THE NEW YEAR DAWNS!

By REV. C. REXFORD RAYMOND, D. D.

The New Year dawns!

*Though war's wild madness rages,
Take courage from those horse-and-buggy days
When Tennyson and Browning were the sages
Whose winged words set human hearts ablaze.
They wove a social fabric still unfaded,
The tapestry of peace for which we strive.
The hopes by which our fathers were persuaded
In spite of stubborn storms are still alive.*

*Defeated, baffled, beaten, yet undaunted,
We dare to hope that right will vanquish wrong;
And by our visions we are still enchanted,
For when we hark we hear the angel song.
The day-star kindles hope; with faith we wait,
Assured that love at last will conquer hate.*

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes for each of its subscribers and friends a happy and prosperous New Year.

Young people in Rhode Island sent Pilgrim Highroad subscriptions to leaders in Japan and China.

Congratulations to Rev. Malcolm Vernon White who was married to Phyllis Lee Kinsman on Thursday, the twenty-sixth of December, at the Plymouth Congregational Church of Framingham Centre, Mass.

A letter from Mr. J. T. Cross of Holland, Va., expresses appreciation for the kindness of the Baraca and Philathia Classes of Holy Neck Sunday School in providing appropriate gifts during the Christmas season.

The Pilgrim Fellowship in Colorado sent money in November to help train a Chinese nurse. Another goal is the gift of $10.00 for someone definitely planning to enter Christian service, to make contributions to preparation.

Lenten Devotions for Youth, 1941 edition, written by Rev. Richard P. Carter, will be the size of the Fellowship of Prayer booklet, 36 pages, and will cost only two (2c) cents per copy. Send in orders early to Pilgrim Press, or Commission on Evangelism.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN has received notice of the arrival of Carol Louise Wild at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Frederick Wild, 26406 Dundee, Huntington Woods, Mich., on Saturday, December 14, 1940. Many CHRISTIAN SUN readers know Mrs. Wild better as Rebecca, daughter of President and Mrs. Leon Edgar Smith of Elon College.

Dr. Walter H. Judd is moving this week to Minneapolis to resume temporary medical practice until it becomes possible for him to return to China. Dr. Judd has been speaking constantly during the past year in the interest of China and missions. THE CHRISTIAN SUN bids him Godspeed in his now work and prays for the day when he may be permitted to return to the people from whom the tragedy of war has taken him.

CHRISTMAS DAYS AT ALBEMARLE.

The Christmas Season descended upon us at five o'clock on Monday afternoon before Christmas Day when we were summonsed to the door by a knock from without. On our front porch and coming up the front steps were people—young and old—bearing packages of all sizes and descriptions. We were rather confused at first, due to such a complete surprise, but we recovered, and invited the crowd inside. Mother and Dad seemed at a loss as to what to say, but words were not necessary until the guest had rested their bundles in a heap on the dining room table.

When everyone had crowded inside, a hush came over all, and the time came for Dad to say something. Words presented themselves: he appreciated the personal bringing of the pounding, even more than the gift. Afterwards Dad prayed and thanked God for all His goodness.

At 5:30 many were scheduled to meet at the church to fill the Christmas sacks for the children's treat and to help decorate the tree. We left the pounding, unwrapped, on the table and floor, and rushed to the church.

Until 7:30 each was lost in counting candy bars, dropping in oranges, apples, tangerines and nuts, or folding the paper bags. Tree decorations were secured from their last year's hiding place and strung on the stately cedar which just tipped the ceiling.

At home again, our family gathered into its own sanctity to open the packages—canned fruits, vegetables, groceries, sugar, lard, flour, fresh fruits, jellies, preserves and many more household necessities were discovered inside the Christmas bundles.

On Christmas Eve, the seriousness of the world today was forgotten for awhile. The Congregational Church at Albemarle was filled long before the hour set for the program to begin. The Sunday school rooms were thrown open to provide space for late arrivers.

The platform of the church was decked with the Christmas tree and large colored lights shone from among the branches which were laden with many gifts. Beneath the tree were piled many more presents and paper sacks of fruit, nuts and candy for the Sunday school pupils.

The children rendered a sweet Christmas program of recitations and music. We sang carols together. The pastor recited "The Night Before Christmas" and wished everyone a very happy season. Immediately after, Mr. Jack McSwain presented the pastor with a tiny, white gold diamond Masonic pin from the Men's Bible Class.

This year the Wednesday night's Prayer Service was not called in because of Christmas. A few people felt as if they wanted to gather together on Christmas night to quietly commune with the Savior of mankind. Surely the group which found their way to the church on the mid-week night received a comfort which was far greater than any other of the holiday joys.

The Church Faces Nationalism

By REV. LOUIS SCHULZ, Jupiter, Florida.

[Address delivered at the Southeast Coast Association, Lake Worth, Fla., November 13.]

Early in the last decade Edward Shillito wrote a book called Nationalism, the New Religion. It was read with much interest of and objective sort. To many readers in this country it was an examination of an interesting phenomenon taking place in a world far removed our own. However, the growth of the "new religion" has been going on apace until today it may well be considered the foremost problem in churchmanship. Five of the large and re-invigorated nations of the world have supplanted the religion of the ages with nationalism as the highest devotion of the people. This rise of nationalism cannot be accounted for by complaining of a decadent church leaving in the hands of national heroes the responsibility of holding in unity the loyalty and devotion of the people. Such a charge was made against the church in Russia in 1917. But since then Turkey, under Kemel, thrust out the Mohammedan; Italy, under Mussolini has strictly confined the efforts of the Roman Catholic Church in Italy; Germany, under Hitler, has made the German Confessional Church subservient to the state; and Japan has shintoized the Christian Churches in the land of the rising sun.

It is as useless as baying at the moon to cry that this has been accomplished through individual leaders and when these leaders pass away all will become once more serene. The philosophy of history and the science of social studies show quite clearly that great leaders are erupted to pinnacles of leadership by the pressure of discontented, milling people who have become disconnected or displaced from the moorings of former days. The rise of nationalism is a social movement of disrupted people who are looking for social salvation. Whatever else might be said against this new nationalism, complete social unity from the peasant to the powerful is its aim.

Where nationalism as a prime emotional force has swept the country, the church, or the form of faith, has been made subservient to the interests and aims of the state where it has not been obliterated. Strangely enough this has not been too difficult to accomplish. There has been comparatively little religious persecution. The rising tides of natoinalism have had very little difficulty in sweeping religious forms and organizations to second place. With the exception of Japan the rise of nationalism has been preceded by indifference to religion. Several friends who visited Europe in the early thirties remarked that the most disconcerting experience of the trip was to find the church services of the continent so poorly attended. Some of the noblest cathedrals and most inspiring forms of service were spoiled for them by the paucity of the attendance. Dr. Raymond Albright, of Albright Seminary in Pennsylvania, upon his return from Europe, revealed that German Christians of the Confessional Church insisted on observing the sacrament of baptism, and required their children to be confirmed and married in the church but evidently did not feel very strongly the need for attending the worship services. It is not surprising that when the new leader demanded the oath of complete allegiance to him that the people as a whole could see nothing wrong in such an oath, since it was the means to defense and new life to the people. The German pietist groups who comprise several small denominational groups numbering about 700,000 were undisturbed by the new order of things because their religious beliefs and expressions were entirely separated from any political and social implications.

It might be objected at this point that such dangers of nationalism do not in any way menace or involve the church in America. However, there are several noticeable trends in this country that remind one rather sharply of similar conditions in Europe before the wave of nationalism swept to power.

1. The Formal Acceptance of Religion.—The first noticeable trend is the formal acceptance of religion. The blatant noisy atheism of ten years ago is not heard any longer. It might appear there is a deepening spiritual life in the United States. Any attempt by our leaders to speak against religion would be met with serious opposition. On the other hand it is shown plainly that while membership in churches is increasing the decrease in attendance is so serious efficiently organized campaigns are under way throughout our country to convince church members who have vowed before God and the assembled church to attend and support the church to actually attend the services. Here we most certainly have formal acceptance of religion with little personal interest.

2. Persecution of Jehovah's Wit- nesses.—Without a doubt these people are mistaken in their belief that it is idolatry to salute the flag, and, too, they have made themselves obnoxious. But mob violence and hysteria such as swept our country several weeks ago in the name of patriotism is an indication of a nationalism that has no concern for religious conviction. If this mob violence is to be excused as a passing hysteria the decision of the Supreme Court against the "Jehovah's Witnesses" written by Justice Frankfurter contains food for the thoughtful. The decision against the "Witnesses" was made on the point that the need for national solidarity is greater than personal religious conviction.

3. The Influence of Europe on the United States.—A third factor to be remembered is the inevitable impact all strong movements in Europe have upon American life. Isolation is a political theory of sound and foam, it has no basis in fact. All forms of political upheaval, industrial change, religious impulse, and social pattern have had their impact on American life from the industrial revolution to the present war. While they have not struck us always with the same force as in the old world they have sufficient force to effect changes in modes and forms of life.

4. Government in the United States by Pressure Blocs.—A fourth and negative sign dangerous to our present democraey is government by pressure blocs. This is considered by some of our statesmen to be serious enough to menace our entire democratic system. When bloc pressure reaches the point of chaos toward which it is rapidly moving a sharp reverse may be expected and with the political patterns of Europe and Asia at hand some modified form of totalitarianism may be expected. If Wendell Willkie carries on a running fire of "constructive criticism" for the next four years the United States will experience a similar confusion that preceded the rise of nationalism in Italy and Germany. A harrassed people will demand united action.

The Relation of Church and State.—To face this situation realistically while there is yet time our outstanding churchmen should make clear to the people in the pews at least the relation of church and state. It is a simple statement and an easy conclusion to quote the separation of church and state. But just what does such a statement mean in terms of modern church life in its relation to the modern state? One writer on this subject found an easy conclusion by CHRISTMAS IS NOT OVER.

The shriveled soul laments that Christmas is over and the greedy soul rejoices that this enforced holiday is now safely past. But Christmas is not over. It came to Bethlehem as a fresh breath to this parched world. Heaven and earth mingled as humanity became clothed with divinity. The New Testament, early church writers and secular authors supply the birthmarks and fingerprints of its advent. Twenty centuries of continuous celebration have by no means reached the point of monotony. Christmas is not over until Christ is forgotten. Christmas is not over until the last church is closed, the last Bible is blacked out, the last missionary massacred, the last minister muzzled, and the last prayer paralyzed. We are privileged to live in an after-Christmas world, and the manifold blessings of Christmas are as available and essential in January and August as in December. In the providence of God, in which a thousand years are as but a day, the cumulative significance of Christmas has merely begun.

COOPERATION AND CHRISTMAS.

Christmas was not a completely isolated event. The prophets, the angel, Mary, Joseph, the wise men and the shepherds collaborated in giving us this most sublime of all occasions. Cooperation is still the order of the day. Realizing how essential this is in the home, in the local church, we must realize how equally essential it is in the total life of our church. The same conditions of success obtain. All who plead and strive for such cooperation in favor of their local church or particular enterprise should remember that the logic of their reasoning as well as the spirit of Christ should lead to an extension and more complete accommodation of that same cooperation. Having proclaimed the Christmas message, it now behoves us to practice it to the limit of our influence.

CONVENTION TEAM WORK IN THE NEW YEAR.

This New Year of our Lord should be a great one for our Convention. Money flows freely, and a reasonable proportion should be appropriated for spiritual ends. Since the life of every local church is ultimately conditioned by the health of the Convention, it would seem that the total program of our church should receive unanimous support from our members, ministers and churches. Any curtailment of our present program would result in weakness and inefficiency at vital points in the corporate life of our church. Failure to carry on all branches of our work would reveal no lack of resources, but only poverty of grace and gumption in our midst. God forbid that there should ever be such a humiliating disclosure within our ranks. Team-work will triumph. "For by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? But now hath God set the members, every one of them, in the body, as it hath pleased him. And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. God hath tempered the body together, that there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular."—(I Cor. 12: 13-27.)

God has set no limit to the achievements of our church. We are limited only by the extent of our faith and vision. Every department and institution will prosper if the Golden Rule becomes the daily rule of every life. Retrogression inevitably follows failure to observe His rules. Ours is a great game and a great Leader. In all humility and earnestness we must seek the promised guidance of His Spirit and resolutely launch out into an enlarging field of usefulness during this year of grace.

A SALUTE TO "THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

"The Christian Advocate," the voice of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for more than a century, was discontinued last week. Dr. William P. King has been the editor since 1932. During this time Dr. King has criticized the inequalities of the capitalistic system, an injustice toward the Negro race, defended the conscientious objector, denounced the wickedness of war, advocated the open method of appointments and the publicising of official salaries, promoted Methodist union and proclaimed a whole Gospel. The new church-wide "Christian Advocate," under the able editorship of Dr. Roy L. Smith, will begin publication this week in Chicago.

R. L. H.

The prodigal... son confessed his sins. He did not try to place the blame on some one else. He did not "beat around the bush," but with frankness he said: "I have sinned." When we have done wrong, why not make a confession and then get right before God? The Lord will forgive us if we have sincerely repented. There are many prodigals today who have not yet admitted that they have sinned. Real repentance means much. Before people can repent they must be sorry that they have sinned—not just sorry that they were caught in sin.—E. M. Borden.

Oh, it is sad for a poor Christian to stand at the door of the promise, in the dark night of affliction, afraid to draw the latch, whereas he should then come boldly for shelter as a child into his father's house.—Gurnal.

OUR PREACHER FOR THIS WEEK IS
DR. RUSSELL HENRY STAFFORD, OLD SOUTH CHURCH, BOSTON.

FORESIGHT—A NEW YEAR'S SERMON.

“ . . . The foolish, when they took their lamps, took no oil with them.”—St. Matt. 25:3.

The story of the wise and foolish virgins is a parable of the Church and the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth. That is its deeper meaning. But that deeper meaning goes along with one on the surface which is suitable as a theme for the New Year. For this is also a parable of foresight or prudence.

The story is in light vein, and I think intentionally so. It tells about a marriage celebration, and the preparations for its merriment. These girls were bridesmaids. According to the custom of the time, the bridesmaids were to wait for the coming of the bridegroom to the bride's home, and go out to meet him. Then a feast would be served before he took his new wife to his own home. Five of the girls had sense enough to carry a stock of oil sufficient to keep their open wick lamps burning even if the bridegroom's arrival was unusually delayed. But the other five were scatterbrains who made no such provision. The penalty of their negligence, no doubt half playfully administered, was that they had to drop out of the party.

Jesus was smiling, I am sure, as he held up these scatterbrains in his tale to the laughter of his audience because as things turned out they were by their own fault put in a silly and humiliating position. Nothing terrible happened to them beyond that. They were shut out from the wedding, to be sure. But they had homes of their own to go to, through the dark streets. And morning would come in due course; they were by no means condemned to perpetual darkness. Nevertheless no one would want to put himself in such an embarrassing spot if he could help it. It is not pleasant to be laughed at, and know that you deserve it.

This story has two interesting aspects which contrast with the unbroken solemnity and the extravagant idealism which we too easily attribute to Jesus, if we have derived our notions about him principally from sermons, without ourselves making an open-minded study of the Gospel records. In the first place, the humor of this narrative here reveals Our Lord as savouring to the full that flavour of the ridiculous which is the salt of daily experience. We can understand and like him better for finding him awake to the foolish as well as to the wicked phase of human nature on its less admirable side. If we can chuckle with him when the facts call for it, we can go farther with him as a congenial friend and brother in those elements of his ministry which plumb the depths of our need and carry us up to the heights of God's majesty and grace.

And again, it may seem at first surprising to find Jesus enjoying common sense with regard to the future. For we remember how in the Sermon on the Mount he has told us not to be anxious for the morrow. Has the subtle, salty humour of that advice escaped us? Let me quote it in full: “Be not therefore anxious for the morrow; for the morrow will be anxious for itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.” Though not without sympathy, Jesus is yet in those words deftly making fun of the folly of borrowing trouble. But worry is one thing, planning is another. The thing to do is to plan without worrying.

Of course there are many things we cannot plan for. For instance, we cannot plan how we will meet an emergency. For by definition an emergency is an event which cannot be foreseen. But in simple matters like having oil on hand to last our lamps through the night—or, to transcribe into a modern parallel, filling our gasoline tank before we start on a long drive on back roads—not only can we plan ahead, but we may get into the kind of difficulty which will invite justifiable derision if we do not.

Moreover, as a practical man—and that he was, through and through, or he would not have got the results he did which are still accumulating—Jesus would never have said that the plans we make for a long time in advance can all be carried out without change. A long-time plan, like a hard and fast rule, is a road to depart from when you have to, but to return to as soon afterward as you can. If you have a plan, you know at least where the road lies which you want to follow. And you can find it again, even if you have had to leave it for a while. And in the end, on the road, you will get somewhere, instead of wandering in circles in the woods.

I have called this story of the bridesmaids a parable of foresight and prudence. The knowledge that there is a future is a part of man's recognition of time, upon which both memory and anticipation hang. It is a function our unique capacity among creatures to think with a certain degree of detachment, including ourselves among the objects of our thought, instead of merely reacting to immediate situations. Foresight becomes prudence when we realize that we can take a hand if we will, and up to a certain extent, in fashioning our own future. That is a corollary of the fact that we are not puppets, with God or nature pulling the strings, but have wills of our own. As philosophers would put it, we have both self-consciousness and self-determination. So of us it is required by reason that as far as we are able we shall provide for future contingencies, just as God does. For He is the Mind of the universe, personal in the same sense as we are, and in this very sense of being self-conscious and self-determining. This kinship of nature is what is meant by saying that man is created in the likeness of God.

God's active foresight, His planning, we call Providence. Man's planning is called prudence. Prudence is a shorter form of the word Providence, just as admittedly man's planning is shorter-sighted than God's. Prudence falls short of Providence, but both in different degrees mean making provision for what lies ahead of us.

Ahead of us just now lies a new year, under our conventional system of time bookkeeping. These arbitrary divisions of the flow of days have no absolute value, but they have great relative value for our convenience. What shall we do about this new year? I suggest that, unless we want to look as silly as the bridesmaids whom Jesus bluntly called fools (the word he uses is the regular Greek term of which that is the exact rendering)—unless we choose to run into needless snags as they did—we had better plan our lives for the next twelve months, tentatively, to be sure, but in as much detail as we possibly can.

The obvious place to begin is with a money budget. There is nothing wrong with money in itself. In its own way it is very important, even essential. Money is just one of the many factors in life in this world which belong in the basement, and are wholly and grotesquely out of

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The contrasts of life are striking and instructive. The festivities of the recent Christmas Season have revealed these contrasts in many ways. Driving through the streets, illuminated by thousands of multi-colored electric lights, one thought of the black-outs of war-stricken cities in Europe. What a contrast between these beautiful lights and utter darkness! Where peace is found and good will abounds, mankind may have the blessed privilege of light, of knowledge and liberty, but when hate is unbridled and covetousness runs riot, humanity must hide in darkness and shudder with fear and trembling. On one hand life, abundant life, is offered and protected; on the other hand life is endangered and blotted out.

There is also a contrast in the pursuit of pleasure. In passing by the A. B. C. store on Christmas Eve, we observed the scores of people, white and colored, standing in line waiting for the opportunity to purchase the coveted supply of liquor for Christmas. There was no evidence of any special privileges for class or race. And it was evident that well-dressed white people were willing to stand in line patiently waiting their turn, conceding due rights to people of other races. In other stores great crowds were busy with their shopping list, seeking to purchase some articles more conducive to the peace and happiness of their families. Some people sought the liquor store for their personal satisfaction; others found their pleasure in the purchase and use of goods which make life happier, without any loss of moral virtue or spiritual power.

The difference in taste is evident in the use of opportunities for spiritual culture. Many people seem to think that it is more profitable for them to stay in bed too late to attend Sunday school and services of worship in the church. They miss the fellowship and the spiritual uplift of public worship. Very few of these people are willing to admit that they have lost their sense of spiritual values. Other people are keenly disappointed when they are compelled to be absent from their church. For them there is no place comparable to the house of God and the altar of prayer. They can say with David: "I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." People should understand that voluntary and continued absence from the house of God may lead one "to dwell in the tents of wickedness."

Again, there are contrasts in the appreciation of values. Esau sold his birth-right for a mess of pottage. Other young men have denied themselves of many of life's pleasures, that they might have something more valuable than a birthright. There are times when youth must choose between indulgence and self-denial. What young people may become is more important than what they may have. The rich young ruler came to Jesus seeking an inheritance; Jesus offered him a way of life. That way of life is more important than any material inheritance within the reach of humanity. Man lives in constant dependence upon material things, but no man can live by bread alone. The kingdom of God must have first place for every person who aspires to rise to the summit of the heights above him. The Bible teaches man how to distinguish between the high and the low, the good and the bad; and the church offers an interpretation of life which should be the ideal of all mankind.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE NEW YEAR.

It is a joy to be a part of the church and a privilege to work for the stability and progress of her institutions. The New Year from the standpoint of our Convention begins with the college period. Since November 1 the greater part of our church has been working in the new church year. The College Period, however, does not begin until January 1. It is to be expected that the college in accordance with instruction from the Convention shall present its program and appeal to the Sunday schools and churches of the Convention that the church may know the state of the college, its plans, purposes and needs. We are in the midst of the best year yet experienced by the college. Our enrollment is larger, our curriculum broader, and our quality of classroom instruction of higher order. It is the purpose of the college to continue a program of advance in essential fields and along vital lines. Because of enforced necessity we are schooled in practical economics.

To operate a college the type of Elon on funds realized from the student body with the exception of contributions from churches amounting this year to less than $7,000.00 is a task requiring versatile ingenuity and infinite patience. Were it not for the contributions from the churches and friends, it would be impossible for the college to continue. If the churches could realize the vital necessity of their cooperation and contribution to the college, I am sure that everyone would feel compulsion to contribute. Sixty-eight hundred dollars may seem insignificant in a total college program, but when that amount means success, it becomes tellingly important.

I have been trying to get a detailed report from the various conferences showing the contributions by churches in our several conferences. Some conference secretaries have provided the information requested, and I am sure that the others will shortly. As is usually the case, some increased their contributions, some were not able to secure an amount equal to last year, and others did not find it possible to contribute at all. The urgency this year is that every church shall do its best. If a church cannot give the entire amount apportioned, it certainly can give something. At the college we face increased cost in everything that will be required for the continuation of the program which increases our need and makes it more necessary for the church and our friends to come to our assistance. I feel that the college is making an indispensable contribution to the intelligent and spiritual life of our church, a contribution that is essential if we are to keep abreast with the march of civilization and provide leadership that our church may extend its influence and service into volumes and fields that are inviting. It would be a good New Year's resolution on the part of the church, its pastor and officials to resolve to meet all conference requirements that our church and her institutions may be able to record achievements worthwhile ere 1941 shall come to a close.

A happy and prosperous New Year to all!

L. E. SMITH.

Divine grace, even in the heart of weak and sinful men, is an invincible thing. Drown it in the waters of adversity, it rises more beautiful, as not being drowned indeed, but only washed; throw it into the furnace of fiery trials, it comes out purer, and loses nothing but the dross which our corrupt nature mixes with it.—Robert Leighton.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Oliver Clayton wants me to tell you that he has gained to nine pounds and six ounces now, and so he is able to smile. Santa has been real good to him. He would like for you to come and see what Santa brought him if you get a chance. He deeply appreciates an electric bottle warmer because it keeps his mother and dad from having to go into a cold kitchen to warm supplementary milk for him at night. It also enables him to get all of his food without a recess in between. He likes best of all the gifts which his Cradle Roll superintendent gave him and he wants me to tell you about it.

A "Child's Bible" with the "Life of Jesus" printed in it. It also has places for baby's picture, history of baby and his mother and dad. Too, there are prayers for morning and evening and grace for meals. He can hardly wait until he is old enough to commit some of them to memory! It was written by Cecil C. Carpenter and may be secured by writing to the Baby Bible and Prayer Book Co., Peoria, Ill. Oh, yes, there are ten commandments for children, too. I am going to copy one of each type of prayer. I hope that your parents or missionary society or cradle roll superintendent will get one of these for each child who reads this page. It would be a good project for the missionary groups to sponsor. I can think of no greater need in the life of a child than just such religious instruction which this little Bible contains. It contains 124 pages and is bound in white with gold lettering on the front. The inside pages are edged in red. I think that these books can be bought in the large Five and Ten Cent Stores for 25c each. But, it may be possible to secure them for less if one orders them in large numbers from the Company. Anyway, it is worth investigating if a mission group is interested. Our missionary society purchased enough for the cradle roll superintendent to present one to each child on her roll.

Children who attend the Baptist Sunday school here in Sanford have been learning prayers before meals in the Beginner's Department. Little four-year-old Barbara had learned one which her parents let her pray at meal time. Barbara liked it so much that she decided to teach it to her two and a half year old sister, Jane. The prayer went something like this: "Dear God, we thank you for the birds and flowers and trees and for our food. Dear Jesus, we love you and want to be like you. Amen." One day, Barbara asked her parents to let Jean say the blessing. So Jean said: "Dear Jesus, we love you and want to be like you. Dear God, we thank you for the birds and flowers and trees and for our food. Amen." After which Barbara remarked: "I think you are mighty sweet to keep on trying so hard to say it. But I declare you get it wrong side out every time."

Here are the prayers from the "Child's Bible"—

Morning Prayer.

Dear Lord, we thank Thee for the rest,
And for protection through the night,
We pray the Thou wilt guide our feet
Throughout the coming day so bright.
Amen.

Prayer Before Meals.

We thank Thee for the food, dear Lord,
That Thou didst kindly give;
Help us show our thanks to Thee
By how we talk and live.
Amen.

Evening Prayer.

Dear Father, bless us all tonight,
Surround our beds with care and love;
And when the shadows "round us come,
Grant us watch-care from above."
Amen.

A CHRISTMAS SERVICE.

Tonight, December 22, I got a friend to stay with Oliver Clayton and I went to church for the first time since October 20.

My husband had gone to preach out at our Shallow Well Christian Church. I decided that I would just love to go to a Christmas service at our church in Sanford. The young people were putting on a Christmas play about stewardship. I had taught some of those young people in Sunday school. So my friend said she would take care of our son while I went.

I wrapped my white gift and hurried to the church just two blocks away! Before I got to the church I heard the organ and the choir. On the Sabbath evening air came the words: "Angels, from the realms of glory, Wing your flight o'er all the earth." When I entered the vestibule of the church the boys who were ushering gave me a program and told me on which side of the church to find a seat. On entering the church I caught my breath sharply at its loveliness. Above the altar a large picture of the Madonna and Child. Either side of the altar flanked with pines. On the altar, communion table, bright red poinsettias, and on either side of the poinsettias a burning taper. Then there were candles and holly on the stands and on the piano. The vested choir and the young man who acted minister in his robe all made one want to worship and caused me to feel anew—"I was glad when I went into the house of the Lord."

SPECIAL CALLED MEETING OF THE MISSION BOARD OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

The Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, Inc., met here today (November 30, 1940) in a special called meeting and was called to order at 2 o'clock by the President, Col. J. E. West. Rev. W. J. Andes, at the request of the President, conducted the devotional service.

Members present were Mrs. J. Monroe Harris, Rev. W. J. Andes, Mr. J. A. Williams, Mrs. S. C. Harrell, Mr. A. L. Jolly, Col. J. E. West and the Secretary, Mattie Cox Parker. Dr. H. S. Harcastle sent proxy to J. E. West. A quorum was present in person. Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary, was also present.

The sale of the Portsmouth lots was discussed by the President, Col. West. Col. West reported that in accordance with the resolution of the Board adopted at the annual meeting held September 11, 1940, he had sold the lots in rear of Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va., for the sum of $500.00. The Board confirmed the sale and instructed him to convey the property to the purchaser when purchase price was paid, and also instructed the officers to give deed for same.

The President instructed the Secretary to pay expenses of the Board members.

Mr. Lester made a report on the Carroll County work as to repairs, etc., that has been done on the churches and also what is to be done in the future. Rev. G. H. Veazey, Belew Creek, N. C., has been elected to the pastorate in Carroll County, succeeding Rev. B. J. Earp, who resigned December 1. It was moved and carried that the Secretary write Mr. Veazey requesting that he hold services at Ivy Hill Church.

Mr. Lester presented to the Board the idea of having Dr. D. Brewer Eddy of Boston in the Convention early in March to solicit special gifts for foreign missions in addition to what we are now doing.

The promotion of missionary giving was discussed. It was moved and carried that Mr. Lester be instructed to invite Dr. Eddy to hold inspirational meetings and solicit individuals only for special gifts for foreign missions only during mission months in 1941, this to be in addition to what the membership is now doing, or expected to do. This campaign is approved on condition that these individual gifts shall be reported and paid to our Board, whether in cash or pledges, and that same be entered by our Board as special individual gifts for foreign missions, or similar language, so that the Mission Board can tell the exact receipts of Dr. Eddy's campaign, and that Mr. Lester work out his schedule for the period Dr. Eddy will be in the Convention.

Mr. Lester again brought up the question of his doing promotional work for the Mission Board, and the President read copy of a letter written to the Executive Committee of the Convention on September 24. It was moved and carried that the administration of the Mission Board be left in the hands of the President and Secretary and to call on the Promotional Secretary for any work the Board wishes him to do. It was moved and carried that the Executive Committee be notified of this action.

It was moved and carried that we print the entire minutes of the Mission Board meetings in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

It was moved and carried that we adjourn. Mr. Lester offered prayer.

J. E. WEST, President.

MATTIE COX PARKER, Sec'y.

NORTH CAROLINA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

PROGRAM SUGGESTIONS FOR JANUARY AND FEBRUARY.

The North Carolina women voted, at their annual conference this fall, to make gifts to the migrants in February. With this in mind, it might be well to have both the January and February meetings center around the work of the migrants. If you prefer, a regular New Year's service can be planned for January, perhaps using "Roads of Service" from Missionary Worship Programs by Doherty, for your devotional, and talking of the ways in which your group can serve during the coming year. However, it is at the January meeting that plans should be made for the gifts to the migrants, so that they can be assembled during the month and brought to your February meeting, or materials secured during the month and brought to the February meeting to be finally fixed into "kits" for use in the Migrant Social Centers sponsored by the Council of Women for Home Missions.

There is an abundance of material in your packet for two programs on the migrants, and many possibilities of combining the materials effectively. The following are suggestions:

I. January Meeting—

- A. Devotional Program from page 5 of "The Refugee Problem."
- B. Talks by members concerning the refugees in our country today—where they come from, why they are coming, what the church can do to help them. (See "The Refugee Problem.")
- C. Report of article entitled "The Refugee Problem" found on page 211 of "Advance" for May, 1940.
- D. If there is a refugee in your community who has recently come to our country, invite him to come to your group to tell you of conditions in country from which he came, and of things he thinks church people here can do to help refugees.

II. February Meeting—

- A. Devotional Service from "Shifting Populations."
- B. Have different women tell about material in each of the sections of above pamphlet, "Shifting Populations."
- C. Assemble gifts for migrant social centers.
- D. Close with poem on page 7 of pamphlet referred to above.

III. January Meeting—

- A. Devotional Service from "Missionary Herald" for September, 1940, page 32, entitled "The Least of These."
- B. Review of "The Church Serving the Migrants," one pamphlet in home mission study book this year called "Uprooted Americans."
- C. Interesting talks concerning the articles in "Social Action" for May, 1940, entitled "A Visit With the Joads" and "Ten Women and Melinda." (Page 6 and page 30.)
- D. Plan for the things your group can do for migrants.

IV. February Meeting—Same as II.

The above material, with the exception of the pamphlet from the Home Mission Study Book, is in the Program Packet, costing 50 cents. There are a few of these which may still be purchased.

Five other suggestions:

1. If you do not have the program (with green cover) given out at Conference, which contains a list of things to be sent to migrant social centers, write to Mrs. D. E. Mitchell, 115 Montgomery Street, Reidsville, N. C., Superintendent of Friendly Service.

2. At the January meeting ask your members to cut out of newspapers or magazines any articles or pictures they see about migrants or refugees during the month and bring them to the February meeting. They may be placed on display, made into posters, or used as the basis for at least one "current event" from each member. You will be surprised how much material you will find on these subjects—from comments by Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt to information about people moving into your community.

3. There is a worship program entitled "The Ministry of the Highway" found in Guide Posts to Better Meetings (which was sent by Mrs. W. E. Wissemann to each local president last summer) which is suitable for use with program on migrants.

4. On the last page of the pamphlet entitled, "Shifting Populations," you will find a list of material you may secure for further study on this subject. Make use of this list.

5. Have someone in your group, or Miss Tora Rudd, Burlington, N. C., review the home mission study book, "Uprooted Americans," during January or February. (We regret that Rev. A. L. Granger, Jr., of Asheboro, is just recovering from an appendicitis operation. He is the other reviewer of the adult study book on the migrants, but his review of it must necessarily come later in the year.)

I shall be glad to furnish the materials suggested for these programs.

A NEW YEAR'S SERMON.

place when transfer them to the upper stories of our dwelling, while we are out of place in the same degree if we go down into the basement to live among them. There is a furnace-room in my house, and it would be a most uncomfortable house in winter if there were not; but I do not sleep or eat or even read in the furnace-room. Beginning our plans with money is all right. Aiming our plans at money is just as wrong as it can be. It is what is chiefly wrong with the world. We Christians must avoid that pitfall.

How much is your income likely to be for the year? Choose a conservative figure, and plan to stay well within it if you can. To do so you must answer in advance another question. How much will it be necessary for you to spend? You can find that out only by analyzing your past living costs into their component items and allotting sums ahead to each of them proportional to their relative importance and to total prospective receipts. Leave a margin for extras, of course, but keep your extras within that margin, duly counted in on your expense schedule. Know where your money is going to, and keep track of it, even if you cannot be sure where it will come from. If your obligations are large and cannot be reduced, you may have to go into the hole on this particular year's balance. But, to paraphrase Bairnsfather, you can find a better 'ole if you choose it with precaution and ease yourself into it instead of stumbling headfirst into the first one you encounter.

It is as vital to budget time as money. There will be 365 days of 24 hours each in the new year. What will we do with all those hours? The two mistakes to be avoided are waste and hurry, if we want to get through with definite aims definitely accomplished, and without wearing our nerves thin. Put down what you have to do and what you want to do alongside of the time at your disposal. Allow for everything, including play. For play is necessary, if we are to keep sane and sweet-tempered under the multiple pressures of duty. Plan each day of a typical week, with minutes enough between engagements to transfer yourself from one to the next without getting flurried. And you will be astonished at the amount you can get done without strain, the growth you can make in many lines in a perfectly normal and agreeable way, simply by taking forethought—drawing up a timetable, sticking to it with such resolution that only a crisis will throw you off, and returning to it promptly after the crisis is over.

Money and time are both closely connected with our work. Exactly what is it that you are trying to do at your job? How much ought you to achieve in one year? What ought you to have in tangible results at the end, to show for it? So much for objective. How have you or others been accustomed to do this kind of work? Can you by taking thought discover better ways of going about it, more economical of energy or productive of more results? So much for methods. Many people dawdle or drift, not because they are lazy, but because they are thoughtless. They are the foolish virgins and matrons, bachelors and benedicts. They are at fault for their own foolishness. For it costs nothing to be wise at this point, and yet it earns a great deal. It does not require genius, but only common sense. He who will not exercise his common sense deserves to be a failure, nor will his deserts be withheld from him.

We must assign time in our schedules for people as well as for toil. Personal relations count for as much as a livelihood, though the livelihood must first be provided for if possible.

WHAT'S NEW ABOUT IT?

By this time most of us have received from a favorite business house a new calendar—one with a different picture at the top, and the numerals set up for the New Year. But with the exception of that—and of our habitually having to think twice before we can remember that the year is 1941 instead of 1940—what's new about this year?

There are new conditions in our world today. Horrible in its newness is the intensity of human suffering. And because of the more complex tangle in which we find ourselves, there is a new urgency for a genuine Christian interpretation of life. There are new calls for the best talents that we have, and new opportunities for service.

On the other hand, we are aware of completely untapped resources for new growth and development, both mentally and spiritually. And with this renewed energy and enthusiasm, we have within our own grasp the potentialities of a truly New Year.

Anything that is new brings with it the thought of keeping a clean record, and of progress. In our young people's work, as in other phases of our lives, the New Year affords an opportunity for us to take into account the things we have done, and the possibilities for a broader program.

BY WAY OF SUGGESTION.

What better time could there be to call together the officers of your local group and have them talk over your activities thus far during the year, and in the light of what has been done make definite plans for future work? If you can arrange a week-end officers' retreat, or at least a full afternoon's session, you will find it easier to plan a successful program.

Make Youth Week (January 26 to February 2) the best your church has ever had. Instead of one service to celebrate the anniversaries of Pilgrim Fellowship and Christian Endeavor, why not several meetings during the week? A banquet, a study group, a discussion group, perhaps a special program for the entire church, or a party for all the church members, might be enjoyable in your group.

The Lenten Season is of special importance to the Christian Church. We should certainly begin now to make plans for the observance of this season, so that it may become more and more meaningful to us. If possible, order now from the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, a copy of Lenten Devotions for Young People for each young person in your church. These may be secured for five cents each. Maybe you'd like to plan a special worship service at the beginning of Lent (February 26), at which time these devotional booklets might be given out.

A PRAYER FOR THE NEW YEAR.

O year that is going, take with you
Some evil that dwells in my heart;
Let selfishness, doubt,
Whit the old year go out—
With joy I should see them depart.

O year that is going, take with you
Impatience and wilfulness—pride;
The sharp word that slips
From these too hasty lips,
I would cast with the old year aside.

O year that is coming, bring with you
Some virtue of which I have need;
More patience to bear
And more willingness to share,
And more love that is true love indeed.

—Laura F. Armitage.

PROGRAM GUIDES.

The Program Guide which was drawn up by the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship and the Pilgrim Fellowship Council of the Southern Convention has been mimeographed by the Board of Christian Education, and is now ready for distribution. It is hoped that every young people's group in the Southern Convention will have a copy of this Program Guide. They are being sent to a key worker in every church, so far as the list is available. If no one in your group has received one, please write to the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., and they will see that you get one.

HOW BIG IS MY WORLD?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JANUARY 12, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Rom. 1:14; I Cor. 4:7;
Gal. 3:28; John 10:16.

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Man of the World—Gen. 12:1-9.

Tuesday—An Extensive, Godly Empire—Ps. 72:1-14.

Wednesday—A Small-World Man—Luke 12:16-21.

Thursday—Peter's World Enlarged—Acts 10:34, 35.

Friday—Apostles' World Delineated—Acts 13:1-5.

Saturday—A Widespread Harvest—Luke 10:1, 2.

This topic provides a great opportunity for the mind to think and feel in terms of world wide problems and needs. Do not let narrowness or prejudice based on national, racial, or social barriers be any part of your thinking. This is a broad world and our horizons need to be enlarged.

A testimony of an African Christian: "When we see Jesus and understand, we cannot help ourselves; we cannot do otherwise but become Christian. And as Christians, we cannot do otherwise but share our lives and experiences with those of our people who do not know this program, and have not found, nor even know of, the joy and freedom that we feel in our hearts and lives."

Is this the conception of a true Christian? Does such an experience limit the world?

Explain what Emerson means in—

"I am the owner of the sphere of the seven stars and the solar year, of Caesar's hand, and Plato's brain, of Lord Christ's heart, and Shakespeare's strain."

Use the questionnaire of World Interests listed in the Christian Endeavor World. Make a questionnaire of your interests around the world.

Questions for Discussion—

1. Does your world permit your soul to reach unto the uttermost parts of the earth?

2. What prejudices toward other people operate most frequently in this community? How can they be removed?

3. To what extent are we dependent on other people for our physical comfort, culture, education and religious privileges?

4. To what extent is your society supporting foreign missionary work in the local church and denomination.

Suggested Hymns—

"Jesus Shall Reign."

"In Christ There Is No East or West."

CHURCH FACES NATIONALISM.

saying the function of the church was to develop character and to maintain virtue in the citizens of the state. But when the state disagrees with the church as to what constitutes good character or uses a program which the church considers to be destructive to character and virtue who has the last voice in the matter? Of course the state does not expect to be defied. The new nationalism precludes possibility of an issue by requiring absolute allegiance and obedience to the state in all matters. There can be no real problem where religious life is expressed in passive pietism.

With the rise of the Social Prophets during the closing years of the 19th century the Christian Church in the United States has become more and more keenly conscious of the need for Christian participation in all of life's relationships. Today the church's vision of the kingdom involves much more than a heavenly rest after earth's labors are completed. The church is interested, and actively engaged in influencing, the lives of Christians from birth to burial. All forms of play, ethical standards of courtship, industrial relations, marital relations, as well as doctrinal beliefs and the recreating impulses of worship are being influenced by the church. One feels our great churchmen must make very clear to the people in the pews what the church believes to be the proper relations of the church and state to each other. This relation has changed many times in the twenty centuries of the Christian era. There is no basic Christian principle in the New Testament. In his Essay on Liberty, J. Stuart Mill refers to the absence of any recognition in Christian ethics of duties to the state. George P. Fisher in his Beginnings of Christianity, refers to the principle of "gradualness and partialness" in divine revelation. In other words what is not revealed clearly and definitely must be expected to be revealed gradually through the experiences of life and the grace of God.

There are three attitudes toward the state to be noted in the New Testament. The first and most commonly used is the "Caesar Saying" of Jesus when the Pharisee sought to involve him with Rome. Cadoux, in his source book The Church and the World considers this statement a flexible repulse which has always been in need of defining more clearly. The second statement in the New Testament often used today is Paul's epistle to the Roman's in which the apostle to the Gentiles says, "the powers that be are ordained of God" and a terror to the evil doer. This was all very well while the emperor and the officers of the empire in general were protecting the Christians. But what shall we say of this passage when we realize that Paul was martyred at the hands of the infamous Nero. Surely Paul would not accept the charge of being an "evil doer." The third attitude toward the state we find in the New Testament is the conviction that the kingdoms of the world were under the sway of Satan. The third temptation of Jesus in the wilderness and the writings of the Revelation of St. John reveal this attitude quite clearly.

The relation of the church and state must be clearly defined in such terms as to permit the church to function as a spiritual force in all phases of human society. The church should never be prevented from opposing such fantasies as Aryanism, antisemitism or class wars. Nor should it ever be hindered from "laboring for progress of knowledge, the promotion of justice, the reign of peace, and the realization of human brotherhood." To all this we can hear a hearty "Amen." But the church in America at least has had to prove its right to speak out for betterment of human relations. The young clergyman, Francis J. McConnell was denounced for his social investigations that revealed shameful injustices in industrial relations, and others of the earlier social prophets often found their way hard. Washington Gladden's great hymn was an inspiration at a time when he felt completely crushed by those who opposed his fight for justice:

The strain of toil, the fret of care,
O Master let me walk with Thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me Thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

When the World War broke upon the western world several courageous churchmen spoke the truth as they perceived it, and history in later years corroborated only to be overwhelmed by a flood of hysteria that came from fellow churchmen as well as government forces in one expression or another. In the last quarter of a century the church in America has developed a rather keen conscience on war. But in the present emergency it dares not press the conviction nor sharpen this conscience among men and women eligible to bear arms.

In the News Letter Supplement of September, 1940, containing a statement unanimously adopted by the General Council at Berkeley we find this strange combination of statements. Speaking of war it reaffirms that which the churches of the world in 1937 passed on all war: "It is a demonstration of the power of sin in this world and a defiance of the righteousness of God. . . . War involves compulsory enmity, diabolical outrage against human personality, and wanton distortion of the truth." The letter continues with a review of the tragic dilemma facing many Christians who recognize that as citizens, "the state has a duty to all its members, involving constant compromise between coercive power and moral principles." These quotations are not set down in a spirit of criticism. They show that although apparently far removed from the scene of conflict Christians in the United States face a dilemma in their relations to the church and the state.

The magazine, Social Action, in its October 15th issue, devotes its pages to an excellent discussion of "The Christian Conscience and the State." The article reaches the conclusion that Christian participation in war is a matter of conscience. The individual must decide for himself. But the whole purpose of Christian preaching through the ages has been to inform, to persuade, to convince and to convict men of the truths of the Gospel. War is recognized as a defiance of the righteousness of God but in the hour of crisis men are told the decision to participate or refuse participation is a matter the individual must decide for himself. The church would certainly have not grown beyond a few men had preaching, through all the years come to this vaporous conclusion. On other demonstrations of the power of sin the church reaches no such easy conclusion. Plainly the difficulty lies in the relation between the church and the state.

It might well be granted that since the state is an instrument of order it must not be contradicted or opposed in an emergency. But the church can, or at least should be permitted to show the causes of modern war. The International Peace Institutes held each summer for at least ten years laid before its students the confusion, distrust and economic chaos caused by the shortage of raw materials; the frustration of industry by suspicion, imperialism and tariffs; in short the causes of war in relation to geography, economics and social patterns. Since the church has demanded, and then conceded, the right to investigate matters pertaining to industrial peace in time of an industrial crisis will it demand the right to be heard in times of inter-

IN THE HAND OF GOD.

"Casting all your care on him for he careth for you."—I Peter 5:7.

Yes, the spirit and heart of anxiety is the denial for the time being, or the forgetting, of God. Therefore its cure, our deliverance, comes with calling Him to our remembrance, that is, with prayer. What does one wish, when one is harassed and anxious, but to feel that he and all that is really of value to him are in good hands, for they are in God's hands? And how can that feeling come to me and stay with me when things seem contrary in the world and in my lot, except by drawing near to God in Jesus Christ, and bethinking myself that He who spared not His own Son, but freely gave Him up for us all, will not fail us in our day of need, or, if He seem to fail us, it is that He is preparing for us some greater good, and preparing us to receive it?—John A. Hutton.

Prayer—O Lord, deliver us from the anxieties and worries of life. Despite our feelings and our conditions help us to realize that we are in Thy care. Help us to draw near to Thee each day this year that we may realize this forever. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE MAGIC PORTAL.

"I have set before thee an open door."—Phil. 3:7-14.

The glorious thing about the New Year is that it gives us all a new chance. It flings open the magic portal of opportunity to the willing and aspiring soul. As is well known, the word opportunity comes from ob, meaning in front of, and porta, a gate. Well, no matter what the mistakes or misdeeds which have marred the past year, Christ offers us His forgiving grace. He sets before us an open door through which we may press forward to worthier living and greater achievements. Resolve that this day shall see the beginning of better things.

Prayer—For this new year, for the chance it yields of leaving the old sins and mistakes behind, we bless Thy name, through Jesus, our Lord. Amen.—The Christian Herald.

WEDNESDAY.

READING THE FUTURE.

"I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."—Acts 26:19.

No one is able to read the future and that is one of our greatest blessings. Could we see what this year holds for us—sorrow as well as joy, adversity as well as prosperity, the disagreeable as well as the agreeable, would we be any happier? No. We would be filled with apprehensions. Happiness would be impossible. It is largely by allusion that God in His mercy leads us on.

Did we but see,
When life first open'd, how our journey lay
Between its earliest and its closing day,
Or view ourselves, as we one time shall be,
Who strive for the high prize, such sight would break
The youthful spirit, though bold for Jesus' sake.

—Cardinal Newman.

THURSDAY.

THE SURE WAY FOR THE NEW YEAR.

"Wait on the Lord and keep His way and he shall exalt thee."—Psalm 37:34.

Much scripture comes trooping up in our minds on this subject. "As for God his way is perfect." "The meek will he teach his way." "The righteousness of the perfect direct his way." "Blessed is every one that walketh in his way." "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and he delighteth in his way."

No matter whether we know what lies before us, if God is leading. Christ is the way. Only as we go on, step by step, does God disclose to us

His wall and plan for our life. It is thus that the troubles of life do not overwhelm us.

Prayer—We do not ask, O Lord, that Thou should shed full radiance upon us, give but a ray of peace and we will go on without fear. We do not ask to see the way, but we do ask that we may feel Thy hand and follow Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ANOTHER WAY.

"Let us lay aside every weight and sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."—Heb. 11:1-12.

Even when the way is revealed step by step, it is not so easy. We all have handicaps and life is not what we would like it. We think if we could be rid of them, life would be better. But would we? Paul had his laments, but he did not waste time with them and he was given grace to endure. The way is, like Paul, to face the difficulties, lean on divine strength, lay aside the things that hinder and cultivate grace.

Prayer—While we thank Thee for our joys, our Father, help us to see Thy hand in our trials, that they may bring us nearer to Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHEN BURDENS ARE NOT BURDENS.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee."—Isaiah 55:22.

We cannot forget our Savior's invitation, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me . . . and ye shall find rest for your soul, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

We were visiting a noted cathedral. An aged woman knelt at the confessional box. The expression on her face was that of agony under some great burden, and anxious supplication for the blessing of relief.

We do not require a confessional, save Jesus Christ himself. He is our High Priest to whom we may always go. Take a few minutes each day to go to Him for the divine help you need. Seek and ye shall find.

Prayer—We thank Thee, O Lord, for that place in Jesus where we may go when we like and find grace and help. Grant unto us the Christ's blessings of this day. Amen.

An unknown writer has said, "The great of the earth may not be known to us in person, but we can live in the company of the great, through our minds, through reading, through our aspirations and our ideals, through our hero worship, and through our attempt to emulate the noblest we know." The Sabbath Day with all its churches, Sunday schools, services of worship, preaching and Christian activity furnishes reviews of the noblest we know. Amen.

A NEW YEAR'S SERMON.

Acquaintances will not turn into friends without our cultivating them. Friendship is a fine art, but one which everyone can practise if he will. It is its own reward. Friends are not acquaintances whom we cultivate in order to exploit them for our advantage in any selfish way, but whom we enjoy for their own sake and who help us to grow up into an all-around understanding and love of human nature. What friends worth keeping have you been neglecting? Will you make the slight effort required to pick up these loose threads of friendship, or do you prefer to stay back in your shell and be sorry for yourself? How much room will you allow for new contacts of a personally rewarding sort? And will you deliberately put yourself in a frame of mind and manner which will facilitate approach to them? These are questions, not of mere society in any frivolous sense, but of a profoundly moral bearing. For we cannot build Christ-like character without being less and less self-centered, more and more friendly toward more and more people.

And we must do some studying, too, at least to the extent of serious reading. There is no duty more obligatory in our troubled time of social agitation and great changes in process than the finest and most thoroughly implemented intelligence we can achieve. And the more we read and think, the more we shall enjoy it—the more sure we shall be that we are really, exhilaratingly alive. Study has its aspects of drudgery, to be sure, but chiefly while we are returning to it after letting our brains lie fallow too long. Good reading is a whetstone on which we sharpen the blade of our intellect for all purposes. I suggest compiling with competent advice, from a librarian for instance, a substantial and varied book list, and then reading straight through it, so many pages or so many minutes a day. Thirty minutes daily, as a minimum, will make us surprisingly keen for our own problems as workers and citizens, if we spend them in the company of informed and stimulating minds, always accessible to us through man's most remarkable invention, the printing press.

And, by way of climax at the conclusion, we should plan our religious life for the new year. There are far too many thin souls, even among church members. If people dieted their bodies as willingly as they starve their souls, there would be no need of stout models in the clothing shops. How much time will you spend every day in Bible reading and prayer? Try trebling your provisions. If you don't know how to pray except by rote or in church, you will learn how by doing it. What activities of the parish will you support by investment of your own interest and dependable participation? There is something for everyone to do—at least one thing which you can do, no matter how busy you are; and as many more things as you can fit into your program. To fit them in will be good for you and good for the church. If you believe in what the church is doing, why not work to such a plan that the church will be able to do it better by virtue of your added help? If you believe in it strongly enough, are there not other items which you can cut down or cut out, in order to make room for what ought to take precedence? But unless you plan these realignments, they will never occur except in idle dreams.

In planning for the future, we must know where we want to go, about how long it ought to take, and what seems to us now to be the best ways of getting ahead towards our goal—subject to constant revision, as experience and imagination combine to show us better ways and worthier goals than it may be that we see today. And we must keep books on ourselves to make sure that we are not slipping. If we will meet the opportunities and difficulties of the new year from that sober and rational point of view, employing foresight and prudence to the very limit of our intelligence and resolution, then under God's favour we shall not be on the streets and in the dark and at a loose end when the unexpected happens, but lamps burning we shall be among the wise at the bridegroom's feast.

RAINBOW JUBILEE THEME TO GIVE JOYOUS COLORS TO ANNUAL C. E. POSTERS.

One of the most joyously colorful of 1941 outdoor posters will be the announcement of C. E.'s Rainbow Jubilee. Through January and February 2,500 or more poster boards along the streets and highways will remind the public of the Young People's Society and of its sixty years of Christian service.

This display of posters, in cooperation with the outdoor advertising companies of the nation, has become an annual event. In excellent poster style, warmly colored, attractively lettered, the message year by year has been some variation on the theme that young people realize highest ideals and achievements in life by attending and sharing Christian Endeavor.

When a youth committee proposed "Rainbow Jubilee" as the designation of the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the first C. E. society, a particularly rich and colorful poster design began to take form.

The rainbow Jubilee message utilizes six bright hues, which are represented in the rainbow that arches across the long panel. A wholesome young man and a winsome young woman are pictured, facing a church entrance. The text of the poster message is:

"Sixty Years—Rainbow Jubilee. 1881-1941. For Victorious Living, Young People Share in Christian Endeavor. Interdenominational, Inter-Racial, International."

The formal observance of the sixtieth anniversary begins shortly before C. E. Day, February 2, 1941, and continues through the International Convention in Atlantic City, N. J., July 8 to 13, 1941.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt attended an interdenominational church service Christmas morning at the First Congregational Church in Washington, of which Rev. Howard S. Anderson is the minister. The Presidential family heard the Rev. William R. Barnhart call for "a Holy Blitzkrieg to save suffering, struggling, bleeding humanity." The service was held under the auspices of the Washington Federation of Churches.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We reached our goal for the year and we are happy. This report closes our report for the year 1940. Reaching a goal for the year is no small undertaking and no easy task. I owe much to those who came to my rescue while I was so seriously hurt and confined to my bed in the hospital. For a number of years we have been making a campaign in Burlington in behalf of the orphanage for Thanksgiving offering. The Burlington people have always been so kind and generous that it has always been a pleasure to visit them. My good friend and chairman of our orphanage board, Mr. Vitus R. Holt, came to see me a few days after my accident. I told him it would be impossible for me to do it this year and it gave me some worry. He said, "Don't you worry at all, I will do it for you." He took time off from his business for several days and made the canvass for me. He did a fine job—went over the top, and the Burlington Church sent us the largest offering they have ever made for a Thanksgiving offering. It was impossible for me to visit the Conferences as heretofore. Dr. L. E. Smith came to see me. I said to him, "It is impossible for me to visit the Conferences." He said, "Don't you worry, I will take your place and make a talk at all of them for you."

Miss Laine, my assistant, and the children visited four of the Conferences in North Carolina and put on their program. Then many others made talks in behalf of the orphanage and the Thanksgiving offering which helped to inspire our people to do their best. And with so many friends who came to our rescue in the time of a misfortune, which we could not help, we were able to reach our goal for the year. We appreciate our many friends far more than gold. We are grateful to those who wrote such splendid letters which were published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN in behalf of the Thanksgiving offering. They all helped us a lot.

We are happy we reached our goal for the year. We are grateful for so many friends who came to our rescue in the time of a real need when we were helpless. I am grateful that God spared my life to still give my best to the work I love. That God's richest blessing be upon each and everyone during the year 1941, is my earnest prayer.

In Memoriam

ROBERSON.

Carrie Brown Roberson was born near Belew Creek, N. C., September 7, 1876, and died November 19, 1940. She professed faith in Christ in early life and joined Salem Chapel Christian Church. She was a charter member of Belew Creek Christian Church where she held her membership till death removed her to her reward. She married V. O. Roberson, Belew Creek, N. C., November 2, 1897. To this union were born eleven children—eight boys and three girls: Foy, Cleveland, Ohio; Smith, Washington, D. C.; Truman, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Kyle, Mooresville, N. C.; Odell, Covington, Va.; Page, Columbia, S. C.; Edwards, Baltimore, Md.; Rivers, Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. Winona Costello, Roanoke, Va.; Mrs. Roberta Humphlett, Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Lillian McCullough, Charlotte, N. C.

She leaves to mourn their loss her husband, eleven children, six grandchildren, a host of other relatives, and her friends were numbered by her acquaintance. Funeral services were held from the Linville Funeral Home, Kernersville and Belew Creek Congregational Christian Church by this writer, assisted by the Rev. W. E. Wisseman, Greensboro, N. C. Burial was in the Belew Creek graveyard in the presence of an unusual large crowd of friends and relatives. usually large crowd of friends and relatives. than was presented as a tribute to this mother who loved her friends, her family, and her Savior.

A CHRISTMAS SERVICE.

The play on Stewardship was acted by four girls and a boy. They did very nicely. At the close of the play, during the singing of "O Come, All Ye Faithful," all of us, children and adults alike, took our white gifts for the Elon Orphanage and put them on the altar. The choir recessed, carrying burning tapers which they lit from the altar candles! It was a wonderful service for me!

CHURCH FACES NATIONALISM.

national crisis and war? The new nationalism would make the forces of Jesus Christ contained within its borders to be subservient to the state but the church cannot reach the fullest expression of its function save as it transcends the limits of particular borders and preaches a universal gospel. It is at this point where tension between church and state becomes serious.

The relation between the church and the state needs to be redefined because of extensive overlapping in the work of both. There was a time when the least government was the best, when practically all charities, educational facilities, hospitals, and various other works of mercy were considered the sphere of the church. Today our government does more work in the realm of charity, education, sanitation and hospitalization than the church could possibly do, not because the church is not interested, but because of the problem of finding the funds for such work from voluntary contributions. It is at a point the new nationalism and the modern church are in accord; namely, that social adjustments removing fear of unemployment, economic losses from sickness, and the fear of poverty-stricken senility shall be relieved. Where the church and state seem to have sharp differences in the old world and may develop these same differences in the new world is at the point of ways and means, and in many instances, in particular ends to be reached. The conflict centers around the question of the Christian way of life or the pagan way.

It would seem the Christian Church always has two choices when pressed by forces of civil power. It can find its expression in pietism divorced from any action. It can emphasize other worldly aspects of the faith. The new nationalism demands social unity and has all the means of physical and psychological persuasion to convince all but the few most obdurate. The desire and vision of world brotherhood, unity and peace in the kingdom of God would, of course, be submerged for the time being. Believers would then be required to wait patiently for the day when wider efforts would be possible.

The second choice before the Christian Church under stern nationalism would be to maintain its universality at all costs of prestige and power. It would ever insist, teach, preach, exhort, convince and persuade men everywhere of the need of world order. And this in any and all times whether the state frowned or smiled on its efforts. Under such a program ecumenicity would be pressed in every way possible to sustain a faith transcending nationalism. Ostensibly the church would face persecution and possibly be obliterated. In 1920 the World Conference of Friends agreed on a general statement regarding Friends' attitude to war, the closing sentence of which might well be mentioned here. "If Friends are to challenge the world and claim the right to continue in the ways of peace while everybody else is fighting, they must reveal the fact they are worthy of peace and that they bear in their bodies the marks of the Lord Jesus.

There does not enter in my mind the shadow of doubt that eventually the new religion of nationalism like many other social movements opposing the church shall pass away giving a free and open course to the church in the great work of the kingdom. Jesus Christ has not died in vain, nor can God be defeated by resistance of His own creation. But the church of a particular generation can fall into bondage which will set back the progress of the faith several centuries.

At one time the Christian faith was in danger of becoming a sect of the Jews. What would have happened had that occurred only God knows. But the Apostle to the Gentiles saw the Gospel was too big to be confined within the limits of a small nation. He cried out that all barriers of race and clan and nationality were broken down in Christ of God who had made of one blood all nations; and by the blood of One who represented all made possible reconciliation between God and man.

Dark Before Dawn!

Persons who are living in a black-out epoch of history are in danger of having their spirit profoundly affected by the temporary gloom, and their whole conception of God and the eternal nature of things colored by it. It will make a vast difference to us in America who wins in this gigantic war, but whichever side wins we shall find ourselves in a different world from the one we have known before, and immense new tasks and responsibilities will be laid upon us.

But dark times are very often birth moments, and though we can not see light in this darkness, we do well to expect that a new era will come to birth out of it. It is supremely important in this time of crisis and world darkness that we shall discover resources to live by which will enable us to face the issues not with hysteria, but with courage and with unfaltering spirits.

"Stand on thy feet and I will speak to thee." These words came to a young person in a very dark epoch, at a moment of discouragement, and changed his whole life, forever, and made him another person. We all love days of high visibility, when the air is transparent, when the horizon opens out to an unbelievable amplitude and it is a luxury to draw the breath of life. But, alas, there are days of low visibility when the fog bell rings and the horizon is contracted.

"The hand of the Dark hath hold of the lines
And the mist is under and mist above."

It is just these epochs of low visibility which summon us to rise to the full height of our stature as persons and to play the heroic role. It was in that dark turn of events which Euripides describes that Plato, the greatest intellectual creator the world has seen, was born and formed his youth. It was in exile in Babylon with his nation crushed, his city destroyed, his temple of religion in ashes, that the summons came to the young Ezekiel to stand on his feet and become the rebuilders of the nation.

In each of these "bad times" the issue was met by this same method of rebuilding the world by first building it in the soul, in the inner life. . . . Certain values of life still stand out as clearly and as unmistakably as the Jungfrau seen from Murren in fine weather. Beauty breaks in on us never more wonderful than now. We are sure that the one thing in this world or in any other world that is good without any qualification is a good person. We bow to Truth when we see it as an inevitable reality, and we know that pure love is the greatest thing in the universe.

If those things are real, God is real, too, because they come out of eternity. If that gets settled we can start building our inner world and we shall be standing on our feet, and facing our task.

"I have a self I never yet have met,
My inner and eternal me."

We all carry that unmet self deep within us.

It is a heroic self, an adventurous, a path-breaking self. You must discover and bring to life that hidden self which few suspect.—Rufus M. Jones.

Social Action in Review

It has been pointed out that traditional Catholicism identified the Kingdom of God with the Church, while modern Protestantism identifies it with the social service state. Without seeking to resolve that nice distinction, it may be suggested that local churches are seed beds in which the good seed of the Kingdom may be planted in the hearts of people in the confidence that it will grow into good practices and sound structure in human habits and institutions.

The local church, therefore, is the key to the growth of the Kingdom of God in the world of affairs. To this end we need a host of church members who can translate the Gospel into Christian Social Action. Whatever guidance local pastors and association, conference or council committees can give is but assistant to this seed-bed culture of the spirit and technique of Social Action.

Christian Social Action may express itself in rudimentary form in private charities, grow into community social services, emerge in voluntary cooperative groups, and flower in the socially directed patterns of the democratic state. But the vitality for this permeation of the social body with ethical values must be drawn from spiritual reservoirs. And the churches, whether Catholic or Protestant, must furnish the sensitive altruism and the realistic vision prerequisite to the growth of the Kingdom of God in human scenery.

Social Action will become an increasing reality in proportion as it is supported with religious sanctions. The New Year season is a good time to begin such planting.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dr. John G. Truitt, President of our Convention Board of Publications, is the guest editor for this week.

Rev. and Mrs. George W. Penn of North Miami, Fla., announce the birth of a daughter, Ruth Lorraine.

The Congregational Clergymen's Group was organized in the new study of Dr. Elisha King in Miami on December 16.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar received twenty-two members into the Newport News Church on the Sunday preceding Christmas.

The editor is in Franklinton, N. C., this week where he is assisting with the Annual Institute for Negro Congregational Christian Ministers.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., is recuperating from an appendicitis operation in the hospital at Greensboro. His pulpit was supplied for the past two Sundays by Rev. O. D. Moore and Rev. James P. McDade, senior ministerial students at Elon College.

Rev. William A. Grissom, a recent graduate of Yale Divinity School, took over the pastorate of Long's Chapel, Haw River and Providence Memorial Churches on January 1. This pastorate was served by Rev. Duane Vore until last September and have been served by Dr. D. J. Bowden during the interim.

Scarritt College, of which Mrs. Joe A. French is a graduate, was admitted to membership in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools at its meeting in Memphis, Tenn., last month. This is the only institution of college rank in the Methodist Church which is designed exclusively for the training of lay workers for social-religious service. Scarritt College is the first institution of its distinctive type to be admitted into the membership of a major regional accrediting association.

MISS ATKINS BECOMES BRIDE OF REV. W. J. ANDES.

The following interesting notice appeared recently in a local paper:

"Miss Carey Elizabeth Atkins became the bride of the Rev. W. J. Andes on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 29, at Linville Congregational Christian Church, where Mr. Andes' parents were married twenty-eight years ago. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. A. Whitten of Winchester and the Rev. P. B. Sanger of Linville.

"Mrs. Andes is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Atkins of High Point, N. C., and is secretary to Dr. J. M. Ormond, head of the Rural Church Division at Duke University, Durham, N. C. She received her bachelor of arts degree from Greensboro College, Greensboro, N. C., and did graduate work at Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn. and Duke University.

"The Rev. Mr. Andes is the son of Mrs. A. W. Andes and the late Rev. A. Andes of Harrisonburg. He was for several years pastor of the Congregational Christian Churches served formerly by his father in the Valley of Virginia, and is now serving two churches near Durham, N. C. He received his education at Bridgewater College and Elon College. At this time he is completing his bachelor of divinity degree at Duke University.

"Mr. and Mrs. Andes will make their home in Durham, N. C."

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

We are getting off to a very good start on conference apportionments for the college this year. Antioch Church of the Valley Conference has paid its apportionment for the college in full and more, for which the college is grateful. We are also grateful for contributions from other churches and Sunday schools. It would be a fine thing if every church or Sunday school would make some contribution however small to the college during the college period. This would at least show good faith, and this is a heart appeal to every pastor, superintendent, and church to consider this appeal favorably and give us the privilege of listing your church as a contributor to the college during this period.

The following amounts have been received on 1940-41 apportionments:

Will you please send me your Superannuation offering at an early date? We will need these funds by the last of June and you will see that we still have several hundred dollars to raise, if we are to give even the small amounts that were given in December. Won't you please see that the offering is sent in and if the offering has not been taken please do so at once.

DR. J. W. MANNING.

I know that others will be writing expressions of sympathy and condolence in behalf of those bereft and bereaved an account of the death of Dr. J. W. Manning of Norfolk, Va. However, because of my association, high regard and affection for him, I am sending these words of appreciation and admiration, also to offer a bit of consolation to the family and other sorrowing friends.

I have known Dr. Manning for more than thirty years and have known him intimately and affectionately since January, 1919. It was my good fortune to have him as an understanding and sympathetic parishioner for thirteen years. During my pastorate of the Third Church, later the Christian Temple, I found him to be one of the most consecrated and dependable laymen that I have ever known. He was a member of the Board of Deacons, of the Official Board, Superintendent of the Sunday School, Chairman of the Music Committee, a trustee of the church, Chairman of the Building Committee for the erection of the new church, Chairman of the Special Committee to raise money for payments on debts, and in other ways too numerous to mention gave himself and his means unstintingly for the support of his church and the kingdom. He was a dentist by profession and was held in high esteem by his associates. He was honored and respected by the citizens of Norfolk and acquaintances everywhere. His interest in his church extended his influence and acquaintances throughout the Southern Convention and in other sections of the country. He numbered his friends by the thousands. They will miss him terribly. He will be missed in the church at large but more than anywhere else from the standpoint of the church and community, he will be missed in the Christian Temple. He was a charter member of the Third Church and a charter member of the Temple. He carried on his mind and heart the affairs of his church as much if not more than anyone else. He gave of his time and means almost to the point of his own personal discomfort. He was a man of strong convictions and one who lived by his convictions. He could disagree with others and at the same time work harmoniously and enthusiastically with them. Those associated with him always knew where he stood on questions of mutual interest. He could be depended upon to do his part generously, cheerfully and willingly—a man of genuine consecration and of triumphant faith.

While he will be missed in his community and his church, most of all he will be missed in the family circle, a devoted Christian husband and father. His affection for his family was unusual and unwavering. He was sure of his responsibility to protect and provide for them. A great and good man has gone from our midst. His influence will live on and on. It will not be possible for the present generation at the Christian Temple to forget him. His place will be difficult to fill.

Grace, comfort and peace to those who loved him.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Dear Editor:

May I send a short tribute to two men who have recently left you?

One is Dr. Atkinson. Because you people sent me around the world, in traveling to Japan, where I witnessed for you for fifteen years, I have heard many great preachers, English and American, Japanese and Chinese, Ritualistic and Non-Conformist.

I have never heard any more eloquent preacher than our Dr. Atkinson. The first time I saw him he was confined to his bed but he wanted to see one of our church missionaries and express his faith in the place of missions in our Christian life. His passion for Evangelism and for world citizenship was contagious. On whom dare we ask that his mantle shall fall?

Today I read that Dr. Manning of Norfolk has also gone on. To me, from our New England Christian Churches, he was a type of the fine laymen our church in the South has trained, although I know that no group of churches anywhere can produce many Dr. Mannings. I had to go to him professionally and I remember the wonderful view from his office windows and his own appreciation of it, although he had seen it many years.

I thought of him as constantly living in the heights as indeed I believe he did.

May God bless his memory to us. THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S weekly visits are inspiration and fellowship.

Appreciatively,

LANETT CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH, LANETT, ALA.

The Lanett Congregational Christian Church closed one of the best years in the history of the church on September 30, 1940. The church came to the end of the year with all bills paid, owing no debts. A large number of the members of the church gathered on a Saturday night for the annual business meeting and church supper. A delicious chicken supper was served by the ladies of the church and was much enjoyed by all those present.

At the business meeting which followed the following officers and teachers were elected or re-elected: Trustees, Mrs. Posey Sorrell, John Will Roquemore, Will Cook, HESSIE MURPHY, Howard Looser, Charlie Miller and Johnny Seymour; Deacons, Roy Haralson, Will Cook, J. T. Cox, George Manley, C. H. Russell, G. F. Partridge, Posey Sorrell, LeRoy Roquemore, Pate Dunn, Jim Roquemore, J. W. Roquemore and W. O. McGill. Mr. McGill presided over the meeting. Deaconesses, Mrs. Bertha Rainey, Mrs. Jeff Raye and Mrs. Jim Roquemore. Clerk, Mrs. A. D. Smedley. Treasurer, Renda Fuller. Vestor Dobson was elected to represent the church on the Lanett Boys Club Advisory Committee. Organist, Mrs. Posey Sorrell. Assistant Organist, Miss Mary Fanny Raye. Choir Director, W. O. McGill. Corresponding Secretary, Sunday School, Mrs. Fletcher Roquemore. Sponsors for the Senior Christian Endeavor Society, Mrs. Stella Roquemore and HESSIE MURPHY. Board of Ushers, Allen Smedley, Johnny Godwin, Lynwood Roquemore, HESSIE MURPHY and Reed Kent. Missionary Secretary, Mrs. Stella Roquemore. News Reporter for Church and Sunday School, Arthur Dailey.

There are at present, fourteen classes in the Sunday school, with twenty-eight officers and teachers. Pate Dunn, Superintendent; Posey Sorrell, Assistant Superintendent; Charlie Miller, Secretary; Boyce Fant, Assistant Secretary; Miss HESSIE GRAY, Superintendent of the Primary Department.

Teachers of the various classes are as follows:

Class No. 1—Primary Department: Gladys Foster and Mrs. Tava Roquemore.

Class No. 2—Primary Department: Miss Ollie Sims and Mrs. Gladys Carlisle.

Class No. 3—Primary Department: Miss Gladys Hamilton and Miss Dahlia Sorrell.

THE CHURCH PAPER.

The church paper is an evangel of the church. It carries the message of the church into the homes of the church for the members of the church. That is great work. For there are no more important messages on earth than the message of the church. It bears good news. It brings news from every quarter of the church, and from many servants of the church, to others who are interested in the work of the church. It fans the fires of fellowship. It seeks to build up the weak places in the church. It announces its program, and sets forth its plans. It cries for help where help is needed, it offers opportunity to excel in Christian service. It serves all the boards, committees, institutions, local churches, Conferences and the Convention of the church.

There must be eight or nine thousand homes in the Southern Convention. It should go into every home. Every home should know more about the church. The church paper tells more. Every home should know more about missions. The church paper tells more. Every home should know more of the place of prayer, the meaning of God's Word, the strength of Christian faith, and the power of Christian love. The church paper tells more. Leaders of our Conferences and Convention should be able to speak to the whole constituency. The church paper should make that possible. The institutions of our church should be able to lay their claims on the hearts of the members of the church. The church paper should be able to offer that opportunity. Once the church paper is on the press it only takes revolutions of machinery to change fifteen hundred copies to ten thousand copies. Ten thousand copies would supply our homes, and if read would make a new day in our church.

Every member of the church should have a greater faith in his church. It is a mission of the church paper to develop that faith, by setting forth the successes, achievements, instructions and aims of the church. Every member of the church should feel a fellowship with the other members of the church, and that is one of the services the church paper could render if given the opportunity. Every member of the church should feel that he is part of a team, mighty in the strength of the Lord. The church paper is the huddle of team-mates before every conference-wide or convention-wide play. In it is instruction, encouragement and challenge. Every pastor should do a better piece of work because he read his church paper. Every deacon should have a deeper interest, every teacher should be a better teacher, and every organization leader should be a better leader, because they read their church paper.

Church papers can carry church programs, missionary society programs, Sunday school lessons, young people's programs, helps, materials, methods, ideas and goals. The church paper is a veritable storehouse of good things. It is a voice, a message, an evangel. It is addressed to little children, young people, adults, the fireside, the prayer room, the classroom, the pulpit, the pew, the individual church member and every organizational aspect of the church. It is from us all to us all. It is the hand-clasp of thirty thousand members, or should be. It is the heart throb of a loyalty that is bigger than the present generation of Southern Convention folk. It is the measure of a great past, the prophecy of a great future, the mold of a great present, or it should be. Every reader makes it a better evangel, every subscriber makes it a greater medium for service, and every interested supporter increases its friends. Perhaps its price could no better be spent by any church home than by having it sent regularly to its sacred threshold.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

Prayer has a great influence over anyone who practices it. It is elemental. It opens the door to the Eternal. It feeds the soul much as the body is fed with bread. Without it one is dwarfed and impoverished. It calms the spirit, organizes the will, and cleanses the hopes and aspirations. It is a tonic for the inner man. It does more within than a new suit of clothes, or a new dress does without. It makes one ready for the day. To many lives it is an untapped source of power.

Prayer leads to God. The fellowship of a friend is worthwhile. The fellowship with God is essential to properly living one's life. We see how much better we should be when we see God. We sense how much God can help us when we pray. We feel a reliance upon Him when we have had fellowship with Him. Prayer is that fellowship. Prayer is communion with God. It is a way of going over urgent matters at hand, and finding the way to do them. It is a way of laying one's life before God for His consultation and help. It is the most natural thing in the world, and is never something strange or affected, or out of place to one who has caught the spirit of prayer.

Through prayer Jesus kept in constant touch with His heavenly Father. Through prayer God met the Son and ordered His life. Prayer is a "give and take" proposition. Through it we speak to God, by it God speaks to us. Through prayer our lives take on a strength such as is seen in the harmonious workings of nature. Through prayer to God we fulfill His will for us just as the sun and soil cause seed to grow. Without constant, regular prayer one robs oneself of a right and proper strength to which one's spirit is justly entitled. Lord teach us to pray.

Great occasions do not make heroes or cowards; they simply unveil them to the eyes of men. Silently and imperceptibly, as we wake or sleep, we grow strong or weak and at last some crisis shows us what we have become.—Cannon Westcott.

NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL OF CHURCHES TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING.

The fifth Annual State-wide Inter-denominational Convocation of Churches, opening in High Point, N. C., on Tuesday, January 14, will bring together many of the nation's outstanding religious leaders. The Rt. Rev. Edwin A. Penick, Raleigh, Bishop of the North Carolina Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church will preside over the opening Convocation session and Dr. W. A. Stanbury, Pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, Winston-Salem and President of the Council, will deliver the president's address. Among the speakers will be Dr. Paul Austin Wolfe, Pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City and Dr. John Calvin Slemph, Editor of Biblical Recorder, Raleigh, N. C.

Dr. Wolfe, who is recognized as one of the foremost thinkers among the younger clergymen of our day, will deliver the series of three addresses dealing with the faith of the church in the world crisis, and will conduct two afternoon institutes especially designed for ministers, his subjects being: "The Church Program" and "The Minister and His Advisors."

Dr. Slemph is known throughout the Southern Baptist Convention for his contributions to the religious weeklies and theological quartlies. He will address the Convocation on the subject: "Return to Vital Religion." Presiding over the session at which time Dr. Slemph will speak will be the Rev. J. C. Glenn, D. D., pastor of the Edenton Street Methodist Church, Raleigh, N. C.

"The Present Crisis and the Christian Church" has been announced as the subject of Dr. Joseph L. Hromadka, Guest Professor of Christian Ethics, Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, N. J., formerly of the University of Prague. He is rated as an excellent speaker and knows the European situation thoroughly. Dr. Hromadka will conduct two afternoon institutes in addition to his address before the entire Convocation.

Among the many afternoon group institutes dealing with practically every phase of the church life, will be that of week-day religious education conducted by Dr. Price H. Gywnn, Jr., Professor of Education, Davidson College, Davidson, N. C. Assisting him will be Dr. Mason Crum, Duke University, Durham, N. C. and Mrs. Walter P. Sprunt, Wilmington, N. C.

The Convocation of Churches attracts annually between 1,500 and 2,000 persons from North Carolina and adjoining states and is sponsored by the North Carolina Council of Churches.

Mayor O. A. Kirkman, High Point, N. C. and Dr. E. H. Blackard, Pastor of Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, host church to the Convocation, will welcome the Convocational registrants at the opening session.

METHODISTS APPROVE NEW CALENDAR.

The Methodist Council of Bishops has approved a proposal to establish a world calendar on which all "roving" holidays would occur the same date each year and all "dated" holidays would fall on the same day of the week each year.

For instance, on the proposed calendar Christmas would come on Monday every year, Easter on April 8 (the second Sunday of the month), the Fourth of July on Wednesday and Labor Day on September 4.

The calendar, which the Bishops' Council approved yesterday, would be composed of a twelve-month year as at present. The first months of each quarter—January, April, July and October—would have thirty-one days each, all others thirty.

In addition, December would have an extra Saturday at the end which would be a holiday called "December Y." An extra holiday would be added at the end of the second quarter in leap years, designated as "Leap Year Day" or "June L."

The Council indicated it would ask the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America to consider the proposed calendar at its convention next week.

Before the calendar could go into effect, State, Federal and foreign governments would have to adopt it.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Sunday school is the most practical organization in the church of the present generation. It survives inefficiency, criticism and neglect. Some people defend it, others support it and many hold it in contempt. There are people who take it as a joke and others take it for granted and go on their way, without fear or favor. But in spite of all these attitudes, the average church today must depend upon the Sunday school for its religious education and its numerical growth. In many of our churches the Sunday school pays its own expenses, makes its own program and gives liberal contributions to the general enterprises of the church. The major part of our orphanage support and much of our mission money is raised directly or indirectly through the influence of this organization.

Almost every department of the Southern Convention frequently makes appeals to the Sunday schools for funds to carry on the work of the church. Every pastor and Sunday school superintendent knows how frequently the appeals for offerings are made. These appeals are worthy and should be carefully considered. The Sunday schools contribute a goodly sum each year for the promotion of religious education. But where are the workers who are seriously devoting time and effort to the task of actually developing the work of the Sunday schools in our local churches?

It is true that some work has been done in the promotion of a training school at Elon College, and in some of the larger churches. But in many instances, these schools have been small in attendance and superficial in the grade of work done. The requirements for securing certificates have been too easy, and there has been no great incentive to stimulate thorough study and adequate preparation. The work which has been done was helpful, but the time has come when it should be improved and the standard should be raised.

But the development of the Sunday school, in the matter of enrollment and attendance, has been sadly neglected for the past ten years. Twenty-five years ago our annual Conferences gave time for serious consideration of the Sunday school work. Year by year this has been reduced until a brief report, dealing in generalities, covers the subject without facing the real opportunity and task of the church. The Sunday school conventions of the Southern Convention are not doing much better. Usually the Sunday school convention is limited to one day, opening about 10:00 A. M. and closing about 4:00 P. M., with time out for lunch and fellowship. Much of this time is devoted to hearing statistical reports covering the past year, adopted without discussion and having few suggestions for the ensuing year. This means that the Convention looks backward when it should be looking forward to the future.

This is written on Friday, and the day is cloudy. The writer is not a pessimist, and is not having a blue day. These observations are not made in a spirit of hostile criticism. But it is our opinion, as a deeply interested pastor, that the time has come when church leaders in our Conferences and Convention should face the challenge and devote themselves to the task of seeking to enlist our constituency in an effort to increase the membership and attendance of our Sunday schools. According to reports made to the last session of the Eastern Virginia Conference there are over 3,000 members of our churches who are not enrolled in the Sunday schools of the Conference. The other Conferences of the Convention face a similar situation. The membership of our Sunday schools in Virginia and North Carolina should be increased by the enrollment of at least 10,000 new members this year. It can be done.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON'S CONTRIBUTIONS.

It is difficult to evaluate the services of Elon College. For a half century she has dedicated herself to the task of discovering and developing talents in young people, developing their characters, enriching their personalities and encouraging them as they launch forth in their chosen fields. The church may invest a million dollars in business, stocks, bonds, or lands, and through a system of accounting determine the success or the failure of that investment, but when the church invests a million dollars in a college plant and directs that that investment shall be used to touch human life, safeguard it, and make it profitable to society, it is difficult to determine the extent of such beneficent efforts.

As we make the turn of the first half century, we can ascertain the advancement of the church through the years and feel some pride in the part that leadership, touched and trained by our college, has played in that advancement. Not all of the benefits of Elon College are to be reaped in the church as such, for the products of the college have gone out to build homes, to build business, to build educational systems, and in a thousand ways enrich human living. To take wasteland, reclaim it, cultivate it, and make it productive is a service to humanity much needed in these days of increased demands, but to take a life that God has blessed with a multiplicity of talents, instruct it, guide it, give it confidence, and make it productive for good is of infinitely more value to the world; for when you make a profitable citizen, you indirectly but definitely increase material values and add to the progress of the world. The wealth of the world is of no value without the human touch. When that touch is scientifically trained with creative and inventive genius its results become phenomenal, and as we have a wealthy state. The value of the services of Elon College is accentuated by the moral and religious content in its instruction and the spiritual contribution made by its faculty in constant contact with the ones to be trained. The Christian Church has made no greater contribution to church or state than the contribution that it has made to education through Elon College. Naturally the college looks to its parent organizations for continued encouragement and support. In these days of her need, she longingly looks for material contributions with which to meet those needs from the church itself. A dollar invested in Elon College will bear dividends five-fold in the years to come.

L. E. SMITH.

"IF AND WHEN."

Preceding the holidays I mailed more than one thousand letters to as many individuals stating that if one thousand individuals would give $100 each for the complete payment of the debts of Elon College, that the faculty would contribute the remaining $11,000. The response has been quite favorable though not as numerous as I had anticipated. I believe that we have not had but three refusals, and two agreeing to give less than $100.

The first three days of this year, and this is being written on the 4th, I received through the mails a check

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

I want to tell you about a letter which a little girl wrote to Santa this year. Linda Faye is only two and a half years old. She could not write the letter so she was getting "Mamie" to write it for her. "Tell Santa that I want a 'Betsy Wetsy' doll and a doll carriage. Tell Santa to come and see Todd's baby and bring him something, too." On Christmas Day Linda Faye came to see us and I told her that Old Santa got her letter and that he came to see Oliver. I think she liked best Oliver's kitty that holds a ball between its paws and can run across the floor and roll over. (If you wind it up.)

What did you get for Christmas? I do hope that Santa did not disappoint you. I just know that all of you have had a good Christmas. Now it is time for you to go back to school again. All of you must get busy and work real hard. Then you can play hard when it comes time to play.

Last Sunday, January 5, was Old Christmas or Epiphany. You will remember that I told you last year that it is so called because upon this day the Wise Men arrived at Bethlehem to see the Baby Jesus. We had another Epiphany Candle-Lighting Service at our church. I hope that many of you had such services in your churches and enjoyed them.

We shall be having more severe weather from now on I suppose. So, take care of your nose. It will run away with you if you get a cold. Those pretty handkerchiefs which you got for Christmas ought not to be used for such a purpose. Keep well and happy during this year of 1941.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

WALKING IN THE NEW YEAR.

On December 31, we shall take our last step in the year of 1940. Then we'll walk right into 1941! A brand new year without a footprint in it. It will be like the newly fallen snow upon our lawns. The snow is all smooth and white with no marks upon it. Then the birds come and make stars as they walk upon it.

The star-like prints in the snow tell us that birds have been there even if we did not see them. It was a star that led the Wise Men to the Baby Jesus at Bethlehem. Our footprints in the New Year will be like guiding stars to someone. Perhaps that someone will be little brother or sister, niece or nephew, friend or playmate. The things that we do they will do; where we go they will follow; what we say they will repeat.

Let us remember this as we walk into the New Year. Then we will be careful to walk in the right paths. The feet which follow after and walk in our footprints will not stumble and fall. No, they will march safely through the New Year ahead.

* * *

Here is a prayer which is a good one for us as we begin the New Year. It is in the Children's Religion for January. I want you to keep on trying to get your parents to take this magazine for you.

Father, lead us every day
Always in your own good way;
Help us to be kind and true,
And do the things we ought to do.

Help us to make this whole long year,
Good and happy, bright with cheer;
With some time in all its days
For thoughts of prayer and songs of praise.

Please help us every day to prove
The best way is the way of love;
Show us ways of usefulness
And help us share our happiness.

—Amen.

"THANK GOD."

A father, mother and two children were coming down the gang plank of a recently arrived liner from Lisbon. Their faces were wreathed in smiles and by-standers heard the parents muttering in German, "Thank God." They were Jews who, after bitter suffering and hardship, had escaped from Germany, made their way to Lisbon and this country. The "thank God" which was in their hearts and on their lips expresses the sentiment of practically all the fortunate refugees who make their way to our shores. They are grateful not alone for escape but for the priceless privilege of breathing the air of freedom.

Most of us whose ancestors have been here for a century or more look with amused tolerance upon this enthusiasm. We think our country a good place in which to live, but fail to appreciate the gain which has been ours because we have been born and raised here. Anyone who will look into what citizenship in the United States means will find reason for joining the newcomers in uttering an earnest "thank God."

It is hard to measure the full value of citizenship whose system and policies of government are based on recognition of the worth of the individual. This is the foundation upon which both Democracy and Christianity rest. The Constitution, the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights, have been designed to secure and protect the rights and well-being of the individual. Most of us have accepted this as a matter of course until totalitarianism began its triumphant march. Now we are getting a faint idea of how unfortunate one is who has to live under a government that uses him as a tool. Even yet, we have not risen to an understanding of those values which come down to us through our form of government.

It is our country's recognition of the worth of the individual that has given birth to our educational system and the numerous agencies designed to prepare people for wholesome and useful living. It is this same factor which has prompted American regard for world welfare. Some of our self-admitted intellectual superiors laugh at us for our desire to straighten out the troubles of other people and act as the moral mentor of the world. Far from being a quality to be laughed at, it is one to be proud of.

Our country is far from perfect. Numerous evils can be found in its life and just criticism can be made of its administration. Its essential spirit, however, is so fine that its defects are of the same relative importance as the spots on the sun. All who will stop to think what it means to have been born and reared in this country, or to have acquired citizenship in it, will find reason for thanksgiving.—The United Presbyterian.

HOME MISSIONS.

The second Sunday in January each year has been designated as Home Missions Sunday by representatives of the various Protestant home mission and church extension boards. In view of the swift changes in the religious, social and economic condition of people everywhere and the fact that America to survive must be imbued with the Christian faith, it is hoped that Christian groups in all communions will engage in prayer and meditation in behalf of the multitudes in city and rural areas destitute of religious privileges and the missionaries who strive to serve needy communities. There are 17,000,000 boys and girls in America without Christian training of any kind.

Total since Sept. 1, 1940 ... $6,613.46

Though the offerings are small this week we deeply appreciate each and every one. In order to raise the same amount as that of last year, we have got to keep this goal in mind and work to that end. With your help and cooperation we can do this and we need the funds for Missions now more than we ever needed them. Now that a New Year has begun let us resolve to do our very best and make every effort to see that this most worthy cause is pushed forward and thus have a hand in spreading the gospel as we have been commanded.

A very Happy New Year to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Sincerely yours,
MATTIE COX PARKER,
Secretary.

THE CHURCH IN A CHANGING WORLD.

"Behold I make all things new."—Rev. 1:5.

We live in a world that is characterized by change. That fact adds interest to living. Life would be boredom were it not for change. Indeed life would be death, as paradoxical as that may sound, were it not for constant change. There cannot be life without change. Progress naturally depends upon that change being for the better. As savagery gave way to barbarism, and barbarism to civilization, so lower stages of civilization gave way in turn to higher stages of civilization under the guiding hand of religion. The Church of Christ have contributed greatly to the changing order down through the centuries, and whenever they have failed to lead the way in advance, history records the sad fact that civilization has suffered decline. The church has had to change in order to effect change in the changing society of which it has been a part. It has had to change its message and its methods in order to meet the need of the changing world. That does not mean that the church has changed its mission or its passion, but that it has to change its message for a better message, and its methods for better methods.

We are living when new and greater changes must be effected in order for the progress attained to be retained. The One who makes all things new, is pleading with all believers to join hands with Him in effecting those changes that shall push the world upward toward God. A new social order must be ushered in. But when humanity tries its own power to bring about the change required, it fails—miserably fails. Only God and man working together can effect the needed change. Cooperation of man with his fellow men, and of man with his Father God alone can give humanity its new world. Man cannot do it without God's help. And God cannot do it without man's help. Each must depend upon the other,

God wants that the old social order shall be changed, and that a new social order shall be established. He wants that racial prejudice and hatreds shall give way to inter-racial appreciation and goodwill. He wants that industrial strife and contention shall give way to industrial cooperation and efficiency. He wants that religious contentions, and rivalries shall give way to religious devotions and harmony. God wants that selfish individualism shall give way to cooperative altruism. He wants that international goodwill and cooperation.

A new social order of industrial opportunity, business security, political honesty, domestic tranquility, religious unity and international harmony is now long overdue. But it is bound to come. The poem prayer offered by Oliver Wendell Holmes cannot go unanswered:

Lord, let the war's tempest cease,
Fold the whole earth in peace
Under Thy wings!
Make all Thy nations one,
All hearts beneath the sun,
Great King of kings!

The changeless God desires that all changes in His world shall lead humanity upward toward God. Man in his madness may resist the Divine purpose of a world of freedom and opportunity for every individual to come to his or her largest self-realization, but his resistance to God only inflicts punishment upon himself, and delays the realization of the divine purpose. "The new heaven and the new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" has the divine sanction anytime that mankind gives its endorsement to it. And woe to any person or group of persons who defy and deny the God of Heaven in His plans and purposes for the new order. By their defiance of God they but pave the way to their own destruction. That is the witness of history down through the centuries.

The fate of the new world for which our forebearers gave the last full measure of devotion in sacrifice, in labor, in prayer and in the giving of life itself now rests with us of this generation. It is the prayer of every true American that those who offered their lives upon the altar of our national welfare shall not have lived and died in vain. It is for us, who now live, to accept the challenge of that greatest American, "to dedicate our lives to the unfinished work for which they fought to advance—that we of today shall highly resolve that those who in the past gave their lives to bequeath to posterity the world of their dreams shall not have died in vain." America has made the greatest advance of any nation, and with jealous eye her progress has been observed by all the nations of the world. There are those who think that there is a plot to draw America into the world conflict that all may "gang-up on her." As the world is threatened by totalitarianism, the church needs to press closer to the cross of Calvary, and to draw closer than ever to the God of our fathers in moral and spiritual defense of the ideals of freedom, liberty and opportunity. The church is the first line of defense for America and every true American patriot should appreciate the fact that moral and spiritual defense for our nation is the greatest defense both in peace time and in war. But God grant that that moral and spiritual defense shall be so strong that our peace shall be unmolested.

The progress gained by all the centuries past can be lost if the world forsakes the God of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Those who made that progress possible believed in God. Those who deny God can destroy it. Those who made that progress possible chose the hard way—they gave their lives for its realization. We, their sons and daughters, are disgracefully unworthy of our glorious heritage, if we seek the easy way and refuse the hard way. If the people of today were willing to take the hard way in order to find the better way, how differently would current events read, and what a difference there would be in the history now being made!

What a glorious thing life is if it accepts the challenge to cooperate with God and humanity in effecting the changes that make for progress! But what a meaningless thing life is if it means no more than self gratification, ease, comfort and following the line of least resistance! The Church of Jesus Christ dreams of a world free from the curse of intemperance, free from greed, free from graft and political corruption, free from social injustice, and from war. To the realization of its dream, the church seeks to enlist men and women who believe that that dream will come true, and wish to help make that dream a realization. It may be that the charge made against the present generation is true—that we are soft and selfish, and unwilling to sacrifice—that we have been weighed in the balances of God's expectation of humanity and are found wanting. But if that be true, we can repent and turn again to the God of all the earth. It is not too late for us to "right about face" and march up the heights

"Youth at Work in the Church"

A. LANSON GRANGER, JR., Editor

NEW BOOK OF SPECIAL INTEREST.

A Theology for Christian Youth by Dr. Henry David Gray. Abingdon-Cokesbury Press. Price, $1.00.

All young people will be glad to hear that Dr. Gray has written a book which will be especially helpful to them in discovering the scope of Christian beliefs that are intellectually sound and spiritually dynamic. In this book Dr. Gray discusses such questions as, "What is theology? Are other religions as good as ours? Can we believe in the Bible? Who was Jesus? What is the 'image of God?'" What does it mean to 'live right' as a Christian? What is the church? 'If a man die shall he live again?'"

With reference to A Theology for Christian Youth, the book review section of the Christian Century includes this statement: "Dr. Gray's simple, orderly, and easily readable account of the Christian faith, and the reasons for believing it shows his own thorough study. An excellent book for individual reading or for class discussion."

YOUTH WEEK.

In planning for the observance of Youth Week (Jan. 26-Feb. 2), you will probably want to check up on your equipment, as well as on your total program. It isn't too early to order the things you may want to add to your room, or to the general interest and improvement of your organization. The following is a bit of suggested materials which every young people's group should have:

Pilgrim Fellowship Wall Chart.—Carries the Statement of Purpose of the National Pilgrim Fellowship. Size, 11 x 17 inches. 25 cents.

Christian Endeavor Pledge (Chart) and Pins.—Definite information may be secured from your state Christian Endeavor officers.

Pilgrim Fellowship Wall Plaque.—Pilgrim Fellowship emblem made of a strong composition that looks like hand-carved wood. Price, $1.60.

Pilgrim Fellowship Membership Card.—Carries the seven major objectives of the Pilgrim Fellowship, with space for member's signature. Size, 3 1-2 x 5 3-4 inches. Price, 35 cents per dozen.

Pilgrim Fellowship Pin.—Small attractive pin with safety catch, bearing the emblem of Pilgrim Fellowship. Dull finish—price, 50 cents; bright finish—price, 75 cents.

Maybe you have wished for some time that you might set up a worship center, using the open Bible, the Cross, great religious pictures, candles, etc., in the room where your young people meet. Why not make a special effort to arrange such a center for Youth Week? This can be done with very little or no expense.

Especially recommended from national headquarters for help in your program are:

Young People in Church Work by Dr. Henry David Gray. 30 cents.

Worship Programs in the Fine Arts by Mrs. Alice A. Bay.

When Youth Worship by J. Gordon Howard.

Do not overlook the fact that the Mills Report was drawn up especially for the help it might be to you in your work. Its study might also be a special goal for Youth Week.

In planning your party, a very usable and inexpensive book is Handbook for Recreation Leaders, which you can order for 20 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

Be sure not to miss the opportunity of having your young people do some special service for your church. Your minister will be glad to talk this over with you.

NOTE: All Pilgrim Fellowship materials may be secured from The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL OF CHURCHES.

The Annual Convocation of Churches in North Carolina will meet at the Wesley Memorial Methodist Church in High Point, N. C., on January 14, 15 and 16. The theme this year is "The Faith of the Church and the World Crisis." Of special interest to young people will be the Group Institute on "Youth in Quest of Religious Reality" led by Miss Clarice Bowman. This group meets on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons from 2:15 to 3:45. Miss Bowman is on the staff of the Youth Department of the Methodist Board of Education, Nashville, Tenn. Registration for the Convocation is $1.00.

HOW CAN GOD BECOME REAL TO ME.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JANUARY 19, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: John 4:23, 24; I Cor. 2:9, 10; John 14:7-10.

Daily Readings—

Monday—God Everywhere—Psalm 139:7-12.

Tuesday—God Real to Enoch—Gen. 5:21-24.

Wednesday—Reality of God in Trouble—Psalm 46:1-3.

Thursday—God Real to Job—Job 42:1-6.

Friday—God's Help in Temptation—I Cor. 10:13.

Saturday—God Revealed in Christ—Heb. 1:1-3.

This topic offers an opportunity for young people to come into close fellowship with God. Any religious experience in the life of an individual must have a sense of the reality of God. It is through the revelation of Jesus Christ that we come to know the heavenly Father. There are degrees of growth in any Christian life and each experience is a step which offers strength for our development.

Give each person an opportunity to speak of some experience in life that has been a real fellowship with God.

The following topics may be used for short talks:

1. God becomes real in periods of meditation.

2. God is made real in Christian service.

3. God becomes real in the beauty of the world.

4. God becomes real in the lives of Christian people.

5. God becomes real through the pages of the Bible.

There are laws by which God governs the earth. These are called "laws of nature." Does God operate the world on moral laws also? What are His moral laws? Discuss.

Is it harder to have faith in God during days like this? If so, what shall be the Christian's duty?

For Discussion—

1. Why do people differ in the ways that God becomes real in their lives?

2. Does the Christian Endeavor meeting create a sense of real presence of God? How?

3. Why is prayer one of the best pathways into the presence of God?

Suggested Hymns—

"Dear Lord and Father of Man-kind."

"Savior, Like a Shepherd."

"He Leadeth Me," S. E. M.

CHRIST'S EVALUATION OF PERSONALITY.

LESSON II—JANUARY 12, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 14:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: Is not the life more than the food, and the body than the raiment?—Matt. 6:25b.

It would have been very uncomfortable for Jesus during his ministry if there had been any hypocrisy, or any insincerity, in his religious life, for again and again we read in the Scriptures that as he went about from place to place the Scribes, and Pharisees, and Sadducees were watching him. They were constantly trying to find some fault in him, to see some action that was not in accordance with their pre-conceived ideas of religion, to interpret some acts of his as a violation of the law which they professed so profoundly to love and so religiously to observe. We know from experience how seemingly impossible it is to be free and natural when we know that we are being watched, when unsympathetic eyes are constantly looking for some fault, when critics are hoping that we will make some mistake. On the occasion of today's lesson, Jesus, having accepted an invitation to take dinner in the house of one of the rulers of the Pharisees on the Sabbath, went in knowing that he was being watched by these religious vultures. But Jesus' safety lay in the fact that he went ahead living his life before God, and therefore he was not afraid of what men could do or say. Our safety lies in the same sphere. We all have our critics. There are perhaps always those who are looking at those of us who are members of the church and professing Christians to pounce upon the least inconsistency, and to magnify out of all proportion the least fault and defect. Our safety lies in a willingness and out of ability to keep our hearts open unto God, and to consistently and humbly try to do the best that we can.

A Man Or An Institution.

What is the place of man in the scheme of things? How does he rate in the scale of values of the universe? Is he an end, or is he a means? This question was dramatized in the situation which confronted Jesus at this dinner. Before him was a man with the dropsy. It was the Sabbath Day, a sacred institution with the Jews. To heal the man meant to perform work on the Sabbath, and work was strictly prohibited. This is dramatized in the question, "Which is of more value, a man or an institution?" Jesus knew what was in the hearts of those lawyers and Pharisees, and he said to them, "Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath, or not?" "But they held their peace." There was nothing that they could say. When it came to a showdown, they had to admit that it was more important that a man who was ill should be healed on the Sabbath Day, even though it required work, and thus made necessary the breaking of religious law, than that the law in its absolute letter should be observed. Jesus took the man and healed him and let him go. He showed them what a cheap view of man they themselves had. They thought nothing of taking an ox or an ass, which had fallen into a well, or a ditch, out of danger, even though it was the Sabbath Day. Yet, they took exception to the fact that he healed a human being. In the light of all of this, "they could not answer again unto these things."

Our modern world needs to take more seriously the standard of value which Jesus put upon personality. Man is a supreme value in the universe. Personality is sacred. It would have primary place over materials and institutions and organizations. One of the tragedies of modern war is the cheap estimate which it puts upon human life. One of the indictments against modern business is that it puts profit above persons, mammon above manhood. One of the criticisms, even against the church, is that sometimes we are more concerned with methods than with men, with plans than with persons.

A Lesson On Humility.

Jesus was a keen observer. He always had his eyes open. He knew what was going on. On one occasion he went to a feast, and he noticed how people very eagerly and ambitiously, and even greedily chose the chief seats at the feast. Jesus did not minimize a legitimate ambition, but he did condemn false and selfish ambition. He suggested that it would be in better taste if men would not think of themselves more highly than they ought to think, that they should be willing to take low seats and humble places until they should be invited to come up higher. Jesus said that the mark of a great man was the willingness to let others have preference.

Jesus laid down a universal principle on this point, "For every one that exalteth himself shall be humbled; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." "Pride goeth before a fall." The people who prime themselves and strut sooner or later will come to grief. The man who seeks to exalt himself will be abased. But the man who in quiet, simple dignity, and in true humility goes about doing his duty, thinking of others, seeking no great things selfishly, will be exalted. He will not always become rich, he will not always gain the acclaim of men, but he will rank high in the sight of God, and there will be grace in his character which lifts him above the sordid, selfish group. Dr. Wilfred Grenfell is a splendid example of this truth. Here was a man who was humble, a man who sought only to serve, and as a result his name will go down in the list of those who are true heroes and great men.

Doing Good From the Right Motive.

With his keen insight Jesus also saw that men often do good because in turn they hope that others will do them good. Much of the social life of his day was more or less on a purely commercial basis. Then, as now, people had feasts and invited those who in turn would invite them. Jesus would not condemn dinner parties or wholesome social functions but he does suggest that we go the second mile in this matter and invite those of whom we have no right to expect a return in kind. It might be well for some of us occasionally to invite underprivileged boys and girls, and people of other classes and culture, into our homes, rather than to have elaborate social affairs only for those who move in our own circle. "And thou shalt be blessed; because they have not wherewith to recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed in the resurrection of the just." We will be repaid not in coin but in character. We shall be enriched not with money, but with manhood.

It is good that fire should burn, even if it burns your house. It is good that force should crush, even if it crushes you; it is good that rain should fall, even if it destroys your crops or floods your land. Only in a live universe could disease and death prevail. Death is a phase of life; decay is another kind of growth.—John Burroughs.

MONDAY.

MY CREED.

Let me be a little kinder,
Let me be a little blinder,
To the faults of those around me,
Let me praise a little more.

Let me be, when I am weary
Just a little bit more cheery;
Let me serve a little better
Those who I am striving for.

Let me be a little braver
When temptations bid me waver;
Let me strive a little harder
To be all I should be.
Let me be a little meeker,
Let me think more of my neighbor,
And a little less of me.

TUESDAY.

A CREED FOR ANY ONE.

I Believe in the Church:

1. Because it stands for all good and embraces the largest aggregate desire for righteousness.

2. Because it represents heaven's order for peace and brings that peace to my soul in times of unrest.

3. Because it is the custodian of the only power that saves man from sin.

4. Because it has made the largest contribution of all forces in the world to the general welfare of mankind.

5. Because it does more than any other institution for the morals of home and community, and in the teaching of righteousness to little children.

6. Because it gives promise of the greatest hope of the world.

7. Because, after nineteen centuries, in all these things it has stood unshaken midst all the attacks of its enemies and despite all the criticism heaped upon it.

WEDNESDAY.

EVERLASTINGLY TRYING.

"Watch . . . and pray always (without ceasing), that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things . . . and to stand before the Son of man."—Luke 21:36.

Life has been described as consisting of manhood, broken sinew, clinging soul, and final rest. Amplified: "manhood" is man at his best with power to resist that which is not good. "Broken sinew" is manhood at the point where resistance ceases. "A clinging soul" is manhood struggling to overcome the broken sinew, laying claim to Almighty strength. "Final rest" is heaven's blessings bestowed upon man when all the scaffolding of his own structure is torn down and the soul reposes in his Maker.

Prayer—O Lord, our God be Thou our thought, our speech, our meditations, our purposes and our determination, that we may overcome the broken sinews of life, forestall a bad past and be ready at last to feel within us the firmness and surety of having done our best and are prepared to enter into the rest of Thy beyond. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE LIGHT IN THE WINDOW.

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify the Father which is in heaven."—Matt.

As a lad I wondered,
When the world grew still
And the dust came stealing
From behind the hill,
Why upon the window
Of our little room
Mother placed a candle
To shine through the gloom.

"Mother," I would murmur, Shyly drawing near,
"Father has returned home,
All of us are here."
But as she caressed me,
I would hear her sigh,
"Lad, the light may comfort
Some one passing by."

I have not forgotten
What my mother said,
Though the years are heaping
Snow upon my head,

And my heart is praying,
As her heart prayed then,
"Make my life a light, Lord, Bringing cheer to men."

—Edgar Daniel Kramer.

FRIDAY.

INSTANT IN SEASON.

(II Timothy 4:2.)

Not a great while ago the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism requested Mr. Hayes, the motion picture producer, to eliminate all reference to God from motion picture films. Mr. Hayes replied in part as follows:

"Building upon their faith in a Creator, and in a God of justice and mercy, men have established certain codes of conduct, pursuance of which tends to happiness, peace and comfort. . . . These codes and these thoughts are inseparable from religion; and rather than see the motion picture used to discourage the religion from which these ideals of right living and of right thinking spring, I would prefer to see the motion picture utterly destroyed." Mr. Hayes explained that it could not be done any more than one can eliminate sunshine from the care of children. The request was the equivalent of asking to blot out the stars because men look at them and ask, "Who made all these?"

Prayer—O Lord, Thy world and our world is a perpetual reminder of Thy love for us. Forbid that we shall ever doubt, but that we may grow in faith. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE ROSE BEYOND THE WALL.

"Thou hast been faithful over a few things. I will make thee ruler over many."—Matt. 25:23.

Near shady walls a rose once grew,
Budded and blossomed in God's free light,
Watered and fed by morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.

As it grew and blossomed fair and tall
Slowly rising to loftier height,
It came to a crevice in the wall,
Through which there shone a beam of light.

Onward it crept with added strength,
With never a thought of fear or pride,
And it followed the light through the crevices length,
And unfolded itself on the other side.
The light the dew, the broadening view,
Were found the same as they were before,
Breathing its fragrance more and more.
Shall claim of death cause us to grieve,
And make our courage faint or fall?
Nay, let us faith and hope receive,
The rose still grows beyond the wall,
Scattering fragrance far and wide,
Just as it did in days of yore;
Just as it did on the other side,
Just as it will forevermore.

SUNDAY.
OUR BEST.

“Covet earnestly the best gifts:
and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.”—I Cor. 12: 31.

“God hides some ideal in every human soul. At some time in our life we feel a trembling, fearful longing to do some good thing. Life finds its noblest spring of excellence in this hidden impulse to do our best.”— Robert Collyer. Our text teaches that when we have done our best, still falling short of the goal, He shows us a more excellent way and leads us on to His fulfilment in us.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee for Thy leadership now and always. Turn our thoughts to loyalty to this day and all it is intended to mean to us. In His name we ask it.
Amen.

SUN'S PULPIT.

of idealism and sacrificial service which our fathers climbed. We, too, can follow the God of change in a changing world as He leads humanity on the upward climb of progress.

The Church of Jesus Christ seeks to contact men and women with the God who instills into life the idealism, and the courage and the power to “carry through.” There are unnumbered thousands of people today who are discouraged by terrible handicaps, crushed by physical suffering, baffled by misfortune, and heart broken because of the sins of others. And there are untold thousands whose lives are a shameful mockery to what they might have been. There are multiplied thousands of others who are buffeted by oppositions of every kind, every door of opportunity slams shut in their face. To these the world is but a wilderness of disillusionment.
To all this myriad host the Church of Christ would come with its message of a God, who knows, who cares, who loves, and who can help. Thousands from every one of these groups have heeded the message of the church and have found their way out into the sunlight of understanding and useful living. Thousands have heeded the message of the church and have made a pearl out of their suffering, a crown out of their misfortune, and have won the approbation of both God and man by their enthusiastic response to the challenge of change.

Call the roll of the noble spirits who have refused to allow any burden to crush them, any power to daunt their purposes, any experience to extinguish their hope, any happenstance to embitter their lives, any circumstance to weaken their faith. It is the religion of Jesus Christ which has given the world men and women who have made the greatest use out of life in the service of God by helping to change things from what they were to what they ought to be. Some of you will recall the beautiful story of my personal friend, Lloyd Douglass, the story entitled Magnificent Obsession. The Church of Christ gives writers ideals like that—and characters like that of the physician in Magnificent Obsession. The poet sounds the challenge of Christian faith in a world of change.

Be strong!
We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift.
’Tis God’s gift.

The Churches of Christ are dedicated to the task of proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus which is God’s power to save the world; God’s power to change lives like yours and mine;
God’s power to change cowardice to bravery; God’s power to change weakness to strength; God’s power to change moral defeat to moral victory;
God’s power, as Dean Brown puts it in one of his recent books, “To make men and women over again after the likeness of Jesus Christ.” “If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature. The old things are passed away—behold they are become new.”
The old doubts are changed to new faith; the old fears are changed to new hopes; the old sins are changed to new virtues; the old lives are changed to new lives in Christ Jesus.

The church of the living God in a world of change, is dedicated to the proposition that that change shall be after the divine pattern—and true to the God of change who, though the same yesterday, today and forever, demands constant change in His world to realize the fulfilment of His hopes for mankind. True to that God of change, the church gladly welcomes into its own life and message any change that will enable it better to meet the needs of the changing world.

The church proclaims without fear or favor God’s power to change the world in which men live by changing the lives of the men who live in the world. There is no other way. A mission so high, so noble, so challenging gives the church its place in a changing world, and its right to enter the Sanctum Sanatorium of the Future. The Christian’s prayer in the “Changing World” is couched in the lines of the old hymn:

Change and decay in all around I see.
O though who changeest not, abide with me.

The visit of the angels was due to Abraham’s prayer. How often do angels speed to our loved ones for whom we have prayed! Two refer-

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

I found this quotation in my file a few days ago and want to pass it on to you:

"I said to a man who stood at the gate of the year, 'Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown,' and he replied, 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than a light and safer than a known way.'"

We are standing at the gate of a New Year. The mysteries it holds for us are unseen and unknown, but they will be revealed to us one by one as we travel along the road of the New Year.

The old year had its joys, its blessings and its disappointments; but the joys and blessings far overbalanced its disappointments. We feel that in our work at the orphanage the Lord was real good to us. The health of the children has been good. We had no serious accidents in our group of children. No serious illness and no deaths. The work has moved along smoothly.

The churches and friends of the orphanage have been good to us and have been liberal in their offering during the year 1940. They made it possible for us to reach our goal for which we are very grateful. We hope and pray that their interest will continue to grow and that the church, through its orphanage, will be enabled to do a larger work in behalf of the orphanage and dependent children.

I know every one who had a part in helping support the orphanage is happier than he otherwise would have been. Those who took no part and turned a deaf ear to the appeal of the little children missed a joy they otherwise would have had.

In this the beginning of the New Year let us all resolve in our hearts that we will do our best this year 1941. Our goal for the year 1940 was $22,000.00—we reached it, and we should do as well in 1941. We are setting our goal for 1941 at $22,000.00. Help us reach it.

In Memoriam

FAISON.

Mrs. Lucy Denson Faison, eighty-six years of age, was buried on November 1, in the cemetery at Burton's Grove Church of which she was a member.

A good Christian and loyal member, she always carried a bright and smiling face, and seemed to be happy. She always gave a handshake with God bless you.

This committee wishes to convey to her family its sympathy through her church paper, "The Christian Sun."

Mrs. MAMIE CARROLL,
 Mrs. NELLIE BURTON,
 Mrs. LELIA BRITTLE, Committee.

HOLT.

We recognize in the death of C. T. Holt, who was for many years a deacon in our church and devoted teacher of a class of boys in our Sunday school, that we have lost a most faithful co-laborer who was always in his place and ready and willing to do whatever he could to advance the cause of righteousness and good government in his community. He was liberal in his support of his church and its enterprises and devoted to its cause.

We sorrow with his loved ones and look with them to the great Comforter of mankind.

By direction of the Board of Deacons, these resolutions are spread upon its minutes, a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication and a copy sent to his family.

C. W. McPHERSON,
 E. B. RASCOE,
 D. R. FONVILLE,
 Board of Deacons.

HOOK.

Margie Spaid Hook was born near Yellow Springs, W. Va., March 13, 1895, and departed this life at her home near Winchester on November 22, 1940, following a lingering illness of many months. Mrs. Hook was the wife of Loy H. Hook a member of the Winchester Church and the mother of Lester, Lillie and Margaret Hook, who, with their father, survive.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday, November 24, at 2 o'clock, at Timber Ridge Church by the pastor and Rev. Cartney H. Anderson. Burial was made in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Hook was a patient sufferer, a loving and tender wife, a devoted mother, a kindly neighbor and a faithful Christian, loyal to her church and the things of God. Truly we shall miss her but we know that our loss is her eternal gain. May God comfort the hearts of her loved ones.

ROBERT A. WHITTEN,
 Pastor.

JONES.

John Woodward Jones passed away on October 21, 1940, and we, the members of Berea Christian Church wish to pay tribute to his memory.

He was a faithful member until his health became impaired. He loved his church and his friends, and was always willing to give to any worthy cause.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, knowing that God never makes a mistake, submit to His will who doeth all things well.
2. That we hold in remembrance his love for his church, his relatives and many friends.
3. That our deepest sympathy be extended to the family.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to be recorded on the church minutes, and one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

An installation service was held for these teachers and officers.

The past year has witnessed many advancements in our church and Sunday school. There has been an increase of forty per cent in Sunday school attendance. There has been an increase in church membership. The missionary apportionment was increased this year and paid in full. Three new young people's societies and one new Sunday school class were organized this year. The young people were in attendance at every Conference and Convention in this area.

The basements of the church were painted and repairs made on the building. New equipment was bought for the Sunday school. A teacher training course for the Sunday school teachers and officers was conducted by Miss Marguerite Davison, extension worker for this area. A music school for choir training was taught by W. O. McGill. One of the best Boy Scout troops in Lanett is sponsored by the church. This Scout troop, Troop No. 1, has had a complete re-organization. A seven-man Scout committee has been elected. This troop took first honors at the Spring Camparee.

Some years ago, a three-story formitory at Southern Union College, which is located at Wadley, Ala., burned with the loss of all equipment. It has been hard for the college to replace furniture for the rooms of the new dormitory. The Senior Christian Endeavor Society of this church decided that this would be a good project for their group this year. With the help of members of the church and a few friends outside the church, they have purchased rugs for the floors, study tables, chairs, beds, lamps, chifforobes, curtains, shades, and paint, varnish or stain for the floors, walls and the ceilings of two rooms in the dormitories of the college. A dedication service was held by this group of young people for the two rooms they furnished at the college. These rooms were dedicated to the youth from the valley who may, in the days to come, attend this college. At the present time, there are three young people from Lanett in attendance there.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Twelve of the North Carolina ministers met in regular monthly session on Monday. More than that number missed the first new year session.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference executive committee has authorized the ordination of Rev. W. A. Grissom on January 23. Mr. Grissom became the pastor of Providence Memorial, Haw River and Long's Chapel Christian Churches the first of this year, and is now located at Graham, N. C. He has just graduated from Yale Divinity School.

The Promotional Secretary, Rev. F. C. Lester, attended the annual meeting of the Virginia Council of Religious Education in Richmond, and shared in the Convocation of Churches held by the North Carolina Council of Churches in High Point. Next week he will attend the Convocation of State Superintendents of the denomination in Chicago, and will go from there to the Mid-Winter Board Meetings in Evanston, Ill.

The following members of the Rosemont Christian Church Sunday school did not miss a Sunday during the year 1940: Mrs. J. D. Swink, Lynn Davis, Jr., Ashburn Kirby, Miss Marjorie Hassell, John Earl Swink, Miss Betty Working, Miss Elizabeth Hicks, Jesse H. McCloud, Miss Gwendolyn Haywood, Miss Janice Halstead, Miss Jackie Hollowell, Miss Doris Spencer and Stanley Mills. Of these, Mr. Mills has not missed Sunday school in twelve years and Mrs. J. D. Swink, superintendent of the Primary Department, has not missed in eight and a half years.

The Baptist Radio Hour, which is broadcast over Station WRNL, Richmond, Va., each Sunday from 4 to 4:30 P. M., is also being presented by the leading radio stations throughout the eighteen Southern Baptist States. The theme for these services is "Christ and the Human Crises in 1941." The speaker last Sunday was Dr. Geo. W. Truett, Dallas, Texas. Other preachers for the Baptist Hour are: Drs. John H. Buchanan, Birmingham; Ellis a Fuller, Atlanta; W. W. Hamilton, New Orleans; John L. Hill, Nashville; C. Oscar Johnson, C. C. Morris, Ada, Okla.; J. Clyde Turner, Greensboro; John R. Sampedey, Louisville and Theodore F. Adams of Richmond.

Dartmouth College at Hanover, N. H., will entertain the next General Council of Congregational Christian Churches in June of 1942, according to the announcement of the Executive Committee. This will bring to the New Hampshire campus the representatives of 6,000 churches with over a million members for a week of business, fellowship and inspiration. This is the fourth "campus Council" to be held by the Congregational Christian Church, the others being at Oberlin College in 1934, Mount Holyoke College in 1936 and Beloit College in 1938. The last Council was held in Berkeley, Calif., adjacent to the University of California in August of 1940. Dartmouth College was founded in 1769 by Eleazar Wheelock, a Congregational minister, for the purpose of converting the Indians of northern New England to Christianity. Although there is no direct connection between the college and the churches, it has trained many of the leaders of the Congregational denomination.

TORRINGTON, CONNECTICUT.

A series of Sunday evening panel discussions have been arranged by Rev. Carl R. Key. The general theme is the "Christian Bases of Democratic Life—Have They Been Challenged?" Mr. Frank M. Jeffrey is the chairman of the following meetings:

January 12—"What Contribution Has Christianity Made to the Democratic Process?" Introduction: Prof. Jerome Johanson.

January 19—"What Is the Place for Experimental Development During Times of National Crisis?" Introduction: Prof. Joseph Van Vleck.

January 26—"What Should Education Contribute to Democracy?" Introduction: Principal Paul W. Stoddard.

February 2—"The Interdependence of Democracy and Religion."—Introduction: The Rev. R. Wilbur Simmons.

February 9—A Music Festival by the Church Choirs." Guest soloist: The Rev. Elden Mills, West Hartford.

Panel Participants: Mr. Willie Aust, Torrington; The Rev. Frederick H. Jacobs, Goshen; Frank M. Jeffrey, Torrington; Prof. Jerome Johanson, Hartford Seminary; Gordon M. Keeler, Watertown; The Rev. Carl R. Key, Torrington; The Rev. G. Homer Lane, Torrington; Mrs. Edith M.

Seig, Torrington; The Rev. R. Wilbur Simmons, Cornwall; Principal Paul W. Stoddard, Falls Village; The Rev. Frank Van Cleef, Winchester Center; Prof. Joseph Van Vleck, Hartford Seminary; George W. Weigold, Torrington.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

256 Second Street, N.,
St. Petersburg, Fla.,
January 9, 1941.

Dr. R. L. House, Editor,
The Christian Sun,
Richmond, Va.

Dear Mr. House:

I am writing a few kind words about Dr. J. W. Manning who died December 14, 1940, to be published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

I was in close touch with our beloved Dr. Manning in church work for about forty-five years. He was very active, first in the Christian Memorial Temple, and was a charter member in the Third Christian Church which developed in our beautiful Christian Temple.

He had forty-five years of life in Norfolk, Va., well spent in his Master's service. He was deeply interested in all the activities of the church. He did not sit still and wait for some one else to carry on as most of us do. He was a good leader, and one of the best Superintendents of the Sunday school I have ever seen.

We always looked to Dr. Manning to take charge of special matters concerning our church when our pastor was away. Nobody knows just how much pastor and church will miss him.

Truly a good man is gone.

In church I always sat two or three pews behind him, and when I return from Florida and take my place in the church again my heart will be made sad. I will miss Dr. Manning in the various activities of our church.

Sincerely,
A. M. JOHNSON.

Christian Education Work Shop

REV. JOE A. FRENCH, Editor.

It has been the desire on the part of some among us who are interested in the cause of Christian education to have some method or channel for the distribution of articles, suggestions, ideas, programs and materials to the workers in our local churches in the Southern Convention. There has been a need for some avenue of passing on to others those methods and ideas which have been tried and found valuable.

There is, too, a desire on the part of workers in our local churches for help and inspiration for their work. A bit of counsel, a word of encouragement or an idea that has been found helpful will often work miracles with discouraged officers and teachers who feel that they have not been able to accomplish their purpose.

There is also need of an opportunity for officers of Sunday School Conventions, pastors and others interested in Christian education for an exchange of opinions and the discussion of pertinent problems.

Recognizing this situation the Executive Committee and the Departmental Superintendents of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention in session recently decided upon a procedure which they hope will be a solution of the problem. It was the opinion of the group that a department in THE CHRISTIAN SUN devoted to the general field of Christian education would meet the evident need. It is the desire of this group that a page of THE CHRISTIAN SUN be devoted to this subject occasionally.

The officers of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention were outspoken in their desire that this page should not be exclusively for and by people of this section of the Southern Convention. This will be kept in mind by writers of articles, selection of subject matter and the editing of the page. All material for this page should be addressed to Joe A. French, Hickory, Va.

The following article by Mr. Slater is a very appropriate one with which to start our page.

THE MINISTER AND HIS CHURCH SCHOOL.

By REV. ARNOLD SLATER.

[Read before the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association.]

The experience of the American soldier during the last war perhaps best describes my sentiments in attempting to discuss the subject mentioned. This soldier visited respectively in the homes of an Irishman, Englishman and Scotchman, and was invited to have a cup of coffee. In each case he found the coffee in need of more sugar. The Irishman passed the bowl and said, "Help yourself, man." The Englishman said, "Pass your cup, sir, and I will add another lump." The Scotchman said, "Man, just try stirring your cup—you already have the information and the knowledge, now it is a question of stirring the cup, using what is already known."

True enough the Church School is but one phase of a minister's pastorate; but it probably ranks as first in importance because it presents the supreme opportunity of dealing with human life at its beginnings. It may truly be regarded as the initial step in preparation for intelligent church membership. Horne, in The Psychological Principles of Education states: "The Church School is the one institution in American life whose avowed purpose is to teach religious truth." In contrast is the revival which is primarily remedial, the Church School is educational and constructive.

The church has been in the vanguard of education, yet strangely enough the Church School is a comparatively young institution, coming at a logical time when religion was being decreased in the secular schools.

Occasionally the child becomes father of the man. To many ministers the Church School is regarded with a degree of apprehension, since it appears to be a parallel and largely separate body, a competitor in the field of religion. Headaches and inferiority complexes, with an occasional fit of apoplexy are not unknown when the subject is considered.

Problem No. 1 for the minister is to secure a cooperative relationship between the church and the school. Along with other organizations of the church the school needs reminding that it is but one of the children of the parent body. As Charles R. Brown suggests: "The school is not, however, a side-show, nor yet a step-child; the Roman Catholics have much to teach us in this respect." This relationship needs a frank, even courageous adjustment, the minister is equally guilty as the laity in that all unwittingly we have permitted ourselves to drift into this difficult situation. Closely related to this fact, it is being increasingly felt, that the school students do not automatically graduate into the larger program of the church; although most of our church workers are admittedly products of the school. Munro in Your Church and Its Program concludes, "The large number of children who have a fairly continuous and satisfactory church school experience, yet who never really become church conscious, indicates the problem is not only real for the minister but the children and the church as a whole." Why doesn't the church reap the fruits?

The church school seems chiefly concerned with its own machinery, its organization, its offerings, its attendance, and is prone to measure its success or failure in the light of these findings. However integrated its program, progressive its methods, the school that does not coordinate and relate its purpose with the whole church program is deficient and archaic. The natural result of this weakness is apparent when we consider the church attendance. The minister has a right to question the value of a school that does not produce a satisfactory number who are persuaded they need the additional atmosphere in which they may reasonably expect spiritual growth. Does this attitude constitute a failure on the part of the church school? Do we count it a failure when one does not accomplish something he has never set out to accomplish? That is why Paulsen in The Church School and Its Program says, "The church school has not altogether failed in its task of developing persons habituated to church because it has not always regarded this as a primary task. The failure lies in not having made this a strong purpose."

I have used the term "church school" in place of the older term "Sunday school"; not simply to juggle names or sound academic but because if this institution does its job, it is literally the "school of and for the church." Its main function is instructional. The practice of church attendance is not to be left to chance or hope; nor can we depend on a sense of duty, obedience or obligation. It should be possible with conscious purpose and clearly defined procedure to prepare students for the practice of and a true appreciation in the morning service. As it is in the church school, one pastor has stated, "We let people sing the songs they like but we use the stately, more dig-

AMERICAN MISSIONS.

Home Missions Sunday was observed last Sunday in many of our churches. Representatives of the various Protestant home mission and church extension boards urged Christian groups in all communions to engage in prayer and meditation in behalf of the multitudes in city and rural areas who are destitute of religious privileges and for the missionaries who strive to serve needy communities.

The valid observation has been made that even though our church was primarily rural in the beginning, we have concentrated our home missionary efforts and resources primarily in towns and cities. Our city churches are important, but the rural churches should not be neglected. They are set, in many instances, amid poverty, tenantry, and lack of vision, with meagre equipment and leadership. That the progress of the rural church is tied up with the antiquated, inefficient agricultural methods is obvious. Strong, self-sufficient country churches are not to be reared on share croppers and bankrupt landowners. In comparison with theirs, the city home and church is like a mansion and a cathedral. The strong should bear the burdens of the weak. Greater resources should be going out to undergird the work in these underprivileged areas.

Home missionary work suffers in comparison with that of foreign. The standards are lower and the resources are less. We approach the task with meagre faith and zeal. The Carroll County charge is our only outpost in this area. There are doubtless other and many equally needy areas beckoning for us to come and help. One isolated project to build life in the mountains may be a corporate minimum if it cannot be considered as a maximum achievement or duty. Additional home missionary enterprises are necessary for the vitality of our faith. The entire work in Carroll County could be sponsored and supported by one church alone, and the other churches might be released for additional enterprises.

More and better churches and ministers, more doctors, nurses, agriculturists and social workers are needed. Young men and women, college graduates with professional training, should be confronted with the prospect of social or religious work in these remote and needy areas.

Let the church, as well as Uncle Sam, put in a bid for youthful energy and service. Let the home missions committees enlist the most capable and aggressive leadership, provide them with annual scholarships to rural institutes and give them access to authoritative books and periodicals on rural work. Guided by a vision of what America with all her resources would be like if brought under the influence of Christ, we should gird ourselves for renewed and more aggressive effort in adjacent fields. Only in this way can we build a substantial foundation for more effective foreign outreach.

ALTERNATIVES FOR EMOTIONALISM

Emotionalism is suspect among the well established Protestant denominations. Marked displays of emotion are studiously avoided. They are considered in very poor taste. Appeals to emotion are thought to be at least slightly tinged with dishonesty. This is due to the fact that appeals to emotion have often been regarded as ends within themselves and not means to an end.

If we are going to discourage appeals to emotion we should diligently seek for alternatives which will be more effective in character development than is emotionalism. That there are such alternatives there can be no doubt. We would like to suggest a few of them.

The first that comes to mind, and perhaps the first in importance, is a well grounded knowledge of the Scriptures. The individual who is ignorant of the Bible is "like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." What is needed is more than a mere surface knowledge of Scripture texts which confirm one's pet ideas. One needs to know not only the letter but also the spirit which underlies and finds expression in each Bible revelation.

Another alternative is the reasoned approach to life's problems. Most of the issues of life have been settled, if settled at all, upon the basis of reason. It is perhaps natural for the individual to become all excited and fluttered by the novel situation and the crucial experience. But such a reaction is generally most ineffective. God has marvelously endowed us with a reasoning mind, and certainly he expects us to use all the faculties of reason in meeting the issues of life.

However, we not only need to know what is the wisest course to follow; but we need to have the determination to follow that course to its inevitable and logical ends. There are multitudes of people who are in perfect agreement as to the desirability of Christian methods of procedure, who are totally lacking in the will power to follow them. It is peculiarly the task of religion to strengthen and develop the power of the will.

But perhaps the most effective of all the alternatives to emotionalism is a well-balanced religious community life. All of man's high desires and spiritual intentions should find a natural and normal outlet in the every day expressions of ordinary Christian living. The man who is practicing true brotherhood every day, does not get into a dither about brotherly love. He does not shout about it, he practices it. And so it should be with all the Christian relationships of life. Sympathy, kindness, understanding, neighborly interest and brotherly love are just as thrilling and far more effective than the most torrential outbursts of emotionalism.

S. C. H.

God doesn't demand that we turn over to the Church every cent we have. But He does demand that we put the love of Christ, and the desire to extend His Cause, above any of our possessions.

IN APPRECIATION OF DR. J. W. MANNING.

The Christian Temple suffered a seemingly irreparable loss just before the Christmas Season when Dr. J. W. Manning suddenly passed away on Saturday morning, December 14, 1940. His death came as a distinct shock to members of his family, his church, and to the city, for although he had left his office the day before indisposed thinking he might be taking the grippe, he was feeling better the next morning and would have returned to his office had the weather not been inclement.

Dr. Manning was born October 28, 1868, near Roanoke, Ala., and was the only son in a family of eight children of the late William I. and Nancy Ann Elder Manning. On his mother's side there have been a number of ministers. His grandfather, Rev. Wyche Elder, was one of the pioneer preachers in Georgia and Alabama, and helped found the New Hope Church in Alabama and also helped organize other churches. Several uncles and cousins have been ministers. Dr. Manning spent his boyhood on a farm, was educated in the public schools, and attended college at Roanoke, and took a business course in Atlanta, Ga., where he graduated in 1892. He attended the Atlanta Dental College from which he graduated in 1896 as president of his class.

After practicing in Milledgeville, Ga., for five years, he came to Norfolk and established an office here in September, 1901. Three or four years later he moved into then incompleated Bank of Commerce Building where he had maintained his office for over thirty-five years in the same place. This office commanded the magnificent view of the city of Norfolk, the Elizabeth River, Hampton Roads, and on clear days even more distant points. Dr. Manning always took delight in having visitors get this view. Dr. Manning was elected president of the State Dental Society in 1917, and at the same time of his death was a member of that body, as well as of the American Dental Association, and the Tidewater Dental Association. He was also a member of the Knights of Pythias.

Dr. Manning was married to Miss Jennie Ada Wymer, who survives him, on January 3, 1897, at Norwick, Ohio. The home which this young bridal couple established was in the finest sense a Christian home. Through all the years Mrs. Manning has also been a faithful and fruitful worker in the church. Into that home three children were born, all of whom are living, Dr. Wymer W. Manning, Lucille (now Mrs. F. F. Myrick), and Aurelia (now Mrs. Robert H. Etheredge), all of Norfolk. Dr. Manning also had the following grandchildren, Lucile Myrick, Shirley Etheredge, Robert H. Etheredge, Jr., and Wymer W. Manning, Jr. Mrs. A. M. Johnson, a member of the Christian Temple, is the only surviving sister; but he leaves a large number of nephews and nieces in Alabama and Georgia and in other states, and some cousins, many of whom are members of Congregational Christian Churches.

Although Dr. Manning achieved distinction as a dentist, and although he was a well known citizen of the community, it was perhaps as a churchman that he was best known, and in which he found his chief delight. Only recently Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, former pastor of the Christian Temple, said to the writer, "Dr. Manning comes the nearest to being the ideal layman of any man in any church which I have served." He was one of the founders of the Third Christian Church, which consolidated with Memorial Temple and Old Providence Church to form the present Christian Temple. He was chairman of the Building Committee when the beautiful Christian Temple itself was erected. He had held many offices in these churches, at one time being superintendent of the Sunday school. At the time of his death he was chairman of the Board of Trustees, chairman of the Music Committee (on the Wednesday evening before his death he and Mrs. Manning and the members of their family gave a delightful dinner party to members of the Temple Choir and invited guests), purchasing agent for the church, a member of the Board of Deacons, and a member of the Official Board. It was an unusual thing for Dr. Manning to be absent either from any of the public services of worship of his church, or from any of the boards or committees of which he was a member. He was liberal to the church and the kingdom with his time, his talents, and with his means. He was recognized not only in his own local church but in the larger fellowship. He served as president of the Eastern Virginia Conference, and as vice-president of the Southern Christian Convention. He was very liberal, also, in his professional services to the unfortunate.

Dr. Manning was a man of unquestioned integrity of character, of simplicity and sincerity. He had a love for and a loyalty to his family, fidelity to his friends, a devotion to duty, a love and loyalty and spirit of service and sacrifice to the church and to the kingdom. He was a man of calm temperament and wise counsel, and possessed a talent for speaking a word of cheer and encouragement. He had a simple and deep rooted faith in God and in the work and dignity of the church of Jesus Christ, a faith which found expression not only in the words of his lips but in the works of his life. He had a zest for life, a love for music, and a devotion to high ideals. He was a splendid Christian, and a great churchman. It can be said of him as it was said of another of long ago, "There was a man sent from God whose name was John"—John Wyche Manning. He has left to his family and to his church and family a goodly heritage of a good name, a fine career, and faithful service. Hundreds will rise up and call him blessed.

Funeral services were conducted at the Christian Temple on Monday, December 16, with Dr. L. E. Smith and the writer officiating. The spacious sanctuary was filled with those who had gathered to pay their last respects to him. There was a profusion of lovely floral designs. Members of the Temple choir sang some of his favorite hymns. Members of the Board of Trustees, the Board of Deacons, and the Official Board of the Temple, and the members of the Tidewater Dental Association served as honorary pallbearers. Burial was in Forrest Lawn Cemetery in Norfolk.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

While attending a missionary conference held in New York City, during the month of April, 1900, in company with Dr. W. W. Staley, the writer went to call on Hon. Francis A. Palmer at his office in his bank. That visit made a deep impression, revealing as it did, Dr. Staley's diplomacy in approaching his distinguished friend. It will be recalled that through Dr. Staley's influence Mr. Palmer previously had given $30,000 to Elon College. Having the privilege of going with him to make this call, it gave an observation of his method of approach.

We went to the office about 10:30 A. M. When we arrived we learned that Mr. Palmer was in his private office, and according to the rules, it was required that callers were admitted by a private secretary. Having passed that "hurdle" with success the next step was to be admitted to the office. Although that event occurred over forty years ago, the details are vivid in my memory. Dr. Staley said: "Brother Palmer, we are in New York, attending a missionary meeting, and we came to your office just to say good morning, and pay our respects to you. I know you are busy and we do not wish to take your valuable time, and I hope you will not take this as an intrusion." Mr. Palmer said: "I am so glad to see you. Have a seat, and I wish you would both stay and take lunch with me today." We remained for a few minutes—long enough for a young minister to make some very helpful observations of those two men in that brief period.

These observations are passed along to others in this account of the visit. Mr. Palmer was a successful banker and had accumulated a fortune. He was a great man. Many callers entered his office during a year. He was frequently solicited for large gifts. Men who tried to put on high pressure methods were usually disappointed by his refusal to give. Dr. Staley entered that office with humility and great deference. He thanked Mr. Palmer for giving him this privilege, expressed again his great appreciation of his munificent gift to Elon College, told one of his timely stories, had a brief prayer after a few minutes of conversation on other topics of mutual interest. In that brief time Mr. Palmer had the joy of entertaining an humble minister who submerged his own self-importance and gave this great banker's personality the predominating role. This pleased him and gave him a more exalted opinion of Dr. Staley. He had one caller whose only business was to pay his respects, express his appreciation, give due recognition to another man's ability and cultivate a personal friendship, without making suggestion of any return for this little courtesy and consideration. It was an unselfish and an unseeking approach, free from any of the tricks of "superiority complex" methods practiced by lesser men who seek to be leaders.

Herein lies the value of pastoral visiting. Pastoral calls, which consist chiefly of ringing door bells and leaving a card, do not have much value. They can be counted, but they have little weight. A sensible visit, which gives real recognition, makes friends and builds up the kingdom of God. Such a call will elevate the host and keep the guest in the background. When the visit is over, the preacher will loom larger in the estimation of the host, if he has wisely refrained from egotistic self-exaltation. The way of humble service, denying self-exalting others and following the trail of the Master will bring due exaltation. Church officials, ministers and other workers constantly need to study and practice the methods of Jesus in trying to win others for service. A study of successful men will be profitable and pay big dividends.

BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MEETS.

The Board of Christian Education elected by the Convention to conduct a united educational program for our church met in midyear session at the college Monday night, January 6. Members of the Board are Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Dr. John G. Truitt, Rev. Herbert Councill, Rev. S. E. Madren, Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, Rev. Joe French and L. E. Smith, Chairman, with Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary, as ex-officio member of the Board. All members were present with the exception of Rev. Joe French who made a valuable contribution to the meeting through correspondence.

The Board remained in session until Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Problems confronting the Board and the church through the Board were discussed in detail. Considerable time was spent in discussing the advisability and the value of leadership training schools located in our various conferences so as to be accessible to the largest number of our churches. It was voted to request Rev. S. E. Madren and Mr. Lester to plan for such a school in the Franklinton section at such a time as to be able to use Miss Lucy Eldredge on her proposed visit to this section. It was also voted to see if such a school could not be arranged for the Western Conference centered at Ramseur, N. C., and serving the nearby churches.

Aside from these important actions, the Board proposes with the assistance of certain pastors to undertake a definite program of Christian Education in the local churches, informing the local churches regarding the responsibilities and the part that pastors, teachers, and different departments of the Convention and Conferences may play in an effort to help and encourage the local church, these suggestions to be put in pamphlet form and distributed.

The Board also felt that it would be profitable if some way could be found to inform Convention and Conference committees as to their responsibilities and opportunities in a progressive program for the church as a whole. A manual of instruction is to be prepared and placed in the hands of all committeemen with the hope that such committees may function throughout the year and that their reports to their respective conferences may be a list of achievements and a program for further undertakings rather than a hasty statement prepared and presented on official occasions.

The Board was much interested in improving the curriculum of Christian Education at Elon College and to be of assistance in working out a plan whereby the college church might be able to serve more efficiently the faculty, students and community. The college community and local church realize the need of a full-time pastor. Necessary funds, however, are not available. This is perhaps one of the greater needs of our Convention, one that must be met in some way. In an effort to help tide over a period of acute need, the writer has undertaken for these nine years to serve both as president of the college together with its multiplicity of requirements and as pastor of the college church. We have succeeded beyond our expectations, but the time has come when additional assistance is needed and should be provided.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

It is just midnight and all good folks are asleep! I have been lazy this week so in order to get this letter written I have to sit up. Mr. Todd and Oliver are fast asleep. The only noises in the house are, the fire flickering in the grate, the watch ticking the minutes away here on the desk beside me and my typewriter as my fingers strike the keys!

Today has been such a nice day for me. Don't you just love Sundays that are full of blue skies, sunshine and happiness? This has been one of those Sundays. It is nice not to have to make your own sunshine! Tonight is nice, too. Outside there is a great yellow moon in the sky; the stars seem to be sailing by the moon; old Jack Frost has already visited the earth and left his footprints everywhere. He (Jack Frost) is trying to creep into my room but he is afraid that my fire might harm him just now. Too, he doesn't like people so very well and I think that he is waiting for me to go to bed before he comes.

I did not get to go to church today but I heard a lovely service over the radio from Christ Episcopal Church in Raleigh. Then I listened to the Catholic Hour this evening, too. People of all ages came to see us today. Ann Taylor who is just five months old came up with her parents to visit us for a bit. Her father is pastor of our Church of Wide Fellowship at Southern Pines. The Rev. W. J. Andes of Durham came down to introduce us to his (baby) bride! Then Linda Faye came to see Oliver and to get the pocketbooks which she left at our house. She sang a lullaby for Oliver while he was getting his afternoon tea and then she showed me how she sings her goodnight prayer. Want to hear it? "Now I lay me down to sleep. I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake. I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take. God bless Mama, Daddy, Gaggie, Pappy, Grandma and Grandpa, and the Mr. Brown who works down at the store with Daddy. Amen."

I asked her why she wanted God to bless Mr. Brown. She replied, "Because he is going to take me and Daddy and Mama to Florida with him to see Grandma and Grandpa."

Two high school girls, whom I taught in Sunday school, came by to talk with me for a little. They gave me some of the words to put in our puzzle for this week. We talked about our Sunday school and about my problem of getting back to the services!

After church tonight, Mr. Todd brought our organist and her mother by the parsonage. We sat in front of the fire and drank hot tea and ate sandwiches and talked.

This afternoon, between visits, we went to see John Fulton, Jr., and his folks. So you can see why I think it has been a lovely day. I trust that all of you have had a good Sunday. Will one of you write and tell the rest of us what you do on Sunday at your house? If you will, then I shall not have to sit up after midnight to write to you next time.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

BABY'S HANDS.

Baby has discovered his hands and for hours at a time he will lie awake and look at them. He waves them all about his head, shutting his fingers and opening them. His mother put mittens on them to keep them warm. Now he looks like a little boxer lying there shoving them about.

The father looks at the baby's hand, so tiny, resting in his giant hand! "What will he do with those hands?" he wonders. Perhaps he will be an artist and paint beautiful pictures. Maybe he will be a musician and fill the world with sweeter music. Or perhaps he will use those long fingers to make sick people well again. He might write great thoughts with them which will be read down through the years to come.

The mother looks at the two chubby fists folded on baby's bosom while he eats his supper. She, too, dreams of what might be done by those hands one day. She prays as she dreams—"Dear God, may these tiny hands never do things which will bring ugliness into Thy world. Rather may they bring peace, health and happiness by their ministry. Let them know the joy of labor for bread. May they know the feel of soft, warm sod in the summer sun. Let them not hold things which will destroy his physical health. Help him to find Thy plan for his life which lies hidden in these tiny fists. And, please God, may he never know what it is to hold those implements which bring death to others on the field of battle. Amen."

I washed my hands this morning;
So very clean and white,
And lent them both to Jesus
To work for him till night.

Little feet be careful where you take me to,
Anything for Jesus only let me do.

The important point is to be on the spot at the moment most favorable for gaining the desired advantage; and it will be found that of men who get what they want in this world, both those who seem to hasten and those who seem to lounge are always at the right place at the right time.—
David Graham Phillips,

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Harmonizing Black and White.—Edgar H. Brookes, versatile principal of Adams College, South Africa, not only guides the destinies of that school, but serves as Senator in the South African Parliament as the elected representative of the Zulus in his area! He believes that getting together is the best way for white and black people to understand each other. So he invited students from high class European boarding schools to visit Adams College for a week. They came. The compliment was returned by two of Adams' leading students visiting the white schools.

On the Eve of Sailing.—Back to join the faculty of Fukien Christian University, now refugeeing in Shao-wu, Mr. Roderick Scott wrote: "The issue of the Far Eastern Conflict is not for the Chinese a matter of arms and supplies but lies between the strength of Chinese morale and the power of Japan's financial structure. The one nation relies for resistance on the spirit of the people, the other supports invasion with the foreign credit necessary for the purchase of foreign supplies. We have no doubt which will give out first. . . ." Mr. Scott pointed out that China feels she is getting more than aid from America. She feels she has America's sympathy, that the ideals of the two nations are the same; that America understands her and will stand by her. "This sympathy is mediated in no better way than through the missionary movement which the Chinese now eagerly welcome. They honor the missionaries and they are favorable toward Christianity. It is a great work in which you and I are engaged."

A Golden Occasion.—The first pages of the new Turkish translation of the Bible now being printed in Istanbul were presented at the last annual meeting of the Near East Mission by Frank L. MacCallum, representing the American and British Bible Societies. Fittingly Frank MacCallum is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick W. MacCallum, veteran workers now retired in Turkey. Dr. MacCallum has done much of the work on this new Turkish translation.

In this same week, Dr. and Mrs. MacCallum celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Their friends saw to it that there was a huge wedding cake, flowers, gifts and a Golden Book containing a collection of congratulatory letters from many friends.

Outposts for World Peace.—Travelers, members of diplomatic services and newspapermen now agree pretty generally that no one understands the Asiatics and Africans as well as the missionaries who live among them. So states Dr. Lora G. Dyer, M. D., of Pierce Memorial Hospital, Foochow, China, adding, "Missions are builders of world peace. The doctor and nurse have peculiarly fine chances to serve, to understand, to interpret internationalism." Then Dr. Dyer points out that "The persistent honesty of the mission doctor in seeking an accurate diagnosis, in giving valid treatments . . . along with his earnest efforts in preventing epidemics, has had perhaps the greatest effect in convincing Christian and non-Christian patients alike of the good will and desire of the West to help and not to exploit the East."

Tires Stuffed With Straw.—When early this summer Robert W. McClure of Foochow, China, had to have his shoes half soled, it was done with old auto tires. They walk well, he says, but they are hot. Many of the Foochow rickshas no longer have pneumatic tires. "When they are worn out they are stuffed with straw," Mr. McClure writes, adding, "I hate to ride in a ricksha for the men seem so thin and weak. I never do ride if I can help it and then I try to pay them well." There is not only a shortage of food in Foochow but of medicine and hospital supplies. Practically every face on the streets shows the marks of hunger. And yet Mr. McClure writes, "But our discomforts are small compared with what the peoples of the earth are enduring these days."

Fan Village Keeps Its Chin Up.—Fan Village in China, about which many people have read during the past years, was an exemplary town before the war. Its sufferings were great during the invasion but it escaped the flood of last summer and managed to hold a Harvest Home festival. But the villagers have shared in the economic distress of the devastated area because friends from the flooded sections have come to live with them. This burden they have accepted in a truly Christian spirit. The Christians were deeply encouraged by a visit for a month of three women students from the Bible Training School in Peking. One specialized in children's work, one for young people and one for women. The third week of their visit saw the village in terror because of bandits who had killed a man. The girls calmly carried on their work. No mention was made of going to Paotingfu for safety. This attitude made a great impression on Fan Village.—Missionary Herald.

CAN WE TITHE IN HARD TIMES.

This is the title of a bulletin published by The Layman Co. especially for these times. Layman bulletins on tithing, thirty-two in number, are printed in regular two-page church bulletin size. The two blank pages of each bulletin provide room for announcements of the local church. A sample set containing thirty-two different tithing bulletins will be sent to any address, postpaid for 20 cents.

SHOULD EUROPE'S HUNGRY BE FED.

"Avenge not yourselves, beloved, but give place unto the wrath of God: for it is written, Vengeance belongeth unto me; I will recompense, saith the Lord. But if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him to drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."—Romans 12: 19ff.

Mr. Herbert Hoover has said that many millions of innocent people in the five small democracies of Europe will starve during the winter and forthcoming spring, unless relief comes from overseas. The American Friends Service Committee have endorsed this judgment.

Mr. Peter F. Drucker, in the Saturday Evening Post for November 30, asks, "Is it true, as has been said repeatedly these last months, that Mr. Hoover and the Quakers are alarmists without cause?" His answer is: "On the contrary, it is only too probable that their forecasts will turn out to have been correct. For the conclusion that there is enough food for everyone in Europe rests on a purely statistical basis. It is arrived at by dividing the entire food supply of the European continent outside of Russia by the total number of inhabitants. On such a basis there would hardly ever have been a famine in the world's history. The main problem of food supplies is not usually their total size; it is their distribution. And while there is, theoretically, enough food in Europe, a famine could only be prevented if the food were distributed evenly—which seems a political improbability and a physical impossibility."

In Europe, there are vast populations which, even in normal times, do not produce enough food to live on but import from thirty to sixty per cent of their food supplies, which now they cannot do because of the British blockade and the German counter blockade. Moreover, their normal production of food has been disastrously reduced by war and mobilization for war. Hence there are now in Europe many millions of human beings, including children, who have not enough to eat, who already are exhibiting the telltale signs of malnutrition, and who during the winter and forthcoming spring, unless relief comes from overseas, will almost certainly die of hunger or, more probably, of hunger-begotten diseases. In this situation there is, of course, grave danger of an epidemic, which, if it appears in Europe, may spread over all the earth, as our own experience with virulent influenza in 1918 may serve to remind us. In cities that have been subjected to continuous bombing, the problem of maintaining any kind of sanitation is now acute; and if, in addition, there should be starvation and consequent weakening of resistance to infection, an uncontrollable epidemic would almost certainly develop.

To meet this desperate situation, Mr. Herbert Hoover, in the light of his experience as director of the American Relief Commission during and after the first World War, has devised a plan which has received the wholehearted endorsement of the American Friends Service Committee and of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, Inc., the Norwegian Relief Fund, Inc., the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Inc., and the Commission for Polish Relief, Inc.

This plan does not call for the use of American ships; nor does it call for the spending of American dollars. The countries whose people are to be fed would carry the needed food in their own ships and pay for it with their own money. There would be, according to the plan, an international commission, with authority to buy food abroad, to safeguard it when it arrived, and to distribute it through the warehouses of the commission to needy civilians. The German government would have to agree to allow free passage of relief ships, and to take none of their cargoes for its own use, and to take none of the domestic produce of the peoples being relieved, and to give to the international relief commission full control of distribution and inspection. The British government would have to agree to allow the free passage of relief ships so long as Germany's guarantees were fulfilled, and no longer. In the event of Germany's failure to live up to its agreement, the British would immediately be released from their agreement. They would be free to impose a blockade of all shipping. And it is an essential part of the plan that the arrival of relief ships should be so timed as to prevent any accumulation of food, so that the amount on hand at any time would make no appreciable difference in favor of Germany if the German government should in any way violate its agreement.

The sponsors of the plan believe that consent to its being tried can be gained from the German and British governments if public sentiment in the United States is mobilized in support of it.

The German government may well recognize the danger of an uncontrollable pestilence and, also, of social revolution on the part of hunger-mad men. Would the British government consider it wise to affront the moral sentiment of the United States—yes, and the conscience of many of its own people who do not take kindly to the idea of killing their friends in order to subdue their enemies? The present refusal of the British government to allow free passage of relief ships need not be taken as final. It is not being so taken by the National Committee on Food for the Five Small Democracies, which has announced its determination to persevere in search for a solution that will be acceptable to the governments concerned.

Those who are opposing this plan have no plan of their own to offer. This plan is the last hope of multitudes of despairing men, women and children who, unless relief comes from overseas, are doomed. And the only power on earth that can secure a chance for this plan to be tried is the power of public sentiment in the United States. Is it improper and unfair to do anything that requires to be done in the way of preventing wholesale starvation, disease, and death?

There is reason to suppose that the German government, because of its fear of epidemic and of social revolution, would consent to this plan. Also, there is some reason to believe that, in this case, the German government would keep its word. As to that, Mr. John F. Rich, associate secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, has this to say: "No one truly conversant with the facts is seriously perturbed by the prospect of Germany seizing American relief supplies for her own military or civil use. The American Red Cross and the American Friends Service Committee know from recent experience that the German government has accorded them nothing but courtesy and

Pilgrim Fellowship

"Youth at Work in the Church"

A. LANSON GRANGER, JR., Editor

NEWS FROM THE VALLEY.

"Onward Pilgrim Fellowship" seems to be the theme of the young people in the Antioch, Linville and New Hope Churches. Keen interest, better attendance, cooperation among the three groups, and a fine spirit are evidence of this. The praise for this is in no small measure due to the efforts and encouragement of the pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. Paul Sanger. In fact, in every phase of church activity the inspiration of these two is felt. A young people's choir has begun regular practice at Linville, and a splendid Christmas program was prepared at Beulah under Mrs. Sanger's direction.

On New Year's Eve, Mr. and Mrs. Sanger entertained the young people of their pastorate at a Watch Party at the Linville Church. The evening's program was concluded with a devotional service which ended promptly at the beginning of the New Year. About fifty Pilgrim Fellowshipers and a number of adults attended. Each church was responsible for some part of the program, and the entire evening was a splendid aftermath to the Conference Pilgrim Fellowship held in the same church on the preceding Sunday.

NATIONAL PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP NEWSLETTER.

In a recent issue of the National Pilgrim Fellowship Newsletter, the national chairman of Personal Action, of Missionary Action, and of Social Action, made some special recommendations for all groups.

Personal Action.

John Webster, 435 Union Street, Bangor, Me., is anxious for all local groups to study Christian beliefs in an effort to lead the individual to formulate his own Statement of Faith. He would welcome any ideas or any requests for help.

John particularly would like for us to emphasize church membership during this pre-Easter season. He hopes that every group will cooperate with the minister in establishing a pastor's class which will give prospective members some conception of the meaning of church membership.

He also suggests a worship committee to study and improve worship services in our young people's meetings.

Missionary Action.

Mildred Nicholls, 1661 East 82nd Street, Cleveland, Ohio, has been working in connection with the church national mission boards on special projects for young people's groups. In the Southern Convention, young people will be glad to know that Pleasant Hill Academy, Pleasant Hill, Tenn., is among the projects listed.

However, in our particular section, Mildred urges us to make careful study of our home and foreign mission books, and to meet our apportionments, pledged through the Woman's Mission Board.

Social Action.

Tom Keelm, 211 W. 56th Street, New York City, sends preliminary information about Work Camps for next summer. These Work Camps are composed of young people who volunteer their services for some constructive community work in a selected community. These camps include such activities as repairing buildings, landscaping, building recreational centers, service in churches and communities; also study, recreation, and worship. Plans are going forward for establishing centers at the following places: Schauffler, Cleveland, Ohio; Southern Union College, Wadley, Ala.; Merom Institute, Merom, Ind.; Grand Rapids, Minn. More definite information will be available later.

Betty Merrill, who has attended two work camps, says: "Work Camps verified my faith in the strength of the democratic community. Indeed our group, in its planning and discussion, often reached a level which I feel is higher than the democratic rule of the majority; it frequently reached that unanimity of mind and spirit which is the essence of the kingdom of heaven. I covet for every youth in this country a work camp experience."

WHAT MY DENOMINATION STANDS FOR.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JANUARY 26, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Eph. 2: 19-22;
I Tim. 4: 12-14.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Christ, the Foundation—Matt. 16: 15-18.

Tuesday—Diversified Responsibilities—I Cor. 12: 27-31.

Wednesday—Christ, the Corner-Stone—Psalm 118: 22, 23.

Thursday—Holiness Becometh the Church—Eph. 5: 25-27.

Friday—An Ideal Social Order—Acts 2: 42-47.

Saturday—Christ, the Head—Col. 1: 16-18.

This topic offers an opportunity for a greater knowledge of the Congregational Christian Church as a denomination. Since the Southern Convention is a concern of our churches in North Carolina and Virginia, someone may make a report on its relation to the Conference and the local church. Someone may report on the origin of the Christian Church. The reasons for her existence. A brief history of the life of Rev. James O'Kelly. The principles of the church may also be considered.

Why are we now called Congregational Christian? Learn something of what the Congregational Church is. Report on her descent, back of which will be the Pilgrim fathers, the Separatists from the Church of England, behind whom were the Puritans within the established church. How large is the whole denomination? Where does the power of the church rest? What questions are asked a candidate for membership?

Trace the set-up of the denomination from the local board to the General Council. What are the offices, boards and institutions in our form of organization.

Collect clippings of news about the church in public affairs and make a poster. Place these over the question what should the church do about it? These may be examples of public issues, war, the liquor traffic, Sabbath desecration, crime, etc. What do others think the church should do. Get various opinions.

For Discussion—

1. Why denominations unite.
2. Should there be different denominations?
3. What should be the attitude of one denomination to another.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., pastor of our new church in Asheboro, N. C., is improving rapidly and within another week expects to be back on the job in his church.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

THE SLIGHTED INVITATION.

LESSON III—JANUARY 19, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 14: 15-35.

GOLDEN TEXT: Come, for all things are now ready.—Luke 14: 17.

Material or Spiritual Banquet.

People are not always quick to understand the deeper things of life. Today's lesson is an instance in point. Jesus had been talking about the things of the spirit. One of the men who was at the dinner party broke in with the words, "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." This man thought that the kingdom of God was primarily a material kingdom. He thought that the Messiah whom God had promised, and whom he probably regarded as finding fulfilment in Jesus, was going to establish an earthly kingdom which would be characterized by an abundance of material things, an era of peace and prosperity. We must not criticize this man too harshly, for even the disciples themselves often thought of the kingdom in terms of material things. During the lifetime of Jesus they never did get it fully into their heads that the kingdom was not of this world, although it was to come in this world. Paul had to combat this error also, and on one occasion he wrote, "The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." To be sure if the kingdom of God should come on earth there would be a more equitable distribution of the world's goods. People would have more of the material comforts; they would have more cultural advantages; but the kingdom of God is not essentially a program of material wealth, or a political device—it is primarily a matter of spirit. It is the rule of the spirit of God in the hearts of men and women, and although, generally speaking, and in the long run righteousness does pay, the kingdom of God is not primarily a matter of material rewards. Its real values and dividends are inner and spiritual.

Making Light of Life's Best Things.

Jesus told a story of a man who made a great supper and invited many people to come to it. In keeping with the custom of that day, when the time for the supper came, he sent his servant out that he might remind the invited guests of their invitation, "Come, for all things are now ready." But according to the story, "They all with one consent began to make excuse." One said he had bought a piece of land, and he had to go out to see it; another said that he had bought five yoke of oxen, and had to go to prove them. Both of these men asked to be excused. The third said that he had just recently been married, and therefore could not come. He did not ask to be excused; he simply flatly said that he was not coming. Thus would Jesus have us to understand that God has graciously prepared a feast of good things for all those who would accept his invitation to come into the kingdom. Thus would he have us know that men deal lightly with life's highest values. The things that these men were doing were legitimate and were in no sense wrong, but the sin and tragedy of the situation was the fact that they allowed the lesser values to come between them and the highest values. They did not put first things first. It was not a case of open antagonism; it was a case of indifference. It is thus today. The disturbing and rather depressing fact about the present situation in religion is not due to the fact that men and women are antagonistic to the church, or to Christ, but that they are simply indifferent toward Christ and the church. A great many men and women, good people, are simply allowing other things of lesser value to crowd out the things of supreme value, love and loyalty to Christ and his church. There is a place, a legitimate place, for the things which they do, but they are not justified in doing these to the exclusion of the other things. Now, as then, people are very good at making excuses. How flimsy are some of the excuses which people give to justify themselves in failing to attend services of worship, and to discharge their religious duties. Time would fail me to list all of these excuses, but the following as characteristic: "I do not have time," "I have so many things to do on Sunday," "Can't a man worship God just as well out of doors as he can in the church?" "I do not like the preacher," "The folks are not friendly," "I was made to go to church when I was young," "They are always asking for money," "The church doesn't do anything for me" —and so it goes with innumerable and illogical excuses. How flimsy these excuses would be if given to Christ himself!

Into the Highways and Hedges.

When the servant returned and told his master that these people refused to attend the feast, the master sent him out into the streets and lanes of the city, and bade him invite the poor, the maimed, the blind, and the lame. And when after he had done this there was still room for more, the master sent him out into the highways and hedges to constrain men and women to come in that his house might be filled. Thus would Jesus have us know that there is room for all at the feast which he has spread, that men are not shut out because of their class, or their color, or culture, or creed. Thus would he have us learn also that the church must carry its ministry to the people, that it must go where the people are. Wesley did this, and it was this fact that accounted in large measure for the rapid growth of the Methodist movement. This does not mean that people are relieved of their responsibility of attending services of worship, but it does mean that the church must carry its ministry into underprivileged sections of the city, into rural areas, among migrant workers, into mission fields. God invites all men to share the spiritual feast; Christ stands at the door of every heart and knocks, seeking admittance, promising to those who hear his voice and open the door that he will come in and sup with them.

The Peril of Rejected Privilege.

High privilege brings great peril. Men who shut their hearts to life's gracious invitations pay an awful penalty. God does not have to punish such men; they punish themselves. How much poorer our lives are because day after day we do not respond to the gracious invitation which God gives us. The story is told about a man who took some groceries and a ton of coal to the home of a poor widow who was in desperate need. He received no response to his repeated knocks. Later when he saw the woman and told her what had been done, she said, "Law me, I thought it was the landlord who had come for the rent, and I did not want to see him." Thus do we often lose some of life's precious gifts because we are afraid of the demands that God will make upon us if we let him into our hearts.

All subscribers who are in arrears are being asked very kindly to bring their accounts up to date.

MONDAY.

I DON'T FEEL LIKE IT.

"When thou prayest enter into thy closet."—Matt. 6: 6.

One does not always feel like praying (altogether too often), much as he would like to do so. Maybe the liver is bad, or something has upset one's feelings, and he is out of harmony with everything. What can be done about it?

Well, either one doesn't pray at such times (maybe a good impulse to follow at that time), or he finds a way of relieving his feelings through some nobler impulse, which is the thing he needs at the time and the thing to pray for. His feelings are purely physical and therefore should be detached mentally from the soul. Just say, "Why let this little thing rule me, or worry me? I will not!" Then go on and forget it. That is the equivalent of saying, "Get Thee behind me Satan." Shall we pray?

Prayer—Lord, help us, Thy love we need. We look to Thee. We wait on Thee. Just give us strength to overcome when we feel this way. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BUILDING YOUR TEMPLE.

"Ye are the temple of God."—I Cor. 3: 16.

"Let your yea be yea, and your nay be nay."—Matt. 5: 37.

Goethe wrote: "I respect the man who knows distinctly what he wishes. The greater part of all the mischief in the world arises from the fact that men do not understand sufficiently their own aims. They have undertaken to build a tower and spend no more labor on the foundation than would be necessary to erect a hut." Goethe's words may apply to the building of our temple for God.

Prayer—Our Father, we can do nothing without Thee. Help us to realize this and never forget it. Lead us and bless us this day with thoughts and deeds that build both us and others for the Kingdom. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"MATHEMATICIANS."

"Ye cannot serve God and mammon."—Matt. 6: 24.

It has been said, "We are all mathematicians and either add to or subtract from the sum total of human happiness." Sir Francis De Sales said, "Nothing is so strong as gentleness, Nothing so gentle as real strength."

Prayer—We thank Thee, our Heavenly Father, that this life is ours through our Lord Jesus Christ and that through Him we can have it in fulness for ourselves and in happiness for others. May our lives each day add to the goodness of the world. Amen.

THURSDAY.

OPTIMISM.

"Study to show thyself approved of God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—II Tim. 2: 15.

"Don't hang a dismal picture on the wall, and do not daub with sables and gloom in your conversation. Don't be a cynic and disconsolate preacher. Omit the negative propositions. Nerve us with incessant affirmatives. Don't waste yourself in rejection, nor bark against the bad, but chant the beauty of the good. When that is spoken which has a right to be spoken, the chatter and the criticism will stop. Set down nothing that will not help somebody."—Emerson.

Prayer—Our Father, make the gospel of Jesus our daily light and guide us to be something, and worth something, to others and the world. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"CONFUCIUS SAID."

Confucius said, "The life of the moral man is plain, and yet not unattractive; it is simple and yet full of grace; it is easy and yet methodical. He knows that accomplishment of great things consists in doing little things well. He knows that great effects are produced by small causes. He knows the evidence and reality of what cannot be perceived by the senses. Thus he is enabled to enter into the world of ideas and morals."

But mere moral ideals alone do not lead us into the kingdom of heaven.

Jesus said: "If thou wouldst enter into life, keep the commandments." "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell all that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven, and come and follow me."—(Matt. 19: 17, 21.)

Prayer—O God, forbid that we shall forget these things, lest we go away, too, sorrowful. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"LIFE."

"Let us run with patience the race that is set before us."—Heb. 12: 2.

"Well done thou good and faithful servant."—Matt. 25: 21.

"There is inexpressible joy in the realization of having completely conquered a secret weakness, successfully solved a formidable problem, or faithfully discharged a disagreeable duty. To many, life is like climbing a long, steep, difficult hill; but as the years pass, those who courageously press on and up and find themselves at last at the mountain top of achievement, where they look out upon a scene of indestructible beauty, and, as they turn to look back and down at the road they have traversed, perhaps rough and difficult in many places, they realize that it has all been worth while, and that the final reward of work well done has fully compensated them for the effort."—Greenville Kleiser.

Prayer—Dear Father, life is a beautiful and inspiring journey for the courageous traveler. Grant that we shall always, every day, find it so and be courageous. Amen.

SUNDAY.

VISION, THE SYMPHONY OF MAN.

"Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears for they hear."—Matt. 13:16.

Give me not the scenes more charming; give me eyes
To see the beauty that around me lies;
To read the trail of souls, see angels shy
Among the faces of the passers-by.

I do not ask for sweeter music than
The common daily symphony of man.
Could I but grasp its counter point and see
How each discord melts toward harmony.

I do not ask for more to seek and love me,
I do not ask for brighter eyes to move me,
But sharper sense to miss no hailing sign
Of fellowship in spirit, seeking mine.

No golden shore I seek, but a heart that sings;
The exquisite delight of common things.
The kingdom of heaven is not there but here—
O for the seeing eye and the hearing ear.

SUN'S PULPIT.

cooperation in their relief operations in Poland and France."

But what if the German government, in this as in other cases, should violate its word? In that event, the amount of food on hand, even though all of it should be taken, would make no appreciable difference in favor of Germany. It would not provision the German people for more than three days.

And what of the contention that Great Britain, in order to preserve the liberties of free people's, must maintain a food blockade? What of the hope that, if the situation in the invaded countries is permitted to become desperate, that is, if enough human beings are allowed to die, there will be a social revolution that will destroy Mr. Hitler and all his works? What of the belief that "between the agony of empty stomachs for a time in one part of the world and the agony of stricken souls in every part of the world there can be but one choice"? On these points there are, it seems to me, several things to be said.

It is surely open to doubt that a food blockade can preserve the liberties of free peoples. There was a food blockade during the first World War which had the immediate effect of forcing Germany to surrender. There was a food blockade after the first World War, maintained for seven months, which had the immediate effect of forcing German compliance with the terms of the peace treaty and, incidentally, of causing the destruction, by hunger and disease, of women and children. But these food blockades during and after the first World War did not succeed in preserving the liberties of free peoples. Where, today, are the liberties of France, of Belgium, of Holland, Norway and Denmark? The food blockades that were imposed during and after the last war contributed in no small degree to the bitterness and madness which are now threatening to destroy the liberties of every people. It is one thing to win a war. It is quite another thing to preserve the liberties of free peoples. A war may be won by means that desecrate and destroy the things for which it is won by the practices of the jungle, the world, when it is finished, will be a jungle in which the liberties of free peoples cannot survive.

Almost certainly, these innocent victims of the war will be told by the German radio that the British government has refused to relax its blockade even to the extent of allowing the passage of ships carrying only food, and that the American people have refused to do anything in their behalf. The farmers of France will be reminded of the assurance given them that their families, in the event of a food shortage, would be cared for with food imported from the United States. And Europe's hungry may not revolt against Hitler but "fall for" his propaganda. Or the revolt, if it comes, may be soon ended, its participants being mowed down with machine guns. Or it may play into the hands of Stalin. Let enough people die, and human nature may be expected to rebel. But those who survive are not likely to be enamored of a "democracy" that has deliberately permitted their relatives and friends to perish. They are far more likely to listen to the wooing voice of a totalitarianism that claims to better than "imperialistic capitalism." If what is desired is the spread of Stalinism over all of Europe, this, perhaps, is the way to secure it. And there are two other possible outcomes that require to be considered. One is the outbreak of a sheer anarchism that would usher in a new Dark Age. The other is an outbreak of typhus and virulent influenza that would be comparable to the Black Death.

The motives of men are sometimes better than their argument. What are the opponents of this relief plan really concerned to say? Is it not something like this: Civilization, today, is in grave peril. It is threatened with utter destruction by the forces of reaction, tyranny, and cruelty. It must, at any cost to the present generation, be preserved. If we oppose this plan, it is not because we are lacking in human sympathy. It is because we are convinced that no ordeal, however terrible, is too great a price to pay for the defeat of barbarism and the preservation of civilization.

But what does it mean to preserve civilization? It surely means (among other things) to keep alive in the world a high regard for human life, a deep sense of responsibility for the welfare of other human beings, an unrelenting demand for human decency. These are surely essential to a humane and civilized culture. And these, I submit, are not safeguarded but are, on the contrary, terribly imperiled by the deliberate killing of innocent aged persons and women and children, even though the killing be done slowly with a food blockade and done in the name of "civilization."

Belief that civilization can be saved by the destruction of millions of innocent people is, of course, the ancient belief that evil can be overcome with more evil. Once again we are being asked to do evil that good may come. But in the light of human experience, including our own during and after the first World War, we are now bound to ask, Would good come if we should consent to such outrageous evil as is involved in a deliberate decision to let millions of innocent people die? Surely, we now have reason enough to believe that when you do evil that good may come, what you actually get is not the good you seek but the evil you do.

To contend that the evil of Hitlerism can only be overcome with the evil of a food blockade is to fly in the face of history. Also, it is to fly in the face of God, who through Jesus Christ has plainly said that evil cannot be overcome with more evil but only with good. "If thine enemy hunger, feed him." That is what God says, according to Christian faith. That is the full Christian demand. And what may the God of Christian faith be supposed to recommend when the hungry in Belgium say, "Feed us;" and the naked in Holland, with winter at hand, say, "Clothe us;" and the sick in Norway say, "Visit us;" and the desperate in Poland say, "Come unto us"? To let these poor people suffer and die would be to deny the wisdom of God in favor of a human wisdom which, over and over again, has proved to be ruinous folly.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

There are two groups of folks who have always held a very tender place in my heart. One group consists of the little helpless, dependent children with no home and no friends who want them. The other group is made up of our elderly superannuated ministers and their widows. They are men of God who have labored to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ, making all kinds of sacrifices to bring to us the message to feed our souls on the bread of life. They gave their best. They worked on small salaries, and during the years were unable to accumulate anything to make them comfortable in their declining years. Their companions sacrificed with them through the years and upheld their hands when it took an abiding faith. Now they are in their declining days and their work will soon be done.

Do we appreciate them? Do we love them for their faithful service which they rendered when they were active in the ministry? If we do, let us try to make them happy and comfortable. How can we do it? By contributing to the Superannuation Fund through our churches or by mailing a personal check to Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker, Secretary, Elon College, N. C.

The writer has been a member of the Superannuation Board for a number of years and has never missed a meeting. In our session in December when we met to make apportionment to the applicants on our list, how our hearts ached because we had so little to give them! Let us show our love and our appreciation for their faithful service during the years by giving more freely to this fund.

nified hymns for morning worship." Could the church school use some of its time to instruct and teach the worth of great hymns? How can they sing them unless they are familiar? In the school there is a freedom of speech and action. Should effort be made to give reasons for reverence in church? In the reading of responsive Scriptures? Has the school given the background history, and value found in this method of Bible reading? Surely the school that properly instructs its youth in the meaning, order, purpose and beauty of the morning service has not wasted its time. Creating a sense of the high privilege found in corporate worship serves a real need. If the people do not attend, do not participate, the reasons may be twofold: Incapacity of those who participate to comprehend, due to the church school failure and the worship itself is faulty. It does not satisfy the spiritual hunger, due shall we say, to the minister's failure.

It is in the training, where we see evidences of this lost power. When and if the young do attend, various methods have been attempted: Giving them specific tasks and parts as is done in the church school, junior choirs, ushers, or a part in the order of service itself; junior churches for the larger churches and a unified program for the smaller, with no intermission and occasionally with worship service preceding the class period. Above all, says Charles Reynolds Brown, "Watch with eagle eye the intermediate and young people for reactions." I have dealt at length with this phase because it is important. The question arises: those who are older also leave? Can this not be traced to earlier training; incorrect and inadequate preparation?

How can we best seek to rectify and improve this condition? We must start at the beginning. Bower in Religious Education in the Modern Church asserts that, "The fundamental problem in churchmanship, as in every social institution, centers in the quality, capacity and training of leadership." Every single officer of the church school, from superintendent to the youngest teacher, should be themselves churchmen and think in the terms of the church. Any intelligent educator recognizes that 90% of good teaching depends on the personality of the teacher; the rest to technique, equipment, material, consecration in and for the task. The superintendent should not be chosen on the basis of his willingness, his genial personality, but he should be prepared to study for the long view of the church. One cannot stress too much or often that leadership is a determinative factor, and for that reason the wisdom of individual classes selecting their own teacher is to be questioned. Matters of such importance should be delegated to the religious education committee who along with the minister as the head, can give more serious study to the teaching staff.

Such a committee could formulate some unified program for all church activities to prevent over-lapping, and even competitive enterprises, when class and society loyalties are in conflict. The educationally minded church will interpret the pastorate as equally responsible to all age groups on the basis of their respective needs and capacities. The minister is the administrative leader and when his ability is questioned he simply marks time, instead of marching forward. The church school council meeting regularly could be of tremendous value in giving opportunity for teachers to express themselves concerning material, equipment, and the children themselves. To further facilitate the efficiency, a parent - teacher - minister relationship, such as found in the public school system, ought to be worth an experiment. Whatever interests a minister may have, however crowded his schedule, in the church school lies the potential strength of the church. Perhaps a little study on his part in the field of education might not be amiss. In doing this he might find the answer to the question, why does the church school lack satisfactory leadership, when the best people, the educated and qualified in the community are supposed to be Christians? Is it because those with ability do not come; because they find in other fields better, more attractive opportunities for the expression of their leadership; because they are supposed to do in one hour with little or no equipment what the public school is doing in many hours with all necessary equipment; because they recognize their limitation in this field but unlike the public school we do not euphasize continuous training?

Children are keen observers; they are quick to make comparisons between public and church school. It is tragic for the school, the teacher, the church and the cause represented, if and when religion suffers in comparison with those representing other interests. This is the business of the minister—to keep the church school abreast of the times; the good old days, real or imaginary are gone. Let us not decide that mere repetition of attendance is necessarily habit forming; if each repeated compulsory experience is unpleasant and uninteresting, the attitude of avoidance is actually cultivated.

Let me prove this subject from what might prove a more helpful angle . . . but even this is offset by complications. In the mind of the minister, the church school should represent the best opportunity for personal evangelism, because it gives him a direct contact with the young, and if his staff has a real purpose, the minister can, at intervals during the year, keep his eye on those eligible for membership in the church, and by the pastor's class introduce them into the larger fellowship. Then they would come knowing the implications of churchmanship, and what being a follower of Jesus Christ actually involved. It is estimated that between 40 to 70% of the children in the church school are sent by their parents, some of these are members, many have no church affiliations. There is an obligatory field for personal evangelism. Through these children we have a tremendous purchase on these parents. The minister talks about the church school as being the church of tomorrow—it is the church today. And two factors are going to make him do some thinking; we are facing a rapidly declining birth rate. Even the rural minister can no longer boast of a crowded church school. The shifting population: people with no roots in the community; and infinitely more patience and skill is required for the minister in creating a loyalty to the church school. The personal touch of the minister and teacher is the best weapon for effective results. Even so a survey in any community would reveal a high percentage of those we might describe as untaught. So whether the minister looks at his church school with foreboding or rejoicing he is wise if he regards it as his best opportunity, his greatest challenge.

If civilization is to be preserved, something decent and daring must now be done. Peoples that walk in darkness in a world at war, if they are not to go mad with terror and suffering, must begin to see light ahead. Nations that have lost all confidence one in the other, so that they can see nothing ahead but a suicidal fight to the death, must become persuaded that there is a way out of their present predicament that leads neither to enslavement nor to destruction. This relief plan, if the American people should propose it and the British government accept it and the German government live up to it and "the little countries" be blessed by it, might, under God, become the means of saving the world from another Dark Age and placing it in the way of healing and hope.

NOTE: The American Red Cross has left France, unable to secure supplies. The American Friends Service Committee is still carrying on, buying in Europe what and where it can. But, with all its magnificent efficiency and devotion, it is only able to meet a very small fraction of the present demand. And the same must be said of other American church committees, through which Christians in the United States may, and undoubtedly should, contribute to the relief of human suffering. Let God be thanked, they are doing what they can; but they, likewise, are inadequate to the situation.

BOARD MEETS.

The following resolution was adopted: "That we request the churches of the conference to cooperate in the college period and to make some contribution to the college either through the church or Sunday school, the same to count on the local church's conference apportionment." If the churches, pastors, and Sunday school superintendents would take this resolution seriously and work with their churches for some contribution to the college during this period, it would be of great assistance.

It was also voted that the first Sunday in February be designated as Elon College Day in the churches and THE CHRISTIAN SUN for the week of January 20 be the college number.

The members of the Board were entertained as guests of the writer and of the college. It was a pleasure to have the Board meet at the college.

Thank God for Dreams

By DR. HARRY THOMAS STOCK.

We are not bound to low levels of our present achievement. We are not held to earth by reason of our poverty, of our limited education, or the circumstances of birth. Praise God that we can dream, that we may soar into realms which only imagination has pierced, that we may fashion air-castles which we may indeed inhabit.

We are indebted to the world's dreamers; to the Pilgrim Fathers who would not be deterred by tempestuous seas and hostile shores; to the scientists who gave new life as they lost their own in quest for cures for seemingly incurable diseases; to those great souls, in city and country, in America and throughout the world, who live among the under-privileged and oppressed, assured that by reflecting the light and love of God, they help to fulfill Jesus' dream of the life more abundant.

Thank God for the companionship of comrades who dream with us of a new heaven and a new earth—who help us to become persons fit to dwell in such a world, to become persons who are instruments of God in creating the Heavenly Kingdom.

Prayer: Vouchsafe to us, O God, not once, but ever and again, the clear vision of the persons we hope to become, of the persons we are resolved to become, of the persons we shall become. Show us wise ways by which our noblest dreams may become realities. Give us that moral fiber which will enable us to endure hardships as we seek to realize our highest hopes. . . .

Lift our souls, with sublime faith, above the sins and sorrows of our seemingly petty days. Teach us Thy will for ourselves and for society. Grant us the daring to dream the dreams of Jesus. Save us from despising divine dreamers. Purge our desires. Help us to fashion them nobly. Add to our dreams that knowledge which will enable us to do the right in the right way. May each new tomorrow find us more confident of every true vision, because we have attuned our minds and wills and actions to the truth which Thou hast granted us. Amen.

ELON OFFERS YOU PATHS OF OPPORTUNITY.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

EDUCATION AND ELON.

Elon College is distinctly the product of a democracy in which church and school have created jointly the social institutions essential to the life of our people. Discerning church leaders realized the significance and opportunity of such an institution more than a half century ago. Valiant work has been done. Their faith has been vindicated. Elon graduates have taken their places with credit along with those from the universities of the North and West.

Now because of the greatly increased complexity of contemporary life specialization and expertness are even more imperative. With the increasing need for perspective among the masses in a revolutionary age, the Christian College should open its doors to as many people as possible. Elon must continue to stand as a key educational and religious institution in America. When students, faculty, and our supporting constituency at large fully realize that in Elon they have an opportunity to meet their great and baffling problems directly and most effectively, many additional unforeseen advantages from their heightened enthusiasm are certain to appear.

College makes life increasingly significant for the student. Here he will associate with those who are academically minded. Here he will be constantly extending his own knowledge and keeping it sound and fresh. We realize that the Christian student body with its youthful zeal and initiative may greatly further the Christian cause. One is reminded of the frequently repeated declaration that "the American state university is the greatest missionary field in the world." It is reported that they sometimes sing "we all came to college, but we didn't come for knowledge." But Elon is neither a country club nor a kindergarten. It is a college in which students are nurtured in a religious experience and faith adequate for the needs of the inner life of the spirit and relevant to the social demands of our time. We must continue to do this at a moment in history when paganism is rampant, traditional ethical standards at a discount, and when most of the observable material facts in our chaotic world seem to declare that the church's message is silly sentimentality and its work futile.

In this center of capable leadership we may give united and tangible evidence of our conviction that religion and education are inseparable. But large resources of devotion are necessary if academic tragedy is to be averted. We are unwittingly dependent on the collaboration of experts for basic information and interpretation. Religiously illiterate students cannot build a new world according to the divine pattern. A work of God's grace is needed. The task requires the unfolding of a plan for sharing His gospel through students with all of life and throughout the world. The evangelistic and missionary assumptions which gave the Student Christian Movement its crusading character in the past generation may be revived and re-directed. These are valid objectives for our prayers, our efforts, and our our gifts.

ATTENTION, CHURCHES!

There is little value in plastering Elon with faint praise unless we are willing to support it. The burden and test of our educational period is the extent to which our churches take seriously the financial goals set up by our Conferences in deliberation. Our college and the general work of our Convention goes limping along simply because these minimum needs are persistently overlooked by many of our churches. How can churches toss sacred responsibilities so lightly aside? Where is our sense of honor and integrity? Is this habit of surlily ignoring Conference askings not a denial of all that we profess in our churches? How can the church teach honesty when it does not practice it? What we as a church do shouts so loud the world cannot hear what we are saying.

The minister who fails to promptly pay his honest debts, even though his salary is barely above the margin of subsistence, is straightway branded as a poor manager and becomes the recipient of unpopular adjectives. His financial delinquency is not condoned. The servant of God must pay his debts! And yet churches which habitually and nonchalantly disregard their corporate responsibility are meekly and supinely condoned. Truly, they need to penitently pray the prayer prescribed by our Lord, "Forgive us our debts." But they are obviously content to be forgiven their debts, rather than pay them.

Something should be done. The deficit in those churches which have been visited by drought, flood and storm, if there be such, should be supplied by generous individuals and churches. Churches in which the majority of the members have been forced to sell their automobiles, homes and go on W. P. A., should be promptly exempted from their apportionment. Churches in areas of war and pestilence should receive appropriations. But all other churches should give a strict account of their stewardship.

Does your church pay its apportionment? If not, why not? The largest apportionments in the Convention are paid without a whimper or a complaint. But they are not paid without effort. A church may become resigned to and paralyzed by littleness. We must be faithful in the few, small things before there can be promotion over many things. Check the record of your church in the Christian Annual and determine whether or not your church is delinquent. If so, inaugurate better financial methods. Write to the Convention Committee on Stewardship for guidance. Do not allow this demoralizing tendency to continue. Discharge every responsibility. Let the church be the church. Great joy will be your portion and to God will be the glory.

Things You Should Know About Your College

1. When was Elon College founded?

The college was founded September 14, 1888, and opened its doors for students September, 1890.

2. By whom was Elon College founded?

By the Christian Church in the South, then the General Convention of the Christian Church.

3. Why was Elon College founded?

Elon College was founded for the purpose of training leaders for the church in both pulpit and pew and to provide higher education in a moral and religious atmosphere for the young people of the church.

4. How many members were there in the original faculty and who were they?

There were six members of the original faculty in addition to the first president, Dr. William Samuel Long. They were: Dr. J. U. Newman, Professor emeritus; Dr. E. L. Moffit, for six years

9. What are the financial needs of Elon College?

The college needs $108,000 with which to pay its debts, and $82,000 for its current budget. (This is an extremely low operating budget for a college of the standing of Elon.)

10. What are the sources from which the church expects support for the college?

Voluntary contributions from individuals, churches and foundations for payment of present indebtedness. The current budget is to be met from student tuition and fees and from Conference apportionments. The Convention has apportioned to the local churches through local Conferences $12,500, this amount to supplement what the college realizes from students.

11. Does Elon College incorporate in her curriculum the principles of progressive education, and what does the college do to encourage creative work?

Elon endeavors to incorporate in its curriculum the president of the college, now a member of the Board of Trustees; Prof. S. A. Holleman; Mrs. J. M. Roberts; Mrs. W. G. Farrar, deceased; and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, deceased.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT COUNCIL.

5. How many were in the first student body?

Between 60 and 70 college students not including Preparatory Department. In 1892-93 there were 67 enrolled in the college and 63 in the Preparatory Department.

6. Who was the first student to register?

Walter H. Albright, Liberty, N. C.

7. How many of the present ministers of the Christian Church in the South have been students at Elon?

Sixty-two.

8. What courses are taught at Elon College?

The present curriculum carries courses in all subjects taught in the average liberal arts institution. In addition it carries courses in Christian Education, business and commercial subjects, aeronautics, pre-medical, pre-dental and pre-engineering courses.

more sane principles of progressive education and uses every available means to encourage creative work on the part of her students. The results of such emphasis express themselves in English, dramatics, music, etc. The Elon Dramatics Class has been awarded first place in state contests held at the University of North Carolina and has two plaques evidencing these awards.

12. What extra-curricula opportunities are available for students at Elon College?

Inter-collegiate and Intra-mural sports, debating, and a high grade lyceum course. This year's lyceum program was featured by the appearance of Helen Jepson, soprano, Metropolitan Opera.

13. What are the total charges per student for attending Elon College?

The cost varies according to dormitory and board. Total cost per student not including books, clothing and laundry, varies from $364.00 to $420.00.

14. Why should the local church send its young people to Elon for college training?

Things You Should Know

About ninety percent of the students from church homes are given financial assistance while in college which totals $10,700.00 this year?

17. How many local churches raised full college apportionments last year?

Eastern Virginia Conference, 16; North Carolina and Virginia Conference, 20; Eastern North Carolina Conference, 7; total, 43. We do not have full reports from the Western North Carolina Conference or the Virginia Valley Central Conference.

18. How many churches did not contribute anything on Conference apportionments for Elon College last year?

Eastern Virginia Conference, 9; North Carolina and Virginia Conference, 11; Eastern North Carolina Conference, 23; total, 43.

THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT YOUR COLLEGE.

Elon is our own institution, it is owed by the church, it is what we have made of it, it is the best that we have, and with few exceptions it is equal to the best that others have. The church should send her young people to Elon for sound, efficient training at the college level and that they may have at the same time a fine, Christian atmosphere in which to live and work, created by a Christian faculty, Christian students, and Christian student organizations.

15. How many young people from Christian Church homes are in the present student body at Elon?

One hundred and thirty-seven.

16. What percentage of the students in Elon College from our own church homes are given assistance either by scholarship awards or jobs, and how much do these assistances total?

About Your College

19. How much did all contributions for the college through Conference apportionments total this year, and how does this compare with previous years?

$7,251.29, which is the largest amount yet received from the churches through Conference apportionments during the past ten years.

20. How may I help my church now to raise its college apportionments in full?

(a) Try to see that the memberships of my church and Sunday School are acquainted with information contained in this week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

(b) See that everyone is given an opportunity to make a contribution for the college during the college period.

A CAMPUS VIEW.

"ERECTED TO THE MEMORY OF JAMES O'KELLY."

- (c) See that the college apportionment is included in the benevolent budget of the church and that information concerning the college and its needs is kept before the membership of the church and Sunday School.
- (d) See that the Sunday School makes an offering for the college on fifth Sundays. All contributions count on Conference apportionments.
21. What is the present enrollment at Elon College?
Six hundred and twenty-six, fall semester only.
22. How many members are on the Elon College faculty for 1940-41, and what are their qualifications?

There are thirty members on the faculty. From the standpoint of scholastic training and experience, they are equal to the faculty of any small college and cross sections in larger institutions.

If interested in attending college, a catalogue may be had on request.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Southern Convention designated January, February, July, August and September as Elon College period in the various churches. It is understood that Christian education in general, and the claims of Elon College in particular, should be emphasized in the churches during this period, with special emphasis upon sending young men and young ladies from said churches to Elon College, as students; and in addition, the raising of the Conference Apportionment for the college during the year.

Why should the churches support Elon College by giving money and by

No. 2. When a college issues a financial statement showing assets of more than $1,000,000.00, is it easy for the average layman to accept the statement that the institution is in need? Many people say: "If I had property worth that much money, I would not think I was the object of charity and offerings." There you are. This view pauperizes the college and belittles benevolent giving to Christian Education. Take No. 3. Does the church-owned college make the contributions to the churches to the extent usually claimed by its publicity agencies? How are church colleges founded? How are they perportunity for people to make their greatest contribution to the growth and development of personal character and the kingdom of God on earth. Christian education is the most dynamic force in the world today, beginning, as it does, in the pulpit, and extending to great institutions of learning. Put the whole matter above ownership, and need, and the possible benefits which may accrue to the church itself. Place the emphasis where it should be placed, namely, on the opportunity of individuals and churches to do something fundamentally great and good, worthy of people who are "heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ." Here is a fertile field for creative and expanding influences which may leap into eternal significance. For this reason Elon College should be sup-sending their sons and daughters to the college? The usual answers to this question are: 1. Because it is our college. 2. Because the college needs this support. 3. Because of the great contribution the college has made, and may continue to make to the churches. 4. Because the college is essential to the future growth of the churches.

Are these four answers reasonable and justifiable? Does the denomination, through the Southern Convention, own and control Elon College? Does any denomination own and control its colleges? Legally and technically, the answer is yes; but in actual practice, church colleges are usually self-determining, make their own curricula, formulate their own program and policies, expecting the churches to support them on general principles. Ownership in itself, is not a sufficient claim for support. Take up answer petuated? Certainly not by any effort of their own initiative or making. Churches establish church colleges. The churches should always be recognized as the foundation support of such institutions. This support does not always come through the church treasury, but the major part comes through individual Christians whose generosity is stimulated by the spirit of the churches. Actually, therefore, the churches should have due credit, and that means major credit for the work done by the Christian colleges. Colleges cannot do much without the inspiration and support of the church. Answer No. 4 is inevitably linked with No. 3.

As a loyal alumnus of Elon College, a fifth answer, somewhat unusual, is herewith submitted as a basis of supporting said institution. Because a church college offers a superlative op- ported. It is not for us to narrow its claim on the ground of necessity or possible reward. It is the church at its best.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON DESERVES YOUR SUPPORT.

There are three groups of people who, above all others, should support Elon College.

First, the members of Congregational Christian Churches should support Elon, and the reason is obvious. The college is not only the property, but the child of the church. The college is as much a part of our denominational equipment for Christian education as any church building in the denomination and is far more vital from the point of furnishing a trained leadership for the future of the church. The local church is interested in training leaders for its program, but the college is training leaders for the whole denomination—laymen and ministers, teachers and missionaries. Young people go to Elon from the local churches. Elon sends them back to the local church as pastor, teachers in the local schools, business and professional men and women capable of giving the best leadership to the local church. Five minutes of survey will show how true a picture we have here of what the college means to the local church, not to mention the pride with which the denomination can point to Elon.

The second group which should support Elon is her alumni. When we see how completely our churches are manned by ministers who got their basic training at Elon, we can see how easy, when the ministers come to realize their duty to Elon and the them into life and into their churches, of whatever name or sign.

There are people in each of these groups who feel that Elon should pay her own way. Suppose she said to us who spent those glorious years on her campus that we, too, should pay our own way? How many of us could have stayed? If Elon charged the students the actual cost, to the college, of their college education, we doubt if half of us could have gone at all. Elon is not heavily endowed, as some schools are, because she was built on faith and by sacrifice on the part of those who saw the need for such an institution and believed that we who have shared her blessings would turn in gratitude and make her future safe to serve those who are yet to come. If we fail, the blame must rest with us. But it will take more than sweet sentiment to see her whole church, it will be to get the support from the churches that the college may continue her ministry to the church and the Kingdom of God. Then, the alumni in our local churches must take up the song. How else can we hope to interest that army of alumni who are not members of the Congregational Christian Church unless we, to whose church the college belongs, are willing to give of our time and our money that our only church institution of higher Christian education in the Southern Convention may go on, unhampered by debt, to greater days in training the leadership of a greater church?

It is interesting to note how the various Conferences responded to this call. Records indicate that our Western North Carolina Conference gave $342.00, or 19% of the amount asked, and that 29 of the 39 churches gave something. Our Eastern North Carolina Conference contributed $471.00, or 26.3% of the amount asked by the Convention, and 27 of the 47 churches had a share in the giving. Eighteen of the 23 churches in the Valley of Virginia gave $258.00, which was 36.8% of the amount requested. In Eastern Virginia 34 of the 44 churches contributed $3,173.00, or 63.4% of the amount apportioned. Thirty-five of the 44 churches in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference shared in giving to the college $3,035.00, which was 94.8% of the amount the Convention said should come from that Conference.

THE COMMERCIAL CLASS.

The third group which should support Elon College is composed of those men and women who believe in the things Elon College is established to do; the ideal which she has served for fifty years, and the equal opportunities she gives to young people of all churches to take her training with through. May we who love her, and have been blessed by her, lay our hearts and hands to her needs in this hour.

She deserves our best.

ELON COLLEGE AND CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

By vote of the Southern Convention and the five Conferences of the Convention each church is asked to give for the support of Elon College. According to the reports published in the Annual, 143 of our 197 churches responded to this call with at least some amount of money. The total asked by the Convention was $12,500. The churches gave $7,282, or 58.5% of the amount asked. This is slightly more than the churches have given to the college through apportionments in recent years,

The churches contributing nothing number 54, and are more than the total in any Conference. If these churches will contribute this year, our college can do a better grade of work.

The difference between the amount apportioned and the amount received by the college is enough to assure a full-time pastor for the college church, and a teacher in religious education who could do effective extension work by aiding our churches with their educational work. These are important services that should be rendered, and will be when the churches give the college adequate support.

Please, kind reader, be sure that your church does its share for our college this year. In doing this you will be giving assistance to your church where it is badly needed. Thank you.

NEWS FROM PUERTO RICO.

Ponce, Puerto Rico,
December 12, 1940.

Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker,
Elon College, N. C.

My Dear Mrs. Parker:

Your air-letter of December 10 was received this morning. It seems very pleasant indeed to hear from "home folks" again, because since the union of the Christians with the Congregationalists, nearly all connection seemed broken, except for an occasional letter from Dr. Atkinson. Yes, we knew of his illness and death and also of the loss to our denomination. It will be most difficult for another to fill the place he did, for so long and so faithfully.

Please extend our most sincere thanks to Circle No. 4 for their gifts. We will be on the lookout for the package, which should be here in plenty of time, and which, by the way, is the first thing we have received from the states, of its kind, for over ten years, so you may be sure we will enjoy distributing each gift.

We are still in the work although Mr. Barrett reaches retiring age in February. The mission allows us to stay on until the last of May and warmer weather, as we would like to return to the States.

Let me hope this finds you and yours well and happy in preparations for Christmas. Ah, if it could only mean that the Prince of Peace comes again into the hearts of men, what a different world this would be!

Most sincerely yours,
EVA REED BARRETT.

P. S.—It is 10 P. M. here and just now I am listening to my son, Alfred, giving the news of the day in Spanish, from Radio City, New York.

The above letter came in response to a box of gifts sent by Circle No. 4 of the Elon College Woman's Missionary Society to the Barretts for distribution to children in Puerto Rico. The Circle got a great deal of joy out of securing and wrapping these gifts, and the letter from Mrs. Barrett would indicate how welcome they were. A card received since then brings the news that the box arrived in time for Christmas.

The same group is planning to send a box of useful articles to a migrant center next month. Each bit of extra giving done by one of our missionary groups brings joy to our women, and at the same time reminds our missionaries that we are thinking of them and are trying to have a small part in sharing with them. It is recommended that each of our groups follow some such practice through the years.

CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

In an effort to find a way for the support of the college by the churches, the late Dr. W. W. Staley worked out a plan whereby the approximate amount expected from the churches for the support of Elon College should be approved by the Convention and the same allotted to the churches of the Convention through the several Conferences constituting the Convention, each church apportioned according to its ability. This proved to be such a practical plan that the Convention has not departed therefrom all through the years. The needs of the college have increased, and the ability of the church to contribute has increased to a greater degree. Each church is informed as to the amount needed and its particular share in raising the amount. The Convention has further designated January and February as the period in which the churches are to do something about their college apportionments. It would be of great help to the college if every church in the Convention could make a contribution during this particular period. Some churches could raise all their college apportionments. Others could not, but all could raise something.

There are churches that wish to cooperate and are anxious to do their share but are not certain how to raise the amount apportioned. Plans that others have used successfully may be helpful. Dr. Harrell writes, "We raise our college apportionments through our regular weekly pledges. On each fifth Sunday the fact is emphasized that the Sunday School offering goes to the college. During the college period we present the appeal of the college through a special program and emphasize that fact each Sunday during the year when a contribution is made to benevolence, a part of it goes to the college." Then he raises the question as to the practical value of an attractive college poster to be displayed on fifth Sundays and on all occasions when offerings are received, a part of which may go to the college.

Rev. Edward E. Martz of Durham, pastor of Apple's Chapel Church, writes that the college apportionment is simply counted as a part of their Conference apportionments and that all through the year they emphasize the fact that Conference apportionments must be raised in full, and that toward the close of the year if there is still a deficit, this fact is called to the attention of the congregation and they usually raise the necessary amount to pay their Conference ap-

THE TRAINING OF YOUNG MINISTERS AND CHRISTIAN WORK.

One of the major functions of Elon College is that of training young men and women for service as pastors and laymen in the church. Among her alumni are listed nearly all of the ministers in the Southern Convention, and each year adds new names to this list. During the past five years, for instance, nineteen ministerial students have been graduated, eleven of whom were of our denomination. Each of these eleven men has continued his education in a seminary of high standing, and three of them have returned to the Southern Convention having received their seminary degrees. Others will soon be ready for full-time service, while Elon continues to pour fine young men into the seminaries. This we recognize as our job, and as we work with twenty-four ministerial students this year we do so with mingled humility and pride, striving to guide them in the paths of effective and consecrated service.

In addition to the four-year program of ministerial training, the college offers to those who are to be laymen and laywomen in the church a course in Christian leadership. This course is directed toward the purpose of introducing Christian young people to the methods and materials for Christian education in order that they may be of service to their local churches both now and later. Thus, the program of Christian education in Elon College, rounded out by the one-year course in Bible (included in the curriculum of every student) points toward an ever-improving ministry and better trained leadership for the church.

D. J. BOWDEN.

ELON GRADUATES MAKE CHRISTIAN CHURCH STRONGER.

The Christian Church needs to be ever on the lookout for that which will give her strength. We need in these churches of ours all kinds of good people, but we need not only good people but trained people who will be able to render a service that will give strength to the church, and an influence for good in the community in which the church is located.

No class of members should mean more to our churches than the graduates from our own Elon College. Elon graduates in our churches add great strength, because they come to us well trained for the many kinds of service needed in all communities. Such graduates have been trained in the fundamental principles of the church and hence are intelligent workers, and such intelligent workers are much needed in all churches.

Then, too, these Elon graduates bring to our churches a beautiful dignity and reverence in the worship services, and the fact that a church has such trained members gives to her a higher standing in the community and hence a greater influence for good.

Most fortunate indeed is that Christian Church that has among its members graduates of Elon College. Such graduates, if they choose, can make their church one of great strength and power, and much good may be accomplished. Let's have more Elon graduates in all our churches that our great church may be made stronger.

J. F. MORGAN, President,
Eastern Virginia Conference.

WHY ELON NEEDS YOUR HELP.

The time is not far distant when there must be a revision of American educational policy. A generation ago the idea prevailed that education would solve most of our problems. At that time the majority of the dependents, delinquents and defectives were from the groups that had not had the advantages of an education. In the light of that fact it was concluded that if the masses were educated the groups which were a charge and a menace to society would be reduced to a minimum.

Much has been done toward reaching the ideal where an education is available for everyone. But instead of our social problems being practically solved, they have been steadily increasing. It is still the concensus of opinion that if we are to have the sort of democracy which we have envisioned, education is indispensable. It must, however, be a method of education which goes deeper than the transmission of a certain amount of necessary information, and the acquiring of proficiency in the techniques and skills of living.

This country needs a type of education which will mould aright the fundamentals of human character. It needs a type of education which will make for the loftiest and the most unselfish of ideals. It needs a type of education which is Christian, in the broadest and deepest significance of that term.

It is not our contention that Elon College and similar educational institutions are the only means which are striving for this higher type of idealistic education. Nor are we arguing that these institutions have even approximately measured up to the ideal. But we must remember that they have always consistently held and have been striving for that sort of education, and with some most notable successes. We also believe that the small college and the denominational controlled college can hope to do this type of educational work most successfully.

It is not merely a case of our own Elon College needing our help. It is a case of our country desperately needing the sort of education which Elon College is offering. It is a case of enabling Elon College to render better service in its own particular field. Mass production and assembly line methods will not avail in the realm of education. Elon College should not only have our adequate financial support; but it should have back of it the power of a reservoir of Christian idealism in our churches.

STANLEY C. HARRELL,
Member Board of Trustees.
Sec'y N. C. & Va. Conference.

THE TORCH IS PASSED ON TO US.

Elon College is well bred. It did not start as from a faction in our Southern Convention many years ago. It started in the hearts and minds of the biggest and best. It was a noble dream of the whole Convention. It was reared through hardships, but bravely, courageously. It has rendered immeasurably great services to the church. The hands that built it have passed it on. The torch has been handed to us.

Do we love our church as they loved it? Are we as progressive in our vision as they were? Are we made of the same measure of heroic qualities, willingness to sacrifice for the church, and ready to serve as they were ready to serve? Yes, I believe we are.

Let us prove that we are. Let us pay Elon out of debt. Let us repair its buildings, add whatever equipment the present demands, and use it as the college of our homes and children. Let us prove that we have a deep interest in Elon by seeing that our own local churches raise that part of the apportionment which helps maintain it—as well as all the other items of our Conference apportionment. Let us take time now by the forelock, and raise the most of our Elon College apportionment on Elon College Day, February 2, or the nearest convenient Sunday thereto. Let us help make the final raising of our apportionment next fall easy by doing all we can for Elon now, while we are in the college period of our Conferences and Convention.

MONDAY.

COURAGE.

"Thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God hath led thee."—Deut. 8: 2.

We were exhorting you to courage yesterday. We would like to continue that today. "So it will be," says a recent issue of Club Life, all through life, difficulty after difficulty, obstacle after obstacle, problem after problem, all to be overcome and solved by application and hard work. The only unfortunate person in all the world is the one who has no difficulties to overcome. . . . So let us welcome difficulties. They are first class opportunities to fortune. Persistence to overcome wins.

Prayer—Our Father, we desire heaven's courage, to play the man, to be strong, and to trust in Thee when things go wrong. Help us this day to take courage against all odds, whatever they may be. Thou art our winning strength. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WITH ALL THY SOUL."

"Love the Lord your God, and serve him with all your heart and with all your soul."—Deut. 11: 13. Matt. 22: 37.

Let us continue our thought about courage. We need that help. It is the only way to succeed, temporarily or spiritually. The following poem from Grenville Kleiser will do now:

If you would win the prize of life,
Arise above vain human strife,
Then set your eyes on one great goal,
And work for it with heart and soul.

The men that win have one clear aim,
Without a thought of selfish fame;
They plan, they toil, tho' rough the way
Till they attain the prize one day.

If you would win the worthwhile prize,
There's one best way, if you are wise.
Just set your mind on one great goal,
And work for it with heart and soul.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray that we may be living souls. May we see and understand what the worth while things are in this life, and throw all our hearts into that for Thee and Thy kingdom. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

DEAD SET UPWARD.

"Set your mind on things above."—Col. 3: 2.

Grenville Kleiser also wrote something that I feel impelled to quote to you here. He said: "Deep in every human soul is a hidden and longing ambition to do something fine and enduring. This secret intimation from within is a summons to rise above the dead level of mediocrity and to use your latent powers to a large purpose. Listen to this inner voice, heed its divine command, and set your eyes upon some great and lofty achievement."

Prayer—Our Father, we know that we rise to nothing except it be from that power above. Thou art the supreme power that lifts us, whose name is above every name and whose kingdom is above everything else. Grant us unfailing strength to daily rise from the earthly level to the things we ought to be. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE DOOR OF HOPE.

"I will give her . . . a door of hope."—Hosea 2: 15.

If you talk about your troubles
And tell them o'er and o'er
The world will think you love 'em
And proceed to give you more.
—Aston.

The Valley of Achor was a valley of sorrow to the Israelites. But God gave them hope. In that hope their sins were covered, their assurances were reinforced, they were given a strength that overcame their weakness, and they were happy.

The Valley of Achor runs through life. Life is full of tragedy. We are always in difficulty and struggle. That, however, is the most blessed order of our lives. It teaches us that true success is in character and not in fortune.

Prayer—Our Father, the hope of the wicked must perish. Our hope is in Thee, and we are saved by that hope. Grant that we shall not slacken our hold on that hope and to share and partake of realities of that hope eternally. We dedicate this day to that end. Amen.

FRIDAY.

OUR ACCOUNT.

"Let a man examine himself."—1 Cor. 11: 28; 11 Cor. 13: 5.

Chauncey M. Depew once said, "We pass this way but once. We cannot retrace our steps. Every time the clock strikes it is both the announcement of the hour upon which we are entering and the knell of the one which is gone. Each night memory balances the books, and we know before we sleep whether the result is on the right or on the wrong side of the column."

Prayer—O Lord, examine us, and prove us, and try the reins of our hearts. We are before thine eyes, and if there be anything good in us, that is before Thee; if there be anything evil, that is before Thee. Help us to walk in Thy truth this day. Amen.

SATURDAY.

DO NOT LIVE IN THE PAST.

"Look not behind thee."—Gen. 19: 17.

"In all things approving ourselves." "Yea, always rejoicing."—II Cor. 6: 4, 10.

The older we grow, the more we realize that life is worth living. And one of the things that contributes to that value is that we think not too lightly become lost, either inadvertently, carelessly, or deliberately lost. It is of the fun that is in it. Some Christians are too stingy with their

CHRIST'S CONCERN FOR THE LOST.

LESSON I—JANUARY 26, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 15.

DEVOTIONAL READING: John 10:11-18.

GOLDEN TEXT: The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost.—Luke 19:10.

A Curious Congregation.

"Now all the publicans and sinners were drawing near unto him to hear him." This was a curious congregation in the sense that it was made up of out-of-the-ordinary people. They were the people who were regarded by the religious leaders of Jesus' day as outsiders, as the "no account people," as the social and religious outcasts of the community. Publicans were hated tax collectors, men in the employ of the Roman government, often unscrupulous and grasping, tight-fisted and hard-hearted, renegades both to patriotism and to religion. Of course, all of them were not thus, but all of them were branded with the name of publicans, and, as has been said, "You may as well kill a dog as to give him a bad name." Sinners were not simply those who were openly vile and desperately wicked, but the great mass of people who did not heed the meaningless traditions of the scribes and Pharisees and did not obey the ceremonial law, hence were regarded as sinners by these scribes and Pharisees, who interpreted righteousness in terms of strict obedience to the law. What a testimony to Jesus that these people came in great crowds to hear him! It was because he was a friendly fellow, because he had preserved the common touch, because he treated them as human beings, because he talked in terms which they could understand, because he made religion interesting, and livable, and vital. One wonders if one reason why the church is not reaching the masses today is because its leaders are failing to keep in touch with the common people, and because religion is not interpreted in interesting, common, human and vital terms.

Contemptible Critics.

"And both the Pharisees and the scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them." One marvels sometimes at the blindness, and almost the brutality, of these Pharisees and scribes. In their blind devotion to the law and their bitter jealousy of Jesus, they did things that were inhuman, and said things which were hard and bitter. Here was a man taking an interest in people who needed him, people who were responsive to him, people into whose lives he brought new hope and new power, and people in whom he saw finer possibilities and potentialities. And here were these Pharisees and scribes standing around watching him, criticizing him, caustically charging him with inconsistency in his religious life because he had contact with those who were ceremonially unclean. The church has to be on guard lest it become a social club, lest those who can not give as much as others, and those who can not dress as well as others are not made to feel quite as welcome as they ought to be.

A Compelling Concern.

"And he spake unto them this parable"—in fact he spake unto them three parables, or three stories, in meeting the murmuring of these carping critics—the story of the Lost Sheep, the story of the Lost Coin, and the story of the Lost Boy. The central theme of each of these stories was the compelling concern which God had for his children, especially those who were lost. And Jesus used the term, lost, in the sense of something which had a great value, of something that was out of its proper relationship, in terms of a thing being used for the high purpose for which it had been created. In each of these parables there is evidence of a supreme concern on the part of those who are interested in the recovery of that which was lost. This concern on the part of the owner was a compelling concern—the shepherd sought until he found the sheep, the woman sought diligently until she found the coin. To be sure, the father of the Prodigal Son did not go out to seek his boy—in this parable the free-will element and deliberate choice must enter in, but there was a compelling love in the father's heart, for while the boy was a great way off the father saw him and ran and had compassion on him. What Jesus is trying to say is that in the heart of God there is a great care and a great concern for all of his children, and that this concern becomes a consuming concern when any of his. We often talk about how much a man suffers who goes into sin, or what it means to a man to be lost. This is, of course, one side, and an important side of the picture, but one wonders if we understand how much God suffers when one of his children is lost, or when one of his children sins. These three little stories, immortal stories they are in their simplicity, are little windows through which we can look into the heart of God, our loving Heavenly Father, little windows through which we see something of his compassion, his care, and his concern for his children, something of the inexpressible joy in his own heart, and in the choice spirits of his redeemed people over finding that which was lost and over the return of the wanderer.

A Convincing Conclusion.

When Jesus had finished, his carping critics had nothing to say because there was nothing left that they could say. Out of their own words and out of their own experience, they stood condemned. What a commentary it was on this narrowness of their interests and the poverty of their spirits that they cared more for sheep and for coins than they did for men!

QUIET HOUR.

laughter. The one who furnishes you amusement, should be well respected for he is apt to make you forget while you are amused, and at least the liver will work better for awhile.

Channey Depew gives the following story: "The raggedest person I ever saw was a Turkish peasant standing in the field, clothed in bits of old carpet. He was laughing hilariously at our well clothed party. The combination of color and humor made him a thing of beauty, if not a joy forever."

Prayer—Our Father, out of the abundance of a Christian heart we would be glad and rejoice in life as it is from Thee every day. This be Thy day. We will rejoice and be glad in it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

IN THE MINDS OF THE GREAT.

"As he thinketh in his heart, so is he."—Prov. 23:7. (Read Phil. 4:8.)

Says an unknown writer, "The great of the earth may not be known to us in person, but we can live in the company of the great, through our minds, through reading, through our aspirations and our ideals, through our attempt to emulate the noblest we know."

Prayer—O Lord, we would recognize this day as the symbol of noble thinking and noble living for every other day. We dedicate ourselves to this day and to Thee. Amen.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

How many of you have the flu? I have been thinking of you and wondering if the flu bug bit you very hard. De haven't been bitten yet and I hope that we will be able to dodge the fellow this year because of Oliver. It is hard to know what to do for a baby when he gets sick because he can't tell you just where the pain is. You have to poke him until you find the sore spot!

To those of you who are ill all of the Todd family wish for you a speedy recovery. Be careful not to get out of bed too soon. A backset is worse than the first time. Do just what the doctor and your nurse tell you to do. Try to be patient as well as a patient.

Often children dislike the doctor because he has to hurt them a bit in order to help them get well. Little Temple Sloan, who will be two years old February 22, got so he disliked his doctor very much because he stuck him! The doctor had to stick him in order to give him the cold shots to ward off colds. Not long ago Temple's father gave himself a shot and then one to Temple's mother. Temple thought that he was being slighted so he walked over to his dad and holding up his arm said, "Stuck, daddy, stuck." His father told him that it would hurt but still Temple insisted on being "stuck." The doctor told Mr. Sloan to give Temple a shot. So the next time Temple wanted to be stuck like his dad and mother, his dad told him that it would hurt. Still Temple begged to be "stuck." Mr. Sloan stuck the needle in his arm. Temple winced and turned his head away. His dad pulled out the needle and said, "There, it is all over!" Little Temple burst out with a hearty laugh. I hope that you will be as nice about taking your medicine as Temple was about being "stuck" by his father.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

JANUARY FIRSTS.

Oliver wants me to tell you that he went to church for the first time on January 5. He cried just a bit before the service began to let everyone know that he was there! But when the Epiphany service started there was so much beautiful music that he forgot to cry again. After the service he said hello to all of the people who came up to him.

His first visit was made last week in High Point. The North Carolina Convocation of Churches was meeting there. Oliver's father wanted very much to attend so we all went. Oliver and his mother had a good time visit-

JANUARY BIRTHDAYS.

This month we are celebrating the birthday of our President. I am sure that all of you have heard of the large sums of money which have been raised in the years gone by. This money goes to help make life more liveable for many boys and girls who suffer with the dreadful infantile paralysis. Men, women, boys and girls, from all over the United States send gifts of money to the President and he uses it for the crippled children of the nation. Would you be willing to go without candy for one week in order to help some crippled boy or girl? If so just give the money you would have spent for candy to the person in your community who is responsible for raising money for the President's birthday gift.

Two other Presidents were born in the month of January: Millard Fillmore was born anuary 17, 1800, and was our thirteenth President; William McKinley was born anuary 29, 1843, and was our twenty-fifth President.

I wonder if you remember your history well enough to know that Benjamin Franklin was born January 17, 1706. He was a great statesman as well as a famous inventor.

Many other national figures claim January for their birth month. There is Daniel Webster, born January 18, 1782, who was a famous orator and statesman of his day. Robert E. Lee, born January 19, 1807, refused the command of the entire Union forces in the War Between the States, that he might serve his native state, Virginia. Thomas J. Jackson, called "Stonewall" because of his courage, was born on January 21, 1824. And Matthew Fontaine Maury, who gained for himself the title of "Pathfinder of the Seas," was born on January 14, 1806. These are a few of the famous Americans born in January.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The Southern Convention designated the months of January and February for special emphasis in behalf of Elon College. In its financial set-up for the several institutions of the church, the Convention designated $12,500.00 for Elon College to be raised through the Conference Apportionments. This amount has been apportioned by the apportionment committees of the several Conferences to the churches in their Conference. All that is raised on this amount through the churches will be credited on the Conference Apportionment for the church sending it in.

The months of January and February will be an ideal time to raise this amount on your Conference Apportionment and get it out of the way. If the churches in the five Conferences would raise the $12,500.00 during this college period, it would make Dr. Smith very happy. He deserves to be made happy.

Nine years ago the college was in debt more than half a million dollars. Dr. Smith has reduced that indebtedness from year to year, and now the college owes one hundred and eight thousand ($108,000.00) dollars. This was a marvelous job. If all our churches would do their best during the college period, it might be that he could reduce the indebtedness to one hundred thousand ($100,000.00) dollars. Then we would feel that we were coming in on a home run.

Elon College is our college. It is a beautiful plant with beautiful modern buildings. We should feel proud of it. It has meant much to our denomination in training our young people during its fifty years of service. It is a pity that it is burdened in its work with this debt. Let all of us come to Dr. Smith's rescue with our offerings and help him get the debt cleared off. Then all of us can rejoice together because we had a part.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

INSTITUTE OF RELIGION.

The second Institute of Religion will be held at the United Church, Raleigh, beginning on January 27. The theme of the Institute is "Religious Adventure in a Perilous World." The first speaker will be Jerry Voorhis, Congressman from California, Dies Committee member, and Chairman of the Congressional Commission on Unemployment. Congressman Voorhis will speak on January 27 on "The Threat from Within." Miss Phyllis Bentley, English novelist, will be presented on February 10. Dr. Arthur Raper, social science analyst with the Department of Agriculture, will be presented on March 3, when the Institute will close. His topic will be "Democracy and National Defense in the South."

Fellowship dinners are to be held each Monday night at 6 o'clock. This will be followed by class periods at which time participants are offered a choice of five courses taught by outstanding local leaders. The special speakers will be presented at a joint meeting at 8:00 P. M. in the church auditorium.

portionments in full. He assures in his letter that it is his desire and purpose to see that his churches increase the offerings to the college.

You would perhaps find these suggestions helpful in your local church:

1. Call attention to the fact that Elon College is our institution, founded by our church, owned by our church, and that it is anxious to serve the church as a whole.

2. Emphasize the fact that the entire apportionment for the college to the Convention is only $12,500.00.

3. Everything that is contributed by individuals, by Sunday schools, or by churches for this purpose counts on college apportionments.

4. This is the college period, so designated by the Convention.

5. Every church is asked to make some contribution to the college during this period.

6. Give the Sunday school and the church an opportunity to contribute, and something will be received.

The Christian College

Education is the torchlight of civilization. Christian Education is the contribution of the church for the continued advance of civilization on moral and religious principles. Education without the Christian emphasis may kindle skepticism that will lead to atheism. Atheism is destructive to the forces that have moulded our civilization, as is being demonstrated in some of the far-flung corners of the world today. It is difficult to combat atheism with armies and armaments. A modern blitzkrieg will not destroy it. The only successful weapon that may be used supreme need of the nations of the earth is the mind of the Prince of Peace; against atheism is education, education of the right type, education that puts God in the center and uplifts Christ as the highway for human hearts in their search for truth.

The Christian college is the voice of the church to this present age, pleading for religion in the curriculum of higher education, for our young people to be taught the fundamentals of Christianity that the truth of Christ may become for them the staying force in their lives when the storms of a wicked world come sweeping across their pathways.

This, more than any other age, needs the Christian College and its indispensable contribution to higher education. Your contribution at this time will mean more than you can half imagine. Please do not withhold your gifts.

“Why I Want to be Known as a Christian”

[Excerpts from answers entered in a contest by twenty members of the Pilgrim Fellowship group of the First Congregational Church of Mason City, Iowa. The pastor, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, gave as a prize a leather-bound King James Version Bible, recently received from London.]

“Only Christians know how to use privileges in the right way.”

“When you feel the need to pray you can pray and have a feeling that your prayer will be answered.”

“Why do I want to be known as a Christian? Because I wouldn't want to be known as anything else.”

“Christians are supposed to be friendly to everyone, helpful to the unfortunate, and willing to share with others.”

“The Christian is honest with himself and with his fellow men. A Christian is willing to sacrifice all for the sake of God.”

“I want to be a disciple of Jesus because I believe in his way of life, the standard he set for youth and his wonderful teachings.”

“I believe that Christianity is the only religion that teaches all the qualities that help make a person's life what Jesus meant it to be.”

“I want to be a Christian because I want to live a full, rich life, and I feel that being a Christian is the only way I may accomplish this.”

“One who isn't a Christian is usually a person who lives for nothing and can see no good in anything. A Christian can look up and be proud to know he worships the true God.”

“I want to do all I can to inspire people to live a Christian life and only when I'm known to others and to myself as a Disciple of Jesus will I have succeeded. This is my aim.”

“I believe that only in the teachings of Jesus are the innumerable qualities found which are the basis of the perfect religion; the basis of a faith for which we never need to apologize.”

“If everyone believed in the teachings of God, what a world this would be to live in! Christ is an ideal. Everybody should look up to Him and pattern their life as closely as possible after Him.”

“If you are a Christian, you can look forward to a life in the hereafter. Christians also in their immediate lives lead a much more cheerful life. Even if they don't have everything, they have the joy of living with God.”

“The Christian Church has remained, although nations have risen and fallen, great men have died, and ages have passed. I once heard that only good things will stand through hardships, so this is a definite proof that the Christian Church is a worthwhile institution.”

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. D. M. Spence, wife of our minister at Sophia, N. C., whose father recently died in Nashville, Tenn.

The guest editorial writer this week is Rev. Joseph E. McCauley, pastor of Liberty (Vance), Ingram and Pleasant Grove Churches, and a member of the Board of Publications.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., has returned to his work in Asheboro, N. C., after a five weeks' "vacation" necessitated by an appendectomy. His members welcomed him gladly.

Rev. Edward E. Martz missed his appointment at Apple's Chapel last Sunday due to illness. Rev. J. P. McDade, ministerial student at Elon College, preached for the church.

Dr. D. J. Bowden, chairman of the Convention committee on Social Relations, has had literature for the observance of Race Relations Sunday, February 9, sent to all pastors within the Convention.

The Promotional Secretary acted as editor of the Missions Page this week due to the serious illness of Mrs. L. I. Cox, the mother of Mrs. Parker. THE CHRISTIAN SUN thanks Mr. Lester and sympathizes most sincerely with Mrs. Parker and wishes for her mother a speedy recovery.

Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, Jr., pastor of the United Church, Raleigh, N. C., is broadcasting each Sunday afternoon over Station WPTF (Raleigh), from 2:15-2:30. "The Churches Make News" is the title of this broadcast, which is sponsored by the North Carolina Council of Churches.

A very profitable session of the North Carolina Council of Churches was held in High Point on January 14-16. Ministers attending from our fellowship included Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, Rev. W. E. Wisseman, Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, Jr., Dr. W. M. Jay, Rev. F. C. Lester and Rev. W. J. Andes.

Haw River Christian Church gave a reception for their new pastor and his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Grissom, on Saturday night, January 18, at the Haw River Community Clubhouse. Members of Providence Memorial and Long's Chapel Churches, the other two churches in the pastorate, joined in the evening of fellowship.

The Mid-Winter meetings of our denominational Boards are being held in Evanston, Ill., this week. Representatives from the Southern Convention who are in attendance are: Dr. L. E. Smith, who is a member of the Council Executive Committee; Dr. H. S. Hardecastle, Vice-President of the Home Boards; and Rev. F. C. Lester, who is a member of the Prudential Committee of the Foreign Board.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference ordained to the gospel ministry William Alfonso Grissom at his home church, Liberty (Vance), on Thursday evening, January 23. Dr. L. E. Smith preached the ordination sermon. The presbytery was composed of Rev. S. E. Madren, President of the Conference; Rev. E. M. Carter, Secretary of the Conference; and Revs. Aubrey C. Todd, J. Frank Apple and J. E. McCauley. The candidate was presented by his brother, Rev. R. T. Grissom and Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary.

The Executive Board of the Southern Convention met in Norlina, N. C., last week and wrestled with Convention finances for a day. There is a deficit of $3,244.00 brought over from the last biennium. The Conferences asked the churches to raise this amount as early in this new year as possible. The Convention Fund is not sufficient to continue the office of Promotional Secretary through the remainder of this year. No solution to the problem was found by the Board. Only the churches can solve it by making adequate financial contributions.

SPRUNT LECTURES OF 1941.

An occasion which should be of interest to our ministers, especially those in Virginia, is that of the Sprunt Lectures, held at the Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., February 2 to 9, 1941. These lectures will be delivered by the Rev. William Childs Robinson, Th. D., D. D., a native of North Carolina. Dr. Robinson is an A. B. graduate of Roanoke College, received his B. D. from Union Seminary, and his Master's degree from the University of South Carolina. His Th. M. work was done at Princeton, and he received his Th. D. from Harvard University in 1928, the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity being conferred upon him by Roanoke College the same year. Dr. Robinson is a prolific author and is also a member of the editorial council of The Religious Digest. The subject of his lectures will be: "Christ—the Hope of Glory."

Another series of lectures will be delivered during the week by the Rev. James George McKnight, Ph. D., D. D. Dr. McKnight received his A. B. degree from Geneva College, his B. D. from Princeton, studied at Johns Hopkins, Columbia and Leipzig Universities, and completed his Ph. D. at Chicago. He received his D. D. degree from Geneva College in 1918. He is a native of Pennsylvania and a Chautauqua lecturer of note. The theme of Dr. McKnight's lectures will be: "The Principles and Program of the Kingdom."

The Inaugural Addresses of four new professors will take the place of the third lecturer. Each of these professors will deliver his initial address on a subject in his chosen field: James E. Bear, Th. M., New Testament Interpretation and Biblical Literature; Howard T. Kuist, Ph. D., New Testament; John Newton Thomas, Ph. D., Systematic Theology; John Bright, Ph. D., who is an Associate in the Biblical Department.

A NATIONAL CHRISTIAN MISSION TO BE HELD IN WASHINGTON.

There is to be held in Washington, D. C., beginning on Sunday evening, February 2, and continuing until February 9, a "National Christian Mission," under the auspices of the Washington Federation of Churches and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ. The opening mass meeting will be held in Constitution Hall, with Dr. E. Stanley Jones as the speaker. There will also be a meeting at Continental Hall, where Dr. Paul E. Scherer will speak. There will be "area" meetings in six different sections of the city, Monday through Friday at 8 o'clock. Of particular interest to ministers will be the morning meetings, daily from 10 to 11:30, at Calvary Baptist Church. Speakers will be: Monday—Harold Phillips, Paul Scherer; Tuesday, Norman Peale, E. Stanley Jones; Wednesday—Bishop T. C. Darst, R. T. Nooe; Thursday, R. H. Bowling, J. C. McCombe; Friday—Adolf Keller, Bishop Paul Kern.

There will be sectional meetings for women during the week, at the same

The Southern Convention

By DR. J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, Secretary.

It would be quite impossible for the writer to be secretary of the Southern Convention and not have on his heart and mind the affairs of the Convention, especially as these present themselves as problems. The Convention has several problems and probably no one of them is a new one. And some of these problems are minor but some are major. A major problem just now is how to finance the overhead of the Convention.

At present we are endeavoring to meet this overhead through a fund known as the Convention Fund supplemented by grants from all our Boards and Institutions except the Board of Superannuation. The amount set up by the Convention for the Convention Fund in 1938 was $5,000.00. Of this $5,000.00 the Conferences apportioned $4,754.00 to the churches and the churches reported in 1940 the raising of $3,439.00. If the Convention Fund had been raised in full the last four years the Convention would have had for its overhead expense an additional $6,500.00. While we might not be justified in stating at this point that had that additional $6,500.00 been received the Convention today would not be facing a deficit; surely we are justified in stating that since the deficit is less than $4,000.00 the deficit today would not be a major or even a minor problem. How can we secure the raising in full of the Convention Fund?

Before considering this question let us consider a related one and pertinent—the financing of the office of Promotional Secretary. The financing of this office is approaching a stalemate. Unless funds are received from some source not now in evidence the office of Promotional Secretary will have to be discontinued or the Convention forced into new and larger indebtedness.

At the Greensboro sessions of the Convention it was voted to continue the office of Promotional Secretary. The writer was among those who urged this action. As secretary, more and more the need of our Convention is reflected by the correspondence which goes through his office and the reports which he studies, tabulates and summarizes. With greater ardor your secretary would today urge the continuance of the office of Promotional Secretary. It is an office we need; it is an office which is now responding effectively where and when demands are made upon it. After acting to continue the office of Promotional Secretary the Convention then proceeded to adopt a financial policy and program which jeopardized the financing of the very office it had voted to continue. The writer was serving as chairman of the committee on finance, but it was not the report of the committee that was adopted, nor was the report presented at the second reading by the committee the best judgment of the committee. A compromise was presented and the Convention appeased it. Now we are in difficulties. What can be done?

It is the conviction of your secretary something should be done. As chairman of the committee on finance he is being written to do something. But what? The Convention has put its hands to the plow and for a plowing that needs to go deep and to the farthest corner. It is not good to put hands to the plow and then take them off and leave the plow in the field needing plowing, intending not to go back. If our Convention permits the closing of the office of Promotional Secretary and continues to pour money into other and less needed activities, our Convention will receive a deep hurt.

The Executive Board of the Convention has met recently to discuss this matter. It expects to meet again within the next month to take some action regarding it. There is a strong sentiment in the Board not to follow a course which will increase the Convention's indebtedness. There is also great reluctance on its part to retrench on a program of promotion that is already too limited. If you have any suggestions to offer the Board make them known to the Board through the secretary or through any member of the board. They will be given every consideration and your interest in the work of your church will be appreciated.

hours as the ministers' meetings, ending with a mass meeting at Calvary Baptist Church on Friday, when Miss Muriel Lester of England and Dr. E. Stanley Jones will both speak.

In addition to the above, there will be seven afternoon seminars: Employed People's Seminar from 4:45 to 6:00 o'clock, noon meetings, a Youth Conference on Friday night, special meetings on Saturday, and closing mass meetings on Sunday, February 9, at 4 o'clock, at Washington Cathedral and Calvary Baptist Church.

MRS. MATTIE PARKER AND BOARD OF SUPERANNUATION.

For these many years Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Chairman of the Board of Superannuation, cared for the few business transactions, the correspondence and the records of this Board through the courtesy of the office of the Mission Board. Colonel West, Chairman of the Mission Board, assures the writer the Mission Board will be glad to extend the same courtesy to him. We find Mrs. Parker a most gracious secretary and one deeply interested in the work of the Board of Superannuation.

Matters pertaining to the Board of Superannuation can be addressed either to Mrs. Mattie Parker, Elon College, N. C., or to Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Sr., 401 Church Street, Burlington, N. C. Checks can be mailed to either but it would expedite matters if they are sent direct to Mrs. Parker.

GIBSONVILLE CHURCH DEDICATED.

Our church at Gibsonville, N. C., was dedicated last Sunday. It was organized on July 29, 1939, with 29 members. There are now 61 church members and 165 members of the Sunday school.

The building and equipment cost approximately $2,500.00, nearly all of which has been paid by local people.

Among those taking part in the dedication service were: Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, Rev. W. E. Wissemann, Rev. M. A. Pollard and two local ministers, Rev. E. A. Long and Rev. John L. Morgan. Mr. Merton Simpson spoke for the church trustees. The pastor, Harold Loman, presided. Special music was furnished by the Men's Chorus of the West Burlington Methodist Church.

EASTERN VIRGINIA ELON ALUMNI CLUB TO MEET.

The Elon College Alumni Club of Eastern Virginia will hold the annual banquet at Hotel Elliott on Friday night, February 14, at seven o'clock.

Dr. W. T. Scott of Jacksonville, Fla., will be the guest speaker.

THE CHURCH AT WORK.

What does the local church do? Perhaps it administers to a needy family. Certainly it improves its physical appearances occasionally by painting, interior decorating, and landscaping the premises. It is expected to conduct regular worship services and occasionally have a special service in the form of a pageant, children's day programs, memorial services and home comings. Some people see these activities only; they never see the real work of the church. This local church program is the smaller part of the work of a church if it is to measure up to the expectation of the larger fellowship.

Our Orphanage at Elon College under the fatherhood of Bro. C. D. Johnston is receiving a part of the contributions of our church and Sunday schools to care for about one hundred children who have no parents to support and guide them. This institution is ours. The care it renders is our church at work. By pooling our funds we are able to do a more effective work in administering to the needs of bereft children.

No individual or people can thrive long on ignorance. Our denomination realized this, therefore, we have our publications, "Advance," "Pilgrim Highroad," "Missionary Herald," and "The Christian Sun," which keep us informed of the workings of our church. When we contribute to our Conference Apportionments, especially when we pay the Convention and Conference Funds, we are working with others to help disseminate knowledge. Our church publications must be supported if we are to be kept informed. "The Christian Sun" is designed for this purpose in the Southern Convention. This church periodical, under the editorship of Rev. R. L. House, is one of the best of its kind to be found anywhere. The local church is having some part in informing all who read these periodicals.

Another field in which the local church works with its fellow churches is in the field of Religious Education. The Promotional Secretary, Rev. F. C. Lester, as head of this department of our work, is serving the larger constituency by directing Daily Vacation Bible Schools, Teachers' Training Schools, Summer Conferences, helping to prepare and plan programs for the local church, and promoting the general welfare of the church.

Only a few of us have the privilege of doing personal work in mission fields. That does not keep us from doing a large work for missions. Under the direction of Col. J. E. West, Chairman of the Board, and Mrs. Mattie C. Parker, Secretary, our offerings for missions are working for us in numbers of places. The mountain area of our Convention is being served and hundreds of missionaries on the foreign field are doing for us what we, ourselves, cannot do.

Our Elon College, under the leadership of Dr. L. E. Smith, is the training station for the workers who carry on for us. The head of each of the departments has been trained here. Sixty-two of the ministers and a large number of the laity of the Southern Convention have been trained at Elon. In addition to training our own leaders, Elon has trained outstanding statesmen, educators, ministers and workers for other denominations. It takes more financial support than the students pay to run any school. Elon comes nearer making the school self-supporting than any other institution I know. Our church helps train and develop men and women in all walks of life through its college. This is our church at work.

WILL OUR CHURCH KEEP PACE?

Dr. Roger W. Babson, writing in the Richmond "Times-Dispatch" on January 1, 1941, gave an outlook for the business trends of our nation in which he predicts the best volume of business in our nation's history. This volume of business, according to the writer, will include everything from cradles to coffins. In other words, farmers, laborers, employers and professional men, all will experience an increase in temporal benefits. The probability of our business volume exceeding the all time high in 1929 is judged by the facts gathered from all parts of the world over a period of time. Last year's volume of business was the largest in eleven years. It has been predicted that in 1941 a twenty percent increase will come from the armament program.

Is it too much to expect the church to keep pace with these national trends? The temporal increase and business trends are expected to draw at least fifty percent of the unemployed into action.

A careful reading of our church records will also show improvements for the year 1940. There was an increase in church memberships. The contributions to the college were a little more than the previous year. Missions in general increased and the orphanage reached its goal. As the nation has sufficient data to predict upward business trends, so does the church. As business leaders are not satisfied with the volume of business done in the past, neither should the church be satisfied with its present learning, growing and giving. The conditions which have brought the possibility of an increased industrial output have also developed greater religious crises. They have made more children homeless, more men and women doubt, more people churchless, and have given the church greater responsibility as well as wonderful opportunity.

The word of God has a vital message for the world of 1941. The church hymnal has a song for our age. The daily quiet hour has a solace for souls who seek God through that avenue. The church school has a lesson to teach those who will be still long enough, study sufficiently, and then share with their fellowmen the knowledge acquired. The young people's organizations offer a Christian environment, information and priceless inspiration for our youth if they will unite with them. There are many spiritually unemployed, undernourished souls, and we are faced with the opportunity of keeping pace with the national progress in a year of business promise.

Our Churches and the College Fund

By DR. E. L. MOFFITT,

Former President of Elon College and a Member of the Board of Trustees.

Having been asked to write an article on the response of our churches to the call of the Convention for the Elon College Fund, I decided to get the latest and most accurate facts possible, showing just what the churches in the several Conferences have been doing. I contacted Dr. Lightbourne, Secretary of the Convention, and he very kindly furnished me the records for the year 1940. But for the six churches making no report to the Conferences, I presume the figures are approximately correct and will give us a fairly correct picture of just what is being done.

As perhaps is known to most of our members, at its meeting in Burlington in 1936 the Southern Christian Convention, desiring to make a definite contribution towards the support of the college, something that they could count on as a reasonable certainty from year to year, gave the college its note for $250,000.00 bearing 4% interest annually. The principal was never to be paid but the 4% interest, or $10,000.00 annually, was to be apportioned among the several churches through their conferences, and it was hoped that at least this much could be counted on.

The original apportionment made by the Convention was for $12,500.00, allowing a margin of $2,500.00 for the possible failure of some of the churches to bring up their full amount.

This $12,500.00 was apportioned by the Convention as follows:

Eastern Va. Conference	$ 5,000.00
Va. Valley Central Conference ...	700.00
Eastern N. C. Conference	1,800.00
Western N. C. Conference	1,800.00
N. C. & Va. Conference	3,200.00
Total	$12,500.00

The amounts actually apportioned by the Conferences, as shown in the 1939 Annual, were as follows:

Eastern Va. Conference	$ 4,159.00
Va. Valley Central Conference ..	378.95
Eastern N. C. Conference	1,856.00
Western N. C. Conference	488.00
N. C. & Va. Conference	3,684.40
Total	$10,566.35

The amounts actually paid by the several Conferences in response to the above apportionments, as shown in the Convention Secretary's report for the 1940 Annual, are as follows:

Eastern Va. Conference	$ 3,173.00
Va. Valley Central Conference ...	260.00
Eastern N. C. Conference	474.00
Western N. C. Conference	341.00
N. C. & Va. Conference	3,038.00
Total	$ 7,286.00

From the above figures it is seen that the Conferences sent the following approximate percentages of what the Convention asked of them: Eastern Virginia, 63%; Virginia Valley, 37%; Eastern North Carolina, 26%; Western North Carolina, 19%; North Carolina and Virginia, 95%.

In 1940 the Eastern Virginia Conference reported forty-four churches with 10,212 members. Of these churches eighteen paid their apportionments for the college in full, ten paid nothing, and one overpaid (on basis of reduced apportionments).

The Virginia Valley Central Conference reported twenty-two churches with 2,357 members. Of these churches eight paid in full, four paid nothing, and three overpaid (on the basis of reduced apportionments).

The Eastern North Carolina Conference reported forty-nine churches with 5,914 members. Of the churches five paid in full and twenty-one paid nothing.

The Western North Carolina Conference reported thirty-eight churches with 3,722 members. Of the churches seventeen paid in full, nine paid nothing, and two overpaid (based on their reduced apportionments.)

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference reported forty-five churches twenty-one paid in full, nine paid nothing, and three overpaid.

I feel it is not necessary for me to write at length about what the above facts reveal. They speak for themselves and answer the often asked question. "Why is not the $10,000.00 Convention Pledge paid in full?"

I understand that the amount received by the college from this source has gradually increased from year to year, the $7,286.00 received last year being the largest amount yet. This is encouraging, but can we not do even better? Is there any reason why we cannot raise the entire $10,000.00 a year for which the Convention, of which we are a part, is definitely obligated? I don't think so. I believe we can, and I believe we will if we go about in a business like way.

I feel that our churches should be as deeply concerned over the meeting of this Convention obligation in full as we are as individuals in meeting our obligations at our bank. When we stop to think of what Elon College has done for the Christian Church and for the betterment of the communities into which its influence has gone, $10,000.00 seems a mighty small return in dollars and cents.

The hundreds of preachers and the thousands of young men and women in every walk of life who have received their training at Elon have done more to strengthen our churches and to uplift the communities in which they live than any other influence that has been brought to bear on them. Those of us who are old enough to remember conditions as they were before Elon was established and who have followed the course of events during the fifty years that have passed since, of course, realize more than the younger generation just how true this statement is.

Among the many things that can help us to succeed in meeting this church obligation, I shall mention only two, which I believe to be absolutely necessary if we are to reach our goal.

First, the pastor must give it his approval and not hesitate to urge that the full amount be raised (and, of course, this is true of all the other enterprises of the church as well). Several years ago when I was more directly connected with some of the church enterprises, I had occasion to observe the situation in all our churches. I found that in practically every instance where the pastor did not take the lead in raising all the Conference apportionments, they were not raised. I also made another observation—in most cases where the pastor was not interested in raising the funds for the various church enterprises, the members soon lost interest in raising the pastor's salary, and in almost no such case was the pastor's salary ever increased. However, these observations were made thirty or forty years ago, and I hope they are not true of this good day in which we are now living and laboring for the advancement of Christ's kingdom through the various activities of His Church.

In the second place, of course, there must be some definite plan for raising this fund and some one individual who is charged with the responsibility of seeing that the plan works. Occasional announcements from the pulpit or from a lay leader will not put it over. I do believe that there is some man or woman in every church who can and will see that this fund and every other fund asked by the Conference is raised in full if he is given a chance to do it.

I am pleased to note the progress our churches have made during recent years, and unless our people are different from what they used to be, I know that when pastors and other leaders show them the needs, their response will be ready and liberal.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Criticism is having its inning in this modern age. Critics have written much of the history of humanity. The first recorded critic was Cain who found fault with his brother's religious sacrifice. That criticism resulted in the death of Abel. It committed the first murder. And that scarlet thread has been woven into the fabric of many lives since that tragic disagreement.

Every great invention has been criticized. There were thunderstorms in the days of Adam, Noah, Moses and Elijah. For generations men looked upon the flash of lightning and heard the peal of distant thunder, while civilization waited for a Franklin, or an Edison, or a Marconi to harness this mysterious force called electricity, and utilize its power. When these men brought their conclusions from their research laboratories they were hissed and ridiculed. The birds passed in graceful flight over the fields and gardens of antiquity, but the world waited for the Wright brothers of Dayton and Kitty Hawk to make a machine which could pass through the air, guided by the same principles used by the birds of passage. Newspaper editors refused to print the story of man's first success with an airplane. They listened to the critics. The critics always have their day.

This is a great day for the critics. At the present time the attacks center upon the economic, social and religious life of the nation. Reporters from New York assail the living conditions of tenant farmers in Georgia, while overlooking the plight of the sweatshops of their own great city. Busy writers from Boston deplore the plight of the migrant workers in the orange groves of Florida and the vicissitudes of the laborers in the Far West. The critics tell of the race hatreds of the South, making pictures of lop-sided cabins to illustrate the perils and the injustices of segregation. These descriptions get front page publicity in the newspapers and special study in women's missionary societies not because they represent the whole truth, but because they are written and publicized by experts who know the art of catching the attention of the readers. This is the way of criticism. It attracts attention by pointing out the defects and calling attention to the unusual. It is a fertile field for the literary profiteer, and they are many.

The spirit of criticism has also raised its babbling voice against the church. No realm of personal life is immune to its attack. Many of its aims and purposes are vicious and destructive. If all the criticisms of American life were true—if they represented the whole truth—the voluminous output of this type of literature—and conversation—would be sufficient ground for a great revolution. It is painful to read so much—and to hear so much—criticism of the American way of life. Some day American industries, economics, social order, educational institutions and churches may have to fight for their existence if the public becomes convinced that the present way is all wrong. The present purpose seems to be headed in that direction. It is folly to say: "Everything is right." And it is equally foolish to say: "Everything is wrong." A few years of presenting the better side, by pointing to the virtues instead of the vices, would help the situation in a constructive way.

Criticism is easy. It is usually made with the tongue or typewriter. It does not paint any pictures, for it has not use for the brush and the paint. It fails to build houses, for that would call for work with trowel, saw and hammer. It does not clear land, build homes, cultivate the soil, develop industries—for it criticizes the people who assume those life-saving and life-giving fields of service. Watch criticism.

I. W. JOHNSON.

A CONVOCATION OF CHURCHES.

North Carolina has a Council of Churches. Each year under the auspices of the Council is held a Convocation of Churches. The Convocation for 1941 was entertained in the city of High Point at the Wesley Memorial Methodist Church. It was the fifth such Convocation, the second to be held in a Methodist Church. The Presbyterians have entertained the Convocation twice and the Baptists once.

Editor House has requested the writer to report for THE CHRISTIAN SUN this 1941 Convocation. It is a happy assignment but how much and what to report out of the great wealth of material to be reported are pertinent bafflements. Able and consecrated ministers and religious workers from the several denominations and the several sections of our country are brought to the Convocation. To share with them the variety and the richness of their experiences is an intriguing experience. Of course, one does not always find himself in agreement with these gifted and often brilliant speakers; in fact one discovers they are not always agreed among themselves. However one's soul's desire to hear and possess the truth is warmed by the deep conviction, the profound earnestness and contagious enthusiasm that characterize these great ones who battle for righteousness over the land or in the strategic centers of our land.

And the fellowship is sweet. During the years one forms friendships and attachments for ministers who come and go. These are renewed at the Convocation. And from Convocation to Convocation new acquaintances are made and friendships formed. One learns to know the very fine things of the men over the state who are not of his own denomination. And out of this grows the consciousness of a oneness of fellowship that is not limited to wishful thinking nor bounded by the second verse of "Onward Christian Soldiers," but which is indeed a fellowship in the body of Christ.

The theme for this fifth Convocation was, "The Faith of the Church and the World Crisis." And the "crisis" ever was kept before us. How could it be otherwise? Dr. E. H. Blackard, pastor of the host church, introduced his words of gracious welcome by introducing the theme; and Mayor O. A. Kirkman echoed it as he added a secular and civic touch to hospitality. Then followed the annual event of the Convocation, the address of the president of the Council. These addresses, and the writer has heard all of them, have been of a high order and always pertinent; combining in forthright declaration prophetic scanning of the horizon with prophetic understanding of contemporary events and issues. Dr. W. A. Stanbury, successor to Dr. Ray Jordan at Winston-Salem and president of the Council he has faithfully served since its inception, got the Convocation off to a great beginning with a great message sounding a clear call to loyal citizenship and an inspiring demand for faithful allegiance to that yet higher claim of citizenship in the Kingdom of God.

Ecclesiastical romance clusters about the names of certain New York churches. One of these churches is the Brick Presbyterian. Its present pastor, Dr. Paul Austin Wolfe, was the most used guest speaker of the Convocation. The shadow of Henry VanDyke lengthens over the pulpit of the Brick Church; the writer awaited breathlessly his introduction to this latest successor of one who has so often charmed and delighted him. Dr. Wolfe brought with him Calvinistic thunderings, Genevan reverberations—and a smile, a smile which cleared the atmosphere like sunshine after rain. There are minor soundings in some Presbyterian preaching which leaves the writer in shocked suspense; but how the heart responds with hot glow to its major harmonies. In a day when so often great preaching centers about problems and issues it was good to be called to a profounder faith in the fact of God and a governing consciousness that God is yet the biggest figure in history.

Since our Southern Convention has become rural-minded to the degree of adding to its already long list of committees one on the rural church, it was good to hear Dr. Mark A. Dawber, Executive Secretary of the Home Missions Council, and an expert on the subject at or away from home. This one address was compensation and more for whatever inconvenience one was put to attend the Convocation. According to Dr. Dawber the former strategic part played by the rural area is to return, is returning. But Dr. Dawber makes clear the rural church is not prepared to meet the new issues this return to strategic importance will bring with it. And so his ardor and zeal in the effort to awaken the rural ministers and the rural churches to their opportunity as well as of their responsibility. The churches of our Southern Convention are chiefly rural and while many of them are weak many of them are strong, and almost all of them are strategically located. We would like to suggest to the chairmen of our Conference committees on rural church work the securance of Dr. Dawber for addresses and discussion groups.

Here is but a beginning at reporting a Convocation. But we cannot go on. You have other things to read; the writer has other things to do. How sad it was to see so few of our pastors present. The Kiwanis Club in Burlington graciously contributed $10.00 to each of its ministerial members toward the expense of attendance on the first two of the Convocations. It would be a very fine investment for a church to do something like this for its pastor.

CONTRIBUTIONS DURING THE COLLEGE PERIOD.

In order to prevent overlapping of appeals to the churches for the support of the different interests of the Convention, the church year has been divided into periods. These periods are allotted different boards and institutions.

January and February constitute the college period. During this period all churches either directly or through their Sunday schools and other organizations are asked by the Convention to inform their several constituencies regarding the college and its needs and to give an opportunity for contributions for the support of the same. The college greatly appreciates this provision by the Convention and is indebted to every church and all individuals for support given it.

We are very happy to report that offerings for this purpose last year from all sources through Conference apportionments totaled more than previous years. We received on Conference apportionments from all Conferences a total of $7,286.00. This is a little more than half the college apportionment. Some of our Conferences raised a large percentage of the amount requested by the Convention. Others either changed the amount apportioned or did not do so well with collections.

This is an appeal to all pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and organized classes to please give the constituency an opportunity to make a contribution. These contributions not only help the college but make it easier for the local church to raise its full apportionment.

Offerings received on college apportionments are as follows:

FIFTY-ONE YEARS OF SERVICE

[We are indebted to Dr. John G. Truitt for the following editorial from the "Suffolk News-Herald."]

Our genial and respected citizen, Colonel E. E. Holland, in celebrating his fifty-first year as president of the Farmers Bank of Nansemond, hangs up a record that is difficult to duplicate, not only in Virginia, but the country as a whole.

We believe that no better tribute could have been paid Col. Holland than that of Publisher Hamilton of the Portsmouth Star. We quote:

Colonel Edward Everett Holland, in his younger political days the "Red Fox" of Nansemond, and now the "Grand Old Man" of all Tidewater Virginia, Friday celebrated at Suffolk his association of fifty-five years with the seventy-two-year-old Farmer's Bank of Nansemond—once known as the richest bank, according to its capitalization, in the United States.

Friday's celebration occurred incidental to Col. Holland's election for the fiftieth time as president of the Suffolk banking institution, and the fifty-sixth time as a director of the same. Col. Holland, surrounded by friends—who are legion wherever he is known—was at this event acclaimed for public service and a long active life of business usefulness.

As Commonwealth's Attorney of Nansemond County, as a member of the General Assembly of Virginia, as Congressman for ten years from the Second Congressional District of Virginia, and final service to an always loyal constituency, Edward Everett Holland stands without stain or blemish in a public career of more than half a century.

It was as John Tyler, tenth President of the United States found pride in accepting election to the legislature of Virginia, as well as to the Confederate Congress, after his presidential

THE WORLD FOR CHRIST.

Each week this page carries in big letters "The World for Christ." This has been the dream, the hope, of the disciples of Jesus through the centuries. In some respects it has become a fact, for the message of the Master has girdled the globe, and the influence of His teaching is felt in many areas of life around the world.

Present world conditions are far from Christian. Yet in almost every country there are those who still believe in making all of the world Christian. Messengers of peace and hope are scattered everywhere. As Dr. S. H. Leger of China recently wrote his friends: "There are still some things to do there. That is why we stay."

FOREIGN MISSIONS TODAY.

"In a time like this all foreign missionaries should be called home." Did you ever hear anyone say something like that? Or have you thought it? Some people believe it. But this writer does not, and for good reasons.

1. Missionaries minister to those in distress.—They go out to serve; to heal the sick, to feed the hungry, to fight disease, to care for outcasts, to bring joy wherever sorrow crushes life. Today the missionaries minister in the midst of war, famine, floods, torture of soul and body the like of which this world has never known. It is no time to quit doing the things Jesus commissioned his followers to do.

2. Missionaries bind nations together in friendship.—They visit leaders in many countries. They bring a fresh point of view. They see human needs. They present high ideals, and live above hatred and narrow nationalism. They interpret Christian ideals as found in all nations. Human brotherhood and the Golden Rule are practiced by them and become a magnet that draws men together. This is no time for the breaking of international friendships. The missionaries will do more than any other one group to bring lasting peace on earth because they show that friendship is better than war and because they practice the kind of friendships that will eventually bring international peace. Now more than ever we need these friendships strengthened.

3. Missionaries enlarge our lives.—Most of us remain close to our birth place. Our horizon is narrow and our efforts are limited. But our missionaries become part of us when we support them with our prayers and our gifts. They are our eyes that see around the world; they are our hearts that answer prayers in the most needy places; they are our hands that minister in things holy everywhere. That is so when we pray for them, and give to support them. We need them now when most people are becoming national, selfish and narrow. They hold before us the ideals of Jesus so that our own lives run deep and broad.

4. Missionaries help to bring God's Kingdom to earth.—By word and deed, both day and night, when everybody believes it and when opposition arises, at whatever personal cost may be necessary, these evangelists of God's love tell of His truth and show His life. When we pray: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," we mean that more missionaries should minister in God's name in the needy places of the world, and we should make the prayer real by contributing for their support. In this way the Kingdom comes into our own hearts, and around the world.

For these and other good reasons, this is the time when the church should put forth special effort to strengthen its missionary enterprise.

F. C. LESTER.

THE EASTER OFFERING.

Some churches are already planning for the Easter offering for missions. One is asking all members to contribute the equivalent of a day's wage. Others will use Cent-A-Meal Boxes, World Banks, and other devices for collecting money. Still others will constructively present the matter and ask for an offering worthy of the givers and the cause. Some will enroll tithers who will contribute to this and other causes in a larger way than before.

Whatever the method may be, the needs of the work demand a liberal offering for the missionary work of our church. Use any method that suits your church, but please do your very best to see that all members contribute as much as possible for the cause of the Kingdom of God around the world at the time when we remember the death and resurrection of our Master. The needs are greatly multiplied this year. Let's at least double what we have been doing in previous years.

Promotional Secretary.

THE WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

The World Day of Prayer always comes on the first Friday in Lent, which means that our women's groups will observe it on February 28 this year. Incidentally, the wrong date is given in the Yearbook, so officers of local groups might do well to change it there.

This year the program, "Thy Kingdom Come" has a special significance for it was written by the members of the World Day of Prayer Committee in Shanghai, China—a committee

THINGS WHICH CANNOT BE SHAKEN.

“Those things which cannot be shaken.”—Heb. 12: 27.

Civilization is falling in ruins about us. The dust from falling ruins clouds the skies. Pain, and blood, and death cover much of the earth. Buildings which do not completely fall when bombed from above by the enemy, are dynamited from beneath by the possessor. There are breaking hearts, breaking spirits, and enslaved souls. It sounds bad, and it is worse than it sounds. No words can fully portray the misery of the earth today. Much is being shaken to the very center. Some are being shattered never to be rebuilt whole again.

But God is not shaken. The sun still shines in the sky, and God is more eternal than the sun. The stars come out at night as though nothing had happened, and God is more everlasting than the stars. Man-made things may be shaken; God and God-made things are eternal, and are not shaken. We may refuse to take hold of God, to touch the hem of His garment; we may turn our backs on Him, refusing to have anything to do with Him; but that is the impoverishing of our souls, our denying ourselves of our spiritual birthright. That is the kind of thing that topped Calvary with a cross, and wrung earth's bitterest cry from the Son of God. In the hills of Virginia they call it, “cutting off one's nose to spite one's face.” And whether it be an individual, a family, a nation, or a civilization it is the same story.

We may see God in Jesus. For a long time devout souls will hear the words of Jesus when He said, “When ye pray say, ‘Our Father.’” When ye have reached the most sublime and sacred act of man—prayer—be in the son - to - father relationship with God. Man has always been a praying being. His heart has even been restless, questing, until it comes to God. Thus Jesus taught men to pray, for he knew that in prayer we come close into the communion and fellowship of God. In Jesus, and with his going unto the Father, in the Holy Spirit now, we have blessed leadership into this fellowship with God. For those who cultivate worship and prayer these things abide. Jesus did one of his greatest services to mankind when he emphasized both by example and by his teachings the great purpose and glory of prayer.

These things abide: God, the Father; Jesus, his Son, our Savior; the Holy Spirit, at work in the hearts of men; and prayer, the medium by which man may come daily and hourly in the presence and awareness of God. Man is reaching his true dignity when he comes unto God. If I could wish for you one blessing above all others during this year I would wish that you might know the strength and fellowship of God's eternal presence. That is expressed in so many ways: Jesus, on one occasion put it, “Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.” Again he expressed his own realization of the fellowship of God by saying, “The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works.” Again he declared himself to be one with the Father. Jesus led man on the quest after this complete and full fellowship with God. Paul called it “reconciliation with God.” Augustine expressed it: “Our hearts are made for Thee, and they are restless until they rest in Thee.”

This divine quest upward abides. It is battle-scarred, it is age-old, but it cannot be stopped. It abides. Men have sought in untold ways to achieve the upward climb. Jesus came to point the way, or shall I say, to himself be the Way! He came that we might make that climb surely and certainly. As I say, men have sought many methods to make the climb—the quest for knowledge, lands, adventure, invention, ever reaching outward, upward, onward. He may stumble, fall back, but up again he comes. While the babe is still an infant in its mother's arms it reaches for the light. That quest is the eternal working tool within the heart of man. It is his reach for God. He does not call it so always, for all too often he does not so recognize it. This divine urge within him is his kinship with God.

Back of the canvas that throbs
 The painter is hinted and hidden;
 Into the statue that breathes
 The soul of the sculptor is bidden;
 Under the joy that is felt
 Lie the infinite issues of feeling;
 Crowning the glory revealed
 Is the glory that crowns revealing.

With one pull of a lever that light of a whole, vast city may be blacked out, but never has a lever been fashioned that could lift the light of God from the hopes of men. An individual may bring a blackout in his own soul, but others will take up the torch and press on. He may fall by the wayside, and will, if he blacks out God out of his life, but his fellows will move on, and the day will come when he will see how he missed life by not following after the things of the spirit. He will not have much of which to be proud then:

I remember, I remember,
 The house where I was born,
 The little window where the sun
 Came peeping in at morn;
 He never came a wink too soon,
 Nor brought too long a day;
 But now, I often wish the night
 Had borne my breath away.

I remember, I remember,
 The fir trees dark and high;
 I used to think their slender tops
 Were close against the sky:
 It was a childish ignorance,
 But now 'tis little joy
 To know I'm farther off from heaven
 Than when I was a boy.

Those lines express the result of having gone the wrong road, of having missed the proper evaluation of life. Far better to be able to say:

I will hew great windows for my soul,
 Channels of splendor, portals of release;
 Out of earth's prison walls will I hew them,
 That my thundering soul may push through them;
 Through stratas of human strife and passion
 I will tunnel a way, I will carve and fashion
 With the might of my soul's intensity
 Windows fronting immensity,
 Towering out of Time.
 I will breathe the air of another clime
 That my spirit's pain may cease.
 That the being of me have room to grow,
 That my eyes may meet God's eyes and know,
 I will hew great windows, wonderful windows,
 Measurless windows, for my soul.

Having caught a glimpse then of the everlasting God, having felt an abiding fellowship with Him, having felt the leadership and lordship of Jesus his Son, let us join our hearts with His in the great anxiety of helping to bring a battered world out of its sorrows into the light of a better day.

"Youth at Work in the Church"

NEW YOUTH MOVEMENT IN NORFOLK.

A new youth movement has been started in Norfolk. Representatives from several of the churches of Norfolk, Portsmouth, and vicinity, met for the first time on December 2, for a discussion of the idea of bringing together the young people of all the Congregational Christian Churches of this area for bi-monthly meetings. These meetings are to include those from Pilgrim Fellowships, Christian Endeavor societies, Sunday school classes and other young people's organizations. Again on January 6, 1941, a similar committee meeting was held. Committees for the first big meeting were chosen, and February 10 was set as the date for this meeting, which is to be held at the Christian Temple, in Norfolk.

There are several purposes for such a meeting. The young people in certain vicinities don't know what is going on except in their own churches. This meeting will bring them together to find what other churches are doing. Again the young people will have the opportunity to become better acquainted. Then, too, projects may be worked out by the larger group which would not be possible in a small Why don't you try to get the young people of the Congregational Christian Churches in your vicinity to gather in similar meetings.

Please send news of your young people's society, or any other news, to me, at 306 W. 35th St., Norfolk, Va

HARRISONBURG, VIRGINIA.

The Virginia Valley Pilgrim Fellowship met in annual session at Linville Church on December 29. This was the first time that the young people met in their regular session apart from the church conference. The day's program began at 10 o'clock when the Fellowship met with the Linville Sunday School. Rev. P. B. Sanger taught the Sunday School lesson. Dr. M. L. Weekley taught the adults.

Rev. W. J. Andes preached the sermon, using as his topic, "The Vision Splendid." The Fellowship groups of Linville, Antioch and New Hope were hosts to the whole Conference at a lunch served in the basement.

The afternoon sessions were devoted mainly to business. Raymond Andes, delegate to the National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship at Mills College at Oakland, Calif., brought a report from that meeting. Mr. Roy Larriek, president of the church conference, spoke on the topic, "What the Conference Expects from Its Youth." He urged loyalty to the church and support of the pastor. A quartette, under the direction of Paul Sanger, sang several selections, including "The Pilgrim Spirit."

The nominating committee submitted the following names as officers for the coming year, and its report was adopted: President, Walstein Snyder, Elkton, Va.; Vice-President, Raymond Andes, Harrisonburg, Va.; Secretary-Treasurer, Herman Hunley, Harrisonburg, Va., R. 2; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Hilda Nelson, Winehester, Va.; Reporter, Ethel Rhodes, Linville, Va.; Superintendent of Devotional Life, Randolph Sours, Luray, Va.; Superintendent of Leadership Training, Amy Louderback, Shenandoah, Va.; Pastor Counsellors, Rev. R. A. Whitten, Winchester, Va. and Rev. P. B. Sanger, Linville, Va.; Lay Counsellors, R. Roy Hosaflook, Linville, Va. and Roy Larriek, Winchester, Va.

The meeting closed the presidency of Eugenia Snow who has done a noble work with the young people in the Valley during the several years of her leadership.

The final number on the program was somewhat of a surprise. Just after the installation of the new officers, Rev. W. J. Andes and Miss Carey Atkins were married to the surprise of the audience.

WHAT THE BIBLE SAYS ABOUT TOLERANCE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 9, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 9: 49, 50;
Gal. 3: 26-29.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Intolerance Rewarded—Esther 7: 7-10.

Tuesday—Christ and Syrophenician—Mark 7: 24-30.

Wednesday—A Roman Friend of the Jews—Luke 7: 1-5.

Thursday—Christ and Samaritan Woman—John 4: 7-10.

Friday—One Body, One Spirit—I Cor. 12: 12-14.

Saturday—Christ, "All and in All"—Col. 3: 10, 11.

This is a timely topic. Prejudice, the opposite of tolerance, is existing in the life of many people. It is a destructive force wherever it may exist. Prejudices are in the business life, economic, racial, political, educational, religious; and it requires the strongest form of tolerance to dissolve them. May each of us find a way to deepen the spirit of tolerance in our life.

Assign Biblical passages to be read and commented upon. Show why tolerance exists in such passages as Isa. 2: 2-4; Jer. 3: 17; Ps. 22: 27; 66: 1; 67; John 4: 3-10; Luke 10: 30-37; Matt. 28: 19, 20.

Why was the life of Jane Addams a tolerant one? Report on her work. Draw comparisons from modern life.

For Discussion—

1. What does prejudice do for a person? for Christianity?

2. What is your description of a truly Christian nation? Would hatred or jealousy between classes or races, or even individuals, be possible? Outline on a blackboard your description.

3. What instances of prejudice exist in the world at large? What prejudices exist in your community?

4. How are Christians commonly tempted to be intolerant.

5. How can we overcome the spirit of intolerance.

songs, toasts, instrumental music and readings. About one hundred people were present. The net proceeds were turned over to the building fund of the church to help pay for pews for the church which were purchased and installed during the week of December 15, 1940.

On December 23, the Sunday school presented a pageant entitled, "The Light of Men." There were about seventy characters in the play and it was presented to a full house. The Superannuation offering was taken.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY REGARDING BEVERAGE CONTROL.

LESSON V—FEBRUARY 2, 1941.

LESSON: IIab. 2:15; Gen. 4:9-12;
Mark 9:42-48; I Thess. 5:22.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Ezek. 3:16-21.

GOLDEN TEXT: Abstain from every form of evil.—I Thess. 5:22.

The Law of the Land and the Law of Love.

"Do not I have a right to do as I please?" say many modern people, with their mistaken idea of liberty and exalted opinion of the supreme rights of the individual. Well, of course, within limits a man does have a right to do as he please. There are many areas in life in which people are free to do as they please, but even according to the law of the land there is a limit to human rights, there are limitations to personal privileges, there are restraints to personal action. A man can do as he pleases provided his actions do not infringe upon the rights of others. Generally speaking, he can do as he pleases so long as he pleases to do right. And, of course, within limits a man can do as he pleases, even if he does not choose to do that which according to the law of God is right. For instance, a man has a right to take a drink, and in many states he has a right to gamble according to the law of the land. There are other areas in which the law of the land does not attempt to set up a standard of morals or ethics for a man's personal actions, but the law of the land does say thus far shalt thou come, and not farther, when a man's actions become a menace, or even a nuisance to others.

But there is a law above the law of the land, at least for the Christian there is such a law—the law of love. The Christian should not be concerned primarily with the question, "Have I a right to do this?" but rather with the question, "Is this in keeping with the law of love?" Because the lesson today is about the individual's responsibility regarding beverage alcohol, the reference in these notes will be made according to the matter of drinking. Even in communities where local option may forbid the buying or selling of alcoholic liquors, it may conceivably not be against the law of the land for a man to take a drink. Of course, in general, throughout America, with the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment it became perfectly legal to buy, to sell and to transport alcoholic liquors. But what about the law of love? To be sure, there are a great many men and women "who can take a drink, or let it alone," but what would the law of love have to say to these people concerning their responsibility to their friends "who can not let it alone"? One of God's prophets a long time ago had something to say about this. Habakkuk pronounces this woe, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink."

To come to think about it, life is a pretty serious business. We are all so bound up in the bundle of life that, for good or for evil, our actions and our attitudes influence the lives of others, and indeed often affect their destiny. The man who gives his fellowman his first drink is not the only man who has a woe pronounced upon him. Perhaps all of us are more or less guilty in doing something that will lead some fellowman astray, or which will tend to fasten upon him a habit which may wreck his life, and blast his character. It is a very serious thing when any man offers another man, and especially a young person, his first drink. It is a serious thing when anybody offers a boy or a girl their first cigarette. It is a serious thing when any man or woman takes the initiative in leading anybody astray. One wonders if those who drink have any conception of their responsibility for those whom they may start on the road to drinking. It must be a rather disturbing experience for some man to learn about some other man or woman who has become a drunkard, and then wonder if perhaps he was the man who gave that drunkard his first drink. For Christians at least the final test should not be the law of the land, but the law of love.

Our Brother's Keeper.

When Jehovah asked Cain, "Where is Abel, thy brother?"; Cain rather cynically replied, "I know not; am I my brother's keeper?" Cain was simply speaking for that great mass of people in our modern world who disclaim any responsibility for their fellowman. Cain may not have been his brother's keeper, but he was his brother's brother. We are not wholly responsible for what others do, but we are more or less responsible for many of the things which they do.

Here again because this lesson is on beverage alcohol, the illustration will be from that field. The church people of America, many of whom would not think of taking a drink, and who under no circumstances would personally offer a drink to others, are, after all, doing just that thing, for it is by the sufferance of the church people of America that the liquor traffic is legal, and is given some measure of self respect. If the church people of America would arise in their political and spiritual might, they could strike dead the legalized liquor traffic. That was one of the tragedies in the return of the liquor business; as long as the liquor traffic at legal, in some measure at least, everyone of us is failing to be, in the finest sense, our brother's keeper. Whether we like it or not, although not with our consent, we are giving our neighbor drink.

Stumbling Blocks.

Jesus also had something to say about those who put stumbling blocks in the way of others. The figure which he uses is that of somebody who puts an obstacle in the way of a child, perhaps putting it in the dark so that the child stumbles over it and falls. Jesus said that it were better for a man who would do that to have a great millstone hanged about his neck and to be cast into the sea. It is a pretty serious business to start anybody, and especially children or young people, in the way of unrighteousness.

A boy thirteen years old, who had the appearance of being not more than nine years old, applied to a clinic in the city of Detroit, which clinic was for the benefit of those who wanted help in their efforts to give up smoking. He was stunted physically, mentally and morally, as many of those boys are. One of the nurses asked him, "How long have you been smoking cigarettes?" "Since I was two years old," he replied. "Who taught you to smoke?" "My brother." With considerable emphasis she observed, "Your brother ought to be in jail," to which the boy quietly said, "He is."

Drastic Measures.

In a series of vivid and sobering words, Jesus said that if one's hand or foot caused him to stumble, it would be better to cut off the feeble member and enter into life maimed, than to be cast into hell. Take the figure of speech figuratively or literally, as you will, Jesus is simply saying that no matter how dear a habit, or any possessions we may have, if they keep us from living our best, if

RECIPES FOR GOOD CHEER.

"He that is of a cheerful heart hath a continual feast."—Prov. 15: 15.

Says Sydney Smith, "I once gave a lady two-and-twenty recipes against melancholy: One was a bright fire; another, to remember all the pleasant things said to her; another, to keep a box of sugar plums on the chimney piece and a kettle simmering on the hob. I thought this mere trifling at the moment, but have in after life discovered how true it is that these little pleasures often banish melancholy better than higher and more exalted objects; and that no means ought to be thought too trifling which can oppose it either in ourselves or in others."

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for the wholesomeness of things in our lives and that no perversions may ever breach our souls. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE STARS THAT GUIDE.

"Lo, the star which they saw in the east, went before them."—Matt. 2: 9.

The star of Bethlehem may be used as a symbol of the star of ideals which lead us to higher and better things in life.

We have been told often that ideals move on ahead of us. We never overtake them. Carl Schurz has reminded us that ideals are the best of the world's treasures, and therefore they should be followed, though we never overtake them. He says: "Ideals are like stars; you will not succeed in touching them with your hands. But like the seafaring man on the desert of waters, you choose them as your guides, and following them you will reach your destiny."

Prayer—Our Father, we gather ourselves together in prayer seeking the light and leadership of Jesus Christ for our souls this day. As the star of Bethlehem led the wise men to Jesus, we seek the light of Jesus and the wisdom sufficient to follow Him all the way unto eternity. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

IDEALS REACHED.

"In heaven thy dwelling place."—1 Kings 8: 30.

Time speeds on his relentless track,
And—though we beg on bended knees—
No prophet's hand for us puts back
The shadows ten degrees.

Yet, dream we each returning spring,
When woods are decked in gold and green,
The dawning year to us will bring
The best that yet has been.

Which is an earnest of the truth
That when the years have passed away,
We shall receive eternal youth
And never ending day.

An angel to each land and clime
Shall locust eaten years restore,
And swear by Him who conquered Time,
That time shall be no more.

LIFE A CHALLENGE.

"Seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God."—Col. 3: 1.

Life is full of challenges to be something; not aping, nor posing, not unctious, but just to be one's self. There is one outstanding challenge that confronts us every Sunday. It is the challenge to ardent prayer. Witness the scene of prayer at the church. The preacher is doing it all. There is scarcely a head anywhere bowed. They seem to have no part in it.

When people are distressed, they get anxious, and anxiously pour out their souls to God (or something) praying with ardor for the thing which their soul desires; spirit, posture, manner, expression, all bespeak their supplication.

We need a revival of the reality of our need of God in our souls, or woe be to us. Till then we suppose we will let the preacher do it.

Prayer—Our Father, if we be risen with Christ, help us to realize it. If we need to set our affections on things above, help us to realize it. If Christ is our life, help us to realize that, and go with us now to prayer for all our needs. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ONE REGRET.

"Study to show thyself approved."—II Tim. 2: 15.

Looking back over the greater part of life one regrets that he cannot, with the experience and insight which he has gathered, start life over again. Perhaps he would not change it greatly in faith, purpose and spirit; but he would do some things more and other things less. He would not have less of the church, but perhaps he would have less of the contingencies of the church which dissipate the church's influence in the hearts of the people. Perhaps he would not preach against sin less, but he might hold before the world the horrors of sin more. At all times study—study—study to show thyself approved of God.

Prayer—Pray as you feel.

SATURDAY.

CHALLENGES OF THE CHURCH.

"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ."—Gal. 6: 2.

The challenge of the church today is to the life that is above the power of the spirit of the day. One may be intelligent, educated and cultured, but one must possess goodness to attract to heaven. The world is distant domestically. Divided homes and divorce challenge the church to family unity. This would be the greatest service that could be rendered the world. The challenge of the church is to give the world non-partisan politics. If the church cannot get together with these purposes, it deserves to perish.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for our souls, save us. We pray for our church. Fire our souls with Thy Spirit, that we may fill our place in it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

OUR INVISIBLE LEADER.

(The Sabbath.)

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."—Exodus 20: 8.

Oh, may it be that far within
My inmost soul there lies
A spirit-sky that opens with Those voices of surprise.
Thy heaven is mine—my very soul
Thy words are sweet and strong;
They fill my inward silences
With music and with song.

They send me challenges to right,
And loud rebuke my ill;
They ring my bells of victory;
They breathe my "peace be still!"
They ever seem to say "My child,
Why seek me so all day?
Now journey inward to thyself,
And listen by the way." Amen.

HOW THE LOCAL CHURCH MAY ASSIST OUR COLLEGE.

There are so many things that the members of the local church might do that would be of great value to Elon College.

Usually there are news items in the church paper regarding the college that would be of interest to Sunday schools, Sunday school classes, and church congregations. These might be given to presiding officials who would in turn inform the ones present.

In practically every church congregation there are fine young men and young women who have reached the junior or senior years in high school. They are prospective college students. It may be that some of them have financial difficulties. Elon College makes a specialty in advising with young people ambitious for college advantages but lacking in funds with which to pay the cost. The majority of our own church people are abundantly able to take care of their own college expenses. If the names and addresses of these fine young people who are in high school could be sent to the college, we would have the opportunity of contacting them or of sending to them through the mails information regarding the college that would enable them to choose their college with full information in hand.

There are certain individuals in every congregation who, if they would make it their business, could see that the Sunday school and church have some intelligent, up-to-date information regarding the college and its needs and see that offerings are received for the college during this college period.

Here are a few definite things that every local church might do. Won't you see that your church undertakes to do something for Elon College during January and February.

ONE OF ELON'S FRIENDS SPEAKS AGAIN.

Mr. Patrick N. Boyd of Virgilina, Va., is not only concerned for the support of his church and her institutions, Elon in particular, but he is certainly doing something about it. His contributions and expressions of interest and devotion mean much. Certainly there are many others who share the same interest and devotion and who would like to contribute. This is an earnest appeal to others to join with Mr. Boyd in an effort to clear the college of its debts. Mr. Boyd's contributions are made in a quiet and private way. Some are simply mailed to the office without any name, and only by chance did we discover who was sending the contributions. It is his desire to be of service. May the blessings of God continue upon him.

Mr. Boyd's recent letter follows:

My Dear Dr. Smith:

I am sending Elon College a money order for $60.00 to help pay Elon College out of debt. I love my church and Elon College very much and I think every church member should make some real sacrifice and pay the college debt.

You know I have made several small donations before this $60.00 donation to Elon College.

I personally believe that ignorance, sin and neglect are the cause of much of our world trouble and crisis today. I think if people would try to live better for each other instead of worse, our world would be much better off.

Dr. Smith, please give me credit for this $60.00 on Elon College's debt book, and let me hear from you sometime.

Yours very sincerely,
PATRICK N. BOYD.

IN APPRECIATION.

The college takes this opportunity to acknowledge its indebtedness to the Burlington Times-News and the Elon College PhiPsiChi for the beautiful cuts used in the special college edition of THE CHRISTIAN SUN appearing last week, also to the editor of the paper for his beautiful editorials, friends of the college for their effective articles, and the managing editor for the excellent arrangement of pictures, materials, etc.

composed of Americans, Chinese and Japanese.

