our onrushing speed. We need not miss our way by air, rail, or motor, if we are in the least careful. If this is true of our physical travel, it is even more true of our way toward God. For this text opens vistas of old and well established truths so that we can pursue the way.

The apostle wrote this message to those who were already in the faith. It is here we have our starting point. The norm by which we may measure our progress towards God starts with the assumption that we are in the faith and intend to be partakers of the divine nature. Therefore:

“Add to Your Faith Virtue.”

There was a time when the leaders in the Christian Church withdrew from the conflict between justice and injustice and lived in seclusion. It was then that sin in high and low places became dominant in the world and the dark ages were born. Thus injustice ruled the earth and men, women, and children suffered oppression and privation. Such conditions exist now, not so much as in those days, but far more that should be.

If we follow the way as given us in the text we are to add to our faith virtue, valor, strength, or rectitude.

As you have made this initial step toward Christ, and if you intend to follow through as you should, it should be known by you that you can best follow him by resolving to enter the spiritual arena and acquit yourselves like men. The Church of Jesus Christ has never yet reached its zenith. Its nearest approach to what our Lord intended it to be was when it was a militant church. If you are to add virtue to your spiritual assets, you must ally yourself with Christ and fight against all that is contrary to his teachings. You must accept the challenge and seek to rid your life of every weight and sin which would beset you and keep you from being your best at all times. But you cannot stop there. Such conduct would become the very essence of selfishness. There are injustices and unrighteousness enough in the world today to call all the Christian forces in the world into action. When you have set about to purify your own character by adding virtue to your faith, you cannot wait until you have accomplished all within yourself. You can best add to your own resources by joining with others in a common cause. The liquor traffic, the commercialized and desecrated Sabbath, social injustice, political racketeering, graft, and economic disorders, all challenge a unified, militant church. We cannot be truly Christian and wink at such a world. You have no faith if you are not willing to try to help bring about justice here as you expect to receive justice and a place of righteousness in the world to come.

Our Heavenly Father sent His Son into the world to bear His love, to bring good news, to direct us in His way. He also sent Him to bring about a moral and spiritual growth in us here and to teach us the way to help others bring His kingdom on earth.

People on every hand will try to disillusion you by telling you the Church and Christian people ought to preach the gospel and keep out of public affairs. But when they do, remember this word “virtue” which you are told to add to your faith means valor, merit, and uprightness. Without it there is a missing step on our way to Christ.

“Add to Your Virtue, Knowledge.”

There never has been and there never will be a premium on ignorance. Therefore, take this divine injunction to heart. The man who knows is always in demand. This is true in every walk of life.

You need not be surprised when you are told that the greatest ocean of truth, the largest field of untapped resources, and the area where there is the most promise for new knowledge and discovery is in the field of the religion of our Lord Christ. Of course, your speaker has in mind the mission fields which are white already unto harvest, but he has in mind more than that. Even the disciples, the best of Christians, and all the Church combined have only explored one little segment of the truths the Master lived and taught.

If you are to add knowledge to your spiritual storehouse acquire all you can from every resource possible. “Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.” Get this knowledge from the sages, get it from secular history, get it from a study of those who write, preach and teach, get it from your study of God's word, get it by listening to Him speak to you and by putting all He reveals to you in practice. Then you have knowledge at first hand. When God speaks to us and we listen to His voice and do His bidding, then come results as day follows the night. Then we can say with Job of old, “I know that my Redeemer liveth.”

Jesus is much concerned about our knowledge of God and His relationship to his children. He said “Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free,” and “If ye know these things happy are ye if ye do them.” Thus we conclude that knowledge for knowledge's sake alone will not serve its maximum purpose. Jesus knew and would have us learn the full value of knowledge by putting it into use as early as possible. He knew and we are beginning to learn that we learn best by doing most.

FAMILY ALTAR.

It is solely by virtue of a man's departing from God, or by virtue of his not yet finding his real life, that sin and error, pain and disease, fears and forebodings, have crept into his life. It is purely cause effect. Only by closing one's eyes to the inner light, or closing one's ears to the inner voice, does one fail to come into a knowledge of God. Only by uniting the life with the divine life, does one come into a knowledge of God, and experience divine grace.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, we pray for the inner spirit to be like our Lord Jesus, now and forever more. Amen.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The girl who had pneumonia is still confined to her room in bed most of the time. The doctor says she can be up and walking around within another week or ten days. She is very happy to have that assurance. She has been a good patient and has borne her illness with a great deal of patience.

We have had several cases of "flu" but none serious, and no serious developments, we are glad to say. When the children are sick it gives us an extra load to carry. The responsibility is always heavy and when sickness subsides and the patients are out of danger it certainly lifts quite a burden from the writer's shoulders.

The Lord has been good to us during the years. Our death rate has been low. During the twenty-three years of the present administration we have had only three deaths.

We attribute the good health of the children to regular habits. They eat, sleep, work, and play regularly each day. The public school will close on the eighth day of May. It will then keep us busy trying to keep the boys busy. It is not so much trouble to keep the girls busy as they cook, sew, clean house, make beds, iron, and do all kinds of work in the buildings; and it is to be done every day. The writer has often heard it said that "a woman's work is never done." It is true. They cook today, they cook tomorrow, over and over each day as the days come and go.

The boy's work on the farm is different. Their work changes from one thing to another. The weather often breaks in and when the ground is too wet to work, they change to cutting wood, doing repair work, and many other things.

Our girls and boys are good workers and work with a will until the job is finished. It is good for boys and girls to have something to do. It develops their bodies and keeps their minds employed. I pity the boy or girl who has nothing to do, whether he is rich or poor.

The churches can help also by conducting the campaign for CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions in May, and by supporting the Board of Christian Education, the Mission Board, and the Southern Convention. It takes money to do the work which you have commissioned to me. I do my best to keep the expense as low as possible, but at the present time those responsible for payments are finding difficulty in making them. If the churches want this work to go on they most certainly will support it with their contributions. It is a cooperative enterprise. I am putting into it my life. The churches put into it their ideas, their friendship, their prayers, and their money. Together we can succeed!

We, as young people, should be missionary-minded, because the call of Christ was the call of youth to youth. Young people of today are not as interested in missions as they should be, due to the fact that it has not been instilled in their minds by the former generation as it should have been.

Christ said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel"—the command to youth years ago and still the call of today.

Four great problems will have to be partly or wholly solved by youth. These problems are whiskey, crime, war, and the economic problem.

In olden days whiskey was thought to be an aid to the physical and mental alertness. Now every youth in our schools knows that whiskey poisons the body, deadens the mind, and weakens the morals. Knowing these facts, will he not outlaw it more quickly than older people who are still skeptical.

Youth will surely have its training school in the present orgy of crime and learn to deal with it better than it has been dealt with. The youth will probably learn methods or means to eliminate the schools in which criminals are being taught vice and crime of all descriptions.

The responsibility of the youth today is to see that war shall be no more. We teach, preach, and talk the evils of war enough to impress its horrors on every mind. Youth must feel its present responsibility of peace at home, peace in the Church, peace in the county, state, nation, and other nations.

The responsibility of youth today in the economic problem is wider, deeper, and more far-reaching than at any other time in the history of our country. The youth will have to solve the problem of whether or not we will be on equal standards of living.

Youth will have to solve problems not only in the Christian Church, and the social life, but also in this great republic of ours, making it a true Christian democratic nation, a nation that will be outstanding in Christianity and to whom other nations will look for an example.

SUN'S PULPIT.

Build up your divine treasure by adding knowledge.

The author of this text is so human that it sounds as though he is talking direct to a twentieth century audience. And he is. He is so divine in his concept of the divine nature that he gives us a clearly defined way by which we may partake of that divinity. We cannot discuss at length all the steps he gives here. Suffice it to mention those we do not dwell upon. He challenges us to add temperance. The modern world, especially the professed Christian, needs to ponder the importance of this phase of our text. We need to be temperate in our beverages (abstaining from all intoxicants), temperate in health habits, temperate in speech, and temperate in thought.

He then says:

"Add to Temperance, Patience."

Certainly this is a Christian virtue. One which few people possess. We are like spoiled children. We want what we want and we want it now. It is easy to be intolerant, but it is Christ-like to be patient in tribulation and to continue to serve the Lord.

It is imperative that we add brotherly kindness and charity to our character if we are to measure up to what we may become. This was a practice of Jesus. It became a distinctive characteristic of the disciples. "See how these Christians love," was a statement made of the disciples in a foreign country. These virtues are the leading selling influences of our own foreign missionaries. They will become an attractive influence for your character, your church, and the kingdom of God if adopted and practiced.

We Are to Add Godliness.

No individual is likely to become very pious who does not first become

God-conscious. It is said of Francis of Assisi that he would go out into the forest and repeat the word "God" over and over for a long period of time. Why did he do this? To become and to remain God-conscious. There is an inevitable law that we become a part of our environment. Since we think of God as an intelligent, loving, willing spirit, what greater desire could we have than the desire to become like Him? We are aware that no definition can be all inclusive or even comprehensive enough to define God. As much as we may think of the one just given we still want something more real or tangible. We want to add to our Christian lives godliness. Let us strive to mould and shape them after the likeness of Christ. If we do then we become like God. Jesus said, "I and my Father are one," and "I do always those things that please my father." Jesus was devoted to His Father. He was devoted to his cause. And it is given to us to become like Him. "But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on His name."

To fulfill this obligation to God, His cause, and ourselves requires self discipline. I do not agree with the present-day philosophy that tells us to do what we want to do and let the child do those things which he likes only. The Christian life demands as well as commands discipline. We should do right for righteousness' sake. If Jesus wanted His body to die on the cross I am mistaken in my interpretation of the Scripture. But He did it because it was the only way to save humanity. It was for this cause that He came into the world. It was for this that He suffered His body to be crucified. If we would be like Him, let us develop godliness in our lives by knowing the truth, doing the truth, and teaching the truth. Then we can say with the hymn poet,

Nearer my God to Thee, nearer to Thee;
Even though it be a cross that raiseth me;
Still all my song shall be, nearer my God to Thee,
Nearer my God, to Thee, nearer to Thee.

CHANGE OF DATE.

(MRS.) PATTIE P. PARIS.

THE CHURCH AND THE HOME

By REV. ROBERT LEE HOUSE.

Religion centers around the home. Christ made his entry into this world not through the temple or the synagogue, but through the home. The model family is not found in Hollywood, but in Nazareth. Out of Nazareth and its model home has come love, the purity, the sturdy characters, the civilization to which America became heir.

The Church nourishes and is nourished by the home. Jesus and the Bible make much of home life. The early Church was cradled in the home. The Church today is interested in the home because it is still the foundation of the City of God. It must ever be interested in the home, for broken homes send forth so many of their sons as criminals. The Church is, therefore, not interested alone about the house where the home is to be, although that should receive careful consideration, but it is more concerned with the character of those who constitute the home.

What, then, should be the type of home the Church should foster?

1. It should be a temple, for there should be worship. Prayer, devotional reading, and conversation about religion should find natural expression in the home.
2. It should be a school, for there should be instruction. Precept and example are both essential to adequate instruction. Manual, mental, and spiritual training should be a part of the home program. Here the child enrolls in the great university of life.
3. It should be a library, for there should be reading. Religious literature should serve as an antidote to the poisonous influences of secular teaching. The boy who read a party newspaper became a party man; the boy who read a church paper became a lifelong member of the Church.
4. It should be a studio, for there should be pictures and music. Such a home will not be a mere filling station on the highway of life, but an abiding place of perennial enchantment.
5. It should be a retreat, for there should be rest and privacy. There the family may share personal problems, rhapsodies over successes, and lament their failures.
6. It should be a palace, for there should be beauty. The best is none too good for the home. If wealth is lacking there should be beauty even in simplicity.
7. It should be a hall of fame, for there should grow the nation's great. Such was Stafford, Arlington, Ashlawn, Monticello, and Mt. Vernon. The genius of democracy is that the hero and leader of tomorrow may live today in this humble home.
8. It should be a Mecca for relatives and friends. If children and friends are not entertained in the home, they soon look elsewhere for such experiences. The home in which visitors seldom are present is likely to be one where it is easy to become careless about the nicer observances. Bringing to one's home people of genuine quality helps immensely to dignify the home in the eyes of all those living in it.
9. It should be an observatory, for there should be windows that look out upon all the world, the world which God loved and would redeem.

THE CHRISTIAN TEMPLE.
Norfolk, Virginia.

Fifteen years ago this beautiful building was opened for service in the heart of a fine residential community in Norfolk, Virginia. Dr. Leon Edgar Smith was the pastor who led the people in erecting this $250,000 building.

The church is pulpit centered. There is a large, beautiful, worshipful auditorium with choir loft and excellent organ. Adjoining it is another auditorium for Sunday school, and many class rooms, all of which can be turned into one auditorium with a capacity of nearly 2,000. There are adequate facilities for all types of religious education. The basement has a large room which is used for gymnasium, plays, and dining room. The kitchen is well equipped to serve meals.

The present pastor is Dr. H. S. Hardcastle. There are approximately 900 members of the church. This is one of Norfolk's most active churches.

The pastor and people are eagerly awaiting the Southeast Convention which will meet in the Christian Temple on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, May 9-11, next. Those who go from distances will be delightfully entertained by the members of this good church.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

A pageant entitled, "The Broken Seal," was presented by the Ingram (Va.) Christian Church to a large crowd on Easter Sunday night.

There will be a Memorial Service held at Union Grove Christian Church the first Sunday in May (7th). Everyone is cordially invited to attend, especially all former pastors.

The Christian Church at Hopedale, N. C., held a meeting in February with their pastor, Rev. Harold Loman, doing the preaching, in which there were eighty-three professions of faith. Several joined the church.

A Norfolk newspaper reports that fourteen new members were received at Rosemont Christian Church on Easter Sunday and that certificates of membership were presented to those members on the Sunday following.

Miss Mary D. Uline, of Boston, Mass., rendered good service at the Woman's Convention at Elon College last week. She spoke at the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C., on Thursday afternoon following the convention.

At the Maundy Thursday night service at the United Church of Winston-Salem, N. C., three new members were received and six baptized. Holy Communion was observed, the Candle Light Service being used. The total members received since the annual conference session are thirteen.

Easter observance at Holy Neck Christian Church (Eastern Virginia, Rev. Arnold Slater, pastor) included a candle-light communion service on Maundy Thursday and a cantata, The Garden of Joseph, by the church choir on Easter Sunday morning. One new member was received into the church.

Ivor Christian Church (Virginia) had a series of meetings beginning the week of April 9th. Rev. Arnold Slater assisted the pastor, Rev. B. H. Watkins, during this week. Mr. Watkins has a fine parish which includes four churches, Wakefield, Ivor, Burton's Grove, and Barrett's. Wakefield has recently added three new class rooms to their building.

Rev. C. P. Garman, a Christian Church missionary to Japan for thirty-three years, has just concluded a visit among our churches in North Carolina and Virginia. On last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Garman were at Windsor, Va., in the morning, and at Suffolk in the evening. Rev. Mr. Garman says that the merger of Congregational and Christian Churches in Japan has been good for our churches.

The Fifty-Sixth Annual Meeting of the Florida Congregational-Christian Conference was held at Coral Gables Congregational Church April 18-20. The theme was Things That Have Stood the Test. A large number of the Florida pastors and leaders had a share in the program. Guest speakers included Dean Vaughan Dabney of Newton Centre, Mass.; Miss Josie B. Sellers, Principal of Fessenden Academy, Martin, Fla.; and Dr. Robert G. McNicoll, Professor of International Relations in the University of Miami.

FORSYTH-GUILFORD ASSOCIATION.

The Forsyth-Guilford Association of Churches meet on April 30, at 2:30 P. M., at Monticello Christian Church, Brown Summit, N. C.

Devotions will be conducted by Rev. E. J. Sanderson. An address, "The Church in the World of Today," will be given by Dr. D. J. Bowden. After special music, the Open Forum will be conducted by Dr. W. M. Jay. A business session will precede the benediction.

D. M. SPENCE,

UPPER ALAMANCE FELLOWSHIP.

The Upper Alamance Fellowship of Churches, composed of Bethlehem, Berea, Elon, Shallow Ford, Carolina, Hopedale, Burlington, Graham-Providence, Graham, Long's Chapel, Haw River, Union, Mebane, Bethel and Concord, will meet with the Concord Church on Sunday, April 30, 1939.

There will be two sessions, the first being called for 3:30, and the second at 6:00. There will be a picnic lunch served on the church-grounds at 5:00.

Promotional Secretary F. C. Lester will speak at both sessions. At the first session he will outline in a general way our Convention and Conference problems, as he sees them from his recent experience as Promotional Secretary. In the second session he will suggest in what ways the local church can help in meeting these problems. There will be special music and devotionals.

A large attendance is desired, and each church is urged to send representatives, headed by its pastor.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE,
President.

DEDICATORY SERVICE.

On Sunday morning, April 30, the Greensboro First Church will use for the first time and dedicate to the memory of Dr. C. H. Rowland, the chimes which have recently been installed.

Dr. Rowland was the active pastor of this church from February, 1924, to October, 1935, and pastor emeritus from October, 1935, until his decease on May 2, 1938.

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, president of the Southern Convention, will be the memorial speaker. There will be a message from Mr. E. L. Beale of Franklin, Virginia, where Dr. Rowland was pastor for 23 years, and also one from the Greensboro Ministerial Association. Miss Mary Lee Foster of Elon College will bring a message in song.

All friends that can do so are invited to attend this service.

ATTENTION, PLEASE!

The Christian Temple is going to try to furnish lodging and breakfast for the out-of-town delegates who attend the Southeastern Convention in Norfolk, May 9-11. It will help the Entertainment Committee so much if those who desire such entertainment will notify the Committee to that effect. If you plan, even tentatively, to come to the Convention, and if you want lodging and breakfast, will you please notify me at once, so that I can in turn notify my Committee. Thank you for your courtesy.

Those who prefer to stay at hotels will find very comfortable rooms at very reasonable rates. I shall be glad to make reservations.

H. S. HARDCASTLE,
272 E. 39th Street.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

The Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is scheduled to meet at Norfolk, Va., on May 9-11. This is not a delegated body. Anyone can attend who wishes to enjoy the fellowship and to share in the study of our mutual problems. The program listed elsewhere in this paper indicates a profitable session. The Christian Temple is a good place to meet and it is sincerely to be hoped that representatives will attend from all over the Southeast.

The young people will meet in their Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship on Wednesday afternoon and evening, May 10. They transact business in the afternoon, enjoy fellowship at the banquet, and share in the Convention program at the evening hour. They have their own officers, plan their own work, and transact business in their own way. Officers for the new biennium are to be elected, a missionary project will be discussed and probably undertaken, and a proposal to change the date of meeting will be considered. Young people from the eight states of the Southeast are expected to be present for this very important session.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

More than two hundred women and many of the pastors of the Southern Convention met at Elon College last week for the first meeting of the Woman's Convention separate from the biennial session of the Southern Convention. Attendance, interest, and accomplishments seemed to justify the separate session, and it is to be continued.

Visiting speakers included Miss Mary D. Uline of Boston, Mass., and Rev. C. P. Garman from Japan. Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, vice-president, presided delightfully and stirred the minds of the audience with a fine address.

The business of major interest was the decision to use the Staley Memorial money to establish a scholarship at Elon College. Details for this will be worked out by the Executive Committee, or a committee especially for this purpose. Several other projects were suggested. The women were almost unanimously in favor of a project in the home field, but they were not so completely agreed on the adopted project. Of course they will unite, get behind the idea, and add more money to the $2,000.00 now in hand and make this venture a complete success.

SPRINGTIME.

When the rapidly revolving earth turns its north pole slightly toward the sun, our hemisphere has longer days, the earth is warmed, and it begins to produce flowers and fruits. We call it springtime. The birds sing, the farmers toil, and everyone feels the surge of new life. It is a lovely time to drive the highways and enjoy the beauty of the blooming flowers in the gardens by the wayside.

It is also a good time for the churches to beautify their grounds, paint their buildings, increase their Sunday schools, and stimulate the communities of which they are a part. The beautiful earth seems to have no place for hatred and war. Springtime speaks of love and life. The Church helps to make these real in human experience.

THE FIFTH SUNDAY RALLIES.

Two of the conferences in North Carolina have adopted the principle of getting small groups of churches together on fifth Sundays for discussion of problems, acquaintanceship, and fellowship. This seems to be an excellent idea. Many who have attended the meetings speak highly of their value.

Whatever the program may be, however badly we may need to know each other, and regardless of the good it might do for us to be friends and worship together, the meetings will have no value unless we attend. If you belong in one of the rallies on next Sunday, please plan to be there, for you will be needed.

We have real problems to solve as a Church, and as part of the Church. We need the wisdom and cooperation of all who are members, and many who have not yet joined with us. The world will be a much better place in which to live when the Church people learn to do their job better.

Join with your friends for the rallies on next Sunday. A list of the rallies is given elsewhere in this paper.

F. C. L.

There are no mysteries in the Christian religion except the mystery of love, the highest expression of which is to give. God gives himself to man, that is the incarnation. Man gives himself to God, that is conversion. Man gives himself to his fellowman, that is Christian service. The whole of life as it is in Christ and the laws of life are found in one word—love.—“Christian Advocate.”

All spiritual strength for ourselves, all noble ties to one another, have their real source in that inner sanctuary where God denies his lonely audience to none. Its secrets are holy; its asylum, inviolate; its consolations, sure; and all are open to the simple heart-word, “Thou art my hiding place.”—James Martineau.

The world is a looking glass and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face. Frown at it, and it will in turn look sourly upon you, laugh at it and with it, and it is a jolly, kind companion.—Thackeray.

People wish to be settled: only as far as they are unsettled is there any hope for them.—Emerson.

Christian Faith for a Modern World

By MRS. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

[An address, delivered before the Woman's Convention, held at Elon College, N. C., April 18 and 19, 1939.]

St. Paul wrote: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

A modern preacher has written: "Faith is not what the proverbial boy said, 'Believing something you know ain't so.' Faith is a source of meaning, purpose, and courage. It is not a weakness but a strength. Our faith is our approach to reality; it is our conception of the truth about what is on its way toward becoming the what-will-be. It provides our hold upon life. By faith we stand firm and endure when endurance is called for; and by faith we move forward to claim the future for our own."

Paul calls the roll of Old Testament characters who surmounted difficulties which to the man of little faith were insurmountable: Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sara, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Rahab the harlot, Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthae, Daniel, Samuel, and the prophets. Then Paul regrets that time does not permit him to continue; and closes with these words: "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise. God, having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

As we continue the roll to include Jesus, the disciples, Paul himself, and the other apostles and missionaries whose records are within and without the pages of the Bible, we must realize that our responsibility is real. God has planned it. God has provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect.

Many times powerful men have embraced unworthy of their faith, but every person recorded as a leader in the annals of history has had a strong faith.

Also, what is it that has made every great nation? Faith of the people in their leaders to accomplish the popular desire. Such faith gives birth to religion. Indeed our faith is synonymous with our religion.

Today we deplore the plight of our German neighbors because their national desires are so frustrated and their national efforts so misdirected. After Versailles the families around the German dinner table were hungry. Their goosetep had not "brought home the bacon."

Such wealth as there was in the hands of a few. "Christian nations" were extracting un-Christian ransoms. German Christian faith and German national faith wavered. Adolf Hitler proclaimed a new hope, a new faith, a new religion. They listened. Their democracy, born in starvation, was inadequate, so they let it go. They embraced the new national socialism with a zeal all but forgotten. For the sake of an ultimate lavish dinner table and an ultimate self-sufficient nation they enthusiastically endure immediate discomfort. Not only do they endure but they require the unbeliever to conform to their program of faith. "Blind faith," we say, and "a misdirected religious zeal." Yes! But no one dares prophesy its consequences. "The wages of national sin?" Yes! But whose national sin? And to whom will the wages be paid? Every Christian nation has reason to fear the answer to these questions at this very minute.

Christian progress has been in proportion to the constant faith of its leaders. Niemoller is faithful. And his influence is as a bright star showing intermittently as the dark clouds of national Socialism roll in rapid succession across the stormy sky of nationalistic Europe. We cannot calculate the importance of Niemoller's presence in Germany at this time.

I chanced upon an editorial, which said: "We, of Christian faith, including all denominations, must reaffirm our position, call upon the national leaders to deal with one another as Christians or the present civilization is doomed." Nazism could never have arisen except that it is a religion. "Our religion," says an editor, "must challenge Adolf Hitler." How? The answer is through the channels we have, inadequate though these channels appear. We can and must study to be conscientious citizens of a democratic nation. We must by our planning, our work, our faith, and our influence promote the mission of our God.

The Church has been and is the greatest institution in the world. When the ecumenical Church shall exercise its full potential strength we shall know no more war. Hitler will have been stopped. Germany and all the earth will be at peace. If our women will work to cause all of our church members to be conscious of our Church's responsibility for the well being of our state, our state will move forward against the forces of evil with an assurance and confidence the statesmen dare not depend upon at this time.

The Kingdom of God has not yet fully come on earth, but the Church has come. She is the body of Christ. The Church's fore-ordained purpose is to work for the coming of the kingdom. We render our churches unworthy of our day when we do not infuse this confidence into the spirit of those who are actually members of our churches and of those who are influenced by the message of the Church. Our God is a God of truth, justice, and peace. When we who would do His will prove Him, we shall find Him to be all-powerful. If we could work, wait, and pray at our tasks with the zeal and directed energy—with the loyalty and faith of an Albert Palmer, a Toyohiko Kagawa, or a Muriel Lester the day of our Kingdom of righteousness would soon dawn.

Too often your faith wavers, too often my faith wavers, too often we have not enough faith to waver! Too often we have eyes and see not.

The plight of the underprivileged people in America, particularly those often referred to as "poor whites" is an urgent one. When we allow their situation to continue, we have laid the foundation for our American Caste System. "Caste" is almost synonymous with India. From India we learn that a national democracy such as we have, to say nothing of a Christian democracy which we envisage, cannot exist except as every member of the nation is accorded his right to participate in the building of the national policy and in the privileges of the national wealth. Then let us look well to our own household.

Wherever there is suffering, poverty, and ignorance there is work for us. This work is our mission. The doing of this work is the only justification we have to claim the name of our Christ who suffered, bled, and died for a condemned world.

We are timid because we cannot do great tasks and are forgetful that smaller tasks are just as necessary. The lad of Holland could not build the great dyke, but he could stop the leak until another could repair it.

The people who have accomplished great things by their faith have had faith in their prophets, faith in their own God-given strength, faith in their co-workers, faith in the people whom they influence. They have seriously considered their problems together with the far-reaching implications.

We sin when we do not study. We sin against the God of truth when we allow our emotional reactions to surplant our intellectual judgments. There is no person without the power of influencing another. The person with a well-defined plan for his life convince the greatest number of worthwhile people.

No one person can know everything; so scientists choose their respective channels of investigation. Persons with intelligence accord a conscientious specialist the authority due his research. President Roosevelt did that when he called together his "brain trust." But when they were assembled there was something lacking. Each one tried to prescribe for the wrongs of the nation from the light of his specialized insight.

Our national leaders needed specialized study. But President Roosevelt and his highly specialized experts forgot the value of balancing the detailed scientific research of the laboratory against the adequate conception of the synchronized whole. Scientific dissection? Yes, but artistic wholeness also! That is the reason the President's specialists began to resign.

"If you cannot see it as I do, I haven't time to play ball. I must resign with regrets to attend to pressing private affairs." Too often we in our less conspicuous places of responsibility emulate the "brain testers." We do not always approach our problems objectively. We do not keep emotional reactions in check until intellectual reasoning can have a chance.

How do we react when we are called upon to do a piece of mission work (or shall we say, an expression of neighborly love) in our own communities? Are we of faith great enough to cross the traditional railroad tracks or to cross the line of creed or race, even for the benefit of all persons involved? I submit that it is easier for some of us to send money across the ocean than it is to go ourselves across man-made lines here in our own land.

This year we have been advised to study City Shadows. A woman of faith in Durham, said: "Before I read this book, I will go into the shadows of my own city. We think we have a comparatively clean city. I shall see." She went. She went upon the urge of plain common sense. She found poverty with sickness. There was slovenly indifference born of long endured frustration. There were over-painted creatures of sex exploitation. There were the shivering, hungry little children looking from behind doors and the heart-breaking sarcasm of bitterness crystallized.

"What do you want here? You go on and get your living off of your rich church folks. We ain't got nothing for you and you ain't really got nothing for us either. I know you!"

This minister's wife is a real Christian. She did not rely merely upon a book to convince the women whom she would influence. She has also been able to give something invaluable to that girl who in her extremity was selling her frail body.

In the issue of March 9, 1939, THE CHRISTIAN SUN carried an anonymous letter. Its burden was an indictment that we of Virginia and Carolina are unmindful of any negro or tenement problem in the South. There is less disturbance within our bounds than in many other sections. Franklinton College is referred to occasionally, but the writer is correct in accusing the writers for THE CHRISTIAN SUN of being all but silent on these very real problems.

The negroes are by nature and inheritance willing to accept their lot much as they have it. "But," said a sociologist to me recently, "their leaders, those who have caught the gleam of a fuller life are getting very impatient. They desire a chance to develop their God given abilities and we white people are not willing that they should have that chance." The white man controls the wealth of the nation and he inhibits the negro.

The sociologist said, "Wouldn't you think that the white person would know that the negro does not wish to trespass the zones of congeniality any more than the white person?"

There is much misunderstanding concerning our race situation, but I do honestly believe that we white people are more confused and prejudiced than our colored brothers.

The tenant problem is less obvious to many of us, but we know that there is real suffering in this area also.

Here I am reminded of the reactions of a woman who sat in the congregation before a young minister. He was most impressive in his denunciations of social injustices. The lady said as she sat there that she was moved to do something drastic at once in defense of the down-trodden. Their rather small city was not an industrial center; it was removed from the share-cropping area. Of course the domestic service problem needed specific study and remedy. But as she walked home in the bright sunshine she felt the scathing indignation so recently stirred vanishing into the balmy spring breeze and she said: "Where is this problem which I must correct?" In that case, perhaps, the minister was guilty of a mistake ministers sometimes make. But that is another trail! The point is unless we are willing to pursue a course of action which will remedy these social injustices we had best let the sleeping dogs of outraged justice lie. Unless we have faith enough in God's underprivileged children; unless we have faith in the God-given strength within each one of us; and unless we have an unwavering faith in an all-powerful God of justice, righteousness, love, beauty, and happiness, we cannot in sincerity speak out against the diabolical powers of evil which are at our door. Why should we write them up in our Church Paper? But surely there comes a day of awakening. In justice to our SUN writers: Do they not write what they think we want them to write?

We were gratified when Madras said the younger churches still desire and need our representatives among them. (They desire the inspiration and benefit of experience our consecrated missionaries offer.) Our missionaries are fulfilling their purpose in life because they have kept a well balanced program for their lives. They have studied to show themselves worthy; they have labored to prove themselves workers unashamed and they have grown in faith in proportion to their continuation of work. Those who have burned the oil of Christian faith have become great lighthouses before all the earth. Who in Christendom does not know Albert Sweitzer or Stanley Jones?

Did you not hear Stanley Jones say, "I shall bring to America missionaries from India who shall convey a more beautiful conception of Christ than you have ever dreamed." I heard him say it. God knows we need a new awareness of Christ. We need a keener sense of His love. Could we accept the gift Stanley Jones promised? We could if we were humble of heart, earnest of purpose, and fervent in spirit.

What am I trying to say? It is this: We cannot increase our faith unless we begin where we are to use the faith we have. We cannot exercise our faith without a technique. We cannot use the most finished technique unless we love our fellow-men enough to go out and find them. We cannot establish contacts with our fellows unless we have the desire that all of God's children shall be happy. We must desire that they share His blessings according to their varying needs and capacities.

Governments must alter engrained national and international policies and persons must change attitudes and objectives to conform to the plans and teachings of Jesus, the Christ. He triumphed over every sin, both personal and social, through an all-powerful faith in an all-powerful God, who is concerned with the destiny of nations, but who is also seeking the happiness of little children.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

Membership in the Anniversary Club is slowly but steadily growing. We would like to see the temperature in the thermometer move up to greater heights. If all who have already decided to join the club would send in their pledges, the total figure would be inspiring. We need your help and encouragement now. Several hundred pledges before commencement 1939 would mean infinitely more than following commencement.

We are planning for a large number of our alumni for this commencement. It will be necessary to discuss and make plans for the great anniversary occasion one year hence. You will not only want to attend the anniversary celebration but you will want to be one of the group to lay plans for this important date in the history of our institution. There must be at least five hundred of our alumni who plan to join the Anniversary Club. If this group will make their pledges without personal solicitation, it will save travel expenses and time. The saving in expenses can go on the debt and the time can be used to solicit those who need to be convinced not only of their responsibilities and duties but of their obligations and privileges.

Last evening at the Duke celebration a lady came and introduced herself and said, "I have had your letters regarding the anniversary. I have not written you yet, but I will in a few days." Hundreds of others feel that way about it. Why not let us hear from you? Your pledges would lend encouragement and be a deciding factor in the progress of the campaign. My good Brother of the church, Fellow-Alumni, or Friend of the college, as you read, won't you write and mail to the college. Your cooperation will help more than you think.

ANNIVERSARY MEMORIALS.

Reported in the membership column this week are Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Boone. Dr. Boone also sent in memorial memberships for Mr. R. T. Hurley and Rev. W. J. Lane. Mr. Hurley and Mr. Lane were members of Dr. Boone's class in college, the class of '94.

There were eight members of the class of '94. Dr. Boone, Professor S. A. Holleman, Mr. J. H. Jones, and Mrs. E. H. Morris are still living. Mr. D. W. Cochrane, Mr. R. T. Hurley, Mr. W. J. Lane, and Dr. W. P. Lawrence are deceased. Dr. Boone and Mr. Jones (yet to be reported to the office) have joined the Anniversary Club. Dr. Boone has paid the memorial membership dues for Mr. Hurley and Mr. Lane. Half the class of '94 are members of the Club. It is Dr. Boone's hope that other members will join soon so that the class of '94 will be complete. It is a good idea so far as the alumni are concerned to appeal to them by classes. There are no doubt many others who, if they had continued their courses in college, would have graduated as the class of '94. If there are those who know of such, will you please forward their names and addresses either to Dr. W. H. Boone, Durham, N. C., or to the writer of this article. We need to enlist everybody's interest and cooperation that the campaign may begin to move a little faster.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"He must increase, but I must decrease." When John the Baptist uttered these significant words, his fame as a preacher was rapidly increasing. His prophetic messages, his boldness and his spiritual challenge drew great multitudes to him. His call to repentance convicted men of their sins and gave them hope of a great moral and religious revolution. The prominent leaders among the Jews were noted for their brazen hypocrisy and gross immorality. The voice of John was the clear call to a new life and a long-looked-for promise of a new era.

Just at this point a young carpenter from Nazareth was seen among the multitudes listening to John. He offered himself for baptism by John in the river Jordan. At that baptismal service a Voice convinced John that Jesus was the Messiah. Jesus began His work and the crowds began to follow Him. This aroused a spirit of jealousy and envy between the disciples of John and the disciples of Jesus. And there was a strong possibility that Jesus and John might be drawn into a competitive popularity contest, each striving to be the recognized leader, in the new religious movement.

John settled the matter without hesitation. "He must increase." Jesus is recognized as the One whose leadership must increase. "But I must decrease." Hard words to speak. A more difficult thing to do. It is not easy to surrender place and power and honor to another. And the greater the personality the more difficult the surrender, on the human side. Here John shows his real greatness. And herein is the spirit of his inner life clearly revealed. From the standpoint of modern psychology John should have sought to retain his dominant place as a leader. But this man was not teaching psychology, nor seeking to develop a "superiority complex," but he was preaching a gospel of surrender and sacrifice. His work was almost done. The work of the kingdom is never finished. It is endless and timeless. Workers come and workers go, but the work must go on. Others must take their places. And when the decreasing point is reached, it should be a joy to know that the kingdom of God is much greater than any human personality.

This struggle for prominence and prestige is at the foundation of many of the present day social, financial, and religious problems, in local churches, communities, states and nations. War between the nations always grows out of a desire to rise to supremacy, or to shine as a brilliant star among other nations and races. Individual liberty is a priceless heritage of a free people. But individual prominence is not essential to human life.

Ministers have to face this problem and are compelled to choose between self-exaltation and lifting up Jesus Christ in the pulpit and in the private ministry. There is a temptation to preach sermons which please the people, in method and in subject matter. Preaching can become an exercise of oratorical gifts and a display of elocutionary talents. The pulpit can be used to illustrate the actor's ability to qualify as an expert in dramatics. The altar of prayer can become a library for "praying" to the congregation and telling the Lord many things which He already knows. On the other hand the pulpit can be a place where the face of Jesus shines with a charm and glow that obscures the minister and puts the choir in the background of a rugged cross upon a lonely hill. That altar in the church may be a place where the sorrows of earth and the sins of humanity are healed and forgiven by the plea of a man whose soul is in touch with Almighty God.

Who shall increase and who shall decrease? Every thing depends upon the answer. John answered that question in the light of eternity. This is a time when the pulpits and the pews need the impact of an increasing Lord.

DUKE UNIVERSITY CELEBRATES.

This scholastic year, 1939-40, is the centennial year for Trinity College and Duke University, located at Durham, N. C. Since early fall a program of celebration has been in process at this southern center of learning. Different schools of the University have been sponsoring programs that accentuate higher education in their particular fields. Leading educators of the world have been brought to Duke campus, affording opportunities for this section unequalled before in the South.

A great deal of criticism has been directed to men who have accumulated massive fortunes. No doubt but that a great deal of such criticism has been justified. With their faults, however, many have become benefactors. They have been successful in accumulating funds. They have been generous and beneficent in disposing of those funds. The Duke endowment is the constant benefactor to the homeless, the poor in their afflictions, to the different causes of religion, and to education in North and South Carolina and in other parts of the country. The accumulations of the Duke family have been used to perpetuate the family name, not in a selfish but in an unselfish way. The fruits of the labors of the members of this family have been left to bless posterity in the finer fields of human achievements. They gathered their fortunes from the many. They return the benefits of such fortunes to the masses. As you spend a bit of time on this campus that is already famous, you cannot fail to be impressed with what wealth means when dedicated to high purposes. An atmosphere, culture, and refinement is in evidence.

Yesterday, Friday, April 21, marked the beginning of the centennial celebration proper. Representatives of more than four hundred of the leading colleges, universities, and foundations of this and other countries were present in honor of the occasion. The academic procession around the quadrangle was colorful and most impressive. The weather was ideal, and the occasion was inspiring.

President Few, to whom credit and honor are due, presided. The Honorable Clyde R. Hoey, Governor of North Carolina, spoke appropriate and delightful words of welcome. Sir William Bragg, President of the Royal Society of London, spoke, representing foreign universities. President-elect Homer P. Rainey of the University of Texas spoke representing state universities, and President Henry M. Wriston of Brown University spoke representing liberal education as propagated by liberal arts institutions. Following the afternoon program, all were invited to the Sarah P. Duke Gardens for band concert and dedication. The program of the day closed with centennial dinner in honor of the delegates, served in the University Union. Mr. Robert Lee Flowers, Vice-President and Treasurer of Duke University, presided. Mr. Flowers has largely represented the executive force in the unusual affairs of the institution. At the dinner, Dr. Douglas Freeman, Editor of the News Leader, Richmond, Va., and of the biography of Robert E. Lee, spoke on the South's contribution to American Education.

THE WOMEN'S CONVENTION.

Here is sympathy for the few pastors who failed to come along with the women and get the inspiration of the great Missionary Convention that was held at Elon the past week, 18 and 19 inst. There were some two hundred or more, of these good women from the various local Societies, and they had a program and a Convention worthy of their numbers. Many pastors availed themselves of the privilege and attended the meeting and heard with helpfulness the women as they showed to all how a Convention can and should be conducted. One of the great secrets of the amount of business the women can transact in so short a time is the fact that their committees work for days and weeks ahead, and do not wait until they get to the Convention to get together and write hasty reports. These various committees study that on which they are to report, and thrash out their differences and combine their wisdom in shaping their reports and then when the session is called they have reports that mean something. When the women at the General Convention at Portsmouth last year decided to hold their biennial sessions in alternate years of the sessions of the General Convention, there were those who doubted if the Convention would be as successful as in previous years and as well attended. However, the wisdom of the decision was manifest in the great session at Elon the past week.

Another secret of their success is the fact that the women are working away at the really spiritual task of the church, and their work in the local Societies is at the very heart and center of the real task of the church, namely; that of strengthening the church and building up through the church the kingdom of righteousness by extending that kingdom in obedience to the most emphatic command our Lord ever gave. For a real spiritual feast, a feast of good things for the soul, commend me to a Woman's Missionary Convention. One of the strangest things I can think of is that, any pastor, who cares for the spiritual life of his church and the building up of the kingdom of righteousness through his church, will not use his best efforts to organize and keep going a Woman's Missionary Society in his church, since this Society organized and going always proves to be the strong right arm of the pastor.

We congratulate the good women for their great Convention, and the many pastors who availed themselves by coming with their delegations to get the inspiration and enthusiasm that the good women always create in their sessions.

The Easter offerings came in very nicely the past week and this is a source of deep gratitude for all who are concerned in the wholly unselfish and divine task of sharing, not physical bread, but the Bread of heaven, with the most needy peoples of the earth. Ours is a hungry and starving world today, hungering for the Bread of life and starving because they have it not. We who are blessed with the gospel have the privilege as never before of sharing it with the distraught peoples and nations of the earth.

In connection with the Easter offering from our Newport News Church the following letter from the treasurer, Mr. C. D. West, is exceedingly interesting:

My Dear Dr. Atkinson:

Herewith we hand you check for $186.00, in payment of our Mission's apportionment of $170.00, through the Eastern Virginia Conference. Please let us have a receipt for this and oblige.

You will be interested to know that about $160.00 of this amount came through the Cent-A-Meal Boxes.

Of course, in addition to this we are sending from our Sunday school, a monthly Mission offering, which will continue. We are very happy to be able to more than meet our apportionment.

The Cent-A-Meal Boxes properly used are indeed a blessing and certainly do yield great results for missions. We sometimes wonder why all the churches do not get their members to use them.

Gratefully,

J. O. ATKINSON,
Missions Secretary.

"GO ON SUPPORTING OUR MISSIONARIES."

A voluntary tribute to the educational work of foreign missions was made sometime ago by Arthur N. Holcombe, Ph. D., of Harvard University, professor of Government and author of several books, the latest being The Chinese Revolution. Speaking before a joint luncheon of the Japan Society and the Twentieth Century Club, Mr. Holcombe said: "The three things China most needs today are education, capital and peace." In discussing education he concluded: "The best aid we can give China along educational lines is to go supporting our missionaries."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

By MRS. W. M. JAY.

The Woman's Missionary Convention of the Congregational-Christian Churches of the Southern Convention which met at Elon College, N. C., April 18 and 19, was a success from every standpoint. A fine delegation from all parts of North Carolina and Virginia was in attendance more than two hundred strong. The program theme was "Faith without Wavering," and was well carried out from start to finish. Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, vice-president, presided in a most charming and efficient manner, and much of the smoothness and success of the meeting was due to her untiring efforts. The Convention regretted exceedingly that their capable and beloved president, Mrs. John G. Truitt, was unable to be present.

The Elon College Missionary Society members proved themselves to be wonderful hostesses for the occasion and were on the job every minute from beginning to end. Their fine and wholesome hospitality was evidenced at the meetings, in their homes and at a buffet luncheon in the Y. W. C. A. at the close of the Convention.

At two o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Harrell called the Convention to order and with Prof. Robert Morgan at the organ the opening song was sung with real enthusiasm.

One of the encouraging features of the Convention was the good percentage of ministers that were present. Rev. C. P. Garman, missionary on furlough, who has spent thirty-three years representing the Christian Church in Japan, was also present and brought helpful messages. It was a great privilege to have him with us.

Miss Mary D. Uline, Promotional Secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, Boston, Mass., was the principal speaker at the Tuesday night service. Out of her rich experiences in Turkey, France and other foreign countries, she brought an address of much interest and help.

Dr. L. E. Smith was the usual genial host and made every one feel welcome and the lovely reception in West Dormitory further showed the hospitality of both Dr. and Mrs. Smith. This was thoroughly enjoyed and was followed immediately by the banquet in the college dining hall with Mrs. J. Monroe Harris as toast-mistress. A sumptuous meal was enjoyed by the two hundred present and the program was well rendered. Miss Mary Lee Foster and Mrs. W. N. Huff each sang two lovely solos and Mrs. Helen Parkerson Cannon deli-ghted her audience with two readings. Mrs. R. T. Bradford presided at the piano.

The Elon singers contributed a vital part to the program of the Convention with a number of selections at various times under the direction of Mr. Stuart Pratt, director of music. Prof. Thomas Edwards rendered several tenor solos.

It was an inspiration to all to have Dr. J. O. Atkinson in the audience in person and to have his message "I Do Believe" read by his secretary, Mrs. Nash Parker.

The president's message "Christian Faith for the Modern World" by Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell was a real

TO TEARS.

[The following lines, found on Kagawa's desk one morning in September, 1938, are a spontaneous expression of his feeling, written without any thought of publication. They were translated by his secretary and sent to a friend in America.]

Ah tears! Unbidden tears!
Familiar friends since childhood's lonely years,
Long separated we,
Why dost thou come again to dwell with me?
At midnight, dawn, midday
Ye come; nor wait thy coming nor delay;
Nay fearless, with what scorn
Ye picture China by my brothers torn Thy scorn I must accept,
But I'm no coward; pray heed ere more ye've wept;
I love Japan so fair,
And China, too; this war I cannot bear.
"Is there no other way?"
Thus do I search my spirit all the day
Nor ever reach a goal;
I live, but only as a phantom soul.
Like Christ who bore our sins upon the Cross,
I, too, must bear my country's sins and dross;
Land of my love! Thy sins are grievous to be borne,
My head hangs low upon my form forlorn.
Ah tears! Unbidden tears!
Long separated we,
Alas! Has come another day
When I must dwell with thee.

challenge and one for thought and meditation.

Reports were heard from all the departments and conference presidents and all showed a marked degree of growth and success.

Mrs. J. Monroe Harris was elected president for the biennium and we bespeak for her the loyal support of every society member throughout our Southern Convention. Let us be a strong link in this chain of women and young people in this our beloved missionary work. What greater thrill could we get than to feel that we have a part in this great field of missions.

"Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering: for he is faithful that promised."—Hebrews 10:23.

CHRISTIAN FAITH FOR A MODERN WORLD.

Finally when we can say with Margaret Slattery, "Our Father, which art in Heaven, Thy Kingdom come now," then we will be real missionaries.

We have already come far. We honor those who have made straight the way for us. May we add new zeal to the cause and as we, the women of the Southern Convention, launch out on a fuller program of endeavor, let us feel that no task is too little to command our strength if it redeems a suffering soul. Let us not flinch from any task, however big, if it promises freedom to the oppressed. I should like to challenge each woman (and man) here to undertake some work in her own community which she thinks would really command her best strength, both spiritual and physical—not for any recognition it may bring her, but as her part of ushering in the Kingdom of Heaven. Then may this organization renew her faith and strength to fulfill the responsibilities she has courageously assumed and in discharging the present ones equip herself for even greater works. Would that we work as individuals and as members of worthy organizations while it is yet day. "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

IN AS MUCH.

I thought to see the face of God; but I could only see the faces of broken men and women.
I sought to hear the voice of God; but I could hear only the pleading voices of starving children.
Oh, that I knew where I might find Him.
Perhaps I did see His face!
Perhaps I did hear His voice!

THE DREAM.

Some day will man be valued more than gold,
The toiler will be greater than his toil;
Some day the gift of life will not be sold.
In new found freedom men will till the soil,
Earth will be glad, the dawn will call to joy;
The moon will tell God's glory to the world
At Eventide; in respite from employ
The sons of men will see night's dream unfurled
And worship Him who made all life to sing.
There will be peace, there will be wide good will;
The winter time of strife will yield to spring;
Sadness will flee, happiness will fill all eager hearts.
Then shall man be supreme—
At last shall be fulfilled God's wonder dream.