Suggestions made by National Committee of Church Women include:

1. Where possible have union meeting of women of all churches.

2. Genuine belief in prayer is essential; choose leaders with care; study program with deep spiritual feeling.

3. Have a young people's meeting on the evening of the 28th.

4. Shut-ins are valuable partners in a service of prayer. By mail and visits enlist their active interest, furnishing them with a program.

5. Station WABC will carry a national broadcast on the 28th; local radio talks are furnished in Handbook.

Material for use in observance of the World Day of Prayer consists of:

Call to Prayer—Free in limited quantities.

Program—"Thy Kingdom Come"—2c each.

Handbook for Leaders—10c.

Poster—Size 17 x 22, 5c.

It is well to have a copy of the program for each member, as it contains responsive readings and the like. Materials may be ordered from the Missions Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, or through the Mission or Promotional Offices, Elon College, N. C.

OUR MOUNTAIN MISSIONS.

In Carroll County, Va., we are doing some real missionary work. In a long neglected area our three churches are now bringing light and help. Several copies of this paper are read by our people there, and from those communities have come fine students to Elon College. The Reverend G. H. Veazey is our minister to these people. He lives at Belew Creek, N. C., and drives the sixty miles to the mountains every two weeks.

Our parsonage at Elk Spur has not been used by the minister for several years, and is now in bad condition inside. A new roof was put on last fall, but the whole interior needs renovating. Perhaps your missionary society, Sunday school class, young people's society, or the men of your church will want to help put this building in good shape. We need to have a minister live in it, but this cannot happen until repairs are made. Why not send an extra gift to the Mission Office just for this purpose?

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Today, I was looking at the Sunday school Leaflet for the Beginners to see what some of you are studying about in Sunday school. Anyone could read the stories this time because they are told in pictures.

Picture No. One.

The first picture shows a little girl and boy with aprons on. The little girl is drying dishes and the little boy is holding them after she dries them. If I were the teacher, I'd make up a story about this picture, or better still get the children to tell me the story. If I were to make a story this would be it: Nancy is seven years old. Joe is only five. Their birthdays come very close together so mother gave a party for them. She (mother) had to have it on Saturday because Nancy is in school during the rest of the week. So mother said that since Saturday was such a busy day Nancy and Joe would have to help with the party. The three of them planned the party in the evening after Nancy came home from school. Joe wanted pink and white ice cream for refreshments with the pink and white birthday cake which Nancy wanted her mother to make. They planned some interesting games that they could play inside. Now the party is all over and they have had such a good time. No one quarreled. Everyone was kind and helpful to everyone else. Nancy and Joe are making a game of washing the dishes. Nancy is Mrs. Bumpstead, or "Blondy," and she is making her husband, "Dagwood," help her wash the dishes and put them away.

Picture No. Two.

This is a picture of a little boy going up the steps of a home with a loaf of bread under his arm. It is summertime for the leaves are still on the trees. The little boy has a summer suit on. Lets pretend that company came for lunch and mother did not have enough bread. Larry has been to the store to get the loaf of whole wheat bread which Aunt Lucy likes so well. He was glad to go to the store because the storekeeper is such a jolly old fellow. He is crippled and has to walk with a stick or hold on to the counter of the store. His head is covered with white hair but his smile is young and warm. Mr. Smith and Larry are big buddies. Mr. Smith tells him grand stories of how he used to be a sailor on a big boat until he got his leg hurt. Larry also likes to help his mother. His father has told him that all boys ought to try to help their mothers. Still there is another reason why Larry was glad to get the bread. It is for Aunt Lucy's lunch. She has come a very long way to see Larry. She has brought him a coloring set. She tells him interesting stories about the little Negro boys who live near her home away down in Alabama.

Picture No. Three.

This picture shows a little girl who is combing her hair. She is all ready except for putting on her dress and finishing her hair. This little girl is Joy. Her mother has the flu. The doctor does not want Joy to go into the room where her mother is in bed, because Joy might get the flu, too. So Joy is getting ready to go to school all by herself. It is the first time she has gotten ready for school without her mother's help. But Joy thinks that it is lots of fun, even if brother did have to button her dress in the back. She calls to tell mother that she is going to get ready by herself every morning now. She goes to kindergarten. There they do many interesting things. Today they are going to play that they live in Holland and pretend that they are wearing wooden shoes. Yesterday they visited the Eskimo children. That was lots of fun. Joy can hardly wait to get to school because she has thought of how to make the windmills of Holland. They can do it with their arms

Picture No. Four.

This picture shows a mother with a little baby on her lap. She must be bathing him. There is a table by her side with bath things on it. Sister is bringing a little gown to mother for baby. It is the nursery because there are baby pictures on the wall. There is a big black and red rubber ball on the floor. There is also a little wagon with a rag doll in it.

Now you make up a story about this picture. I would like for you to send it to me if you will.

* * *

Next week I shall tell you something about Oliver's book. Perhaps you have one just like it. It isn't "Jack in the Bean Stalk," but "Jack of the Can you fill in the blanks?

Perhaps I shall tell you about how Oliver was Christened today also. If you get tired of hearing me talk about my son just write and let me know. I shall either write something else or get you to write something for me.

Those of you who are still shut in the house with the flu might start making you some valentines. Don't you think that would be a good thing to do? Try it and you can send one to me if you want to so I might see how well you got along.

Goodnight!

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The flu has made a visit to the Christian orphanage family. Several of our girls and boys have had it, also one of our matrons. Several out of the number have been real sick. The weather has been wet, damp and foggy—real pneumonia weather. No one has developed it yet. There has been so much flu in the community the public school closed for a week until things cleared up so the attendance will be better.

Our children are doing very good work in school this school year. We have two girls who are in the graduating class. Both of them make fine grades. We give everyone who gets on the honor roll fifty cents. We had three to make it last month and they won the fifty cents. Martha Lee Whitten, Catherine Whitten and June Dalton were the lucky girls. Martha Lee Whitten deserves special mention as she has only one "B" on her report card so far this school year. We always enjoy working with children when they take an interest in themselves and want to make good. When we have children who graduate in high school and want to further their education we have always worked out some way to finance them and let them pay it back when they got a job and went to work. We have a number of boys holding good positions now that received their education that way. We have a good many girls who are now private secretaries, stenographers and nurses, or hold other positions, who came here when they were little tots and were reared here. We feel proud of them. It has been a real joy to us that the orphanage through your gifts was able to give them a chance when they had none. They have made good. To invest in a little dependent child is in most cases a splendid investment.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY.

February 9 will be observed this year as National Race Relations Sunday, the nineteenth annual observance of the occasion. In thousands of churches appropriate sermons and addresses will be delivered and special programs presented in Sunday schools, young people's meetings and other assemblies.

As in previous years, materials useful in preparing such addresses and programs are offered free of charge by the Commission on Inter-racial Cooperation, with headquarters in the Standard Building, Atlanta. Among these are two new bulletins which are recommended as likely to prove especially helpful. These are "Christianity and Racial Adjustment," which outlines the Christian principles to race relations, and "Understanding Our Neighbors," a 32-page booklet packed with salient facts regarding the Negro's African background, his contribution to American life, the problems incident to his presence here, and the common fallacies and fears that complicate the situation. A postal card request to the address given above will be sufficient to bring these materials.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

they are a menace to our best life, they must be ruthlessly sacrificed, they must be drastically dealt with.

The Safe Way.

"Abstain from every form of evil," or "all appearance of evil," as one version has it. The safest way is for those of us who are Christians carefully and even sacrificially to abstain from the things which have the appearance of evil. Only thus can we exert the most wholesome influence over men.

Should Your Name Be Here?

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO "THE CHRISTIAN SUN."

More new and renewal subscriptions to this paper are needed in order to meet expenses of publishing it. Two hundred and seventy subscribers whose subscriptions expired during 1940 are urged to get their names on the list of "paid up subscribers" during this month.

We are grateful to the following list of people who have paid for their subscriptions since the last list was printed. They include those who sent us $234.98 in December and those subscribing during the first week of January. You will be interested to know that one paid to January 1, 1946. He expects the "Sun" to continuing shining!

The Test of Democracy

The life and death struggle in the world today is in defense of liberality and tolerance. The war is between the Nazi doctrine of race hate, religious intolerance, the ruthless dominance of all diverse cultures by one set of arrogant overlords, and the American ideal that all groups have a right to their own lives and that the very fact of diversity adds to the richness and strength of society.

We in America are committed to our ideal—but we have never fully realized it. We have grossly discriminated against Negroes. We have practically wiped out the Indians who were the original owners of the continent, and to such Indians as survive we are only beginning to grant some freedom for their own ways of life. There is jealousy and prejudice against Jews. There is mistreatment of the Catholic Church and snobbery toward its members. Settlers from eastern Europe and Asia, no matter how orderly and loyal, are still often subject to suspicion.

The most spectacular failure in democratic practice in America is our treatment of Negroes. Our attitude toward this race, which makes up one-tenth of our entire population, more than one quarter of the historic region of the South, is a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy. So long as we degrade one segment of the people we set a pattern of caste and discrimination that may easily be transferred to other groups. No race or class can be firmly assured of fair play so long as we continue to treat any group unfairly. Consideration for the Negro rests not merely on the grounds of humanity and charity; it rests on the solid base of enlightened selfishness. It is a question not only of the rights of the Negroes themselves; it is a question of the total health and strength of the nation.

Although the Declaration of Independence of the American nation stated that "all men are created free and equal," it was only seventy-five years ago that we even pretended to put this declaration into practice by abolishing a system under which four million Negroes were held in slavery. The Emancipation Proclamation, however, gave freedom of person only. All the essential marks of free men have had to be won by hard and painful struggle: education, health, self-reliance, economic prosperity.

Slowly Negroes have been given more freedom and the wider opportunity. They have made the most of the new openings and built a life fuller and happier for themselves and richer and stronger for the nation.—Social Action.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dr. Tenry N. Weiman, professor in the University of Chicago Divinity School, was the speaker at the Institute of Religion held in the United Church, Raleigh, last Monday evening.

The new church building of the First Congregational Christian Church of Everette, Pa., was dedicated last Sunday. The previous building was destroyed completely by fire. Rev. Robert M. Kimball is the minister.

Five or six years ago, while Dr. John Stapleton was pastor, the Philadelphia Frankford Church decided to substitute for the annual bazaar a new and novel method for supplementing the finances of the organization. They decided to have a great church party around the first of December to which all the members were invited to come and bring, if they would, as a personal gift about what they had usually spent at the bazaar. The plan worked so well that it has continued ever since with increasing interest and support. The party held on December 8, 1940, was the best yet. A total of $1,936.45 was received as the free will gifts of the people over and above their regular weekly contributions. The Frankford people have discovered that this method eliminates the hard work of preparing articles at considerable expense which have to be bought back by themselves or others at the bazaar. But best of all was the fine spirit manifest at the Thanksgiving party. Rev. L. Reinald Lundeen is pastor and we feel sure he would be glad to give details to any group interested.

RELIGIOUS WORK IN STATE INSTITUTIONS.

In two effective gestures the Congregational Christian Church at its annual conference in Norfolk last November displayed a keen interest in the services rendered by the Interdenominational Board for Religious Work in State Institutions. Not only did this denomination approve an appropriation for the budget but it elected the Rev. Robert Lee House as its representative on the Board.

In this spirit the Congregational Christian Church contributed a vital part to a service that already has had a far reaching effect upon the lives of patients in hospitals and inmates of penal institutions. The Rev. Henry Lee Robison, Jr., director of the service, addressed the Norfolk conference and pointed to the manner in which the organization of various denominations touches the lives of those who must remain in the institutions. In many instances, courses are changed to the eternal glory of God.

The State makes no provision for religious services in its various institutions, but with the combined effort of several church groups religious guidance, financial aid to persons released, libraries and even chapels are supplied. The eight-point program decided upon by the Board is a pointed declaration of its objectives. It stresses the preaching of the Gospel as a fundamental phase of its program. This is accomplished by Mr. Robison and the volunteer services of ministers and laymen. Groups are formed and headed by responsible leaders in each locality where the institutions are located.

Libraries in these institutions is a service of the Board. These libraries are established and maintained solely through the gifts of books which have outlived their usefulness in homes and from gifts of state and city libraries. Ironical as it may seem many inmates of institutions display keen interest in travel books. Volumes may be brought, or mailed to the office of the director at 101 North Jefferson Street, Richmond, Va., at a small cost of 1½ cents a pound if marked "books." Every three months boxes of fifty books are rotated around the prison camps of the state. Men in these institutions are showing an interest in reading that has increased materially due to the effort of the Interdenominational Board to supply a form of instruction and entertainment that keeps many of the inmates gainfully occupied in the hours between five and nine each evening.

Men and women leaving the institutions frequently seek Mr. Robison's counsel. Often they do not have sufficient funds to reach relatives, and know but little about how to contact the world outside. To meet this condition the Board has established an emergency fund. Sometimes an outlay of less than a quarter or an expenditure of a few dollars will transform the conceptions of people who must take up life anew after leaving the institutions. Contributions for this fund are greatly needed, Mr. Robison says.

In addition the Board stands behind and supports actively many worthy movements that link definitely with the program it fosters in this connection. An accomplishment which came about as a result of whole-hearted support and cooperation on the part of a number of women leaders was the raising of $10,500.00 for the construction of a chapel at the State Industrial Farm for Women. This money is being held as the cash outlay when the building begins. Labor and material will be provided by the State.

The idea of a chapel for the Woman's Industrial Farm was promoted through the initial efforts of Miss Elizabeth Kates, superintendent at the farm; Deaconess Anna Tucker; and Mrs. Churchill Gibson. Later, a general committee of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish women was formed, and the $10,500.00 was obtained within a year. Mrs. James H. Price, wife of the Governor, was named honorary chairman, and Mrs. Fred M. Alexander, ex-president of the Virginia Federation of Woman's Clubs, was named active chairwoman.

The annual report for last year showed 2,230 religious services in nineteen institutions and thirty-one prison camps, 12,000 pieces of devotional literature distributed, thousands of miles traveled in interviewing ministers and laymen in advancing programs or organizing groups for service.

In addition the homes of hundreds of inmates were visited and comforting messages were left. Voluminous correspondence is necessary as well as personal interviews with men coming into the penal system. A new library was established at the State Farm, and other libraries were enlarged. Mr. Robison preached 218 times in the institutions. Yet, at the close of his report, he said, "We feel that we have hardly skimmed the surface of the possibilities for this vast missionary enterprise."

Georgia and Florida News

By REV. W. T. SCOTT, D. D., Associate Editor.

Rev. S. M. Penn, Richland, made a recent visit to New Britain, Conn., where he was the guest of the First Congregational Church and Rev. Theodore A. Greene, minister. This church has long expressed a kindly interest toward the work Mr. Penn has done in the South.

Barnesville Parish.—Reviewing 1940, the following accomplishments under the leadership of Rev. Carl Parker, who completes his first year's ministry, is of interest: new organizations—one woman's society, one young people's society, one Sunday school; physical equipment—one church installed electric lights, one purchased a heater, two churches bought new hymnals; fourteen new members added to the four churches of the parish.

Columbus, "United."—Continued progress is being made at this church under the leadership of Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Booth. The members of the church have shown their appreciation to their leaders by their personal loyalties and cooperation.

The name of the late Rev. H. W. Elder is recalled whenever the matter of church building is discussed among the former Christian Churches of Georgia and Alabama. Mr. Elder was responsible for nearly a score of churches during his ministry. Many of these he built with his own hands. In Georgia, Ambrose, Enigma, Richland, Vanceville and Oak Grove owe their existence and strength to the labors of this Christian leader. At the present time Rev. W. C. Carpenter is pastor of Ambrose and Enigma; Rev. C. D. Hung is pastor at Vanceville; Rev. Samuel M. Penn is pastor of the Richland Church, where Mr. Elder lived a number of years; and Rev. C. W. Hanson is pastor of the Oak Grove Church.

Lagrange, "United."—Rev. David W. Shepherd and his people have done much during the past year to improve the physical equipment of the church. Recently a recreational room has been provided for the young people, and classrooms have been artistically arranged.

New Port Richey will this year observe its 20th anniversary, having been organized on January 14, 1921.

Plans are being made for the observance of the anniversary. Rev. and Mrs. James E. Parker are the beloved leaders of this church.

The Superintendent had the pleasure of attending the annual meeting at Palm City on January 10. Encouraging reports for the activities of the year followed a fellowship dinner. Dr. C. S. Laidman, for many years associate secretary of the Chicago Congregational Union, is the faithful pastor of this church. Among other features of the church's activities is the maintenance of the Sunday school bus which travels fifteen or twenty miles each Sunday to make available transportation for boys and girls who otherwise would not be privileged to attend Sunday school.

Aron Park Church calendar carries each Sunday, "A Prayer for the Nations." The following was clipped from a recent calendar, "We pray for Africa, long time the dark continent, over whose vast and mighty reaches the light has begun to rise. May her people be protected from plunder of greed and of the sword, and may their minds be enlightened with the light of truth and their hands and feet unshackled into the liberty of the sons of God."

Rev. Robert Fairbank has been enthusiastically received by a number of the Florida and Georgia churches during the past month. Mr. and Mrs. Fairbank are the missionary projects of Florida and Georgia, serving in Vodala, India.

Ft. Myers reports that the church attendance during the last quarter of 1940 was twenty-eight percent higher than the same quarter last year, and the Sunday school has had an increase of twelve percent. Construction has begun on the addition being built to the church.

Dr. Douglas Horton will visit Florida February 22-March 2. He will conduct a preaching mission at Winter Park, February 23-28, will attend the State Officers' Meeting in Winter Park, February 25-26, and will be the speaker at a Congregational Fellowship Meeting in DeLand on Sunday night, February 23 and possibly Ft. Lauderdale on the night of March 2. On the morning of March 2 he will speak at the Miami Beach Community Church.

The new educational building at Winter Park has a geography and visual education room. Dr. Edwin Clarke, teacher at Rollins College and active in our church, will meet a different class of the Sunday school each Sunday for two months in the room for special study of world friendship and Bible geography.

Governor William E. Sweet will visit Florida.—The Moderator of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches, will visit Florida, March 9-April 4. He will be the guest speaker during Religious Emphasis Week at St. Petersburg, March 9-16, and will be available for visiting a limited number of churches within the state. Moderator Sweet, formerly Governor of Colorado, is one of the outstanding laymen of the United States. He has distinguished himself as a churchman and we heartily welcome him to Florida.

In point of service in Florida, Rev. J. Delman Kuykendall, D. D., of Coconut Grove, is the Dean of Florida ministers. That does not mean that he is an old man, it just happens that his term of service has been longer. In January he celebrated his twentieth anniversary as minister of the Coconut Grove Church. Not only has Dr. Kuykendall distinguished himself as a preacher but his sermons appearing in the Miami Herald have given him a wide ministry among those who are not privileged to hear his messages in person.

Jupiter-Lake Park.—Rev. Louis Schulz, ministers of Jupiter Church since September, is now serving the Lake Park Community Church as well as Jupiter. We congratulate Lake Park in securing such an able minister as Mr. Schulz, and we are happy that the Jupiter Church is able to share its minister with Lake Park. We anticipate a happy and a successful ministry for Mr. Schulz.

Phyllis Kinsman White was born in Framingham, Mass. She was one of four young people from Massachusetts to attend the first meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship, and last summer she attended the second meeting at Oakland, Calif. After her return East, she came to Mount Airy, in North Georgia, to teach. She was married, on December 26, to Malcolm White, in Framington, and they are now located at Mount Airy.

RACE RELATIONS DAY.

Sunday, February 9, should be used in our churches as an occasion to soberly answer the ancient question with great social implications: "Am I my brother's keeper?" We must seek new and more effective ways of implementing the Scriptural injunction, "Do good unto all men." What an opportunity America has now to do just that! May God pity us if we fumble this opportunity.

Dr. Fred L. Brownlee, General Secretary of the American Missionary Association, writes:

We are in the midst of a colossal defense program for the protection of democracy against outside invasion. What about also putting our house in order according to democratic principles?

Indians live apart on barren reservations. Orientals are treated with suspect. Spanish-speaking people from Mexico, the West Indies and Central and South America are regarded hardly as neighbors and friends. Thirteen million Negroes are denied the privileges of citizens and the conveniences of travel, entertainment, amusements, hospital service, library facilities and common religious worship. In all things which make for social and economic solidarity they are discriminated against.

Race Relations Day offers a fine chance to do something about the treatment of minority groups in the United States.

ABSENTEE MEMBERS.

Dr. Fred L. Fagley applies the rigour of a doctor in diagnosing the ills of our corporate religious life. His long executive experience enables him to prescribe with authority. We learn from him that real churchmanship is a part of our stewardship. Now he proposes to do something about a problem which has been generally recognized, freely lamented, and promptly neglected. The following merits the attention of our constituency:

The Massachusetts State Committee on Evangelism has proposed a plan which aims to save to the churches many absentees who, if not re-interested in the church, may later be dropped from church membership by revision of the rolls. With the cooperation of the Massachusetts Committee, the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life takes pleasure in making this plan available to the churches throughout the land. The loss through absenteeism is tragic.

The Year Book shows that, year by year, there is a continuing loss in church membership through the revision of the rolls which indicates that absenteeism has run its usual course. But cutting off the names is not a remedy. This Massachusetts plan, if worked with diligence, will mean the saving of many of these absentee members to the church fellowship.

Today every man needs the ministry of the church and the church needs every man of good will. The peculiar mission of the church is to strengthen people in all that makes for true manhood and womanhood, and to build them into a fellowship effective for righteousness and justice. In years of ease, some churches have become careless, and multitudes have become lax. We must do everything possible to reclaim these absentee members.

The loss through absenteeism affects all religious bodies. Some of the other Protestant denominations have suffered equal or even greater losses than have we. The Roman Catholic Churches also have great losses through this same cause. The newspapers carried a story a short time ago that the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Brooklyn had just removed the names of more than 600,000 people from the church register!

The Commission recommends that pastors everywhere give this plan especial attention and notify by the use of these cards the pastors of the communities where absentee members now reside. If you do not know the name of the pastor to whom the card should be sent, make out your cards and send them to your State office or to the office of the State Conference where the absentee now lives; or send them to the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City. The cards will be distributed from these offices.

GIVING THE NEGRO A CHANCE.

If a solution is to be found to the problems of the Negro in the South, that solution must come from the sympathetic understanding and friendly cooperation of the Negro's best friends, the fair-minded white people of the South. . . .

Americans have been horror-stricken at Hitler's treatment of the Jews and of defenseless national groups. We do not pretend to understand how he could be so brutal and heartless. Yet, as we shudder at his unspeakable violence, we should realize that we, as a nation, are not without guilt in our treatment of minority groups. There is no sound reason, for example, why four times as much money should be spent on the education of the white child as on the Negro child. (Let us not do less for the one but more for the other!) Nor is there reason to provide three times as many hospital beds for white tubercular patients as for colored patients, especially when there are three times as many colored tubercular patients as white. The economic status of the Negro, caused by his almost impossible chance of making a decent living, is no tribute to our fairness or generosity. Let the Christian Southland become better acquainted with the situation as it is, and give the Negro the opportunity for which we would loudly clamor were our positions reversed. . . .

The remarkable advance made by the Negro race in an almost incredibly short time and under trying conditions is ample evidence that all that they need is further opportunity to advance. Even from a selfish standpoint, we should help him. If the Negro is infected with disease, his white neighbor cannot stay well; if he has no purchasing power, the white man cannot do business with him; if his education is neglected, he becomes more easily the prey of unscrupulous persons who offer bribes for his support that they cannot pay. It is still true that America cannot exist half slave and half free. Let us recognize the wisdom of seeking the highest good for the Negro, and realize that the same time we are helping ourselves as well.—Editorial in Virginia Methodist Advocate, George S. Reamey, Editor.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION FOR SUCH A TIME AS THIS.

What can a Christian educator think, do, say, and teach in a world at war? This question must be faced by everyone of us regardless of where we are or what we do. Whether you take a position and advocate that position or completely ignore that question, you are in either case making a decision and taking a standing on the matter.

Now, it is not my purpose to say what position you should take in the matter. You may be what the Chicago Round Table called a "war monger," or you may be an ardent pacifist. You may believe that we should join Great Britain with all our armed forces or you may believe that we should become perfectly neutral by cutting off our present help to Britain, or you may take any position between these two extremes. Whatever your position or attitude there is a strong temptation to commit the church to your point of view. This is a matter about which we should be careful. Every person has a right to his opinion, and most thinking people have definite convictions on the problem and further, it is his privilege to advocate his point of view, but it is not his duty to use compulsion to bring others to his position.

There are, however, certain points of view about Christian Education and methods of procedure upon which we may find common agreement and upon which we may unite our efforts. These things, I believe, we should keep in mind always in whatever capacity we may work in our local churches or in the larger fellowship of our church.

Our subject, "Christian Education for Such a Time as This," may be viewed from two angles, one of desperation or one of hope and promise. In a time like this when the armies of brutality are sowing death among the helpless and innocent people of Europe, when all that decent civilization has struggled for and stands for and even civilization itself seems to be on the brink of destruction when we of the United States tremble for fear lest we be drawn into the horrible and sinful conflict, and when Christian Education stands on the threshold of such a challenging situation, it is time for us to clarify our position on the task of the church. The very fact that we live in such a day as this is all the more reason to hope that Christian Education will define its purpose, plan its program, and execute its divine mission in the world.

Let it be understood that when the term Christian Education is used it is not in a limited sense, but for our purpose I am thinking of the total process of our efforts in all organizations which have for their purpose the creation of the consciousness of the presence of God, loyalty to Jesus Christ as our Savior, and the development of Christ-like character.

Considerable attention has been given to the statement of objectives for Christian Education by religious educators, the result of which has been a number of projected statements from individuals as well as from organizations. Probably the most inclusive and clearly stated objectives of Christian Education have been prepared by the Federal Council of Churches which suggests seventeen things for which the church should stand, and the rather elaborate statement of the seven objectives as set up by the International Council of Religious Education. In this respect there is a weakness in our Conference organizations in that specific objectives have not been prepared and so the work is done rather haphazardly. It would be a forward step for our organizations to set out to achieve definite goals.

Our program for Christian Education has been very indefinite. We attend annual conferences, and there are six of them to attend every year, we give our reports, receive our funds, make our speeches, get keyed up and inspired, and return to our home churches with very little information for a constructive program, and we soon forget even that. Pilot Knob and Pine Ridge Churches hear very little from these conferences except for the amount of money they are asked to contribute. During the past year an effort has been made to suggest a very definite program for Christian Education to the churches of our Conference by the chairman of your committee. Ministers and superintendents have received a suggested program in line with the national Program of Progress both for the past and the present year. Each quarter they have received a calendar for Christian Education which follows the idea of a Christian Year calendar for the church.

In efforts to foster a program of Christian Education let us remember a few points upon which we should be able to agree, which will enable us to do a better job at our task in whatever capacity we may serve.

FIRST—Christian Education begins with the cardinal principle of the value and worth of an individual both to God and to His Kingdom. This is primary in the teaching of Jesus and of necessity must be the first consideration of Christian Education. Any true educational process will recognize the individual as the basic unit of human society. The history and achievement of your church is not so much a parade of your total number of members as it is the procession of godly personalities who have lived and labored for the success of the church. Jesus had a challenging and inspiring vision of the Kingdom but he never lost sight of the individual. Jesus gave his primary attention to individuals and we must follow his example. In a day like this when human life is counted of so little value to nations and when personality is forgotten in the mad rush to achieve questionable ends, we will find it increasingly difficult to remember and follow our Lord on this point.

Who is the child that the church should be mindful of him? Only Christianity has the answer. The paramount responsibility of Christian Education is the proper training of the child. Man was not made for the state but for God, and as such each individual has value beyond our conception. Christianity must then become a very practical force in the life of the child. Our greatest opportunity lies in the formative years of the child. It is the duty then of Christian Education to prepare both the child and the adult to meet the strain and stress of days like this.

SECOND—Christian Education offers the church its best approach for the development of a more Christ-like individual and bringing in the Kingdom of God . . . the Educational Method. The primary responsibility for the child's experience of religion rests with the family; but this responsibility is often neglected, leaving the entire religious training of the child to the church. The church is not as well prepared with trained leadership as it should be, but it is making an effort to meet this need. For this purpose we need more local leadership training schools in our Conference. The Elon School serves a vital need but we must not stop with send-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In the last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN (January 30) there was an article by Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, Secretary of the Southern Convention, which should have careful reading. In this article, Secretary Lightbourne presented the problem of continuing the office of Promotional Secretary very cleverly, and stressed the urgency of the situation.

It is difficult to discuss such a problem in print without seeming to be critical. There is always the possibility that people who hold different opinions will likely be offended by any frank discussion. The movement to create the office of Promotional Secretary was stimulated by the great work done by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary. Although his distinctive work was the development of interest in the cause of missions, he made a fine contribution to the general development of every enterprise represented within the Southern Convention. He wielded a great influence in behalf of Elon College, religious education, the orphanage, superannuation and missions. His major emphasis, of course, was for the cause of missions. Under his leadership and inspiration contributions for missions increased more than a hundred-fold within twenty-five years. Because of his success there were many who thought that someone should be elected to devote full time to the proportionate development of all the financial interests of the Convention, the Conferences and the local churches. This movement reached a definite conclusion in the action of the Southern Convention at Portsmouth, Va., in the 1938 session.

The movement was in the right direction. Its sponsors meant well. But, unfortunately, the Convention failed to adopt a financial policy which would assure adequate financial support of the office. The pastors and churches failed to support the financial program which was adopted. The churches did not pay their Convention Fund Apportionments in full. In addition to this the Convention did not definitely define the duties of the Promotional Secretary. The man who was elected to that office was told by the Convention to promote the general enterprises of the Convention, and that instruction was too general and too indefinite to be clearly understood by any member of the Convention. The Convention has not yet, in session, defined the duties of this office. The Promotional Secretary has done a great deal of work. But much of this work has been done on his own judgment, due to a lack of definite agreement and instructions from the Convention. He has made a real contribution to the churches.

Under the present plan of operation the department of missions is not included in the designated work of the Promotional Secretary. There is strong opposition to a reorganization of present plans as touching the work churches failed to support the financial program which was adopted. The Fund Apportionments in full. In ad- of the Mission Board. There are others who oppose any further independent work by the Mission Board on the ground that it should all be under the direction of the General Council. There are some people who think the Southern Convention undertakes to do work which should be done by the local conferences. This diversity of opinion and the lack of financial resources create a difficult problem.

It is generally agreed that there is a real need for the office of Promotional Secretary. When it comes to the matter of raising funds to pay expenses, the support is not in keeping with needs. If the Convention will present and adopt a definite program and policy for this office, based upon the actual promotion of Convention enterprises, with the approval of the various boards and institutions, and then adopt a sound financial plan which the churches will support, the major problems will be solved. In approaching this problem the office and not the official should be considered. This is not the time to quibble over who holds the office.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE DAY IN THE CHURCHES.

The Board of Christian Education, in session at Elon College, January 6 and 7, among other things claiming its attention gave consideration to the needs of the college as recognized and provided for by the Convention. The Convention recognizes and provides for its responsibility for the financial support of the college by annual askings from the local churches through the several conferences constituting the Convention. The total amount asked for is $12,500.00. There is nothing compulsory about these askings, but as a rule the conferences and churches cooperate, and the majority of them by far undertake to do something about it.

The Board took definite action designating Sunday, February 2, as Elon College Day in the churches hoping that on some Sunday previous to that date a campaign of information and instruction would be conducted that the constituency might have the latest information concerning their college and might learn again not only of its needs but of its desire and willingness to be of service to the church through the training of her young people and otherwise providing leadership for the various organizations of the church.

The Board also asked that THE CHRISTIAN SUN of January 23 be made a special college issue. The special issue appeared on that date and has met with universal acclaim. Many congratulatory expressions have been received. This special issue should pave the way for a successful College Day in the churches, if not on the first Sunday in February, certainly on some Sunday during the month. The article on "Things You Should Know About Your College" provides information that would be helpful. It would make a good question and answer period for Sunday schools or organized classes. It is the feeling of those responsible for the administration of the college that if the constituency knew the college, its assets, program, and achievements, that they would be very happy to lend their support.

If your church did not observe College Day on February 2, won't you plan now for such a day either the second, third, or fourth Sundays in February? Your membership should know more about the college and should be given an opportunity to contribute.

Two churches in the Convention have paid their entire apportionments already. Another has paid half. These churches, of course, are accustomed to raising their apportionments in full. There are a number of churches in each of our conferences that pay their apportionments in full. On the other hand, there are a number who for the past years have made no contribution whatsoever. The Board has appealed to all of our churches regardless of the methods employed to raise apportionments or to make some contribution to the college on their apportionments during the college period.

The college has needs other than

EVANGELISM

DR. JOHN G. TRUITT, Convention Chairman.

PRE-EASTER EVANGELISM.

Many of our churches will be evangelism conscious during this period leading up to Easter. The churches have been steadily building toward that goal. Their boys and girls have been studying in their Sunday school classes, and they are approaching the time of year when they will be given opportunity to make decisions for Christ and the Church. Sunday school teachers are great evangelists of the church. This is their period. Some teachers in junior departments make it a rule of their teaching not to let a year pass without winning every pupil in their class to a profession of faith in Jesus. The Sunday school teacher is very close to her, or his, pupils. They have a wonderful opportunity. If every Sunday school teacher of classes of boys and girls, and young people, in our Convention would now think of winning their pupils to Christ during the pre-Easter period, there would be a rich harvest. Let this writer appeal to our superintendents, teachers and pupils to make this a time of ingathering for the church.

THE PASTOR'S CLASS.

It is the time of year for the pastor's class. I have enjoyed the pastor's class as much as any part of my work, because of its fruitfulness. Sunday school teachers have made ready a fine group of boys and girls by their faithful work during the years, and each year previous to Easter they help me get those who have not yet professed faith in Jesus to join in a brief study course which we call the pastor's class.

In our case here in Suffolk for seven years now we have had this class to meet Friday afternoons after school. That perhaps would not be the best time in many towns and cities, and certainly would not be a good time in rural communities. I do not know that it is the best time here, but since it works, and since the time has become known to all the Sunday school pupils and parents, we keep that hour: "Friday at 3:30."

Any pastor will have a good time if he sits down and carefully plans what he would say to the boys and girls about their decision to publicly profess their faith in Jesus. Let the pastor ask himself how many sessions of the class will he hold. I hold five regular sessions, and in connection with this season of the year I have what we call "The Children's Church," a part of the 10:00 o'clock church service, wherein all boys and girls of the primary, junior and junior high departments attend the morning service with their officers and teachers and occupy a reserved section. To this group a brief story-sermon is given, we sing a hymn, and have a children's prayer. These children are all requested to remain right where they are for the entire service, which is prepared with a view to the fact that they are to be present, and close quite promptly at 12:00 o'clock. Thus the Friday study and the Sunday sermons and worship make a total of twelve sessions together, the Sunday before the Friday study begins, and the Sunday after, which is always Palm Sunday, on which Sunday they join the church. On Easter Sunday a children's program takes the 11:00 o'clock service. Therefore this season is definitely youth season in our church.

As I was saying, the pastor who studied out just what he will say to his boys and girls about joining church will find himself undertaking a very interesting task. There have been several pastor's class pamphlets prepared for this purpose (send a postal request for same to: Commission on Evangelism, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City) which will be helpful in forming the course of study.

My pastor's classes are composed of two people (perhaps not so-called) where a pastor with an understanding heart has a heart-to-heart conversation with a lad in his pastorate. They are friends, and their friendship leads to a noble decision. In other words it is not necessary always to be too formal about these things, but I find that anything well done must be well considered, and well planned. We, as pastors, are called to one of the most sacred tasks in all the world. Let us think carefully and prayerfully about it.

PUTTING NEW MEMBERS TO WORK.

The Suffolk Christian Church, Suffolk, Va., seeks to make everyone feel overall spirit of friendliness and neighborliness. This is not easy to do at home in the church by a general fine, but we believe it is easily felt.

It is more than "places" in the official family of the church, it is more than handshaking at the door, it is a fellowship felt as naturally as the sunshine, and is wholesome for the church as a unit. The membership of the church is friendly.

Members are received into the church through organized classes of the church school, through the younger departments of the school, through the choirs, and by personal contact. Hardly a month passes except August when no members are received, an average of more than one each Sunday for the past seven years. Perhaps nine times out of ten the new member is already working in some department of the church before he joins the church. Usually we say we have enlisted so-and-so to church membership we must now put them to work, but here most often the case is just the opposite; and we say since a member is already interested in some phase of our work we shall ask him to unite with the church.

Our church is strategically situated in our Conference of forty-four surrounding churches. Many people move into our little city from the surrounding countryside and smaller towns. Through our conference work members of our other churches are well acquainted with our local church, and they naturally follow their friends and kinsfolk right on into the activities of our church.

One of the big fellowship assets of our church is our large, complete diningroom and kitchen. It is "The Fellowship Hall" not only to the church and our city (because it is the largest dining room in the city) but it is often used by conference gatherings. Preparing and serving these meals the fellowship at the table welds into lasting friendship many a mere acquaintance.

We have consciously sought to keep folks active in the church. Jobs in our church wherein members may engage in some special task have grown as the church and needs have grown. Indeed nearly every family in the church has someone in the family actively engaged at some church task. There are 1,376, so obviously there is not a presidency for every person. But there is a friendly urge to have a share in something of whatever goes on.

There is a class of men with two hundred members, three classes of women—Philathea. Junior Philathea and young working girls. Each of these classes meet monthly in well-organized meetings, besides their Sunday sessions. They raise money for

THE WAR AND MISSIONS.

The war in Europe, Asia and Africa is greatly complicating our mission work, but making it much more essential.

The war in Spain eliminated our work there. Only a few Protestant ministers are left. The government has recently destroyed a large quantity of Bibles sent to Spain by the London Bible Society.

In Czechoslovakia there are some four thousand members of our churches, but our missionary activity has almost ceased. Present conditions there are not well known in America, but there seems to be little we can do for the present to help our friends there.

In Greece our two colleges have closed for the present. At least one of them is being used for a hospital. Some of the workers have left Greece, but some are remaining to carry on the best they can.

In Turkey the work continues as usual. For years our efforts have been largely educational because of governmental regulations. If war comes to Turkey (and who knows whether it will or not?), the work will be greatly retarded again.

In Africa the war has not reached our church area directly, but many indirect effects are being felt. In west, south, and east Africa our missionaries continue the work with accelerated opportunities.

In India there is no war, but again the effects are evident. German missions were next door to some of ours. The churches of Germany can no longer continue their support. This means that we should greatly increase our efforts to sustain not only our stations but also to strengthen the "orphaned" German missions.

In the Philippine Islands excellent progress is being made in Christian work. Our area is the large island of Mindanao. New roads are opening the interior, and multitudes are migrating there from the north. This is our fastest growing missionary field.

In Japan most of our missionaries are still at work. Some have come home, among whom is Miss Angie Crew. Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Q. McKnight expect to come home on furlough this year. Latest reports indicate that both the government and the churches want the missionaries to continue their work. If war should come between the United States and Japan—which God forbid—then the missionaries would become enemy aliens and would be liable to internment for the duration of the war.

In China the country is divided into three parts—that under Japanese control, which is the east side along railroads and rivers; that disputed territory where the war continues; and free China. The latter includes most of the territory and the people. The missionaries are also divided into three classes—those who are mothers and children and those who are sick; those who can be moved to other areas for service; and those who expect to stay where they are until their presence may cause their Chinese comrades danger. The first class is coming home. The other two groups are working desperately to serve the people of China.

In Mexico the war has not greatly disturbed our work, which is making commendable progress.

War brings new questions to people everywhere. It brings death and destruction. Forty million Chinese have been moved from their homes by the war there. War opens the mind and heart of humanity, and makes possible more and more effective Christian service. Today we have our greatest opportunity to make real the message of Christ around the world. This is at least one blessing the war has brought.

The major question is: What will we do with the opportunity?

HOW DID IT HAPPEN?

A survey chart distributed at the Mid-Winter Meetings of the boards of our denomination at Evanston, Ill., last week indicated that the Southern Convention gave to foreign missions last year $699.00 less than the year before. The total for the country increased. Kentucky and Tennessee were among those on the up-grade. Why did we go down? Must we continue in that direction? Perhaps we will need to give greater care to the way we divide our gifts for the support of the Kingdom. God gives us the ability to earn money, and he gives us the wisdom to invest it. How did it happen that we of the Southern Convention did not give but about sixteen cents each for the spread of the Gospel outside of America?

DR. EDDY TO VISIT US.

Dr. D. Brewer Eddy of Boston, one of the secretaries of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (our foreign mission board), will spend the first week of March in the Southern Convention. He will speak at Elon College on Sunday morning, at Greensboro in the evening. Monday evening he will be in Burlington. Other engagements to be planned will take him through North Carolina and Virginia.

Dr. Eddy is a dynamic personality, is well informed concerning our mission work around the world, and is a convincing speaker. Please plan to hear him. Watch for further announcements of his schedule.

NEEDED RECRUITS.

Two years ago our Foreign Mission Board decided to try to send at least fifteen recruits to the mission field each year. Last year fourteen were appointed. More than fifteen are being sought for this year. At least thirty-seven are badly needed. Many of the older missionaries are reaching the age of retirement. The increased pressure of work is making some break under the strain. Much more work is being done by a reduced staff. This is clearly illustrated in North China where fewer doctors performed many more operations.

Some of these new recruits can be sent on the regular budget of the American Board. But if anything like the needed number go it will be necessary for new money to be found for their support. Wouldn't it be fine if some of our young people of the South should go and some of the churches would support them? It does not seem to be enough simply to talk about the needs and to hope that someone somewhere will go while others pay the expenses. The question for readers of this paper to answer is: What can I do to help give the Gospel to a desperately needy world?

BUILDING NEW CHURCHES.

Much of the home mission work done in our area is in reality church extension. We need to grow. We start churches and aid them until they can support themselves. Sometimes that is quite a while, but several of them are coming of age and are walking alone.

We have several young churches. There is one at Little Creek, on the road from Ocean View to Virginia Beach. This is a little community that really needs a church. We have a nice building on the highway where the multitudes pass. Another is at Gibsonville, N. C., where the building was dedicated last Sunday and where all the members read this paper. This manufacturing community is in the shadow of our College and has had no Christian Church until eighteen months ago. Another is in Asheboro, N. C., where the Reverend A. Lanson Granger, Jr., is doing an excellent job with a fine group of people. They have paid for a nice lot and are well on the way to raising enough money to start a building. Another is at Hope Mills, N. C. Here we have a two-year-old church that is meeting all Conference requests and has asked for no financial help. They all read this paper. The baby church is at Pfafftown, N. C., where Dr. W. M. Jay recently organized a fine country church.

There are many other places in North Carolina and Virginia where we could organize churches, and bless the communities by so doing, if we had the money and the workers to undertake it. The work awaits the workers, and the workers await the money to pay expenses. Half of the people in our two states are not working in anybody's church. We should have many of them in our church.

MRS. L. I. COX.

Mrs. Mattie Craven Cox, the wife of the late Rev. L. I. Cox, passed away at 2:30 Wednesday morning, at her home in Elon College, North Carolina, after ten days of serious illness of influenza, pneumonia, and other complications.

She was born near Ramseur, Randolph County, North Carolina, on

MRS. L. I. COX.

December 5, 1870. Her husband was for a number of years a prominent North Carolina preacher, a man of unusual ability. He was not only a good preacher and a good pastor, but a constructive church builder. He organized the churches at Greensboro, Reidsville, Monticello, and others. At the time of his death he was treasurer of Elon College.

Mrs. Cox lived a quiet, unassuming life and was of inspiration and great help to her husband in his work. She bore largely the responsibilities of the home while he went out in the interest of the church and the kingdom. She certainly shares with him the honor of his achievements.

Mrs. Cox is survived by eleven children: Mrs. E. B. Huffine, Mrs. Alta Washburn, Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker and Walter E. Cox of Elon College; Newman C. and Woodrow W. Cox of Burlington; Mrs. J. O. Sutton of Lillington; Basil S. Cox of Greensboro; Lemmeous R. Cox of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. G. W. Black and William O. Cox of Charlotte; one brother, L. C. Craven of Indianapolis, Ind.; two sisters, Mrs. D. M. Frazier of Greensboro and Mrs. Oren Macon of Pleasant Garden; fifteen grandchildren, one great-grandchild and several nieces and nephews. Mrs. Huffine is bookkeeper and office manager for the college, and Mrs. Parker is secretary to the Mission Board of the Southern Convention.

Funeral services were conducted from the college chapel by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro. Dr. G. O. Lankford of Elon College was invited to assist but was unable to attend. The body was laid to rest beside her husband in Magnolia Cemetery at Elon College.

The church at large that remembers Rev. L. I. Cox and is acquainted with certain members of his family will have a feeling of sympathy for the ones who mourn. May the surviving members of the family be comforted in the thought of the consecrated and useful lives lived by their parents, and may they be given grace to follow in their footsteps as the day offers opportunity.

L. E. SMITH.

AN APPRECIATION.

In 1906 the Home Mission Committee of the Convention became a Board. It was incorporated September 28, 1912, with the following incorporators: Rev. J. O. Atkinson, Rev. J. W. Holt, Hon. K. B. Johnson, Rev. H. W. Elder and J. E. West. Hon. K. B. Johnson, who has served the board so faithfully, has resigned, and his successor will be elected at the next meeting of the board. Mr. Johnson is deeply interested in all of the departments of the Convention, is a man of fine judgment and dependable and, through membership on the board, has made a valuable contribution to the missionary interests of the church.

J. E. WEST,
President.

The American Board of Foreign Missions, foreign service arm of the Congregational Christian Churches of the United States, announces its immediate need of trained Christian workers to fill twenty-one posts overseas. A new Candidate Folder just issued lists calls for six doctors, one nurse, nine educators and five ordained men to work in both the Near and the Far East. At a later date we will give greater detail regarding these posts.

THE STUDENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION OF ELON COLLEGE.

As the largest class ever to enter Elon College walked through her stately halls, the Student Christian Association took it upon themselves to make these new members of the student body feel at home. All during "Freshman Week" the S. C. A. helped the freshmen get settled in their new home and sponsored social gatherings at which the freshmen met the other undergraduates, and began to feel that they really belonged to Elon.

Three hundred members of the student body signed the S. C. A. pledge and became members of the Association. The pledge reads:

"We, the members of the Student Christian Association of Elon College, unite in the desire to realize full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God.

"We determine to have a part in making this life possible for all people.

"In this task we seek to understand Jesus and to follow Him.

"Knowing this, I wish to enter the fellowship of the Student Christian Association and will endeavor to uphold its purpose in my life."

Each morning students gather in the chapel at a morning watch service, conducted by members of the association. Members have also conducted the Wednesday and Friday morning chapel services.

The Student Christian Association sponsored a most worthwhile visit by Paul Moretz to the college. Mr. Moretz had just returned from China, and gave us much to think about concerning our neighbors throughout the world. In our social service work, the Student Christian Association gave Thanksgiving baskets to the needy. As is customary, we again gave our White Christmas gifts.

Delegates have been sent to the Christian Movement Conference; and all have profited by the reports given by these delegates.

Panel discussions on the Christian student's life on the campus have been conducted. The entire student body enters into the spirit of these discussions of our religious life.

The plans for the future call for a drive to support missions in accord with the Student Christian Movement.

In this busy college life in a world torn by the horrors of war, the Student Christian Association helps the students of Elon College to keep ever present in their minds the life and teachings of Jesus Christ and to strive to become better, more sincere Christians.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE PRESENT CRISIS.

The other night in a supposedly humorous skit on the radio, a man was repeating the familiar line from Hamlet, "To be, or not to be." Suddenly, a gun was fired, and someone was heard to remark, "That's the answer." Strangely enough, in this connection, we remembered the words which were reported to have been said some months ago by an outstanding religious leader to the effect that about the simplest and easiest way for Christians to escape responsibility for the evils of the present catastrophe is suicide.

No one doubts that the world crisis has opened up for us plenty of questions about ideas, that somehow all of us have had a share in making the world what it is. Willingly or unwillingly, we have contributed to the forces of its destruction. Our self-will, our unforgiveness, our dislikes, our prejudices have become a part of the accumulated evils which now threaten us with complete disaster. And perhaps the simplest answer and the easiest way to escape further responsibility is suicide.

But it is heartening to notice the recent expressions of some young people who are unwilling merely to ehuek the whole business. Rather than being cynical in the midst of what faces them, they are displaying a stubborn realism. They have courage in their hearts, and they are not admitting defeat. They're eager to do more than walk out. But they are restless. They are not quite sure that they should merely be living comfortable, easy-going incidental lives just now, with all the horror and suffering that

In a day like this the nations of the world do not trust each other. A sarcastic expression seems to be penetrating the high and noble in civilization. Two strong opposing forces in Europe are causing misery, sorrow, woe, and even death, when a better understanding should be reached. Why should either seek to destroy the other? One reason is because the spirit of brotherhood has not been practiced through the years that have passed. Our own nation seems to be on the verge of destroying the practice of brotherhood toward certain nations.

What does the Bible say about brotherhood? Isaiah 2: 2-4 may be discussed; also 9: 2-7. Isaiah was the most outstanding person to foresee an era of peace and brotherhood. The idea of brotherhood is not developed to any great extent in the Old Testament. God is a god of hosts or of battles. Compare Psalm 35: 1-9 and Psalm 109: 1-13 with Psalm 15: 1-3.

In the New Testament Jesus urged his followers to abandon the spirit of retribution and hatred toward enemies. Discuss Matt. 5: 21-24, 38-44; John 13: 34; 15: 12, 13. Consider the daily readings, find other passages and report. Make a special study of the hymn, "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

For Discussion—

Is there a lack of brotherly spirit in the homes of your community, in your school, in business life? What is the cause? How may it be overcome? How may business competition be carried on and still keep within the bounds of Christian brotherliness? What are the causes of enmity between races, and how may these be removed? Does the spirit of brotherliness always prevail in the church? What is the cause? How may it be overcome?

THE CHRISTIAN ATTITUDE TOWARDS POSSESSIONS.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 9, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 58: 6-11.

GOLDEN TEXT: Ye cannot serve God and mammon.—Luke 16: 13.

Jesus had a great deal to say about material things. Somebody said that twenty-seven of His thirty-six parables, or stories, had to do with material things, either money or possessions. There must have been a reason for this emphasis upon money and material things. Jesus with his spiritual insight knew the subtle danger which material things had for the spirit of man. He knew that they were a constant temptation to divided allegiance, that a man was likely to care more for gold than he was for God, that he was likely to think more of mammon than of men, that he would think more of profit than he would of persons. He knew how material things had a tendency to lull men into a false sense of security, how they had a tendency to alienate one from his fellow men, how when a man started out to get wealth it often ended up by wealth getting the man. Therefore, again and again Jesus warned men against the danger of material things.

To be sure, Jesus did not condemn riches as a such. Material things have a rightful and a necessary place, not only in the business world but in the business of the Kingdom. The Kingdom of God will never come merely with money, but it is equally clear that it will never come without money. The emphasis in Jesus' teachings was that material things were a means to an end, that they should be held in trust, that they should be the servant and not the matter of men.

An Acid Test.

"He that is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much; and he that is unrighteous in a very little is unrighteous also in much." Here also is the acid test of character. Jesus says that the only way to know what a man would do with great responsibilities is to judge him by what he does with so-called small responsibilities. The way to know what he would do if he had a great deal of money is to learn what he does with a little bit. He plainly states that if a man is not faithful in a little, he is not likely to be faithful in much. As a matter of fact, in Jesus' thinking there was little distinction between the little and the great at this point. A man who is faithful in little things is faithful in much. In his parable about the talents Jesus said that the road to larger responsibilities and larger usefulness is faithfulness to the so-called little things. "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Let no man think that if he has been slovenly in the performance of his duty, or unfaithful to that which has been committed to his care, that by a miracle he is suddenly going to be faithful or dutiful in larger responsibilities.

Divided Allegiance.

"No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." This is just another way of putting the supreme law of religion, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength." Jesus said that it is impossible for a man to straddle a fence in things religious, that it is impossible both to serve God and mammon. He called for men to put first things first. He said that men should lay up for themselves not treasures upon earth, but treasures in heaven. Jesus did not say that men could not serve God with mammon. One of the most fruitful ways in which a man can serve his Master is to hold in stewardship that which his Master has given him, and to serve his Lord with his material wealth, using it for the highest interests of the Kingdom of God.

Scoffers.

"And the Pharisees, who were lovers of money, heard all these things; and they scoffed at him." It was because they were lovers of money that they scoffed at him. They laughed at his idealism, they were cynical about the practicability of his ideals. One of the commonest complaints which one hears against the church is, "They are always asking for money there." As a rule, the folks who make this complaint are the folks who give least to the church,

They scoff because they refuse to face the facts. It is simply a defense mechanism against the cold, hard facts of the poverty of their own spiritual lives, and their lack of interest in the things of the Kingdom.

The Sight of Men—The Sight of God.

"Ye are they that justify yourselves in the sight of men; but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is exalted among men is an abomination in the sight of God." What a difference there is in God's scale of values, and the scale of values which men so often use! Many things of which men are proud are held in low esteem by God. Many a man of humble station in His sight ranks far above many who are prominent in social, political, and business circles. Man looks on the outward appearance, but God looks at the heart. Our chief concern should be to have the favor of God. To be sure, one wants to be in the good graces of his fellow-men, but it is far more important to stand in the grace of God.

A Rich, Poor Man.

The story of Dives and Lazarus is one of the most vivid and moving stories which Jesus ever told. It is the story of a rich man, well clothed, well fed, well established in the community. Day by day there was laid at the entrance to his home a beggar, hungry, undernourished, diseased. Day by day the rich man walked in and out of his door, and gave no heed to his case of human need at his very doorstep. The man was rich in material things. But a man's life does not consist in the abundance of things which he possesses, and in spite of his wealth, he was poor, poor in the spirit of human kindness, compassion, of unselfishness, of social responsibility. The sequel to the story—the poor beggar being in the bosom of Abraham, while the rich man was in torment, in Hades—is a parable of the fate of those in whose hearts there is none of the spirit of humility and compassion, while Lazarus' position shows that there is a world in which ultimately justice shall be done, and that there is wealth of soul for those who may have been poor in substance.

MONDAY.

LIVING AND PRAYING.

I knelt to pray when day was done,
And prayed, "O Lord, bless every one;
Lift from each saddened heart the pain,
And let the sick be well again."
And then I woke another day
And carelessly went on my way.

The whole day long I did not try
To wipe a tear from any eye;
I did not try to share the load
Of any brother on my road;
I did not even go to see
The sick man just next door to me.

Yet once again when day was gone
I prayed, "O Lord, bless every one."
But as I prayed, into my ear
There came a voice that whispered clear;
"Pause, hypocrite, before you pray;
Whom have you tried to bless today?"

God's sweetest blessings always go
By hands that serve him here below."
And then I hid my face, and cried,
"Forgive me, God, for I have lied;
Let me but see another day
And I will live the way I pray."

—Whitney Montgomery.

TUESDAY.

"HOLDING BACK THE BAD BACILLI."

"Every idle word that men shall speak they shall give an account thereof."—Matt. 12: 36.

"Let love be without dissimulation."—Rom. 12: 9.

"A sure cure for gossip and slander is to breathe through your nose—keep your mouth shut. A certain amount of your dying body (for you die daily) momentarily floats off on your breath into the air. And God has filled the air with plant life to absorb such products, such effete and poisonous material. But gossip and slander on your outgoing breath have only people to absorb them. The flowers, happily for their fragrance, have no way of taking them in. Be good enough to the air, be good enough to people, to let all wickedness and malice remain inside of you. Germs of love, bacilli of brotherliness, will eat them up, and you will be strong, and beautiful and beloved."—Maltbie D. Babcock.

Let your hearts go out in prayer as you feel.

WEDNESDAY.

THE TEST OF CHARACTER.

"Be kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Eph. 4: 32.

"There are four great tests on character. First, the home test: how a man treats those with whom he lives. Second, the business test: how a man conducts himself towards his customers and employees. Third, the social test: how a man acts toward those who do not enjoy the same social advantages as himself. Fourth, the "success" test: how a man behaves himself when favoring circumstances bring him wealth, power, position and honor."—Kiwanis, San Diego.

Prayer—O Lord, we would be the good neighbor to every one. Give unto us "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE WHITE ROBE OF CHARITY.

"But the greatest of these is charity."—I Cor. 13: 13.

It has been said that "Charity comes of that fine state of mind and kindly feeling which shows a person to be possessed of an abundance of good will and unselfish interest toward others, finding expression in both words and action." This virtue evidences all other Christian graces and proves that Jesus would have us pass along the sunshine given by His softening and impelling grace.

True Christians have promptings of compassion, encouragement, kindness, liberality, sympathy, tolerance, unselfishness, goodwill and genuine desire to be all, to do all, that falls within the radius of the good and the true and the beautiful.

Prayer—Dear Lord, may the white robe of charity cover us that we may be kind, generous and helping to generous proportions. Amen.

FRIDAY.

MY CONFESSION.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—I John 1: 9.

The many unkind things I've said,
I do despise.

I haven't always truthful been
In mine own eyes.

I've failed to practice every day
The golden rule,
And Wrong has often conquered Right
In life's great duel.

It hasn't mattered much to me
How others fared,

And many blessings sent to me
I've not shared.

I've failed to give to every one
A friendly smile,
And let him know that I, for one,
Think him worth while.

Oh, take my sinful life and make
It over new,

And give me strength, dear Lord, to live
Each day for you.

Teach me to pray to Thee each hour
For needed grace,

And when the Tempter comes and meets
Me face to face,

O Savior, give me power to turn
From him away.

Each night, O Lord, as I review
The busy day,

I pray Thee give me sense to see
My failures great,

And teach me, Lord, the good to love,
The ill to hate.

—Ida Mae Malendy.

SATURDAY.

THE EYES OF YOUR HEART ENLIGHTENED.

Tennyson says, "I doubt not through the ages an increasing purpose runs." That sets us thinking. All ropes belonging to our navy have a colored thread running through those of the day school. On this point them. By this they can be identified. The Scriptures have the golden thread of God's loving purpose. We see it in the story of Moses and Israel, in the prophets who acclaimed the coming Messiah, in the wondrous revelation of Christ Himself. That God should concern Himself about us, that His love should overspread us like the skies, that He should order our lives, is good news indeed. His purpose is our redemption. Life shall be changed from glory to glory, and His purpose completed.

Prayer—Gracious Father, confused by the happenings of the days, we fail to see Thy controlling hand. Help us to discern in Thy Word, in the example of our Savior, Thy will divine. Amen.—Christian Herald.

SUNDAY.

THE TRUE GUIDE.

"Surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3:7.

Mr. Lloyd George, speaking on the subject of world peace in 1937, said: "The leadership of the nations is vacant." Only six words, but how very significant! If they were true then, how much more are they now! Yet, God has through His holy word, and other ways, sought to help man and give him the direction and leadership he seeks. That leadership is the Bible, our guide book—our law, our chart and our compasses. Only as a man takes heed thereto is he in a safe way. If he deviates from it the greater will be his perplexities and problems.

Prayer—Dear Lord, Thy Word is before us. We have no excuse. Give us the spirit and the courage to take it daily into our lives and make it our sure pathway. Amen.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION WORK SHOP.

ing fifty to seventy-five students to Elon from forty-three churches in our Conference. Our methods in the church school should not lag behind the Rev. H. J. Armstrong says: "We shall never change the world, nor build a Christian social order through any program of religious endeavor that ignores or even slight the educational method. We have been ordained of Christ not only to preach the good news of the new day, but also to teach and to nurture it."

The Educational method lends itself especially to the emphasis on the value of the individual and also to the creative method of education. In this way emphasis is not material centered but pupil centered which recognizes that the personal Christian growth of the individual is the principle objective.

THIRD—We should recognize that because of its adaptability Christian Education holds a strategic position in a day like this. Christianity, if it is to be effective, must touch and influence life at all points. The gospel message remains the same in all ages but meets life at all points and its adaptability is endless. Jesus always adapted his message to the individual and so must we if it is to be effective. It is fortunate for the church that the gospel can be adapted to meet changing needs and conditions. There is no provincialism in the gospel of Christ, it is a universal gospel. Man's condition of living may change but the need of the heart remains the same.

FOURTH—The method of Christian Education is comparatively simple. It is not always easy but in most cases it is possible. No matter how worthy the objectives or how fine the program, it will not work of itself, it must be worked by those who are willing to give themselves in service, content to work faithfully and wait patiently for results.

The adaptability of Christian Education to any age, condition, or individual and the comparatively simple method of its execution makes it possible for an effective program of Christian Education to be put into effect in any place, large or small, with or without the aid of specialists in the field. So you need not think that because you are in a small church with only one preaching service per month, that you are excluded from the opportunity of engaging in an effective program of Christian Education. Education of this kind is possible at any time. Wherever there is an honest desire for Christian training, only the refusal to consecrate oneself to the task will prevent its being done. To paraphrase Chesterton's famous quib about Christianity, we may safely say that Christian Education has not been tried and found wanting; it may have been found difficult, and not tried.

FIFTH—Our modern civilization has placed at the disposal of Christian Education a wealth of resources. Never before has there been such an array of devices, techniques, and instrumentalities at the command of Christian men and women for putting into effect the program of Christian Education. Modern educational methods have placed at our disposal efficient and adequate avenues of expression. To take a hint from Hebrews, "And what more shall I say," for time would fail me to tell of the various scientific devices of the summer conferences, the vacation church school, Pilgrim Fellowship conferences, Missionary conferences and Leadership Training Schools of our day.

SIXTH—The very fact of the dangers of our age offers Christian Education all the better opportunity to do a good job at a time when it is most needed. There are so many things that divide us and only one thing that unites . . . the Gospel of Christ. Here is the golden opportunity for Christian Education. We have the materials, we know the objectives, we can learn the method, we can plan our program. What we need to do is to put into effect in our churches a program of which we will not be ashamed and which will inspire and challenge our people to renewed efforts to do an honest job of Christian Education.

EVANGELISM.

the church plant (which has been paid in full this fall), and money for missions, and their own projects and plans. Then there is the woman's organization known as the Ladies' Benevolent and Social Union, organizing a very large number of the women of the church in various circles with monthly meetings. Besides this there are the missionary societies, with their circles, studies and goals. There is the church school with more than one hundred teachers and officers in various classes and departments. There are the two large choirs, which are enthusiastic and active. Until I began writing this little line I did not realize how many "officials" there are in our church—but I have just figured up three hundred and sixty-three of them, not to mention a few special committees.

Who works all these "officials?" They each voluntarily serve in some humble place, because they have been asked by their comrades to do so, and because they are themselves interested in the work. One person assists the pastor by mimeographing the Sunday bulletins, posting the finances and keeping the books and other secretarial duties, which takes her five mornings of the week. She is paid for this job. The choir director and organist, and one soloist are paid. The others "each for the joy of working," and all to the single purpose of making ours a faithful and friendly church filling the needs of a goodly number of people.

FOR THE CHILDREN

"Mes Amies":

If you do not know what the two French words in the salutation mean, look at John 15:14. I like to think of you as being my "my friends."

In our crossword puzzle for this week I have tried to use as many words pertaining to Valentine Day as I could. I hope that you will be able to solve it.

The two blanks in last week's letter should be filled with "Bean Fields." The book which Mr. Todd brought home for our son from the ministers' meeting at Elon last month. "Jack of the Bean Fields," by Nina Millen. It is our missionary book for children. You will enjoy reading it if you get a chance. Get the women's missionary society of your church to help you get a copy.

You will learn a lot on your trip with Jack Marco. You may think that you would like to change places with him for a bit as he travels across our United States with his family, picking vegetables from early spring until late fall. You will imagine that you are with him as he plays while a flat tire is being fixed. You will explore his new home with him. "Another shack" to Jack. You will be glad with him as he finds a book. Then you will feel as I did. You will wish that you could be there to help him to learn to read. At the end of the journey with Jack you will be lappy with him, that there is a Friendship Center. After reading the book I think that you will want to have your Sunday school class do something for boys like Jack. The women's missionary group will be glad to tell you where and what to send. They are studying about these migrant groups for their home missionary theme this year.

Yesterday I saw a red bird or cardinal perched on the edge of a sunflower, balancing himself with his outflung wings, picking out the seed with his sharp bill for his noon-day lunch. Birds migrate, just as Jack and his family, in search for food and warmer weather.

Last week I was talking with the president of our missionary society here in Sanford, N. C. She had been down at Fort Bragg and she told me that we had migrants to study right here at our back door, so to speak. She said that living conditions were very bad for many of the laborers.

Yesterday afternoon, or evening, about 7:30, a sample of the labor which is migrating toward Fort Bragg stopped at our front door. A man and his wife. He was a carpenter. They were from Norfolk, Va., and were going to Fort Bragg to work. They had only fifty cents left and wanted a bed for the night. They had walked all over town trying to find lodging. It was cold and they were weary and traveled-stained. They were just poor people and didn't look very nice as to wearing apparel. My husband was away from home and I was here alone with baby. Invited them into our living room to rest and warm themselves. The gentleman explained the situation and I discovered that I had met his wife. She used to play the piano at our church in Columbia, S. C. I met her there while I was doing Student Summer Service work in 1934! I invited them to spend the night in our spare bedroom. It made things difficult for my husband as he usually has Saturday night reserved for preparation for Sunday. Yet it was an interesting experience. The look in their eyes when they came to our door will not trouble my memory now. We got to know some of our next-door migrant group.

Some of you have written me that the news about Oliver made very interesting reading and to keep it up. Thank you! But I do not want to make this a family page! I promised, however, to tell you about Oliver's first morning service at the church and his christening.

I was very much afraid that he would cry like a little girl baby I saw Christened in Winston-Salem once. Surprise! He laughed and cooed from the time I started getting him dressed. He even smiled up at his father and Dr. Bowden while he was being Christened. Then he thought Dr. Bowden's scripture reading was a bit dry for him. He fussed just a bit. I gave him a drink of water from his water bottle. Believe it or not he went to sleep while Dr. Bowden was preaching—just like a grown man! I think that Dr. Bowden was about as glad as we, that Oliver did not cry.

It was a very sacred experience for me. I thought of the parents of Bible stories who took their children to the Temple for dedication! Parenthood carries grave responsibilities for the parent, yet it also carries untold happiness.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

LENT.

Do not forget that February 7 means the beginning of Lent. I shall like to think that you are keeping Lent also. When there is so much hate in the world we must re-learn Christ's way of loving people. Let us try "doing good" to someone each time that we feel that we have been hurt or wronged. By doing this we may copy the oyster in nature. Out of our sears and hurts there will come pearls of love in the lives of others. Let us try to understand why people act as they do, then we will want to love instead of hate.

Marriages

MURRAY-FISHER.

Mr. L. Elisha Murray and Miss Marcelle Fisher took marriage vows on December 28, 1940, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at the home of the writer at Elon College, N. C. The ring ceremony of the Christian Church was used.

Miss Murray is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marsh Fisher of Goldston, N. C., and Mr. Murray is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Murray of Bennett, N. C.

The newly weds left immediately for a visit to several cities in Virginia. They will make their home in Siler City, N. C.

Their many friends wish for them long and happy lives.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The sympathy of the Christian Orphanage goes out to one of our dear boys, J. T. Rabey, this week because of the death of his wife on January 28. J. T. Rabey was reared in the Christian Orphanage. He reached the age limit three years ago and accepted work in Burlington. About a year ago he married Miss Virginia Barnhardt.

They lived very happily together until the Master called her to come home to live with him. J. T. was one of our splendid boys and the whole orphanage family grieves with him in his great loss. "May the kind Master comfort and sustain him in this sad hour," is the prayer of the entire orphanage family.

The flu has visited all our buildings, but so far we have had no serious results. It has been in a mild form except in a few cases.

The weather has changed from foggy, damp weather to clear, cold weather, and I hope the flu will soon bid us good-bye. We have so many little tots here that it is hard to keep them all out of the weather. Then, too, a little fellow will get warm while playing, take his coat off and throw it down, and it is often the case when he quits playing he will forget his coat until he gets chilled enough to take cold.

Handling a group of little tots is a much bigger job than many would think. They don't think about taking care of themselves to keep from taking colds when the weather is bad. Someone has to think for them and see that they are properly clothed all the time. The larger boys and girls can look out for themselves, but it is necessary for an older person to think for the little fellows.

material. We need a large stock of good will on the part of our constituency. We would like to build a good reputation on the campus. We would like for the constituency to recognize this fact and speak to its friends about the work that we do. We also need a larger number of our own young people in our student body at our college. If you know of young people who are members of senior classes in high school who should attend college next year, won't you please forward us their names and addresses immediately that we may be able to contact them for our own college. We wish in advance to express appreciation for the cooperation and help of our friends.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

covers the earth. And many of them are asking some serious questions: "How can I really live a Christian life in our present crisis?" "What kind of work does it mean?" "Does it mean giving up all I possess, and, if so, how does a person begin to live that kind of life?"

Well, just what does it mean? I've been trying to ask myself that question. What does it mean to you—just casually living, or trying to throw your weight about twice as hard on the side of peace and justice, on the side of Christ? Will you take a minute to think about it—for yourself. Then, next week will read the article on this page in which Miss Emily Parker, who was the representative of the United States Christian Youth Movement on the Child Feeding Mission in Spain during the Civil War, answers some of the questions which many young people are seriously asking.

A Fellowship of Free Souls

By DOUGLAS HORTON,
Minister of the General Council.

A fellowship, a fellowship of free souls—that is what a Congregational Christian Church is. The Congregational Christian Communion is a fellowship of free churches; and the prophetic word we have for the greater Church of Christ is that it must be a fellowship of free communions. I want to point out a new area where our free fellowship around the world is actually being practiced.

Come with me to a hotel in Bridgeport, Conn., where in a back room we find Dr. Hachiro Yuasa, Fred Hoskins, and a group of men from the United Church, having supper together.

Dr. Yuasa starts the discussion by pointing out that there is a good deal of similarity between the personal and business problems of Mr. Smith in Bridgeport, Pandi-ji in Bombay, Mr. Jones in Cardiff, and Ito San in Osaka. Why shouldn't they face their problems together, all being of help to each?

"But how can we?" It is a natural question one of the men asks—and for answer Dr. Yuasa asks another. "Is there no problem upon which we can pool our thoughts and experiences? What, for instance, is the chief moral question that you would like to have answered right now?"

Says a business man: "I would like to know in laymen's language what it means to be a Christian. We hear a lot of talk in the church about 'doing God's will' and 'living a Christian life,' but I want something more specific, something I could put my teeth into. What is God's will for me? What is the Christian life for men who have to work in a down-town office every day in a city like Bridgeport? How can I get more out of my religion? Should I pray more? How can I pray anyway—I'm no hand at that sort of thing. How much of my income ought I to give to the work of the church? I don't know whether I'm giving too much or too little. It's questions like these that bother me at times."

"Yes," says Dr. Yuasa, "and it's questions like those that at times bother laymen in Japan and in other parts of the world.

To abbreviate a long and interesting story, the men of Bridgeport decide to meet regularly and in the course of the winter to discuss (among others) the question, what habits should a Christian layman form in order to grow to the height of his personality. They plan to put their tentative findings on paper—and Dr. Yuasa is to translate these findings into Japanese and send them to a similar group of business men he knows in Japan. Through the connections of the General Council and the American Board he will also send them to other groups in various parts of the world, who in turn will discuss them, add to them, alter them if necessary, and return them to the men of Bridgeport either directly or through him.

Thus groups of laymen of the Congregational Christian Church around the world will work together as correspondents to develop a set of disciplines—I believe that is the word—by which they can make their lives count for more to themselves and their neighbors. Here is one of the beginnings of a Christian world community.

And here is an opportunity for other groups of laymen and ministers. If you will let Dr. Yuasa know of any discussion group that desires to participate in this international project, he will put you in touch with the other groups. His address is 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

A "Christian Sun" Project

As chairman of the Board of Publications I asked a person able to do so, to help us prove that "The Christian Sun" is a real blessing to a church whose members read it. I talked the matter over with the person, and suggested that we take an average small, rural church, and ask the church to go along with us in the plan to put "The Christian Sun" in each home, and when they had done whatever the folks of the church were willing to do, then send it to every home for, say three years, and see how much it would accomplish in the spiritual morale and cooperation of that church. The plan was accepted, and the project is being worked out. The members of that church will be told that they are all to have "The Christian Sun" for at least a year, and that they are to make whatever contribution they will be glad to make toward the cost of the project.

This person went a step further, and added, now try that also in a selected average city church. And that project is being worked out. There are a number of us who believe in the printed page, and the church paper with a real message, and real suggestions, and real helps. We believe it will help to build the church. There was a time when "The Christian Sun" was published in Suffolk, in a day when it could get a hearing, and it no doubt helped to build some mighty fine rural and city churches in this section. Let us get behind "The Christian Sun" and make it a channel of strength in our Convention.

The Board of Publications in their recent meeting agreed to launch a campaign in the Convention for new subscribers to "The Christian Sun" to begin March 1, and run until Easter. Every pastor, every church, and all church homes will be urged to help with this campaign.

JOHN G. TRUITT, Chairman,
Board of Publications.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dr. Robert Lee Flowers was recently elected President of Duke University.

Throngs attended the National Preaching Mission held in Washington, D. C., last week.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Mt. Auburn Christian Church will hold a World Day of Prayer service on February 28 at 2:30 at the church.

The Mid-Year Session of the Virginia Valley Conference will be held on March 27, 1941, at Bethlehem Christian Church. The Conference will convene at 10:00 A. M., and all churches in the Conference are asked to have their delegates present.

Rev. Joe A. French, pastor of Ocean View and Berea (Norfolk) Churches, has accepted a call to the First Christian Church of Reidsville last Sunday, holding communion and receiving three new members into the church. Rev. James P. McDade and Thomas Smyth, ministerial students at Elon College, have supplied the pulpit in Reidsville recently.

The Congregational Christian Committee for Assistance to War Victims reports the following receipts from churches in the Southern Convention: Eastern Virginia—Holland, $1.00; Holy Neck, $5.75; Berea (Norfolk), $5.00; Christian Temple, $5.00; Portsmouth, $7.00; Portsmouth, First, $15.00; Rosemont, $25.00; Newport News, $10.00. Valley of Virginia—Winchester, $10.45. North Carolina—Durham, $25.00; Burlington, $41.53.

Rev. Ellis N. Clarke, senior ministerial student at Elon College, is apparently having good success in the churches he serves. A woman's missionary society has been organized at Mebane. Pilgrim Fellowship groups are being formed at Mebane and New Elam. Lee's Chapel and Lebanon are having two services a month, instead of one as they have had, and improvements to the buildings and grounds are under way. The Sunday school has been organized at Lee's Chapel with Mr. Emory Buchanan as superintendent.

In a recent contest for a name of the Group No. 4, Virginia Valley Conference, Mrs. R. L. Williamson, wife of Rev. R. L. Williamson, Charlottesville, Va., suggested the name "Shenroek." This name has been voted by the majority of the members of the six churches in the group. The pastor, Rev. R. D. Coulter, has mailed Mrs. Williamson the five dollar prize, which was offered for the best suggestion. Suggested names for the other groups in the Valley Conference: Group No. 1, "Rockingham." Group No. 2, "Greenrock." Group No. 3, "Shenpage."

Members of our churches in North Carolina will want to take advantage of the remaining addresses in the "Institute of Religion" sponsored by the United Church, Raleigh, N. C. These addresses will be presented at 8:00 in the church auditorium: February 17—Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of Christ Church, New York City, "The Christian in a World at War"; February 24—Rabbi Alex A. Steinbach, a leader in the National Conference of Jews and Christians, "The Fellowship of Faiths in a Democracy"; March 3—Dr. Arthur Raper, native North Carolinian now with Department of Agriculture, "Democracy and National Defense in the South."

A building fund committee has been elected at Wissler's Chapel with the sole aim of raising funds for a church building. This church has never had a building of its own. In many ways they have been handicapped from any real growth. This committee is busy at work. Many fine contributions have already been made. It is hoped that the new building will be erected by the middle of next summer. Any contributions will be appreciated. However, the six churches of Shenroek Parish, R. D. Coulter, pastor, hope to raise all the funds for such a building without asking any help from the outside. This is the hope of the building committee.

Lent will begin this year on February 26. Helpful material which may be secured from Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City, N. Y., or through the Promotional Office, Elon College, N. C., is: Fellowship of Prayer (daily devotional booklet for adults), 2c each; Lenten Devotions for Young People, 2c; A Second Book of Prayer (80 prayers for personal or group use), 5c; A Technique of Private Prayer, 1c (plan and program for forming the habit of private prayer); The Manual for Church Members, 5c (things every church member should know about obligations and privileges of church membership); The Meaning of the Church Service, 10c. It would bring rich dividends to any church to invest in some of this material to be distributed to its members.

A SUCCESSFUL LAY CHRISTIAN.

In thinking of the life of Dr. J. W. Manning, I am reminded of lines written by the poet, Longfellow:

Lives of great men oft remind us
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

One of the outstanding marks of his life was his love for his church. He was a layman who made his church his calling, his vocation. It was a joy and a privilege, not a task and a hardship, for him to give time and money to his church. While it may be true that "the pastor is the key man" and leadership must begin with the pastor, no pastor can lead a church to large achievements without the support of laymen who are themselves "self-starters."

Dr. Manning made religion his vocation, his calling. I believe he almost knew the location of every brick in the Christian Temple. He was like a very successful business man who once said that he was in business for the Lord and sold groceries as a side line to pay his expenses. It is only when laymen put the Kingdom of God first that the church succeeds.

And the record of the Christian Temple through the years shows that Dr. Manning and others like him did not identify the church with the local parish. He did not think of his gift of time and money as a tribute to his pastor but he laid his talents on the altar as a gift to the Lord. Too many laymen measure their contributions by the salary of the minister and are quite content if the annual report shows that the minister's salary has been paid in full. Look at the record of the Christian Temple and see how the benevolences beyond the local parish are sustained. It is all in The Annual. The Southern Convention will succeed in its far-flung enterprises when and only when laymen like Dr. Manning (and, thank God, there are many such) put the Kingdom first and regard their lives as given to God in loyal, joyous stewardship.

C. REXFORD RAYMOND.

ELON HISTORY.

The May, 1900, Session of the Southern Convention was a very constructive one. It established the Twentieth Century Fund for Elon College, with a minimum of $20,000, and apportioned same among the conferences, as follows: Eastern Virginia, $7,500; Virginia Valley, $938; Eastern North Carolina, $3,437; Western North Carolina, $3,150; North Carolina and Virginia, $4,068; and Georgia and Alabama, $937.

Rev. W. C. Wicker, Dr. E. L. Moffitt and J. E. West were elected as a committee to have charge of the campaign. Rev. W. C. Wicker, chairman, was instructed to give his whole time to the work, from June 1 to November 1, 1900, and he was allowed expenses and $50.00 per month.

Mr. Wicker had a very limited success and resigned as chairman. Rather than see the movement fail, J. E. West, who initiated the movement, accepted the office of secretary, with expenses and no salary. As the campaign got life into it and showed signs of success, Dr. W. W. Staley and the writer interviewed Hon. F. A. Palmer in his New York bank. Since Mr. Palmer had intended, or promised, to give $20,000 to Elon, we laid before him in detail the campaign and asked him to match us with $10,000 additional, if Secretary West could raise $10,000 in cash. Mr. Palmer made no further promises at that interview, but said that he would consider the proposition and advise Dr. Staley when he reached a conclusion. He wanted to know what the prospects were for a successful campaign, and I told him there was no such thing as failure. Later he accepted my proposition. I raised over $12,000 in cash, securing his $10,000, and making a total over $22,000 in the first general campaign ever made for Elon College.

Although it required very hard work and long hours, I was delighted to serve Elon College and my church. I appreciate the gifts, sacrifices and support given me in that drive. The members did their part nobly. Their devotion, loyalty and love were a great inspiration to me, and while they do not get remembrance, thanks and praise like Mr. Palmer, they richly deserve it. Brushing aside the fact that I conducted this campaign, I am glad to pay this tribute to those sacrificial donors, many of whom have passed to the great beyond.

"Honor to whom honor is due." May Elon College write her history correctly. When she does, there will be glory enough for all.

J. E. WEST.

ELON COLLEGE DAY IN THE CHURCHES.

Last Sunday, February 2, was designated as Elon College Day in the churches. Every church throughout the Convention was asked to present the claims of the college and give those who were present, whether in Sunday school or church, an opportunity to express their interest by making an offering. It is to be hoped that the day was observed in many of our churches and that before the month of February is gone, all will have observed College Day, received their offerings, and forwarded the same to the college. The spring months are difficult months with us here. We are dependent on the churches for funds with which to carry our current program. The college greatly appreciates the cooperation of the pastors and churches in this worthy undertaking.

TWO MORE CHURCH LISTS COMPLETE.

Hope Mills and Gibsonville, two of our newest churches, have joined Chapel Hill in having THE CHRISTIAN SUN sent to each family. This is a fine start. Perhaps some of the older churches will want to follow suit at the rate of $1.00 per year for each subscription, when each family gets the paper.

Below is a list of those who renewed or subscribed since the last report. Thank you every one. We received for subscriptions during January $326.70. In order to reach our quota we will need to receive an average of $311.00 each month from now through June. This will not be difficult, but it will take the cooperation of the people in all our churches. Thanks for your help.

THE OFFICE OF PROMOTIONAL SECRETARY.

The Convention continued the office of the Promotional Secretary for the present biennium. Now we are confronted with an approaching shortage of funds to care for this item. The question naturally arises, should the office be discontinued?

In the face of a deficit in the local church the usual procedure is not to fire the janitor (rather than the boiler) or discharge the organist in order to balance the budget, but rather to have the finance committee devise some way of meeting and raising the deficit. This same logic may be applied to the Convention. Our usual experience indicates that whatever is really needed can be raised in the local church. Within the Convention there are churches which have found themselves in dire financial distress and, realizing their conditions, have taken a firm hold on their financial bootstraps and pulled themselves safely out of that deplorable condition. Our Convention may "go and do thou likewise."

It is by no means unusual in many churches for the members of the finance committee to go out annually and personally solicit contributions from those in arrears. Now the number of churches in our Convention is approximately the same as the membership in our average church, and the number of delinquents in each case would practically parallel. Our suggestion is that we cease putting additional pressure on the responsive churches, that we abandon the long-distance method of absent treatment, that Convention finance and stewardship committees devote themselves frankly and immediately to the development of these delinquent churches. The financial program of the Convention must be pursued as assiduously as that in the local church. The same tactics will produce the same results. There is little value in "beating around the shrubbery," we must go to the root of the matter. And until we go to the source of our financial embarrassment we are simply "barking up the wrong tree."

This is not an unreasonable or an impossible proposal. It is simply our duty. The self-respect as well as the efficiency of the churches in question would be greatly enhanced. Every institution of the church would profit thereby. Prolonged debate, filibuster and uncertainty will paralyze our program. Courageous action will eliminate the necessity for a funeral dirge and call forth a hearty Doxology.

CHURCH DEBTS.

Dr. Roy L. Smith, editor of "The Christian Advocate," reminds the Methodists that the bankers have been getting all too much of the Lord's money in the form of interest. The condition is not peculiar to the Methodists. Many churches are content to pay their interest and evidence no interest in paying the principal. One church in Eastern Virginia is definitely planning to retire its church debt of long standing this year.

Others may duplicate this record. The wise Scotchman did not vainly try to get blood out of a turnip, he simply found a market for the turnip. Now the moral of this story is not that we should sell our churches, but that we should and can find ways of paying for them.

PROGRAM GUIDE.

Representatives of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship Council of the Southern Convention are to be congratulated on the preparation and recent publication of their Program Guide. One is amazed at the concise information and practical suggestions packed into thirty-six pages. With this guidance young people will be able to "plan their work and work their plan." Definite planning is the price of success in any field. The Program Guide is adapted for use in Sunday School, Christian Endeavor or Missionary Societies, and should be useful to ministers and churches in planning their total program. "The Christian Sun" wishes for each class and society a year of rich fellowship and constructive service.

R. L. H.

THE ART OF APPRECIATION.

"The art of appreciation is one of life's finest. It does so much for others, and even more for the one who makes use of it. Like a breath of fresh air, a tasty meal, a good sermon, it gives tone to body and mind, and courage for the day's task.

"If only I am appreciated I can do anything!" said a good wife and mother who seldom heard a word of praise from the lips of her husband. 'All I need is an occasional word of commendation and I can do twice as well!' said the college student who made good grades, but never quite attained the honor society. 'If folks would only remember to say, "Thank you!" I wouldn't mind waiting tables, washing tables, washing dishes and scrubbing floors,' said the maid as she left an impossible home where words of appreciation were never spoken."—Benjamin Eitelgeorge, in "The Upper Room."

Greatness, in the last analysis, is largely bravery—courage in escaping from old ideas and old standards and respectable ways of doing things. This is one of the chief elements in what we vaguely call capacity. If you do not dare to differ from your associates and teachers you will never be great or your life sublime. You may be the happier as a result, or you may be miserable. Each of us is great insofar as we perceive and act on the infinite possibilities which lie undiscovered and unrecognized about us.—James Harvey Robinson.

Never tell evil of a man if you do not know it for a certainty; and if you know it for a certainty, then ask yourself, "Why should I tell it?"—Lavater.

STEWARDSHIP

JESSE H. DOLLAR, Convention Chairman.

STEWARDSHIP AND DEMOCRACY.

By REV. ARNOLD SLATER.

Unlike other articles on Stewardship it is not the intention of this one to give a sentimental, scriptural, or necessarily a spiritual treatment of the subject, but, to endeavor by plain logic to arrive at certain conclusions. The writer frankly admits however, the present crisis may color or discolor his processes of reasoning, though basically the thesis would remain the same under normal conditions.

As a people we seek the abundant, the full life, we claim it is found in the democratic way. Whatever else is involved in the present conflict we recognize democracy is at stake, and the church, because it accepts this philosophy, is at the center of the conflict, for we say that by perpetuating the democratic principles we seek to give to the largest number, the right for individual freedom and thereby assist them, our people, to attain the abundant life.

There are those who tell us that the "democratic" processes and ideals belong to an out-moded, inefficient pattern, and should be discarded. That people left to their own resources, given the right to follow the individual conscience, soon lose sight of the common or social good. And it follows, that their institutions become inadequate agencies of service. As a church we are, according to that reasoning, unable to cope with present situations. For we are a democratic institution.

Whatever else the church may be, let us remind ourselves that it is "every single individual affiliated with the institution," everyone who was admitted into the fellowship after subscribing to the following vow: "I promise that, so far as I am able, I will attend the services, observe the sacraments, share in its work and support its benevolences."

Perhaps some were too young, others too nervous, and many more too uninformed to measure these words with due deliberation and weigh with any accuracy the full implications of this pledge, but this democratic institution of ours accepted them on faith. Thereafter the church did not prescribe or determine the number of services attended, sacraments observed, duties performed or dollars contributed . . .

these were left to the individual's conscience . . . to do and give "so far as they thought themselves able." For the church to assume dictatorial powers on these matters may be tantamount to a forfeiture of the title, "champions of democracy."

In like manner our Conference, Convention and Council when they seek the support of the members in the interests of the Kingdom, do not demand, but ask—even plead—on the strength of the "given word" of each member. In essence it is democracy at its best and worst. Is the church in a position to refute the criticism or accept the challenge that democracy just does not work? Has the church so lived the principle that it can say, Look at us? Do individuals given the right of choice adhere to the theory?

What we may conclude.—The following statistics are not conclusive but they are suggestive, a short story method of presenting thought-provoking facts: 10% of the church members do 80% of the church work and 23% do practically all the work. 40% subscribe to the local church and 73% give nothing to missionary agencies. The average church attendance is less than 33%. We know the affect this has on our church work but the question is broader than our local church, Conference, Convention, or Council. Great men and small, wise and scatterbrain, Christian and non-Christian are saying the present emergency calls for service, for sacrifice, if we are to maintain our way of life. Do these figures speak that language, do they say here is one place "democracy works if given a fair trial," or do they give opportunity to the critics to say, "I told you so," the plague of democracy you see is indifference, lack of vision, broken pledges and inefficient organization. However, the final word has not been spoken, for it is the privilege of our system to take the question back to the individual church members for their consideration.

Here is where the church might lead in the defense of democracy: Following the democratic procedure we bring to the attention of each individual, not simply the appeal to save our own program and support our own institutions, but by doing a thoroughly conscientious job of Stewardship, we may reveal plainly the vi-talities and vision of a free people. For if democracy is to survive it must not simply cite the fallacy and folly of the old order garbed in modern clothing, but give positive proof of its own worth to survive. And we may acknowledge without any further alibi, that if it dies in society, it will die because it could not first live in the church.

Since this is a matter of individual concern, there are some cardinal rules, if followed, that would assure amazing results and justify the retention of our present system:

1. As church members acquaint ourselves with the implications of our original pledge given prior to acceptance into the fellowship.
2. A willingness to assume the responsibilities, all of them, without regard to another's failure to live up to the code.
3. Be ready to enjoy the shared blessings of those who completely dedicate themselves to a purpose.
4. Accept the findings of history, that those who live for the good of humanity discover the abundant life for themselves.
5. That God, through us, is seeking to bring upon the earth a Kingdom where men may live together in unity and love.

DR. M. W. BUTLER HONORED.

One of the most surprised men in the State of Pennsylvania was the pastor of Gulph Mills Church, Rev. Murdock W. Butler, on Saturday evening, November 2. While busily engaged in his study, he was called to the church building across the road. To his utter amazement he found the church filled with members and friends of this church which he has served so long and so well, and was informed they had come to honor him on the occasion of the fifty-sixth anniversary of his ordination and the fifty-fifth anniversary of his first pastorate.

In the beautifully decorated sanctuary a characteristic Gulph Mills program of excellent music was interspersed with messages from friends far and near. This was climaxed by the gift of a reclining chair from members and friends of the congregation.

A social hour in the dining room followed and the entire event was a fitting tribute by an appreciative church to a worthy pastor. This modest and unassuming man is serving his second pastorate at Gulph Mills and is known and loved by the entire community.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

This letter is being written in Orlando, Fla. My wife and I are on a winter vacation of ten days in this state. This is a privilege which we are using to give us renewed health and strength for better service to the church we love. Mrs. Johnson is the pilot of our V-8 Ford, although I exercise some stolen privileges often used by "back seat" drivers. She does her part well and is so efficient and satisfactory, she is really proud of her job.

This is our fifth vacation in Florida. We get a different impression every time we come. Impressions of a state depend, in part, upon the point of view. It would be very easy to get an unfavorable impression of Florida, if the attention is fixed only upon the thousands of acres of swamps and barren wastes unfit for timber or cultivation. There are many worthless orange and grape fruit trees. There are hundreds of cheaply built huts, unfit for human habitation, where real comfort is desired. These things are in plain view of the tourists, but they do not fully and justly represent this great state.

What really gets one's attention here is the beauty and greatness wrought by God under the touch of human skill, and the power of inventive genius and faith. Man has cut canals and converted barren wastes into fertile fields. He has planted and cultivated great groves of citrus fruit trees. Tropical and semi-tropical fruits and vegetables are raised and shipped to every part of this great country. Great cities have arisen and great wealth has been created. And there are thousands of uncultivated acres awaiting the transforming touch of man.

This is a faint suggestion of the greatness and glory of this state. It may be of interest to many readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to know that we spent last night in the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Walters of Hawthorne, Fla., where he is supply pastor of the Methodist Churches. They are doing good work. Today we visited Rev. Mrs. Fred Bullock who is ill of a heart ailment and is now a patient in Orange General Hospital in Orlando. She has been suffering at intervals for several years. At present her condition shows improvement, but she is a very sick patient.

Joy and sorrow, health and sickness, pleasure and pain, success and failure—these seem to have a place in human experience. Beautiful flowers grow in ugly soil. Brilliant success sometimes follows dismal failure. Men and women must exercise faith in themselves and the promises of a living Father. With that outlook one sees victory beyond present strife and peace supplanting conflict.

THE COLLEGE STUDENT AND NATIONAL DEFENSE.

The National Committee on Education and Defense, sponsored by the American Council on Education and the National Education Association, invited the presidents of all colleges in the nation together with one other representative to Washington on Thursday, February 6, for a one-day and evening conference concerning the relation of the colleges and students enrolled therein to the nation's program of defense. Five hundred educators from forty-one different states and the District of Columbia responded to the invitation and were present. Dr. Isaiah Bowman, President of John Hopkins University, presided over the morning meeting. The principal address was given by Mr. Paul V. McNutt, Administrator, Federal Security Agency. Mr. McNutt spoke on "Civilian Morale and the Colleges and Universities." Other speakers in the morning session were Frederick Osborn, Chairman of the War Department Committee on Education, Recreation and Community Service and Chairman of the President's Advisory Committee on Selective Service, who spoke on "Contribution of Higher Education to Military Defense"; and Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershey, Executive Officer, National Headquarters, Selective Service System, who spoke on "Selective Service and College Personnel." Francis J. Brown, Executive Secretary, Subcommittee on Military Affairs; Consultant, American Council on Education, spoke on "Organization and Activities of Defense Councils."

In the afternoon session the personnel of the conference was divided into sections according to the status of their respective schools and the number of students enrolled. Elon College came under Section III, Private Colleges with Enrollment of 600 or More, and was presided over by James L. McConoughy, President, Wesleyan University. The presiding officers of these different sections reported their findings at the beginning of the evening session. In the afternoon sessions general discussion was invited and encouraged. The prevailing opinion was that in the judgment of university and college representatives, all students called for military service after they had enrolled in college should be permitted to complete that particular year's work and certainly should not be withdrawn in the midst of a semester or quarter according to the system used by the school affected, and that perhaps all students enrolled in medical, dental and engineering courses should be permitted to complete their courses in college since in the event of war, experts in all these fields would be required in great numbers. There seemed to be but little room for any kind of suggestions other than those that would be acceptable to the administration in Washington. It was suggested rather positively that there be no resolutions passed contrary to the regulations already laid down by the government for national defense. General Hershey expressed himself vigorously in opposition to what he termed the creation of any kind of special class in this program for national defense, contending that the fact that a young man was in college should not affect his relation to the government in this emergency in the least.

It would seem to the writer that the contentions of the ones in authority at this conference for immediate and complete compliance with the government's request on the part of college students would be justified if we were actually at war and manpower in great force was required, but since we are not actually at war and are simply calling these young men for one year's military training, that the government in interest of preparedness before the war, during the war, and particularly after the war, could arrange for young men who are to enter college either to take their year's military training following graduation from high school or following graduation from college. I fail to see the advisability of breaking a young man's college career when he might with equal profit take his year's training either before he enters or after he completes his college course. We shall need soldiers, of course, to fight the war, and, I fear, in larger numbers than we yet imagine, but it is to be hoped certainly that the war will be over some day, and following the war we will find ourselves in a broken

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

I am sorry that I made the error about the beginning of Lent in last week's letter to you. I picked up an old diary and just didn't think about it until I had mailed the letter. As you know Lent begins forty days before Easter. Since Easter comes on April 13 this year, our Lenten Season will begin on February 26. Sundays are excluded in the counting of the forty days.

Last week's crossword puzzle was a Valentine one. This week I have tried to work in as many words pertaining to migrants or social service as possible. I hope that it will help you to become more interested in children who would like for you to be their friend.

Those of you who are Scouts and read this page are now celebrating National Scout Week. No doubt you listened to the President's message to the Scouts over your radio this Sabbath morning. Tonight I went to the Scout church service at the Methodist Church here in Sanford. It was a union service with all of the other churches in town attending. The service was most impressive, especially the memorial candlelighting service for Chief Scout Lord Robert Baden-Powell. We are all grateful for this great leader who founded such a worthy movement. I am sure that every Scout will strive to be loyal to the ideals which he held dear.

During this month our churches are observing Brotherhood. I know of no way to break down racial barriers more quickly than for boys and girls of differing nationalities to work and worship together. This morning I heard that beautiful service of song and worship from St. Louis, in which all nationalities and denominations were joining their voices in songs of praise. The songs were those of different nationalities also. The boys and girls of St. Louis high schools were having a rich and uplifting experience which they, and we, shall not forget.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

SCHOOL DAYS.

"Miss Graham is the nicest teacher anyone ever had," said Billy to Joe as they were going home from school. "I'll bet that she is better than your teacher even!"

"She would have to be pretty good to be better than mine," replied Joe. "But, what makes you think she is so good, Billy?"

"Oh, she lets us play in school. We use our imaginations and have a grand time!" "Why the other day a stray kitty came into the building and hung around in the principal's office. Miss Graham sent Lewis down to the office for more chalk and he saw the kitty. He told Miss Graham about it and she let us get it and make a home for it in our room. We fixed him a bed in a pasteboard box. We take turns feeding and watering him. That's not all, she let's us keep a turtle, too. Today, I gave the canary the lettuce out of my sandwich. It was more fun to watch him eat than to eat myself. Next week we are going to give a program for our mothers in the auditorium. We are going to show them how we care for our pets and what we learn about life from them!"

"Gee! you do have fun, don't you. I wish that she had been here when I was in that grade," said Joe.

"Tomorrow we are going to make Valentines during our drawing period. Miss Graham showed us the lovely things which she bought for us to make them out of today. I just can't wait until tomorrow. I am going to make a real nice one for Betsy. She is always so eager to help a fellow. I hope she'll let me be her sweetheart after we grow up!"

"Say, Billy, how about making one for me to give to Janet while you are making them?" "We are too big to make Valentines in our class, but I hope I'll never get too big to send them to the girls!"

"LET 'EM COME."

We may be sure that Jesus wants all children to share the right to play. The children of the migrant camps, love as you do, to hear the story of Jesus telling his disciples to let the children come to him. Let us read Matthew 19:13 and 14. The migrant children have a right to know this story is meant for them.

One day a nurse, visiting a migrant camp, had taken care of all her patients. The children crowded around her begging for a story. She told them the story from Matthew 19:13 and 14. She made paper figures of people that she moved about as she told the story. That made it easier for those whose English was not good. A ten-year-old boy then retold the story. He moved the paper figures about to show just what happened. At last he came to the verse he thought he had learned, the verse that told what Jesus said to the men who were trying to send the children away. The boy tried and he tried but the right words would not come. But the boy knew what the story (Continued on page 11.)

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Dangerous Living.—Few folks in America realize the actual physical hardships and dangers run by our missionaries in many lands. The missionaries don't harp on such factors. It is part of the day's work for them. But during the past year or so, many have had to travel through bandit-infested areas of China with large sums of relief money. Harold W. Robinson of Tehsien tells of seeing three young men with long spears enter the room in a village home as he was about to retire. "Night watchmen," he thought sleepily, knowing the village had no guns. At 4:30 he was up and ready to start off. The young men were still with him. They had come, he found, for the one purpose of protecting him!

Our Grandchildren Again.—Out of pathetically limited resources the "Bantu Congregational Church of the American Board" of South Africa is supporting a Foreign Missionary in Portuguese East Africa. This promising young man gave up his South Africa church to pioneer. He already has a congregation of over 300. They have asked James Taylor to help raise money for a badly needed church-and-school building there. If he does not succeed fairly promptly the building privilege will pass to a sister communion, the Roman Catholic Church in East Africa.

Make Missionaries of Your Old Books.—Dean James F. McKinley of the College of Theology, Silliman University, Dumaguete, Philippine Islands, reports delivering to a Filipino pastor a book for which he had paid his cash income for a month. There is a great need for second-hand religious books of good quality in the Philippine Islands. "Surely there are ministers and others in the United States who have kept old copies of Christendom and religious book-of-the-month club volumes, or who would be willing to buy secondhand copies of the Lyman Beecher lecture series and send them by parcel post to us," writes Dean McKinley. Such books will be used for reference in the seminary, will go into the circulating department of the library, and will be given, when these needs have been met, as direct gifts to ministers. The address is Jas. F. McKinley, Negros, Or, Dumaguete, Philippine Islands.

Is Your Bible Dusty?—In spite of a great price due to increased cost of publication in war times, people in China are clamoring for Bibles. "We simply can't get enough to supply the demand," reports Philip H. Dutton of Taiku, Shansi, China. "People are paying out their hard earned money in these difficult times because the Bibles meet a genuine need which nothing else will satisfy. It makes one rather ashamed of the many Bibles gathering dust in so many American homes."

This Strange World We Live In.—So thoroughly has war and its horrible way of life gripped the world that when the most matter-of-fact reports come in of repairs or additions made to property in the mission field, there follows a phrase like this: "Two adjoining caves in the rock on our hospital grounds have been enlarged and connected so as to form an air-raid shelter." From all over the world our missionaries write, whether in countries actually at war or in the danger zone, of preparations made for protection in case of bombings.

Back to Spartan Living.—"The future belongs to God and neither totalitarian dictatorship, or unbridled individualism, nor ideals divorced from concrete reality can long endure." This is the belief of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Leger, as they sailed back to Shaowu, China, to rejoin the staff of refugee Fukien Christian University. "We claim a share in building the cooperative commonwealth of mankind under the leadership of Christ Himself." The Legers, like the other missionaries in Shaowu, and similar areas, will burn wood or charcoal, read by kerosene lights, sleep in beds with board or canvas bottoms under mosquito nets which are the substitutes for screens in that malaria-infested region.

A Poignant Paragraph.—A missionary from Japan who visited occupied China writes: "To our sorrow we have learned that a people can be loved and hated and that we can be of two minds and hearts. We have known and loved the Japanese here for nearly twenty-five years and over in China for a few days, yet have no answer to the baffling mystery. What we saw awakens the desire more than ever to try to show them the only Love that can teach the way to peace in East Asia. It seems an almost impossible task, but our faith is not dead and we still have courage."—Missionary Herald.

HOW DID IT HAPPEN?

In THE CHRISTIAN SUN of last week Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary, asked, "How did it happen" that the Southern Convention gave to Foreign Missions $699.00 less than the year before. This is a misleading statement and can easily be explained.

The Board's receipts for Foreign Missions were only $86.55 less than the previous year. On account of part payment of salary of the Promotional Secretary, the expenses of administration and promotion were materially increased without any corresponding benefit. On account of a balance in Foreign Mission account August 31, 1931, of $445.29, the Board sent to Harold B. Belcher, Treasurer, $6,387.74 for 1940, against $6,173.54 in 1939, an increase of $209.00. Mr. Lester should have consulted the annual report of the Mission Board before writing the article.

HOLY NECK CHURCH NEWS.

The Woman's Missionary Aid Society held its twenty-fifth anniversary in the church hall January 16. Despite inclement weather the attendance for the "event" was exceptionally large. Due preparation to make the hall attractive had been made with new curtains for the windows and the stage, and a piano, purchased by the Missionary Aid, and repairs and shades previously made possible by the Philathea Class.

The president of the Missionary Aid Society, Mrs. B. D. Jones, presided and her address of welcome provided the right tone for such a service. Mrs. Allen Piland, speaking on behalf of the church and its organizations, made an appropriate response.

Mrs. E. T. Holland gave the history of the society, telling of its organization, growth and the great work it had accomplished in both spiritual and material phases of its quarter of a century of organized activity.

The pastor then spoke briefly, expressing his appreciation of the remarkable record, and suggested that with such a society active, the future of the local church, and also that of the kingdom itself, was bright with possibilities for service. Special music was rendered by the Holland High School quartette, with Mrs. J. O. Davidson as pianist.

Twelve tables were arranged with each bearing a centerpiece to represent a month of the year and a birthday cake with twenty-five candles as the main centerpiece.

Seventy-five members and guests were present, bringing with them one penny for each year the society had been organized as their "gift."

After supper had been served, those present remained seated at the tables and when the pianist began to play, they spontaneously started to sing old favorite hymns and songs. A report was given that $25.00 had been received at the door, which gave the silver anniversary a real silver offering. Somewhat reluctantly the group decided it was time to go home, so with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," an eventful, profitable evening came to a close.

HALIFAX DISTRICT.

Since Mrs. B. J. Earp was transferred to another conference because of change of pastorate, she was succeeded as superintendent of the district by Mrs. T. W. Chandler of Virgilina, Va. She has received reports from Lynchburg, Ingram and Union or Virgilina and each of these three are working towards the Standard of Excellence. They have made a good beginning and each had a Thanksgiving service and gave a liberal offering to the Asheboro Church. We expect to hear other favorable reports like this from this district in the future quarters, so send in your "write-ups" of your doings and your work and your accomplishments.

NEWS FROM THE VALLEY.

The churches in Group No. 1 of the Valley Central Conference had a busy but pleasant holiday season. This group is made up of the Linville, Antioch, New Hope and Beulah Churches of which the Rev. Paul B. Sanger is pastor. All four of the churches had Christmas plays or pageants and a fine spirit of cooperation was shown among the churches in the group. Many attended the programs of all four churches.

On December 15, the first program was given at the Beulah Church when the play, "Glad Tidings," was effectively rendered by the people there under the direction of Mrs. Sanger. It closed with a candle lighting service. On December 22, the New Hope Church gave their program and play, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," directed by Mrs. John Bryant and Miss Beulah Vanpelt. At the close of the service the good people of the church presented their pastor and family a large box of groceries. The Linville Church gave the pageant, "White Gifts for His Birthday," on Christmas evening, December 25, directed by Mrs. Emma Davis. The choir assisted with appropriate music directed by Mrs. Sanger. On the evening of the 29th the Antioch Church presented to a full house the pageant, "The Light of Men."

In addition to the Christmas programs, the Linville Church was guest to the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Valley Central Conference on Sunday, December 29. The season's activities closed on December 31, when the young people and many older ones of the several churches in Group No. 1 came together in the basement of the Linville Church for a social time together. At 11:15 all assembled in the auditorium of the church for the watch night service just as the New Year came in. These services were all well attended.

MRS. PAUL SANGER.

NEWS FROM PLEASANT RIDGE (R).

In November, Rev. D. M. Spence of Sophia came to us at Pleasant Ridge (Randolph) as our leader and pastor for this year. Rev. F. C. Lester of Elon College had charge of the installation service. No one could have come to us in a more humble spirit and a willingness to help serve others than did Rev. Mr. Spence.

Three months of this year have passed and he has delivered well-thought sermons. He certainly seems to be a Christian leader and worker. Also Mrs. Spence takes part and helps in the interest of the church. They not only attend the preaching service but Sunday school and the missionary society meetings held each month.

Attendance has been good for the winter months. We are trying to pay our pastor in monthly payments so as to make it easier for him to meet his bills. So far we have done well in this. The second Sunday morning service is given as a free will offering.

Our apportionment for THE CHRISTIAN SUN deficit is $30.00. We raised over $17.00 of it last Sunday and we are planning to raise the rest of it next Sunday.

The church seems to be getting along good under the leadership of our new pastor. May the Lord help and bless him in his work.

"Youth at Work in the Church"

A CALL TO OBSERVANCE OF WORLD BROTHERHOOD SUNDAY.

The Committee on the United Christian Youth Movement recently issued its annual "Call" to all Christian youth, who, living in a world "embroiled in war, stalked by hunger, torn apart by racial and class hatreds and antagonisms," seek a new understanding of the meaning of world brotherhood, as they participate "unitedly in the observance of World Brotherhood Sunday, February 16, 1941." In the "Call" the committee suggests the following projects in which young people's groups may profitably engage on next Sunday.

1. Organize a study group in your local church to seek an answer to the question, "What can world brotherhood mean in view of the present international situation, and with regard to our own community situation?" Establish contact with groups in your own community who are suffering from the results of racial antagonism and prejudice, such as Jews, Negroes, and alien groups.

2. Hold an inter-racial, inter-faith meeting on World Brotherhood Sunday.

3. Make a definite contribution to the relief of refugees. (This may be done through the Congregational Christian Committee for Assistance to War Victims.)

4. In some communities a Peace Angelus at 7:00 P. M. each evening has been established, a time when one's activity, whatever it may be, is stopped for a minute, and the time spent in meditation and prayer for world peace and brotherhood. Church bells may be tolled every evening at 7:00 P. M. to mark this time of meditation.

LENTEN DEVOTIONS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

In a letter just received from John P. Webster, Chairman of the Commission on Personal Action, of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, he urges all the young people of our national fellowship to unite in the use of "Lenten Devotions for Young People" at the Lenten season. Copies of the pamphlet may be secured for two (2c) cents each from the office of our Promotional Secretary. We hope that your group will purchase its copies now.

The "Devotions" this year are written by the Rev. Richard P. Carter, minister at Suffield, Conn., who has been active in numerous summer youth conferences throughout New England. This year's theme is "On the Quest."

YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE PRESENT CRISIS.

Last week we were giving some thought on this page to the earnest questions which many young people are asking with regard to how they may really live a Christian life in the present crisis. We stated that in this issue we would reprint an article by Miss Emily Parker, who was the representative of the United Christian Youth Movement on the Child Feeding Mission in Spain during the civil war, in which she responds to some of these questions. It will be impossible to give the whole of her article, but we do here present the major portions of it.

"The letters I have received have differed to the extent of the differences in the personalities of those who wrote them. The question and expressed concern has been fundamentally the same in each. . . . Let me quote from some letters:

. . . "As the world grows messier and messier I'm growing more and more dissatisfied with my relatively soft life" . . . "I feel called to do something more constructive out in the thick of things" . . . "I've had a completely soul-stirring experience which results in my being on the point of resigning my job, selling my car, pulling up all roots and plunging right into the one hundred per cent active fields of Christianity. What can I do to help?"

I understand the feeling which has prompted the questions. . . . I realize that there are times of emergency when the only thing one feels it possible to do and still maintain one's integrity is to give up everything—job, security—and plunge into something that has the satisfaction of being obviously Christian. . . . War relief, feeding children who starve, building shelters for children . . . taking in temporarily those who are homeless, replacing dead parents with foster parents, all are poor substitutes indeed for that which was needlessly lost—is only a mopping-up job at best. I know—I've done it. . . .

But it is not the fundamental job. Much more basic is the need for all of us to dedicate our intelligence, our skills, our spirits to building the structure of society where peace based on justice becomes the norm. . . . This means building over a life time. . . . It means living in a community where one earns his right to speak. It means people learning to live together cooperatively. . . . It means helping to provide decent housing and living conditions for the people in "our town." It means a concern for education. . . . This kind of living needs not professional Christians but men and women of all professions who act like Christians. . . .

The world will be built anew when every area becomes the thick of things, when we find . . . where we are . . . that which removes the occasion for war.

WHAT THE BIBLE SAYS ABOUT JUSTICE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 23, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Micah 6: 8; Isa. 56: 1, 2; Col. 4: 1; Matt. 5: 38-42.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Justice for Injustice—I Sam. 24: 9-12.

Tuesday—A Prophet's Justice—II Kings 6: 18-23.

Wednesday—God's Impartial Justice—Psalm 65: 8-13.

Thursday—Promise of a Just King—Jer. 23: 5, 6.

Friday—Injustice Condemned—Matt. 23: 13, 14.

Saturday—Justice Sought for Servant—Philemon 10-17.

If one should try to discover just how many courts for justice there are in a state like North Carolina and Virginia, it would be quite a difficult task. Each state has squires' courts, police courts, circuit courts, a supreme court and many others. Finally over all these is the Supreme Court of the United States. Over these courts judges preside. Each is attended by clerks, deputies lawyers and assistants of many kinds. The purpose is to deal justice.

What does the Bible say about justice? Assign these passages to be read and commented upon: Micah

Sunday School Lesson

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS AND GRATITUDE.

LESSON VII—FEBRUARY 16, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 17.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 100.

GOLDEN TEXT: Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you.—Eph. 4: 32.

Causing Others to Sin.

Reference was made in the Sunday school lesson a few weeks ago about the seriousness of causing another to stumble, or to sin. Jesus frankly says that in our kind of world "it is impossible but that occasions of stumbling should come." It is bad enough to cause others to stumble unconsciously, but what a serious thing to deliberately cause one to stumble! Jesus says that it were better for a man if a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were thrown into the sea, than to cause any of his little ones to stumble. The story is told of a man who was walking in his garden one day among the tender plants. His little boy was following him. Fearing lest the boy should step upon some of the growing plants, the father told him that he had better go back. The little fellow replied, "That's all right, Daddy, I am walking in your steps." Let every Christian take heed how he walks, lest he cause someone else to stumble!

Forgiveness.

"If thy brother sin, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he sin against thee seven times in the day, and seven times turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him." Jesus put a great deal of emphasis upon the matter of forgiveness. Its importance can not be over emphasized. For instance, men need to understand the fact that God forgives. God is not angry with men when they sin against him; he is hurt. He does not desire vengeance upon his children when they do wrong; he desires to have the personal relationship, which sin and wrong doing break, re-established again. Forgiveness is the means whereby the personal relationships broken by sin are restored again. Whenever and wherever a man sincerely confesses and repents of his sin, God freely forgives him his sin, and remembers it against him no more. The whole relationship is restored, and although the penalty of sin often has to be endured, the man need not worry any longer about the sin itself.

This matter of forgiveness is important not simply from the standpoint of God's forgiveness of our sins, but because our forgiveness of sins on the part of God depends absolutely upon our willingness to forgive others. When Jesus taught his disciples to pray, he said, Forgive us our sins, or our trespasses, as we forgive those who sin, or trespass against us. In other words, we shall be forgiven only as we are willing to forgive. This is not because God is arbitrary, or petty, but because forgiveness depends upon an inner spirit, an attitude, and until a man is willing fully to forgive others, he does not have the spirit which makes it possible for God to forgive him. Indeed, there is not one word which needs greater emphasis in ordinary Christian living than the great word, forgiveness. Forgiveness is to be without stint or limit. Jesus used the words, "seven times," only in a figurative way. On another occasion he told Peter that he ought to forgive even unto seventy times seven, or in other words, without stint or limitation. One of the disturbing facts which a minister often faces among members of his congregation is the large amount of malice and the spirit of revenge, and unwillingness to forgive, which is characteristic of so many otherwise good members of the church.

Gratitude.

Luke tells a very interesting story, which illustrates the spirit of gratitude, and ingratitude, which is so characteristic of human nature. Ten lepers, helpless and hopeless, met Jesus as he was going into a certain village. They could not draw near him because the health laws forbade it, but from a distance they lifted up their voices saying, "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us." With his consistent compassion, Jesus commanded them to go show themselves unto the priests. It might be said by way of parentheses that here was a great test of faith. He was suggesting that they go to the priests and get a clean bill of health, when the leprosy was still upon them. "And it came to pass, as they went, they were cleansed." As they moved out in obedience to the divine command, they received the blessing. This is the essence of faith—true faith obeys even when it can not understand. True faith obeys where it can not at present see. As Dr. Jowett said, "Faith begins as an experiment and ends as an experience." Whenever and wherever a man moves out in response to the divine impulse, he finds that God is not slack concerning His promises.

All ten of the men were healed of the leprosy. Nine of them evidently went on and reported to the priests. But one of them—and Jesus calls attention to the fact that he was a Samaritan—immediately came back, fell on his face at Jesus' feet, and gave him thanks. How often do we fail to find gratitude on the part of those from whom we would most expect it! How often do we find gratitude in the lives of those from whom we least expect it! One wonders if this is the proportion of people who are really grateful—one out of ten. Certainly there is far too little gratitude in the hearts of all of us for the blessings which we receive day by day from a loving Heavenly Father.

The spirit of gratitude is an achievement, not a gift. One develops it like he develops any other quality of character, or any other spirit. He who moves through even the ordinary days with a grateful heart will find much for which to be thankful. Too often our prayers are made up of requests and petitions, rather than of expressions of gratitude and thanksgiving. Perhaps one reason why we do not receive more and greater blessings is because we do not show the proper spirit of gratitude for the blessings which we have already received. The spirit of gratitude is a prerequisite for the reception of more blessings. It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto his holy name, for the Lord is good, his mercies are every morning new, and his faithfulness abideth unto the eventide.

"LET 'EM COME."

meant. He finished it, "Jesus said, 'Let 'em come.'"

Prayer—Our Father, we, too, would do something to help migrant boys and girls. As we grow older, do not let us forget about these people who need our help. And make us wide awake now to miss no chance to do something for them. May our gifts make the days a little brighter for some of these children. May our gifts help some child to know that Jesus said, "Let them come." Amen.—Taken from Services of Worship for Junior Group, Children's Religion for February.

MONDAY.

A MOTTO FOR EVERY ACTION.

"The spirit of the Lord is upon me."—Luke 4:18.

If our text be our motto, at the beginning of our endeavors we will try to find out what the Lord would have us do in the matter. Fresh from the rest of the night and beginning the new day and the new week, stand in the temple of thy soul, face God at the altar thereof, and say:

Come Holy Spirit, in love,
Shed on us from above
Thine own bright ray!
Divinely good Thou art;
Thy sacred gifts impart
To gladden each sad heart:
O come today.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE NEED OF THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

"Renew a right spirit within me."
—Ps. 51:10. (Read Gal. 5:13-26).

What a different world it would be if every one had the right spirit. Think of the spirit that is not right: jealousy, envy, prejudice, intolerance, hatred, greed, adultery, fornication, lasciviousness, idolatry, quarrelling, anger, selfishness, dissensions, drunkenness and such like. "But," says Paul, "what the spirit produces is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control. There is no law against such good things."—Goodspeed.

Yet we find the spirit that is not right to be the spirit that influences and controls many of us, and controlling public and personal action.

Prayer—God, forbid that we shall have the wrong spirit. Give us the spirit of Christ just for today, and each day, day by day. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

REVELATIONS OF TRUTH.

"I am the truth."—John 14:6.
"The truth shall make you free."—
John 8:32.

It is truth and the integrity of righteousness that has identified Jesus with everyday living. It is in truth and the doing of truth in everyday living that we find God and God finds us. Truth is everywhere, in everything, is in every thought and word. How often one covers it up and turns to the false because of some selfish usefulness he thinks it will be to him.

Prayer—O Lord, we will seek truth as the goal of our lives, that we may be conscious of Thee and Thy blessings. Therefore we long for it; we seek it; we want it; we love it; we would honor it; we would defend it; and we would die for it. God help us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FIT FOR THE MASTER'S USE.

"Adorn the doctrine of God, our Savior in all things."—Titus 2:10.
(Read verses 1 to 10.)

Goodness in life is not enough. According to Christ's teachings we are to add to our goodness, delightfulness, attractiveness, kindness, and all the personal graces that we can. These things are armaments of life and Christianity insists that we are ornaments of the Gospel, showing forth not only robust virtues that folks love, but sweetness that they love the more. Thus we become "vessels fit for the Master's use"—winsome souls. We know you all want to be that way. Let us try always to be lovely.

Prayer—Our Father, bless us. Keep us from the unlovely things, and make us lovely winning others to Thee and Thy cause. Amen.

FRIDAY.

TENDER HEARTS.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."—Eecl. 12:1.

Did you ever notice how large a dog's track appears in cement? We have seen such tracks made when the cement was soft. "My, what a big dog that must have been," we say. But it wasn't a big dog at all. He only stepped in the cement when it was soft. The impression was easy and the foot spread. But there it is, now hard and nothing can eradicate it or change it.

How like ourselves! Parents, teachers, those of you speaking in the presence of children, what a responsibility you have! What you say or do to them makes an impression upon their soft lives. There it hardens and makes character—makes it for Christ. Do not wait till their lives are hardened. It will be too late. It can't be changed easily.

Prayer—O God, may we be privileged to leave the right impression before the heart is hard. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESSFUL LIVING.

(Proverbs 1:7-10.)

The secret of successful living is honoring God. The time when this principle can be instilled in a life with greatest results is childhood. The parents' obligation to do this is found in Prov. 13:24; 19:18; 22:15; 23:13; 29:15; Eph. 6:4; Col. 3:21.

Do not blame crime in the world entirely upon the devil. Much of it lies in you. Parents set the example. We can expect the children to do no less than we. How can we expect children to live clean, wholesome, Christian lives if parents do not set the example? We are the example and the children follow.

Prayer—Our Father, Thy Word is more powerful. Draw us by its power into the right path, and into an exemplary life for our children. We would read it and know it that we may do this. Amen.

BETHLEHEM CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Bethlehem Christian Church was established early in the nineteenth century, the earliest known date being in the year of our Lord, one thousand, eight hundred and thirty-two. There have been three buildings. The first was located approximately half a mile from where the present building stands on what later became a part of the late Faucette property. The second was where the cemetery now lies, and the third on the present site.

The first page as recorded by the secretary is as follows:

North Carolina, Alamance County, September, 1832. The Christian Church established at Bethlehem Meeting House and the following contain the numbers and names of all who are united to said church: Boston Iseley, Tobias Waynick, Rachel Iseley, Lewis Iseley, Elizabeth Ireland, Christian Iseley, June Iseley, Mary Gerringer, James Melvin, Catherine Melvin, Susannah Waynick, Michael Tickle, Henry Coleman, Mary Iseley, Alfred Iseley, Mary Coleman, Sarah Dickey, Rhoda Ireland, Tilman Ireland, Mary Hughes, Priscilla Allen, Kernalia Dickey, Sarah Ireland, Elizabeth Brown, Peyton Brown, Andrew Hughes, Sarah Hughes, Eli Iseley, Lewis Melvin and Lavinia Love.

There were no minutes of any meeting recorded until the following:

Alamance County, North Carolina, December 14, 1856. In accordance with a previous notice the church met at Bethlehem in the County of Alamance when the subject of the Convention report upon the most scriptural plan for the organization of a church came up for consideration. It was proposed to take the same by items, which being done, with a slight objection it was adopted unanimously.

The church in compliance with the above plan of organization proceeded to elect a committee to wait on disorderly members. The following were chosen, viz.: William H. Swain, Thos. Palmer, Jr., R. L. Tickle, Philipp Waynick.

William Love, treasurer.

James A. Underwood and Eli Iseley, collectors.

A. B. Tickle, secretary and sexton.

The first pastor mentioned in the old record is the Rev. Alfred Iseley, a native of the community, born October 13, 1813, serving in the Christian ministry forty-one years, and pastor at Bethlehem from March, 1839, to April 18, 1874.

The second pastor was Rev. Albert G. Anderson, born in Caswell County, December 20, 1810, licensed to preach at Bethlehem Church, Alamance County, 1857, and active pastor at the time the present building was erected (about 1879).

Rev. D. F. Jones is mentioned as Moderator, February 16, 1878, and intermittently for several years.

Rev. Jeremiah Holt was chosen pastor November, 1880, and served until November, 1884. He served a second term from November, 1896, to November, 1897; third term from November, 1900 to November, 1906; and a fourth term from November, 1908, to November, 1922. Being too feeble to continue active service he was elected pastor emeritus for life. Mr. Holt was born December 7, 1848, licensed to preach 1872, ordained 1876 and died August 1, 1923. He was a native of Alamance County, and an ardent defender of what he thought was right; especially did he champion the cause of Prohibition.

The following pastors have served the church: Dr. W. T. Herndon, November 1, 1890-November, 1894; Rev. C. C. Peele, November 1894-November, 1896; Rev. P. T. Clapp, November, 1897-November, 1900; Rev. Thos. W. Stroud, November, 1906-November, 1908; Rev. J. Frank Apple, November, 1922-November, 1928; Rev. J. W. Patton, November, 1928-November, 1933; Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, since 1933.

The Secretaries are as follows: A. B. Tickle, George Kernodle, Coley Brand, A. G. Faucette, Wm. A. Hall, L. D. Rippy and Clyde Iseley.

The following Deacons have served the church: James Gilliam, Coley Brand, D. F. Kernodle, Samuel A. Ireland, Riley Sutton, I. N. W. Garrison, A. T. Gilliam, E. T. Iseley, David Micheal, Daniel Waynick, William S. Sutton, Jas. H. Gilliam, J. D. Simpson, W. H. Gilliam, A. C. Madren, C. H. Sutton, G. T. Sutton, E. B. Matkins, W. A. Paschal, Clyde Iseley, R. V. Moore, G. E. Brown, Carl D. Iseley, G. E. Somers, J. E. Wilkins and W. L. Gilliam.

The Trustees have been as follows: Eli Iseley, Philipp Waynick, Riley Sutton, L. D. Rippy, W. H. Gilliam, J. D. Simpson, E. B. Matkins, A. C. Madren, R. V. Moore, C. L. Simpson, W. A. Paschal and C. H. Gilliam.

Bethlehem Church has entertained the North Carolina and Virginia Conference several times; the first time being in 1857.

The cemetery was begun in 1875. ?

THE COLLEGE STUDENT AND NATIONAL DEFENSE.

world, one that must be rebuilt from practically every angle. Those days, and treacherous days they will be, will require trained, capable leaders. It would seem to be a part of wisdom to take a long range view of this life and death struggle into which civilization has been inadvertently drawn.

The session closed with an address by Mr. John D. Biggers, Director of the Office of Production Management. He reminded his hearers that the nation is faced with the task of arming itself more quickly than any nation has done in all history. "The blue printing of the defense task and the preparation of the necessary tools are nearly complete," he said, "and now is the time when we must prepare our brains and pour out our energies in an effort to turn those blue prints into furnished products."

The gathering of university and college representatives was purely a conference. We discussed freely the government's program for national defense and the part that the college students may play in that program. The conference did not serve as an appeasement effort but afforded the opportunity for those who are nearest the affairs at Washington and more conversant with present day trends in national affairs to express to us and through us to the young people whom we represent the extreme gravity of the situation and the hazardous task that lies before us. Ere long it is feared that deepening shadows will begin again to fall across the homes of our fair land. These are days fraught with fearful possibilities. May our leaders in government be blessed with divine leadership, and may God have mercy upon the young men of our country and of the world.

SUNDAY."IF YOU KNEW."

If you knew that your boy with eyes of blue—

With manly tread and heart so true—
Should enter yonder barroom bright
And stain his soul in one sad night,
What would you do then;
What would you do?

If you knew that your girl with silken hair—

With winsome way and face so fair—
By felon drink at last were seen
To follow the steps of Magdalene,
What would you do then;
What would you do?

But you know somebody's boy must lie
In drunken stupor and must die;
Some girl goes wrong in tender years;
Somebody's wife must sob in tears—
What will you do about it;
What will you do?

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The orphanage family had a very pleasant visit from Herman and Jaek Cozart last Saturday. These two boys came to the orphanage soon after the writer took charge and were reared here. They are now located in Baltimore, working for an air craft company. We are glad to have our old boys come back and see us. While here they visited friends in the community, and renewed old acquaintances.

The weather has cleared up and February is rapidly passing by. It makes one in this work begin to think about planting garden peas, Irish potatoes, lettuce and all kinds of garden vegetables.

In this work food is one important item. It keeps our thinking cap on to plan far enough ahead to get early vegetables and then to keep planting so we will have some coming in all the time to feed the children, and to can beans, tomatoes, etc., for winter.

We make lots of stuff if we have good seasons, but often we have extreme dry weather to contend with and sometimes extreme wet weather.

In producing beans to can and to eat through the summer we don't only have the weather to contend with but the dreaded bean beetle, which often ruins our bean vines before they get large enough to bear. They are so persistent and multiply so fast that they are hard to combat. But after all the Lord is good to us and we have something to eat from day to day and every day.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

Marriages

SLAGEL-HOBGOOD.

On Friday evening, December 27, at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Slagel, Roxboro, N. C., I united in marriage Miss Dorothy B. Slagel and Mr. Dennis Jackson Hobgood of Oxford, N. C. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and a number of friends were present to witness the ceremony. The bride is intelligent, attractive and popular. The groom is an excellent young business man of Oxford. Mr. and Mrs. Hobgood, after a trip to Florida, will be at home to their friends in Oxford, N. C.

C. E. NEWMAN.

FULP-JONES.

On Saturday afternoon, December 28, at 2:00 o'clock, in the home of the uncle of the bride, Mr. G. Atkins, Virgilina, Va., Miss Thelma Elizabeth Fulp was married to Mr. Gabriel Prior Jones of Person County, N. C. Mrs. Jones has for several years been the leader of the young people's work in Union Christian Church, and has attended several sessions of the Elon Training School. Mr. Jones has a good position with a large manufacturing company in Roxboro, N. C. They will make their home in Person County. Their many friends wish for them happy and useful lives.

SUITED AND TAGGED.

On Sunday morning, December 15, 1940, I was called up in Sunday school by the secretary of the church, Bro. C. D. Newman, who presented me a nice purse with the instructions that I buy a nice suit of clothes as a Christmas gift from the church and Sunday school. This was a very big surprise to me. But a very pleasant one. This was the first time that I had ever been suited by a church in such a way. After I had tried to express my appreciation, Mrs. Apple was called to the front, and to her was presented a purse with no strings attached.

A few days later a good family that had recently joined our church came to the parsonage with a nicely wrapped package that contained auto tags for 1941 as a gift. This was soon followed by a town tag from my Sunday school class. This was not all. On Christmas Eve a grocery truck drove into the back yard and set off a nice box of assorted groceries as a gift from a very loyal member. Is there a Santa Claus? Yes, there will be one just as long as the spirit of giving, love and appreciation exists.

The work here is coming along very nicely. The attendance and interest all along the line is increasing. Graphs are being made or kept that will show the attendance of this year as compared with 1940 in Sunday school, church and mid-week services.

Six members have been received into the church since conference. It is a joy to work with such a fine, appreciative and cooperative group as we have here.

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT PRESENTED AT BETHEL CHURCH, ELKTON.

The annual Christmas services were observed at the Bethel Congregational Christian Church, Elkton, Va. The program consisted of a candle lighting service with the presentation of a pageant entitled, "The Light of Men," by Mattie B. Shannon.

The pageant portrayed the life of Jesus from birth and closed with the commissioning of the apostles to go forth and spread the light of the King. At the close of the services the young men representing the apostles and twelve angels filed down the aisles of the church lighting the candles of persons in each row with the candles they carried, leading the audience out of the church to go forth and let their light so shine before men.

The pageant was under the capable direction of our pastor's wife, Mrs. A. Grieg Ritchie. About thirty-eight people and children participated in the program.

At the beginning of the services our pastor, Rev. A. Grieg Ritchie, was presented with a gift of $10.00 for his services and especially the interest and effort taken in the rehearsals of our pageant.

We feel that we owe much to Rev. and Mrs. Ritchie and have grown to feel in close friendship with them.

Other topics for short talks:

1. Justice is demanded in the economic world.
2. Justice is demanded between the races.
3. Justice is demanded between nations.
4. Justice is required for our spiritual welfare.

It is said that the question always in the life of Abraham Lincoln was: "Is it right?" He once said to a client who begged him to take a case, "Yes, there is no reasonable doubt but that I could win the suit for you. I could set a whole neighborhood at loggerheads; I could distress a widowed mother and her six children, and thereby get for you $600.00, which rightfully belongs, it appears to me, as much to the woman and her children as it does to you. You must remember that some things that are legally right are not morally right. I shall not take your case, but will give you a little advice, for which I charge you nothing. You seem to be a sprightly, energetic man. I would advise you to try your hand at making $600.00 some other way.

For Discussion—

1. What violations of justice do you know of by personal experiences or by reports in the papers.
2. Are church members guilty of injustice to others?
3. How may justice find a permanent place in the lives of men?

A Service Organization

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

Office at Elon College, North Carolina
Rev. F. C. LESTER, Promotional Secretary

* * *

SOME OF THE WORK BEING DONE

The service of this office is always in cooperation with others. Part of the credit of accomplishment belongs to them.

1. Pastorates.—Attempt to get churches grouped, and pastor on field. Valley Conference complete, with seminary men as pastors. Western North Carolina Conference now working on plans. Several other groups formed, and pastors located.

2. Pastors for Churches.—Helped to place 29 of our 75 active pastors. Office is clearing house for pastors and churches. Information given, but no attempt made to force decision as to minister or location.

3. Church Finance.—Practical suggestions given to churches about church finance. Budget, pledges, envelopes and regular giving as stewards is urged. Income from churches last year greater than in recent years.

4. Leadership Training.—Summer Conferences at Elon for church workers. Institutes and schools in local churches or groups of churches to teach all workers is aim. Individuals and churches given special advice and helps. Planning Summer Camp for Junior High young people.

5. Young People.—A Convention Council organized. Five Conference Fellowships and one Mission Conference aided. Sunday school classes, missionary societies, Christian Endeavor societies, and other local groups furnished counsel and materials. Delegates sent to regional and national meetings.

6. Missions.—Education and inspiration through materials, book reviews, addresses, special speakers, conferences, articles for "The Christian Sun," are some of the ways we serve. Secretary also does field work for the Home Boards and Southern Convention Mission Board.

7. Personal Conferences.—Hundreds of people go to the office for materials, conference and advice. Secretary majors in talks with pastors and officers of Convention, Conferences and local churches.

8. Student Work.—College students, especially ministerial students, are increasingly being aided by the office. Several are given summer work. Last year five workers conducted 33 Vacation Bible Schools.

9. Books and Bibles.—Books on all phases of church work are available, and many people use them. Pamphlets and magazines are distributed. More than a thousand New Testaments are given away annually. Subscriptions to "The Christian Sun" are collected. Our literature is introduced and urged. Program materials are furnished to Sunday schools and churches for special occasions.

10. Correlating Center.—The office is the center of all our church work in the Convention. It represents the denomination and all Convention and Conference work. Many services not listed above are rendered. It is the one correlating agency of the Southern Convention.

Christ in the Crisis

By LESLIE PINCKNEY HILL.

Dedicated to the Observance of Brotherhood Month.

A CROSS the oceans, from old lands
Where freedom sinks in starless night,
Pale hope, with lacerated hands,
Gropes tow'rd the New World for the light.

London ablaze, fair Paris cowed,
Gibraltar shocked, Rome tyrant-bound,
Europe's most precious culture bowed
In hungry terror under ground!

From Norway to the torrid wastes
Of Africa, by ship and plane
And battle line, destruction hastes,
And reason seeks a home in vain.

Foul bigotry alone is free
To scoff at God and render youth,
What man was never meant to be,
A savage thing at war with truth.

And he who clings to self-control
Against all tyrants, whose last breath
Must still attest the sacred soul,
Will walk companionate with death.

O tortured Europe, where begins
The root of all thy plaguing, where Does retribution trace the sins
Implicit in thy stark despair?

The sin of all the sins, the root
Of shattered Europe's flaming wreck,
Is that one man should set his foot
Upon a fellow-mortal's neck.

And, O America, my land,
By what infallible decree
Will they find succor at thy hand
When the torn nations turn to thee?

By this alone, that here we swear
Freedom shall live, whate'er the cost,
And that no human soul shall wear
The chains that come with freedom lost.

And, though the mad dictators chafe
And froth their threats, here we declare
No nation on the earth is safe
Till men find freedom everywhere.

And as they come, the refugees,
Einstein or Mann, the royal dame,
Pauper or child, to all of these
The boon we offer is the same—

This freedom-starred democracy
Which men of every race and creed
Have wrought to conscious unity
To serve a universal need.

For when the thunderhead is past,
When tyranny is stricken down,
And peace re-builds the world at last,
Democracy will be its crown.

Then the great miracle will be
That He who long ago could say
The truth would set man's spirit free,
Had led the battle all the way.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The "Provincial Council" of the Southeast is being held at Burlington, N. C., this week.

Christian Temple raised a $1,000.00 on their building debt on last Sunday. Congratulation, Christian Temple.

Dr. Ernest M. Halliday will speak at both morning and evening services at the First Congregational Christian Church of Richmond, next Sunday.

Dr. William T. Scott was the guest speaker at Newport News Congregational Christian Church on last Sunday morning, and at Suffolk in the evening.

The First Congregational Christian Church of Lynchburg, Va., had sixteen enrolled in the Lynchburg Christian Workers' School, which has just concluded. Rev. J. Howard Smith, pastor, reports a quite successful school.

The Elm Avenue Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., will be dedicated this Sunday, February 23, at 2:30 P. M. Congregational Christian ministers, in the Conference, will speak each evening during the following week. Rev. S. W. Phillips is the minister.

The Ann French Circle of our Ocean View Church has published a Year Book with a complete roster of officers and members, devotional material, and an outline of each monthly program. The society now has thirty-three members. Mrs. W. M. Fisher is the President.

Rev. J. H. Warren, pastor of Little Creek Church, writes: "We have received seven new members into Little Creek Church since the C. M. A. Conference, three ladies and four men." We congratulate the youngest church of the Eastern Virginia Conference and its pastor on the fine work they are doing.

Seventy-four Elon alumni and friends were present at the Eastern Virginia Elon Alumni Association Banquet on Friday evening of last week. Dr. William T. Scott of Jacksonville, Fla., was principal speaker of the meeting. Mrs. Frank Holliday was toastmistress. Mr. Roy Richardson of Suffolk was elected president for the coming year.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Morrisville Christian Church will hold a World Day of Prayer service on February 28 at 10 A. M. at the church. All who attend will please bring a light lunch so as to be present for the afternoon meeting.

Rev. B. Tart Bell, Youth Secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, was the speaker at at First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., last Sunday evening. Mr. Tartt spoke on the subject, "Working for Peace." Dr. Leon Edgar Smith was the speaker at a union service of the three Congregational Christian Churches of Portsmouth, the first Sunday evening in February. The service was held at the First Church.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF ELON COLLEGE MEETS.

For a number of years the Board of Trustees of the college has met in February for its midyear meeting. At this meeting the faculty is either elected or the election provided for through the Committee on Faculty and Budget. Changes in the curriculum are noted and approved. The condition of the campus including buildings and grounds is likewise brought to attention.

As has been the case for a long time, a good part of the Board's meeting was given to the discussion of the financial condition of the college. All progress must stem from the economic condition of the institution. We are able to plan for progress in keeping with our successes in acquiring funds. Debts are bad companions as we have found out. Conditions have compelled sane handling of funds. Additional debts could not be accumulated if we were to stay in the business of education. Circumstances demand that we operate on a balanced budget. We reached the place that we could not spend more than we had. We still have a debt on our hands amounting to $106,000. This debt is a tremendous handicap. We should get it behind us where it will serve as an inspiration rather than as an obstruction. The reports showed that the current accounts are entirely in balance. The indications are that with the help of the churches, we shall be able to meet our operating demands for the remainder of the school term. We may get in difficulties in the summer months.

As regards the debt of the college, the Board approved the plan submitted by the president to secure one thousand individuals contributing $100 each for the complete liquidation of this debt. There is a sufficiency already pledged to take care of the remaining $6,000. These new pledges are received on the condition strictly that they are not payable and will not be asked for until the entire amount is pledged, and then all will be expected to pay and the debts will be paid in full. This would be a glorious achievement.

The Registrar's report revealed that there were thirty-three new students matriculated for the second semester, making a total of 659 matriculated students for the entire year. This is a goodly number, and we have a very excellent type of student at Elon.

The Dean's report indicated a fine spirit and a high grade of work being done by the college. We are much concerned as to the possible effect of the military draft on our student body next year. All members of our church and friends of the college are urged to use their influence in getting young people from the homes of our church to attend our own college.

We had a very good attendance and a very excellent meeting of the Board. The college always appreciates the visits of these officials.

ALBEMARLE.

Despite the flu and much sickness, things seem to be moving along nicely. The first Sunday in February, we observed Elon College Day.

The Senior Pilgrim Fellowship, of which Miss Ellgie Russell is president has purchased a new hymn board for the church.

The Junior Fellowship is under the direction of Miss Constance Jenkins who is proving very efficient.

The Precilla Missionary Society has had both the home and foreign missionary study book reviewed; sent a box to the migrate center and collected clothing for bundles for Britain. Miss Irene Sells is president.

The Woman's Missionary Aid, with Mrs. Minnie Whitley as president, meets every two weeks. We are carrying out all the points for the Standard of Excellence.

The Sunday school, under the direction of Mr. J. W. Hill, is doing nicely.

The Men's Bible Class will have a fellowship supper February 15 for all the men and boys of the church.

I would not dare forget my own class of precious boys who were thought to be more or less problem

SOCIAL RELATIONS

D. J. BOWDEN, Ph.D., Convention Chairman.

THIS IS MY BROTHER.

"This is my brother," said my friend to me as he presented a tall young man, handsome and intelligent. And as I shook hands with the young man, I saw a gleam of pride in the eye of my friend. Here was one whom he was happy to call his brother, one who for years had been his friend and companion, with whom he had sometimes fought over trifles and with whom he often shared his sorrows. This was his brother.

And perhaps here lies the meaning of brotherhood; mere blood relations need not be important, but rather the sharing of one's life, its joys and sorrows, its rewards and disappointments. This is brotherhood.

This is my brother! Winston Churchill calls to all Americans everywhere and tells these lovers of freedom that valiant and stalwart men of England are facing tragedy and death with courageous fortitude. "We do not need men," he says, "but we need your good will." And we respond with the feeling if not in words, "This is my brother." This is one with whom I share ideals and high purposes and for whom I am happy to sacrifice.

This is my brother. Belgian, French and Danish folks are lifting up their arms, crying for bread to satisfy their hunger. You and I from across the sea look upon them as human beings whose souls are valuable in the sight of God and whose lives are our responsibility. Said a communication from Belgium on February 1, "Famine conditions will prevail in this country within two weeks." St. Valentine's day is past and with it two weeks leading to hunger and starvation. An expert recently said that the flu epidemic which has mildly swept our country within the past month will reach Europe in the fall of this year and will take a heavy toll of lives there, because of privations which have been suffered by every warring people.

This is my brother. German men and women sincerely lend their support to a movement which they believe to be righteous. Their sacrifice is none the less, regardless of the attitude we may take toward their leader. German people for centuries have been God-fearing people and no temporary leader can destroy this attitude. Our German brothers have skill and intelligence which might well be used to bring about God's Kingdom in this world. Let no one hate his brother.

This is my brother. A new call has been made in the last few days to Americans in the Orient to come home lest it would be too late. Yet hundreds of Christian missionaries in China refuse to leave the land and the people to whom they have dedicated their services. These, they say, are our brothers in China, and Chinese people are God's children. We cannot and will not come out.

This is my brother. Many years ago when I was but a child, a Japanese woman visited in my home and I shall never forget her kindness toward me. Nearly twenty-five years have passed since that experience but always when I think of Japan, I think of Toshio and feel that surely there are in Japan many millions of equally fine people. These are my brothers.

And thus we may circle the globe with the meaningful words, "This is my brother." This man whom I have never seen, perhaps, who does not speak my language, who does not live as I live, who does not do things as I do them; yet this man is my brother. I share with him life in God's world. The joy of sunshine, the blessedness of rain, the sacredness and sacrifice of love; these things we share as God's children.

This is my brother. A strike is called in a nearby factory. The laborers, perhaps, more dirty and more ignorant than I, certainly less privileged than I, defend what they believe to be their rights by striking against the management. This is their way of saying, "We shall not endure injustices." The cause of labor is not always right; no man is perfect, nor are the causes which they defend always so. But labor deserves to be heard.

And so with capital. Manufacturers and businessmen, mill owners and managers, those who invest their money for fair returns; these, too, deserve to be heard and to be protected. Capitalism itself is not inherently evil. The only charge that need be made is that some men who have become rich have done so at the expense of those who were poor and helpless. Economic injustices, whether it be on the part of labor or on the part of capital, is still injustice.

This is my brother. Did you pause a few days ago as you passed the road gang at work on the highway? Did you pause to glance at the faces of those men? Those are America's criminals, men who were born mostly as you and I in poor homes with comparatively few advantages, men who somewhere got into the wrong crowd or under the wrong influence and who are now paying for their misdeeds. They are not beasts; they are not born as enemies of society. They have grown that way, and thousands of their brothers are in prisons throughout the United States paying the penalty for greater crimes. Not only do we find men in prison however; there are women also. We seldom think of women as criminals but there are thousands who spend their days in tiny cells or at hard labor in payment for sins they have committed against society. They, too, born of loving parents. They, too, are human.

This is my brother. The sharecropper who has become shiftless and worthless because of his ignorance and because of his physical conditions under which he has to live. He is not an animal. He is not a mere beast of burden although in many cases his reactions are hardly human and show little ambition or desire for self-improvement. He is not to blame, however, for a society which allows men to take advantage of poverty in other men and to make them into worse than slaves. That society is partially responsible for the shiftless sharecropper. The fact that he does not care to improve his condition does not relieve our obligation toward him. Thousands of years ago one man thought to relieve himself of responsibility by asking, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

This is my brother. His skin is black or brown, his parents they call Negro. Yet he is an American and puts his shoulder to the wheel in aiding American progress. He is not always good; he is not always honest, he is not always beautiful, but let him who is among us without sin cast the first stone. The Negro asks the opportunity to improve himself. He asks for education, for a living standard in which sanitation and good health become possible. He is human. He is one of God's children. He is my brother.

These, too, are my brothers. The Jew who has been hounded down through the centuries, who has been driven from one country to another, who dares to call no place home lest

BROTHERHOOD DAY.

Some of our churches may take Brotherhood Day seriously this year and devote one or more services and sermons to this problem on Sunday, February 23. An estranged world is in sore need of guidance. The church should rise to the occasion and endeavor to nurture the world in brotherhood.

Miss Muriel Lester, founder of Kingsley House in London and internationally known Christian social worker, reminded her Washington audience that our present frightful separations should force us to think in universal terms. It is imperative that we not allow ourselves to fall into political, ecclesiastical, or racial grooves, but rather that we should cultivate an inclusive point of view. When we pray in sincerity "Our Father," we learn to look upon the world's children as our own. Dr. E. Stanley Jones, speaking at the National Preaching Mission, testified that if we fail to measure up in this present emergency he had rather be a Chinese coolie when face to face with the judgment of God. Leland Stowe, who for seventeen months has watched the Hitler hordes swallow up small nations, returns with a report in which he paraphrases Lincoln's famous remark on the union to say: "The world cannot exist half slave and half free." Two years ago in the city of Portsmouth a forum lecturer pounded his refrain in a prophetic utterance: "You are not merely citizens of Virginia; you are citizens of the world." Brotherhood Day should be observed in the spirit and purpose of Him who carried the world on his heart.

ASSISTANCE TO WAR VICTIMS.

Many of our people will remember Dr. Boynton Merrill as the Chaplain at the Oberlin General Council. Others will remember his Seminar in Worship at Suffolk and Elon College and his address before the Eastern North Carolina Conference. He is now serving as Chairman of the Congregational Christian Committee for Assistance to War Victims. His sermon in this issue moved his church to the largest single benevolent offering in its history.

Dr. Merrill writes further:

"Lent is almost here. Those six weeks will serve to remind us all of the selfless courage with which Jesus faced the hatred which achieved his physical death but which also set his watchless spirit free to range and bless the world. Let us, in these coming weeks and in His name, lead our people into sacrificial giving that the shadowed period of Lent may, for the thousands to whom our gifts will go, be indeed a prelude and prophecy of the Easter joy and another proof of God's continuing love.

"Many Protestant denominations and churches are uniting to give their gifts for war relief on the first Sunday in Lent, March 2. Let us, as many of us as possible, unite with these millions to initiate Lent thus. I venture to suggest, however, that our giving on that day should really be but the prelude to an entire Lenten season of sacrifice."

A climax appeal for a million dollar war relief fund will be the first concerted effort of the reunited Methodist Churches on "Compassion Day," March 2. With eight million members of combined Methodism the slogan of the campaign is "one million from eight million." Half the fund will be set aside for relief of refugees and churches in warring sections of Europe and Asia, one fourth for the relief of British Methodism, and the remaining fourth for expansion in religious work in the vicinity of military camps in this nation.

Eleven churches in our Convention have raised through our Committee for Assistance to War Victims a total of $150.73. It is hoped that other churches will join in this humanitarian effort. Contributions may be sent through the office of the Promotional Secretary or directly to the treasurer, Mr. Elbert A. Harvey, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

NEW PERIODICALS.

Two new religious periodicals of general interest have recently appeared. "Current Religious Thought" is edited by Rev. Herbert D. Rugg, a former contributor to "The Christian Sun," and is published monthly in Oberlin, Ohio. This periodical offers to its readers a wide variety of current sermons and addresses.

"Christianity and Crisis," a bi-weekly journal of Christian opinion, edited by Reinhold Niebuhr, has a more specific purpose. The editors are convinced that we face the ultimate crisis of civilization. "We know to what degree totalitarianism represents false answers to our own unsolved problems, political, economic and spiritual. We think it dangerous to allow religious sensitivity to obscure the fact that Nazi tyranny intends to annihilate the Jewish race, to subject the nations of Europe to the dominion of a master race, to extirpate the Christian religion, to annul the liberties and legal standards which are the priceless heritage of ages of Christian and humanistic culture, to make truth the prostitute of political power, to seek world dominion through its satraps and allies, and generally to destroy the very fabric of our western civilization." In view of this condition the editor frankly writes, "We believe the task of defending the rich inheritance of our civilization to be an imperative one. The immediate task is the defeat of Nazi tyranny. If this task does not engage us, both our repentance and our hope become luxuries in which we indulge while other men save us from an intolerable fate, or while our inaction betrays into disaster a cause to which we owe allegiance."

The exact opposite position is advocated by such men as Allan Knight Chalmers, Kirby Page and A. J. Muste, members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. The Executive Committee of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, meeting on Feb- (Continued on page 13.)

OUR PREACHER FOR THIS WEEK IS THE REV. BOYNTON MERRILL, SECOND CHURCH IN NEWTON,
WEST NEWTON, MASS.

WHAT ON EARTH CAN I DO FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE?

I shall always be glad that I lived most of my early years on a New England farm where simple living, hard work, and close contact with the soil and with the stars was the order of the day. There, too, were the farmers, simple, stony, forceful men and women who, I suspect, are everywhere, really, the backbone of the nation. From the lips of country people there often fall terse phrases which express with brief clarity the fundamental convictions and hopes of men. These people who have daily contact with elemental things like the marching seasons, seed time and harvest; whose daily lives really depend upon what takes place in the heavens above their heads and in the earth beneath their feet, have a way of going quite simply to the very heart of things. Two such brief exclamations I used to hear very often upon my mother's lips. They have been repeating themselves over and over in my mind recently. These expressions were sometimes called forth by circumstances that were exasperating, but usually they represented a perplexed eagerness to do the right thing when it was almost impossible to see what to do or how to do it. One of these exclamations was this: "What on earth"—! The other was, "What for heaven's sake"—! And they were usually followed with the query, "can I do?" What on earth can I do? What, for heaven's sake, can I do? The implication was that there was very little that could be done.

A few months ago a deservedly eminent and beloved minister published a sermon with the subject: "What on Earth is God Doing?" I am sure it was a most excellent sermon. I did not read. But when I saw the title, my instant reaction was: "Yes, it is important to speculate on what God is doing in a time like this; but it is also important that I should ask myself what should I do, and what can I do in a time like this." Here am I, human, faulty, living on the earthly plane, but aware of the divine dimensions. What on earth can I do?

I want to unite these two exclamations of my mother's and suggest that they do represent in a homely way the state of mind of most of us who are sentenced to do our thinking and to live our lives in these distraught and tragic days. What on earth, for heaven's sake, can I do?

By the word "earth" I mean the actual life of the race as the human family lives it out in successive generations upon the planet. And by the word "heaven," I mean not that imagined land of milk and honey beyond the stars; I mean the actual existence of the ideal, not only as it casts its tremendous shadow into the minds and hearts of men, but as it lies eternally in the mind and will of God. What on earth, what here and now, can I do for heaven's sake? I have three things to suggest.

FIRST—We can refuse to believe for one moment that earth and heaven can ever be separated. God may be forgotten and denied, but He cannot be discharged. He cannot be drummed out of His world. Heaven and earth, God and man, are inseparably and forever linked. We can cling to and declare our faith that however viciously and brutally men may seek to divorce heaven and earth, man and God, the ideal and the actual, it cannot be done. We can refuse to let a passing storm, no matter how fearful it may be, shake us from our belief that the ideal is ultimate and real. We can remember that it is part of our inheritance and right as human beings to believe and to declare that as the cloudless empyrean overarches all earthborn clouds and storms, so the eternal God abides, unalterable, above all the tragedy and in the midst of all the turmoil of earth.

"The Christian religion was nurtured and came to earthly fruition in a world dominated by a philosophy of might and challenged by a political system which totally disregarded the rights of the Christian conscience. More than once since that time, nations have turned their backs upon God, but they have learned that He cannot be mocked with immunity, nor His purposes for the world circumvented. It is a man's failure to conform to God's order as revealed in Jesus Christ that has brought the world to its present chaos. Our supreme task is to be His witnesses to the world that has so largely and so tragically repudiated Him."

What on earth can I do for heaven's sake? I can believe and I can declare that God's will can never be permanently defeated. The ideal and the actual may seem poles apart but they are forever linked. They are parts of a universe in which men are free by virtue of free will and in which they are prone, by virtue of ignorance and wickedness, to dash themselves against the unprepared cliff of God's purposes. But, though like the waves of the sea, they dash themselves to bits they are yet, like the waves of the sea, still close up against the cliffs of the eternal. What on earth, for heaven's sake, can I do? I can believe that nothing, not even man's willful sin and tragic folly can separate him from the will; nay more from the love, the long-suffering love of God who, though we fling ourselves away in tragic revolt, yet does not, can not, will not let us go.

SECOND—We can so far as in us lies, and so far as we can discern God's will for us, seek to do that will in our own daily lives. God is a spirit, but until spirit becomes incarnate it apparently cannot become effective in the midst of life. Not even God can minister to our human world until He has captured and commanded the hearts, and hands, and lips and feet of men and women. "God is a spirit"; "God is Love." So we say and so we believe; but love must be made incarnate if it is to lift and bless our needy world. The most moving revelation which God has made of Himself and the one which has altered the whole life of the human race has been His revelation in the Lord Jesus Christ. In these days of hatreds and of ruthless passions we can prove to men everywhere that God still seeks to make Himself incarnate. On this earth where we dwell, in the name and spirit of the God of Love, we must reach out with loving hands and send our feet on loving errands. We can and we must, on earth for heaven's sake, do the tender things that must be done. "Ye are my disciples if ye do whatsoever I command you: this is my commandment, that ye love one another." This spirit of love must be made manifest, not only by our words, but by our deeds. I come to you today with a specific and definite call to rise up and to prove to men whom you will never see that the love of God is real and that it can reach out to him through you.

Cataclysmic disasters are sweeping the world. Whole continents, huge cities, the islands of the sea are today under the curse of hate, and war and

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On our return from Miami we passed through Maitland, Fla., and called upon Mrs. Fred Bullock who is again at her home. Her address is R. F. D., Maitland, Fla. Her physician says she must remain in bed for the next three months for absolute rest. She will appreciate a letter from her friends. Her condition has improved.

We attended two church services in St. Petersburg, Fla., on Sunday, February 9. In the morning we attended the First Methodist Church. A large congregation in the main auditorium numbering about 2,500 heard a great sermon by the pastor, Dr. Allen Moore. The first floor was well filled by a congregation which heard the service over the church broadcasting system. We were told that the combined congregations totaled about 4,000. At night we attended a service of music given by students of Southern College, at the First Congregational Church. About 1,000 people attended that service.

In St. Petersburg we called upon Mrs. A. M. Johnson, a member of the Christian Temple, Norfolk. We had a pleasant visit also with Mr. S. M. Smith, formerly of Norfolk, Va. Mr. Smith is deeply interested in the Human Relations Clinic which is being conducted under his direction at the city Y. M. C. A. He is happy in this new field of service. People from all walks of life—young and old—come to his office to tell their troubles and seek his advice. The majority of people who come have passed middle life. If the church could enlist the cooperation and consecration of youth and give proper guidance and direction to social activities there would not be so many derelicts in middle life. Two difficulties are met in this field: the church is not always alert to its opportunity and young people are not easily impressed with the importance of moral responsibility. The dangerous places are not always known to those who travel along the highway of life. Sometimes people fail to use what knowledge they have.

The national defense program is being rapidly developed in Florida. This is marked where the air fields are located. By day and by night the roar of airplanes is heard in those vicinities. One wonders what the future may bring. In the future a great air base may be regarded as a menace to a community. At the present time a passing airplane excites interest and curiosity. A thousand airplanes in the air might create a panic of fear, when the people on the street consider the possibilities of a sudden crash in their midst. For example, a citizen of Orlando said: "We think the tourists are not coming to our city in as large numbers this year because they do not like to be near the airport, and they do not like the noise at night." Tourists are beginning to seek tourist homes and camps located some distance from the principal highways. The noise of passing cars and trucks at night is disturbing to people who seek sleep and rest. The great highways are good for business, but in the future the most desirable residences will not be erected near them. In the cities the residents are giving this matter serious consideration. In the country the farmers will deal with the problem in the future.

At home again and at work. A vacation is fine when it is needed. But work is the greatest blessing to humanity. To be able to work and be busy is better than great riches and idleness. We were interviewed by an ardent advocate of the Townsend Plan, in St. Petersburg, who told us we should join him in voting for its adoption. He said we should retire from all work, get $200.00 per month by the Townsend Plan, and spend it all every month. Our reply was this: "It would be a calamity to face this kind of retirement and will you tell me how a retired man can spend $200.00 a month?" Give us work and poverty in preference to that.

THE COLLEGE FARM.

When the friends of Elon College and the church at large read or hear about the Elon College Farm, they may have some serious misgivings, and I do not blame them. The writer was reared on a farm and is perfectly acquainted with the hazards as well as the possible benefits.

The college for its students draws quite largely from rural sections. Many of our students are acquainted with the farm. Others would like to know more about it.

The college has at least two friends who are interested in seeing the institution enlarge its activities so as to offer different and greater opportunities of a practical nature to its students. One of these friends who is not a member of the church and not an alumnus of the college strongly advocated the farm idea and backed up his interest in this particular with a gift of $5,000 for specific purposes. The other friend joined with him in the idea, and so we are off to a new adventure. If you do not agree, at least wish us success. We are using the farm as a means of student help. Students who wish an education but who do not have funds, by taking six years to graduate, working four hours a day during the school year and through the summer months, the college proposes in lieu of the students' work to grant them all college expenses other than those of a personal nature such as clothing, books, laundry, etc. Six students have applied and been accepted. This is about all that we can use at present. At present the college is spending $18,000 to $20,000 a year for articles for the dining room that are produced on someone's farm. I see no reason why we should not produce our own requirements. I believe we can and believe that we can do it more cheaply than we can buy. At any rate, the college has approximately two hundred acres of land for this purpose without cost to the college. We are under obligation to make the effort, and in full confidence we set ourselves to the task. We feel that the constituency at large will appreciate at least an effort on our part to help ourselves. This should be of encouragement to others to help in our program to eliminate our debt.

A VIEW OF HUMANITY.

Today a twelve-year-old child knocked at the door of the home where we teachers board. He had made his way down the mountain side by foot to the nearest telephone. His father had been in bed since January 8, at which time he was operated on for appendicitis. This child had come to try to get some doctor to come to the little mountain hut to see why his father's side was not healing.

Three of us decided that we would take the child back home. When we had driven the distance, the child asked us to come inside and see his father.

The house had a front room which sheltered a bed, a dresser, a fireplace and four chairs. The kitchen was directly in back of the front room and could be viewed through the door which was open. The two rooms were clean even though very bare.

The father lay in the bed. He told

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Guess what? I went to Sunday school this morning! I didn't really know how much I had been missing it until I got back this morning. My class of girls are an inspiration to me and I just love to be with them.

Where was Oliver? Oh, he was here at home in his little bed. One of the other members of our church, a mother who has a little boy and girl big enough to take to Sunday school, brought the children's nurse to stay with Oliver while I went to Sunday school with them. Wasn't that thoughtful? It is good to have Christian friends to help you isn't it? Often we just talk about being and doing good but this lady lets the good deeds which she does speak for her.

Charlotte, I am sorry that you and Jesse have been so ill. We all hope that both of you are able to play in the sunshine today. I wish that you could have seen Oliver this morning after I got home, Charlotte. I fed him his milk and cereal and after a bit I held the blue rattle baby which you brought to him just above his hands. He reached up and caught it by the left left leg and did he have fun! He and the doll had a great time. Every time he succeeded in making it rattle he grinned and tried again. We took him to the doctor this week for his check-up. He weighs thirteen pounds and five ounces and the doctor said he was in good health. He likes his nurse who weighs him, but he cried when the doctor started listening to his heart! Doctor said that he could have cereal twice a day now and half of an egg yolk. He eats out of the little silver spoon which he got for Christmas, just as if he were an old person. Oh yes, he laughs aloud even when getting his bath now and tries so hard to talk. He likes people and isn't afraid of new faces.

Our crossword puzzle this week has words about home and families in it.

Our letter this week is from Nellie Ann Hosaflook. I am going to write to her real soon and ask her to do something for us. We all thank you for thinking about writing to us and really doing so.

Dear Mrs. Todd:

How are you and Oliver? I hope you are all right. I am O. K.

I still read the Children's Page in "The Christian Sun," and I enjoy it very much. I go to church every Sunday, and I haven't missed any since the first of the year.

We are going to have a social at our church on Valentine's night.

I have been very much interested in Oliver. I like to hear about him. Will you please put a picture of him in the page? I would like very much to see him.

I am twelve years old and I am in the seventh grade at the Linville-Edom school.

Here's wishing you luck with your page in "The Christian Sun."

A MOTHER.

It was summer in England. She was by the sea with a group of tents and a trailer behind her. Her back was bent over a fire but a greater light than the firelight shone from her face. She was frying "flap-jacks" or hot cakes. They looked as American as did her rugged face. "Come, get them, those who want them!" The tents which had been so quiet came alive. Children, lean and ragged, came from the tents, their bare feet kissing the soft grass of the English countryside. Eagerly they attack the stack of cakes which they drown in rich sirup.

She used to be an Ohio girl before she married an Englishman. Everyone in Ohio has hot cakes for breakfast. One summer while visiting in her native country with her family, a sudden storm overtook their boat on a quiet lake in New York. Her two small sons were drowned. She held on to the hand of one as long as she could before letting go.

The sun went to bed on the English countryside. The little children followed its example by slipping away into the tents. This mother of the poor children from London's slums sat on the steps of the trailer telling her story to an interested friend. A little ragged boy crept from the tent and crowded next to her on the step. "I am afraid like last night," he told her. She drew forth a harmonica and played the folk songs of her native America until the little boy was soon asleep against her.

We see her again. This time in a theatre where hundreds of children were gathered. The theatre was in a small English town where evacuated children from London were seeing the picture. A fire broke out. This woman led all but ten of 250 children to safety. Then she stayed with the ten, playing her mouth organ until the end, so that they would not be afraid.

children, are developing into such promising young men.

As a whole the church seems very appreciative and an effort is being made to get a better understanding among its constituency.

Despite the long wintry January, and elondy, cold February days, the warm sunshine will be here soon and it wouldn't surprise me to see the Albemarle Church make the port yet.

Already we have one half of our Conference apportionments raised. That's not so bad for a little over two months on the field.

TRAINED WORKERS NEEDED.

In a recent issue we ran a statement from Miss Dorothy P. Cushing, news editor of our American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, in which she stated that there was an immediate need for trained workers on the foreign field. Below are given some of the opportunities for service which are offered by the Board. If it so happens that one or more of our readers is interested and can qualify for any of these places, they will be making a lasting contribution to the cause of the Kingdom by contacting the Board at 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. The list follows:

Doctors, preferably married, are needed for posts in Foochow, Fenchow and Taiku, North China; Wai, India; Mt. Silinda, East Africa and Dondi, West Africa. A nurse is desired for Dondi, Portuguese West Africa, who will train and supervise both men and women native nurses.

Educators, six young women and two men, are needed for Africa, China, India and Turkey. A principal, a married man, is desired for Mt. Silinda Institute, Southern Rhodesia, Africa, a school for training primitive African boys and girls.

The Christian character of each applicant must be satisfactorily attested. The American Board requires college or university graduation, or its equivalent, plus professional courses with appropriate degrees. All recruits, except those who go for "short-term service," are expected to learn a vernacular language. In some cases two languages are required.

Military disturbance is no new thing for the American Board. Its first missionary reached Calcutta on the brink of the war of 1812. For over 130 years the American Board, and its missions have weathered revolutions, wars and massacres. The Board stated its position in these times of crisis at its last Plenary Session in October. Among other things it said: "Suffering members of other races need fellowship and help. Missionaries embody the active goodwill of American Christians. Difficulties already face them. There will be increased danger and there may be suffering and death. There is no honorable discharge from the church's war against evil at home or abroad."

In this educational group needed is a young woman trained in general academic subjects or home economics, with rural experience if possible, for Inanda Seminary, first and finest school for Zulu girls in South Africa; a teacher for girls in Dondi, Portuguese West Africa; a teacher for Capron Hall School for Girls, Madura, India, and for the Bible Training School, Ahmednagar, India.

A young man is desired, qualified in mathematics and with musical abilities, if possible, for American College, Tarsus, Turkey, and a young woman trained in home economics for the American Collegiate Institute, Izmir, Turkey.

Two young women especially trained in Religious Education and social work are needed for service with the churches of Tientsin and Paotingfu, North China, the latter in rural areas.

Five ordained young men, preferably married, are desired for work with the Ovimbundus in Angola, West Africa and at Galangue. The latter post it is hoped will be filled by an American Negro couple. Also needed are a theologically-trained couple for South Africa and China in predominantly rural fields. In Madura, India, a man and wife are desired for church and general religious and educational district work in a rural area requiring knowledge of agriculture and economics.

APPRECIATION.

As a native of the hills, and a member of Elk Spur Christian Church, I would like to express the appreciation of the people of this section who have been, and now are being, remembered by our many friends of the Southern Convention. Valuable articles have been received and distributed to thirty-one needy families. If our many friends (many of whom have never seen these hills) could see the expressions on the faces of those who are being remembered, I am sure they would realize that their efforts are not in vain.

Valuable clothing, books, magazines, etc., have been received from the following places since conference last November, viz.: Luray, Suffolk, Windsor, Va.; Albmarle, Durham, Burlington, New Lebanon, Shallow Ford, N. C., and possibly other places that we do not know of.

Yours for Christ,

Mrs. ANDREW E. HORTON.

We are delighted that the offerings this week brought our figures up to a gain over the amount we had this time last year. The Conference collections coming to us did much to bring our total up. We now have a gain of $251.17 over the amount this time last year. Can't we keep it in the "gain" rather than go back? There are several Sunday schools that used to send a monthly offering for missions, but who have not done so now for the past six months. We would appreciate it very much if you would begin once more this method of sending in your mission money. Mission period begins in just two weeks, so let us keep this in mind and resolve that we will raise more money for missions this year than we have in the past few years.

death. Millions of innocent men and women and children are suffering tragically. We must not pass by on the other side. We must rise up and go forth to heal the wounds and lessen the suffering of those who are the victims of this ruthless and far-flung of wars. We cannot, we must not wait for other Christian men and women, for other Christian Churches, to step into the vanguard and lead us on. We must ourselves step forward here and now, in this place, today, and throughout many days to come. The need is going to be infinitely greater before it will be less. Therefore we must, I say, here and now, in this place and in the days ahead, prove that we are ready and willing, on earth and for heaven's sake, really to do something sacrificial.

I have recently been asked to serve the denomination, of which this church has been for a hundred and sixty years and more a part, as chairman of a committee to bring assistance to those who are the victims of this war. The Congregational Christian Churches of the country are being asked, not only to prove that the love of God is real, real enough to move them to sacrificial giving, but that it is real enough to send them out with faith and hope and love under the dark clouds of war with the instruments of mercy and tenderness which can alone give food and clothes and care to the thousands who perish for need of these things.

Scores of our own churches and hundreds of other Christian Churches in England have already been toppled and ruined. Hundreds of thousands of little children are this day in desperate distress in the so-called unoccupied areas of France. The fires of faith have been trampled and the light of hope has almost gone out in hundreds of the churches in Central Europe. For nearly four years there has been fearful suffering in China. The world around there are missionaries who have been giving their lives in Christ's name, who are today without subsistence and any hope of help because their European sponsors are themselves crushed and helpless. Thousands of religious and political refugees have managed to make their way to our own shores or are waiting with desperate hope and eagerness upon the shores of Europe to find passage to this place of refuge. These men and women have landed or will land here, as did our ancestors, for the sake of conscience and freedom. They must find, not "a stern and rock-bound coast"; they must find friends, and help, and hope and new life in this strange land. What on earth can we do, you and I, for heaven's sake, and for the sake of these our fellow Christians and for the sake of human beings who are not Christian perhaps?

What on earth can we do? We can open our homes. We can open our hearts. We can open our purses. We can translate into loving deeds, we can translate into money, into food, into medicine, into warmth and welcome the pity that we feel. In a world and in a time when the tides of hate are running swiftly and the waves of passion are mounting high we can, from our full hearts and out of our safety and abundance send forth a flooding tide of help and tenderness. This we can do on earth, here and now, you and I, not only for heaven's sake, but for the sake of these men and women whose hearts and whose hopes are exactly like our own hearts and hopes.

This Committee for Assistance to War Victims, which is the committee of your own church, does not intend to administer these gifts at all. We have neither the machinery nor the ability to do this. We intend simply to serve as a channel through which these gifts of love and money shall be guided into a half dozen tested and proven organizations which are in a position to render merciful, efficient service in the name of Christ to His distressed and needy ones. You can make your gift today. You can make it tomorrow. You can make it when even your heart moves you to make it. I can see this church rising to new levels of sacrifice and outgoing love. You can prove to me, your minister who knows and loves you and has had ample proof of your goodness many times, you can prove to yourselves, and you can prove to those nameless ones to whom you will be forever nameless, that your hearts are open and that the love of God is still at work in the world. This is what you can do. I beg you to do it.

THIRD—We can continue to do, steadfastly and faithfully, what happens to be our daily work in life. We can do very little about Moscow, and Rome, and Berlin and London. We can do very little sometimes, we feel, about Washington even. We can do a great deal in West Newton. We can do a great deal in and through our church. We may do very little to influence those men whose names fill the columns of the papers, but we can do a great deal with the man or woman who walks in our shoes, works with our hands and speaks through our lips. We can and we must keep our own local work strong and steady and sweet. We must in no least degree let slip the great ongoing enterprises of the Christian Church. These great efforts which have been in a certain sense the glory and the crown of the out-reaching, world-changing church of Christ throughout the centuries must not, in this hour of crisis, be allowed to slip or fall. The third thing that we can do on earth for heaven's sake is to "rally the good in the depths of ourselves." We can, as Thomas Carlyle put it, "do the duty that lies nearest."

We need as individuals and we need as institutions to keep steady. We must do each day's work quietly and well. We must do it a little better because we are living in a day of crisis and of testing. It is so very easy to dissipate much energy and to add to the general confusion by rushing off north, south, east and west all at once, when probably most of us will render our greatest service by "sticking to our last" until some other duty is clearly indicated. I am deeply concerned that this church should send her light quite far, but her light will not stream out through the darkness unless it blazes first in this place. You may give generously here today and I believe you will; for only thus will the blessing sweep past our borders to bless many a far-off life. Our continuing and imperative task is to labor steadily here. Day after day, month after month, year after year, we must put the mind of Christ, and His spirit, into the minds and hearts of such boys and girls and men and women as shall turn aside to us here." "First to thine own self be true.

What on earth can we do for heaven's sake? We can "at the post where he hath set us" do our simple, steady best. We can do it without fear. We can do it in faith. Second, we can set free, and send forth pity and the love which we feel and which are, I believe, God resident within us. We can translate these into deeds of love and pity. We can, by our generous and continued giving, making men and women sure once more, not only that God lives, but that The Great Physician who walked by blue Galilee still walks the roadways of the world. Third, we can, for heaven's sake on earth, here and now, refuse to let the fury and the folly of men who have turned their backs upon God make us think for one moment that God has turned His back upon us! We can declare both in word and in deed that it is our deep and abiding conviction that "behind the dim Unknown standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above His own."

LENTEN READING.

It is not surprising that in these times when we are so distressed with perplexity and confusion that young people and adults alike are seeking to reaffirm the value and necessity of personal religion. It is a hopeful sign. Not that what we call "personal religion" has thereby become a method of escape or retreat from reality is this true. The reason lies more deeply in the fact—which experience confirms—that the serious questions of life must be finally resolved within the sanctuary of our own souls. Perspective, courage, and vision are the consequences of an abiding inner faith. These days force upon us, therefore, the need for a deeper personal religion.

It is in this attitude, I believe, that we should welcome the Lenten season this year. Lent is a time for "examination of life and for discipline in the way of Christian living." And all of us may wisely accept every impulse, follow every pathway which leads to this end.

This article is written with the simple purpose of suggesting briefly some of the tools in the form of devotional reading, which might help us in the thoughtful examination and discipline of our lives.

As an introductory guide to the devotional life, Dwight Bradley's Highways of the Spirit (35c) is especially helpful. It is a brief discussion of the use of the Bible and other devotional literature, private meditation and prayer, and religious growth through fellowship, social action and leadership.

Recently there has appeared an able little book, The Lower Levels of Prayer ($1.50) by George S. Stewart. Written with simplicity and deeper devotional insight and feeling, it is a masterful aid to those who are learning to pray. The volume is a mine of suggestive helps for enriching one's life by intensifying the "lower levels of prayer." Douglas Steere's Prayer and Worship (50c), a smaller book which covers a wider scope, is written in a comparably simple style and reveals the same sincerity and clear insight into the devotional life. Muriel Lester's Ways of Praying (20c) is likewise an invaluable little pamphlet.

Four devotional classics which have been sources of inspiration for centuries may also be mentioned here: Augustine's Confessions (90c), Thos. A. Kempis' Imitation of Christ (50c), Brother Lawrence's Practice of the Presence of God (15c), and John Woolman's Journal and Other Writings (90c).

The Manhood of the Master ($1.35) by Harry Emerson Fosdick is a revealing study of Jesus, and it is especially good for Lenten reading.

Also, do not fail to have your society get sufficient copies of Lenten Devotions for Young People by Rev. Richard P. Carter. These may be secured from the Promotional Secretary for 2 cents a copy.

(The books listed above may be purchased from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., at the prices indicated.)

ASHEBORO YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Young People's Fellowship, an intermediate group of the Asheboro Church, have been studying for the past two months about the migrant workers—their problems and the peculiar problem which they present the Christian conscience. Each Sunday evening, chapters have been read from Otto Nall's book, Move On, Youth, and these have formed the basis for study and discussion. The Asheboro group have now prepared a box, including clothes, toys, pictures, and other articles which will be sent to a Florida migratory center. With the box they will also send letters of greeting to which they hope to receive replies. Future plans call for a play, depicting migrant life, to be presented before the church.

NEWS NOTE.

Of special interest to all the young people of the convention is the announcement that Miss Luey Eldredge is expected in this area next month for a series of Pilgrim Fellowship conferences. "Miss Luey" holds a place of esteem and admiration in the hearts of each of us, and we shall welcome her visit. Her coming is an event to which we may look forward with eager anticipation and serious planning.

HOW ONE MINISTER SOLVED THE PROBLEM OF HIS YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING.

By DR. HARRY WESTBROOK REED.

During my ministry in the North we were troubled, as many leaders of youth are troubled, in maintaining interest and attendance in our young people's meetings on Sunday evening. There were, on the average, about twelve or fifteen young people, whose attendance was due more to their loyalty than their interest. It is more difficult to keep up the interest of a small group than a large one. We tried, I think, the usual methods which other groups had used, some of which were more or less artificial, but we seemed unable to increase either the membership or the interest.

Fortunately the church was very well equipped with facilities for playing games. Two bowling alleys, one carom and two pocket billiards tables, indoor shuffleboard court, quoits and several smaller games.

We proposed to the young people that we would give over to them the entire use of this equipment one night a week, if they could make use of it. After the matter had been thoroughly discussed in one of their meetings, Bainbridge B. Leland, who was president of this high school group, asked why they could not hold their devotional meeting and discussion the same night instead of holding it on Sunday night. We were just as much surprised as we were delighted. Why not? The young people could be just as serious on a week-day night as on Sunday. And if this is what they really wanted to do then why not let them do it? At least they could try it.

The selection of the evening was interesting. After thoroughly discussing the merits and demerits of each week-day evening, taking into consideration school work and various affairs which claim the interest of young people, they unanimously selected Saturday evening. This, too, was somewhat surprising. But when you think it through, which I have not the space here to discuss, you can understand how natural and wise the selection really was.

The adopted plan called for the devotional meeting and discussion to begin at 7:15 o'clock. This would last from forty-five minutes to one hour and a quarter, and even longer at times when "discussion" was good,

JESUS CALLS TO PRAYER.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 23, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 18.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 62:1-7.

GOLDEN TEXT: Lord, teach us to pray.—Luke 11:1.

Jesus had a great deal to say about prayer. He knew the importance not only of right but of living, vital relationships between the spirit in man, and God, the loving Heavenly Father. Whatever else prayer may have been in the thinking of Jesus, it was primarily a matter of fellowship, friendship and communion between God and man. In today's lesson He emphasizes two important aspects of prayer.

Persistence in Prayer.

As a means of emphasizing the necessity for, and persistence in, prayer, or calling attention to the fact that prayer at its best is a continuing process, Jesus told the story of a widow in a certain city who again and again went to a judge asking for justice against one who had done her wrong. The judge was rather hard hearted and indifferent. For a long time he paid no attention to the woman, but finally, in self defense, he granted her request, "Though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest she wear me out by her continual coming." Jesus then added, "Hear what the unrighteous judge saith. And shall not God avenge his elect, that cry to him day and night, and yet he is longsuffering over them? I say unto you, that he will avenge them speedily." Jesus does not mean, of course, that God is careless or indifferent to human needs. Neither does he mean that God is like the judge in this story. The point is that prayer at its best is continuous, is persistent. The finest fruits and the most lasting rewards of prayer do not come through spasmodic praying. True prayer is not a hit-or-miss method, but when there is a sincere, earnest spirit that persists in season and out of season, that accepts no barriers, that refuses to be discouraged by seeming lack of answer, and that refuses to be denied—for prayer of this kind there are rich rewards and good fruits. It might be well to call attention to the fact that in the well known words of Jesus, "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." The verb in each case denotes continued action—if we keep asking, if we keep knocking, we shall receive, we shall find, and it shall be opened unto us.

Humility and Penitence in Prayer.

Jesus emphasizes another aspect of prayer by another story. It is a story of two men who went up in the Temple to pray, one a Pharisee, another a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, "God, I thank Thee that I am not as the rest of men, not an extortioner, nor unjust, or an adulterer, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I get." As one reads it, one wonders whether the man was really praying, or whether he was delivering an eulogy about himself. He called attention to his freedom from vices, as well as to the excellence of his virtues. There was no sense of sin, nor of need, no sense of fellowship with God, no expression of love to God, nothing of that which is the very essence of true religion. It is quite significant that like so many other men he compared himself not with the best of people, but with the worst. Any man can rate pretty high in this standard. As Dean Brown says, his prayer never got any higher than his bloated head. What a traversity upon prayer these words are. He paraded his self-righteousness before God, who regards self-righteousness as filthy rags. He took pride in the keeping of the jot and tittle of the law. He called attention to his supposed generosity. But according to the words of Jesus himself, he lacked the essential spirit of true prayer and true religion. His sense of self-complacency, and contempt of others puts him in the same class of the Negro who said, "O Lord, the more I sees of other people the more I likes myself."

The other fellow in the story was a publican, a man who made no pretence of formal religion as such, a man who was a kind of social and religious outcast from the standpoint of the Pharisees. He also went up to the temple to pray, but he had a sense of humility and of penitence, and he did not go into the temple itself. He stood afar off, and with bowed head and deep penitence, he cried out, "God, be merciful to me a sinner." He had no virtues to parade before the Lord, or if he had them he knew that at best that they were insufficient. He did not count the good deeds which he had done, although he might have had such deeds to recount. He had a deep sense of need, he had the spirit of penitence, he had a sense of dependence upon God, he had a great yearning for forgiveness, for reconciliation, he had a deep sense of sin. We have the word of Jesus himself that this man, as we would say, not a member of the church, went down to his home justified, rather than the Pharisee, a member of the church, who punctiliously kept every jot and tittle of the law. Jesus drew the moral from this story, "Everyone that exalteth himself shall be humbled, but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

A poet, Richard Crashaw, thus describes the scene:

Two went to pray: oh! rather say,
One went to brag, the other to pray.
One stands up close, and treads or high,
Where the other dares not send his eye.
One nearer to God's altar trod,
The other to the altar's God.

A VIEW OF HUMANITY.

of an ugly sore which had formed near the incision of the appendectomy. He was worried and his face looked feverish. The mother admitted that she was sick and that the child had had to miss school to wait on his parents.

The son went out to try to find eggs to cook for his sick father. We asked about their needs. Twice during the month, the mother visits the welfare office where she receives fat-back, barley flour, grapefruit, apples, potatoes and two small sacks of corn meal. Due to unfortunate circumstances, she was unable to tend a garden or can anything during the summer. She admitted that the barley flour made her think of "shorts," and she told of going to the welfare on "nigger" day by mistake!

We're going back up there this afternoon to take some sweet milk, white flour, soup mixture and something that will be nourishing and tempting to a sick man. But what we take will be only a square meal for a day or so.

Don't look for a plea! But, I'm just wondering: "Are we our brother's keeper?"

MONDAY.

TO THE CHILDREN.

"The instruction of thy Father . . . and the law of thy Master . . . shall be an armament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck."
—Prov. 1: 8-10.

Still thinking about parental responsibility and children's response to it, let the children listen. Our text is a figure of speech referring to the reward of clean living which will be a non-diseased body, a clean conscience, offspring that will not be deformed because of disease, a good character, a good citizen ready for both family and national right, prosperity and favor with God.

Prayer—O God, give us all wisdom and instruction, understanding and discretion, the fear of the Lord and eternal devotion to His Kingdom. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ASSURED BENEFITS.

"A wise man will hear."—Prov. Prov. 1: 5.

If parents give the instruction to their children, then the children will benefit. The main item in that instruction is example.

You don't have to tell how you live each day, You don't have to say it if you work or play; For a tired and true barometer—right in its place . . . However you live, my friend, it will show in your face.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, shine thou in our souls that as the light of the sun gives light, life and glory, we may shine for others to the glory of Jesus Christ. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE SIN OF CROOKED REASONING.

"Their root shall be as rottenness . . . because they have cast away the law of the Lord."—Isa. 5: 24. (Read verses 18-24.)

Today our attention is directed to those who sin with such abandon that it seems as though they were in a contest to see who could sin the most. Our attention is directed to those who sin by taking short cuts of advantage for selfish purposes or purposes of personal pleasure, thus setting aside the laws of right and God as though they are able to stand God's judgment. Crooked doings mock God and invoke His judgment upon our heads. God is not mocked, and He will not keep silent forever.

Prayer—O dear Father, forbid that we shall put "bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter." Grant unto us Thy Spirit and wisdom to see the end and live each day right and holy unto the Lord. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE SOURCE OF SORROWFUL LIVING."

"Let us not be weary in well doing: For in due season we shall reap if we faint not."—Gal. 6: 9. (Read verses 1-10.)

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—verse 8.

We often discuss the law of cause and effect. It is brought to the forefront in the past year's holocaust of the world. Well, the great law of cause and effect is a law of God Himself. It is expressed in our second text. It is a law of "kind." If you plant cotton you get cotton. If you sow wild oats you reap wild oats; and so with thorns and thistles, etc.

Why do men think that this principle will not hold in every-day living? Why does he not know that if he sows to dishonesty he will reap the fruit of dishonesty; to the flesh there comes corruption; to adultery there is shame, disgrace, poverty, sorrow, regret, pain and death.

Prayer—Our Father, the source of all purity and right, the Giver of all blessing, purify our hearts for the Master's use, and may we know no sin. Amen.

FRIDAY.

STAYING AWAY FROM EVIL.

"He that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. 6: 8.

The law of cause and effect works just as well the other way. To stay away from ungodly things and live pure lives, think clean thoughts and walk circumspectively, brings happiness, joy, pleasure, health, character, virtue, honor, prosperity and a clean conscience here on earth, to say nothing of the reward in heaven.

Prayer—O Lord, we thank Thee for the new day, for all its blessedness, for all its opportunities. Help us to enter upon its duties with singleness of heart, fervency of spirit and joy in Thy way. Give us strength not to be weary in well doing, nor to faint or falter by the way. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE CURE FOR FEAR.

"Resist steadfast in the faith."—1 Peter 5: 9.

That is the answer. During the past year we have shivered with fear, gone into hysteria and suffered devastating consequences. Midst it all there have been staid souls who have held many more on an even keel; all because of their faith in the ultimate triumph of God and His good over all evil.

The cure for all this is a child-like trust in the unfailing wisdom, love and power of God. Cast your care on Him and He banishes fear.

Prayer—O Father, we bless Thy name that we may trust Thee. Help us to do so implicitly. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE WAY TO TRUST.

"They are they which testify of me."—John 5:39.

The text refers to a constant reading and study of the Bible. In the Navy each officer has his Navy Regulations and other books relating to his job. He cannot serve the Navy without them. Compliance with them is necessary. Each sailor has his Blue Jackets Manual for his guidance. He must know this book to do anything right in his rating.

The Bible is God's book. It is the book of life and living. Without a working knowledge of it we cannot be godly teachers of our children; we cannot go right; we cannot plan well the seed-sowing of life; we are void of power to withstand transportation; and we are subject to devastating fear.

To have a working knowledge of it and obey its instructions gives one an indescribable sense of nearness to God; it gives him an inexplainable power to foster His Spirit, and an indomitable faith that reaches beyond things as they span time and eternity to the glory of God. Often we think we cannot pay. What is more to it, any way? Friends, we find that the Book induces prayer, gives us the things to live for and the things to pray for; in it prayers become not only easy but spontaneous.

God bless you this Sabbath day. Let not the sanctuary suffer through your neglect.

bruary 11, 1941, adopted a statement which warned that a foreign policy which urged Britain to continue to fight and yet had no intention of sending an American expeditionary force to aid her, was both "selfish and shabby." The statement said, ". . . so we might keep Germany and Britain fighting each other, until they are exhausted and we should thus dispose of two of our imperialistic rivals at one stroke. Stalin is pursuing such a policy in Europe. And like in China, where he gives Chiang Kai-Shek's regime enough aid to keep fighting the Japanese, but not enough for a decisive victory. Indeed, our own Oriental policy of giving aid to China while selling supplies to Japan adds up to much the same thing."

The statement pointed out that "even if American imperialism were temporarily successful at this game, it would be an empty victory. We should have helped to create a desert in many parts of the earth, and there would be no customers in it, though it were called peace." If the task of restoring millions of demobilized soldiers and armament workers to peaceful employment "should involve too much sacrifice of power from the holders of privilege" so that America stayed on a war-footing after the war and abandoned even a pretense of returning to democratic processes and began to prepare for World War III, the statement said, "We shudder to think of the state of our nation after this second crusade for democracy when the American people wake up to find what it really has been about.

The true defense of America's democracy, it is asserted, depends on "devoting America's full strength" to problems of social reorganization at home. If this were done, the statement continues, "the war tortured and impoverished peoples of Europe and Asia would not follow the siren call of any dictator to make overseas war upon us when we were not aiding war against them. Rather they would demand peace and democracy for themselves and their children in their own land. The demonstration that democracy works would strike a mortal blow at Fascism; in no other way can democracy be made "impregnable."

Calling for a "peace offensive now," the President and Congress are urged to put through "a genuine and thorough New Deal in international relations," including a peaceful armada of food for Europe and Asia, and sharing in building after the war "some sort of federal world government and an economic organization of the world in which all peoples would have equal access to the earth's resources."

cient president, Mrs. L. H. Huey, we are enjoying our work and much interest is being manifested. With good attendance at each meeting, we meet twice a month, the business meeting is held at the church the first of the month, and the second meeting, different members of the society entertain in the home with a social to follow the meeting.

Our first project for the new year was to furnish a room at Southern Union College, Wadley, Ala. This room is in the boys' dormitory and was dedicated to the young people of the Roanoke District, who may in days to come attend this college. At the present time one young man from Roanoke is in attendance there, and we are very happy that he can enjoy this furniture while attending Southern Union.

One other interesting feature of our society is our "Forget-Me-Not." We draw names the first of the year and send some little inexpensive gift to our "Forget-Me-Not" as often as you wish to during the year. It is a real joy to do this.

Our society planted grass seed on the church lawn in the fall, and the green grass beautifies the church quite a bit these gloomy days.

We plan to observe the World Day of Prayer, February 28.

OUR FRIEND BOYD WRITES AGAIN.

The Christian Church and Elon College certainly have a devoted and earnest friend in the person of Mr. Patriek N. Boyd. His friendship and interest are expressed not merely by words but by deeds as well. In Bro. Boyd's opinion the future of the church is tied up with the future of her institutions, that the support of the church as such without concern for her institutions must eventually fail in highest expectations. In order to help and demonstrate beyond a question his affection for his church and her institutions, Bro. Boyd does not hesitate to make personal sacrifices. In a letter received this week expressing again his devotion to his church and college, he enclosed an additional check of $75.00. This is certainly generous of Brother Boyd, and the college wishes to take this opportunity to express publicly its appreciation of these frequent and generous contributions that the college may be freed of its debts.

No doubt there are at least one thousand others among the alumni and membership of the church who are just as able to contribute as is our generous friend. I hope that others may take up the line of support and follow in his train.

Dear Friends:

The buds in the early spring flowering bushes are beginning to swell and the jonquils and tulips are beginning to show signs of life and are breaking up through the ground and will soon be in bloom. The birds are beginning to sing in the early morning. The robins are visiting our campus. The mocking birds will soon be making us all cheerful with their early morning song.

Birds are welcome visitors on our campus. The children seem to realize their gracefulness and beauty. They may throw rocks at other things but I have never noticed them throwing at the little birds. I have known the brown thrush to build her nest and raise her young in the shrubbery in front of my office window where the children pass by many times each day but they were not molested at all.

We have many different species of birds to visit us each year. The blue jay, too. But the blue jay is not as welcome as the other birds as he is a destructive sinner and eats the eggs and the young of other birds. There is a mocking bird that visits us each spring and often sits in the tree near my office window and sings many times during each day. We often wonder if it is the same one each year.

The writer well remembers when he was a little boy and often visited his grandfather. There was a mocking bird that would sit on top of the chimneys and fly from one to the other and sing. It seemed to be so happy and cheerful. It is interesting to watch the birds and study them.

It is interesting to watch children and study them. No two look alike as the birds do. All have different dispositions, different ambitions and different tastes. But handling children is an interesting work. To take a little child that has lost father and mother and has no home nor friends who want it is a worthy undertaking. And through the years to see it develop into a fine citizen makes one who has had it in charge feel that the undertaking was worthwhile.

The Board of Trustees met in its regular annual meeting last week and transacted the regular routine business that claimed its attention. They elected the same officers for another year. They also elected the Superintendent for his twenty-fifth year. On the first Sunday in September we hope to celebrate our Silver Anniversary in orphanage work. We trust our churches, Sunday schools and friends will help make this our best year.

YOU ARE MY BROTHER.

he be accused of seeking possessions of what is not his. The Jew is my brother and I am proud of the contributions which he has made to my civilization, in medicine, in music, in government, in religion. The Catholic, too, is my brother. His religious practices are not mine. His beliefs do not always agree with what I hold to be true, but he is my brother, and I am proud of the religious heritage which comes to us in the background of the Catholic Church. His God and my God are one. Perhaps neither of us has the whole truth but we worship a God of justice, of righteousness and of mercy.

It was God who many centuries ago said of one who was baptized in Palestine, "This is My Son," and from the teachings of that one whom we call the Christ we find brotherhood in common with all men. Brotherhood is not simply a word, for it denotes one of the most powerful ties that human nature can experience. Yet the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man cannot be realized nor can their power become effective until man himself is willing to recognize his responsibility in those relations.

These are my brothers; all these and many more.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

which it usually was. You should hear, if you never have, our high school students discuss any given theme. They put many an adult to shame. The young people's councilor, a fine young man of about thirty, was always present, together with either or both the minister and his wife. The games were supervised and they would disband not later than 10:30.

The best part of this innovation was—it worked, and still works. The renewed interest rapidly spread among other young people. The membership soon jumped to about forty. The average attendance was between thirty and thirty-five, which made an excellent group for both their meetings and playtime.

The plan had the hearty endorsement of the parents. Saturday night is an "off night" for young people. No school work. No parties. "What shall we do?" is often their question. The parents were especially grateful for this new order, for they knew their children were having a profitable time, and perhaps the best part of it was they knew their children were in good company and in good surroundings.

It is my thought that, even though your church may not be so well equipped, it might even be possible for you to adapt the idea to your local conditions. Personally I thoroughly believe in it, and that it has real merit.

We may not always be sensible of revealed presence of Jesus: we may be occupied with many things of necessary duty, but as soon as the heart is disengaged it will become aware that he has been standing near all the while, and there will be a bright flash of recognition, and a repetition of the psalmists cry, "Thou art near, O O Lord!" Ah, life of bliss, lived under the thought of his presence!—F. B. Meyer.

HOLDSWORTH.

Whereas, in the course of human events, death has removed from our midst, our friend and brother, R. E. Holdsworth, who for a number of years was a steady and consistent member of the Waverly Christian Church and Sunday school; therefore, be it resolved,

That we, the members of the Waverly Christian Church and Sunday school, hereby register our grief at the passing of our brother; and, be it further resolved,

That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Waverly Christian Church as a lasting testimony of our appreciations and esteem, and a copy be sent to the family.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH GETS FRAGMENT OF PLYMOUTH ROCK.

A three-day celebration of the 320th anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims was held recently with the transfer of a fragment of Plymouth Rock to Plymouth Congregational Church of the Pilgrims, Orange and Hicks Streets, Brooklyn, from the former Church of the Pilgrims at Henry and Remsen Streets, Brooklyn.

The transfer had been planned ever since the merger of the latter church and Old Plymouth Church in March, 1934, bringing together the successors of the two oldest Congregational congregations in Brooklyn. The rock fragment will rest in a niche in the hall of paintings and relics of the Civil War, which connects the Plymouth Church edifice with Plymouth Institute, its educational and recreation center. A night procession to the niche to place the rock will end the celebration.

The rock fragment, weighing more than fifty pounds, had rested in a wall of the tower of the Church of the Pilgrims since Forefathers Day, December 22, 1844, the year the church was founded. It was removed by William F. Hatje, sexton at Plymouth Church, and borne away by four men attired in Pilgrim costumes, after it had been passed to them by George N. Whittlesey and Kenneth W. Greenawalt, trustees of Plymouth Church. The former, who was president of the trustees of the Church of Pilgrims at the time of the merger, formally presented the rock fragment to the trustees under the merger in a ceremony at Plymouth Church. It was received in their behalf by Mr. Greenawalt, who is secretary of the board.

The Rev. Dr. J. Stanley Durkee, third successor of Henry Ward Beecher as pastor, read a message from President Roosevelt urging prayer for "the reign of moral force" that "shall supplant brute strength in the government of men."

"Not without significance is the happy coincidence through which the days of the celebration will embrace Forefathers Day," the message added. "Nothing could be more appropriate at this time of world crisis than a rededication of the united spiritual forces of two famous congregations to those democratic ideals and principles which characterize the American way of life and are the source of all of our happiness as a nation.

"We who hold to the old ideals of freedom must keep the faith even in the face of the challenge of those ideals over large areas of the earth."

In the procession were a group of Mohawk Indians, nine members of the Old Guard of the City of New York, headed by Captain Charles W. Lange, and members of Clinton Commandery, Knights Templar. By the side of Dr. Durkee walked the Rev. Dr. Charles William Roeder, Chaplain of the Society of Old Brooklynites, who offered prayer later at the church. Dr. Roeder is minister of the Flatlands Dutch Reformed Church, Kings Highway and East Fortieth Street, Brooklyn, organized ten years after the Church of the Pilgrims.

En route to Plymouth Church, the procession passed Brooklyn Borough Hall and paused while Dr. Durkee placed a wreath at the base of the statue of Henry Ward Beecher in its new location in the public square.

The principal speaker at the church was Godfrey Haggard, British Consul General. Declaring that in the present war "the British are fighting to the last Briton," he expressed a conviction the empire would win.

"Hardships just as severe are being suffered now and greater ones may be in store for us all before the present tyranny is overpassed," he said, citing the hardships of the Pilgrims who came here from England.

"We must build up a system in which we hope and believe the Germans may take part, especially in the economic sphere, but in order to do so we will have to remain strong and rely mainly on our own exertions. That is my thesis. We may be part of a new and improved League of Nations, a league of all the nations with British, American and Russian teeth in it, such as Mr. Wells has been advocating in his recent lecture tour here.

"But in the last event, whether the teeth are in the league or elsewhere, or whatever association of free countries is formed, if any is formed, it is always the strong, liberty-loving nations that have to supply them and to use them and to bear the burden of keeping the peace."

A pageant was given after an address by Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College. Dr. MacCracken said "if Plymouth and its rock symbolize anything, it is the significance of independent thought." He said "we have come to the crossroads of decision" and "most of all we need to stop calling names, to stop belaboring our opponents with epithets instead of answering their arguments."

"Christian liberty is freedom from the law in order that the law may be kept in us by Another."

Let Us Keep Lent

By ROBERT W. COE.

Lent will soon be at hand! Let us keep it! That is today—let us claim for our lives and the lives of our people whatever good it may bring. Finding that meaning, let us order our program according to its demands. To that end let us use its days wisely, not allowing so much as a single one to slip from us without being freighted with some prayer and being used in some holy service.

It may be that we have never really tried to keep Lent in a serious, honest way. We may have disregarded, even despised the season because we thought its observance a melancholy performance for small minds, or a deadening duty in which our free souls could find no joy. If such has been our prejudice in any sense, let us, for a while at least, dare to dismiss it. Let us admit that there may be more in Lent than our eyes have been willing to see. As spiritual adventurers let us enter this promised land to see for ourselves what it is.

Spiritual discipline is not popular in our day. Probably it has never been popular in any day. Certainly it has never been easy. At the same time it must be clear to all who care to see that earth's noblest spirits have been nourished, not in places of indulgence and pleasure, but always in the harsh, strict school of discipline. Whatever goodness human lives have attained has invariably been attained by curbing foolish thinking, by controlling fierce passions and by obeying religiously certain rules laid down. Such discipline is not all of human redemption. But it is an important part of it. Let us yield our wills, our passions, our desires to God's discipline.

It is not an amazing thing that the uplifted Cross still looms so large? The years are many and long since "Calvary's red sun went down in dreadful night." The shadows of time have gathered thick and heavy about that strange scene. New interests have come to claim our minds. Yet, despite all, that Form upon the Cross does not recede or disappear. It is still there, seen, pitied and adored. In every passing year there continues to be an unnumbered host who, bending low beneath life's crushing load, come to gaze for a while and then go back, strangely energized, to carry on the struggle. Surely the most unscientific, the most unreasonable, the most irreligious attitude of all is that which dares to treat this experience as unreal or to suggest that here is nothing here of which the modern man still stands in need.

We are not able to give a scientific explanation of how God comes into human hearts. As has been said, "the winds of his redemption come from a far land and no man knows whence they come or whither they go. Still the fact of redemption stands, written large in letters of renewed and glorified lives. The Christ who gave Himself is the Christ who is still mighty to save."

“The Christian Sun” Can Talk

By JOHN G. TRUITT, Chairman, Board of Publications

Three more years and “The Christian Sun” will be one hundred years old! That year we must have a “Christian Sun” celebration! Gee! if “The Christian Sun” could talk! But it can talk! Perhaps there is not a person reading it that is as old as it is. It has grown beyond the generation that founded it, far beyond. It was founded before our fathers were born. Our great-grandfathers were young men when it was being launched—at least mine were, and I sort of strike an average.

“The Christian Sun” has served our church now for nearly a century. It has seen many other church papers come and go. It still abides. It has seen many other church papers combined with others. It is still “The Christian Sun.” It has seen many other church papers change to once-a-month. It still comes every week. It worked for a college in the Southern Convention. It has seen a great one grow. It worked for a Christian Orphanage. And there it stands a monument to the charity and unity of a great people, readers of “The Christian Sun.” It pled for Missions, Missions Board, Mission Conference Committees, Woman’s Missions, and their auxiliary mission organizations enveloping young people, children, and the cradle roll, and they all thrive today. “The Christian Sun” spoke its piece enthusiastically, constructively, regularly, persistently, faithfully through all those formative years. A secretary of the Congregational Christian Church from Chicago told me that he was surprised at the marvelous benevolent and missionary giving of the churches in the Southern Convention. “The Christian Sun” helped to do it!

Sunday schools, superannuation, new churches, colleges, orphanage, missions, conferences and conventions have been a part of the cargo of “The Christian Sun.” But more than even these it has helped to develop our men, women, young people and children into leaders in God’s Kingdom. It has been a brilliant and worthy servant. It said what we told it to say. It built what we told it to build. It led where we told it to lead. And it has spoken well, built well and led onward, outward and upward, right across the wide reaches of the century of its life. It has opened the door for ministers, picked up the words of laymen, given a place to women, and an opportunity to all.

As I hold it here in my hand as I prepare this little message in its behalf, it is fresh, and clean, and beautiful, in word, and deed, and thought; and also it is wise with the wisdom of the years! How stately is its banner: “The Christian Sun, a Religious Weekly for the Home, Devoted to the Interest of the Kingdom!” Something glorious has been saved across all these years from yesterday. Older it is than any of us, or any of our beloved modern institutions. And since the day of its founding well nigh a century ago, until now it has had good men, consecrated men and oftentimes very wise men, and great writers at its helm. Today it can be proud of its board of editors, the learned and consecrated young minister who is its editor, and that generous Christian layman who is its publisher and manager.

But if it could talk it would speak of great souls like Daniel Kerr, the Wellons, the Longs, the Barretts, Staley, Atkinson, and scores of others—men and women of renown in our beloved circle—who read it, wrote for its columns, prayed for its success, and gave (Please turn to page 5.)

NEWS AND VIEWS

Have you raised your College Apportionment for this conference year? Then you are ready for the Mission Period which starts next Sunday.

Be sure to read what friends of THE CHRISTIAN SUN have to say about their church paper on pages eight and nine of this issue. Then remember that you can help, too.

Mrs. F. C. Lester served as secretary of the Council held at Burlington last week. She tried to claim that she was not eligible for the position, but was drafted for duty and did a good job.

It was good to see Pattie Lee Coghill and Priscilla Chase at Burlington last week. We know the work is going well in these states so long as their superintendents have them to direct them.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman, a member of the Board of Publications, has graciously contributed guest editorials for this week. "A Call to Prayer" will be appreciated by all those who observe the National Week of Prayer this year.

Dr. Leon Edgar Smith will speak at the First Congregational Christian Church of Richmond on next Sunday evening. Other guest speakers will be present for the remaining evening services of the month.

The Cole Lectures at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., will be given this year by Dr. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City. Dr. Buttrick is the ex-president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The "Five Talent Plan" was used in our Newport News Church as a part of their Anniversary Campaign for the Building Fund. The talent money mounted and amounted to $509.00. The total offering for the day, February 16, was $1,050.21. The remaining indebtedness on the church is $1,700.00. The mortgage is now covered by pledges, payable by September 1, and one pledge of $25.00 carried them over the top. Congratulations to Rev. J. H. Dollar and his loyal congregation.

BELEW CREEK.

World Day of Prayer will be held February 28, at 7:30 P. M., at Salem Chapel, jointly with Belew Creek and the Fulp Moravian Missionary Societies. The Moravian pastor with the pastor of the other two churches will be present and have part on the program. Mrs. J. C. Crews, Walnut Cove, Route 2, N. C., is president of entertaining society. Many people cannot attend these meetings but every one can, and should, pray.

G. H. VEAZEY,
Pastor.

DR. BREWER EDDY TO VISIT US.

Any man who can raise $85,000.00 for anything is worth hearing. The Rev. D. Brewer Eddy raises about that much every year for Foreign Missions.

Dr. Eddy is to visit the Southern Convention March 2-6. His schedule is:

Sunday, 11:00 A. M.—Elon College.

Sunday, 7:30 P. M.—Greensboro, First.

Monday—Burlington Christian Church.

Tuesday—United Church, Raleigh.

Wednesday—Suffolk Christian Church.

Thursday—Christian Temple, Norfolk.

Each week day there will be a supper conference with Dr. Eddy at 6:30 P. M., except in Raleigh where the time is six o'clock. He will give a public lecture at 8:00 P. M.

The conditions of our world make the message of the church important. Be sure to hear Dr. Eddy describe world conditions and tell what the church is doing to establish brotherhood.

THE SUFFERING SAVIOR.

Rev. John H. Knight pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, will begin on March 2 a series of Lenten sermons entitled "The Suffering Savior." These sermons are based on the events in the life of Christ leading up to the Crucifixion and Resurrection. The subjects are announced as follows:

March 2—"The Lamb of God"—(John 1:29).

March 9—"Was Judas to Blame?"—(John 13:30).

March 16—"Christ Before Pilate"—(Luke 23:4).

March 23—"The Bitter Cup"—(Isaiah 53:6).

March 30, Passion Sunday—"It Is Finished"—(John 19:30).

April 6, Palm Sunday—"Christ the King"—(Luke 19:38).

April 13, Easter Sunday—"The Greatest of All Miracles"—(I Cor. 15:4).

NEWS FROM SOUTH NORFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The assistant superintendent of our Sunday school, Mr. Lee Henley, and Mrs. Henley are receiving congratulations on the birth of a new son, born February 18, 1941, at Norfolk General Hospital.

* * *

At the official board meeting last Monday night it was voted to have our spring revival, starting the latter part of April, the pastor to secure the speakers. The board also appointed Mr. R. E. Brinkley to secure subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, with the entire official board to head the list of subscribers. A large number of subscribers have already been received. Other names will appear in THE CHRISTIAN SUN soon.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society visited the County Home and Poorhouse Thursday night February 20, with a group of endeavorers from Hope Chapel and Church of Christ, Norfolk, Va. Chocolate candy bars and magazines were distributed to every ward and the group, numbering about fifty, sang several hymns. This makes several visits the C. E. has made to the City and County Home. Edward Thurman is president.

On Easter Sunday, April 13, the Sunrise Service will be held in the church auditorium, with the Rev. Rowland P. Wagner, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, Norfolk, delivering the sermon. An elaborate service is being planned with special music, including the high school choral club. The service is being sponsored by the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society and is looked forward to as being the largest affair of the year. The society offers an invitation to the entire city as well as anyone from our churches in Tidewater or conference. Several young people will have part in program. It is promised to be a worthwhile service.

LUKE, CHAPTER FIFTEEN

By Dr. C. REXFORD RAYMOND.

[Read before the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association.]

It would be "carrying coals to Newcastle" to bring a verse by verse analysis of this famous chapter to ministers who know so well the charm of the parables of the lost sheep, the lost coin, and the lost son. Perhaps a study of the setting and background of this chapter may help us realize its fundamental significance.

Chapter fifteen is part of a section of Luke which has no parallel in any other story of our Lord and His teaching. Luke is rich in its collection of information about Jesus which is found only in Luke. The first three Gospels are much alike, differing widely from the fourth Gospel, but all the three have surprising likenesses and differences.

Analyzed by sections of teaching and episodes, we find that Mark has sixty-one sections, all but two of which are paralleled in the other gospels. Matthew has seventy-three sections, with five which are peculiar, not found elsewhere. Luke has seventy sections with nine which are not found elsewhere. That is, while Matthew and Luke together repeat essentially all of Mark but two sections, they also cover common material outside of the sections like Mark, so that each has an added contribution to our knowledge of our Lord, five sections in Matthew and nine sections in Luke.

Of these nine sections peculiar to Luke, chapter fifteen, assigned for study today is intensely interesting and significant. These parables about the lost sheep, lost coin, and lost son, found only in Luke, have an artistry so superb that they are probably the best known and with the possible exception of the Beatitudes the best remembered of all the teachings of Jesus. We should also remember that the parable of the Good Samaritan is also found no where but in Luke. These riches which Luke has preserved for us make us wonder about the sources of his knowledge of Jesus.

As Luke was not a companion of Jesus and he claims for himself in his preface (1: verses 1-4) only that he had carefully collated the materials of his book from the writings of others who had been "eye witness," we may wonder where he got the 59% of his Gospel which did not come from the other Gospels. As he said that he had "many" others to consult, and the Gospel ascribed to John was written much later than Luke, "many" must be more than two, so we have a wide field for conjecture.

As the verbal similarities in the passages common to Luke with Mark and Matthew clearly indicate, Dr. Luke could have had no literary scruples which would have kept him from copying freely from any writings which he deemed trustworthy. We may therefore suppose that a part at least of the 59% of his book not found in our other Gospels came from other books which perished.

But there is also the probability that he used oral tradition besides these written sources to which he refers in his preface. (1:1-4.) Dr. Luke was a companion of Paul. Indeed, it is only by a careful study of the "we" passages in Acts that we can identify Luke as the author of Acts and so also of the Gospel ascribed to him. (It is, of course, understood that the titles placed over the books in our English Bibles are only the opinions of scholars and were not in the original Greek manuscripts.)

From Acts we also learn that Dr. Luke was with Paul and went with him to Caesarea where Paul was in prison for "two full years," remaining to be near him until in 59 A. D., when Paul was sent as a prisoner to Rome. Dr. Luke and Aristarchus went with him. (Acts 27:1 and 2.) Caesarea, north of Jaffa on the seashore, is perhaps seventy-five miles by road from Jerusalem. The two years at Caesarea are a blank in the history of Paul's ministry. We have no letters written by him from Caesarea.

We also know that after the death of Stephen (33 A. D.) the Greek-speaking Christian Jews were "scattered abroad" (Acts 8:1-4) and this persecution ended the idea that Christianity was simply another Jewish sect. Deacon Philip, the evangelist, was one of these Hellenists who fled at that time from Jerusalem, going first to Samaria, later to Gaza and finally to Caesarea. Luke spends most of the 8th chapter of Acts telling of Philip's activities and his missionary journeys leading to his arrival at Caesarea. In Acts 21:8, 9, Dr. Luke tells of Deacon Philip in Caesarea saying that he had a house there and lived in it with four old maid daughters. On an earlier visit Paul and Dr. Luke had been their guests.

From these facts it is no wild guess to suppose that Luke may have learned from these "eye witnesses" by oral tradition much about the life and teachings of Jesus which the other Gospels do not contain. The parables in Luke 15 were spoken by Jesus in Jerusalem about thirty years before Luke met Philip in Caesarea, perhaps twenty-five years after the death of Stephen and the persecutions of that time which scattered Philip and other Greek-speaking Christians among other cities. So these parables of protest against the persecuting Pharisees who are typified in the unkindness of the Elder Brother may well have been especially cherished in the memory of Philip and other similar fugitives. We should know nothing about the evangelistic activities of Deacon Philip, except for the writings of Dr. Luke in Acts. Paul and his talented Greek friend, Dr. Luke, tells us all that we really know about the beginnings of the Christian Church outside Jerusalem.

The well-known parables in Luke 15 convey to us a clear conception of the ideas which the inner circle of the Hellenist Christians had concerning the teaching of Jesus about sin, its effects, its cure, and how God's attitude toward the sinner should be shared by the followers of Jesus. Reading the parables in the light of the opposition of the Pharisees to the life and teachings of Jesus we may summarize them as follows:

1. Sin is failure to be where we ought to be. Ninety-nine sheep are safe in the barn, one is astray. One coin has been lost from the necklace of ten coins given to the woman by her husband as a bridal adornment. One of the father's two sons is lost in a country far from home. Someone suggests a progressive degree in the types of loss: the farmer has lost one percent of his flock, the woman has lost ten percent of her necklace, the father has lost fifty percent of his sons. But they are alike in this, that the losers and the lost are alike miserable. And yet the greater the loss the more the loser mourns.

2. This miserable result is the effect of sin. Unless the losers do something about it the sheep will die, the coin will be forever lost, and the son will become a slave and die far from his master's house.

3. But something can be done by a power greater than that possessed by the lost. The shepherd can find the lost sheep and bring it home on his shoulder. The lost one-tenth of the necklace which involves the honor of the wife can be found when the woman and her friends unite in the search. And the lost son can be restored. But in this climax of the parabolic teaching there are three parties concerned. First, the lost son must leave the swine and go home, humbly ready to become a hired servant, a slave in his

A CALL TO PRAYER.

Benjamin Franklin was a man of many gifts. He was a printer, a publisher, a diplomat, an author, an inventor. In each of these fields he achieved success. But the greatest thing Benjamin Franklin did was to call to prayer the memorable Constitutional Convention which met in Philadelphia in 1787.

A body of great men had been together for more than four weeks. After these many weeks of deliberation they had not agreed on a single sentence or even a single word. The situation seemed hopeless. They were about to adjourn. Had that happened, the whole course of our history might have been altered. It was Benjamin Franklin, perhaps the wisest of the group, who addressed the chairman and called the convention to prayer. Among other things he said: "In this situation of this assembly, as it were, in the dark to find political truth, and scarce able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it happened, sir, that we have not hitherto thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understandings? I have lived, sir, a long time, and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of the truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without his notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without his aid? We have been assured, sir, in the Sacred Writings, that, 'except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.' I firmly believe this; and I also believe that without his concurring aid we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel: we shall be divided by our little, partial local interests, our project will be confounded, and we ourselves shall become a reproach and a byword down to future ages. . . . I therefore beg leave to move: That hereafter, prayers imploring the assistance of heaven and its blessings on our deliberations, be held in this assembly every morning before we proceed to business, and that one, or more, of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that service."

From that time on progress was made in framing the document called by Gladstone "the greatest piece of work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."

We have set aside a World Day of Prayer. Christian people all over the world will pray on that day. What would happen if we would make every day a day of prayer? "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." The place of prayer has been the starting point of all great Christian movements. The disciples started from the upper room to carry the message of Christ to a hostile, pagan world. The Salvation Army had its beginning at the place of prayer. The foreign missionary movement in this country had its beginning in a haystack which had become a place of prayer. The day of great victories for God has not passed. We are hoping and looking for a great revival to sweep our land. It must have its beginning at the place of prayer.

As a Convention we are faced with difficult problems. These problems can be solved, but we must, as Benjamin Franklin suggested long ago, "apply to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understanding." Personal ambitions must be put aside. Our pet projects must be pushed into the background. The Convention is bigger than any of its interests or institutions. All are a part of it and all are worthy and should have the whole-hearted support of all. Let us not just see one phase of our task but let us see the whole of it and formulate a plan of action which will carry us forward together. Perhaps we have depended too much upon our human understanding and have not been eager enough to discover the will of God. The words of George Washington, uttered after Franklin's call to prayer, are appropriate for us now: "Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair; the event is in the hands of God."

THE VETERANS OF OUR CHURCH.

In recent years much has been said about the forgotten man. Who are the forgotten men and women in our churches? They are the retired ministers and their widows. Who are these forgotten ones? They are those who have sacrificed and worked and suffered through the years to establish and maintain our churches. Very few ministers succeed in laying aside anything for old age. And much of that which was laid aside was lost during the depression years. Today they live on very little. They do not complain. The church should make more ample provision for them. It is not charity but a debt of honor which we owe. What they get now helps but it is not enough.

The maximum old age pension paid by the government is thirty dollars a month. The veterans of the church should not receive less than that. The following paragraph appeared in "Zions Herald":

"In conversation with a pullman porter some days ago, the editor of the "Herald" inquired about pullman pension rates. The porter, a man of sixty-seven who will soon retire, replied that he would get a pension of "around forty-five ($45.00) dollars a month." This is exactly the average pension of a retired Methodist minister. The rates are low in both cases, but of the two men the preacher fares worse than the porter, since the minister must spend more years and money in preparation for his task, and has to meet a larger expense budget during his active career than the porter. The average salaries of porters and ministers, when pullman tips are included for the one and fees for the other, are probably about the same."

The grants for the retired servants of the Southern Convention are far below the forty-five ($45.00) dollars a month average. Let us be more liberal to these worthy and deserving veterans of the church and thus express our deep gratitude for their faithful service.

MEETING OF THE PROVINCIAL COUNCIL.

The Provincial Council representing the South met on Wednesday and Thursday of last week in Burlington, N. C. Approximately forty persons were present. Ministers, college presidents, extension workers, general secretaries and laymen considered plans to promote a more effective witness of the Congregational Christian Church in the South. Dr. Douglas Horton spoke of the South as "a potential Kingdom of Christ in which we have definite responsibility." He urged that we solicit gifts from individuals who dare not give more through their local church, lest they pauperize the congregation, but may be induced to give generously to Conference-wide developments. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell advocated a type of evangelism which put fire into those who believe in educational evangelism and also utilize the enthusiasm of those who believe in mass evangelism. The further evangelization of the South was considered a primary objective. Ways of developing indigenous leadership and means of keeping our ministry intellectually and spiritually alive were carefully considered. Dr. W. F. Frazier and Dr. E. M. Halliday brought mature judgment to the deliberations. The presence of three laymen, D. R. Fonville, I. H. McIver and J. T. Kernodle, helped to keep our ecclesiastical feet on the ground.

Supt. W. T. Scott made some valuable study in advance and prepared regional statistics. Our 637 churches in this area have a total membership of 66,841. There are 406 white churches as compared with 231 negro churches. We have a total of 364 churches in North Carolina and Virginia, of which 167 are negro and 197 are white. Since more than half of our strength is concentrated in North Carolina and Virginia, we, of this area, have a definite responsibility with reference to home missions. If it still be true that "the strong should bear the burden of the weak," we cannot successfully evade this responsibility.

The composite picture of our church in the South was graphically presented by maps and colorfully exemplified by wide representation. Here the various segments of our church were at once isolated and integrated. Such a demonstration of numerical strength, financial resources and aggregate leadership should provide an effective antidote for our prevailing inferiority complex. Orientation, integration and inspiration are prerequisites for the growth of our church in the South.

A CAMPAIGN TO SUSTAIN "THE SUN."

Some of the scientists are saying that we cannot indefinitely take the sun for granted. They warn us that considerable scientific and technical ingenuity will be necessary to keep this world habitable for centuries to come. Be that as it will, one thing is certain: we cannot indefinitely take "The Christian Sun" for granted. So the Chairman of our Board of Publications is as wise as a scientist. He is taking time by the forelock, and taking nothing for granted. The many fine testimonials in this issue indicate that Dr. Truitt will receive hearty cooperation in this campaign to sustain "The Christian Sun."

Life would be intolerable and impossible without the sun. The life of our church would be greatly impoverished without our church paper. We rarely appreciate fully the value of friends and relatives until they are gone from us. Then their faults appear to be insignificant and their virtues are seen in their true perspective. We hope that it will never be necessary for us to lose "The Christian Sun" in order to arrive at a just appraisal of its importance. The value of such a paper can never be tabulated in terms of dollars and cents. The problem of sustaining "The Christian Sun" is, in essence, the problem of sustaining the entire life of our church. Success in this campaign will give us the necessary confidence to undertake more difficult tasks.

R. L. H.

"CHRISTIAN SUN" CAMPAIGN.

You have heard of that before? Of course you have for the paper is almost half a century old, and papers live because people subscribe for and read them.

"The Christian Sun" needs some more subscribers. Another two hundred would balance the budget.

But that would leave about six thousand of our families without the paper. They need to know the news, and the ideals of our church. This they get by reading "The Christian Sun."

The way to have an active local church is to get the people to read our literature.

The campaign is being sponsored by the Board of Publications, and is to begin the first of March.

Several churches are taking advantage of the offer to get the paper for $1.00 per year if all families of the church subscribe. It might save your church money. A reading church is likely to be an active church, therefore, work for "The Christian Sun" until it shines in all our church homes.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" CAN TALK.

liberally for its noble destiny. You and I ought to see that it reaches an ever enlarging and increasing constituency. It can talk, and will talk, and does talk now. We have problems, it will help us solve them; we have goals, it will help us reach them; and we have men and women, and children; and it will help us develop them. It hinders the church nowhere; let us honor it, subscribe for it, read it and use it: "The Christian Sun" can talk!

It gives liberty and breadth to thought to learn to judge our own epoch from the point of view of universal history, history from the point of view of geological periods, geology from the point of view of astronomy. When the duration of a man's life appears to us as microscopic as that of a fly, and inversely the life of a gnat as infinite as that of a celestial body, with all its dust of nations, we feel ourselves at once very small and very great; and we are able, as it were, to survey from the height of spheres our own existence and the little whirlwinds which agitate our little world.—Henri Fredrick Amiel.

"On the outside of the door of prayer inscribe the words, 'Go in'; on the inside of that door write the words, 'Go out.' Go in to listen, go out to serve; go in to see the vision splendid; go out to share with others what you have seen and heard."—Exchange.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are many members and friends of our churches in Eastern Virginia and Eastern Carolina who will be glad to have some news regarding the long illness of Dr. D. L. Harrell, a member of the staff of Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va. He has been a patient in Lakeview Hospital for six months or more. Both of his eyes were operated upon for Glaucoma. These operations were successful. In conjunction with this condition he has been treated for Diabetes. In the late fall he had a major operation for other trouble which has kept him in the hospital most of the time during the winter. During this period he has had several surgical operations and treatments in an effort to effect a complete recovery. He has borne his suffering bravely and patiently. At the present time his condition seems to be much better and he hopes to be able to return to his home at an early date.

As a member of Lakeview Hospital staff, Dr. Harrell has rendered efficient service to thousands of patients. He has specialized in Diagnosis, and the treatment of diseases of the heart, lungs and stomach. A man of pleasing personality, a physician of skill and keen understanding and a Christian of deep piety and sincere consecration, he has made many friends among other physicians and his contacts with patients and their families. These friends will rejoice with him in the outlook for recovery and a return to his work of helping to relieve suffering humanity. His cheerful spirit and his unflinching faith have been an inspiration to those who have visited him in the hospital.

Some clouds have a silver lining. Long illness may become one of those clouds. It depends upon the outlook and the uplook of the patient. In the midst of the cloud it is easy to forget the sunshine of yesterday. When the body is tortured by pain it is helpful to remember the months of abundant strength and abounding health. One can be grateful that there are days of youth and hope and health. And a confident faith that the future may have better things in store than one has ever dreamed it could be possible to anticipate, will help to bridge over the depression. The house of feasting may make the heart glad, but the house of suffering and sorrow may make the heart better. It is much easier to look up when one is lying down, if the face is not covered. It is more important to make character than to make money. Our chief business should be the making of life. The days of quiet meditation, under the inspiration of submissive faith, make their contribution to refinement and spiritual culture. Do not despise the days of sickness and suffering. Make them stepping stones to the enrichment of life.

The refiner's fire purifies the gold and tempers the workman's steel. God has promised to be with those

OUR "CHRISTIAN SUN."

By Robert Armster Whitten,
Lo, many years thy beacon light
Hath shed its constant beam,
Thy lamp of faith, all burning bright
Hath led us by its gleam.

The family altar, children's page,
And lines from able men,
The weekly news for every age
Is like a welcome friend.

The voice of orphans hast thou been
To bring to us their need,
And we have sent our food to them
Their hungry mouths to feed.

The glory of our dear Elon
Thou dost deserve to share,
For thou hast been her battle song
Through days both dark and fair.

To missions you've been true as steel,
God's Gospel you've proclaimed,
Until you've made us all to feel
The world's sin with its pain.

Closer together hast thou bound
Our Christian brotherhood,
And through thy service we have found
The way to greater good.

We cannot, dare not dim thy light,
We need its helpful ray,
We pledge our help to keep it bright
And our subscription pay.

who trust in Him. What a blessing to rest upon His promises! How abundant are the rewards of faith! Trust in the Lord brings rich compensation. With Him as our guide we shall be as safe in the storm as in the calm; we shall be as content in sickness as in health.

I. W. JOHNSON.

DID YOUR CHURCH DO IT?

Many calls are made upon the local church. It would be unfortunate if this were not true. We are useful to the extent that we have the opportunity to serve. A church locates itself by the width of its vision and the extent of its service outside of itself.

Christianity grows from within out. The Kingdom of Christ is a giving kingdom and not a receiving agency. The church is called upon to give, and those who give are declared to be blessed. The church that seeks to save itself must eventually lose its life. The Christian life is saved in the giving. The needs are so great and so many that the calls must be multiplied.

Within our own Convention there are needs beyond the membership of the local church. This is as the Convention planned and directed for her life. That she might be able to serve more richly, she has authorized certain boards and established certain institutions. These boards and institutions in their need naturally turn to the Convention and through the Convention to the local church and the individual member.

We are this month closing what was designated as the College Period. It was the plan and hope of the Convention that every church would support the college and begin that support during the College Period. A number of churches have complied with the request of the Convention by sending a contribution to the college. Did your church do it? Have you taken the time to consider the Convention's interests as expressed in her institution of higher learning at Elon College, N. C., to acquaint yourself with her needs, and then to share what you have that these needs might be met in part. If your church has complied with the plan of the Convention, you are to be congratulated. If not, you have the opportunity. Contributions from the churches at this particular season of the year come like gifts of love and are the occasion of great encouragement to the college in her efforts to carry out the wishes of the church.

Today as never before the Christian College is needed. The atmosphere of the college campus needs to be Christian. The content of instructions given to young people in all branches of learning needs to be charged with the Christian Spirit. Today as never before the world needs Christian leaders—leaders who can serve without prejudice and in fairness to all—leaders who themselves are Christian, that the nation in its legislation and diplomacy may prove itself to be more Christlike. The nation whose God is the Lord is blessed as much today as ever. May the church arise in its faith, in the strength of the Spirit, and with its generous gifts to make sure that the Christian College shall not pass from the field of training and direction.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Our crossword puzzle this week has words about Scouts and activities which Scouts might participate or take part in. So both boys and girls who have been or are Scouts should be able to solve the puzzle easily.

Let us remember that Lent is beginning February 26, and try to keep it this year as we never have before.

This week beginning with Washington's Birthday and going through February 28 is Brotherhood Week. We might plan to observe it in a real way this year instead of just talking about it. Isn't there a person of a different nationality near your home? I believe that it would mean more to us if we could do something nice for such a person or just be friendly to him or her. Try to learn something of their life and background so that you can better understand him or them.

This is the last letter that I shall write to you in February. The next time I shall date it March! You will be flying your kites, trying to keep your caps and hair on your heads, and getting earaches from the rushing wind. You will begin to see young buds peeping and you will say that soon spring will be with us again.

Perhaps your parents plant gardens. Then you have great fun helping to plant the tiny seed in the good earth. Do you ever wonder how such tiny seed can grow up into such delicious things to eat? I used to wonder and I still do. I remember very clearly the first time I was permitted to help in the garden. I had to cry before mother would let me drop the brown bunch beans in the long, straight furrow. I did that so well that mother let me put in the onion sets; from that time on I never had to cry to get to help with the planting.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

GEORGE ALVIN WOMBLE.

George Alvin lived in a tumbled-down sort of make-shift of a house in "Niggertown!" His father was dead. His mother did washings and housework for the "whitefolk" of the village to get enough money to keep the wolf from their door. Their house was so full of cracks and so hard to keep warm that they had colds all winter long. George Alvin dreaded to see it come and he felt like shouting when a warmer sun told him that summer was coming soon again.

George Alvin and his sisters and brother had started going to the Holiness Church right next door. It was so far to the Baptist Church but most of all the boys and girls who went there dressed nicer than the Womble children could dress. George Alvin did not mind going to the new church because he had such a nice Sunday school teacher. His teacher was helping her class to get up a play for Easter Sunday. George Alvin was so excited about the whole thing that he didn't know whether he walked or flew any more. Until he thought of the new suit which he must have. Then his feet dragged and his head hung upon his chest in deep thought.

One afternoon when his mother had come home with some papers and magazines and was getting supper, George Alvin thought that he would try to tell her about the suit. But her face looked so troubled that he thumbed through a magazine and hesitated. Suddenly he stopped turning the pages! "I bet I could do that the best of anyone," he said. He hastened to get his crayons. He was glad that his mother had made him buy them instead of candy now. The next half hour was spent very busily over the magazine. Finally he held up the page for his mother to see. "Look, Mom, don't this look just like 'Little Brown Koko' should look? I'll bet that it is more like him than any white boy could make him."

"Sho it does, Honey!"
"Do you think that it might win a five dollar prize, mother?"

"You just cut it out and we'll send it off and see what happens. I certainly think that you ought to win the five dollar prize at least." His mother helped him get the letter off in the next day's mail.

"What will you do with the money if you win the prize, George Alvin?" asked his mother.

"You just wait and see, mom, I need something real bad that I am going to buy with it!"

The days and weeks went by and no letter came. George Alvin was beginning to think that he would have to tell his mother about the suit as Easter was getting so near. I'll wait until Monday and if it hasn't come by then I shall tell her, he said to himself.

The next day came and he could hardly wait until school was out to get home and look for the mail. But there was no letter for him yet. On Saturday morning he was just starting out to take Mrs. Smith's clothes home when his mother called to tell him that the mail had come.

Yes, there was an envelope and it was for him!

"Here, mom, you open it, I am too shaky," he said.

His mother tore the letter open while the other children crowded around her. Sure enough there was a check in the letter. But it was not a five dollar check, it was for ten dollars! George Alvin jumped up and

For Our Church and Our Church Paper

I am pastor of three churches, viz.: Christian Light, Clayton and Hayes Chapel. I will appoint the committee to canvass the homes as per your request.

J. C. CUMMINGS.

Yes, I believe in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and I do hope we can increase its circulation. I am constantly urging my members to take it. I can't see how any pastor could get along without it; it is great help to both pastor and members.

T. N. LOWE.

My aim is to secure twenty-five (25) new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, which I read and enjoy. I think every member of our great denomination should have a copy each week in their home, and if they can't afford it, the church ought to subscribe for them.

R. E. BRINKLEY.

You can count on me for the best that I can do, and I do sincerely hope that enough subscriptions can be secured so the income will balance the budget for this phase of our work. That, of course, is the poorest reason for wanting the paper sold. The main point is that our people should read it.

F. C. LESTER.

I thoroughly believe in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and am trying to secure subscriptions. I see no way by which we could hold our organization together without it. I propose to refund the money to any Christian who will take the paper and read it one year if he is not satisfied with his investment.

G. H. VEAZEY.

I cannot remember when THE SUN did not come to my home. I have been reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN many years and look for it each week like I would a visit from friends. Mr. Hardeastle's Sunday School Helps are worth the price of the paper. Every teacher, officer and church official should certainly take their church paper, because it is the source of information throughout our Convention.

MRS. B. D. JONES.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the organ of the Southern Convention upon which all of the activities of the Convention depend to a great extent. Double the list of subscribers and readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and at the same time I believe we would double the interest in the orphanage, the college, super-annuation, Christian education and missions. An informed church will be an interested church and a giving church.

W. E. WISSEMAN.

Apparently the Committee on Publications is at work on their task. It is with a genuine hope that THE CHRISTIAN SUN shall soon reach the age where it can sustain itself and where more people shall have access to it. Committees are already at work in my churches and are anxious to secure subscriptions. You have my heartiest wishes for the achieving of your desires in the interest of this worthy paper.

W. J. ANDES.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is, with us, a family tradition. From the first issue in 1844 until today THE CHRISTIAN SUN has come into our home—grandfather, father, daughters. It has an accepted place in our family life. But it is not for this that we value it, but rather that it keeps us in touch with our church. It keeps us informed; it inspires us to do our part; it binds us closer to our fellow workers. We would not do without THE CHRISTIAN SUN!

MRS. W. E. WISSEMAN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN was the first paper I ever remember seeing. It was in my father's home for fifty or sixty years, I presume. I would feel that I had lost a faithful friend if I did not receive THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Apart from our own personal regard for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the paper deserves the support of our church for what it has done in the past, is doing at present, and will do in the future to make known to our folks the larger interest of the Kingdom in a world which has become so secular.

WM. T. SCOTT.

Inspiration often comes by means of information. One cannot be truly interested in any subject or thing that one is not well informed about. The only way that we can know what our church, through her various organizations, is accomplishing is by reading our church paper. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a splendid paper, and throughout its pages there is a vast amount of interesting material which every church member needs and should enjoy.

I do trust that the campaign that is to be put on to increase subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN may be most successful and that our church paper may find its way into many new homes among our church people.

JENNIE WILLIS BRADFORD.

I would like to give expression to my sincere appreciation for service rendered by our paper, I was first introduced to THE CHRISTIAN SUN thirteen years ago and there are very few editions that I have not read since then. To a large measure, my knowledge of our denomination and its various activities can be traced to this weekly habit. As a promotional agency it has a very definite place in our program, seeking as it does, to relate our local churches to the larger program of our church.

For light (information) and warmth (enthusiasm) I say, "Long live THE CHRISTIAN SUN! And I expect to work for its continuation.

Here is hoping this good idea of yours produces results.

ARNOLD SLATER.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

This letter is to wish you and the Board of Publications success in THE CHRISTIAN SUN campaign and to pledge you our hearty cooperation in Durham. It is difficult to understand how anyone who is at all interested in humanity should not be interested in reading of world events as recorded in the daily press. It is equally difficult to understand how anyone who is at all interested in his church should not be reading his denominational paper to see what are the plans and program of his church to help a world such as ours. Certainly the reading of the church paper will deepen one's interest and enable one to have an adequate conception of the total program of the church.

Cordially yours,

STANLEY C. HARRELL.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is an absolute essential for our Southern Convention program. No pastor can afford to be without it. Its support depends on all of us. The attitude that suggests that we need it but we are willing to "Let George do it" when our support is asked is unworthy; it seems too much like the attitude of a parasite that feeds on the life of others.

The homes where the SUN shines respond better to our pastoral efforts. Its subscribers know our united program. Its readers have a message every week to supplement the news which they get from the commercialized press and radio. It is the only religious newspaper which comes every week with the news of our Congregational Christian constituency. Subscribe now.

C. REXFORD RAYMOND.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN may well be called the mother of missions, Elon College and the orphanage. Its rays of sunshine—the thoughts of our people of the Congregational Christian fellowship have gone into such homes as would permit it. One can clearly see wherever members of our church have taken THE CHRISTIAN SUN there is a church loyalty which reflects itself through the activities of the local congregation. If you would help the pastor and the local church to build a good foundation on faith and fellowship, get the members to read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Our most loyal men, members and ministers come from homes that have been readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is a necessary need of our church. Our church enterprises are all dependent upon THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Long may she shine. May her light live.

BEN JOE EARP.

I do believe in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and it has been a regular visitor to our home for many years. I deplore the fact that the circulation is so small and shall make every effort to secure the full quota of subscriptions on my charge.

I have often stated that the weekly sermon, the Sunday school lesson and the children's page, to say nothing of the news items, the Suffolk Letter, and other articles, are worth much more than the present price of the paper. I have also observed that those who subscribe to and read THE CHRISTIAN SUN are better informed about church affairs and are the most regular and liberal givers to the enterprises of the Convention.

Wishing the publications committee full success in their endeavor to have THE CHRISTIAN SUN shine in every Congregational Christian home.

T. FRED WRIGHT.

I liken THE CHRISTIAN SUN to a telephone exchange, for it is the medium of "church news" exchange for all the churches in the Southern Convention, as well as all the boards, institutions and committees of the conferences and the Convention. If one can visualize what a busy city would do without a telephone system, that one may be able to see how our churches, pastors, Sunday school teachers, our institutions, our interests and enterprises—our interests and efforts for the Kingdom of God—could keep posted, inspired and cooperating if we did not have THE CHRISTIAN SUN as our medium of exchange. I don't see how the work could possibly be done without THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The approaching campaign for new subscribers to THE SUN is an effort to enlarge the "exchange" facilities of the church that more information, inspiration and cooperation may be experienced in the work of our church. No pastor should stop until the full quota of his parish is subscribed. No church should rest until it is on the honor roll of churches with its full quota of subscriptions. Some of us plan to exceed our quota; let none fall below it!

JESSE H. DOLLAR.

I am glad there is to be a campaign for subscriptions for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and here is hoping that it will be a great success. I speak of THE SUN with my people at times, but there seems to be a lack of interest. We are talking the matter of getting the paper into every home, as was voted at the last session of the Convention; and, I feel that some of them are going to work it up. That, if carried out, might be equal to a campaign. At least, I am hoping that we can get the church paper into more homes.

When I became interested in church work, I subscribed for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. That has been forty-two years ago, since that time it has come to my home every week. I look for its coming because it brings information that I want, relative to the interest of the church to which I am trying to give my life. With the paper there is inspiration to keep me going. Such, I feel, would come to every one who would subscribe and read it. I read from the secular press because I want to know what goes on; and, that I may talk of it to others. I read my church paper in order that I may have the information first hand. Those who do not read can scarcely be informed of the work that is going on in the church. I wish all our people could realize it that way.

E. M. CARTER.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

I rejoice in the news you and your co-workers on the Board of Publications are planning a campaign for a larger subscription list for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. THE SUN needs that larger list. I wish every family in our church here in Burlington subscribed for THE SUN, and that every member read it. I write this because

I look upon THE SUN as the chief news and promotional agency of our Southern Convention. As such I look forward to receiving it each week and I know if all my people received and read it they would be more deeply interested in and concerned about our Convention's enterprises and programs.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN has other values, of course, and these need to be put upon a sounder basis and enriched. But these several ends cannot be realized unless the subscription list is increased. That should be apparent to all. In your efforts to achieve this you can count on my interest and my services.

It seems to me your most effective appeal is that of loyalty. THE SUN is our church paper. It has a rich tradition. It has served faithfully and effectively. We still need it. Let us loyally support it.

Yours truly,

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE.

Our people have been looking into the possibility of placing THE CHRISTIAN SUN in every home of the church. I am standing back of this move one hundred percent and sincerely hope that we can put it over.

Personally, I feel that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is one of the finest little religious weekly papers that has so far come under my observation. The articles are timely, the devotional literature is helpful, and the news items are informative. Ministering as it does in these many ways to its subscribers, I am positive that it is tremendously necessary, not only for the great purpose of making us better Christians for the service of God in seeking to realize more fully His purpose and will, but also for the purpose of binding us more closely together as one great fellowship of believers in the Southern Convention. A reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is one who can see the working of the Kingdom of God far beyond the bounds of the local church; his heart and his money as well goes out to the support of the Christian Orphanage, the Christian school—Elon College—home and foreign missions, as well as to the support of the local church's current expenses; and what's more, he is a better informed layman, lives close to the facts of life, and in most cases grows in the grace and the knowledge of our Lord, Jesus Christ. Just think what kind of a church we could have if all its members were readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Consider also the kind of a Southern Convention we would have.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LENT.

The days and weeks of Lent confront us with the opportunity for facing personally and seriously the deep concerns of our Christian faith. The tides of the spirit are such that we need days and seasons which bring into sharper focus the meaning of the Christian life. Lent is such a season. Let us seek honestly to use it this year to renew the resources of our faith.

The following suggestions are offered in the hope that during the Lenten period they may at least indicate some of the paths of discovery and enrichment of Christian experience.

1. Emphasis Upon Basic Christian Beliefs.—Lent is an especially opportune time to think upon the basic ideas and convictions of the Christian faith. This may be done through sessions of Sunday school classes, the Sunday evening meetings of young people's groups, or at special group meetings during the week. A friendly and informal setting for discussion and sharing of ideas may be provided by meeting in the homes of members of the group, particularly if the group can sit around an open fireplace.

What does it mean to be a Christian now—in 1941? This is a decisive question which may be the basis for exploration. As guides to thought, Young People in the January, February, and March issues of The Pilgrim Highroad or Dr. Gray's recent book, A Theology for Christian Youth may be used.

As an outcome of study and thought, the members of a group may like to write personal statements of belief and conviction.

2. Emphasis Upon Learning to Pray.—One writer who has had wide contact with young people wrote recently that prayer is one of the resources of the Christian religion most neglected by young people today. He could have added with equal truth that the same about adults. Most people do not pray because they do not know how. To learn how to pray! that's a goal worthy enough and big enough for any group to work on just now. Why not get your group to discuss together ways of praying. In this connection, these books will offer clear and forthright helps: Fosdick's The Meaning of Prayer, Stewart's The Lower Levels of Prayer and Muriel Lester's Ways of Praying.

3. Preparation of Worship Center.—Worship in many of our young people's meetings would be made more significant if the places of worship themselves were such as to lead minds and hearts to be centered upon God. Any group can inexpensively prepare a simple worship center, with altar, cross or open Bible, and flowers. Such a use of symbols in a place of worship has more than an aesthetic value. It is the simple device whereby the mind is led on to the ultimate concern of our worship—God.

4. Making a Reading Table.—Young people's groups may find of particular help during the Lenten season a literature or reading table which provides good books, especially devotional literature. The pastor and members of the church may be willing to lend books for such a project.

5. Help With the Pastor's Class.—Many pastors hold classes on church membership for young people during Lent, and with this the members of a youth group may helpfully cooperate. The names of members of a young people's group who are not members of the church may be suggested to the pastor. Also groups should consider the matter of enlisting young people outside their society for membership in the church.

6. Planning for Easter Play or Pageant.—Now is the time to begin making preparations for an Easter play or pageant, if such plans have not already been begun. A number of Easter plays are suggested in the March issue of The Pilgrim Highroad.

NEWS NOTE.

Last week we announced the visit of Miss Lucy Eldredge to this area for Pilgrim Fellowship conferences and gatherings next month. It is hoped that a meeting of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship Council can also be arranged. The editor of this page would appreciate some word from each of the members of the Council as to whether or not they would be able to attend such a meeting.

THE GRACE OF CHRIST, THE SON.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 9, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: John 1: 15-17; II Cor. 8: 9; II Tim. 2: 1-3.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Gift of Grace—Eph. 2: 4-8.
Tuesday—Grace for Sin—Rom. 5: 15-17.
Wednesday—Grace by Love—John 3: 16, 17.
Thursday—Salvation and Hope—Tit. 2: 11-14.
Friday—Proof of Grace—I Cor. 15: 10.
Saturday—Victory Through Grace—I Cor. 15: 54-57.

This topic carries us a step farther in our search for a deeper experience with, and a great appreciation for, the Trinity of God. The Son was a physical demonstration of God's nearness and personal interest for mankind. Christ was God demonstrated in human life. He gave us the assurance that God is not far removed from His people, but in their every experience whether it be adversity, sorrow, joy or prosperity.

He is a path, if any be misled;
He is a robe, if any naked be;
If any chance to hunger, He is bread;
If any be a bondsman, He is free;
If any be but weak, how strong is He!
To dead men, life is He; to sick men health;
To blind men sight, and to the needy wealth;
A pleasure without loss; a treasure without stealth.

—Giles Fletcher.

As a part of the worship use the picture, "The Lost Sheep," by Soord. Darken the room and light the picture. Have all to bow in silent prayer. Then someone should tell the story of the picture, calling attention to the mountain valley, the snowy peaks, the circling vulture. The injured sheep has fallen and lodged, and is in danger of falling farther. The shepherd is straining to reach the sheep, running a risk of falling to his death on the rocks far below. Jesus was this kind of a leader.

Topics for Short Talks—

1. Jesus was a normal human being.
2. Jesus was a master teacher.
3. Jesus was the Great Physician (Matt. 11: 5).
4. Jesus was an humble servant (Matt. 20: 28).
5. Jesus was the Lamb of God (John 1: 29).
6. What is involved in the words, "He went about doing good"?

Suggested Hymns—

- "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."
"My Master Was a Worker."
"In the Cross of Christ I Glory."
(Hymns exalting the character and life of Christ.)

THE AUTHORITY OF CHRIST.

LESSON IX—MARCH 2, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 19:1-20:8.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matt. 7:21-29.

How God Looks At Cities.

“And when he drew nigh, he saw the city and wept over it.” Here we see an expression in time of the eternal heartache and heartbreak which is in the heart of God over cities. This does not mean, of course, that cities are wholly vile; nor does it mean necessarily that people who live in the country are any better than the people who live in the city. It does mean that the misery and the woe of a modern city, with its slums, its tenements, its underprivileged and undernourished children, its impersonality and its callousness, its vice and its underworld, its worldliness and its paganism lay heavily upon the heart of God. There are advantages in living in a city. Anyone who knows city life in an intimate way, and anyone who knows the sordid side of the life of a city knows that there is enough to cause God himself to weep.

Forfeited Privilege.

“If thou hadst known in this day, even thou, the things which belong unto peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.” In the case of Jerusalem it was a case of forfeited privilege. For ages she had stood out, the temple of Jehovah himself stood in her midst, from her had come the law. To her had come the pilgrims from all over the world to worship Jehovah and to offer their gifts unto him. In her were the religious leaders and the religious rulers of the Jewish nation. It was a city of great religious privilege. But religion was in forms and ceremonies, in outworn creeds and formal religious practices. At the heart of the nation's life there lay formalism, and greed, and hypocrisy. Already sentence had been pronounced, and judgment was impending. Indeed the Master himself said that it would not be long before enemies should come and lay siege to Jerusalem, and utterly destroy the city until not one stone should be left upon another. All this was to happen because they had forfeited their high privilege. Goodness and greatness were not in their midst. They rejected God's anointed, they refused to obey the truth, they were unwilling to walk in the light. So shall it be with cities and nations, as well as with individuals.

A House of Prayer, Or a Den of Robbers.

“And he entered into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold, saying unto them, It is written, And my house shall be a house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of robbers.” For Jesus the temple was the House of God, a house of prayer, a place where men came to express adoration, to make confession, to give thanks, to present their petitions and their supplication, and to dedicate themselves anew to God and His service. Its essential ministry was spiritual. But these people were making of it simply a commercialized bazaar. They were buying and selling in the courts of the temple, they were doing this at extortionate rates, and in unscrupulous fashion. Jesus drove them out. Judgment must begin at the house of God. The church can not do much toward setting the world in order until it first of all sets its own house in order. Perhaps Christ will have to cleanse the modern church before he can expect it in fuller measure to bring in the Kingdom.

Teaching and Preaching.

“*And he was teaching daily in the temple. . . . And it came to pass, on one of the days, as he was teaching the people in the temple, and preaching the gospel. . . .”—it is difficult to draw the line between the time when Jesus was teaching and when he was preaching. In fact, there was a ministry both of teaching and of preaching. There is, however, a difference between some teaching and some preaching. Someone recently said that teaching is concerned primarily with ethics, while preaching is concerned with the evangel. A minister ought to be a good teacher, but mere teaching is not enough. He should preach the gospel. There should be a fervor, a zeal, an enthusiasm, an inner compulsion which seeks not only to present the truth, but to enlist disciples for Christ.

The Authority of Jesus.

“And they spake, saying unto him, Tell us: By what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that gave thee this authority?” That was a fair question. What right had this man, who had never been ordained by the religious leaders of his day, and did not have back of him the sanction of the organized church, to teach or to preach? In what sense is Jesus an authority for us today? On what does his authority rest? In reply to these questions there should be said first of all that the authority of Jesus found its source for one thing in his sinless life, that enabled him to speak with authority, to speak with authority such as no man ever had, because no other man was sinless. There was the authority also which was evidenced by the mighty works of Jesus. Any man who did what Jesus did had a right to be heard. There was of course the authority of the self-evidence of his truth. It was because of this fact that Jesus refused to give them an answer. “And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.” The words that he spoke, and the works that he did were well attested by evidences and carried with them authority. For those of us who are Christian, we feel that the authority of Jesus rests finally upon his atoning death on the cross, and his triumphal resurrection from the dead. When a man can do what Jesus did, he can speak with authority.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

Contributions from the churches and Sunday schools continue to come in. Our contributions to date amount to more than last year at this time. The College Period closes with this month. Perhaps you did not receive your offering until the last Sunday. There is plenty of time to send your contribution. I know that you want your church to join with the rest in the support of our college. A word to your congregation or to your pastor may result in a good deed. May we expect your offering soon?

He who stops being better stops being good.—Oliver Cromwell.

BY CHAPLAIN

MONDAY.

THAT DIVINE LEGACY.

"Let not your heart be troubled."
John 14:1.

A story comes to us that during World War No. 1 some soldiers found a house that was torn to pieces by shell fire. Midst the debris they found a caged canary in good shape. Pinned to the cage was a note: "Please take care of the bird." They did. They took it to the trenches. The last time they saw it the canary was black with smoke from shell fire, but it was cheerful as ever . . . singing its beautiful songs.

Think of it! Midst bursting shells and the thundering din of war spreading death and dismay, this little creature cheerful and singing.

To be without fear and undismayed by trouble is our divine legacy.

Prayer—Oh Lord, shine thou upon us and be gracious unto us. May we have enough of Thy grace to look beyond trouble and be glad still. Help us to sing when things go wrong. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUR GREATEST NEED.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—I John 1:9.

A student once asked his professor, "From all researches you have made, from your conversations with other great minds, from all your troubles, what is your greatest discovery?"

The professor, after a moment's thought, replied, "Just two things stand out above all others. The first is that I am a great sinner, and the other is that Jesus is a great Savior!"

These are two vital truths which Christians discover as they grow older, which if the world would accept, would save it. It seems a fact that the people of this age are sophisticated and self-sufficient, therefore Godless.

We must realize our sinfulness and dependence on God.

Prayer—Our Father, there is none other name but Jesus' whereby we may be saved. Help us to repent of sin and look to Jesus. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

PROOF OF THAT NEED.

"Remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."—Luke 23:42.

This text is the words of the thief on the cross—his last words. Thousands of persons through the ages give evidence of a last confession.

A story is told of an atheist who ridiculed the Bible and Christianity to his last day and did all he could to neutralize Christian influence. At death's door, he looked into eternity and saw only a "dismal abyss of nothing, with no Savior there. Like the thief on the cross he realizes his need for Jesus and called upon Him. Did Jesus hear him? See the answer tomorrow.

Prayer—Our dear Father, how much better the world would be if men would see their need of Thee in health and prosperity, while time is yet at home. Grant us that blessing. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE ANSWER.

"And it shall come to pass, before they call I will answer."—Isa. 65:24.

That Jesus came to this atheist is attested by the following poem found in his possessions after he was gone:

I've tried in vain a thousand ways
My fears to quell, my hopes to raise;
But what I need, the Bible says,
Is ever only Jesus.

My soul is night, my heart is steel,
I cannot see, I cannot feel;
For light, for life, I must appeal
In simple faith to Jesus.

He died, He lives, He reigns, He pleads;
There's love in all his words and deeds;
There's all a guilty sinner needs
Forevermore in Jesus.

Amen.

FRIDAY.

ADVERSE HAPPENINGS.

"All things work together for good."—Rom. 8:28. (Read verses 28 and 29.)

The machinery by which this paper is set and on which it is printed are a triumph of many brains. To the casual onlooker they are a complicated mechanism of moving wheels, cylinders, pinions, cogs, etc., yet they all work together.

So for the Christian, whether he understands or not, life is an intricate machinery all for him if he will do his part. It is possible that if adverse happenings, misfortunes, disappointments and troubles were taken out, it brings appall to us. As it is we see these things overruled by His gracious hand, and we are enriched thereby.

Prayer—O Lord, silence our complainings and strengthen our faith. Endorse us with wisdom to see and trust. Amen.

SATURDAY.

BLESS THE LORD, O MY SOUL.

(Read Psalm 103:1-14.)

"O thou that lend'st me life, lend me a heart replete with thankfulness." So sings Shakespeare. But what if life be stern and trying? What if we feel we have nothing for which to be thankful? Well, certainly we have the priceless gift of life. Paul seems to say that, if he had nothing else for which to give thanks, at least he had infirmities in abundance. He gloried in them. That does not mean he indulged in self-pity. They gave him the chance of showing what faith could do. The greater his need, the greater Christ's aid. Life's cross purposes may be made rungs in the ladder by which we may climb to a radiant, joyous, grateful life.

OUR MOUNTAIN MISSION WORK.

You have noticed, no doubt, in the columns of this paper recently a few things about the Elk Spur parsonage. That it was re-roofed last October. The old roof had been leaking so much and so long that the wallpaper was completely ruined, a great deal of it is hanging loose. The plan is to refinish the interior with light (weight) wall board, when properly nailed will resist the strong winds more than wallpaper. Molding and base-board will be required, which the building has never had. The material, alone, will cost $25.00 to $30.00 per room. Labor will be donated. The pastor is a good carpenter and with local help, the material will be the only expense. I am anxious to know how many churches, groups, or organizations will give the price for material for one room. There are, of course, needed repairs on the outside. The back porch is about ready to fall, and the entire building is in great need of repainting. Total expense for material will be approximately $200. If you are interested in making the parsonage a decent place for a pastor and his family to live, send all contributions to Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker, Elon College, N. C., designated for this purpose. The pastor is very anxious to get this work done without asking the Mission Board for any assistance. He would be glad to give any information he may have about the entire work on the field, and to visit churches or societies within reach, and discuss fully the work as he sees it with those who are interested.

WHERE CHURCH BELLS CAN RING.

By Mrs. G. K. Savage.

I oft forget the needy when there's snow;
I often overlook a sunset's glow;
I may not hear the robins that sing,
But I always hear the church bells ring.

With every day a twin to the day before,
And hours are filled with duties—chore after chore;
I forget what day it is or what the next might bring,
But I always know Sunday because church bells ring.

I'm thankful for homes when friends may meet;
For uncensored news and friendly cops on the beat;
For public schools where happy children sing;
But I'm most thankful for a country where church bells can ring.

In spite of threatening war clouds today;
In spite of those who believe "religion doesn't pay";
May every American resolve to do at least one thing—
Keep America a country where church bells can ring.

Keep America a country where church bells can ring.

Keep America a country where church bells can ring.

other enterprises of our church; but to all of us THE CHRISTIAN SUN serves as the medium of such information and contact and its value cannot be overestimated.

There should be no question to the sincere church membership as to the real worth of the church paper. We pay from twenty-five to thirty-five cents per week for the daily paper and do not question the charge. THE CHRISTIAN SUN costs us only about four cents a week—about the cost of writing one letter, and less than the cost of a Coca-Cola or a package of chewing gum. Isn't it a great preference the Christian is expressing when he will secure for himself these and other trivial things and deny himself the far greater values of his church paper. As Jesus said, "It is not that ye should not do these things, but that ye should not have the greater things undone."

If we could all take the time for a few moments of serious thought and think the matter through of how the church and its enterprises would be seriously handicapped without this medium of information and inspiration, then no one would have to be coaxed to become a SUN subscriber.

The informed church member is a wiser, better and more willing church worker. No one should rest their ease on the outmoded slogan that "Ignorance is bliss," for "where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise."

Let the SUN shine in your home and light will be brighter in the church and as a Christian. W. M. JAY.

THE QUIET HOUR.

Prayer—Blessed be Thy name, Thou are the confidence of those who rely upon Thee. In all that today may bring, let the spring of gratitude rise in our souls. Amen.—Ward in Christian Herald.

SUNDAY.

DIVINE MERCY.

"Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea."—Micah 7:19.

A couple of years ago there were a series of sea disasters. Three submarines went down with all hands. Many lost their lives.

Tragic though disasters. They bring to our thoughts the completeness of divine forgiveness, as recalled in God's promise, expressed in our text. We, too, are asked to forgive as God does.

Prayer—Help us, our Father, to forgive our fellowman, and our fellowman forgive us our trespasses against him. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the medium through which the several institutions of the Congregational Christian denomination keep before our constituency. It is a servant of all the institutions of our denomination. Through it the college, the mission board, the orphanage and superannuation can inform the readers of THE SUN of their needs and also the progress they are making.

Being a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN is like being a member of a large family. What is more beautiful than a large family? We find that when we have a need to be met and the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are informed they are always loyal and ready to respond. Those who give like to know the results of their giving, and THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a very fine way to keep the readers informed.

In the Southern Convention, the Congregational Christian denomination has more than thirty thousand members. One of our main troubles is that our CHRISTIAN SUN family is too small. Thirty thousand members and less than fifteen hundred subscribers! If we calculate five members in an average family that would give us six thousand families who ought to take THE CHRISTIAN SUN. But let us cut that number in half. That will leave three thousand families. If these three thousand families would take THE CHRISTIAN SUN at $2.00 each, that would give an income of six thousand ($6,000.00) dollars—about enough to run THE SUN. How can we increase our CHRISTIAN SUN family to three thousand? If each subscriber will become responsible for one new subscriber, either by persuading some friend to subscribe or by donating to some person who would enjoy reading it but who is unable to take it, we can run THE CHRISTIAN SUN family up to three thousand in a week. It's great to be a member of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family. Get your friends to join this happy family.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

A man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart; his next, to escape the censures of the world. If the latter interferes with the former, it ought to be entirely neglected; but otherwise there cannot be a greater satisfaction to an honest mind than to see those approbations which it gives itself seconded by the applauses of the public.—Jos. Addison.

In Memoriam

MONTGOMERY.

Mrs. Mary Francis Montgomery passed to her reward on January 21, 1941, at the age of seventy-one years. Her husband, Lewis Montgomery, died several years ago. She is survived by two sons, Norman of Cuningham, N. C., and Cephas of Newport News, Va., and five grandchildren. Sister Montgomery had been a member of Lebanon Christian Church since early life. The funeral was from the home and burial in the family cemetery, Cuningham, N. C. A large crowd was present. Floral tributes were beautiful and abundant. The deceased loved her church. She suffered much for several years. Loved ones find comfort in the assurance that she is at rest.

C. E. NEWMAN.

FORLINES.

Mr. Aubrey Lee Forlines, age nineteen, died at the South Boston Hospital early Sunday morning, January 26, as the result of an automobile accident a short while before. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Z.

Forlines of Nathalie, Va. The funeral and burial were at Liberty Christian Church on Monday, January 27, where the deceased had been a member for several years. Besides the parents he is survived by one sister, Mrs. B. W. Fisher of Nathalie and the following brothers: G. E. and W. W. Forlines of South Boston, Va.; G. C. and H. Z. Forlines of Nathalie. He was a member of Company F, 116th Infantry, Virginia National Guard. He was to leave with his company for Fort Meade, Md., in the early part of February.

C. E. NEWMAN.

AYSUCUE.

At six o'clock, Thanksgiving morning, Liberty (Vance) Congregational Christian Church sustained a great loss in the death of Bro. Tollie Ayscue who died in Watts Hospital, Durham, N. C. He had been in declining health for more than a year. He underwent a major operation from which he never recovered. Mr. Ayscue is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bertha Ayscue; one son, Tollie Franklin, Jr., who lives with his mother; two daughters, Misses Bettie Fuller, a graduate nurse at Duke Hospital and Marie, a stenographer for the County Farm Administration at Louisburg, N. C.

Brother Ayscue had been a member of Liberty Church since boyhood. He was Chairman of the Board of Trustees of his church, a faithful and devoted member. His home has been the home of preachers and Christian workers for years. He was one of the genial souls who made you feel welcome in home and life when you first met him.

His influence as a Christian gentleman was not limited to his own church but was felt in the entire community. He was both church- and civic-minded. Therefore, we shall miss his presence but profit by his sweet spirit and beautiful life.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

LUKE, CHAPTER FIFTEEN.

father's house. Second, the outreaching love of the bereaved father must be great enough to welcome the lost son back into the family. Third, the older son must be willing to welcome his erring brother home; he must accept him as his brother.

As this last touch is the whole purpose of our Lord's teaching in this sequence of three parables, this added comment may be worthwhile. Remember, the parables are the answer of Jesus to the criticism made by the scribes and Pharisees in these words: they murmured, saying, this man receiveth sinners and eateth with them.

Let us put ourselves in the ranks of the Pharisees, the clean, law-abiding good Jews, who are described in the parable as the Elder Brother. His father does not accuse him of sin. He has been a law-abiding, diligent, sober son. Just as the Pharisees felt about publicans and sinners and as the older brother felt about this ragged poverty-stricken wreck of a man, so we are apt to scorn the fallen and call them the "scum of the earth," the unemployable riff raff, morons and dregs of humanity.

It is this unlovely side of the Elder Brother in the aggressive successful nations which perpetuates race hatred by the use of scornful nicknames, justifying themselves in this way for exploiting these brothers among what we call "the lesser breeds." When we call Jews "Sheenies" and "Kikes," the Chinese "Chinks," the Italians "Dagoes," the Mexicans "Greasers," the Japanese "Japs," and the Negroes "Niggers," with a small "n," we are the Elder Brother of the parable. This message of Jesus in these incomparable and never to be out-dated parables is that God is the loving Father of all men, seeking always for the recovery of the lost image of our divinity; and that, therefore, all men are brothers who should help the disadvantaged and weaker brothers up the altar stairs to the Father's house of love. In short, Jesus believed in the improbability of all men.

One other aspect of redemption is hinted all through the parable, namely, that there is joy among the invisible inhabitants of the universe when one of us earth-bound children of the Father faces upward in seeking the good, the true and the beautiful.

Five facets in this gem of our Lord's teaching shine with eternal luster:

First—God is always like a father bereft when we go wrong. God is the loser when any child is lost.

Second—The lost sons of God are always miserable and in great peril.

Third—God is always eagerly seeking to recover His lost sons.

Fourth—The recovery of the lost sons of God is in some mysterious way a source of ineffable joy to those who dwell in the unseen universe beyond this bourne of time and space.

Fifth, and supremely—All God's children should work together in faith, striving for and rejoicing in the recovery of our brothers from the tangled paths of sin, hoping always that love will at last prevail, and that finally we may sit down to eat together with those who one time were strangers in a far country but who now have returned to their Father's house and home.

down and squealed for joy. "Now I can have a new suit to wear in the Easter play," he said, "and there will be enough to get the girls new dresses, too, so that they will look nice for their parts in the Easter program. I sure am glad that you brought that magazine home from Mrs. Smith's, mom."

Subscription Apportionments

Our Workmanship as Missionaries

By WALTER H. JUDD, M. D.

One stream of influence going out from America is what we ordinarily have in mind when we speak of foreign missions—those who go under the banner and auspices of the Christian Church. That is an indispensable part of the total enterprise. The task cannot possibly be done without it because its share of the task is the most fundamental thing of all, that of making the right kind of bricks—men and women of disciplined Christian character—without which no house can be built that will not fall. But foreign missions, too, must be made thoroughly Christian.

We must constantly criticize missionary work as to its techniques, methods, strategies, as a doctor criticizes—not to destroy but to save. Some may say it is unnecessary and unkind because missions is 95% all right. But many a man is dead who was 95% all right. People pay a doctor to find the 5% that is wrong with their bodies, to search out not so much the well spots as the sick spots and correct them. Just so we must do with this cause which is so near to our hearts.

If I were to take a text for what I have to say about improving our workmanship as missionaries, it would be where the Lord said unto Moses, "Ye have compassed this mountain long enough. Turn ye northward." It was all right for the Israelites to be around that mountain during the first stage of their journey, but staying on right there just because it had been proper to spend the first period there, was an error. The situation was changing; it was time to move on. I want to mention six or seven aspects of our work where we, too, need to move on quickly if we are to meet the special needs of our day as our predecessors succeeded so admirably in meeting the needs of theirs. We have hindsight to help us, the benefit of their experience. None of the recommendations I make is new, you are aware of every one of them and you already have been working at them for years. My contribution, if any, is merely to review them and stress the urgency of getting action on them at once. We must move more rapidly in our present emergency, redouble our efforts.

1. We must completely de-nationalize God. The people to whom we go don't want or need an American God. They do need and want the God of the universe. We must get wholly rid in our thinking and attitudes of an idea that we are going out as Americans to them as, for example, Chinese or as Africans. It is not in any sense because we are Americans or Westerners that we have something indispensable to take to them; it is only because we are Christians who happened through no virtue of our own to be born where we had the chance to learn of Jesus Christ. That experience has been so transforming, so all-in-all to us, that we cannot rest until we try to give to everybody else the chance to know Him, too. On the other hand it is not in any sense because they are Chinese or Africans that they need God; it is only because they are human beings. They don't need Him any more than we do; but they don't need Him any less. We go because we believe no human life anywhere can be fully redeemed from its lower nature and lifted to its fullest heights except as it is brought into contact with (Please turn to page 5.)

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. and Mrs. Joe A. French moved to Reidsville, N. C., last week to take up the new work at the First Christian Church there. THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes them good success in their new field.

A new missionary society has recently been organized at Shallow Ford Christian Church, near Elon College, N. C. Mrs. Kenneth Register, the wife of the pastor, has been chosen as the first president of the group.

The pastor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, reports that the people of Pleasant Hill Christian Church, near Liberty, N. C., have voted to begin work on building a new church. Mr. Crutchfield has recently become pastor of Pleasant Ridge Christian Church in Guilford County.

Our people at Seagrove, N. C., have recently constructed a lovely new brick church. The Promotional Secretary was the speaker at the first service held in the new church building last Sunday morning. Rev. T. J. Green will be the guest preacher on the second Sunday in March.

The Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., has copies of "Lenten Devotions for Young People" for sale at 2c each. It is not too late to take advantage of the period from now to Easter as a time of encouraging personal meditations among your young people. These booklets will help them.

Dr. John G. Truitt, chairman of the Board of Publications, recommends that a committee be appointed in each church to secure subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Subscriptions should be sent promptly to F. C. Lester at Elon College and reports on the campaign should be sent to Dr. Truitt or directly to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office.

From Rev. J. H. Warren, pastor of Little Creek Christian Church, comes the following: "Friends will be interested to know that the Government is starting an initial expenditure of $740,000 in the Little Creek area, which is to be the base for the Miniature Navy. We are expecting to see the population doubled in the next few months, which should be a great help to the church."

Dr. Walter H. Judd, formerly of the North China Mission, has entered temporary private practice, believing it inadvisable and finding it now impossible to take his family back to any part of China. He has taken over the practice of a doctor friend who is being called into military service. His home address is 205 West Rustic Lodge, Minneapolis, Minn.

LENTEN SERVICES AT NEW HOPE, ANTIOCH AND LINVILLE.

Antioch, Linville and New Hope Churches in the Virginia Valley Conference, held union Lenten services under the direction of their pastor, Rev. Paul B. Sanger, at the three churches in the order named on February 26, 27 and 28.

There will be a week's services at New Hope, beginning Monday, March 10, and running through Friday. A second week's services will start at Antioch on Sunday, March 23, running through the following Friday; and at Linville a Union Holy Week service will begin on Monday, April 7, and continue through Good Friday.

NEWS FROM GEORGIA AND FLORIDA.

An impressive service of installation for the new officers of our Atlanta, Ga., Church was conducted by Rev. Philip M. Widenhouse at the Sunday morning service the last of January.

The Fourth Annual Preaching week at St. Petersburg, Fla., was conducted March 9-14, with the Honorable William E. Sweet, Moderator of the General Council and former Governor of Colorado, as guest speaker. Governor Sweet is a forceful speaker and his messages of deep conviction are inspiring and challenging.

At Lagrange, under the direction of Rev. David W. Shepherd, the minister, there is being developed a splendid recreational program in the church for the young people. One or two nights a week the young people meet in a room which has been especially outfitted for the purpose—with ping pong tables, carom, Chinese checkers, etc. On other nights the young people of intermediate age gather, and just recently they have inaugurated a similar program for the adults.

DR. BREWER EDDY IN SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

The people of our churches in the Southern Convention were fortunate to have the opportunity of hearing Dr. D. Brewer Eddy this week. Dr. Eddy is a Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, with his office in Boston, Mass., and is known throughout the country for his knowledge of international affairs as well as of our foreign missionary work.

Repeated trips abroad, during which he has studied anew the political and economic difficulties of Europe and Asia and sought timely information from leading nationals, enable Dr. Eddy sympathetically to interpret the trend of events in these troubled areas. His last visit to Russia came when that country was passing through the "blood purge" with hundreds of high officials executed or under arrest. In Germany also he was present during significant and dramatic events, and in Denmark and Sweden studied particularly the cooperative movement. In China, Dr. Eddy spoke before a series of great audiences with his brother, Sherwood Eddy, and met most of the active personalities who now figure in the news from the Orient. While attempting to interpret current events in an unbiased and balanced manner, his emphasis is definitely on the moral and ethical issues involved.

MID-YEAR SESSION EASTERN N. C. CONFERENCE CALLED.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational Christian Churches has planned to have a mid-year session at Oak Level Christian Church, March 19, 1941.

A good program has been arranged for the day, and lunch will be served in the grove by the host church. We hope each church will be represented by three persons: a man, a woman, and a young person. We also want all the pastors present. The program will begin at 10:00 A. M. Each church should select some layman to speak a few words on "What Our Church Is Doing." At eleven o'clock Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke University will address the conference.

In the afternoon there will be two group conferences. Rev. F. C. Lester will lead the adults on "The Work of the Church." Miss Lucy Eldredge will lead a forum for the young people, after which she will speak to the conference. We hope to adjourn about three o'clock.

S. E. MADREN,
President.

RESPONSES TO THE COLLEGE APPEAL.

We are encouraged a bit by the responses from Sunday schools and churches that continue to come in for the college. We had hoped and urged that every church and Sunday school would give their people an opportunity to contribute for the support of the college as provided by the Convention. A number have responded, but quite a number of churches and Sunday schools have not yet forwarded their contributions.

It is useless to indicate the need of the college. We are all aware of that. Your contributions will count on your conference apportionments and will be of tremendous assistance to the college during these spring months. We are grateful for those who have responded.

WIDELY KNOWN MINISTER PASSES.

Rev. Samuel Quinn Helfenstein, M. A., D. D., passed to his reward at his home in Dayton, Ohio, Sunday night, January 19, 1941, after a brief illness, in the ninety-third year of his life. Dr. S. Q. Helfenstein was one of the best known, and most highly honored ministers among the Christian Churches. He was a scholar of unusual ability, having won first honors in Hebrew and Greek while a student in McCormick Theological Seminary. He received his B. A. and M. A. degrees from Parson's College of Fairfield, Iowa, and the D. D. degree was conferred upon him by Palmer College of Iowa.

For twenty-five years, Dr. Helfenstein was the editor of the Sunday School Literature for the Christian Churches. He was a keen mathematician as well as an able scholar in the languages. He was Professor of New Testament Greek, Biblical Literature, and Comparative Religions at Palmer College, and held the same position at Defiance College. He also held pastorates in Iowa, New York and Ohio. Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" gave him credit a few years ago for being the only man known who could square nine nines mentally. Later he squared twelve twelves.

Dr. Helfenstein traveled widely in Europe and in the Near East as well as in America. His services were in constant demand by churches and conferences up to the time of his death. Though nearly ninety-three years old, as reckoned by time, he was as alert and vigorous mentally and physically as most men are at seventy. He was able to turn hand springs until he was seventy years old, and was a great lover of golf and tennis even in the last years of his life. A year ago he attended the World's Fair in New York and within a few weeks took the trip to California to attend the World's Fair at San Francisco.

He was a brother of the late Rev. David M. Helfenstein, and an uncle of Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein.

His wife, a daughter of the Rev. Dr. Austin Craig, the noted theologian, preceded him in death two years ago. Dr. Helfenstein leaves two daughters, Mary the wife of a physician in Minneapolis, and Ruth, the wife of an attorney in Dayton, Ohio. Also surviving are two sisters and one brother, out of a family of eight children. Thousands of admiring friends will mourn his going.

Dr. James R. Clinton, pastor-at-large of the Board of Home Missions, spent February in Florida conducting Preaching Missions in Tampa, First; North Miami and Miami Shores. Two weeks were spent in Ft. Lauderdale exploring possibilities of establishing a church in that city. Dr. Clinton has a deep spiritual message and a fine music talent. Mrs. Clinton, who is an accomplished organist, accompanied Dr. Clinton.

The impossible is that which we have not yet learned to do.—Whitney.

DR. WALTER H. JUDD.

We believe the article by Dr. Judd on "Our Workmanship as Missionaries" is a most appropriate one for the inauguration of our Mission period. This realistic presentation, this first-hand grappling with the stubborn problems of the missionary, may force us to revise some of our traditional, prosaic conceptions of missionary work. Dr. Judd, who is credited with having done more than any other one man to arouse the sympathy with China in the United States reflected in the last Gallup Poll on embargoes, may also arouse our interest in missions and stimulate our giving to higher levels. We suggest that missionary societies make this article the subject of serious study and discussion.

INSURANCE.

Professor William Lyon Phelps once wrote a delightful essay on the subject, "Life Insurance." He listed four items to insure one against the destitution of old age. A sense of humor takes away the dread of old age. By it the ideal woman can laugh at her approaching old age. Good health comes in for honorable mention. The cultivation of the mind is listed as the best insurance, for this makes it possible to live with oneself. And, finally, there is friendship, the assurance that comes from the knowledge of being wanted. Like ordinary insurance, these qualities must be cultivated constantly in order to be active and available when they are most needed.

Church membership is the best policy for protection in the realm of spiritual values. In the time of sickness or bereavement, many people have been astounded at the dividends of friendship which had accrued during the years to their credit. What a pity for people to allow this form of spiritual insurance to lapse. Occasionally one finds people who seem to have the idea that the period of grace for paying a church pledge is thirty years rather than thirty days.

A paid up subscription to "The Christian Sun" is the best policy to insure and assure the moral and spiritual maturity of the children now in the home. The circulation of "The Christian Sun" into every home is as essential to the health and long life of the church as the circulation of the blood to every part of the body is essential to its health and long life. Don't let your insurance lapse! Check your lable to be sure. By checking the table of subscription apportionments in our last issue you will be able to determine if your church needs additional insurance.

MISSIONARY PROMOTION.

The chairman of the Missions Council for the ensuing year is Rev. Albert D. Stauffacher; the vice-chairman, Mrs. Leslie R. Rounds; and the recording secretary is Rev. F. C. Lester. In the mid-winter meeting the Missions Council called attention to the orphaned missions, through the dislocation of war, turning helplessly to the churches in those lands not caught by war (4,000 missionaries of 166 European missions are bereft of church support except as we help, in cooperation with other denominations).

In order to awaken a new realization of the world's need of Christianity the Missions Council adopted the following resolutions:

1. That every pastor, than whom as a source of interest and leadership the church cannot rise higher, be asked to give the situation more than ordinary attention, not failing in Sunday morning messages to sound the missionary note and plainly declare the need.

2. That activities to aid causes outside our regular responsibilities be added to and not replace our regular programs.

3. That in line with the recommendations of the United Stewardship Council, stewardship emphasis be continued with increased stress.

4. That we urge the members of the Boards scattered through the churches, their officers and ministers, to give renewed consideration and effort through the proper channels to concrete personal relations with one or more missionaries, home and foreign, with a view to more intelligent and adequate support.

5. That we continue the program of missionary education through well publicized and promoted meetings which missionaries on itineraries are invited to address and through diligent use of helpful literature.