How then shall we define a Christian faith for the modern world? It is to begin where we are to use what we have and to rely upon God's help to accomplish what God wishes to be done.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA SPRING RALLY.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference recently held its Spring Rally at Union Church, near Burlington, N. C. A program of inspiration and constructive work was enjoyed by about 100 young people and their leaders.

We Especially Remember—

How much we enjoyed the presence of Rev. C. P. Garman, one of our missionaries to Japan for the last thirty-three years.

The delicious supper served by the ladies of Union Church.

The fact that we voted to have some definite missionary project to work on for the coming year.

That each active society is to send out Caravans (groups of their members) to present a program to the young people of a church where there is no active young people's group.

The manner in which the meeting was "run" by those twins, Elberta and Roberta Murray.

The very lovely and inspirational half hour of music given to us by Mary Nell Jay and Ida Mae Higgins.

The impressive installation service, conducted by Billie Andes, when the following officers were duly inducted into office: President—Elberta Murray, First Church, Greensboro; Vice-President—Becky McCauley, Union Church; Secretary—Ruby C. BEING CHRISTIAN IN MY LIFE WORK.

(VOCATIONS DAY.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 7, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Deut. 10:12-14;

I Tim. 6:6-12.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Loyalty to Jehovah Rewarded—Gen. 41:38-44.

Tuesday—Faithful in Service—Eph. 6:5-8.

Wednesday—A Good Rule to Follow—Matt. 7:12.

Thursday—Three Christian Tent-Makers—Acts 18:1-4.

Friday—Greatness in Service—Matt. 20:25-28.

Saturday—Soul Above Material Gain—Mark 8:34-38.

The right vocation will determine much of the happiness of ones future. "What shall be my vocation?" is a question which comes into the minds of energetic young people. Some experienced person should be asked to make a talk on "Vocations and Their Effects Upon Character."

Problems (use in general discussion)

1. Tom has been out of work for some time. His family needs the money which he would like to earn. There is an opening in a hotel. Tom is interested in learning the hotel business; but the hotel advertises and sells alcoholic drinks. Tom is a Christian and is facing decision. What would you advise him to do?

2. A high school girl declared, "Christianity and the church have nothing to say about what I shall do, unless I am to be a minister or a missionary." Was she right? Why?

Questions for Thought—

1. What percentage of adults do you believe are not happy in their work?

2. When you have noticed a man unhappy in his work, is the unhappiness due to the type of work he is doing or the spirit in which he is doing it?

3. When Jesus calls men, does He generally call them out of the work they are doing, or does He call them to improve the work in which they are engaged?

4. If you were advising a person younger than yourself regarding the choice of a life work as a Christian, what are some words of advice which you would offer?

The following may be placed upon a blackboard for discussion. Place 1, 2, or 3 before each according to its importance.

When choosing a life work a person should think of:

His own ability; what his talents and aptitudes are; his interests and desires; what he enjoys doing; the needs of the world; what his father and grandfather have done; his duty; the reputation or standing such work will give him in the eyes of his friends; the amount of money it will bring; the amount of preparation it will take; the amount of time and energy it will consume; the length of the vocation he will have; the good it will do.

Suggested Hymns—

"Come, Thou Almighty King."

"Rise Up, O Men of God."

"Lord, Speak to Me That I May Speak."

PAUL CROSSES INTO EUROPE.

LESSON V—APRIL 30, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: When he had seen the vision, straightway we sought to go forth into Macedonia.—Acts 16:10.

LESSON: Acts 15:36; 17:15.

The Impulse to Share.

It was all right to preach and teach in Antioch, but Paul's great heart soon became restless and he felt the urge to carry the gospel to those who were not having the opportunity to hear it. Accordingly he and Silas—Paul and Barnabas had a disagreement over John Mark who had deserted them on the previous missionary journey—started out "to visit the brethren in every city where they had preached . . . and to see how they did." Little did he dream of the significance of what he was about to do. For before he returned to Antioch again he had planted the gospel in Europe, and had started the process that ultimately gave Christianity to the Western world. How many glorious adventures often await us when we put ourselves into harmony with the divine purpose.

A Young Disciple.

On their routine itinerary they came to Lystra. Here they found a young man who was destined to become quite a figure in the history of Gentile Christianity, Timothy by name. It is significant that "he was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium." It helps tremendously to have a good reputation. Happy is that young person who has lived in such a way that the folks in his community speak well of him. A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

How little we know what is going to happen when we win a young man or woman to Christ. How little did Andrew dream of what he was doing when he first found his own brother Simon Peter and brought him to Jesus. When a person wins another to Christ he sets in motion influences and forces for good that reach out into eternity. Truly he that winneth souls is wise.

Frustrated Purposes.

Twice in succession, did Paul and Silas attempt to undertake what they thought they ought to do, in each case, good Christian work and service, in each case to open up new fields for the gospel. But in both cases they were forbidden "of the Holy Spirit." The Holy Spirit sometimes forbids us to do good things as well as bad things. He sometimes closes some doors that He may open others. He makes all things to work together for good to those who love God, to those who are the called according to His purpose. The important thing is that when our purposes, our worthiest purposes are frustrated, we keep an open mind and a responsive heart.

Obedient to the Heavenly Vision.

Turning away from closed doors to the North they finally turned South and came to Troas, famous in Greek history. Before them stretched the Aegean Sea, and beyond that Europe, a whole continent untouched by the gospel of Christ. The thing must have intrigued Paul's mind and heart. In any event that night he had a vision, in which a man of Macedonia stood on the shore of Europe and with outstretched hands asked for help. When Paul awoke he knew that it had been of God. Immediately he made plans to obey the vision, and the next day he set forth and crossed over into Europe. It was one of the significant events in history. The continent of Europe—think of that continent in all its phases, its contribution to the civilization and culture of the world. And the saving element, the redeeming factor in it all has been the influence of Christ and the church, the initial impulse of which came from that little Jew and his companions as they landed on European soil.

The Day of Small Beginnings.

Paul had a vision of a man entreating him to come over to help. But when he landed at Philippi he did not find people crowding around him to hear the story. Indeed he did not find even a synagogue where as was his custom he could preach. All he could find was a few women holding an informal prayer-meeting beside a river. But Paul always used what he had, or took what he could find. Forthwith he began to tell these women the story of Christ. And the Spirit of God moved upon the heart of one of them, a woman of ability and evidently of some wealth, named Lydia. She became the first convert, the first-fruits of a redeemed womanhood in Western lands, who have been given priceless boons by the gospel of Christ. And from this small beginning in Europe there has come all the influences and achievements of the church of Christ, Catholic and Protestant. Who dares despise the day of small things?

Songs at Midnight.

Paul always had a revival or a riot, and sometimes he had both. Philippi was no exception. As is always the case when Christ's principles cut across vested privilege and money-making, things begin to happen. Paul and Silas were arrested, soundly and thoroughly flogged, and thrown into prison. But at night they prayed and sang songs. Perhaps there is something in the order—they could sing songs because they had prayed. How little did their happiness and peace depend upon outward circumstances. Alas, that there are so few of us who can sing in the midnight hour. Stone walls do not a prison make. Men like Paul and Silas could sing under the most unpromising circumstances because they knew whom they had believed, and because in their hearts they had His peace. And there are people who today, even in the midnight of present world conditions, sing praises unto God because of inner resources.

A Saved Household.

"What must I do to be saved? Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." This Philippian jailer found salvation in that earthquake-torn jail through simple faith in Christ. And likewise his household. And as an evidence of his experience he and his family were baptized. It must have been a happy household in the light of that rich experience. A whole family, a whole household coming into the household of faith.

DUKE UNIVERSITY.

Dr. Freeman emphasized the importance of liberal education for the continuance of a democratic government. He warned his audience regarding the future of education as fostered today by church institutions, reminding us that should public donors permit small colleges to perish, that would mean doubling the cost of education to the state and ultimately to the taxpayers of the nation.

Following the dinner, all delegates were invited to Page Auditorium where "The Mikado" was presented by the dramatic clubs of Duke University.

The celebration continues through Saturday, the 22nd, and Sunday, the 23rd. The South is greatly indebted to the Duke family for the unusual opportunities that are now offered in the field of higher education at the university that bears their name.

MONDAY.

"CAUSE AND EFFECT."

"Whosoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6:7.

"He that soweth to the flesh." One that leads a course of life agreeable to his corrupt nature, laying out an estate and bestowing his time and pains to make provision only for this present life, shall reap only corruption and the things of the flesh. One who sows to the spirit, laying out an estate, spending his time, strength and talents, in the dictates of the spirit and for the glory of God, and using his estate for the maintenance of that glory, reaps life everlasting, both here and hereafter.

Prayer—Dear Lord, teach us the principles of saving truth. Help us to embrace and to lead others to embrace thy truth unto perfection in Christ. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"CAUSE AND EFFECT."

"Didst thou sow good seed in thy field?"—Matt. 13:27.

"All the evil, unhappiness, and want, in the world, are attributable to man, and are the direct result of his taking his life, either consciously or unconsciously, either directly or indirectly, out of harmony with the power that works for righteousness and consequently for wholeness and perfection. But when our life is lived in the life of God, and God's will becomes our will, all is and necessarily must be well with us. . . . And thus it is that he who seeks first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, shall have all other things added unto Him."—Trine.

Prayer—Our Father, transform our souls into the infinite spirit of living in a conscious union with Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"CAN'T KEEP IT DOWN."

"There is nothing hid that shall not be revealed."—Matt. 10:26.

Things become hidden and mysteries pervade our life only as we turn away from God. There is nothing hidden of itself. To God all things are known; and he who lives the life of Christ sees with a divine vision that reveals all things to him, certainly, all things that are necessary to the light of the world. To live by Divine guidance is to enter into the realm of His wisdom, and even in the most trivial things of everyday life, yea, even in the simple play of children and the sports that attract the natures of all of us, is never to find ourselves in a state of doubt or perplexity, for it is revealed to us what to do and how to do it.

Prayer—Help us to live, our Father, so that we may see all along the way and understand and be inspired to press on to the mark of the prize of the high calling. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE FALLING OF THE NORTH STAR.

"Take heed that ye fail not to do this; why should damage grow to the hurt of kings (others)?"—Ezra 4:22.

Ralph Conner says that a friend once said to him: "Now, Connor, don't rage. Craig will walk his way where his light falls; and by all that's holy, I should hate to see him fail. If he does, my north star shall have dropped from my sky."

Paul says, "None of us liveth to himself." We are somebody's guiding light. If we fail and fall, somebody else is hurt. Somebody's north star drops.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to keep in mind that we may be a light to somebody. We would keep watch over our souls that we may never let the light go out. O God, help us. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE LIFTING INFLUENCE.

"And he took away the shields of gold . . . and made instead brazen shields."—I Kings 14:26, 27.

And so doth some people let go Christ and their good character.

Moral goodness, unselfishness, generosity, faith to believe in the power of good over evil, and committing the will, the love, and the life to the Infinite God are the golden shields of life.

To neglect God and to undertake to conduct our affairs without His counsel and guidance, necessarily loses moral strength which makes it possible for one to stand against forces of evil that invade his soul. When this happens, we turn our gold to brass. It is our privilege to bear shields of gold, and when we do, we work a great lifting influence among others.

Prayer—O, our Father, give us the faith to claim the finest and highest things of life. Forbid that we shall ever be content with the lesser. Amen.

SATURDAY.

DEFINITENESS OF THINKING.

"Let your conversation be yea, yea, and nay, nay."—Matt. 5:37.

Indefiniteness in thinking is often potent to achieve. This is only half of it; it makes one easy and yielding to temptations resulting to downfall. Life is arduous and filled with problems, and too often we do not know what to do; but a clearcut vision of His righteousness and a living of the inner life unto Him, reveals the way and all will work out well.

Prayer—O God, save us from vacillation. Empower our inner lives with the Christ's spirit, and give us the ability to work ever toward the mark of the prize of the high calling. Amen.

SUNDAY.

DEFINITENESS IN SERVICE.

"Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in Him; and He shall bring it to pass."—Ps. 37:5.

We are definite enough in what we think we want others to do for us, but we are not always so committed in our

ENCOURAGEMENT.

“That I may be encouraged by meeting you.” — Romans 1:12. (Moffatt.)

It is Paul, campaigner for Christ, valiant, intrepid, mighty missionary, who wrote the words of our text. Paul was expecting encouragement from a church, a group of people, in a very difficult place and in the midst of terrible temptations. He wanted to meet people who were struggling hard that he might be encouraged in his hard struggle.

I.

I have long felt that more and more we all should practice the ministry of encouragement. I do not mean that we should become flatterers, glib with cheap praise as some do who laud others that they may profit by it, but use more often honest commendation. The other is tawdry. But if encouragement is done with meaning and feeling, and not mere chatter, folks can be helped, and often by those who are the most hard pressed.

For example, there is the salesgirl who, all day long deals with folks who are in a hurry and impatient, and then we come along with our impatience fairly bristling from us, and add to her burdens. There are workmen, and I know this for my father employed them, who will appreciate the encouraging word. All these are just human beings, just as hungry for commendation as any one of us, and maybe needing it far more than we.

Now how long has it been since you encouraged some man or woman or youth who is having a hard time of it? We know of those very aggressive Christians who believe and act as if all of life is a fight. Much of it is. Sin must be faced boldly. But do not forget the ministry of encouragement. As some one has said, “Most of us are bearing hard and heavy burdens.”

The thinking of too many is that in this world of strife each man must be for himself, and if one fails and is trodden under foot it is unfortunate, and the rest of us must go as if nothing ever happened. And as for encouragement, some say not too much of that can be used, for all what people need is encouragement, but cleverness, hardness, and a knowledge of the rules that men have made, and how to play them, and how to beat them.

But this thinking is completely wrong and utterly inadequate for our world, to say nothing of being millions of miles removed from the spirit of Jesus Christ, and if kept up, and done universally, as it appears at present it will be done, it means that before many more generations are born, we will be again in a period worse than the dark ages.

The finer spirit is as Thomas Curtis Clark has written:

The touch of human hands—
 That is the boon we ask;
 For groping, day by day,
 Along the stony way,
 We need the comrade heart
 That understands,
 And the warmth, the living warmth
 Of human hands.

The touch of human hands;
 Not vain, unthinking words,
 Nor that cold charity
 Which shuns our misery;
 We seek a loyal friend
 Who understands,
 And the warmth, the pulsing warmth
 Of human hands.

The touch of human hands—
 Such care as was in Him
 Who walked in Galilee
 Beside the silver sea;
 We need a patient guide
 Who understands,
 And the warmth, the loving warmth
 Of human hands.

II.

So is there not some child, some youth, some hard pressed man or woman to whom you can bring encouragement? If there is not one among all the people in the world, or one in your community in which you live that you can reach by word, or letter, or deed, then you are either spiritually blind and insensitive to human need, or living in some sort of a paradise of which one should be ashamed to speak in this heavy burdened world.

The ministry of encouragement must have been in the early church. For we know that that group suffered but became more noble in spirit and larger in numbers. Running deep down, from heart to heart, in those black, but triumphant days, there was for each other the ministry of encouragement.

So you of our church today who have faith in mankind tell the world how you came to have that faith, and tell the world the reason for your holding on to it. You who have faith in the nation tell the world what you have seen that gives you this faith. And you who have faith in God tell that abroad, tell why you have it, and why you know you will have it always.

III.

Think of the little encouragement our Lord received from men! There he was aiming to build the Kingdom of God, and the crowd cried out for more miracles, the leaders trying to snare Him and one of His disciples plotting to betray Him. I believe that almost from the first our Lord, knowing folks as He did, carried an inner cross in His heart. The disciples fished, exchanged money, collected taxes, tilled the soil, all important, but after all only waiting for the overthrow of the Romans so that they in turn could supplant them. Little encouragement for Jesus in that. His followers tried to discourage a blind man from going to Him, little children from going to Him, the man who was casting out devils, and Jesus Himself from going to Jerusalem. But when we turn to the words of the Master we find hardly a single experience but what in it there is encouragement for others.

IV.

Now how did our Lord give so much to men in the way of encouragement when He received so little from them? How did He find encouragement in the darkest hours? If only we could find how that came about what a help it would be for many of us. For we need access to just the same source of encouragement from which He drew strength. We may be sure that it was not on the surface. It was not superficial. Deep down there must have been something that kept Him moving on and out to Golgotha. For I cannot believe that He stumbled out there to Calvary mentally benumbed, or that He was duty to others. Remember that Jesus said, “The best fellow is the one who serves most and best.” He himself came “not to be ministered unto but to minister.” Christian living is not receiving something but giving something. Whether arduous or problematic, it should be committed to noble tasks. The most limited personality can find something to do.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to see some place where we can be utilized for others. Give us definite tasks and forbid that we shall forsake them. Amen.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

It has been the custom here to let the little children go barefoot when the dogwood gets in full bloom. Several weeks ago we had a few warm days and the boys came in with blossoms half open insisting that they be allowed to take off their shoes; but we would not accept half-open blossoms. The weather has been so cold and rainy since that they got over the fever and they still wear shoes although the dogwood is in full bloom.

The Southern Convention Woman's Missionary Conference met at Elon College April 18 and 19. It was a real pleasure to have the opportunity to entertain some of the delegates at the Christian Orphanage. We were also delighted to have quite a number of the delegates to visit the orphanage who had never had the opportunity to visit the orphanage before. Our experience is that when people visit the orphanage and see our plant and our children, they realize the opportunity to help the boys and girls who have been left homeless.

A number of Sunday schools have made visits to the orphanage in a body on Sunday afternoons and looked it over. We find they are always more interested than before. We are glad to have them. I fear that Sunday schools do not come to the orphanage on picnics because they might be expected to give the children dinner, which would be quite a job. We don't expect that. We have our regular schedule, and your picnicing on the grounds will not interfere with us at all.

We hope to have water to fill the swimming pool this summer. We are drilling our new well deeper with the hope of finding water. We are so short of water and it takes lots of it to keep little boys' hands, necks, and ears clean. We are praying that we will strike a good flow within the next fifty feet. Then when Sunday schools picnic on our grounds, the children can enjoy the swimming pool. We will furnish a picnic table on our campus under the shade of the trees. We will furnish iced water also. We extend to all Sunday schools a cordial invitation to picnic here and see your orphanage plant which you are helping to support.

acting a part in passing drama, or that He was playing up to the crowd. There must have been some source of encouragement that kept Him moving toward that cross to which He did not want to go.

I have often wondered what was passing through the mind of Christ during those last hours when He was lied about, deserted, went through the streets of Jerusalem with that heavy cross, and a thoughtless crowd jeered, a stolid soldiery abetted, and as unscrupulous leaders gleefully agreed to His death. What was He thinking?

Could it have been something like this:

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil,
For Thou art with me;
Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me . . .
Nevertheless I am still with Thee.
Thou hast holden me by my right hand
I am thine.

And underneath are the everlasting arms.
And underneath are the everlasting arms!
Yes, we can be sure that something like this was in our Savior's mind. It must have been or else how could he have gone on? And what was His source of encouragement can be ours.

In Memoriam

HOLLAND.

In the passing of Mr. Abram Thomas Holland on February 10, 1939, the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church, of which he was an honorary member, has lost a faithful friend. For many years Mr. Holland was associated with this organization, and was always interested in the work undertaken by its members. He was ever ready and willing to lend his good judgment and wise counsel in matters pertaining to the society's best interest.

Therefore, be it resolved:

That the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union bear witness to the inspiration and support given it by Mr. Holland by making it a matter of record; and,

That the example of true brotherhood set and maintained by him be emulated by all who remain to carry on the work; and,

That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this organization, a copy sent to the family as a testimonial of the esteem in which he was held, and that a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

NOAH.

Mrs. Sophronia Williams Noah was born on June 18, 1863, and departed this life February 15, 1939, at the age of seventy-five years. She had made her home with Mrs. L. D. May, Gibsonville, N. C.

She left to lament one son, Floyd Noah, Greensboro, N. C.; one brother, J. J. Williams (since deceased), Route 2, Elon College, N. C., a number of other relatives, and a host of friends.

Early in life Mrs. Noah professed faith in Christ as her Savior. About twenty years ago Sister Noah moved to Elon College from Orange County, N. C., bringing her church membership to Shallow Ford Church. Her membership has been very helpful and inspirational to many. She had many friends around Elon College. All who knew her held her in high esteem. She will be greatly missed.

Funeral services were conducted from her church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. L. Neese, and interment was made in the local cemetery. May the good Lord comfort all the loved ones. L. L. WYRICK.

FULTON.

James G. Fulton was born at Belew Creek, N. C., February 17, 1874, and died March 31, 1939. He professed faith in Christ and united with Belew Creek Christian Church in his early manhood, remaining a true and loyal member until the burdens of life were laid aside. He married Miss Prudie Linville, and to this union were born four boys and three girls, all of whom survive. "There is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel."

Funeral services were held from the home and church by his pastor and a former pastor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield. His body was laid to rest in the church cemetery underneath a great array of beautiful flowers.

May He who doeth all things well bless and comfort the bereaved and raise up a man to take up the great work he laid aside, is the prayer of his friends and pastor.

G. H. VEAZEY.

SHIFLETT.

Mrs. Julia Shiflet (nee Eaton) was born in Rockingham County, Va., near Elkton, in 1866, and died at her home near Dyke, Va., April 7, 1939.

She is survived by her husband, John H. Shiflett, one sister, and one brother of Rockingham County.

Mrs. Shiflett joined the Christian Church when she was eighteen years of age and lived a consistent Christian life. She was a member of Mount Olivet (G) Congregational-Christian Church at the time of her death.

The funeral was conducted from the church by her pastor and interment followed in the Church of the Brethren cemetery near Dyke, Va., April 8, 1939.

M. W. MANN, Pastor.

BOWEN.

William Cecil Bowen, infant son of Jordan and Hattie Rice Bowen, was born March 20 and lived only two weeks. The young parents and other close relatives are greatly grieved. They are all followers of the Savior and bow in humble submission to the Father's will, knowing that the dear little soul is in Heaven.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

It is not too late to get material for your Mother's Day program from the Board of Christian Education at Elon College, N. C.

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, N. C., is this week conducting a revival at Franklin, Va., where Dr. Elwood W. Jones is pastor.

Rev. J. L. Neese, of Reidsville, N. C., is this week and next aiding Rev. S. W. Phillips in a revival meeting at Elm Avenue Church, Portsmouth, Va.

Good reports have come in concerning the Fifth Sunday Rallies. Some of them are very well attended, but some of the churches haven't yet gotten into the habit of going.

Rev. T. N. Lowe of Hopewell, Va., recently had the misfortune to fall from a ladder and break his right arm at the wrist. Brother Lowe seems to be improving and it is hoped that he will soon be well again.

The Board of Christian Education at Elon College, N. C., can supply to pastors and leaders pamphlets giving program suggestions for the observance of Rural Life Sunday, which is May 14, or May 21.

A revival meeting will begin at the Christian Church, Liberty, N. C., on the night of May 7, with the pastor, Rev. Harold Loman, as preacher. The meeting will continue for two or three weeks. Visitors are invited, and prayers are solicited.

A framed picture was given to the largest church group present at the spring missionary rallies in Georgia, which were held during March. THE CHRISTIAN SUN regrets that it did not have the interesting program in time for publication before the rallies.

Rev. Harold Lowman of Greensboro, N. C., has recently held a revival in the Methodist Protestant Church of Draper, N. C., with 164 professions and reconsecrations. A large number united with the churches as a result of the revival.

Rev. Arnold Slater, pastor of Holy Neck Christian Church, was the leader of the quiet hour at Holland Christian Church on Wednesday evening, April 19. The Holland pastor, Rev.

W. B. O'Neill and his people are working to build up the attendance at these mid-week services.

This is the last call for attendance at the Southeast Convention which is to be held in Norfolk, Va., Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of next week. Meet us at the Christian Temple, Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock for a great fellowship and inspirational gathering. Everybody will be welcomed.

The First Congregational Church of Torrington, Conn., had snow and sunshine for the setting of their Easter program. The annual sunrise service was held. At the regular morning worship hour twenty-three members were received. On Good Friday evening the pastor, Rev. Carl R. Key directed the presentation of the peace play, The Terrible Meek.

Rev. Marvin Mann reports that Pre-Easter services were held in four of his churches with the following visible results: Antioch, accessions—professions of faith, 3; letter, 1. Bethel, accessions—profession of faith, 10; letter, 5. Mt. Olivet (R), accessions—professions of faith, 2. Mt. Olivet (G), accessions—professions of faith, 2. Total, 23. Four babies were baptized at Bethel.

Union Methodist Church, 229 West Forty-Eighth Street, New York City, will be open day and night to aid visitors at the World's Fair. They can give expert advise concerning things to see, places to eat and sleep, and can otherwise render service. "To save people from being exploited the church gladly offers its services to the church people coming to the World's Fair." Those interested may write Rev. C. Everett Wagner, minister of Union Methodist Church, at the above address.

SHALLOW FORD.

Easter services were held at Shallow Ford Christian Church on Good Friday, Saturday, and on Easter Sunday. Rev. B. J. Earp brought three stirring messages on the subjects, The Wounded Christ, the Dying Christ, and The Living Christ. Brother Earp endeared himself to the congregation during his short stay. We feel that the undertaking was worthwhile. It was a new program. There were five professions of faith in Christ and four accessions to the local membership.

There is a live Sunday school, an active Christian Endeavor Society, and a large basement is being excavated, which are evidences of a growing church. We are thankful for all blessings received and pray that the Lord will continue his blessings.

A WOMAN'S CONVENTION RESOLUTION.

A very important resolution voted by the women in their recent Convention was to the effect that each church is asked to send at least one person to the Elon Summer School of Leadership Education who will study under the missionary, perhaps take a course on the Study Book and be prepared to teach it in the local church, collect materials for missionary education in the home church, and otherwise be prepared to lead in missionary education in the local church.

This would in no way interfere with the sending of leaders to other Missionary Conferences for special study, but it would prepare some person in each church to be a leader in this phase of religious education.

It is to be hoped that the churches will join in this program, send such a person to Elon for the Conference on June 19-24, next. The cost of the week at Elon this year will be $8.00 per person. Churches and missionary societies can make a good investment by paying the way of the woman's society president, or some other person who will take the responsibility of missionary education after getting the training.

The Mission Office is at Elon, the Secretary will doubtless be delighted to have Conferences with leaders, a missionary of our own will be on the faculty of the school, arrangements can be made for the teaching of the Study Books for the coming year. Rev. W. E. Wiseman, Greensboro, N. C., is Dean of the Summer School, and will be glad to receive suggestions for this special work. The school is sponsored by the Board of Christian Education located at Elon College, N. C., and that Board will gladly receive suggestions concerning this work or give further information about the entire School.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS.

For several years the young people of the Southeast have been considering undertaking some missionary project of their own. So far nothing definite has been done. At the meeting in Norfolk next week a definite proposal will come before the representatives of the Southeast. What they will do about it remains to be seen, but there is no doubt but what it will appeal to the representatives present, and will challenge the imagination of all those who hear about it later, if it is undertaken.

Young people are interested in building friendships that reach beyond national and racial boundaries. They want to make real the theory of brotherhood. They believe that Christianity has practical applications that will bind the people of the world together in cooperative work. They are not interested in conflicts that lead to war. If young people can keep their idealism until adulthood they can change the world in which we live. One way to insure this fine type of idealism is for young people to become acquainted with people of other nations, and to share with them in their work. This is one major reason for missionary activity in our churches.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

In the Southern Convention there are eighty-four pastors, two hundred Sunday school superintendents, numerous church officials and officials of church organizations, and perhaps a thousand or more Sunday school teachers engaged in religious education. This army of perhaps two thousand men and women are trying to teach the religion of Christ. It is a noble army of the Lord engaged in conflict with evil ideas, superstition, and ignorance.

Back of them are parents in probably six thousand homes who are interested and who do their bit in educating in religion. Many public school teachers are real aids to the church in promoting religious ideals and the teaching of religious ideas.

With all this splendid force at work in religious education it is a bit disappointing when one discovers that many grow to maturity in our churches and homes without ever learning much about the fundamental facts of the Christian religion. Tests in public schools and high schools and even in colleges indicate that the Church has not succeeded very well in her educational task.

There must be some reason. Among other reasons must certainly be listed the fact that most of the teachers are poorly prepared for their task. They have—most of them do—a religious experience and a desire to be helpful. This is essential, and goes far towards preparing one for the work. They usually have some idea of what is in the Bible, but this is often not a very perfect knowledge. In the matter of knowledge of methods, materials available, and goals to be achieved there is much to be learned yet.

It is the purpose of the Board of Christian Education to put within the reach of all those who work in the field of religious education helpful materials and courses. Books can be borrowed without cost. Materials on every phase of religious education are available for the asking. Training schools are held in local churches and in community groups. The Summer Conference at Elon is conducted especially for leaders and prospective leaders.

If you are a teacher of religion, your Church wants to help you to succeed. You are engaged in a good work. There are men and women who are giving their lives to the study of this field. Their knowledge is at your disposal. Let your church help you to be the best teacher of religion that you can be. The Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., is your friend and servant.

"Even the wise when made aggressive by wine shall fall to chatter words which were better far unspoken."

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Put up again thy sword into his place." Thus spake Jesus in the most trying crisis of His ministry. And the presence of a threatening mob, armed with swords and staves, seemed to justify the use of a sword in defense. But Jesus was teaching a new lesson and declaring a fundamental principle of His kingdom, in which military force was not to have a predominant place.

Jesus did not need defense. He does not need that now. He is His own defense. His word defends itself. His personality defends Him. His life is its own tower of strength. The followers of Jesus, who take it for granted that they must prove the claims of Jesus, by logical argument and historical statements, are missing the mark. The messengers of the cross are exhorted to declare the gospel of a risen Lord. They are not commissioned to prove the truth of the resurrection. Jesus gave His own indisputable proof that He who was dead is alive. The gospel of the Son of God has already proven itself by its power and works. The Church should accept this proof and challenge the world to believe, not blindly, but rationally, in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Christians are justified in defending themselves. But the kingdom of God is not extended, nor established, by swords, guns, bombing airplanes, standing armies and powerful navies. All these may be essential in the promotion of national security, but they are not the instruments, ordained and sanctioned by the Lord Jesus Christ, to establish His kingdom of earth. They may defend the church of Christ in many ways, but it is difficult to prove that they promote the peace and power of Christianity. Jesus had invisible resources of super-human power at His command, but He chose the way of suffering and sacrifice upon the cross and the preaching of the gospel to build His church.

The sword (war) does not make any constructive contribution for Christianity or higher civilization. It confiscates property, destroys high ideals, takes human life and lowers moral and spiritual standards. "They perish with war. History verifies the way of Jesus, as the better way for individuals and nations. The nations should seek peace instead of war.

Put up the sword. Beat it into a plowshare. Use the weapons of destruction for saving and blessing human life. Do not destroy, but build something finer and better than the world has yet dreamed for mighty empires and worldly people. Put character above suspicion. Inspire confidence by unselfish love. An international disarmament conference could accomplish great things. But an international, inter-racial conference on promoting love and good fellowship could accomplish more, for these must take the place of the sword.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

The Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches met in biennial session at Elon College April 18 and 19. This organization, beginning like the kingdom in a very small and unpretentious way, has grown to most helpful proportions. It has proved to be the leaven in our church that has worked wonders among our people. It has been the main inspiration for our expanded missionary program. The church is indebted to those who organized the Woman's Convention and to the members of this organization themselves who have worked consistently and faithfully for the advancement of our church through this organization. The Woman's Convention has heretofore met in conjunction with and as a part of the Southern Convention itself. At the recent session of the Southern Convention in Portsmouth, Va., the women voted to hold separate sessions.

The recent session at Elon College seemed to prove the wisdom of this move. The attendance was large—larger than the combined Convention at Portsmouth. This is not a delegated body but a meeting of the whole. Every member of every local society is invited and urged to attend. Attendance becomes a point of excellence. The advantages of such a meeting are evident. There is an inspiration in a large gathering for a serious purpose. Members of local societies receive information first hand. They know about goals, plans and purposes. It isn't necessary for them to wait until some delegate reports. Most reports of such Conventions are inadequate. They certainly cannot convey the atmosphere and enthusiasm of a great gathering. It means progress when a large number of the constituency learn for themselves the ideals and purposes of an organization.

It was a genuine pleasure for the college church, the college and community to entertain this Convention in its first separate session. Mrs. John G. Truitt, the President, was unable to be present on account of illness. Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, the Vice-President, presided with grace and efficiency. A good program was arranged and executed with precision and effectiveness. Our pleasure in entertaining the Convention was so genuine that an invitation is hereby extended to the Convention to hold its next session at Elon College.

FROM WAKEFIELD, VIRGINIA.

The Wakefield Christian Church for the first time observed Holy Week services beginning on the first Sunday evening in April and closing Easter Sunday morning. The services were well attended.

On Friday evening we observed the Parish Communion Service. At this service members of all the churches of the parish were present, and there were sixty-three members who came to the altar and knelt for reconsecration, receiving the broken bread and wine, as symbols of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord and Christ. Truly, this was a great service, but our hearts were made heavy as we had for our subject, "The Suffering Christ." We went home with a great burden on our souls, conscious of our neglect and indifference to the cause for which Christ gave himself.

Sunday morning came with a bright sunshine and everything seemed to say "Christ is alive" and there is new hope. Even the nations of the world as they talk of war and conflict must hear something say, "Peace on earth and good will to men." Truly it was the Spirit of the Christ that came to our minds and hearts, for it was Easter, and Christ was alive, and had found a dwelling place in the hearts of his people. We had joy unspeakable that filled our souls. Then came the Sunday school hour, boys and girls, young people, men and women, with smiling faces and joyful hearts came to give us the largest attendance since I became the pastor of this church.

Then the worship hour, the church was filled to capacity. Truly, when He ascended up on High, He led captivity captive and gave gifts to men. A great service in which five new members were added to the church.

FOR THE CHILDREN

YOUR MOTHERS.

Most of you know that the second Sunday in May is Mother's Day—a day when people all over the United States stop to consider just what mothers do for their children, and just what mothers have meant to this country in the influence they have had on their children.

It would be nice if you could plan ahead to do something special for your mother on that day—May 14. Why not have your Sunday school class give a party for your mothers on the day before Mother's Day, or invite them to your class on that day and give a program for them.

Begin now to save your money—and try to earn some extra money between now and then—so that you can get something nice to give your mother on that day. Even more than something you have bought, your mother might like something you have made for her. Perhaps you can grow a flower, put it in a pretty jar, and give it to her on Mother's Day. Another nice thing to do is to tell your mother that you children—if you have older brothers or sisters—will get the dinner and let her rest on Mother's Day. Or if necessary, you can stay at home with the younger children and see that your mother gets a chance to go to church that day.

THE TRUE STORY OF A BIRD AND A WOMAN IN CHINA TODAY.

Nelson Eddy doesn't know it, but he has an understudy and namesake in Tehsien, Shansi, North China.

Right in the heart of "occupied" China, where not so long ago the war raged, many suffering people and in particular one American nurse, Miss Helen Dizney of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, is being made happy by "Nelson Eddy of Tehsien."

"A canary has come into my life," writes Miss Dizney, a Christian nurse who worked through the war and now faces the uncertainty of "behind the lines." "He is so blond and his music is so devastatingly sweet that I call him Nelson Eddy."

"I once had two other canaries in Taiku, named Safed and Keturah," she continues. "They were eaten one night by an unspeakable vile rat and their bones lay under the stone bird bath beneath the wisteria arbor in front of the Women's Hospital. I am told that the Chinese call a canary a 'white jay bird.'"

Miss Dizney, although nursing and training Chinese nurses, is also an expert in public health work in which she has pioneered in Shantung Province. She has pushed yearly vaccinations against the dread small pox, or "heavenly flowers," as uneducated villagers call it, and trains students, Christian Church folks and other volunteers to go out into the villages and vaccinate. But they plan the campaign at an auspicious time—because of native superstitions—namely, when the apricot trees start blooming.

Among the patients in the daily clinic in the Tehsien Hospital, Miss Dizney reports a mixture of cases—a leper, a tubercular man, many with bad eyes, a 16-year-old lad, victim of bandits, and a youngster suffering from kalaazar.

"I took Nelson Eddy to the hospital to cheer the small kalaazar patient," she writes. "Anything to counteract the depressing effect of a bath."

Paradoxically the war has passed over, but has not left Tehsien. The week before Miss Dizney wrote, heavy firing had sounded for two hours from the barricaded city gates. Constantly she sees many army trucks and soldiers passing through.

"At least once a week the postman says, 'no train today.' That means the Chinese irregulars have torn up the railway tracks somewhere between Tientsin and here. That means that the nearest village to the interrupted track must be 'punished' whether the irregulars came from there or not."

In direct contrast to this statement about reprisals on innocent villagers, Miss Dizney tells of a Japanese maternity case cared for in the Christian hospital where obligingly the young mother was presented with a son. A Chinese nurse trained in the mission hospital with special midwifery experience, had charge of the case.

While the war has interfered seriously with her work, it has not lessened the need. Miss Dizney is pushing the spreading of the gospel of cleanliness as well as godliness, among the villagers helping the people to help themselves. The Tehsien mission hospital continues to relieve suffering and to train Chinese nurses.

The Chinese government, prior to the war, had been making great strides in public health. As always the Christian Church and Christian missionaries have been in the vanguard of progress for better public health.

Miss Dizney is said to be a distant relative of Walt Dizney, although she herself does not know what, if any, connection there may be. She was born in Jellico, Tennessee, and educated at Berea College and West Suburban Training School, Chicago (R. N.). She taught in the Kentucky mountains and in a mining camp in the U. S. A. before going to China as a nurse under the American Board in 1920.

Miss Dizney is the daughter of E. F. Dizney, 1819 G Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., and the sister of Margaret Dizney at the same address, and of Walter C. Dizney, Kirkwood, Mo.; Howard Dizney, Lenaure, Ky.; William L. Dizney, Chicago, Ill.; and Mrs. Howard M. Fields, Middleboro, Ky.

Miss Dizney is the special representative in China of the Berea Kentucky Congregational Church and the First Congregational Church of Oak Park, Ill., and Congregation and Christian Churches in Tennessee, Alabama, and Georgia are deeply interested in her and her work.

THE QUESTION BOX.

WHAT IS THE MILKY WAY?

On looking at the sky on a clear night in summer you can see a shining circle extending completely across the heavens from north to south. This is popularly called the "Milky Way" because it looks something like a stream milk. It is produced by many stars—not hundreds, or even thousands, but actually millions of stars. They are so far away and there are so many of them that we cannot see each separate star, but with a strong telescope many of them can be seen. When you consider that each of these stars is a sun like our sun, some smaller, but many larger, you begin to realize how very big the Universe is.

"The infallible recipe for happiness is to do good; and the infallible recipe for doing good is to abide in Christ."

ANointed EYES.

Dr. William T. Ellis, world traveler and syndicated Sunday school lesson commentator, recently declared, "Anointed eyes are a primary Christian need. To glimpse the highest, and then to follow it to the farthest: That is the Pauline program."

Dr. Ellis is imminently correct in declaring that the deepest needs of man are seldom expressed and are far beyond desires. The people who need help most are not those who come asking for help, but those who do not consciously realize their need. It was the need rather than the desire of the people of Macedonia that disturbed Paul's dreams and thus caused that adventurer for God to cross over into Europe and preach the gospel there also. As a rule the heathen, the ungodly, the unsaved whether nearby, here at home, or far away do not come with outstretched hands and pleading words. They have to be shown, often at great expense, patience and effort that they are in need. And then after their desire for help is kindled, the way is easy and results are assured. The most difficult process is that of showing the most needy that which they most need. Our missionaries at home and abroad will tell you that those whom they have helped most were the very ones who to begin with did not want their help. We who are blessed with the gospel little realize what power ignorance and superstition have over the minds and lives of those who do not know the saving power of our Lord. This writer had a schoolmate at Harvard, one who in his native land heard a missionary preach and accepted Christ, though he knew at the time he was imperiling his own life when he did so. This school-mate told your writer that when he went home from the meeting in which he had accepted Christ the news of his conversion to Christianity had preceded him and his father stood in the door and told him never to darken that door again, while his mother inside screamed in awful anguish, "You are no longer my boy, but an illegitimate child, whose face I hope never to see again." This school-mate told me that he walked all of that night to put as many miles as possible between him and the home and the parents for whom his heart yearned, and while he had never seen that home and those parents since that eventful night, when he was through with his schooling he was going back to the land of his nativity and there somewhere in the neighborhood of his former home he expected to spend the remainder of his life, teaching and preaching the blessed gospel of his Lord to those who in their native state and condition hated with passionate and blinded prejudice the gospel that now meant everything to him.

Paul's out-reaching spirit is indeed that spirit that marks the church at its best. The centuries since Paul have proven what Dr. Ellis in the article referred to declares that the genius of Christianity is that it is a going concern, "Where it is not missionary, it is moribund." As one said, at an early meeting of the American Board, in answer to the objection that America had not sufficient religion to export, "The peculiar nature of Christianity is that the more you export abroad, the more you have at home." "Thriving congregations are those which are maintaining missions and Sunday schools outside the confines of their own parishes; and that are sending their own members out into definite Christian work."

We who would see the church respond most readily to the demands and calls closet home must bear in mind always that "The light that shines furthest from home, shines brightest at home." You may always count on the missionary church, the truly missionary church, to be most willing and ready to give a helping hand to the plea for help to the needy round about. This for the reason that any church, or people, who have the faith in their Lord to help the most needy, namely; those who do not feel, or express, their need, will be the very ones to help the less needy, namely; those who realize and are only too willing and ready to express their needs and look to others rather than to their own efforts and responsibilities to help them.

While several churches and Sunday schools have not reported their Easter offering the above report indicates that the offering was taken in many churches and was very gratifying. We trust that all the churches took the offering, or will do so at an early date, since cooperation and the willingness to work together are the marks of real Christianity in the spirit of brotherhood. The 17th Chapter of John stands as the immortal and heart-searching plea of our Lord Himself for the brotherhood, yea, even the oneness of His followers. On this account, we rejoice in the increasing number of our churches and pastors, who are seeking to give their answer to our Lord's most earnest plea.

Gratefully,
J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

"To be a Christian is to live the noblest life possible to any man or woman."

I Do Believe

By J. O. ATKINSON.

[An address before the Women's Missionary Convention at Elon College, April 18.]

One of the most difficult, if not the most difficult, problems of life and religion to understand is that of Missions. I say this advisedly. The chief reason of this difficulty is that Missions have to do primarily with that which is spiritual. Missions is at the foundation of other church and life problems, and when we once, even partially, grasp the meaning of Missions we begin to understand most of the problems of the spiritual life. That which is purely spiritual is never easy to grasp, since we deal so constantly with that which is material and temporal. By nature we walk by sight, and want to know the results of our efforts, or the outcome of our donations. We easily ignore the fact declared by the Apostle Paul, that in Missions "we walk by faith and not by sight." Our Lord had the faith, whether we, His professed followers have it or not, when He declared, "Ye shall be witnesses of me unto the uttermost parts." Lord Christ said that to test, as well as develop our faith. If one can't stand that test and obey that command one hasn't much faith, and is a weak Christian indeed, if Christian at all.

It is doubtful if it has ever been more difficult than it is for us in this day of confusion and chaos to understand why we should seek to exercise this faith. The world of our day seems to be, as in the days of Jason, turned upside down, and in the hands of those, very largely, who defy and set at naught the teachings of the Prince of Peace and all that makes for righteousness wrought in love. We behold a world threatened with war and rumors of war, and many of the wavering and doubtful are ready to say, "What is the use?" It has been nearly two thousands years, they say, since the Prince of Peace laid down His program of individual, national and international rulership and government by and through love. So far is the world from adopting this program that only a few days ago a dictator, ruling over millions, declared, "Force and force only is the power that governs in international affairs." This modern dictator is saying exactly what the Cæsars said, namely; "Force and force only can govern, therefore, arm the nation to the limit, be equipped with more soldiers, guns, and weapons of death."

I say in the light of these facts it is indeed difficult to understand the meaning, the might and the majesty of Missions, for in Missions we know full well that we are acting in love, not for self, but solely and wholly, in love for others.

On this account we need now, possibly as never before, to pray and to pray often, "Lord, I do believe, help thou mine unbelief." These are the words of one who had asked a favor of our Lord; a favor not for himself, but for another. Our Lord seeing the anxiety of the man for the salvation of another, said to the man asking the favor, "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth;" and then the man seeking not his own, but the redemption of another, said, "Lord, I believe, help thou mine unbelief."

As already stated, Missions being fundamental and a test of faith, if even partially understood, helps us to understand many of the difficult problems of the Bible and of life.

Note a few of these from the Bible. Some months ago your speaker was in a Sunday school, whose lesson for the day was taken from the Book of Ruth. When the classes had reassembled for a brief lecture on the lesson, by one chosen for the purpose, this lecturer said that the Book of Ruth was one of the most beautiful love stories to be found in any book, and then he proceeded to talk about the book as one of romantic interest and treated it as a purely human love story. Your speaker confesses he hung his head in regret and humiliation. Anyone, much less a Sunday school teacher, who reads the Book of Ruth without realizing that from start to finish it is purely a missionary book, fails to get the force and the meaning of this marvelous revelation. Other than a missionary book the Book of Ruth has no place in the Bible. In order that the writer of the Book might make himself, or herself, thoroughly understood, twice over again in the closing paragraphs of the book the fact is repeated that Ruth was a convert to the true God from among the hated heathen of the day, and to show that the true God was no respecter of persons, this character, Ruth, won as a convert by the unselfish life of a missionary, Naomi, was to become and did become the ancestress of our Lord Christ. Verily, the Book of Ruth is a love story, but it is love divine, love for the true and living God. If you wish a thrilling story of a missionary and a missionary's achievements I suggest that you read the Book of Ruth as a purely missionary book, a book revealing a love that is eternal, unselfish and divine.

Let's note one other example of a missionary book in the Old Testament. A while ago your speaker heard a teacher of religion say that the Book of Jonah was not a story of actual fact, but was an allegory. My sympathy went out immediately for that teacher, and for his class. No one can possibly hope to grasp the beauty, the wonder and the glory of the Book of Jonah who does not read it as a missionary message, as true and as real as any of the missionary letters written by the Apostle Paul in the New Testament. Some see in the Book of Jonah an impossible miracle of a whale swallowing a man. Your speaker readily admits that the Book of Jonah has in it the story of a whale, a story that looms so mighty and majestic in its revelation and meaning that one who reads it will certainly fail in getting its meaning unless one reads it as a missionary story. In this Book of only a few chapters we have condensed and epitomized in the life and conduct of one man, Jonah, the whole story of the Hebrew race up to the day of its writing. This Hebrew race God had chosen to go to all the nations, teaching them that Jehovah was the true God, and that their mission was to make Him known to all the nations and to reveal Him to all mankind. This His chosen people, as did Jonah, refused to do, and like some people of our time, said, "What's the use?"

They actually ran from the appointed task of converting the world to the worship of the true God, and the Hebrew race, symbolized in Jonah, fled from their appointed task, and in doing so they ran square into the awakened displeasure of the true God, who had done so much for them. On this account, God had overthrown them and mighty Babylon had swallowed them up as a nation and as a people, (just as the whale had swallowed Jonah) and then out of the depths these people cried as Jonah cried from the depths that had swallowed him up, "Jehovah, He is God! Salvation is of Jehovah." Thus in sorrow Jonah acknowledges his mission, and his willingness if delivered from the belly of the whale to go forth and give his message of salvation to the world. We as a people may have to pass through disappointments, regrets and heartaches before we shall be willing to obey the command of our Lord in giving the gospel of light and love to the world. We are still saying, "What's the use?" We are yet just playing at the task of missions. Many of us are, and on this

"Youth at Work in the Church"

WANTED: YOUNG PEOPLE.

We want young people from all sections of the Southeast to be present at the Southeast Convention—particularly at the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship session on Wednesday afternoon and evening, May 10. This meeting is not to be "run" by the older people—it is conducted by young people for the purpose of carrying out young people's work in our area. Be there to aid the group with your interest and intelligence—and to gain first-hand information to take back to your local group and to your conference group.

As this goes to the printer, we cannot give you a more definite program than that printed on this page last week. The distances throughout the Southeast are so great that it takes time to arrange such a meeting by correspondence. However, we promise that a full program will be waiting for you in Norfolk at the Christian Temple next week.

If you live in Eastern Virginia and cannot arrange to be at the whole meeting (which begins at 2:00 in the afternoon), please come as early as possible—after school or work—and join with us in the planning of the work which is to be done within the next two years.

A "Fellowship Supper" will be held at 6:00 at the Christian Temple. A program consisting of skits, music, and a talk by Dorothy Truitt of Greensboro, N. C., is being planned by F. C. Lester. Plan to attend this supper, even though you cannot come to a meeting earlier in the day.

AN OFFERING.

The only way the local societies of young people are asked to contribute to the support of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship—for postage, materials to be sent out, etc.—is by taking an offering once a year, preferably the first Sunday in May. This offering is to be sent to the treasurer, Emmanuel Hedgebeth, Elon College, N. C. It will be greatly appreciated if you will take it upon yourself to see that your young people's group does this next Sunday—or sometime in the near future.

ANTIOCH (VALLEY OF VIRGINIA) PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

The Antioch Pilgrim Fellowship is making a vigorous drive for funds to send delegates to the Elon Training School. This the first year of the organization of the young people of Antioch Church, and this has been accomplished largely through the inspiration and incentive furnished by the Elon Summer School to several of the young people who have attended.

The Fellowship was organized last September with seventeen charter members, and three more have been added to the roll. Since that time the Fellowship has engaged, victoriously, in a debate with young people in the Brethren Church in Harrisonburg, made a study of the Jewish situation, begun a library, and undertaken other non-profit making activities. Attendance has been above 80 per cent of membership.

In order to raise money, the Fellowship, with the aid of the church, served supper to a neighboring Ruritan Club with a net income of nearly twenty dollars. An Easter drama was presented, and the offering from this service placed in the treasury. This play was the first project entirely supervised and presented by the young people for a number of years.

Immediate plans call for a peace program for the next meeting, another debate, and the sending of a large group to Elon this summer.

Next year a rather intensive program of social service studies, exchange of programs, and cooperation with church and Sunday school work is planned. This year while it is felt that much has been accomplished, the inexperience of the officers and other difficulties encountered by any new organization has hindered the full realization of our aims. Next year with the help of the summer school training, greater familiarity with the duties and purposes of the Fellowship, the Antioch Pilgrim Fellowship fully expects to become an indispensable asset to the church and a power for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom in its community.

RURAL LIFE SUNDAY.

MAY 14, 1939.

Rural Life Sunday, which has its roots in Rogation Days, is a day set apart for the invocation of God's blessing upon the seed, the fruits of the soil, the cultivators of the earth, and for contemplating the spiritual blessings of rural life. Rural Life Sunday was first observed in 1929, at the suggestion of the International Association of Agricultural Missions and according to plans adopted by the Home Missions Council, the Foreign Missions Conference and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and many religious bodies.

This year 1939 marks the 10th anniversary of the launching of Rural Life Sunday. It is also the 30th anniversary of the publication of the Roosevelt County Life Commission report which marked the beginning of the country life movement in the United States. These anniversaries, and the present surge of interest in the rural church movement, should stimulate more churches than ever before to this year observe Rural Life Sunday.

How shall Rural Life Sunday be observed? The usual way is to set aside the Sunday morning hour for a worship service and sermon or address that is centered about the spiritual realities of rural life. This custom is now widespread. Sometimes spiritually-minded agricultural leaders are invited as guest speakers. Local agricultural societies such as the 4-H, Future Farmers, Farm Bureau and Grange are happy to cooperate, not only in attending but in taking part in such an observance. City churches may invite town and country pastors to speak on an appropriate theme.

One pastor has sponsored a simultaneous Rural Life Sunday observance in twenty churches, followed by a Rural Life dinner and program in which all participated. Pageants, plays, forums or formal services may also be arranged for the evening. The particular form of service to be arranged will depend upon local needs and conditions. But the importance of each church making some recognition of the day cannot be over-emphasized. An order of service and other suggestions can be furnished by the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C.

NOTE—Where it is not convenient to celebrate Rural Life Sunday on May 14, 1939, which is Mother's Day, the observance may be postponed one week, or given at another time.

PAUL WORKS A HARD FIELD.

LESSON VI—MAY 7, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.—Phil. 4:13.

LESSON: Acts 17:16; 18:17.

Paul never looked for easy places. He loved the difficult. He preferred rather to have power equal to his tasks than to have tasks equal to his power. In today's lesson we find him in two different, but difficult fields of missionary activity, Athens and Corinth.

Paul in Athens.

Athens was the great intellectual, the great university center of Greece. It was the most famous center of learning in the world of Paul's day. Centers of learning are not always the most responsive places in the world to religion.

With all her learning and culture, Athens was "superstitious." She was filled with temples, and along her streets there were endless statues and altars to gods, known and unknown. As Paul spent a few days in this great city, "his spirit was stirred within him" as he saw the city "wholly given to idolatry." To many a modern visitory Athens would have impressed itself by the grandeur of its buildings and the glamour of its educational glory, but to this little man the thing that impressed him most was the poverty of its spiritual life, and its blind groping after spiritual reality by which men live. The thing tugged at his heart; it would not let him rest. Forthwith he went to the synagogue to talk to the Jews, and to the market-place to talk with the Gentiles. He spoke to the Stoics "who believed that man was master of his fate and supreme in himself, not dependent in God, and to the Epicureans who believed that the aim and rule of life was to enjoy in soul-quietness, as many as possible of the higher pleasures and nobler sensations of human nature, especially the mental emotions apart from any relation to God. Practically both philosophies made man and not God the ruler of life."

Always ready to tell or to hear something new, but mystified by references which Paul made to a certain "Jesus" and the "resurrection," they brought him into the market-place which was the clearing house for ideas, and bade him tell them "what it was all about." It was a dramatic moment when this wiry, fiery man stood there at the center of culture of the ancient world and interpreted religion in terms that were intellectually intelligible. To be sure, Paul did not have much visible results from his sermon—only a few people "clave unto him," but he made no apology for the new faith, and he declared certain fundamental phases of the Gospel that showed his power of adaption and his intellectual breadth and depth. Taking his cue from the presence of an altar "to the unknown God" which he had seen on the street, he proceeded to tell them that this God whom they worshipped ignorantly was in fact the only true and living God. It was He that had created the world and all things therein; it was He that was Lord of all His creation; He was Spirit; He gave life and breath and all things to all; He had made of one blood all nations of men—there was no difference between Jew and Greek. Furthermore there was the possibility of knowing Him, for He was not far away; indeed it was in Him that men lived and moved and had their being. He was not to be worshipped in idols of wood and stone. He had made due allowance for men's ignorance, but in Jesus Christ He had made known the fullness of His glory, and He now commanded all men everywhere to repent. Men would be brought to account for their deeds—He had appointed a day in which He would judge them even by that man Jesus Christ. God had given assurance of all this in that He had raised this Jesus from the dead. That was too much for these intellectual, cultured folks. When they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked, and others said they would like to hear him again. But only a few did anything about it. Religion always has a hard time when folks use only their heads. To be sure it is intellectually defensible, but spiritual things are spiritually discerned, and there are some things that can be learned only by the heart. But what one learns by the heart is just as real as what one learns with the head.

Paul in Corinth.

Athens, the intellectual, cultured center of the Greek world. Corinth, the commercial metropolis of that part of the world. Here was also a shrine of art, and the center of profligacy and iniquity. It would be difficult to find a harder place for the Gospel to get a foot-hold than in Corinth. Paul himself says that he came among them in weakness and in fear and in trembling. He says also that when he came he determined to know nothing among them, but Jesus Christ and him crucified. Mere philosophy, even though a religious philosophy, was not enough as he had learned at Corinth. The center of the Christian religion as Paul preached it in Corinth was a man, Jesus Christ, and it was a redemptive religion, this man Jesus Christ crucified. Paul wanted the faith of his hearers to be grounded not in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

As usual, Paul's message aroused opposition. As soon as he began to speak in the synagogue the Jew resisted him and blasphemed against him. Thereupon Paul turned from them to the Gentiles. It was another case of forfeited privilege. Little did those Jews realize what a loss was theirs because they would not hear and heed the Gospel. It is, of course, ever thus.

Paul remained in Corinth for eighteen months, teaching and preaching. At one time the going was hard, and Paul evidently became discouraged. But God spoke to him by night in a vision and told him not to be afraid, and to speak boldly the word, assuring him that no man would do him hurt. Then He added that "He had much people in this city." God still has "much people" here and there in our modern world. In city and on farm there are devout, humble, loyal people who have not bowed down their knees to Baal, and in private life as well as in public worship are keeping alive the spirit of service and sacrifice.

Paul undoubtedly put a new emphasis on the things of the spirit, for later the Jews brought the charge against him that he persuaded men to worship God contrary to the law. They even hailed him before the deputy of the district, thus accusing him. But this sensible man saw that it was a matter of petty jealousy, and quibbling over the jot and tittle of the law, and refused to have anything to do with the case, dismissing the case with a rebuke to the Jews.

In the year and a half which Paul spent in Corinth he planted the Church deeply and permanently in that whole area. He was a wise master-builder, laying broad and deep foundations.

There is only one time when we do not want the Bible—that is when we prefer to do as we please. There are many, many times when we feel the need of, and desire for, it—in sorrow, sacrifice, death.

MONDAY.

UNMITIGATED CONSECRATION.

"Be ye also ready . . ."—Matt. 24: 25.

"I am ready not to be bound only, but to die."—Acts 21: 13.

A verse of an old hymn reads:

Ready to speak, ready to think,
Ready with heart and brain;
Ready to work where he sees fit,
Ready to bear the strain.

And the chorus follows:

Ready to go, ready to stay,
Ready my place to fill;
Ready for service, lowly or great,
Ready to do his will.

Prayer—Dear Father, help us to be alert and ready to do something always to glorify our Savior's name. Amen.

TUESDAY.

NEVER FADING OR DECAYING.

"Heaven and earth shall pass away but my word shall never pass away."—Matt. 5: 18.

Life's doings can indeed be that which glorifies His name. It may be a small thing; but, whatever it is, it will be lasting; it will outlive all the monuments of earth; all the masterpieces of man, they will fade, but the things done for Christ will never fade or decay.

Prayer—Our Father, as we lift our hearts in prayer, Thy Word, He that endureth to the end shall be saved," resounds in our consciousness. Thy truth shall endure. Help us to endure with it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MY TALENT.

"I went and hid Thy talent."—Matt. 25: 25.

My talent is that which I do with the talents He has given me. All of us cannot be ordained preachers, or some outstanding person in the public eye, but all of us can use our abilities toward doing something fostering God's cause. If we are willing to do what we can, Christ will complete our work and use it for mighty service. A mother brought up her child and trained it the best she could little thinking of the consequences. But the training of that Christian home brought up a John Wesley who fathered one of the greatest movements the world has ever known.

Prayer—Our Father, give us faith, and courage, and loyalty, and steadfastness in righteousness, and love for Thy kingdom. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE FINAL BENEDICTION.

"Well done thou good and faithful servant . . . enter thou into the joy of the Lord."—Matt. 25: 21.

A woman who had been a nominal Christian finally decided to do something definite for Christ. After she had prayed earnestly and searched diligently for the task, she resolved to help the fallen women of the city. She rented a house and invited them to come there. They did, and within the short space of three years she had rescued more than three hundred of these fallen ones, and restored them to their homes.

What a reward there must be for such a service as that? And how she will rejoice in the last day when she hears the Lord's benediction, "Well done!"

Prayer—Dear Father, another day we look to Thee for strength to any work that Thou hast for us. Give us the courage to try, to pray and search for that task. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE FANTASIES OF LIFE.

"And I will show wonders in heaven above."—Acts 2: 19.

"For what is your life? It is even a vapor."—Jas. 4: 14.

The authors of the texts may have been talking out the transitoriness of life. But they certainly must have felt and meant a great deal more. . . . At this writing I am on the good ship Henderson sailing the great Southern Pacific. I am enjoying a comfortable deck-chair watching the fantastic formations of the billowy white clouds as they seem piled upon one another along the horizon. So clear is the atmosphere that they seem to lie close down upon the sea. There are figures and designs and all sorts of formations changing rapidly from one to another every few minutes.

These clouds so beautifully gilded by the setting sun, are but a vapor that now is and then is gone. Yet, they serve man. They seem rather remote from man at the present time. Nevertheless they take up the water of the sea; they condense it and send it back again. This is service that man depends upon, and at the same time, they give beauty and glory to the universe.

Such is man, "But a vapor" indeed, and yet a servant while passing, and intended to give beauty and goodness while passing. Shall we?

Prayer—Our Father, life is too short to be flitted away aimlessly and uselessly. This day we dedicate ourselves to Thee, for service. Amen.

SATURDAY.

DO MOTHERS STILL HAVE KNEES?

"The children were brought up on Joseph's knees."—Gen. 50: 23.

Our text, while not representing mother, does represent parental training. An unfading memory of my mother is saying my prayers at her knees. Our experience has been so remote from the intimacies of the home life so long that we cannot speak with definiteness regarding the present custom of mother's knees as an altar for children. But George Arliss, the famous actor, has recently said, "Mothers still have knees, but there are no children to gather round (Continued on next page.)"

WORLDLY-MINDED PEOPLE VS.
WORLD-MINDED PEOPLE.

“Ask for me, and I will give you the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost part of the earth for thy possession.”

—Psalms 2: 8.

LESSON: Isaiah 55; I Cor. 13.

No sincere Christian who has been informed as to the world situation, no thoughtful student of social conditions, can fail to be interested in missions. Time was when occasionally one would hear conscientious, well-meaning Christian men and women say that they did not believe in foreign missions. That time is rapidly passing—if it is not already past—thank God. “Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to all peoples,” was the command of our blessed Lord, and how any Christian could construe that to mean only his own nation is a mystery. The Church of Jesus Christ asks for the world to be laid at the feet of its Lord.

The world situation today is perhaps the most perilous for all nations of any time in human history. Politically, the nations of the earth are like a ship upon a stormy sea, driven by winds of dissension within and by storms of opposition without. In countries where the governments have broken down, and where the restraining influence of faith in Christ is not known, human life is considered no more sacred than brute life. People are better off with idols and with their religious fear and superstition than to be without any such restraining influence.

Let us take a glimpse at the different nations of the world. Japan is passing from being a rural people to being an urban population. Her people are literate—but she is intoxicated with greed of power, because of her materialistic philosophy of life. As a means of self-defense, Christian missions will do more to stop Japan in her craze for possessions than will all the battleships that can be built. In Latin America 40 per cent to 85 per cent of the people can neither read nor write, while thousands die each year from preventable diseases. There are districts as large as the state of Iowa where no Christian worker has ever been, and the name of Jesus is unknown. In India is one-fifth of the population of the world. Because of the caste system, 95 per cent of the men and 99 per cent of the women cannot read or write; while in Africa there are 60,000,000 souls who have never heard about Christ. China covers four million square miles and domiciles 400,000,000 people. In China, there is only one missionary to every 66,000 souls. Here in America, every person has a chance to know God, while in China, only one out of a hundred have a chance. Is it fair? There are five or six churches for every 1,000 people here in America, but in many communities in China there are 100,000 people and no church. Great men of China say, “You have taken away from us our idols and our temples, and destroyed our faith in Buddhism and Confuciusism. Responsibility rests upon you to give us a positive substitute—which we must have to avoid chaos.” And it is the responsibility of Christian nations to give them Christ.

That is a glimpse of the world as it is—more than two-thirds of the people of the world who have never heard of Christ, never heard of our Bible, of our God—two-thirds of the people living in ignorance and superstition. The Christian recognizes that there ought to be Christian homes in every land. If every nation had an open Bible and free churches and all people had a knowledge of Jesus Christ, how different the world situation would be! Instead of wars and rumors of wars, there would be peace among the nations and cooperative planning for the building of Christ’s kingdom upon the earth. Jesus Christ would speedily relieve the tensions that today threaten the very life of the world, if he were but in the hearts of the people.

And it is your faith and mine as His disciples that ultimately His cause shall prevail, and that wars and rumors of wars shall cease; and that peace shall be the cherished blessing of all mankind.

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Doth his successive journeys run;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore,
Till moon shall wax and wane no more.

To him shall eudless prayer be made,
And praises throng to crown His head;
His name, like sweet perfume, shall rise
With every morning sacrifice.

People and realms of every tongue
Dwell on His love with sweetest song,
And infant voices shall proclaim
Their early blessings on His name.

Blessings abound where'er He reigns;
The prisoner leaps to loose his chains;
The weary find eternal rest,
And all the sons of want are blest.

Let every creature rise and bring Peculiar honors to our King;
Angels descend with songs again,
And earth repeat the loud amen.

Worldly-minded people used to be thought of as those who sought the enjoyment of certain pleasures, amusements and recreations. But worldly-minded people are those who think only of what the world has to give them, rather than of what they should contribute to the world.

World-minded people are those who ask that the world shall be laid at the feet of their Lord. World-minded people are dedicated to the proposition of work and praying to the end that the kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

THE QUIET HOUR.

them; for the children are out and away. They go to the movies, or they sit in friends’ houses, not to talk pleasantly or to listen intelligently, but to hear the noise of the radio.”

Prayer—Our Father, bring back the old ways of devotion and a firm foundation for consecrated living. Give us the happiness that comes from consecration and service. Amen.

SUNDAY.

CHRIST ROOTED IN HISTORY.

“Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever.”—Heb. 13: 8.

“Try as we may,” said Dr. Wood, in his Did Christ Really Live? concerning the efforts of the critics who endeavor to explain Him away as a myth, “We cannot get Christ out of history, and if we have any sense for reality we cannot evade his challenge.”

The writer wishes to add that there is an insipient and elusive way of evading Him. It is the neglect of Him, His Word and our prayers. This neglect makes Him nothing to us.

Prayer—O God, forbid that the most vital life our existence may be neglected. We would be alive to Thy Spirit through Jesus Christ. Grant us Thy Spirit now. Amen.

“Good will, like a good name, is won by many actions, and lost by one”

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Our graded school closes Monday, May 8. The Christian Orphanage will have five to graduate—three girls and two boys. A child deserves a lot of credit to finish high school and get his diploma. It is a long road from the first grade to the eleventh. So many fall by the wayside before they finish the journey. It is a great pity that they do. Any boy or girl is at a great disadvantage without at least a high school education.

Children don't always realize it, but good grades count. Several years ago the writer went to a hospital to see if he could get a girl who lived at the Christian Orphanage a place to take training to be a nurse. The first question the lady superintendent asked was, "What kind of grades did she make in school?" She said, "Mail me her grade card, I go more by the grades they make in school when selecting girls for my class than anything else. If they work in school, they will work here." The girl had made splendid grades in school. She was given a place in the student nurses' class and graduated two years ago. She is now nursing the sick back to health. But it was the good grades she made in school that influenced the hospital to take her in.

Our activities on the farm for the last week have been from early to late. Preparing our corn land and planting has been the order of the day. If the weather is favorable, we hope, within another week, to get our crop in. When we get our spring crops in, we can always breathe more easily.

We are still drilling our well deeper. We are short of water. This is an emergency expense we were not looking for. It costs money to drill wells down through rock. The expense makes it hard on us when our income is not sufficient to meet it. We had two good friends in Burlington, N. C., last week who showed their sympathy by mailing us checks to help us meet this extra expense. Mr. J. H. McEwen sent us a check for $50.00, and Mr. D. E. Sellars sent us one for $15.00. We are grateful for this extra encouragement.

Strawberries will soon be ripe and the children are looking forward to having strawberry pies, preserves, and shortcake. Nothing beats strawberry shortcake with cream. The prospect now is that we will be able to satisfy all their appetites.

Our pneumonia patient got out on the lawn for the first time on April 30. The day was clear and pleasant, and we let her venture out in the sunshine and fresh air. We are very happy our pneumonia cases did not come in threes as our appendicitis cases generally come.

In Memoriam

WARREN.

Mr. W. T. Warren, a charter member and deacon of the Berea Christian Church in Alamance County, N. C., and a life-long citizen of the county, has left us to be with His Lord. God saw fit to remove him from this life of labors to his reward, and his going has left the church and community all the poorer. He was loyal and sincere in all the things which he was given to do, a man of strong faith and lovable disposition. Since his faith in a heavenly home is our faith, the church wishes to express the following resolutions:

First, that we, the Berea Christian Church, in due recognition of all that he was to the church submit in a beautiful way to the will of God;

Secondly, that we extend our deepest sympathy to the family, and encourage them to follow just as close to their Heavenly Father as he did;

Thirdly, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Secretary's book.

GENTRY.

Manis Gentry was born February 14, 1869, near Dyke, Va., and died at the home of a son, Robert Gentry in Dundalk, Md., April 2, 1939, at the age of seventy.

In 1890 he was married to Miss Melvina Morris and to this union were born ten children, eight of whom survive. Mrs. Gentry lives with a son, Robert.

In early life Brother Gentry was converted and joined Mount Olivet (G) Christian Church and lived a consistent member till the time of his death. For many years he was a deacon in his church and was at the time of his death.

The funeral was conducted from the Mount Olivet Church by his pastor, and interment was in the family burying ground.

I DO BELIEVE.

account my plea today is that we affirm and strengthen our faith in the power of our God to redeem and to save by praying often and much, "Oh, Lord, I do believe, help thou mine unbelief."

Again Missions being fundamental in the teachings of our Lord helps us, when understood, to solve many of the problems of life. Detached as we are, it is difficult for us to understand why many of the brightest, best and greatest of men and women have been willing and are willing to go and give their lives to the hardest and most difficult task known to mankind, and this, too, without asking or expecting any reward or prestige other than that of sacrificing all for the sake of their Lord. We need not go back in history to William Carey, or to David Livingstone, or to Robert Morrison, and the deep need of the millions of India, Africa and China. I say we need not go back in history to these lives as examples of self-denial for their Lord, since we as a church and as an American Board have hundreds of our own number in India, Africa, China, Japan and the Philippines, who are doing today, by the grace of God, and for the sake of their Lord, just what these great and good ones did decades ago. There is no explanation of all this except a lingering belief, yet deep in the heart, especially of womankind, that "This is the victory which overcometh the world, even our faith." Somehow, or other, it is this faith, faint and flickering as it may seem, in the heart of you good women that has brought you to this great Convention and that carries you to the monthly, or bi-monthly, meeting of your Missionary Society. While many of the men folks and the national governments are talking about, and planning for war, you good women are talking about and planning for peace by trying to make the name of the Prince of Peace known to all nations.

All this in a measure helps explain why the good women, even with their very meager dues—ten cents a month, or what not—are willing to follow these dues with their prayers and consecration and add to these dues to make a sizeable sum with which to support the cause of Missions. It has only been a very brief period as history marks time, since your Mission Secretary asked the President of the Southern Convention to appoint a Woman's Board, which he gladly did, and then after that Board was appointed it was called together that the work of organizing Missionary Societies in our churches might begin, just a little over twenty-five years ago. And yet in that brief time twenty-six years of your organized existence, you have contributed to Missions something like $200,000.00. Possibly there are those who have witnessed your labor of love for this cause through the years and have said of you and are saying of you, what some of the disciples said of the woman who made the first missionary offering, recorded in the New Testament, the woman who poured out the love offering on the head of her Lord; "What waste," some of the disciples declared, "for this ointment might have been sold and given to the poor." Then our Lord Christ made that ever memorable reply, "The poor you have with ye always; what this woman hath done in making her love offering for me shall be told as a memorial of her for all time to come, for through such offerings there shall be preached the gospel throughout the world."

The good women of this Convention are still making these love offerings solely for the sake of their Lord, and through these offerings the gospel of our Lord is slowly but surely doing its work in the world and the time will come, I know it will come, because it is the promise of God, when all shall join in the glad acclaim, "This is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith."

"Lord, I do believe, help thou mine unbelief."

"Strong men are made by opposition; like kites, they go up against the wind."

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER.

In many of our Church homes there are mothers who are trying like the one in the picture above to train children in the ways of Christ. To them and to their holy task this paper is dedicated.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

FANCY GAP, VA.

Dear Friends:

As a member of the Elk Spur Christian Church, I wish to thank you people for the kindnesses you all have done for us people of the hills. We appreciate especially the work of Rev. B. J. Earp and his good messages of God's word. I am just a 13-year-old girl. I am in the eighth grade at school.

NELLIE HORTON.

ELON COLLEGE ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the one thousand committees of the Elon College Golden Anniversary Organization:

Elsewhere in THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a resume of the approaching commencement exercises. This is to remind you that you are particularly invited to attend the commencement. Your presence will be greatly needed Monday. You will have a free lunch, an opportunity to see what the college is endeavoring to do for you, and share in the efforts to build for us together a greater institution.

Please mark May 29 as a special day, a day on which you are to attend the Elon College commencement. You will find many of your friends here.

OUR FRONT PAGE.

The picture on the front page is symbolic, but it is also real. It represents all those mothers who today are busy in their homes training their children to meet courageously the difficulties of our day.

It is the true likeness of Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell and her daughter, Mary Ann, in their home. Mrs. Harrell is the wife of the president of the Southern Convention and pastor of the Durham Christian Church. On the wall is the picture of Mrs. Harrell's father, Dr. W. H. Boone, chairman of the board of trustees of Elon College.

The editor is deeply grateful to his (Elon) college class-mate, "Doc," for this lovely picture.

HANK'S CHAPEL.

Hank's Chapel Christian Church witnessed a full day of worship at the church on Sunday, April 23. Sunday school was held at ten o'clock. The attendance was about ninety-five. At eleven o'clock the worship service was conducted by the Missionary Circle, which brought interesting talks on missionary work. The Scripture was read by Mrs. Ike Bland and Mrs. Everette Riddle and prayer was made by Mrs. Sam White. A poem, "Missionary Challenge," was given by Miss Margaret White. An interesting talk was presented on the work in Carroll County, Va., by Mrs. Tommie Farrell, followed by a poem by Mrs. Mal White. An interesting talk on A MOTHER'S PRAYER.

By R. C. Helfenstein.

I was summoned to come quickly to the bedside of a noble mother of an only son. She felt she was nearing the end, and she wanted her pastor to read a chapter to her from the Bible, and to read a favorite hymn that her father used to sing, and then to offer prayer. It was a beautiful thought that prompted her to have the nurse summon me for this service.

As I entered the room I felt "the presence of God." I had been in the same room many times before to visit her in her affliction. But this time it was different. It seemed as if heaven had telescoped that part of the earth. She smiled appreciatively as I read her favorite chapter from the Bible, and as I read the old hymn. Just then her son who had been called from his place of business came in, very much broken up over the thought of his mother leaving him. He was a man in middle life, had a family, and was a prominent business man. But the thought of mother going made him as tender as a babe.

She took his hands in hers and said, "My boy, I'm going to go away, but I am going to keep pulling to get you in. I've pulled the best I knew all my life to get you into the Kingdom. And I am not going to give you up. Maybe I can pull harder from over there. O, how I will pull! And you'll have to pull back mighty hard to keep me from getting you in, for you must come. It won't be heaven for me without you and 'Pop.'"

And then his tall manly frame quivered like a leaf as he stroked his mother's head, and sealed the kiss of promise upon her brow, saying, "Mother, I'll be there." And she closed her eyes in sleep.

A mother's faith reckons not with the barrier of distance. Mothers now in heaven are today pulling to lift son or daughter into the Kingdom. What a tragedy that any man or woman will pull back!

Foreign Missionary Work in China was given by Mrs. Glen White, which was followed by another poem, "Missionary Command," by Mrs. Ralph Riddle. After this our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, brought us a missionary sermon, the subject being "Witnessing for Christ." A Communion Service was held which was observed in a very sacred manner. Music was played softly throughout the service.

On Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock the young people from the Sanford

Christian Church gave a pageant entitled, "Along An Indian Road." After the program the Sanford young people were served by the Missionary Circle at the home of Mrs. Tommie Farrell. May God bless these young people in their work.

Since April and May are set apart by our churches for Mission months, let us see how large we can make our mission treasury.

MOUNT OLIVET (G).

Several months ago we wrote for the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN how our little church on the hill was thrilled with the Christmas Season and how we spent it. We thought then that that was the highest peak that we could reach for a long time, but another church season had been spent and there is a question in our minds as to whether or not this one—Easter—meant more to us as Christians than did Christmas.

Never before in the history of the church have we had pre-Easter services to prepare us for the greatest day, perhaps of the Christian year, and the pastor, Rev. M. W. Mann, did his utmost by giving us most instructive, uplifting, and challenging sermons as he related the works of our Lord during the last week of His life before the resurrection. It was in every sense of the word a revival and we feel more besides, since it was held at that particular time of year when a study of Biblical facts were most fitting. The series was climaxed by a most inspiring Easter message which was more than appreciated by the church, since the pastor had to rearrange his schedule in order to be with us, for without this sermon, we feel that the revival would have been quite incomplete.

No one can measure the value of these services to the church or to individuals, but as an immediate visible result there were two accessions on profession of faith.

Another thing that everyone appreciated and enjoyed was that the children played a large part in the services, for they were given the opportunity to sing each night under the direction of Mr. C. H. Knight, who had complete charge of the music during the services. This, of course, was an asset, for he arranged a special musical number from either the Junior or Adult choirs each night.

The services were largely attended and the fullest cooperation, loyalty, and support were given both to Mr. Mann and Mr. Knight as they rendered to the church unmeasurable service.

CHURCH REPORTER.

MOTHER'S HONOR.

The second Sunday in May is set apart by many churches as a time to do honor to mothers. In 1907 Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia quietly observed the anniversary of her mother's death with a friend. Thus the custom began. Now the observance is quite general among churches and is intended to do more than simply to remind people of their departed loved ones. It is expected that on this day people will become aware of the responsibilities, opportunities, and joys of motherhood. It is a time for appreciation of those values which come from Christian motherhood.

It is a beautiful thing to hold a service in a church in honor of mothers and to make mothers the guests for the occasion. It is a fine thing for children once each year to pay special tribute to those who have served them in infancy and in childhood. It is a beautiful sight for children to worship in their church with their parents at least once each year. All honor to those mothers who faithfully perform their duties and service of love in rearing children.

Mother's honor, however, comes not through the observance of Mother's Day. Flowers and poetry and service are not the things out of which her honor grows. Mother's real honor comes out of her own sacrificial Christian service to her family. It comes from her ideals, her prayers, her loyalty to the things that are best, and the giving to her child of that divine spirit which sustains her own life. Mother's honor grows out of the honor of her own personal character and life experience. On Mother's Day we simply recognize her honor and in our hearts seek to appreciate more fully that which she really is.

"The Christian Sun" joins with the multitudes who pay tribute to Christian parentage and especially to the queen of the home, who through great difficulties, it may be, gives to the life of the child a rich heritage of happiness and spiritual grace.

RURAL LIFE SUNDAY.

Thirty years ago a Commission on Country Life was formed. Members of this committee were Liberty Hyde Bailey, Henry Wallace, Kenyon L. Butterfield, Gifford Pinchot, Walter H. Page, Walter S. Barrett, and William A. Beard. President Theodore Roosevelt in announcing the Commission stated that he expected something more than effort to "make two blades where one grew before."

The churches have become greatly interested in this phase of their work and have appointed leaders like Warren H. Wilson of the Presbyterians and Malcolm Dana of the Congregationalists who have done much to improve rural church life. We are far from the goal as set by the early Commission and far from what should be accomplished.

In 1909 the report said: "In the rural villages there are generally several or a number of churches of different denominations, one or more of which are likely to be weak. The salaries range from $400 to $1,000."

This is still true of our Congregational and Christian rural churches today. Materials have been sent to pastors for the observance of Rural Life Sunday, either the second or third Sunday in May. It is hope by this focusing of attention on our rural problems that new interest may be stimulated and better churches may be developed.

IS THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION PRACTICAL?

Since the merger of Congregational and Christian Churches an effort has been made to hold a meeting of leaders from these churches in the Southeast once every two years. It has seemed to be a good thing for our church members in Kentucky, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, the Carolinas and Virginia to get together for acquaintance, fellowship, and a study of our mutual problems. Out of the past meetings has come inspiration for undertaking larger problems in a more cooperative way. There has grown up a new consciousness of our inter-dependence. There are those who believe that the expense of such a get-together is a good investment and brings big returns in Kingdom service.

On the other hand, there are those who feel that distances are so great, and that meetings are so numerous that it is not wise to have a meeting of the Southeast Convention every two years. The Convention is meeting at Christian Temple in Norfolk, Va., this week, and a discussion of the practical problems of holding such a biennial meeting may be advisable.

METHODIST UNION.

The three branches of the Methodist Church—Northern, Southern, and Methodist Protestant—are now in the process of uniting their forces. A great Conference is in session at Kansas City. For the first time in 111 years the M. P. Church has elected one of its members as a Bishop. Members of Congregational and Christian Churches will wish our Methodist friends good success as they unite their combined forces of eight million people for Kingdom service.

NOTABLE PERSONAGES AT NORFOLK.

The Southeast Convention is fortunate to have as one of its speakers Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, moderator of the General Council. Dr. Maurer has had a long, successful pastorate in New Haven, Conn.

Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, president of the Home Boards, and long-time pastor in Evanston, Ill., will delight the Convention with his eloquence.

For thirteen years Dr. Edwin C. Gillette has been a leader in the Southeast. He will soon retire as Superintendent of the Southeast. He will be present to help make this session of the Convention a very happy one.

SUFFOLK LETTER

There are people who sit by the window. From the bed to the window and return is the extent of their daily journey. Looking out the window furnishes the chief source of recreation and inspiration for them. Sickness lays its blighting hand upon many people and leaves them weakened and helpless by the window. They know that there is no reasonable hope of recovery. But they hope against hope that the sweet breath of air will bring them a return of health tomorrow. Other people come and go—but they must remain shut in by the window. That is the best out-look that comes to them as the days drag wearily by.

Many disappointed people sit by the window. The east window is their choice for the day. Looking out through this window they see the way over which they have passed in their effort to achieve success. They worked hard, made an honest effort to lay up treasures on earth for the evening time of life, and find themselves poor and needy. They think now of their failures. The pantry is empty, the bank account has been closed and they are no longer able to work for the actual necessities of life as in other days. They once had plenty, but now they must carefully save and use their small resources to make ends meet. They have tried to do right. Others have prospered, where they have failed. Happy are they who, in such an hour, can measure life and success in terms of character. Money is not the only reward for faithful service.

Old people sit by the window towards the west is their choice. The day for them is dying in the west. The winds of mid-day have passed. For many the storms are over. For some the grim spectre of doubt lingers to haunt them. The evening time of life is not all calm for the saints who are seeking rest. The choicest saints may be disturbed by a passing cloud. But the look out will help them to look up for help and assurance. Youth and strong manhood cannot appreciate the out-look of old age. But it is soothing and comforting for them. The quiet of the twilight, the golden hue of the sunset, the falling of the evening shadows all inspire hope of sweet peace in that realm beyond the setting sun. Sweet memories fill the mind and enrich the hearts of earth's saints who sit and dream of the past—and the future—by the window.

Many of us know what it means to lie in bed and sit by the window for months and look out into the narrow spaces of life. The vision is limited and the scenes are not changed like the images on a movie screen. It is so easy to be blue and discouraged by such an experience. Reading is more difficult because of weakness. One is inclined to become self-centered in thought. The afflictions and frailties may be magnified by vivid imagination. Memories, if they are pleasant and refreshing, help to while the hours away. What a calamity if memories are bitter and full of remorse! Faith, yes, living faith, gives direction to trustful hearts sitting by the window. Maybe this age needs more of the help that comes to those who are shut in from the busy throng, but who find time to sit and think of life in its relation to God and eternity.

It is possible to grow rich sitting by the window. Every thing depends upon the inner life and the attitude one takes towards the finer things of the kingdom of God. The soul may be made better. The heart may become more tender. The will may more readily yield to the wishes of the Father who gave us life. Use the hours by the window for soul culture and sweet meditation.

COMMENCEMENT AT ELON COLLEGE.

The forty-ninth annual commencement of Elon College will be observed May 27-30. An excellent program has been arranged. Everyone participating on the program this year, is either an alumnus, student, or faculty member of the college save one.

Commencement proper begins Saturday evening, May 27, at 8 o'clock with the Dramatics Club of Elon College presenting one of the college's original plays, Mill Village, written by Isaiah Israel Sears, a ministerial student now in Andover Newton Theological Seminary. This play won the first award as an original production in the collegiate contest held at Chapel Hill this spring. It is a three-act play and a very powerful production. It is the presentation of certain conditions in society demonstrating relations that exist between employer and employee in the light of a certain type of emotional religion.

The baccalaureate service will be held Sunday morning, May 28, at 11:30. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, President of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches and pastor of our Durham Church, will be the preacher. Special music will be furnished by the Elon Singers under the direction of Professor Pratt, Mr. Edwards, soloist, and Mr. Morgan, accompanist.

The Elon Singers will present "The Vision of Sir Launfal" by Leo Sowerby, Professor Pratt, Director, and Mr. Morgan, accompanist, Sunday evening at eight o'clock.

Monday will be Alumni Day. It is hoped that representatives of all committees will be present for the day. We are expecting a great representation. Mrs. E. R. Bryant, (nee Miss Mary Lee Williams) of Franklin, Va., will speak at eleven o'clock. This is the first time that this address has been delivered by a woman. Mrs. Bryant will do a good job. The entire alumni and church will be interested in this program. At 12:30 the college will serve a picnic lunch on the campus for all who attend. It will be necessary to secure tickets from the committee in the vestibule of the auditorium at the beginning or at the close of the morning service. The business session of the Alumni Association will be held at 2:30 in the afternoon. Officers will be elected, plans for the anniversary will be promoted, and other business will be attended to. The annual tea for the alumni and visitors will be given by President and Mrs. Smith at five o'clock. The regular alumni address will be delivered at 7:30 by the Hon. John J. Ingle, Attorney of Winston-Salem, N. C. Following the address, the historic alumni march will be observed, ending in the dining room for the annual banquet. Mr. L. J. Perry, Superintendent of City Schools, Reidsville, N. C., and President of the Alumni Association, will preside and serve as toastmaster.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College will meet Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Graduating exercises will be at 10:30. The address will be delivered by Hon. Jonathan Daniels, editor of the News and Observer, Raleigh, N. C., and author of A Southerner Discovers the South. There will be seventy in the graduating class in addition to those receiving certificates in other departments.

This is a genuine and most cordial invitation to all alumni, all members of the church, all friends of the college, and all readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to attend the approaching exercises of the 49th anniversary of the

FOR THE CHILDREN

Since next Sunday is "Mother's Day" we are giving you some poems below which we think you will enjoy. Perhaps you could copy the one you like best on a pretty piece of colored paper and give it to your mother for "Mother's Day." We will have to leave "The Question Box" until next week. Remember—try to do something "special" for your mother next Sunday.

MOTHER'S WAY.

Whenever I am bad all day
Until I'm really 'shamed to pray,
I wait till mother comes to say
"Good night, dear child." That's mother's way.

And then, somehow, I don't know why,
I tell her everything and cry.
She hugs me then, and right away
I feel less sad. That's mother's way.

And mother kneels down by my bed
And pulls my face close to her head,
And we both snuggle down and pray,
That's why I'm glad for mother's way.
—Author Unknown.

MOTHER'S KISSES.

They're good for bumps, and good for lumps,
They're even good for dumps and grumps,
They're good for stings of "Bumble-bees"
And barks from "shinnying" cherry-trees.
For splinters, sun-burn, "skeeter-bites,"
And scratches, scratched while Tabby hisses—
Mother's kisses.

There's naught so pure, there's naught so sure,
Indeed, they seem a heavenly cure,
For pounded fingers, and stubbed toes,
And all the long, long list of woes,
Yet did you ever think it queer
That while they're fine for every fear
They're just as fine with all the blesses—
Mother's kisses.
—Annie B. Wheeler.

A BOY'S MOTHER.

My mother she's so good to me,
Ef I was good as I could be,
I couldn't be as good—no, sir!—
Can't any boy be good as her.

She loves me when I'm glad er sad;
She loves me when I'm good er bad;
An', what's a funniest thing, she says
She loves me when she punishes.

I don't like her to punish me—
That don't hurt—but it hurts to see
Her cryin'.—Nen I cry; and nen
We both cry an' be good again.

She loves me when she cuts an' sews
My little cloak an' Sund'y clothes;
An' when my Pa comes home to tea,
She loves him most as much as me.

She laughs an' tells him all I said,
An' grabs me up an' pats my head;
An' I hug her, an' hug my Pa,
An' love him purt night much as Ma.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

THE REASON.

Once I asked my mother why she wa'n't a boy like me,
So she could grow to be a man and sail
upon the sea,
And be a famous Commodore and have a lot of ships;
"I would rather be your mother," and her love was on her lips.
—David Stearns.

WINSTON-SALEM.

The United Congregational-Christian Church of Winston-Salem, N. C., has been busy on the job since the annual session of Conference. We have received thirteen new members, baptized seven, and granted letters of transfer to five.

A Junior Christian Endeavor Society has been organized and now has twenty-five members. This is a community society and not confined to the church constituency. The officers and committees are all junior boys and girls, but are well sponsored by adult leaders.

The Woman's Association has also been active, holding regular monthly meetings in the homes with good attendance and well-planned programs. The Foreign Mission study book was reviewed before a group of fifty by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Greensboro, N. C. Representatives from the Salem Chapel and Belews Creek Churches were present. The Association also observed the world's Day of Prayer and was hostess to the Forsyth-Guilford Missionary Rally on March 22.

The choir rendered its Easter music program on Palm Sunday to a good audience. A very impressive service was held on Maundy Thursday night. The well-planned service provided by the Home Boards for the occasion was effectively carried out. At this service a mother and her two daughters were received into the church by a candle-light ceremony. After being received each member took a candle from the altar and lighted it from the Master candle and then in turn lighted another candle, thus showing that they not only received light from the great source of light, but were willing to share that light with others. Following this, six persons were baptized by sprinkling. While the candles still burned on the altar table, the Holy Communion was observed, every member of the church present, participating.

The pastor participated in the three hour Union Good Friday Service held at the First Presbyterian Church, and also was one of the speakers at the all-day prayer service at the Calvary Moravian Church.

Race Relations Sunday was observed on two successive Sundays. Messages were brought to our people by Dr. G. J. Thomas of the Wentz Memorial Congregational-Christian Church of the city and by Rabbi Edward Ellenbogen of the Reformed Jewish Congregation. A group of sixteen composed of members of the Home Boards and friends visited our city on April 21 and a part of the Mother Knows

They say my dad is a very wise man
And few lawyers can make things as plain as he can,
But whenever to him with my questions I go,
He always replies, "Ask your mother; she'll know."

If I ask why Sue in the parlor at night,
When Joe Clifford comes calling, must turn down the light,
Till it shines with the tiniest, least little glow,
He simply replies, "Ask your mother; she'll know."

And when the baby curls up his bare toes
And looks up so funny and gurgles and crows,
I ask dad to tell me what makes him do so,
But he's sure to reply, "As your mother; she'll know."

And once when we had a new maid in the house,
She dropped a big dish at the sight of a mouse;
I couldn't see why, but dad said, "Suppose
You wait till tonight, and ask mother; she knows."

I can't understand it, but somehow I feel
That mother's not getting a downright square deal;
Why don't they print her picture, in her best clothes,
Like dad's in the paper? For mother she "knows."

—E. I. Farrington.

THE WAY OF THE WICKED.

Every invention and discovery of man for progress and civilization, however good and promising in the beginning, is seized upon by the forces of evil and used for moral and spiritual undoing. Little indeed could the Wright brothers (one of whom is still living), conceive thirty-five years ago when they invented the first aeroplane, that within their generation this triumph of genius could, or would, be turned into one of the most deadly means of destruction to the innocent and helpless. Thus that which gave to man the wings of the bird and permitted him, on call to go hundreds of miles in an emergency for help and relief, put into the hands of the evil-minded the most dastardly weapon of destruction in our day.

Little indeed could the maker of the first automobile imagine that in a generation his wonderful mechanism would make for the desecration of the Holy Sabbath and for the moral and spiritual detriment of millions in our day.

Little indeed could the inventor of the radio conceive that his device, capable of so much good and joy, could possibly work such inroads on church attendance and satisfy millions, even in the face of the Biblical injunction, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together." Or of that other Biblical teaching, "We took sweet counsel as we went up to the house of the Lord together."

All of these and others in line that could be mentioned have united in making the problem of the church and especially of the ministry more difficult, complex and trying than we of a few years ago could possibly imagine. The minister who is not awake to these new difficulties and allurements of our times is blind and deaf indeed to the demands of his day. The gospel message in its depths and foundations remains the same, but the cultural and surface interpretation of the gospel and preaching are not the same. They tell us that the depths of the ocean remain quiet and undisturbed while the tides and passing storms greatly disturb the surface of the sea. So, indeed, is the gospel and its interpretation. Down in the depths of the gospel there is that which is quiet and satisfying to the soul; but the preacher who does not recognize the disturbing elements and the changes on the surface is but poorly meeting the spiritual demands of his his day and generation. God has always spoken to man in the language of the time and its needs. Moses and Isaiah were great teachers and preachers in their day, and for our day and time, too, as for that matter, but their teaching and preaching are far different from the teaching and preaching of Mark and Paul and James and John. All of these had a message for their day and for our day, but their messages were delivered and interpreted in the needs and language and customs of the day in which each lived. Thus while the gospel in itself is the same, the faithful teacher and preacher is he who interprets that gospel so as to help those of his day meet their problems and solve them in the light of righteousness and truth.

To every church, Sunday school, and individual contributing to the above amounts we hereby express our gratitude. These contributions to missions reveal a deep seated and far-reaching desire, on the part of those in the churches, (for only church members, or professed followers of Christ, make contributions to missions) and Sunday schools, both to obey the command of their Lord and to make a wholly divine and unselfish contribution for a purely spiritual task, that of sharing the gospel message in its saving power with others.

Gratefully,
J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

RANDOLPH DISTRICT NOTES.

Mrs. Hugh R. York, Superintendent of the Randolph District of the North Carolina Woman's Conference, sends the following report: Five woman's societies and two young people's societies have reported. The Biscoe woman's society has seventeen members, has paid $25.50 on appointment, and is using the programs in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Ether woman's society has sixteen members, had two representatives at the Rally, and is using the programs from the literature packet. This society is young and great things are expected by the Conference officials.

Pleasant Ridge woman's society has recently reorganized with a membership of nineteen on roll and one meeting has been held. A good number of this group was in attendance at the Rally meeting. More news from this society later.

The Ramseur woman's society has nineteen members, four of whom are new this year. The Standard of Excellence has been reached so far and $16.70 has been paid on the apportionment.

The Ramseur young people's society has seventeen members with a perfect attendance at the regular monthly meetings. How is that for a record? Who can measure up to it or what society can do better?

The Parks Cross Roads woman's society has twenty-eight members with two new ones this year. Six meetings have been held and $12.25 has been paid on the apportionment. All points on the Standard have been reached thus far.

The young people's society of this church is showing increased interest in missions and steady growth along all lines.

We thank Mrs. York for this interesting information about her district and we hope to get other reports soon. Your editor cannot put news in THE CHRISTIAN SUN that she does not get; ways? Ah! possibly so, possibly so. But, I feel that I can form no finer wish for them than that her open-minded, old-fashioned goodness may be their inheritance.

Framed in quaint recollections and more faithful to life than any daguerrotype, is the picture my memory holds of a certain old-fashioned mother. Her silver hair is partly covered by a cap of lace. Over her shoulder is a soft, light cape, one corner of which is thrown back in the interest of some homely task. Again, as in the days of long gone, I watch the flickering firelight play upon those gentle features, and again I feel the thrill of a peace that passeth boyish understanding as I receive the caress of her restful eyes. How calm and capable she was! and yet how old-fashioned. Those industrious fingers could skillfully knit and spin and mend in the olden time, but what could they do toward the execution of the perfumed accomplishments of today? Strong, efficient and gentle as she was, would not her children's children oftentimes be embarrassed by her old-fashioned so get busy and send in your news. Society presidents, see that your financial report blank filled out, to your conference treasurer, on time and regularly. Also, Madam President, see that the report blank which you received last fall be filled out and sent regularly the last of each quarter to your District Superintendent. Look for the dates on your report blank.