6. That Miss Mildred Widber, with the help of the Joint Staff, be asked to make plans for the promotion of Children's Giving, and the use of the leaflet on "Children and Giving," and that we urge members of the Missions Council to cooperate in this promotion.

7. That full cooperation be given the Pilgrim Fellowship in their promotion of a plan of Giving and Service.

8. That we highly commend the woman's gift plan for sacrificial giving from women's groups of the churches, beyond their previous giving to the apportionment, and that we recommend that the Missions Council cooperate to the fullest extent with the State Presidents and the women members of the Boards in the promotion of the plan.

9. That a message be sent to each parish, to be read from the pulpit and to be included in parish letters, calling attention to (1) the Christian World Fellowship obligation and (2) the non-Christian World Need of hearing the gospel and experiencing gospel sympathy and help. The adequate meeting of this two-fold situation calls for an advanced goal of sacrificial giving.

10. That we commend the plan that each church should (1) study its own (Continued on page 13.)

OUR WORKMANSHIP AS MISSIONARIES.

and into conformity with that life of Jesus. We must completely divorce the Christian religion from western civilization and the many secondary practices and non-essential accretions which have developed, naturally enough, during the centuries and which it is so easy to identify with the primary and essential. A good deal of progress has already been made, but there is still a long way to go.

2. We must stop putting the institution ahead of the faith. It is so easy to let the institution which was created as a means to an end come gradually and almost without our realization to be regarded as the end itself. We must recognize increasingly that it is our religion we are taking, not primarily our organization, our denominations, our order of service, our church government, our system of a paid full-time ministry, or even our brand of theology. All these things are important. But they are not the one great essential. The Christians in the younger churches in mission lands will gradually work them out for themselves as we did for ourselves and as Christians everywhere have always done. Pray God they will be able to do it better than we have; and there are good reasons to have faith that they will.

Greece led the world for a time, making her contributions through art, literature and philosophy. Rome made her great contributions in the realms of law and government. For the last few centuries the Nordic races have been making theirs in the fields of scientific investigation, power machinery to do man's labor, clever political organization, practical business efficiency—the mastery of nature. It looks as if they had passed their peak and are being destroyed by their own inventions because their religious development has not kept pace. Is it not, therefore, a rather bold assumption and presumption for us calmly to take for granted that we are not only able but destined to lead the world in matters of religion—a realm wherein lies the genius of Oriental peoples? Is it not possible that the next great contribution to the total culture of the world, the next great forward step in its progress as looked at from the viewpoint of the centuries may be in the realms of religion and philosophy and led by Oriental peoples—if only Christ as he is in the New Testament can be given to them? It is He we are to take; all else is secondary.

It is so much easier to take them our institutions than our faith, so much easier to be a Congregationalist than a Christian, to let the former be a substitute for the latter. The great insidiousness of the temptation comes just from the fact that our institutions and their good work are so very important. Money has been invested in our hospitals, schools, churches; generations of missionaries have labored to build them; we feel we must keep them going at all costs. And we must, as long as they serve the greater end; but just as certainly we must be willing to have them sacrificed if to maintain them keeps us from doing an even better thing, a more essential thing—fearless witnessing for the truth, standing for the right.

All Jesus needed to do to keep going His great work of ministering to the bodies, minds and spirits of men was to keep silent about the evils He observed in high religious circles. Yet what would He have had worth preaching about if He had kept still when the very stones were crying out? He challenged the evils and was promptly eliminated. His medical work was stopped, but he kept the faith. As a result, medical work has gone on in his name all the centuries since, and in all continents.

The moral authority of the American missionary is all but destroyed in China as long as his own church at home is quiescent or acquiescent in such a ghastly iniquity as our being the major ally of Japan's military in its ruthless assault on China. Even if belated action by us to stop that traffic should not be enough now, added to China's own efforts, to save her, yet that action would restore integrity and power to the missionary enterprise through the moral authority of a sacrifice—the same moral authority that Jesus Christ gained on the cross. He could not have gained it any other way, nor can we.

That moral authority would advance the Christian gospel in China more than fifty years of good words and kind deeds without it can ever do. If it were demonstrated once that the Christian gospel had enough vitality to command the allegiance of its adherents in even one land to the degree that they were willing to follow its Christ in risking their business for the sake of right and justice and other methods than war of settling the disputes that have always arisen and always will arise, that spectacle would give fresh validity to, would vitalize the whole Christian movement in every land as nothing else can.

In coming through Japan a prominent Japanese Christian woman told me that she and her husband thought the Christian Church there ought to go into the catacombs. On my inquiry if she meant that the church ought to risk its educational and medical institutions in order to take a stand against the military clique, she replied without hesitation that they believed such a stand should be made even if it meant, as it probably would, the giving up of their Sunday morning church services. She said that the church was already able to carry on publicly only insofar as it kept silent on the one burning public issue, and by its silence appeared to approve. Better to lose all the institutions and go into the catacombs if necessary, in order to save the faith.

One is compelled to wonder if we Western Christians have not become so soft and so concerned about our institutions and our property that we would fail to stand up as well before difficult decisions as have most of the younger Christians. If our attempt to preserve our "work" and insure the comfort and safety of the workers takes precedence over the chance to grow in Christian character and grace through suffering for the right, then the missionary movement may save its organization temporarily but will lose its soul.

3. In the crucial and difficult years ahead we must be far more careful in the selection and sorting out of our personnel. We must have people of greater ability, better education, better training in how to use their bodies and minds without strain, better emotional stability, better adaptability to strange and trying situations, and above all deeper spiritual experience and more contagious enthusiasm to share it. We must have people who are not only willing to go but who have something to take that is worth taking, and who are willing to come home if they don't fit. If maladjustments develop occasionally it should not be surprising. Many a man working as a minister in a city church in this country where he may be able perhaps to have a fairly regular routine with hours for study in the quiet of his library, the stimulus of association with fellow ministers, inspiration from great religious conferences, will be a giant in the American pulpit; but the same man might quite understandably be a flat failure as an itinerant evangelist on the barren plains of Northwest China. That is no disgrace. A race horse cannot do a draft horse's work, and vice versa. It is only a disgrace if he or his mission thinks he ought to stay on there out

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In a recent meeting of the Ministers' Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference, there was an informal discussion of the problems of the Southern Convention. A meeting of ministers usually drifts into that kind of discussion, if time permits, and eventually two difficulties are encountered. The first difficulty is a tendency to to emphasize some local interest; the second is the necessity of adjusting plans in which some personalities are involved. After many years experience in serving on Committees appointed to prepare programs for Convention and Conference sessions, we know something about these things in respect to our regular meetings. There are people who would feel slighted if they did not appear on the program. There are departments and committees who want first consideration in the selection of time and place. These localized attitudes and personal ambitions are self-evident, in many forms, and they affect our plans for expansion and growth.

This explains the present difficulties under which the Convention is trying to publish THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Too many of our people have regarded the paper as a local institution, and have based their support upon their likes, or dislikes, of the editor and the management. This also explains, in large measure, the major difficulties of Elon College during its eventful history. It has been the victim of many local attitudes, and it has been afflicted by ambitious personalities. Our missionary work has been hampered in a similar way, although not to such an alarming extent. The orphanage has been under a similar handicap. The successful administration of the institution, for several years, has been due to the wisdom of its management in cultivating a public sentiment, free from localized ambition and prejudice. It is not operated in the interest of any personal honor or profit, but for the sake of helpless children.

When the Southern Convention was organized, its leadership planned for its extension to the Gulf of Mexico, including all of the Southeastern states in their missionary plans. Why has the area of the Convention been reduced to include only Virginia and North Carolina? Why was it not re-organized after the union with the Congregational Churches to include all the churches of the Southeastern Convention? Localized ideals and personal perspectives in both groups must be included in a full explanation. Church people usually develop a strong loyalty to some local traditions which are not easily surrendered. This is true in the local church, the Conference and the Convention. It should be said with emphasis, that this tendency contributes to the growth of character and the performance of the church, when it is properly directed. The danger arises when people draw a circle around their personal tastes and traditions, excluding others from their fellowship and sacrificial service.

The day has arrived when the conferences and associations in the Southeastern States should become members of the Southern Convention. The Afro-Congregational Christian Convention is an organization of colored people with objectives similar to our Southern Convention. The colored Congregational Christian Conferences and Associations should also effect a united organization under their own leadership, giving them a strong working organization in the Southeast. It would require some adjustment of methods in both Conventions but these can be made. In the interest of the kingdom of God this should be done. It was not easy to do this when the denominations united several years ago, because of certain property holdings and financial obligations. But those difficulties are not as great now, and some steps should be taken to broaden our vision and unify our common interests.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE MISSIONARY PERIOD.

With March begins the Missionary Period in the churches of the Convention. During this period every pastor and every communicant should inform himself as best he can concerning world conditions, the urgency of the need of the Christian Gospel in all lands, his church's and his own personal responsibility for meeting these needs.

Perhaps not in the history of the Christian movement was the need greater or the situation more precarious. Totalitarian states, and they seem to be multiplying, are violently set against democracy and Christianity and are moving ruthlessly and with incredible speed over the earth. If democracy, Christianity certainly as we know it will likewise go. Current happenings throughout the world issue an inescapable challenge to the whole Christian system. This country cannot afford to sit by and see democracy hopelessly crushed, nor can the church in this country afford to be indifferent to concerted actions against the church in other parts of the world. Men and money in abundance will be needed—men who love Christ and His Church and are willing to bear witness, regardless of the cost, and money in sufficient amounts to sustain those who go to carry the gospel and to provide equipment and the necessary expense for carrying the gospel in its power to those who need it.

Our churches in the Southern Convention can ill afford to close their eyes to world conditions, their ears to a universal appeal, and their purses to the acute financial needs of the various agencies of the Kingdom operative in the world today. For many years we have been alert to world conditions and responsive to a small measure of our ability. For many years we as a Convention were blessed with the fearless, capable, and consecrated leadership of our fallen comrade, Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Dr. Atkinson meant much to the various enterprises of our church, but he meant more to our missionary interest. He was a great advocate for the cause of missions, writing, speaking, and praying to the one end that our church might become missionary in spirit and in practice. His labors were not without their rewards. At this season of the year he has been accustomed to speak for more than twenty years. This time we will not hear his voice, nor will appeals and messages go from his pen to our people. The needs are great. We as a people are able. May God help us to respond.

The church has made the writer directly responsible for our program of higher education at Elon College and the conduct of our institution of higher learning. I am sensible of the responsibilities connected therewith. I am, however, passionately interested in every phase of our work. My interest today is in our missionary program, and my appeal to the churches is for a prayerful consideration of our missionary program and sacrificial giving on the part of every member that we may not only raise the amount asked for our missionary enterprises, but facing the needs of the church today as she is called upon to administer to a broken and a suffering world, and considering the blessings that

Dear Readers:

Not so long ago I wrote a letter to Oliver and his mother thought that I should write a letter to you. I don't have any little boy or girl to keep me busy, but there are many other jobs I have to do.

Aren't you glad that spring is in the air? It is cold yet in Richmond, but this morning when I walked in my garden I found a few forsythia blooms and the jonquils and iris are pushing their heads through the ground. Some birds have come to my ward, too. I have seen a cardinal and a pair of robins. They were pecking our sunflower seeds.

While I was sitting in our living room reading this afternoon I heard an awful crash in the fireplace, and I couldn't imagine what it was—unless it was a bird that had fallen in. Since we weren't having a fire there, we had put the fire cover over it and it was too heavy for me to lift and I thought I would wait until someone could help me. Later, when Mr. House came home from making visits I did manage to lift it a trifle for just a peek, and while I was trying hard to see what was trapped in my fireplace, out flew a tiny sparrow. It was frightened and flew around and around bumping into furniture and the walls. We chased it into the dining room where finally we caught it. Its little heart was going bumpy, bumpy, bump! We took it on the back porch and let it go, and it flew to a big tree where it could rest. Not all little birds have such adventure—paying calls at parsonages.

Can you finish the story about the bird? I don't know what happened to him when he left. Perhaps you can make up one. Try it and see.

Do some of you live in parsonages? I am sure that you do. It is a special kind of place in which to live and I think I will share the pleasures of it with you. A parsonage is a house that belongs to a church and it is for their minister to live. The one I live in has nine rooms and it keeps me busy taking care of it. The first minister and his family to live in it were a large family and they needed lots of room. Now just two people live in it. We stay busy all day long: cleaning, cooking, studying, visiting, calling people and talking to people. Sometimes the church folk come to the parsonage for a meeting, sometimes just to visit. Every once-and-while there is a wedding at the parsonage. That, too, is good. Parsonage dwellers are sort of like doctors and their families because they must be used to telephone calls at any time in the day or night for often the pastor must go to be with someone who is sick or unhappy. A parsonage is such a nice place, for you share it with a whole church and that makes you feel like such a big family. Maybe some of you will grow up to be ministers or ministers' wives and then you can have the happy experience of living in a parsonage.

AN INDIAN STORY.

This summer I was traveling to California with a group of folks and we decided to go to see Grand Canyon. It is in Arizona and is one of the most beautiful spots in our country. It is a great and deep cut in the earth and was made by the Colorado River working itself along through many years. The colors of the Canyon are very beautiful. But I want to tell you about what happened when we were on the way to the Canyon. It was hot and dry and the land was arid or desert land. There was nothing but gravel and sand and a few cacti. Suddenly we saw a covered wagon driving across the sands. It was an Indian wagon and the family was going some place—but we never found out where. And do you know why? Because they couldn't speak English. We wanted to take their picture and we waved for them to stop and they did. The father was driving the old mule and the mother was sitting beside him and the children were in the back, under the cover of the wagon. One of them was afraid, but a little girl came over to us. She must have been about eight years old and she was a warm brown color. Her hair was black and pulled tightly to the back of her head and in her ears she had big round earrings. She wore a bright colored dress that made me think of Joseph's many colored coat. Do you remember that story? Her dress was full and pleated and she was barefooted. I wondered how her feet could stand the desert's warmth. She laughed and stood still while we took her picture and she smiled when we gave her some money. Then the father called to us, but we could not understand him. He shouted loud and beat on his chest, but still we could not understand, and when we drove away he was still trying to talk to us.

We think of all the Indians of story book land and history being gone, but they aren't. After the census was taken last year (do you remember it?) it was found that there are many Indians in our America. Try to find out if there are some Indians living near you. Some live near Richmond on the Pamunkey Reservation.

IN HONOR OF DR. J. O. ATKINSON.

My brother, Mr. Caleb D. West of Newport News, Va., has suggested that we endeavor to increase all missionary offerings, but especially Easter church offerings in honor of our great missionary leader, the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson. It is Mr. West's intentions to actively support this movement by increasing the missionary offerings of the Newport News church. In order to reduce this suggestion to a workable basis, the secretary will keep accurate accounts and the Honor Fund will be made up as follows:

1. All increases over last year of each Sunday school monthly offering during March and April, 1941.
2. All special gifts for the Honor Fund.
3. From March 1 to December 31, 1941, all increase of offerings sent direct to the Mission Board by the churches after Easter, or to the Board through the various Conferences at the end of the Conference year.

In addition to what I did for Missions last year I have enclosed to Secretary Parker my check for $25.00 with which to start the fund.

MINUTES OF MISSION BOARD EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH,
FEBRUARY 17, 1941.

The meeting of the Executive Committee of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches was held in the Suffolk Christian Church, Suffolk, Va., on Monday, February 17, 1941, at 2 o'clock. The following members were present: Col. J. E. West, Chairman; Mr. J. A. Williams, Rev. H. S. Hardeastle. H. S. Hardeastle was elected secretary pro tem.

At a conference of the executive committee of the Board, the executive committee and committee on plans of the Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference, and the Home Missions Committee of the said conference, it was deemed necessary for the Board to make an appropriation to Ocean View for next year, and for the Board and the Christian Missionary Association to make an appropriation to the Richmond Church for next year, it being satisfactory with the Richmond Church to reduce that apportionment of $1,800.00 from all sources to $1,500.00 per annum, $300.00 of which must be paid on mortgage indebtedness. J. A. Williams offered the following resolution, which was seconded by H. S. Hardeastle:

Resolved:

1. That next year we appropriate $1,200.00 to the Richmond Church on pastor's salary.
2. That we recommend to the Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference that they appropriate at least $300.00 to the Richmond Church, the total amount to be applied on the mortgage indebtedness.
3. That for next year we appropriate $300.00 to Ocean View on pastor's salary, payable monthly, and that the secretary of the Board be instructed to pay monthly the remainder of this year's appropriation.
4. That in calling a pastor, or pastors, for Ocean View and Little Creek Churches, the Board approves any minister who meets with the approval of the Home Missions Committee of the Eastern Va. Conference. Carried.

It was moved and carried that Rev. Joe French be released from Ocean View and Berea pastorates as of February 28.

It was voted that we accept the resignation of Mr. K. B. Johnson, for many years a member of the Mission Board. Professor L. L. Vaughan of Raleigh, N. C., was elected to membership on the Board to fill the vacancy of Mr. Johnson.

Motion passed that a committee of one be appointed to confer with the Elon College Community Church concerning the matter of securing and supporting a full time pastor for that church. H. S. Hardeastle was appointed.

Meeting adjourned with prayer.

NORTH CAROLINA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY PROGRAMS.

We hope that your programs so far this year have been so fine that you feel the packet of material you purchased was well worth the money. The Thank Offering Service or Stewardship material was used in November, the special Christmas folder in December, and material on the Mi-grants in January and February.

Perhaps it would be well to examine the remaining material in the packet and plan for the programs during the remainder of the year, which closes with the September meeting. It may be that you will want to follow the suggestions which will be given in THE CHRISTIAN SUN from month to month, and which will include the following: March, "The Church"; April, "China"; May, "Our Church in China"; June, Cradle Roll Program; July, Echoes of "School of Missions" and "Elon Summer Conference"; August, "The Bible in the Home"; September, Reports of year's work and election of officers for new year.

Some of our societies have circle meetings in which they wish to study in more detail about our own missionaries and the places where they work. Other societies prefer to use that for their study in their general meetings, and study the mission books by means of book reviews or individual reading. You will find a pink sheet in the packet marked "Information Service Department." In these mimeographed pages you will find a list of material available about our missionaries and their work in China, as well as in other countries. On page 4, you will find that much of the material described is free, while the remainder may be had for only a few cents.

Take advantage of this opportunity to secure additional missionary material for your society.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LENT.

"The Church."

Use as the basis for your program "The Church," a blue mimeographed folder, and the worship service, "The Inner Life—of the Church and of Ourselves," both of which are in your packet.

Begin your program with the Devotional Service found on page 2 of "The Church." (Note that additional copies of this may be secured for ½c each.) If you only have one copy, let a third person read the passages of Scripture marked "All."

Use several people to give the various parts of "The Church":

1. Part A.—The Church from the Past to the Present.
2. Special information about our specific branch of the denomination. It is likely that someone in your church will have a copy of "The Life of Rev. James O'Kelly," by MacClenny; "Lives of Christian Ministers," by Kernodle; or booklets like "The Origin and Principles of the Christians," by Burnett. Copies of these may be borrowed from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., which also has copies of the latter booklet for sale for 25c.
3. Part B.—The Church Today—Introduction on page 4.
4. The ministry of the Church to the Congregation, pages 4 and 5.
5. The Ministry of the Church to Our World—First Four paragraphs, through section by Dr. Shelton on page 6.
6. The Ministry of the Church to Our World—Beginning middle of page 6 through paragraph top of page 7.
7. The Ministry of the Church to Our World—Beginning with "The Slums of the City" on page 7 through paragraph top of page 8.
8. The Ministry of the Church to Our World—Paragraph on Refugees on page 8.
9. The Ministry of the Church to Our World—Begin middle of page 8 and finish section B.
10. Part C.—The Church of the Future.

Use in closing the worship service entitled, "The Inner Life—of the Church and of Ourselves." If you do not have enough members to divide the study among ten people as suggested, use three or four. It will be much better if they will tell their part rather than read it. Since the sheets are not mimeographed on the back, it is possible to cut up the program, giving each person her part to report on.

Of the books mentioned on page 1 of the program material, the Board of Christian Education can loan "The Congregational Churches," "An Outline of Church History," and "Christianity and Our World." Also "The Church," by Stewart.

OUR WORKMANSHIP AS MISSIONARIES.

of a false sense of pride or a mistaken notion that Christian devotion to his "calling" requires that he continue to butt his head against a wall. We must have more careful personnel direction, getting the square pegs out of the round holes and into the square.

This question of being willing to come home for the sake of the work's best interests may be a much sterner test of character and Christian grace than is the decision to go in the first place. Missionary work is a very specialized task, carried on in an environment where one is dealing constantly with the very delicate fabric of relations between races, religions, cultures. It requires certain special qualifications which many people simply do not have. That fact may not be discoverable without actual trial. My chief point here is that every missionary candidate ought to be confronted with the possibility that he may not prove to be well suited for the task and that it may, therefore, become advisable for him to return. Will he be willing to come home at a time when it may be much harder for him to get a job than it would have been if he had not gone abroad, when the best years of his life may already be passed, when his classmates may all have forged ahead leaving him far behind, when he may have to put his family on a lower scale of living—will he be able to do that without the slightest bitterness or resentment against his colleagues or Chinese associates or mission board for bringing him home?

I have read that in India when a student with a B. A. degree took examination for his Master's degree and passed, he wrote after his name "M. A." But if he failed in the examination he did not write just "B. A.," he wrote "M. A. failed." There was some honor in having at least tried. Just so I would far rather write after my name "Missionary, failed," than to be allowed to stay on the field one day after my presence had become for whatever reason more of a liability than an asset to the work. It would be an utterly mistaken sense of kindness to me that would put consideration for my ego ahead of Christ's cause.

Unfortunately it has happened that a missionary was kept on the field after he or she should have been withdrawn because it was thought it would hurt the missionary's feelings too badly, injure his personality too deeply, or might cause the loss of the support of an influential individual or a wealthy church that was greatly attached to the particular missionary. That is no adequate reason. It is another place where we must "turn northward." Decisions regarding personnel must be made solely on a basis of the best interests of the work on the field, and not on any basis of saving the face or feelings of the missionary, or his supporters and friends at home. If a man is not delivered from his selfish ambitions and his personal vanities then he simply is not converted to the Christian position and the discovery should, if possible, be made before rather than after he is appointed. If unfortunately that is not done, the action necessary to correct the situation must be taken no matter how unpleasant. We need to be constantly reminded that we are the means to an end, not the end.

In a southern college I ran across a young student who said she was going to China as a missionary. I asked her where in China she hoped to work. She didn't know. What did she plan to become? Evangelist, teacher, physician, nurse? She hadn't the vaguest idea. I inquired how she had happened to decide to be a missionary. She said when she was twelve years old she had been very ill and her parents had promised the Lord that if her life were spared they would give her as a missionary. Now that was a good start, but only a start. It certainly was not enough, without long study and preparation, to qualify her for a very hard and specialized task. She was going to China to try to save her own soul and the Chinese were to be the victims of the attempt! That simply will not do. If we cannot do much direct good for China, at least we can do considerable indirect good by keeping such a one from ever getting there unless she demonstrates willingness to grow.

4. We must change the approach and emphasis of much of our missionary publicity. We must be far more honest with the home churches in the sense of telling them all the truth with less reporting of just one side of the picture—the favorable side. Whenever that has been done it was always with the very best of intentions, being considered necessary to stimulate the interest and flagging support of the givers at home, since as we all know there are so many pastors and churches that have never been quite sold on foreign missions. But my question is whether that really is the way to win support, and certainly this enterprise has got to have some new support from younger men and women if it is to continue on its pres-

MISS ELDREDGE IS COMING.

The coming of Miss Lucy Eldredge is an event for young people anywhere in America. We are especially delighted to have her in the Southern Convention because she began her work with young people in this area.

She is to be with us March 14-28, 1941. Her schedule is not quite complete, but it is about as follows:

Friday—At Elon College.

Saturday—In Western N. C. Conference.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday—Liberty (Vance) Training School.

Wednesday—Oak Level—Mid-Year Conference; 7:30—Auburn Institute.

Thursday, 7:30—Wake Chapel Institute.

Friday, 7:30—Sanford Institute.

Saturday—To Eastern Virginia for a week.

EASTERN VIRGINIA SPRING RALLY.

The Spring Rally of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship will be held at the Christian Temple, Norfolk, on Saturday, March 22, with an afternoon and evening session. The program committee is composed of Miss Margaret Butler, Mrs. Allen Piland and Baxter Twiddy. Miss Lucy Eldredge of Dayton, Ohio, will be the guest speaker at the evening session.

CHRISTIAN YOUTH AT WORK.

Young people are so often either planning or attending youth conferences that one on the outside might easily gain the impression that the total of their activities consists of merely "another conference." The fact is, however, that the major portions of work, locally and nationally are done by smaller groups which are silently and constantly on the job.

Recently two meetings of youth groups have been held which call particular attention to this fact. Both of them were of national significance, and indirectly they relate to the young people of the Southern Convention.

One was the meeting of the Central Committee of the National Pilgrim Fellowship which met in Chicago last month. This was an executive gathering, the purpose of which was mainly to follow up the emphases outlined at Mills. Special consideration was given the plan of establishing regional conferences for young people who are possible recruits to home and foreign mission fields. Another matter of im-

A DAILY PRAYER FOR THE YEAR 1941.

Father of all mankind, throughout this day, and every day, help me to remember that very real portion of Thy Kingdom has been placed in my keeping. Therefore, teach me to love Thee:

WITH ALL MY MIND—that I may think Thy thoughts after Thee, from dawn to dark, making beautiful and significant each decision of my daily living; help me to remove all prejudice and small-mindedness, O Lord:

WITH ALL MY HEART—that I may love those whom Thou lovest, feeling for even the most unlovable and difficult of Thy children Thine own everlasting mercy:

WITH ALL MY SOUL—that I may seek fresh ways in which we can all be one in Jesus Christ our Lord, praying for Thy divine power to surge through my commonplace routine from morning till night:

WITH ALL MY STRENGTH—that I may work the works of Him who sent me while it is day, seeking to channel through every act Thy devotion to the needs of both my neighbor and myself. Remind me from moment to moment that this is not optional, but the last command of Jesus Christ, Our Lord. Quicken me and use me this day, for Thy name's sake.

Amen.

[This prayer, which appeared on the cover of the World Day of Prayer Service, might well be our sincere prayer for each day of this year.]

portance which was discussed was the setting up of six Work Camps sponsored by the National Pilgrim Fellowship located in strategic areas of the nation. The camps will be set up at Wadley, Ala.; Schauffler College, Cleveland, Ohio; Santa Clara, Calif.; Merom, Ind.; Deering, N. H.; and Grand Marais, Minn. THE COMMUNION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 16, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: John 14:15-17; 16:13, 14.
Romans 8:14-17.

Daily Readings—

Monday—The Promise of the Spirit—Joel: 28, 29.

Tuesday—The Promise Fulfilled—Acts 2: 15-21.

Wednesday—Holy Spirit for the Asking—Luke 11: 11-13.

Thursday—The Holy Spirit Received—Acts 8: 14-17.

Friday—The Spirit's Human Temple—1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.

Saturday—Sanction of Sonship—Gal. 4: 6, 7.

With this topic we are completing the series on the Holy Trinity. To give a summary of the relationships of the three persons of the God Head it may be explained as follows: God the Father is the Creator of all things pertaining to the world. God came into the world in the form of man in the person of Christ who revealed God the Father. The Holy Spirit is God dealing with men in a personal way. The Holy Spirit is an inner light, friend, guide, companion, the spirit of wisdom and truth.

Let us make two divisions of the topic. The first may deal with the reception of the Holy Spirit. Assign as short talks the topics in the Daily Readings for Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. The last division may deal with what the Holy Spirit accomplishes. Assign these for short talks:

1. The Holy Spirit is a Comforter (John 14: 16).
2. The Holy Spirit reveals truth (John 16: 13).
3. The Holy Spirit is a source of power (Acts 1: 8).
4. The Holy Spirit enables us to become the sons of God (Rom. 8: 14).
5. To become religious one must know the communion of the Holy Spirit.

For Discussion—

1. Helen Keller, blind and deaf, was able to say: "We cannot choose what life will bring to us of joy or pain, but what our souls bring to meet the challenge—this is our power!" Did it take Christian courage for her to say this, facing her difficulty?

2. Is it not the fact that the Holy Spirit is ever present the Christian's greatest comfort?

3. How can we intensify our communion with the Holy Spirit?

Suggested Hymns—

"Holy Spirit, Truth Divine."

"Take My Life and Let It Be."

"Just As I Am." S. E. M.

CHRIST REJECTED.

LESSON X—MARCH 9, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 20:9-21:38.

DEVOTIONAL READING: II Tim. 2:3-13.

GOLDEN TEXT: Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.—Matt. 5:11.

Good Preaching.

Some of the best preaching is indirect. The lesson today is an instance in point. Jesus told a story. As always, he told it in a vivid and vital way. When he had finished, we have the record, "And they perceived that he spake this parable against them." It is great preaching when a man can so present the truth that people will perceive that the truth fits their own lives, and brings a sense of conviction into their own hearts. One wonders if too much preaching and teaching is not too abstract and unreal, and unrelated to life. Jesus made his preaching vivid by the use of stories, or illustrations, by talking in terms which people of his day understood, and talking in the language which they used. As a result, the common people heard him gladly, and they understood what he was talking about.

Stewards Not Owners.

Jesus told the story of a man who planted a vineyard, and then leased, or rented it, to another. At the appointed time of the harvest he sent his representative to collect the rent, or to get his share of the fruits. The point of the story is that man holds in stewardship, but does not own. All that we have and all that we are is a trust from God. The cattle upon a thousand hills are his, the silver and the gold are his. It is the Lord God who gives us power to get wealth. We ourselves are not our own, we are bought with a price. In this and other scripture which might be quoted, it is emphasized again and again in the words of God the fact that man possesses, but he does not own. Perhaps there is no lesson more needed in the Christian curriculum of life than the lesson of stewardship. A man can not be a genuine Christian until he understands and practices the basic principles of stewardship.

A Day of Reckoning.

At the appointed time the owner of the vineyard sent his representative to collect. It was a day of accounting, or a day of reckoning. It is a part of life. Men are always being called into judgment, but there is also a final judgment. This is a moral universe, man is a free creature. He has the power of choice. He will be held accountable for how he has used what he has, for what he has done, and for what he has become. One must not take too serious an attitude toward life, but one has not looked at life at all until he sees that it is a kind of moral probation, that there is a day of reckoning, that here and hereafter he must stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

Rebellion.

In the story which Jesus told, the husbandmen, that is the farmers or the tillers of the vineyard, treated the representatives with varying degrees of contempt, and even of personal punishment. They beat one, handled another shamefully, wounded a third, and finally when the owner of the vineyard sent his own son, they killed him. It was high rebellion against rightly constituted authority. Here is dramatized what is going on everywhere and always. At the root of all rejection of Christ and disobedience to the laws of God is the desire of self will to reign supreme. Men resent being reminded that they are tenants, and they are determined to assert their ownership. The parable, of course, applies to the Jewish nation as such. God had sent his prophets, but again and again the nation had rejected them, and had treated them shamefully. Now at least God had sent his own Son in a final effort to reconcile a nation unto himself. The Son was not only rejected, he was not only shamefully treated, he was actually put to death. Thus did the Jewish leaders sin against the light, thus did they reject God's anointed, thus did they defy God himself. It seems a little strange that the Jewish people should reject the Messiah, the one for whom they had looked for so many centuries. But they did reject him, and they did so because his way of life cut across their ways of life, because they were determined to hold to the privileges and prerogatives of their offices, because they wanted to have their own way rather than to do the will of God.

Rejected But Exalted.

"The stone which the builders rejected the same was made the head of the corner." This statement often finds fulfillment in contemporary life. It found its historical fulfillment in Christ. He who was rejected by the Jewish people, he who was scorned and crucified by the Jewish leaders became the very head of the Christian Church, and the foundation of the Christian social order.

Judging or Being Judged.

"Every one that falleth on that stone shall be broken to pieces; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will scatter him as dust." Men sometimes think of Christ as being on trial when as a matter of fact, men themselves are on trial before Christ. Men think of themselves as breaking the laws of God when really they are breaking themselves. In their refusal to follow the light these men were pronouncing their own doom. Christ can be a savior unto life for those who believe on him and to those who commit themselves unto him. He becomes even a stone of stumbling to those who refuse him. Jesus himself said that this is a condemnation that light is great to the world and that men love darkness rather than light.

Darkening Shadows.

"And the scribes and the chief priests sought to lay hands on him in that very hour; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he spake this parable against them. And they watched him and sent forth spies who feigned themselves to be righteous, that they might take hold of his speech, so as to deliver him up to the rule and to the authority of the governor." As has been said above, they perceived that he had spoke this parable against them. It made them angry, it stung them to the very quick. It fanned the flame of what eventually became flaming and consuming hatred. From that time on Christ was a doomed man. Spies constantly watched him, and every effort was made to trip him. The sinister forces of evil were set in motion, and from this time on the shadow of the cross increasingly lay across his path.

have been ours, may we contribute beyond the Convention's askings. May we give until the treasury is filled to overflowing. I am sure that the Mission Board through its chairman, Col. J. E. West, and its recording secretary, Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker, will send out information, provide programs, and issue appeals. I simply wish to add my appeal and urge everyone to do his share.

MONDAY.

A FATAL ERROR.

"Ye cannot serve God and mammon."—Matt. 6: 24. (Read 6: 19-25.)

Petain, the French General, said, in explaining to his people why France failed, "Since the war of 1918 the people have made pleasure their supreme objective. They have demanded pleasure without sacrifice. Now disaster has come."

In July, 1938, Canada put a ban on its citizens using their funds for travel in the United States, explaining that if one "wants to go to Chicago to dance, or to Palm Beach to swim, he cannot have the money for such a purpose."

This is the same thing as saying "You cannot have your pie and eat it," or vice versa. Over emphasis on pleasure is mammon and is disastrous to the higher self. We shall reap what we sow.

Prayer—O Lord, we would set ourselves right with Thee and Thy kingdom this day. We pray for Thy spirit to possess us, O God. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE DAWN OF A NEW DAY.

"Redeeming the time."—Eph. 5: 16.

If you are now a spendthrift, a waster, don't let any one convince you that you will always be so. Don't accept the idea that you will never have a cent ahead in your life. That is up to you.

There are many miracle tales of spendthrifts, who turned, saved their money resolutely, steadily till they had their homes and plenty. Why should any one continue to be a waster, when by the exercise of his willpower he can become an independent citizen? Every day is the dawn of a new day and calls us to a greater enjoyment of the finer things of life.

Prayer—Our Father, as Thou dost make us new and give unto us a new day each day, renew Thy spirit within us and help us to make each day count for something good for ourselves, for others and for Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

DEDICATED TO YOUTH.

"He that is of God heareth God's words."—John 8: 47.

The Bible, the Word of God, is the book that our young people need most to hold them, guide them and steady them in these mad jazzy crazy days, days when multiplied evils are leading many of them down to certain destruction and death. Their only hope is their clinging to the truths of the Bible. Study it. Believe it and cling to it.

Prayer—O Lord, Thy Word is the truth of the past, the present and the future. Have mercy upon us sinners who fall away from it so easily. Increase our faith in it and in Thee. Give us the spirit and the courage to follow it and know Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE HIDDEN STREAM.

"There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God."—Psalm 46: 4.

In Peiping, China, there is a Jade fountain. It bears the inscription: "Under heaven the first spring." It is called the most wonderful spring on earth.

We have never seen this spring, nor have we sipped its waters. But there is another spring that is the first one where we pause to drink just now. It is the fountain of life in Jesus Christ, from the God the Father. Its waters are pure and deep and those who will may come and drink freely, and "whosoever shall drink of this water shall never thirst"; in turn it will give unto him that drinketh also "a well of life springing up unto everlasting life."

Prayer—Our Father, through Thy Word, through our thoughts, and through our prayers, we try to drink of the abundance of Thy fountain of life for us. We pray that we may have that life this day and in turn shed forth a light that is a blessing to others. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DIGGING DEEP.

"Go to the ant thou sluggard . . . and be wise."—Prov. 6: 8.

A party of explorers in the desert came upon an ant hill that always had the appearance of being moist. They thought this strange, for there was not an oasis within hundreds of miles of the place. Certainly the ants were getting water from somewhere and they investigated. We are told that they began digging to find the source of this moisture. Twenty-five feet, fifty, sixty-five, and there they found a spring of water. The little ants had gone down and down until they found that which their lives depended upon, the water of life.

The arid surface of our lives is terrible. But, if we will, we may dig deep knowing that we shall find the hidden stream of salvation.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, we Thy servants, want to drink more deeply of life's golden things. In Thee we shall find them. Help us to press on and faint not. Amen.

SATURDAY.

FAITH IS THE WAY.

"Early will I seek Thee."—Psalm 63: 1.

In the dedication of ourselves each day to the Lord, faith is the way that enables us to dig deep and find that "Hidden stream" of the Lord, the fountain of eternal life—faith to say even as the woman of Samaria said, "Give me of this water," and faith then to keep on knowing that that fountain will be found at last.

Prayer—Dear Lord, our God, the flesh is so weak. We are failing every day to measure up to Thy standard for us. But we can, and that possibility with its rewards hold Thou before us each day. May we not falter. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Let us get together a few minutes this morning and reread the Ten Commandments. Read Exodus 20:1-17. We committed these to memory years ago. Let us now try to repeat them again. But most of all let us refresh our souls with their meaning, make them the subject of our thoughts this day. Wherever thou shalt be, if possible, go to church and let the world know that thou givest place in thy heart and life to God and His love and guidance.

record of giving over the last ten years, especially the ratio of benevolences to current expense giving, (2) decide what is a reasonable advance in giving for Christian work outside the parish, (3) adopt definite goals which will be conscientiously pursued, with the purpose of reaching that self-appointed goal in December, 1941.

OUR WORKMANSHIP AS MISSIONARIES.

ent scale, to say nothing of expansion. The faithful who have borne the load for fifty years will continue to do so but they are passing on to their reward. Many of them were people of considerable means and were very generous. The loss of each leaves a hole that is hard to fill because this cause simply has not caught the imagination or captured the loyalties of recent generations. Why, must we not re-examine critically our whole techniques of publicity and the philosophy behind them.

When a trap to catch mice is not accomplishing its purpose, is it not likely that the fault is with the trap rather than with the mice? Perhaps putting the question that way gives a clue to one reason for the partial failure of our publicity to get the desired results. Maybe our major mistake was in using it as a trap, or at least giving many people the impression it was that, a suspicion which inevitably caused them to shy off and put them on the defensive. Personally, I have been firmly convinced for years that if we worried less visibly about money and really told the story of the place foreign missions can and must play in shaping the destinies of whole continents the response would exceed anything we have yet seen. People care terribly about a world they see going to pieces. They do want to help. The first question they ask is almost always, "What can I do that will really count?" It is seldom that foreign missions has ever occurred to them as offering the greatest opportunity of all because most of them think of missions in terms of little isolated, sentimental incidents, a friendly but rather inconsequential charity, a very nice thing to do of course when there isn't something more important. How many have glimpsed is as a world-shaking force, as dynamic potentially as Hitler's panzer divisions?

Now that is not their fault, it is ours. The enterprise is so much more than we have let them see (or perhaps ourselves have seen). Oh yes, we have told of its quantitative bigness, how many countries, stations, workers, converts, dollars—but that impresses almost no one in a day of billions for battleships and bombers. Big as are our figures they are paltry compared with those involved in man's attempt to destroy himself. And figures cannot tell the bigness of this cause, just as the Lord was not in the wind or the earthquake or the fire, but in the still small voice.

Too often I fear we have gravely underestimated both the intelligence and the loyalty of the people in the pews. We hardly expected them to be able to grasp the gigantic thing missions is essaying to do, so we gave them so much tinier a picture than it deserves. We doubted that they could take strong medicine in huge doses so we passed out small samples in sugar-coated capsules. It wouldn't do to let them find out that we missionaries are human beings just like themselves, that we are not always a serenely happy little family, that we differ vigorously on politics, that we are sometimes petty and mean and our children quarrel as badly as anybody's, that some of our best plans go awry, projects flop, money is spent unwisely. We felt we must play up our successes and hush-hush our blunders.

We know the difficulties, the failures, and we don't quit; but probably the "ordinary Christians" would quit if they found out the whole story. No, they wouldn't. They would rally just as loyally as we do. They would give twenty dollar bills where they now begrudgingly give dimes and nickels just to get rid of us for a time. People don't quit in the face of danger and strain if they realize their support is really needed to win for a cause they understand and believe in. People are so much better Christians than we usually give them credit for. Whenever we don't get a big response it is almost always because we have presented too small rather than too big a challenge.

That is a subtle temptation to which professional religious workers are particularly subject, the temptation to believe that our being officially in full time religious work somehow makes us better and more loyal Christians than are those who are just business and professional men, homemakers, farmers, or day laborers. We believe in God and in ourselves, but we doubt His other children. We are willing to sacrifice for a cause but others probably won't be. Of course that is sheer blasphemy. God can do for others anything He can do for us.

The trouble with publicity that coats the enterprise with so much whitewash that its real character may be obscured is manifold. To begin with, sooner or later from other sources people get portrayals not so flattering as our reports indicated. They find out the truth about us. They discover what they suspected all along, that no man ever became a saint just by taking an ocean voyage. The discovery sometimes proves disastrous. They have been carefully fed on predigested soup for so long that no preparation has been made for the inevitable day when they are presented with a tough piece of meat. They haven't any apparatus with which even to chew it, to say nothing of digesting and assimilating. The net result is the undermining of their faith in the reliability of the Board through which they have giving. They couldn't themselves visit the field and inspect the work; the Board and its agencies had to serve as their eyes. They had trusted the Board's publicity and then it turned out to have been in greater or less degree only a part of the whole picture, it hadn't taken the supporter fully into confidence, hadn't laid all the cards on the table. It hadn't been education, it had been propaganda. The people expected that of Hitler but not

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Have you written your will? To make the best possible disposition of your earthly possessions is a matter that will require deep thought and meditation. God has intrusted you as his steward to use it and get the best returns while in your care, but one day you and I will be called to give an accounting of our stewardship. Will we be among the faithful servants to whom he can say, "You have been faithful"? If you have already written that important document, did you remember your church, your college, or your orphanage. If you have not, don't you think it would be wise to add that clause? If you have not written your will, please remember the institutions of your church when you have thought it through.

From time to time friends have remembered the orphanage and there has never been a time when these amounts have come to us that they did not meet a real need whether the amounts were large or small. Remember the orphanage in your will.

Little children apply to the orphanage from week to week for admittance. The calls must be heeded or they are turned away. When a little child appeals for home and shelter and we know it is in real need it is hard to turn it away. Twenty years ago a man brought a little girl to the orphanage and wanted the orphanage to take her in. We were crowded at the time. Her father and mother were dead. She had no home and no people who wanted her. She was a beautiful little child with a smile on her face. When we told the person who brought her that we were crowded to the limit and had no room, she looked up into my face with a most pathetic expression on her face and said, "Please take me in, I have no home." That settled it. We took her in.

From time to time since that date we have had many pathetic calls. It is hard to turn them away. We took in two sweet little girls last week who had no home. They are fine little tots whose father is dead and whose mother could not support them. We need your help to give them a home and training. Will you remember us?

In Memoriam

WINFREY.

Miss Angie Winfrey departed this life on January 29, 1941, at the age of ninety years, ten months and eight days. She is the last of her family and had spent her life at the old home. Her parents, Mr and Mrs. Charles Winfrey died about forty years ago. Her brother, James W. Winfrey, who represented Union Christian Church at the annual conference for a long period of years, died about twelve years ago, leaving his sister alone at the ancestral home. Her mother was a Miss Farmer of the Pleasant Grove section. She was related to the Farmers, Boyds, Carltons, and others in that section.

Miss Angie was one of the most beautiful Christian characters I have known. She was loved by all who knew her. Her strong faith was an inspiration to many.

of their own church publicity organs. You pastors know all too well what the effect is.

The older type of publicity which did a good job during earlier decades but which leaves our critical younger generation cold has an even more serious consequence than the loss of financial support. It deprives us on the field of the home church's indispensable support through intelligent prayer. There have been times in the last fifteen years when some of us were up against blank walls that seemed unscalable. We were overwhelmed by problems that seemed unsolvable. Just when we were needing to be lifted constantly to the throne of grace in intercession that was effective because it was accurately informed, loyal Christians in their private prayer and in public services were dismissing us with a casual "God bless all the missionaries," because they didn't realize more was needed. Reports had come from Board headquarters that things weren't as bad as the papers might suggest; as a matter of fact, things were going very swimmingly.

That sort of publicity hurts the cause rather than helps it. This is a spiritual enterprise and it cannot succeed without far more spiritual undergirding from the home church than has usually been the case. We must not let a fear that a prompt and frank report of reverses might lessen financial support prevent our receiving the far more important spiritual support. The whole point of what I have been saying is that I believe the best way, yes, the only way to cure our financial anemia is by curing the spiritual anemia. We can get a long-term and sound correction of the financial difficulties that constantly hang like a dagger over the work, only when we succeed in portraying the enterprise as it is, in all its strengths and weaknesses, so that it earns the intellectual respect and the spiritual loyalty of the great body of Christians. The more or less frantic issuance periodically of desperate last minute appeals to squeeze by some touching or dramatic stories a few more dollars out of those who have already given, is an emergency procedure which works the first few times but soon wears out while the emergency continues. It gets some money partly because of its nuisance value but that is no sound foundation for a steady support. I suspect the profusion of such appeals during the last fifteen years has been not so much a consequence of the decline in missionary giving as a cause of it.

I fear there is an almost inevitable crack-up ahead in our missionary work in Japan and much of China as the result in part, of shortsightedly timid and compromising policies followed by most of the mission boards during the last three years. If and when that occurs there is likely to be an even more rapid decline in giving, because people are not being prepared for that eventuality. They are still being led to think everything is quite lovey with our work there. They are being shown only the great open doors (and they are there) and not the powerful adversaries. Emphasis in our publicity is being placed on the favorable surface currents and not on the terrible undertows. Missionary support for the hard days ahead will have to be built on more than superficial sentimentalisms.

(To be continued next week.)

councils rather than through mass meetings were discussed.

The second meeting, the meeting of the Administrative Committee of the United Christian Youth Movement, held in New York in January, should be mentioned. Recognizing the peculiar problems which have been created for large numbers of young men by the present national emergency, the Committee worked on devising practical plans for realizing our Christian responsibility to young men in military service. An effort is being made to place one representative of the Committee on the National Service Board for Religious Objectors. For some time the advisability of establishing "Fellowship Groups" based on particular interests and concerns, such as peace, inter-racial cooperation, economic reconstruction, and the like, has been considered. Plans are being made to develop these groups throughout the country.

It was reported that since June, 1940, Christian Youth groups have contributed slightly under $1,000.00 monthly for the rehabilitation and care of homeless European children, under the Foster Parents' Plan. Eighty-five war children have been "adopted" by local country or state youth councils, and individuals.

Another encouraging report was that American young people who were delegates to the World Christian Youth Conference at Amsterdam in 1939, have contributed almost $900.00 to European delegates who have been victimized by the war.

The Convention's Crisis and Call

Readers of "The Christian Sun" are acquainted with the difficulty the Convention is facing in the matter of financing the office of Promotional Secretary. For several months the Executive Board has been wrestling with this difficulty. At the sessions of the Convention held last spring at Greensboro it was voted 65 to 1 "that we continue the office of Promotional Secretary for the next biennium."

The Executive Board approaches every consideration of the problem of financing the office of Promotional Secretary with the understanding it is the expressed will of the Convention that the office is to be continued for this biennium. If the Executive Board orders the office closed it is acting in opposition to the action of the Convention in session. But the Executive Board raises the question as to whether the Convention in session in 1942 will approve a deficit realized through the continuance of the office, a deficit recognized as early as the fall of 1940 as being almost inevitable.

The Executive Board has endeavored to ascertain the present attitude of the Convention regarding the office. Every official who has appeared before or written to the Board with the exception of one has endorsed the work the office is doing and described the suggestion the office might have to be closed.

Here in North Carolina the office of the Promotional Secretary is denominational headquarters. Our ministers gather there and they go there for materials. In ways too numerous to list the office has meant for us a sense of oneness, morale and denominational consciousness. The three members of the Executive Board from North Carolina realize this. But the two members of the Board from Eastern Virginia sense it, too.

An official of the Western North Carolina Conference writes regarding the usefulness of the office to that Conference and supports his position with an enclosed check for the support of the office. The chairman of the Convention's Committee on Finance has received several letters of a most insistent character that the office must be continued.

In the light of all this the Executive Board at sessions held in Burlington, Tuesday and Thursday, February 18 and 20, took action as follows:

Therefore, we go on record that we are convinced this is not the time to discontinue the office of Promotional Secretary; and,

Therefore, we call upon individual members and churches of our Convention to—

First—Make additional non-apportionment gifts to the Convention Fund.

Second—To give priority to the Convention Fund apportionment in all the churches of the Convention.

And that we place upon the Promotional Secretary as a first responsibility of his office the solicitation of individuals for larger gifts for the Convention Fund and the cultivation of churches in the matter of raising the Convention Fund apportionment.

And that the Executive Board does hereby authorize the Promotional Secretary by whatever methods he can employ to ask those churches which did not last conference year raise the apportionment for the Convention Fund in full to make up the deficit during this conference year, and at the very earliest date possible.

J. H. Lightbourne, Secretary.

NEWS AND VIEWS

All young people in our churches in the Western North Carolina Conference are invited to attend the rally at Ramseur Christian Church on Saturday afternoon, March 15, at 2:30. Miss Lucy Eldredge will be the guest speaker.

Rev. Joe A. French, concluded his ministry at Ocean View with a Mortgage Burning Service and the service of Holy Communion. One hundred ($100.00) dollars in cash and pledges was raised to provide a new roof on the church.

Dr. W. B. O'Neill was the guest preacher in our Richmond Church last Sunday evening. Other speakers during Visiting Ministers' Month in this church will be Dr. Howard Stone Anderson of Washington and Rev. F. C. Lester.

Rev. J. F. Morgan preached the dedicatory sermon at the Elm Avenue Church, Portsmouth, on February 23. Rev. John H. Knight and Dr. H. S. Hardeastle also assisted Rev. S. W. Phillips in the service of dedication. The series of services continued through March 2.

Remember the Eastern North Carolina mid-year session of Conference to be held at Oak Level Christian Church, one mile east of Youngsville, N. C., on Wednesday, March 19, beginning at 10:00 and closing at 3:00 o'clock. Lunch will be served by the host church. Each church in that Conference is expected to be represented by its minister, one man, one woman and one young prson, at least.

Throughout the Lenten Season, cottage prayer meetings are being held each Wednesday night in various homes of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth. This will take the place of the regular mid-week prayer service. The membership has been divided into two sections and one prayer meeting in one home of each section is conducted each Wednesday evening. All members of the church are using "The Fellowship of Prayer."

TRAINING INSTITUTES.

Three one-night Institutes will be held in Eastern North Carolina next week. The schedule is: Wednesday night, Auburn Christian Church; Thursday night, Wake Chapel, Fuquay Springs; Friday night, Sanford Christian Church. The young people will meet with Miss Eldredge, those interested in improving the worship of their Sunday school and church with Rev. A. C. Todd, and church officers and leaders will discuss their problems with Rev. F. C. Lester. These sessions will begin at 7:30, and members of nearby churches are urged to attend. A young people's banquet will be held in the Sanford Church at 6:30, preceding the Institute there. Young people from surrounding churches should write Rev. A. C. Todd for reservations. The supper will cost 35c.

VALLEY MID-YEAR CONFERENCE.

The Virginia Valley Central Conference will hold its mid-year session at Bethlehem on March 27. A good program is in the making. Members of the Conference will keep to the usual standard of filling the church.

Good reports come to the office of the work being done. There are four rural pastorates, and each is supplied with a seminary trained minister. Without grouping the churches this would have been unlikely.

UPPER ALAMANCE FELLOWSHIP.

The Upper Alamance Fellowship of Churches will meet Sunday, March 30, with the Bethel Christian Church. Bethel Church has asked that this meeting of the Fellowship have two sessions, with a picnic supper during the intermission. The churches of the Fellowship are asked to observe this by not planning evening or night services for that Sunday. The first session will be at 3:30 in the afternoon; the second at 7:00 in the evening.

The program for the sessions will feature the place and work of the young people in the local church program. So each church is asked to send to this meeting several young people, a representative of the Woman's Missionary Society, the Sunday school superintendent, the teachers of the Sunday school classes for older girls and boys and young people, a deacon, the pastor and all others who will go. An appeal is made for every church of the Fellowship to be represented.

The program will include worship and music by the Junior and Young People's choirs of the Burlington Church together with other special musical numbers. Miss Ruby Wright, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship, will speak on, "After Mills, What?" Mr. Joel Scott will tell about the Young People's activities on Elon's campus. Miss Helen Boyd will make an address on, "Why Pilgrim Fellowship?" Then there will follow a discussion period under the leadership of Mr. Jimmie Washburn on Pilgrim Fellowship Organization and Activity in the Churches of the Fellowship.

For this discussion a number of young people are being asked to be prepared to tell about the work of the young people in their churches. It is also planned to challenge every church to have some character of organized young people's work, Christian Endeavor, Young People's Missionary Society, organized classes, etc. And where the organization is not definitely a Missionary Society to ask that the other organization meet once a month as a missionary society.

At the evening session Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., will speak to the subject, "The Place of Young People in the Church."

SAMUEL BARBER,
President.

THE COLLEGE PERIOD.

The college period is past. Many of our churches and Sunday schools have contributed, but some have not. Thus far we have received contributions from the churches and Sunday schools listed below. Please read the list carefully and see if your church or Sunday school is in the list.

First, we list the churches and amounts received during the week:

A Brief History of Missions in the Christian Church

By J. E. WEST, President of Mission Board.

The first meeting of the General Convention of the Christian Church was held in 1808 at Portsmouth, N. H.

In 1847 the Southern Christian Association was organized at Good Hope, Granville County, N. C., being the first general meeting of the Southern Church, and the delegates from the South attended the General Convention until 1854, when the Southern Church withdrew from the General Convention and was not reunited until 1890 or some say 1894, when the plans of the uniting were fully completed. Therefore, it is necessary to discuss missions in the North and South separately, which, so far as I know, no one has ever done.

In 1908 the late Rev. J. G. Bishop, D. D., mission treasurer of the American Christian Convention, wrote for the Centennial of Religious Journalism (Dr. J. P. Barrett) a six page article on "The Origin and Growth of Our Missionary Interests," to which I am largely indebted for facts about our missionary work outside of the South. For nearly one hundred years our ministers were nearly all home missionaries, without any appointment by any mission board or society. Conferences were organized in the early part of the 19th century (E. Va. in 1818) but there was little missionary work done in the general or organized form until nearly the close of the 19th century. We learn from this article that while "The Ohio Christian Home Missionary Society" was organized in 1844 and the Home and Foreign Missionary Society of New England in November, 1845, and later a more general missionary organization was effected, called "American Christian Church Extension," with a secretary at its head, practically nothing was done by this general society until 1878 when the American Christian Convention elected Rev. J. P. Watson, mission secretary, and he inaugurated "Children's Missions" by receiving dime contributions and from 1878 to 1886, raised $17,034.34 for home mission work.

In 1886 the American Christian Convention created a "Missionary and Church Extension Department," with a mission board of five persons: J. P. Watson, N. Summerbell, D. D., J. G. Bishop, E. A. Devore and W. R. Warbinton. The same convention authorized the mission board to commence foreign mission work in Japan. Altogether the total foreign mission fund was $1,281.69, a good part of which amount came from the South, which has always sent its entire foreign mission fund to the mission board of the American Christian Convention. In the summer of 1886 one family in Spring Hill contributed thirty dollars to foreign missions.

In January, 1887, Rev. D. F. Jones of North Carolina and his wife, Amelia P., the Christians' first foreign missionaries, sailed for Japan.

While there are records of scattered woman's missionary societies in Michigan as early as in 1850, whose work was limited to their own conference or state, in July, 1885, the first woman's missionary society was organized by Mrs. Ellen G. Gustin, a conference foreign mission secretary, at Westfield, Mass. In 1886, the American Christian Convention elected the Woman's Board for Foreign Missions and in 1890, a Woman's Board for Home Missions was organized as an auxiliary to the Home Mission Department of the Convention.

Allowing full credit for all that was done in the way of missionary work by attempts at organization of societies or boards and the organization of many churches by evangelists and ministers, there was nothing of any consequence done for home missions within the bounds of the Southern Convention or the former bounds of the American Convention until in 1876. Spring Hill Church, Sussex County, Va., of which Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., was pastor, took the lead in home mission work and requested the Eastern Virginia Conference to request the Convention to make home missions the centennial effort of the denomination. The Convention was timid as usual about home missions as a Convention project, but mission work was started immediately in the conferences.

From this effort originated in Eastern Virginia and other conferences, the taking of ten-year bonds for home missions on which 6% interest was paid annually, but the principal was never to be paid. This was followed by the apportionment system in the conferences, with the addition of other calls from time to time, but the Convention committee on home missions did not raise any funds until after the 1904 Convention. Thus home mission work was begun constructively in the South before Dr. J. P. Watson, mission secretary of the A. C. C., began "Child Missions" by dime collections.

Foreign missions also began first in the South. The first time the subject was ever considered publicly by us as a people was at Poplar Branch Church of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference in November, 1883. In 1884, the North Carolina and Virginia Conference authorized raising of funds for foreign missions, appointed a committee on foreign missions, requesting them to "correspond with the secretary of missions in the Christian Church, North, with the view of uniting our efforts and sending out one or two missionaries as soon as possible."

In 1886 the Southern Convention, at the request of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, appointed a foreign mission board: Revs. P. T. Klapp, W. G. Clements, W. T. Hernon and laymen A. Moring and M. J. W. White (father of one of the medical missionaries of the Congregational and Christian Churches). This quickened the interest in foreign missions which was developed by individuals, churches and conferences which included a foreign mission column in the church letter, so that receipts from all sources for foreign missions from 1882 to 1886, was $452.40 and from 1886 to 1889, $627.40. The interest grew until in 1901, Memorial Temple of Norfolk, Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., pastor, became the great foreign mission church of the denomination, raised $1,303.67 and through the mission board of the A. C. C. sent Rev and Mrs. D. P. Barrett, two of its members, as missionaries to Puerto Rico, the second foreign mission field of our church.

With foreign missions and Elon College established as Convention projects, in 1892 the Convention organized the Christian Missionary Association, being first suggestion of Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., in 1890, to reach individuals, Sunday schools, societies and churches by fees of ten dollars, except women, five dollars. This association raised $14,862.00 from 1892 to 1908 inclusive under the Southern Christian Convention and later became Conference Associations and as such have done a splendid work, the Eastern Virginia Association averaging about fifty per cent more in annual receipts than the Southern Convention Association. The Convention of 1904, held at Berea, Nansemond County, Va., finally adopted Convention Missions, on motion of Dr. J. W. Harrell, same having been recommended by the home mission committee, consisting of Rev. J. W. Holt, J. L. Foster and J. E. West.

A MISSIONARY MEMORIAL.

Occasionally the editor receives a letter which prompts him to revise the well-known saying, "the minister is the key man," and make it read, "the layman is the key man." A good layman in Newport News, Mr. C. D. West, advances the idea that we establish a Missionary Memorial to Dr. Atkinson. Mr. West writes specifically, "I want to see if our people cannot be aroused with the idea of making this year's offering To the Glory of God and in Memory of Dr. J. O. Atkinson. When I think of the advancement of our people in missionary interest and giving while he was secretary, I simply marvel what can be accomplished by determined people when they have the right sort of leadership. His life and labors, his sacrifices and deep devotion to the Great Commission, his fascinating leadership aroused an interest on the part of our people that will manifest itself for untold years. I think the training and teaching he gave us in the matter of Christian giving will be to our work a royalty which might be compared with the income from some wonderful patent.

"I recall that about the time he started his work, many, many of our people just thought 'the Lord will take care of the unsaved in His own good way,' and wouldn't give anything either. And now a large percentage of our women are actively enlisted in our missionary effort. I want to see if our people can be aroused to a deep interest in a movement to make this a special memorial to the man who has been so responsible for the interest we have been manifesting. My thought is that we should build up the idea of glorifying his efforts in a great Easter missionary effort. I am sure we could do nothing that would bring greater joy to this good saint in Heaven than to thus manifest the influence of his life among us."

The writer has had the good fortune to serve as the pastor of this fine layman and wishes that each church in our fellowship had such missionary interest among its lay leadership. Through the cooperation of ministers and laity great interest may be realized in the J. O. Atkinson Fund.

CONCENTRATED AND PERPETUATED PERSONALITY.

The complete stewardship of personality includes its investment during life and its continued activity after death. Personality should be concentrated to the burning point in some stubborn area of modern life. Through this persistent pounding of personality the malleable form of society is patterned; "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed." Privileged hills, economic valleys, political curvatures, industrial and vocational rough places await the firm influence of Christian personality. Through this creative process the glory of the Lord is revealed.

By judicious planning and execution during life the personality and possessions of one may continue their blessed ministry. This is made possible by a well-planned bequest. The letter by Mr. C. D. Johnston in last week's issue of this paper is worthy of editorial emphasis. He wrote on the subject: "Have you made your will?" One who plans to bequeath generously to a great and continuing cause is extending a helping hand far beyond the limits of mortal life. Over the body of such a person the minister may repeat without reservation, "O death, where is thy sting; O grave, where is thy victory." Death has been transcended.

The Scriptures raise a personal problem, "This night shall thy soul be required of thee; whose then shall these things be?" Only the person who has made a Christian will can answer that question with confidence. In this way much of the needless dissipation and secularization of resources may be avoided. Where there is no vision the people perish at death and their institutions suffer. Where there is vision life is multiplied and perpetuated. "My Father worketh hitherto," said Jesus, "and I work." These words are as true today as when they were first uttered. The general understanding and application by our people of this principle of extended stewardship would soon double and treble the entire work of our kingdom enterprise. One who has a Christian will executed under legal supervision may be able to sing with added confidence, "It is well with my soul." Again he may sing, "In life in death, O Lord, abide," and stop there: abide, continue, perpetuate. That is the secret of victorious personality.

J. O. ATKINSON AND "THE CHRISTIAN SUN."

The name of J. O. Atkinson is inextricably associated with missions. His name is also closely associated with this paper. "The Christian Sun" carried his weekly message for years to those who never heard his voice. The church paper was a ready and powerful instrument in his hand for proclaiming the eternal mission of Christ. That instrument is ours today. Every new subscription is a means of perpetuating and extending the spirit, message, and vision of J. O. Atkinson. The campaign now in progress is a test of our faith and an opportunity to improve "our workmanship as missionaries."

R. L. H.

He who had not where to lay his head, has made us all rich. His Apostles, without silver and gold, dowered men with health and salvation. The churches of Macedonia in affliction found abundance of joy, and in deep poverty abound unto the riches of their liberality. The race has been helped most by benefactors who struggled with narrow means. The degree in which I bless the world is far more a question of what I am than of what I have. Power is determined chiefly by personality.—Selected.

Our Workmanship as Missionaries

By WALTER H. JUDD, M. D.

Another reason why we ought to "turn northward" in a great deal of our publicity is for the sake of the missionary himself. Missionaries are subjected to certain special and subtle temptations. The missionary is almost always a person of strong convictions and willpower or he would never have decided to go or been able to pull up his roots here and transplant them in a foreign land; strong convictions easily become stubbornness. Then he is usually a person of sensitive spirit, or he would not have felt the need or the urge to go; that sensitiveness to others' needs easily becomes touchiness. Then he is subjected to hero worship from his own church. It is at least spectacular to go as a missionary and because it is spectacular many people assume it is necessarily heroic. It may be that, but usually is not in the sense of requiring unusual physical courage.

In addition he often gets adulation from the Chinese which he may not discount properly. For instance, the more poorly he speaks Chinese the more likely it is that the person to whom he is talking will say to some third person in such a way that the missionary will be sure to hear, "Doesn't this brother from the West speak Chinese wonderfully? Why, if you were in another room and heard him without seeing him you would never know he is not a Chinese." That is one of those delicate ways the Chinese have of cushioning life's jars. They assume he knows how atrociously he speaks and they are trying to keep him from feeling too badly about it. And I admit that even though he understands perfectly well that it is merely "applesauce," as they expect him to understand, nevertheless it does buck him up a little just when he may be feeling discouraged about his inability to make more progress with the language.

Of course, we, with our literal minds might brand their technique of courtesy as lying. But if we define lying as leaving somebody with the wrong impression, then they are not lying, because other Chinese are not left with the wrong impression. They understand perfectly! But unfortunately the foreigner may not understand and discount accordingly. I knew a missionary who was a saint but was so poor in the language that he was sent away by his mission for another year of study. He was so guileless that when the Chinese would make some remark about his extraordinary proficiency with the Chinese language you could almost see him balloon as he explained blandly that it was because he had had an extra year of study. The first look of perplexity on the Chinese face would change to an indulgent smile. Poor fellow, he doesn't understand.

Now here is a man of strong convictions and sensitive spirit, he gets hero worship from his home church, adulation from the Chinese and on top of that he is called upon constantly to praise himself, to recite all his great achievements for publication at home so as to show the supporters they are getting a lot for their money and perhaps induce them to give more. No one sees our work but ourselves; people who invest the money naturally want to have reports, they must get them from us; and many publicity agencies seem to think that they want to hear only good reports. Surely there is no other profession that requires of its members so much and so constant self-praise. I submit that that is a bigger load than human nature was ever intended to carry. Almost before the missionary realizes it he may get to believing his own publicity really is the total picture and if that happens he is hopeless.

What I am saying is not wholly theoretical. When I went to report to my own supporting church after my first term in China it was one of the hardest problems I ever faced. It so happened that I had been in an area of almost continuous conflict and trouble when it had looked at times as if we might never get through alive. I knew the loyal friends in that church naturally would like to hear all about the perils encountered, the thrills experienced, the victories won, the good things accomplished. They wanted to be able to look at each other with satisfaction and say, "Isn't that a swell missionary we have?" And naturally, too, I wanted to tell them these things. But I couldn't do just that. I had been gambling with my very life. I had felt utterly licked before the enormity of the job, I had all but despaired at the puniness of anything I might be able to achieve against such odds. We had been plunged into crisis after crisis in which I simply did not know what was best and right to do, in which I sometimes felt like crying out loud for help and counsel and wisdom.

Some of the things into which I had poured months of effort had crashed. If ever a man in this world had needed help it was I. It was unfair to those loyal supporters not to know the whole story, unfair to me and to the work to which I would soon be returning with the problems still unsolved not to have the benefit of their fullest understanding and the undergirding of their prayer. So I had to pour out my heart to them (just as I am in a degree doing here to you), had to try to transport them into the situation so that they could stand in my shoes and struggle with the difficulties as I was struggling with them.

The response to that report which I had given with fear and trembling, as it was quite contrary to the suggestions we are sometimes given as to the contents and nature of a proper missionary speech, was beyond anything I could have imagined. I fear the talk perplexed and troubled some of the older people, for fewer of the saintly ladies who have supported missions so faithfully all their lives, bless them, held my hand and praised the Lord that he still had young men to go to the ends of the earth for Him. But there was a line of middle-aged and young men who filed past to say a word of support or just grip my hand. The missionary enterprise has got to have them, too. The strongest layman in that city, a member of another church, came along and said, "Young man, I have been going to missionary meeting for twenty-five years, in order to keep peace in the family; but I always had my fingers crossed. No enterprise run by human beings could be quite as angelic and uniformly successful as this was always represented as being. If the thing you've talked about tonight is foreign missions, then I'm a hundred percent for it." He contributed a hundred dollar bill then and there and I happen to know has been a generous and regular giver through his own church ever since.

If our present publicity is not getting the results necessary to carry on, why not try saying less about money and more about the Cause, the uniquely decisive role, the key position, the extraordinary opportunity this enterprise has at this critical hour in human history? If we can give the Christians here a vision of the Cause in as large proportion as we see it who are giving our lives to it, the money will flow automatically. I am sure we must be more honest and comprehensive in our publicity. It has got to go deeper than just selected, isolated incidents, touching lit-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The problems of the church are so complex they cannot be settled. When one phase is provided for, another appears to disturb and challenge one's faith and resources of power. The order of the day seems to require the church to undertake the task of making adjustments in every realm of human life. Leaders of great learning and wide experience are asking the church to be aggressive in correcting the social, racial, economic and political disorders of this generation. The emphasis is being placed upon corporate injustice and organized responsibility. The organic union of all churches is advocated in order that a great mass effort may be organized and directed as one unit.

This spirit and method seems to be extant in every field of human activity. Great corporations have been organized in industry and commerce. Banks are organized. Farmers are organized. Labor is organized. Applicants for jobs are requested to join the union. Employers must consult an organization before they employ laborers. Every organized group is seeking to control some phase of life. In these days of large organization the individual is being overlooked. Each man is required to submerge his own interests and promote the growth and power of an organization. The church has caught the spirit of industrial and commercial organization. Many individuals are expecting "the church" to do their work and assume their responsibility. These individual members frequently expect others to do the work and pay the bills.

The church, as an organization, cannot take the place of individuals. Some work is to be done by the united church. But the major responsibilities rest upon individual members of the church. When the final accounting is made before the Judge of human character, men and women will be called to give a personal account of themselves. It would be very comforting to many people if they could take along a record of the church in which they held membership and offer that as a defense before the great Judge. The church may be judged, but that will not be substituted for a personal accounting. Every man will be judged according to his own record.

Therefore, it is essential to turn our attention to the matter of personal living. The challenge of society is great in many fields. The needs are always present. They will never disappear. But ministers may become deeply interested in preaching and forget their personal devotions. They can be very busy going here and there and neglect the throne of grace. Men and women as members of local churches face the same tragic possibility. Christian living and service cannot be eliminated from personal responsibility.

It is fitting that every church member should give much time and thought to private devotions during the Lenten season. There should be a place for rigid self-examination and personal consecration. It may be helpful to ask ourselves these questions: "Is my personal life true and sincere?" "Are there some things in my life which should be corrected?" "Do I enter into the services of worship, in my church, with a deep desire to increase my spiritual interest in the kingdom of God?" "Am I doing my best for my church and my Lord?" It may be easy to answer these questions. But the important thing is to surrender to God by sincere consecration.

THE COLLEGE GROWS.

The seed of higher education was sown in the hearts of our people more than a half century ago. By the warmth of faith and affection, fanned by the winds of vision, the seed sprouted and took root. The tender plant was named Elon and set in a beautiful grove of original oak and hickory at what was then Mill Point, now Elon College. From a small beginning the college has grown, grown in proportion to the care and husbandry of the church.

Perhaps the function uppermost in the minds of the founders of Elon College was the training of young men for the ministry of our church. So strong was their desire for an efficient ministry that they were willing to sacrifice time, effort and money that the church might have training ground and adequate facilities with which to encourage and fit the young men of the church upon whom God has laid His hands for service for the greatest possible contribution to their church and to their day. The vision and curriculum of the college have broadened through the years until today it offers courses of training for practically all professions and walks of life. We do not carry these courses to completion, but we do lay the groundwork that those who apply themselves may go on for higher training in seminaries and universities. Practically all professions including technical and scientific subjects are covered in Elon's curriculum. Those who complete the requirements above indicated usually succeed favorably with graduates of other institutions of similar ratings in their post-graduate pursuits.

These advancements and achievements have been made possible by added physical facilities. From one building for administrative and instructional purposes, the physical plant has grown to five modern and adequately furnished buildings in which the work of the institution is carried on. Rooming facilities and other accommodations for students have likewise been multiplied but are not as adequate and representative as the physical plant for instructional purposes.

The prestige and influence of the college have been extended greatly. Instead of being an institution of the Christian Church, in addition it has become an institution of the church universal and of the country at large. Elon College is not only known in the Southern Convention, but it is known to the ends of our United Church. It is not only known in Alamance County, North Carolina and Virginia, but it is known throughout the entire country, and it has increased and is increasing in favor with the public, educational institutions, and other educational centers over a wide area.

In the sweep of its influence it has attracted to the campus students in increasing numbers. The public no longer feels that Elon College is an institution principally for the training of poorer students from rural sections, but that it offers superior advantages to young people with better minds from all sections, country, town and city. The college has experienced a normal growth through the past decade that has brought its present enrollment to the satisfactory number of 659. People who have not taken time to inform themselves still think of Elon College as a very small institution. The facts in the case are that comparatively speaking the number of institutions in this country with better facilities, better faculties, and larger student bodies are not so very numerous. The growth of Elon College through the years has been significantly striking. Her possibili-

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Yes, it is March now! It is Sunday today. There is a battle going on up in the March sky; at least here in Sanford that is true. The sun and the sun and the clouds are trying to see which can outdo the other. A brisk March breeze is helping the sun because every little bit it sweeps all of the clouds away from the sun's bright face. I believe the sun is getting the best of the fight right now. She is zipping along up there, smiling down at all of the boys and girls who are out flying their kites today.

The past week has been full of cold weather, dark clouds, and sickness. Oh, yes, and there was rain in it, too. Members of our church have been very anxious this past week because of the condition of little Andrew Wicker. He is just a week younger than Oliver. Last Sunday he was taken to the hospital. He had a cold which developed into pneumonia. His condition was extremely serious and his doctor didn't think that he would pull through. But he is better now and was taken out of the oxygen tent yesterday. He is still a very sick baby but we feel that he is going to get well now. Mr. Todd said there were five babies who had pneumonia in the hospital when he went over to see Andrew last week.

Oliver has had a bit of a cold and when he woke me up with his coughing yesterday morning at three o'clock, I was so worried that I couldn't sleep any more. I called the doctor as soon as eight o'clock came. Oliver's throat was inflamed but his chest was all right. He has been real sweet about letting me mop his little throat and is taking the medicine which the doctor sent him. He feels like playing with his toys again today. He is here in the study, in his little bed, in the sunshine which is coming in through the window.

Did all of you enjoy reading the Children's Page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN as well as I did? Our guest editor, Mrs. June Joy House, gave us an extremely interesting story and a dandy letter, too. Did you finish the story about the sparrow? I think that as soon as he was rested he flew away to the nook where his fellow sparrows were. He was still breathing pretty fast and trying to tidy up his ruffled feathers. The other sparrows asked him where he had been so long. Then he told them of his strange adventure. "You would have thought it was Christmas again," he said, "the noise I made going down that chimney sounded like Old Saint Nick and all his reindeer, too!" The other sparrows thought that this house had unusual people in it; when Jake Sparrow told of how kind hands let him out of his dark prison, caught him and carried him to freedom again. They decided to keep all of the bugs and insects out of the House garden this summer because of their kindness to Jake Sparrow.

How many of you are keeping Lent? How many of you are helping to prepare a special Easter program for your church and Sunday school? I trust that all of you are doing your best to give of your strength in serving God in your church and community. Remember that "He has no hands but your hands to do His work today."

Last week's puzzle was about Moses. This week I have tried to use as many words about the month of March as I could. I hope that you have fun trying to solve this "windy month puzzle."

Take care of your babies during the changing of the season, from winter into summer. The pneumonia bug will catch you if you don't watch out!

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD,

TRAINING SCHOOL AT LIBERTY.

A training school will be held at Liberty Christian Church, Vance County, Eastern North Carolina Conference, to which members of all nearby churches are invited and urged to come. The Sunday afternoon session (March 16) will last from 2:30 to 4:30; Monday and Tuesday nights the session will last from 7:00 to 9:00. First series credit will be given for the following courses:

"The Life of Christ"—Taught by Rev. S. E. Madren.

"Planning for Children in the Local Church"—Miss Tora Rudd.

"How to Improve Our Sunday School"—Rev. J. F. Apple.

"Young People's Work in the Local Church"—Miss Luey Eldredge.

"The Program of My Church"—Rev. F. C. Lester.

A textbook for any of the courses will not cost more than thirty cents. Arrange for a carload from your church to take advantage of this opportunity for further training for Sunday school and church workers.

DATES TO REMEMBER.

April 1-3—Eastern Virginia Missionary Rallies.

April 1-4—North Carolina Missionary Rallies.

April 29-30—Biennial Session of the Woman's Mission Board.

June 16-20—Mission School at Elon.

June 23-28—Young People's and Pastors' Conference, Elon.

The executive of the future will be rated by his ability to anticipate his problems rather than to meet them as they come.—Howard Coonley.

LETTER TO PASTORS.

Suffolk, Va.,
March 6, 1941.

Dear Friends:

You have, no doubt, seen the announcement of the Mission Board to increase missionary offerings during 1941 in honor of the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson. I assume we will have your full cooperation in such a program. In order to make it a big success without much expense, I respectfully ask that you appoint a layman in your church, or churches, to promote this campaign, or effort, by development of missions in the local church, and an increase of missionary offerings by the Sunday school, the church, and individuals, or all three, in honor of the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and notify Mrs. Parker of his name and address.

Laymen volunteered as follows: Mr. Caleb D. West, Newport News; J. E. West, Suffolk.

We will appreciate your cooperation in this undertaking.

Sincerely yours,
J. E. West, President.

[The above letter has been sent by J. E. West, President, to all pastors in the Southern Convention.]

Since the above letter went out to all pastors I have had replies from several pastors pledging their cooperation in this undertaking and naming a layman in their church to promote this work. We deeply appreciate this and are hoping that every pastor will make a special effort to see that the undertaking is successful. One pastor writes: "I think it is a splendid idea to rally the offerings for missions in honor of Dr. Atkinson. It will be my effort to double our apportionments for the year. I sincerely hope all the pastors will get behind this mission offering and make it the biggest in our history."

MATTIE COX PARKER,
Secretary.

MISSION BOARD RECEIPTS.

In his Suffolk address, Dr. Eddy deplored the fact that since about 1930 or '31, the receipts of the American Board had dropped so much, and appealed to his hearers to increase their gifts for Foreign Missions. To acquaint you with the experience of our Board the receipts from September 1 to September 1 of each year for ten years, beginning 1930-31, have been as follows:

1930-31.....	$ 27,153.34
1931-32.....	19,856.84
1932-33.....	14,396.50
1933-34.....	17,480.05
1934-35.....	17,102.90
1935-36.....	17,940.68
1936-37.....	17,700.66
1937-38.....	18,134.86
1938-39.....	17,520.45
1939-40.....	17,417.45

Total for 10 years . $184,703.73

We seem to have done as well as the American Board, but we want to do much better and will do it if our constituency will support the fund in honoring Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Twenty-five hundred ($2,500.00) dollars additional will cause 1940-41 to surpass any year since 1930-31. Let every member give something additional for missions and the goal will be reached. An average of ten (10c) cents per member is certainly a reasonable increase.

J. E. WEST,
President.

CONDITIONS IN EASTERN VIRGINIA.

Little Creek Church is paid for.

Elm Avenue, which lost its building by fire has rebuilt and dedicated a new church building fronting on Elm Avenue.

In as much as Rev. Joe A. French, has resigned Berea (Norfolk) and Ocean View, a pastor will be called to begin work at Ocean View and Little Creek on May 1, 1941. The outlook is good at both places.

Berea (Norfolk) will call a whole time pastor and the Home Mission Committee of the Eastern Virginia Conference has appropriated $350.00 for the year beginning November 1, 1941, on pastor's salary.

Rev. B. H. Watkins has just brought the thrilling message that all the churches in his pastorate will pay Conference apportionments in full.

Rev. R. L. House is doing a good work in Richmond, according to reports, written and otherwise, and the church is destined to become a leading church in the Convention.

Newport News Church is arranging to pay its mortgage debt in full this year and has electrified Eastern Virginia by a layman, Mr. Caleb D. West, volunteering as mission leader to materially increase the missions offerings of that church in honor of the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Mr. West believes in the development of of the Home Mission Committees of each local church.

MISSIONARIES.

the appeals and romanticized stories. It has got to aim at developing a real understanding of the whole enterprise that will carry the supporters through whatever ups and downs are ahead of us, just as Jesus was able to set His face toward Jerusalem because He understood fully the business he was about—His father's business. If we will lay our cards frankly on the table before the home church I have every faith that people will work and give far more freely not just to carry on but to strengthen and expand.

5. We must reduce the gap between our standards of living and those of the people among whom we live. I am, of course, not saying we should try to live on the scale where millions of Chinese are perforce compelled to live. It is right and necessary for their sakes as well as ours that we show them a higher standard of living; but I cannot believe it is right to set the standard so very much higher than it will be possible for them to reach in this century, no matter how hard they try. The net result of that is to discourage rather than encourage them in the effort to raise their own levels. It makes it harder rather than easier for them to be drawn to the Christian religion. Their inevitable reaction is, "Well, if we had food and clothing and homes like they have we could be Christians, too; but we wonder if they could carry out their fine teachings under the circumstances where our whole lives will have to be lived despite our hardest efforts to improve our lot." That is, the gap is too great. Our standards must somehow be reduced to a level nearer that it is reasonable to expect them to be able to attain.

Some will say that if the missionary has the right spirit it can overcome any handicap resulting from a difference in standards of living and possessions. That is perfectly true. But does it justify our putting one more handicap on a work which is already extraordinarily difficult because of the unavoidable obstacles which differences in race, language and cultural background necessarily impose? We pray daily, "Lord, lead us not into temptation"; and then we live in ways which inevitably lead them into temptation. Is it possible to put relative affluence alongside extreme poverty anywhere in the world without creating in the minds and hearts of those in poverty, covetousness?

This is one of the very hardest places for me to know how to "turn northward." The things I, as an American man, naturally and properly want to do for my wife and three children frequently and inescapably are in head-on conflict with what the soul of me wants to do for and with the people whom I have gone to serve and who are living in such poverty through forces largely beyond their control. How can I convince them that I really believe in a religion which commands loving my neighbor as myself when I build and live in what to them is a castle? Of course it is not a castle, it is not as good a home by far as most of us are accustomed to and could have in this country. But nevertheless it is to them a veritable castle. I do not pretend to have been able to solve this dilemma. I only know that somehow the gap has got to be reduced.

If someone complains that my criticisms are largely destructive, I admit it. We need more of that kind from within our own ranks. We have plenty from without which usually drives us to the defensive. We marshal our answers to the 80% of criticism which is inaccurate and unjust, and soft-pedal the 20% which unfortunately is justified. If we would frankly admit the latter and take the lead in discussing how to correct the causes of it, we would regain the offensive and the unjustified criticism from without would fall flat.

It is argued that one has no right to criticize until he himself has the whole solution, I disagree. Is there no value in a doctor's diagnosing diseases for which he does not yet have a complete cure? Our cause has suffered too long from that sort of attempt to evade the issue.

6. In our missionary work we must regasp and re-emphasize the full significance of the Christian cross as the ultimate way by which the Christian religion advances. I lived alone for two years at a time when I had to get under my mosquito net at dark, unless I was on the move, to avoid dying from further bouts with malaria. That gives one a lot of time to think about one's work. I was haunted then and I am still haunted by this, our apparent belief that our efforts can succeed without the cross. This is not just a question of change in our methods and techniques; it is a question as to the whole foundation of Christian missions as they operate today. Jesus preached as never man preached; so have we preached the best we could. He taught; so have we taught. He healed in ways some of which we haven't yet been able to duplicate; so have we healed. He lived His winsome life among his people. He loved them with His matchless love. He shared His glorious personality with them. And it wasn't enough. Yet we seem to assume that if we just keep on preaching and teaching and healing long enough and living and loving and sharing long enough, the kingdom will somehow come.

Well, we have been at it nineteen hundred years on that basis and it hasn't come. I cannot avoid the haunting conviction we can be at it nineteen thousand years on that basis and it still will not come. If Jesus Christ with the winsomeness of the Son of God was not able to break down the intractable in human hearts by just preaching and teaching and healing, and living and loving and sharing, is it probable that we, with our obvious limitations and inadequacies, will be able to accomplish by just those methods? Jesus then went the rest of the way. Will we? For myself I am dead sure there is no hope of being able to bring Christ to these people or them to Him except by the way of the cross.

Does that mean just physical death? For a few, doubtless, yes. But don't be afraid of that. That is relatively easy. For far more it means this: that those who could become rich will deliberately choose to remain poor for the sake of the Kingdom; that those who could write their names across the headlines will deliberately choose obscurity for the sake of the Kingdom; that those who could know the thrills of wielding great power in financial or political or educational or religious circles will deliberately choose unseen and unheard of places for the sake of the Kingdom; that those who could surround themselves with comforts and luxuries will deliberately choose hard ways for the sake of the Kingdom.

It means that after we have spent years collecting pearls, we are to give them all up gladly for a great pearl. The lesser pearls are not bad pearls; they are good pearls, the best we have been able to find. Often when we glimpse the pearl of great price we fail to get it because we are unwilling to give up these other pearls to which we have grown so attached. We concentrate so much on what we would be losing that we forget what we would be gaining. But the wise man of whom Jesus told had the truer evaluation: when he saw the pearl of great price, he for joy sold all that he had that he might gain it. That is the way of the cross.

Why does God demand that we give up all else? Because He wants to

Pilgrim Fellowship

"Youth at Work in the Church"

LUCY ELDREDGE COMES TO THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Members of our churches in the Southern Convention always look forward to a visit from Miss Lucy Eldredge, who was the first religious education field worker in this area. We are all proud of the fact that "Miss Lucy," a graduate of Elon College, is one of the two national secretaries for young people's work in our denomination. She travels all over this country, and recently took a trip to the Orient, meeting with young people's groups and helping them with their problems. The Pilgrim Fellowship has come into being under her guidance. We are glad to welcome her to our section of the country this week.

Schedule for Miss Eldredge—

On Saturday afternoon, March 15, the Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship will hold a meeting at Ramseur Christian Church, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, at which Miss Eldredge will speak and lead the young people in a discussion of their church work.

On Sunday afternoon, March 16, at 2:30 o'clock a training school will hold its first session at Liberty, Vance County, in the Eastern North Carolina Conference. Succeeding sessions will be held on Monday and Tuesday evenings at 7:00. Miss Eldredge will teach the course on young people's work in the local church.

She will be one of the speakers at the first mid-year session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference at Oak Level Christian Church on Wednesday, March 19, and will lead a discussion group for the young people there. On that night she will also meet with the young people of surrounding churches at Anburn, on Thursday night at Wake Chapel, and on Friday night at Sanford. On these three nights Rev. A. C. Todd will meet with a group interested in worship, and Rev. F. C. Lester with church officers and leaders who wish to discuss their problems.

On Saturday, March 22, Miss Eldredge will go to Norfolk, Va., to speak at the Annual Spring Rally of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship being held that afternoon and evening at the Christian Temple. She will be in that Conference for meetings on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Wednesday, March 23, will find "Miss Lucy" enroute to the Valley of Virginia, where young people in reach of Elkton, will meet with her at Mt. Olivet (R) on that night. The next day she will speak at the mid-year session of the Valley of Virginia Conference at Bethlehem, and will talk with young people of the Valley at Bethlehem on Thursday night.

LUCY M. ELDREDGE.

Thus Miss Eldredge will meet with young people and their leaders in four of the five Conferences of the Southern Convention during her two weeks with us. The fifth Conference was the fortunate one the last time she came our way.

ON TO NORFOLK.

Young people and leaders of Eastern Virginia will come to the Christian Temple, 34th Street and Llewellyn Avenue, Norfolk, on Saturday, March 22, for the Ninth Annual Spring Rally of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship. "Christian Youth in Democracy" is the theme which has been chosen for this rally. There will be an afternoon session, a period of fun, a fellowship supper, and then the evening session when

HOW CAN I MAKE CHRIST ATTRACTIVE TO OTHERS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 23, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 5: 14-16; II Cor. 3: 2, 3; II Tim. 1: 8.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Presented As "Lamb of God" John 1: 29, 35-37.

Tuesday—Implicit Assurance—Rom. 1: 16.

Wednesday—Personal Contact With Christ—John 12: 20, 21.

Thursday—Yielding to God—Rom. 6: 11-13.

Friday—Testifying—Mark 5: 18-20.

Saturday—Righteous Living—Eph. 4: 20-24.

Each person who knows Christ has a responsibility of introducing others to Him. The object is to present Christ in the most attractive manner. It is true that people must be attracted to Christ if they are to accept Him sincerely.

Try this experiment: Ask the group to go through the week trying to see people—friends, enemies, everyone—as Jesus saw persons. Report next week with these questions in mind: What happened to me? What happened to the person I met?

Use these for short talks: We can make Christ attractive—

1. Through the Bible and other Christian literature.
2. Through worship services and devotional meetings.
3. Through personal testimony.
4. Through attractive living.
5. By demonstration what He can do in social life, the home, the church and other groups.

Questions for Discussion—

1. Has your Christian Endeavor been a training agency for personal workers? Why not consider a course in personal evangelism?
2. Upon a blackboard make a list of the most attractive features of Christ. Which of these appeal most strongly to young people?
3. If Jesus were to come to live upon earth as He once did, what are some things He would do in your community?
4. Prepare a list of questions to deal with the Daily Readings (using a quizz leader for this period).

Suggested Hymns—

"I Love to Tell the Story."

"Jesus Calls Us."

"I Want My Life to Tell for Jesus."

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

LESSON XI—MARCH 16, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 22: 1-38.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Jer. 31: 31-34.

GOLDEN TEXT: As often as ye eat this bread, and drink the cup, ye proclaim the Lord's death till he come.—I Cor. 11: 26.

Someone has said, "The highest cannot be spoken." One realizes the truth of these words when he comes to write about the Lord's Supper. There is something so high, something so deep, something so mysterious about it that mere words can not express it. The best that can be done is to make a few comments on it, hoping that under the guidance of the Holy Spirit the individual reader will come to understand better, and appreciate more this memorial to Jesus, this memorial which is one of the great miracles of all time, for nowhere else is the spiritual genius of Jesus shown to greater advantage than in the fact that he took simple elements such as bread and wine and made them a living and continuing memorial to Him through the centuries. Today after nearly twenty centuries his followers of all classes, and colors, and cultures, and creeds year after year, observe the Lord's Supper, the holy communion, or Eucharist as it is called, in remembrance of Him. It is one of the most impressive things in all human history.

Making Ready for the Lord's Supper.

"And he shall shew you a large upper room furnished: there make ready. And they went, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover." The Lord's Supper is so significant and of such spiritual content that every effort should be made to make ready for it. The sanctuary itself should be prepared, the elements should be prepared and arranged with dignity and orderliness, the order of service should be prepared, and the hearts of both those in the pulpit and the pews should be prepared to enter humbly, penitently, expectantly, and reverently into this holy service. It used to be the custom in many churches, and this custom still remains in some churches today, to have a service preparatory to the communion service. Certainly, no preparation of head or of heart can be too thorough as one comes to this high and holy hour. The church should make much of the communion service. Every effort should be made to make it spiritual and meaningful for all those who partake of it.

Meeting Our Lord at the Lord's Supper.

"With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer." There is something deeply moving and tender in these words of Jesus. He frankly said that there was a great yearning, a great desire in his heart to have this fellowship with his disciples before he suffered. He needed their companionship, and he also knew that they needed him. It was a case of mutual profit to all. The Master still desires to have fellowship with us at the communion table. He has spiritual gifts to impart which he can impart only to the humble and contrite in heart. He is eager to have an opportunity to remind his followers again of his love and to impart to them his blessings. Alas for those Christians who habitually absent themselves from the communion service! The very fact that men and women often remain away from the communion service is evidence of the fact that they desperately need that for which the communion service stands. In a special way they have an engagement with their Master for the Lord's Supper.

The Meaning of the Lord's Supper.

Dr. Palmer, in his book on worship, calls attention to the fact that there are five elements in the Lord's Supper, or the communion service. First of all, there is Commemoration. It is a memorial. It is rooted in a historic event. The Jewish Passover had historic associations, it had meaning for the pious Jews, it was a continual reminder to them of God's goodness in delivering them from Egyptian bondage. In like manner the Lord's Supper is rooted in historic fact, it is a constant reminder to us of the life and love of the Lord Jesus Christ. He himself said, "This do in remembrance of me." It is desiring to keep alive in our hearts the memory of what he was, and of what he did, and of what he can mean to us. This memorial aspect of the communion is an important one.

Another element in the service is that of Thanksgiving. We read that when Jesus took the cup and the bread, he gave thanks. Indeed in some churches it is called Eucharist, which is the Greek word for the giving of thanks. Even in the shadow of the cross Jesus gave thanks.

In the third place, there is an element of Fellowship. There is a real fellowship in eating together in a common meal. Around that table there were gathered men of all temperaments, and types, and dispositions. If one uses his imagination as he partakes of the communion, he can easily think of himself as one of a great host which no man can number, men and women, boys and girls scattered around the whole wide world, different in color, class, culture, creed, but bound together by one common tie of discipleship to the Lord Jesus Christ.

The fourth factor is Sacrifice. Jesus said, "My body broken for you" and my blood shed for you." In a symbolic way the communion stands for the selfgiving of Christ. It is the message of his sacrifice; it is an expression of his self-denial. In like manner it is a call to us of sacrifice and self denial in His behalf and in behalf of the Kingdom which he loved and for which he gave himself.

Finally, there is the element of mystery. The Lord's Supper was instituted around the dark background of the cross. Then, as now, there were many mysteries in religion, many things hard, indeed impossible, to understand. Every time we meet in the Lord's Supper, especially in these present days, we meet against the background of the mystery of the world's suffering and sin. But this Supper speaks to us with notes of assurance of God's love and care, and tells us again that his will can not permanently be defeated.

Shadows Over the Lord's Supper.

Even as they gathered for this high moment there were ugly shadows hanging over them. Indeed the shadow was in their very midst, for one had already planned to betray Him. And the other disciples were not much better, for while they sat there they go into an argument as to which should be counted the greatest. It seems strange that such things could intrude on such a sacred occasion. But it seems that nothing is sacred or secure against the insidious temptations and the diabolical plans of the evil one. One is not always safe even if he is in the place of worship. It is imperative that we be on our guard, as Paul says, "Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

MONDAY.

TRUST.

"He heareth the cry of the afflicted."—Job 34: 28.

"He heareth the prayer of the righteous."—Prov. 15: 29.

"If any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth His will, him he heareth."—Luke 9: 31.

"If we ask according to his will, he heareth us."—Rev. 5: 14.

At dusk I breathe my night prayer to a wind
That carries its swiftmess to some star;
And this star, on whom my faith is pinned
To bring it safe to regions very far,
Twinkles across the dark a signal clear
To God that now a prayer is on its way.
And so I never have the need to fear
That it will lose itself or meet delay.

—Dorothy Herigstad.

TUESDAY.

THE TREND OF TODAY.

"He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be an abomination."—Prov. 28: 9.

It is not sufficient to repent of our sins, nor to forgive others of theirs; we must be willing to obey God. There is a tide of disobedience sweeping into man's soul today. Some people think of God only when they are in distress. In a character skit over the radio recently one said, "It is strange how generous and penitent one gets when he is sick."

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, do enable us to purpose each day, and day by day, to live in obedience to Thy will, let life bring us what it will. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

REASONS FOR UNANSWERED PRAYER.

"If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me."—Psalm 66: 18.

This is only one of the reasons for unanswered prayer, but one which may often be the reason, perhaps unwittingly. One of the prerequisites for unanswered prayer is that we repent of our transgressions and make restitution when necessary. Even with the saints there is necessity for constant watchfulness lest they enter into temptation or lest they carry in their lives something that separates them from His will.

"The Lord's hand is not shortened," saith Isaiah, "that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: but your iniquities," said he, "have separated between you and your God . . . that he will not hear."

Prayer—O Lord, we search our hearts this day. Give us the strength and courage to separate ourselves from anything that separates us from Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GUARD THE GATES.

"Watch and pray."—Luke 21: 36 and Matt. 26: 41.

We are responsible for what we think, see, and hear. When Paul advised, "stay away from the the appearance of evil," as applied today he must have included Satan's playgrounds, where the powers of sin are strong and where souls are sinning. Bad plans, bad company, and bad books must be shunned.

Prayer—Our Father, we would learn to keep ourselves from the corrupting influences of the world. Help us to watch for them, keep busy, be constant and ever serving Thee.

FRIDAY.

NEVER GIVE UP.

"If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the righteous."—I John 2: 1.

Life means battles to fight, opportunities to meet, and weaknesses to overcome. When beset with these things, do not be discouraged, remember that you can pray, that you can come before the Lord who with outstretched arms awaits the coming of his prodigals to tell Him about their mistakes.

Prayer—And so we come, our Father, pleading our weaknesses. Strengthen us for fresh endeavor Christ died for us, O Lord, and so we come. Amen.

SATURDAY.

DO IT HEARTILY.

(Col. 3: 12-17.)

An old artist, engaged on a canvas which he hoped would be his masterpiece, was compelled to give up through illness. He called one of his students. He bade him go on with the painting, and to the youth's protests, he replied, "Do thy best." With a prayer in his heart, the young artist took up the work. Some months later the picture was finished. When the old man saw fit, he said, "My son, I paint no more. Verily, thou hast done thy best." That youth became famous. He was Da Vinci, the painter of "The Last Supper." And if only we put our hearts into the tasks of the day, if we always do our best, who can tell what might be done?

Prayer—We would magnify Thee, O Christ, not in the spoken word alone, but also in the work entrusted to us. Help us ever to do our utmost for Thee. Amen.—Christ Herald.

SUNDAY.

THE PRAYER OF A MAN.

Great God, make me decent, orderly, appreciative, useful, courageous, and kind in the work of this day. Let me not weaken myself by anger, cheapen myself by boasting, or play the fool by lying.

Give me to remember that there are others in the world beside myself and that they are men like unto me.

Teach me to observe the rules of the game; to come through defeat victorious and out of victory unspoiled.

Let me not be unmindful of the gift of friend or foe, for both are much of my own making.

For my own sake and for the sake of my comrades keep me wholesome and cheerful, but if the devil of error should grip me at times grant me the good sense to go quietly alone until the impulse to act wrongly shall have passed.

And at the end of each day bring me to my bed with a knowledge that greed and malice and envy and hatred have played a lesser part in my thinking; that my weariness is the result of well-doing. Amen.

make us unhappy? No, it is because He wants to make us happy! Because He wants to take life away from us? No, it is precisely because He wants to give life to us, rich, full, abundant; but we insist on keeping less than abundant life. He wants to give us gold; but we are unwilling to let go of our brass. He wants us to see the angel vision over our heads; and we won't take our eyes off the muck heap.

Yes, the cross does require losing one's life; but it turns out that "he who loses his life for my sake and the Gospel's," is the one who finds it. The way of the cross does not bring personal safety and ease; it more often brings danger and hardship. But it works, in that it transforms the lives of those among whom it is lived.

My best friend in China was a young physician, Dr. Leonard Wilbur. He came from one of the most eminent families in America. He was a son of Judge Curtis D. Wilbur, former Secretary of the Navy, and a nephew of Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, President of Leland Stanford University and former Secretary of the Interior. He was a brilliant lad who had won all scholastic honors. He could have had anything he wanted in the medical world in this country. He chose rather to go to China in 1933 as a medical missionary where we worked under the same mission in neighboring hospitals. During his first term he encountered more dangers and difficulties than many meet in a lifetime. While still in language school his wife contracted sleeping sickness and their first baby was born during the illness. The area in which they worked witnessed several upheavals culminating in almost two years of war when the hospital was in a no-man's land—under the Japanese army by day and the Chinese guerrillas by night. After five years they came home then went back to China last fall. Early this spring Leonard came down with an illness which was thought at first to be merely influenza. A Chinese woman was brought in in labor. She had a deformed pelvis, so common in our area, requiring a Caesarian operation as the only hope of saving either mother or child. The only other physician was one of our Chinese doctors who had just contracted a severe eye infection following an injury and, therefore, could not operate. Leonard had the attendants carry him to the hospital where with a fever of 103 he operated and saved the woman and her baby. A few days later, on Easter Sunday, he died of typhus.

In a sense that is sheer stark tragedy; but in another sense it is glorious victory, just as Jesus' death on the cross was not defeat but was triumph. One cannot but mourn for the world that it has lost so gifted and beautiful a life. But I cannot grieve for Leonard. He had counted all the costs long before. He was doing exactly what he wanted most to do. The ones I feel most sorry for are those dying needlessly because of the blunders of their elders. Surely Jesus was speaking of such as Leonard when He said, "Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit." Leonard could have been like a grain alone; he preferred to go the way of the cross, fall into the receptive soil, and out of his sacrifice there is already coming and will come through decades boundless harvests. "How prudently most men creep into nameless graves, while now and then one forgets himself into immortality."

Some months ago Madam Chiang Kai-Shek wrote to some Chinese Christians in invaded China where they were suffering persecution from their conquerors, "The Generalissimo and I have come to the conclusion that the path of loyalty and sacrifice is the only Christian way."

Christ never wavered on His way to Gethsemane and Golgotha although he knew what awaited Him. The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church. But we are not mindful that each season nature requires fresh seed. I wonder if the unmistakable decline of interest in Christianity in our own country does not mean we have been coasting along on the momentum built up by the sacrifices of yesterday's martyrs. We may expect a stalwart church again and a new missionary outpouring only if we ourselves are willing to be the fresh seed for our generation. I am sure that as individual Christians and as Christian organizations, churches, and missionary institutions we must return to the principle of the cross.

7. We must learn to project ourselves, in our thinking and in our loyalty, out to the people whom the missionary goes to serve. It is so much easier to give our devotion to and center our interest around the missionary himself or the missionary board or the missionary society in the local church.

Perhaps I can make this point most clear by an illustration. At a time when I was isolated in the interior of China for months there were reports in this country that I was missing. When communications were re-opened I eventually got letters from about sixty of my best friends who had written in the hope that their letters of encouragement and support would get through to me. They all said in one form or another that they were remembering me daily, scanning the papers for possible news of my well-being, praying night and morning that God would throw His arm about me and keep me safe and bring me home again to my old mother and father, etc. It, of course, warmed my heart that my friends were remembering me thus in a time of crisis. But the fact that they said no more than that was a deep disappointment because it made me know I had utterly failed to give them, my most intimate friends, even a glimpse of what I was trying to do. They saw not much farther than Walter Judd in China. Their imagination encompassed him—and very little more. If he were safe nothing else much counted, no matter what happened to the Chinese. Only one person saw the further thing, strangely enough, my mother—or perhaps it wasn't so strange. I had been her fourth son, and was now her eldest, as the three older sons had gone on. Yet she wrote, "Son, you know I am hoping that you will be safe. But that is not what I am praying for most of all. I am praying that you will be given the strength to do your duty to and for the people whom I know you went to serve. Stick at your post until He calls." She saw beyond her son, through her son, the missionary, into the hearts and needs of the people, God's children, sheep without a Shepherd.

Only as we today rededicate ourselves to the larger task of making all of these streams of influence completely Christian and worthy of the great Christ in whose footsteps we strive to follow can the day for which we all yearn and labor and pray come.

The Orphanage
 CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Let us talk finances for a little while in this letter. You will realize it takes money to run an orphanage where you have nearly one hundred children. We are entirely dependent on the Sunday schools, churches and friends of little children for our support. The children eat and wear clothes every day whether funds are sent in or not. The churches, Sunday schools and friends were real good to us during the year 1940 and stood by us and saw to it that we reached our goal of $22,000.00 for 1940, for which we are very happy. Out of that amount we purchased ten acres of beautiful land which is a permanent investment and will be very useful in our farming activities.

This year, 1941, we want to reach another goal of $22,000.00. We have some farm machinery to buy which we very much need if we do good farm work. We also have some work on the buildings to do to keep them in good repair. If we can raise the $22,000.00, we believe we can meet all our expenses and get out at the end of the year, at least, even.

So far, this year, to March 15, we have received from all sources the sum of $3,151.66. Of this amount, $1,301.66 has come from churches and Sunday schools. $1,850.00 has come from other sources.

We want to urge all the Sunday schools to make a monthly offering this year. We hope those schools not on the monthly contributing list will begin now. If your Superintendent lives to the first of December and nothing happens, he will have served as superintendent of the Christian Orphanage twenty-five years. A quarter of a century, and still a young man. Let everyone join in and help make this a banner year for the Christian Orphanage.

THE COLLEGE GROWS.

ties in the years to come are beyond present computation. In fact, the college has grown in the hearts and affections of her natural constituency, church, alumni, and friends, so that today we think of our institution with pride and confidence, as one standing shoulder to shoulder with the other great educational institutions of the country, making her contribution to church and state that civilization may advance and that the kingdom of God may come.

It has also grown in its needs. In years past the financial support given to Elon College by her natural constituency would certainly be considered insufficient in the light of her present needs. Growth in equipment, service, prestige, and influence necessarily means larger demands and more generous financial support.

The college needs additional teaching help. We need very badly a teacher to give full time to Religious Education that our program in this department in which we train workers for the church may be adequate. We also need an instructor in Industrial Arts that every student may have the opportunity of knowing something of the practical side of everyday life and living that they may know at least the elementary rules that they may provide for themselves some of the actual necessities and conveniences of everyday living. Many of our students come from the rural sections, and others are interested in agricultural advantages. An instructor in this field would be welcomed and beneficial on our teaching staff. To meet these needs additional funds are required.

If the college needs anything badly, that one thing is a dining room adequate in every particular for serving meals. At present we are compelled to serve two shifts for all meals, and our kitchen facilities are woefully inadequate. To meet the growing needs of a growing institution, of course increased funds are demanded.

We face these situations in connection with our institution of higher learning and express a wish that they might be met, but have we done what we could to meet them? Think of what a few dollars contributed by every member of our church and alumni would mean. The Convention has sensed these needs and has asked the church to make an effort to meet them. Has your church been given an opportunity to contribute to the college on Convention askings this year? If not, won't you please see that the membership of your church has this opportunity and that the offering is forwarded to the college? Your support will mean much to your institution.

HISTORY OF MISSIONS.

So far as mission work in the Southern Convention is concerned, the Convention of 1904 was one of the most memorable in all our history.

In 1906, the home mission committee became a board and was incorporated September 28, 1912, with the following incorporators: J. O. Atkinson, J. W. Holt, K. B. Johnson, H. W. Elder and J. E. West. The charter was amended on April 30, 1918, so as to include both home and foreign missions under the name of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, Incorporated. In 1904 and 1906, Rev. J. W. Holt was chairman. In 1908 J. E. West was made chairman and has continued as such to date. In 1909, Dr. J. O. Atkinson was elected secretary, without salary, and was elected by the Convention as mission field secretary with salary from September 1, 1917, thirteen years after the Berea Convention of 1904, and continued in these offices till July 2, 1940, when Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker was elected secretary. The income of the board from 1907 to 1917 from conference apportionments only ranged from $1,000.00 to $2,000.00 per annum—about doubling the annual average receipts of the Southern Convention Missionary Association.

In September, 1917, the board authorized Dr. J. O. Atkinson to raise $100,000.00 for missions in five year subscriptions, one half to home and one half to foreign missions. Just as the twentieth century fund campaign was stimulated by the conditional gift of $10,000.00 by Francis Palmer, so the hearts of the entire brotherhood were thrilled by the gift of $5,000.00 to the campaign by Mr. J. M. Darden. The campaign was a great success, but before the five year subscriptions were paid another great impetus was given to missions by the adopting of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. "Moved by a spiritual and spontaneous demand for an opportunity for every member of the church to do work for the Master, and expressed by the voice of J. E. West, in the Christian Missionary Association, in Portsmouth, Va., December 9, 1919, and voiced again in a mission board meeting, with others present, in Suffolk, Va., December 12, 1919, your board, at the request of the Suffolk meeting, called a meeting of all executive committees of the conference composing the Convention to meet in Suffolk, Va., at the expense of the mission board, on December 30, 1919. At this joint executive meeting it was decided to launch a forward movement of the Convention with a final financial five-year goal for $2,000,000; and a campaign committee was chosen to direct the work."

In this campaign in 1919 all enterprises of the church showed forty per cent of all new money being tentatively distributed to missions. From the special campaign, the Men and Millions Movement, Convention Missions and the Woman's Missionary Movement, the board's income from 1917 to 1927 increased to an average of over $20,000.00 per year, some years reaching as high as $50,000.00 per year. During the decade, 1927 to 1937, the average has been not quite $20,000.00 per year, the income having dropped considerably with income to other church enterprises during the depression of 1931-32.

While the women of the Southern Convention date their permanent organization in 1912, it seems that the Eastern Virginia and some other conferences authorized conference organizations in 1911. The year 1912 will always be a memorable year in the history of missions, but this does not mean that the women of the South had not been missionary before that time.

In the eighties missionary societies were formed in many local churches in the Southern Convention in which women took the lead although men and children were members. These societies, studied and taught missions, raised money for missions and were important factors in the development of the local church. Antioch, Eastern Virginia Conference, had such a society in 1888 and Suffolk organized one in 1889.

The mission board feels very grateful for the cooperation of the woman's board from its organization. At the Southern Convention in April of 1914, upon the recommendation of the home mission board (now mission board) Mrs. C. H. Rowland, first president of the woman's board, was elected a member of the mission board and succeeding presidents have become members for various periods. Our present board is composed of ten members: Col. J. E. West, chairman; Mrs. J. Monroe Harris, Mrs. S. C. Harrell, Mrs. A. L. Jolly, Rev. W. J. Andes, Mr. J. A. Williams, Mr. L. L. Vaughan, Miss Dorothy Truitt, Mr. F. M. Wright and Dr. H. S. Hardcastle.

In concluding this too brief history. I want to hereby give testimony to the great leadership of Dr. J. O. Atkinson from September, 1917 to July, 1940, and to the splendid cooperation of every member of the board since 1904. Looking back upon a half century of experience in business, political, civic and religious work, I can truthfully say Dr. Atkinson was one of the most lovable men I ever knew, and one of the easiest to work with. Let us close in the ranks and carry on the work he loved so devotedly. February 26, 1941.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

Christian youth has never faced a more challenging period than that in which we find ourselves today. May we be alert to our opportunities and responsibilities. If every Congregational Christian Church in Eastern Virginia will see to it that at least five representatives attend this rally on March 22 at the Christian Temple, the attendance will number 172, and our chances for doing more effective work in our world will be strengthened. We are depending on you.

BAXTER TWIDDY.

A Christian Emissary

By DOUGLAS HORTON,
Minister of the General Council.

It was a cold, gray morning. On the dock and on the decks of the steamer there was a motley company of people. Many of them were obviously of the military class. One gathered from wisps of conversation that floated out from the huddled groups that many of the passengers were sailing on diplomatic missions, representing various departments of the government, and that others were going to Europe on business errands. They were apparently all men—headed for the war zone.

Edgar Chandler was perhaps the only one of the passengers who was not going abroad to deliver airplanes or defend the Monroe Doctrine or write articles on why France was defeated, or otherwise help to make it a bigger and better war. He had been appointed by the Executive Committee of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches to carry greetings to the Congregational Union of England and Wales in this time of crisis. The American section of the World Council of Churches had also appointed him its emissary to the churches in Great Britain. The Church Peace Union had not only given him its credentials but had also contributed to his expenses.

Mr. Chandler's sailing is not for war but for peace. He is to confer with the leaders of the church on the other side of the water as to how we of the church in America can join them in the work of relief and of reconstruction which is already assuming large proportions and must continue to do so as long as the war lasts. Even more important than this, however, is the meaning that his errand has for the development of the International Church. The fact that American Congregational Christians and others are concerned for the churches facing danger and disaster across the Atlantic declares in unmistakable terms that the church has a wider than national character.

Said I to Dwight Bradley who was standing next to me on the dock—for the Council for Social Action's Committee for Assistance to War Victims is also sponsoring Mr. Chandler's visit—"This may be a historic moment. It's by such means as this that the Christian world community will be established."

"Yes," said D. B., whose terse phrases never desert him, "It's now a race between a coming Christian world community backed by the Church, and a coming non-Christian chaos, backed by the don't-care, me-first rabble of the world."

We are sending Mr. Chandler over at a time when the air raids are likely to be less fierce than at any other time of the year and have asked him to stay out of the areas which are likely to be bombed. But even at that I was glad to see the special dispatch in the "New York Times" three weeks after he had sailed announcing that he had arrived safely in London by plane from Lisbon. I shall be gladder when I see him well behind the Statue of Liberty again. But this was a job that needed doing right now, while our interest is high and while we can show ourselves friends in need—and that is the reason we are grateful to Edgar Chandler for saying, "I'll go," and to his wife for letting him.

The Function of the Church

As the President of the Federal Council of Churches, Dean Luther Allan Weigle of Yale Divinity School, has been called the "No. 1 U. S. Protestant." Clear and positive are Dean Weigle's views on the Church's responsibilities. He considers worship, evangelism, education and community welfare in that order the four primary functions of the Church. His views on each:

Worship of God.—"I mean more than liturgy by that. I mean active acknowledgment by men of the will of God, the moral law of God, the justice and love of God—in their own lives and in the life of the world. The function of the Church is to prevent men from taking anything less than God as their ultimate concern."

Evangelism.—"The real spirit of evangelism is not a spirit of conquest, of going out and winning souls as trophies, but of going out to share with others the values we have found real and enduring."

Religious Education.—"People must be taught what the facts are upon which Christian faith rests. The Church must give children and young people an environment in which they can grow up as Christians, and help its members everywhere to look at the problems of their lives in the light of their relation to God."

Community Welfare.—"We must distinguish between the welfare activities which the Church undertakes in its own name and those which it helps to inspire and maintain through the service of people who themselves are inspired by the Church. The second is more important."

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dr. Earl Marlatt, dean of the Boston University School of Theology, will be the Lenten preacher at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Richmond, Va., March 24-28.

Dr. J. H. Lightbourne sent a check for $64.00 to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office last week. This shows the work done by the Burlington, N. C., Church toward getting new subscriptions.

Henderson Christian Church, Henderson, N. C., went out to get their quota of subscriptions. At the last report of the pastor, Rev. J. Frank Apple, the church had exceeded its quota by three subscriptions.

Mrs. John Robert Foster announces the approaching marriage of her daughter, Frances Lavinia, to the Rev. Armor Lanson Granger, Jr., on Saturday, the twenty-ninth day of March, at the First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C.

One week the quota for the Mebane (N. C.) Christian Church for CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions appeared in this paper. Following the next church service the pastor, Rev. Ellis N. Clark, brought in the four subscriptions necessary to reach the quota.

On March 9, 1941, the members of Mt. Zion Christian Church extended Rev. J. H. Warren, pastor, a unanimous call for another year. This is the fifth year of Bro. Warren's pastorate here. The members and friends of the church are greatly pleased with his services.

The pastor of our Asheboro Church, Rev. A. Lanson Granger, reports that he did not write the chairman of the Board of Publications how fine he thought THE CHRISTIAN SUN was, or what he would try to do to raise the quota of subscriptions. Instead, he and some of his members did a little work and Asheboro Church, with a quota of five, has twenty-five subscribers.

RALLY AT O'KELLY'S CHAPEL.

For several years there has been no regular service in the chapel built by the founder of our Southern Church and named in his honor.

The little church stands by Highway No. 55, several miles south of Durham, N. C.

On the fifth Sunday in March, Congregationalists and Christians are called to meet in this historic church. Pres. L. E. Smith will preach that morning, and interesting historic talks will be given in the afternoon.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" CAMPAIGN MOVES ON.

News of twenty-six new subscriptions from one church and sixteen new subscriptions from another is good news. Other pastors are on the job, too, and THE CHRISTIAN SUN will shine into many new places. THE CHRISTIAN SUN should go into all our homes. Tell your daily paper to move over and make room for your church paper.

Be loyal to your church and your church paper.

FORSYTH-GUILFORD ASSOCIATION OF CHURCHES TO MEET.

The Forsyth-Guilford Association of Churches will meet March 30, with the First Greensboro Church at 2:30 in the afternoon.

The following program will be rendered:

- Devotions by Mrs. O. H. Paris.
- Reading of Minutes.
- Subject: "Mass Evangelism"—Discussion led by Mr. W. B. Truitt.
- Subject: "Personal Evangelism"—Discussion led by Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.
- Music.
- Subject: "Educational Evangelism"—Discussion led by Miss Frankye Marshall.
- Subject: "The Claims of THE CHRISTIAN SUN"—Presented by Rev. M. A. Pollard.

It is hoped that every church of the district will be represented by a strong delegation, which will enter freely into the general discussion of each subject on the program.

W. M. JAY, President.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

Amounts contributed by churches and Sunday schools to the college to be counted on conference apportionments have been encouraging. The number of churches and Sunday schools responding during the past week has been more or less disappointing. There are many churches that we have not heard from. Surely your church wants to be numbered with those who express their interest in the college by their contributions. This is an opportunity not only to assist the college but for the churches to discharge a part of their obligations to conference. If your church has not yet sent in its contribution, won't you please see that it does within the next few weeks. We are slightly ahead of what we were last year at this time, but far from the total of our apportionments.

The report for this week follows:

The Annual Session of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational Christian Conference meets at Timber Ridge, August 6 and 7, 1941.

NEW AND RENEWAL SUBSCRIBERS.

The following list of subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN includes those whose money was received at Elon College, N. C., between February 6 and March 4, 1941. The total receipts for the month of February amounted to $332.50, which is a little above the monthly average we must maintain between now and July. We wish to thank all those who have sent in their renewals promptly, and all those who are subscribing for the first time.

Included in this list are the names of the members of the Congregational Christian Church of Asheboro, N. C., who were not already receiving their church paper. This is the fourth church to join the ranks of those who can receive THE CHRISTIAN SUN for one dollar a year, because it goes to all the families in the church. Incidentally, all of these churches are in North Carolina. Which Virginia church will be first to join this group?

Please send subscriptions to Rev. F. C. Lester, Elon College, N. C.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Let the Ministers Keep Their Heads and Their Hearts

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.

Eleven years ago, Mussolini was addressing a great throng of his countrymen at one of the largest public gatherings ever assembled in Italy. He had just witnessed the drilling of 100,000 soldiers who had passed in review before the great crowd of more than 200,000 citizens. The vast multitude burst into a frenzy of wild applause when Mussolini said, "It was I myself who ordered this review, because words are fine things, but muskets, machine guns, battleships, airplanes, and bombs are even better." Said he, "Right, if unaccompanied by might, is a vain word. Fascist Italy, which today is the most powerfully armed of any nation in the world, can now propose its alternative to any other nation — either our precious friendship or dangerous hostility."

The 100,000 militiamen drawn up in the vast piazza, and the 200,000 private citizens assembled in the foreground burst forth with much applause and waved with such patriotic fervor that Mussolini seemed dazed by the storm of applause which he had evoked. And he leaned over the gaily decorated balcony from which he had spoken and exclaimed:

"What patriotism! What patriotism! Magnificent! Magnificent!" The cheering from the great multitude of citizens continued for half an hour after Mussolini had finished speaking, and he was obliged to appear on the balcony time after time to answer the crowd's fanatic response. That was eleven years ago the 17th day of this coming May. What a price, what a price Italy is paying today for glorying in its militaristic leadership! Similar gatherings and similar hysterical demonstrations of the war spirit have taken place in Germany in response to the utterances of Hitler during the past two years. Germany has not yet paid the price for submitting to the military regime that has caused the downfall of nations down through the centuries. But she will, Ancient Rome, Ancient Greece and Ancient Babylon paid the price, and history has a strange way of repeating itself. The nations in the past that forgot God and laid their major emphasis upon militarism fell beneath the weight of their own military iniquity. And likewise will the nations go down in ignominious disaster that today are paying tribute to the god of force.

May God save America from the peril of any and all militaristic regimes!

Militarism is threatening the very life of the world today. Let America beware of the perils of militarism! Not until the nations unite in a passionate demand for universal peace, can any nation be secure. But if America follows the example of the militaristic nations, what nation would be left to call the nations back to peace?

In June of 1930, Lloyd George, that eloquent British statesman from Wales, addressed the World Council of Congregational Churches in session at Bournemouth, England. With passionate appeal he pleaded with that great assembly to pray and work for universal and permanent peace. Said he, "I have come here tonight to lay the cause of Universal Peace upon the altar of the Christian Church. We politicians have failed in the past to prevent war. We are failing now. The church is the world's only hope. If the churches allow another war, they might as well close their doors. War puts out the light of love, and makes the world dark with hate, because it is easier to kill in the dark. The church is God's agency for peace."

So spoke the distinguished Lloyd George. The memory of his passionate challenge to the churches can never fade from the minds of those who heard it. How our hearts thrilled in response!

And so it is that the church of Christ is God's agency for peace as he declared. But there are leaders in the church today who have forgotten that fact, and would make the church a promotion agency of militarism. There are pastors who have forgotten that they have solemnly vowed to follow the Prince of Peace, and instead of crying, "Peace, peace, even though there is no peace," are calling, "war, war," when war is already cursing three-fourths of the globe. Certainly every American minister's religion, as well as his patriotism, makes him concerned about his nation's security, and turns his sympathies toward the nations now fighting in behalf of their democracy, while his heart cries out in protest against the designs of totalitarianism. But his Christian idealism also calls him to cling to the Cross in his thinking and in his preaching, instead of reaching for a sword, a rifle, or a bomb as a substitute symbol of his faith.

Ministers may feel that they should lay down the Cross and take up the sword, but unless they are willing to do that very thing, they have no right

FREEDOM AND THE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

"Freedom and the Religious Press" was the subject of Boston University's Founders' Day celebration last week. Dr. Guy Shipler, editor of "The Churchman" and president of the Associated Church Press, stressed the long tradition of freedom which had characterized religious journalism in America.

"It is little wonder," said Dr. Shipler, "that the religious press values its freedom and fights for its maintenance, though the fight is carried on under heart-breaking economic handicaps which constantly threaten it with extinction. The economic shifts have forced religious journals, with all too rare exceptions, to depend on subsidy of one sort or another to cover the marginal losses between income and operating costs. It is to the everlasting credit of the rank and file of these journals that they have already refused to be financed by any individual, group, or organization bent on controlling their policies for interested ends. Like hospitals, social settlements and parish churches, they must, as institutions for the common good, depend for maintenance on socially-minded citizens who recognize the high value of their freedom in the social order.

"Hans Kerll, Hitler's cabinet minister, in charge of all church affairs of Germany, including the religious press, has declared: 'There is a new authority which has arisen in Germany and which will say what Christ and Christianity will mean for Germans. That authority is Adolf Hitler.' In spite of the poverty under which the religious press of the United States battles, it will be a long time before that authority, or anything resembling it, will control its freedom."

Dr. Alexander Brin, editor and publisher of "The Jewish Advocate," spoke on the same subject and reminded his hearers that—

"When the Nazis conquered the German Republic and with it its liberty, justice, free speech, a free press, impartial education, unhampered elections, representative government and human freedom, they crushed, ruthlessly, all opposition. Everyone surrendered: the political parties, the scientists, the educators and every element of the population allowed themselves to become regimented. Everybody kissed the rod. The one glorious exception, however, was the religious leaders.

"The defiance of any enemy from a distance of thousands of miles is no proof of one's conviction and courage. But to defy the enemy in the face of brutal threats, persecution and concentration camps, gives every evidence of sincerity and strength. Not only in Germany, but in other areas of conquered territory, have the religious leaders defiantly assumed the role of opposition. The greatest defeat which Hitler has sustained at home and in the conquered countries was administered by the religious forces that dared to come in the pathway of the Nazi orbit and challenge it.

"The United States of America is the last great nation in the world today that has a free press. The responsible religious press of America has risen to its sacred obligation as custodian of truth and faith. The religious editors have proved themselves worthy trustees and guardians of the nation's freedom and soul, the apotheosis of balance in an unbalanced world, the exemplars of sanity in an insane world.

"The public generally does not realize the magnitude and importance of the religious press in helping to create a noble and inspired public opinion; little does it appreciate its unswerving loyalty and steadfastness to those ideals of thinking and living which form the very basis of religion and the American way of life. Since religious teachings so greatly helped to lay the democratic foundations of our nation, it is natural that religious editors should be among the foremost in the effort to keep America safe for democracy.

"In a nation where we have about 45,000,000 Protestants, 1,000,000 Greek Catholics, 5,000,000 Jews, two-thirds of a million Mormons, one-tenth of a million Quakers, 22,000,000 Roman Catholics and 500,000 Christian Scientists, there has been much neglect in the matter of reading religious publications. This failure is not the least among the reasons for the indifference to religion by so many people in the United States. I cite these further facts that while 84,000,000 people go to the movies every week, that out of a school population of 32,000,000 children in the public and private schools of the nation, only 16,000,000 receive religious training. The religious publications are character-building agencies. They are more essential than ever in a terrified world. Like our institutions of culture, spiritual aspiration and social aid, religious publications are the symbols of our humanity. They must not be allowed to grow anaemic and ineffectual."

Our denomination was born as a child of freedom. We must not sell, surrender or forfeit that birthright. We need to take that freedom far more seriously: to examine its roots, trace its history, and champion its future. The editor is not alarmed over the variety of views occasionally expressed in the columns of "The Christian Sun." That is simply a proof of our life and freedom. It behooves us to keep open this channel of free expression. Churches throughout our Convention are now urged to secure additional subscriptions for our church paper as a means of keeping open this historic artery of religious freedom.

R. L. H.

As Washington declared in his farewell address, "Reason and experience forbid us to believe that national morality can long prevail where religious principles are excluded." These principles rightly understood by both capital and labor and diligently applied to the social and industrial structure are the only effective answer to the communist.—William E. Kerrish.

The difference between getting somewhere and nowhere is the courage to make an early start. The fellow who sits still and does just what he is told, will never be told to do big things.—Charles M. Schwab.

When the War Is Over

By JOHN R. SCOTFORD.

Obviously those of us who are opposed to war cannot hope to reverse the present tide of events. It is doubtful if even the president can control the forces which have been unleashed with his approval. By putting on such brakes as we can find we may in some measure slow down the mad rush in which we are caught. Through the exercises of calm intelligence it may be possible to modify some of the aims sought. We may be able to mitigate the situation to some degree, but for the present there is no hope of diverting the mind of the multitude from war to peace.

But, in the words of the western farmer, "Ultimately it always rains." The day will dawn when the present furies will have spent themselves. Now and again events come to a dead center; after a pause they take off in a new direction. When the war has run its course, some sort of a reaction will inevitably set in. That will be our day of opportunity.

After the last war there came such a moment. It was celebrated by Dr. Charles E. Jefferson with a sermon on the text, "And Noah was drunk." We experienced a revulsion from the verbal idealism of Woodrow Wilson to the unutterable materialism of Warren Gamaliel Harding and the practical politics of Calvin Coolidge. When the dream of a new world was shattered at Versailles America shrugged its shoulders and proceeded to eat, drink, and be merry.

So far the present war has not been clothed in the garments of idealism. Our memories of 1918 are too vivid to permit us to expect our boys to be transformed into angels of righteousness when they put on their uniforms. We have seen too many Legion conventions to expect the graduates of the drafts to forever after lead a godly, righteous and a sober life. Fortunately even those who accept war as inevitable regard it as a dirty and disagreeable business from which no good can be expected. As yet the enlisted man thinks of himself as more of a martyr than a hero. The president undoubtedly cherishes something of a messianic complex. An effort will probably be made to proclaim a moral crusade. This has not happened yet. The shades of 1918 are probably our best protection against such an eventuality. In some localities such a move will be without benefit of clergy.

As matters now stand there is a possibility that the inevitable post war reaction may be from materialism to idealism, from coercion to persuasion. Certain it is that men will turn away from the eup of war with utter nausea. If they are offered the pure waters of peace in a progressive way there is a chance that they may accept them. In honest one must admit that the odds are somewhat against this coming to pass—and yet stranger things have happened. There are substantial grounds of hope for those of us who believe in peace.

How can we best prepare ourselves for the fateful day when the clamor of war will cease?

The first and simplest duty of the individual is to maintain the integrity of his own soul. To allow the spirit of hatred to enter one's heart is to commit spiritual suicide. Our charity must extend from the foe abroad to those at home with whom we disagree—which for most of us will be the greater burden. To allow our emotions, or those of the crowd about us, to color our thinking is to commit intellectual hari-kari. Perhaps the greatest service which we can render our country is to keep our mental processes uncontaminated by fear, hatred or nationalistic propaganda. This is extremely difficult, but when the shouting and the tumult dies somebody must be ready to do some real thinking. The danger is that the world may find itself at the mercy of those who have suffered intellectual shell-shock. Sanity at such a time may be a gift from heaven. There is need of brave souls who will dare to retire even into so-called ivory towers "for the duration."

A more difficult undertaking is to keep the war dissociated from Christian idealism in the public mind. Fortunately we have in a number of very conspicuous pulpits men who can be trusted not to give the blessing of the church to war. In addition there are a goodly number of less conspicuous Christians who have not bowed the knee to Baal. They may be compelled to keep still, but they cannot be coerced into giving their approval to that which they believe to be wrong. Great will be the value of the testimony of this goodly company, for it will be a living reminder that there are Christians of unquestioned integrity whose idealism moves in another realm than that of war. During the months which lie ahead we cannot hope to convert the multitude to the gospel of non-violence, but we can keep them reminded that sane men believe that there are other ways of meeting world problems than that of war. This continuing testimony will be difficult, but it may also prove to be priceless.

There is also need that those who do not believe in war maintain some sort of fellowship with those who have sincerely but reluctantly felt themselves compelled to acquiesce in the resort to force. Of course there is no hope for those who want to deport Lindbergh and their ilk. But there are many even among the military who have scant stomach for what they see ahead. They are marching down the path to war, not because they like it, but because their imaginations can conceive of no other way of meeting the present situation. At heart their ideals are the same as those which lead others of us to foreswear the appeal to force. The more this underlying unity of the spirit is stressed, the better. It is from the ranks of the reluctant war makers of today that we may expect many of the peace makers of tomorrow to arise.

The outlook is dark, but it is not utterly hopeless. The war cannot last forever. When the cannons cease the men of good will face their hour of opportunity. May they have wisdom and understanding equal to their task.

VALLEY OF VIRGINIA MID-YEAR CONFERENCE.

The mid-year session of the Valley of Virginia Conference meets at Bethlehem Church on March 27, 1941. The Conference will be called to order at 10:00 A. M. by President R. A. Larrick and the Bethlehem Church will bring the opening worship service. The program will center its attention around the work of the Southern Convention, with laymen of the Conference speaking on various subjects concerning the Convention.

The outstanding event and privilege of the Valley people will be the challenging messages of Miss Lucy Eldredg, one of our national youth secretaries. Most of the Valley people know her and will not want to miss her addresses.

For further information as to the program, see the printed program of the Conference in this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Each church is to have the delegates there. One delegate from each church is to report on "Two Good, Constructive Things My Church has Accomplished During the Last Six Months." When the churches have completed their reports by the groups in which they are, the pastor of the group will summarize the activities of the whole group of churches he serves.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Streptococic throat infection." That first word is hard to spell and difficult to pronounce. For the past five or six days this ailment has kept the writer in bed, groaning at times with pain and discomfort.

This is no ordinary sore throat. The doctor was very kind and considerate, but the treatment is heroic and testing. He uses an electric light in making a preliminary examination. In order to divert the patient's attention, he tells a funny story while wrapping some absorbent cotton around the point of an innocent looking instrument, in preparation for first aid treatment.

He dips this cotton into a bottle containing a purple solution, as he finishes the story in time for you to have one more laugh before you are told: "Open your mouth and say a—h!" When you are almost out of breath, he inserts that beautiful purple absorbent cotton until you wonder if your collar button is to be discolored in the process of the heroic treatment.

Sometimes a preacher's voice is so noisy one might think his throat was large—but it seems to be much filled by the treatment for "strept" throat infection. The pain and discomfort are so distracting one fears the worst is yet to come. But the treatment has been effective, and we are on the road to recovery.

Such an experience has more value than the patient can appreciate while the illness is at its worst. For example, it is profitable to be reminded that a man must be right within if he wishes to live a full orb'd life. When your sense of taste and smell and good cheer has disappeared, food and fellowship do not have their usual charm. An appreciation of the material world depends in part upon the spirit within a man.

For this reason, alone, we should take care of our bodies. There are other reasons for temperate living, but it is well to remember that these bodies are holy—the temple of the Holy Ghost.

The same lesson is evident in our spiritual outlook upon life. Much depends upon the coloring matter in our inner life. If the heart is filled with pride, and lust, and hate, some day there will be an outbreak of evil forces seeking to attack and endanger the peace and contentment of others.

Jesus understood this law when He said, "Ye must be born again."

Paul said with emphasis: "If any man hath not the spirit of Christ he is none of His." The final test of life is the spirit within man.

Personal iniquity is a spiritual disease, and the treatment must be heroic.

Preaching should quicken new life within the heart of the hearers.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WE LIKE OUR OWN.

Our home is the place where we live. We may not own the house or the land on which the house stands. Nevertheless, it is the place where we live. It is our home and all the home we have. It is the associations, the atmosphere, and the love of family that make it home for us. It may not be elaborate or elegantly furnished, but the ones who live there, the things they do, and the purposes that they have, make it home for us.

We have our country, and a great country it is. It is not the land or the things in the land that make our country dear to us. It is the memory of those who have lived, the purposes and achievements of their lives, the constitution that guarantees to us justice and equality, the opportunities that are ours, and the hope that it holds for our children that make it our country. At present these guarantees and opportunities are threatened from without. Everyone stands ready to defend.

The most of us have a church that we call our church. It may not be on a prominent corner in a great city. It may not be cathedral-like in its structure. It may be a one-room structure on an unpaved road somewhere in the countryside. It is not the land or the building that makes it our church. It is the effort, the sacrifice, the fellowship, the spirit, and the devotion that make it ours. We love it because of what it offers to us and because of its willingness to receive what we have to give in devotion, service, and material substance. The largeness of place that it has in our affections is made not because of what it has to give but because of what we ourselves, out of sincerity and faith, have brought and left on its altar.

Our church has a college, an institution of higher learning. It belongs to our church, therefore it belongs to us. The ones who have come before us have through service and sacrifice made our college possible for our advantage and use. The only way to keep the college ours is to give ourselves to it. There are so many things that we may give that will not diminish our holdings but will multiply our possessions. Faith, confidence, trust, devotion, prayers—these are the things that count—riches that endure. Not everyone may be able to give money, but not one who is among us can afford not to give what he has. Because of the contributions made by those who have come before us and made by us ourselves in these latter days, we have an institution of higher learning at Elon College for which no one need apologize in any respect whatsoever. Our college stands with outstretched arms and yearning hearts for our own young people that she may have the opportunity of giving back to them what she through the years has received from the church itself.

There are this year more than one thousand young people graduating from our own homes, the homes of our own church. If our own young people will give our college a fair consideration, their number at Elon College for the coming year will be more than doubled. This is the season of the year when colleges are considered, decisions are made, and plans to enter college are underway. The college through its administration has appealed to all the pastors of our church in the Southern Convention to please introduce us to their fine young people that we may acquaint them with the opportunities and superior advantages offered by their own college.

The founding fathers had a noble vision. They saw that if the church had its own campus where educational advantages were available for the young men and young women of our church and these young men and young women should come and take advantage of these opportunities, that because of their association and fellowship on the college campus, a solidarity of plan and purpose would be created within the leadership of our church and thereby fit it for larger service within the church after graduation. They were right, for on a college campus hinderances are brushed aside, and those things that help are made clear and become a part of the individuals who associate together and who labor for world betterment and world uplift through the church of which they are a part.

But how can the college of the founding fathers make this contribution to the church through our young

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

How many of you belong to "The Pastor's Class"? In many churches the pastor, during the season before Easter, teaches a class on church membership; or the meaning of church membership. Mr. Todd is teaching a class in our church here in Sanford. He has written a story about the Communion Table for our page today. He has been telling the members of his class what some of the things in our church stand for, or their symbolism. Next week the story will be about the Pulpit Desk.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Cline with their son and daughter stopped by the parsonage after the church service. While Mr. Todd talked with Mr. and Mrs. Cline, I taught Joe and Faye how to work our crossword puzzles. We worked three of them. Mr. Cline saw how interested the children were in working the puzzles, so he gave Mr. Todd two ($2.00) dollars for a subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for his family. Wasn't that nice?

In this week's puzzle I have tried to use words from the book of Ruth in the Old Testament. I hope that you will not find that it is too difficult.

Mr. Todd and Oliver are in bed asleep again. I have lost a lot of sleep this week because of Oliver's illness. He had an infected throat, or "strept" throat, as it is called. The hoarse, croupy cough which went along with it was pretty bad. I was almost afraid to close my eyes for two nights for fear he might choke. He slept all night last night without coughing for the first time since last Thursday night! I am so glad that he is about well again.

So, before I fall asleep at the typewriter, I shall say goodnight!

DOROTHY TODD.

THE COMMUNION TABLE.

When you go to your church, do you ask yourself what the communion table stands for, or says to you? The communion service. It is different from other tables and has a special message for you.

First of all, the communion table would tell you that you can talk with your heavenly Father. That is how the table got its name. To have communion with someone means that you talk with him.

The communion table also helps you to remember Jesus, especially on the Sunday when there is a communion service at your church. On the tables in some of the churches you will find these words written or carved: "In Remembrance of Me." The communion service itself is a memorial service.

Another important thing that the communion table stands for, or is a sign of, is fellowship. One reason that Jesus ate the last supper with his disciples was the great desire he had to be with them. Just as your family has fellowship around your dinner table at home, the family of Jesus also has fellowship, and the communion table is a sign of this fellowship.