We are glad to get the enthusiastic reports of the use of the fine and helpful programs in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and those in the packets. Surely with all the splendid available materials, no society can be lacking a well as your problems; so let your officials know through this page and they will profit thereby.

A LETTER FROM THE WEST.

penetrates farther and farther into it, transforming its fruitless wastes into fields, areas of grass and grazing cattle.

Just twenty-five miles from where we are tonight runs the "All-American Canal," a project that takes the waters of the Colorado River and sends them flowing through the great sand dunes, as barren as the Sahara desert, to these barren waterless sections for the development of its resources. The building of this canal is as marvelous a feat as the building of the Panama Canal. This sort of thing has made the Imperial Valley one of the richest agricultural and cattle raising sections of the United States. Within a few years it is expected that this entire section will be irrigated and man will likewise prosper there and God will be praised. Even we, for a day, without picks and shovels may live on its goodness and draw from its resources much desired things. Though without form and void, this part of God's barren earth yields its values to our pleasure and recreation. It is a tonic to a sick man and we lay ourselves down to rest in its peace.

How old is the earth? Well, we think science makes no mistake in placing it millions of years; and even that is not contrary to the Bible story when we understand that the word "beginning" was first in the plural and indicated that there were ages before the first record was made. We understand further that man's development of this old earth, no doubt, is God's way of speaking to it and making it fruitful, and that that process is still going on. We know not when it will be completed. Some of it will never be, of course. We can see no possible use that this vast area of sand dunes can even be to the world. We might have a W. P. A. project and transfer it to the sandless beaches of the world; but the formation and the crystallization of the desert life goes on and will go on to eternity.

We can hardly wait for the supper that is about ready. With desert waterbags and jugs to quench our thirst and supply our needs; with an improvised cook-stove made of a tin foot-tub turned bottom up, a hole in one end for a draft door and a flue at the other end made of tin cans put together end to end, the fire "a-roaring," the flue "a-smoking," the smell of Virginia ham (which we happened to have) and milady doing her stuff—boy, we can hardly wait! We feel this moment that this is the life (for one day anyway) and we feel that we would tarry here longer. As we feel at this moment, we are close to God, close to ourselves, and are a part of the great whole. H. E. ROUNTREE.

MOTHER'S DAY.

Of course, you all know that next Sunday is "Mother's Day." Each young people's group should plan to do something for "Mothers" on that day, or during next week. While it is too late to plan anything elaborate, if you have not already done your planning, still there are things which can be done. Arrange for the members of your young people's class or society to go to church with their mothers next Sunday, and sit with them as a group. Invite the mothers of your group to your meeting next Sunday and have a special program in their honor. Perhaps you can get flowers and arrange them into little nosegays for each mother of a member

MOTHER'S LOVE.

There is no Love like a Mother's—'Tis the Sun that shineth forth;
There is no truth like a Mother's—
'Tis the Star that points the North;

There is no Hope like a Mother's
'Tis the April in the clod;
There is no Trust like a Mother's—
'Tis the charity of God:
The Love and Truth, the Hope and Trust
That make the mortal more than dust.

—John J. Holden.

of your group. The young people in some churches have a supply of white and of pink or red flowers at the door of their church next Sunday morning, so that they can give one to each person who comes to church—a white one if the mother is dead, a colored one if she is living. Don't forget to take along a paper of pins, so they can be worn that day, if you do this for the members of your church—and in honor of their mothers. Many young groups plan a Mother-Daughter Banquet for some night during the week preceding or following Mother's Day. The boys can do a similar thing for their dads on Father's Day.

Remember, it is not the cost of the thing we do for our mothers that counts. It is the spirit of it that they will treasure. So let us, as individuals and as young people's groups, do something for our mothers which they will remember and cherish to commemorate Mother's Day.

MOTHER.

There is a religion in all deep love, but the love of a mother is the veil of a softer light between the heart and the Heavenly Father.—Coleridge.

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers.—An old Jewish saying.

A mother is as different from anything else that God ever thought of, as can possibly be. She is a distinct and individual creation.—Henry Ward Beecher.

No language can express the power and beauty and heroism of a mother's love.—Chapin.

As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you.—Isaiah.

All that is purest and best in man is but the echo of a mother's benediction. The hero's deeds are a mother's prayers fulfilled.—F. W. Morton.

Mother is the name for God in the lips and hearts of little children.—Thackeray.

For unwearied patience and unchanging tenderness, the love of a true mother stands next to the love of our Father in Heaven.—Anon.

I remember my mother's prayers and they have always followed me. They have clung to me all my life.—Abraham Lincoln.

The love of a mother is never exhausted, it never changes, it never tires.—Washington Irving.

Religion begins at home. John Wesley once was asked if a certain man was a Christian. "I don't know," replied Wesley, "I never was a member of his family." This meeting should cause young people to examine their relationships to their homes and evaluate their conduct in their homes according to Christian standards.

Henry Drummond says, "The spectrum of love has nine ingredients—patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, unselfishness, good temper, guilelessness, and sincerity." The sum of these ingredients is character completed. Let someone make a talk on these qualities.

Points for Discussion—

1. How can an engaged couple be sure their love will continue? In fairy tales they live "happily ever after." They do in modern life if (with emphasis on the "if") they recognize the fact that happiness is not a gift from some outside source, but that it is the result of sharing all their relationships of life: facing sickness, sorrow, poverty, and disappointment together if necessary, and never failing in sympathy and understanding.

2. How can a family worship be maintained where families have broken schedules so that all members of the family are not together at the same time?

3. Does not every home which receives Jesus have an attraction and a glow similar to the Bethany home?

This meeting may be held in some home. The four main rooms of a home; namely, living room, dining room, bedroom, and kitchen, may be discussed in terms of the kind of life lived in each.

These are good topics for short talks:

1. Good health.
2. Love for the beautiful.
3. Music.
4. Mental growth.
5. Spiritual sensitiveness.
6. Church loyalty.

Florida Conference Honors Dr. Gillette

MEETING OF FLORIDA CONFERENCE.

The Fifty-Sixth Annual Meeting of the Florida Congregational-Christian Conference was held at Coral Gables, April 18-20. The Conference was attended by practically every church and minister, and a well-rounded program of the general theme "Things That Have Stood the Test" was ably carried out. The Conference opened on Tuesday evening, April 18, with the fellowship banquet in the church patio, at which Mr. Louie Lanford served as toastmaster. Following greetings by the minister, Rev. Leslie J. Barnette, responses were made by several persons. The Moderator's address was delivered by Rev. Everett B. Leshner of Jacksonville, Fla., his subject being "This Shaking World."

Dean Vaughan Dabney of Andover Newton Theological Seminary, delivered two addresses at the Conference session, one on evangelism, "The Power of the Witnessing Church," and one on missions on the subject "For the Other Members of the Family." The Conference sermon was delivered by Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, D. D., Winter Park, who used for his subject "The Sacrificial Life of the Church."

An important feature of the program was the discussion groups held on Wednesday afternoon on the general subject "Toward a More Effective Churchmanship." These groups were divided into three divisions, one dealing with the work of the deacon and deaconess, led by Mr. Thomas H. Colevell of the Miami Shores Community Church; "Trustees and Church Business" led by Mr. Robert Williams, Lake Worth, Chairman of the Florida Laymen's Fellowship; and one on evangelism led by Dr. Chicoine and Dean Vaughan Dabney.

The Missionary Department, with Rev. John P. Jockinsen, St. Petersburg, Chairman, presented a splendid report of the activities of this department. Recommendations for pledged work projects were enthusiastically received by the Conference; Rev. Veto A. Venezia, new superintendent and pastor of the Latin American Institute of West Tampa, presented this missionary opportunity; Miss Josie B. Sellars, principal of Fessenden Academy for Negro youth, Martin, Florida, effectively presented the challenge and opportunity of this school.

At a luncheon meeting Mrs. Robert G. Williams, Lake Worth, President of the Florida Federation of Congregational-Christian Women, presented the work of the women.

One delightful feature of the Conference program was an appropriate resolution (which will be found in another section) and the awarding of a certificate of honor to Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, who for thirteen years was the beloved superintendent of the Florida Conference. Dr. Gillette is now superintendent of the district of the Southeast, but will retire this fall. Dr. Gillette by unanimous vote was made Superintendent Emeritus of the Florida Conference, and a certificate of honor, bound in an attractive leather booklet, was presented to him.

On Wednesday night, the 19th, the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship was in charge of a banquet, at which time Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was honored

MY ALTAR.

I have worshipped in churches and chapels
I've prayed in the busy street,
I have sought my God and found Him
Where the waves of His ocean beat;
I have knelt in the silent forest
In the shade of some ancient tree,
But the dearest of all my altars
Was raised at my mother's knee.

I have listened to God in His temple,
I've caught His voice in the crowd,
I have heard Him speak where the breakers
Were booming long and loud;
When the winds played soft in the treetops
My Father has talked to me,
But I never heard Him clearer
Than I did at my mother's knee.

for ten years of faithful service among the youth of our churches. A purse of $100.00 was presented to her.

Following this banquet Mrs. John P. Jockinsen, of St. Petersburg, led the devotional service, which was followed by an address by Dr. Robert G. McNicoll of Miami University, and the presentation of the missionary drama, "BaThane," by the North Miami young people.

The closing service was conducted on Thursday morning with an appropriate service led by Dr. J. Beveridge of Coconut Grove, and an address, "Things That Will Assure Victory," by Dr. Clarence A. Vincent of Miami Shores, who led the Conference in a period of silent communion.

Mr. Rindalden Saunders, deacon of the Miami Beach Community Church and principal of one of the Miami schools, was elected Moderator for next year. Rev. Henry J. Condit of Orange City was elected Conference preacher, and Rev. Elisha A. King, D. D., Miami Beach, was re-elected Chairman of the Board of Directors.

A RESOLUTION.

[Presented at Florida Conference meeting at Coral Gables, April 18-20.]

WHEREAS, in the Providence of God and the custom of the Congregational-Christian denomination, the time of retirement is approaching when our former State Superintendent and present Superintendent of the Southeast District, Dr. Edwin Carlton Gillette, is contemplating severing his official connection with the Florida Congregational-Christian Conference in the near future, and

WHEREAS, Dr. Gillette has served as Superintendent of our state work for thirteen years and has endeared himself to all who have known him as a friend, a Christian gentleman, a wise leader with a sympathetic and constructive spirit, and

WHEREAS, the thought of his leaving us in official separation gives us a sense of regret and distinct feeling of loss, be it

RESOLVED, that we who are assembled here in the capacity of the Florida Congregational-Christian Conference, do hereby confer upon our friend and associate the highest title within our power to give; namely, that of Superintendent Emeritus of the Florida Conference; that this title be retained by him forever; that the name and title be printed on all documents issuing from the State Office; and be it

RESOLVED, that we bespeak for Dr. Gillette first a period of rest and recreation that he may be freed from his arduous labors, that he may relax without the sense of responsibility and secure that health and strength which will help to make his future years ones of great usefulness as a friendly confidant and advisor in matters pertaining to the welfare of our churches; that we wish for him a new leisure in which he may find opportunity to realize unfulfilled dreams, to live in the fellowship of his family, his friends, his books, and flowers, and to enjoy the sure rewards of patient toil. And be it further.

RESOLVED, that this resolution become the expression of the whole Conference, the sense of all our churches assembled here by delegates, and that this resolution be presented to Dr. Gillette, and a copy placed upon the official minutes of this Conference.

Done this 18th day of April, 1939, at Coral Gables, Fla., at the 56th Annual meeting of the Conference, and signed by the Moderator and Scribe.

NOTE—I read a little book the other day called "Wit, Wisdom and Humor," by an "Unspeakable Scott." There is so much of his philosophy that appeals to me religiously, I am going to pass it on to you in the daily meditations of this week. I am giving each one a title and a text.

MONDAY.

THE CRUCIBLE.

"He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him."—Prov. 16:7.

"Trials, temptations, disappointments—all these are helps instead of hindrances, if one uses them rightly. They not only test the fibre of character, but strengthen it. Every conquered temptation represents a new fund of moral energy."

Prayer—Our Father, help us to live today as though it were all. We would not rest upon the conquests we have won in the past, lest we lose and fall. Be Thou our strength. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"GOD IS LOVE."

(I John 4:8.)

Spirit being the essence of God, and God being love, Spirit is the essence of love. Love is the end on which man's entire personality rests. Without love life is futile. The possession of all else profiteth a man nothing. Let man therefore develop his spiritual sense and through love make manifest the glory of his inheritance."

Prayer—Dear Father, may Thy love flow deep in our hearts and lives. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FIGHTING A STORM.

"Be ye angry sin not."—Eph. 4:26.

"Do nothing in a passion: is it wise to put to sea in the violence of a storm." That depends upon the kind of storm. Sometimes, in a hurricane, a ship has to put to sea and scud before it, riding it out in order to escape the rocks. Do good with what thou hast, or it will do thee no good. Return not evil for evil," saith the Lord.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe Thee. We know that one who feels the greatest sorrow may experience the greatest happiness; he who endures to the end shall wear the crown. Amen.

MOTHER.

Rare gems in earth are hidden deep
And from the forest sod
The fairest bloom wafts its perfume,
An incense up to God.
There is a gem of greater worth,
A bloom, like to none other,
'Twas born in heaven to bless the earth,
This treasure we call "Mother."

Her love allayed our early fears
Along life's troubled way,
Her counsel lasts when she has passed
Beyond terrestrial way.
Then bring her cheer, if she be here,
If gone, there is no other,
One priceless gift God gave to all,
When He gave us a "Mother."
—Anon.

THURSDAY.

GOD HEARS PRAYER.

"Before they call I will answer."—Isa. 65:24.

If Radio's slim finger can pluck melody from the night
And toss it over Continent or Sea,
If the notes of a violin can be blown across a mountain or city's din,
If songs, like crimson roses, are culled from the thin blue air,
Why should mortals wonder that God hears prayer.

Prayer—Our Father, everything is beautiful. Teach us to esteem life as we ought, and grant unto us Thy free Spirit. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WHAT THE ANGELS ASK.

"A man's life consisteth not in the things which he possesseth."—Luke 2:15.

"A man's wealth is the good he does in the world. People ask when he dies, 'What property has he left?'"

The angels—"What good deeds has he done?" If we understand Christ, he who helps others most lives the largest life.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, help us not to consider man for his money, nor think meaner of ourselves for the want of it. Make us kindness and goodness itself all along our pathway. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOD'S HOME.

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."—Heb. 13:2.

Home is not a place that gold can buy,
Or build up in a minute;
You've got to weep to make it home,
You've got to sit and sigh,
Perhaps to sit beside some loved one's bed
And know that death is nigh.
Folks who call—make always welcome,
They've their troubles as well as you.
So make the best of all God gives you
To make your home a home.

Prayer—O God, bless our home. Make it the place of Thy abode. Amen.

SUNDAY.

OF FRIENDSHIP.

"Faithful are the wounds of a friend."—Prov. 27:6.

"There are many fruits that never turn sweet till frost has laid its hand upon them; there are many nuts that never fall from the tree till frost has opened them and ripened them; and there are many lives that never grow sweet till sorrow touches them." He who has loved, though skies be cold above him, will have many warm hearts around him.

Prayer—Our Father, we cannot lay claim to virtue till we have been tried. We cannot lay claim to the true Christian spirit till we have been tested. If Thou wouldst test us, we would be faithful. Dear Lord, by Thy Spirit, make us so. Amen.

THE FINE ART OF MOTHERHOOD.

By REV. CHARLES F. BANNING, D. D.

"Thy mother was like a vine in thy blood."—Ezek. 19:10.

There are three realms of spiritual value—truth, goodness, and beauty. Out of the search for truth has come Science. Out of the search for goodness has come Philosophy and Religion. Out of the search for beauty has come Art. Perceiving all those—truth, goodness, and beauty, and transcribing them into human life, gives mankind the highest art ever discovered or practiced—the art of mothering.

1. Insofar as a woman is able to perceive the truth, or the good, or the beautiful herself, is she a success as a mother. Some mothers give their children a sense of beauty, but very little regard for truth. First of all, before she can give them to her children, a mother must have a desire for these things in her own life, and only insofar as she makes them her own can she be successful.

2. The second requirement after these qualities have been made her own, is that she be able to transcribe them, to make them live in the lives of her children. During the impressionable plastic years the mother is the one who has the privilege and responsibility of shaping life. Insofar as she makes truth, goodness, and beauty her own, and insofar as she can reproduce them in the lives of her children, so does she become a success in this great art of mothering.

Methods:

1. Many mothers seem to think they can teach their children what they want them to be. There is a vast difference between knowing and being. Very few of us accomplish all the good that we know. Very few people ever do wrong that they do not know better. If everyone did what they know is right and what their mothers taught them was the true and the right thing to do, our Sunday schools would be doubled next Sunday, and there would be an overflow meeting at prayer meeting. Mothers must teach, they must impart information. But that is only a small part of their job.

2. Many mothers seem to think that their task is one of correction. They see all of the things the children do that are wrong, and any parent knows that there is much to be seen. They confine their task to pointing to these mistakes and warning their children against them. Their stock in trade is "no" and "don't." They feel that if they can properly warn or frighten their children against the wrong way that this will insure their children of doing right. Of all the ways of becoming a successful mother, this is the poorest.

3. Character is caught more than it is taught. This unusual mother is one who cannot only teach her chil-

A PRAYER FOR MOTHERS.

Holy Father, we thank Thee for our mothers. They sought to teach us how lovely Thou art. In their tireless ministries and sleepless vigils they rayed forth thy love in gentle emanation about our candles and along the untried paths over which our children's feet ran.

For the mothers who have fallen asleep in Jesus we thank Thee. The memory of them is sweeter than the flowers that bloom above their graves, brighter than the dewy beauty of the meadows where we wandered in the gleeful days of innocence more musical than the song-birds in the tops of the yard-trees under whose shade we used to play.

We are grateful for those mothers who are partners with us still in the things on earth. In Thy mercy spare them to us for many a day. They kissed our souls into glad consciousness of Thyself and led the way for us in the heavenward path of prayer. Thou, who has been their hope and help through the toilsome day, make their tasks a bit easier and their burdens less heavy; and let it be bright for them "at the evening time."—Anon.

dren what is the good, the true, and the beautiful, and warn her children against that which is false, evil, and ugly, but can set an example before them as well.

4. The way that most successful mothers have succeeded in this art of mothering is by inspiration. To inspire one child is of greater importance than to impart information or correct fifty children. This is the lesson which teachers and parents ought to learn. It is not enough to instruct or to correct. The supreme task is to inspire.

This is true of the great mothers of history. The mother of Lincoln died when he was a boy. She had little opportunity to teach or correct him. She had little chance to set an example. Somehow by her life, by her love, and by her final message to him, she inspired him so that all his life there rang in his ears that challenge which his mother gave him, "Be somebody, Abe." Blessed is that mother who can leave an inspiration in the heart of her child.

No man knows whether civilization is going up or down. One man's guess is as good as another. The answer to the question lies not in the hands of statesmen, politicians, business men, educators, or preachers. The future of this country lies in the hands and the hearts of mothers of the coming generation. If they fail to have in their lives this truth, goodness, and beauty, or if they fail to inspire it in the lives of their children, then we are doomed. Not science, discovery, industry, nor Big Business, but the art of mothering is the key.

Two final words. If there is love in your home, it will be a place of beauty and happiness where children will want to be. There may be wealth, plenty, wholesome food, expensive clothing, and toys, but if there is no love it will not be a place of happiness. Paul was right when he said, "Love never fails." It never does. A successful home is the home where love is the law of life.

The second is religion. You must have it if your home is to be what you want it to be. The Bible reminds us that the prayers of a righteous man exert a mighty influence. Then the prayers of a righteous mother exert a mighty influence in the life of a child. One thing I cannot understand. Every mother recognizes that this is true. Every mother wants her child to grow up with fine strong Christian character. She wants her children to be Godly men and women. Yet she raises that family without voice lifted in prayer. There is no grace before meals in their home. There is no regular attendance at church on the part of the parents. Religion becomes a matter of convenience.

Now let me sum up. The greatest art in the world is the art of mothering. It is the taking of truth, goodness, and beauty on the part of woman and making it her own, and then transcribing these ideals, not on canvas, but on human life. It is the inspiring of her children to know and to be the best and the highest. It is this that our country needs above all else today.

"No one should permit the pride that comes from enjoying any worldly honors to hinder his doing the things necessary to eternal life. Seeking the kingdom of heaven is man's first duty."

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The weather man has given us a variety of weather since the first of May. On the morning of May 2 we were awakened from sound sleep about three o'clock by a shower of hail. My heart jumped up toward my throat. I knew our wheat was just heading out and if the shower of hail lasted very long our crops would be ruined. The hail was of short duration and not much damage was done. We had a hail storm twenty years ago in the month of July that destroyed all our crops and the memory of its effects still lingers with us. But the weather man still had more in store for us. About nine o'clock on the second of May, it began to snow and it snowed for two hours—in the month of May. It was something that the oldest people don't remember ever seeing in this section. The writer has on a number of occasions seen it snow in the month of April and has heard his mother say that she could remember people wearing overcoats to the field in the month of June; but snow in the month of May was something new in this section.

Our public school closed Monday night. We had five to graduate, five to get jobs for. They will enter the wilderness of life. Their pathway will not be strewn with flowers. Obstacles will, perhaps, often confront them, and they will have to overcome them and not get discouraged. The writer has great sympathy for a boy or girl when they start out on their life's journey. He knows that they need encouragement.

SILENCE IN CHURCH.

“One of the marks of true friendship are the periods of silence when no conversation is necessary. There are silences which are the essence of understanding and fellowship. So refraining from indiscriminate talking either before or after the service is not a mark of coldness nor lack of cordiality. We come to worship, and not to talk. There is, or there can be, plenty of opportunity for greeting the stranger and our friends either before or after the service outside the church. Once we are in the church, let's remain silent.”

group made a visit to our church plant.

We were very glad to have as our guest speaker on the fourth Sunday morning the Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary and Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lester. It was a pleasure to have them in our midst.

AT ELON.

With spring in its full glory, we find the old campus changing into a lovely gown of bright green, and the breath of spring is everywhere. As one of the great poets has stated, “In spring a young man's fancy turns to love.” One should find this definitely true if one should stroll around the campus. The girls, dressed in their very best, and the young men are certainly taking advantage of this beautiful North Carolina weather. They can be seen strolling over the campus with kodaks any Sunday afternoon.

The winners of the superlative contest, sponsored by the “Maroon and Gold,” have been crowned. Joyce Black was voted prettiest girl on the campus, while Galloway Walker, Elon's May king, won title of most popular and best looking.

Elon has the privilege of having the “number one” piano composer of North Carolina as a student. Charlie Hamrick, a talented musician on our campus, composed a piano composition and submitted it in the contest sponsored by the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs. Mr. Hamrick was awarded the prize for having the best composition submitted in this contest. Hats off to Charlie Hamrick and his future musical career.

The Annual Peace Oratorical contest was held last week when students gave their orations on Peace. The winner of this contest was Emmanuel Hedgebeth, a senior, and a ministerial student. He will compete with students from every college and university in the state at Wake Forest College on May 5. Should Mr. Hedgebeth win, he will receive $50.00—and the school, the State Cup. This cup is now in the possession of our college, having been won last year by Emerson Sanderson. Hopes are high for retaining the cup.

A great privilege was it to have Rev. C. P. Garman, our missionary to Japan, and Dr. James Fraser of New York on our campus. They have been our chief speakers at chapel and at our church services on Sunday. Rev. Mr. Garman was attending the Southern Conference which was held at the College during several days in April.

The first week of May finds much activity here at the college. Friday Elon's baseball team meets the mighty Catawba team. Saturday we find the King and Queen of May being crowned before many spectators.

In Memoriam

GRIFFIN.

Mrs. Sallie Tuck Griffin, daughter of the late Carey and Esta Tuck, was born January 27, 1891, and died March 20, 1939. In August, 1910, she married Charlie Griffin. She is survived by her husband, four children, and three step-children, Spencer, Fillmore, Ethel, Bailey, Mrs. Henry Joyner, Mr. Russell Griffin, and Mrs. Lillian Dunn. Mrs. Griffin lived for a number of years in Brunswick County, Va., and while there she united with the M. E. Church, but after returning to Virgilina she transferred to Union Christian Church where her people have worshipped for several generations. All who knew her say she was a good woman. She was a great sufferer and death came as an agent of mercy to release her from pains of the body and translate her to the rest of Heaven.

BRAY.

Mrs. Lee Anna McCraw Bray was born in Halifax County, Va., May 20, 1898, and departed this life March 30, 1939. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beverly McCraw.

On December 27, 1916, she married Brother Burnette Bray, a charter member of Liberty Church. Mrs. Bray is survived by her husband, four children, mother, five sisters, and four brothers. The children are Lula, Junior, John, and Paulette. Miss Lula is a third-year student at Martha Washington College, and Junior a member of the senior class in High School. The deceased had been a member of Liberty Church for twenty years. She was an industrious woman and faithful to all duties. The funeral was at Liberty Church, with burial in the church cemetery. A large crowd attended. Floral tributes were in abundance. Be comforted, loved ones, in the hope she has passed from years of suffering into eternal rest.

Mrs. Sophronia Williams Noah passed from this life February 15, 1939, in the seventy-sixth year of her life. Sister Noah was a loyal and faithful member of Shallow Ford Christian Church for many years.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we shall greatly miss her cheerfulness, friendliness, and neighborliness among us.

2. That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy in their sorrow.

Talley, eighteen grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren. Two sisters also survive him, Mrs. Bet Glascock and Mrs. Jenny Overby. Brother Talley was a quiet man of good judgment and of high ideals, a most excellent neighbor, faithful in church attendance and liberal in giving. One of the largest crowds the writer has seen at a home funeral was present on April 1. Burial was at Gravel Hill Church.

Mrs. Faucette professed faith in Christ in early life and joined Shallow Ford Church some 40 years ago. Here she has proved a faithful and loyal member. She was a good neighbor, a devoted wife, and an affectionate mother. Peace to her soul. May the Lord comfort all who have sustained a loss.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor at her church-home and interment was made in the local cemetery in the presence of a large number of people which was an evidence of the high esteem in which she was held in her community.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Dr. Elwood W. Jones, pastor, reports a very successful revival meeting at Franklin, Va., with Dr. Stanley C. Harrell as pastor-evangelist.

Last week and this Rev. J. L. Neese of Reidsville, N. C., is aiding Rev. S. W. Phillips in a revival meeting at Elm Avenue Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va. Rev. Mr. Neese attended a part of the Southeast Convention in Norfolk.

The Rev. H. S. Hardeastle, pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., and his good people are happy about receiving sixty-five new members since last Conference. Incidentally, they did an extra good job in entertaining the Southeast Convention last week.

Rev. W. T. Scott, superintendent of the Florida and Georgia State Conferences, gave the Mother's Day message at the First Congregational-Christian Church in Newport News, Va., and spoke at the evening service of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., on last Sunday.

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will be delighted to know that Chaplain H. E. Rountree has sufficiently recovered in health to return to his post of duty. He will join the Henderson again upon its arrival in San Diego, and during the summer he expects to be in Chinese waters, going to Norfolk, Va., in September for two months.

A Children's Day program has been prepared by the Board of Christian Education for use in our Southern Convention Sunday schools. Every pastor and superintendent in the Convention has received one of these suggested programs. The Board will welcome further requests from those who are planning to observe Children's Day. (Most churches will have their program on June 11.)

The parsonage at Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., will soon be completed and Rev. J. F. Morgan and his family will be residing happily there. The old parsonage was moved away, an adjoining lot bought and a lovely brick venter building erected far enough from the church to give the effect of spacious grounds. When completed, the Rosemont Church, parsonage, and lawn will be very beautiful.

A NEW CHURCH AT ASHEBORO. IS IT POSSIBLE?

The Promotional Secretary, working with the Home Missions Committee of the Western North Carolina Conference, has secured the names of 120 people who are (or have recently been) members of Congregational and Christian Churches, and who now live in Asheboro, N. C. Many of them are eager to start a new Congregational-Christian Church there.

A meeting of the group is called for next Sunday evening, May 21, at VIRGINIA SUBSCRIBERS.

At the Valley of Virginia Central Conference meeting last August a quota of CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions was accepted and passed on to the churches. At a recent meeting of the committee appointed by the Eastern Virginia Conference subscriptions were apportioned to the churches in that Conference. Both lists are given below with the hope that the pastor and people in each local church will busy themselves at once to secure paid in advance subscriptions equal to the number suggested. Of course, the present subscribers count in the quota.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN office at Elon College, N. C., will be glad to furnish the present list of subscribers by Post Office addresses. We do not have them by churches. The office is glad to aid in every possible way.

Now is the time to get busy about this particular phase of our church work. The personal interest of pastors and present subscribers is needed and will be greatly appreciated.

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor

OUR MOST PRESSING JOB.

The Southern Convention has divided the year into periods for emphasizing the different phases of our church work. The Christian Orphanage, Ministerial Relief, Elon College, and Missions have had their emphasis during this Conference Year. Shortly the Board of Christian Education will come in for special consideration. At present the most urgent matter before the churches of the Southern Convention is the securing of new and renewal subscriptions to "The Christian Sun."

We now have about 2,200 subscribers. Most of these are paid in advance, but quite a large number of them need to renew. The Convention voted to increase the subscription list to 3,000 within the Convention. This means that we need to secure a thousand new subscribers in North Carolina and Virginia.

In former years it has been the responsibility of "The Christian Sun" to secure its own subscriptions. By vote of the Convention and the Conferences this responsibility is now shifted to the churches. It is believed that every church should undertake to educate its membership by getting the church paper into the homes. This sounds logical. If the paper brings the necessary information and inspiration, then the members should read it and the matter of securing subscriptions should depend not on the salesmanship of the managing editor or a Board of Publications, but on the leadership of the local church as part of the educational program. This is a new venture and may cause some degree of hardship, both for the paper and for the local church, but it appears to be a step in the right direction.

At the present time "The Christian Sun" is greatly in need of funds with which to continue operation. Editing and printing the paper are closely tied in with the office of Promotional Secretary, since the editor is also managing editor of "The Sun" and Promotional Secretary for the Convention, and since funds for subscriptions aid in the whole promotional work of the church. While the Convention is desperately in need of funds, this writer is not inclined to ask the churches to secure subscriptions merely for this reason. Unless it is worth two dollars ($2.00) per year to have "The Christian Sun" in the homes of church members, a pastor would be doing injustice to his members if he should try to sell them the paper. There seems to be good reason to believe that the investment of two dollars ($2.00) in this way will mean much to every home. In fact, there seems to be no other means by which our church families within the Southern Convention can continue to be informed about their united work. "The Christian Sun" seems to be a necessity for our church homes. It therefore seems to be wise for all the ministers to see to it that "The Christian Sun" goes to the homes of our church people.

On this basis an urgent appeal is given to every pastor and the leaders of all the churches to undertake a thorough canvass of the church homes to secure new and renewal subscriptions in the immediate future. This is the most pressing problem now facing the Southern Convention and its churches. Success in this field will lead toward success in other enterprises. The cooperation of pastors, church leaders, and subscribers is expected because of the reasonableness of the request and because of the previous experience of fine loyalties and cooperation.

A GREAT CONVENTION.

The recent session of the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, held in the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., was a great convention—or so said many who were there, some of whom were sceptical about its value before the meeting.

There were great addresses. Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, Moderator of the General Council, made a great speech concerning our Congregational-Christian Church fellowship and our place in the "body of Christ." Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, president of the Home Boards, thrilled his audience with addresses on "I Salute the Church," "Come and Be Eyes for Us" (to the young people), and "Towering O'er the Wrecks of Time." Rev. G. D. Ridout, editor of the missionary organ of the United Church of Canada, gave an interesting and instructive talk along with pictures he had taken of missionary work in Africa.

Moderator John G. Truitt and Rev. Robert Lee House stirred their audiences with challenging messages. Many other lesser lights also twinkled in the firmament. The speeches made it a great convention.

From eight states of the Southeast came men and women to renew old acquaintances and make new ones, to sing the great hymns of the church, to think about common tasks, to listen for the voice of God, and to worship before the Almighty. In banquet hall, corridors, and by the way-side friends met to talk and enjoy comradeship. In conversation and conference they considered their common problems and sought mutual understanding. In worship and holy communion they found spiritual renewal, inspiration, and guidance. The fellowship made it a great convention.

The pastor and people of Christian Temple welcomed, fed, and entertained with such graciousness that it was a great Convention from the standpoint of hospitality.

The time and place of meeting for the next session were left to the executive committee composed of the Moderator, Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, Burlington, N. C.; the Vice-Moderator, Rev. R. Wiley Scott, Atlanta, Ga.; the Secretary-Treasurer, Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Rev. E. H. Rainey, Evarts, Ky.; Rev. V. B. Chicoine, Winter Park, Fla.; and the superintendents and extension workers, Dr. Fred P. Ensminger, Rev. W. T. Scott, Rev. F. C. Lester, Miss Marguerite Davison, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A recent report issued by Dr. Hugh Hartshorne, Chairman of the Committee on Standards of the General Council Commission on the Ministry, contains some interesting information. Among other things it states that there are 3,108 Congregational ministers, in full standing, available for 5,688 white Congregational Churches in the United States. It is presumed that these figures include Christian ministers and churches. There are 527 pastors of other denominations serving Congregational and Christian Churches. Many of the Congregational and Christian ministers have come into our fellowship from other denominations.

In this connection it may be observed that of the twenty-five active pastors serving churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference thirteen came from other denominations as follows: five Congregational, four Methodist, three Baptist, and one Reformed. Twelve were reared in the Christian denomination. Other Conferences of the Southern Convention have a similar status, with varying percentages of ministerial transfers from other denominations. This condition obtains in many other denominations. There is no reflection upon the standing of the ministry or the standards of the various Conferences for entering the ministry. Some very useful men have come from other denominations.

But it is well to note that ministers as well as laymen do not change the background of their early training by transferring their membership to another denomination. A minister who changes his church relationship carries with him all his former doctrinal beliefs and administrative policies. In some instances he can make a much needed contribution to the growth of his new charge. However, it would not be difficult to find a number of cases where churches have suffered much from the radicalism of transient ministers who were seeking a position with no thought of denominational loyalty.

Two factors enter largely into the making of the minister. The first is his denominational affiliation. The church to which he belongs has much to do with his personal creed and spiritual attitude. The second element, and sometimes the most powerful, is the institution where he received his training for the ministry. The college makes a contribution, and the seminary makes a greater impression. Some schools develop strong leadership; others spoil promising young men. Usually college and seminary graduates find it difficult to relieve themselves of a lot of mental rubbish during the first year in the pastorate. In this unloading process they find calmer waters out in the deep of reliance upon the wisdom of the Pilot—the Unseen One—whose Gospel is superior to all the schemes of secular scholasticism.

The progress of the church depends upon unity of the ministers. There should be some way to bring all the ministers of certain sections together for a great Conference once every year. In the Southern Convention such a Conference of Ministers and laymen could be held at Elon College. Attempts have been made to have such a Conference, but they have not been very successful. Lack of funds has been a handicap. Church doctrine and church polity should have a prominent place on the program. We should find some great challenging church doctrines and some unifying methods of polity to warm our hearts and stir our enthusiasm for our great denominational opportunities. We are drifting when we should be following a well-defined charted course. We are lagging when we should be leading. A unified ministry, with progressive leadership, will help.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON ALUMNI.

The real worth of an educational institution is reflected quite largely in the character and achievements of its alumni. A tree is judged by its fruits; a college is judged by the results of its efforts in the field of education. If it is thorough, comprehensive, and practical in its program of training, the alumni of that institution will demonstrate that thoroughness and practicability. The breadth of the curriculum will determine the scope of its training and the caliber of its alumni. If it trains for teaching and teaching alone, cultural achievements such as music, art, dramatics, etc., will not be in evidence in the application of the alumni to the problems of society. If the curriculum embraces predominately technical subjects, the graduates of that institution will function in technical fields without appreciation of the finer arts. A liberal arts church-related school presents a more inclusive curriculum for training than any other type of institution. In the church school practical technical opportunities are offered along with and in addition to the cultural courses that characterize the type of education offered by the so-called church schools of today.

Someone has said that a thorough knowledge of the Bible constitutes a liberal education and that no one could be considered educated without an intelligent understanding of the Bible. Anything that will add to the knowledge and efficiency of the students of today may be included in the curriculum of a church institution. Of course great care is exercised in the formation of a course of studies to be pursued by the ambitious young people of today. The point is that the church-related college is at liberty to adapt its courses to the requirements of the individual student without fear or restriction. Religion and religious instruction are essential to the growth and development of the whole of life. When an individual graduates from a church-related school, if he has exercised care in the selection of his courses and been diligent in the prosecution of those courses, he has acquired for himself a foundation broad and strong upon which he may build life's structure.

For forty-nine years Elon College has given itself to the serious business of touching life and preparing young people for the eventualities of life. The college looks upon her alumni with interest and affection. At the close of her forty-ninth year she opens wide the gates to her campus and invites earnestly all her sons and daughters to return on this happy occasion. A warmth of welcome, a congeniality of spirit, and a hospitality of home await all who come. Alumni Day is Monday, May 29. Commencement exercises follow on Tuesday. Please drop us a card saying that you are coming.

L. E. SMITH.

The Valley of Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will meet this year at Winchester, Va., on June 14. The theme chosen for the Convention is "The Threshold Preparation for the Church." Pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers, other leaders, and young people should begin making plans to attend this important session of their Church.

Rev. D. M. Spence reports a fine attendance at the special Mother's Day program on last Sunday at Sophia Church.

VALLEY GROUP MEETS.

The Pastoral Committee of Group No. 4, Congregational-Christian Churches of the Valley Conference, met at the Lee-Jackson Hotel, New Market, Va., and recalled their present pastor, Rev. Roy D. Coulter, to serve them another year. This group is composed of the following churches: Wissler's Chapel, Mt. Jackson; Palmyra, Edinburg; Wood's Chapel, New Market; Concord, Berkley Community, Tenth Legion; and Mayland, Broadway.

Mr. R. L. Ettel of Mt. Jackson was elected as Chairman of the Group Committee. Mr. Vincent Huffman was elected scribe. The meeting was opened with a round-table discussion on the problems confronting the group of churches, and plans for its future growth were outlined. As a result of this discussion it was agreed that the members of the churches concerned meet sometime this summer for an all-day, dinner, and inspiration meeting at one of the churches within the group; the object being a more democratic discussion of the plans and objectives that concern the whole group—making them matters of one concern. Rev. Roy D. Coulter was selected to plan the program and appoint his committee.

The high-light of the meeting was felt in the willingness of all to buy or rent a parsonage for their pastor. While this discussion did not reach the stage of an immediate set-up, it did find hearty approval with the committee. Many other matters of importance to the group were discussed at length.

A happy spirit was prevalent and whole-hearted cooperation was assured the pastor in his efforts. They assured Rev. Mr. Coulter of their faith in his work and pledged better support and confidence in his plans for the future of the churches.

This is the first year under which the churches have labored under the new plan of grouping voted by the Valley Conference last August. The churches of this group are well pleased with the year's results and have high hopes for the future.

HOLLAND LETTER.

By W. B. O'NEILL, D. D., Minister.

From Moravia to Holland! That sounds like an old world adventure, but in reality it was one preacher's place of departure in the Empire State to that of his new home and work in the Old Dominion State. When the call came to leave the winter snows of the North to bask in the warm sunshine of the South, we were carried back to old Virginy on the swift wings of desire.

After our arrival there were vague rumors and mysterious whisperings of a "pounding" to be given the preacher and his wife. This was all ably to the atmosphere of the worship. On this occasion the choir gave a most effective rendering of the Easter Cantata "Immortality" by Stults, before a large and appreciative congregation.

The Holland Church is well organized and manned in every department. The strong leadership of the past is reflected in its Christian spirit; in its search for the truth and in its keen missionary consciousness. It takes justifiable pride in its beautiful sanctuary surrounded by spacious grounds made lovely by flower and shrubbery and to which pine and maple trees add not only shade but beauty and dignity. It manifests the same sense of pride in its modern and too suggestive of a memorial initiation, weird and far too painful, which had for its locale the land of the shamrock and shillelah. Our fears were quickly dissipated, however, when we learned that it was to be the outward and tangible expressions of an inner warmth of welcome, true Southern hospitality at its best. What a pounding it was! The hands and hearts of this generous people withheld no good thing.

Maundy Thursday was observed by a candle-light communion service when some fifty people braved the inclement weather to participate in the fellowship of this sacrament. An improvised altar with its large ivory cross and gleaming candelabra, loaned by one member of the congregation whose lifetime hobby has been a study of the symbolism of the church, provided an impressive background for this beautiful service.

Some of the good seed sown by my immediate predecessor came to fruition on Easter Sunday when the choir appeared for the first time in gown and surplice adding immeasur-attractive parsonage which was renovated and repaired in the interim between pastorates and thus made more comfortable for the new incumbent and his family.

This church faces the future with consecrated courage and the high hope of an increasing usefulness in making real the Kingdom of God in the hearts of men.

The children presented a very interesting Mother's Day program in Sunday school.

On account of the illness of the Rev. Mr. O'Neill, the Promotional Secretary preached in Holland last Sunday morning. Mr. O'Neill expected to be out again within a few days.

Rev. Emmanuel Hedgebeth, a member of the Holland Church, will graduate at Elon College this year. He recently won the oratorical contest at Elon and since then has represented our college in the state contest on "Peace." He is hoping to enter seminary next fall.

Elon College Golden Anniversary

I am greatly encouraged by the enthusiastic interest in the Golden Anniversary Campaign that I find wherever I go. True, a great deal of this interest and enthusiasm has been content so far to express itself in words and assurances, both of which are excellent, fine. I have not been able yet, however, to use words and assurance for cash. Whenever these words of encouragement are accompanied by the anniversary dues of $50 or a part thereof, I have no difficulty in getting our creditors to accept the same. The friends have been speaking well and writing well, some have been giving well. This week we have a little better report than last. Our thermometer steps up a bit. We want to see it move faster. Well, your subscription paid up will keep it moving. You intend to take membership in the club. Of course you can't afford to have your name off the permanent record when it is made. This will be a fine company to be numbered with. Why not send your membership in today? It is only $50, but $50 will help tremendously.

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERINGS.

Our friends continue to increase. A number of Sunday schools have sent in their offerings this week, and we hope that the large number who have not yet remembered us will forward their offerings immediately. When you send your Sunday school offerings to the college, it helps you with conference apportionments and helps the college with its current accounts. We are forced to depend on our Sunday schools and churches quite largely during the late spring and summer months. When you think of it, I know you will be glad to add your contribution that the fine work that we are undertaking for the church may continue without unnecessary hinderance.

UPPER-ALAMANCE FELLOWSHIP.

The Upper-Alamance Fellowship met in regular fifth Sunday session at the Concord Church, Caswell County, Sunday, April 30. The attendance was excellent in numbers and very good from the point of churches represented. A fire which spelled tragedy for a Concord Church family caused a considerable excitement and cast an atmosphere of sadness over the meeting.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. U. Fogleman, Rev. I. T. Underwood gave the welcome. Two sessions were held with a picnic supper on the church grounds between sessions.

Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary of the Southern Convention, was present and spoke twice, presenting first the problems of the Southern Convention, and secondly, how these problems can and should be met.

Officers for the year 1939-1940 were elected as follows: president, Mr. J. E. Wilkins, superintendent of the Bethlehem Sunday school; vice-president, Rev. J. Frank Apple, pastor of Bethel and Mt. Zion Churches of the Fellowship; secretary, Mrs. J. D.

History of First Congregational-Christian Church of Henderson, N. C.

By J. EVERETT NEESE.

The First Congregational Christian Church at Henderson, N. C., was organized in Parker Hall, November 26, 1905, by Rev. M. W. Butler. At this meeting Miss Ida Ayscue was elected secretary and treasurer, and "the election of other officers and the roll of charter members was left open until November 29." The first meeting of this group also resulted in the organization of a Sunday School "of 35 members. With Brother D. I. Langston as superintendent."

When this group met again on November 29, 1905, there were 35 men and women who were enrolled as charter members, and of this number thirteen are still living. Mr. C. D. Harton and Mr. D. I. Langston were elected as Deacons to be ordained the second Sunday in December, at 11 o'clock. The first money ever to be raised for the maintenance of this newly organized church was $9.05 which represented a collection taken at the abovementioned meeting.

On May 6, 1906, the special committee previously appointed reported that a lot on Zene Street had been purchased for a church site. This was later sold and the present church site purchased.

Rev. M. W. Butler, the motivating force back of this new organization, remained as pastor only one year during which time he received $114.00 for his services. Rev. C. E. Newman was elected pastor September 23, 1906, and the church agreed to pay him $125.00 for his services. The next year he received $150.00.

The present church site was purchased in 1907 and the auditorium building erected in 1908 at a cost of about $12,000.00.

In November, 1912, Rev. A. T. Banks became pastor with the understanding that he was to receive $200.00. On January 10, 1913, plans were made to purchase benches for the church auditorium to replace the chairs which were then in use. The benches arrived sometime between July 26 and October 29, because on the latter date a report was made that they were "half paid and the other half due."

On June 29, 1913, the church made plans to launch a "Financial Campaign" to raise $2,500.00 for church improvements. This campaign was not really begun until September of the same year.

The first effort towards building a parsonage was made September 8, 1915, when a committee was named to make plans and raise the money. At the next quarterly meeting of the church this committee reported "owing to the scarcity of money your committee decided to postpone its work until a more convenient time." The committee was discharged. This interest was resumed at a special meeting held in February, 1917, which resulted in the erection of the present parsonage in 1918 at an approximate cost of $2,000.00.

On September 8, 1915, another committee was appointed to raise money and this time it was for the purpose of building a class room. This committee reported at the next quarterly meeting that it was not an advisable time to raise money. The committee was discharged. An interest in class rooms was resumed in 1917 and again dropped due to the high cost of building materials. This interest for a Sunday school addition to the church was brought out again in August, 1921, and resulted in the erection of a small Sunday school auditorium and five class rooms in 1922 at a cost of $2,500.00.

In 1919 Rev. R. L. Williamson succeeded Rev. Mr. Banks and the church agreed to pay him $750.00. The next year the church had grown to the extent that the salary was increased to $1,000.00.

Rev. J. P. Barrett became pastor in 1922 and remained one year and was succeeded by Rev. A. H. Hook who remained two years (1923-1925). In 1925 Rev. F. D. Ballard became pastor and remained for three years (1925-1928) and was succeeded by Rev. D. M. Spence who remained until July, 1929. From July, 1929, to November, 1930, the church secured the services of various men until Rev. H. E. Crutchfield became pastor in 1930 and remained for one year. In 1931 Rev. R. A. Whitten accepted a call to the Henderson Church on a salary basis of $100.00 per month and

CHILDREN'S DAY.

In many churches throughout the United States the second Sunday in June is set aside as "Children's Day." On that Sunday the children and young people of the Sunday school prepare a special program which they present to the older people. Your pastor and the superintendent of your Sunday school have copies of a program which may be used in your church year for "Children's Day." Ask them, or your Sunday school teacher, about it. Tell them that you would be glad to help.

QUESTION BOX.

WHY DO WE USE OUR RIGHT HAND WHEN SHAKING HANDS?

In the olden times all men went fully armed and were ready to fight at any time. Guns were not in use then, and the sword was the common weapon. Then, as now, most people were right-handed, so that the sword was carried in the right hand. When two men met it was very necessary that each know whether or not the other was peacefully inclined. If one on approaching would extend his right hand so that the other could see that it contained no weapon, then if he, too, wished peace he could extend his right hand weaponless to show that he accepted the truce. By clasping hands neither could change his mind and assume a fighting attitude without fair warning.