Then next time you go in your church sit very quietly and look at the communion table. Perhaps you will hear it say: "I am the table of communion. Be still and talk with your Father. I am the table of remembrance. Remember that Jesus loved you and gave his life for you. I am the table of fellowship. If you walk in the light, you will have fellowship one with another."

HANK'S CHAPEL.

Since our last church news to THE CHRISTIAN SUN many things have happened. The first of November, we had the pleasure of entertaining our Western North Carolina Conference, which was enjoyed by every one that attended. The last of November, the Pilgrim Fellowship had a Thanksgiving banquet sponsored by the missionary women. This was enjoyed by every one. There was some real good speaking and plenty of good fellowship. Our missionary society held its regular meeting in December. At that time we were known as the woman's missionary society. However, as we had several men members, we decided that our society should be called just Hank's Chapel Missionary Society, thus including that our men and young people were missionary-minded, too.

In December, our church and missionary society gave a real good Christmas service. While the Christmas spirit was around, our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, went home in the Valley of Virginia. While there, he was married. He and his wife came back to Durham, N. C., and began looking for an apartment. Then, to show them we were happy for them, we began giving them showers, and many useful gifts were given to them to make their apartment just a bit more convenient.

Our missionary society sponsored the World Day of Prayer service for the entire church, Friday, Feb. 28.

The church has secured enough Devotional Guides for each family of the church to be studied and read before Easter. The church is looking forward to the Easter Sunrise Service which will take place at six o'clock Easter Sunday morning.

The missionary society is looking forward to the Spring Rally, which includes Chatham - Lee - Moore and Randolph Districts, to meet with us. Plans are now under way to entertain the Rally.

NOT LESS, BUT MORE MISSIONS.

Let no one think that there is any less need for missions in these days. As a matter of fact, there was never a time when missions were more desperately needed. There are, of course, still great areas of the world geographically into which the Gospel has never been carried. Even in those countries in which there are missionaries, in those nations which are so called Christian, there are still large areas of life in which the spirit of Christ is not practiced, as for instance in our industrial life, our economic life, our social life, the matter of race relations, the political life, our national and international life we need missions not less, but more than ever. There are great masses, there are millions of men and women who have never heard the name of Christ, and who do not know of His love and of the salvation which comes through faith in Him. Even in lands and in areas where there are missionaries, the staffs are all too inadequate and the workers too few to do more than scratch the surface in missionary effort. Even if the world were at peace there would still be a great crisis in the missionary program of the church of Christ. Before the war started many missionaries had been called home, not because there was no need for them, not because they did not want to remain on the field, not because the people among whom they were ministering did not want them, but because of lack of funds, lack of interest on the part of the people at home in the missionary program of the church.

The missionary situation has been rendered even more acute by the recent trend of world events. Because of the war the missionaries of many European countries have been called home, or have been left stranded. We in America must remember that a part, or a large number, of the great army of missionaries working in all parts of the world come from England and from European countries rather than from America. These countries are bending every effort now toward winning the war. As a result the work of missions has suffered very grievously. The plight of some missionaries in overseas service is not only pathetic, it is critical. One of the great casualties of the terrible world war which is now going on is what has happened to missionary work around the world.

There is one other thing which needs to be taken into account. This world war is not the will of God; it is the result of selfishness, and greed, and jealousy, and sin of men and of nations. It is a denial of the spirit of brotherhood and of the basic unity of mankind. It is going to result in bitterness, and hatred, and the spirit of revenge. The one institution above all others which offers any hope for our modern world is the Church of Jesus Christ and its message of the love of God, the brotherhood of man and the spirit of good will and love. Now, more than ever, are missions needed. This is all the more reason why the churches of America, in a land in which industry is booming, in which money is in free circulation, and in which the church is unhindered, either by interference from the state or by the ravages of war, are under obligations to bear the burdens of missionary minded people, and so fulfill Christ's law of love. One of the ways in which we can make our work more effective in the world is to maintain and enlarge the work of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. During this season, which is devoted particularly to missions, let us be alert and alive to our responsibilities, let us undergird the missionary enterprise with our purses, and with our prayers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONS.

One of the largest resources of the Mission Board is the monthly mission offering of the Sunday schools.

Since August 1, 1940, five Sunday schools in the Valley Conference, twenty in Eastern Virginia, twelve in Western North Carolina, eighteen in Eastern North Carolina and nine in the North Carolina and Virginia Conferences have not sent a monthly offering for missions. A few of these Sunday schools remit once a year and some quarterly.

I appeal to every Sunday school that has not done so to take a monthly offering in March and April for the J. O. Atkinson Honor Fund, and urge those that take the monthly offering regularly to send in an extra, or increased, offering in honor of the Atkinson Memorial. It is a great privilege the membership has to contribute to such a cause. The Board appreciates the gracious support given it by the Sunday schools of the Convention.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTHERN CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

At a recent meeting of our Southern Board, held at Norlina, N. C., it was voted that we hold our biennial session of the Woman's Missionary Conference at Elon College at the same time that the School of Missions is meeting there. The time for the School of Missions is from Monday evening, June 16, until Friday noon, June 20. We are planning two afternoons of business sessions and one evening session. The evening session will be planned as a memorial service to the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

Full information concerning the recommendations from the Board and the plans of the program committee will be given at all the rallies held April 2, 3, 4 and 5.

One of our guests for the school and the convention that has already accepted our invitation is Miss Ruth Seabury, who will be with us all the time and who will teach one of our courses. This assures you of a school worth while and I sincerely hope you will begin now to plan to attend.

Other important information concerning the program will be ready for you at the rallies and in THE CHRISTIAN SUN from time to time. Please look for these announcements and send any suggestion you might have for the school or convention to me.

LIBERTY SPRING.

On December 22, 1940, the Liberty Spring Missionary Society presented the three-act Christmas playlet, "A Gift for the Christ Child." The play was directed by the society's president, Edward H. Tarkington, and the music for the carols played by myrtle Sue Turner. The cast of characters included nearly every active member of the society. Those who did not have parts, assisted with the stage properties and singing the Christmas carols.

The church pulpit was arranged with improvised curtains so that back-stage changes could be made. The choir was screened off with small pine trees, interspersed with holly, carrying out the holiday season effect. With the use of a single foot light the characters were shown to the best advantage, each character being attired in the costume made up especially for his part.

Each character applied himself diligently to the task of learning his dialog, making the program a complete success, as evidenced by the large attendance and the many compliments received by the ones that had parts and the society as a whole. Because of this the Liberty Spring Missionary Society, feel that this was the most successful public program ever presented by the society.

SUFFOLK.

The Christian Church was the scene of the celebration of the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of that church. The general assembly room had been beautifully decorated with palms and cut-flowers and potted plants by Mrs. L. Barrett and Mrs. W. H. Burchett, Mrs. J. E. Rawles, president of the society presided during the business session, at which time the five circles reported their monthly meetings, and a total offering of $48,

At the conclusion of the business session Mrs. C. C. Rawles had charge of the special program which consisted of devotionals led by Miss Olivia Yates; a devotional interpretation of Hoffman's Christ in Gethsemane by Miss Virginia Brinkley; a solo by Miss Geraldine Parker, accompanied by Mrs. W. A. Daughtrey; an address by Mrs. J. Monroe Harris of Norfolk, president of the Woman's Convention of the Christian Church; Mrs. John G. Truitt sang a solo, and refreshments were served during the social hour which followed. A special birthday offering of $27.00 was contributed by those present.

The W. W. Staley Missionary Society were special guests, and Miss Gladys Yates, president, expressed for that society their delight in being present.

NORFOLK DISTRICT.

The Berea (Norfolk) Woman's Auxiliary has made great progress since the beginning of the New Year. The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies were merged into one organization in September, with two circles meeting once each month and the whole group coming together once each month. The circles report their activities at the monthly covered dish meeting and all moneys are turned in. There are fifty members on roll. The home books and famous characters in the Bible have been studied. The foreign book is to be given by Mrs. R. B. Wood in February. They have increased their apportionment $10.00. They have a year book in the hands of every member with the complete program for each month in it. The whole group is very active and interested.

The Christian Temple reports a very fine year with special day observance for the New Year meeting. They start off the New Year with a special program each year on Stewardship under the direction of the Spiritual Life Superintendent.

First, Portsmouth, reports a very successful quarter with more money and gifts sent to the orphanage than usual. They also report that more women are reading and enjoying the home mission books than usual because of it being condensed into small booklets.

Rosemont reports that more of their apportionment money has been sent in to date than at any other previous date. They are enjoying the mission study books. They express the prayer that "In this day of hatred and prejudice, may our missionary societies make strong the bond of Christian fellowship."

Newport News reports a delightful luncheon in December with a large attendance. They have also had a beautiful consecration and communion service on the anniversary of the merger of the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies. They, too, are enjoying the mission study books. They, like Berea (Norfolk), have a fine Year Book in the hands of their members.

Ocean View reports a larger attendance than formerly. They have Year Books in the hands of all member. They are taking up in addition to the regular requirements this year a study on some of the "Gems of the Bible."

First, Norfolk, reports a good quarter with each member taking turn on the programs. They have been meeting in the homes which seems to have brought out more members and created more interest. They report more money in treasury than they need to meet responsibilities now, which is something they have not had before. They attribute their success to the growing interest of their women in the work.

District Sup't.

What a lovely way to celebrate one's birthday! This lady sent a penny for every year and then some. If there were more offerings like this one I am sure we would have no trouble in raising our apportionment for Superannuation. Why not try it!

THE PERSON I WANT TO BE.

Each of us doubtlessly has had moments when we have contemplated the kind of person we should be or would like to become. Certainly this may degenerate into a harmful sort of wish-fancy in which we pity ourselves for not being someone else or imagine ourselves to be something other than we were ever fashioned to be. But there are some moments when with deeper vision we do seem to see the person we should become. Christianity has always been tremendously concerned with this personal desire. Our Christian faith translates it into a need. "As many as received him," says the writer of the Fourth Gospel, "to them gave he the power to become the sons of God."

When we settle down into the dull monotony of not caring or being indifferent about what we should be, it is usually because we have not been disturbed enough by the vision of the ideal, or because we lack the simple faith to believe that our lives can be different. Indifference and lack of faith are destructive. It is reported of Jesus that in his own home town "he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief."

What Jesus does for us is to rebuke our complacent contentment with what we are, and to give us the power to become what we should be, the power to become the sons of God. But this transformation, now as always, is possible only to those who in the discipline of love are continually yielding themselves to the influence of Christ's fellowship and presence. Whatever else Christianity is, it is fellowship with him, and without him it is merely a lifeless formula for living which has lost its meaning. Do we really believe we can avoid him, and still be what we ought?

A LAST WORD OF WELCOME.

The young people of the Christian Temple are looking forward with much joy to the ninth annual Rally of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship, which meets in that church on Saturday of this week. Those of us who are employed and could arrange it have secured the boss' permission "to take Saturday off." In one case two of our young people are employed on Saturdays at the same place. The boss became so thoroughly convinced that this rally was such an important affair that he arranged well in advance for both of the boys to attend the rally, hiring two substitutes for the busy day which would be his.

We shall all be out to greet you, and to hope that together we may have a very profitable day. Disappointment will come to us if every church in Eastern Virginia is not represented. We believe we have no false hopes, for that is possible.

The Christian Temple is located on 34th Street, two blocks from Colonial Avenue, and two blocks from Granby Street. If you need a special escort, call the church office.

YOUNG PEOPLE OF OLD ZION REORGANIZE.

A group of twenty-two young people of the Old Zion Christian Church, met on March 2, 1941, to reorganize the Young People's Society.

The officers elected were: Mr. William E. Etheridge, president; Miss Hilda Neece, vice-president; Miss Myrtle Peach, secretary-treasurer and Mr. Erby Bailey, chairman of the program committee. Mr. C. P. Miers was re-elected as leader of the society.

Appreciation was expressed to Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Heath, Jr., of the Newport News Christian Church, for their interest in the society and for giving very helpful information to the program committee.

MISSION BOOK REVIEWS DUE APRIL 1.

HOW CAN I MEET OBJECTIONS TO BECOMING A CHRISTIAN.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MARCH 30, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: I Peter 3:15-18;
Col. 4:6.

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Terse Tactful Reply—John 1:45, 46.

Tuesday—Answering Excuses—Luke 9:57-62.

Wednesday—Bolstering Faith—John 20:26-29.

Thursday—Avoid Arguing—II Tim. 2:23-26.

Friday—A Clear Choice—Matt. 6:24.

Saturday—"Almost, But Lost!"—Acts 26:27-29.

Bruce Barton gives this advice for presenting the life of the Master to another. "The minds of busy men are in motion. They are engaged with something very different from the thought you have to present. You can't jump at them and expect to make an effective landing. You must put yourself in the other man's place; try to imagine what he is thinking; let your first remark be in line with his thoughts; follow it with another with which you know he will easily agree. Thus, gradually, your two minds reach a point where they can join without conflict. You encourage him to say, 'Yes,' and 'Yes,' and 'That's right,' and 'I've noticed that myself,' until he says the final 'Yes,' which is the favorable decision."

Make much of discussion in this meeting. Ask those present to answer the question: "What was the greatest objection which stood in my way in becoming a Christian?" Write these answers upon a blackboard. Add to this list the objectives which other young people offer for not becoming Christian.

Select the six most common objections; and ask individuals how they would meet this objection made by a friend. Write the answers opposite the objection. Study the replies in this fashion: Is there a Scriptural basis for the reply? Does it conform to the spirit and teaching of Jesus? Does it seem convincing? Take up each objection in this order.

Here is a list of objections for consideration.

1. I will wait until I am older.
2. The sacrifices are too great.
3. There are too many hypocrites in the church.
4. I am afraid I cannot "hold out," "make a go of it," or be loyal. Study I Cor. 10:13.
5. I am not "fit" or good enough. Wait until I get better. Study Luke 15:18-24.
6. I am good enough.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

JESUS CONDEMNED AND CRUCIFIED.

LESSON XII—MARCH 23, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 22: 39-23: 56.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 53: 7-12.

GOLDEN TEXT: What then shall I do unto Jesus who is called Christ?—Matthew 27: 22.

Between last Sunday's lesson and today's lesson there was a string of interesting events. The agony in Gethsemane, the betrayal by Judas, the denial by Peter, the appearance before Caiaphas—all these are the background of today's lesson which places Christ before Pilate.

Christ Before Pilate.

Pilate was the Roman governor, evidently a man of some ability, a man with an inherent sense of justice, a man with good intentions, but a man who was covetous, cowardly and callous. He knew that Jesus was not guilty of the charges which the Jewish leaders had brought against Him. He knew that for envy they had delivered Him up. He knew that there was no reason in the world why He should be put to death, in fact, why even he should be punished. But they played upon Pilate's weakness. When they failed to substantiate the charges that Christ had promoted insurrection and revolution, they said that if Pilate let Him go that he would not be Caesar's friend. They put a new aspect on the matter, for it meant that Pilate might lose his job if he was true to his conscience. Like many another man, Pilate was willing to sell his conscience for cash.

There is something pathetic about this situation. Three times Pilate tried to release Jesus. It did not help any when his wife sent a warning for him not to have anything to do with Jesus, saying that she had been troubled very much by a dream which she had had about him. It is not so much a case of Christ before Pilate as of Pilate before Christ. How the weakness, the unscrupulousness, and the moral cowardice of the man stand out in the presence of Jesus!

Christ or Barabbas.

"Whom will ye that I shall release unto you, Barabbas, or Jesus which is called the Christ?" Barabbas was a noted prisoner, a disturber of the peace, a revolutionist, an enemy against the existing social order, a murderer, a man who held a cheap view of life. To release him meant to release that spirit into the world. Jesus was the embodiment of kindness, of helpfulness, of love, and of sacrificial service. To release him meant to release that kind of a spirit into the world. The leaders and the mob had their choice as to which spirit they would release. So do we. Everyone of us has to choose whether we will release into the world the spirit of Barabbas, or the spirit of Christ.

The Voice of the Crowd.

Here is one of the most dramatic instances of the heartlessness and thoughtlessness of the mob. Many of these people did not know what they were doing, they did not know the meaning of the words which were put into their mouths by their leaders. They felt no sense of personal responsibility for the sin which they were committing. They were like the crowd at a modern lynching. They were like individuals who, when they are out with the crowd, do things that they would not think of doing if they used their own best judgment and followed their own enlightened conscience. Strange as it may seem, majorities are often mistaken, in fact, usually wrong. One of the dangers of our modern world is that it shall be ruled by the masses, that is, by mob psychology. Modern inventions, especially the radio, have made it possible for dictators and demagogues to play upon the emotions and the imaginations of the masses, and thus create situations of great peril.

Were You There?

There is a famous Negro spiritual, "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" It seems like a strange question to ask, but as a matter of fact, we were there; in a deep sense we are there. The religious leaders at the cross, who were blind to new and larger truths, the business interests which selfishly wanted to hold on to their profitable traffic in the temple courts, the betrayer, Judas, with his disloyalty, Simon Peter who denied his Lord, the weak Pilate who does his best to free Jesus but finds it costs too much, the emotional fitful crowd, the fearful disciples, the callous soldiers who are unmoved by the tragic spectacle—these and others find their counterpart in you and in me. In a sense we were all there when our Lord was crucified.

"There Is a Green Hill Far Away."

There is a green hill far away,
Without a city wall,
Where the dear Lord was crucified,
Who died to save us all.

On a hill far away stood an old rugged cross,
The emblem of suffering and shame.

Thus the hymn writers have put in poetry and melody the story which the evangelists put in prose. Just outside the wall of Jerusalem there was a knoll, or a hill, called Calvary, or Golgotha, it being interpreted means "the place of a skull." It marks the spot where there took place what seemed to be at the time the greatest tragedy of all time. It was in a sense a tragedy, but in another sense it was a triumph. In His death on the cross, Jesus made possible salvation for a lost world. There is a mystery about the cross; it is difficult to explain it in simple terms. But at its best Christianity through the centuries has believed that what happened there has had significance for the soul of the individual believer. Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures. The Christian Church has followed the soundest instincts in thus magnifying the place of the cross in Christian experience.

Love Unto the Uttermost.

"And Jesus said, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Here is an unparalleled example of love at its best. Even as they nailed him to the cross, Jesus prayed for those who were doing it. His prayer might also have included the Jewish religious leaders, the priests and the elders. This love, this spirit of forgiveness is the mightiest force in all the world. The future belongs not to marching armies and to material might, but to the spirit of love and forgiveness.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

Youth!" by Nall; and one for the best review of, "Stand by for China," by Potat.

April 1 was the date set by which these reviews were to be sent in. As this dead-line is only a short time away, every young person who is planning to submit a review should do so soon. The reviews should be forwarded to the chairman of the judging committee, Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne, Burlington, N. C.

All North Carolina young people between the ages of 14 and 18 are eligible. While only two scholarships are offered, every one who participates will be given recognition in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

MONDAY.

THE PRACTICE OF FAITH.

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy path."—Prov. 3: 5, 6.

This text answers the question, how to practice faith. David, for instance, had lots of time as he moved about the fields tending sheep; but he did not let this time slip. He practiced with the sling-shot. Out of this practice came his victory over Goliath. According to his succinct descriptions, he must have also written many of the Psalms during those leisure hours.

The big contest of life depends upon how we act in private and to what purpose we use our free time. This sentence caught our eye: "It takes long practice to become skillful in faith, in prayer and in patience."

Prayer—Dear heavenly Father, teach us to pray, teach us to have faith and trust, and teach us patience to await Thy will. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE EFFECT OF PRAYER.

"Continuing steadfast in prayer."—Rom. 12: 12.

The effect of prayer in three-fold:

First—The effect on the one who prays. Prayer subjects the will, strengthens the trust, acquires in time power of sustained thought, through which the soul apprehends truth.

Second—The moral effect. Prayer aids to decision, stimulates energy toward the thing desired, and encourages unselfishness. Thus prayer builds up moral life by remedying deficiencies, strengthening weaknesses, and uplifts one to excellency.

Third—The social effect. Prayer makes one different in their attitude toward other people, especially those who do not pray. It produces an evenness of a consideration of others which leavens and strengthens society.

Prayer—Dear Lord, giver of all grace and truth, give us this day all grace of the true prayer life. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FAMILY PRAYERS.

"The fire shall ever be burning upon the altar: it shall never go out."

—Lev. 6: 13.

This text was the law concerning the altar of the Tabernacle. We have a tabernacle—the home—wherein is an altar; a living altar or a dead one. Home is the most important influence on life, the community and the country. Said the Archbishop of York: "If we could see a revival of family prayers and of the custom whereby parents of the children go to church together regularly, that would do more for the religious life of the country than anything else."

Prayer—Our Father, we feel a great need of Thee each day. We dedicate our lives to Thee this day. Grant us the strength of mind, body and soul to keep the fires burning in our hearts and our homes. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CONSIDER THY HUSBANDRY.

"I am a husbandman."—Zech. 13: 5.

"When he cometh what will He do?"—Matt. 21: 40.

As we write this, the fields are ripening for the harvest. Only a few months ago they were victims of the cruel plow. The surface of the land was cut all to pieces. Why such cruelty? No one thinks of fallowing land as cruelty. It is preparatory to a harvest.

Is that not a parable of life? Life has its spells of reversals, trials and sorrow. It must be fallow time. The soil of the soul is being broken up in preparation for something better. The purpose is that God may sow the seed and we are his stewards and husbandmen of it, that there may be a life of good and at last an ingathering of good. And then, do you ask, "Why suffering?"

Prayer—Our Father, give us grace to submit ourselves to Thee, that in all things we may trust in the outworkings of Thy gracious purpose. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DOES IT WORK THAT WAY?

"Godliness with contentment."—Phil. 4: 10-13.

"It is said that 'two bones are better than one.'" It is also said, "grasp all and lose all."

We recall a story which we read in one of our first readers many years ago in which a dog carried a treasured bone in his mouth. While he was crossing a bridge, in the stream below, he saw what he thought was another dog, with a larger bone. On the principle that two bones are better than one, he snapped at the reflection only to lose the one he had.

How often we lose both peace and happiness of mind because some one has what has been denied us. Paul found the secret of contentment. He was content with what he had and not with what he was. Many of us have to learn that lesson.

Prayer—Our Father, though many things are withheld from us, we do have countless blessings. Give us this day a grateful and contented heart. Amen.

SATURDAY.

KEEPING OURSELVES RIGHT.

"If, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God."—I Peter 2: 20.

Humans seem to be disposed to complainings. Something is always wrong. When it is cold, we want it hot. When it is hot we want it cool. We are unhappy in misfortunes, and with fortunes we still want something else. After all, happiness depends upon ourselves. We can make ourselves happy in any state, or we can make ourselves very unhappy. Whether things are right or wrong is fifty percent in our minds often. If it is wrong, we can meet it with patience and in the spirit of Christ. If we are annoyed at others, let us hold ourselves in check, remembering that they may be annoyed at us.

Prayer—Our Father, we know that we try Thy patience with our misdeeds and misdirected spirit. Let Thy gracious spirit through our Lord Jesus Christ rule us in all our days. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Go to church today, learn of God and worship Him; learn of religion and life and covet it; learn of the efficacy of prayer and cultivate it; regard your fellowman with interest and find the reasons for loving him; for, saith the Lord, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength . . . and thy neighbor as thyself." (Mark 12:30, 31.) Amen.

LET THE MINISTERS KEEP THEIR HEADS AND THEIR HEARTS.

to climb upon the top of war's propaganda band wagon and play their strains of militaristic appeals. It seems ridiculous, if not farcical, for Christian ministers to forget their pleas for peace and brotherhood which they have made down through the years of their ministry, and declare that "If war comes, I'll support it," unless they mean what such a declaration implies, that if war comes they will be willing to take their rifle and bayonette, their bombs and any other implement of death and go out with the army to kill. It is preposterous and deceptive for any minister to say that he will support war unless by that he means that he is willing to try to kill just as many men of the enemy nation as he can. That's what it means to support a war—to be willing to take up arms and go out to kill his fellowmen. Every true minister will support his nation in time of war as faithfully as in time of peace. But supporting a nation in time of war is altogether a different thing from supporting a war in which one's nation might be engaged.

It may be true and is, that the only thing that makes life worthwhile is the fact that there are some things worth dying for. But a still higher value of those same things is expressed when they are recognized as being of such value that they are worth living for.

The ministers of the Gospel need not classify themselves either as pacifists or as militarists, but as Christian Idealists. If war should come to America—God grant that it may not—but if war should come, let the ministers of America keep their heads and their hearts, let them keep true to their ideals as ambassadors of the Prince of Peace. Let them pray as never before; let them preach Christ and him crucified; let them give only utterance of love and brotherhood. Let their messages be absolutely free from bitterness, hatred and revenge. This they must do if they remain in true to the high calling of the Gospel Ministry!

War is evil, regardless of what nation is involved. And as ministers we dare not sanction evil even though good might come. A larger good will come from our whole-hearted sanctioning of the good, namely, of peace, fraternity, and love. Though it is still true that God can make the wrath of men to praise Him, He can make the love of men to praise Him far more. Totalitarianism is not the answer to the world's need. Christian democracy is the only answer. But it must be Christian. There are many wrongs that need to be righted even in the democracies that are now fighting for their very existence. Social, and economic, and religious conditions in those democracies need to be set right. The war itself is already setting them right. Not only are ancient land marks being bombed and destroyed, but ancient traditions that have withheld justice from the multitudes and blocked the progress of the warring nations for centuries are also being destroyed today by the war. The caste system in the democracies, the religious bigotry of the Established Church, the economic and social inhumanities of the democracies in the Old World are crumbling before the wild orgies of the war. Had they crumbled sooner, the war could have been avoided. There are hideous wrongs in our American democracy, too. But God grant that they shall not have to be righted by war! The ministers of America are called upon to show the better way of righting our wrongs—the way of the Cross.

Every nation has greater need of ministers who will faithfully carry the Cross in war time than any other time. Ministers of the Gospel can support their nation better by carrying a Cross than by carrying a rifle—not because they are not brave enough to carry a rifle, but because they have been ordained to serve their nation and their God in another way. Shame, thrice shame upon the ministers, whatever their name or creed, who would dress the man of Galilee in a khaki suit and put a rifle in his hands! The munition manufacturers are today taking our nation on a wild ride for a fall unless the churches call a halt. Those who profit by war, those who are willing to take the blood money that war would bring then in dividends are responsible for creating the war scare in this country, and no minister of the Gospel should be so gullible as to join with the war mongers in their schemes to promote war. Under the guise of patriotism, the munition manufacturers and those who would profit by huge rolls of war supplies, have fostered their profiteering schemes by the psychology of the hour. Let the minister of America beware, and let them refuse to be used as mere tools in promoting the war propaganda.

Let the ministers of America beware of the danger of making their pulpits but sub-stations for war propaganda! Let the ministers of America beware of the propaganda offense against the holy office of the ministry by becoming assistant recruiting agents for the national army instead of recruiting agents for "The Army of the Lord!" Let the ministers of America beware of the treacherous sin of allowing bitterness, hatred, and animosity to be voiced in their preaching! Let the ministers of America beware of losing their own souls in these days of war hysteria! Let the ministers of America spend more time than ever before upon their knees in prayer, and in serious meditation upon the world's need of love, the world's need of brotherhood, the world's need of peace, and upon Christ's sufficiency to meet that need. "Jesus wept" when he looked upon the ancient city of Jerusalem. He is weeping again today—yes, he is crying out loud as He looks upon the war-crazed modern world. Weeping, too, is more becoming to the ministers that bear Christ's name as they look upon a social order that is sick unto death.

Though our hearts bleed for our brothers of the Allied nations, though we may well pray for the complete overthrow of totalitarianism, though we may well pray for the victory of the Allied powers, though we may well pray that democracy shall be victorious—we need also to pray that democracy shall be thoroughly Christianized. And let us not forget that that cannot be accomplished by the plunging of our nation into the inferno of war.

Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, Lest we forget!"

The Orphanage
 CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The cold weather holds on with a strong grip this spring. We had hoped that it would clear up and turn warm so our coal for our furnaces would hold out and we would not have more to buy; but it has been so cold since last November that it has forced us to run our furnaces all the time and it has taken a lot of coal. If spring doesn't come soon and the weather warms up some, we will have to replenish our coal bin again.

We heard the frogs croaking in the branch this week. The robins have been conspicuous on our campus for several days now. The blue birds and the mocking birds are visiting us also. We are happy to welcome the birds. They seem to bring sunshine and cheer with them.

We also had three little boys to come to make their home with us, too. They are fine little fellows and have won their way into the hearts of all the children in the building where they are located. If there is a child that comes close to my heart it is one that has lost its mother. If a child has a good Christian mother and death takes her away the child sustains a loss that cannot be replaced. No one can take the place of a good mother. The death of a good mother leaves an aching void in the heart of a child that cannot be filled by others. We may do our best and show it every consideration and kindness possible, but it's not like mother. The good advice and influence of the writer's mother has followed the writer all the days of his life. Mother will stand by her child when all others have gone. The orphanages are doing a fine work in trying to supply, as near as possible, the loss the fatherless and motherless children have sustained.

What is more pathetic than a little orphan child without a home and no friends who will take it? It is a work that all should be willing to contribute to, to help give a home and training to the little fellows who have been unfortunate.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

For Discussion—

1. How can we answer people's questions and meet their objections without an argument?
2. What can we do to introduce others to Jesus Christ through personal contact?

In Memoriam

SPEIGHT.

In in the death at Sunbury, N. C., February 12, of Deacon William H. Speight, our Damascus Church loses a man who in the days of his strength was a tower of help. Mr. Speight was almost eighty-nine years of age and had been a member of Damascus Church for almost seventy years. He was secretary of the church for eight years, its treasurer for twelve years and a deacon for twenty-five years. His integrity and his uniform courtesy endeared him to everybody. His passing came as a welcome relief to some years of invalidism. And his memory is a cherished legacy of the church.

C. REXFORD RAYMOND,
 Pastor.

WILKINS.

Thomas Jackson Wilkins died in Richmond, Va., January 2, 1940, at the age of nearly sixty-nine. His funeral was conducted at his church, Union (Va.), and burial in church cemetery. When young he married Miss Julia Francis Brown who passed away eighteen years ago. Bro. Wilkins was possessed with a brilliant mind. His active years were spent as a bookkeeper and surveyor. He was well read and a good conversationalist. He is survived by his two children, Miss Isabelle Wilkins, a graduate nurse of New Jersey, and Richard Thomas Wilkins of West Virginia. Also one sister, Mrs. T. H. Elliott and one brother, Mr. Josiah Wilkins of Virgilina, Va.

 C. E. NEWMAN.

EVERETT.

In the death of Mrs. Louise Munford Everett on November 16, 1940, we, the members of Berea Christian Church, Driver, have lost one of our much loved and highly esteemed members.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we keenly feel our great loss, we give thanks to God for the great blessings of her life.

2. That we will always remember her quiet personality and willingness to do more than her share in the good things of life.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the family, assuring them of the great loss to our church and community.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our church record, one sent to the family, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. W. B. WARRINGTON,
 Mrs. R. T. BRADFORD,
 Committee.

FELTON.

We, the members of the Ladies' Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian Church, find it our sad duty to record the death, on February 13, 1941, of our beloved member, Mrs. Annie Ella Franklin Felton, wife of Deacon J. C. Felton.

A noble Christian woman, a devoted wife and mother is dead, yet she speaketh.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our dear Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to her husband and two daughters.

3. That we strive to be more loyal to the church which she loved and served.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our records, one sent to the family and one sent to "The Christian Sun."

Mrs. ANNIE S. CALHOUN,
 Mrs. IRA P. BRINKLEY,
 Mrs. GEORGE BRADSHAW,
 Committee.

FARRELL.

The oldest member of the Hank's Chapel Christian Church, Pittsboro, N. C., and the oldest Farrell in that part of the country, passed quietly away to his reward on February 22, 1941. Brother Isaac Walter Farrell was nearly eighty-seven years of age and had always been quite active. Five miles was just a nice little walk for him. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Hank's Chapel Church and was always a regular attendant at the services. His going has left a sadness in the hearts of his many relatives and friends. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mann of the Baptist Church.

Brother Farrell had been married twice. Mrs. R. H. Abernathy and Mr. Frank Farrell of Bynum, N. C.; Mrs. J. A. Pendergrast and Mr. Herbert Farrell, superintendent of the Sunday school at Hank's Chapel for nearly twenty-five years, of the Hank's Chapel community, survive him and were children of his first wife. Mr. David Farrell, a son of the second marriage, also survives Brother Farrell and lives at Hank's Chapel.

people if they do not come together on her campus for training and preparation for the opportunities and responsibilities of the church, the state, and society? The college is happy to serve but depends upon pastors and patrons that those whom we should train may be numbered in her student body for 1941-42. Catalogues, bulletins, suggestions, and various kinds of materials may be had for the asking.

THE COLLEGE DEBT.

A few weeks ago an interested layman said to me, "I think it is time to quit talking about the college debt. You have said enough about it. I think you will do harm instead of good by continuing to talk about the debt. Forget it."

Shortly thereafter a minister in conversation took practically the same position, saying that he felt it was time to let the idea of the debt rest, to work on something else.

These are fine suggestions, excellent counsel. I wish it were possible to follow their advice. The minute I think that perhaps I will forget the debts, our creditors come along with a very forceful reminder. If it were not for our creditors, it might be possible to forget our debts, but the only way I know of to forget our debts is to pay them.

A number of friends who are interested in the college are greatly interested in the last plan proposed; that is, to get one thousand people to give $100.00 on the condition that the entire debt be paid, and that no individual be asked for his contribution until there was enough in sight to pay the debt. I am being urged now by different ones to launch this campaign in dead earnest. These friends think it can be done. I am now working on the idea and will make definite announcements regarding this effort to clear the college of its debts and propose certain plans by which the one thousand individuals may be selected, interviewed, and interested.

I wish that the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN would take this idea under consideration, and if you have a suggestion, please forward the same on to me at once. At any rate, begin to look around and see if it will not be possible for you to make a contribution of $100.00 to Elon College to clear it of its debts. What a glorious experience it would be. It is possible, can, and will be done if you will do your part.

The Christian Sun Campaign

Our Objectives

1. A campaign for subscribers in every church.
2. A total circulation of 3,000.
3. A self-supporting paper.
4. A self-respecting church.
5. A self-sacrificing people.
6. A well-informed constituency.
7. A deficit-free Convention.

How Can This Be Accomplished?

1. Complete the campaign in your church before Easter.
2. Secure the complete quota for your church.
3. Adopt the plan of placing THE CHRISTIAN SUN in every church home at half price.
4. Send your subscriptions to Rev. F. C. Lester, Elon College, North Carolina.
5. Keep a record of the mailing list in your church.
6. Send THE CHRISTIAN SUN to a relative or friend.
7. Report your plans and progress at once.
8. Read and study your church paper, send in all important news from your church promptly, keep all copies of the paper for future reference, pay your subscription in advance, pray for the editors and contributors, be charitable and constructive in your criticism, support all departments and institutions of the church, develop interest in the total program of your denomination.

[The following poem was written by Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor of our Suffolk Church. The poem appeared on the front of the church program in the Suffolk Church, March 23, and will be used in the Easter offering work of the church.—M. C. P.]

He touched the lives of others
 With joy and happiness;
 He thought of the work of others
 And not his own success.

He gave a buoyant spirit,
 He offered a friendly hand;
 He championed the cause of the needy—
 The needy of every land.

He gladly gave his talents
 Of speech, and thought, and pen;
 And when others would have rested,
 He gave, and gave, again.

His words still live amongst us,
 Still radiant the road he trod;
 His life still is a blessing—
 A benediction from God!

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar of Newport News is our guest editor for this week.

Remember the Rally at O'Kelly's Chapel next Sunday, March 30. Come and bring your lunch!

Dr. James H. Lightbourne reports that THE CHRISTIAN SUN campaign has been quite successful in the Burlington Church.

The many friends of Rev. J. S. Carden, Durham, N. C., will regret to learn that this veteran preacher of our area has been ill this winter, and has been confined to his home for some time.

Dan River District Rally will meet with Liberty Christian Church March 30 at 2:00 P. M. Will all churches in the District plan to send a large delegation as we plan to have some god speakers and special music.

Pre-Easter evangelistic services will be held at the Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk. Dr. Frank H. Lewis, pastor of the Shelton Church, Portsmouth, will be the guest speaker for the first week, beginning March 20.

Miss Lucy Eldredge accompanied Rev. and Mrs. Lester from Norfolk to the Virginia Valley Wednesday of this week. We were glad to have her visit THE CHRISTIAN SUN office en-route. Miss Eldredge was at one time stationed in Richmond and was editor of the young people's page.

The records of Liberty (Vance) Christian Church, in the Eastern Virginia Conference, were lost when the home of the secretary, Miss Margaret Alston, was destroyed by fire recently. She is anxious to get a new roll of the members of Liberty, and will appreciate any information concerning any whose names should be on the list. Her address is Route 1, Henderson, N. C.

Many of our churches have secured material for Easter programs from the Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C. Last minute requests will be answered promptly. Several churches have not returned the material borrowed for Christmas programs. This will be needed for use by other groups next year. Please check about material used by your church. Thank you!

The first mid-year session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference was a success. This was due partly to the large number of lay members who were present and who reported on the work of their churches, partly to the inspiring addresses of Dr. H. Shelton Smith and Miss Lucy Eldredge, partly to the helpful discussion groups, and partly to the hospitality of the members of Oak Level Christian Church.

ONE FRIEND OF ELON CONTINUES TO STAND BY.

In the morning mail on Tuesday of the past week there came an interesting and delightful letter from our friend, Mr. Patrick Boyd, with an additional contribution for the college of $12.15, explaining that because of his interest and out of his desire to see the debts of the college paid, he was sending this additional contribution. Mr. Boyd has given substantial sums to the college at different times during the past year, and I am taking this opportunity to express publicly our great appreciation of his continued generous support of the college and to express the hope that others may join with him that we may soon see the job that we have worked at so many years completed.

Many thanks to Mr. Boyd and others who have contributed.

L. E. SMITH.

MR. WALTER C. RAWLS.

Years ago when the writer first went to Norfolk, Va., as pastor of what was then the Third Christian Church, he met Mr. Walter C. Rawls, then on the official staff of a Norfolk Bank. In conversation, cooperation, and contributions Mr. Rawls greatly encouraged me in plans for the growth and development of the Third Christian Church. Since then through the years he has been a contributor to every enterprise of the church for which I have been personally responsible.

After coming to Elon as president, Walter expressed a desire to be of help and assured me that as soon as he was financially able, he would make substantial contributions. Shortly after I came to Elon, he visited us here. He was then manufacturing television sets. He brought a set along with him to demonstrate to the faculty and students. That set is still here and is used by the Physics Department.

A little more than a year ago Mr. Rawls further expressed his interest in Elon College by a generous pledge of $1,500 of which $1,300 has been paid. He is greatly interested in Elon College, the institution of the church of his childhood, and purposes to be of greater assistance. I take this occasion to express to members of the church and friends of the institution who may chance to read our church paper our great appreciation for this generous support from a great friend.

I am also grateful for every gift, however large or small, and express the hope that all who are interested may rally to the support of the institution that she may no only live but that she may go forward in the purposes for which she was founded.

A LETTER FROM OLD ZION.

Dear Bro. House:

Being proud of my membership in Old Zion Christian Church, and of the success we are accomplishing at this time, I feel it my duty as well as pleasure to let you and the outside world (through the medium of THE CHRISTIAN SUN) know of our rapid strides to progress.

May I commence by thanking our Lord and Master for His kindness in directing the footsteps of our dearly beloved pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese, who has been, and is, a wonderful help to us.

Permit me to mention some few of the deeds that he has been instrumental in bringing about during the four months of pastorage with us:

1. The first Wednesday night's prayer meeting he conducted for us there were ten present. At our prayer meeting held last night seventy-eight were present.

2. Our services on Sunday, both morning and evening, are meeting with same results; both numerically and financially.

3. To date we have had many conversions and several additions to the church; and as we start our revival on April 2 to continue till Easter Sunday, or longer as the Lord may lead, Bro. Neese will be the evangelist. We are earnestly praying and believing great good will be accomplished, and many souls added to His kingdom.

4. Last, but by no means least, and I am sure you will be pleased to hear. He is a booster for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. If he has not sent you some additional subscriptions already you sure will get some in the near future.

MEMBER OF OLD ZION.

Southern Convention Shop Talk

This article is for those who are interested in the work of the Southern Convention. It is a sort of family conversation.

The Convention office is having financial difficulties. You had heard that? A good many people have heard it. And some have given money to change the situation. But that gets ahead of the story.

The Convention set up an office three years ago to do some constructive work. The office went so well the first two years that the Convention voted to continue for two years longer, and set up a definite schedule of expenditures and sources of income. The expenditures have been about as scheduled. The income has not been quite adequate.

The Convention Fund should have amounted to $5,000.00 last year, but only $3,439.00 was received. Of this amount $500.00 goes to the General Council as our share in the denominational work. Another $200.00 goes to help pay for the printing of this paper. There are some other expenses of the Convention that cannot be so accurately foretold. Last year we had to borrow on the income before it was received. That left only a small amount to use for the Convention office this year.

The second source of income for the Convention office is the Board of Christian Education, which is supposed to received $3,000.00 annually. Last year the income was near $2,000. The prospects are reasonably good for a little more this year.

The third source of income for the Convention office is $1,000.00 to be raised by the Promotional Secretary. This year is the first time that this item appears in the Convention budget. Prospects are that most of this, perhaps more than this amount will be raised.

If we can manage to get through this calendar year without drawing on the money that will normally come to the Convention through the Conferences next fall, it seems to be fair to assume that the office will have no financial difficulty next year. Our problem is to get through this year without debt.

To do this we will need to raise about $2,000.00. The executive board of the Convention has authorized the Promotional Secretary to see what can be done. The Board voted that the office should be continued, and asked individuals and churches to cooperate so the work may go on.

The Promotional Secretary and his wife, who is office secretary, propose to give $450.00 of the needed amount. The pastors in the Convention are being asked to give at least ten dollars each during the year. To date sixteen have responded with cash and pledges amounting to $160.00. From this source it is hoped the office will receive $500.00, or more.

The only other source of income is the interested people of our churches. There will be something received for service rendered in churches where there is no pastor. Some churches that have not met the apportionment for the Convention Fund will doubtless do so. I believe they will. An increased amount from Children's Day offerings and Sunday School Conventions for the Board of Christian Education will help. At least a few Sunday schools and churches will do like Bethel (Elkton, Va.), send a special offering. And then it is hoped and believed that there are some laymen who will give something to keep the work going. Two have done so without solicitation. One of them is giving five dollars each month for the remainder of the year.

What is to be done, if the money is received? That is most important. That is the reason those who are contributing do so. Only the work accomplished and the work to be done can justify the expenditure of the energy and money.

Our ten pastorless churches need service, and a pastor. Several other churches need reviving. Leaders need training. Young people seek guidance. The summer program is a sample: A Junior High camp for young people; a training school for young people and church leaders, including pastors, at Elon; Student Summer Service, which this year should mean a half dozen or more of our own young people serving the churches where they are needed most, conducting Vacation Bible Schools in at least fifty churches; the promotion and assistance in making useful five Sunday School Conventions and as many conference young people's organizations; the conducting of several stewardship institutes and abiding numerous churches in preparing for a better program of finance; the stimulation of the churches and pastors in rural areas particularly for a constructive evangelism that will increase the total membership of the church while reaching many who are not now active; and making preparation for a very busy schedule during the fall when the city churches take on new life for the winter season.

Because so much work needs so badly to be done the Promotional Secretary has not resigned when the money gave out. There are many easier jobs than this, but only a few are so pressing. If our Convention is to render the service that it should, if our churches are to continue and to grow, if our institutions are to continue to receive aid from our churches and to have the needed increase, if our young people are to be trained for service in our churches, then it will be necessary for someone to continue to work in and for the Convention. The work is just getting started. Twice as many things need to be done as we can possibly do. We are doing our best because we believe in the work and the churches.

Would you like to share in the work? We need you, and will welcome you heartily into the circle of friends who are taking upon themselves the carrying on of the work of the Convention for this year. All contributions should be sent to the Convention office at at Elon College.

Thank you very much for your friendship, and your help.

F. C. LESTER,
Promotional Sec'y,
Southern Convention.

A LETTER TO THE PROMOTIONAL SECRETARY.

Elkton, Virginia,
March 10, 1941.

Dear Sir:

Our special attention has been turned to the editorial on the cover of the March 6 issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The question has aroused our interest as we would deeply regret to hear of the discontinuance of the office of the Promotional Secretary.

We are enclosing a check for five ($5.00) dollars to be used as a gift from our Sunday school for the purpose of helping finance the office of Promotional Secretary.

We have especially felt the influence and interest of Mr. Lester here in our church. It was through his special effort that we have been able to secure our present pastor, Rev. A. Greig Ritchie. We are sure that the entire Valley of Virginia Conference would feel the loss of our Promotional Secretary. His interest and efforts have been felt throughout the churches of our Conference. We, too, feel that there we may go for materials for various organizations of our church.

Sincerely yours,
BETHEL SUNDAY SCHOOL,
Goldie Dofflemyer, Supt.

THINGS THAT MATTER IN A MINISTER.

To preach a great sermon must be a thrilling experience for a minister who has the gift, the erudition, the application of self and will to build great sermons. But sermons measured by such a yard stick must wait the rarity of men who can build on that scale. It is the sermon made great by a great passion that we must count on to change the world—and they need not be so few and far between as the first type. Passionate Preaching; preaching done by the average minister whose soul is fired with a zeal for godliness and who has found an intimate, working acquaintance with the Eternal. Such preaching is within the grasp of every preacher who is willing to pay the price for the soul-fire out of which such sermons are refined. Searching for an understanding of the Will of God will burn out fanaticism, selfishness, pride and pomp, without which all zealous proclamation of the Word of God is great preaching. Such preaching is within the reach of every one of us.

To be a great pastor makes no such demands upon the minister as the preaching of great sermons. One needs only to bear in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus, coupled with the conviction that he is the shepherd of the flock over which God has called him as minister. Such a vision of his task, with love in his heart for his people and a willingness to "Work the works of righteousness" in the homes and hearts of his flock, will send him to them as often as conditions may permit. When to leave is often as important as to be convinced that there is a Divine mission in his going. The preacher who knows these things and does them is a great pastor.

To be a great churchman carries one beyond the preaching of great sermons or being a great pastor. One may be a great sermonizer and a great pastor and be a stinch in the nostrils of the church by his utter lack of vision that he is a part of a fellowship which has a world-wide outreach. As he has definite responsibilities which relate themselves to his pulpit and people he has responsibilities which he dare not, as a good churchman, neglect the preparation of a sermon or the visitation of the sick or the burial of his dead.

What of his loyalties to the association or the conference in which he holds his membership, and by which he is given the High and Holy privilege of preaching in the parish which he proudly calls his very own? These are things which matter in a minister. Disloyalty to his conference may be marked by his absence from its annual sessions. Reasonable attendance at such meetings as the Pilgrim Fellowship and the Ministers' Association is also an index to his ultimate integrity. His disloyalties to the enterprises of his denomination may (and doubtless will) express themselves in his failure to keep his people informed as to the needs of its institutions and their responsibilities for their successful ongoing.

Or his churchmanship may break down in the face of his neglect to answer or to heed letters written him by his Brethren; letters which present plans for the program and progress of the fellowship, letters pertaining to his responsibilities on certain committees to which he has been appointed, letters requesting information about his local program; letters seeking compilation of valuable information for the conference or denomination. Failure to do these things spoils the otherwise high tone of his sermons and produces a deep sense of nausea at his annual report of two-thousand pastoral calls! The minister who is not a churchman is a failure in his parish and a hindrance to the cause which his ordination to the ministry sets him apart to serve.

Finally, what does he do when a member moves from his parish into another? If he is selfish, you will see it here. In a loyal minister—a real churchman—there is a sense of responsibility for those who move away as well as for those who stay at home. The minister in the community, into which such move, is immediately notified and the pastor from whose church they go uses his good graces to save them to the church fellowship. Brethren, these are things that matter in a minister.

IN REMEMBRANCE.

The thought of going the second mile in our gifts to missions as a Memorial to Dr. J. O. Atkinson is a thought which should stir the heart of every person who is acquainted with the fact that Dr. Atkinson was the incarnation and the personification of the spirit of missions in the Southern Convention for thirty years. To have the thought impels action.

The question arises as to what will constitute a memorial gift. As we see it, it is to be a movement on the second mile—a distance to be traveled beyond the full payment of Conference apportionments. It is a noble thing that a church pays in full its apportionments, but it should be remembered that it is not doing the unexpected, by virtue of the fact that the apportionments are set up on the ability of the church to pay such an amount toward the total program of church interests. The church is expected to pay in full. Not to do so is a default of responsibility which every pastor and every church should exert themselves to avoid.

We can scarcely memorialize a great man by doing our budgeted duty. This call is for gifts beyond our apportionments. The call to raise a memorial offering offers a pastor a splendid opportunity to call upon his membership to meet their apportionment to missions in full in order that they may have the joy of the second mile in the raising of a memorial offering to a man whose whole life, great intellect, deep passion and untiring efforts were directed toward creating in us a consciousness of our missionary opportunities and responsibilities which would be as good seed in our own hearts and would bring forth an abundant harvest "Unto the uttermost parts of the earth." The Newport News Church challenges every church in the Southern Convention as a Memorial to Dr. Atkinson.

OUR PREACHER FOR THIS WEEK IS
REV. WILLIAM ROBERT CATTON, MANISTEE MICHIGAN.

WE ARE LIVING IN A WORLD OF LAW.

"By their fruits shall ye know them."—Matthew 7:16.

The text is Jesus' way of saying we are living in a world of law. I imagine he had never studied science. He had probably never heard the word "psychology." But however he came to know it, he seems just as sure as any modern scientist can be that the life of man has to be lived in a world of law. And success or achievement, in a world of law, does not come by accident.

We are all agreed as to the truth of these assumptions when they are stated in the abstract. We even realize them in the particular case Jesus uses in the text. We never expect to sow wheat and reap cotton. We don't even expect (most of us don't) to sow poor wheat and reap a good crop. It never occurs to us to try to gather figs from thistles.

But in the more complicated and obscure realms of the mental and moral and spiritual life we seem to forget that this is still a world of law.

Let us see how it works out.

Here is a boy in your town. His father is a laboring man, with an uncertain and frequently inadequate income. There are several brothers and sisters. They live in a poor house, "the other side of the railroad tracks." Both mother and father are so busy trying to earn enough to get along that there is little time to devote to his family of children. Father and mother themselves have come from similar homes. They are none too well educated, and so in what little time they have they are but poorly qualified for the delicate business of child nurture. Their home is drab, uninteresting, sometimes cruel. Society, by which we mean ourselves, hasn't yet learned how to provide for all its members a chance at proper homes, adequate incomes, proper upbringing for all children. So our boy rebels against life as he finds it. He rebels! That in itself may be good. He ought to rebel! We would expect him to rebel. His rebellion, if circumstances permit, if he has a wise friend or two, if he gets a "lucky break," may take the form of a proper urge to educate, to "better himself," to lift himself above the economic and social level into which he was born. This was somewhat the experience of Abraham Lincoln. But his rebellion may take the form of a blind striking out against the social, legal and economic fetters that bind him. He runs afoul of the law. He is arrested. He is placed in jail to await trial. Here, while legally and theoretically "innocent," he is given a thorough dose of misery and a thorough schooling in crime. Presently he is a criminal. Society is indignant. He is punished. He has to be punished; but why did it happen?

I think it was Gene Debbs who said, "No social system is so stupid as the one that sows the seeds of vice and crime and later becomes purple with indignation when the crop is ripe for the picking." "As ye sow, so shall ye also reap."

Take another case. All during the last two decades we had a horror of war. Now another one is here. Our country may find itself in it. There are a good many bewildered people. There are a good many conscientious objectors. There are a good many people who condemn our politicians, or condemn our diplomats, or condemn somebody, at any rate, for "leading us into war." And yet we ought to know that there are certain conditions of peaceful international life, and that if those conditions are not met we cannot hope, with any logical consistency, for peace. But how readily could you get the average American, in the 1920's and 30's, to interest himself in these conditions? He would murmur something vaguely about radicals, about impractical idealists, about being ready to defend ourselves, about leaving European nations to their own troubles, and straightway think about something else. And in the meantime world peace was based upon the very shaky foundation of the Treaty of Versailles, of the balance of power, of the scrambling of greedy men for markets and raw materials, or of race hatred, the hope of revenge and the like. But could you get anyone interested in these "seeds" of war? We all preferred rather to ignore the seeds, and save our surprised indignation for the inevitable harvest.

Now people are asking, "How can a just God permit this terrible war?" How many ask, "What business would a just God have in saving a world from the inevitable results of its own folly: a world not even a little repentant of its folly until called upon to reap the harvest?"

Still another case, all too frequently duplicated. Here is a young man just starting in his professional life, a lawyer, a doctor, yes, a minister, let us say. He has fine dreams of his career. He is to be a brilliant success, and to know large achievements. But he is just a little careless in his every day's work. He is just a little indolent. He doesn't cheat; he doesn't do anything wrong. He is just content to do a little less than his best, day by day. So he drifts along, to be startled some day in middle life by the realization that he isn't "getting on" as he should. He is surprised; he can't understand. He must be the victim of hard luck. He is not! He needs to remember, "As ye sow, so shall ye also reap."

It's true in every realm of life. True in family life; true in marriage. We shall receive in proportion to our own contribution. We find it true in education. We shall grow in proportion as we cultivate the soil.

But I suspect Jesus didn't say all this merely in denunciation. He never seems to have been quite as much interested in denouncing the sinner, or even the hypocrite, as he was in "seeking and saving that which was lost." "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," may be a threat. But it also is a glorious promise. If it's true that we sow poverty, ignorance, degradation, only to reap poverty, ignorance and degradation, it's also true, and most magnificently true, that if we sow good seed we shall reap a good harvest.

If we can only learn to sow understanding, justice and fair dealing among nations, we can count with the utmost confidence upon reaping peace. That's the real point in all movements for disarmament, in all Kellogg Peace Pacts, in all world courts and leagues of nations. They must be efforts to sow justice and fair dealing and mutual trust. If they are not, they will fail. But if this seed can be sown, the harvest is certain.

If we can somehow find social engineers who will teach us how to sow steady employment, fair wages, good housing, we can count with assurance on reaping far less of criminality. If we can add, say, right education, in school and home, if we can add a wholesome training in the response of the whole of life to the universe that we call religion, we can count with positive assurance on reaping no crime at all. Yes, by the grace of

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mrs. Mamie Lee Tourtellott, daughter of the late Elisha Everett Lee and Mrs. Elizabeth Virginia Gaskins Lee, was born at Bennett's Creek, Nansemond County, Va., June 2, 1868, and died in the home of her childhood, after a brief illness, on March 19, 1941, at the age of seventy-two years, nine months and seventeen days. She was married to Mr. James L. Tourtellott, a prominent business of Providence, R. I., February, 1897. She made her home in Providence until the death of her husband and returned to the home of her childhood in June, 1927. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Virginia Nurney, wife of Mayor Jack W. Nurney of Suffolk, Va., two grandchildren, Virginia Nurney and Jack W. Nurney, Jr.; one sister, Mrs. T. A. Jones, with whom she lived. She was a member of Berea (Nansemond) Christian Church from her childhood. During the thirty years of her absence from the community in which she was born and reared, she never lost her love for her local church. When she returned in 1927, at once she resumed her active work in her church. The writer, her pastor, was sick in bed at the time of her funeral, and Dr. John G. Truitt officiated.

Mrs. Tourtellott was a woman of rare charm and strong personality. Until a few weeks ago she was active and appeared to be in excellent health. She was enthusiastic and energetic in her work. She loved the beautiful in nature and she was an authority on the care and culture of flowers. She spent many happy hours in her garden working with choice shrubs, plants and flowers. She did much to prompt the development of beautiful flower gardens.

She was kind and charitable to the poor and needy. In her last years she was deeply interested in the young people of her Sunday school and church. She taught a class of young people in the Spnday school. Young people enjoyed her fellowship and responded to her enthusiastic leadership.

Her life represented humility and dignity; graciousness and reserve; cheerfulness and serious thinking; hospitality and work; patience and perseverance. Endowed with artistic taste she devoted her talents to the various duties of husekeeping with rare skill and efficiency. She enjoyed sharing her hospitality with others,

It was a great pleasure for her to spend her last years with her devoted sister on the beautiful estate where they were born. She loved her home, her state and her church. Her renewal subscription was reported in last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Truly a great woman has passed from our visible fellowship. She made a fine contribution to her loyal church by her presence, her work, her progressive vision and her loyal consecration. Berea is a bigger and better church because she loved it and shared in its program of service. She left a good name and a precious memory for her family and friends.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE DEFENSE.

The contributions of the Christian College to present day civilization could hardly be overstated. The founding fathers of the nation were more interested if possible in building a Christian civilization than they were in founding a new government. As they laid the foundation for a new government, they at the same time were building educational institutions with a Christian emphasis.

All through the years of this republic's existence, marked deference has been paid Christian institutions by our democratic form of government. At present, however, it would seem that there is considerable opposition to such concessions by state and national governments. The friends of so-called public education paralleling the Christian College are being multiplied daily. They would not like to be classed as opposing Christian education, but they are most aggressive in behalf of public or state supported education. The institutions of Christian higher education have necessarily depended upon public generosity for adequate support. They have preferred to be so dependent. Anything that is Christian thrives more rapidly and more permanently in a voluntary atmosphere. Christianity will not be regimented. However, either purposely or inadvertently the battle lines are being drawn. The rising tides of taxation draw from the purses of individuals practically all surplus funds from which heretofore contributions to Christian colleges have been made. This fact is embarrassing both to the Christian philanthropist and the Christian college. He would like to support his institution, but instead he is compelled to contribute to the rising cost of government.

With constantly mounting sums appropriated by states for the support of state institutions, college expenses in these institutions are constantly decreasing, again putting the Christian college at a decided disadvantage.

For more than one hundred and fifty years the State of North Carolina has permitted the church institutions of North Carolina to own producing property free of taxation. For the past two years a determined effort has been made to put all such properties on the tax lists, again putting the Christian institutions at a disadvantage. In this connection it might be well to remind ourselves that the church institutions of North Carolina are educating one-fifth more North Carolina students than are the state-supported institutions of higher learning in North Carolina, and that without one penny's cost to the taxpayer. It is to be hoped that North Carolina will not change its practice that is of more than one hundred fifty years standing. Whatever may be our hopes or ambitions, the tides seem to be rising against the church institutions.

The church institutions' first line of defense is the church itself. The constituency of the denomination building and controlling the college of its affiliation must come to its support or the college will suffer seriously. The church needs her institutions of higher learning today more if possible than when they were founded. The only way for the church to hold her institutions of higher learning is to sympathetically align herself with her institutions and give constant and sufficient material support.

Every worthy alumnus of an institution is interested in the future of that institution. He wants to see his college advance and keep its proper place in the field of higher education. The alumni of an institution constitute its second line of defense.

We are beginning to realize that as we support other institutions through taxation, our own institutions must be supported by voluntary contributions. The cause of Christian education has friends outside of the church and alumni who are interested and are glad to be counted among the supporters of the church institutions and are willing to be placed in the line of defense for the same. I cannot urge too strongly the natural constituency of Elon College to seriously consider the needs of the institution. I hope

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

I hope that you will enjoy the story which Mrs. June Joy House wrote for our page this week. It is a very timely story and tells you something about the life of boys and girls in other lands than our own. We are very grateful for this fine contribution, Mrs. House, and we hope that you will send us more stories.

March is just about to end into April now. I hope that you will enjoy the showers and flowers which the new month will bring. There is a lot to look forward to in this new month. First will come Palm Sunday and then Easter Sunday, with special services at your churches. Perhaps some of you will join the church at Easter. I hope that all of you will do your busy season.

bit to help serve your church at this

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

BETTINA.

Mother and father were talking. Bettina often listened to them. Today they were talking about how beautiful the springtime was at home. Bettina was an American girl, and so were mother and father, but they had been born in far off Switzerland. Bettina longed to go and see the beautiful mountains, her uncles and cousins, but most of all she wanted to know mother's family, Grandfather and Grandmother Schmoll. Sometimes she asked to go, but always Daddy was too busy, or her younger brother and sister were too small to take the long trip.

One happy day, Daddy came home and said they were all going. Bettina felt like a top that was merrily dancing. She was too excited to think. She laughed and cried all at once. The whole family took the trip, and spent the summer in the small Swiss village near Zurich.

Bettina had such a happy time. She knew many German and French words now, but she was glad that Grozenmutter and Grozenvater could speak English. She played with boys and girls, some of whom spoke German and some French. She learned to say "guten tag" for good day, and in French she could say "bon nuit" for good night. Bettina loved the village church and its kind pastor. She liked to look at the great mountains and see the snow that lay on the very top peaks.

Summer was nearly ended and Father said they must go home to America. Bettina could not think of it. She felt weak like the time she stuck a splinter deep in her foot. She cried and cried. Mother said a little girl who was nine years old, shouldn't cry like that. But she didn't ever want to leave. Grandmother loved Bettina and hated to have her go, too; so she persuaded Mother and Father to let her stay. Bettina hated to see her family leave, but she was excited thinking about going to the village school. Um-m-m, she thought, I will learn many new words.

For two happy years Bettina lived in the tiny town. In the winter she went up into the mountains to ski, and in the summer she went up to the chalet, or little house in the mountains, for hikes and picnics. Now she could understand the other children when they spoke German or French very rapidly. Sometimes she went with Grandfather on the train to Zurich.

But last year, Bettina had to come back to America. Germany was at war. Bettina did not understand all about that. Grandfather said that wars were wrong, and some day the world would be at peace, and fight no more. They insisted that she must go home. Although Switzerland was peaceful, many of its neighbors were enemies, and there would not be enough food, and many things. Bettina was plump and they wanted her to stay that way. Well, she thought, I might not ever have seen them. Grandfather rode with her on the train across the mountains, and then she flew in an airplane to Portugal, and from there caught a boat to cross the Atlantic.

When she got to New York there were Mother and Father to meet her. Bettina was glad to be home. "Mother," she said, "I love them, but I'm glad to be home with you."

Bettina goes to school in America. Many times she says, "When I was in Zurich," or "When I was at Grozenmutter Schmoll's," but more often she says, "It is good to be home . . . in America."

THE PULPIT DESK.

In some of your churches the pulpit desk is to one side, with a reading desk on the other side. In some of your churches the pulpit desk is right in the center. By "pulpit desk" I mean the stand from which the minister delivers the sermon. This is a very important piece of furniture in the church, and you should always remember what it stands for.

The pulpit desk is a symbol or sign of the preached word of God. When you look at the desk in your church you should think of all the preachers who have delivered God's word to the people. All the prophets of the Old Testament and the disciples of the New Testament would come to your mind. And, of course, you should think of all the preachers you know by name, and all those who have preached in your own church.

The main way in which God makes

A DIVINE FELLOWSHIP.

"Into all the world . . . go! I am with you." These words lingered long in the memory of those who saw the Master after his resurrection on that first Easter morning. The journey was just beginning, and it would go into all the world. It was to be a comradeship, a fellowship that included the followers and the Followed. The world might think they were alone, but they would know better. It was a divine fellowship that began on the mountains of far away Palestine long centuries ago.

More than four hundred Americans scattered around the world today, members of our Congregational Christian Churches, bear witness to the continuing reality of this fellowship. On the continent of Africa, almost within sound of roaring guns of war, our teachers, farmers, social workers, doctors, nurses, and evangelists sing and pray at their work and witness to the presence of the resurrected Christ. In Greece, Turkey and Syria where war and a torturing uncertainty do their work our missionaries teach of the Prince of Peace who gave us Easter and all its blessings. In Czechoslovakia and Spain and Bulgaria there are remnants of Protestant churches started by our missionaries and our friends feel a fellowship that is divine.

In lovely Ceylon our churches are now able to take over responsibility for carrying on the work, but among the natives are American friends who make real the bond that binds hearts of varying races to the heart that was broken for all mankind. Among the moving multitudes and classes of India our brothers in Christ tell of the love of Him who died on Calvary and walked with his friends in the garden on Easter morning. In Japan sixteen of our noble band of missionaries remain to share with the native Christians whatever may come in the very uncertain months that lie ahead. A larger group continues to serve in China although our government has advised them to come home. Some of our China missionaries are living and working in the buildings used by the Boxers who killed missionaries in 1900. Our missionaries in the Philippine Islands are building friendships that will continue long after the Islands get their freedom in 1946.

In all these countries the missionaries tell of that comradeship formed between Jesus and his friends, and of that divine fellowship which comes to all who know the Crucified Savior.

The way for us to enjoy this divine fellowship is to join with those who go to the ends of the earth with the Christian message. Those of us who cannot go in person can go by writing to our missionaries telling them of our interest and prayers, by daily prayer to the Great Comrade who walks the rough roads of our modern time with those who suffer, and by giving of our money for the support of the missionary enterprise.

Our offering for missions at Easter will help us to enter into this divine fellowship. A sacrificial gift will make the fellowship with the living Christ real, rich and rewarding. To do less than our best will mean a broken fellowship for us. By giving we join with the missionaries and the accompanying Christ in the most divine fellowship known among men.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

In 1940, the Convention apportioned for each year of the next biennium as follows:

Elon College Fund	$12,500
Elon Orphanage Fund	12,500
Convention Home and Foreign Missions (one half each) ...	10,000
Convention Fund	5,000
Christian Education Fund	3,000
Superannuation Fund	2,500
Total	$45,500

These amounts were apportioned to the five Conferences.

As there are 30,378 members in the Convention the call for missions is thirty-three (33c) cents per member.

The Woman's Board, whose offerings are not included in the Convention call for missions, have set a goal for each year of the next biennium of $10,000. From September 1, 1939 to September 1, 1940, the Woman's Board came nearer reaching its goal than the entire membership did the Convention goal. It is time for the entire membership of the churches to become interested in missions, as the Woman's Board has. Let churches, individuals and Sunday schools take a greater interest in missions and the total Sunday school conference offerings for missions will greatly exceed $10,000 annually.

Including the Woman's Board the Convention should raise for missions $30,000 annually. Begin now to increase your offering for missions.

J. E. WEST.

THE J. O. ATKINSON HONOR FUND.

The appeal of mission offerings in honor of Dr. J. O. Atkinson is meeting with an encouraging response. The pastors are rapidly appointing a layman in each church to look after missions. Many churches that have never paid Conference apportionments in full will do so this fall.

The outlook for an increase by the Woman's Board and various societies is very good.

The receipts of the Mission Board show an increase of $354.61 to date.

The list of laymen appointed to date who will promote missions in the churches are, as follows:

Eastern Va. Conference:

- Newport News, Mr. C. D. West; Suffolk, Col. J. E. West; Mt. Carmel, Mr. O. is V. Joyner; Antioch, Mr. J. T. Godwin; Isle of Wight, Mr. S. Ray Turner; Windsor, Mr. S. T. MRS. ROBERT G. WILLIAMS.

[I am sure the following article, taken from the "Florida-Georgia Congregational Christian," will be of interest to all the women in North Carolina. As you know, Mrs. Williams is to be our guest speaker for our Rallies April 1, 2, 3 and 4. You want to be sure to attend your Rally and hear Mrs. Williams.—M. C. P.]

"Mrs. Robert G. Williams of Lake Worth was honored by election as chairman of the National Conference of Women's State Presidents at the recent Mid-Winter Meeting in Evans-ton, Ill. Mrs. Williams has been the efficient president of the Florida Federation of Congregational Christian Women for the past eleven years. Under her leadership the women's work of the Florida Conference has made great progress in organization and program of work.

"Mrs. Williams first came into the service of our churches in the South during the service of Dr. Bloom. She was appointed Extension Worker for Florida. She was well known and beloved as Mary Ann Jeffries. She rendered a special service in the development of the Young People's Summer Conference, known as "Camp Immokalee." After about one year of service she married Mr. Robert G. Williams of Lake Worth and resigned as extension worker. She rendered us the gracious service of picking Pattie Lee Coghill as her successor.

"The Florida Conference is gratified and feels itself honored in her election as chairman of the Congregational Christian Women's State Presidents of the United States."

ALAMANCE DISTRICT LEADERS MEET.

Mrs. J. D. Strader of Burlington, superintendent for the missionary societies in Alamance District, invited the president of each society in the district and the other district officers to meet at her home on March 7, 1941. The following were present: Mrs. S. F. Scott, Union; Misses Lillie and Alice Fowler, Mebane; Mrs. A. L. Hook, Elon; Mrs. Kenneth Register, Shallow Ford; Mrs. Frank Bain, Haw River; Mrs. W. A. Grissom, Graham-Providence; Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne and Miss Tora Rudd, Burlington; Mrs. Lacy Hooper, District Secretary and Mrs. F. C. Lester, Assistant Superintendent. Each society president was given a booklet made by Mrs. Strader, containing names of officers, dates of meetings, and aims for the year.

The work of missionary societies was discussed, and Mrs. Strader presented these aims: Have each woman in each society spend at least ten minutes daily in meditation; have each society represented at the rally in Burlington on April 1; have all the ministers of the churches in Alamance District present at the rally; have each group contribute to the Memorial Fund for Dr. Atkinson; give more to church work of our time, our talents, and our means.

Mrs. Strader has visited all but three of the eighteen churches in her district. Fourteen of them have missionary societies, and it is her aim to have one organized in each of the other churches during this year.

All of the women present felt that of exchanging ideas and getting acquainted with each other was a fine this district meeting for the purpose idea, and would recommend it to other districts.

HINES' CHAPEL.

The Hines' Chapel Missionary Society has been doing some exceptional work under the leadership of Mrs. R. W. Iseley, president. Her untiring efforts and dauntless courage has added enthusiasm and spirit to the hearts of the members and a marked progress thus far is noted.

At the beginning of the year the executive committee edited a bulletin which listed all the officers, special committees, program leaders, places of meeting, hostesses, etc., for the entire year. Several boxes of clothing were sent to the mountain work in November and the Thankoffering for the Asheboro Church almost tripled that of last year. The orphanage came in for a nice box of food, etc.

The annual Christmas party at the home of the president was a most enjoyable affair. The husbands and guests were invited and a pollyanna exchange of gifts, the revealing of the Sunshine Sisters and a general good time was enjoyed.

The World Day of Prayer was observed with the Greensboro Churches in a union service. The meeting was held at the W. Market Street Methodist Church, with Miss Esther Baird, returned missionary from India, as guest speaker. A wonderful fellowship was enjoyed and all felt that they realized more what the Master meant when He said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the the gospel."

An Easter pageant, "The Living Christ," by Valeria R. Lehman is to be a part of the Easter services sponsored by this society. Miss Vera Gerringer is the reporter for this group and ends with the following—

We ask the prayers of all who are interested in missions so we may attain our aims for the year:

- To do more for Christ.
- To do more for our church.
- To do more for our fellowman.
- To again attain the Standard of Excellence.

"Youth at Work in the Church"

A. LANSON GRANGER, JR., Editor

THE CHURCH IS RESPONSIBLE FOR ITS YOUTH.

Modern young people have come in for much criticism in recent years, especially by those who do not understand them or their problems, as being on the whole an ungrateful, rebellious and selfish lot. They are ungrateful for privileges and opportunities which their forebears never had. They are rebellious against traditional values and ideas. They are constantly revolting against what they have and forever voicing complaints for what they do not have. So runs the common opinion.

There is no doubt that this is the prevailing attitude of a large portion of the youth of this generation. But before the church and its leaders draws a prejudiced conclusion about their young people, they should take a look at some of the facts, which explain in part the mood of modern young people.

There are about twenty-one million young people in our nation between these ages of sixteen and twenty-four. Of this number four and one third million are out of school and unemployed. Another million are employed only part time or are engaged in temporary work. This means that about one third of our youth are idle most, or all, of the time. Certainly our churches have a challenging responsibility to this large group of restless youth, a responsibility which they cannot dodge. In many instances no help will be provided these young people at all unless the church provides it. This is especially true of many of our rural youth. In a study recently made by the department of sociology of the University of North Carolina, it was revealed that the "most frequent North Carolina youth" belongs to no organization except a church club."

In other words, the only source of guidance and help with which most rural young people come in contact is the church. The conclusion is evident, in many cases to hopelessly evident. Unless our churches provide the necessary direction to their young people, in the form of vocational guidance (since many of our public schools do not offer this), personal counsel, and concrete aid in securing satisfactory work, they will fumble their opportunity. But more than this, it is the responsibility of the church to give what no other institution presumes to offer, an adequate philosophy for living creatively and abundantly.

LORD, THRUST ME INTO LIFE. A YOUNG PERSON'S PRAYER.

By Percy R. Haywood.

Lord, wilt Thou thrust me boldly and vigorously out into life. Push me away from my easy comfort and out into the hot struggles of mankind. Send me into to arena where men strive to rid the world of war. Lead me out to the field of honor where others ahead of me have thrown down the gauntlet to poverty and ignorance and fear. Summon me—with a voice I dare not disregard—to the hard and unfinished tasks of my own life and heart. Bend my will, not to stern duty and my inescapable destiny. In the name of him who, seeing the Cross at the end of the road, nonetheless said, "We must needs go up to Jerusalem," thrust thou me into life.

Amen.

THE STEADFASTNESS OF JESUS. (PALM SUNDAY.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR APRIL 6, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Luke 9: 51-56; 19: 28-38

Daily Readings—

Monday—Prophecy of His Steadfastness—Isa. 50: 5-7.

Tuesday—Steadfastness in Ministry—Matt. 4: 23-25.

Wednesday—Steadfastness in Love—John 13: 1.

Thursday—Steadfastness in Purpose—Matt. 16: 21-23.

Friday—Steadfastness in Doctrine—John 7: 14-18.

Saturday—Steadfastness to the End—Heb. 12: 2.

This can be a most helpful meeting. It marks the beginning of Holy Week. A record was made in history that changed religious thought through generations past and for all generations to come. An increased faith and a sharing in all lines of something of the steadfastness of Jesus should result from the meeting.

The daily readings serve as important topics for assignment. They reveal the steadfastness of Christ.

Others may make comment on the following:

1. Jesus was steadfast in His conviction that He had an important mission in life. His words in the temple at the age of twelve. He pursued this course.

2. Jesus was steadfast in rendering service to others. He labored day by day in the most helpful way.

3. Jesus was steadfast in His appreciation of the worth of man. While He was despised and rejected, He placed in the hands of men the completion of the work He began.

Nay, never falter, no great deed is done
By falterers who ask for certainty,
No good is certain but the steadfast mind,
The undivided will to seek the good;
'Tis that compels the elements, and wrings
A human music from the indifferent air.
The great gift a hero leaves his race
Is to have been a hero.

—George Eliot.

For Discussion—

1. What is the difference in steadfastness in comparison to stubbornness?

2. How can we be so sure that we are right that we can afford to be steadfast in spite of what others may think or do to hinder us?

3. How may the steadfastness of wicked men toward evil goals be redirected toward goals which are good?

4. Do we appreciate what it cost Christ to redeem the world? Can we fully understand the cross of Christ? How does it give assurance that sin may be forgiven?

Suggested Hymns—

"I Would Be True."

"Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken."

"Our God, Our Help In Ages Past."

NEWS NOTES.

North Carolina young people who are planning to submit book reviews of the study books to the Woman's Board should send them immediately to Mrs. James H. Lightbourne, Burlington, N. C. The dead-line for these reviews is April 1. The names of those to whom scholarships are awarded will be announced in a few weeks.

At the meeting of the Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship at the Ramseur Christian Church on Saturday, March 15, Juanita Owens Jones was elected president to succeed Sybrant Pell, who has recently moved to Norfolk. The new presiding officer announces that a meeting of the executive committee of the Western Fellowship will be held soon.

CHRIST'S COMMISSION.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 30, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 24: 36-53.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 52: 7-12.

GOLDEN TEXT: Behold, I send forth the promise of my Father upon you.—Luke 24: 49.

“And as they spake these things,” they told about how women had gone to the tomb and had found it empty, how two men in shining garments had said, “He is not here, he is risen,” how Peter and John had gone together to the tomb and had also found it empty, how as they walked along from Jerusalem to Emmaus they had been joined by a friendly stranger who talked with them about the things which had happened, who at their invitation had come in to break bread with them, and who through the breaking of the bread was revealed unto them as a living Lord—as they talked about these things Jesus himself stood in the midst. There is a parable of life here. If men and women talk about high things, as they share their experiences Christ himself draws near and becomes real.

Peace Be Unto You.

“He himself stood in the midst of them and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.” It was the ordinary oriental salutation, but it was more than that—it expressed one of the basic principles of the ministry of Jesus. He had spoken before about the peace which the world could not give, and which the world could not take away. It was peace for the human heart. It was peace also in a larger way. If He could have his will, he would not only put in human hearts today the peace of God which passeth all understanding, but wars would cease and nations would be at peace one with another, and good will would prevail.

Doubters.

“Why are ye troubled? and wherefore do questionings arise in your heart?” We often speak of doubting Thomas when as a matter of fact all the disciples were doubters. They did not believe that Jesus had risen from the dead. One of the surest evidences of the fact of the resurrection is the change in the attitude of the disciples. They were not gullible, credulous, people who swallowed things whole. They came to believe in the resurrection against their own fears, their own questions, and their own doubts. It was because they received such indisputable evidence, that the fact was overwhelmingly borne in upon them that Jesus had risen from the dead and had actually appeared unto them not only once but many times and in many forms that they believed. The resurrection is not only once but many times and in many forms that they believed. The resurrection is not the product of men who got together to collaborate in a great fantasy, or a dream, or a manufactured lie. It is a fact based upon the testimony of trustworthy men and women who were convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that the thing which they preached was a historic, verifiable fact.

His Hands and His Feet.

“And when he had said this, he showed them his hands and his feet.” Jesus was always willing to deal with those who had honest questions, and honest doubts. In this case he showed the disciples his hands and his feet. It must have been a dramatic moment when they saw the nail-pierced nail-scarred hands and feet of their Lord. They became convinced that it was He. To be sure there is mystery, in fact, there are things, as Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says, which are “utterably inexplicable.” The fact remains that Jesus was able to identify himself to his disciples, and they knew that it was He.

Too Good to Be True.

“And while they still disbelieved for joy . . .” It was too good to be true. In spite of the fact that he had foretold his rising from the dead, somehow or other they were not prepared for it. They thought that the crucifixion had ended everything, that their dream had been broken, or that their universe had collapsed upon them. When he made himself known to them, they still could hardly believe it. They were overwhelmed with joy at the thought of it, but they scarcely dared believe it. They wanted it to be true, they even felt in a way that it was true, and yet they were afraid that it was not true.

Understanding the Scriptures.

“Then opened he their mind, that they might understand the scriptures.” There are many fine teachers of scriptures, many men to whom God has given the ability to open and interpret the word of God, but the best teacher is the spirit of Christ himself. To every sincere student of the scriptures, and to every sincere seeker after truth, God promises his Holy Spirit to guide them into all truth. As one sits down to read his Bible, he might well pray, “Open mine eyes that I might behold wondrous things out of thy law.” “That which I see not, teach thou me.” “Bring to my remembrance all things whatsoever thou hast told me.”

“Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer, and rise again from the dead the third day.” Jesus called the attention of the disciples to the fact that while he was with them he had told them that all things must needs be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and the prophets and the Psalms concerning him. It is rather significant that he told them these things would come to pass before they came to pass. It is significant also that the grounds for his predictions were to be found in his knowledge of the word of God. Prophecies made clear that the one who should come, God’s Anointed, the Christ, was to suffer. The Jews were familiar with the idea of “the suffering servant.” One of the central teachings of the word of God is that Christ suffered for our sins. The scriptures also plainly stated that he should rise again from the dead. The one scripture has found fulfilment as surely as did the other.

Repentance and Remission of Sins.

“And he said unto them . . . that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name.” Jesus himself began his ministry with the words, “Repent ye, for the kingdom of God is at hand.” When he sent out the seventy he told them to preach repentance. In what we call the great commission, he says that repentance is to be one of the central themes of their preaching. The word means “a change of mind,” or in a deeper sense, “a complete change of heart.” Their preaching was to emphasize the companion truth that when men did repent, when they turned from their wicked way unto God that he would grant them remission of sins. That was to come not through any merit of their own, not through any work of their own, but it should come in his name, that is, in his power to cleanse and renew.

“Unto all nations, beginning from Jerusalem.” The gospel was to be for all men, and for the whole of man. To be sure they were to begin at Jerusalem, but they were not to stop there. The message and the ministry of the

MONDAY.

A DOG'S PRAYER.

"The ox (dog) knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider."—Isa. 1:3.

Fellowship with, and lessons from, our domestic animals is possible. That fellowship is often marked with mutual dependence, affection and sacrifice. The ox, the horse and the dog are striking examples. Hanging in a frame on the wall of one of the bedrooms of Ramona's Marriage Place, San Diego (one of the sight-seeing places of the city), is a copy of a poem written by one Will Judy, which leaves every one who reads it a better person when they leave the place. It is as follows:

O Lord of humans, make my master faithful to his fellowman as I am to him. May he be opened faced and un-deceptive as I am. May he be true to the trust imposed in him as I am to his.

Give him a face cheerful like unto my wagging tail. Give him a spirit of gratitude like unto my licking tongue. Fill him with patience like unto mine that awaits his footsteps uncomplainingly for hours.

Fill him with my watchfulness, my courage and readiness to sacrifice comfort or life.

Keep him always young in heart and alive with the spirit of play as I. Make him as good a man as I am a dog.

TUESDAY.

THE TRUE FRIEND.

"Closer than a brother."—Matt. 11:16-19.

What a friend can mean when life seems against us, when we are lonely and sad, we all know. Yet one who believes in us despite our mistakes, and whose sympathy can always be counted on, is hard to find. It is of the first importance to know that: We have such a friend in Christ. He was the friendliest soul alive. None ever appealed to Him in vain. And strangely, with one exception—and that was the ruler's own opinion—they were all imperfect people who enjoyed the Master's love. In Jesus, we have God's fullest revelation to mankind, the one Savior from sin. But we have also a friend who, through prayer and fellowship, imparts sympathy, solace, and strength.

Prayer—Help us to turn to Thee when we are worried, lonely, and discouraged, that our hearts may rejoice in Thy companionship. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE MAKER NEAR.

"A man (Christ) shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a rock in a weary land."—Isaiah 32:2.

We humans grow impatient in the heat of worry and trial, disappointments and griefs. Should we? In Christ we have a refuge from all this. Even the shadow of His providences which is sometimes flung over our plans, denying us what we had hoped for and causing disappointments and pain, may in Christ become beneficent shadows from which the soul finds its Maker and peace.

Prayer—O Lord, lead us with simple trust each day in Thy goodness. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE FIRST CONSCIOUSNESS AFTER TRUST.

"The eye of the Lord is upon them that fear Him."—Psalm 32. (Read 33:13-22.)

After committing himself unto the Lord, the first consciousness of a Christian is the consciousness of the presence and encouragement of the Lord. At the races, a little boy dropped out and began to cry. When asked, "What's the matter?" he said, "Every one else had some one rooting for him and no one rooted for me? I just couldn't go on."

We all feel like that sometimes. If we only had some one to encourage us. If we know Christ's interests, we cannot lose heart.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to be as good as Paul to run with patience, looking unto Jesus, our hope and prize. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HE NEVER MAKES A MISTAKE.

"Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial."—I Peter 4:12. (Read the whole chapter.)

This chapter is most helpful to those who suffer trials. One interpreter translates the text: "I have chosen thee in the fires." Moffatt: "Be not surprised at ordeals. You are suffering what Christ suffered." Goodspeed says, "Be glad that you are in a measure sharing the sufferings of Christ."

Cellini, we are told, due to the lack of fuel, found it necessary to use his own furniture and the flooring of his home to complete the statue of Perseus, but that did it. Fiery trials cannot always be purposeless. That may be God's means of bringing forth something in us of exquisite beauty and worth.

Prayer—O Lord, thou art too wise to err, too good to be unkind. Help us to commit ourselves unto Thy care that Thy will may be done in us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

EVERY DAY TRYING.

"So run that ye may obtain."—I Cor. 9:24.

Due to physical condition or to physical circumstances, often one does not feel like praying, reading the Scriptures, or performing religious devotions. Under contrary circumstances he feels that perhaps the Lord understands and after all one must be in the spirit to draw from devotions spiritual value. Is that right?

The great spiritual truth of everyday religion is keeping on everlastingly at it. Paul, who knew, says that the athlete whose heart is set on the prize, recognizes the condition of success, and that is to exercise daily unto that end whether one feels like it or not, and put forth every effort to win. Ours is an incorruptible prize. Though we do not feel like it, the exercise has its contributing factor to spiritual condition. The Lord sees and blesses.

Prayer—O Lord, save us from apathy and slackness. We pray for strength to press on for the glorious goal of life as it is in Jesus Christ. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Today is a day set apart by the Lord that we should observe in a way to gather strength, experience and feelings for the daily exercise of religion. It took Angelo years to develop the latent beauty of the statue of David from a piece of shapeless marble, but by the swinging blows of his mallet and chisel every day he finally brought forth the object of admiration for all the ages. So the divine Sculptor of our souls. So we in our daily consecration. Let us find ourselves this day. Amen.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

With warm weather sunshine and a breeze blowing has given our little boys "kite fever." Some of the little boys had friends who sent them store bought kites, some have homemade kites. They come to the office and beg for twine. They enjoy flying them for hours. The one who can get his kite to fly the highest seems to be the champion kite flyer. To stand and watch the little fellows and realize how much joy they get out of it reminds the writer of the time when he was a little boy and went down to the creek to fish with a hook and line. The little minnows would play around the hook and steal the bait but would never bite. We didn't catch any fish but we got a lot of pleasure out of trying. We had no big fish stories to tell when we went home.

Our girls are looking forward to getting new Easter dresses, especially the larger girls, ages fourteen to eighteen. Our good women have always been so kind to us at Easter time to send dresses for the girls and they are so happy to get them.

The Johnston Hall needs three druggets for its reception room. A man gave us three when the building was furnished for the opening in 1927 and they have lasted nearly fourteen years. They are now worn out and will have to be replaced. A good drugget will cost $35.00. We do not have the money to spare to buy them. We wonder if three friends of the orphanage would not be willing to contribute one each—or three missionary societies or ladies' aid societies. It would be a highly appreciated gift.

It became absolutely necessary to put a new roof on the "baby home" building. It cost us nearly $400.00. This was an expense that we had hoped to put off another year but the old roof leaked so badly we had to do it before the spring rains came. It seems that if we get a few hundred dollars ahead something comes along to force us to spend it.

But these things come and we cannot help it. We have to meet them as they come. Our people have always been good to us and have always responded when called upon.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

himself known to people is through other people. He speaks his message to certain men and they feel called to tell others about it. The pulpit desk tells you all these things. When you go into the church you should be silent and let it speak to you. If you listen long enough you will hear it say, "I am the pulpit desk. I stand for all the men who have let God speak through them. Will you let God speak through you?"

AUBREY C. TODD.

How many of you helped to send gifts to China to feed the Chinese boys and girls this past year? Did you see the story in our last Missionary Herald about what our gifts are helping to do? I do not think that the editors will mind my passing it on to you in our page.

"THANKS TO AMERICA."

"Riding across country on his bicycle to visit a country church, Lewis L. Gilbert of Tungechow, North China, saw two small boys near a former flood refugee camp. They watched the queer white man closely. Mr. Gilbert felt sure he had seen them in the refugee camp. He smiled and said in Chinese, 'Hello, boys.' Their faces brightened. They rushed forward. 'You're Pastor Gilbert, aren't you?' they cried eagerly. They had not at first been sure, for all Americans look alike to them just as Chinese often look alike to Americans. They overwhelmed Mr. Gilbert with politeness and kindness. They invited him to rest and have tea. They insisted on pushing his bicycle until he assured them he could make better speed riding! And so, after further talk about their parents, he went on. Thanks to gifts from American friends, possibly boys and girls, these two boys who so joyfully greeted 'Pastor Gilbert,' are today alive and happy."

* * *

The Advance for March carries another story of China. This one is about Louis Whitaker and his friend Howard. They were born in China; sons of American missionaries to China. They were in college here in America but hearing of the need of their Chinese people they secured money from American friends and spent nine months in China; the battlefields of China. They helped families to move back home, clean up their homes, streets and cities. They cared for typhus patients. Both of them were stricken with typhus immediately after arriving in China. After nine months of loving labor, Louis died of typhoid pneumonia. A Chinese student said to Howard, as they were returning from the funeral, "Mr. Whitaker must have loved China and the Chinese people more than we do ourselves. What is it that makes you young Americans do these things for us?"

AN APPRECIATION.

Being a member of Rocky Ford Christian Church and as distributor of the clothing and other things sent to the poor people of this community, I wish to send our warmest thanks to our friends of the Southern Convention.

The thirty-four families that have received the nice clothes, appreciate them very much. Since many of our people have never owned clothes as nice as some of them, you may be sure they are very grateful for them.

Again let us say, "Thank you," to our many friends, and also to our pastor, Mr. Veazey, for delivering them to us.

Your friend in Christ,

MISS NETTIE EDWARDS.

In Memoriam

YARBORO.

Brother John H. Yarboro of Semora, N. C., passed away December 5, 1940, at the age of sixty-nine. He was the son of S. R. and Auguston Yarboro. For forty-eight years he was a member of Lebanon Church and the greater portion of this time he property. He was faithful in all duties, served as deacon and caretaker of the church above reproach in conduct and practical in judgment. On January 20, 1885, he married Miss Luetanar McAdam, who departed this life eight and one half years ago. Their only child, Mrs. Mabel Yarboro Wells, died since her mother. Their only grandson was taken by death two years since. One sister, Miss Mattie Yarboro, and three grandchildren survive. The granddaughters are Mrs. Virginia Mosley, Mrs. Eleanor Blick and Mrs. Annie Everell.

C. E. NEWMAN.

ALPHIN.

On September 28, 1940, God, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to remove from our midst one of our faithful and beloved members, Mrs. Mamie T. Alphin.

She was a loyal and devoted member of Oak Grove Christian Church, and Womau's Missionary Society.

We, the members of the Missionary Society, desire to express our appreciation of her worthy life, and our grief at the loss sustained by her departure.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, remembering that "He doeth all things well."

2. That in her death Oak Grove Church and the Missionary Society have lost a consecrated member, and her home a loving and beloved mother.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy, and may the memory of her life be an inspiration to them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be placed on our record, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

gospel of Christ was to be world-wide and universal.

Power for the Impossible.

It looked like an impossible task, but Jesus promised power for it. That which was impossible for men became possible for men with God. As Dr. Jowett says, "Now the point is, this commission was carried out. That is the point to lay hold of. The commission was carried out. They did it."

The Unseen, But Ever Present Lord.

"And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he parted from them, and was carried up into heaven." He disappeared from their sight; they did not see him any more, but they knew that he was still with them. He had gone into that great spiritual realm in which they lived, and moved, and had their being. It was because of this fact that as they returned to Jerusalem, they went with great joy and were continually in the temple blessing God.

that we may realize that Elon College in the face of the rising tides that naturally stand in her way must be supported more generously than ever before. The college has fought a good fight and has partially won a difficult battle. However, she has not yet been able to cast aside her last hindrance or arm herself completely for the battles that seem to be in the offing. She appreciates her friends and the support received through the years. Today she faces the future confident, for she feels that her friends will not desert her in the thick of the fight.

LIVING IN A WORLD OF LAW.

God, we can count on something better than that. We can count on reaping as our harvest a race of men and women who even now are called the sons of God," and for whom it "doth not yet appear what they shall be."

In fact, isn't that one way of understanding the very essence of the Christian gospel? Interpret the life of Jesus thus and how sublime it becomes! He ventured his life on the conviction that you can sow love, and mutual trust and mutual goodwill, and sympathy, and kindness and justice and fairness, and then reap a harvest of exactly those things. It hadn't by any means been generally believed that you could do that. It had hardly been believed at all. Jesus found a world that almost deliberately refused to believe it. It was a world in which every man must look out for himself, a world of selfishness, of ruthless competition, of bitterness, of cruelty, of much injustice. A little corner of this world heard him and wistfully followed him, in the hope that his sublime confidence might somehow be justified, in the instinctive feeling that he had the "words of life." But how slowly that hope has spread! How little confidence we have in it even now!

The Christian faith is that this confidence of Jesus in the validity of the ideal is justified. Isn't that what we mean by faith? The conviction that when we sow good will we shall reap it. By that faith men are justified. Without it we go on living selfish, hard, narrow and fearful lives.

Be not deceived. God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

Sow truth, if thou the true wouldst reap,
 Who sows the false shall reap the vain.
 Erect and sound thy conscience keep;
 From hollow words and deeds refrain.

Sow love and taste its fruitage pure,
 Sow peace and reap its harvest bright,
 Sow sunbeams on the rock and moor,
 And find a harvest home of light!

A Tract For the Times From China

The Laymen's Preaching Band of Hsiao Yao Chuang, which means "Little Village of the Yao Family" prepared the following tract which they distributed from place to place by bicycle or foot in their district of North China.

"In these confused and grievous times, there still are small groups scattered the world over from which come constantly the sounds of thankful songs and of grateful invocations. What is this sound? What are these folks really doing? Friends, these small bands are church organizations. These sounds of song and praise are the voices of those church people who believe in Jesus Christ. They are thanking and praising the Lord that under oppression and in the midst of calamities they have found comfort. And at the same time, they are interceding for others, praying that God may make it possible for all people throughout the world to secure alike with themselves happiness in the midst of anxiety and evil. Their one desire is that the Kingdom of Heaven shall come to earth.

"On account of these things, some say that the Church is the Kingdom of God. We think that this simple statement is right, because in the Church there is peace, joy, mutual help, sacrifice, service of others, forgetting of self for others and a great love. Though its sphere is limited, we may say that the Church is a reduced model of the Kingdom of Heaven. Its center is Jesus Christ. Under His guiding it shares mutually the spiritual life which comes from a never-dying love for each other. Its object is to unite as one body in Jesus Christ all people in the whole world. This past union will make it possible for the individual and society to find new life.

"In a society which is oppressed by poverty and sickness, fearful of its own stupidity and blindness, embroiled in warrings, the task of the Church in this day is to spread this news of happiness and with all its energies to manifest the truth and power of this news. This also is the reason for the establishment of our Church.

"But the establishing of our Church concerns not merely society as a whole, but it has an even more important implication for our local community. One's own possessions are what one most treasures. The Christians of our village now have their own church; what a priceless treasure this is! This treasure can develop these Christians' sense of independence, their capacity for fellowship, and their spirit of mutual love. Each Christian must love his own church as he does his own home. Then he must feel the greatest responsibility for and faith in his fellow men of this community who do not yet belong to the Lord.

"It is our deepest desire that our whole district may become a small Kingdom of Heaven; that by relying on the sacred teachings, deeds, power, and influence of the Lord, all those who are living in anxiety and distress, in wickedness and suffering, may all together come under the name of the Lord and may share with Him the joy of spiritual living. Not only do we desire newness of life for each individual, but also the gradual extension of this small model of the Kingdom of Heaven until we, with all the small Kingdoms of Heaven in every other place, unite together to make one whole body and bring the Kingdom of Heaven to this earth to prosper here as it does in Heaven itself."—"The Missionary Herald."

Dr. Emmett Leonidas Moffitt

Not only his local community, but the entire Southern Convention, suffered a distinct loss in the sudden death on last Friday evening of Dr. Emmett L. Moffitt. Dr. Moffitt had just completed an address at the annual banquet of the Alamance County Chapter of the Elon College Alumni Association. He was said to have been apparently in good health and excellent spirits, and there was no indication of his approaching death. Dr. James H. Lightbourne had just started to speak, when Dr. Moffitt, who was sitting beside him slumped over in his chair. A physician was present, but the end came instantaneously.

Dr. Moffitt was born at Moffitt's Mill in Randolph County, North Carolina, January 17, 1869, the son of the late E. E. and Martha Hatch Moffitt. He attended Graham Normal College, and later graduated from Trinity College (now Duke University), receiving his A. B. in 1889 and his Master's degree the year following.

After finishing his work at Trinity, he served his church as a teacher at Elon College for several years. He returned to the college a second time when he succeeded the late Dr. W. W. Staley and became the third president of Elon. This position he occupied until 1911, when he severed his connection with the college to enter business in Asheboro.

In 1929, he went to Burlington as representative of one of the larger insurance companies, and made an outstanding record.

Funeral services were conducted from Burlington Christian Church on last Monday, being in charge of Dr. Lightbourne, assisted by Rev. W. E. Wiseman of Greensboro, and interment was in the family plot at Asheboro.

Dr. Moffitt is survived by two sons, Emmett L., Jr., and Rhodes Moffitt; one daughter, Mrs. Fred Van Burskirk; and three sisters, Mrs. E. H. Morris, Mrs. J. R. Parks and Mrs. C. C. Howell.

The writer took three years of his college work under Dr. Moffitt's presidency, and the next year completed his work for the master's degree directly under his supervision. It was during this last year especially that he knew Dr. Moffitt best and learned to love him and to respect his counsel. The intimate personal contact imparted a value that a degree could never, of itself, have given. He was a man of sound thought and courageous ability. Many friends will greatly regret his passing, but none more than the writer of this notice.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

On Easter Sunday, April 13, there will be a special service of consecration of children at Little Creek Christian Church.

Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison is lecturing this week at the University of Virginia on the general theme: "The Old Church in the New Time."

Chaplain H. E. Crutchfield was a visitor in Richmond and Windsor last week. Mr. Crutchfield expressed keen interest in THE CHRISTIAN SUN campaign.

The young people of Evarts, Ky., have organized a young people's church which meets each Thursday night in connection with their recreational program.

Holy Week services will be held at the First Christian Church and the Shelton Church, Portsmouth. Dr. Frank H. Lewis and Rev. H. G. Council, Jr., will exchange pulpits each evening except Thursday, at which time each will conduct a Candlelight Communion service in his own church.

Our Henderson Church has voted to begin the construction of an addition to their church at an approximate cost of $3,500.00. Work on this project will get started within the next few weeks. Contributions from friends toward this worth project will be gratefully received by the Henderson Church.

There are quite a few pastors who have not ordered the Easter offering envelopes for their church, or churches. Will you please send your order to the Mission Office, Elon College, N. C., today? Remember it is only two more weeks until Easter and such a little time left to get your envelopes!

Rev. W. H. Tillman secured the payment on the parsonage loan to Blackwoods Church, East Alabama, through the sale of a small bale of cotton. From fifty to three hundred pounds of seed cotton were given by a farmer. The hauling was donated and Mr. Solomons of Headland did the ginning without cost.

How is THE CHRISTIAN SUN campaign progressing in your church? Every church is urged to complete the campaign, if possible, by Easter. Some ministers do their own soliciting for subscriptions. Others appoint a special committee. The missionary society or young people's society may be the logical group to do this work in some of the churches. The important thing is to see that it is done.

East View Church, Central Alabama Association, has led its parish in the Lord's Acre plan. One of the projects was the cooperative working of an acre of cotton, and one man gave the fertilizer; another man had six bushels of corn from his Lord's Acre planting; another donated the proceeds from a watermelon patch; another gave the work on half an acre of peas. Many women canned provisions for the pastor and his wife.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

Churches and Sunday schools continue to send in their offerings for the college. A large number did not respond during the College Period. In all probability offerings were received, but they were not forwarded to the college. It is hoped that churches and Sunday schools that have not sent their offerings may do so even yet. Help from the Sunday schools and churches is needed more at this season of the year than at any other. The college will greatly appreciate your cooperation and help.

HAPPY HOME.

An appreciative audience received spiritual uplifting in observance of the World Day of Prayer in our church, under the direction of Miss Ruth Stephens, president of the missionary society, assisted by Mrs. William Ward.

We have just completed a Bible study course, conducted by our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes. Much good has been accomplished by these courses and we trust each one has received a clearer vision of the truths found in our study of God's word.

Very soon we hope to be enjoying the use of new church hymnals. We need to glorify God through our singing.

Awaken us, O blessed Savior!
 We have been asleep too long,
 While there're souls who're all about us
 Being led from right to wrong.
 Oh, the sadness of our failure
 To teach Jesus and His Cross,
 When men's souls go down in darkness,
 Never knowing of their loss.

REPORTER.

RALLY AT O'KELLY'S CHAPEL.

O'Kelly's Chapel, looking beautiful with its new paper and paint, new steps, new stove, new pulpit Bible and new Pilgrim Hymnals, was crowded on last Sunday when the Eastern North Carolina Conference and the Fifth Sunday Fellowship met there for a rally. Members and friends came from far and near to do homage to the Rev. James O'Kelly and to gain something of his spirit to carry them forward in times like this.

Rev. S. E. Madren, president of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, presided over the morning session. A paper on the life of Rev. James O'Kelly, written by Mr. W. E. MacClenny, historian of the Southern Convention was read. Rev. F. C. Lester, in the absence of Dr. L. E. Smith who was in the hospital and so could not be present, gave a talk on THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Rev. E. M. Powell, pastor of O'Kelly's Chapel and president of the Fellowship, presided at the afternoon session. Music was furnished by the Hank's Chapel Choir and the Carden Sisters of Durham. It was discovered that there were twenty-one direct descendants of the founder of our church present, and representatives from twenty church groups.

A bountiful dinner was served on the grounds, everyone enjoying the fellowship of seeing old friends and making new ones during the lunch hour.

Several of those present expressed their desire to become associate members of O'Kelly's Chapel, coming to similar meetings once a year and contributing something to the support of the church. Others who wish to share in this will please write to the pastor, Rev. E. M. Powell, Henderson, N. C.

VALLEY MID-YEAR CONFERENCE.

The annual mid-year session of the Valley Virginia Central Conference was held at Bethlehem Christian Church on last Thursday, March 27, with all but two churches represented.

One of the main emphases of the program was the Southern Convention, with Rev. F. C. Lester, R. R. Hosaflook, R. O. Rothgeb, Walstein Snyder and Mrs. A. W. Andes presenting various phases of its work, and explaining its relationship to the local church.

One of the most interesting features of the meeting was the report by laymen of two good things accomplished by their churches in the last six months. These were given by groups, and then the ministers of the group summarized the work in his churches. There is developing in the Valley a group consciousness which seems sure to lead to more effective church work.

Miss Lucy Eldredge of Dayton, O., was the special speaker for the Conference. In her first address she gave practical helps for local churches, centering around these things: Effective worship, good teaching, training for service through service, outreach into the community and the world, and fellowship. In her afternoon address she gave a first-hand account of our mission work in China and Japan as she saw it on a recent trip to the Orient.

The president, Roy Larrick of Winchester, emphasized the fact that every pastor in the Conference was present to give his report and that Rev. R. L. Williamson and Rev. W. J. Andes, two other ministers of the Conference, were also present to share in the day's program. With this interest on the part of the ministers, the local churches are bound to work cooperatively together.

LONG'S CHAPEL IS PROGRESSING.

Rev. W. A. Grissom, graduate of Elon College and Yale University, came to us in January as our leader and pastor for this year. No one could have come in a more humble spirit and willingness to serve than did Mr. Grissom. In the three months of his stay the attendance has been good and he has brought us helpful and inspiring messages, which were as food for hungry souls. Mrs. Grissom also takes part and is an inspiration to the church.

Mr. Grissom had a call meeting of the church March 23, and discussed ways in which the church should improve. The following committees were appointed and urged to get to work immediately: finance committee, social committee, roll committee, good cheer committee and church reporter. We feel the church is going to do greater and bigger things under Mr. Grissom's leadership. May the Lord help and bless him in his work.

A cantata, composed by Charles Frances Lane, has been prepared within the group of three churches, Haw River, Providence and Long's Chapel, under the direction of Rev. W. A. Grissom. This will be given at the following places: Long's Chapel, April 6, at 7:30 P. M.; Haw River, April 13, at 11:00 A. M.; Providence, April 13, at 7:30 P. M. The public is cordially invited to attend.

SPECIAL SERVICES FOR PASSION WEEK.

A series of special devotional services will be held during Passion Week, April 7 to 11, at the First Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, according to an announcement of the pastor, the Rev. John H. Knight.

At these services, to be held each night in the week at 8 o'clock, a number of guest preachers will be heard. The schedule of services is as follows:

April 7, the Rev. J. Frank Morgan, pastor of Rosemont Christian Church, preaching on "Nothing But Leaves."

April 8, the Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of South Norfolk Christian Church, preaching on "A Widow and Her Three Mites."

April 9, the Rev. James Milton McKnight, pastor of Armstrong Memorial Presbyterian Church, preaching on "My Visit to the Garden Tomb." The other Berkley congregations have been invited to this service.

April 10, Sacramental Service, conducted by the Rev. John H. Knight.

April 11, the Rev. H. S. Harcastle, D. D., pastor of the Christian Temple, preaching on "The Message of the Cross for Modern Life."

At these services special music will be rendered by the choir of the First Church, under the direction of Mrs. W. J. Spence, chorister, and with Mrs. Paul Sieloff at the organ.

A LETTER TO CHRISTIAN SUN READERS.

Edneyville, N. C.
March 21, 1941.

Dear CHRISTIAN SUN Readers:

Spring is here!

If you've never gone out in the yard, drawn a big circle and played marbles with a nice nine-year-old boy, then you've missed part of your life. Now, there are certain instructions to be followed before your game will be a complete success. First, you must allow the young child to explain the rules of the game to you. Even if you have played before, its better to forget all you ever knew and listen thoroughly. If you can't set your fingers so as to shoot the marbles, maybe your partner will make allowances as did mine. He permitted me to throw at the ring and he frequently declared that my "bowling" wasn't so good! But he was so honest in his criticism that I rather enjoyed being scolded.

Last night, the frogs were croaking far into the darkness, which means that their hibernation is at an end. This afternoon, I discovered an old yard where a house had recently burned down. Around the ruins was a perfect bed of daffodils just in the beginning of blooming. I picked the yellow flowers until I had quite a handful. They resembled a big bowl of rich sunshine.

Have you noticed the tiny hoops which the school boys are rolling about? One can count on this as a sure symptom of spring.

The harbinger of spring, the patriotic bluebird, is back in the mountains again, along with the faithful robin and cardinal.

And the landlady's winter supply of canned soup has given out. Won't you agree that we have found spring's corner.

TWO UNUSUAL LETTERS.

Since Christmas the college has received two very unusual letters, both from the same person. The first was written in February and read, "We just had a little money and could find no place to put it, and hated to throw it away." This letter was unsigned. The check for $50.00 enclosed, however, was signed.

The second letter came last week and was similar to the first. It read, "A little more that we hated to throw away." This letter was also unsigned, but the check for $50.00 enclosed was signed. The signature on both checks was that of a lifelong friend of Elon College, one who has been most generous and helpful in many ways. Prior to these two checks, he had given $1,000.00 on the Anniversary Fund.

I have two hopes to express. One is that he will continue to have money. If so, I know he will continue to divide with Elon College. The other hope is that there may be many more throughout the church and friends of the college who will take the same at-

SPIRITUAL PINK PILLS.

The casual visit of the clergyman to the sickroom has recently been characterized as a "spiritual pink pill." During the Philadelphia Christian Mission the Rev. Seward Hiltner of the Department of Religion and Health of the Federal Council of Churches pointed out that "some ministers are in hospitals merely as visitors. They do not go over cases with the doctors. They walk in, say a prayer and walk out. We want ministers to work hand in hand with the doctors. More doctors would be interested if we did that."

The Rev. Robert Morris, director of clinical work relating to healing and religion at Pennsylvania Hospital, said it had become increasingly evident to himself and to physicians that many organic failures are attributable to periods of stress and strain in family or vocational life. "The person who becomes ill most quickly and whose illness lasts the longest frequently is that person whose expenditure of energy is not outgoing, but who pushes his mental feeling down into his anatomy, causing organic complications. I believe conditions like these constitute an important problem for the minister."

We must humbly confess that often our blundering ministry in the hospital and sickroom has not promoted a happy relationship between Christianity and medicine. It is possible that a very crude visit from a minister may bring hope and confidence to the sickroom. But it may bear the same relation to the visit of a capable spiritual advisor that the visit of the old-fashioned, well-meaning family doctor bears to that of a competent specialist. A mere "God bless you" does not untangle the intricate problems of the human soul. A bare "word of prayer" does not come to grips with the complex maladies of human personality.

One may sometimes note that many pastoral sick calls are perfunctory; the prayers follow a set pattern, almost irrespective of the patient. "Lord, teach us to pray" becomes a fitting petition for all ministers who enter the sick room. Those who simply administer spiritual pink pills are "weighed in the balances" of human need and "found wanting." Here lie opportunities for the "physicians of the soul" to relieve minds of poisonous fears and divert them from a morbid consideration of their own misery, to formulate a rational explanation of suffering or failure, to further progress in religious knowledge, to reconstruct an adequate philosophy of life, to chart a more wholesome future and supply the resources for its practical realization. Under capable spiritual guidance sickness may become a benediction and the sickroom a school of religion.

THE BASES OF A JUST AND DURABLE PEACE.

The biennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America voted that a commission be appointed for a study of the Bases of a Just and Durable Peace, and that this Commission be broadly representative of the communions holding membership in the Federal Council, also that representatives from each of the following bodies be invited to become members of the Commission: International Council of Religious Education, Foreign Missions Conference of North America, Home Missions Council, National Council of Church Women, United Stewardship Council, Church Peace Union and the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches.

There is a growing insistence for the formulation of war aims and peace plans. H. G. Wells has been urging his American audiences to freely discuss and debate the grounds for, and nature of, a lasting peace. This necessary ground work should prevent the world from being duped into another dictated, one-sided, impossible peace. The trumpet of religion must give forth no uncertain sound in this important eventuality. The voice of religion should be heard now in order to hasten the day when a negotiated peace will be possible and to thoroughly acquaint the public mind with the essential features of such a peace.

In order to thoroughly school public opinion in the problems involved, many of our religious leaders are already insisting on certain minimum requirements in this postulated blueprint for a new social order: "it must be world-inclusive," "it must reckon with economic and social as well as political issues," "general disarmament must be established," "international law must be completely revised and codified," "there must be international supervision of labor standards, armament production, colonies and minorities," and "Europe must be rehabilitated."

Our real task is not that of defeating, annihilating and exterminating a race, a nation, or any combination of nations. When the bombers have blasted to bits the last bankrupt borough and baptized it with blood, when the guns have violently vomited their last vindictive venom, then our ultimate task may be faced: that of rehabilitating, integrating and redeeming every area of a demolished civilization. This task must be undertaken in the spirit of him who came "not to destroy but to fulfill."

R. L. H.

The last three lines of the third paragraph of Mr. Dollar's first editorial last week should have read, "responsibilities which he dare not, as a good churchman, neglect any more than he dares neglect the preparation of a sermon or the visitation of the sick or the burial of his dead"; and the first sentence of the second editorial should have been: "The Newport News Church challenges every church in the Southern Convention to raise an amount equal to, but over and above, the total amount of its missionary apportionment as a memorial to Dr. Atkinson." We regret the omissions in these articles.

Georgia and Florida News

By REV. W. T. SCOTT, D. D., Associate Editor.

The North Georgia Christian Life Conference will be held at Liberty Church, near Bowman, April 19-20. In attendance at this meeting will be a number of New England visitors on a study tour of the South, under the leadership of Rev. James E. Walter, Secretary of the Mission Council.

* * *

Daytona Beach.—Rev. Albert A. Trembert has made wide and excellent use of the Denominational Lenten Literature. The church is sponsoring classes on voice fundamentals for women, men and young people. The Senior and Junior Choirs are rendering excellent services to the church.

* * *

Coral Gables.—The young women of the church have organized themselves into a Junior Association for the women of the church. They hold each month one study meeting at the church and a social meeting at one of the homes. At their first meeting Rev. Veto A. Venezia of the Latin American Institute was the speaker.

* * *

Ft. Myers.—Sunday, March 9, was an eventful day for Rev. Miles McLean and the people of the Ft. Myers Church. They dedicated their Estey organ, which was made possible by a member of the congregation. Superintendent Scott delivered the address for the occasion, following an inspirational musical program and litany of dedication.

West Tampa.—At the communion service held March 2, five of our young people made a public profession of faith and were received into full membership of the church. One of the young men received came to us two years ago with a bitter and hateful attitude. Today he has a smile on his face and is one of our outstanding boys.

Successful Laymen's Meetings were held at Daytona Beach, Sunday afternoon, March 16 and Lake Worth, March 23. These meetings were under the sponsorship of the Florida Laymen's Fellowship, Mr. Robert G. Williams of Lake Worth, chairman. The meetings were well attended and lively interest was expressed by the Laymen in attendance. The discussion centered around the life and work of our churches and just where the Laymen may more effectively serve through the church.

New Port Richey.—Superintendent Scott attended the service at Community Congregational Church on Sunday, March 2 and delivered the sermon in connection with the twentieth anniversary of the church. By request he returned to the church for a conference on March 10. At this meeting Rev. James E. Parker, the minister, had arranged a fellowship supper which was attended by nearly seventy people. The object of the meeting was to raise a fund for building or purchasing a parsonage. Over $600.00 was raised and subscribed at that meeting and plans are going forward for raising the balance to enable the church to purchase a parsonage.

The Florida Conference.—The 58th annual meeting of the Florida Congregational Christian Conference will be held at Winter Park, April 15-17, 1941. This gathering is the official meeting of the state body of the Congregational Christian Churches, and each church is entitled to be represented by its minister and two delegates, plus visitors. It is hoped that every church will elect their official delegates, and that these representatives will attend the entire session. An increasing number of our churches are sharing in the expenses of their chosen representatives. This is a wise policy because it not only adds significance to the State Conference Meeting, but it makes possible the attendance of persons from the churches who otherwise would not be able to do so on their own expenses.

Georgia Ministers' Convocation.—For the past eight years the Georgia ministers have held an annual Convocation extending over three or four days. Last year they united with the Alabama ministers in a very profitable Convocation with Drs. Dwight Bradley and W. F. Frazier as instructors. For 1941 the ministers will attend the Church and Community Conference at Vanderbilt School of Religion, Nashville, Tenn., April 21-26. Among the leaders of this Conference will be Dr. George Butterick, who will give the Cole Lectures; Dr. Douglas Horton, Secretary and Minister of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches; Dr. Roekwell Smith, Specialist in the Rural Churches in the American Country Life Association; Dean W. J. Faulkner of Fisk University; Dr. William James Campbell, President of the Atlanta Seminary Foundation affiliated with Vanderbilt School of Religion.

Demorest, "Union."—A pastor's class is being held during the period of Lent. Its purpose is to prepare the pupils' church school for church membership. The Pilgrim Fellowship had charge of a church service recently. The "aims" of the Pilgrim Fellowship was the theme. A Men's Bible Class has been organized which meets each Sunday afternoon at five in the Oddfellows' Hall. Mr. Phelps, chairman of the Board of Deacons, is in charge of the Bible Class. It is held particularly for men who are not regular attendants at any church service. The attendance has tripled in the month since it has been organized. At the first meeting there were only five members; at the last meeting there were fifteen. Three states are represented by the three officers of the Pilgrim Fellowship or Christian League: President, Kathryn Moye, Georgia; Vice-President, Tom Nation, Florida; Secretary-Treasurer, Nellie Gayle Joyner, Virginia.

Columbus, "United."—Members of the Christian Endeavor presented an interesting program at Ft. Benning on a Sunday evening recently. About forty young men and women attended and met with the men from the 20th and 44th Field Artillery of the 4th Division of the United States Army. Chaplain Marvin Brown, minister of the Congregational Christian Church, formerly of Kansas, but now stationed at Ft. Benning, welcomed the visitors, and Rev. Robert H. Booth, the pastor of United Church, addressed the group. Chaplain Brown brought more than fifty soldiers from Ft. Benning to a special service at the United Church on a Sunday morning in March. A Leadership Training School was conducted at the church by Mrs. Marvin Brown. The attendance was good, and the interest in the school was gratifying. The George Foster Peabody Apartment, a Government Housing Project composed of more than 360 homes, in their weekly news bulletin acknowledged the work of the United Church, and the invitation of Rev. R. H. Booth to the children to use the church piano for practicing music lessons. The manager devoted a half column in the bulletin to this invitation and concludes with this, "Rev. R. H. Booth and his church seem to have a broad vision of the church's mission in its community in that the building and equipment be used for more than two or three sermons a week."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

I was born and reared on the farm. When I was a small boy the farm was enclosed by a rail fence, with a gate at the entrance to the front yard. About once a week my father went to the small town about five miles distant to purchase the needed supplies for the next week. This usually required one half of a day, as he was very thoughtful and considerate of his horse. Sometimes he did not return as early as we expected, and the family began to be uneasy about him. If he was late returning I was usually told to go down to the gate and look up the road to see if I could see him in the distance. If not in sight, I sat by the gate for several minutes, hoping to see him and waiting to open the gate for him. At last when I saw him in the distance I was repaid for waiting at the gate.

This experience of childhood made a great impression upon me when I recalled it in later life. We learn in the Book of Revelation that there are gates in the Holy City, the New Jerusalem. Three gates on the east, three gates on the west, three gates on the north and three gates on the south. Whatever interpretation one may use in explaining this description the fact remains that there are gates—points of entrance into heaven. It seems that the picture suggests that there are entrances available from every major point of the compass—the east, the west, the north and the south. Is it fanciful to suggest that those who have passed on, to be with the Redeemer, are still interested in the friends and loved ones on earth? Personally, the Bible seems to teach us that the redeemed are a "cloud of witnesses"—interested in the spiritual victory and homecoming of loved ones on earth.

If this interpretation has any real basis of reality it is reasonable for them to await our homecoming with interest. If so, is it too much to think of them—many of them—as saying to each other: "It must be almost time for someone to come home. Let's go down to the gate and see if they are on the way." Is it possible that there are ministers in heaven who go down to the gate to see if some members are on the way home. If so, there are fathers and mothers who walk down to the gate—to wait—and to extend the welcome when the children are on the way. Waiting at the gate! And waiting with a glad heart and cordial welcome. Maybe part of their joy will be the privilege of telling about the place prepared for the faithful ones. And there will be many things for the new arrivals to learn about the heavenly city.

There is the memory of waiting at the gate. And it is a memory which seems to be enriched by the spiritual application of a very simple childhood experience. Others who read these lines will recall similar tender and pleasant memories. When the gate was opened, father drove in, stopped the horse and we had a ride by his side up the lane to the barnyard. The separation had been only a few hours—but long enough to be missed. Around the open fireside the events of the day were rehearsed and the family life was brought up to date.

When the evening time of life approaches, when the road seems to turn in at the bend towards home, it lights the way to think that there may be someone waiting at the gate. The face will be familiar. It may be wreathed in a more glorious smile. We shall know as we are known. Home in the evening time! The meeting at the gate will be the beginning of unending fellowship. It is fine to travel the road that leads towards home. Watch the signboards and the road markers these days to make sure you are on the right road, and that you will find the gate where they are waiting for you to enter.

EVANGELISM.

Ours is an evangelistic church. We have an evangelistic gospel. Our ministers in the Southern Convention from two decades or more ago were consistently evangelistic in their efforts and messages. It was the custom of practically every church to hold sometime during the year what it called its protracted or evangelistic meeting. During this period sin was denounced and Christ was fervently held up as the only one able to save from sin. Much has been said to the discredit of such meetings. They perhaps did have their faults, but they also had their virtues. Many were influenced to confess Christ. Not all remained true to their confessions. Many did, however, and the church thrived.

In these more recent years there has been a change in emphasis. There has been a hesitancy to speak boldly of individual sin or to present Christ as the sinner's Savior. On the other hand we speak of emphasis upon religion, of guidance conferences, and of fellowship gatherings, and we like to think of Christ as the great Teacher and Counsellor. In our fellowship and counselling we like to influence people to align themselves with the church and to identify themselves with Christian fellowship. It may be that the world is drifting into a condition today that will again require some very positive and fearless preaching. We like to feel that ours is a Christian country and that we are a part of a Christian world. It is evident, however, that wickedness of a severe type is in evidence, that the sins of our times will have to be reckoned with. I know of no one who is able to convict the world of its sins and to save man from his shame other than Christ, the Son of God. In all probability it shall be necessary to wrestle with wickedness in high places. The full armor of Christ will be necessary if we are to win in the struggle.

At this particular season of the year, the Easter Season, while we are reminded of the suffering of our Lord for a sinful world, of his death on the cross, and of His resurrection from the dead, the setting is perfect to call on the members of our church and our community to consider—to consider for what He suffered and for what He died, to consider our own relation to our fellowman and to our God, and to see what is necessary on our part that obstacles may be removed, that darkness may be scattered, that we may come face to face with Him to see for ourselves our personal and individual needs. In such intimacy and knowledge we may confess our wrongs, lay our burdens upon Him, and find for ourselves a new relation, a new hope, and a new joy. Into such a fellowship there will consciously come an irresistible power—the power of the Spirit—and in such an atmosphere it will be easy for those who have wandered away to return, for those who have fallen to stand erect, for those who have sinned to confess and find forgiveness. May this Easter Season be for our churches a season of confession, of consecration, and of generous contributions, that again the power of the Spirit may be evident among us and the gospel may have a sufficiency in material values to go even to the ends of the earth.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

This letter comes to you from Norfolk, Va. My mother came with my father to Grandpa Todd's home, so I came along, too. Since mother is so busy going to meetings with daddy, I am writing the letter for her this week. I am so excited about my first long trip to Grandma and Grandpa Todd's that I just have to tell someone about it.

It took mother and father all morning until 11:45 Monday to get ready to leave for Norfolk with me. Oh, yes, and I forgot to say that Grandma Todd was visiting us so she helped to get things ready. Mother must think I am a sissy, anyway, she fixed me such a warm bed on the back seat of our "Chivvy" that I nearly melted before Grandma noticed me and took the hot water bottle which mother had put in bed with me, out! My bed was so soft that I just had to sleep part of the way. A lot of the time I lay awake and looked at Grandmother or watched mother who talked with me from the front seat.

The first place which we came to was Raleigh but I felt so good riding that I was glad that daddy did not stop. Daddy wanted to wait until we got to Murfreesboro to eat lunch but I was so hungry that I could not wait that long. We stopped in Weldon where dady and grandmother went to eat lunch and get my milk warmed. Mother stayed in the car with me and let me sit up a bit to get rested. I got so hungry that I cried before daddy came back with the warm milk. He brought mother a bottle of milk and a sandwich. I got all of my milk drunk up and cried because mother wouldn't offer me some of hers which she was drinking from a glass. By the time mother put dry clothes on me and got me fixed in my bed, daddy and grandmother were back. We started out again, in the rain. It rained all of the rest of the way to Norfolk. When we got to Grandpa Todd's, counsin Barbara held the umbrella over daddy and me while we were entering the house.

It was lots of fun meeting all of my cousins, uncles and aunts. Grandpa is real nice, too; he promised to give me some candy from his store the next time I come to see him.

Daddy has been real busy all week. He has been preaching each evening at Hope Chapel. One day I went over to the Sousa home with him and met little Charlie, who is just thirteen months old. He gave me a nice hug. It was the first one I've had from one who was so near my size. I let him see my Mickey Mouse.

One night, when dady came home, he told me about the beautiful way in which the Junior Choir sang "The Holy City." He said that he hoped I'd like to sing in church some day. I would have liked to have gone with him but there is too much sickness about. I have been real good and have slept all of the time that I was supposed to have slept. This morning daddy preached at the church where he used to go when he was a small boy. Mother and grandmother went with him. I stayed at home and slept in the little bed which used to be Uncle Howard's. I had real nice dreams. But now it is time that I started dreaming again. It has been fun writing to you. Goodnight!

THE CROSS.

In many churches there is a cross. This cross is usually on the communion table or altar. Usually there is a candle on either side of the cross.

From now until Easter we shall be thinking about the cross and what it means. When Jesus was here, he had to think about the cross, because its shadow was upon him and he knew that he must die upon it.

When we enter the church let us look at the cross. If we listen very closely we will hear it saying softly: "I am the cross of Christ. I am here to remind you that Jesus loved you so much that he died upon me, so that you, too, might know the life of love. I tell you of the sins of men and the forgiveness of God. I tell you of great suffering but a greater service. Today, there are still those who nail Jesus upon me because of their envy, hate and greed. Yet, there are others who would follow him, even to the end and give their lives for love of fellowmen as did their Leader. Will you follow him also?"

ABBIE'S CURE.

"Did you ever see such a child?" asked Miss Martin, helplessly.

"I never did," said the doctor.

They stood outside the door of Abbie's room. She had been ill for a long time, and it had been very hard for her, because all her life she had done as she pleased and had whatever she wanted. When she was ill she could not do as she pleased or have whatever she wanted, and that made her dreadfully cross.

She fretted and scolded, and scolded and fretted about everything. She cried when her tray came up, because she did not like what there was on it to eat, and then she cried again because she wanted what the rest of the family had for dinner and could not have it. She scolded because her friends did not come to see her, and when they came she scolded because they stayed too long. When it was time for her to take her medicine, she worried and cried until both the doctor and Miss Martin were quite worn out. It had gone on this way day after day, and it was no wonder that Miss Martin and the doctor agreed they never had seen such a child.

"The real trouble with Abbie now is her disposition. I am afraid that unless we can find some help for that she never will get well," said the doctor, as he started downstairs.

Miss Martin walked softly back into the room, and Abbie cried sharply: "I haven't any other disease the matter with me. I know I haven't. The doctor doesn't know."

"The doctor didn't say you had any other disease," said Miss Martin gently.

"Yes, he did, just now," insisted Abbie.

Miss Martin thought a minute and then smiled. "Do you mean what he said about your disposition?" she asked.

Abbie nodded and wanted to know what her disposition was.

"It is that which makes you merry and kind and happy, or cross and unkind and unhappy," answered Miss Martin.

"Oh!" said Abbie, and was quiet for a long time. At last she asked, "What will the doctor do to cure my disposition?"

"The doctor can't cure it," answered Miss Martin. "Only God can do that, but we all can help God to do it. Shall we ask Him to now?"

Kneeling down beside the bed she said softly: "Dear God, we thank Thee for all things that have been helping this little girl to grow better, and we ask Thee to soon make her

OUR WORK IN THE VALLEY OF VIRGINIA.

Four and a half years ago, the Valley of Virginia Conference faced a rather sad-faced situation. It is a rural conference, only one church within city limits, and the churches are scattered on the main highways through the Valley at important crossroads, at the foot of mountains and between mountains. The people of this conference are farmers or are closely connected with the farm. There are no "money crops" and they try to realize a living off of the various resources of the farm. Four ministers were then serving 21 churches, with several churches needing to be revived in addition to the 21 active churches. Of the 21 churches, two churches—Timber Ridge and Winchester—formed a group and had their minister living in the parsonage in Winchester.

There were three ministers left to care for 19 churches, and none of these were in any kind of an organized pastorate. There was one parsonage but the minister served churches other than those within the pastorate of that parsonage. These three ministers preached three times a Sunday, conducted funerals, married a few couples, and wore out their cars by great distances.

The situation was discussed by several members of the conference and Dr. J. O. Atkinson was asked for advice. Through his kind efforts, the Mission Board in the fall of 1936, came to the rescue and promised to pay part of another minister's salary if he would come to the conference. Thus, Rev. R. D. Coulter arrived to help bear the responsibilities of the work. The Mission Board backed him and the conference with financial and moral support.

For several years, there had come the insistent cry for the forming of pastorates or the group of churches. With the aid and continued hard work of our Promotional Secretary, Rev. F. C. Lester, and this was his first job in his new office, four groups were outlined among these eighteen churches, the Winchester-Timber Ridge group remaining the same and making the fifth group. Some, in fact many, said that it wouldn't work. All that I can say is that it is now working for nearly three years.

The Mission Board is still rendering financial aid to the Valley. It is not giving to just one pastor, but to four, so that the salaries of the ministers are now equalized to some extent. The smaller churches receive services even though they can't pay any great amount of money. Yet the Mission Board is giving only a little more today than it did in 1936 to the one minister.

Thus this day we find five well organized pastorates in the Valley Conference. There are five seminary trained men as ministers in these twenty churches. Some of the old, weak churches are finding new life. Each minister is concentrating upon his area of work and there is no traversing of pastors to distant points. The churches have their ministers in their midst. Incidentally there are three parsonages now, another group has purchased facilities with which to renovate into a parsonage in the near future. The other minister lives in a rented house and the group of churches, which he serves, is trying to arrange to get a parsonage for him. The churches are gradually increasing their financial gifts so that it is hoped some of the groups will not need the Missions Board's appropriation for a much longer period of time.

Each group of churches is beginning to feel the value of being organized into a pastorate. Each church in the pastorate is beginning to feel that there is a neighbor just up the road. More can be accomplished when neighbors live and work together at a common task in a specified area. Even churches of the same denomination can and should be neighbors, bearing the burdens of each other. This is a great accomplishment and the Valley Conference is grateful to the Mission Board for its help and encouragement.

AN EASTER MESSAGE TO CHURCH MEMBERS.

The following letter by Dr. John G. Truitt, Suffolk, Va., has been sent to church members of the Suffolk Church relative to the Easter offering. This pastor is on the job and is putting forth every effort to increase the offerings for missions. We hope that all the ministers will cooperate as Dr. Truitt is doing.—M. C. P.

April 2, 1941.

My Dear Fellow-Workers:

Please help us to have one of the largest mission offerings we have ever had this Easter. The mission work of the denominations continue throughout the mission fields. Many mothers and children among the missionaries have returned to their respective lands, but the men missionaries are carrying on, and the un-married women missionaries also are still carrying the mission message.

They are ministering in the Gospel of Jesus-Christ. They are representing the church on the fronts of the needy world. Where there is great danger they carry on as ministers, doctors, Christian teachers—serving in many ways to live and teach the gospel.

Now is the time to leave off. When the seed of God's Word needs sowing as never before. When the church is being tested. I feel sure our Suffolk Church wishes to make one of its finest records for mission giving this needy year. God will bless your gift, and you. Give this Easter liberally.

Col. J. E. West, chairman of our Mission Board, is asking every church in the Southern Convention to remember our late beloved fallen leader, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and to make their mission offering more this year in answer to the great challenge and leadership of our Convention which Dr. Atkinson so unceasingly gave.

Let us do a noble thing this Easter, and increase our gifts to missions. You increase yours and I shall increase mine, and if we all increase our mission gifts it will bring joy to us all to see what noble thing we can do.

Your loyalty and attendance at church are greatly appreciated by me, and by us all.

With best wishes, I am,

Most sincerely yours,

JOHN G. TRUITT,

Pastor.

MISSIONS—1941.

Missions and missionary endeavor are as old as the church itself. Since the founding of the early churches and the necessity of long, hard journeys by those who dared to go among people of different religions to establish the rudiments of the Christian way of life, men and women of fearless hearts and willing hands have gone out to disperse the Christian religion among those who had not heard the good news. There have always been obstacles of many kinds—race, hostile governments, difficult living conditions and many heartaches for those who have given their lives for missions. And along with those whom we honor because they "went," there are those, many of them unknown, who have "stayed" and have had their oft-times difficult task of promoting the mission cause at home. This spring we honor one of those great souls of whom all of us younger people can say we were proud that we knew him because we have heard so much of his good works and great missionary spirit. Although we were not able to know him as well as the generation just preceding us, we will always revere his memory as a great man of God and a true missionary.

"Missions—1941" could be the topic of a sensational study of the many opportunities and difficulties not before known to the history of the church. The new barriers raised by war, fear and discontent and the changed attitude toward mission giving—the materialism which robs us of the Christian ideals of sharing. At all times of crisis, the church should be in the foreground, giving guidance of a way of life and thought in a world of change. Christian missions are today receiving a huge challenge and it is those of us here in a relatively safe geographical and economic situation who will have the responsibility of guiding how the challenge is met. Only through our sharing more liberally and being more earnest in our missionary efforts can we keep abreast of the times and its challenge.

NORTH CAROLINA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY PROGRAMS FOR APRIL AND MAY. "CHINA."

There is such an abundance of material on China in your packet that the only difficulty will be in picking out what you want to use for your programs. The best way to do it will be for your program committee to look over the following material carefully, choosing enough from it for two good meetings:

1. "Have You Heard?"

A complete program worked out in the form of a simple play, closing with a worship service. Note that copies of this service may be secured for 1/2c each.

2. Envelope Series, China Number—Especially notice.

- a. "Getting Acquainted With New China"—by Miss Seabury, page 3.
- b. "News from Chinese Letters"—page 22.
- c. "From Our Foochow Messenger," page 32.
- d. "What Shall We Do for China Now?" page 40.
- e. "Four Programs On China," page 50.

3. "The Missionary Herald" for September, 1940.

- a. "Missionaries in China Still Get About," page 16.
- b. "China Repaired," page 34.

4. "So We Have a Mission in China."

This gives a complete picture of the work of our denomination in China, past present, and future. Two meetings could be very profitably spent in using material from this book.

5. "Fenchow Middle School in War Time."

By Miss McClure, the missionary who taught at the School of Missions last summer.

6. "Lintsing Memorial Hospital."

By Dr. Hugh Robinson.

7. "The Pilgrim Highroad for August, 1940."

- a. "This Way the Orient," by Shepherd, page 6.
- b. "Letters from Young People in China," page 8.
- c. "Neighbors Near and Far"—material on China for four meetings.

Of course, you are studying "Dangerous Opportunity," our foreign mission book on China for this year, in some way. It may be that you will want to have a review of the whole book at either your April or May meeting. A play dealing with China is also an effective way of presenting the message of missions. A list of these can be found in your "Guidenposts to Better Meetings." Out of this wealth of material, two good programs can certainly be developed.

THE BLUE RIDGE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

"The Task of the Church in Community Building."

(Fourth Session.)

JUNE 16 TO 22, 1941.

Representatives for denominations and teachers of religion in the colleges, unitedly look at the problems of building a genuine Christian community. Such outstanding leaders as Dr. Walter Horton of Oberlin University; Dr. Arthur Holt of University of Chicago; Dr. Wm. J. Hutchins, former president of Berea College; and Dr. Quinter Miller of the Federal Council of Churches, will each have an hour each day for the whole week. A score of outstanding leaders will each make one address, lead a discussion or participate in a forum.

It's a chance to meet great minds and to see the task of religion at large.

Write: Conference on the Task of the Church, in Community Building, Blue Ridge, North Carolina.

A. LANSON GRANGER, JR., Editor

HOLY WEEK.

Next week is known by Christendom as "Holy Week." This begins with Palm Sunday, includes the days of the last week of our Lord's life on earth before the Crucifixion on Good Friday, and ends with Easter, the day of resurrection. It is well for young people to "think on these things" and join with their churches in commemorating them. It may be that you can use the poem, "Outside the Holy City," in your worship service next Sunday, for it was written in 1931 for use on Palm Sunday. If your church is having services next week, you will want to share in them, especially in the communion on Thursday night and the Good Friday service. And then on Easter Sunday young people in all our churches will lift their voices in prayer and praise for the Resurrected Christ. Do not miss this opportunity to re-dedicate your life to Him who gave so much for you.

CONGRATULATIONS!

The readers of this page, as well as young people and leaders of our church throughout the country, offer their congratulations and best wishes to Rev. and Mrs. A. Lanson Granger, Jr. They were married with an impressive ceremony at the First Congregational Christian Church on last Saturday, March 29.

Both these young people have meant and are meaning much to the development of the Pilgrim Fellowship. Lanson was elected the first president of the National Pilgrim Fellowship at the Lakeside Conference, and led the business sessions of the Rockford meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship. At the present time, he is one of the councilors for the Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship and is the editor of this page. Frances Foster Granger was a delegate to the Mills Conference in California last summer, is our regional representative on the executive committee of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, and president of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. Both of them are members of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship Council. We are happy to know that their marriage will mean that they will continue to live and work in this section of the country—at least for the present—and that it will mean a continuation of their interest in the young people's work of our church.

LEARNING ABOUT OUR CHURCH.

Occasionally we hear the leaders of our church say that the young people do not learn about the history of our

OUTSIDE THE HOLY CITY.

Outside the Holy City
Unnumbered footsteps throng,
And crowded mart and streets of trade
Fling back a swelling song.
The voices echo nearer,
In flaming hope they sing,
"Throw down your branches at His feet, Hosanna to the King."

Once more beside a city
The Son of David waits,
Once more the children throng to bring
A welcome at the gates.
Within are hearts sore burdened
And feet that go astray;
O Christ of God, come near and walk
Our city streets today.

The branches that we offer
Are no unmeaning sign;
Take Thou the hands we lift on high
And make them wholly Thine.
No songs of shallow welcome
Are these we raise to Thee;
O give us faith to face the cross
And set Thy city free.

A distant music mingles
With all our songs today,
The chorale from a city fair
Where sin has passed away.
There rides the Christ triumphant
And victor songs ring clear;
O God, give us the strength to build
With Christ that city here.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR APRIL 13, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Mark 16:1-11.

Daily Readings—

Monday—His Glory Described—Rev. 21:10-27.