ROBIN'S RETURN.

Robin on the tilting bough,
Redbreast rover, tell me how
You the weary time have passed
Since we saw and heard you last.

"In a green and pleasant land,
By a summer sea-breeze fanned,
Orange trees with fruit are bent—
There the weary time I've spent."

Robin, rover, there, no doubt,
Your best music you poured out;
Piping to a stranger's ear,
You forgot your lovers here.

"Little lady, on my word,
You do wrong a true-hearted bird!
Not one ditty did I sing,
'Mong the leaves or on the wing.

"In the sun or in the rain;
Stranger's ears would list in vain,
If I ever tried a note,
Something rose up in my throat.

"'Twas because my heart was true
To the North and springtime new;
My mind's eye, a nest could see
In yon old, forked apple tree.'"

CHURCH UNION.

It surely must rejoice the heart of every Christian of every denomination to observe the movement towards uniting the various branches of Protestant churches. Under the leadership of great Christian statesmen inspired as they seem to have been, and directed also, by the Spirit of our Lord the three branches of Methodism consummated their great task in the uniting Conference at Kansas City the past week. By this union the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) and the Methodist Protestant Church become one, a body of eight million members, thus giving the Methodist Church the largest number of members of any Protestant denomination in America. It was a great body that met at Kansas City and from the reports a body that realized its divine mission as well as the responsibilities and privileges that were theirs.

Of course, there will be some dissenters and rebellious spirits here and there as is always the case when any great and far reaching task in the name of our Lord is undertaken. These dissenters, good of heart, mean no harm, but are jealous for the right as they see it. However, the movement for union goes on and will go on, since it was the supreme desire of our Lord "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one: I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me." This is a part of the longest recorded and most earnest prayer of our Lord's Christ and we know full well that the Father will not deny His Son this petition, since through the granting of this petition of His beloved Son is the world to know that God sent His only begotten Son into the world that whosoever should believe on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

On this account, as stated in the beginning, every Christian heart should rejoice and will rejoice at every movement to the uniting in Christ, all those who accept Him as Savior and Redeemer.

Here in the United States we Christians and Congregationalists pioneered in the field of church and denominational union and of this we should not be ashamed. Church union is in the air and is bound to come for God wills it. Nor will the declaration of His Son go unfulfilled; "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Thus it isn't a driving, but a drawing proposition.

It is noted with deep and singular interest that the Protestant Episcopal Church of North Carolina in its diocesan Convention last week appointed a commission to study the possibilities of the union of the Episcopal Church with the Presbyterians. At the first glance there may seem to be insurmountable difficulties, but things that are impossible with man are possible with God and where the Spirit of God leads and directs, human difficulties and obstacles disappear.

The church is in our day called upon to meet difficulties, problems and dangers such as it has not had to face in decades, if not centuries, but Lord Christ is building His church and we know full well that He will not cease that building until the church militant shall become the church triumphant. All who desire to see that glad day will take courage and renew the hope from this movement sweeping as a mighty current down the stream of time toward that day when all the kingdoms of earth shall become the one kingdom of our Lord and His Christ.

As will be seen from the above the Easter (Annual) offering for missions is still coming in from the churches. We are grateful indeed for this liberality and spirit of brotherly love and cooperation. We trust that the churches not yet taking or sending in the offering will do so at an early date, since this will be helpful to the sending church and the individuals who make the donations as well as for those to whom the donations are made. ("It is more blessed to give than to receive," said our Lord and He knew for He himself was the most liberal giver this world has ever seen.)

The Southern Convention in its 1938 session, Portsmouth, voted that the churches of the various Conferences be urged to take an offering for Superannuation at each Communion Service. This of course is in addition to the Christmas offering upon which we have depended so largely for this purpose. It will be seen from the above that some of the churches have adopted and are adopting this plan. It is hoped that all the churches will make this a custom, since the allotments given to beneficiaries are so very small. Payments are made by the Board of Superannuation to the beneficiaries twice a year—once at or about Christmas and the second payment July 1. It is very much hoped that when the Board meets for the July 1 payment some of the reductions that had to be made to some of the beneficiaries at the last meeting may be restored and that some others who so much deserve shall have an increase. We gratefully acknowledge the receipt of the above, which includes the Christmas offering and some Communion Sunday offerings.

Gratefully yours,

J. O. ATKINSON, Chairman,
Board of Superannuation.

AMERICAN BOARD AND MID-WEST REGIONAL MEETING TO MEET.

St. Louis, Mo., will play host to the most significant church gathering of the fall in the Middle West, when on October 24, 25, and 26 the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Dr. Truman D. Douglass, minister, will be headquarters of the 130th Annual Meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and the Mid-West Regional Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches.

The American Board, representing the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States in their overseas work, is the oldest foreign missionary society in America, founded in 1810. Only twice before in its long history has the Annual Meeting of the American Board been held in St. Louis. The first visit was fifty-eight years ago, in October, 1881, and the second in October, 1900.

The general theme of the meeting will be "The World Christian Community at Work." There will be nationally and internationally known church leaders on the program as well as business and professional men of national reputation.

From the four corners of the world will come Americans who are at work under the banners of the Christian Church, building the world Christian community. From India, Africa, China, Japan, Ceylon, the Philippine Islands, and the Near East they will bring fresh news of the progress being made by the "younger" churches and the foundations being laid for permanent peace.

Full details as to the program, giving speakers and highlights, will be announced at a later date. Already a local committee on arrangements is fully organized and at work in St. Louis planning to entertain the five hundred odd official delegates and welcome the many other hundreds who will attend the sessions.

The Mid-West Regional Area includes the Congregational and Christian Churches of nineteen great states: Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, and Texas.

The American Board not only represents the overseas work of the Congregational and Christian Churches of these states, but of every state in the Union. It has a foreign parish of over 44,000,000 in Africa, the Far East, and the Near East, with 441 missionaries, and 5,730 Christian national workers. The American Board has 10 colleges, 49 theological and training schools, 933 lower schools, 23 hospitals, 41 dispensaries, and a total investment in lands and buildings of about $7,000,000.

The National Program Committee for this joint meeting of the American Board and the Mid-West Regional Congregational and Christian Churches includes: Mrs. George R. Wilson of Chicago, Chairman; Alfred Fairbank of St. Louis, Mo.; Rev. T. C. Hume of Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Fred Field Goodsell of Boston, Mass.; Dr. T. R. Faville of Madison, Wis.; Dr. Truman B. Douglass of St. Louis, Mo.; Dr. Mark H. Ward of Boston, Mass.; Mrs. E. E. McClintock of Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. J. P. Palmer of Omaha, Neb.; and Dr. Howell D. Davis of Chicago, Ill.

The members of the Prudential Committee from the Southern Convention are: Rev. F. C. Lester and Mrs. Charles F. Rush.

Corporate members of the American Board from the Southern Convention are: Dr. James O. Atkinson, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Mrs. C. F. Rush, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. H. S. Hardeastle, Rev. F. C. Lester, and Col. J. E. West.

PLEASE SEND OFFERING.

Easter offerings for Missions have been coming in quite well. If the offering from your church has not been sent to Dr. Atkinson, please see that this is done so the money can begin to work for the church.

EVANGELISTIC WORK IN NORTH CHINA KUNG LI HUI SCHOOLS.

At the Martyrs Church in T'unghsien on Sunday, October 2, thirty students from Jefferson Academy and the girl's school took the first step in church membership. Thirty more, including Miss Ch'uan, principal of Goodrich, and another teacher, joined as associate members, and twenty-five were baptized. The church was packed. All of these men students have been in Bible classes. In Jefferson Academy there is a class in each of the six years of junior and senior middle. Principal Ch'en, Mr. Martin and three Chinese teachers are conducting them. Mr. P'eng is going to T'unghsien two days a week and has been giving religious talks in chapel. Bible class are to be organized in Goodrich in the near future.

Yu Uing and Bridgman are holding special evangelistic meetings; and there seems to be an unusual opportunity just at present to reach students with the Christian message.

The evangelistic team, which you will remember visited a number of our student centers last year, consisting of P'eng Chin-chang, Wei Chen-yu, P. H. Wang and Chang Heng-ch'iu, is going to be working again this year and will go to T'unghsien this fall.

We are also considering the presentation of religious vocations to students in our middle schools. We shall try to organize teams including one missionary directly related to the special line of work, with one or more of the younger Chinese already in it. For instance, Miss Studley, the present principal of the Peiping Union Bible Training School, or Miss Barnes, and some recent graduate of that institution like Miss Liu Fuchen who is now in charge of the lower grade training school in T'unghsien, will go to our girls' middle school and spend several days meeting the girls in conferences and presenting the subject to the school as a whole. The same will be done for teaching, for medicine and nursing, and for a rural service. We find that there is a big field for trained Christian secretaries in rural reconstruction.

Pastor Wang has just gotten out a number of booklets in Chinese on "The Meaning of Church Membership."

The interdenominational Lay Training Committee was convened recently, and is planning for a third year of the lay training course at T'unghsien, probably immediately following Chinese New Year.

Pilgrim Fellowship

—“Youth at Work in the Church”

Emily Carleton Lester, Editor

THE SOUTHEAST PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

Twenty-five young people from the eight states of the Southeast met at Norfolk, Va., last week for the regular meeting of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. Mr. W. B. Williams, vice-president, presided over the meeting. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill told of plans for young people's work in Florida and Georgia, and Miss Marguerite Davison did the same for Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, and West Florida.

Besides the routine matters of business, the following items were discussed. It was the opinion of the group that the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship should not continue to meet with the Southeast Convention, since so few young people can be present at this season of the year. The time of the next meeting is to be left to the executive committee. It was decided to discontinue the special quarterly issues of THE CHRISTIAN SUN devoted to young people's work, and to have the editor responsible for sending news of young people's work to the various papers of our church in the Southeast. The general feeling of the group was that something definite should be done by the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship—that in uniting to work for one common cause we would gain strength. It was decided to have a committee appointed for the purpose of investigating the possibilities of a missionary project for the organization.

The officers elected to serve for the next biennium were: president, Frances Foster, North Carolina; vice-president, Charles Drake, Georgia; secretary, Betty Chicoine, Florida; assistant secretary, Lorene McGlowin, Alabama; treasurer, Roland Allgood, Virginia; editor, Emily Carleton Lester, North Carolina.

Superintendents: Devotional Life, Grace Long, Georgia; Missions, Frances Everett, Virginia; Social Action, Ann DeJarnette, Tennessee; Leadership Training, Eugenia Snow, Virginia; Publications, Walter Cooper, North Carolina.

Counselors: Miss Dorothy French, Tennessee; Mrs. W. B. Williams, Virginia; Rev. W. J. Andes, North Carolina; Rev. Alan T. Jones, Georgia.

Greetings from each of the states were brought to the group at the Fellowship Supper. The highlight of the program there was an inspirational talk by Dorothy Truitt, Greensboro, N. C., who is assistant secretary for the National Pilgrim Fellowship. The young people presented an electric clock to Dr. Gillette, retiring superintendent of the Southeast.

“WE” GET IN THE NEWS.

Those of you who have read the May issue of The Pilgrim Highroad carefully have found that several groups of young people in the Southeast “made” that issue. Under the heading “What the State Pilgrim Fellowships are Doing” we find a picture of the officers of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship taken last summer as they were enjoying a picnic supper at the beach. The article tells a little of the history of that picture, of the value of the Program Guide planned by this group, of the Key Workers' Council which has recently been formed, and of the request of the Committee on Home Missions that the Pilgrim Fellowship consider as one of its objectives increasing Sunday school membership.

On the page headed “What's Going On?” a page where young people exchange their best plans, we find write-ups of the Burlington (N. C.) Pilgrim Fellowship—telling of the activities of that Sunday school young people's department—and of the young people's group of the Shelton Church, Portsmouth, Va. We congratulate these groups on doing things in a different way and thus attracting the attention of Miss Lucy Eldredge and her page.

Turning over a few pages, we discover the “Pilgrim Fellowship Program for May,” which is very helpful to local groups in planning their programs. Among the suggestions which are made for this month is that of following the example of the Greensboro (N. C.) young people, who used last May as “Caravan Month” and visited other churches to present a program which would in-

GOODWILL TOWARD ALL MANKIND.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 21, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 6: 27-38.

(WORLD GOODWILL DAY.)

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Goodwill Visit—I Kings 10: 1-9.

Tuesday—A Goodwill Gesture—II Kings 5: 9-18.

Wednesday—Heralding Goodwill—Luke 2: 10-14.

Thursday—A Goodwill Message—Acts 10: 34-43.

Friday—Peace in Jesus Christ—Eph. 2: 14-18.

Saturday—Reconciliation in Christ—11 Cor. 5: 17-19.

The third Sunday of May has been designated as World Goodwill Day. It celebrates the founding of the Hague Tribunal, or “the permanent court of arbitration.”

The words of Abraham Lincoln, “Testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure,” were destined to live for the beauty and high idealism they embody. After the Civil War the democracy in America was on trial. Today the democracy of the entire world is on trial.

This would be a good question for a debate: By great leadership for peace and freedom can this continent save democracy for the world?

These ideas may be used for short talks. Some reasons for world ill-will: (1) Economics, (2) Politics, (3) Cultural differences, (4) Racial pride, (5) Segregation.

What would you do to solve the problem raised by the following incident? A Mexican family moved into a western town, and the mother was eager for the children to go to a Protestant Sunday school. She sent them. For a Sunday or two the church people said nothing, but after the third Sunday began to protest at the presence of Mexican children mingling with their own children. The Mexican mother was asked to keep her children at home. She consented, but said, “I hope my children will never know that Christian people did not want them.”

There are two things that each group of young people may do to help break down racial and national barriers which cause ill-will and threaten world peace.

1. Help to bring about goodwill in the community.

2. Help missionary movements which are working to carry the message of Christ to the uttermost parts of the world.

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND THE HOME.

(A Social Aspect of the Liquor Problem.)

LESSON VII—MAY 21, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Drink no wine or strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee.—Lev. 10: 9.

LESSON: Jeremiah 35: 5-10;
Ephesians 5: 15-21; 6: 1-4.

Moral Courage.

Here is an inspiring instance of moral courage. The Rechabites, a wandering tribe of Kenites, had been driven into the city by the approach of foreign armies. They were sturdy, liberty-loving, abstemious people. They were offered wine. How easy it would have been "when in Rome, to do as the Romans do." Away from home, where nobody knew them, why not "have a fling?" "Come on, be sociable, be a good sport, what's the harm? don't be a sissy"—these and other subtle things might have been said to these Rechabites. But they steadfastly refused to drink the wine. They had high traditions to live up to. They wanted to keep faith with their "father Jonadab the son of Rechab."

One wishes that more of our modern youth would have the fine courage of a conviction like this. What a chance our young people have to become moral heroes by refusing to drink beverage alcohol in any form. As a matter of fact the "sissy" is the one who drinks, rather than the one who refuses to take a drink. It does not take any spine to go with the crowd. It does take spine to stand up in the crowd and humbly but firmly say "No."

Of course, the tragedy in the present situation is that so many young people, and others, have no high traditions to live up to. How can we expect our young people to say "No" when liquor is served in their homes, when parents drink before them, when in many instances parents drink with them. And progress toward a sober nation has got to start in the home. Christians have got to remember that there are certain high traditions which are sacrificed when beverage alcohol comes into the home. One of the greatest losses involved in the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment was the fact that people now take it for granted that a thing which is legally permissible is morally right. If one studies the liquor traffic, however, he will see that it denies everything for which Christ and the Kingdom of God stand.

Walking Carefully.

"Look, therefore, carefully how ye walk, not as unwise, but as wise . . . wherefore be ye not foolish, but understand what the will of the Lord is." It is not simply a matter of whether one can take a drink and let it alone; it is also a case of what effect his action will have on others. And this applies, of course, not only to drinking but to other things. A Christian should be careful how he walks.

Redeeming the Time.

"Redeeming the time, for the days are evil." The words really mean "buying up the time." Paul is telling the first century Christians that they ought to be especially busy, ought to take advantage of the hour in which they were living, because of the powerful presence and manifestation of evil in their days, and should do something immediately and decisively for the Lord Jesus Christ. It is pertinently true today. Times like these call for alertness, for a good account of one's stewardship of time.

Drunk With Wine—Filled With the Spirit.

"Be not drunk with wine, wherein is riot." Paul knew what confusion and quarreling and rioting excess of wine caused. The crimes and sins committed under the influence of alcohol are legion. For alcohol strikes first at the part of the brain that contains the finer sensibilities of a man.

Not drunk with wine, but filled with the Spirit. Be not overcome of evil but overcome evil with good. The best protection against the sins of the flesh is to be filled with the Spirit. We can through the Spirit put to death the things of the flesh.

Conversation Seasoned With Grace.

"Speaking one to another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Let a man have the Spirit of Christ in his heart and his mouth will show forth His praise. Those who cannot sing often hum, and those who cannot sing sometimes whistle, when filled with the Spirit of Christ. Out of the overflow of a heart filled with the Spirit there come songs and spiritual speech.

Giving Thanks Always.

Giving thanks always for all things in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ to God, even the Father." The thankful heart moves through the day and finds many things for which to be thankful. Because the Lord God daily loadeth us with benefits, we should daily give Him thanks.

Right Home Relationships.

"Children obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right." Obedience is a basic, oral obligation. It is divinely appointed by God himself. To be sure children are not to obey their parents in everything—Paul did not write that. But they are to obey them "in the Lord." The child which does not learn obedience in the home is not likely to learn it anywhere else. And a child with no respect for properly constituted authority will be a "pain in the neck" to himself, to his parents, and to others. He is a nuisance; he becomes a tragedy.

"Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise, that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth." This commandment stands at the head of the commandments as given by Moses, concerning the relations between man and man. That was no mere coincidence. Respect for properly constituted authority, reverence for age, courtesy to others, are basis to well-ordered and happy and wholesome home and social life. And it pays, despite the fact that there are exceptions. But the parents must be worthy of respect and of honor if children are to honor them. It works both ways.

And then, in a special bulletin sent out by Walter Staves, president of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, "pinch-hitting" for Miss Eldredge while she is on her trip to the far corners of the world, we find that the young people of Brown Summitt, N. C., (Monticello Church) were among the first to send in money to pay on the expenses of our Pilgrim Fellowship delegates to the World Conference of Christian Youth to be held in Amsterdam, Holland, in July. Congratulations!

MONDAY.
OF HATE.

"Thou shalt not hate thy brother in heart."—Lev. 19:17.

Hate is the most painful of all emotions and one productive of much misery. . . . There is no circumstance in life in which it is justifiable. No man truthfully hates himself, yet he knows himself better than others; how much less reason have we therefore for hating others, apart altogether from the injury we do ourselves."

Prayer—Our Father, we believe that hate is of the devil. We know that Christ, Thy Son, came to put the devil out of us and out of the world. Forbid that he shall reign in us, and our home. Give us the victory in our lives now and forever. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OF THE TONGUE.

"The tongue is a fire. . . . No man can tame."—Jas. 3:6, 8.

James also teaches that he that would be religious must bridle his tongue. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn, and so it is well to remember that a word rashly spoken cannot be brought back by a chariot and horses." "It is a good tongue that speaks no evil. It is a better heart that thinks none."

Prayer—Pray as you feel. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HOPE KNOWS NO DEFEAT.

"Love . . . hopeth all things."—I Cor. 13:4, 7.

One thing that distinguishes man from all other creatures is his ability to hope. It's the foregleam of day-break that promises the fulness of the day. When hope is lost all is lost. David declared that "God is our hope." Christians place their hope not in physical force, nor in reform, but in God."

Prayer—Dear God, help us to hope more in Thee, and in the final triumph of righteousness. As we pray "Thy Kingdom come," with that hope, forbid that we shall fail Thee in bringing it to pass. Amen.

THURSDAY.

OF PATIENCE.

"For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise."—Heb. 10:36.

Can any word be any more appropriate, more eternally true, more searching, or more needed than this text. Think how impatient we are, and of the results of our impatience: Prospect abruptly ended, friendships suddenly broken off, family harmony broken, personal ineffectiveness.

Think of the trials and temptations, discouragements and broken faiths, sicknesses and misfortune, countless other things make us impatient.

First do the will of the Lord. Our peace depends upon that. Believe in Him and wait patiently for Him and He will bring it to pass. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE GRASSHOPPER MIND.

"Speak to yourselves in Psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." Eph. 5:19.

We cannot have dual objectives in life and please God. Something must occupy the center of our consciousness. We must avoid "The Grasshopper Mind." This bird is an attractive thing, but he has no mind. He leaps and may as soon land in the lake as in safe ground, and sometimes turns all around in the leap.

Leave not God out of the life, thus you will achieve harmony of life, and melody of heart. Fellowship with the service of Christ will give the supreme objective and "Keep the heart singing all the day." Amen.

SATURDAY.

BIG LIVING.

"They shall cry unto the Lord . . . and He shall send them a Savior and a great One, and He shall deliver them."—Isa. 19:20.

God does everything in a big way. Men with narrow horizons and limited view-points dwell in the valley of little things, but men of broad minds climb high. A superior faith in God makes citizens of a vast universe and corresponding character of glory. They who have gone in for a few big things have done more for the world than they who have spread out their lives in little and unknown things.

Prayer—Gracious God, remember us we beseech Thee, in our work this day. Whatever it is, may it be well done, and glorify Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

APPRECIATION AND ENCOURAGEMENT.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."—Ps. 103:1, 2.

The art of appreciation and lending encouragement is one of life's finest. Like a breath of fresh air, or a tasty meal, it gives tone to body and mind, and courage for the day's task.

If God delights in a cheerful countenance and a thankful heart, why not lavish a little of it on Him and on our neighbors. Look for good in every one you meet today, and see what you find.

Prayer—Father, we thank Thee through Jesus Christ our Lord, for the courage that Thou didst give Him to live His life well. Grant unto us Thy spirit and so teach us to live that we, too, may make happy all the way. Amen.

SOURCE OF STRENGTH.

"Tell me, I pray thee, wherein thy great strength lieth."—
Judges 26: 6.

These words were spoken by Delilah to Sampson because she wanted to know the source of his strength so that, robbing him of it, he could be easily slain. However, in this brief sermon they are being asked that some who are willing to seek may live.

Once in the history of the world there was a supreme need for the kind of strength which Sampson possessed. The man who could run down the deer, slay the fierce animals, and face successfully the rigors of the different seasons was an important man. But, with the passing of the centuries, there developed the need for a different kind of strength, and therefore a different source.

I.

Where then is the source of the kind of strength that this old world needs so badly? Some have said that it is in hatred, and that if one can hate hard enough, great strength will be theirs. Hate has been known to help men perform prodigious feats. Others say that love for gold is the source of strength, and there are those who have endured great torture for gold. Without question this desire has aided men to struggle year after year in the pitiless market places of the world, face blizzards of the north, and to endure the heat of the desert. Others say love of prestige and honor; love of nation; love of family; the urge to solve some mechanical problem; the desire to be the first one to scale a mountain; and the like, are the real sources of power. But most of us, I am sure, are left rather cold by such statements.

II.

Men were eager to know the source of strength from which Jesus drew his power. His ability to go on and on with a superb functioning of the body and mind and spirit greatly discomforted his enemies. To his friends, however, it was a great source of joy that they had a leader and champion who could both speak and perform mighty deeds. Pilate, without question, recognized that in Jesus there stood before him a strong personality, when He was before him waiting for the verdict. Strength sometimes comes from hard experiences, endured and overcome. Strength often comes when one goes out deliberately in a good cause because frequently latent, but great energy, is set free. Seeing others mistreated has been known to arouse onlookers, who apparently are both without purpose and strength, to give unbelievable aid. To have others, depending upon one also often is a source of strength. But as fine and noble as these are, and as far as these are beyond others mentioned, as hate, love of gold, there is still one other source of strength.

III.

One cannot think of Jesus as being a physical weakling, for his work in the carpenter shop must have made him rugged. We know too that he loved the open, and that in the out-of-door life with the disciples, strong men though they were, that often they were hard put to it to keep with him. But with all his physical powers of endurance there were undoubtedly many men in Palestine who could have easily crushed our Lord in a life and death struggle in some arena!

The truth is that there was a source of strength to which he went, and from which he came away, supplied so completely with power that in the end, although overcome physically by evil men, he became more than a mere conquerer. Our Lord, first of all had an unassailable belief in the sovereignty of God the Father. Then there was prayer and a habitual seeking of some sanctuary, and sometime, somewhere, each day in a quiet moment, or a moment snatched from a busy day, Jesus took opportunity to commune with God. He never allowed the number of things that were in his world to overcome him. He kept free from all entangling alliances that would dim his vision of the Father.

IV.

George Morrison once wrote, "There is the story of an officer in the Great War who went drifting and was finally cashiered. He came back to his boyhood home and entered the little bedroom in the old home. Then, turning to his mother, he said, 'Mother, the whole thing began when I stopped praying as a lad beside that bed.'"

The source of strength, the strength that can make men and women the kind of people they were destined to be, and keep them that way, is as old as the universe itself. There may be other and better sources of strength than God that have not yet been revealed to us, but one doubts it. The strength of a nation, of men and women, is after all in God, as revealed by Jesus Christ.

FORSYTH-GUILFORD FIFTH SUNDAY RALLIES.

The Forsyth-Guilford Association of Churches met Sunday afternoon, April 30, at Monticello Church.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Rev. D. M. Spence, and a devotional service followed, impressively led by Rev. E. J. Sanderson, pastor of the host church. Dr. D. J. Bowden of Elon College addressed the meeting, using as his subject "The Church in the World of Today." Dr. Bowden spoke of the idea held by people of ancient time of religion as a preparation for a future life, rather than as a contribution to life here and now. Our aim should be to bring about the Kingdom of God in the hearts of men in this present time. Our responsibility in bringing peace to the world was emphasized with the fact that no single nation is responsible for the chaotic condition of the world today. Many nations have been actuated by a spirit of greed and not of love and generosity. The Christian must not be inflamed by war propaganda, but must insist upon a Christian approach to international affairs. The business of the churches is to make the business of war impossible.

An open forum was conducted by Dr. W. M. Jay, with questions asked concerning the policy of churches in dealing with members who have moved far away from the home church. The plan of voluntary grouping of churches was discussed with testimonials from individuals having experienced the blessing derived from such a system. The question was raised as to why our churches still fail to form group pastorates, even when financial assistance is offered and others testify of advantages to pastor and people alike.

A roll call of churches disclosed that nine of the ten churches of the district were represented with four ministers, eight superintendents, and twenty-two teachers present besides other delegates.

The association will meet July 30 at Salem Chapel, when a picnic fellowship supper will follow the afternoon meeting.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The human heart naturally grows tender toward the helpless. Even an orphaned animal appeals to our sympathetic hearts.

When the writer was a young boy his father owned quite a flock of sheep. It was the duty of the writer to look after the sheep and feed them. We remember going down to the lot one morning to feed the sheep and a mother sheep was lying on the ground dead. Her young lamb was running around crying for its mother. The mother could give no response to its cries. It was a pathetic sight. The writer's sympathy went out to the little orphaned lamb. It was motherless; it was helpless; it was in distress; it needed a friend. It was entirely dependent. The question came to us: Shall we let it perish and die or shall we feed it and give it a chance to live? We picked it up in our arms and carried it to the house and mother and I warmed some sweet milk and made a little mop on the end of a quill and taught it how to drink its milk. It grew and developed into a large sheep and each year in the spring of the year gave back to us a heavy coat of wool to be made into blankets to keep us children warm in winter. It proved to be a fine investment.

In the orphanage work I have visited homes where father and mother have been taken away and there have seen a group of children just as helpless and dependent as the little lamb. They needed a home, a friend, and food just as much. We have taken them into the orphanage and by your gifts from time to time have made it possible to give them food, clothing and training. They have grown and developed into fine young men and women and have gone out into life and are now reflecting credit upon the institution that reared them. They do this by being fine citizens and giving back not only in money contributed from time to time, but in fine service rendered. Are they not better and of greater value to society than a little lamb?

NEW CHURCHES.

At Little Creek, Va., a few miles east of Ocean View, a new church is being erected. It is the only Christian Church in Princess Anne County. There are probably 150 homes in this vicinity, where there is no other church. The Christian Missionary Association of Eastern Virginia and the Eastern Virginia Conference are lending a hand to these people as they try to start a new church. It is a worthy undertaking and it deserves aid.

At Hope Mills, N. C., there is a group of some sixty people who have built for themselves an attractive little church and have conducted Sunday school there for three years. They now want to organize a church and dedicate their building. Within a short time there will doubtless be a Congregational-Christian Church doing good work in Hope Mills.

Asheboro, N. C., is in the center of Christian Church territory. In recent years this small town has made rapid strides toward becoming a city. Members of nearby Christian Churches have moved to town. The Promotional Secretary has a list of 120 people, and there are many others yet to be found, who are now or recently have been members of our Congregational and Christian Churches. A meeting is called for next Sunday evening in Park Street School, Asheboro, at which time the interested group there will discuss the advisability of undertaking a Congregational-Christian Church in Asheboro. Prospects seem to be good for such an undertaking.

These are three new projects within the Southern Convention during the past few months. Other places are waiting for our consideration. The opportunities for new churches are many. Now is the time for us to rise up and build. F. C. L.

HISTORY OF HENDERSON CHURCH.

a parsonage. Rev. Mr. Whitten remained pastor until February, 1933, at which time he resigned and Rev. S. E. Madren accepted the work on a part-time basis. (Let me say just here in parenthesis, that no city church can grow on a part-time work.) Rev. Mr. Madren remained pastor until 1936 at which time the latter accepted the pastorate.

In 1927 the church installed a heating plant at a cost of $1,978.00. All of this amount was paid except $798.00 which was given to the church on Sunday morning, December 23, 1934, by Mr. W. A. Newman who held the note.

The Henderson Church was host to the Eastern North Carolina Conference in 1914 and to the Southern Convention in 1923.

The church has had four secretaries since its beginning thirty-three years ago. They are, as follows: Miss Ida Aysene (1905-1907), C. D. Harton (1907-1915), F. M. Harward (1915-1918), and C. D. Newman (1918 until the present).

During the history of the church the following men have served for a period of time on the Board of Deacons: C. D. Harton, the only charter deacon now living; D. I. Langston, J. W. Lashley, W. A. Newman, Reginald Renn, J. E. Harward, Fred Harward, B. H. Nelson, C. D. Newman, J. Lee Lassister, E. M. Powell, R. P. W. Seaman, and John Allen Hall.

The writer came to the Henderson Church in 1936 and since that time the church and parsonage have received extensive repairs and both the interior and exterior of the buildings have been painted. The church roof has also received a coat of paint and a new roof has been put on the parsonage and the long-standing debt paid. The radiators in the Sunday school class rooms have been enlarged and painted, and shrubbery has been placed around the parsonage and the lawn improved. During the past two years 37 members have been added to the church roll and each year the money raised has exceeded the church budget.

We now face the 34th year of the church's history and the third year of my association therewith and we believe that it will be the best year in its history.

In Memoriam

HOLLAND.

WHEREAS, the deacons of the Suffolk Christian Church have been called upon to record the passing of the beloved Chairman of the Board, Brother Abram Thomas Holland, who was not only chairman of the Board but a trustee of the church, a former member and chairman of the finance committee of the church, and a trustee of Elon College for a long period, and a staunch supporter of every enterprise of the church and denomination;

WHEREAS, his passing has brought poignant sorrow not only to us but to the entire Christian denomination and to many outside of the church, he was regarded in highest esteem by all, being not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. He had served his county as Supervisor for years and when he moved to Suffolk was a member of the City Council for some years, and his keen business mind was of great assistance to both bodies. He was one of the men who helped to bring the great peanut industry to our city and in the early days of the industry his experience was of great value to the promoters. He was one of the pioneers who had laid the foundation for this city to become the peanut capital of North America. He was always quiet and unassuming in his manner, yet his humility gave him strength with his fellowmen, wether in business or in the church. He was in his 79th year, and had so lived that it might be said of him that he had served his day and generation well in every position he had held.

RESOLVED that, in his passing his family had lost a devoted husband and father, his community a kind and generous neighbor and friend, and the country a Christian gentleman and a loyal citizen, and his church a true and faithful member. May his mantle fall upon some worthy member of this church, and may we all strive to emulate his noble example, and try to meet him in the better world.

RESOLVED that a copy of this be spread upon the minutes of our church, a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy sent to the family.

McCULLERS.

George Matthew McCullers was born June 9, 1856, and died March 6, 1939. He was converted in early life and joined Catawba Christian Church where he was a deacon at the time of his death.

He was twice married—first to Miss Almira Isabella Johnson, and to this union one child was born. His second marriage was to Miss Harriet Rebecca Stephens, who, with his daughter, Mrs. Grace McCullers Yancy, survive him.

The burial services at his request were conducted under the spreading limbs of a great white oak that stands in front of the old McCullers home.

The remains of a good man, a loyal friend, and upright citizen, were placed in the McCullers burying ground. The many beautiful flowers spoke silently of the high esteem in which Mr. McCullers was held.

Services were by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. Lee Johnson and J. A. Denton. Peace to his dust and sympathy to his loved ones.

J. L. FOSTER.

WINNER.

Our Heavenly Father in His infinite love and wisdom called from among us on March 24, 1939, a beloved and faithful member, Mrs. Berthania F. Winner.

Therefore, we, the Ladies Benevolent Social Union, the Woman's Missionary Society, and members of the Berea Christian Church (Nansmond), have resolved as follows:

1. That we have been blessed by having such a good Christian woman with us, and we will always cherish the memory of her personality.

2. That remembrance of her life should be a comfort to her loved ones in their assurance that she is safe in the arms of Jesus.

3. That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy, realizing that they have lost a good, kind, and loving mother.

4. That copies of these resolutions be sent to the family, one spread on the minutes of our Ladies Benevolent and Social Union, one on our Woman's Missionary Society, one on our church minutes, and one published in "The Christian Sun."

THE UPPER-ALAMANCE FELLOWSHIP.

Strader, superintendent of the Alamance District of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference; treasurer, Rev. Melvin Dollar, student pastor of the Carolina Church of the Fellowship.

The Pleasant Hill Church is extended an invitation to join the Fellowship, this church being a member of the Western Conference.

The outstanding and gratifying feature of the sessions was the large number of ministers present—eight.

A NEW GROUP ORGANIZED.

A new spirit is beginning to dawn upon a group of churches near Franklinton, N. C. Twelve churches were represented at an all-day rally, which met at Pope's Chapel the fifth Sunday in April. The churches represented were as follows: Beulah, Good Hope, Fuller's Chapel, Henderson, Liberty, Mt. Carmel, Mt. Gilead, New Hope, Oak Level, Pope's Chapel, Raleigh, and Youngsville.

The assembly was called to order at 10:30 A. M. by Rev. J. E. Neese. A brief business period followed, after which the audience entered into the morning hour of worship. Rev. S. E. Madren delivered the sermon, using as his theme, "Anxiety and Care for the Churches."

At 12:30 all who were present shared in the fellowship of the lunch, which was spread in the grove.

In the afternoon, following the worship service, Rev. E. M. Carter spoke on "What We Propose to Do in the Fifth Sunday Rally." Rev. J. E. Neese presented the plans of "Our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention." Rev. Allyn P. Robinson spoke on "Increasing Church Attendance." Rev. W. J. Andes discussed "The Problems of Evangelism."

There were present 150 representatives from the churches, 6 ministers, and 25 visitors from other denominations. Special music was an added feature to both the morning and afternoon sessions.

The following officers were elected: president, Rev. E. M. Powell, Henderson; vice-president, Miss Nell Holmes, Franklinton; secretary-treasurer, Rev. S. E. Madren, Henderson.

DO YOU KNOW?

By CARL R. KEY.

Do you know that the Christian Church is one of the oldest truly democratic spiritual organizations in America, and that it was organized at Lebanon Church, Surry County, Va., August 5, 1794?

Do you know that this Church has six principles for our guidance in Christian living? Five of them are often printed in "The Christian Sun." In W. E. MacClenny's "Life of Rev. James O'Kelly" we read the sixth principle on page 122, thus: "The union of all the followers of Christ, to the end that the world may believe."

Do you know that this principle of unity was put into practice in 1931 when the union of the Congregational and Christian churches was consummated at the Seattle Council?

Do you know that "The Herald of Gospel Liberty" was the first religious newspaper or journal of its kind to be published in this country; that our church led in the field of religious journalism? Do you know that this magazine and the former "Congregationalist" are now published as a monthly publication for our United Church under the name of "Advance?"

Do you know that the Christian Church was the first to re-unite, both North and South, about twenty years after the close of the Civil War?

Do you know that "The Christian Sun" is the only remaining weekly paper of our denomination published in America?

Do you know that Elon College might actually trace its history further back than the charter date of 1889 to the beginning of the Graham Institute in 1859?

Do you know that a number of interesting things about Christian Church history can be discovered by reading W. T. Morrill's "History of the Christian Denomination in America," P. J. Kernodle's "Lives of Christian Ministers," W. E. MacClenny's "Life of Rev. James O'Kelly," "The Principles and Government of the Christian Church," "The Christian Annual," "Advance," and "The Christian Sun?" The first book named can be found in any good library in this country. All these materials can be found in Dr. W. W. Staley's library in the Suffolk Christian Church and the Carlton Library of Elon College.

Do you know your Church? Do your children know about your Church? Do your friends know about your Church? If you do not tell them, who will?

"Our only rule of faith and practice."

Congratulations to Graduates

From High Schools to Colleges all over the country there are fine young men and women graduating about this season of the year. To each of you "The Christian Sun" offers its sincere congratulations and good wishes.

You are congratulated because you have attained. Your industry and study have sent you beyond the average person in the field of education. It takes much work to learn enough to pass the examinations of High School or College. You have kept to the path of knowledge until you have succeeded in attaining graduation. For this you are to be congratulated.

You have had friends and you made friends. Without friends no one could get knowledge or do any other worthy thing. Without friends there would be no schools. Parents, teachers, school-mates and others are to be listed among your friends. Those who have twenty friends are twenty times as rich as those who have only one friend. Because you have friends you are congratulated.

Your graduation is the opening door to greater opportunities. College and University invite you. Libraries, scientific laboratories, or travel may intrigue you. Business bids you enter and bear your part of its responsibility. Literature, art, or music enchant you. The heights and depths of life await you and beckon you on. The world needs your talents.

Those of us who are a bit older have not done an extra good job with making the world a wholesome place in which to live, even though God has been good to us. We need your help. In the language of a very wise man of long ago, "Come, and be eyes for us." We need your vision, your courage, your wisdom.

Because you have shown your high quality by graduation, because you have friends, and because the world awaits your help, you are offered the congratulations of your Church friends.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

You are cordially invited to attend the Forty-Ninth Commencement of Elon College next Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. Your college invites you.

Prospects are excellent for the organization of a church at Hope Mills, N. C., within a few weeks, perhaps on next Sunday. The building will be dedicated soon.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter was the speaker at the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of New Market (Va.) recently. The newspapers report a crowd of 2,000 to 2,500 people, and speak well of Mr. Coulter's address.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Valley of Virginia Conference will meet at Winchester, Va., on June 14, 1939. A good program is in preparation for this convention, and delegates from all Sunday schools in the Conference are expected.

Hank's Chapel Christian Church, Pittsboro, N. C., invites friends to share in the Memorial Day services on next Sunday. The program begins at ten in the morning, and the afternoon service will close at three. Dinner will be served on the grounds (by those who take a basket).

The label on your paper tells when your subscription expires. If it embarrasses you, please send sufficient money to pay your subscription in advance to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office at Elon College, N. C. The amount is only a little less than four cents per week, but it does have a way of mounting up if you let it run behind.

Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, pastor-elect at Jonesboro and Sanford, N. C. has been serving one of our churches at South Pekin, Ill., while in Chicago Theological Seminary. A beautiful church has been erected in place of the one destroyed by a hurricane last year. Twenty-eight new members were received into the church at Easter, and perhaps as many more will join at Pentecost.

Rev. B. J. Earp reports a fine day at our mountain churches last Sunday. Services were held at all three churches, and one new member was received. In the evening about 150 people stood to see pictures of our work in China and other religious pictures presented by Mr. W. E. Walker of Shallow Ford Church. Vacation Bible Schools and revivals are being planned for the first three weeks in August.

Sixty-eight people attended an evening service in Park Street School, Asheboro, N. C., on last Sunday evening, and remained for a discussion concerning the establishment of a Congregational-Christian Church in that city. The opinion was unanimous that a church should be established there. A committee was appointed to arrange for other meetings and to see how many people can be secured as charter members.

The North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will meet at Third Avenue Christian Church, Danville, Va., on June 15, 1939. The Pilgrim Fellowship will meet at the same place on the evening of the same day. Rev. Millard Stephens is president of the Convention, and has plans well under way for a good program. It is important for every pastor, Sunday school superintendent, Sunday school teacher, and many others to be present for this day of study and inspiration.

MOTHER'S DAY AT REIDSVILLE.

The local newspaper from Reidsville, N. C., carried a long item telling of the Mother's Day service at the Christian Church there. It is reported that about four hundred people were in Sunday school and that there was an overflow congregation for the eleven o'clock service at which time the pastor Rev. J. E. Neese preached on "The Love of Mother."

Three lovely gifts were presented: one to "Grandma" Clapp, 78, the oldest mother present; Mrs. Frances Jackson, 19, the youngest mother present; Mrs. Mullen Moricle, mother of the largest family, who attended church with her husband and ten children.

Several appropriate selections were rendered by the choir and the altar was banked with flowers in memory of mothers.

The evening service was of the evangelistic type based on Luke 1: 19. Many visitors attended the services.

RELIGIOUS LEADERS HAVE BIG PART IN DUKE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Evidence that the modern university puts due emphasis on the contribution that religious thought can make in the solution of modern world problems is shown by the impressive list of religious leaders who had a part in the extensive Duke University Centennial Program just closed. Throughout the year, in observance of the 100 years of its history, the university conducted a series of symposia on modern problems. Religious leaders were prominently featured on many public occasions. More than

OUR TYPE OF CHURCH.

In these days of world-wide disturbance, terrific human need, and increasing pressure on the Church, it becomes necessary for those who love the Church universal and the particular branch to which they offer allegiance to do some rather careful thinking about the church of which one is part. It seems to be important for those of us who share the name Congregational-Christian to re-think our place in "the body of Christ."

We can be justly proud of our forefathers who have made a name for themselves, and us, by establishing churches on broad Christian principles, churches that give liberty to all in the matter of Biblical interpretation, and require nothing but Christian character for fellowship and church membership.

But we can no more live on our heritage than we can last year's food. The Church of today faces different conditions. Democracy in Church and State are today under pressure. It remains to be seen whether the democratic principle can survive in the midst of dictators both in Church and State. Reason is on the side of personal liberty, but reason is not always allowed to live in human relations.

If we have any one contribution to make as a Church it is in the field of democratic freedom. Those who would close the doors of the Church to people who cannot repeat certain dogmatic doctrines are far removed from the spirit of James O'Kelly and the other founders of the Christian Church as well as all that long line of illustrious leaders of Congregationalism. A religion as broad as the Bible, as inclusive as the love of God, and as kindly as Jesus of Nazareth is our heritage, the need of the present world, and our responsibility to promote.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Many of our churches are now holding Memorial Day services. It has become quite an occasion. People who have moved away return to the old home church for the services of this day. Sacred memories are recalled, old acquaintances renewed, the cemetery is decorated, and a new understanding of the old church is developed. In many ways this memorial day has value.

On the other hand it may easily degenerate into a very unworthy affair. Memories of the past may aid us to be better in the future, but a cemetery should never bind the living about it in such a way as to hinder full and free service in the church wherever one may live. To hold as a sacred trust the heritage of the past and the memory of the departed is an obligation resting upon all, but to live in the past and fear the future is unworthy of those who call themselves Christian. To catch a glimpse once in a while of the "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens" is a stimulating experience, but to fail to live at our best in the house we now have is shoddy preparation to live with God in a realm beyond the sky.

It is important for pastors and people to watch the tendencies of memorial occasions and to see that wholesome sentiment is cultivated, that life is "richer, fuller, deeper" because of this fine service.

HOW BIG ARE WE?

Two men were recently talking about another fine, Christian gentleman. One said to the other:

"He is a very fine man, if we could just get him out of our county."

No discourtesy was intended. This good churchman had built a wall about himself that was no bigger than his county. He had some vague vision of his state, but his view was far too small.

The old walls are crumbling. China once had a wall about her that could keep the enemy away. That day is gone. Once there was a line that divided the North from the South in our own country. Travelers now go from one area to the other without ever knowing the historic background and enjoy living beyond the borders that once divided. Denominations that once fought each other are now joining hands in a crusade for Christ. Whether we like it or not, the veil of the temple has been rent in twain and human beings of every race and clime are meeting at the foot of the Cross as brothers.

Are we big enough for the next day? We measure ourselves by the attitudes we take. The man who is no bigger than his county is not big enough. A Christian who stands on the mountain with Jesus sees unfold before his view the whole world, the world for which Christ died. A preacher who sees nothing bigger than his local congregation (or one that he hopes to have) has not looked high enough yet nor seen the face of his Lord in the agony of the world. A local church that thinks that it can live alone is destined to defeat and will soon be assigned to the limbo of forgotten things. A conference or convention that tries to be a lone wolf will soon find itself stranded on a lonely mountain side. Unless we can visualize our place in the world-wide kingdom of God we will soon lose our vision entirely and will stagger to our destruction.

"Where there is no vision, the people perish." Selfishness never pays. "The liberal soul shall grow fat." "To him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken even the little that is his."

Are the leaders, the members, the churches which call themselves Congregational and Christian big enough for the God and Father of all mankind to use them? This is not a rhetorical question. It is an important matter for us to consider in the light of our activities, our gifts, and our interests. If the answer is in the negative, we must mend our ways or be lost in the onward march of progress. If we can honestly answer in the affirmative, we may expect a bright, happy, useful future.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Thursday, May 18, at 3:00 P. M., a memorial service was held at Mt. Carmel Church, in Isle of Wight County, Va. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield is pastor of the church. A very timely and helpful address was delivered by Dr. Elwood W. Jones, pastor of the Franklin Christian Church.

It was a privilege to attend this service in the church of our childhood days. Of course the old house of worship was torn down in 1905, when the present beautiful building was erected. There is a great deal of sentiment associated with a building in which one attended Sunday school, confessed Christ as Savior and united with the church. Not only is the old building one of the memories of the long ago, but many of the active workers, of thirty-four years ago, have been laid to rest in the cemetery near the church.

What memories pass through the mind when one returns to the old church after so many years in the work elsewhere! Faces of familiar friends and acquaintances seem to appear like pictures in an old album. New voices sing in the choir, while memory recalls the old familiar songs of the long ago. A multitude of young people occupy the pews where the saints of other days rejoiced in the worship of God. And if one could return thirty-four years hence, many of the people who were present for this annual memorial service on last Thursday will be gone and their places will be filled by people who are yet unborn.

Twelve members of this church passed away during the past year. The list was read by Mr. Otis V. Joyner. That means twelve families came to that service with a fresh bereavement in their hearts. Twelve vacant seats. An unusual number of deaths for a church less than three hundred members. This great loss by death is a challenge to the church to make a strenuous effort to find new members to fill their places. This church should have a membership numbering between three and four hundred.

Two life size pictures hang upon the walls of Mt. Carmel Church. A likeness of Rev. Mills B. Barrett, the first pastor, hangs on the wall in the rear of the pulpit, and those who remember him can recall the flash of his eyes as his eloquence thrilled his congregation. He was a powerful pulpit orator at his best. His sermons were usually deeply moving and it was his custom to preach for an hour. He was especially gifted in his ability to read church hymns effectively. The picture of Major I. W. Duck hangs over the door beside the pulpit. He was the leading layman in founding the church, and was for many years the superintendent of the Sunday school. He assisted Rev. H. H. Butler and the writer in preparing themselves for the ministry. It was a pleasure to see his daughter, Mrs. Nannive V. Bradshaw, present for this annual memorial service. She is well advanced in years, but takes a deep interest in the church of her distinguished father.

It is eminently fitting for local churches to observe a memorial day for their departed members. The dead should not be forgotten. Their works follow them. They made their contribution to the religious and moral standards of their community. The living worship in churches erected by people who have passed on to their reward. History is more profitable than philosophy. Facts have more value than fiction.

I. W. JOHNSON.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTIONS.

In a few weeks the annual assemblies of the Sunday School Conventions of our several conferences will be convening. These are most important gatherings. They should be taken seriously by everyone earnestly interested in the status and progress of our church. In the past the Sunday school has in a large measure been the mother of our churches. Through a Sunday school organization however small, many of our churches have had their beginning. As a mother the Sunday school has nursed and nurtured the church, bringing under the influence of the church children of the community and eventually the families from which these children have come. The Sunday school still is the strong arm of the church and can be made a much greater asset than it now is. Unchurched people in a community will become a part of a Sunday school more readily than they will a part of the church. To become a member of the Sunday school, the conditions are simply a willingness to unite and cooperate. To become a member of the church, the question of individual salvation enters, personal consecration and definite obligations are requisites. If we could re-discover the purpose and possibilities of the Sunday school and effect a closer and a more helpful alignment with the church itself, the entire church program would be revitalized and become far more productive.

In our Sunday School Conventions the question of program and policy for the Convention is vital. In addition to receiving reports, contributions and addresses on these annual occasions, there should be a very serious program of study and plans having to do definitely with Sunday school work. In these annual meetings, we should face the question of officers and teachers for the school, their duties and responsibilities. The average Sunday school is anxious to know the type of teacher to be secured. We certainly need to face the question of a more efficient organization for our Sunday school and to consider how to make our regular sessions of Sunday school in the local church more interesting, more helpful, and more beneficial. The question of materials and methods needs always to be presented in an enlightening way. We need to know the materials to be taught and the best plans of teaching whereby the members of their several classes and departments may receive the greatest possible benefit. It might be well to consider the technique of a real Sunday School Convention. There is a possibility of overlooking the more essential features of a Sunday School Convention and the things most vital to the efficiency and progress of the Sunday school in the local church. It is all right to talk about the church's institutions in our Sunday School Conventions, but more profitable I think to seek to improve the local Sunday school, and as our Sunday schools are improved, their value to the institutions of the church will be accordingly increased.

This is simply a suggestion to those responsible for the program of our Sunday School Conventions to have utmost in their minds the Sunday school and the local church as they plan their program. Lest we forget, the Sunday school offers the most productive field for evangelistic endeavor of any department of our church's life.

Would it be possible, my Brother Pastor and Superintendent, to determine a Sunday School Day for every local church constituting our Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. On this day, special emphasis would be put on the value of the Sunday school

FOR THE CHILDREN

THE LITTLEST LEAF.

By ELEANOR HAMMOND.

The little leaves were all whispering in the wind.

"Isn't it a fine world we've come into?" one little elm leaf whispered to the others. "I'm going to have a lot of fun! I'm going to play with the breezes and the sunbeams! I'm going to grow to be the biggest leaf on my bough and get the best place in the light!"

"I'm going to dance all spring and summer and hop and turn somersaults!" another leaf whispered. "And when autumn comes I'm going to fly right away! I'll fly in through Robbie's window and tickle his nose when he's asleep."

"I'm going to be the most beautiful leaf on the whole tree," a third little leaf said. "I'm going to have the finest green color and the prettiest scalloped edges and the most graceful veins. I'm going to be so beautiful that even the people on the ground under me are going to look up and admire me."

The wind laughed as he ran past. He gave the littlest leaf of all a little shake. "What are you going to do, you funny little bit of leaf?" he asked.

"I'm going to try to make people happy," the littlest leaf whispered. "I'm going to grow so that I will make nice shade for children to play in on hot days."

"You! You little bit of green foolishness!" And all the other young elm leaves laughed a rusty little laugh. "You aren't big enough to make shade. You couldn't shelter even a mouse from the sun."

The littlest leaf sighed. "I'm going to try, anyhow!" it said.

Every day the littlest leaf did its best to grow. It didn't spend time playing with the breezes nor dancing with the moonbeams. It didn't bother about whether its edges were perfectly scalloped or whether its veins were the most graceful. It just tried to grow convenient and shady.

But it was so high up on the tree that nobody ever noticed it. Robbie played in the yard below, but he didn't need the littlest leaf's shade. There were plenty of bigger leaves on the maple trees to shade his toys on a hot day. The littlest leaf gave a rusty little sigh. It wanted so much to be kind to somebody—and there was nobody who wanted it to be kind to him and he did feel bad.

"I wonder if there is any use trying to be good," the littlest leaf sighed. "Anyhow, I suppose I'll have to keep on trying—it's grown to be a habit now."

Just as he was saying it, the littlest leaf heard a chirping little voice in the tree. It was Mrs. Brown Wren and she was looking for a very good place to build her tiny nest.

"Just the leaf to build it under," Mrs. Wren chirped, when she caught sight of the littlest leaf. "It's so big and shady. It will keep the hot sun off my eggs and the rain off my babies." And she went to work at once building under the leaf—which

THE SEED AND THE SOUL.

By Margaret E. Sangster.

God dropped a seed in the ground on day,
A brown little seed in a far-off spot,
Where the mud was thick and the sun so hot
That it blasted life with its scorching ray.
But the seed took hold on a sullen stone,
With roots as fine and as soft as lace;
And it struggled up toward the sky alone,
Until it bloomed in that far-off place!

God sent a soul to the earth one night,
And set it deep in a crippled frame;
A golden soul in a body lame
And racked with pain; but the morning light
Found faith and hope in a pair of eyes
And a heart that was sweet with trust and whole.

And through the dark of the crippled frame,
A song sprang out of that buried soul!
And as folk marveling, stand apart,
I whisper, "God," in my inmost heart.

—"The Christian Herald."

wasn't really a little leaf at all any more, but a fine big shady leaf.

The leaf felt very, very proud and all the other leaves looked up at him enviously. "I guess it does pay to keep on being good," the leaf whispered. And think of a family of wrens—all my own."—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

QUESTION BOX.

WHO WERE THE FOUNDERS OF THE CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN AMERICA?

The founders of the Congregational Church in America came over on the Mayflower. As you probably know from your study of American history in school, this little boatload of Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620. This group had been forced to leave Scrooby, England, because of their religious beliefs. They went to Leyden, Holland, and from there came to the New World. The leaders on this adventurous trip across the little-known Atlantic were William Brewster, William Bradford, and Edward Winslow. Soon other Congregationalists came to this country and founded the colonies of Massachusetts Bay, Connecticut, and New Haven.

There are three men who are credited with the founding of the Christian Church. In 1794 Rev. James O'Kelly and a group of his followers withdrew from the Methodist Church, because they did not agree with its form of government. Rev. O'Kelly organized this group at Old Lebanon Church, Surry County, Va., where they took the name "Christian." A monument erected in memory of him stands on the Elon College campus. In 1801 a similar group under Rev. Elias Smith separated from the Baptists in Vermont. The same year another group in Kentucky left the Presbyterian Church under the leadership of Rev. Barton W. Stone. These three separate groups had similar ideas about religion and their followers finally united under the name of the Christian Church.

Next Week: How did it happen that the Congregational and Christian Churches united?

SERMONS THAT ARE REMEMBERED.

“The Bible is always being re-discovered. Often has it been shoved aside as an obsolete antique to which our ancestors had a curious addiction; always men have returned with new interest to its pages. Each age brings new questions to this ancient book—and finds within its covers fresh and timely answers.

“The most effective writers and speakers have always found the Holy Writ a goldmine of figures and phrases with which to give their thoughts a cutting edge. We read that even Heywood Brown uses it as a source-book for style.

“The wise story tellers and preachers ultimately go back to the Bible. Fairy tales and nature stories have their places, but if you want to charm a group of little children, tell them about Baby Moses. Even the “squirmage” will pay attention to the parable of the Good Samaritan. As for the preachers, it is their privilege to discuss the problems of the day without benefit of texts, but the sermons which the people remember are built around one of the definite human situations with which the Bible overflows. The pews are grateful when the man in the pulpit takes a text—and then sticks to it!

“But there are indications that we are going back to the Bible in a deeper sense than as an aid to effective self-expression. We seem to be on the verge of a re-discovery of its spiritual mountain peaks.”

The above to which we give our most hearty approval and indorsement is taken from an editorial in The New York Congregational-Christian State News, being a part of an editorial “Once More the Bible Speaks to Us.” We indulge the hope, and have evidences for the increasing belief, that many indeed are re-discovering the Bible and its invaluable aid in solving the human problems of our time.

More than once in late years we have been surprised that the minister at the regular eleven o'clock worship hour on Sunday would consume the period allotted for such service in discussing topics of the times, or whatnot without choosing a text of Scripture as a basis for his so-called sermon. We wish to repeat that which this writer has often said before, that in his opinion the very best sermon any minister can preach is that sermon which gives emphasis and vitality to a text of Scripture in such wise as to make, not his sermon, but the text, stick in the minds of his congregation. “And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us.” That is the specific task of the minister in his worship service to give flesh and blood to the Word of God, the text chosen for the occasion. If the preacher makes his text live in the minds of his hearers he need not fear as to result and outcome of efforts. But for the minister to ignore a text and not to stick to the text when it is taken, is to make a fatal blunder indeed.

THE TREND TOWARD CHURCH UNITY.

“A definite trend toward church unity has set in everywhere. North America shows the greatest number of denominational divisions; nevertheless, a former president of the Federal Council of Churches recently ventured the prophecy that in twenty-five years there will be only one church in all America.

From these recent ecumenical meetings has come a new understanding of the vitality and universality of Christianity. It is the most potent force on earth today. As one instance of its power, we recall that in Germany only the church has been able to withstand Hitler and the Nazi program. We have learned, too, of the recent large-scale acceptance of the Gospel in India and China and Africa. Deep-flowing in the world's democracies is a new understanding of the place of Christianity in practical affairs. Statesmen are foremost in recognizing the religious factor in the mood of mankind.”—Exchange.

PROGRAM OF WORSHIP FOR THE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Prepared by

MRS. J. EVERETTE NEESE,
Henderson, N. C.

THEME: “Faith in Our Task.”

Instrumental Prelude.

Call to Worship: “Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden . . . I am the Good Shepherd; and I know mine own, and mine own know me. . . . Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: they also I must bring, and . . . they shall become one flock, one Shepherd.”

Moment of Silent Meditation (After which the leader prays):

Oh God, Thou who hast instilled into the hearts of men that without Faith in our task we labor in vain, instill within us today the realization of the city's need of Thee. Awaken us to what we can do to carry the Gospel to those parts. We ask in Thy Name. Amen.

Hymn: “My Faith Looks Up to Thee”—498, Pilgrim Hymnal.

Scripture Lesson: Mark 1:32-42.

Prayer:

Our Heavenly Father, help us that we may share with the needy, give aid to the suffering, minister to the discouraged and do all within our power to lift the blight from the city. May we have faith in Thee and faith in our fellowman, which combined will help us combat the forces of evil. Make us to realize the avenues of life through which we may work, and in our work, share Christ with others. Let us never think of self nor work for selfish gain. Let us never be so exalted as to refuse to enter the city slums and through Faith in our task, serve those there. Guide, strengthen and help us, we pray, in Thy Name. Amen.

Poem:

Give me, O God, the understanding heart—
The quick discernment of the soul to see
Another's inner wish, the hidden part
Of him who, wordless, speaks for sympathy.
I would be kind, but kindness is not all:
In arid places may I find the wells,
The deeps within my neighbor's soul that call
To me, and lead me where his spirit dwells.
When Jesus lifted Mary Magdalene
And Mary came with alabaster cruse,
A deed was wrought—but more; and there was seen
The bond of holy love of which muse.
Give me, O God, the understanding heart,
Lit with the quickening flame thou dost impart.
—“The Christian Century.”

Talk by Leader: Robert W. Searle in his book City Shadows deals with the most important part of the city—its people. He says: “Has not every city its lonely aged, its physically, socially, and economically handicapped, its neglected and delinquent children? Are there not in nearly every city one or more groups which suffer from prejudice and discrimination? It has been said that ‘every American community has its slums or substandard area.’ And every city has its impoverished families whose income is less than the amount necessary for the maintenance of healthy life. These then are neighbors to us all.

“While this suffering is more vast in extent than the average person realizes yet of course it is not a new development in our community life. It has always been present and thanks to the Church, there has always been an effort to minister to it.

“We live in a desperately confused and suffering world. Our happiness is bound up with that of our fellows; things will not right themselves. Hate and fear will not vanish automatically. What is needed is a Christian crusade in love to conquer the world for Christ, which is only another way of saying to bring in the reign of brotherhood. For you and for me that must begin in our community,

We cannot achieve it by force or by regulation. We can achieve it if we seek to do so in the power and spirit of the Master.

“Will you enlist and dedicate your life to the task of dispelling the City Shadows by the Light of His Life?”

Hymn: “O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee”—291, Pilgrim Hymnal.

Closing Meditation:

My life shall touch a dozen lives before this day is done,
Leave countless marks for good or ill ere sets this evening sun.

My life shall touch a million lives in some way ere I go
From this dear world of struggle to the land I do not know.
So this the wish I always wish, the prayer I ever pray:
Let my life help the other lives it passes by the way.

ELON MINISTERS' CONFERENCE.

ELON COLLEGE, N. C.,

JUNE 19-24, 1939.

Teachers and courses are as follows:

- 8:00 “The Vocal Use of the Bible”
—Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, New York City.
9:00 “Rural Sociology”—Dr. Selz C. Mayo, University of North Carolina.
10:00 “The Geographical Background of the Bible”—Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, Newport News, Va.
11:00 “Improving the Local Church”
—Dr. Halliday.
2:00 “Expository Preaching”—Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, Sunbury, N. C.

Years of experience have taught the necessity of having our ministers at Elon in order to get the young people. During the past few years a definite program has been arranged for the ministers. This Conference is held jointly with the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. A program covering the various phases of our church activities has been prepared. Competent instructors have been secured. Ministers need not only the instruction, but also the fellowship. Churches should insist that their minister attend and assist him financially if necessary. Many churches send a young person to Elon. How many send their minister? We would like to have every minister in the Southern Convention at Elon June 19-24. Let's make it unanimous!

THE MISSION OF OUR CHURCH IN THE SOUTHEAST.

With reference to a broad application of the gospel to contemporary life let it be understood that an era of social vision and prophetic preaching might produce a Jane Addams or a Graham Taylor for the South. Too long the power of the Gospel has been concentrated largely on incidental and relatively insignificant sins. Pathfinders in social relations are desperately needed in the South today. Fortified by a crusading spirit, our denomination may aspire to the role of supplying to a definite extent this pressing need.

As we face our complex task we seem to be caught between the proverbial must and can't. We do, however, have resources, coefficients which should give us courage.

1. Literature second to none—Yes, we have Programs of Progress, perfectly printed, promulgated and propagated at prolific pace for perspective patrons by the proper prelates of the Pilgrim Press, and palpable pamphlets by parcel post on parents, pacifism, pedagogy, pageants, parables, prophets, patriotism, posters and ping pong to provide perennial pedagogy from Pensacola to Pasadena and from Pennsylvania to Panama. With an abundance of literature educationally and theologically trustworthy we should truly “go to town.”

2. An organization and form of government lacking the Machivellian tendencies of the Episcopacy and yet strengthened by the guidance and inspiration of superintendents and extension workers. We have probably clung to antique techniques, but fortunately we are not historically encumbered and presently embarrassed by narrow creeds and outmoded dogmas. Such a background and organization should facilitate progress.

3. An expectant, susceptible, rejuvenated, contemporary South. The South may indeed be the land with a future. The nation's number one problem may prove to be the nation's first asset. Here is an area for concentration and expansion. The experience of the race, the heritage of the ages, the imperishable Word, and the Eternal Spirit of the living God are available resources for building the Kingdom in the Southeast.

I close with the words of Leopold the III of Belgium: “To be able to serve, one must know; to be willing to serve, one must love.”

“Say preachers, when you rise to the occasion, please learn to sit down.”

MISSIONARY COMMITTEE.

At the meeting of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship held recently in Norfolk, Va., the question of doing something definite for missions was discussed. It was decided to have a committee appointed for the purpose of investigating such a project and the possibilities for carrying it out. This committee is composed of: Miss Frances Everett, Holland, Va., Chairman; Miss Elizabeth Newton, Jupiter, Fla., and Elon College, N. C.; Rev. Melvin Dollar, representing Alabama, Elon College, N. WHAT THE CROSS MEANS TO ME.

[Prize-winning essay by Ray Day, of First Church, Norfolk, Va.]

As I gaze off into space, I see a vision of a great event which occurred in the year 33 A. D. What is happening? My heart aches, my eyes fill with tears, and my mind is bewildered because my Saviour is being crucified.

"And they spit upon Him, and took the reed, and smote Him on the head." They spit upon Him, but He forgave. They smote Him, but He forgave. He, our King of kings, suffered that we might live.

While Jesus was carrying the cross on His way to Calvary, Simon the Cyrenean took the cross for our Lord. Simon was a compassionate man.

On the cross He was placed. Cruel nails were driven through His beloved hands and feet. A spear was thrust into His side. The precious blood of our Savior's body was spilled. All this He suffered for you and for me.

The cross is a sacred emblem of the death of Jesus Christ. As I think of the cross, I not only see a wooden structure, but I see a guide which leads me to the way of eternity. Down the path of life we journey. We should not mind our cross, because He carried His cross in our behalf.

Upon the cross He was placed one day,
And for our sins He did pay.
Willingly He His life did give,
In order that we might live.

To the cross He was led,
Upon Calvary He bled.
Carry your cross as He did that day,
And be not a Judas who would betray.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF OUR CHURCH TO YOUTH.

[This article is part of a paper read at the Mid-Year Conference in the Valley of Virginia by Miss Louise Bowman. Editor.]

Our Church of today is confronted with grave perils and inspiring challenges such as:

The great continuing problem of giving youth its opportunity to serve, and inspiring them to greater ideals in a changing world. Youth today is not satisfied to do the same things in the same way as our forefathers did them fifty, or even twenty-five years ago.

The Church should concern itself with the upbuilding and maintaining of new churches and younger churches as a part of the world-wide Christian fellowship. How is the Church, in such an environment as just indicated, to live, to grow, to reach out with transforming power?

We are still laboring under the impression that a small church building set far back into the woods, difficult to reach in bad weather, ought to be made to stand, and worship ought to

SOURCES OF SPIRITUAL POWER.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MAY 28, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 2:1-12.
(PENTECOST.)

Daily Readings—

Monday—the Secret Presence—Ps. 31: 19-20.

Tuesday—Belief in Christ—John 14: 10-12.

Wednesday—Fellowship in Worship—Heb. 10: 19-25.

Thursday—The Source of Prayer—Matt. 6: 5-8.

Friday—The Holy Spirit's Power—Acts 1: 4-8.

Saturday—Abiding in Christ—John 15: 1-8.

Pentecost means fifty days. It carries us back to the scene where Peter spoke out of the boldness of his heart when the Holy Spirit had come upon the disciples. They were assembled in an upper room fifty days after Easter and ten days after the Ascension of Christ. We are told that three thousand believed on Jesus Christ. These people had communion with God. Their lives were stirred to the depths of their souls.

This meeting should help young people discover these sources of spiritual power: Prayer, the Bible, Church Worship, Meditation, Sacrifice, and Music.

Let each person make some contribution to this meeting. Plan together a schedule for daily worship. What would you include in a daily plan? Now make a schedule for a month.

Give some time to the discussion of things which should be included in a yearly schedule of sources of spiritual power.

In this hurried age is it possible to use sources of spiritual power regularly? Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Paul are illustrations of people who found a cause to which they gave their lives. What were their convictions?

For Discussion—

1. Why is prayer so often a matter of asking God for something, and so seldom a fellowship with Him?

2. How can Christian Endeavor direct the efforts of its members so that there may develop a sense of partnership with God?

3. Is our hurried age responsible for our lack of spiritual growth?

4. Should we slow down the era in which we live? Or is there some other solution?

Suggested Hymns—

"This Is My Father's World."

"Jesus Calls Us."

"Open Mine Eyes That I May See."

PAUL THINKS IN WORLD TERMS.

LESSON IX—MAY 28, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: I am not ashamed of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Romans 1:16.

LESSON: Romans 1:1-17; 3:21-30; 5:1-11; 10:11-15.

In his second letter to first century Christians Peter says that "Brother Paul hath written unto you in all his epistles, speaking of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood." II Peter 3:16. He must have been referring to some parts of Paul's letter to the Romans. In any event there are some things hard to be understood in that letter. It is one of the most profound things ever written. It is high and deep.

But there are some parts of that profound letter which we can understand. There is light enough to walk by, which will bring us into more light. A survey of the several passages included in today's lesson text reveals several plain and practical truths and principles. They can be only hinted at, for space forbids an extended treatment of them.

The Gospel Is for All.

Again and again in these passages of Scripture Paul writes in terms of the universal aspects of the gospel of Christ. It is for all men of all colors and creeds and cultures. All men have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Christ died for all. The gospel is for all. "Whosoever"—Paul thinks in world terms. One of the tragedies of modern Christianity is that it has lost its world vision and its world passion. The churches need to re-read Paul's letter to the Romans to get a world view again. Christ died for all. Christ can save all. This is the central message of true Christianity.

We Are Heirs of All the Ages.

Paul frankly acknowledged that he was "debtor both to Greeks and Barbarians." No man can cut himself off from the past. No man has anything that he did not receive. We are in debt both to the cultured and the uncultured for what we have and are. In recent years men of spiritual insight are discovering that Christianity itself will never become full-orbed and rounded until other races and other cultures make their contribution to it. A great deal of the best in our civilization and our culture came to us from those who were not "of the household of faith."

The Gospel Is Power.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile or Greek." The word translated power is the word "dunamis" from which we get our English word "dynamite." The gospel is the "dynamite of God." We need not defend it; we need simply to proclaim it, and to incarnate it. We need to keep in mind that the magic word in Rome was power. Rome was the proud mistress of the world. She ruled supreme. She had all power of a kind. Paul was talking in terms they could understand when he talked about power. But what was the power of Rome as compared with the power of the gospel? And today the gospel is power.

We Need Not Be Ashamed of the Gospel.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel." Some of us would have been. If we had been an humble and hated Jew, going into the capital of the world, representing a small religious group, we would have been ashamed. At least many of us today are half-way apologetic about our religion and our church membership. But Paul had a sense of values. He was not ashamed of Christ or Christ's gospel. He made no apology for it. Nor do we need to apologize for it, as we do not need to defend it. Proclaim it, live it, and it will vindicate itself.

Salvation Is By Faith.

Several times Paul insists that salvation is not a matter of doing good works, or by performing certain ceremonies, or even of believing certain dogmas, but of personal, sincere faith in Christ, in personal trust, in taking God at his word. Faith is a matter of personal relationship. Faith brings a man into a relationship with God which is salvation. We are saved by faith. We are saved by faith through the grace of God in Christ. It is not of ourselves; it is not of works, even good works.

We Are Reconciled to God Through Christ.

"God commended his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us . . . for if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled we shall be saved by his life." The preaching which implies that God needed to be reconciled to man is false. Man needed to be reconciled to God. And when men see the Cross as the extent to which God in Christ will go to redeem them, they become reconciled to God through Christ. If that will not produce a change of heart in man, nothing else will.

Peace and Joy in Believing.

"Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement." This peace does not come from the absence of trial and trouble. Paul frankly says that the believer will have tribulations. But in the heart of the man who has been justified by faith in Christ there is a peace of God which passeth all understandings, and a joy which the world cannot give or take away. Even in the surface storms of life, there is an abiding peace and joy in the depths of the soul or heart.

We Have a Common Humanity.

"For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek." The idea of such a thing! Who could not tell a Jew from a Greek just by looking at them? But Paul is right. Fundamentally mankind is one. Under all superficial and outward differences of race and color and custom, men are one. They have the same hungers, the same fears, the same hopes, the same temptations, the same sins. God hath made of one blood all nations of men on the earth. Fundamentally we are all brothers for we are the children of the same Father God. And because we are all alike all men need the gospel. The red man and the yellow man and the brown man and the black man have the same need of, and the same capacity for the gospel as does the white man. "The same Lord is rich unto all that call upon him." And "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

We Must Send the Gospel to Others.

The gospel cannot be preached through abstract mediums. It must become incarnate. "How shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent? God could have converted the so called heathen by a direct act. He chose, however, to do it through human cooperation. And God will not and cannot make his salvation known unto the ends of the earth until he finds enough men and women to go to the ends of the earth to proclaim and to incarnate his gospel of love. The day of missions is not done. It is hardly begun. The church which refuses to lose its life for those abroad will lose its life at home.

MONDAY.

"IF IT'S KIND, JOT IT DOWN."

"If thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."—Gen. 4:7.

The above was the title of an editorial in a recent nursing journal. The suggestion was that if anything kind in the nursing profession was heard, it should be jotted down and sent to the Journal.

Should this be so only in the nursing profession? Shouldn't it be so with every one in every walk of life? Yea, verily, and not necessary to jot it down but just remember it; and then for the happiness and encouragement of others, repeat it.

Prayer—Our Father, it is not the easiest thing to forget the unkind and the bad. We need Thy grace and Thy power within us to give us the thought and desire to do so and to pass on the good for the good of the world. O Lord help us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE CONVERSE."

"Forgetting those things that are behind . . ."—Phil. 3:13.

"If it isn't kind, do not jot it down. Just forget it." This is just as religious as our prayers, and it is apt to contribute as much good as if we went about doing good. It is not the easiest thing in the world to do. There was a poet who said:

The ill-timed truth we might have kept—
Who knows how sharp and pierced and stung!

The word we had not sense to say—
Who knows how grandly it rung!

We go along in this world so engrossed in ourselves, and priding so well in what we think and say, that we little realize how other people are going to be affected by it.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us how to govern our tongues, control our tempers, and direct our spirit so that we may cause no hurt, bitterness, sting nor sorrow to friend or others. In Jesus' name we ask it, Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A HELPFUL SOUL.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6:2.

How often we fail to say the little word or give the sympathetic smile that helps some struggling one along the way, makes his load lighter, and his way happier!

There was a young man who, after much struggle, gave his heart and life to the Lord Jesus Christ. He was happy and his parents were happy. The day was perfect but for one thing: A well meaning friend said "Well—I am glad you were baptized. Even though you aren't a Christian, you may be some day." That thrust at a time when encouragement was needed most left a sore that was never healed. Tragic!

Prayer—(Pray as you feel.)

THURSDAY.

WHO IS GUILTLess?

"He that overcometh shall inherit all things."—Rev. 21:7.

I wonder if we are not all guilty of saying unkind things. Isn't it true that in our homes and most intimate relations we are continually hurting those whom we love best by letting go our words and saying what we think. Many have company manners. Well—let's let love wipe this disgrace out. Some one has wisely said:

"Don' speak all yo' knows; but be sho' yo' knows all yo' speak."

Prayer—Dear Father, forgive us our sins and make us willing to be endowed by Thy spirit so that we can be sweet all the time."—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"POSSESSED OF A PURPOSE."

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made heaven and earth."—Ps. 121:1.

There come days when we are sorry for all of our bad speeches. It may be the day when we are sending flowers and we wish we had long before sent a visit. We may prevent such sorrows, at least reduce them, by looking to Him who overcame all sin, of whom it is said, "He was possessed of one purpose; He lived to bless others." With His spirit in us, things will be different. When we desire to speak, if we can reflect: "Would Jesus think this is kind? Would Jesus consider this a blessing?"

Prayer—Dear Father, we are humiliated to think of how weak we are. We would be like Jesus. Grant unto us submission of self so that we may have His spirit always. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"REMEMBER."

"I will remember my covenant with Thee."—Ezek. 16:60.

When we remember God's promise in Jeremiah 31:34, that He will remember our sins no more, and that He will forgive our iniquities and make us clean, it will be easier for us to remember that if a thing is not kind, forget it; and if it is kind, remember it, and tell it, and leave it with someone who appreciates it; it will be easier for us to know that "there's miles and miles of smiles, and life's worthwhile if you smile." It will be easier to say, or do something kind.

Prayer—O Lord, Our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth." Thy very spirit throbs our thoughts and passions now. O God, may we think enough every day to bring us into the mood and spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ, and be His children forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Dear Father, we cross the threshold of this day to do Thy will. Help us to do it in lowliness of mind and

"THY SANCTUARY THAT IS DESOLATE."

(DANIEL 9: 17.)

By VICTOR B. CHICOINE,
Winter Park, Florida.

It is not the exact truth that all the sanctuaries of the land are desolate, but it is so very nearly true in many places that they who are the most interested are greatly disturbed. People will travel in hords to entertainments that are bawdy, pugilistic combats that are fraudulent, but the sanctuaries are often desolate. So once more, as in ancient Israel, there is the cry, "O God, hear the prayer of Thy servant, and cause Thy face to shine upon Thy sanctuary that is desolate."

I.

Now what is the truth? Why is the sanctuary desolate? Is it because the majority of men and women do not care to be associated with those who continue to have, as they call it, an outmoded attitude towards the universe? Is it sheer thoughtlessness and selfishness, and every minister of the sanctuary knows who have come to him in deep need, asking for the service of the sanctuary, and then having received that aid, have gone away, ignoring the sanctuary, leaving it desolate as far as they were concerned until the next time? Is it that the sanctuary being a quiet place, removed from the crowds, unadvertised by blaring posters, catchy slogans over the radio, is fading from the thinking of the people and is therefore unattended? Or is the reason that they who have ministered in the sanctuaries having been false, and the hungry, unfed sheep, disillusioned have gone elsewhere for sustenance? Can it be that science, education, philosophy, mechanical toys are now satisfying the inner needs completely? Or is it possible that too rugged a truth is being heard from the sanctuaries and a people grown soft, and loving now, easy going cults, and fads, have drifted away?

II.

Whatever the cause the fact remains that many sanctuaries are well nigh desolate and that there is a cry in the land unto God that His face may shine upon the houses of worship. One can ask the above questions but who has the answer? However this much is observed to take place wherever the sanctuary is forsaken and true worship neglected. There, men and women are also desolate itself! There, true community spirit always lags. There, such words as nobleness, and generosity are almost empty terms!

There are communities where the desolation of the sanctuary and of the people do not at first appear to be converging; but they will meet. Even where there is great wealth, and houses are beautiful, temples grand, if the sanctuary is desolate, so the lives are, or will be desolate in that community. Such desolation may not come with a pounce, nay it will not come that way, but if the sanctuary remains desolate—it will come! There is no corollary in all life that is more certain!

III.

I ask you to have a sanctuary, a place to which you deliberately go for regular appointments with God. If you are far from the great temples of the cities you need not feel that you are bereft of a place in which to worship. Allow no one to tell you that one church or one group has the only sanctuary or the one way of worship. It is the hearts of men and women that make or unmake a sanctuary.

Make sure of a place of worship. True sanctuaries, and there are such, are waiting for men and women that may help them to stand, to give them inner buttresses that nothing in this world can crack! There is power to be had in the sanctuary, power to save every last one of us from ourselves; to redeem the race; to challenged youth to give up inhabiting the slimy places; and in its place to attempt the heights of noble and great experiences.

However certain requirements must be met before such things can even begin to happen. One cannot enter the sanctuary, be it even a simple, plain, country chapel, with a jaunty or flippant air, laughing at the ancient customs that men have learned not only to love but to call holy, and expect a blessing. Neither will a blessing come to anyone who enters with a shallow spirit and a carping attitude; but an honest, searching mind entering the sanctuary will find welcome, peace, and power.

Therefore the first attitude must be that of honesty. There is no other way to begin. We must understand that, "The Lord is in His holy temple," and that He is reached only through a spirit that is seeking the truth. There must be the deep desire to be real and utterly sincere, or else there is not even a beginning to the worship. Douglas Steers says, "A friend who is the most effective clergyman in the middle-west has told me that, without entering into this silence each day of his life and opening up every pore of his life before God, the praise and eulogy and adulation which he as a clergyman is subject to would make a play-actor of him within a month." Now that, I submit, is a startling quotation; but it is the attitude which every person must have, in the sanctuary, if their worship is to reach its true culmination.

IV.

We need a place, and moments, into which we dare not enter with a scintilla of sham or acting in our souls—a place where other men and women are meeting with the same spirit upon them. The theatres are drawing their multitudes. But not even the greatest dramas will do for them or for us what the sanctuary can do. I do love the drama, the truly great drama; but it is only acting. That is the subtle psychology which will keep the stage forever from supplanting the sanctuary. Let any man or woman imitate vicarious suffering as dramatically and as gripping as it is possible for any human being to do—and it will still be acting. And they who see and listen will know and feel that it is acting.

There can only be acting on the stage. It never can be real. But on the other hand, in the sanctuary, no matter how clever it may be, we must be real, there never can be anything else but reality in the sanctuary! If there be acting in the sanctuary, then indeed, it is a desolate place! Calvary was no stage with a vivid set of scenery and many extras for the mob, and highly priced actors for the main parts! That is why men and women turn to it again and again. It was life, it was real. It happened once, only once, but it was enough for all eternity!

And if they who worship in the sanctuary, and they who minister, tell that tale well, tell it out of full hearts, and then live it out in life gloriously, the sanctuaries of the land, I believe, will again be crowded with seeking men and women!

"Give not, from the top of your purse, but from the bottom of your heart."

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

It took faith; but by having faith we won. More than a year ago our well that furnished the orphanage plant with water failed to furnish as much water as we needed. To be short of water supply in an orphanage with nearly a hundred children is a serious matter. It takes lots of water for such a large family. The question came to us as to how to get a water supply. We first undertook to drill our old well deeper. That proved to be a failure. The Board instructed us to select a new location, and drill a new well. We carried out their instructions. We had a geologist from the State Department to come and select the location. We started the drill and had gone about 40 feet when we encountered quick sand. If you ever had any dealings with quick sand in a well, you have some idea as to what we had to contend with. We lined the well as we drilled on down through sand and slush until the pipe would drive no further. Still the sand and slush ran in. It was then necessary to drive a smaller lining inside the first lining in order to cut out the quick sand. Finally at the depth of two hundred feet we cut out the sand and slush, but had no water left. Spending such an outlay of money and getting no water was heartbreaking. On the advice of the man who drilled the well and several others we decided to stop and spend no more money. Then what to do next was the question. A number of suggestions were made, but when we would figure the cost it was out of the question to undertake it. The writer still had faith to believe we could find water in the well we had abandoned if we would go deep enough in the rock. We finally decided to drill fifty more feet. We made a new contract and started the drive. After drilling about forty feet, we struck water and at a depth of seventy feet we found that we had a water supply which we think is ample. Our well is 270 feet deep and the water is clear and pure.

Our next trouble is to get a pump in the well and pipe the water to the buildings. Drilling deep wells through rock and buying and installing a pump costs money. When the income is barely enough to run on, it is hard to meet such an emergency as this. But we rejoice that we have water in sight.

as a religious factor and divine institution of the church itself, and to think of this day as an occasion for rallying at the church all who are interested in the church and in the Sunday school. If we are accustomed to have one hundred and fifty in regular attendance, set a goal for two hundred and fifty. Whatever our regular attendance is, set a goal of considerable increase and strive to reach that goal. The Board of Christian Education will give some token of recognition to the Sunday school registering the largest increase in attendance on such a day. It will also give some special token of recognition to the school in each conference that makes the best record of attendance. These recognitions of award will be given on the point of attendance only. The object is to turn the attention of every community toward the church through the Sunday school. Here is a magnificent field for progress if we could only realize the opportunity and in the name of Christ and for the sake of His church grasp that opportunity. heart that, whatever may come, Thy will may be done. When we meet temptations, give us strength to overcome them. When we meet people whom we do not understand and who do not understand us, give us the mind of Christ and the spirit to see and understand, and endeavor to help them to bear their crosses in a dying world. Make Thy will our objective and yearning. Make in us the continual strain of obedience our greatest joy. And thus we shall find Thee an ever-present joy and blessing. Amen.

In Memoriam

TUCK.

Nathan Tuck, son of Nathan Tuck (deceased), was born April 27, 1920, and was killed in an automobile accident near South Boston, Va., on Saturday, May 5, 1939. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Nathan Tuck of Virgilina, Va., and four sisters. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Union Christian Church on Tuesday, May 9. The entire community was shocked by the sad accident that so suddenly ended the life of this young man. A large crowd of sorrowing and sympathetic people attended the funeral and burial. The latter was in the family plot in the town cemetery. Nathan had many friends. The sympathy of the community goes out to his mother, for he was the only son and she, a widow.

RESPONSIBILITY TO YOUTH.

continue because our parents and forefathers' names were written on that particular church record. It is a nice thing to be sentimental about such things. We sing with much feeling, "The Church in the Wildwood." But I am thinking that if the church is to be true to its responsibility to youth, if the church is to be an agent for God and His Kingdom on earth, we must forget sentiment and think of the Cross of Christ. Good, honest thinking in this regard will include the youth of our day.

The churches are leaving youth out of planning. The churches are leaving youth out of objectives. Jesus Christ said: "Suffer the children to come unto me," but our church seems to be saying by its actions, "We forbid you take an active part in our programs, or our business administration. Our church should awake to its responsibilities to youth and give them a chance to modernize and streamline its program. Let's forget "The Church in the Wildwood" and build churches in the towns where the youth of our day gather for purposes that are worldly. We need churches in our cities. We, and when I say we I am speaking of the youth in our churches, are walking miles to churches and riding a few hundred yards to the pleasures of the world in our cities. Other denominations are getting our members who are fast moving to the more congested centers. It is time we forget our sentiment about the old home church building and think of the children of tomorrow, if we are to exist as a denomination and as a church. The Church's responsibility to youth is for better educational equipment, and better leaders and teachers in the Sunday school, for better Sunday school rooms. The Church should see to it that youth has trained teachers.

There is grave danger lest Christianity become diluted by superstition and sub-Christian conceptions of God. There are also to be met ideas and attitudes which are tending to cut the roots of the missionary undertaking because they cut the roots of Christianity itself.

There is need of realistic thinking and sacrificial action with reference to the development of a sound financial basis for the churches. The Church should teach youth to give, and youth will give. The Church is responsible if youth does not give.

The hour has come to sound out a strong recall to evangelism—the larger evangelism. This is absolutely necessary to all we have at heart.

The last place where we of the Congregational-Christian denomination should permit ourselves to think of limitations is in the realm of our youth. For youth is the natural resources of the Church life.

In view of the alarming state of the world, in view of the so largely unfinished task, in view of the great designs of our ever-living and ever-creative Lord, our attitude and our spirit should be one of adventure—forward-looking and forward-moving—if we are to live as a Church of Jesus Christ in the world and in the Valley of Virginia.

DANVILLE.

We have just closed another great Sabbath day at Danville, Va. We had 710 present at Sunday school on Mother's Day, the average for the past two months being about 750. The attendance for morning worship was six hundred, while the evening attendance was about nine hundred. The great auditorium was filled almost to capacity. A wonderful spirit prevailed throughout the day. The evening service was a special young people's service, a pageant being given followed by a brief message from one of our young boys. At the close of the service twelve young people came to the altar acknowledging their definite call to a specific work for the Lord—some missionaries, some evangelists, and others to the work of pastors. It was a great scene, and now the task lies before us of getting them prepared for this great work. All of them are working on meager incomes, but are willing to launch out on the promises of God. It is with them just as it was when we built our Faith Home for under-privileged children; and again our large tabernacle. We do not know how we are going to send them to school, but we are sure God will provide. We invite you to join us with your prayers that God will help us to carry on. He has been wonderful this year, giving us to date seventy-four additions to the church.

M. T. SORRELL.

The Time Is At Hand

The months of May and June have been designated by the Convention Committee on Publications as a time to secure subscriptions for "The Christian Sun." The Convention voted "that we endeavor to secure 3,000 subscriptions within the Convention." It further recommended that each church have a standing committee on Publications and that subscriptions become a definite part of our Conference apportionments. Quotas have been determined for the churches, and those securing their apportionment during this period should appear in "The Christian Sun" as Banner Churches. While we have the entire Conference year, it would be far better to check up on renewals and secure the necessary new subscriptions at once.

The spring and summer are the seasons to secure several sane, stalwart, scientific, smooth-sailing super-salesmen to sell "Sun" subscriptions to the scholars and the skeptics, the self-indulgent and the self-righteous, the secular and the sacred; to circulate a select section of sensational Samaritans who sustain sentiment, stampede the sanctimonious, salve the sensitive, and survey the street, school, and sanctuary in a spontaneous scramble to salvage the savings, stipulate the stipends, secure the silver, and supply the shekles to stimulate the "Sun"; who successfully sing their swan song by signing a substantial succession of superior subscribers throughout the spacious South from Shenandoah to the salty sea breeze of Saint Simon's. The time is at hand!

ROBERT LEE HOUSE, Chairman,
Convention Committee on Publications.

Requirements for Real Citizenship

IF I WANT TO BE A HAPPY, USEFUL CITIZEN I MUST HAVE:

Courage and Hope—I must be brave—This means I must be brave enough to control what I think, and what I say and what I do, and I must always be hopeful because hope is power for improvement.

Wisdom—I must act wisely—In school, at home, playing, working, reading or talking, I must learn how to choose the good, and how to avoid the bad.

Industry and Good Habits—I must make my character strong—My character is what I am, if not in the eyes of others, then in the eyes of my own conscience. Good thoughts in my mind will keep out bad thoughts. When I am busy doing good I shall have no time to do evil. I can build my character by training myself in good habits.

Knowledge and Usefulness—I must make my mind strong—The better I know myself, my fellows and the world about me, the happier and more useful I shall be. I must always welcome useful knowledge in school, at home, everywhere.

Truth and Honesty—I must be truthful and honest—I must know what is true in order to do what is right. I must tell the truth without fear. I must be honest in all my dealings and in all my thoughts. Unless I am honest I cannot have self-respect.

Healthfulness and Cleanliness—I must make my body strong—My eyes, my teeth, my heart, my whole body must be healthful so that my mind can work properly. I must keep physically and morally clean.

Helpfulness and Unselfishness—I must use my strength to help others who need help—If I am strong, I can help others. I can be kind, I can forgive those who hurt me and I can help and protect the weak, the suffering, the young and the old, and dumb animals.

Charity—I must love—I must love God, who created not only this earth but also all men of all races, nations and creeds, who are my brothers. I must love my parents, my home, my neighbors, my country, and be loyal to all these.

Humility and Reverence—I must know that there are always more things to learn—What I may know is small compared to what can be known. I must respect all who have more wisdom than I, and have reverence for all that is good. And I must know how and whom to obey.

Faith and Responsibility—I must do all these things because I am accountable to God and to humanity for how I live and how I can help my fellows, and for the extent to which my fellows may trust and depend upon me.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

Rev. Robert Kimball of Everett, Pa., was among the visitors at the Elon College commencement.

If you need help in conducting a Vacation Bible School this summer, ask aid of the Board of Christian Education at Elon College, N. C.

Mt. Bethel and Hine's Chapel will observe next Sunday as Memorial and Home-Coming Day at their respective churches. Rev. C. L. Moody is the pastor of these churches.

Ministers of our church graduating at Elon Tuesday were Melvin Dollar of Alabama, Emmanuel Hedgebeth of Virginia, and E. J. Sanderson of Canada. All of them expect to enter university next fall.

An offering for the Board of Christian Education when you have the Children's Day service will do much towards making it possible for the Board and the Promotional Secretary to keep at work for the churches.

The dedicatory service for Kallam Grove Christian Church, near Madison, N. C., was held May 21. The service was led by Rev. T. J. Green of Ramseur, N. C., who is a former pastor. Rev. LeGrand Moody is the pastor.

The Promotional Secretary will be the speaker at the annual Memorial Day service at Providence Memorial Church in Graham, N. C., on next Sunday morning. Former members, and friends are invited to spend the day at this famous old church.

Congratulations to Rev. Melvin Dollar who, on last Thursday evening, took to be his wife Miss Gwendolyn Strickland of Royston, Ga. The marriage took place in the home of the bride, who is a graduate of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga. The happy couple are making their home in the new parsonage at Carolina, N. C., where Mr. Dollar is the minister. The CHRISTIAN SUN family wishes them much happiness.

day, June 4, at 11 A. M. and 2 P. M. Basket dinner will be served at 12:30 on the parsonage lawn. The former pastors, members, and friends of the church are invited to be present. Rev. J. H. Dollar of Newport News, Va., will bring the morning message, and Rev. R. A. Whitten of Winchester, Va., will bring the afternoon message.

Members and friends of Congregational and Christian Churches in and near Asheboro, N. C., are invited to meet at the Park Street School building in that city on next Sunday night to continue the processes of starting a church. A committee was appointed two weeks ago to arrange for other meeting and to solicit membership for Sunday school and church. The committee is composed of M. F. Wright, James Truitt, George T. Gunter, Mrs. Sybrant Pell, and Mrs. Paul Craven. The service will open at eight o'clock.

On last Sunday evening, after a brief worship service and sermon led by Rev. F. C. Lester, twenty-one people in Hope Mills, N. C., gave their names for charter members in a new church there. Prospects are good for that many more to join with the charter member list on the second Sunday in June when communion will be observed and the church building dedicated. The name for the group is First Congregational-Christian Church of Hope Mills, N. C.

Within a few weeks three of our Southern Convention ministers will graduate from seminary. Aubrey C. Todd will finish at Chicago and will go at once to a pastorate at Sanford and Jonesboro, N. C. Herbert Council, Jr., and A. Lanson Granger, Jr., graduate from Yale. Latest news from them indicates that they would like to return South but that no definite call has been extended. Here is a wonderfully good opportunity for some churches that may be in need of ministerial service.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

"How can we keep our church members? People join our church, but they seem to get lost and never return."

Such statements as this can be heard in many, probably most, of our churches. The back door of the church seems to be about as large as the front door, and people can get out as rapidly as they come in. What can be done about this? Here are a few things that can be done which may help to change a very bad situation into a more wholesome one.

1. Make church membership mean something important.—Train those who are considering membership. Make clear the meaning of "the Church is the Body of Christ." Teach the prospects that the reason for joining the Church is to serve, and not to be served. Discuss the rights and duties of membership. Get the candidate to write down the reasons why he wants to join. Use a meaningful ceremony in inducting people into membership of the Church. After the name is added to the roll, be sure that the new member finds real friendship and fellowship.

2. Keep an accurate roll of membership.—This should be done both by the secretary (clerk) and the pastor. There may be a card file for use in church work, but there should be a full record kept of each member in a book (not a loose-leaf book either). The report to Conference should correspond with the exact count on the book. When a new minister arrives, give him a complete list of members with addresses so he can find those with whom he is supposed to work. A printed (mimeographed) list each year given to each family will do much towards keeping the record up to date, and will help to make the members feel proud of their church.

3. Give new members literature concerning their Church.—Since the Bible is our rule of faith and practice, give them a copy of the Book. If you expect them to be informed concerning the work, present them with a subscription to the Church Paper and Missionary Magazine. After a year, or even six months, ask the member to renew the subscription. Start the new members to reading about the Church they have joined.

4. Make the Church a fellowship of workers as well as believers.—It is very important to believe, but it is equally (or more) important to work. Every local church should have a definite schedule of things it is trying to accomplish. Every member should have a part in deciding what is to be done, how it is to be done, and in the actual work. Give every member something definite to do—else wherefore solicit members? The "yoke" about which Jesus spoke in inviting followers was made for labor. A cross is to be carried. The Kingdom is to be builded. Unless we are about our Father's business, there is little excuse for a Church. New members should be received into a fine fellowship of those who care and work in the name of Christ for the bringing of His love into all human relations.

If these four simple things are done, there is reasonable assurance that membership in the Church will become more permanent. Three-fifths of those who join such a church as this will never be lost to its membership. If members are lost from your church other than by death or transfer to some other church, it is partly your fault, and something should be done about it by you.

REVIVAL MEETINGS.

Plans are now well under way for many revival meetings in our churches this summer. It is an old custom, and may become just a custom. It may have very great value. The value will depend upon the leaders.