Tuesday—His Reign Characterized—Isa. 11:3-9.

Wednesday—At God's Right Hand—H. B. 10:11-14.

Thursday—His Power Manifested—Acts 4:31-35.

Friday—His Resurrection and Reign—I Cor. 15:20-25.

Saturday—His Assured Inheritance—I Peter 1:3-5.

We have very definite proofs of the resurrection of Christ. First, the life of Christ bears its own testimony. Christ anticipated His own resurrection. (Matt. 12:38-40; John 2:19-21.) Other proofs are:

1. The Empty Grave.
2. The Transformation of the Disciples.
3. The Existence of the Primitive Church.
4. The Witness of St. Paul.
5. The Gospel Record.

All these point to a living Christ who changed not only the history of the world, but religious thinking. This would have been a dark and gloomy world had Christ not inspired a living faith of reality in the disciples' lives. A new hope in the life to come came into being as a result of a living, rather than a dead, Christ. The disciples were no longer shrinking men, but fired with enthusiasm and zeal for their Master.

The proofs of the resurrection referred to above may be assigned as topics for short talks or the time may be well spent in worship rather than discussion. Hold a sunrise service. With the assistance of the pastor plan an Easter vesper service.

A dramatic worship service may be found in the Christian Endeavor World. You may be able to produce one that is original.

Use such hymns as "Crown Him With Many Crowns," "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," "Up from the Grave He Arose," and "Christ the Lord Is Risen."

Savior! Thy dying love
Thou gavest me,
Nor should I ought withhold,
Dear Lord, from Thee;
In love my soul would bow,
My heart fulfil its vow,
Some offering bring Thee now,
Something for Thee.

—S. Dryden Phelps.

In vain with stone the cave they barred;
In vain the watch kept ward and guard;
Majestic from the empty tomb,
In joy and triumph, Christ has come.

CHRIST PROMISES POWER.

LESSON I—APRIL 6, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 24: 48, 49; Acts 1.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 12: 1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT: But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you; and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1: 8.

VOLUME II—By DR. LUKE.

The Acts of the Apostles is the second book which Luke, the beloved physician, and the only Gentile writer of the scriptures, wrote. In his first volume, written to Theophilus, he recounted the things that Jesus "began both to do and to teach, until the day in which He was received up." This gospel of Luke, in the opinion of the writer of these notes, is the finest book ever written.

In Volume II, Luke writes to Theophilus of the things which the apostles and the early church did under the direction and influence of the Holy Spirit which Jesus sent at Pentecost, after He had been received up. Here again Dr. Luke gives us an impressive and inspiring volume. The man who can read the Acts of the Apostles without his pulse beating a little faster is to be pitied. Here is a story of how that little group of disciples went out to share their experience of Christ unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

Preaching Based On Facts.

"To whom he also showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, appearing unto them by the space of forty days . . ." The apostles did not go out to talk fairy tales or idle dreams. They went out to preach a gospel based upon facts and upon an experience. There was no doubt in their minds that Christ had risen from the dead. He had appeared to them over a long period of time; he had appeared to them in many forms; he had given many infallible proofs. Christianity is based upon the fact of the risen Christ. It stands or falls on the historic fact of the resurrection.

The Kingdom of God.

". . . Speaking the things concerning the kingdom of God." Jesus began his ministry with the words, repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand. It was the central theme of his ministry and his message. After his resurrection from the dead, he still talks with the disciples about the kingdom of God, about the righteous rule of God in the human heart, not simply in heaven or in the world to come, but on earth now even as in heaven.

The Promise of Power.

"And, being assembled together with them, he charged them not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for the promise of the Father, which, said he, ye heard from me . . . ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit not many days hence." He was sending them out on a world mission, on a seemingly impossible task. He promised them power equal to the task which he had given them. God never commands us to do a thing which he does not give us power to do. This power was to come through the Holy Spirit. The spirit of God in the heart of man is the source of moral and spiritual power. Much of our failure in Christian work is due to our attempt to do the work of God without the power of God. Waiting is just as important as working.

Slow of Understanding.

"Lord, dost thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" The disciples had been with Jesus about two years and a half. They had heard him speak again and again about the kingdom of God. He had tried to make clear to them its spiritual aspects. Yet here they were asking him if he would at this time restore the kingdom to Israel. They still thought of the kingdom of God in material terms. They still thought that he was going to establish an earthly kingdom, that he would overthrow the hated Roman rule, that he would establish again the rule of Israel over the nations. Their spiritual discernment was still undeveloped. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. Then, as now, the disciples of Jesus had eyes which did not see, ears which did not hear, and hearts that did not understand.

Witnesses.

"Ye shall be my witness both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." When the Holy Spirit was come upon them, they were to be witnesses. They were to tell what they knew, they were to speak out of experience. They were to do this at all costs. The word from which we get the word, witness, is the same word from which we get the word, martyr. This witnessing was to be done at home and abroad. The gospel was to be done at home and abroad. The gospel was to be for all men of all time. The genius of Christianity is missionary.

The Ascended Lord.

"And when he had said these things, as they were looking, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight." There is a mystery in connection with the ascension of Christ, just as there is a mystery in connection with the resurrection of Christ. The basic fact is that Christ disappeared into the unseen spiritual world out of which he came. The point is that during those days when he had appeared and disappeared they gradually became conscious of his presence, whether he was to be seen or not. As a result, when they returned to Jerusalem, they worshipped him with great joy. They knew that although they could not see him that he was still with them. From a localized body he had become a universal spirit.

Doing Something About It.

"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye looking into heaven?" A spiritual experience is not an end in itself; it is a means to an end. Action must follow hard upon vision. If God gives us an experience, he expects us to act upon that experience.

Prayer Meeting.

When they returned to Jerusalem, they went into the upper room for prayer. If one reads the story in the Acts of the Apostles he will see how much prayer entered into the life of the early Church. It was undoubtedly the secret of its power. The modern church would be more effective and more influential if it had more quiet seasons of prayer, and less activity.

I AM AN AMERICAN.

"Let us play the man for our people, and for the cities of our God."—II Sam. 10:12. Goodspeed interprets: "Let us show ourselves strong for the sake of our people, and for the cities of our God."

As we write this there is a wave of patriotism sweeping the country. "I am an American," is the motto, and we are singing "God Bless America." The following selection is quoted as a kind of pledge which the people are reading: "I am an American! The Golden Rule is my rule! In humility and with gratitude to Almighty God, I acknowledge my undying debt to the founding of fathers who left me a priceless heritage which now is my responsibility.

"With steadfast loyalty I will uphold the Constitution and Bill of Rights. I will treasure my birthright of American ideals; I will place moral integrity above worldly possessions. Problems of interest to my country shall be of interest to me! I will count my right of suffrage to be a sacred trust and I will diligently strive to prove worthy of that trust. I will give my full support to upright public servants, but with unclean hands I will firmly oppose. Each obligation that comes to me as a true American, I will discharge with honor! My heart is in America and America is in my heart! I am an American!" So mote it be. Amen.

TUESDAY.

I AM A CHRISTIAN.

"Walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work."—Col. 1:10.

"Moses . . . refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to share ill treatment with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasure of sin for a season."—Heb. 11:24-26.

"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples."—John 13:35.

There is also a pledge of Christianity which is our first duty. Would that we could have a wave of Christian loyalty sweep the country. By substituting for a few words of the above pledge we have a very appropriate slogan.

"I am a Christian. Right is my rule. With humility and with gratitude to Almighty God, I acknowledge my undying debt to Him who left me a priceless heritage of a righteous responsibility. With steadfast loyalty I will uphold the Constitution and the Bill of Rights as found in the life teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ first and foremost above worldly possessions, and the problems of interest to the church of the living God shall be of interest to me. I will count my place in the kingdom of God as a sacred trust and I will diligently strive to prove myself worthy of that trust. In this I shall feel it my bounden duty to support upright public servants, but those with unclean hands, I will firmly oppose. Each obligation that comes to me as a Christian I will discharge with honor! My heart is in Christianity and Christianity is in my heart. I am a Christian!"

Friends: When one lives a life like this he automatically lives the sacred patriotic life. So mote it be. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CHRISTIAN MANHOOD AND WOMANHOOD.

"Be careful about the life you lead: Act like sensible men, not like thoughtless; make the most of your time: So do not be senseless, but understand what is the Lord's will; and do not get drunk—that means profligacy—but be filled with the spirit."—Eph. 5:15-20 (Revised version).

Prayer—O Lord, help us poor weak sinning souls. We so often fall short of the simple rules of righteous living. Baptize us afresh with the Holy Spirit and grant us always victory over ourselves. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SELF RELIANT TO A FAULT.

"Let every one not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think."—Rom. 12:3.

"As long as men try to make out that they are worthy to receive anything from God, they will never get a crumb from God's table."—D. L. Moody. O yea, that is very good for drunkards and thieves, but hardly applies to us. We are educated; we go to church; we say our prayers, etc. . . ." say they. Yes, "having the form of godliness but denying the power thereof." However, the moment any one takes his place as a poor miserable sinner, then God can deal with him.

Prayer—O Lord, have mercy upon us as sinners. Grant us the humility and contrition of soul that enables us to open the door of our lives to Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SAVED BY GRACE.

"By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."—Eph. 2:8.

There is no chance for boasting, or for a man to work his way up to heaven. A man said that he had been forty-two years learning three things: first, that he could do nothing toward his salvation; second, that God did not require him to do anything; and, third, that Christ had done it all himself.

Prayer—O our Father, our work and our efforts are all but naught without Thee. We come to Thee for salvation, for power, for service and for rest. Amen.

Tools for Toilers

AMERICAN MIRROR: Social, Ethical and Religious Aspects of American Literature 1930-40, by Halford E. Lucecock. The Macmillan Co., New York, 1940.

One of the most outstanding non-fiction books published in recent months is that written by Halford E. Lucecock entitled "American Mirror." Professor Lucecock, whose "Contemporary American Literature and Religion" was extremely popular a few years ago, has presented in "American Mirror" another interpretative survey of literature. Nothing reflects the social, ethical and religious aspects of American culture more than its literature, and the decade from 1930 to 1940 could not have been more dramatically pictured than it is in Professor Lucecock's book. He does not attempt an aesthetic or literary criticism. It is his intention rather to show "the impact of the dark years on the minds and lives of people, when 'the merry-go-round' broke down."

The decade from 1930 to 1940 was one of confusion, in which "the enchantments of the confident twenties were drowned out by the chorus of ten million unemployed. New forces were emerging; the spirit of sceptical scrutiny was abroad; a new social awareness developed—sheer hunger emerged as a central theme of life and literature." The period is marked by an increased social awareness: "A mountain range in the landscape of the years, shouldering the whole sky, was the titanic government effort in the field of social welfare and recovery from 1933 on." Never before in any ten years of American history has there been such great advancement in the real power of labor. Never before has capitalism been so drastically criticized. Mankind in America during these ten years has truly gone through "the valley of the shadow." In such an age, at best confusing and topsy-turvy, characterized by Professor Lucecock as "an era of erasing in a world of low visibility," one must expect the literature to reflect this instability. Much of the confusion can doubtless be traced to loss of faith in any common body of accepted belief. Hunger and want stalked across the pages of the 1930's. "The ill-fed, ill-clothed, and ill-housed have supplied a proportionately greater number of subjects for literary treatment than in any previous time." Throughout the literature of this period comes the ever recurring realization of floods and dust storms, of wasted land and men. "Labor walked onto the stage of literature and onto the stage of national life as never before," and American readers cannot peruse the popular novels of the day without knowing how it feels to be jobless, to be hungry, to be without a home.

Yet, out of this discovery of American life in the raw we find reflected in the literature of the period a new consciousness of America itself. "It is not too much to say that more interest in American history is being shown today than in any previous generation. We are asking, 'How did we get that way?'" As in every period of confusion, the decade is marked with fear and scepticism, and where fear enters in, tolerance is driven out. "Fear not only coagulates the blood but tends to congeal the humanity of people. The national jitters were well represented in the nation's books."

This was a time, says Professor Lucecock, in which many writers carefully avoided the very appearance of ethical purpose. "But the ethical qualities of experience were inherent in the thing itself. They do not depend on labelling. There is no such thing as literature divorced from moral and religious implications—there is a striking parallel between the most significant religious and theological thinking of the period and much literary interpretation of life and the world. In both there has been a fore-swearing of an easy and superficial optimism."

The author cites the findings of those who write in pictures. With the aid of a candid camera "portraits (are) drawn by the sun on celluloid," describing as never before the bewilderment of a homeless America driven off the field onto the road which leads to nowhere. Books of photographs and moving pictures depict flood and famine, waste of land and manhood that characterize the decade.

The inner life of man has been explored by Steinbeck in "Grapes of Wrath," Gold in "Jews Without Money," Clifford Odets in his many dramas. Willa Cather, Dorothy Canfield, Ellen Glasgow and many others desire the impact of American life upon human personalities.

The depression is felt as an unrelenting in practically all the literature of the period. Mortgages are as central to the theme of modern novels as they were in the days of the black-whiskered villain who foreclosed on the widows' homes. But the modern picture is much more real and is placed in a setting of social significance. "Grapes of Wrath," "Land of the Free," "Tobacco Road," and "O Mice and Men" are dynamic portrayals of American economic problems.

Social issues are as dominant in the drama as in the novel of the 1930's. "We, the People," "Dead End," "Waiting for Lefty," and "Stevedore" are a few of the titles which one remembers on Broadway.

Nor has poetry escaped the emphasis on social problems. Stephen Benet's "Burning City" characterizes the spirit of the time:

"We thought we were done with these things, but we were wrong.

We thought, because we had power, we had wisdom.

We thought the long train would run to the end of Time.

We thought the light would increase. Now the long train stands derailed and the baudits loot it.

Now the bear and the asp have power in our time.

Now the night rolls back on the west and the night is solid.

Our fathers and ourselves sowed dragon's teeth.

Our children know and suffer armed men."

The closing chapter of "American Mirror," presenting a dramatic revolt of American writers against the war system, is preceded by the most significant chapter in the book. Entitled Religion—Implicit and Explicit," it bears out the author's thesis that religion, though seldom expressed explicitly, may be found implicit, emphatically so, in much of the writing of the decade. One cannot miss "the persistent search for values in a time when many traditional faiths and reliances, including religious ones, have been shaken. There has been a search for something to cling to, which is at heart a religious quest." A second indication of religious interest is "the strong, often passionate expression of the inadequacy of the Christian religion and the church to meet contemporary needs of the individual or society . . . not an oratorical onslaught of the complacent and evangelistic 'village atheist' type of mind. . . . Nor is it the exuberance of bad boys joyously hurling rocks through the church windows. It is rather the thoughtful, often reluctant and saddened rejection of the Christian faith as an insecure foundation; or a rejection of its adequacy as a force for necessary social change; or a protest against its organized forms for failing to realize its potentialities."

An increased insistence upon the worth of human personality also runs through the whole of the literature of this period, "arousing awareness of social injustice, descriptions of its effect on human life, and protest against it. . . . There is evident in scores of novels and hundreds of poems the definite sense that in the exploitation of man something precious, even sacred, is being violated."

* * * *

No person who has enjoyed and appreciated the literature of the past decade can afford to overlook this clear, charming, yet challenging interpretation of that literature. No more perfect reflection of our national culture of the 1930's may be wished for than that in Professor Lucecock's "American Mirror."

FAITH FOR LIVING by Lewis Mumford, 333 pages, 1940. Harcourt, Brace and Company, New York. Price, $2.00.

Lewis Mumford has at last come into his own. Increasingly is he being recognized as a profound and original thinker in his own right. More than that, however, for he is realizing the best within himself as his great mind matures and his spirit partakes of grace.

In this most recent brochure, confessedly a "tract for the times," Mumford writes a sequel to his "Men Must Act," the call to arms against fascism published early last year. Then, too, hasty composition of that earlier polemic is avoided in this carefully written work. Pungent sentences and valuable insights abound on every page.

Mumford has long been familiar to many for his studies of architecture and literature. In more recent years he has merited fame by reason of his scholarly "Technics and Civilization" (1934) and "The Culture of Cities" (1938). For the nonce he forsakes the quiet of his study and strides into the arena of warring ideologies.

It is neither accurate nor fair to call Mumford an alarmist as do his smug "intellectual" friends who resent any intrusion of the ivory tower. The simple fact is that he has discerned the demonic nature of fascism and refuses to relent in his merciless attack on this paganism of the present hour. He sounds the wilkin to arouse men that they may "subdue the barbarous mechanisms and the mechanized barbarisms that now threaten the very existence of civilization." It is his thesis that "no matter how long the present war lasts or what its outcome may be, life will be difficult on this planet for another two generations; probably for at least another century. Until fascism is finally defeated there will be no peace for the peaceful, and no happy promise for the unborn. Recovery from this poisoned state will not come fast."

The uniqueness of this book lies in its appreciation of the classical Christian tradition, an awareness not apparent in any other work of Mumford's. He has a grasp of Christianity's portent and content far in excess of the average professional theologian. "The social irresponsibility of the

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The mumps and German measles have entertained quite a number of our children for several weeks. The measles have been light and the children were in only a few days. Most of the children got by with a light case of mumps, except one little girl—I think she had the fattest jaws I ever saw.

One of our girls, Martha Lee Whitten, entered the District High School Music contest, which was held in Durham, N. C., and won the highest place as a soloist. We feel very proud that we have a girl in our institution that has that special talent and ability.

We have one little boy in the hospital this week. He had been ill for several days and was taken right much worse one night in the middle of the night and the matron in charge called the writer and said we ought to call a doctor. We dressed and went over to the building in which he lives. The doctors who look after our children were out on calls and we could not get them. The little fellow had strong symptoms of acute appendicitis. We carried him to the hospital and put him in the care of the doctors there, as we could not afford to take undue risk and responsibility in such a case.

April is here and with it sunshine and warmth. Somehow, March is always a long month, or seems so. We are always glad to welcome the month of April. Everything takes on more life and the buds begin to swell and the flowering shrubs begin to bloom and the crops of small grain turn green and take on new life.

Life seems to be more worth living. One catches the inspiration of nature. As the trees come out in their new spring coats it makes us all feel like we would like to have a new suit, too, and join in whole heartedly in the joys of springtime. What is more pleasure and happiness than to stroll through the forest in the springtime and drink in the works of nature when all the little shrubs and dogwood trees are in full bloom. It makes us realize that God has made us a beautiful world to live in. Then after viewing from His hand the beautiful landscape, the trees and the flowers, we should ask ourselves the question, "Are we appreciative of the many blessings He has given us?"

In Memoriam

LANGSTON.

We, the members of the Dena Ayscue Missionary Society of the Henderson Congregational Christian Church, record the death of Mrs. D. I. Langstou, who passed from earth to heaven on December 22, 1940. She will ever be a guiding star leading onward and upward.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That this society and church has lost one of its most faithful, loyal and devoted members, one who has gladly rendered active and devoted service through a number of years. She patiently bore her suffering with never a complaint.

2. That we realize that God doeth all things well, and we mourn the loss of one who has meant much to her church, home and community. We bow in humble submission to His divine will.

4. That we commend the grief stricken ones to God, who is able to bear them up and to comfort all broken hearts.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be recorded upon the records of the society.

body strong and well. We ask Thee, too, to help cure that other disease that our earthly doctor can not cure. Help her to be kind and loving and happy, for Jesus' sake. Amen."

Medicine time came soon, and for the first time in many days, Abbie swallowed the little tablet that Miss Martin brought to her, and Miss Martin looked so pleased that Abbie smiled a faint, tired little smile herself.

"I guess God heard!" she said.

"He always does," said Miss Martin. "All we need to do to have Him help cure sick bodies, or any other kind of sickness, is just to ask Him, and then help Him ourselves all that we can."—The Sunbeam.

DELIGHT IN GOD'S WORD.

"The statues of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart."—Ps. 19: 7.

The man of God delights in the Word of God. One said, "I delight in the Word of God because I have the Author in my heart." The Psalmist says, "I meditate in God's law day and night." This speaks continual delight. It is really astounding what delight we derive from His Word when we give ourselves to it with the purpose of contemplating its truths.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou alone canst make us and make Thy Word a delight. Grant unto us power now to consecrate ourselves to knowing it and loving it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

IMMORTALITY AND HAPPINESS.

"Set your mind on things that are above."—Col. 3: 2.

Today is Palm Sunday. Next Sunday is Easter. Let us follow our text for every day this week. Easter teaches that we are to live daily in the light of the knowledge that He is to live forever; that we are to set our affections on the spiritual side of life; that we are to endure afflictions patiently because the soul is worth more than the body; that we are to love our fellowman because he is to share this hope.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to see Christ beyond the grave, and live for that beyond, by living Christ's truths and teachings, a simple life, a child-like life and a happy life each day. Amen.

TOOLS FOR TOILERS.

Christian Churches cannot be overcome by lip service. More verbal devotion to the higher ends of life, at Sunday services or mid-week prayer meetings—with picnics and strawberry festivals at odd times—brings with it little of the stern discipline needed to face the present world."

Mumford has dipped freely in the reservoir of Christian theology and has quenched a thirst born of more than mere curiosity. "The marvel is that it (Christ's message) has been kept alive by a handful of faithful souls in every generation, even during the periods of unbridled worldliness and corruption within the Christian Church itself."

He scorns the "pragmatic liberal" of our time who is duped and deceived at every turn, and on whom he heaps abuse for paving the way to another Dark Age. "And because a Dark Age is not included in the liberal chronology, the liberal glibly refuses to accept the evidence of his senses. Like the sundial, he cannot tell time on a stormy day."

One would like to quote at greater length, but perhaps another paragraph will reveal the richness of these pages:

"Man's destiny is a great one because the essence of it is tragic. All that he builds crumbles; all that he embodies turns to dust; all that he loves most, he must one day leave behind him. That which alone endures on earth is the spirit in which he understands and meets his fate. This he passes on to his children and his comrades: only a breath indeed, but the breath of life. Death comes to all; but death comes best to those who are ready to die, so that man may live. The words of Jesus are ultimate in their wisdom: 'He that loseth his life shall find it.'"

Such writing brings light in our darkness. Lewis Mumford is a Christian humanist of our time whose voice should be heard above the din of clashing armies. Reinhold Niebuhr is right: "Such books as Mr. Mumford's are as important as the political and military measures which are now being taken to constitute the remnant of the democratic world into a final bastion of civilization."

This type of book is significant because we need such a faith for living. "What I have uttered is, I hope, no private faith; certainly it is no original one. I but remind the reader of those durable ideals of life which in the past have kept humanity going during its most anguished and shattered moments. Forgetfulness of these ideals has helped to bring on the very catastrophe we must now live through; remembrance of them may help us to survive it."

 13—Easter Sunday. Reception of members. Consecration of babies.
 Mission offering.
 20—First Sunday after Easter.
 27—Second Sunday after Easter.
- April 10—Maundy Thursday. Appropriate time for Holy Communion Service.
 11—Good Friday. A three-hour service based on the seven words from the cross is helpful.
- Missionary Period—March, April, May and June. Ask Missionary Society to present a brief review of the Mission Study books to some Sunday service. If Pastor's Class has not been held, arrange one for new members received Easter.
- Provide a service during the quarter for the Young People, and invite the Senior Class of the local high school as special guests.
- About half of the conference year is gone. Check up on program, objectives, and conference apportionments and see if you are half way with your year's work.
- May 14—Third Sunday after Easter.
 11—Fourth Sunday after Easter—Festival of the Christian Home.
 (Mother's Day.)
 18—Fifth Sunday after Easter—Rural Life Sunday.
 25—Sixth Sunday after Easter—Memorial Sunday.
 30—Memorial Day.
- Plan to send a pastor, women, teachers, and young people to Elon Schools in June.
- Plan for a Vacation Bible School.
- June 1—Pentecost—(Birthday of the Church). Christian Unity Sunday.
 8—Trinity Sunday—Children's Day.
 15—Second Sunday after Pentecost—Father's Day.
 22—Third Sunday after Pentecost.
 29—Fourth Sunday after Pentecost—Nature Sunday.
- June 16-20—School of Missions and Woman's Missionary Conference, Elon College.
 23-28—Elon College Leadership Training School.
- Arrange a "Wedding Bells" or "June Brides" service to which all couples married by the pastor are invited.
- Plan an interesting program for the church and all organizations for the summer to prevent a slump in the work of the church.

RESURRECTION

TODAY is Resurrection! Look not hence
To some far distant trumpet call to sound
That hour when, as the spirit's recompense,
Man's body shall be summoned from the ground.

Earth at this hour is shaken with the passion
Of Resurrection fire.
Stupendous forces move and mold and fashion
Unto God's great desire.

The only death is death in man's perception;
The only grave is grave of blinded eyes;
Creation's marvel mocks at man's deception—
It's man's mind that from its tomb must rise!

Today is Resurrection! Take the word,
Cry it loud to all the waiting earth;
Today is Resurrection! Thou hast heard—
Man must arise unto a nobler birth.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Holy Week services are being conducted this week at Wakefield by the pastor, Rev. B. H. Watkins.

Holy Week services are being conducted this week in Newport News by the minister, Rev. J. H. Dollar.

Rev. Joseph E. McCauley was taken to Stuart Circle Hospital, Richmond, last Friday. It is reported that he is now improving.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is being sent this week as a birthday gift by a brother to his sister in a distant city. This plan is cheerfully commended to others.

The Annual, which has just come from the press, lists no one as pastor of our church in High Point, N. C. That church is now being served by Rev. John Q. Pugh.

Next Sunday's offering for missions should be much the largest we have made in many years. The needs are greatly multiplied—at least by 100—and our ability to give has increased. Please do your best not only in your own giving but also in getting others to give.

Mary's weeping at the tomb of Jesus on the first Easter Morn relieved her own soul, but her message of the resurrected Christ brought joy to the world. So it is with us on this Easter. Let's make the message sound around the world by our witness and our giving.

The excellent review of Halford E. Lucecock's book, American Mirror, which appeared in the last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, was prepared by Dr. D. J. Bowden of Elon College. We are interested to know how many of our people are interested

Last Sunday, the promotional secretary preached at Hines Chapel Christian Church in the morning and met with our Gibsonville Church in a business session in the afternoon. On Thursday night he will hold a communion service at Hines Chapel, and on Sunday he will preach at Waverly, Spring Hill and Centerville Churches in Virginia.

"God's Acre" is a good title for part of the farm many of the readers of this paper will cultivate this year. Why not set apart a certain space on which you will grow something for the church? Perhaps the church could cooperate in cultivating the crop, or it could be an individual project. Much money is needed to make our church move forward in a world like this.

Many of our ministers are familiar with, and interested in, the Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching at Yale University. This year, April 15-17, they will be given by Dr. Ralph Washington Sockman, minister of Christ Methodist Church, New York City. The general title of the series will be "Prophets, Yea, More." Two lectures a day will be delivered as follows: I. A Voice in the Wilderness: Our Contemporary Confusion. II. A Reed in the Wind: The Relative and the Absolute. III. A Prophet: A Voice of Authority. IV. More Than a Prophet: Preparing the Way of the People. V. The Least in the Kingdom: The Means of Grace. VI. The Children of Wisdom vs. the Children of the Market Place.

UPPER ALAMANCE FELLOWSHIP.

On Sunday, March 30, the Upper Alamance Fellowship had the best attended sessions of its career. The young people came and the Bethel Church was filled to capacity for the afternoon session and comfortably filled in the evening.

The program was provided by young people and each did splendidly. The older folk felt the young people were a little long with their talks. Now, what do you think of that! But the young people had something to say, and what they said impressed the adults.

Mr. Samuel Barber retired as president of the Fellowship with this meeting. He is a young person just about to move out the age limit and he has made an interested, enthusiastic and consecrated leader. Under his administration the Fellowship has progressed and seems now to be well established.

Rev. Melvin H. Dollar is the new president. This young minister is a man after the writer's own heart. He is not afraid to try to do things—and he is doing things. Privately, we think of him as "Mile-a-Minute Dollar." That is because he goes fast and is always going.

The next Fellowship meeting will be held June 29. The new officers will announce the place of meeting and the program.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE.

DR. RAYMOND ACCEPTS CALL TO CHARLESTON.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Circular Congregational Church of Charleston, S. C. Dr. Raymond concluded his services at Damascus and Oak Grove last Sunday and will preach his farewell sermon at Eure next Sunday. His ministry in Charleston will begin on April 20.

The Charleston Church was organized in 1681 and its 260 years of service makes it the oldest of our churches in the South and one of the oldest in the nation.

The friends of the former pastor, Rev. George N. Edwards, will regret learning that his retirement was made necessary by a cerebral thrombosis. His wife have gone to live in their home in Palma Sola, near Bradenton, Fla.

Dr. Raymond has rendered constructive service in North Carolina and Virginia and his many friends wish him every success in the historic city of Charleston.

REV. A. GREIG RITCHIE ORDAINED.

The Bethel Congregational Christian Church, Elkton, was the scene of an ordination of interest to people of the Valley Conference, and of special interest to Group No. 2, when their pastor, Rev. A. Greig Ritchie was ordained. The ordination began at three o'clock with presiding Elder Roy Larrick, Winchester, conference president, in charge. Ministers taking part were: Rev. R. A. Whitten, Winchester; Floyd Fulk, of Elkton U. B. Church; Rev. W. J. Andes, Durham, N. C.; Rev. Paul Sanger, Linville. Rev. Whitten preached the ordination sermon with Rev. Fulk reading the scripture and offering the prayer. Rev. Paul B. Sanger gave the charge to the people and Rev. Whitten the charge to the pastor.

The church was decorated with cut flowers. The guests were entertained at various homes following the ordination. They returned to the church basement at six o'clock and were served a delicious lunch by the ladies.

The installation service began at eight o'clock (candle light service). Rev. Ritchie was installed as pastor

The Southern Convention

By DR. J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, Secretary.

At long last, The Annual, Volume Sixty-Nine, is off the press and ready for distribution. As a permanent record whether it is off the press in January or July is of no moment; as a reference book for convention, conference and church officials it should be ready for distribution in December.

* * *

Your secretary has a plan, which if adopted, can make this possible. Let each conference secure for its sessions the services of a typist and a typewriter, and as the reports are adopted let them be then and there copied in duplicate. As the secretary records the procedure of the conference let this be copied in duplicate. Let each secretary use his assistants for the compilation of the church reports. Within five days after adjournment the minutes and statistical reports for each conference could be forwarded to the secretary of the Convention. Within five days of the receipt of the last such reports the secretary of the Convention could have the complete manuscript ready for the printer. Such a plan would not be expensive for any conference or the Convention.

* * *

In a publication so large, with so many editors and of such a nature errors will appear. Probably these should be corrected in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Attention is hereby called to two of these. In the section given over to statistical tables in Table No. 2—The Convention Funds, in the first column and fourth section it should read: Elon College Fund—$12,500. In Table No. 3—Total Conference Apportionments, in the seventh column the figure $4,500 should be preceded by a "brace," for in North Carolina the three conferences are served by the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference.

* * *

Attention of conference officials, and more especially those having to do with conference apportionments, is called to Table No. 2—The Convention Funds. It will be observed that not one of the seven funds of the Convention is apportioned in full to the churches.

* * *

Probably there needs to be a revision of these apportionments. In only one fund for each did the Eastern and Western Conferences raise fifty percent of the sum asked by the Convention. But the Western Conference raised seventy-nine percent of the apportionments set up by the conference itself. The North Carolina and Virginia Conference percentages are high due to the fact the moneys raised by the Burlington Church are now credited to the conference while its apportionment by the Convention has not been increased.

* * *

When the Burlington Church withdrew from the Western Conference it was felt by some of the officials of the conference that would be a serious blow. The officials of the Burlington Church, however, felt the conference would benefit. Financially the records of Volume Sixty-Nine when compared with those of Volume Sixty-Five, indicate the giving in the Western Conference for missions and benevolences has increased seventy-two percent, the total giving seventy-five percent. Of course these percentages are arrived at by deducting the report of the Burlington Church in the records of Volume Sixty-Five.

STUDENTS OF OUR CHURCH.

One of the places wherein the Southern Convention is lacking is its work among college or university students. Throughout the Convention one gets the feeling that we have no students in any college except Elon College. And we do want to thank God for our own college and for our students there. It has been the center of our Christian educational work and we could not well afford to lose it. On the other hand, what about all of the students from our own church in the other colleges and universities.

Recently the writer has visited several institutions in North Carolina. He found only one Congregational Christian group of students that was organized and held regular meetings. This group has forty-six students in it from our own church. There are approximately 500 students in colleges and universities in North Carolina that belong to the Congregational Christian denomination. How many are there in Virginia? What place in our church program is there for the students? THE CHRISTIAN SUN never speaks of them unless a student from Elon College writes an article. At our Convention meetings or in our Conference gatherings, nothing is said about the place of students, although we speak of young people's work under the name of Pilgrim Fellowship. There is no student conference in our church in the Southern Convention. There is a tendency to think of the students as the parents possibly conclude: They've gone off to school, now. When they leave our churches for school, nothing can be done until they return.

Rather important that these students learn to know each other and formulate their lives according to the patterns of a Christian community. They need to know our church, its history and for what it stands. In college or in university, these students plan their lives and the aftermath is what they plan during these important school days. Is it no wonder that our ministerial roll is short, our new missionaries from this area just don't come, our church in the South fails so many times to catch a larger vision of the Kingdom of God on earth?

The chairman of the Board of Christian Education and a few other people are interested in this situation and are anxious to do something about it. This area is a neglected one. Perhaps it should be the work of the Mission Board, also. Whoever's job it is, the fact remains that something must be done about it. We have quibbled so long over details of who is going to do this or that and in the meantime the partially erected building is gradually crumbling down. If we were to lay great and solid foundations for God's kingdom today in the lives of these students of ours, the universal church would be strong tomorrow.

W. J. ANDES.

THANKS!

Through the generosity of several ministers, some churches, the Valley of Virginia Conference, and several laymen, I was able to send a check to the Southern Convention treasurer at the end of March so the work of the Convention Office can continue through April with all bills paid. I am deeply grateful to all who had a share in this good work.

With the help of those who are interested, it is expected that such a check can be sent each month through the year. This will make the office financially secure. We are now working on faith—faith in the people of the Southern Convention. Your help is going to increase that faith.

F. C. LESTER.

“SAY IT WITH FLOWERS”?

This slogan does not appear in the concordance, and there is no evidence that it has Scriptural origin or authority. It was obviously “coined” by, and for, the florist. A revealing study might be made in our churches concerning the statistics and stewardship of expenditures for flowers as compared to the contributions for missions.

There is a note in the last issue of the “Missionary Herald” stating that “some of Miss Annie Crosby Strong’s friends, instead of sending flowers to the funeral, sent money to Ingrati, China, as a memorial to her. How appropriate!

Our people are being asked, not to give expensive flowers for a funeral, but to give money as a memorial to a great missionary leader, Dr. J. O. Atkinson. The form and fragrance of the most expensive and exquisite flower will soon perish. But an investment in missions is an investment in human life and eternal life. “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.”

Jesus was buried, was he not, in a garden? The garden and the flowers were there. But when the sorrowing ones sought him there, he had quickly forsaken his fragrant habitation and his ineffable presence had hastened to share the dust and discouragement of the Emmaus Road. The only garden that could retain the Master was the garden of prayer. Simple or expensive corsages can never tell the whole Easter message. A worthy missionary offering is the most convincing testimony to our faith in “Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel.”

COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY STUDENTS.

W. J. Andes has written a conscience-disturbing article concerning, “Students of Our Church.” This article merits careful consideration and should prompt further discussion among our readers. After genuinely confessing our sins of omission or negligence we may search for some constructive suggestions.

One partial and possible solution presents itself. We have in North Carolina and Virginia a number of churches within reach of colleges and universities. These churches may exercise their full stewardship by establishing some definite, workable relationship with these students. Local conditions and individual problems vary the character and frequency of these relationships. The constant sharing or exchange of methods and programs would greatly enrich our fellowship and strengthen our organization.

In our church generally we have relied too heavily on student pastors and have failed to utilize assistant pastors. This may be one index to our weakness. Student pastors either facetiously recount or painfully confess their blundering ministries and administrative boners. Unfortunate ministerial patterns are often set in these student pastorates which are totally lacking in supervision. The opportunity for observation and participation in a well administered church coupled with the sympathetic guidance of an experienced minister may be of inestimable value during the formative years of ministerial experience. Really, is it not a short-sighted policy to turn over to our weaker churches the important task of properly initiating our ministerial students? Perhaps this is another instance in which “the strong (churches) should bear the burdens of the weak.”

Let us say that we have a half dozen churches capable of sponsoring and utilizing ministerial students or religious workers during college or seminary training. This would mean that our Southern Convention would be carefully schooling six religious leaders every three or four years. The cumulative effect of this systematic procedure would be far-reaching in the total life of our church. Much of our traditional inefficiency and loss of motion would be eliminated.

Students, ministers and churches would profit by this arrangement. Whereas the student pastor usually goes to his church once or twice each month, the assistant pastor would gain experience daily or weekly. Students serving on the church staff would serve as intermediaries between the church and the college students of our denomination. Not the least of all the benefits would be the assistance rendered to our overworked ministers. This is a field for study, experiment and development. The future of our ministry and the life of our churches are involved. What is your solution?

AN EASTER PRAYER.

Eternal God on this Easter day of triumph over sin and death, we thank Thee for Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, for the love and tenderness, the glory and power of his living presence.

May His promise that because He lives, we shall live also, remove from us all fear and doubt. May the power of His resurrection be made manifest today in the lives of wearied, suffering and persecuted people everywhere.

May we arise today in victory over the dead past of selfishness and sin into newness of life to reconsecrate ourselves to the service of our living Lord. Inspire in us new faith in the resurrection of justice and righteousness, in the invincible might of truth and goodness, in the ultimate triumph of His cause throughout the earth.

May His radiant presence be revealed anew today to Thy people in all lands, to the missionaries of His cross, to statesmen and all others in authority, to the end that peace may come, and all Thy children dwell together in unity and brotherhood, turning their energies and their resources to the consummation of that abundant and eternal life for which He lived and died and rose again. Amen.—Church Calendar Service.

AN ADDRESS BY COL. J. E. WEST.

Madam President, Members of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference, and Friends:

I appreciate most sincerely your cordial invitation to speak to you on this occasion. On behalf of the members of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches I thank you for your contributions to missions in money, education, enthusiasm and sacrifice. You have always been an inspiration to our board. Under our set-up, since the death of our beloved Mission Secretary, Dr. J. A. Atkinson, the responsibility of the president has been greater notwithstanding the board's valuable and most efficient secretary, Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker. I, therefore, beg of you increased interest, support and prayers that we may carry on successfully the great work in which Dr. Atkinson spent the last twenty-five or thirty years of his life. To the glory of God and in honor of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, we are asking the members of the Southern Convention to increase their mission offerings and especially the Easter offerings in churches and Sunday schools that take such an offering. As the board operates on less than one percent overhead, we are setting up no machinery except asking each pastor to appoint a layman, not laywomen, as mission leader in each local church and working through regular channels. The woman's board contributes around one half of the total receipts of the Mission Board and any increase by your board, Sunday schools, churches, individuals and specials will be credited to the Honor Fund. While our primary purpose is to increase offerings for missions, we emphasize payment in full of all conference apportionments.

The Mission Board and the Conference Committees on Home Missions are interested in the welfare of every church, besides a church for every pastor and a pastor for every church, and payment in full of conference apportionments, if equitably apportioned, is one of the signs of a healthy church.

Let it be understood that the Honor Fund is in no way intended to take the place of a more tangible memorial to Dr. Atkinson or to prevent the woman's board or any other group from leading in such a memorial, which, I trust, will be a suitable memorial from the entire church to a great missionary leader.

The most important problem confronting the Eastern Virginia Conference is to stop the decline in Sunday school membership and increase the percentage of Sunday school members to total membership of churches.

For several years the Conference Committee on Home Missions has talked about this condition and at the 1939 Conference the Committee on Sunday Schools confirmed the facts, said they had no recommendation as to the solution of the problem and asked to be excused, which was done.

The 1940 Christian Annual shows percent of Sunday school members to church members as follows: Eastern Virginia, 64; North Carolina and Virginia, 74; Western North Carolina, 95; Eastern North Carolina, 62; Valley of Virginia, 62—but none of them show such percentage of decline in membership as Eastern Virginia.

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover of the F. B. I. said recently: "Non-church children are furnishing the criminals of tomorrow."

C. Melville Wright of the New Jersey Christian Layman's Commission said, "Fifteen million American school children get no religious training whatever."

Perhaps in our Sunday School Convention we have paid more attention to training teachers than we have to going out in the by-ways and hedges and bringing the children to the Sunday schools. The State of Virginia is interested in school buildings, but more in educating every child and hence a compulsory school attendance law. Here is work for everybody in the Sunday school and church whether you are able to contribute money or not.

I know of no better subject for consideration than "Christ for the Crisis." I was born soon after the war between the States and saw Virginia struggle under the hardships, privations and sufferings of reconstruction and the rule of aliens to our State who were almost as bad as the taskmasters of Egypt over the children of Israel. I saw our boys march to the Spanish-American War under the leadership of President McKinley, when he re-united the nation in spirit as well as in fact, by the appointment of former Confederate Generals as Brigadier Generals in the army and by asking that on National Memorial days flowers be placed alike on the graves of those who wore the blue and grey. And when the war had ended, I saw America emerge as a world power and with world-wide responsibilities, and then we remembered the American flag never beats a retreat and knows no defeat. Again in 1917, I saw idealism reach the highest point in all the history of America and our boys sailed the seas to fight the battles of democracy in Europe under that fearless leader and great statesman, President Woodrow Wilson. They fought a war to end war but it did not end war. He did what no other man has ever done since Jesus came. He created in the hearts of all men a desire for peace. Regardless of what others may believe, I believe that if the victors in the World War had followed the lead of President Wilson there would be no war today. Our present World War is the worst of all. Whither we are going I know not and where and when it will end I know not. I am bewildered. I favor aid to Britain, but I believe America should drop on her knees in prayer, repentance and confession of our sins to God as the Leader of our nation and proclaim to the world, "Christ for the crisis." There will be no lasting peace until there is peace in the hearts of mankind.

For a solution, let America turn to Washington's source of strength. I quote from the Sunday School Times:

"Everywhere today the supreme question is, 'To whom can we turn for help that is sufficient.' The more men know of the soul of Washington, the more they realize that he had, in a bitter, cruel world, found the source of peace. The source was in believing prayer to God in terrible crises. Early each morning, in the snow, at Valley Forge, he beat his own well-worn path to the thicket; and there, on his knees, pleaded with God for mercy upon the Colonies—unto His glory. Like Abraham—all seeming to the contrary—he trusted God to bring victory such as should seem good to the all-wise and all-powerful God, motivated by his perfect love. Despite the apparent hopelessness of his just cause; despite the pitifully small numbers of his faithful 'Ragged Regimentals'; despite their lack of blankets, warm clothing, and stout shoes, Washington prayed on in full trust. Can any of us today, in the present unparalleled world crisis, find a more adequate source of spiritual strength than that possessed by the Father of Our Country?"

Washington believed in both personal and national salvation. Few statesmen believed as he did in morality and religion as foundation stones for a great nation. In his farewell address to the American people he said, in part:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. And let us indulge with caution the supposition that morality

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The spring rally for the woman's missionary societies of Gates, Nansemond, Isle of Wight and Southampton Counties, was held at Liberty Spring Church, Wednesday, April 2. The weather was favorable and the attendance was large. Two hundred and twenty-seven tickets were sold for lunch at the the noon hour. Liberty Spring lived up to its good reputation for serving excellent meals at church. The ladies of that church know how to prepare and serve good meals at home—and they have set a high standard of excellency for this kind of service in their church.

The pastor was unable to be present on account of a recent illness, so he cannot give a first-hand account of the meeting. Fortunately, a good wife has the capacity to make a fair estimate and bring home an accurate report of the proceedings. From this very favorable report your correspondent herewith submits an account for readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Mrs. E. P. Jones of Franklin presided with grace and efficiency. She delivered a very interesting and helpful message which challenge the societies to undertake a larger work with greater devotion and enthusiasm. Mrs. A. C. Moore of the Bethlehem Church was secretary and performed the duties of that office with ease and satisfaction to all. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Emmett C. Skinner, of Liberty Spring Church; Vice-President, Mrs. H. V. White, of Holland, Va.; Secretary, Mrs. A. C. Moore of Bethlehem.

The principal speaker outside the area included in this District, was Dr. Frank Lewis, pastor of the Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. Many of those present heard him on that occasion for the first time. He captivated the audience by his timely message and his eloquent appeal. It was refreshing to hear a speaker, willing to give himself to the task of delivering his message, with warm-hearted enthusiasm and well chosen language. Intense earnestness and deep conviction will always find a favorable hearing when wisely used with sincere consecration. The great majority of younger speakers appear to be economical with earnestness. The prevailing method of public speaking in many areas is to stand up and talk. Many seem to fear their voices will be heard outside the building. Quiet talking may be more acceptable than loud-speaking, and a message is not to be judged on the basis of noise—but on its merit and its appeal to the human heart. Dr. Lewis, in the opinion of those reporting to the writer, made a profound impression upon the audience.

The missionary work among our women and young people seems to be taking on new interest in the Eastern Virginia Conference. The presence of the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson, who served with great acceptance as Mission Secretary, was greatly missed. The seed sown by him are bringing forth an abundant harvest. The wise church of the present time will accept its share in the responsibility of trying to increase the missionary work, at home and in foreign fields. The present tendency to make this nation a military arsenal, to convert all the wealth, talents, skill, earnings, material resources into instruments of death and destruction should arouse the church to the seriousness of its own danger. Word has gone out that 110,000 acres of land in Virginia will soon be converted into a military base. All churches, schools, private homes, farms and churches in this area must be evacuated for military purposes. If the churches do not call a halt, the day may soon come when the United States will own all the land, the industries, the means of transportation, the wealth—and devote these great resources to the perpetuation of some form of political and military dictatorship. The present military program may become a great menace to our free institutions unless it is undergirded by the missionary movement of the Church of Jesus Christ. The church must extend its missionary program or perish.

THE RESURRECTION.

There are certain things more desirable than life. These precious things, however, are of no value apart from life. The tragic happenings of the world seem to cheapen life; life is destroyed in the mass. We breathe a sigh of regret and hope for better days. Seldom has Easter come to the world in more distressing times. War threatens to embrace all peoples, the missiles of death fly thick and fast. Life is in danger wherever it exists. The anxiety, the grief, the distress and sorrow of these times could hardly be overstated. The true Christian, with a sigh of hope exclaims with Paul, "If in this life, only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men, most miserable." The message of Easter takes us beyond the experience of the day to hopes and joys of eternity.

The Easter message, however, is not only for the life after this life but it means strength and encouragement for the present. Tested and tried by every known emergency, the hope of Christianity in our hearts enables us to endure and make our contribution to a needy world.

Totalitarian authorities of the world would not only overthrow democracy, but would destroy Christianity. Christianity seeks to redeem and dignify the individual. The totalitarian movement would exalt the state at the expense of the individual, disavowing for him any personal rights or privileges when those rights and privileges were disadvantageous to the state.

In the Revelation of God through Christ, we become priests and kings unto God. Every man in his own right and name may become boldly to the throne of Christ with his confessions and petitions, with the assurance that the same shall be recognized and granted graciously according to the measure of faith.

Nations and empires may discredit the Christian gospel and by formal edicts banish God and Christianity and still the light of hope lingers in individual hearts and faith in the everlasting Christ continues to impart courage and assurance to those who continue to cherish the hope that was first in the hearts of our fathers and now doth abide within our own hearts. In these days of war and destruction, the church will not escape without injury. Christianity must bear the scars of conflict. The strong-holds of faith may be overrun and yet the doctrines of Christ, the message of Easter, and the hope of eternity must live.

Christ came to save the world and he will complete his mission before the world falls. Faith shall not perish from the earth but the Kingdom shall come in its fullness. It is opportune for the church to gird itself, proclaim its peace and rest on the promises of Almighty God.

May our church, the Christian Church, arise to the opportunities of this Easter occasion and give itself without reserve that one, even Christ, may be exalted in as its Master, and give of its substance without stint that the gospel of Christ may go to the ends of the earth, even though the sound of battle be heard in our land.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

I returned from Norfolk, Va., last Monday to find that something had happened in Sanford while we were away. Spring had come to Sanford! Buds are peeping out of the end of the twigs on the trees. Robins are sitting down backwards in our garden as they try to unearth their supper. Here comes a dash of blue—it's a blue jay looking for a meal. That blossom on the end of the clothesline prop turns out to be a cardinal.

Friday, I went to our Spring Missionary Rally at Hank's Chapel. There I made some new friends but said "hello" to a number of old friends. Many of you know the Rev. W. J. Andes, pastor of Hank's Chapel, from whom I did Student Summer Service work in the Valley of Virginia. But the friend whom I met there whom I had known the longest, was Mrs. Williams, the guest speaker. When I was going to high school in Tampa, Fla., I attended and was a member of the Congregational Church. We had a mother and daughter banquet at our church. Our speaker was the extension worker for Florida, "Mary Ann" Jeffreys. She told me of how she used to do Student Summer Service work in North Carolina. I like Mary Ann so much that I told myself, "I want to be like her. One day I shall do Student Summer Service work." Mary Ann married Mr. Williams, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill of North Carolina came to take over her extension work. We came to love Pattie Lee as dearly as we had loved Mary Ann. You can imagine how happy I was to hear Mary Ann, as Mrs. Williams, bring a wonderful message to our missionary group.

I want to tell you one of the stories which she brought to us. It is a missionary story of a Bible woman in China. I hope you will like it as much as I did.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

MA JAUNG.

Ma Jaung was not exactly a nurse, but she was a very important person in a hospital in China. The young American nurses liked her because they had received their training in America, and not being used to Chinese ways, they often wanted Chinese patients to do the American way when the Chinese way was more comfortable for her people. The Chinese patients loved her because she helped the American nurses to understand how to make them more comfortable in their usual customs but most of all because she was the Bible woman and told them stories of Jesus and his way of living.

Ma Jaung came to the hospital early in the morning and remained there until late at night. Cheering the sick, telling them stories of the Bible, showing them the Christ way of living by her own life. The patients and nurses just didn't see what they should do if it were not for her comforting, helpful presence. But one day Ma Jaung did not show up at the hospital. Her son had been stricken with a deadly disease. The nurses and doctors did everything in their power to fight this enemy but it worked very swiftly. Poor Ma Jaung's son died and she was sad and heavy hearted. It wasn't easy for her to go on with her work but she did.

Ma Jaung still had her little daughter to love. This little girl was the joy of her life. But one terrible day this little daughter was stricken with the same disease which had taken the life of the son. Ma Jaung just didn't see how she could live without her dear little daughter. She watched over the little sick girl and prayed that she might live. Every nurse and doctor did everything that they knew to do to help the little girl live.

One day, Ma Jaung decided that the little girl just couldn't get well because she was so terribly ill. So, Ma Jaung sent the material and pattern for the little grave garment to the nurses at the hospital, so that they could make her burial clothes. She also gave the carpenter an order for the coffin box. The nurses could not sleep, they were so anxious about the little girl. They worked and watched and waited. The night of the crisis came and the doctors said that they did not see how the frail little body could keep its spark of life. The minutes passed as slowly as hours, the long night finally ended. In the morning, Ma Jaung's little daughter was alive. She had passed the crisis and would get well! Ma Jaung was the happiest person in all China that day. All of her friends rejoiced with her. The nurses were glad that they had a small share in helping Ma Jaung's daughter to live. Ma Jaung came back to the hospital with a new and brighter smile and more wonderful stories from the Bible for her patients.

EASTER SUNDAY.

You will go to church on Easter Sunday dressed in your new spring clothes. They will be bright and gay like newly bloomed blossoms. Your dark, heavy winter things will be put aside. You will feel that life begins anew. Some of you will be as I, you will not have new things but you will try to bring new life to your old clothes for Easter Day. All of you will think of Jesus and the First Easter Day! You will pray the Heavenly Father to make you lovely inside, that you, too, might live a beautiful life of love and service as Jesus came to teach you to live. Again we will know that he is not dead because he lives in our hearts.

NORTH CAROLINA MISSIONARY RALLIES.

About 400 women, most of the ministers, and several laymen attended the Missionary Rallies conducted by the seven districts of the North Carolina woman's Missionary Conference last week. There were four places of meeting. When two rallies met together the superintendent of one district and the secretary of that district presided and kept the minutes in the morning and the officers of the other district performed in the afternoon. This was a fine demonstration of how the women work together harmoniously.

The guest speaker for the rallies was Mrs. Robert G. Williams of Florida who is president of the Florida women and president of the annual meeting of the Women Presidents of the denomination. Mrs. Williams charmed her audiences with a report of her trip to the General Council meeting in California last summer, an account of the Mid-Winter Meetings at Evanston, Ill., and a ringing challenge to share in the missionary enterprise of our day.

Another very interesting feature of the program was what a woman had to say concerning "What the Missionary Society Expects of the Minister," and the reply of a minister on "What I Expect of My Missionary Society." The women made it very clear that they expect the ministers to share with them in the missionary work, to inspire them, to aid in presenting the message to the whole church, to keep them up to date on missionary education, and to really be a leader in this phase of the church work. The ministers in turn seemed to expect the missionary women to be missionaries, to live that kind of life, to be loyal to the church, and to really work at their job.

The state treasurer reported that the societies have gone slightly beyond the half-way mark in reaching the financial goal this year. All societies reported, and most of them are doing aggressive work and are hopeful of reaching the standard of excellence.

All rallies were attended by the state president, Mrs. W. E. Wissethman; superintendent of literature,

Mrs. F. C. Lester; the secretary of the Mission Board, Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker; and the promotional secretary, F. C. Lester. Mrs. Williams and the two Lesters gave a panel discussion on literature and methods of work. Announcements were made concerning the Woman's School of Missions and their Convention which are to meet at Elon College on June 16-20 and of the proposed Memorial Fund for the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

Officers for the new year were elected. They are to take office after the annual missionary conference in October. Mrs. Jerry Strader of Burlington will lead the Alamance District; Miss Frankye Marshall, the Guilford-Rockingham; Mrs. E. M. Carter, Vance-Warren; Mrs. Kathleen Glenn, Durham-Wake; Mrs. Joe Dunn, Halifax; Mrs. R. L. Ross, Chatham-Lee-Moore; and Mrs. Hugh York, Randolph.

MRS. ROBERT G. WILLIAMS.

The missionary women of North Carolina are really trying to measure up to the needs of our church in this day. Success is crowning their efforts.

F. C. LESTER.

A CONVENTION MISSIONARY.

Sounds crude, doesn't it? Perhaps it might be a little worn with the passing of time. Yet, such a need exists today within the limits of our Southern Convention. The early missionary endeavors of the Christian Church in America were those of men known as "Conference Missionaries," or "Frontier Missionaries," or "Children's Missionaries," etc. These men were employed by the Home Missionary Department of the American Christian Convention and they were sent into various conferences to assist in resurrecting old churches, establishing new churches and supplying the pastorless churches. Perhaps you might call him a "floating preacher" (floating power in a car is highly recommended today). He might save a lot of jolts in the shifting of pastors (or gears within the car) within the Convention.

What might be his task? Today there are a number of pastorless churches within our Convention, and there is a little hope of finding an immediate pastor. There are some churches that need a new start or a little tonic to stimulate them—Six Forks, near Durham, N. C., is a good example. A minister needs to go there and stay with them several months, get things started and line the church up again with regular ministers of our church. Some churches are split so wide open that you would think the sheep and the goats had already been designated and the Day of Judgment had passed. Other churches have such huge programs in progress that it is not fair to the church to keep it without a pastor for several months until a new man can be secured. There are a plenty of tasks for such a home missionary. There are plenty of places that we need to build new churches (church first, and then the building).

This task is such a huge one that we, as a Convention, ought to encourage our Mission Board in this undertaking. This Mission Period is one in which the Convention ought to see its mission work, both home and foreign, in the light of the work that is to be done and in the light of what materials we have with which to accomplish the necessary work. The above task as a Convention Missionary is almost a necessity, for without something being done, many of our small and weak churches shall close their doors. Our home mission task is a great one today. It is much more than simply appropriating money to churches in debt and to new churches. Many of our churches are as the land on which they stand and which surrounds them. The best part of the land has washed away or has been farmed until it is worth nothing. But that land can be reclaimed and reworked by soil conservation projects. So can our apparently washed up churches be reclaimed. It will take some new thought on the part of the Mission Board and some new work on the part of the Convention as a whole.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Africa Helps. — From Bailundo, Angola, West Africa, a beautiful letter and a sacrificial gift came to the American Board treasurer from Um-bundu Christian women to sufferers from wars' horrors in Europe. The amount sent was $39.00. The letter said in part: "This news has brought us keenest sorrow. We wish we might help in some way. . . . This gift goes with our Christian love." The money came out of keenest poverty. The missionary who sent the letter for the women stated that she could not understand how it was possible for them to do this but that even in this difficult year they had refused to reduce their gifts to others. In addition the Bailundo Congregational Church is carrying on some "foreign missionary work" of its own among the Esole tribes and has helped straitened Finnish missionaries who are working among the Kuanyama people.

"Mei Yu Fa Tzu."—Is the slogan of despair so well know to millions in occupied China. "There is no solution!" "The water in this village is very alkaline," commented Mr. Lui, co-worker with Harold W. Robinson of Tehsien, North China, as they ate their sparse lunch. It was a relief area. They learned then that a man had committed suicide the night before in the only good well, so the water could not be used. This man had pulled through a grim winter. His hopes were pinned on the wheat harvest. The rains failed. In the hot, dry wind his wheat died. He saw only starvation ahead and his courage broke. "To people who live in such an atmosphere it has been a comfort to learn that there are still those who care. The reputation of the Christian Church has been greatly enhanced," says Mr. Robinson, referring to relief gifts from American Christians.

Stepping Stones to Peace.—Last Christmas, Edward H. Smith of Foochow, China, distributed more than 400 pairs of warm woolen wristlets made by Christian women in Connecticut for poor children and war orphans in China. He says, "Never will these cold little children forget the warmth of gratitude to these Christian friends in America which they felt on the birthday of Christ." There came also bags of clothing from friends in California. The gratitude of the poor in that war-torn country was touching. These are what Mr. Smith calls "Stepping stones to world peace."

"Friends Who Are Our Enemies."—A high tribute is paid to Pastor Ntuli of Chikore, East Africa, by Mr.

and Mrs. John P. Dysart. "He is deeply spiritual and has a fine personality," they report. He has asked them to set aside every Monday night for prayers and a discussion of some of some of the great Bible themes. On one such night Mr. and Mrs. Dysart and Pastor Ntuli discussed the gravity of the situation in France and all Europe. Then this African pastor said, "No matter what misfortune comes my way I shall not lose faith in the fatherhood of God." This statement recalled to mind a prayer which he had made on another occasion, saying, "O God, help us to love our friends who are our enemies."—Missionary Herald.

ADDRESS BY COL. WEST.

can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

I wish it could be sounded throughout the nation today by speech, press and radio that morality cannot be maintained without religion and that this nation was founded as a religious nation. "In God We Trust" was stamped on our coins many years ago. So long as the nation puts religion first, ahead of morality, education and wealth, the nation will survive. This is a part of your duty and mine.

It is the duty of the followers of Jesus not only to render every possible assistance to missionaries in foreign lands with money, sympathy, prayers and fellowship, but we must keep America for Christ. Every American seems willing to sacrifice in material things and high taxes to save Britain and the democracies. What is the church willing to do in the way of tithes and offerings to not only keep America safe but to save the world for Christ? In the World War America not only reached the highest point in idealism but also in gifts to religion and benevolent causes so that our mission treasuries were filled to overflowing. It seems that the government of the U. S. will surpass herself in the spending of money to again save the world for democracy, and my prayer is that the church of God will arouse from its apparent indifference and lethargy and surpass its record in the World War period, in gifts to religion and benevolences. May the Christian and Congregational Churches share in such a blessed programme.

ELON STUDENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Dr. Brewer Eddy paid a most beneficial visit to the Elon campus this past semester. His pleasing personality along with his wide knowledge of missions in this country and abroad made him a quick, yet lasting friend with all the students who met him. On Sunday morning, Dr. Eddy preached at the eleven o'clock service. In the afternoon, he very graciously met with a group and led a most enlightening discussion on the religious, economic and political conditions of our world today.

The Freshman S. C. A. have taken it upon themselves to raise funds to enable us to send a Chinese student through college in his native land. The Freshmen are working hard in devising ways and means for raising the necessary amount.

The S. C. A. sent a deputation to North Carolina State College to conduct a worship service. The following week North Carolina State sent a group to Elon to lead our regular Sunday night vesper service. As is their hospitable custom, Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Bowden entertained this deputation at supper following the service.

Just prior to spring holidays, the S. C. A., in conjunction with other members of the World Student Christian Federation, sponsored the sale of small crosses to raise funds for the Student Christian Movement and its great work throughout the world.

Immediately after the vacation, the S. C. A. will elect its officers for next year. Plans are now underway for a pageant to be presented on Easter Sunday. On Easter morning, we hope to conduct a sunrise service.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP RALLY PLANNED.

On Sunday, April 20, at 2:30 o'clock, the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship Conference will meet for its spring rally at Shallow Ford Christian Church, near Elon College. At the meeting one person from each young people's group is asked to give a brief report of their recent activities and program.

Officers for the new year will be elected at this session.

Plans for the meeting include an address on "Summer Activities for Young People" and a review of Otto Nall's book, "Move On, Youth!"

Every church in the conference is urged to be well represented at this rally which promises to be a profitable and inspiring meeting. Each one is asked to bring a picnic supper which will precede the closing vesper service.

MEBANE PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP ORGANIZED.

Young people of the Mebane Christian Church report that they organized a Pilgrim Fellowship group on March 23, with eleven members. Officers for the year are: President, Rev. Ellis Clark; Vice-President, Mrs. Peyton Mace; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Nannie Fowler; Reporter, Forrest Harmon. This group seems to have gotten off to a good start, and anticipates a continuing increase in membership. They are planning a campfire program to be held Saturday, April 26.

FOR THE SUMMER.

With summer only two brief months away, young people should begin making definite plans for attending the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. It is a fair appraisal of the Summer School to say that no more inspiring and creative experience is afforded the young people of the Southern Convention. Summer Conferences are more than the opportunity to establish new friendships and gain new ideas. They are vital experiences in Christian living. Many young people mark them as the beginning of their entrance into the Christian life. And countless others name them as the deepest sources of spiritual growth.

Some of our young people might like to investigate the possibilities of participating in one of the Work Camp projects being sponsored this summer by the National Council of Pilgrim Fellowship. These Work Camps are an opportunity to do constructive manual labor and to engage in a creative experiment in Christian living. The camp nearest to us will be Wadley, Ala. Those interested should write to Tom Keehn, National Social Action Chairman, 600 West 122nd Street, New York City.

THE TEST OF DISCIPLESHIP.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR APRIL 20, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: John 15: 8-17.

Daily Readings—

Monday—Sincerity—Matt. 21: 28-32.
Tuesday—Singleness of Purpose—Luke 14: 26.
Wednesday—Soberness—I Thess. 5: 4-10.
Thursday—Sharing—Mark 10: 21, 22.
Friday—Self-Denial—Luke 9: 23.
Saturday—Suffering—I Peter 4: 1, 2.

Following up the inspiration of Easter we shall study two topics on "Christian Discipleship." This topic deals with the test of discipleship and the one for next week will deal with the cost of discipleship. Jesus put the disciples to a test when they were sent out two by two. He had prepared them for this purpose. He first invited them to follow Him that they might become fishers of men. Some followed Him well; others deserted Him in the cause.

The following topics may be assigned as short talks:

1. A disciple of Jesus has eyes which see broadly and deeply.
2. A disciple of Jesus has lips which speak in God's name (Psalm 141: 3).
3. A disciple of Jesus has ears tuned to the voice of God (Isa. 50: 4).
4. A disciple of Jesus has hands which share the blessings of life.
5. A disciple of Jesus has feet which walk in the way of the Lord (Deut. 5: 23).

I will start today serenely
With a true and noble aim;
I will give unselfish service
To enrich another's name.

I will speak a word of courage
To a soul enslaved by fear;
I will dissipate drab discord
With the sunshine of good cheer.

I will be sincere and humble
In the work I have to do;
I will praise instead of censure
And see the good in you.

I will keep my mind and body
Sound and flexible and pure;
I will give my time and study
To the things that long endure.

I will do what I am able
To advance a worthy cause;
I will strive to lessen evil
And obey God's righteous laws.
—Grenville Kleiser.

Suggested Hymns—

"Jesus Calls Us."

"Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us."
Ask your group to formulate: (a) a code for present-day discipleship; (b) a personal test of discipleship.

Sunday School Lesson

CHRIST SHOWS HIMSELF ALIVE.

LESSON II—APRIL 13, 1941.

LESSON: Luke 24: 1-43.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Rev. 1:12-18.

GOLDEN TEXT: I was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore.—Rev. 1:18.

The Empty Tomb.

Christianity rests upon the historic fact of an empty tomb. There is a great deal of mystery about it. The gospels give varied accounts of it, but undergirding it all there is the basic fact that Jesus Christ rose again from the dead, that he came forth from the tomb alive, that he is alive forever more. Christianity stands or falls at this point. But those of us who are Christians need have no fear the resurrection of Jesus is as well an established fact as any other thing in history.

Deluded and Dejected Men.

On the road which leads from Jerusalem to Emmaus, on Easter Sunday evening there walked two men who were deluded and dejected. They were talking about the strange happenings of that early Easter Sunday morning—of how the women had gone to the tomb and found it empty, of how angels had said that Christ had risen from the dead, of how he had appeared to the women and later to Simon Peter. They had hoped that it was he who was to redeem Israel. Like the disciples themselves, they thought that the Messiah was going to establish an earthly kingdom. Because they had been deluded in this high hope they were very dejected and despondent. They were walking with heavy hearts and with slow steps back to their homes again. They were representatives of that great number of men and women who became discouraged and dejected because God does not always work in harmony with their pre-conceived ideas. Today many people are troubled because God does not, as they think he should, step in and stop the war, or strike Hitler down, or give them what they ask, or do what they think he ought to do. These men are also typical of men and women everywhere who have been disappointed in their high hopes and frustrated in their worthiest desires.

The Unrecognized Christ.

As they walked along and talked together, they were joined by a friendly stranger. Evidently Jesus had a different form for these men did not recognize him. But they were conscious of his presence. With friendly greeting he asked them why they were so sad, and what this strange thing was that they were talking about. They expressed surprise that he had not heard about the happenings of the day.

The significant thing is that it was as they communed with one another about Christ that Christ himself drew near. Perhaps one reason why Christ is not more real to us is that all too seldom do we talk with one another about him and the things which concern him. If men and women commune with one another about Christ and the things of Christ, a different atmosphere is produced and a different spirit makes itself felt. Our religion would be more real and vital if we shared it in a simpler and more informal way with one another. It is significant also that in no case did Jesus reveal himself to his enemies. It was to men and women, his followers, those who believed in him, and those who trusted him, those whose hearts were still sensitive even though their faith was weak, that he made himself known. Still, as of old, he makes himself known to the humble and contrite in heart, and to those who are poor in spirit.

Through Tragedy to Triumph.

Jesus interpreted what seemed to these men to be stark tragedy in such a way that it turned out to be a glorious triumph. He took that which they thought was disaster and defeat and showed that it was victory. He did not explain away the trouble, he did not blink the facts, but he showed that God took even these things and made them work together for good. Indeed, he showed that it was an inevitable part of the divine plan that through the things which Christ suffered he entered into his glory, that the law and the prophets themselves plainly taught this. This is one of the supreme contributions which Christ makes. He is able to take the defeats and seeming disasters of life and catching them up in the purpose and love of God to transform them. Tragedy becomes triumph, the cross becomes a crown.

Christ As Guest and Host.

When they reached the little village, whither they were going, "he made as though he would go further." It was no idle gesture, it was no mere bluff. Christ comes only as an invited guest. There must be a desire in the heart for him. He does not come in response to mere wishful thinking; there must be seeking after him. There must be some evidences of sincerity on the part of those to whom he comes. These men showed an eagerness to have him, and constrained him to come in and spend the evening with them. He then went in to tarry with them.

He came as guest. He immediately became host. As they sat at meat, he took bread and blessed it, and breaking it he gave to them. Thus does Christ always do more than we expect. Sometimes we think we are doing something for him, and we soon find that he is doing far more for us. If, as he stands at the door and knocks, we hear his voice and open the door, he will come in and sup with us. He spreads the feast of good things for all those who sit with him.

Christ In the Commonplace.

It was when he took bread and blessed it, and broke it "that their eyes were opened, and they knew him." In other words, it was in the simple, commonplace incident that he made himself known. All too often we look for the Christ in the spectacular and the unusual. As a matter of fact, we should make it a habit to identify Christ with every impulse of goodness, over compulsion of conscience, every longing for some better way of life. God in Christ reveals himself not so much in the spectacular as in the quiet, ordinary incidents and experiences of life.

The Burning Heart.

"Did not our hearts burn within us while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?" As these men looked back, they realized that there had been a glow and warmth in their hearts as the then unknown stranger, who was then indeed the Christ, had shared his presence and had opened to them the scriptures. It is ever thus. Who is there whose heart has not been strangely warmed as some new light and some new meaning has come from the divine word, or in some experience of worship, private or public, or in some bit of service or sacrifice he has become conscious of the presence of the living Christ. Our modern world calls for men and women with clear and cool heads, but perhaps one

RULES FOR HAPPINESS.

"Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord, that walketh in his ways."
—Psalm 128:1, 2.

The following rules for happiness appeared in the San Diego Club Life, a local magazine:

Think less of your own happiness and more of other people's.

Don't make excuses.

Forget past unpleasant things and live for the future.

Keep your troubles to yourself; most of them are imaginary.

Learn to laugh; meet people with a happy smile.

Smooth over misunderstandings before they run too long; be willing to do more than your part.

Be tolerant of others' beliefs and ideas; they can be just as right as you are.

Worship God the way you see fit and let the other fellow do likewise; who can tell who is right?

Live clean and obey the laws of nature.

You have no enemies until you create one in your own mind; so keep malice out of your heart.

Give some of your time to helping others; money is the easiest thing to give, but time is the real sacrifice.

Rid yourself of greed and face the world with an open mind.

Abide by these rules, and good luck, happiness and contentment will abide with you.

TUESDAY.

GETTING READY FOR PRAYER.

"When thou prayest enter into thy closet."—Matt. 6:6.

What does it mean to "enter into thy closet"? The answer came to this question the other day. We were at Divine services. When the minister said, "Let us pray," and all heads were bowed, he said, "Let us relax." He waited an instant, then he said,

"Let us forget everything for a moment." Then he waited another instant. Then he said, "Now let us banish all worry for a moment." Silence again. "Now," he said, "let us think about God and what He is able to do for us. Let us turn our thoughts inward and then think of just what we need, what we want God to do for us and would be pleased to do for us." Silence again. Then he prayed. We have never seen an audience come to prayer more fully than this one seemed to do. We think that he who leads others in prayer should first prepare the worshippers for praying. That is one way of entering into the closet.

WEDNESDAY.

BOOSTING THE OTHER FELLOW.

"The Carpenter encouraged the Goldsmith."

God expostulateth with his people to help one another—to boost the other fellow. Despite the two decades of the teachings of Christ to live in brotherly helpfulness, a strong individualism still exists. The majority of people love exaltation and many exalt themselves. How much better everybody would be if each perceived the good in others and boosted them a little. It develops talent and the best that is in one. Christians can be made that way.

Prayer—O Lord, give us the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ and make us inspiration, light, and life to others, according to Thy will. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WHY DO YOU WAIT?

"Ye will not come to me that ye may have life."—John 5:40.

He sought the aid of the Chaplain and he sought Jesus Christ after he reached his crisis and the damage was done. Why did he wait to make his search for God after he crashed. There is a preventive grace that saves from falling. There is a preventive grace that keeps the soul, that keeps one in the way, that gives life, that gives understanding, that inspires to righteous judgments, that keeps from temptation and from falling, that finds blessedness in the way, peace, satisfaction and contentment. That grace is in Jesus and the making of Him thy daily companion. Pray for this. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE BATTLE OF BELGIUM WAS LOST.

"Let us, therefore, fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it."—Heb. 4:1.

A Christian's reward is obtained by faith and by seizing the opportunity before it is too late. In the recent battle of Belgium when they capitulated to Germany, they would not allow the French and the English to move into their country until Germany walked in—then it was too late. The whole tide of the war might have been different had the French and the English been there. We can idle away our time till it is too late. Pray for soul consciousness that it may be that way. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"QUIET, PLEASE!"

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psalm 46:10.

"Commune with your heart and be still."—Psalm 4:4.

What do you go to church for? I hear my answers. They are according to the ideas taught each during life. Some have let the idea slip and have forgotten. We are at church. The organ is paying a prelude of soft sweet music. The church is nearly full of people. The most of them are talking, moving about and there is a general "hubbub."

THE GLAD MESSAGE OF EASTER!

The glad message of Easter is the promise of immortality—the promise of life beyond the grave.

Belief in a future existence is as natural as is the belief in nature's promise that we shall awaken when we lie down to sleep. Belief in immortality is the heritage of the human race. Every tribe and race of man has had this instinctive belief. The American Indian had his idea of the Happy Hunting Ground. Different races have believed that the future life was a continuance of the present. The early Christians thought of the next life as the perfection of the present. Cities, instead of drab cobble stones for pavement, would be paved with pure gold. The idea of immortality has been instinctive in human life from the beginning of time. Who placed that instinct in the heart of man? It was the same God who gave the bird the instinct to sing and to fly. God never gives an instinct to any animal without a purpose. Every new born animal, every new born babe instinctively seeks nourishment that it may live. Every normal person instinctively seeks knowledge, and that quality of life which makes for a future life. Instinctively every animal seeks a safety from danger. In answer to instinct, the song birds leave the Northland to fly South in the autumn—and return again through trackless space in the spring. Would God be so thoughtful of a bird without deceiving it, and put the instinct of immortality within the souls of man made in His own image, and deceive him?

Faith in the love and power of God confirms the witness of instinct which tells man that the grave is not the end of life, but the beginning of a life that never ends. Faith defies mystery to silence its hope of life beyond. Immortality is shrouded with mystery—but so is the present life. There are many questions which schoolboys can ask about this life which schoolmasters cannot explain. How does the same grass and grain produce wool on the sheep, hair on the horse, and feathers on the chicken? Why does a piece of coal burn and produce heat, while a piece of stone the same color and size and weight puts out the fire? How can the same piece of wire carry electricity to make light if you want light, or give heat if you want heat, or give power if you want power? Why is it that if the differential attraction of the sun and moon upon the earth has power to lift millions of tons of the ocean's water to high tide that it doesn't have the power to lift a man's hat off his head when he is walking along the shore, though the water of the ocean is being lifted against wind and weight? The child wonders what makes it possible for birds to fly and spend most of their time in the air—how can a fish live in the water when water drowns other animals, etc., etc. When the child grows to maturity, he explains it for himself by saying, "O, they are just made that way." But who made them that way?—Just nature, but who is the author of nature? Even a little apricot seed has its own world of mystery so great that grown men cannot explain it. We can only accept that fact.

Science says that matter is indestructible—that it cannot be destroyed, but that we can simply change its form. Religion says that human personality is immortal—that love, honor and goodness of life cannot be destroyed—that death does not destroy motion, so neither does death destroy emotion. Faith says that for the soul of a man to depart from the body to make its abode in the realm of the spiritual world is no more mysterious than is the birth of a babe into the physical world.

The power of temporal life to resist death argues for the power of eternal life to break the chains of death. Your mother walked through the valley of the shadow of death to bring you into the world. Your life was the victory of the struggle between death and life, and your birth was the signal that life had won in the struggle. And at the cradle when you were but a helpless babe, the struggle began between life and death as to which should claim you. From the moment you breathed your first breath until now, that struggle has been going on, and down through all these 10-20-30-40-50-60-70-80 or more years, your life which God gave you has been holding death at bay. Your presence in the world now witnesses the power of life to prevail over death. If temporal life has had the power to resist death, which all along has sought to take you as prisoner, is it anything strange for one to believe that eternal life will have the power to break the bonds of death and set the prisoner free?

The resurrection of Jesus announced to the world the glad Easter message that as temporal life resists death for a time, so eternal life conquers over death for all time—for eternity. The resurrection of Jesus declares that physical death is no more able to destroy personality, individuality, and spiritual reality than sleep destroys the power of memory, or the power of consciousness.

One summer night, a Scotch skeptic was addressing a large audience on the subject of, "The Hereafter." While speaking, a bird flew into the room through an open window—fluttered about, and then flew out of the window into the darkness. The speaker referred to the bird's experience coming into the room, etc., and remarked: "So we come into this life and flutter about for a little time—then to pass out into the night of the unknown into a future that is dark with mystery." That is all the hope that skepticism has to offer. Atheism has still less—Atheism says that our existence is like a bird beating against the window only to fall lifeless on the floor. So we beat our lives against the windows of fate to fall lifeless after a time in a death that has no more meaning than the death of a bird. In answer to the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?", philosophy offers a cold and heartless perhaps. But faith answers with the words of the Redeemer: "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall live again." "Because I live, ye shall live also." "In my Father's house are many mansions." "I go to prepare a place for you."

Faith in these promises of Christ has given the world its greatest heroes and heroines. Faith in these promises will enrich any life, will brighten the way for any pilgrim of earth, will give meaning to the life that now is and assurance of the life that is to come. The Christian believes that as Christ liveth, so we, too, shall live again—that death is not the end of life, but the thoroughfare to larger life.

*Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God, within the shadow,
Keeping watch above his own.*

—Lowell.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The offerings since the first of the year for the superannuation fund have been very gratifying to the Board of Superannuation. The writer is very much interested in seeing this fund grow. Being a member of this Board for a number of years and seeing the real need of a more adequate fund for the Board to use in ministering to the needs of our superannuated ministers and their widows, it is encouraging to see our people are taking more interest in helping to make their declining years more comfortable and happy. They have given their best. They fought the battles in the Master's cause when fighting was discouraging. They have gone in former years through rain and snow, through the cold chilly weather and through the heat of the summer to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ to hungry souls. Never faltering or complaining though sledding was hard. The least we can do for them now is to minister to them and see that they have the comforts of life they so richly deserve. Who is it that would not like to mail a personal check to Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker, Secretary, Elon College, N. C., to help swell the fund to larger proportions. The Board can only apportion the amount sent in.

If all our churches would see to it that the conference apportionment set by the Convention for the superannuation fund is raised it would help a lot. More than thirty thousand members of the Congregational Christian Church in the Southern Convention and we have been giving so little to this fund. Is it because we are not interested or is it because our attention has not been called to the real need. I believe it is the latter reason. Our people have always been willing to respond to the call of a real need. The writer has faith in our people to believe they will be more liberal in giving to help swell the superannuation fund in order that the Board can be more generous to the ones on its list. Let us all help.

of Mt. Olivet (R), Mt. Olivet (G) and Bethel Churches, and Mission Work at Island Ford and St. Peter's Churches. Rev. W. J. Andes preached the installation seron.

Guests from a distance were: Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Whitten, Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Larrick, Winchester; Rev. and Mrs. Paul B. Sanger, Linville; Rev. W. J. Andes, Durham, N. C.; Mrs. John Houston, Providence, R. I., John Carlson, Waterbury, Conn.; and Mrs. ohn Houston, Providence, R. I., also members of various churches of the Valley.

Rev. Ritchie is graduate of Guilford, N. C., and also studied at the Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Conn. His parents reside in Waterbury, Conn. He served as a Summer Service Worker in the Georgia-Florida Conference.

Mrs. Ritchie, formerly Marguerite Carlson of Waterbury, Conn., is a graduate of the Mississippi State College for Women, Columbus, Miss., and Hartford Seminary Foundation, Hartford, Conn. She served as Summer Service Worker in New Hampshire Congregational Christian Conference.

Mr. Ritchie came to Virginia in July of 1940 for the summer. He returned home and he and Mrs. Ritchie were married September 4, 1940, by Dr. James E. Gregg, of First Church, Waterbury, Conn. They returned to Elkton and have made their home there since. They have won the friendship of many friends of the different churches he serves and of other denominations.

The churches of Group No. 2 congratulate their pastor and feel that they are fortunate in having both his and Mrs. Ritchie's services in the different churches.

The Bethel Church rendered special music for the occasion and presented Rev. and Mrs. Ritchie with a huge basket of cut flowers following the services.

We feel sure the churches are back of Rev. Ritchie and will loyally cooperate with his program for the churches.

REPORTER.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

The annual meeting of this Pilgrim Fellowship is to be held Sunday afternoon, April 20, 2:30 to 7:15 o'clock, with the Shallow Ford Christian Church. As president of the conference, I wish to appeal to all our pastors and to the adult laity of our churches to help our young people make this meeting a great occasion. Sometimes our young people need our urging; sometimes they need our assistance if they are to get to such meetings.

Here is a goal for the meeting of the 20th. A car filled with young people from every church. How many will?

For our Conference we have set this standard: A young people's organization of some character in every church, meeting every week and once each month as a missionary society.

To get to Shallow Ford, go to Elon and turn north at the filling station at the N. W. corner of the campus. When the road forks, keep to the right and the church is less than a mile beyond the fork on the right side of the road.

In Memoriam

PERRY.

Mrs. Henrietta Perry, one of the most beloved members of Beulah Congregational Christian Church, departed her life here on earth March 9, 1941, after a very brief illness. Sister Perry's going has left a sadness not only in the hearts of her loved ones, but friends as well.

She is survived by seven sons (of which two are deacons in the above church) and three daughters. Twenty-five grandchildren, one great-grandchild, and one brother. Her husband, the late J. R. Perry, preceded her about seven years.

The funeral was conducted at the church with burial in the family cemetery on Monday after her death, by the writer, assisted by the Rev. R. T. Grissom, a former pastor.
 E. M. POWELL.

CHANDLER.

Mrs. Lulu McWhorter Chandler, daughter of Benjamin Cullen and the late Mary Sweatt McWhorter of Hattiesburg, Miss., departed this life at the Burlington Hospital, Burlington, N. C., March 24, 1941, at the age of twenty-two years, four months and seven days. She united with the M. E.

Church when young. On April 16, 1938, she married Mr. George Ruffin Chandler of Virgilina, Va. Mrs. Chandler leaves her husband, infant daughter, Mary Lulu, her father, five brothers and two sisters. The deceased had a fine personality and added to her social graces was a true Christian spirit, evidenced by her regular attendance at Sunday school and church services. No one ever came into this community and in so short a time won the esteem and admiration of our people.

The young husband, son of G. W. and Mary Watson Chandler, and a former student at Elon College, has the deep sympathy of his numerous friends here and in other communities where for several years he has been engaged in the road construction business.

The funeral was conducted at the Christian Church, Virgilina, Va., on Sunday afternoon, March 26, by President L. E. Smith of Elon College and the writer. Interment was in the family plot of the town cemetery. The floral tributes were in abundance, and so typical in their loneliness of the beautiful life as it was lived here, and will continue in its influence in the lives of others.

HALIFAX DISTRICT RALLY.

The Woman's Missionary Rally of the Halifax District met at Ingram Church on April 3. Mrs. D. J. Sipe opened the meeting and Rev. C. E. Newman offered prayer. The superintendent's message was given by Mrs. Newman on the theme: "Always Abounding." The devotional service was led by Mrs. G. W. Pollard. The offering amounted to $7.91.

In the afternoon, brief talks concerning the Elon School of Missions were given. Mrs. Adams spoke on "What Our Woman's Society Expects of Our Pastor" and Rev. J. Howard Smith explained "What the Pastor Expects of the Woman's Society."

Mrs. Joe Dunn was elected District Leader and Mrs. W. T. Dunn, Secretary and Treasurer. Pleasant Grove was selected as the place of meeting for next year.

DAN RIVER DISTRICT RALLY.

Dan River District Rally met at Liberty Church, March 30, with a large attendance. Rev. C. E. Newman made a brief talk on, "The Good of a Sunday School." Rev. J. Howard Smith of Lynchburg was the principal speaker, and used for his subject: "Making a Life Was More Important Than Making a Living," which every one seemed to enjoy.

Ingram Sunday School got the banner for having the largest number present. We meet with Virgilina Church on the fifth Sunday in June for an all-day service.

J. K. LANDRUM,
 President.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

of its most crying needs is for men and women with burning hearts.

Sharing the Good News.

"And they rose up that very hour, and returned to Jerusalem . . . and they rehearsed the things that happened in the way, and how he was known of them in the breaking of the bread." Their first impulse was to share the good news with others. This is the genius of Christianity. Those of us who know the love of God in Jesus Christ have the solemn responsibility and the high privilege of sharing this experience with men to the uttermost parts of the earth.

FAMILY ALTAR.

The church in the Navy is an example of quiet worship. Whether on a battleship under way, or whether in the chapel of the station, from the time the organ sounds till the Amen at the close of the service there is absolute quiet attention fixed on the altar. This kind of worship is most conducive to spiritual tone, anything different is destructive to the purpose of worship. Let us pray for a depth of devotion that sends us to church seeking His grace and neither speaking to anyone nor allowing anyone to speak to us, if it can be prevented, during worship. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Let us all plan to go to church at least once today, and let us go with the high and holy purpose of worship, and also with an idea that should we sit at the end of the pew we will move up toward the center rather than have others drag all over us in finding a seat for themselves. There is a fineness of Christian courtesy that also contributes to worshipfulness and to the tone of Christian character. Amen.

The Church in a Time of Crisis

By DR. DOUGLAS HORTON.

Crisis is upon us.

And thank God we are prepared to meet it not as sectarians but as a church not as exclusive little companies which devote themselves only to one side of a question, but as a fellowship which includes people of various points of view.

John Bennett believes that the best way to achieve peace is to defeat aggression and so proceed to organize international society politically and economically on Christian principles. Albert Palmer believes that the only way to reach peace is to abstain from war and to develop avenues of international cooperation. The glory and power of our fellowship is shown in the fact that John Bennett and Albert Palmer, though they are poles apart politically, do not run off and form new sects but remain members of a single brotherhood in Christ.

This they accomplish by distinguishing between those activities which belong to the church as a church and those which belong to individual members or individual groups within the church.

We are all agreed that the church must minister to all sorts and conditions of men wherever they are found—and ministry means providing them with the means of growing to the full stature for which God has designed them.

The church must therefore, among other things, defend every man in his right to announce the insights he believes God has given him. If he desires on such grounds to object to participation in military warfare, the church stands by his side to see that his objection is heard. If he feels he must oppose his conscience to what he feels to be an ignoble peace, again the church is his attorney.

If he goes to a camp to be prepared for fighting, the church sends its chaplains to help him remain at his spiritual best. If he goes to a camp of conscientious objectors, again the church provides him pastoral care.

The church distinguishes, however, between protecting a person in his right to protest and joining him in the protest. The right belongs to him as a human being, but the protest itself is a form of political action.

When the church as a whole includes members who differ politically, she cannot act as a church on the point at issue, for moving in one direction she would offend the conscience of the opposing group.

But here the freedom of our fellowship asserts itself. Those within the church who care to unite to buy a war ambulance or provide the salary of the driver may do so, though the church as a whole may not, since there are those within her who believe that such an enterprise aids the war system and frustrates the Prince of Peace.

Correspondingly those within the church who desire to establish and maintain camps for conscientious objectors are free to do so, though the church as a whole is estopped from this endeavor except as a temporary relief measure, since she includes communicants who believe that such a course, if magnified, would lead to war instead of to peace.

The day will come, in the fullness of God's time, when the eyes of all of us will be opened and we shall be led into ways of complete unanimity. But in the meantime we glory in the fact that in spite of all differences we have learned how, under God, to live as one church, eternal and indivisible.

The Youth of Our Churches

The Church must seek to understand the problems of youth. There is a personal side. When our own lives demonstrate that religion has something to give which is valuable in living today, young people will want it. Among our own youth are young people who go to church and those who do not. There are the unemployed, the economically insecure, the oppressed, the favored. There is a keen interest in social issues. Missions is becoming a living concern as responsibilities are accepted. Social action excites many.

Ten thousand and more were in our hundred summer conferences last year, five percent of the total youth groups of our fellowship. Many more are in other meetings during the year. Days and weeks are spent in study, worship, fellowship, planning. As one parent said as he observed a closing summer conference service: "If this is happening all over the country, it must mean much."

More than a thousand young people are association, state, regional and national Pilgrim Fellowship officers. They are working on state committees. A few attend national board meetings. They plan missionary projects, write promotional material, make speeches, lead hours of worship and discussion. These youths are marching. They need many who are older to keep in step with them, as well as those who are ready to cheer them on.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Miss Susie D. Allen, treasurer of the North Carolina Woman's Mission Board, writes: "We feel very proud of our report this time and of our record-to-date for the year. We have reached the half-way point towards our goal of forty-five hundred dollars and we are confidently expecting to raise the whole amount by the end of the year."

LENTEN SERVICES IN THE VALLEY.

Lenten services in the Antioch-Linville-New Hope Pastorate came to a close on Friday night before Easter.

The union lenten program began with services on Ash Wednesday at Antioch. On Thursday night of that week the services were held at Linville. A week of services began on March 10 at New Hope, on March 24 at Antioch, and on April 6 at Linville.

During the latter week, particularly impressive services were rendered. On Thursday night all three churches united in observance of our Lord's last supper by a communion service. Dr. M. S. Weekley assisted the pastor, Rev. P. B. Sanger. Deacons of the three churches took part. A pantomime, "The Old Rugged Cross," was given by twelve girls. On Friday night, Dr. Weekley brought the closing message.

The union services increased the cooperative spirit of the churches. Inter-church attendance was good, and Mr. Sanger preached with power and conviction. Mrs. Sanger aided with the music and directed the pantomime.

EASTER AT ALBEMARLE.

Easter was observed at the First Congregational Christian Church of Albemarle after the following manner: as the beautiful rays of light of the rising sun began to penetrate and pass through the transom of the door to the auditorium, the audience assembled was singing, "Christ Arose." The minister spoke on "The Empty Tomb," which finished a series of sermons on the theme: "Jesus Saves," which covered the entire week previous to Easter. The Sunday school proved to be the largest of the year; the primary department under the direction of Miss Irene Sells came to the auditorium and rendered a special program. At eleven o'clock the largest number in the history of the church participated in the communion service. Just before the communion service was observed the minister and deacons gave the hand of fellowship to fourteen new members which makes a total of forty-three since the first of last December. A very pretty scene was that of two little girls dressed in white uniform who presented Bibles to the new members. The happy Easer day culminated with a fitting climax when under the direction of Mrs. Earp an Easter play was presented, to the delight of the large congregation assembled.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" AND THE D. W. KERR MEMORIAL.

For several years the membership of Mt. Zion Christian Church and the men of the Loyal Men's Bible Class of the First Christian Church, Burlington, have been interested in placing some kind of marker at the site of what was Junto Academy, one of the first institutions of higher learning in this section of North Carolina and from whose office the first edition of THE CHRISTIAN SUN was edited by its president, Dr. D. W. Kerr. The plans as now agreed upon are to enclose the area of the original office building of Junto Academy with an iron rail supported by eight stone pillars. A gateway will lead to a concrete pavement which will approach a stone monument placed on a concrete base and enriched by a concrete walk. The stone for the monument will be of excellent quality blasted from a stream-bed on the McAdams' farm, the site of the Junto Academy. In the monument will be placed a timber preserved from the original office building. The monument will be so constructed that a memorial plate, 15 in. x 24 in. will be placed on an oblique top, the back of the monument being 5 feet high, the front being 4 feet. The tablet will have inscribed on it:

Commemorating
1838—Site of Junto Academy—1849
First Issue of The Christian Sun
February 17, 1844
D. W. KERR, Minister, Editor, Teacher
1796—1856

This tablet has been secured and is ready for placement. The men of the Mt. Zion Church plan to do all the work required except that of the mason itself; for this the services of an expert mason have been secured.

Probably there are others who would like to contribute to this work.

Contributions should not be large—$5.00 would be an adequate maximum gift. Seventy five or more gifts of one dollar ($1.00) each would be gratefully received. But these gifts must be made immediately as the monument is going to be erected within the next month, the work beginning the week of April 13. Send your gifts either to Mr. Vitus R. Holt, c/o Kirk Holt Hardware Co., or to Dr. C. W. McPherson, McPherson Building, both of Burlington, N. C.

The McAdams family has donated the land on which the Junto Academy office building stood and has evidenced great interest in the plan. The McAdams' farm is off the paved highways but Mr. Carl Goerch of "The State" magazine farm has promised his support in securing a highway marker calling attention to the historic interest of the site. In 1944 the Mt. Zion Church, about a half mile distant from the McAdams' farm and the Junto Academy site, plans entertaining the North Carolina and Virginia Conference in its annual sessions. The plan contemplates a fitting observance at the site of the monument.

OFFERINGS FOR ELON COLLEGE.

Offerings for the college during the college period were slightly in advance of those of a year ago. However, we are far, far from the goal. Surely there are other churches that cooperated in the Convention's plan and the conference directions and received offerings for the college. If not, we do hope that they will in the near future. The spring months are needy months for the college.

Fifth Sunday offerings have been coming in fairly well. We have not heard from a large number of our Sunday schools. Your messages help and encourage greatly. Following each fifth Sunday we wait with great expectancy. If your Sunday school has not sent in its offering, won't you please do so at an early date.

The report is as follows:

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED IN MARCH.

For the first month since February, 1938, the new subscriptions were more than the renewals. We are glad to welcome the 139 new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN family. Our hope is that as we come to know each other better we will like each other more.

By glancing over the list below it is easy to see where work has been done. There are several churches in which all families receive the paper, but in most churches there is still a chance to increase the number of subscriptions.

The excellent cooperation of the pastors and church workers is making it possible for our church paper to meet its obligations and bless our church homes. Thank you, everyone.

“SCIENCE AND THE MORAL ORDER.”

Religion has said many harsh things about science. One might easily gain the impression that one of our favorite homiletic pastimes is that of berating science. Science is so helpless when it is being unmercifully brow-beaten from the pulpit. And yet, at the same moment, religion freely uses the products of science. The majority of church members come to church by means of scientific locomotion. Without the benefits of science the church would immediately be deprived of its electric lights, pipe organ, steam heat, and radio broadcast. There is little value in omnisciently declaring that “science cannot deal with the intangibles and imponderables in human relations,” and “science is largely useless for the building of a better human world.”

In the spirit of the man who wanted to “say a good word for California,” why not say a good word for science? After all, the breakdown in our international relationships and the hasty retreat to barbarism cannot be comfortably attributed to the shortcomings of science. Yes, we like to have a convenient scapegoat for all our sins. But religion and the church are simply Pharisaical if they are so busy confessing the sins of others they forget to confess their own.

Raymond B. Fosdick, President of the Rockefeller Foundation, may help to clarify our thinking on this point. In his “Review for 1940,” Mr. Fosdick deals specifically with “Science and the Moral Order.” Mr. Fosdick begins by stating that “Science is today under sharp attack. The growing public realization that its powerful tools can be used for man’s enslavement and destruction has given rise to bitter questions and charges. In this hour of intellectual confusion and moral chaos the social consequences of science have been brought to the fore, and the question is persistently asked: Are these consequences so important, because of technical applications, that the social interest is paramount over intellectual interests? Are there too many nations and too many people everywhere using the instruments of a civilization they have not achieved?”

“It would be presumptuous to attempt an answer to this question in a few brief paragraphs,” continues Mr. Fosdick, even if the writer were especially competent to make any answer at all. The question arises, of course, because science as a technique for gaining understanding of nature is also a technique for gaining control over nature—that is, it is a technique for gaining power. And power can be used by evil men to do evil even more obviously and dramatically than it can be used by men of good will to do good.

“But this is true of many things in life. Sulfanilamide, perhaps the most amazing development of modern medical science, came from the German dye industry, but so did mustard gas. Exactly the same principles of physics are employed to point a 500-ton telescope at a star and a 15-inch naval gun at its target. Language is a powerful tool which can be used to mirror spiritual insight or to spread false and destructive propaganda. The possibility of misuse is not an argument for no use at all.

“However, this point of view would scarcely justify science in dissociating itself from considerations of value and purpose. The disavowal of concern with social ends would seem to be a callous and irresponsible way to defend science against the charge that it provides man with forces which outstrip his powers of control. Such a defense, in fact, arises from too narrow a view of science. For science is more than the technologies which cluster about it—more than its inventions and gadgets. It is even more than the discovery and correlation of new facts. Science is a method, a confidence and a faith. It is a method of controlled and rechecked observations and experiments, objectively recorded with absolute honesty. It is a confidence that truth is discoverable. It is faith that truth is worth discovering.

“The contribution which this aspect of science can make to human problems is too often overlooked. Science has developed a specialized set of mental procedures and a noble tradition concerning their use. Confronted by a problem the scientist begins by sorting out the pertinent factors. He discards the irrelevant, testing relevancy as critically and dispassionately as possible. Then with the relevant material in front of him he begins the painstaking tasks of describing, classifying, discovering correlations, constructing hypotheses, experimentally testing, discarding or adjusting these hypotheses—and extending them to new fields. It is of the essence of this whole process that he should suspend judgment until ponderable evidence is at hand, that he should continually re-examine underlying theories and definitions, that he should prepare to abandon a position however attractive it may be, that he should be sanely skeptical of conclusions and that he should maintain complete dispassionate intellectual honesty.

“Surely a technique of this kind has some meaning in the confused issues which we are now facing. We can scarcely afford to declare a moratorium on this kind of intellectual objectivity. It has undeniable social serviceability. It can create a new approach to the solution of the difficulties which now overwhelm us. It can be a nourishing atmosphere for the development of a factual outlook, of a healthy and flexible skepticism, of a disposition to seek for causes of things, and of objectivity and tolerance in the appraisal of evidence.

“In giving expression to this faith one would wish to guard against excessive optimism. Measurement and accuracy by themselves do not even touch the fringe of social questions. Human relations cannot be reduced to mathematical formulae or deterministic sequences. Knowledge of facts does not tell us what to do about them. The social sciences can successfully copy some of the techniques of the physical sciences, but ahead of us is the long difficult road, through trial and error, towards goals of social organization and control that lie obscured on the far horizon.

WHAT THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN MERGER HAS MEANT TO THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

By JOHN R. SCOTFORD.

When a group of 100,000 people unite with a group of 900,000 people it is inevitable that many of the latter will be only dimly conscious that anything has happened. This natural pre-occupation of the larger group has been further accentuated by the fact that the former Christian Churches "come in bunches." In a given locality they are either numerous or else non-existent. The result is that in large areas of our fellowship the merger has been largely a mystifying change in the denominational nomenclature.

In other areas, however, the merger has completely transformed the ecclesiastical landscape so far as the Congregational Churches are concerned. In Virginia we were practically non-existent, in North Carolina a scanty band—and now we are a mighty host! In Indiana the Congregational Churches were found in a few cities, the Christian Churches in the open country and in numerous towns; together they are an effective and properly balanced fellowship. In Ohio the strength of the Congregational churches declined in direct proportion to the distance from Oberlin—but now our fellowship covers the state. The merger greatly enriched the fellowship on both sides of the house in Southern Illinois, Georgia and Alabama, while the former Christian Churches brought new elements into the denomination in New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Iowa. The merger has added Delaware to the list of the states where we are effectively present.

When the union of the two denominations was first projected it was not expected that the life of the local churches would be greatly disturbed. One of the surprises of the merger has been the number of congregations which have gone together. Wherever local churches have been able to meet on a basis approaching equality, they have united! This has been particularly true in Ohio, where churches have merged at Conneaut, Lima, Fort Recovery, Columbus, Springfield and in some smaller communities. The moral seems to be that local churches welcome an excuse to join with one another.

The merger has enlarged the horizon of the Congregational Churches by making them conscious of a number of interesting institutions. Elon College in North Carolina is one school which is unashamed of its ecclesiastical affiliation and which is glad to serve as a gracious host to all manner of denominational gatherings. Defiance College in Ohio offers Christian education on terms which are tempting to the frugal and also entertains summer conferences with great joy. Merion Institute is a reborn child of the merger where we are experimenting with new ways of meeting the problems of the rural churches of Indiana and Illinois. Southern

WHAT THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN MERGER HAS MEANT TO THE FORMER CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By LUCY ELDREDGE.

Some former Christian Churches have changed their names. Others have not. But all know that a merger has taken place, that there is a new day. There have been changes to make new practices to adopt in relationships with State Conferences and National Boards, new appeals, new names, new meetings to attend. Some "growing pains" are inevitable when those accustomed to the family spirit of a denomination with 100,000 members find themselves belonging to a church with a million members. Individuals, enthusiastic and skeptical, admit that the union has succeeded to the extent that the Congregational and Christian Churches have become one denomination within the short period of ten years. Leaders express amazement and gratification that so much that is wholesome in our church life could come in one short decade.

Something real has happened. Members of the two former bodies are worshipping and working together, often without noting differences in their church heritage. Last fall the Mid-West Regional Meeting made a pilgrimage to Tallmadge, one of the oldest Congregational Churches in Ohio, for a session on the rural church. They were welcomed by a young pastor whose entire experience up to three years ago had been among Christian Churches. There were two speakers, Roy E. Bowers, well known Congregational clergyman and Shirley Green, Director of Merion Institute, a rural social action project centering in an old Christian Church College. And Shirley Greene came from a New Hampshire Christian Church. Few knew these facts. It

Union College at Wadley, Ala., has opened a door of opportunity for service in one of the most appealing sections of the South. The Craigville summer assembly grounds on Cape Cod have been called "the surprise package of the merger."

From the point of view of the larger fellowship of the denomination, possibly the most significant gift of the former Christian Churches has been in the personalities which they have contributed to our common life. The first national president of the Pilgrim Fellowship came from the former Christian Church as have a goodly number of other lay leaders. It would be impossible to list the pastors of today or the staunch souls of

was not the result of careful planning by the program committee. The merger had gone beyond that stage. The Congregational Christian Churches were in conference session. Members from both groups were ready with contributions needed. And all were concerned in what they had to say.

"You see, I belonged to the former Christian Church group." I listened. It was the voice of a North Carolina delegate to the Mills National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship. I had not known her local church membership. It was evidenced that "These are Congregational Christian young people, looking ahead, not caring whether one belonged to a Congregational or a Christian Church group ten years ago!"

"As the youth of the Congregational Christian Churches . . ." the voice of the young man from Minnesota went on to set forth some responsibility of the youth of our churches. And I thought. There never was a Christian Church of our group in that state. But he was a Congregational Christian. Through his voice and service, the principles and ideals of both bodies will go on in the world, whether the present deacons of his church know very much about the merger or not.

There has been a merger. There is a growing Congregational Christian Church. But what would many members of the former Christian Churches say today after ten years? I decided to ask them. A bundle of post cards went into the mail. The answers came. I have learned a lot, for every reply has had a point worth studying.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Christianity is not a system of ethical teachings. It is a way of life. The teachings of Jesus deal with definite ethical principles, but they go beyond the realm of formal legalism. The New Testament rests its case upon spiritual personality. The security of the Christian faith is not established by the adoption of dogmatic definitions of theology, and it is not disturbed by the denials of its tenets or the rejection of its oral and spiritual standards.

Jesus said: "Follow me." And that invitation involves more than the acceptance of the creeds of the church. Followers of Jesus must seek to have fellowship with Him. "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God."—(Col. 3:1.) This explains why He attached so much importance to sincerity and denounced hypocrisy in such scathing terms. And if He should enter many of the churches of the present age He would find similar conditions.

People are hungry for sympathetic personal attention. What would happen if society should decree that no one should shake hands with another, or smile when they meet their friends. Many reasons could be submitted for putting a ban on laughter and crying. The attendant noise may disturb others. Why not establish a code of conduct making life as formal and rigid as a soldier standing at attention? For the simple reason that human life cannot find its finest self-expression without the personal human touch. Men want the bread of human fellowship and, in many instances, they are getting a poor substitute when they pick up the stones cast by those who pass by.

In conversation a few days ago a group of prominent business men agreed that the best place to serve a meal is on the shore of a lake, and the most appetizing menu consists of fried bacon, fish, corn bread and coffee, all cooked over a campfire in the great out-of-doors. China plates, silver knives, forks and spoons would spoil the whole affair. A table is superfluous. No chairs are needed. But there is a wealth of human fellowship, a sense of brotherhood and a display of genuine good will. Society would be greatly enriched if something of these values could be carried back to the office, the factory and the home as well as the church.

On a similar occasion Jesus met Simon Peter and some other disciples by the seaside in the early morning, and served a fish breakfast. The account dismisses the breakfast in a few words, but a vital personal conversation is given space in comparison. And that conversation was centered upon three words: "Lovest thou me?" And the conclusion reached was a command of three words: "Feed my sheep." Love is revealed as an experience reaching out in rich fellowship with Jesus. If our teaching and preaching and worship does not reach that high point we have failed—miserably failed—in every thing pertaining to Christianity. And if that experience is to reach a climax it must "feed my sheep"—with the bread of spiritual fellowship.

After Easter the church should intensify the lessons and spirit of the Lenten Season. It is tragic to turn from such a season with a desire to intensify our lust for pleasure and dissipation. The cross should still be lighted on the hill. The altar should be aglow with perpetual light. The hearts should continue to burn within as the Master walks with us along the way.

I. W. JOHNSON.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" AS A DENOMINATIONAL BUILDER.

There are two agencies in the Southern Convention that have made substantial contributions to the growth and development of our church—the college and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. THE CHRISTIAN SUN preceded the college. In fact, if it had not been for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the chances are that the college would never have been built, and so with our other denominational institutions. THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been the medium of information and inspiration since the day of its founding. It is the mouthpiece of the Convention, articulating the Convention's plans and purposes and at the same time speaking directly to every family within the church that has interest and vision sufficient to subscribe for the paper. It is one thing for the Convention to set goals, formulate plans for the reaching of those goals; it is another thing to work the plans and attain the goals. Successes in these fields are much more possible where there is an interchange and an exchange of ideas. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the proper medium for such services. In reality it becomes our "Committee on Correspondence." One group speaks to another group regarding its responsibilities and purposes, and at the same time expresses its desires regarding the welfare of the entire Convention of which that group is a part. We want, as a church, to move forward. We won't make much progress unless we pull together. We decide on certain definite goals for our church within the Convention, but we shall not reach those goals with every local church working at its own problems without consideration or regard of sister churches. We cannot work together as a group unless we adequately and regularly are informed as to what all are doing. This information can best be carried by our church paper. The paper makes its weekly visit. On Monday of each week the pages of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are open and blank, awaiting the message from you, pastor and people, that others may be encouraged and inspired by what you are doing. THE CHRISTIAN SUN should have an intellectual value for its readers, and it does. It should carry inspiration to those who need it. It should keep its readers informed regarding achievements and possibilities within its natural constituency. It should also convey information and create interest in localities, fields, and countries beyond our Convention's borders. The ones of us who have to do with the making of THE CHRISTIAN SUN need to give a bit more careful thought to the contents to make sure that we provide the information and message that a religious journal should carry today. We have a paper with great possibilities. Its mission is clear cut and necessary. Let's make sure that we do not miss the boat in this particular.

We are all delighted at the progress that the campaign to increase the circulation of the paper is making and congratulate those who have accepted these definite responsibilities. It is an opportunity for every family to render a great service to its church by subscribing for THE CHRISTIAN SUN and reading the same carefully and diligently. Continued success to our church paper!

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Truly, this is the end of a perfect Easter Sunday! Do you remember how we ate snow cream last year on Easter Sunday night? I hope that your day has been as full, satisfying and happy as mine has. Perhaps I should not have said the "full" part. I'm sure I had more things to do today than I'd wish upon you, but I enjoyed the doing of them.

I got up at 5:00 o'clock this morning. Mr. Todd went to our six o'clock sunrise service. I got dressed, gave Oliver his breakfast, made up my bed, and was ready to go to church for my breakfast when Mr. Todd came back for me. We took Oliver, bed and all, to our next door neighbor's house where he was a good boy until we returned. I ate breakfast with three charming high school girls. We talked about many things including biology drawings while we were breaking our fast!

My breakfast was so nice that I just couldn't come home without asking about helping to wash the dishes. I'm a member, absentee, of the Alpha Sunday school class, which planned, cooked and served the Easter breakfast. All of the dishes were washed by 8:15. I came home, bathed Oliver, gave him his orange juice and cod liver oil, fixed the food for his noon meal and took him back to the neighbor's house. I rushed back to the church where I sang, "O Perfect Love," at a wedding ceremony. The church was so beautiful with its altar banked with lillies and other white flowers in settings of green. It would have been a shame not to have a wedding. Little Linda Faye Tillman was christened before the wedding, in a private ceremony.

I sang in the choir at our 9:45 A. M. service at our Sanford Church. Then I went out to our country church with Mr. Todd for our 11:00 o'clock service out there. I sang in the choir out there also. We returned to Sanford, and Oliver, after the service out there. After lunch Oliver and I went riding out in the country to visit three of our members and left Mr. Todd at home in the study. Now Oliver is tucked in bed for the night and I am writing the Children's Page.

Our Board of Publications wants our material in as early as possible so that they will be able to get THE CHRISTIAN SUN out by Thursday from now on. I shall have to omit the puzzle again this week because I have just been too busy to get it done. I would appreciate some help from you very much. Now that school is about over for this year can't some of you find time to write us a letter? Try to find time to do so!

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

EASTER AT THE GRIGSBY HOME.

The Grigsby children looked forward to Easter as eagerly as they looked forward to Christmas. Not only did Easter mean that spring had come with its home-made whistles, fishing trips, and interesting gardening tasks, which always seemed more like play than work, but also special programs at the country church, helping the Easter Bunny to gather up his eggs and the coloring of the eggs.

The children were allowed to color six dozen eggs. You can imagine how busy the children were on Easter Saturday. All of them were in the big kitchen and back porch trying to see who could color the most beautiful egg. It is a wonder that Mother Grigsby kept her senses amid such a hub-bub but she seemed to have as much fun as any one of the children.

The children rose early on Easter

AFTER TEN YEARS.

What the Congregational Christian Merger Has Meant to the Congregational Churches.

yesterday who have helped to build the united church, but something should be said of those who are now serving in official capacities. In his position as head of the General Christian Convention and ex-officio assistant moderator of the General Council, Judge John V. Sees is a tower of good humor and parliamentary skill. The Council will never get into serious mischief so long as he is around. In a world of change Judge Sees typifies the permanent. Few leaders of youth are more beloved than Miss Lucy Eldredge, while no mere man can appraise the share which her good-humored resourcefulness had in the building of the Pilgrim Fellowship. Although technically retired, Warren H. Denison is still welcome in the churches as a warm-hearted and genial advocate of Stewardship. In Pennsylvania, Superintendent Wilson P. Minton is conducting a test-tube demonstration of church union by fusing an exceedingly variegated group of churches into an effective working state conference. In Indiana, Superintendent Simon Bennett has gone about unobtrusively but persistently building city, town and rural churches into a common fellowship. Both of these men have accomplished the seemingly impossible. In the deep South Superintendent William T. Scott spreads himself from North Georgia to Key West looking after all sorts and conditions of churches. He is ably assisted by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, one of the first fruits of the merger, who is loved in the South and admired in the North. In Virginia and North Carolina, Fletcher C. Lester is quickening the life of the churches, particularly along missionary lines, in his capacity as a secretary of the Southern Convention. President Leon E. Smith of Elon has added to the good humor and Christian zeal of the united fellowship, while Director Shirley Greene of Merom is outgrowing his former designation as "a promising young man" into a resourceful leader.

One of the significant characteristics of these men and women is that their friends tend to call them by their first names. The strength of the former Christian denomination lay in its family spirit. Everybody knew everybody else. Through these leaders something of this personal intimacy has passed over into the larger group. The former Christians have had a distinctly humanizing effect on the Congregationalists!

The ultimate significance of the Congregational Christian merger probably lies in the future. By shaking us up and loosening our ecclesiastical joints it has given us excellent preparation for further adventures in church union. Church boards resist change; their officers tend to become the slaves of things as they are. They need to be reorganized at least once a decade! The merger has also started the meaningless and altogether too polysyllabic name "Congregational" toward the discard. Our churches will be better off when they choose for themselves some simpler and less sectarian-sounding designation.

Church Union was one of the fundamental teachings of the former Christian denomination. The only trouble with the Congregational Christian merger is that it did not involve enough churches. Too many congregations are jogging along as they have always done. Those who have participated in the union have found it good. It has whetted their appetite for bigger and better denominational mergers.

THE DAY THAT CHANGED THE WORLD.

"They came unto the sepulchre. . . . And they found the stone rolled away. . . . And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus."

This is Resurrection morning. Our churches are garlanded with flowers, and our hushed voices break out into song of praise for the Risen Christ.

Something happened on that first Resurrection morning which has changed the world. Those early disciples who had followed Jesus with high hopes of the kingdom He was to establish, were terrified and stunned at His death. They had depended on the Master and were left leaderless. But in a few days this was changed. Those same dismayed men who were afraid to face the world were transformed. The timid and cowardly became bold and courageous. Their faith was in a risen and glorified Lord, a living Savior. This faith yet lives and transforms the human race.

The Resurrection morning has changed man. When men came to see each other as immortal souls, they began to think of their earthly relations and obligations to their fellows. From this day ethical and social forces have continued to bless life.

From that Resurrection morning the assurance of immortality has become the possession of all men. The Easter message comes with power to man the believer, the hero of moral struggles and the child of God, to man able to make the sublime venture of faith. For that message assures us that whatever else death may take from us, it is powerless to dim the great realities of home, love and brotherhood, or to quench the vital energy of the spirit of God.—(Taken from a church bulletin used Easter Sunday.)

The above report is fine this week and we are counting on the churches, Sunday schools, individuals, and others to keep the offerings for missions on the increase. Our goal this year is an increase for missions.

Easter envelopes have been distributed to the pastors for their church, or churches, and we are hoping that they will be used in each church along with the special Easter program. Several churches are planning special services and quite a few have reported they are having a Sunrise Service Easter morning.

Gratefully,

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

Sometime ago we printed in THE CHRISTIAN SUN a notice about refinishing rooms in our parsonage at Elk Spur, the cost of each room and asking that churches, Sunday schools, classes, missionary societies or individuals donate a special offering for this purpose. We are grateful to those who have given of their money for this work and we are hoping that others will be sending their donation at no far distant date. One Sunday school class gave $25.00, the amount estimated to refinish one room, and we had an individual gift of $5.00. We appreciate every dollar given for our mountain work.

The school authorities have recently repaired the Rocky Ford Church.

The missionary society of Mt. Olivet (R) in the Valley of Virginia Conference completed a quilt recently, which they sent to the pastor, Rev. G. H. Veazey, for the parsonage in Carroll County.

Almost every week or two I receive packages of clothing, etc., for our mountain work. These articles have been distributed and our people in Carroll County are most grateful for your kindness and thoughtfulness.

Rev. Veazey is doing good work in Carroll County and I am sure you will want to remember him in your prayers, and also help to carry on the work which he is so diligently doing.

MATTIE COX PARKER,

NORFOLK DISTRICT MEETING.

The twenty-first annual session of the Norfolk District of Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference was held at the First Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, April 1, 1941.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. R. B. Wood, acting superintendent, using for the theme, "Christ for the Crisis." Mrs. Wood brought us a very inspiring message on this topic. Mrs. Ernest Waterfield led the devotional for the day.

Roll call of churches showed nine churches represented, with approximately one hundred and twenty-five delegates and visitors. Mrs. J. M. Harris, President of Woman's Board of the Southern Convention; Mrs. B. D. Jones, President; Mrs. Harrell, Secretary; and Mrs. Darden, Treasurer of Eastern Virginia Woman's Board, were our guests for the day.

Mrs. J. L. Gall, well known Bible teacher of Newport News, was the guest speaker of the morning. She gave a very illuminating address on the theme, "Christ, His Cross and Resurrection." Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle and a group from the Christian Temple conducted a panel discussion on the topic, "The Cause of Calling Missionaries from War Torn Areas," which was very educational, broadening our information on missionary interests. Mrs. J. M. Harris gave us interesting information relative to the session of the Southern Convention for Women to be held this year, as well as the School of Missions, a matter most vital to all of us.

Mrs. R. B. Wood was elected superintendent for the coming year and I am sure we shall do great deeds under her capable and consecrated leadership. May this be a year of real service and work for Christ and in His name.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

They Give What They Have.—The District Conference of Eastern Mindanao in the Philippines has recommended setting aside not only God's acre, but God's trees, God's pigs and God's chickens! "We suggest," ran the report, "that every member have fruit trees of some kind growing and producing as a symbol that he is bearing much fruit." And these dedicated pigs, trees, gardens and chickens are used to support the churches. Some churches raised their budgets by stripping abaca and selling it. Abaca is used to make what we call hemp rope. Another group raised coconuts and each family dedicated certain coconut trees to the church for their pledge, as well as money, rice, chickens and eggs.

Kagawa "Retires."—According to information from the International Christian Press, Toyohiko Kagawa has retired from public life. His release, together with that of his associate, Mr. Ogawa, pastor of the church in which Kagawa was preaching when arrested, is reported as "unconditional." Kagawa has decided that he must no longer subject his friends and auditors to suspicion and danger, runs the news item, and will spend the next few months in quiet writing and studying the problems of tuberculosis on the Island of Toyoshima where he is trying to develop a co-operative Christian sanatorium and colony for tuberculosis patients from all over the Japanese empire.

How Green Is Their Valley?—Hard work in the hot sun at brick kiln or in the fields, followed by supper to cook. That is the life of most of the women in the outcaste communities near Manamadura, India. Yet, they want to study. Weary bodies, heavy eyes, they pour over their lessons so that they may learn to read the Bible. For women too old to learn a set of clapping songs has been devised—Bible stories set to music. Says Mrs.

Emmons White, "They love to do these in the silver moonlight of a soft Indian night. Can you imagine them in a circle, clapping their hands, swaying their bodies, moving their feet, as they sing the Ten Commandments or the story of the birth of Jesus?" Mrs. White specialized in work with these women, both Hindu and Moslem. She finds the Hindu women more responsive to direct Christian truths but the Moslem women pathetically eager for friendship.

* * *

Any Old Hymn Books?—A call for discarded hymn books comes from the Philippine Islands. Frank C. Laubach of Dansalan, Lanao, Philippine Islands, writes that they are very much in need of song books in quantities. He suggests that some churches may be buying new books and would be willing to send him the ones they discard. Some sent them by the late S. Parkes Cadman gave good service but have now gone like the "wonderful! one-hoss shay."

* * *

Have You Colored Bible Pictures?—"I am the only Christian teacher in a local government elementary school which serves a community of 3,000 Hindus," writes a young man to Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Nichols of Batlagundu, India. "No Christian work whatever is being done amongst them. I am eager to tell them of the Gospel. Please pray for me and my wife." This young man asked the Nichols if they could find American friends who would send out colored Bible pictures which he might use in his volunteer evangelistic work among the people. If you have any, send them along.

One in Christ.—A bell chimed. The great throng was quiet. Floor and balcony of Webb Memorial Church, Madura, India, were crowded with white gowned men, the lovely flower-like colors of women's saris, little children and dark eyed babies. "The Church's One Foundation" thundered from the organ as up the aisle came a white-robed choir, the new Anglican Bishops in robes of red and gold and pastors of all the Christian Churches in Madura. In the shadow of the great stone gopurams of mighty Meenatchi Hindu temple stands this Christian Church. For a union service there came not only Indians of all creeds, but Englishmen, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. workers. Down upon this reverent throng looked the tender face of the Good Shepherd from the memorial window. Each day many who pass drop in to gaze for a moment on this beautiful picture. "If ye love me, feed my lambs," it seems to say.—Missionary Herald.

A LETTER TO ALL COLLEGE YOUNG PEOPLE.

Dear Fellowshipers in College:

I read Bill Andes' letter in THE CHRISTIAN SUN last week and took it upon myself to let you know of our Pilgrim Fellowship student group at Woman's College in Greensboro. We have forty-two members and we meet in the Religious Activities Center every month. Miss Valda Davis, a senior, from Wake County, is president of the group.

On different occasions this year we have visited the children at the Negro hospital in the city. At Christmas time we made silhouettes for their windows, and valentines for them on Valentine Day. The girls attend the First Congregational Christian Church in Greensboro, and take an active part in our programs.

At our last college meeting we discussed the problem of our student groups over the state. We decided that something should be done in order for us to know more about what the different groups are doing. Most of the other denominational groups have state-wide student conferences where they exchange ideas and plans.

Thus I am addressing this letter to all Congregational Christian college students over the state to let me know if they are interested in some form of conference. We could start plans and perhaps have such a meeting in the fall. If you have time, and are really interested, drop me a letter or card and we'll see what can be done.

MEDITATION.

There would seem to have been nothing strange or unusual about Jesus' saying "It is finished" there on the cross. Those words are the natural consequence which could be written across the life of any man when it has come to its close. The two others hanging there on each side of Him that day knew for them, too, "It is finished." But for Him it was inevitable. Strange that it should be so, that this man of all men should be thrust upon a cross in his middle years and broken by it. And yet not so strange! For this world being what it is, and His love being what it was. He could not escape being hurt for it. It is the eternal symbol of what always happens to love which dares enough, which cares for nothing so much as pushing itself out into all the world, fearing no consequences which shall overtake it. So in the silent face of God, Jesus dies, saying, "It is finished."

In truth, for Him it was finished. But it was not the end which descends upon incompleteness, as death sometimes precipitately does, as though to say, "Sorry, but this is all." He entered it sure, as confident as one who knew that this was in reality the beginning. And that is the mystery of it! What Christ upon the cross says to us is that here is the timelessness of the eternal God, as though in this life there was neither beginning nor end. Here is life in its completeness. What could time have added to it—two more hours? Through Him the eternity of God broke through. So Christ dies saying, "It is finished."

And yet, to anyone who stands there silent enough and long enough for these words to speak to him begins to glimpse the mysterious paradox, that even in its completeness it is not finished! This "strange man upon his cross" will not let us go, keeps crying out to us as though what he lived for and died for were never complete until it had won us, and pushed its way through us out into the world. His spirit is like a restless flame which forever seeks to catch fire in new hearts and go on to burn itself out in them, cleansing and purifying the evil and injustice in the world.

Our completeness lies in our willingness to enter with Him in "costly adventure for the Kingdom of God," to be willing to be hurt for the sake of love and truth.

Whenever there is silence around me
By day or by night—
I am startled by a cry.
It came down from the cross—
The first time I heard it.
I went out and searched—
And found a man in the throes of crucifixion,
And I said, "I will take you down,"
And I tried to take the nails out of his feet.

But he said, "Let them be
For I cannot be taken down Until every man, every woman, and every child
Come together to take me down."
And I said, "But I cannot hear you cry.
What can I do?"
And he said, "Go about the world—
Tell everyone you meet—
There is a man on the cross."

CHILDREN'S PAGE.

Sunday morning. Each one was eager to leip someone else to don his or her new Easter outfit. Everyone ready, the family set out on the two-mile trek to the Methodist Sunday school. The least one was carried part of the way in father's arms; the next smallest one held on the mother's hand as they trudged along over the rough country road. Before they got to the church they could hear the church bells telling them the good news that Christ rose on this day. The Easter service was always a beautiful one and the children loved it because they were always given a special part in the service.

But, perhaps the climax of the day came when after lunch the children were all allowed to go out on the lawn and search for the Easter eggs which the Easter rabbit had hid from them during the night. They knew perfectly well that father had hidden the eggs in the early morn while they were still in dreamland! The least children were always given the first chance to find the eggs which were hidden among the Easter lillies. Each older child was allowed to invite a playmate to come and help hunt the eggs. After all of the eggs were found and equally divided among the children, there was an egg rolling out on the hill back of the house.

It was too far for the children to walk back to the evening services at the church. Mother and father went, leaving the smaller children in the care of an older child. Then they had their own evening service—"family altar service" it was called. It was always lovely and the children were always glad to be left alone so that they could conduct it by themselves. The one on Easter evening was one which they never forgot until the next Easter rolled around.

USING WITNESSING POWER.

LESSON III—APRIL 20, 1941.

LESSON: Acts 2:1-4:31.

GOLDEN TEXT: They were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and they spoke the word of God with boldness.—Acts 4:31.

Promised Power.

Jesus had promised that his disciples should receive power after that the Holy Spirit was come upon them. He also told them to tarry, or to wait, until the Spirit came. In obedience to his command they waited. Waiting is often much more difficult than working. Yet, much of our failure in Christian work is due to our failure to wait until we are endued with power from on high. In the final analysis the work of the Kingdom is not accomplished by mere brawn or even by brains. It is "not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." Much of our failure in performance is due to our failure in prayer. They that wait upon the Lord not only shall renew their strength, they shall receive power. Often one can do more and do it better in a given time if he spends part of that time in prayer and meditation and waiting. Like the disciples, we, too, shall receive power if we tarry.

The Coming of the Promised Power.

The promised power came at Pentecost. The word, Pentecost, itself means "fifty," or "fiftieth"—it was the feast which came fifty days after the Passover. Pentecost may be called the birthday of the church. To be sure the Holy Spirit had been at work in the world before this day, but in a special way God through Christ sent the Holy Spirit in new fulness and in power into the hearts of the apostles and the waiting disciples on that memorable day.

The account as given by Luke contains elements of history. It was such an unusual experience that ordinary language was inadequate to describe it. As the disciples were gathered together in one place, in one accord, suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind. It seemed to fill the whole house where they were sitting. There appeared also unto them tongues divided, or parted asunder, like as a fire, which rested upon each one of them. As an accompaniment to these outer manifestations they were all filled with the Holy Spirit. They were conscious of spiritual power within, of new dynamic energy. Another strange accompaniment was that each of them began to speak with "other tongues," as the Spirit gave them utterance.

Later those who heard them said that each heard the gospel in his own tongue. It was a sign and symbol of the universality of the gospel of Christ and the fact that God can speak to every man in language which he can understand. The central fact in this account of Pentecost is the idea of fullness, abundance, overflowing, irresistible power. The disciples and the apostles felt that there was an adequacy in their lives which they had had never experienced before, an adequacy equal to all of the demands which life could make upon them.

Using the Promised Power.

The writer of these notes heard a great preacher preach a sermon a few weeks ago on the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. Instead of discussing in detail the account as given in the second chapter of Acts, he proceeded to interpret the coming of the Holy Spirit in the lives of the disciples in the terms of what they did with it. It was a different approach from anything the writer had ever heard and commended itself to him for its saneness, and practical application. In general the Spirit in these men expressed itself in the following ways.

1. In Evangelism.—The first impulse which the disciples had when the Spirit came upon them was to share the good news with those near at hand. They told of the love of God revealed in Christ Jesus, who had been crucified, who had risen from the dead, and in whose name those who had crucified Him could find remission of sins and salvation through faith. In whatever other ways the Holy Spirit manifested Him, it manifested itself in this way. One of the first fruits of the Spirit is the sharing of the experience of Christ with others.

2. Witnessing.—These men under the power of the Holy Spirit found the source of courage which enabled them to bear witness in the face of persecution and even the threat of death. It was when they perceived the boldness of Peter and John, and when they perceived that they were ignorant and unlearned men (this means that they were not trained in the religious schools and did not have a formal education), it was then that they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus. The failure of many a Christian to bear witness for his Lord is due to the lack of the Holy Spirit in his heart.

3. Sharing With Others.—One of the finest fruits of the Spirit in the life of the early church was the concern which it begot for others, the compassion for the condition of others which it aroused, the impulse to share with others that which they themselves had. This is evidenced in the story of Peter and John going up to the Temple and bestowing not an alms upon the man who lay there at the Gate Beautiful, but something far better and more precious than a piece of money. It is expressed also in the action of the early church in having all things in common, some of them at the expense of selling what they did have and bringing it to a common treasury that there should be enough for those who were in need. The Holy Spirit prompts those in whose heart He resides the share with others, to bear one another's burdens, and so to fulfil Christ's law of love. The present world situation, with its need, its stark human needs, is a test to those who profess to have the Holy Spirit.

4. Missions.—The preacher made a distinction between evangelism as such, and world missions. He did not strain the point, but he called attention to the fact that the missionary passion was a little more inclusive and comprehensive than evangelism. Missions is the evangelistic spirit going into the whole world. Under the inspiration and power of the Holy Spirit, these men soon broke over the provincial barriers of Judaism, or their mission to Christian Jews, and began to go first into Judea, then into Samaria, and then unto the uttermost parts of the world. The foreign mission enterprise was born in the Holy Spirit. One of the surest evidences of the presence of the Holy Spirit in the heart of the individual believer is his interest in missions.

Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill., recently conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. Roy L. Smith, the new editor of The Christian Advocate.

RUNNING AWAY FROM SELF.

"If the salt have lost its savour wherewith shall it be salted?"—Matt. 5: 13.

What is meant by this text? There is a story of a black maid who said to her neurotic mistress, who had complained of her weariness and that she needed a vacation: "What you-all need a vacation for? Don' you-all know you'se goin' to have yo'self with you?"

That is what has happened to many people: they have tried to escape from reality. The salt of life has lost its savour for them. They have flattened out. Their faith in God is eclipsed. Their zest is taken out of them. Life has become futile and useless. All hard workers need a vacation from their regular routine but they need a zest in their every day duties which gives them a lot of pleasure and grace. One who can find pleasure in their daily task has learned to find joy in living. Let us pray for that.

TUESDAY.

AMAZING ARROGANCE.

"A true witness delivereth souls; but he that uttereth lies causeth deceit."—Prov. 14: 25.

As we read the billboards and listen to the advertising chatter over the radio we would conclude that each particular article is "your best friend." We have seen Santa Claus advertising the brewers, and we expect to see a picture of the Virgin Mary inviting us into a saloon. How can such arrogance be explained save that moral values have lost their meaning and God's people have fled from it. Let us pray that we, each individually, may let our little world know that we stand against anything that weakens the moral values of life and for that which builds up our faith. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SOWING AND REAPING.

"Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; break up your fallow ground; for it is time to seek the Lord, till he come and rain righteousness upon you."—Hosea 10: 12.

Some people expect to reap a harvest without sowing, and some expect to do a lot of sowing without reaping. In the first class are those who wait for something to turn up, expecting their "ship to come in" when they have done nothing to turn things up, nor have they sent any ships to sea. They are those who would like to draw checks on the bank when they have made no deposits. They expect money to come to them when they have not worked. They expect to have friends when they have not been friendly. They expect the big jobs without climbing to them. They expect to drift finally into heaven without doing very much about it. They want life the easiest way when there is no easy way to success, nor to glory. Let us pray for the gift of understanding moral and religious values and dedicate our lives to whatever may be necessary to achieve them. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE OTHER CLASS.

"Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"—Matt. 7: 16.

The class of people who expect to do a lot of sowing and no reaping consists of those who expect to sow carelessly, recklessly; who expect to plant their wild oats and reap the tame variety, to sow tares and reap wheat. We find them disregarding the laws of their own bodies, the laws of men, and the laws of God, always hoping that they will be lucky enough to escape the penalty.

A visitor to the prison one day found an old acquaintance of his sitting in the midst of a large heap of burlap, sewing. The visitor greeted his old friend and said, "You are sewing, aren't you?" "No," he replied, "I am reaping." Because it is hard to see the end and outcome of things, and because we think we can escape, and because we shall not "escape if we neglect," let us pray for the gift of God that we may be careful, and from youth up sow in a way we shall reap the best fruit. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE IMMUTABLE LAW.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6: 7.

The law of sowing and reaping is as certain as the law of gravitation, or any other of God's laws. We older ones know that there is no escape from reaping what we sow. Youth may think it can sow wild oats, break the laws of health for a time and escape the results, but the reaping comes later. It comes in sickness, in pain and in misfortune. The drunkard does not think when he begins that he will wind up in misery and woe. We may think that we can break the Ten Commandments and a loving God will forgive and forget. He will forgive the soul and forget the deed, but the laws do not. "The wages of sin is death." Let us pray for the wisdom that brings a rich harvest. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THINGS OF THE BIBLE.

"Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against thee." Psalm 119: 11. (Revised version.)

Much is said and well said about the Inspiration of the Scriptures. But the Bible is not all inspiration to bear experience. It is something reason-

AFTER TEN YEARS.

What the Congregational Christian Merger Means to the Former Christian Churches.

I know these men and women. Most of them voted for the union at the General Convention in 1929. Some are ministers, others laymen and women. They live in many parts of the United States. A summary of their replies is not easy, but I find five answers to the question: "What has the merger meant to the Christian Church?"

First, there is joyful satisfaction in the "achievement of a century old passion for some practical steps in the direction of church unity." Many would agree with the man who said simply: "We preached union. We have worked at it. It works." "The feasibility of union has been demonstrated." "A high ideal has been achieved." The merger is the "fulfillment of an age of preaching." Many hope this merger is but one step toward a wider unity among many churches. There is a general feeling that denominations can unite, if they really desire to pay the price to do so. The members of the former Christian Church continue to believe in Christian union, and their confidence in its practicability has increased.

Second, there is a hearty appreciation expressed for the wider fellowship of the united church, for new friends, and for state contacts. There were tributes to "rare personalities" in Congregational leadership. "I would not have missed this increased fellowship for a great deal," writes a young minister. "I'm just as strong for the merger as I ever was"—the writer was in the youth group when the vote was taken. "The united body is experiencing a new birth of Christian fellowship and power" is the opinion of an older man. Vision, inspiration, desires to serve have been positive outcomes of this wider fellowship. There is a wistful note here and there, too. "It has not meant very much to me but as a whole it has meant a lot to our church. We do not have the same fellowship." "I long for many among the Congregational leaders to know more of the heritage of the Christian Church" reveals more than a criticism in passing. It is a longing for a common ground on which fellowship may be built. And that common ground is none other than that which has been present time and time again in the appreciation of each group for the other, for appreciation must always accompany genuine fellowship.

Third, the opportunity to share in a world-wide missionary program is mentioned by many. The former Christian Churches, many, many of them, rejoice in the knowledge that "we" have work in China, India, Africa, the Philippines, the Near East, as well as in Japan, and that young people from the former Christian Churches are at work in these lands today. The widened scope of the home mission program has its appeal, and the service of the Home Board has strengthened the work of many a former Christian Church. It must be confessed that sometimes former Christian Church members have not acquired a deep sense of responsibility for the missionary program of the united churches. The intimate note of a time when the foreign missionaries, as well as the home, were all personal friends is gone. Something must grow. It is growing. It is something for the former Christian Churches to cultivate in the second decade of the merger. There is evidence that it will come.

Fourth, the merger has brought to ministers and congregations of former Christian Churches many new resources and opportunities. The national and state organizations, with "kindly supervision" were mentioned. The leadership, a wider choice of printed materials, a program with higher goals and new privileges for training and youth activity—all were mentioned with appreciation. The opportunities open to the younger ministers in a larger church, together with the incentive for adequate preparation for their work, are assets.

Fifth, "Every change brings gains and losses." This quoted statement is a prelude to varied opinions. There are those who feel that the net result of the merger has been that the Christian Church has lost its identity, has been absorbed in a larger church. Others believe "The principles of the Christian Church are more clearly before the world today than ever before, as a result of this merger." "There is a danger of a loss of that freedom and liberty in religious positions which characterized our church" is the opinion of a man too thoughtful to be ignored. "There is less evangelistic zeal in the church," said some, while one of the oldest ministers asserts: "The merger has opened quite a number of closed churches, put on a larger program, given a new vision of service and started some new churches." "A skeptic believes," writes one man, while another warns, "We need to preserve the essentials of our faith which are threatened by the merger."

Opinions are affected to some extent by geography. Those who have shared actively in a Congregational Christian state program are more enthusiastic than those in more isolated places, or sections where there were few or no former Congregational Churches. Some small churches feel out of touch with the denomination, while others find the state fellowship helpful, and a substitute, they say, for the national fellowship they enjoyed before. "It is good for the churches and individuals which have cooperated" is the common sense practical observation on the merger, writes one minister.

These answers are "red lights" of warning. The test of the success of the merger ultimately will be in terms of how far the united church is a new church, with more to offer the world than either the Congregational or the Christian Churches could have offered alone.

Suppose the delegates of the former Christian Churches could meet again today at Piqua. Suppose they could vote again on the merger, with all events of the past ten years to guide them. What would happen? I believe the "Ayes" would be louder. I know there would be some who would wonder, and some who would question, and others would come instructed to vote "no." But, on the whole, I believe that the vote would be in the affirmative and even more enthusiastic than a decade ago. I am confident that the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," which had so much meaning for many of us on that fall afternoon in 1929, would have much more significance today. It would carry us into the world with new vision, with new friends, with greater resources for a more adequate local church program, with work to do and a will to do it. This first decade has been a beginning in a period of changes to be made, new customs to adopt, new ventures to be made. The former Christian Churches, I believe, enter the second decade with a desire to share in the development of a truly united church program which will meet world needs.