Did you ever think seriously about what you want to revive? Has the fire of Christian fervor burned low in your own heart? Is that what you want to revive? It is not necessary to await a week's meeting of the church for that fire to be rekindled. God is now brooding over your spirit and breathing into your heart the breath of life insofar as you will let him. Go to some secluded beauty spot, or even close your eyes where you are, and say sincerely, "breathe on me, breath of God" and see what will happen. A revival for you can begin now, and will begin whenever you relax into the hands of God to be used by Him.

There are some things that should not be revived. Among these are family feuds, church disputes, and, if you will understand my meaning, over-zealous emotional religion. By the latter is meant that type of religion that depends upon swing music, exciting stories, and loud and long prayers for its life. Those who come into the church under this sort of hypnotism in the name of religion are likely to need conversion at the next revival. In fact, it too often happens that a revival is simply the bringing back of those who moved to the front under some emotional appeal at the last revival. Why not honestly think through the experiences of your church before you sit down and write the editor your heated opinion of this article and demand that he discontinue your subscription? You might even be surprised at just what you do really mean when you speak of a revival.

If the revival you think of and plan for means the stimulation of your own soul and the souls of others in the Church as you worship God, prayer for yourselves and the lost, and work for the redemption of the community and the world, then such a revival is worthy of your best effort. And may the God of all grace (graciousness) bless you as you join heart to heart with your fellow-churchmen in such a heart-warming that will set you aflame for right in all areas of life and in all of the earth.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" That is a great question. One answer is: become a Christian. How may I become a Christian? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." That was the answer of Paul and Silas. It is the answer of Gospel preachers today. But there are some steps to this saving faith which should be carefully considered. Let us consider them briefly.

Every one who desires to become a Christian must begin with a faith in the existence of a personal God. No human eye has seen God. No infinite mind can comprehend Him. But the heart can believe the evidences of His existence which are daily submitted to the mind. And having accepted this great truth it naturally follows that God, the Creator, the Father, is also the Author of the moral and spiritual laws operative in the society of mankind. When a person discovers these laws he finds that he has broken them. His conscience verifies the condemnation of the Word of God. He realizes that he is a sinner. "Sin, when it is finished (full-grown) bringeth forth death." The discovery of sin follows the discovery of God.

At this point conviction of sin becomes the bitter experience of every seeking soul. There is no escape from this verdict at the bar of God. Under the power of the Holy Spirit and the Word of God the sense of personal guilt is intensified. There is hope for every one who deeply realizes the inevitable penalty of personal sin. Pilate may wash his hands but they are not clean. The red blood stains haunt the guilty murderer. "Guilty or not guilty?" is the question of the court. "Guilty"—is the reply of the soul.

Shall the guilty be punished or saved? "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Repentance, godly sorrow for sin, is the hope of one under condemnation. This is another step in the direction of salvation from sin. It is a great privilege to repent. It breaks the heart, but it mends the bruised and broken soul. Tears of penitence freely flow and the broken heart finds relief after the storm.

Faith in Jesus Christ, as a personal Savior, is one of the essentials in the plan of salvation. It satisfies the soul of man and the demands of a righteous God. It is glorious news that every one, who desires to enter into the joys of the Christian life, may come without money and without price. Money cannot buy faith, for it is a priceless treasure and possession. Jesus Christ is able to save unto the uttermost all who come unto God by Him. Acceptance of His mercy by faith, is the high privilege of penitent believers.

Faith brings justification before God. "The just shall live by faith." "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Justification is something that God does for a penitent, who has no merit to commend him. This is a part of God's work in the redemption of fallen man. No man can justify his sin, and faith in Jesus is his only hope of being justified by God.

Regeneration, a new life within, is the redemptive work of God in man. Jesus said to Nicodemus: "Ye must be born again." The new birth comes by an act of Divine Grace. Man can reform, that is, he can change his conduct; but he cannot change his heart. Only God can do that miraculous work. He is calling lost sinners to come to Him that they may have new life.

THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The Board of Christian Education is endeavoring to do a good job. It is doing about as well as could be expected with available resources. There is a tremendous amount of work to be done in the field of religious education work that would be profitable and enduring. The lack of funds often times hinders progress, even in the work of the Kingdom. Paul said, "I can do all things through Him who strengtheneth me." This is eternally true, but where funds are necessary for certain achievements, it often takes longer to get them done than it should.

At present our Board is putting all of its resources into the work done by and through our Promotional Secretary. Funds are insufficient to carry our share of this undertaking. Money received for this year's work has about been exhausted. We have barely enough to meet the requirements for the month of May. Our only sources of income are conference apportionments and Sunday School Conventions. If we could realize the full amount apportioned to the churches for the Board of Christian Education, this together with contributions from the Sunday schools through their Conventions would be sufficient to meet our obligations and make our program for the church a bit more thorough and inclusive.

For 1937-38 the Board received about fifty per cent of its apportionments. This makes it necessary to appeal to the churches to make advance payments on 1938-39 apportionments; that is, if your church has on hand or can raise money to send to the Board now, you will receive credit on your 1938-39 apportionments. This will be borrowing against future assets. If we cannot secure funds from this source, it will be necessary either to borrow money or to halt our program entirely.

During the month of June all Sunday schools are asked to observe Children's Day. A program has been prepared by the office of the Promotional Secretary and distributed to our Sunday schools for this purpose. You are asked to observe Children's Day and receive an offering for the Board of Christian Education. Please forward this offering to the writer at your earliest convenience. Your cooperation will not only be greatly appreciated but will be of effective assistance in carrying out the church's program. May we hear from your Sunday school?

“Every Person Can Be An Assistant to God”

By DR. R. C. HELFENSTEIN.

The Old Testament lays great emphasis on the help which is available for mankind from the Lord, little reference being made to the human equation by the Lord. Jesus and His disciples gave a new emphasis on the need which God has of human help. Throughout the New Testament, we find the idea that God depends upon men and women like ourselves to be assistants to Him. God has no other minds but human minds to think His thoughts, no other hearts but human hearts to be motivated by His love, no other lips but human lips to speak His truths, no other hands but human hands to do His work. God depends upon us as definitely as we depend upon Him. Neither can get along without the other.

It is a great privilege to be an assistant to some great official in public life, or to some great leader in church or civic life. Think of the privilege of being an assistant to God Himself! That is the privilege that God offers to everyone of us. He wants men and women to be His fellow helpers in promoting the truth. How sadly the world needs to know the truth about human life, the truth about God, the truth about our obligations to God, the truth about the Bible, the truth about our responsibilities to our day and generation and to the generations yet unborn.

As disciples of Jesus, we are committed to the proposition of finding the truth at any price, because we have the responsibility of being God's assistants in the interest of discovering and promoting truth.

The highest privilege which life affords us that of being an assistant to God in opposing the wrong and in promoting the right. Society is divided into three classes—those who abhor evil and seek the good; those who despise the good and seek the evil; and those who assume an attitude of absolute indifference to either. No language is adequate to express the baseness of the ingratitude of those who refuse to assist God in opposing the wrong and promoting the good. Cooperation with God in this, His supreme concern, is the least one can do in appreciation of life.

Jesus, as “God's First Assistant” in the long ago, went about his homeland seeking to enlist others to follow him in helping God to realize a better world for their generation and the generation to follow. The men and women who responded to the call of Jesus and followed him as assistants to God made their names and deeds immortal in the records of the ages. Those who refused to accept Christ's invitation went away sorrowful and their lives have long since been forgotten.

Jesus of Galilee, the risen Christ, is still passing by. He is calling to men and women today to join with him in helping God, his Heavenly Father and our Heavenly Father, to realize a world freed from injustice, from crime and sin—world freed from war and the fear of war—a world characterized by brotherhood, good-will and peace for all mankind. For the sake of our children and of all youth, every man and woman ought to accept Christ's invitation to become “an assistant to God” in this divine task.

TODAY.

Fifteen minutes with the morning paper. Another fifteen in the flower garden. Breakfast. Thirty minutes with a devotional study of Matthew 18:1-6, and a daily page in my book of daily devotions, then an hour and a half of study, followed by thirty minutes of planning of next Sunday's two worship services.

At this point my friend, Dr. I. W. Johnson, paid me a very pleasant call in my study. That is always a joy. I do not know of a faster and finer sermonic mind than his. “What will you preach on Sunday?” And I read Matthew 18:1-6, telling him I wanted to give encouragement and strength in my morning message to our Sunday school. I told him I would talk on the church teaching the child. He listened respectfully and remarked: “Different minds work in different ways; I would call that the child teaching the church. Those disciples were not teaching the child; through Jesus the child was teaching them the gateway to the Kingdom of heaven.” Dr. Johnson is really a great sermonizer. Valedictorian of his class in college, he has always been a clear thinker. One of the joys of my experience in Suffolk has been his friendship. For forty years he has given the highest type of pastoral leadership to the churches of his pastorate.

Out of the study at noon to call on the sick. Lunch. A bit of rest. And to see a number of high school boys and girls about their part in Sunday's programs. Then a pastoral call that won a new member. Another call on a man who has been sick for several years, and who waits eagerly, he tells me, for my visits. From there to see a woman above eighty, bed-fast and blind, who calls out from her bed as I enter. I know that voice, and I'm glad to hear it. I wish I could call on her, and more than a score of others, each week, for they bless my soul, but I go sometimes several weeks without getting around to see them.

Back home. A peep into the garden. While there two men call, one begging for a pair of discarded shoes. He gets them. The “lady of the maunse” and I plant some pansies. A meeting with our boy scout troop. In for the night. A man at the door begging for something to eat. I gave him the food, and instead of returning to the book I was reading, I have written these lines.

During the first moments in my study this morning, I set free a mother bird which had imprisoned herself by dropping down the chimney. Perhaps the Heavenly Father has helped me to open the window of the soul for some man or woman, or boy or girl today. At least my own spirit sings in these commonplace efforts.

It is a duty he owes the Church, the duty he owes to add his increment of spiritual energy to the healing and illuminating and converting power of worship,

Elon College Golden Anniversary

We have had a little better luck this week, but not as good as we had hoped for. We are reporting five additional memberships with three paid in cash. Three-fifths cash is fine if the total amount were just large enough.

Tomorrow the forty-ninth annual commencement of the college will be initiated. Before the week is over, we hope to have a large number of new members for our club. Just one year from now we hope and not without reason that the club will have three thousand members and the creditors of the college will have full and complete payment of all obligations. That will be a grand and glorious day, and happy will be every individual who has done his share—his full share—to make these ideals a reality.

The report for the week is as follows:

OFFERINGS FROM CHURCHES AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The total amount received on conference apportionments for 1938-39 continues to increase a bit every week. A larger number of Sunday schools are beginning to make fifth Sunday offerings to the college, and more of our churches are making advanced payments on their apportionments. These facts are encouraging and helpful. Contributions at this season of the year mean a great deal to us in our determination to pay for what we get as we get it and balance our current budget at stated periods throughout the year. I am sure that the church at large appreciates the fact that we are endeavoring to live within our income. Often times this is difficult and the work is compelled to suffer. We cannot do what we should do for the lack of funds. However, we feel that it is a good policy to be paying our debts rather than creating new ones. Every time you make a contribution to the college, you make one to a worthy cause, one that endures, and one that shall continue to endure because of your assistance.

NEWS FROM THE HILLS.

This is my second time to write from the mountains. I would like to tell you about an old lady, ninety-three years of age, who came to church Sunday at Elk Spur. She climbed four miles of mountains in order to attend this service. She brought her crippled granddaughter with her. They arrived about eight o'clock for the service which began at ten.

Mr. Walker and Mr. Pitts, from the Shallow Ford Church attended all three services Sunday. Mr. Walker was deeply impressed by the attendance at Ivy Hill.

Stones are being spread on the Sky-line Drive. This means that Mr. Earp will not get stuck going to Ivy Hill any more.

Miss Orine Tate was the new member received at the Rocky Ford Church. She was given the hand of fellowship by the members of the church.

Mr. Walker showed pictures of our work in China and of the Christian Orphanage. These pictures were sent out by our General Board.

Mr. Walker made pictures of the deacons' homes in these mountains. Our pastor distributed books and pamphlets to be read and returned in two weeks.

After the picture of China had been shown on Sunday night, Mr. Earp wore a smile as he shook hands with the two hundred people who were present.

We people in the hills appreciate very much what you people of THE SUN family and our Mission Board do for us. We are always glad to have you pay us a visit.

NEWS AND VIEWS

NEWS FROM WINCHESTER.

Not long ago our Winchester (Va.) Church purchased a house and lot adjoining the church property for the sum of $1,205.00. The Ladies' Aid Society paid $405.00 and began immediately to work for money with which to pay the remainder. In a letter from the pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten, the following paragraphs are of interest:

"In addition to the substantial contribution of $405.00 on the new lot, the Ladies Aid Society since October 1, 1936, has paid $1,200.00 on the parsonage debt, spent a considerable sum in improvements to the parsonage, such as papering, painting and new steps to the stairway, raised about $140.00 with which they paid for and installed a high grade carpet for the pulpit and choir platform, and sponsored the campaign to purchase new hymnals for the church.

"Within the same period the church has removed the old worn carpet from the floor, having the beginners and primary department floor covered with inlaid linoleum and the remainder of the floors—including the main auditorium—sanded, varnished, and runners placed in the aisles, all at a total cost of about three hundred dollars and paid when the work was done.

"At a special business session of the church it was voted to tear down the old building now standing on the lot recently acquired, after the church gets possession about June 1. This will very greatly add to the appearance of our beautiful church building and everyone is rejoicing that this is to be done. The church voted to sell the parsonage and the trustees are offering this property for sale. It is the hope of the entire membership that this can be accomplished and a new parsonage built on the west side of the church.

"We badly need Sunday school rooms, recreational hall, and other conveniences, and we are hoping and working to the end that one day our dreams shall come true.

"The last gift to the church, made on Easter Sunday morning, was a lovely Bible marker for the pulpit Bible and a lecturn scarf, which were presented by the Intermediate Department of the Sunday school. These boys and girls earned the money after school hours for the beautiful and useful gift."

HAPPY HOME, RUFFIN, N. C.

Yesterday I went to church. I love my church and Sunday school. Our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, spoke at the Memorial Service on "Memories." This has been a custom in our church for many years. Always it is a special day; but never do I remember a more beautiful and inspirational Memorial Service at Happy Home.

Last night the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Greensboro Church had charge of the church service. These people have a worthwhile message. We are grateful to them for their visit to us.

Happy Home Church is growing both in numbers and in things accomplished. Recently shrubs and concrete walks have been placed on the grounds. An effort is being made to finish the floors and to get new pews.

Our pastor is a student at Duke University. His presence among us has caused us to discover that there is a task to do and to realize our responsibility.

The revival starts on July 10. We are looking forward to having the pastor's mother with us to help in the work of a Bible School.

Rev. Mr. Andes is a young man, but he is "about his Father's business." We feel that our church is growing much better because he is passing this way.

LIBERTY, VIRGINIA.

Liberty, Va., Church is fifty miles south of Lynchburg, and was organized by the present pastor in 1910. The building was erected in 1911, consisting of one auditorium seating two hundred. It has recently been remodeled by changing the roof covering to galvanized tin, adding four Sunday school classrooms, and painting the entire building on the outside. The entire cost was twelve hundred dollars. The grounds surrounding the building have also been considerably improved.

This community is composed of small farmers. Never have I known people to be more united and interested in improving their church property. Much of the work was done by the members, some giving several week's labor. Brother Burnette Bray, chairman of the committee on improvements, and his helpers are to be commended. The church has a lively Sunday school, Christian Endeavor, and woman's missionary society. The membership has increased from sixteen to about two hundred.

CAMPS, CONFERENCES, SCHOOLS FOR LEADERSHIP EDUCATION IN THE SOUTHEAST.

PURPOSE.

Effective leaders must be trained. In these days church people need to be leaders. This means that church people should be trained. Many of them cannot attend college or university and have to be content with short courses. The church is undertaking to fulfill this need and give an opportunity for study to all who want it.

In the Southeast, Congregational and Christian Church people have a wide variety of opportunities. Training schools, conferences, or camps are within the reach of all. It is the hope of those who invest time and money in this work that leaders from every church will enlist in the schools and take training, so they may do a better service wherever the Lord may want to use them.

A partial list of such events follows. Further information will be given from time to time.

The Rev. F. E. Hyde, former president of the E. N. C. Conference, who is now the pastor at Cortland, N. Y., seems to have been busy since going to his new home. Thirty-three new members have been received since February, six memorial windows dedicated, a flower garden planted by the church, and new hymn books purchased. His friends hereabouts will wish for him continued success.

IN THE NAME OF RELIGION.

Let one with zeal, or deep seated prejudice, start out with any dogma, or doctrine, and he is sure to have followers. While there is in our day, as stated in this column previously, a definite trend in the direction of church union (the uniting of real Christian forces to combat a world of sin), there is at the same time an increasing number of cults, divisions and schisms clamoring for hearing and all of them enlisting followers and adherents. Recently, according to reports in the daily press, the Mormons, "Latter Day Saints," are gaining a foothold and numbers and were holding a State Convention of various districts in which this church (?) had gained a footing and a following. Many complimentary things have appeared in the papers from about the membership of this cult. Possibly CHRISTIAN SUN readers noted accounts of this State Convention of Mormons and would appreciate some actual facts about this church and its doctrine. On this account we give to our readers a statement from The Missionary Review of the World for April, the facts of which, of course, can be verified by any who may desire. The Review article, titled "Why Work Among Mormons" is as follows:

"Recently a contributor to Westminster College in Utah wrote Hans P. Freece, a representative of this College, and a former Mormon: 'As Mormons no longer practice polygamy, and we are led to believe they are highly educated, with a great deal of culture and refinement, just what is the purpose of missionary work among them?' To which Mr. Freece replies: 'It is true that polygamy is not now openly practiced, but Mormons say the Lord has only suspended it for the time being and that He will restore it in His own time. God Himself has many wives, they say, and polygamy is practiced in heaven.'

"'Refinement and culture' are below the average in Utah. Some better class Mormons send their young people to Westminster College to get 'refinement and culture'; also, high scholastic attainments. Mormons do not know God nor trust in Jesus Christ, and Christian workers are needed in Utah for the same reason they are needed in China, India and Africa."

These facts seem revolting enough in themselves for any right thinking people who desire to know and worship the true and living God and Jesus Christ His Son, whom He sent into the world to redeem the world. We repeat that any dogma, or doctrine, seemingly which is taught in the name of religion can get some following in our day. On this account it behooves the true followers of Christ to seek with more zeal to live the life of humility and service that He lived and to be guided by His teaching and His example.

The Annual (Easter) Offering for missions from churches are still coming in and some Sunday schools are being added to the growing list of those taking the monthly offering, for all of which we are profoundly grateful. Our Richmond church, itself struggling toward becoming self-supporting, gives a splendid example in its liberality in sharing with others. The Ancient Greek philosophy was "Know thyself." The Romans said, "Control thyself." The Christian philosophy, given by Christ Himself, is "Deny thyself." As we deny ourselves for His sake we enter into the fellowship of that philosophy and teaching that is to save mankind.

THE POWER OF THE GOSPEL.

How the Word of God under Varied Conditions Changes the Lives of Individuals and Builds Up Groups of Believers in Manchukuo (Manchuria).

I have yet to find during observation and experiences of nearly thirty years of missionary work here in the Far East and travels in other lands a single missionary in evangelistic work who has been, or is, discouraged. Rather are we much encouraged. And were God's people in the homelands able to see what we see, hear what we hear and feel what we feel, funds needed from abroad would not be lacking.

Taking the missionary's hand with a warm grasp in both of his, with real earnestness and feeling, the leading man in the village, a stalwart Chinese of forty years, said: "Pastor, we have been looking forward for days to your visit!" He and others were waiting in the cold outside the village to receive us, for two men on horseback had passed our cart and carried news ahead. Others were awaiting us in the house and hastened out into the yard with expressions of welcome when they heard the cart's approach on the frozen yard and the happy voices of those traveling with us.

Until a few years ago large numbers of Chinese Christians met us in the same spirit at the railway stations here in Manchuria, but to avoid abuse and intimidation they do this no more, for policing of the railways is now in different hands. But in their hearts there is the same appreciation and, we believe, a better understanding among the non-Christians as to our purpose and work.

Our first visit to this village, ten miles out from an outstation on the railway, was three years ago, along with a lay evangelist. On account of banditry the landowners had to flee to the railway for protection, while many of their homes were looted and burned. Among these was Mr. Hwa, the most influential, to whom was presented a Bible by a Christian while he was patiently waiting at Anganghsi for better days. It was then, during days of adversity and a realization of man's depravity and injustice, that he became a Christian. Later we had the pleasure of baptizing him and other members of his family.

Mr. Hwa is one of those who show real appreciation of the missionary and his message and an understanding of what it has meant for us to leave homeland, parents and others that he and his might have salvation, and deep gratification for Christ's great sacrifice. Such Christians always make rapid progress. On the cart with Evangelist Ku and myself were a dear old man, his daughter-in-law, his son's daughter and three small children. They had come from a distant place to join others in the opening up of uncultivated land belonging to Mr. Hwa, and had never before heard the unsearchable riches of Christ. Bumping of the heavy wheels on the rough frozen road, with only a thin layer of straw between us and the floor of the heavy springless cart was hard on the women and children. These people were so impressed with our concern for their comfort and saving the children from frozen feet, ears and hands by sharing our bedding with them that they not only heard the Word willingly but with great reluctance saw us leave the village of their adoption.

On our first visit to Peitachiai more than fifty men and women enrolled as esquires. Some did so because of Mr. Hwa, the head of the village. Among these was a man who tore down his private heathen temple. But soon afterwards a cow died. Later members of his family became ill. He was frightened, and hastened to Anganghsi, where he was told by a soothsayer that he had offended the idols, foxes and other animals whom he had formerly worshipped. He was told to warn the people against becoming Christians, to rebuild the temple and restore worship of the animals which are supposed to embody the spirits of devils. By the time he did this his family had recovered from their sickness.

This gave a setback to the gospel, others also turning in fear to their old gods. But recently Miss Liu, the Bible woman, and Mr. Cheng, the lay evangelist, held ten days of meetings in the villages. The Christians were enabled to see the Truth in a better light and to find just where they stood. It seemed a fitting time for Evangelist Ku and the missionary to make a visit. I wanted especially to help them get a reading class started, using a primer of one thousand characters which makes possible reading of the New Testament. Regular weekly worship was organized, to be held in the Hwa home, and the reading class enthusiastically instituted, fourteen enrolling, Mr. Hwa teaching this six nights in the week. The roll of inquirers was revised. There are now forty-two who give evidence of being born again. These are to be prepared for baptism. They have now been formed into a regular organized group, and later will grow into a church with their own place of meeting.

Thus the work begins and develops at these places, each in a different way, but ultimately to the same end. The genuine love and appreciation of these people at such places is an inspiration. We are made to feel so unworthy, and yet so grateful, as the children crowd around to hold our hands, to ask that we prolong our visit, and the older people expressing a desire to do anything in their power for us. It was possible to be there only two days and three nights. On the last night the meeting continued until long after twelve o'clock. As the babies went to sleep the mothers put them down upon the hard, warm brick "kang," covered with a thin, hard mat, but the boys and girls remained on wide awake until 12:30.

At another place, Tontzan, visited on our way back to the railway, we advised with the group of some twenty Christians there regarding the building of a place of worship this spring. An earnest Christian has given for this a most desirable large lot in the center of the little town. At this place a reading class was also organized, twelve enquirers who cannot read enrolling for this. A Mr. Wang (King), who gave the lot, will teach the class. This work is largely the outgrowth of the Anganghsi Church, members of this group going to Tontzan, six miles distant, on their bicycles Sunday afternoons to preach.

At an important city, Antachan, one of our outstations, we responded to a request to assist them in selection and purchase of better buildings to be used as a church and evangelistic center. This, a leading soya bean center, has gone down commercially in recent years, but business has now improved since the advance in the price of grain. The Lord's work there is also going forward.

The writer is fond of hunting and fishing, but finds little time for this. Besides, usually where there is good fishing or hunting bandits are too plentiful. I have, however, bagged several wild boar and deer during these fifteen years here in Northern Manchuria, and have caught beautiful trout and big land-locked salmon. Our most famous game is the savage, well-known Manchurian tiger. Of the smaller game the Manchurian pheasant is the best known. We have bagged a number of these, but never a bustard, the large, brown bird, as large as the American wild turkey, well-known in Europe, and considered "big game" because of its size. These wonderful big birds now feed on soya beans in this part of the world, and

MT. OLIVET (R) PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

Members of the Pilgrim Fellowship of Mt. Olivet (R) Church were divided into two groups to contest for the largest sum of money raised to send delegates to the Elon Leadership Training School. The winning side will be entertained by the losing side. The group of which Miss Margaretta Hammer is chairman has been named "Go-Getters." On May 19 they held a Mothers, Fathers, and Friends Banquet, which was attended by over sixty guests. Our pastor, Rev. M. W. Mann was the toastmaster; Rev. W. H. Smith of the Elkton U. B. Church gave the invocation; the welcome was given by Miss Irene Hensley; recitation by Miss Ruth Strickler; Roll Call of Fellowship members by the secretary, Miss Fern Hensley. The guest speaker for the evening was Rev. R. D. Coulter of New Market, a former pastor of the church. Music was furnished by Misses Ruth and Ruby Harlow of McGaheysville. The other group led by Miss Frances Michael will hold a social on the lawn of the church June 3, 1939. Here's hoping for their success.

EURE.

The young people of the Eure Christian Church of Gates County, N. C., are doing a splendid piece of work in the young people's missionary society. Miss Louise Eure is the efficient superintendent and sponsor of the society and is proving to be a helpful guide to the youth of this community. They have a membership of fifty and the attendance at the regular monthly meetings has been more than fifty per cent. They have met all requirements on the Standard of Excellence and the goal for foreign missions is $16.00 per year.

The officers for the year are as follows: Miss Barsha Howell, president; Mrs. Clarence Eure, secretary; Mr. Curtis Green treasurer.

Dr. Rexford Raymond, Sunbury, N. C., is the pastor of Eure Church and lends his support and aid to this fine group which in turn is a strength to him and the church. Many acts of kindness are done in the community and through these, the members are kept busy for others.

The best monument that a child can raise to her mother's memory is that of a clean, upright life such as she would have rejoiced to see her daughter live.

FINDING MY PLACE OF CHRISTIAN SERVICE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JUNE 11, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: Isa. 6:8; Matt. 4:18-20.

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Call to Service—Exodus 3:9-12.

Tuesday—Called to Special Duty—Judges—6:11-16.

Wednesday—Faithfulness of Christ (prophetic)—Psalm 40:7-10.

Thursday—Peter's Commission—John 21:15-19.

Friday—Each in His Own Place—John 3:22-30.

Saturday—A Question of Submission—Acts 9:1-6.

The summer is a good time for young people to think seriously about their future and make important decisions. The summer is a time of change of occupation and for varied interests.

Some will attend summer conferences and conventions. They should grasp the opportunities offered there for studying vocations, and for trying various kinds of Christian service.

Others will have leisure time at home. They should contact local agencies which offer them the help and counsel they need—libraries, summer schools, and the like.

When young people make plans for the future, it is important to seek vocations in which they will be able to work out the principles of their religion. They should give a large part of themselves to the church regardless of their calling. The church needs strong men and women in her service.

Someone should make a strong appeal for decisions for full-time Christian service. More young people need to consider this as a life work.

Let another speak on the opportunities in the church lay-leaders to render Christian service.

For Discussion—

1. Is the field for Christian service over crowded?

2. Why do we not have more decisions among young people for full-time Christian service?

3. Has the church placed enough stress on the "opportunities for Christian service?"

4. Do we look at Christian service as a work which may or may not be of vital importance?

Suggested Hymns—

"Day Is Dying in the West."

"Jesus Calls Us."

"A Charge to Keep I Have."

REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

PAUL PLEADS HIS OWN CASE.

LESSON X—JUNE 4, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: I have lived before God in all good conscience until this day.—Acts 23:1.

LESSON: Acts 21:27-23:11.

One hardly knows how to go about writing comments on a Sunday school lesson that covers nearly six chapters of the most thrilling events in a great man's life. The best that the writer of these Notes, and the teacher of this lesson can do, is to touch the "high spots."

A Costly Compromise.

The trouble really started in a compromise which Paul made as a concession to Jewish prejudices. Because false reports had been brought back to Jerusalem about Paul's work in other places, James and the elders suggested that Paul might take upon himself a vow and enter into a period of "purification" designed to soothe the feelings of his critics. Paul obligingly did this, at no small expense to himself, and with what turned out to be a immense amount of trouble. For when he was seen in the temple later, he was falsely charged with having taken into the temple a Gentile, Trophimus and Ephesian. And things began to happen thick and fast.

It is interesting to note that much of the trouble was due to a false supposition on the part of the Jews. "They supposed" Paul had taken Trophimus into the temple. How much of the world woe and how much of heartaches and heartbreaks of people are caused by people supposing things that are not true.

A Religious Riot.

A riot broke out within the precincts of the Temple area. The aroused Jews laid hold of Paul and were about to tear him to pieces. In fact they probably would have done him to death right then and there if the Roman guard had not rescued him. People in a mob will do things that they would not dare to do as individuals. A lynching is an instance in point. And perhaps of all the things that arouse the passions of people are the religious factors. Witness the unrest and the bitterness and the fighting in the Holy Land.

A Personal Testimony.

Paul was given an opportunity by the captain to speak for himself. Standing on the stairs or the steps of the castle, and speaking in his native

Hebrew tongue he made his defense, which was really the giving of a personal testimony. He tells how he himself was a Jew, brought up after the strictest sect of the Jews, and trained in Jerusalem itself under a great Jewish teacher. He reminds his hearers of his great zeal for the ancient faith, calling the priests themselves to witness to his zeal in persecuting "those of the way" even unto death. He tells how when on an errand of persecution he was brought face to face with Christ and how in Him he had found a new meaning to religion and to life, and how he had set out on a new career as an apostle. He mentions, undoubtedly with great humiliation how he had given consent to Stephens death, and how in a moment of uncertainty, and perhaps of discouragement, there had come a vision that made it clear that he was to go to the Gentiles. It is a great testimony, an epitome in a sense of Paul's religious career, and it ought to be read carefully and prayerfully. It must have been tremendously effective to hear Paul give it.

A Narrow Sectarianism.

The people listened attentively until Paul said that God had ordained him to go to the Gentiles. But they could not stand that. To think that God would send his gospel to the Gentiles! The idea of such a thing. "Away with such a fellow from the earth; for it is not fit that he should live" they said. Evidently the folks who do not believe in foreign missions have some ancestors. There are those today who do not believe in missions, who believe that God wants them to have the gospel, but that He does not care about the heathen. These folks of that far-away day have had a large number of descendants who persist until this modern day.

An Appeal to Partisanship.

Perhaps Paul should not have done it. But it was a shrewd and clever thing to do. Again he was called upon to defend himself and to give an account of his work. This time he was before the "Council" or the Sanhedrin, the supreme religious court of the Jewish nation. Quickly discerning that for the most part the council was made up of Pharisees and Sadducees, and knowing that the former believed in angels and spirit, while the latter believed in neither, he made capital of this point, and soon had these staid, dignified, ossified religious stalwarts figuratively going at each others throats. How Paul must have chuckled to himself when he saw these old fellows getting heated up and scrapping like school boys. The thing became so serious that again the chief captain was forced to intervene and put Paul in the castle for safe keeping.

An Assurance of Divine Help.

When the going was roughest, God did not leave himself without witness. On that very night the Lord stood by him and said "Be of good cheer, Paul; for as thou hast borne witness of me in Jerusalem so must thou bear witness also at Rome." Those who do God's will, will have God's help. They that are for us are more than they that be against us. He will never leave us nor forsake us.

On to Rome.

For years Paul had had a great ambition and a passion to go to Rome. And here was the assurance that he was to go to Rome. But how mysterious is the strange providence of God. When later he went to Rome he trudged into the city chained to a Roman soldier as a prisoner. But God can make all things to work together for good to those who love Him, to those who are called according to his purpose.

An Impassioned Appeal.

Paul gives another stirring personal testimony before Festus, and before Agrippa and Bernice, the king and queen respectively. Here again he tells of his conversion and of his ministry. And he tells it with such power of appeal that even this hard-headed, hard-hearted king confesses that almost he is persuaded to be a Christian. Folks will listen to our testimony about Christ if we have anything to say.

MORTALITY.

"Work while it is day for night cometh when no man can work."—John 9:4.

People die little by little all their lives it seems to me—

A little part cries out and dies away
A sudden hurt
A broken word
A breath that never should be heard
A little laugh that came awhile
And could not—
Could not—stay,
People die all their lives I think
And not in just a day.

TUESDAY.

GOD NOT FAR AWAY.

*"Ask and it shall be given you."
"If ye, being evil know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?"*—Luke 11:9, 13.

By the new equipment now being installed in hospitals a patient too weak to lift his arms may touch a button just at hand, and instantly four lights flash on—one in the office, one in the great hall, the two others in different parts of the building; and it is impossible for any one to turn them out until that call has been answered—that room visited.

Shall human skill and pity devise such things as these, and yet we question that our Heavenly Father has any system by which He can hear the cry of His children in need?

Prayer—O Lord, help us to live so close to Thee that we can talk to Thee at any time and feel Thy answering presence. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

APPRECIATION AND ENCOURAGEMENT.

"Were there not ten cleansed? But where are the nine?"—Luke 17:17.

Of the ten lepers whom Jesus cleansed only one returned to show his appreciation. Where were the nine? Is it possible that the others were not grateful? They must have been, in a way, and yet they did not show it.

Expression of appreciation is said to be a rare virtue. All of us are apt to take things as a matter of course. Count your blessings, count your loved ones; count your friends; count the good things and the kindnesses done to you. How oft have you returned thanks? It must seem strange to God that we keep on asking for more and never return thanks.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou hast been good to us. We are sinners in ingratitude. Forgive us. Make us grateful children all along the way. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BETTER THAN SAVAGES.

"And in process of time it came to pass that Cain brought . . . an offering. . . . And Abel, he also brought . . ."—Gen. 4:3, 4.

Adam and Eve taught their children tribute due the Maker. We are told that this is a rightful ceremony and custom of savages from earliest times; and woe unto him who failed to pay the proper tribute.

God remonstrated with Cain not because he failed to make an offering; but because of the quality of that offering. It was a spirit of "Any old thing will do." It was a case of not doing well. "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted." Shall we do better than savages?

Prayer—Our Father, teach us through the spirit of Thy Son how to give cheerfully and gladly what savages did readily through fear. In Jesus name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE RAINBOW ON THY FACE.

"Rejoice at all times."—I Thess. 5:16.

We are told of a little lad attending a motion picture with his mother, suddenly turned to her and said: "I have both laughed and cried over this picture, was there a rainbow on my face?"

Another lad upon being reprovved for laughing in school replied by saying. "I was just smiling and it busted."

The Christian soul is a shining soul, and the glow shines on midst the mixture of sorrows and smiles. Since God keeps us, what can affright us? Let us be overcomers, and because of His Indwelling Presence, shed joy as roses shed fragrance.

Prayer—Oh Our Father, saturate our spirits with perennial good cheer—the good cheer of Christ, of Christianity, and of God. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WE SING.

"How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?"—Ps. 137:4.

Three Sundays ago, while in Shanghai, China, it was our privilege and pleasure to sing a concert to an audience of over fifteen hundred people, at the Metropole Theatre. Nearly every nationality on the globe was represented there, and yet there was not one who did not understand the English. Despite the strangeness of the situation, we sang the Lord's songs to them. All nature seemed to sing, and round us rang the music of spheres. God was very near and there was a sense of His power. Let us sing now and always the songs of Zion.

Prayer—O Lord, truly all Thy works praise Thee. We confess that we are often grouchy and there is no song in our souls. But Thou dost take all this away. Do, Lord, and we will sing forever. Amen.

THE INCOMPARABLE PERSON: JESUS CHRIST.

By DR. ELISHA A. KING.

"This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."—Matthew 3:17; also Matthew 17:5.

I am not concerned today with Jesus' birth, nor with the prophecies announcing his coming, nor with the land He lived in, nor with any special part of his words or deeds. My interest centered upon His Person as revealed in the Scriptures and as noted in the light of His unparalleled influence in the world.

It would be easy enough to fill the hour with estimates of the character of Jesus from the pens of countless scholars, historians, and poets. This I do not wish to do because all my life I have read the story of Jesus in the Gospels and have studied that story word by word and phrase. I have read many lives of Jesus by friend and by foe, but best of all I gave myself to Him when I was a boy and have ever been glad of the decision.

After these many years I had the privilege of seeing the land where Jesus lived and I walked the streets of Bethlehem and Nazareth and if Jerusalem and I felt much as Richard Watson Gilder felt when he wrote:

This is the earth He walked on; not alone
That Asian country keeps the sacred stain;
Ah, not alone the far Judean plain,
Mountain and river! Lo, the sun that shone
On Him, shines now on us; when day is gone
The moon of Galilee comes forth again
And lights our path as His; an endless chain
Of years and sorrows makes the round world one.

The air we breathe, He breathed—the very air
That took the mold and music of His high
And godlike speech.

The effect of my visit to the Holy Land was a confirmation of my faith. I now know that the outlines of the Bible are true to fact, I discovered what many others have done, that the land fits the Bible and the Bible fits the land. It does not take much imagination to see Jesus in His own country living as the Gospels say. Thus it is, the historical Jesus is real to me.

The life of Jesus, the Christ, is so interwoven with the pages of the whole Bible that one should look upon the book as the golden casket in which is enshrined the precious life of Jesus. Turn back the pages to the early chapters and you will read the sublime story of creation. The Creator characterized it as being very good. And when man, made a little less than divine (in the very image of God) appeared, the Scripture says, "And God saw all that He had made and very good it was."

We are all quite familiar with the story of man's first disobedience and sin, sorrow and confusion that followed. We have read, I doubt not, the story of man's miserable condition in those early strivings, but I wonder if we have all read with understanding what God is accredited with saying regarding it. "When the Eternal saw that the wickedness of man on earth was great, and that man's mind was never bent on anything but evil, the Eternal was sorry that He had ever made man on earth; it was a grief to Him." So the Eternal said, "I will blot him off the earth, this man that I have formed—man and beast and reptile and bird; I am sorry that I ever made them."—(Gen. 6:5-8.)

These seem to me to be the saddest words ever spoken by God or man! But the whole Bible seems to be concerned with them, for the Bible is the record of how God went to work almost immediately to redeem man and endow him with eternal life. In brief, Abraham was the progenitor of the numerous race that Moses sought to train into national consciousness. The Prophets of Jehovah sought to warn, to plead and to inspire this growing nation through whom, after all, the world was to be blessed.

Isaiah sought to develop the idea of spiritual worship, Jeremiah taught the meaning of personal responsibility. Amos, the layman prophet, scolds, and Hosea, that lovely spirit, pleads with man in the name of God. He represents God as greatly moved to compassion and pleads earnestly with the sin-weary people to return to Him.—(Hos. 11:8, 9.) The Old Testament is the story of how God disciplined His chosen people, of how He plead with them, of His efforts for their salvation. It is the parable of the Vineyard over again (Matt. 21:33-46) and the New Testament is the sending of the Father's beloved Son to make one more final appeal to sinful man to return to God and to his better self. So Jesus is born into a world that is sick and sorrowful unto death, sick of its sins and sorrowful for its futility. Thus we see Jesus a part of the world movement emanating from God and culminating in man's redemption.

Now we ask, On what do we base our claim that Jesus is the Incomparable Person?

I. He Was Incomparable in His Character.

The divinity of Jesus rests upon what He was, what He said, and what He did. A philosopher once said there are three steps to character, viz.: acts, habits and character itself. Character may be good or bad according to one's acts that grow into habits, for habits finally produce what man is or becomes. In Jesus we see a consistent series of acts growing from youth into habits of manhood and making a whole that is as perfect as any of us can comprehend. In Him we see certain ideal elements which mark His supremacy among men.

He was, first of all perhaps, a perfect gentleman—not by study or imitation, but by inner, innate quality. Jesus was never boorish, rude, needlessly contentious. All that is reported of Him shows nothing wrong in His social contacts. This was not due entirely to home training; it was an inner quality of souls which found outward expression in life.

II. He Had An Innate Sincerity.

He was not crafty, or artful, and yet no one was able to deceive Him or best Him. He was so frank and open-minded that He outwitted all who sought to entangle Him. He gave His opponents full credit and played fair with them. He was inherently sincere. Sincerity is a quality of character that gives men strength and power. The insincere man is to be dreaded and shunned. Insincerity is a sort of theatrical quality that causes men to pose, to pretend for the sake of gaining an end. In reality it vitiates life, disfigures the soul, and makes men contemptible. Sincerity is one of the first foundation stones of a perfect character. Sincerity makes men dependable, always loyal, and constant.

III. He Had An Innate Nobility.

My friend, Dr. J. D. Kuykendall, once wrote these words about nobility of Jesus.

"There was something great, something stupendous about Him. He was sure of Himself. He gave the impression of power. He had a regal bearing. No one could overlook Him. Among the poor of earth He stood forth as the symbol of healing and help. Among the great earth He spoke with compelling authority. He needed no royal name or title and yet He accepted kingship as His right—the kingship of noble character. He

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The orphanage children are now enjoying strawberry short cake. The berries have been ripe for more than a week. Our patch of strawberries has made a good yield this spring and the children have had all they wanted to eat.

Our garden peas are also in full swing, and fresh peas right from the garden are greatly relished by our children. It won't be long now before we will have onions, beets, cabbage, and Irish potatoes right out of our own garden.

The seasons have been fine on gardens this spring and our vegetables are doing very nicely. We are always glad when we have plenty of vegetables for the children, for they enjoy them, and they are a healthy food.

We are also enjoying a good supply of good, wholesome sweet milk. We have the required amount of one quart per day for children—for those who will drink it. Some of them just don't want sweet milk to drink, but they get it in cooked food and on cereals.

Our farm boys have been very busy getting the corn planted and beans sowed. They are now making up ground and planting sweet potatoes. Then it will be time to plant the tomato crop, and that will about end the planting for this spring.

The wheat and oats are beginning to take on a golden shade and about the tenth of June harvest will be in full blast. Work on a farm never ceases. When one job is finished another confronts us.

We had a little boy who fell out of a small tree and broke his arm this week. I understand he was playing Tarzan and was jumping from limb to limb and failed to catch the limb. Boys will be boys. It is just nature for them to climb trees and throw rocks. Whoever saw one who didn't? But who would take that joy from him? They pass that period in life only once.

In Memoriam

KING.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Christian Church in Burlington, N. C., offer this tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. M. A. King, one of our most loyal and beloved members, who lived a long and useful life.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Burlington Christian Church has lost one whom they loved.
2. That we extend to the family our deepest sympathy.
3. That we strive to put Christ in our lives, following her example.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our records, that a copy be sent to the family, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

could not have made the impression on His age that He did, and He could not have come down the ages with so convincing a display of power, if there had not been born in Him true nobility, real greatness, and the self-assurance of one who thought greatly, felt greatly, and who consequently did greatly."

IV. Jesus Was Incomparable in His Teachings.

There is hardly any necessity of saying this because it is generally conceded by the world's best critics. Those who have tried to belittle Jesus have boldly attacked this statement. They say that what Jesus said was not new, not original, and they ransacked the writings of Confucius, Mohammed, Buddha, and other ancient teachers to prove their case. In answer, one great critical scholar said, "I do not ask whether in Jesus' faith and ethical system what He had to offer was new. Was it able to give something that could warm my heart and strengthen my life?—that is all I ask. What we ought to feel grateful to Jesus for is that He was destined for the first time to make the ideas take effect and influence the lives of mankind in general." Even admitting that others had given expression to some of the things Jesus said, it still remains true that He set forth the best of all other teachers in an appealing way that has never been surpassed. As a matter of fact, Jesus' teachings are admitted to be ideal and it is quite generally agreed that His way of life, set forth in His teachings, holds the key to the happy solution of the world's perplexing problems.

V. Jesus Was Incomparable in His Greatness.

Any one of us could name fifteen or twenty great men without any hesitation. We could tell also, what made them great. Great men are those who have achieved something worthwhile and have made a mark on the mind of the world. In the light of the above, what did Jesus achieve? Dr. Jefferson says, "Jesus never chiseled a statue, or painted a picture, or wrote a poem, or composed a piece of music, or published a book, or led an army, or controlled a senate, or framed a law, or made a discovery, or contrived an invention, or did any one of the things that have made the names of other men illustrious. Jesus never wore a crown or held a sceptre, and yet everybody calls Jesus great!"

The true greatness of Jesus was in His soul. He had insight, power, genius, a nature that distinguished Him from all others. The secret of greatness is incommunicable. It is hidden in the abysmal depths of personality. Other men may be great poets, inventors, and musicians; Jesus was a great Man. A great Soul! No matter how far back or how far down the critics go, they find a Crystal Christ. He had no sordid motives, no selfish ends. He is everything that men and women and little children love. He is the leader of strong men and thoughtful men and good men. He is the world's guide into a new spirit. He remains for humanity an inexhaustible source of moral new birth. He calls us still to follow Him. And we feel that we would be infinitely better if we would follow Him more closely. There is nothing incongruous about it.

We cannot think of Him as never living, as some have suggested. No human mind could have invented such a person as Jesus. There was no model from which to copy such a life.

We cannot think of Him as an impostor, or self-deluded or mentally deranged as some have suggested. We agree with Walter Bundy who says, "The mind of Jesus thought more correctly, clearly, strongly and profoundly than any human mind has ever thought."

We cannot think of Him as an accident, or just an extraordinary man who happened to live at an opportune time in the world's history. His life fits into the Biblical setting too perfectly for that.

How can we think of Him? There seems to be no other way than to believe Him to be the Son of God in a unique sense. He was the Word made flesh, the Messenger of Love and Forgiveness for God the Creator and the Father. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself," as St. Paul said. The Message is to sinning men living upon the earth. He is the revelation of God in character and life, a veritable language that we can all understand.

He is the concern of everyone of us. Long ago I came to the conclusion that Gilder came to while visiting the Holy Land:

If Jesus Christ is a man,
And only a man—I say
That of all mankind I cleave to Him,
And to Him will I cleave away.

If Jesus Christ is a God,
And the only God—I swear
I will follow Him through heaven and hell
The earth, the sea and the air.

We Need Your Help Now

This Message Is Directed to Pastors, Sunday School Leaders, Young People, Missionary Leaders, Church Officials, and Present Subscribers.

Dear Friends:

The Southern Convention at its last session tied up the success of "The Christian Sun" with the new office of Promotional Secretary. The same person is Editor, Managing Editor, and Promotional Secretary. If one fails, the other must fail also.

I am desperately trying to fulfill my part of the contract. Much more needs to be done than one person can possibly do, even with office help. I join with you in wanting our Church to succeed.

The Convention, and the Conferences, made the local churches responsible for securing subscriptions to "The Christian Sun." If you will do this part of our united task, we can certainly succeed. If you fail, we all fail. But you will not fail. I believe that you will do your best.

Your help in the immediate future will mean more than it will next fall. We need money to pay a long past due account with the printer, and to keep the office open so materials can be prepared for publication. The people need to read the paper this summer so they will be ready for better work next fall.

Please give us a lift by sending new and renewal subscriptions equal to the quota for your church, and do it just as soon as possible. Thank you.

Cordially yours,

F. C. LESTER,
Managing Editor.

WHY WE SEEK NEW SUBSCRIBERS

I. The Church Needs the Paper:

1. We have a message worth publishing.
2. There is no other paper in our area to publish our message.
3. A Church without a Paper is like a Person without a Voice.
4. Our Institutions and Boards depend on this paper for publicity.
5. "The Christian Sun" is the greatest "Unifier" in our area.

II. Our Paper Needs Subscribers:

1. A Paper without Subscribers is like a Preacher without People.
2. The Subscribers help to make the paper a living organ of communication.
3. The more subscribers, the less the paper costs per subscriber.
4. Three thousand paid subscriptions will pay for the paper under present contract.
5. At present we are losing money in a big way—$2,000.00 or more annually.

III. Our People Need to Read the Paper:

1. News of our churches keep our people informed of our work.
2. Devotional materials help to develop Christian character.
3. Plans and programs tell how to improve our church work.
4. Missionary materials give a world-wide vision.
5. News, stories, poems, and constructive articles clarify thought and inspire to holy living and helpful service.

OUR WORK AND WORKERS

You are cordially invited to share in the Dedication Services at Hope Mills, N. C., on next Sunday. There will be an all day service with lunch on the grounds. The dedication will be in the afternoon.

Children's Day is a fine time for your church to make a special offering to aid your Board of Christian Education. Please do not forget. Your workers want to serve. Your offering will make this possible. Thanks.

Thanks to Pleasant Hill Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C., for the first contribution from the Children's Day service. This fine response gives heart to the workers in the Board of Christian Education.

The Valley of Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will meet at Winchester on Wednesday of next week. Every Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society in that conference should have representatives present with their dues.

If your church is expecting to need a new pastor next year, why not correspond with the Promotional Secretary? Part of his business is to aid the churches and preachers in making needed adjustments. Take him into your confidence. He may be able to help you. Just write to F. C. Lester, Elon College, N. C., and tell him of your needs.

See the program for the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention elsewhere, and then be ready to start to Danville, Va., early Thursday morning of next week with the purpose of learning more about how to run your own religious educational program. Don't forget to take the dues from your school or society. That is very important, for it helps to carry our work forward.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT PLEASANT RIDGE.

A large crowd attended the annual memorial day services on Sunday, May 28, at Pleasant Ridge Christian Church near Ramsour. The program for the day began at 10 o'clock with Sunday school under the direction of the superintendent, Sybrant Pell. The annual sermon was delivered by the pastor, Rev. J. F. Apple, of Elon College. Special music was furnished by a trio composed of Lawton Burgess and Lawrence Burgess, both of Ramsour, and Fred Allred, local choir director. Lawrence Burgess played the accompaniment on his accordion. Flowers had been placed in the church and were carried to the cemetery by members of the primary and

At the noon hour a picnic dinner was served when visitors and "home-comers" renewed old acquaintances and made new ones.

The special speaker for the afternoon was Rev. Jimmie McDade, a ministerial student at Elon College. His subject was "Their Works Do Follow Them." Special tributes were paid to those gone on before by Glenn Craven, Rev. H. V. Cox, Rev. Robert York and Rev. M. A. Baldwin. Two members of the church, J. C. Allred and Deacon E. W. Brown, and former pastor, Rev. J. M. Allred, have passed away during the year. Special music was furnished by the Johnson family of Alamance County and a local duet composed of Misses Marie Pell and Mary Dean Brown.

NEWS FROM ASHEBORO.

On last Sunday night the committee appointed two weeks ago to make plans for the work in Asheboro reported back to a goodly group who worshipped in the Park Street School at eight o'clock. The committee was of the opinion that there are good prospects for a Congregational-Christian Church in Asheboro. They had several names of those who are willing to become charter members, and a longer list of those who would share in a Sunday school.

The group voted to continue services through the summer on the first and third Sunday evenings at eight o'clock. The next service will be in the same school building. At that time announcement will be made concerning a regular place of meeting for the remainder of the summer.

While it did not seem opportune to organize a church as yet, it did seem advisable to form a temporary organization so the work may continue. Professor James S. Truitt, brother of Dr. J. G. Truitt of Suffolk, Va., was elected as chairman. It will be his business to think through plans, select leaders, and inspire those who may be leaders. The secretary is Mrs. Orva Brown, and the treasurer is Mr. George Gunter.

Several committee chairmen were elected as follows: Publicity, Mr. Sybrant Pell; Place of Meeting, Mr. F. M. Wright; Music, Mrs. Sybrant Pell; Finance, Mr. Hubert Beane; and Membership, Mrs. Paul Craven. These committees will be completed as the work moves forward, and the work will grow as they work.

It was also voted to purchase hymn books to be used for the worship services. The chairman of the music committee is responsible for this, and the books will likely be ready for the next service.

Interest in the work is illustrated by the fact that at least one person has already begun tithing for the new church.

The Promotional Secretary is leading in this new venture, but does not have the necessary time to press the work as it should be done. It is hoped that within a few weeks someone may be secured who will spend time in Asheboro and get a church organized. All interested people are invited to share in the services on the first and third Sunday nights, and in any other way.

"An automobile traveling at sixty miles an hour moves one-sixth of a city block before the average driver can even begin to stop."

SUMMER CONFERENCES.

"Thar's gold in them thar hills" but only those who dig find it. The best things are reserved for those who search. Without effort, attainment is impossible. The most difficult is often the most profitable. Golden opportunities usually lie beneath some hill.

Sunday school superintendents and teachers, pastors, missionary leaders, and many young people in our churches may feel that it is very difficult to attend a Summer Conference, Camp, or School, but those who attend will be the leaders in the days to come. Those who see only the hill (the difficulty) will not win. Down the toboggan they will slide. In the Valley of Despond they will some day regret lost opportunities. But those who make the needed sacrifice of time and money to share in the training program of the Church will find new opportunities opening before them.

Look again at the list of our schools in the Southeast as recorded in last week's issue of this paper. Select the place you want to attend. Dig into the mountain until you find the gold. There are golden treasures in these Summer Conferences awaiting you. What they will mean to you and your church depends upon attendance.

WE NEED MINISTERS.

We need more and better ministers. Among our men are some who are capable and consecrated. As a group they stand well with people of other professions or with ministers in other denominations. Of course there are some who have not yet seen the broader vision, and some who are unwilling to make a complete sacrifice of self in order that the Kingdom may increase. But their number is small. Those who are the best are those who feel most keenly the necessity for better ministers for the churches.

The opportunities of our time demand better ministers. When the mail was delivered once a week in rural areas where there were bad roads, no electricity, little travel, few schools, and small churches, it was quite an event for the preacher to come once each month and preach. But that day is gone forever. Some people do not believe it. They cling to the ancient custom for the church. There must be more pastoral service or the churches will die. Many of them have already died, and many more are now going into a coma from which they will never revive unless the pastor comes to stay and gives a blood-transfusion of new life.

This means that we must have more ministers. The churches can get more service when ministers serve fewer churches and live with their church people. By the end of this Conference year we should have eight or ten new men at work in the Southern Convention. Unless we do, progress must continue to be slow. Some of these should be rural men who take newly formed pastorates. Others should be assistants in larger city churches. It is utterly impossible for one man to minister effectively to a thousand or fifteen hundred people. He may wish to do so, and there are some things that he can do, but he cannot do half the things that are needed in order for the church to grow as it should and for the members to get the leadership they need.

Where shall we get the men? Shall we take those others do not want? Shall we steal from other denominations? Or shall we develop them in our own churches? From whence shall they come? Why do we in Virginia and Carolina fail to furnish enough ministers to supply our churches? Without the aid of Georgia and Alabama the Southern Convention would hardly be able to continue. If you doubt that statement, call the roll of the ministers now serving the Convention and see where they came from.

Your church paper wants to urge that pastors and churches begin the process of developing future leaders that God can call into his divine fellowship and send into the churches to lead them successfully in this day of the world's great need.

OUR COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

For forty-nine successive and successful years Elon College, the child of the Christian Church of the South, has held commencement exercises. Last week sixty-eight young people, dressed in collegiate cap and gown, crossed the auditorium stage at the call of our college dean, and received from President Smith a diploma.

It was quite a thrill to see the procession enter that auditorium. While the organ sang sweet music they came marching, marching. First, the ushers in their regalia, followed by the black robed choir, the speakers ready to give thrilling messages, then the faculty clad in gay-colored professional hoods like sashes around their shoulders, the trustees on whom rests the responsibility of finances and faculty, and finally, the seniors who were about to graduate. When the last words were said and the benediction pronounced, the procession marched out and the multitude followed.

"Elon's benedictions are yours forever" said President Smith as his parting words to the graduates. Elon is our Church institution. It was our Church that raised a hand of blessing as these trained youths set sail on the high seas of life with the hope of making some new discovery before casting anchor on the distant shores of the celestial realm. Our Church is now inviting another class to receive its blessings and to join with others who train for Christian service in a non-Christian world. The benedictions of the Church may best be realized by those who study within its walls and achieve in its programs. Now is the time for others to step into the procession and be among the graduates four years hence. It was a great commencement this year. It will be better next year, and the next, and the next.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A normal Christian will desire to become a member of the church. It is possible to be a Christian without uniting with the church, but it becomes more difficult to enjoy the deeper spiritual life. "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." This test of Christianity will make it imperative for a convert to seek the fellowship of other "brethren" in some organized church. Jesus gave His unqualified approval to the building of the church. Paul, the great Apostle of the New Testament, recognized the Church as "the body of Christ." Jesus is the Head of the Church. The Church is a divinely appointed institution. Followers of Christ should recognize their duty in being loyal to this body of believers.

Joining the church is the sacred duty of converts to Christianity. In the Southern Convention there are Congregational Churches and Christian Churches. The term "Congregational-Christian Church" is not an official title of a local church in this Convention. There is no objection to the use of this title, or name, if the local church so desires, but the correct name of the local church is Congregational or Christian until the Convention changes the name. In the Christian Churches of this Convention three questions are asked persons who seek membership in the local church on profession of faith as follows: (1) "Have you heartily and sincerely repented of all your sins?" Answer: "I have." (2) "Do you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as the Savior of the world, and as your personal Savior?" Answer: "I do." (3) "Is it your purpose, through grace, to live a godly life?" Answer: "It is." These questions being answered in the affirmative, there being no objection, the candidates are received as members of the church.

What does it mean to unite with a Christian Church? What are some of the distinctive principles of a Christian Church? There are Five Cardinal Principles of the Christian Churches, as stated by authority of the governing bodies many years ago, as follows:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church. By this statement we are told that this church looks to Jesus Christ for authority and guidance in all the policies it adopts.

2. The name Christian is a sufficient name for the Church. The early disciples were called Christians first at Antioch. This name indicates a recognition of Christ.

3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. Human interpretations of the Bible cannot be an adequate substitute for the Bible itself.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and Church membership. People differ in their interpretations of faith, but Christian character should be the acid test of fellowship.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all. The right to worship God, the privilege of Christian liberty guided by Jesus Christ and the Bible should be counted a priceless heritage in this age of Dictators who would substitute the state for the Kingdom of God. Surely there is need to contend for this vital principle of the Church.

Membership in the Christian Church inducts one into that fellowship which purposes to be free from the tyranny of ecclesiasticism based upon personal interpretations not warranted by the Bible. This Church has had a wonderful history. It loses none of its vital doctrines and surrenders none of its principles by uniting mutually with the Congregational Church. Congregational Churches and Christian Churches were left free to continue their respective traditions, policies and faith, under the terms of the union. To be a member of either local church is a great privilege.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The forty-ninth annual session of the Elon College commencement was held May 27-30 inclusive. All commencement exercises were of a very high order. Baccalaureate services were well attended, and Dr. Harrell delivered a very timely message to the graduating class and all present. The First Christian Church of Burlington, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, pastor, held a combination Sunday school and church service, dismissing in time for all who wished to attend the baccalaureate services at Elon College. Dr. Lightbourne assisted in the service, and a large number of his congregation was present. The Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary of the Southern Convention, was present and assisted in the services.

The music students' recital in the afternoon was appreciated by those who attended. The musical Sunday night consisted of the rendering of "The Vision of Sir Launfal" by Leo Sowerby, by the Elon Singers under the direction of Professor Pratt. The soloists were Thomas Edwards, tenor; Walter Vassar, baritone; and Margaret Godwin, contralto. Mr. Robert Morgan accompanied at the organ. This was a most unusual and a most enjoyable program.

Monday was class and Alumni Day, with addresses by Mrs. E. R. Bryant and Mr. John J. Ingle. These programs were not as well attended as they should have been, but the addresses were thoughtful, appealing, and very helpful.

Commencement exercises on Tuesday were largely attended. The address was delivered by Mr. Jonathan Daniels of Raleigh, N. C., introduced by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, Senior Senator from North Carolina. There were sixty-eight in the graduating class. Five different individuals were awarded degrees. The following was President Smith's last word to the graduating class:

TO OUR SENIORS. 1939.

"For four brief years you have been on our campus. During this time, we have given you our best—our best thought, our best efforts, our best fruits. You have given your cooperation—cooperation in plan, purpose, and spirit. We have endeavored not only to acquaint you with the facts incident to human progress but to prepare you and inspire you to make a worthwhile contribution to society in this plastic age in which we live.

"Today you look out on a world fraught with greater possibilities than has any college generation since the 'tragic '60's.' The sciences in their aggressive programs, destined to conquer the air and the sea, further annihilate space, destroy disease, lengthen the span of life, and in a thousand ways better human conditions, are only in their infancy. Let no man tell you that the day of opportunity for college youth is no more. The best is yet to be, the best crop has not been grown, the best house has not been built, the best machine has not been patented, the best book has not been written, the best poem has not been penned, the best song has not been sung, the best sermon has

Commencement has come and gone. We were hoping that raft of pledges would be left on the desk by interested individuals in attendance at the commencement. Our hopes were not realized. Our expectations, however, are not cut off. There are plenty of people who have it in their minds to join the club and make their contributions, but how am I to know about it and how can I give these facts to the public unless these intentions are taken out of their minds and put on the cards? If you have been planning to do a generous thing, why delay? The quicker you do it, the quicker will be your own satisfaction and happiness and the quicker your example will have its effect upon others. When we give our subscription for membership in the club, we have two purposes in mind. The first is to become a member ourselves, and the second is that we may influence someone else to do as we have done. At any rate, we never get things moving until we begin to move, and when we begin to move, others will follow in our footsteps.

My dear reader, if you have not yet sent your subscription, won't you please do so now? If you can send cash, please send it. We must be able to make our regular monthly contribution curtailing our debt. Your contribution will help. If you cannot send cash, please send your pledge.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

It is better late than never. When a contribution is being sent from the churches or Sunday schools to Elon College, that contribution is thankfully received, whether it be early or late, large or small. No doubt you have money in your treasury which eventually will come to the college. Why not forward it on? When it is received, it will be reported, and when it is reported those who have not contributed will be reminded of their neglect and opportunity.

We have had a few contributions during the past week. We have many other friends who intend to send. These contributions will be thankfully received at any time.

THE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

With the opening of school in September, the fiftieth year of Elon College's existence will be inaugurated. The Board of Trustees, grateful for these years of service and history making and desirous of observing properly and within our means this historic occasion, referred suggestions regarding the proper observance of the anniversary by the president to a special committee.

These suggestions presented a program to begin early in September with the establishment and observance of Founder's Day at which time the beginnings of the institution would be properly recognized and the original faculty signally honored. It would be the purpose of Founder's Day not only to recognize and honor those who had to do with its beginnings but to inaugurate a program that would be observed annually for all time to come.

The second suggestion is that sometime near mid-season a program be executed recognizing the position and contribution of the church-related college to the cause of Christian education and higher education in general, at which time the college would propose to bring to her campus some of the outstanding leaders in the field of Christian education in this and other countries for the purpose of giving the church-related school its

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT HANK'S CHAPEL.

Hank's Chapel had a full day of worship Sunday, May 28. Service started at ten o'clock. The choir furnished special music, and Mr. William Dan White, Jr., read the devotional Scripture. The prayer and welcome address were given by Mr. H. C. Farrell, superintendent of the Sunday School. After this our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, brought us a real memorial sermon, the subject being "Son, Remember." After the sermon the children marched out to the cemetery carrying flowers, followed by preachers, deacons, and the choir. The choir sang "Cover Them Over With Flowers" as the children placed the flowers on the graves. After the benediction, the good women placed a nice lunch on the table for everyone.

At the afternoon service the devotional was conducted by Rev. T. Y. Sycamore, the Baptist minister of Yonesboro, who read the Twenty-third Psalm. A visiting quartet from West Durham Baptist Church brought some beautiful selections of music, as did the home quartet. Dr. W. H. Boone of Durham brought an interesting talk. Rev. W. W. Finlator of the Baptist Church of Pittsboro made an interesting address. There were several others who made short talks, these being people who had come home for the memorial of some loved one who had gone before, and who had lived a good life here in this world. After the talks and addresses, the congregation sang "Blest Be the Tie." Benediction was given by Rev. W. W. Finlator. We hope to see all of our friends again next year.

FOR THE CHILDREN

THE GIRL WITH A SINGING HEART.

By GEORGE TUTTIE.

She has a very plain face, this girl with a singing heart. Freckles? Well, yes; come to think of it, she may have a few. Warts on her hands? Well, now, possibly they are warts, but they really seem like beauty marks to me! What are such trifles when Laura has a singing heart?

I know that she sings and makes melody in her heart—songs of thanksgiving and praise—because of her winsomeness, and because of the kind things that she does. There is that half-witted Joe, for instance. Her chums all dodge Joe, with his foolish remarks, but Laura stops and speaks so kindly to him. Why does she not look the other way, and pass Joe by? Do you suppose she thinks of these words: "And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted. . . .?"

Will you tell me why every dog in the neighborhood looks up in Laura's face and seems to be trying to say, "You are my friend"? They cannot see Laura's heart, but they can see her face, and they like the feel of her hands as she pets them. Remember that it is worth while to make even a cat or a dog happy.

When this girl with a singing heart passes the poverty-stricken home of Mrs. Sobrowski, she often calls, "Good morning, Mrs. Sobrowski." Then the poor woman, who has such a hard time in life, says to herself, "Almost she makes me happy!" Laura's chum once said to her, "I believe you are on chummy terms with every old grandmother in town." To this Laura said: "I love everyone of them. Grandma Baker tells me bear stories, Grandma Harris is strong on now to attend, to have all reports ready, and help make this convention a success. GEO. T. GUNTER,

President.

CONCORD MEMORIAL SERVICE.

The annual Memorial Service was held at Concord Christian Church on Sunday, May 28. The floral offering, which was beautiful, was carried by the children and placed on the graves of the cemetery. The Memorial Address was delivered by Rev. J. S. Carden of Durham, N. C., to a large and appreciative audience. Following a sumptuous lunch served on the grounds, the afternoon service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. U. Fogleman.

Bible stories, and I love them all."

That heart of Laura's persists in singing on the dullest, gloomiest day. Her mother says, "What is a gloomy day outside when Laura is inside?" Her father says, "Laura is the best medicine for me; she rests me when I am tired and discouraged." Her brother Sam says, "Laura encourages a fellow instead of finding fault with him." Is not a girl with a singing heart bound to be an encourager?

Is there not a reason?

Yes, Laura said, "Come in," when Jesus knocked at the door of her heart. Did not her heart then sing for joy because Christ was within? Do you not remember what Jesus said to his disciples about his joy remaining in them, that their joy might be full?—The Girl's Weekly.

LOYALTY.

In some way loyalty is connected with and forms an integral part of life. The larger and deeper loyalties to institutions or to others than self constitute an essential part of the life of those who are loyal. Elon College has been fortunate enough through its history of forty-nine years to create loyalties and thus help to develop lives that count and are worthwhile. Every Elon commencement brings to the college at their own expense individuals who realize something of what the college has done for our church and for the world and they come to commencement out of sheer loyalty to the college for what it has done and with faith in what it will do. These visitors renew their old acquaintances and make new acquaintances and friends of those who like themselves are showing a loyalty and devotion to the college.

Then there are trustees of the college, whose loyalty and devotion, not only contribute to their own lives, but make them outstanding examples of what loyalty and devotion through thick and thin, dark days and good days, will do for a person. There are trustees who have been on the Board for twenty, some twenty-five, some thirty years and never missing a Board meeting unless hindered by obstacles they could not overcome. And of course these and all other members come at their own expense and give one or two, or three, days if necessary of their valuable time, counselling with other Board members and officials of the college as to the best interest of the institution.

It may interest CHRISTIAN SUN readers to know that there are two members of the original Board who were on the Board that located the college at its present site, Col. J. H. Hardin of Graham, N. C., and Col. E. E. Holland of Suffolk, Va. And of these two, Col. Holland has remained a member of the Board till this good hour, and while the college will not celebrate its fiftieth anniversary till a year hence, Col. Holland this week was congratulated on having served his fifty years continuously as a member of the Board, being unanimously elected to the Board over half a century ago and every sixth year since when the term of a member expires. Seldom has Col. Holland ever missed a Board meeting and the sessions that he did miss he was in Washington at the time of the Board meeting as a member of Congress. This is indeed a record, worthy of commendation and emulation, and while this writer feels that Col. Holland with his wise counsel has always been a very valuable and far-sighted advisor in Board sessions, the college in turn with its commencements and meetings has helped to contribute somewhat at least to the large heartedness and wisdom of this loyal and faithful member.

That is what loyalty and faithfulness do for a person. We have members, laymen and ministers, on other Boards of the church, who have been loyal through the years and with great cost to themselves and they are not the poorer today, but the richer in experience, in life and in friendship, because of this loyalty. Say what you will, loyalty and life are two currents of the same stream that run through the ocean of time and they are paralleled and are very close together and the one supports and contributes to the other. No one ever knew this more than our Lord Christ, who realized that if He could get a few men and women who were and would be loyal to Him through thick and thin His cause would win out and His church would triumph in the world. "I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," but He would build it on the loyalty and devotion of men and women true to Him and willing to forego their own conveniences that they might reveal Him to others as Savior and Redeemer of mankind.

We will very much appreciate it if the pastors who have taken the Annual (Easter) offering for missions will send the same in now. Some churches took the offering, but have not sent it in, hoping to increase the same. It will be very much appreciated as the funds are so much needed, if all offering taken may now be sent in. We deeply appreciate the continued interest in missions, especially on the part of the pastors and faithful and loyal Sunday school superintendents, who seek to do their full duty in contributing to, and cooperating with, our missionary work. We thus show, not only our interest in the welfare of our fellowman, but our devotion to our Lord in sharing His love and life and blessed gospel with others, which was His most emphatic command.

Gratefully and sincerely,
 J. O. ATKINSON,
 Mission Secretary.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF ROANOKE, ALABAMA.

So far this conference year, we, the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Christian Church, Roanoke, Ala., have gained five new members, and lost one by death, Mrs. G. D. Hunt, whose influence is greatly missed. There are twenty members on roll.

Our society made a quilt and sent it to the Orphanage for Thanksgiving. We raised enough money by donations from our men to buy about thirty pieces of new shrubbery to put out in front of our church. We had our special Alabama Arbor Day program at the church on December 10 and dedicated our shrubbery to the church in memory of those who have, and are, and will make the mission work a success.

We sold Christmas cards and received $9.60 profit to go on pulpit chairs for the church which we hope to purchase in the near future. Our New Year's program was the one that was prepared by our president and that appeared in Down South News. Names were drawn at the beginning of the year for our Forget-Me-Not—remembrance of each member throughout the year. The society and church together gave the blanket of flowers for Mrs. Hunt.

We observed the World Day of Prayer and completed our mission study book, Dinabandhu, all in one day at the church. The book was reviewed by the president.

The society and church had a part in contributing to the box of clothing that was sent the Orphanage before Easter from the Roanoke District of East Alabama Woman's Work.

OPEN DOORS FOR THE GOSPEL.

A Young Bible Woman Rejoices in the Privileges of Giving the Word to men and Women in a Frontier Town of Manchuria.

The following letter is typical of correspondence that comes from our Manchurian Christian workers throughout this large field. It is from a young woman, Miss Chang Yan-Ching, a cultured, earnest, faithful Bible woman, who finished her Bible school training last year and is now preaching the Gospel at Hsinking, the new capital of Manchukuo. Miss Chang was asked to go to one of the smaller outstations to supply until an evangelist could be sent there. She writes:

"This being a frontier town, the people here never heard of a woman preaching the Gospel. They thought this a strange thing at first, and because of this many came to see this unusual performance. I could readily see that a number of those in my audience had come not to hear my message but to see a woman standing before a public audience and speaking as a man. What rejoiced me most was that so many had come and that God had given me this opportunity to witness for Him in a strange place. Many were unable to find places to sit down, but they did not mind standing for this unusual occasion. My concern at the first was not so much whether they would believe me or not, but whether I was able to open up to them the Word of God in such a way that they could understand. Thanks be to God! Every day the people came. In the evening time the audiences went from thirty to a hundred and more. Twenty registered as inquirers, some accepting the Lord, others desiring only to study the way. Three families who became Christians destroyed their idols.

"The need for this place is that someone can work here permanently. Please pray for the people of Wakeshu for so many of them are in spiritual darkness, yet many showing a desire for the Light.

"The reason I am leaving at this time is because a revival meeting begins in a few days at Hsinking and I must be there to help prepare the women for these services. I have received much valuable help from my experience this month working here in this new place and have great occasion to thank God for His kindness during my stay, for, I feel sure, a number were saved and the few Christians whom I found here have been built up in the faith."

In the same mail a letter came from down at Laichowful, Shantung Province, where we labored for fourteen years, telling of the opening of a new preaching place there and of the readiness with which the people were receiving the Gospel. So throughout China and Manchuria word comes from many places telling of the large open doors for the preaching of the Gospel and of the ready reception in the hearts of many. Truly this is the time when we should press with all the force possible advancement of God's Kingdom in the hearts and lives of the people.

CHARLES A. LEONARD, SR.

AS PROFESSOR EINSTEIN NOW SEES THE WORLD.

"Being a lover of freedom, when the revolution came in Germany, I looked to the universities to defend it, knowing that they had always boasted of their devotion to the cause of truth; but no, the universities were immediately silenced. Then I looked to the great editors of the newspapers whose flaming editorials in days gone by had proclaimed their love of freedom; but they, like the universities, were silenced in a few short weeks. Then I looked to the individual writers, who, as literary guides of Germany had written much and often concerning the place of freedom in modern life; but they, too, were mute.

"Only the Church stood squarely across the path of Hitler's campaign for suppressing the truth. I never had any special interest in the Church before, but now I feel a great affection and admiration because the Church alone has had the courage and persistence to stand for intellectual truth and moral freedom. I am forced to confess that what I once despised I now praise unreservedly." —Quoted in The Living Church.

ELON COMMENCEMENT.

not been preached, and the best life, save one, has not been lived.

"Let no son or daughter of Elon College stand on the threshold of this plastic world and in the morningtime of this day of golden opportunities whine out his song of disgust, discouragement and hate, but instead let everyone tune his heart, bear his arms, stir his soul, and beat the music of daring endeavor that national differences, racial prejudices, economic inequalities, social injustices, political and religious persecutions may disappear forever from the horizon of human possibilities. These are your opportunities and your responsibilities. We have done our best to make you equal to them. May I remind you, however, that in your own strength you cannot succeed, but that in the strength of Him whose we are and whom we serve, failure is impossible. In the conviction of the Apostle of the ages, you can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth you.

"Today we put the stamp of approval on your achievements. As you go out, you go as a representative of Elon College. Wherever you are, whatever you do, you are Elon College. Elon's benediction's are yours forever."

There were three members of the original faculty of Elon College in attendance at the commencement, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. E. L. Moffitt, and Prof. S. A. Holleman. All members with the exception of Dr. W. S. Long, president, are still living. It is hoped that by the grace of God they may all be with us at the beginning of our next session in September. Sometime during the month of September, special services honoring the original faculty will be held to which all will be invited.

"Religion is the conscious bond between man and God. The Christian goes to church carrying wood and a eup—the one to place on the altar as fuel for the fire of adoration, the other to fill at the Fountain of Life. In one sense he goes full and returns empty, having made anew the offering of self; in another sense he goes empty and returns filled with God's heavenly benediction and grace, having received afresh God's offering of Himself."

ARE YOU GOING?

At this time of the year the thoughts of many of our young people are turning to the memories they have of summer conferences, camps, and training schools they have attended—and plans for going to similar meetings this year. We hope that you are among the latter group, even if you can't be among the former.

Elsewhere in this paper you will find a list of the different groups that meet this summer, along with some information regarding cost and courses. Most of you who read this live in North Carolina and Virginia and will probably go to Elon—though you might decide to take your vacation at the same time and go to the lake section of Florida, or the mountains of Tennessee! You will be most welcome wherever you choose to go, and will find there congenial people and interesting work and play.

In every church there are young people who are eligible to go—and who want to go. Some of them do not have the money necessary for these meetings. Each church would reap large benefits from sending these worthy young people, or at least paying part of their expenses. Many people think it better for the church to pay part, and the individuals part, rather than having the church pay the whole amount. If we have to sacrifice a little ourselves, in order to get the things we want, we will be more likely to appreciate them. Then, too, a church can help send more young people with the same amount of money they might spend on a few. Perhaps, if you cannot go because of work, you can see that some other young person has a chance to secure this training and thus become a more effective worker for Christ and His Church.

LEARNING AFTER SCHOOL DAYS ARE OVER.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JUNE 18, 1939.

SCRIPTURE: PROV. 2:1-9; 3:1-6.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Wisdom and Instruction—Prov. 4:7-13.

Tuesday—Learning by Experience—Ecl. 2:1-3; 10-13.

Wednesday—Reading for Correct Interpretation—Matt. 12:1-8.

Thursday—Learning by Obedience—Jer. 42:1-6.

Friday—Spiritual Perseverance—I Tim. 4:12-16.

Saturday—Learning by Practice—Jas. 1:22-25.

Because we have graduated from high school or college, or because schools have closed for the summer months, should not mean the laying aside of books. Whatever use we do or do not make of books and study courses after graduation, we keep learning. Our education continues for a life time.

Here are some of the ways in which we may keep learning after school days are over: (1) reading selected books, making use of reading courses recommended by libraries and schools, acquiring an interest in a field of knowledge and reading all available literature on it; (2) attending night school, taking correspondence courses from reputable institutions; (3) attending lecture courses, conferences, forums, discussion groups and the like; (4) following up vocational interests, having interviews with leaders in the selected vocation; (5) traveling.

Several persons should be assigned to study the community in order to determine the opportunities which exist for education and learning beyond school days. These findings should be reported to the society and a discussion should follow.

Other Questions—

1. Does not Christian Endeavor have a real contribution to make to young adults whose formal schooling is over?

2. How can we make our meetings more helpful from a learner's standpoint?

3. Is it possible for a Christian to cease learning and yet continue to be a true Christian?

4. Can the constant search for new truth become a handicap to conviction?

Suggested Hymns—

"O Worship the King."

"Lord, Speak to Me That I May Speak."

"Sweet Hour of Prayer."

PAUL SOLVES CHURCH PROBLEMS.

LESSON XI—JUNE 11, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: Let your manner of life be worthy of the gospel of Christ.—Phil. 1:27.

LESSON: I Cor. 1:1-3, 10; 4:14-21; Gal. 1:1-7; 3:1-29; I Thess. 1:1; 4:9-15, 22.

Paul's letters were practical. For the most part they were written to answer questions which had been asked him by the churches, or to instruct them in certain matters of faith and practice. And in the letters which are for the most part doctrinal, the ones which contain so much teaching material, there is a practical application. Paul is always putting a "wherefore" or a "therefore" in his letters. Because such and such a thing is true, there or wherefore, you ought to live in such a way, or serve in such a spirit. Thus it is that the sections of the scripture which form today's lesson are simply passages which deal with church problems in the respective churches to which Paul wrote. But they deal for the most part with universal or certainly general problems, and thus they are up to date and fresh.

The Problem of Divisions in the Church.

The section from First Corinthians deals primarily with the matter of divisions in the church. Members of the household of Chloe had told Paul that in Corinth the church was split up into several cliques or factions. One group followed Paul, another Apollos, another Peter, and another Christ. As a result, the church was disunited and ineffective. Paul takes these Corinthian Christians to task about these inexcusable factions. Who after all were Paul and Apollos and Peter except ministers through whom they had believed? Christ was the Head of the Church. Christ was not divided. Their divisions were a denial of the unity of the Spirit of Christ and a disgrace to the church. He urged them "to speak the same thing, that there be no divisions joined together in the same mind and the same judgment." Paul did not, he could not have meant that they were all to think exactly alike. To think is to differ. But he did mean that they were all to think exactly alike. To think is to differ. But he did mean that they should be united in a common loyalty to Christ, and that they should be of the same mind as concerning Christ. If Paul was scandalized and grieved by the four divisions in the church of his day, how much more would he be grieved at the more than two hundred divisions in the body of Christ today. But, thank God, there are signs that churches are at last beginning to face this scandal of Christianity, and a definite tendency toward union is at work.

The Problem of Salvation by Works Or by Faith.

Paul's letter to the Galatians dealt in large part with the matter of the essential nature of salvation. Paul, of course, preached that a man was saved through faith by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. Works had nothing to do with salvation, that is, so far as earning it or meriting it was concerned. They were an expression of salvation, not a means of it. But after Paul had left the Galatian churches, the Judaizers went there and insisted that man could not be saved unless he kept the words of the law. They put emphasis upon such things as circumcision and the observance of certain days and ceremonies. When Paul heard of this, he wrote at once his well-known letter to the Galatians. He said that he marvelled that they had so soon fallen away from the faith. He called them to witness as to how they had first found salvation—was it by works, or was it by simple faith in Christ? If they had originally been saved by faith, why should they revert to works as a means of being saved. Paul writes bluntly, even sharply. He exalts Christ. He denounces Judaism. He scolds the Galatians for their indifference and their weakness in being led so easily astray. He declares that "we are all sons of God through faith in Jesus Christ." And here again this letter deals with abiding principles which need re-emphasis in every age.

The Problems in the Church in Thessalonians.

The letter to the Thessalonians is filled with suggestions for Christian conduct in the church and the community. Paul exalts the church as a divine institution with a divine nature. He admonishes the brethren to love one another, to abound more and more in good works, to be quiet, that is to be orderly and peaceful, and especially to be diligent in their work.

There is an interesting fact in this connection. The early church confidently expected an immediate return of Christ. The hope was so real and so immediate that they had left off working. Paul enjoins them to labor, to be diligent, to work. He discusses the coming again of the Lord Jesus, and shows how comforting this is. But he urges his readers to sobriety, and watchfulness, and an earnest preparation just because of the fact that they are to live together with Christ.

The letter gives detailed instructions for the members of the church. They are to have respect for those who teach them, sympathy for the weak, a concern for the unintelligent. They are to warn and rebuke the unruly—in the spirit of love and fact—to support the weak, and to be patient toward all men. Under no circumstances are they to return evil for evil, but good for evil. And they are to follow that which is good, both among themselves, and to all men.

PLANS FOR EVANGELISM.

Let the pastor, along with leaders of his local church, plan for his evangelistic campaign. Plan it. Envision it. Think how it ought to be, what its results should be. Meditate on just how it is to be undertaken. The very universe is a world of order. The word "universe" itself teaches us a great deal. It means: many things lined up into one order! There is planning. A pastor must learn to do that very thing. Take all of the diversified interests and activities of his church and unify them. This takes planning. The hours you sit in your study thinking about your local church are hours well spent. The other hours of carrying out the plans will be much easier and happier, and much more conducive to results on account of the thoughtful, prayerful planning.

An evangelistic meeting? What are the needs? What is back of these needs? How has the need come about? What could the Spirit of Jesus do if He had right-away toward correcting those needs? Who are the people to be won to Christ? Who are the people to be renewed in Him, and given a new consecration? What lack we yet as a Church? And as individuals? Thinking along these and many kindred lines, and many moments of waiting in prayer for divine leadership; and also a goodly bit of reading and study of such matters to stimulate thinking. The Church needs a lot of thinking. A little girl said to her father the other day, "When I lose anything I just sit right down and think where I could have lost it, and I go there and I nearly always find it." Good! Thinking will save the lost!

It is a pleasure to suggest in this connection that if in your plans you

GREATEST NEED OF THE CHURCH.

"Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which He hath purchased with His own blood."—Acts 20:28.

The conversion of the world is the supreme business of the church, therefore vital passion for the redemption of the lost is the supreme need of the church. Christianity today is quite complacent and we are in great danger of the evils of comfort and the warm fireside. Let us not judge others, but let us examine ourselves and set our house in order.

Prayer—O Spirit of the Living God, descend upon us and make us truly Thine. Fill us with Thy love, thy joy and Thy power, and with righteousness and peace till Christ shall dwell in the world. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"CHRIST IN THE SUN."

"Go ye into all the world."—(Mark 16:15). "And whatever ye do, do it heartily."—Col. 3:23.

Herein lies the success of the church. It is said that the church has never experienced such a success as it did in the first centuries, all because of the zest and earnestness of the apostles. We must put zest in business to succeed and we must put zest in our fight for life. Wesley commissioned George Shadford with the words, "I let you loose, George, on the continent of America. Publish your message in the open face of the sun, and do all the good you can." How does your zest stack up with that?

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for the faith of our Fathers. Help us to see the needs of our fellowman as Jesus saw them, and give us a passion for souls. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

YOUR FIELD.

"The field is the world."—Matt. 13:38.

The field for your service of the Lord is where you are. The soil and substance is your life and the lives of those around about you. The Gospel is framed for man not only in his work but in all his thinking. God's eternal purpose is in it all. My field is a ship and the hearts of a thousand men. I must make known to them the breadth and scope of Jesus day by day.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to find Thy image in man, to love him as Christ loves him, and to work for him unselfishly as Christ would. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

"And they continued steadfastly in the apostle's teachings and fellowship."—Acts 2:42.

It is a ministry of instruction; a ministry of worship; a ministry of intercession; a ministry inclusive of all divisions of race, creed or language; a ministry to a dying world. May we give our hearts and lives to these ministries of His Spirit.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou art our God. May our lives encompass all Thy ministries; may our minds be endued with wisdom from above; and may our souls breathe with the Holy Spirit. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

NECESSITY OF REPENTANCE.

"Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."—Acts 2:38.

It is believed that the sinfulness of sin and repentance for sin is not emphasized as much as it should be in our lives. Much is said about enthusiasm and much is done to have outbursts of enthusiasm. Enthusiasm is all right if it has the stuff behind it. If it is mere ballaho, away with it. Spiritualization is what we need. We must repent and have spiritual impulse given us from on high, that we may go out and change the world for Him.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy abiding love. We know that we are impotent through our failures and sins. Make us new day by day and send us out to shed His light in the world. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"QUIET, PLEASE."

"Be still and know that I am God."—Ps. 46:10.

Every day we are lost in a preponderance of things we are engaged in. If we are not careful we shall lose the inner life that should be behind it all, and we shall find ourselves just empty. Quiet hours are necessary for us, if we are to avoid failures. It is in the quiet that we see things as they are, and feel the pulse of the universe of which we are a part. It is in the quiet that we see God's face and discover the way.

Prayer—O Lord, through Jesus Christ Thy Son, we lift up our countenance to see Thee as Thou art. Grant unto us the will and the opportunity to get away from the crowds frequently and know Thee, and ourselves, and prepare ourselves to do our duty. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE SILENCE OF ETERNITY.

"And when evening was come, he was there alone."—Matt. 14:23.

This scripture tells us of the habit of our Lord in drawing away from the crowd. But few of His prayers are recorded, but we know that He was in the quiet, talking with His

IT REALLY HAPPENED.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"And it shall come to pass.
. . ."—Joel 2:28.

"And it shall come to pass.
. . ."—Joel 2:32.

"This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel."—Acts 2:17.

God said it would happen. What? That he would pour out his Spirit, and people would speak his message—prophesy—and both young and old would dream dreams and see visions. And all along there were those who envisioned a better world, and dreamed of its coming to pass; but there had not been any special out-pouring of God's Spirit upon common multitudes; and, so far that they still waited. A generation passed, a century, several centuries, and yet it had not come to pass. Perhaps the prophesy was practically forgotten. A few persons still hoped it would come true, perhaps others said that it had already come to pass and we did not recognize it. Still others said it would never happen. Other prophets came and went. Other books of the Old Testament were written, and finally the Old Testament was closed, and yet it had not come to pass. One read on through Matthew, the whole of the life of Christ, and Mark, and Luke, and finally John and not yet does he find it. Then one day the apostle Peter in a magnificent sermon announces that it has really happened! "This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel," says Peter. "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams." . . . "And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

And now it had really happened. God's Spirit was freely given, men were hearing the Gospel in their own tongues, and they were being convinced, were turning away from their evil ways of unbelief, and by the tens, and hundreds, yea, thousands, were turning to this new Way of the lowly Nazarene. They saw visions of a finer civilization, and dreamed dreams of a land of love, and peace, and sweet fellowship. And God's Spirit was with them without measure. They had boldness, and courage, and preached a Gospel which convicted those who heard it, and layed their lives upon the altar of living service.

Let us thank God for that day. It was the birth of the Church. It was the day of beginnings, and beginnings so great that our minds yet are unable to take in all that it means—a world whose kingdoms are the kingdoms of the Christ.

How did it come to pass. Jesus came, for one thing. It did not come to pass without Jesus. Let us put that down as a primary fact. Jesus came and led the way, by living it, teaching, preaching, practicing it; and then finishing the plan for it upon Calvary with his very life; and then arising to proclaim eternal life and victory, and to promise power to his followers, upon the consideration of their going regardless of all handicaps unto the uttermost part of the earth and preaching it to everybody. It really happened, but it followed Jesus.

But even then it did not happen exactly when Jesus had finished and ascended even unto the right hand of the Father. It still had not yet happened. Do not overlook something. And that something is that men and women took Jesus absolutely seriously as far as they understood him, and hazarded their lives on carrying out his requests. Not in any wild excitement, but quietly right down the line exactly as though he himself were in their midst, leading them into the upper room, restraining their ardor for ten long days and nights in quiet, earnest prayer. I like to think of those days! Simon Peter learning composure, quiet, obedience, and waiting! See him, loving Jesus as he did, enthusiastic as he was, frightened though as long as he might have been, and thus in such a case ready to blunder ahead in some wrong way, but waiting, praying, and keep as cool as John the beloved. One of the highest spots in the New Testament is the waiting in prayer those days, unnumbered for them, just waiting, and waiting, and waiting. It takes a lot to teach us to be patient. There is a power in patience which God needs now to build a better world. We have talked about building a new world, but what we should do is to give God a chance at it through us! That was what Jesus had told his disciples to do. To possess themselves until they were transformed from "learners" to "teachers," from disciples to apostles! When they obeyed, and with the right spirit of obedience which offered life and all, the Holy Spirit came, and the prophesy of Joel, now centuries old, had really come to pass. It came, but it followed Jesus and men with the willingness to give their lives in complete surrender to Jesus—Jesus and men, and women, yes, and young people, for even little Rhoda is not left out of the picture.

I am afraid we are trying in the fast days to motorize God's plans. We would harness our new speed, and efficiency to his throne, and in mass production make a new world. His thoughts are not our thoughts, and the same quiet manner must move our world as move the Master when tempted to "speed up" in the forty days wilderness experience. Not by the speed of the age, but by the Spirit of God, will the new world be made. I would like to have hundred members of this church to worship here every Sunday morning, and move us all like a moving hive of bees into the mouth of the kingdom of God; but what I would like even better would be that five hundred church members worship God for five minutes every morning of their week-a-day lives, and again at noon every noon, and again at night every night! The quiet bringing of our families to God every day would beget a power that would bring a new day for us all. We have come too much to expect the beauty of our mass worship, our big ways, our splendid choirs, our minister-prayers, and our preacher-sermons in lump sums in a single hour to do our worship for us, but what we need is a sense of meeting ourselves, for ourselves, and by ourselves in order that we may learn hourly, daily, to live a Christian life with and for others, and to take our orders from Jesus as our Lord and Master.

I am heartened to believe we are catching that spirit. Our prayer meeting is increasing, requests for pamphlets and booklets designed for daily devotions are on the increase in our congregation, and it is becoming more and more so across our country. You can do a great thing by beginning, if you are not already doing so, to be in that much needed fellowship of those who worship God privately and definitely every day. Do you covet the out-pouring of God's Spirit upon your life and upon your family, and upon your day and age? Let Jesus prepare you, lead, and command you. It really happened for them. It will happen for you.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

I often think if our people could come in contact with those in need and distress, as orphanage superintendents so often do, we would not have to lie awake at night trying to figure out how to make the income meet the expense account. If we never had extra expense to come unexpectedly, we might sail along easily. But a child will develop appendicitis and have to go to the hospital for an operation (extra expense). We have had three cases since Christmas. A child may develop pneumonia, a disease we always dread and fear. It does its work so quickly. Nurses, medicine, doctors make much extra expense. We have had one case since Christmas.

Then drilling a deep well and installing a pump and running the water line, which will cost at least $800, is extra expense which cuts our small surplus to a low ebb. It was a need we had to meet. We had to have water, and we had to go down in the ground 270 feet to it, through solid rock. But we found it.

We have appeals from mothers who are left with little children and no income and no one who can work to win the bread. I want to quote from a letter I received a few days ago:

"I wrote you sometime ago in regard to getting my children in the Orphanage there. You stated that you were crowded to capacity but for me to write you about the 10th of May. I have since that time been trying utmostly hard to make out without letting them go. But it is a drastic situation. I am working in a cafe for which I get $7.00 per week and my meals. My house rent is $10.00 per month. A girl to keep house and look after the children and cook costs me $8.00 per month, and she is very extravagant. Some one will have to come to my rescue, or I sink. I do hate to talk and feel this way but all week I have neither slept nor eaten humanly, and my hours are very long. It has most gotten me."

This is just one of many. Here is a mother in distress. She needs help. "Pure religion is to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction." Don't you think it would bring you a little closer to the Master if you would make a contribution to help relieve distress like this!

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

proper place in the program of higher education.

The next program of importance on the roster for the observance of the Golden Anniversary would come, of course, during the commencement season, at which time representatives of other institutions would be invited. The program would consist of sermons and addresses by some of the more prominent leaders of our united church.

These suggestions are given to the public through our church paper for the purpose of inviting suggestions of any kind from interested individuals. Please let us have your suggestions as early as possible. It will be necessary for the program in outline to take definite shape at an early date.

Father. A mountain climber tells us of an experience he had in climbing a high mountain. He said "the silence of the elevation was the silence of eternity and space." There is a place of the soul beyond the rim of things where there is a silence of eternity, and it is a place not of talking with God, but of listening to Him as well.

Prayer—O God, help us to practice Thy presence in our lives that we may hear Thy voice and follow Thy guidance along life's highway. As we face the work and the problems of life, give us the joy and the assurance of Thy abiding companionship. Amen.

EASING THE STRAIN.

By BISHOP JAMES E. FREEMAN.

Bishop of Washington.

To get away now and again from the crowds and social occupations is a wholesome and healthy thing. There is a monotony in doing anything with too great frequency; even an excess of luxuries creates nausea. Man is so constituted that he demands variety.

The argument for any change of habit is that it saves us from losing our appetite for a given indulgence or pleasure. If all work and no play makes us dull, by the same token, all play and no work issues in satiety and an unresponsive palate. A balanced diet is a good thing and gives satisfaction and healthy digestion. The happiest people follow such a practice in everything; they have variety in their amusements and recreations, in their reading and social indulgences. All is carefully compounded in right proportions; they keep their appetites keen, their sense of enjoyment alive.

In such a well regulated life a consistent time-table is observed, with the result that the zest of living is never lost. Some of my friends who are upwards of eighty enjoy life today with a finer enthusiasm than they did at forty or younger. They will not let themselves grow old. The secret of it is balanced living, a life poised, hopeful, expectant, satisfied. In such a life there is time for action and time for repose, for humor and more serious thought.

It was such a conception that made the Great Master of men provide a balanced religious faith for the solvent of life's problems, the easing of its strain, the quieting of overwrought nerves and the answering of its greatest riddle. Many people think of religious faith and practice as disciplines, as hindrances to its deepest satisfaction. Robert Louis Stevenson, merry despite his broken body, said that the Bible was a "cheerful book."

The tempo of living today is such, that we measure everything by its intensity, its capacity to excite, hence we are the victims of heart strain and early breaks. Our shortened lives could be lengthened and the real joys of life made more satisfying, if we would have periods where we give ourselves to regulated and prescribed devotional practices, and thought for a while about our souls. We have souls, even if at times we forget them, and they constitute an essential part of our equipment.

It is to recognize this fact that Lent is designed to be a season for surcease from non-essential things. Christ, himself, burdened with the greatest scheme for improving life the world has ever known, stopped for a lengthened period and alone faced the greatness of his undertaking. Even when his work was most demanding, he sought some retired place for repose and reflection.—Michigan Christian Advocate.