After reading the replies of my friends, and thinking about their experiences and mine, there seems to be just one sentence which will sum them all up. I need to use a favorite expression of my grandfather's, "one thing and another," and the minister's "by and large." By and large, the merger has meant one thing and another to our former Christian Churches, and it has been good for us.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Friday and Saturday before Easter Sunday were two busy days at the Christian Orphanage. After the boxes of Easter dresses sent in for the girls from the women's missionary societies of a number of our churches, Friday afternoon was spent by the matrons and the girls selecting dresses for each one and fitting them on. The dresses are sorted out first, according to ages, say from 10 to 12, 13 to 15 and 15 to 18 years of age and placed on a long table and then the group from ten to twelve years of age from all three buildings are invited to come to the Johnson Hall where the dresses are given out and make their selection and get a dress to fit them. When this group has been waited on, then another group for the next age is invited, and so on, until all the children have selected the dresses of their choice. By having the children divided in groups as to age and inviting them from all the buildings at the same time keeps down any chance for some one to be dissatisfied. Sometimes a girl will select a dress that she wants very much but it just wont fit and she cannot wear it and some other girl gets it; but there is no hard feelings—she is just glad it fits the other girl.

The superintendent has the job of buying the Easter slippers and that is a harder job than the matrons have fitting the dresses. Some want one style and some another style. When everything is equal as to quality and price we try to comply with their wishes. If we buy the style they want they get more joy out of wearing it. We appreciate the many dresses sent in by the good bodies. It made all the girls happy for Easter and they all wore a smile as well as a new dress.

Our good friends of the Providence Memorial Christian Church, Graham, N. C., sent us eighteen dozen eggs for the children's Easter. This church remembers us every year and sees to it that the children have eggs for Easter.

Our good women of Hank's Chapel Church, near Pittsboro, N. C., sent us one crate of thirty dozen eggs for Easter. This church, too, has been a loyal friend to the orphanage for many years. We are very grateful to these two churches for remembering us at this Easter season with plenty of eggs to make all the little boys and girls happy. All children expect eggs for Easter. The writer well remembers when he was a little fellow how we looked forward to having boiled eggs for breakfast on Easter Sunday morning. Mother made it a rule to give us children all we wanted on that occasion.

We hope everybody had a most happy Easter.

detachment and suspended judgment; it emphasizes the value of imagination and doubt; in a world of emotion and passion it shows us what the weighing of evidence means. us aloft into the ecstasies of religiously vital. It is the best literature in all the world. It brings us into the presence of the living God. It is the voice of the living God. It is a history of man's search after God and of God's revelation to man. It reveals both the failures and successes of man in his search and then the inspiration makes it possible for him to avoid future failures. It is a way in which we walk with Jesus who himself went about doing good and with whom we may also do good. It points the way of love in everyday life and brings us into happy fellowship with the angels who still praise Him. Let us pray for a deep consciousness of the sacred nearness of the Lord Jesus and for a keen everyday interest in His word.

SUNDAY.

Said Jesus, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath." Many ask, "Why should I observe the Sabbath?" Well, if the Sabbath was made for man, it is a better question to ask, "Why should man be deprived of it?" If the observance of the Sabbath has been the greatest delight to the most enlightened people of the ages, why should any one forfeit the privilege.

In Memoriam

MILTEER.

In the death of Miss Emily Milteer on March 20, 1941, we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Holland Christian Church, have lost one of our oldest and most faithful members.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of God, giving thanks to Him for such a consistent, faithful and useful life, devoted to the church and consecrated to the cause of Christ.

2. That we hold in remembrance her love for her church, her relatives and many friends.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication and one placed on the record of our society.

Mrs. H. B. EVERETT,
 Mrs. JOB G. HARRELL,
 Mrs. W. J. HOLLAND,

BYRD.

January 16, 1941, the death angel visited the home of Mr. J. R. Byrd of Suffolk, Va., claiming the spirit of his devoted and faithful wife. In her going, Bethlehem Church and Sunday school have lost another faithful member. We deeply deplore our loss, but we are sure that she has entered into the joys of that heavenly home.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we humbly bow in submission to our heavenly Father's will who doeth all things well.

2. That we extend anew to her devoted husband and children our sympathy.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our church record a copy be sent to her family and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

RENN.

Whereas, it was the will of our heavenly Father to call from our midst our friend and member of our church and missionary society, Mrs. Molly Ayscue Renn, on December 14, 1940; and,

Whereas, ill health was the cause of her inactiveness in her church work during her last years; therefore,

Be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to Him who called her to her reward.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to her bereaved family, and loved ones, and commend them to the all powerful God, who alone can give comfort and consolation.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication and a copy be spread upon the minutes of the missionary society.

WOODWARD.

God, in all his love, saw fit to take from our church, friends and loved ones, Mr. Billie Woodward on December 7, 1940. He spent a quiet Christian life and was a friend to all who knew him. He was sick only a short time, and will be greatly missed.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That through God's divine plan he was taken from us.

2. That our church extend sincere sympathy to his family.

3. That we shall remember his quiet Christian life.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication and a copy be placed on the record of Liberty Spring Christian Church.

HARRELL.

Our heavenly Father, in His great love, came on January 8, 1941, and took from our church and loved ones, Miss Hattie Harrell, a life long member of Liberty Spring Christian Church. Failing health had taken her from her church work and societies, the work she loved so much. Even though in failing health she did not forget their needs. A loyal Christian has passed, one whose smile will be missed.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That her beautiful life be a guiding light to us.

2. That we follow the Christian example she has left us.

3. That we extend our sympathy to her loved ones.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy recorded on our church record and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

PARKER.

In loving memory of Mr. Henry Parker, whom God, in His infinite wisdom, removed from our midst on February 19, 1941, we, the members of Liberty Spring Christian Church, desire to express our devotion to his memory as a member of our church. While knowing that the place he filled in his church, home and community will always be vacant, we believe that our loss is his divine gain and that he has gone to that mansion which God has prepared for this one.

We shall miss his kindly smile, his quiet manner and his devotion to his church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will.

2. That we hold in remembrance his faithfulness to all.

3. That we extend anew our sympathy to the family.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication and one to be placed on our church record.

Migrant Work in the Florida "Glades"

By HOWARD HANEY.

The migrant camps at Belle Glade are the only ones of their kind east of the Mississippi River. They were built under the Farm Security Act of 1934. Camp Ocoola is the camp for white workers and Camp Okeechobee for colored workers. Both camps are identical, they have the same rules and regulations, the same provision for clinic, the services of the doctor and nurse, a grade school through the fourth grade, and a 24-hour nursery.

Everyone, on making application for entrance to the camps, must have a physical examination with blood test given by the camp doctor. There is a nurse on duty 24 hours of the day; the services of the physician and nurse are free to all. An isolation camp is provided for all cases of communicable disease.

The nursery school in each camp will take care of 100 children from the ages of six months to six years. Food and supplies are provided for the schools by merchants, farmers, packing houses, and community agencies. Children are cared for night and day, some children seeing their parents only on Sunday.

The community assembly hall provides recreation and music, a Church school on Sunday mornings and preaching services in the afternoon, conducted by a nearby local minister.

The community is governed by councilmen elected by the workers. The houses are built in units of 14 homes. Each unit elects their own councilmen who form the community council which makes the laws and enforces them. A family disregarding the laws may be evicted by the council. In this way every laborer is an active member of the group, in some cases it may be the first time they have had any part in planning for the group and thinking of a neighbor's welfare. Each laborer gives two hours of work per week and pays $1.00 per week rent. The work on the camp takes care of the comfort stations and keeps the grounds clean. Fifty cents of the dollar goes to the Federal Government and is used to pay for the construction of the camp. It is believed that it will pay for the camp in fifty years. Of the fifty cents kept in the camp, part is used to create a loan fund from which help can be given in cases of need. Last year during the frost period, when there was no work, $1,500 was loaned in sums of $5 and $10. Only three people left the camp last year without repaying what they had borrowed from the fund, and one of these came back this fall and paid what he owed. They are learning to budget and make plans.

A lunch room is being developed to serve one good meal a day to migrant children in the public school of Belle Glade and to children attending the Migrant School. Parents often have to work in the packing houses during the night, and their children are cared for in the 24-hour nursery.

Fifty thousand workers come to Florida each year and about 75% of them return from year to year. In Florida, Georgia, Alabama, and South Carolina, there are 90,000 migrant families whose incomes are less than $200 per year.

At Belle Glade there are twenty labor homes where people are encouraged to live permanently; there is land around the homes for raising vegetables, taking care of a cow, chickens, etc.

America Challenges the Church

While we rejoice in the blessings we have in the United States and thank God for our good fortune that has enabled us to escape the horrors of war and the devastation that has been the experience of other nations, we are nonetheless mindful of the forces within our shores that constitute a threat to our national life. These factors represent the challenge that the church must face realistically. They may be summed up as follows:

85,000,000, or 63% of our population without the Church.

30,000,000 children and youth without religious training.

30,000,000 foreign born, parents and their families, representing forty-five nationalities.

96 metropolitan centers have 45% of our population, with the evils of city life, and in many of them only one out of seven are members of a church.

The active criminal population is $4\frac{1}{2}$ million which is $3\frac{1}{2}$ times as many as are enrolled in our colleges and universities; the annual crime bill is \$15,000,000,000—\$120 for every man, woman and child.

The national liquor bill last year was $5,000,000,000, a little short of 50% of the country's food bill. We spent $15.33 per capita for education, and $38.60 per capita for liquor.

These facts suggest something of the task that confronts the church in general. They also have potent meaning for the home mission agencies, and they have significance for foreign missions, for only in proportion as America becomes genuinely Christian, shall we be able to help evangelize the world.—Dr. Mark A. Dawber, Executive Secretary of the Home Missions Council.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. J. Everett Neese will become the pastor of Ocean View on May 1.

Dr. John G. Truitt received twenty-six members into the Suffolk church on Palm Sunday.

Rev. J. L. Neese received twelve members at Old Zion Church, Norfolk, on Easter Sunday.

Rev. T. Fred Wright reports a large congregation and fine service at Windsor on Easter Sunday.

Dr. H. S. Harcastle received thirty-seven members into the Christian Temple, Norfolk, on Palm Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. John Knight of the First Church, Norfolk, report the birth of a daughter on April 20, 1941.

Rev. O. D. Poythress reports a capacity congregation at the South Norfolk Christian Church on Easter Sunday.

We regret that it has become necessary for Chaplain W. W. Elder to receive treatment in the Brooklyn Naval Hospital.

Rev. B. H. Watkins conducted Holy Week services at Wakefield. He received five members into the church on Easter Sunday.

Hon. Wm. E. Sweet, Moderator of the General Council, was the speaker at the Suffolk Christian Church on last Sunday evening.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree will be the speaker at Newport News this Sunday evening. He is preaching each Sunday this month at Berea, Norfolk.

Arnold Mark Slater was born on April 1, at Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk. Mark is now receiving friends and visitors in the parsonage at Holland.

The Easter offering for Missions at Newport News was $298.75. Mr. C. D. West reports that a check for $340.00 has already been forwarded to the Missions office. The regular apportionment for the church was $170.00, and an equal amount was sent for the J. O. Atkinson Memorial Fund. Congratulations to this fine church.

NEWS FROM LYNCHBURG.

Our Easter program began at 5:30 a. m., at which time we had a sunrise service sponsored by our young people. Sixty persons were present, and it was a splendid program of scripture and song, concluding with the celebration of the Lord's Supper, conducted by the pastor.

At Sunday school we broke our attendance record, having four more present than we have on the roll. It was the finest Easter attendance since I have been in Lynchburg (nearly five years).

At the morning service I christened my nephew, Norman Asbury Kerlin, Jr., of Newport News, Va., and also one other child. We received into our fellowship five by transfer of letter and four on profession of faith. My family was present for the christening, coming from Newport News, and Norfolk, Va., and Wilson, N. C.

We have 120 on Sunday school roll and had 124 present Easter Sunday. We had three of the best services our church has ever enjoyed.

The Woman's Missionary Society met at 10:30 a. m., April 16th, at the church. After a thirty minute business session, including a report of the Halifax District meeting held at Ingram, Mrs. Sidney M. Bedford, wife of a Disciple minister of Lynchburg, taught the mission study book, "Dangerous Opportunity."

At 12:30 a delicious luncheon was served to twenty-eight women, and from 1:30 to 2:30, another hour was devoted to the completion of the mission study book. Mrs. Bedford gave a most interesting and helpful review, and we feel it was a very successful day. This meeting was a variation from the regular monthly night sessions.

Pastor.

THE TASK OF THE CHURCH IN COMMUNITY BUILDING.

No greater test has come to Christianity than that offered by the present world crisis. It is not simply a question of what the attitude of the Christian Church shall be toward war and peace, but more significantly it is a question of how the Christian message may strengthen and sustain the individual in a time of complete bewilderment.

If ever the Christian forces of a community needed to work together and utter an authoritative word about God's care for life, it is now.

Four years ago a group of outstanding Christian leaders and educators interested in vital religion, planned a conference which would study just this aspect of the Christian forces. These sponsors included each of the presidents of southern state universities, a number of deans of the theological seminaries which train our active ministry, and outstanding persons from the leading denominations. Some sixty of the ablest leaders of Christian thought have cooperated in holding such an interdenominational conference of Christian workers each summer for four years at Blue Ridge, N. C.

The power of the church in any community is almost unlimited if all worked with a common eye to meeting a common need. This does not in any way mean less denominational loyalty and enthusiasm but it does mean that each church views the community as a whole and finds its best way of cooperating with all other Christian forces in building a Christian community, and meeting the spiritual needs of the whole group making up such a community.

The problem of the thousands of unchurched people, who never darken the door of any church of any denomination is an acute one at a time of crisis like the present. The real strength of America will be the united strength of all its citizens. Any persons having no religious insights will be a weakening influence in this important hour.

Somehow the churches simply must find a way of reaching a larger portion of our people. This, the Sponsoring Committee for this conference believes, can best be done by all churches seeing eye to eye and making a bold frontal attack on this whole community problem. As a means of accomplishing this large task, the Sponsoring Committee has felt that groups of Christian leaders from all denominations should meet together each summer under the ablest leadership to be found in America and formulate plans for the common task.

This summer (June 16-22), Dr. Walter Horton of Oberlin University, one of the ablest minds of the American Church will lead the group the first hour of each morning on the Foundation Principles of Our Faith; Dr. Arthur Holt of Chicago University will lead the group the second hour each morning on the Social Message of Our Gospel and Dr. Quinter Miller of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America will

EVANGELISM

DR. JOHN G. TRUITT, Convention Chairman.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

By REV. B. J. EARP.

The business of the church is to establish the Kingdom of God on earth. We pray "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." The process of bringing God's kingdom to human hearts and lives, as well as to this planet called earth, is what we call evangelism. To remove evangelism takes away the heart of the church. Ideal evangelism would involve the enlistment of every organization, and all the forces of the church, for the redemption of the world.

We are in the habit of thinking of the church as possessing many functions and objectives such as charity, welfare, social action, temperance, education, publications, etc.; and most truly these objectives are commendable, but to my mind the one dynamic of the church is to save the world for Christ, and this task is mainly through evangelism. Many other agencies have their place, but they must never be allowed to crowd out the evangelistic spirit, or a burning passion for souls on the part of the church. Such a passion is what has kept the church alive from pentecost to the present moment.

Paul tells Timothy to "do the work of an evangelist," in the sense of proclaiming the message of an Evangel; meaning to preach the gospel with an expectancy of leading the unsaved to Christ. Paul also declares in Eph. 4:11, "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." Paul himself is an outstanding example of personal evangelism, and in his preaching and letters his doctrinal teaching is never in excess of the one desire of his heart that Israel might be saved.

We are apt to think of the minister's many tasks, among which we reckon the work of evangelism. In this we are mistaken unless we give evangelism its central place. All our labors, Brethren, should be governed by the evangelistic spirit, or impulse. Bishop Leonard says, "The ideal toward which the preacher should bend the entire energies of his soul, is that of bringing his own church to a standard of continuous evangelism, with himself as the evangelist."

But our subject is one of Personal Evangelism. It is much easier to stand in the pulpit and tell others what they should do, than it is to show them. The true evangel called of God to win souls to Christ, will not only tell the way to Christ, but will lead the way. His life itself must be a living example of Christ. He will walk circumspectly, redeeming the time, and be filled with the Spirit. Deacon Stephen, the first martyr, was Spirit filled. Perhaps his dying prayer: "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge," did more to touch the heart of Saul of Tarsus, than everything he ever said or did in all his previous life. He may never have known in this world the contribution he made to the cause of Christ, by praying just that prayer, and paying the price of his life a martyr for the Christian cause. Had Stephen lived he could never have done the work that Paul did.

The incident of deacon Philip, obeying the Spirit and joining himself to the chariot of the Ethiopian eunuch, is a true example of personal evangelism. It is our conviction that God has used the personal word, the personal prayer, or the individual effort on the part of the followers of Christ, to evangelize and save many of the great personalities of the kingdom of God. Not only is this true in the case of Saul just cited, but the day that Andrew said to his brother, Simon, "We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ," perhaps that was the greatest day for the Christian cause in the life of Andrew.

Jesus himself was a personal evangelist. The greatest that the world has ever known, or ever will know.

Jesus called them one by one,
Peter, Andrew, James and John,
Then came Philip, Thomas, too,
Matthew and Bartholomew,
James, the one they call the less,
Simon, also Thaddaus,
Twelve apostles Judas made,
Jesus was by him betrayed.

John 7:37—"In the last day, the great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." Although Jesus was addressing an assembly at the feast of the Tabernacles, his invitation is personal, and addressed to the individual heart. When Jesus taught the doctrine of the New Birth as recorded in John 3, he made the appeal direct to Nicodemus, as so far as we know, no one else was present. Our Savior was quite personal, as he uncovered the sin of the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well. The disciples had gone away to buy meat, but when this woman took leave of Jesus, she went away inviting the men of the city to "Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" She may have left her waterpot behind, but through her testimony the men of the city came to Christ.

When the Scribes and Pharisees brought to Jesus the woman taken in adultery, He wrote on the ground until the irritated hypocrites retired, and then he forgave the poor sinful woman. It seems to me, brethren, there are too many of us who want to get before a crowd, with a big sermon, and say we had so many to hear us preach. Well, Jesus did not seek large audiences, He rather evaded them. His greatest experiences were in the presence of the individual or the few. Personal evangelism then, the kind that would be Christ-like, forever stresses the saving process, the new birth in Christ. Its terms are simple—forsake sin, repentance; accept Christ, forgiveness: and its field is universal. It seeks the renewal of the soul and its deliverance into the glorious liberty of Christ.

Richard Roberts phrases evangelism thus: "That deep hidden channel by which we are connected with God is the avenue by which the eternal Christ finds his way into our spirits. Only the channel is blocked by our disobedience, by our contumacy, and sin. We have shut ourselves away from God; that is only another way of saying that sin is self-assertion and rebellion. There is no salvation except by clearing the choked channel and keeping it open; and the clearing and opening up of the channel is our repentance and submission and obedience." The true evangel of God's love to man may find himself praying this prayer by Metcalf:

God, make me a man—
Give me the strength to stand for the right
When other folks have left the fight.
Give me the courage of the man
Who knows that if he wills he can.
Teach me to see in every face
The good, the kind, and not the base.
Make me sincere in word and deed,
Blot out from me all shame and greed.
Help me to guard my troubled soul
By constant active self-control.
Clean up my thoughts, my speech, my play,
And keep me pure from day to day.
O make me a man.

FIVE ELEMENTS OF SUCCESSFUL EVANGELISM.

1. Knowledge of God's Word.—The use of the Bible as a guide and textbook, is absolutely essential to the success.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" GOES TO PRESS.

Have you ever thought of the process through which your church paper passes before it reaches you? Perhaps a knowledge of its history together with a realization of the work and responsibility involved in its publication may promote a fuller recognition and appreciation of its merit.

The Story of Printing.

This year marks the 500th anniversary of the invention of movable type; the 400th anniversary of the printing of the first book in America; the 300th anniversary of the printing of the Bay Psalm Book; the 250th anniversary of the publication of the first newspaper in what is now the United States and the 200th anniversary of the death of Alexander Hamilton, the lawyer who helped acquit John Peter Zenger and thereby establish the essential principles of freedom of the press.

Those who appreciate the significance of printing are this year paying homage to Johann Gutenberg who devoted the best years of his life and his entire personal fortune to perfecting the invention of printing with movable type. This invention has made possible the diffusion of popular education and a spectacular rise in the general level of intelligence. The power of the printed word to influence human thought and action, for good or ill, has seldom been more impressively demonstrated than at just the present time, when we see the governments of great nations enforcing rigorous control of the press in order to control the thinking and conduct of their peoples.

Gutenberg lived in Mainz, Germany, and completed his famed "Gutenberg Bible" about the year 1440. The text of this famous book was printed on 1,282 great folio pages, two columns to a page. As each column contained 42 lines of type, the book is called the 42-line Bible. It was printed, one page at a time, on six hand presses which were worked simultaneously. The tedious and laborious task of copying the sacred scriptures and the writings of church fathers could now cease after fifteen centuries. Again we are indebted to a country which we now seek to crush.

Continuous History.

Back of each issue of "The Christian Sun" lies almost a century of continuous publication, the 4,896 issues in unbroken succession. Back of each publication stands the faith of Daniel W. Kerr who first published the paper in 1844. Back of each printing remains the sustained efforts of all those who, by their writing and printing and subscribing, have made possible its survival and continued usefulness.

This historic venture has not been abandoned or superseded. This weekly rendezvous of news and views, personals and impersonals, editorials and censorials, continues with ever-renewing freshness.

How Does the Paper "Get Together"?

This paper patiently grew as wood for many years before it "went into the ministry." Perhaps some farmer found a market for his timber because "The Christian Sun" creates a market for wood, pulp and paper. This original timber had a most varied and interesting experience before it traveled "the inky way" of the printer.

All articles must somehow succeed in getting themselves written before they stand a chance of being published. These articles come from Carolina and California, from Virginia and Vermont; they come from Drs. Smith, Johnson and Hardcastle, Messrs. Madren, Granger and Johnson; from Harrell and House; yes, from Olejar and Oliver!

Modern Printing.

These and others must first write their articles or pages and then must send them promptly for publication. The editor and publisher must read the material and endeavor to secure the proper amount each week. It is necessary to re-write some of the articles. The material is then given to the linotype operator. He writes the articles out in print on a big machine that looks like an over-grown typewriter. After he finishes, the print is run through a proof press and the proof reader gets it. When all the type has been set and corrected it is then locked in a chase or form and taken to the great press for printing. When it has run through the press, the paper is then folded, stapled, cut into pages and addressed. A few people have been taking the paper for more than fifty years and have never changed their address. Other subscribers are "off and on" and frequently change their addresses so that constant revision of the mailing list is necessary.

Uncle Sam Steps In.

The printed papers are now turned over to "Uncle Sam" for delivery. He is always on the job, rain, snow or blow. He is credited with being more rich than religious, and yet he is far more dependable than many "fair weather Christians." He takes our paper promptly and regularly into every nook and cranny of the Convention and into many distant states.

Your Subscription.

All this and more is necessary every week in order to get your paper to you. Endless hardships and headaches of the editor and publisher are never entered on record. In return for this composite service you are asked to pay $2.00 a year (only $1.00 if every church family subscribes). Is this asking too much? Some think so. Others, realizing the great effort and sacrifice necessary on the part of those who bring it into publication and the service it renders to the entire church, feel that it is a very nominal sum.

The value of the paper is conditioned, not only by its quality of publication, but also by the number and quality of its subscribers. Those who help pursue the current campaign to a satisfactory conclusion will assure its continued publication and make it increasingly significant when "The Christian Sun" goes to press.

Keeping Faith in War Time

A Radio Address By DR. FREDERICK K. STAMM.

There is a little book nestling within the covers of the Old Testament, and written by a comparatively unknown prophet by the name of Habakkuk, which takes about five minutes to read, and which describes the situation of our world today better than the best newspaper columnist could do it.

About the year 600 B. C., an army under the command of Nebuchadnezzar had swept over Egypt and was on the point of overrunning Palestine. Describing this devastating army the author uses phrases which have a familiar sound. He says the army belongs to a "swift and fiery race," and "their horses also are swifter than leopards, and more swift than the evening wolves." When he talks of the manner in which this army kills and captures men, he says, that prisoners are swept up like sand and gathered into the net like fish. The army rejoices in cruelty, takes things into its own hands, and God seemingly stands by and does nothing about it.

In such a world we live today. At present the scene of this devastation is three thousand miles away. In news reels, in photogravure sections of newspapers, and in the writings of eye witness, we have descriptions of the awfulness of the scene. We shudder at its horror. But if we are foolish enough to allow ourselves to be dragged into the maelstrom, the horror of it all will be intensified.

A few years ago when it was my privilege to preach in Glasgow, Scotland, I picked up the newspaper and ran my eye down the column of church notices. Noting the many societies of Spiritualists, I asked someone the reason. He said, "Well, you see during the war most of our families lost one or more sons. Sometimes he was the only son. People are bewildered, they want to have some assurance that their sons are alive, and so they go seeking, seeking, some assurance of immortality." One can understand that bewilderment, especially when one climbs the hill to the old castle in Edinburgh and sees book upon book with the names of the casualties of the World War.

When calamity comes, when hopes are blotted out, when the peaceful pursuit of life is distributed, when wickedness runs rampant over the earth, doubt is very likely to settle over the spirit of the best of us. If a man is not sensitive, if his soul is never troubled, if he doesn't think, he never doubts. But if he has walked the way of honesty and faith, if he has given himself to the betterment of society, and then begins to realize that in spite of his efforts the world still goes on in its barbarous deeds, and seemingly grows more barbarous with the rising intelligence of the human race, he begins to doubt. When the Christian conception of the Fatherhood of God is challenged today by the injustice, dishonesty, and the oppression so rife in the world, he begins to wonder where God is, and whether there is a God at all.

The majority of people would like to retain their faith in God if only they knew how to do it. Habakkuk doubted at first, but in the end came to the place where he said, "I will rejoice in the Lord, I will rejoice in the God of my salvation."

I never grow disturbed when a troubled individual comes to me expressing his grave doubt about God's goodness. I would be more disturbed if he had no doubts. If you should read the history of the great saints you would discover that they were great doubters. Doubt is not a sin; it is the natural part of the progress to a real and lasting faith. Tennyson in In Memoriam says:

There lives more faith in honest doubt, believe me, than in half the creeds.

The Voice of a Printing Press

By WILLIAM M. LESSEL.

Have you ever listened to the roar and thunder of the mechanized organs and feeding arms of a printing press? Have you ever seen the rhythmic and dramatic production of reams and stacks of printed paper? If you have, you can almost "feel" the throbbing, pulsating heart of that press as the life-giving ink flows through its very veins. One such printing press talked to me the other day. Listen:

"You think I am a greasy, oily, ink-bespattered printing press. I am not supposed to see, hear, or know anything. My lot is simply to print and print and print. Yet, through my body pass reams and reams of stories, representing man's joy and sorrow, success and failure, virtue and sin, love and hate, news and history, life and death, friend and foe, ecstasy and despair, and through it all I am supposed to remain blind, deaf and immune.

"Instead, I have developed a keen sense of understanding; yes, I can see, hear, feel, and think.

I wouldn't give very much for the faith of any man who had never experienced seasons of great doubt. If you have never raised any questions about the goodness of God, if you have never been disturbed by the problem of evil in the world, if you have never tried to put God out of your life, either it is because you never have had any deep, harrowing experiences, or else you never think deeply about life. We don't usually look for any profound utterances to come from the prize fight ring, but the other day, Joe Louis said, "I sometimes get mad inside, but I don't show it." That expression tells more than appears on the surface. It simply means that oftentimes the person who faces the world calmly and unruffled and with confidence, has experienced within some mighty upheaval, some testing of the soul, some emotion that shook his faith. Doubt is not a sin.

I can think of three situations which are liable to produce doubt. First, is the mystery of the universe and life itself. If you live in a flat world, a simple world, you'll likely never raise the question, "Is there a God?" But if you believe in a world that took millenniums to fashion, and then think of the many other universes which must be far out and beyond the one you see, you will wonder how there could be any kind of "Sometime ago I was printing a few verses from the thirteenth chapter of Matthew where Jesus speaks of the sower 'who went forth to sow.' I remembered that some seed fell among thorns, which choked it. But others fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit.' Now, I don't know if man ever thought of the similarity between the sower and myself. I know I've never printed any such comparison. Yet, as I thought of it I could see the farmer sow his seeds just as I print my sheets. Some of his seeds fall on barren ground; some of my sheets fall in the wastebasket. Some of his seeds bear fruit, a hundredfold, sixtyfold and thirtyfold; some of my sheets are read by a hundred people, sixty, or thirty. Some of his seeds lie dormant; some of my sheets lie on somebody's desk, unread. Some of his seeds and some of my sheets accidentally fall among rocks and out-of-the-way places, both bearing fruit. For instance, here is an

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Two quotations in the Bible are unique and suggestive. One is in Paul's letter to the Colossians, Chapter 3; verse 15. "Salute the brethren which are in Laodicea, and Nymphas and the church which is in his house." The other is in Paul's letter to Philemon, in verse 2—"and to the church in thy house." Nymphas and Philemon each had a church in his house. And that suggests that a great institution in the long ago had found a place of habitation in a private house. One does not have to draw on the imagination to believe that this statement reveals something of the generosity and breadth of understanding of these two disciples of Jesus Christ.

"The church in thy house." "The church in his house." Hospitality, spirituality, fellowship, love, worship, teaching, missionary liberality—in a private home. Paul recognized the significance of this fact by writing it in a letter. Those letters became a part of the New Testament. Census enumerators ask many personal questions, but no one in these days has the courage to ask: "Is there a church in your house?" Churches usually have a building, or meeting house, of their own, soon after organization. In modern times churches have been organized in a private house. But such cases are exceptional.

But there is another suggestion worth consideration. This is a time to sit down quietly and thoughtfully ask some personal questions. Some people do not respond favorably to personal questions concerning their religious attitudes. To avoid any intrusion upon personal rights, we may put the question in this form: "Is there a church in my house?" Is there a time for worship, either personal or as a group? Does the church stand in any central place in conversation, in plans, in preparation and in service? Is there any place in the home hallowed by reading the Bible in private devotions?

People are not building so many large homes today. The tendency is towards a small bungalow type of home—just large enough for the modern small family. The time has come when the average city home has no guest room. This condition affects every phase of family life. It is not practical to plan for the old-time family visiting on a large scale. The house is too crowded for that kind of fellowship. People are limited in their hours of work per week. But they hurry home to get ready for rapid transit to some distant place—just to be away from home. Family life is crowded out of the home—except at meal times—and a few hours of sleep.

Have we lost any thing by this change in home life? The good old days among church people in Eastern Virginia had as many weaknesses as could be named in the present age. But one feature made a strong contribution to the spiritual life of those who entered into the spirit of it. We refer to the custom of singing religious songs in the home. Young people took great interest in the singing. A parlor organ, or piano, a few song books and someone to play the songs summoned the young people to select the time and place. The singing was not always of the highest standard—but was a medium of expression and fellowship. What happy hours they were, and how precious the memory of them! Listening to the radio can not be a competitor from the standpoint of developing personal talents for service.

The home must have a time and a place for some phase of the church. It may be that the modern home needs to restore the guest room. There should be a Bible on a table—a used Bible—free from dust. A musical instrument and some religious song books should be provided. Have a church in the home. Some things will be changed when the church takes its place.

THE HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE.

Commencement occasions are not many weeks away. There will be thousands and thousands of the youth of America who will be awarded high school diplomas on or before June 15 this year. A large number of these high school graduates will want to continue their educational training. They are aware that the world is in an unusual condition, that when political, military, social, and religious conditions adjust themselves, trained minds and honest hearts will be in popular demand. This is the time when it will pay a young person to prepare himself, to get ready for high things. For those who are prepared, their time will come, and those who are not prepared will have remorseful moments as they remember the opportunities that they failed to take advantage of. However badly a person may want to fill a position, however much his native abilities may commend him for that position, unless his abilities have been trained and developed through a system of instruction, the doors will be closed to him, and the others who have taken the time to prepare will go in ahead of him.

We do not have thousands of our own young people, that is, members of our own church within the Convention, among these high school graduates, but we do have a goodly number. Elon College, our own church institution, is anxious to have our own young people as students. All through the years the church has been supporting and improving Elon College that our own college might be thoroughly capable of meeting the educational requirements of our own young people. We are prepared today to give first class instruction in the classics, in the sciences, in religion, in music, in commercial subjects, and in other practical fields. The college is sure that if it could sit down and talk over with the young people of our own church the necessity of a college education and the advisability of attending our own college, at the same time presenting its merits and considering carefully its shortcomings, that we could induce a large number of our own young people to come to Elon for their college training. This, however, is impossible.

The ministers of our church are our friends. A large number of them received a part or all of their undergraduate training here. They are a part of our college and a part of our church. Their young people are a part of their local churches. I am sure that we may depend on them to do what they can to influence their young people to come to Elon. Recently I drafted a letter to every pastor in the Southern Convention begging cooperation to the extent that they forward to the college immediately the names and addresses of those young people who belong to their churches and who are members of either the junior or senior class in high school, enclosing blanks for their use, urging them that if they would give us this bit of cooperation, we would immediately contact these, our own young people, giving them detailed information concerning the college and offering to them the facilities and opportunities of the institution. The pastors were asked simply to give us the names and addresses. This would seem a small effort, but to our disappointment only a very few have responded. This cooperation, if

Dear Friends:

If a certain little girl were old enough to write me about what she did last week should would have said something like this:

Dear Mrs. Todd:

Sometimes I am glad that I am the only girl in the family. Because, when mother goes away from home, daddy wants me to go with her. He says he can take care of the boys, who are older than I, but that he can't take care of a little girl and see that the boys don't tease her. So, I almost always go when mother goes, but there are times when I'd like to stay at home.

This week, it was fun to go with mother! On Thursday, she went to Mrs. George Watson's "quilting bee." I went along and it was just loads of fun. They let me sew some on the quilts. There were lots of lovely flowers beginning to bloom out on the lawn. Every one was so nice to me and the quilts were so pretty, too. I had fun trying to decide which one of the squares would make the prettiest dress for me. Then I spent a lot of time choosing one of them for each of my family of dolls.

Thursday night, I went to the missionary meeting. You know, for you saw me there. Mother says that I am the smallest missionary in our group. I think it is fun to put my nickel in for dues each time. I'm sorry that I was too sleepy and tired to take up the offering Thursday; but I had never been to a "quilting bee" before and it was tiresome for a little four-year-old girl like me.

Sincerely,

CHARLOTTE THOMAS.

Yesterday, I met three new little friends. Sarah was very interesting. I wish that you could meet her. Her father is pastor of our United Church in Raleigh. Her mother is a charming lady with red hair. I have always loved red hair. Sarah is going to have hair just like her mother's some day, I believe. Sarah is three years old and has a dear playmate, Frances Perry, who lives just next door. Frances is just a month younger than Sarah. Sarah had been exposed to the measles and so wasn't supposed to play with Frances. It made both of them very unhappy to have to be separated.

Sammy and Ruth live near the city of Raleigh on a farm. Ruth had just recovered from an attack of pneumonia. She was very glad to be going to school again. She told me that folks were very good to her while she was ill. Sammy took Mr. Todd to see the little three-day-old kitties. They did not yet have their eyes opened. I saw a little white one and a little gray one. They were so cunning and helpless looking. You wanted to help them to find their supper. They could not see but they soon felt around with their little noses, then they began to run a race to see which would get the most milk!

Do you have any pets at your home? Write and tell us about them. Have you made any new friends lately? Write and tell us about them, too.

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

MOTHERS' DAY AND CHILDREN'S DAY.

It will not be long now until Mothers' Day. Please do not forget to be specially good to her on that day. Those of you who are away from your mothers, as I am, should at least write a letter home.

This week your pastor probably received a package of Children's Day Materials. Do not let him put it in the waste basket. If he says that he did not get any tell him to write to Mr. Lester for suggestions and materials. That is, if he does not have any himself. Let us celebrate Children's Day by making our church people happy with a beautiful service. If you will start in time you will find that it is lots more fun and you can do your part much better if you are not worried over it.

OFFERINGS FOR THE COLLEGE.

There are in our Southern Convention more than two hundred Sunday schools. Each of these Sunday schools is asked by the Convention to make a contribution to the college every fifth Sunday. If the pastors and superintendents would take the time to explain and give the schools an opportunity, there are but few of our Sunday schools that could not and would not raise as much as $1.00. The majority of them by far would raise much more. The Sunday schools would not be impoverished, would actually be helped, and the college would be greatly benefited.

We have heard from a goodly number of our Sunday schools but by far the greater number has not responded. If your school has not sent in its offering, won't you please see that it is done at an early date? The college agrees that all offerings shall be counted on conference apportionments. It is not necessary for me to say to you that the college needs this support. This is perfectly obvious to every reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We are grateful for those who have cooperated.

BOARD OF SUPERANNUATION,
By Mattie Cox Parker,

THE DEVOTIONAL PERIOD.

Mrs. RUSSELL T. BRADFORD.

“Worship is the most important function of a man’s soul” and if our missionary societies are to be the vital, wide awake organizations that we would have them we must give much time, thought and effort to our Devotional Periods. It is most important that we study our mission study books for it is impossible to be enthusiastic over any subject concerning which we are not well informed. But when we meet in our monthly missionary meetings let us not forget the fundamental need of our missionary program. May our Devotional Period be filled with worship and consecration for this should be a time set apart for the study of the Bible, the praising of God through our beautiful hymns and learning the joy of experiencing the power of prayer.

In no way can we ever become rich-hearted Christians, with abundant life, much fruit and lovely character, but by reading and studying God’s word. The Bible is the Christian’s daily bread. There is no other book whose great thoughts so strengthen one against temptation, so renew one’s youth and so enrich one’s nature as the Bible.

Then the singing of our grand hymns just seem to lift one up on a higher level. Haven’t you often experienced the thrill that comes when you let your song of praise to Christ ring out in the wonderful hymn, “All Hail the Power of Jesus’ Name, Crown Him Lord of All.” The singing of this wonderful old hymn and others equally as great will fill your heart with gratitude and joy that we have the power and love of Christ and the opportunity to praise His name.

In a recent well known monthly magazine there appeared a most interesting article on “Prayer Is Power,” which no doubt many of you read. In part the author said, “Prayer is not only worship, it is the most powerful form of energy that one can generate. If you make a habit of sincere prayer, your life will be very noticeably and profoundly altered. Today, as never before, prayer is a bounding necessity in the lives of men and nations. The lack of emphasis on the religious sense has brought the world to the edge of destruction. If the power of prayer is again released and used in the lives of men and women there is yet hope that our prayers for a better world will be answered.”

Prayer is the most important generator in church work. Every great leader of the church and every missionary on the field is begging for more prayer. John R. Mott said, “Every other consideration and plan and emphasis is secondary to that of wielding the power of prayer.”

Thus, may we build our missionary programs around our Devotional Periods, may we plan at each monthly meeting to study the Bible, sing and pray together, for it is only through earnest and faithful study of the Bible will we ever realize that the real missionary motive is Jesus the Christ. We give to missions, we pray for missions, we send out missionaries, or go as missionaries just for Jesus’ sake.

ON THE WAY.

I was amazed to hear a leader of another denomination with 8,000 members in a certain area in Eastern Virginia say that this body of 8,000 members averaged $3.00 per member for all benevolences and missions.

Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Secretary of the Southern Convention, has performed high service in making statistical tables reveal to a great extent what our church is doing financially. Assuming that figures from church letters are correct in The Annual, Eastern Virginia Conference gave last year for benevolences and missions $23,786.00. Our membership being 10,223, the average was $2.32 per member, 22 churches out of 44 paid conference apportionments in full.

The Southern Convention averages about 66 cents per member for home and foreign missions. It can raise $1.00 per member if we will treat missions seriously.

I regret that not all the pastors have appointed a layman as missionary leader in each church. I am satisfied beyond a shadow of a doubt that we must have a more intense development of the local church. We must train our laymen, and especially as to missions. This is largely the program of the pastor. It is not true that our laymen do not have time for this. It is a lack of interest. I am annoyed as to how little many members know about the program of the church, conference and Convention. It is the duty of the pastor to teach them. The majority of the members never attend a conference or convention in any denomination and they must be taught locally, if at all.

Many of our churches have enough talent to govern any country or city and this talent must be enlisted in behalf of the whole program of the church. Also, we need to teach a little more denominational loyalty, as long as we are a denomination.

NEEDED IN 1941.

The American Board is seeking recruits for a number of important posts in various countries.

The Christian character of each applicant must be satisfactorily attested. Questions concerning background, motive and habits will be asked. The touchstone of personal fitness in this service lies in the realm of attitude toward the Kingdom of God as described by Jesus, and commitment to his way of life.

The standard of qualifications for all these openings is high. The Board requires college or university graduation or its equivalent, plus professional courses with appropriate degrees. In addition to good health, a certain amount of practical experience is highly desirable, but only rarely is any candidate over thirty years of age accepted.

All recruits except those who go for "short term service" are expected to learn a vernacular language. In some cases, two languages are required. Arrangements are made to allow time for language study at the outset on the field.

After five years on the field a furlough of one year to be spent in America is authorized. The second and later terms of service abroad are seven years, except in tropical countries. Normally, retirement with pension comes at 65 to 70 years of age.

Traveling expenses, salaries and allowances vary widely according to country and local conditions. The Board provides travel to and from the field and a salary sufficient to provide "comfortable and economical support." Rental, health, language study and children's allowances are added as needed. In general it is assumed that one does not enter this service with a view to financial gain.

POSITIONS TO BE FILLED IMMEDIATELY.

HUNGRY LITTLE STOMACHS.

A Chinese pastor once said of the children under his care: "Sometimes they are a comfort and sometimes a headache!" At 6:30 in the morning children flock from the far and wide over Foochow city to the Fairy Bridge compound, once the home of the Women's Bible School, but now used as a relief station. These youngsters sweep, dust, pull weeds, rake, water flowers and try to keep things looking neat. Roll call is at seven—and then they go forward by leaps and bounds to the dining room! The bowls are filled, the blessing said, and pangs of hunger appeased in little stomachs. Next, they sing and study until at 11 o'clock the "birds" roar overhead. The dugout isn't big enough for all. Soon skinny bodies fill out and improved health is manifested in mischievousness. Practically none of the children have both parents, and many of them are orphans. The Women's Bible School is carrying on this life saving work.—Missionary Herald.

VOICE OF A PRINTING PRESS.

article I just finished printing which illustrates my point very well. Read it for yourself.

"Soved at the Bottom of the Sea.—Mike was not a bad man, but he found little time for churches and their teaching. He was a diver by trade, and one day as he set about a particularly difficult job he found a religious tract lodged between two oyster shells at the bottom of the ocean. For some reason the words were clearer there than when read in the bright sunlight, and the message reached Mike."

"Then there is the interesting case of Richard Gibbs, who wrote a leaflet entitled The Bruised Reed, which was printed by one of my ancestors. A tin peddler gave a copy of it to Richard Baxter. After reading it Richard Baxter felt led to write a leaflet entitled A Call to the Unconverted. Thousands of copies traveled all over the world. One reached the hands of Philip Doddridge, influencing him to write the book, The Rise and Progress of Christianity. William Wilberforce read a copy, became converted as a result, and freed all the slaves of the British colonies. But the far-reaching influence of the original leaflet did not stop there. It continued, until today millions of copies are still circulating throughout fifty different countries and bearing fruit, the seed of which was sown by Richard Gibbs.

"Now, I know to sow and sow, year after year, is the farmer's contented and happy lot, who believes that the harvest will be sufficient and plentiful. For as long as he sows in 'faith believing' his seeds will bear fruit. So why should I despair? My sheets, too, will bear fruit if I work and trust like the sower.

"Not long ago I printed this verse: 'For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.'

"Thus I believe that sowing and printing are both essential to man's existence—one to feed his body, the other to feed his soul. "What greater encouragement could I want."—N. C. Christian Advocate.

Pilgrim Fellowship

"Youth at Work in the Church"

A. LANSON GRANGER, JR., Editor

THE TEMPLE FELLOWSHIP AT WORK.

One of the most active groups in our Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship is the Temple Fellowship at the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va. Following their activities of Youth Week, they planned and carried through a helpful observance of Lent. "Lenten Devotions for Young People" were used by the young people, and special inexpensive banks were purchased for use in making a self-denial offering for missions. Each Sunday evening during Lent the pastor led a series of discussions on the theme, "The Christian Way," using the topics, Jesus, God, The Holy Spirit, The Bible, and Duties and Rights of Church Members.

On Palm Sunday three members of the Fellowship who were not members of the church united with the church and were baptized. Some of the group attended the candlelight communion service conducted at the church on Thursday of Holy Week. At the Easter sunrise service, conducted by the young people, provision was made for presenting the self-denial offering at the foot of the cross. This offering amounted to $16.00.

At the service of worship on Easter Sunday morning the young people's choir joined with the senior choir in presenting a program of music. Some of the group went to the home of the counselor in the afternoon where they were guests at supper, and then shared with another group in the evening in an Easter consecration service.

Plans are now in the making for the study of the migrant workers and China during the month of May.

On the last Sunday in each month, the young people enjoy a buffet supper at the church, to which each person brings food. Following this period of fellowship the monthly business meeting is held. The day's activities are then brought to a close with a worship program.

Leaders of the Temple Fellowship have been meeting with officers of young people's organizations in our Congregational Christian Churches in the Norfolk-Portsmouth area during the winter and spring, studying the possibility of organizing this district for a stronger unified program. One mass rally has been held, and another is scheduled for April 21st.

The young people of the Temple who went to the Elon Training School last summer have been giving good publicity to the school, in the hopes that the attendance from the Temple will be doubled this year.

FIRST ISSUE OF U. C. Y. M. NEWS APPEARS.

The first issue of the "U. C. Y. M. News," which is the official newsletter of the United Christian Youth Movement, has just come out. Since its inception, many have felt that the movement needed some publication which would voice the convictions of young people throughout the country, present the plans and projects of the movement, and be a source of information of what was happening in various groups throughout the country. The presidents of our conference Pilgrim Fellowships especially should be on the mailing list to receive the newsletter. It may be secured by writing to Rev. Ivan Gould, 203 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The "U. C. Y. M. News" is another of the steps taken in the effort to reach into local communities, furnishing ideas and reporting activities. News of interdenominational character in your community is desired for publication.

This summer the United Christian Youth Movement is conducting another series of Regional Conferences such as were held last year. These conferences are held for Christian youth leaders throughout the country to develop and encourage local action in the areas of the movement. Last year, at the six conferences, a total of 811 persons were present.

This summer the theme of all the Regional Conferences will be: "That They All May Be One," in line with that for the Christian Youth Council meeting.

Of interest to young people in our Southern Convention should be the Southern Regional Conference which will be held in June at Blue Ridge, N. C. Information concerning the conference may be secured from Rev. Ivan Gould, Chicago, Ill.

VERMONT VISITORS.

Richmond was taken by the Yankees again last week, but in a friendly and good neighborly way. A good representation of the Christian Endeavor group, affiliates of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the United Church, Johnson, Vermont, made a visit to the Virginia Capitol to see the sights and to present Governor James H. Price with three gallons of Vermont's delightful maple syrup.

Under the leadership of the Rev. Ritchie Low, their minister, and Dean Rowe, their school superintendent, the young people combined study with their sight-seeing and pleasure.

The group, ten in number, arrived in Richmond, Wednesday morning and were the luncheon guests of Virginia Union University. This is a Negro institution and afforded opportunity for study as most Vermonters do not see as many as fifty Negroes in a year. The rest of the day was spent in visiting historical spots and seeing cross sections of Southern life. The climax of all this was the partaking of Southern fried chicken a la fingers.

On Wednesday evening the young people were informally entertained by the Pilgrim Fellowship members of the Richmond Church. Many comparisons of accents and political beliefs and customs evolved.

Thursday morning, after a visit to the Capitol and its grounds, the group was received in the study of the Governor where the maple syrup was presented. Shortly after, the Johnson Vermont Tour left for Washington where they planned to meet and present Vice-President Henry A. Wallace with some of the same famed syrup.

Each year a similar trip is taken. Each year a different group makes the trip. Two years ago they were the guests of Albert Einstein. Such experiences are splendid for young people. Are there not some of us who would like to go into the far places bearing gifts?

JUNE JOY HOUSE.

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better or worse as his portion; that though the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground which is given to him to till. The power which resides in him is new in nature and none but he knows what that is which he can do—nor does he ever know until he has tried.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

THE EARLY CHURCH MEETING HUMAN NEEDS.

LESSON IV—APRIL 27, 1941.

LESSON: Acts 4: 32-7: 60.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I John 3: 13-18.

GOLDEN TEXT: And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and soul.—Acts 4: 32.

Attention was called in the notes last week to the fact that one of the first fruits of the Holy Spirit was the effort on the part of the early church to meet human needs. Today's lesson develops that idea more in detail. The lesson in its entirety is too long to be covered in the brief compass of these notes, so an interpretation will be given only of the printed text.

Of One Heart and One Soul.

"And the multitudes of them that believed were of one heart and soul." This does not mean that they all thought alike. Christianity puts no premium upon regimented thinking. Indeed, Christianity treats every man as an individual. It does not require uniformity of thought. It would not be well for Christianity if we all did think alike. But these early disciples did set an example in being of one heart and one soul. Above, beneath, and beyond their differences of temperament and thinking, they were united in a common bond of loyalty to Jesus Christ. They were one in their desire to love Him and to serve Him. That unity of heart and soul was one of the secrets of their power.

A Sense of Stewardship.

"And not one of them said that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common." Here was a sense of stewardship indeed. They did not look upon the things which they had as their own. They felt that they were stewards of all that they had and such as they possessed was to be used for the common good. It was, to be sure, an unusual form of Christian service. It was not of necessity the ideal. As a matter of fact, there were several elements in it which need to be taken into consideration: (a) It was voluntary; (b) it was sponsored by a select group; (c) it was done in the thought that the return of Christ was quite imminent; (d) it was done in a special environment. Even under these circumstances it did not prove successful and it was soon abandoned. There is a sense in which these people had laid hold of something vital. A man has not learned one of the basic principles of the Christian life, and certainly not of Christian stewardship, until he realizes that what he possesses he does not necessarily own. Man is a steward. What he has he should hold in trust.

The Witnesses of the Resurrection.

"And with great power gave the apostles their witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus." That was the central theme of the witness which they bore that Jesus Christ had risen from the dead, that he was alive forever more. They bore this witness with power because it was personal experience with them, and because they had yielded themselves in obedience to the Holy Spirit. Man can always speak with power when he speaks out of experience based on obedience.

Grace.

"And great grace was upon them all." It was an ideal situation as long as it lasted. Men and women living together in Christian fellowship, sharing with each one another's needs, witnessing to a common faith, bound together by common love and faith, with the spirit of God. It was a bit of heaven on earth. It was symbolic of the ideal situation in which the will of God is done on earth even as it is done in heaven. How poor is the life which has only the material things in comparison with the life which has at the heart of it the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ!

Sharing Possessions.

"For neither was there among them any that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto each, according as any one had need." Reference has been made to this in a paragraph above. Suffice it to say that in bearing one another's burdens they were all fulfilling Christ's law of love. They were expressing religion in practical ways. They were expressing their love for God whom they had not seen by ministering to the needs of God's children whom they had seen. Small wonder that members of the pagan world said, "Behold how these Christians love one another."

Sharing Responsibilities.

The work of distributing to the needs of the people grew to such proportion that it was impossible for the apostles to look after it personally. As a result some of the people were overlooked, especially the widows of some Grecian Jews who were neglected in the daily ministrations. With practical judgment and common sense the disciples faced the situation and made a very common sense decision. They realized that it was necessary that this work be done; they realized also that the supreme thing was that the word of God should be preached. Accordingly, in democratic ways, seven men were selected, men of good report, full of the Holy Spirit, and of wisdom, who were appointed over the business of distributing to those who were in need. The men for these practical duties were made to realize that it had spiritual implications and they were set aside with special services, with prayer, and the laying on of hands. Men need to realize that there is little distinction between the so-called secular and the so-called sacred. To be sure there is a sense in which the preaching of the word of God is a spiritual function. The Christian also ought to realize that selling goods over a counter, or working in an office, or shop, or attending to household duties, or performing routine and commonplace activities is also sacred if done unto God. He is no respecter of persons, he regards those who faithfully, diligently serve him as doing all things unto him.

A Growing Church.

"And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem exceedingly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." The church was much in prayer, the word was preached with effectiveness, the church had a heart and a helping hand for those who were in need, everyone did his proportionate share. No wonder the church grew! Any church which embodies those factors in its life and program will grow.

MONDAY.

AN OLD PRAYER STILL GOOD.

Here is an interesting old prayer in verse, which dates from the eighteenth century at least. It is of English origin, but its author is unknown. It is as appropriate today as when written as a petition for divine help in a happy, healthy and useful life:

Give me a good digestion, Lord
And also something to digest.
Give me a healthy body, Lord,
With sense enough to keep it at its best.

Give me a healthy mind, good Lord,
To keep the good and pure in sight,
Which, seeing sin, is not appaled
But finds a way to set it right.

Give me a mind that is not bound,
That does not whimper, whine or sigh.

Don't let me worry over much
About the fussy thing called I.

Give me a sense of humor, Lord;
Give me the grace to see a joke,
To get some happiness out of life
And pass it on to other folk.

—The Churchman, N. Y.

TUESDAY.

MEDITATION: "Be careful about the life you lead: act like sensible men, not like thoughtless; make the most of your time—so do not be senseless, but understand what is the Lord's will; and do not get drunk—that means profligacy—but be filled with the Spirit."—Eph. 5: 15-20. (Revised version.)

WEDNESDAY.

NECESSITY FOR INCREASED FAITH.

"Increase our faith."—Luke 17: 5.

This is the prayer of Peter to the Lord Jesus. Jesus had been teaching them to forgive any wrong done against them and to forgive seventy times seven. This seemed impossible to the apostles. They might forgive a few times, but Peter felt that to do as the Lord had instructed would take much more faith than he was capable of. How could he keep on believing in the sincerity of repentance that could relapse four hundred and ninety times? And yet this is the quality of forgiveness to be shown in the fullness of the Christian spirit. He needed a great deal more faith than he possessed: therefore he prayed for this faith, and all the apostles prayed with him. We are afraid that we need this faith a great deal more than Peter did. How would it be to make this text—prayer of Peter's—a sentence included in our prayers every day? Lord, increase our faith. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOD OF THE OPEN SPACES.

"He brought me and set me on a very high mountain."—Ezk. 40: 2.

We were up in the Sequoias, the high mountains of the Sierras. We feasted upon the bigness, the infinity, the grandeur and glory of the interminable spaces of God's earth. We thought of Jesus who was taken to a high mountain where he was tempted of the devil to sin and renounce his mission in the world but who turned the occasion of his mountain vision into larger vision of His Father and into strength for his mission. Here, too, we would try to do the same.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou has brought us into a very high mountain. Here, we are not free from temptation, but here, we are in the presence of our Almighty God. Thou has brought us here to feast on the reality of Thyself, to be drawn to Thee forever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

We continue to pray in the words of Mae Cole Kuhn:

God of the open spaces,
Hilltop and plain and sea,
Build Thou my life with largeness,
By Thine infinity;

Give me to grow in spirit
Till dearth and meagerness
Resign to high endeavor,
Power and gentleness.

God of the high and holy
Who dwelleth with life and light,
Break Thou each inhibition
That clouds my groping sight;
Vision and hope and hearing—
These wilt Thou send to me?
Shape Thou my life with largeness,
In Thine infinity.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

DISCOURAGED.

"Thou wilt keep in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee."—Isa. 26: 3.

"Let this mind be in you which was also in Jesus Christ."—Phil. 2: 5.

It is hard, in our human frailty to keep from becoming discouraged, for "trouble is no lie; it is real." But Satan takes our trials and distorts them, for he will not abide in truth. He would cause them to fill our whole vision and consume our entire thought till the sun ceases to shine, the flowers cease to bloom, and the birds cease to sing. Oh, the needless anguish! "I am the way, the truth and the life," said Jesus. If we can let Jesus fill our gaze, we will have peace like a river. No man looking unto Jesus enough, and listening unto Him enough, ever became discouraged. Let us pray for the increased faith and the long vision of our Lord and His blessings. Amen.

SUNDAY.

This is the day of light; let there be light today;
O Dayspring, rise upon our night, and chase its gloom away!
This is the day of rest: our failing strength renew,
On weary brain and troubled breast shed Thou Thy freshening dew.
Amen.—John Ellenton.

KEEPING FAITH IN WAR TIME.

Being who could keep his hand on the millions of balls of fire that move through space. If you could see God with your eyes, and hear him speak as you hear your friend speak, you would have little difficulty believing that he is. If some infallible proof of his existence could be given you such as you get in a court of law or in a laboratory, you could easily believe in his existence. But God doesn't speak in that fashion, and he doesn't give infallible proof of his existence to your intellect. You don't find God in a test tube. You can't take him apart and examine him as you tear the petals from a flower. We all go seeking God as did Job with the words on our lips, "O, that I knew where I might find him."

Questions about God arise, too, when some great calamity or trouble visits us. W. E. Sangster tells of a beautiful singer in his church in England. She sang beautifully of the love of God. She sang of the love of God when calamity came to the church, and when sorrow was all around her. But one day her own mother died. Then something happened to her voice. She grew sour and bitter; she accused heaven; she said God was cruel and unkind. Yes, we can lose faith when calamity touches us. It is not hard to sing of God's love when the bombs are dropping on other people's heads, but when the sirens shriek in your own backyard and your own dear ones are killed, you must have something more than opinions about God, you must have convictions.

Then, too, we question God when evil comes down on the whole world on a large scale. Habakkuk looked around and saw evil sitting where good ought to have been. He saw people fleeing from the wrath of the conqueror. We see the same things today. Our land is filled with refugees, thousands of people are slaughtered in China and Europe. Nations have crumbled beneath the feet of armies. Innocent children lie dead. Libraries and churches and school buildings are in ruins. Drummond said that love is the greatest thing in the world, but hate looms and seems triumphant.

We sometimes think that these men whose names are found in the pages of the Bible were a peculiar kind of men, different from us. But they were not different. They just lived in a far off age. They faced life as we face it. They were just as weak and as strong as we, just as human and just as divine as we. And here in this little book is the record of a man who kept his faith in war time, and who believed in the good purposes of God. He won out over the doubts that disturbed his mind. Can we? And how?

It is quite evident, in the first instance, that it is just as difficult to disbelieve God as it is to believe God. Sit down some day and try to prove to yourself that there is no God, and see the impasse at which you arrive. You'll have to say to yourself that the world was created by accident; you'll have to say that this marvelous mind of man which can create wonders, which has projected great and good causes, which has made history, just came by accident. You'll have to say that the soul which loves, is heroic under difficult circumstances, has shown unselfishness, has forgotten itself while thinking of others, is in no wise connected with a power that makes for righteousness in the world.

Again, you can keep your faith when you begin to ask yourself under what other circumstances, and by what other power than God, can you gather up a shattered world and put it together again. Suppose your best friend meets with a catastrophe; suppose you see him slipping and reeling like a drunken man under the blow, suppose you see his mind reeling and he goes groping in the dark. What do you say to him? Do you tell him to pull himself up by his own bootstraps? Do you tell him to go out in the country and forget it all? Yes, that's what you might tell him, but down deep you know that isn't the final remedy. There is a gospel for folk of that sort, and the gospel that we have to give is one which does not promise that there will be no trouble, but one which says, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but I have overcome the world." You can never make a mere success story out of the life of Jesus. At the centre of the life of Jesus is a cross. It is the story of a man who met pain and suffering and rose above it by the power of God. That's what makes it a message of salvation for people who face evil as Jesus faced it. There are ten thousand circumstances in life which we can't understand. But it is the testimony of countless numbers throughout the history of the world that there are no circumstances which can defeat the spirit of man when backed by God.

This is a trite platitude, you say. Perhaps, yet nonetheless is it far and away the boldest and most remarkable discovery of human genius, and the part of knowledge which means infinitely more to us than all the rest of life thrown into one colossal heap.

We can keep our faith when we believe that good will be triumphant. Right now it looks like defeat for the good purposes of God. I have always heard people say that the world is going to the dogs. There is an old fable which says that on one occasion the devil thought of going out of business and he offered his tools for sale. His tools were malice, hatred, jealousy, deceit, depression, and so on. And it is said that the tool with the highest price-mark was "depression." When asked why he valued that one so highly, he said that it was the most useful one he had, for if he could get people in a defeatist mood, he could do anything with them.

How we have seen this tool do its work!

People have imagined that this is the worst time ever. They give up in despair. Environment defeats them, circumstances kill their spirit. But God is the same, faith is the same, and all the other inner compulsions are found in man now as ever. All one has to do is to exercise and put to use God's divine endowments.

Be still, my soul: thy God doth undertake
To guide the future, as he has the past.
Thy hope, thy confidence let nothing shake;
All now mysterious shall be bright at last.
Be still, my soul: the waves and winds still know
His voice who ruled them while he dwelt below.

Prayer—O Lord, thou art very great and we are very small; thou art all that is good, and we are so frequently all that is evil. And yet, to live apart from thee is spiritual death. We keep returning to thee because we cannot go on breaking ourselves upon thy universal laws. Thy law is inevitable and thy love is inescapable. Whither shall we go from thy presence? If we ascend to the heavens thou art there; if we make our bed in hell behold, thou art there. We come to thee because we know no other abiding place. We yield ourselves to thee because yielding to any other means bondage and fear. Thou alone dost mean liberty and freedom. Lift the light of thy truth upon our darkened minds, and lead us past all shame and shadows to thyself. Even though at best we can be but broken lights of thee, give us a divine discontent with anything less than thine infinite love. Number us, we pray, among thine obedient children, and shelter us in thy home. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

"Mr. Johnston, let me go barefooted," is the great cry at the orphanage just now. You would hardly believe the number of times this request is made daily. It has been our rule for a number of years to let the little folks go barefooted when the dogwood gets in full bloom. It has been cold so late this season that they have been late in getting in full bloom. But we have had nearly a week of clear, warm weather, and the dogwood blossoms are opening very rapidly. Friday, the 18th, was so pretty and warm and the little fellows were so persistent that we had to yield to their pleas and let them take off their shoes. They were just as happy as they wanted to be.

We are happy, too, because we have reached and passed the sixth rung in our financial ladder since January 1, and have only sixteen more to go to reach our gold for the year.

In looking over our income record book at the end of the first quarter, we find that twenty churches in the Eastern North Carolina Conference are not giving, twenty in the North Carolina and Virginia, eighteen in the Eastern Virginia, thirteen in the Western North Carolina, three in the Virginia Valley, eighteen in the Alabama and ten in the Georgia Conference, making a total of 102 that have not sent us a single offering this year. Had all of these Sunday schools been giving, we would have been nearly half-way to our goal. The Sunday schools that give make up a happy family. To those that are not giving we want to extend a cordial invitation to join with those that are and get some of the joy of belonging to that large, happy family.

discuss ways of uniting our efforts in building a total Christian community.

At the twilight hour, Dr. Wm. J. Hutchins, for many years a great Congregational minister and later sixteen years president of Berea College, will lead the group in the deeper meaning of worship.

Many representatives of various denominations will take part in forums, panel discussions and individual addresses.

Altogether the program is significant and inspiring. Dr. W. D. Weatherford at Blue Ridge, N. C., is acting as secretary of the Sponsoring Committee and all communications should be addressed to him.

In Memoriam

BYRD.

On February 26, 1941, God, in His divine love, saw fit to take from our church and community, Mr. David Byrd, who had been in failing health for about a year. Mr. Byrd passed quietly in his sleep. In his going our church sustains a great loss. Truly a Christian man has gone, and will be missed by all who knew him.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to our heavenly Father's will.
2. That we pray to God in His great love to comfort his devoted wife.
3. That a copy be sent to the family, one recorded on the records of Liberty Spring Christian Church and one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

EVANGELISM.

cessful soul-winner. You can no more lead lost souls to Christ without the Bible or some knowledge thereof, than you can fly to New York without a plane. When Philip found the Ethiopian eunuch, he was studying the sacred Scriptures; so was he won to the faith and obedience of Christ. God's word giveth wisdom. "He that winneth souls is wise." The diligent search of the pages of God's word enlighteneth the soul, its authority inspires the human heart, and the use of its teachings in practical personal effort, achieves the spiritual victories that the sincere Christian is ever seeking to win. "The word of God is quick and powerful." "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to Thy word." "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted Word, which is able to save your souls." (James 1:27.)

2. Prayer.—Prayer is also essential, both for the sinner and the evangelist or personal worker. Conversion means that we have found God, sins are surrendered, the soul is happy, the Spirit beareth witness. Evangelism then is the interpretation of God to others. We cannot introduce God, unless we know Him. We cannot reveal Him unless we are in close touch with Him. Through prayer—which is communion with God—we are able to bring his message of love, into fellowship with man's sin and poverty of soul. A praying Christian is a friend of God and so becomes a friend to all men who need God—and all men need Him—for all have sinned.

3. Faith.—We may have a knowledge of God's word, and be able to pray a long prayer after the manner of men, but unless there is faith in the promises of God, and in the power of God to lift men from the ways of sin, our lives may be as fruitless as the hot sands of the desert. No genuine evangelism is lacking in faith. Faith lays hold on the promises of God. Faith takes God at His word and praises Him for victory. It engenders a compelling passion for souls. Faith made John Knox cry: "Give me Scotland or I die." It is said of John Bunyan that he never preached a sermon that he did not entreat the sinner to cast in his lot with Jesus Christ. Faith lay at the root of the Reformation movement. It is the background of all revivals, that have really revived; and without which no soul can wing its way into harmony with God's will. "By grace are we saved through faith." "Faith is the victory that overcomes the world." "By faith we understand."

4. Soul-Value.—In every sincerely evangelistic effort, great or small, the Bible, prayer and faith have been allied with a high estimate of the value of the human soul. Jesus said: "How much better is a man than a sheep?" "What will it profit a man if he shall gain a whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" According to the Master: "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." When one really understands the true value of a soul, and finds his own spirit in communion with the Master Spirit, his supreme passion is for other souls that they, too, may be brought into subjection to the divine will of God.

5. Spirit-Filled.—Before telling his disciples good-bye Jesus said: "But the Comforter which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." God is not only willing and anxious to send the Comforter, but it is His desire that he may dwell in the midst of His saints: "Even the spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you and shall be in you." It is not difficult to discern those who are Spirit-filled by their fruits. "But the fruit of the Spirit is life, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith." Usually when God's Spirit is within a man he is not afraid or ashamed to speak a personal word, offer a prayer, public or mental, do a deed, or lend a helping hand to lift men by faith into the presence of God.

Just Where I Am.

Just where I am, oh let me be
A faithful witness, Lord, for Thee.
While others seek a wider sphere,
O keep me faithful, Lord, just here.

Just where I am, the way is rough,
But Thou art near; it is enough;
They rest who lean upon Thine arm.
O make me strong and keep me calm.

And if Thou, Lord, should'st point the way
To lands afar, where shines no ray
Of light Divine, then let me go
To speak of Christ and heal their woe.

Or if at home Thou bid'st me stay,
Let me be used to smoothe the way
Of those who go at duty's call,
Leaving their homes, their friends, their all.

Just where I am, oh let me win
Some sad, despairing soul from sin.
With heart aflame and face aglow,
Strong in Thy strength, Lord, let me go.

American Board Missionary Visits Southern Convention

(See Schedule on page 8.)

An eye witness to stirring events in North China during and after the Japanese invasion, Rev. Rowland M. Cross of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in Peking, brings a story of the courage and utter lack of a spirit of "defeatism" in the Chinese Christian Church.

Traveling extensively, bringing comfort, courage and advice to isolated Christian groups in devastated areas, Mr. Cross constantly has seen first hand the ruin wrought by those twin scourges, war and flood. As Secretary of the North China Committee on Co-Ordination of Emergency Relief he has been burdened with terrific refugee problems.

REV. ROWLAND M. CROSS.

lated Christian groups in devastated areas, Mr. Cross constantly has seen first hand the ruin wrought by those twin scourges, war and flood. As Secretary of the North China Committee on Co-Ordination of Emergency Relief he has been burdened with terrific refugee problems.

Visiting scores of flooded villages where starvation stalks daily, he has seen the terrible need and suffering there. He has visited the thousands upon thousands of pathetic refugees crowded into mission compounds and Chinese churches. Food—just enough to sustain life—clothing and shelter, together with the opportunity to learn of the Christian way, are given these victims of war.

Mr. Cross, with years of constructive service behind him, is familiar from actual contact with many phases of our work in North China. In earlier years he traveled by mule back, by bike, by motoreyele, by jinrickasha, and many other ways. He went along the mountain trails of Shansi and Shensi visiting the Christian outposts. He can tell of the deep interest in Christianity now among students and has done religious education work in the schools. For a number of years he was Foreign General Secretary of the Kung Li Hui (Chinese Congregational Church) in which position he acted as liaison officer between the home base in America and the Younger Church in China. He knows fully the joy and success of team work with Chinese Christians.

Serving in North China in peace days, through the tense years when hostilities seemed imminent, through the invasion by Japan, and more recently in "occupied China," Mr. Cross has been an eye witness to significant developments under changing circumstances.

Missionaries, Mr. Cross feels, are indispensable in helping bulding right relations between races and nations. Now more than ever, they are needed. When he came home on his last furlough, he said: "I can think of no other place than China where my life could count for more than it does right there." He still believes that.

Born in Minnesota, Mr. Cross was educated at Oberlin College and Oberlin and Union Seminaries. He went to China first in 1917.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dr. Elwood W. Jones reports a success CHRISTIAN SUN campaign in the Franklin Christian Church.

Rev. Herbert G. Council, Jr., of Portsmouth, attended the Lyman Beecher Lectures on Preaching at Yale University.

Rev. Sam N. Hurst, member of the Eastern Virginia Conference who is open for supply work in our churches, is now located at Hiwassee, Va.

Rev. W. J. Andes is assisting the pastor, Rev. J. E. McCauley, with revival services this week at Ingram Christian Church, Paces, Va.

Dr. and Mrs. Vaughan Dabney of Newton Center, Mass., were visitors at Elon College one day last week. Dr. Dabney is Dean of Andover-Newton Theological Seminary.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar and three cars of people from Newport News drove to Richmond last Sunday evening for the Orchestra Concert at the First Congregational Christian Church. A large congregation was present.

On Sunday morning, April 27, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Sr., preached the baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of the Liberty High School. In the absence of the pastor, Professor Merton French, Ph. D., of Elon's faculty, was the guest preacher at the First Church, Burlington.

The John Calvin McNail Lectures at the University of North Carolina will be given at Gerrard Hall, Chapel Hill, by Dr. William Ernest Hoeking, professor of philosophy in Harvard University. The subject for the series is "Contemporary Science and the Idea of God." The lectures will be given on May 5, 6 and 7 at 8:30 P. M.

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will sympathize with Mrs. L. E. Smith in the death of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Clemens. Dr. and Mrs. Smith were over-night guests in the home of your managing editor when intelligence came of her sister's demise. Mrs. Smith left Richmond Wednesday morning for Parsons, Kansas, where her sister had made her home.

We are happy to welcome to our area this week Rev. and Mrs. Rowland

M. Cross, missionaries of our church to China, who are in this country on furlough. Members of our churches in the Valley of Virginia Conference are especially fortunate for they will have several opportunities to hear them. Mr. and Mrs. Cross are to be the guest speakers at the Valley Mission Rallies.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones recently canceled his passage to India, because the Liner Voice, upon which he often depends in times of crisis, clearly said, "I want you here." Dr. Jones remains with the hope that "we may be able to replace in some measure the present war-mindedness of America with a consideration of this program of reconstruction, as a means of ending the war and of laying the foundations of a new beginning among nations. For America holds the key to the future."

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR PASTORS AND OTHER CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

A great opportunity is offered at Duke University each summer for a week of intensive study, wide and rich Christian fellowship, many highly inspirational addresses, numerous open forums and services of deeply spiritual worship. The opportunity in question is summed up in what we are calling The Duke Institutes and Bible Conference. These meetings will be held this year June 2-7 at Duke University. They will be opened by a special address in the Duke Chapel by Dr. Albert W. Beaven, President of Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, on Monday evening, June 2, at eight o'clock. Bishop Clare Purell will conduct a season of worship each morning in the chapel. Dr. James Moffatt, author of the well-known and widely-used Moffatt translation of the Bible, will be present, teach two classes each day, and conduct one of the open forums. Dr. Arthur W. Hewitt, the author of Highland Shepherds, will be present, teach two classes each day, and make one of the evening addresses. Perhaps most of our pastors have read Highland Shepherds and will readily agree that it is, to say the least, one of the best books ever written on the country pastorate. Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Dickinson of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City, will be with us, conduct a course in Church

Worship, and talk to special groups. Dr. Dickinson will give an organ recital one evening. Besides these, something like fifteen or twenty other religious leaders will be present, teach classes, conduct forums, make addresses, and help in various ways to make this what is in my judgment one of the richest and best of the summer conferences. Besides providing such an inviting menu for the mind and the soul, the body is by no means overlooked. Good room and good board are to be had at a nominal cost. Those who are interested should write a card at once to Dean J. M. Ormond, Duke University, Durham, N. C., and ask for a copy of the Bulletin.

DR. W. R. CULLOM, Pres.,

DANVILLE.

It has been our purpose for some time to give a brief report on the work here at Danville. Last year was probably one of the greatest years of work in the history of the church. We received 236 members and so far this year 71 have come into the fellowship of the church. The Sunday school for the past year has been very good with an average of near 800.

The church has gone well in that the attendance for morning services is about 800 and evening services vary from 750 to 900. The giving has been unusually good. We built a tabernacle a little more than two years ago hoping to pay for it on a six year plan. We found, however, in February that we had ample money in the treasure to pay this indebtedness off and today we have a plant valued at $50,000.00, clear of all indebtedness. We are now going forward with the following program. We are supporting six missionaries and will put on two more just as soon as the workers can be placed. Then our tract work is going real well. We started this work about two months ago and have distributed six thousand tracts. We are hoping to average two thousand per month. Recently two of the adult classes purchased two nice new tents and they will be used through the summer for revivals in and around Danville. Our student fund is doing well and the church is now able to assist three worthy young people with their college work. Out of these three, two are preparing for the ministry and we have another fine young man who will soon finish high school who is going on to college as a ministerial student. Recently the

Southern Convention Summer Program

REV. F. C. LESTER, Promotional Secretary.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

The Southern Convention seeks to serve the churches of North Carolina and Virginia in several ways. The summer program is largely in the field of religious education. It might be called educational evangelism, for the purpose back of all the work is the desire to win people to the Christian way, and to prepare them for Christian service.

JUNIOR HIGH CAMP.

One new phase of the work for this summer is a camp for seventh, eighth and ninth grade young people, or people from twelve to fifteen years of age. This Junior High Camp will meet on June 9-14, beginning Monday afternoon and closing Saturday noon, at Crabtree Creek Recreational Area, which is about half way between Raleigh and Durham just off the new highway. The Federal Government has an excellent camp there. Cabins are comfortable, cooking and dining room facilities are adequate, the camp is in a pine forest, and a lovely lake furnishes good swimming.

Plans are well under way for a fine faculty and counselors, courses on Our Church and Our Bible, nature study and handwork of various kinds, and recreation that really develops the person.

The cost of each individual will be only five dollars, and four dollars of this amount can be paid in chickens, eggs, vegetables, and other food supplies. It is none too early for those who plan to be there to register by sending a dollar, name and address to the editor of this page at Elon College, N. C. Only a limited number can attend. Better be among those writing in early.

ELON SUMMER CONFERENCE.

June 23-28 is the time. Pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and officers, young people and their leaders, and all who aspire to the position of leadership in the church are invited and expected for this annual Summer Conference at Elon College.

The first period after breakfast each day the entire group will hear the Rev. Archie Hook of Troy, Ohio, tell of the church, and especially of our church. The next period the study of the church will continue in groups of pastors, young people, and teachers of children. The third period will be given to the study of the Bible when there will be discussions of the Psalms, the Sermon on the Mount, selecting and telling Bible Stories, and the Bible and Missions. The fourth period will have quite a variety of courses, including one by the missionary.

The cost of this Conference for the week will be $8.50 per person. Registrations can also be sent to the Convention Office.

STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE.

We will be able to use six or eight of our young people for Student Summer Service. In addition to conducting Vacation Bible Schools, they will help with young people's organizations and program building, and render whatever other service may be needed in the local churches.

Churches that want this type of help should write to the Convention Office just as soon as possible, stating when the service is desired, and whether one or two weeks are needed. The cost to the church is only the entertainment of the workers while on the field, transportation to the next place, and an offering at the close of the school for the Board of Christian Education. This work is underwritten by the Board of Home Missions and the Board of Christian Education.

In addition to the workers who will serve for two months, there is to be an opportunity for several other capable young people to get a week of training at Elon during the conference there in return for two or more weeks of work in churches other than their home church. Those interested in doing this type of work should discuss it with their pastor and then write to the editor of this page.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTIONS.

The five Sunday School Conventions will do what they can in the one day sessions by way of help to those who are carrying the religious educational work in local churches. Within a short time further announcement will be made concerning expert speakers for these conventions.

It is now time for Sunday schools to begin planning to send delegates and to pay the annual dues. The delegates will go home better prepared for Christian service, and the money sent to the Convention will help the Board of Christian Education through the Convention Office to serve the churches, Sunday schools and young people.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

The second Sunday in June is the time for the annual Children's Day program. On this day the churches let the children lead in worship of the Master who blessed the children. It is a very important occasion. The Convention Office will gladly furnish materials for the program.

WOMAN'S MISSION CONVENTION AND SCHOOL.

The women of the Convention hold their annual School of Missions at Elon June 16-20. This year their Convention session will be interspersed through the School of Missions. Miss Ruth Seabury of Boston will be one of the leaders. Every church should certainly be represented. Mrs. J. Monroe Harris of Norfolk, Va., is the president, and inquiries should be sent to her.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP CONFERENCES.

One Conference Pilgrim Fellowship has met recently. Others will convene during the summer. There will likely be many group meetings of young people to consider plans for cooperating in helping to build a better world.

REVIVALS.

Most of the rural churches will hold revival meetings during the summer. This, too, should be educational, and usually is. The evangelist tells what is meant by the Christian experience and then seeks to get people to accept the Christian way of living. Evangelists and Sunday school teachers should feel a very close comradeship. The Convention Office often aids churches in securing the desired assistance for revivals.

RETREATS.

If the time can be found for it, the Convention Office will sponsor retreats for ministers, Sunday school superintendents, church officials and young people. Several churches get their officers together in some restful place for fellowship and to plan the new year's work. Other churches will find it to be a very happy and helpful experience.

ELON PASTOR'S SCHOOL.

Rev. Archie H. Hook, D.D., of Troy, Ohio, will lead the pastors at Elon in a study of "The Church" and "Stewardship." Dr. Hook has served as the chairman of our National Commission on Stewardship and comes with a rich pastoral experience to lead us in these very practical courses. Other members of the faculty will be announced at an early date. The school will be held June 23-28. This date should be reserved by all ministers of our Convention. Fine fellowship and capable instruction are enjoyed by all who attend.

VIEWS ON NEWS.

Impressions concerning the general character of this paper only occasionally reach the eyes or ears of the editor. The reading constituency is, for the most part, quite silent, offering neither commendation nor criticism. The most general complaint up to date, however, is that there is too little news. The news page is doubtless more generally read than any other page. A minority has frankly advised, "Cut out those trite news items!"

The editor is in sympathy with those subscribers who look for news in each issue. Names and places enjoy a universal interest. The public is usually more interested in what one does than in what one thinks. The editor, as well as others, is disappointed when there is no news to print.

This brings us face to face with our first problem. We cannot automatically manufacture news. News must originate in and be reported by the local church. There is no virtue in hording news. Often a post card will suffice in reporting, for it is conducive to brevity. Modesty should prevent no minister or church from reporting constructive work or unusual achievements. Trite news is important, but every church should do something occasionally worth reporting. This news will be of interest and value to all churches. "The Christian Sun" can render a distinct service in carrying news items of real merit. Every effort is made to publish promptly, without the slightest discrimination, items of this nature.

While there is real sympathy with this general desire for news, there is also an "uneasy conscience" when people read the news and neglect "the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith." Is it possible that our church people have also become "tabloid minded"? There is cause for serious editorial concern when readers hastily read the news page and ignore more profound articles on the Bible, the church and the Christian life. The intelligence and spiritual depth of our church is reflected by the nature of its reading. Surface reading can never produce a stalwart church. A mature church must sink its roots in historic as well as contemporary study. News is temporary, ephemeral and often inconsequential; the Gospel is profound and eternal. News should be reported, published and read. But this light spiritual diet can never fully satisfy those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness."

COMPLAINT NO. 2.

Subscribers like to receive their papers promptly and contributors like to see their articles appear in publication without delay. Some cannot understand the occasional delay. Unforeseen difficulties often arise and delay the day of publication. The printer may be able to send the paper out on time if only one contribution arrives late, but a number of tardy arrivals will necessarily arrest the progress in printing. We frequently find it necessary to hold an article until the following week simply because it does not arrive in time to be included in the first form. All articles for pages 1, 4, 5, 8, 9, 12, 13 and 16 must be at hand for the first form. Material for these pages should reach the office of publication by Friday before the week of publication. Material for the second form should be received on Monday if possible, or not later than Tuesday of the week of publication.

There are weeks when there is a superabundance of material, but there is no elasticity in the printed form of the paper. The editor must arbitrarily hold articles from time to time to be included at a more convenient season. We like to have some material in reserve for weeks when there is a dearth of contributions.

We solicit your continued patience and cooperation. The paper is being edited under very obvious difficulties. The editor is also a pastor and his first responsibility is for his pulpit and a congregation scattered to the four winds of a great city. Much time is consumed in carrying on necessary correspondence, writing and re-writing articles and editorials, and carrying this heavy responsibility without the assistance of a secretary. We appreciate this opportunity for service and hope to do better in the future.

"MORE OPEN THAN USUAL."

The oldest Congregational Church in the British Capital was recently bombed. This old church of our Pilgrim fathers was founded in 1592. The City Temple, London, has also been struck by a bomb. These two famous Congregational Churches have been laid open by an enemy bent on total destruction. Art, religion and history have become the helpless victims of annihilation.

Quite to the contrary, some of our churches "are more closed than usual." They are closed, however, not by the violence of the enemy, but through inertia and lack of faith. In recent years a few of our churches have been closed completely and permanently. There is a widespread reluctance on the part of Christian people to keep the Lord's House open for evening services on the Lord's Day. Many of our rural churches are still closed for preaching with the exception of one Sunday in each month, and a few of our city churches declare a complete "moratorium on preaching" for at least a month during the summer. This kind of appeasement policy with secular forces is a dangerous concession, for it only whets the appetite of commercialized pleasure for further Sabbatical conquests. A closed church, like a closed Bible, is powerless to help and to save.

When confronted with two courses of action I jot down on a piece of paper all the arguments in favor of each one then on the opposite side I write the arguments against each one. Then by weighing the arguments pro and con and canceling them out, one against the other, I take the course indicated by what remains.—Benjamin Franklin.

The Southern Convention and My Church Their United Possibilities

By R. O. ROTHEGEB.

What is the Southern Convention?

I am glad that I have had the privilege of attending three biennial sessions of the Southern Convention, the first one being in the city of Burlington, N. C., at which time, a desire which had long been cherished, actually became a reality.

Here at this, my first session, I really came to understand what the Southern Convention is, and I sincerely wish that every member within the bounds of the Convention could attend at least one session, which I feel would certainly deepen their interest in all of the enterprises which it is promoting.

As I stood on the steps of that splendid church edifice and watched the cars coming in from the various sections of Virginia and North Carolina, I realized that it was the common interest of a great church that was bringing us together: a church whose simple, but fundamental, principles are unexcelled by any denomination.

Then, in a little while, we were seated in that beautiful and worshipful auditorium, and the president had called the Convention to order, and as I looked out over the audience I thought: "Now this is the Southern Convention." But was it?—No! only in part, for in a little while (after the devotional services, which made us feel the very presence of God), the secretary was calling the roll of conferences, and then I was reminded of the thousands back at the home churches, and I thought: they are the Southern Convention, and we, only a small part of it, have been sent here to represent them in the various interests of the church which they love. Then it was when I realized more fully the great responsibility which rests on the officials of the Convention, and as I sat through the sessions of that Convention and observed the earnestness with which these men and women wrestled with the problems before the Convention, I realized that our church has some great men and women, not great in authority or worldly pomp or power, but great in humble service for Christ and His Church.

Then I tried to picture in my mind the churches from which they came; and I saw through the mind's eye some beautiful churches on busy city streets, and some on great highways where the throngs pass by, and some nestled in the wildwood, almost hidden from view, and not at all beautiful in architecture, and yet beautiful, because the spirit of Christ planted them there. From this latter group most of the ministers and lay members of the Convention originally came.

One might ask the question, "How then, did they become great? and how did they come to occupy the highest official positions of the Convention?"

Jesus said, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." That's how they became great.

And now, let us turn the spot light on my church.

Since my church is one of the one hundred and ninety-one or more churches in the Convention, and since the membership of my church is counted in the more than 31,000 members in the Convention, what is my church's responsibility in promoting the work of the Kingdom of God as represented by the Southern Convention as it undertakes to send out missionaries, and to care for the orphans and widows, and train the youth in the principles of Christian living.

Shall my church say: Because we have no wealthy members, and because we need our money at home, we will not contribute to the enterprises of the Convention. It is true, my church alone could not maintain an orphanage, my church alone could not send out many missionaries, or operate a college, but my church along with your church and the many other churches in the Convention, can send out missionaries, maintain an orphanage and college, and care for the other enterprises of the Convention, and that on a much larger scale than we are now doing, if we become spiritually awakened.

I believe that if my church and your church and the other churches of the Convention were to come to have a Spiritual zeal, that our possibilities would be practically unlimited. With God all things are possible. (Matt. 19:26.)

When we consider that fact that in many of our churches, one third of the member contribute nothing to the church financially and probably nothing spiritually, and then another one third manifests but little interest either financially or spiritually—it is certainly evident that we need a spiritual awakening.

I think the Convention needs to know the individual churches better, and I think also that the individual churches need to know the Convention better, and I feel that the creation of the office of Promotional Secretary is already showing gratifying results in this respect. I believe the Promotional Secretary should know so far as is possible to know, the financial and spiritual condition of every church in the Convention, and especially the Spiritual condition, for when any church becomes spiritually alive, it will manifest itself in its giving.

I believe there should be within the bounds of the Convention, several Spirit-filled Born Again Evangelists who could be sent to cold and inactive churches, and that in many cases, great results would follow.

I believe that our greatest need right now is a Spirit-filled ministry with a passion and a zeal for the Gospel of Christ like a consuming fire. I believe we need Born Again men and women who love the souls of men and women, boys and girls more than they love the carnal things of the world, and many of which are in the churches today.

Upon the authority of God's word I say all of these things are possibilities; but unless we are willing to act upon them, then the probabilities are that we will become weaker and weaker until the end comes. God's spirit does not always strive with man, and the door of opportunity will not remain open forever.

These are serious times in which we are living. The remaining days of grace may be few. Let us act now.

PIEDMONT MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

The ministers of the Piedmont Ministerial Association plan a fishing and picnicing meeting for Monday, May 12. The place is the city pond at Burlington, and the time will be ten in the morning. The Mayor of Burlington, Mr. Earl Homer, invites the ministers to come and use the boats and the pond and to catch as many fish as they can. The game warden for the county informs us the Mayor has the authority to be thus gracious and that fishing licenses for the occasion will not be necessary.

From past experiences on similar occasions the writer suggests it would be using pretty good judgment to bring pretty well supplied picnic lunches.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There is a remarkable promise recorded in II Chronicles 7: 14, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and heal their land."

These words were spoken to King Solomon during a season of prayer in the darkness of the night. The young king was very anxious to discover the will of God and sought the Divine guidance for himself and his kingdom. God revealed to him the conditions of security and prosperity. These conditions are simple but comprehensive. Four great moral pillars suggest a safe and secure foundation for personal living and national independence. They are clearly stated: 1. "If my people shall humble themselves." 2. "If my people shall pray." 3. "If my people shall seek my face." 4. "If my people shall turn from their wicked ways." And the three-fold assurance follows: 1. "I will hear from heaven." 2. "I will forgive their sin." 3. "I will heal their land."

According to some of the writers of sacred history the period from Abraham to the building of Solomon's temple covered nearly one thousand years, or from B. C. 1921 to B. C. 1005. That is a long period to wait for the consummation of a Divine plan for the race. Many generations looked for the realization of this ancient dream and promise. The Israelites arose from the slavery of Egypt to seek the land of promise and build a great national center of religious worship. The reward is offered for royal fidelity to God and righteousness. The warning—a stern warning—is sounded against forsaking the true God, the violation of the highest moral law and the worship of "other gods."

The subsequent history of the chosen people indicates how rigidly God kept His promises of reward and His warnings of moral and spiritual delinquency. The tragic story of the Jews is an evidence of the inexorable laws of the kingdom of God. And the history of the Jewish people, from the standpoint of religious fidelity, should be read and interpreted in its significance for the whole human race. God does not have one standard for the Jews and another for the Gentiles. "God is no respecter of persons,"

There is no escape from the sphere of the moral and spiritual laws of Almighty God.

Humility is more powerful than pride. Prayer overshadows the roar of powerful weapons on the battlefield. Seeking God surpasses the conference call of the world's mightiest military dictators. Turning away from wicked ways is more dynamic than the mechanized forces of relentless oppressors. Yet there are great people who will read these statements with a shrug of the shoulders and a sneer from their lips. This is old-fashioned and out of date, in the opinion of many people. Humanity must remember that God is not dead, and He has not surrendered His law or its binding authority. A decade is a short time in the sight of God. And the shifting fortunes of nations are not the final measure of omnipotence.

So many people are asking: "Where is thy God?" The forces of righteousness will one day find their rightful place among the powers that be. And God will be triumphant in spite of the defiant blasts of the enemies of righteousness. In the meantime it behooves those who seek the better way to meet the Divine requirements of peace and security. Our churches should be filled every Sunday with sincere worshippers. The prayer meeting should be crowded. Penitents should seek the altar. Sinners should forsake their sins and turn to righteous loving.

I. W. JOHNSON.

POSSIBLE SOLUTIONS.

In a recent issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Rev. W. J. Andes wrote a very interesting and timely article under the heading: "Students and the Church." The thesis of the article was that the Christian Church has a large number of her own students in colleges and universities in North Carolina and Virginia other than our own college. The statement is made that "there are approximately five hundred students in colleges and universities in North Carolina that belong to the Christian denomination." The question is raised as to what our church is doing for the religious welfare of these students. If we are compelled to answer that question, I am afraid that the answer would of necessity be "Nothing." This presents an urgent problem, and the question is how the problem is to be solved.

It would seem that there are two possible solutions. First, we should remind ourselves that at great effort and cost our church has built her own institution of higher learning. It is expensive to maintain and conduct that institution. It would seem to me that if the pastors and interested laymen of our church would put forth conscientious and consistent efforts that a large number of these Christian church young people enrolled in other colleges could easily be steered to our own. No pastor or church need make any apology for our college, the opportunities that are offered, and the grade of work that it does. The educational organizations of our section place proper appraisal upon the institution. Our graduates are able to cope successfully with the graduates of other institutions, regardless of the institutions. Each year I write to every pastor an earnest letter requesting that he simply let us have the names and addresses of the young people belonging to our church who are seniors in high school. All we ask for are the names and addresses that we may have the opportunity of sending catalogues and other information introducing them to our college and urging them to come. This would seem to be an elementary effort in cooperation. You would be interested to know how many pastors have answered. I should tell you and give you the names, but it would be embarrassing. Until we can secure the cooperation of our own folks and the interest in our own college, conditions such as Mr. Andes points out will obtain.

The second solution it seems to me, would be intelligent and interested cooperation on the part of our local churches in college towns. I am making a guess that the majority of the five hundred young people that Mr. Andes refers to are enrolled in State College at Raleigh, Duke University at Durham, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Woman's College at Greensboro, and Davidson College at Davidson. With a large number of our own church young people enrolled in a college located in a town where there is a Congregational Christian Church, the presence of these young people on that campus offers an unusual opportunity for service. These young people are for the time being away from their homes and home churches and as a rule welcome attention from, and are glad to respond to invitations extended by a local church, particularly if that local church is of their own denomination. I do not mean the usual invitation to

Dear Friends:

I am the month of May. I bring to all children warm sunshine, blue skies and bright blossoms. I make the good earth warm so that the seed burst from their prison shells and peep forth in tender green. I warm the water in the brooks, so that boys and girls can splash merrily with their first "wading" of the summer. On my lawns and grassy meadows children's bare feet kiss the green of the grass. In the faces of my flowers you may find a splash of color for each rainy tear that April showered.

I bring you May Day. Who hasn't known the joy of dancing about the May Pole? Colleges choose their queen, who bears my name and rules for a day. High schools and grammar schools throughout the land keep this happy custom of May Day. Have you ever done as the boys and girls of Merry England used to do? Your May basket of flowers should be left at her door but she should not catch you in the act, little boy! Yes, I invite all to play, young and old, 'tis good for your soul. Build for yourself a castle of happy May memories for the darker months ahead of you in this year.

I bring to you Mother's Day! That you may surprise in your mother's eyes a dazzling light, with a secret bright. You can never know the depth of that mother love, until you, too, one day teach your child to play and pray.

You will find in everyone of my thirty-one days an opportunity to be your best self. Grow beyond the mistakes of a yesterday. Each sun which rises above my horizon, calls you to a happy day. Cherish them for me.

Sincerely,
"MAY."

"MARY."

M-a-r-y—these four letters spell the name of a little girl who wants to meet you. She is six and one half years old. She is very happy and wants you to know about it. Tonight her tiny feet danced about in their new white slippers and caused the cherries to bob about on her new spring bonnet. The lady who held her hand said, "Mary, I want you to meet Mrs. Todd. Her husband preaches in a church over on the other side of town." Then the lady told me this story.

"Miss W. helped us to find her. We have had Mary for two months now. She is such a happy little person and we learn so many things from her. Today when I was trying to get her to drink her quart of milk, Mary said, 'I never drank milk before coming to your house. Before I just drank water. I don't remember ever eating cereal before, either.' It is a joy to watch Mary eat the right food and grow strong and rosy."

Mary did not come from England, but she had no home. These good people who have taken her to give her a home for a while had no children. Now Mary has a home and her foster parents have a child in their home. Isn't that fine? Perhaps there are other Marys who do not have homes. Would it not be nice to help them to find mothers who would love them by Mother's Day; and whom they could love? To those parents who no longer have children at home, yet would like to help children, our home at Elon offers a wonderful opportunity. You could not lose anything by investigating in this home for children.

"MALCOLM."

Malcolm has come to live next door to me. I asked him how old he was and he held up five fingers. Malcolm does not have many boys and girls living near with whom he can play. Yet, Malcolm never seems lonesome. Today when I took Oliver out for a stroll, Malcolm was looking at the green leaves on the oak trees.

"Oliver likes this sunshine," I said, "don't you like it also?"

"Yes," Malcolm replied, "do you know that this warm sunshine will make poppies bloom?" he asked. "I'll bet that you do not know what poppies are," said he.

"Oh, yes, I do. They are beautiful flowers that are bright red, yellow, blue and pink!"

"I have some crayons. One of them is violet blue. Did you ever see a crayon that color?"

"Yes, I believe that my husband has one like that, Malcolm."

"What does your husband do with his crayons?"

"He does many things with them, Malcolm. He draws pictures of birds and flowers; he makes posters, and at Easter he loaned them to a friend who wanted to color some eggs for a little girl! You must come over some afternoon and watch Mr. Todd use his crayons."

"I would like that, but I shall have Hymn and Prayer.

Opening Recitation—

You'll have to be quiet just so you can hear
And I'm doing my best to speak out plain and clear—
It's very im-por-tant what I have to say,
For I'm bidding you welcome on this Cradle Roll Day.

A Group Representing American Children Sing: "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old." (1st & 2nd verses.)

During the singing of these verses, a group of children in costumes of China, Japan, India, etc., enter slowly.

Foreign Group: "Who is this of whom you sing, who calls little children?"

American Group: "Why, our Jesus; don't you know him?"

Foreign Group: "No, who is He?"

American Group: "He is the Son of God, who came from Heaven to save us."

Foreign Group: "We never heard of Him."

American Group: "Don't you have the Bible read to you?"

Foreign Group: "What is the Bible?"

American Group: "It is the book of God. Don't you know about God?"

Foreign Group: "We have gods, but we are afraid of them."

American Group: "Then they are not the true God."

Foreign Group: "We wish we had one like yours."

American Group: "You can; He is for you, too. Listen. (Sings 3rd verse of, "I Think When I Read.")

Foreign Group: "We wish we could know Him. Where does He live?"

American Group: "Sings last verse of, "I Think When I Read.")

Foreign Group: "We would like to go there, too. Will you show us the way?"

American Group: "Yes, we will. (They go to meet them, each taking the hand of one of the Foreign children and sing, "Come Unto Me.")

Both groups sing, "Suffer Little Children."

Reception of Mite Boxes in an attractive manner.

Just before the "Prayer Song" three children recite:

1. We fold our hands that we may be
From earthly play and work set free.
2. We bow our heads as we draw near
The King of kings, our Father dear.
3. We close our eyes, that we may see Nothing to take our thoughts from Thee.

Closing Prayer Song. A Prayer.

OBEY THE INNER VOICE.

Stanley Jones had planned to return to India on March 20 of this year. In the Christian Century of April 4, he says early on the morning that the boat was due to sail the inner voice kept repeating, "I want you here." It was so compelling as to be inescapable. He continues, "I had my baggage taken ashore and I canceled my sailing." "Perhaps in this time of national crisis," observes Dr. Jones, "there is something I must do."

On this occasion, Stanley Jones is acting under a divine compulsion similar to that which constrained him in those wonderful early years of his in India which he disclosed in "The Christ of the Indian Road." Dr. Jones is still submissive to the voice divine that guided him when the General Conference, years ago, had elected him bishop and his friends kept insisting that he be ordained and thus take upon himself the high office of bishop of the church of God. After a serious night of prayer alone with God, he appeared before the General Conference to give his final answer. There and then, Stanley Jones in that crucial hour told of his night alone with God seeking to know what answer he should make to the General Conference of his church. In substance, God said to him, "Stanley, if you will relinquish this I will walk with you across Asia." Following that decision, the inner voice sent Stanley Jones across the Orient; this same voice now holds him here in America. This sounds similar to much we read in Acts of the Apostles.

Eighteen centuries have profited by the Apostle Paul in his journeys across the Roman world and millions have gained inspiration and guidance from the voice of God that came to him in the storm on the Mediterranean and in the heights of the third heaven. Why not listen to the voice of this present marvelous missionary as God speaks to him and through him in this present age? The church certainly needs more than ever to hear the voice of God from men who obey the inner voice, as does Stanley Jones.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

We are so happy over this week's offerings and the fact that one or two churches have already raised their conference apportionment in full for missions.

Newport News doubled their apportionment for missions and this is splendid.

Reidsville sent their mission apportionment in full, and will surely go far beyond that figure before the Conference year closes.

These churches have done good work and we know that it can be done. We hope you will send your offerings soon and that each church will report an increase over their offering of last year.

Most sincerely yours,
MATTIE COX PARKER,
Secretary.

May 2, Friday night, 7:30—Happy Home, Ruffin, N. C.

May 4, Sunday, 9:30—New Hope; 11:00—Antioch; 2:00 Bethlehem for District Mission Rally; 7:30, Winchester for District Mission Rally.

May 5, Monday, 7:30—Dry Run, Seven Fountains, Va.

May 6, Tuesday, 7:30—Bethel for District Mission Rally.

May 7, Wednesday, 7:30—Mt. Olivet (R), Elkton, Va.

May 8, Thursday, 7:30—Mt. Olivet (G), Dyke, Va.

CONCERNING OUR SOUTHERN CONVENTION FOR WOMEN AND OUR SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

Plans for the program and committee to carry out those plans are being made daily for our Convention and School of Missions, which will meet at Elon, June 16th through 20th. One important thing to announce is the cost. Six dollars will take care of all expenses after you arrive at Elon. The college is furnishing board and room for five dollars and one dollar is the registration fee. The price has certainly been made within the reach of our women and now we want you to plan to go. The first meal in the college dining hall will be the dinner at 6:00 o'clock on Monday, June 16, the last meal will be lunch on Friday, June 20. The prospect now is that we will tax the capacity of the college to entertain us. Already letters have begun to arrive containing helpful suggestions and promises of groups who will be going.

Mrs. L. E. Smith and Mrs. F. C. Lester have consented to be on the registration and room assignment committee, so just as soon as you plan to go please let Mrs. Smith know, telling her how many are in your party and how you would like to be grouped for sharing rooms.

Last year Berea (Nan.) was the first church to send in a list of prospective attendants. They had six names of those who registered first. You can't be first this year, but you can be second if you hurry and notify Mrs. Smith.

We are very fortunate in having secured our three hostesses that so splendidly served last year, Mrs. W. M. Jay, from Carolina Conference; Mrs. R. B. Wood, from Eastern Virginia Conference and Mrs. A. W. Andes, from the the Valley Conference. They will return this summer and greet you when you arrive.

Rev. Robert House of the Richmond Church will be the inspirational speaker for the Monday evening service and Miss Ruth Seabury for the Tuesday evening service. Dr. I. W. Johnson will teach the Scripture Study Hour and other definite arrangements concerning the program will be announced later.

Mrs. Everett Bryan, from Franklin, Va., will be hostess for the dining hall and her assistant will be announced soon. Miss Dorothy Williams of Franklin, Va., will have charge of the literature table and if you have any ideas and suggestions you could offer to make this literature display more attractive to our school, please let Miss Williams know. She is already at work on her plans.

Mrs. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk is to be our pianist again and we all know how much we appreciated her services last summer. The nominating committee is composed of Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, Mrs. W. A. Daughtrey and Mrs. L. E. Smith. Please contact any of them if you can assist them in selecting officers for the new biennium. The "Business Manager" is Mrs. J. S. Rollins of Suffolk, the very capable Corresponding Secretary of our Woman's Board. She will be assisted by Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne and Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker. The registration office this year will be in the office formerly occupied by the late Dr. J. O. Atkinson and now used by Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker. The Twilight Vespers to be held on the lawn at seven o'clock each evening after Monday are being cared for by Mrs. Claude Eley and Mrs. John G. Truitt of Suffolk.

Hostesses for our special guests who will be our teachers and speakers are Mrs. Herbert Harrell, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell and Mrs. W. V. Leathers.

The devotional periods at our Convention sessions will be in charge of Mrs. W. R. Sellars of Burlington, N. C.

I hope to be able to announce by next week who will be our outstanding speaker and more details of our "Atkinson Memorial Program."

Special music committee for the Convention and School is composed of Mrs. R. T. Bradford, Mrs. A. B. Jarvis and Mrs. J. L. Foster.

I am happy to announce that every person that has been asked to serve in any way so far has gladly accepted the invitation and I have contacted these persons and many others, except in a very few cases. Watch each week now for additional news and send any suggestions you may have concerning our plans or program to me. It will be greatly appreciated.

MRS. J. MONROE HARRIS,
President.

WAVERLY DISTRICT.

The Waverly District meeting held in Wakefield recently proved very interesting and enlightening as well as being enjoyed by all who attended. Mrs. J. Monroe Harris, Mrs. B. D. Jones, Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Mrs. Herbert Harrell, Mrs. J. R. Darden and Mrs. R. O. Luter were guests of the occasion and joined in the program of the day. Rev. R. L. House gave a splendid address in the morning session. The highlights of the afternoon were a lovely tribute to Dr. Atkinson by Mrs. P. J. Holmes, a "Professor Quiz" conducted by Rev. B. H. Watkins, Col. J. E. West's paper read by Mrs. Walter Seeley and the vesper led by Mrs. Annie M. Brown.

The Dendron Society reported three new members and program booklets presented to every member in October with outlined programs for the year. More interest has been manifested this year in the study groups and personal service department. A cradle roll is in the process of being organized.

The Richmond, Waverly, Wakefield and Burton's Grove Societies have had study classes and their monthly attendance and contributions are increasing.

Although there is no organized society at Ivor or Barretts there were representatives at the District meeting. Hopewell was reorganized in November and New Lebanon disbanded in January. Plans are being made to have a good representation at the Elon School of Missions in June. Under the capable leadership of Mrs. Garland Spratley who has served so faithfully and efficiently for the past three years, this district, though small has done some remarkable work and according to this recent Rally will push forward to better missionary work in the future. The new officers for the ensuing year are as follows: Superintendent, Mrs. Annie M. Brown, Richmond, Va.; Assistant Superintendent, Mrs. Ernest Lane, Ivor; Secretary, Mrs. P. J. Holmes, Wakefield.

THE FEDERATION PRESIDENT TRAVELS.

By MRS. ROBERT G. WILLIAMS.

On March 30, I left for a long anticipated series of meetings in North Carolina. With Mrs. Graham Wisseman, President of the North Carolina Congregational Christian Women, I attended four district rallies which were attended by a total of four hundred women and pastors. The program of each rally consisted of reports from each society, business, worship, talk by the district president on "What a Missionary Society Expects of Its Pastor" and a talk by a minister on "What a Minister Expects of the Missionary Society," a panel discussion on methods and a talk by the visitor from Florida on "Always Abounding in World Wide Fellowship." It was interesting to hear the achievements of the women of that area and to sense their problems. The churches represented in these rallies were the Christian Churches of our Congregational Christian fellowship. I learned much from them. Their zeal for missions and their achieve-

SHALL WE LET THEM STARVE?

One of the great dangers in our feverish efforts to steel ourselves against the shocks of the world is that in the process we so easily become callous. In nothing is this more evident than in the way in which we casually dismiss figures (written with 7 or 10 digits) even when they represent human lives. We still talk very glibly about "ten million unemployed," if of course, we haven't forgotten them altogether. But there is one figure which keeps striking us in the face which makes astounding reading. It's all the more astounding because it is written in human terms. There are 37,000,000 people in the small European democracies which have been ravaged by war, which confront the dire consequences of starvation unless something is done immediately to help them. Those who are informed indicate that possibly 20,000,000 may starve unless foodstuffs reach them speedily.

To think about that for a moment, try to ponder it in terms of men, women and children, is like having an operation performed upon you without an anæsthetic. It hurts!

The trouble with us is that we still tend to become callous or in different to this kind of thing, and to pass it by, as did a certain priest and Levite. That's what many of us have been doing. We're too busy to be concerned, or perhaps concerned enough only to view aid to these people as a possible threat to our own desires, usually with the callous response, "Well, isn't it better that 20,000,000 people starve than that the Nazis win the war?"

For a moment let us look at some of the facts. Last September, former President Herbert Hoover, who successfully directed a controlled food program in occupied Belgium and Northern France in the last war, proposed a similar plan to bring aid to these people now suffering. That plan has been rejected by the British government. The present plan asks for an experiment to be tried in Belgium. If it is successful there, it will be carried to the other countries. The plan proposes feeding 2,000,000 starving children and 1,000,000 destitute and unemployed adults. One meal a day with supplementary food for the children served through soup kitchens assures consumption on the spot. Food will be transported, warehoused, and distributed under the complete supervision and control of a neutral commission.

Surplus supplies of food are already on hand in the United States. Sufficient Belgian funds are also available. The problem then is not one of money or supplies. The problem is to arouse American public opinion to the urgency of the need and the feasibility of the plan, to get the British and German governments to allow one food ship at a time through the blockades, and to secure binding agreements from the German government guaranteeing the contribution of part of the foodstuffs. The plan provides that if Germany does not contribute food or if that government seizes any of the food, the entire plan will be discontinued immediately.

There are many who will argue that it can't be done, or that it should not be done. No doubt there are serious difficulties involved, but these are not as important as the seriousness of feeding these who have been the victims of ruthless aggression. Even such military experts as General John J. Pershing and Admiral William Pratt have stated that the adoption of this plan would constitute no military loss of the British or gain to the Germans.

The important thing for us to do now is to begin discussing this matter in our churches, in Sunday school class, in young people's meetings; sending copies of our approvals of the plan to our Senators and Congressmen; and in every other way possible trying to create sentiment for the plan.

Further information may be secured from the National Committee on Food for the Small Democracies, 420 Lexington Ave., New York City.

"Starvation will not wait." "Lord, when saw we Thee hungry and fed Thee?"

The Board of Christian Education, Elon College, N. C., would appreciate the return of material borrowed for Easter programs in our churches.

AN EVENING OF RELIGIOUS MUSIC.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MAY 11, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Psalm 100.

Daily Readings—

Monday—When Morning Stars Sang—
Job 38: 4-7.

Tuesday—Moses and Miriam, Singers—
Exodus 15: 1-3, 20, 21.

Wednesday—Song of Deborah and Barak
—Judges 5: 1-3.

Thursday—The Magnificent — Luke 1:
46-55.

Friday—Jesus and Disciples Sing—
Mark 14: 26.

Saturday—Admonition to Sing— Eph.
5: 18-20.

The leader should prepare a brief opening period of music and prayer.

The choir director, minister, or someone who has studied the history of hymns, authors and composers, should be invited to provide technical guidance to this meeting.

A period may be given to singing hymns from memory. Select them in some order, as follows: (1) Hymns of praise, as "Holy, Holy, Holy"; (2) Consecration, as "Take My Life and Let It Be"; (3) Petitions, as "Just As I Am"; (4) Prayer, as "Sweet Hour of Prayer"; (5) Missions, as "O Zion, Hasten"; (6) Christian purpose, as "I Would Be True"; (7) Christian service, as "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

To Think About—

1. Lyman Abbott said, "Real music did not come until the Christian era." Why?

2. Mohammedanism has no hymns. Buddhism only lately plagiarized certain Christian hymns. Why have Christians always sung together?

3. In our good hymnbooks there are several hymns that come out of the first thousand years of the Christian era. Look them up. Read over "Shepherd of Tender Youth."

4. Today the Christian Church has 600,000 hymns. How many do you use in your society meetings in a year? Learn some new hymns during this program.

Some excellent books telling of the origin and history of hymn writers and composers are: A Treasure of Hymns by Amos R. Wells; Hymn Lore by Calvin W. Laufer; Stories of Hymns We Love by Cecelia Margaret Rudin; Christ and the Fine Arts by Cynthia Pearl Maus.

For Discussion—

1. How can our music be improved?

2. How can our society learn the story of great hymns with their authors and composers, and how can we learn to sing them better?

3. What can the Christian Endeavor do to help lift the level of music for the church? S. E. M.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

THE CHURCH ENLARGING ITS FELLOWSHIP.

LESSON V—MAY 4, 1941.

LESSON: Acts 8.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 42:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT: They therefore that were scattered abroad went preaching the word.—Acts 8:4.

The First Martyr.

Stephen was the first martyr. Our word, martyr, comes from the same word as our word, witness. In other words, bearing witness to the truth as it was in Christ, Stephen had to pay the price of his life. It is no wonder that Christianity grew so rapidly and had so much power, for it had men and women who were so convinced and convicted about the truth that they were willing to die for it. They loved Christ more than they loved life itself. The Church in our modern world has fallen on too easy times. Perhaps it is going to take persecution to arouse it again from its indifference and to awaken within it a new sense of the crusading spirit of faithful witnessing for Christ.

A Young Man Named Saul.

One of the witnesses at the stoning of Stephen was a young man named Saul. He was a Jew, but enjoyed Roman citizenship. He was a young man with a finely trained mind and with a great enthusiasm. He also had a great devotion to God. This accounts for his madness against the Christians. He felt that their teachings were subversive to true religion, that they were the enemies of God, and therefore they ought to be exterminated. He took no part in the stoning itself, but he gave his approval and even took care of the flowing garments which those who stoned Stephen laid aside in order to be more free to perform their deadly work. One wonders if this was not the beginning of that uneasiness in the life of Saul which gradually led to his conversion. When Christ appeared to him on the Damascus road, he said, "It is hard for thee to kick against the goad." For a long time this young man had been troubled, there was a restlessness in his soul, a sense of uneasiness. One wonders if by day and by night the vision of that saintly character, even praying for those who were at the moment stoning him to death, did not haunt this zealous Jew.

The Church Faces Persecution.

"And there arose on that day a great persecution against the church which was in Jerusalem." This was the beginning of a long series of persecutions of Christians which has continued even unto this day. Christianity is being persecuted in lands dominated by the Nazis and by other totalitarian powers, and the end is not yet. As has been said, "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church," and so persecution has but strengthened the fibre and enriched the life of the Church of Christ. The gates of hell itself can not and shall not prevail against it.

"But Saul laid waste the church, entering into every house, and dragging men and women committed them to prison." This man Saul did not do things by halves. He gave himself with all of his might to whatever his hands, his head, and his heart, found to do. He went in and out of houses dragging forth men and women and putting them in jail. Perhaps his very zeal and vindictiveness was an effort on his part to keep from hearing the still small voice within him. Already he must have had questionings about the wisdom of his course and the futility of his actions.

Starting Fires Around the World.

"They therefore that were scattered abroad went preaching the word." The attempt to put out the great fire by kicking the embers apart resulted in a new fire where each new ember fell. In Jerusalem only apostles were doing the preaching. Now all believers scattered by persecution went everywhere preaching the word.

The persecution brought latent talent to the surface, and in a sense every Christian became a fire brand, a flaming evangelist, a center of a new fire. The stones of persecution are only winds which fan the fire of faith and carry the sparks of truth to a distance.

Into Samaria.

"And Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and proclaimed unto them the Christ." Jesus had said that his disciples should be witnesses in Jerusalem, in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Under persecution the church began to enlarge its fellowship. But what a momentous thing it was when Philip went into Samaria. The very word Samaria was an anathema to the Jews; the Jews hated the Samaritans and had no dealings with them. But Philip had the love of Christ in his heart and as a Jew he went among these hated Samaritans and proclaimed to them the Christ. The love of Christ breaks down all boundaries and all barriers. The followers of Christ have gone among all nations and all races to proclaim that in Christ there is no bond or free. No Jew or Greek.

A City Made Happy.

"And the multitudes gave heed with one accord unto the things that were spoken by Philip, when they heard, and saw the signs which he did. For from many of those that had unclean spirits, they came out, crying with a loud voice; and many that were palsied, and that were lame, were healed. And there was much joy in that city." This man Philip's preaching was not only with word, it was with power. Things happened. Men and women with unclean spirits were cleansed. There were also miracles of healing. Men came into a new experience of God. Old fetters were broken; new freedom was found; life took on new meaning. No wonder there was much joy in that city! There is always joy in any city or town or community, when there is a genuine revival, when the preaching of the word is accompanied and validated by changed lives.

Looking Over Things.

"Now when the apostles that were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John." The apostles could hardly believe that God had intended for the Gentiles to be saved. At least they could hardly believe that there would be any response on the part of the Samaritans, but word kept coming back to Jerusalem that things were happening in this city of hated Samaritans. They thought they had better go down and look things over. Then, as now, there are prejudices in religion, narrowness, bigotry, self interest. When Peter and John came down they saw, however, that a great work had been done. They prayed that the Holy Spirit might come upon them. They had been baptized only in the name of the Lord Jesus. In response to the prayer the Holy Spirit had come upon them as the apostles laid their hands upon them. It is possible, of course, for a man to believe in a formal way and to unite with the church, and still not receive the Holy Spirit. But when a man in sincerity

EYES OFF GOD.

"When he saw the wind . . . he was afraid."—Matt. 14:30.

(Read Matt. 14:25-33.)

Peter started out with his eyes on Jesus, intending to walk straight to Him, but he saw the angry waves, he listened to another voice, and his vision became blurred. Elijah, listening to the voice of God, dared to rebuke the king and challenged the entire nation; but when Jezebel attracted him he looked away from God, fear and discouragement seized him, and he ran like a coward; afraid of his own shadow, he prayed to die. David "encouraged himself in the Lord," but when he saw the insane hatred of Saul, he fled.

Let us learn by these examples to keep our eyes on the Lord and live with a steady and fixed purpose, knowing that God is faithful who said, "I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."

Pray for this. Amen.

TUESDAY.

COMPANIONSHIP.

"Not my will but thine be done."
—Luke 22:42.

Lonely? Yes, sometimes, when the night is dark,

And silence wraps the spirit in its gloom;
But then the angels, watching every night
Supply the place of friendship's room.

Tired? Yes, often, when the day is done,
And sun rays sink behind the distant west;

But then my Savior walks beside; and he
Can give the weariest heart its rest.

Afraid? Oh yes, when mountain paths are steep,

Too steep for feet unused to rugged ways;
But then his promise cheers me, and the fear
Is turned to joyful hymns of praise.

So on I press, the loneliness and fear
But bind me closer to the love divine;
Within the deepest darkness faith can see;
And so I pray: "Thy will not mine."

—R. Hare, "Signs of Times."

WEDNESDAY.

THE RESOLUTION.

"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evils for thou art with me. Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."—Psa. 23:4.

With this and many like promises and with the assurance of their fulfillment, we have confidence in God, we can keep our minds on him with a fixed and steady purpose, and use our bitter experiences to strengthen our purpose to follow him all the way. Let us pray for that faith and for that mind to be in us this day. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NORMAL BUT NOT WORKING.

"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"—Acts 9:6.

This question marks the consecration of Paul to the service of God. Just as soon as he realized the greatness, glory and power of Christ, he cried out and gave his life to Christ.

The life, surrendered to Christ, cries out like Paul and then seeks service, striving ever afterwards to live the life to which God calls Him. It is not necessary to be an apostle to do this. Jesus was once a carpenter. Whatever the calling, a Christian follows in the spirit and with the loyalty of Christ. Are we just normal, drifting and accomplishing nothing? Let us pray that we may be more than this, working to a great end. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WHY NOT WORKING?

"Though the vision tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come."—Hab. 2:3.

Many of us have lived to learn that the Lord has an answer to our prayers sooner or later, and that He will reveal it if we are sincerely willing to have it revealed. In the case of Paul we learn that the Lord Jesus did not directly answer his question, save in a general way; for more complete instruction he had to wait for a visit to Ananias, a disciple living in Damascus. Let us pray for consecration and also that the answer to our prayers may come according to His will—through godly followers of Jesus and through experience and through every divine influence. To give ourselves to such leadings will mean just that. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHISPERS OF GOD.

"Lo, these are but the outskirts of his ways: and how small a whisper do we hear of him! But the thunder of his power, who can understand?"—(Read Job 26:6-14.)

Like Elijah standing before the whirlwind, in the presence of this text we realize the greatness of God and the littleness of man. The thunder, the earthquake, the mountains and the hills are but whispers of His voice. Yet, some day, if we are faithful, we shall see the Lord, and be like Him; some day we shall measure in His statue and be filled with His fullness. Some day these whispers will be enlarged into a complete symphony of heavenly music to our souls. Let us pray that we may purify ourselves that we may appreciate it. Pray that we may listen to the whispers here and enjoy the chorus there.

SUNDAY.

"In these busy, rushing, burdened days, most people have forgotten that ever there was a Sabbath. Perhaps that is why they are so tired and so easily discouraged. Maybe some essentials of primitive godliness will help us." Let us pray for true Sabbath keeping. Let us not be satisfied with our present attainments in the spiritual life, but to strive constantly to know more of God, and live closer to Him. Amen.

CHOICE OF LIFE GOALS.

“And so he bringeth them into their desired haven.” — Psalms 107:30.

This text is selected from one of the great praise songs of Israel. I like it because it is song, and because it is poetry, and because it is expressive of an eternal and valuable truth. “And so He bringeth them into their desired haven.”

They Made Their Choice. — They saw from afar what they wanted, and they set their hearts on it. We reap what we sow. We get what we want, in the main—that it, we get what we really want enough to diligently seek it. The failure is not in the choice, but in the seeking of the choice. If you have not read the 107th Psalm lately, you had better read it very thoughtfully again. For instance, a section of it says:

They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters;
These seek the works of the Lord,
and His wonders in the deep.
For He comandeth and raiseth the stormy wind,
which lifeth up the waves thereof.
They mount up to the heaven,
they go down again to the depths:
Their soul is melted because of trouble.
They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wit's end.
Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and He bringeth them out of their distresses.
He maketh the storm a calm,
so that the waves thereof are still.
Then are they glad because they be quiet;
so He bringeth them unto their desired haven.”

They choose to go down to the sea for its treasures, and the treasures of its hundreds of shores; they do business in great waters. Their choice is a large one, and a noble one full of treasures.

Last summer I saw a view grand indeed to behold. I climbed to the top of the Berkeley Hills, mountains that overlook the San Francisco Bay and the strait leading into it called the Golden Gate. And marvel of it all was that great bridges had spanned the Bay and the Golden Gate.

But something else also attracted my attention. In the great Bay, man had gone and built a solid island, sought out the treasures of the earth, both far and near, across the seven seas, and had called it “Treasure Island.” It was built for the Golden Gate Exposition. On this Treasure Island they had built a Temple of Religion and a Tower of Peace. When they were seeking funds with which to erect the great temple to God, they asked the Governor of California for $50,000.00 of State allotted funds for the project. The Governor was not sure the funds could be used for religion, and sent the delegation to Attorney General U. S. Webb for his decision. Attorney General Webb said: “Gentlemen, it is inconceivable that man would build an island in the Bay, and not find on it a place for God.”

Young people, dig down into the depths of your souls, and build you your treasure island by the shining golden gate of your far off dreams; but make on your island a place for God, and for His peace which passeth all understanding. Bring the treasures of time, and learning, and talent, and experience, and faithfulness, and industry, and health, and happiness, and wealth, and service; but with all your treasures do not forget God. Have His temple within the postern gate of your soul.

In that same Bay I saw another Island, bleak, bare, cold, deathlike, with prison walls of Alcatraz upon it, and watchmen with guns walk its windswept ramparts. Death lay within. A sad end to many a long journey. Those within had arrived at the Golden Gate, but their lot was the gate of death or long-term imprisonment.

What different havens they were!

They had not sought such a haven, to be sure, but they had left God out of their lives, and they had sought the wrong havens all along life's way. “He bringeth them into their desired haven.” Those who went down to the sea to do business in great waters did not find it easy sailing. And you, too, will find storms, and troubles in your journey toward your life goal, but if faithful you will find that God will bring you into your desired haven at last. Let me express it in the following words:

High above the ribboned roads
That span the Gate and Bay,
I stood and watched the moving loads
Which came and went that day.

From mountainside as I looked down
Across the hilly wilds,
I saw far out in 'Friseo Bay,
Two very different isles.

On one of them the good was brought
From every land and sod,
And on that one good men had wrought
A Temple to our God.

On the other isle were prison walls,
And guards and guns and locks;
And on that isle evil calls,
And conscience knocks and knocks.

And thus the road of life we run,
We come to the Golden Gate;
Two isles we'll find when we are done,
Nor will we have to wait.

And a man may choose on which to rest
All he gains and has—
Yon Treasure Isle of all that's best,
Or only Alcatraz!

ments in that field are remarkable. I am also convinced that we, as members of this larger family need to know each other better and feel a stronger sense of kinship. Never to be forgotten were the two “dinner on the grounds” where spread out on long tables under the trees were quantities of the most delectable and varied foods. One walked around and piled one's plate high and then stood eating and chatting and eating until one's sides bulged. I was most graciously entertained in homes and my life was greatly enriched in the whole experience. An unexpected pleasure was meeting Pattie Lee Coghill's father and mother, being in their home and the somewhat magic appearance of Pattie Lee herself.

This trip was especially happy in another way. In a pouring rain and gathering darkness, Rev. F. C. Lester and his wife, Emily Carleton Lester (formerly of Winter Park), took me to call upon two of my beloved parishoners of my Student Summer Service days. Although I had written to these friends I had not seen them for twelve years. To just drop in on them and be with them for a little while renewed our friendship and strengthened our ties. Incidentally, one of them produced a diploma from one of my Daily Vacation Bible Schools held thirteen years ago and still a cherished treasure. My enduring thanks go to the Lesters for making this possible and also to Mrs. Wisseman for inviting me to the rallies.

When we came back to Greensboro, I found word to go on to New York City for a meeting of the Women's Work Committee and the Joint Staff upon which I serve as Chairman of the Women State Presidents. For three days we worked together on the work of our women throughout the nation and on the larger work of the denomination. It was a rich experience and I feel a deep confidence in the leaders of our denomination.

KITE FLYERS.

Dear Friends:

The little picture at the head of our letter this week is our "Kite Flyers." They have had a great time during the warm breezy days of April flying their kites. They, too, had their troubles along with their joy. The wind would blow their kites up in the trees and they had a hard time getting them down. Sometimes they would get caught on the wires of the power lines and they lost them. Your Superintendent had his troubles, too. We had a fine field of wheat near the buildings and when the kites would blow over in the wheat they did not hesitate to go after them. It made no difference as to the amount of wheat they trampled down. But they got lots of joy out of flying their kites. As the days have become more balmy and not so much breeze, kite flying will be about over now.

We were delighted to have a fine rain on Friday, April 25. We were somewhat dry, and wheat and oats and clover were thirsty for rain.

The high school junior-senior banquet was held last Friday night. The writer was invited and attended. The young folks had a very enjoyable occasion. The orphanage had two honorable seniors in the class and a number of juniors. The annual junior-senior banquet held each year means a lot to these young people. When they graduate from high school it means the high spot in their educational life if they do not go on to college.

But a boy or girl who graduates from high school should make every effort to go on to college. The standards are being raised from year to year and people are looking for college graduates when they want to employ some one to handle a position. It is easy to stand at the foot of the ladder, but it takes some effort to climb to the top. But the best plums are generally in the top of the tree.

come to church, but I mean a program by that church that will be inviting and of interest to the young people in college. Something more than the usual program would be necessary. Socials, get-acquainted meetings, teas, parties, and the like will usually find a response. A service at the Sunday evening hour planned particularly in the interest of young people and along helpful lines would be particularly attractive. At any rate we have here a specialized group of young people—young people who are capable, ambitious and loyal. To interest them and make a contribution to their social, intellectual, and religious life will require thought and efficiency on the part of the local pastor and his congregation. Above all things, when these young people from the college do come, they should be greeted by the pastor and membership and made not only to feel at home but made to feel that they are needed.

We do have a large number of our young people in colleges other than our own. We do have a responsibility to these young people. It seems to me that we could work at the problem along the lines above indicated. If we can interest them in our own institution, that would be good. If we cannot, then through our local churches in these college towns we should do our best to administer to them. The Board of Christian Education stands ready to cooperate, and I am sure that the Mission Board would likewise lend every possible assistance.

When Peter and John started back to Jerusalem they caught the inspiration of Philip's example. They preached the gospel to many villages of the Samaritans. Thus did the gospel, beginning first at Jerusalem, spreading into Judea, and now going into Samaria, start that long process which eventually is carrying it to the uttermost parts of the world.

church employed Miss Eunice Willis for full time work as a promotional worker, whose business and work will be to assist and help carry on the various enterprises of the church as well as to help find new avenues through which the church may work. We have a total membership now of 1,100, and to keep a church active we must keep it busy. Our broadcast of one hour per week has proven a great blessing for the past five years and though this work is supported by free will offering, every bill has been paid when due.

I would like to mention in brief our greatest work. Three years ago this past December, we opened a nice ten-room home on a thirty-five acre farm seven miles north of Danville on Route 29. Since the opening of Faith Home we have been able to place about seventy-five children. We are today caring for eighteen children and have built a new cottage that will care for ten, and we are hoping by fall to be able to open this to dependent children. Our home is run without any guarantee of any income from any source other than the church here. We are glad to report, however, that we are able to pay cash for every thing, and today have a small reserve in the treasure. It has been remarkable how God has supplied our needs. We have never closed our doors to a worthy child and have children now from three states. We so often find ourselves at the place where we do not know where the next money is coming from, but in due time God sends it. I would like to relate just one experience: In the early part of the year we began praying that God would give us money to operate our farm on this year. We needed $365.00. We started praying on Sunday morning and on the following Saturday I was called into a businessman's office and he said, "Bro. Sorrell, my wife and I were very definitely led of the Lord last night to make a contribution to your work of $400.00." I said, "For what purpose?" He said, "For the purpose you have in your own heart." He did not know we were praying for this amount, and God not only gave the $365.00 but added some for the extras that we would need. We are producing all our meat, eggs, chickens and plenty of milk and butter for the family of eighteen children and five workers. The prospect for a fine crop on the farm is good and we are praising God for His blessings.

MINISTERIAL PRONUNCIATION

By DR. DOUGLAS HORTON.

"An archiepiscopal enquiry into the status of Lilliputian valiance aerated not only a clandestine indiscretion but also the poignant exigencies often inherent in chastisement"

This was the sentence the irate young laywoman slapped down on my desk, all neatly typed out. I attempted in gingerly fashion to read it aloud.

"I've been listening," she interrupted, "to a number of different ministers preach lately—good ones, too—and some of them seem to be unable to get through a sermon without murdering the pronunciation of at least one word. Two or three of them are artists in massacre."

"But it was surely not a minister in his right mind who attempted such a sentence as this."

"Oh, that's just a lot of words I have recently heard mispronounced, strung together at random. It's the corpses left from half a dozen sermons. For 'archiepiscopal,' for instance they will say 'artchi'."

"But you say 'archbishop,' don't you? And as for 'enquiry' and 'status'—why can't a free man pronounce those the way he likes?"

"Listen," said my young friend, rapidly rising to 212 degrees Fahrenheit. "Do you or do you not believe there is a right way and a wrong way to do things?"

Prudence counseling the deaf ear, I went on, "And if 'Lilliput,' why not 'Lilliputtian'? 'Valiance'—that's surely a rare one."

"Yes, but they keep saying 'vayliant'—and 'ayree-ated' with the 'e' in the wrong place, and 'clan-destine' with the accent on the first syllable. I suppose you'll say that because 'indiscreet' is 'indiscreet,' 'indiscretion' should be 'indiscretion'."

"That would certainly be logical," I replied. "But joking aside, isn't pronunciation too secondary a matter to warrant all the feeling you are working up about it?" I asked her if she did not think the Gospel could be preached except in perfect English. Dwight L. Moody regularly said "He don't" and gave words pronunciations that could have caused Noah Webster three turns and a wiggle in his grave—but he communicated his meaning to his hearers, and that would seem to be the main matter. My own idea is that a minister's fear of making mistakes in words is likely to rob him of the abandon which characterizes great preaching and that it is better for him, if it is necessary for him to make any mistakes, to make them cavalierly, bending his energies to the content of his message. There is something to be said for the man who serves notice on pronunciation to get out of his way when he begins to preach the Gospel.

"But," said my friend, "it isn't a case of either-or, is it? Why can't a man give his first attention to the content of his sermon but good secondary attention to improving his pronunciation? I don't believe I could have listened to St. Paul himself, admirable as his content must have been, if he had spoken of 'the poigg-nant exijj-encies of-ten (with the t sounded) in-hairnt in chast-eye-zment'."

St. Paul, fortunately, however, did not have to add to his other distresses the pronunciation of the English language.

MOTHER'S DAY--1941

“Blessed Art Thou Among Women”

The Mother's Song

By WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Lord who ordainest for mankind
Benignant toils and tender cares,
We thank Thee for the ties that bind
The mother to the child she bears.

We thank Thee for the hopes that rise
Within her heart, as, day by day,
The dawning soul, from those young eyes,
Looks with a clearer, steadier ray.

And grateful for the blessing given
With that dear infant on her knee,
She trains the eye to look to heaven,
The voice to lisp a prayer to Thee.

Such thanks the blessed Mary gave
When from her lap the Holy Child,
Sent from on high to seek and save
The lost of heart, looked up and smiled.

All-Gracious! grant to those who bear
A mother's charge, the strength and light
To guide the feet that owe their care
In ways of Love and Truth and Right.

Miss Dorothy Edwards of Portsmouth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Edwards, was the May Queen at Elon.

Dr. Reuben E. Alley, editor of the Virginia Religious Herald, received the D. D. degree from the University of Richmond.

May 18 is Rural Life Sunday. A service of worship with suitable suggestions for the observance of the day may be secured from the Town and Country Department, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

There was a Memorial Service at Long's Chapel, Sunday, May 4. The morning service was held at 11:00 A.M., conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. A. Grissom. Lunch was served on the grounds at 12:30. At the afternoon service at 2:00 P. M., Rev. H. A. Matthews, a friend of the pastor, delivered the sermon.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" MEMORIAL.

Dr. J. H. Lightbourne reports that only two contributions of $1.00 each have been received for THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the D. W. Kerr Memorial. At least seventy-five such gifts are needed immediately in order to complete the work on the monument and make possible its erection. Send your gift now, either to Mr. Vitus R. Holt, or to Dr. C. W. McPherson, both of Burlington, N. C.

DEDICATION—MEMORIAL DAY.

Sunday, May 18, will be a great occasion for Belew Creek Church and community, Belew Creek, N. C. We will dedicate the house of worship that was built three years ago. Dr. William T. Scott, a former pastor, will preach the dedicatory sermon.

The annual memorial service will be held in the afternoon. Mrs. O. H. Paris, a former member, will be in charge. All former pastors are invited to be present on this day and will be expected to have part in the program.

The memorial service will be especially for all former members and pastors who have died since the church was organized in 1893. All charter members who are present will receive appropriate recognition.

G. H. VEAZEY,
Pastor.

GRAHAM PROVIDENCE MEMORIAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Since accepting the pastorate of Graham Providence Memorial Christian Church in early January, Rev. W. A. Grissom has proven to be not only an outstanding minister, but also a capable organizer as well. Under his supervision the various committees are working efficiently.

The goal of THE CHRISTIAN SUN committee is to have the paper a weekly visitor in each home of the church membership. Already they have made great progress toward this objective.

Reverend Grissom is ably assisted by Mrs. Grissom, who is a talented musician. Untiring have been the efforts of both in all phases of the church work.

On Easter Sunday morning, the combined choirs of Haw River, Long's Chapel and Providence Memorial Churches gave an inspiring rendition of the Easter Cantata, "Christ the Victor," by Charles Francis Lane.

Spring is the time of awakening of spiritual interest that will not be confined to our church alone, but will spread through the entire community.

NEW LEBANON (N. C.).

Since our last church news to THE CHRISTIAN SUN many things have happened. The past year we have belonged to a group of churches, with our pastor, Rev. F. E. Church and his wife, living in our community. This is a privilege we had never before in the history of our church enjoyed. Mere words count for little when we endeavor to estimate or express to you what benefits we have received.

As a pastor, he and his wife endeared themselves to our entire membership by their great faith in God and deep spirituality. It is so good to have our pastor with us for our mid-week prayer meetings. These meetings have been an inspiration to all who have been privileged to attend.

Our Sunday school is progressing under the leadership of our superintendent, J. I. Sharp. We are glad to report a growing Sunday school for the past year.

The Missionary Society has been doing some fine work with Mrs. R. E.

COLLEGE OFFERINGS.

I would like to plead the causes of our church in the Southern Convention. The individual who proclaims his interest in one particular phase of his church's program without due or even lesser regard for the other interests has missed the inspiration and power of the whole church. We have different interests, and every interest is not the same, but all are essential to the efficiency and power of the church. I would fall far short of my ideals of a Christian if I were less interested in any other interest of the church because of my personal responsibilities in connection with the college. I know that if the college is to serve as it should, the other interests of the church must be properly supported. To support the college abundantly and fail to support the other interests of the church would be a serious mistake. The same is true with every other interest of the church. You cannot lift the three corners of a square building and fail to lift the fourth without injury to all. The same thing is true with our church. It is forward together or it is hard sledding for us all. In fairness and in interest of our whole church, Elon College presents its appeal for a fair and legitimate share of the benevolent funds of the church. It is interesting to note the contributions that are being made for the different causes.

We have already passed through the college period. We did our best. Contributions continue to come in for which we are grateful. If your church or Sunday school has not sent a contribution this year, won't you please do so? We greatly need your help during the spring and summer months.

Georgia and Florida News

By REV. W. T. SCOTT, D. D., Associate Editor.

Union Hill has started "The Lord's Acre Plan" and the people are enthusiastic about it. It is hoped that this will provide necessary funds for the work of the church.

Central Church, Atlanta.—Miss Pattie Lee Coghil addressed the Ladies' Guild at their April meeting. Holy Week was observed at the church with sermon on Palm Sunday, the cantata "Olivet to Calvary" presented on Monday night and a Good Friday service sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Circle. Rev. Philip M. Widenhouse is the pastor.

* * *

Sardis Church.—This March, the minister spent three days with the Sardis people, cutting down some pine trees in preparation of making some much needed pews. Our church members and friends will donate the trees, cut them down, saw them into lumber, and make the benches. The nails and varnish have already been promised. Thus the work will be done for the minimum of money. Just recently the county road man leveled off the churchyard and put on it sod with Bermuda grass. Soon we will have a nice lawn in front of the churches. The ladies are going to look after the flowers and shrubs around the church house.

* * *

LaGrange, "United."—The Women's Society held a "Sacrificial Service" during Holy Week. The meeting was held in a special arranged classroom with lighted candles and cross. The minister gave a meditation and closed with a communion service. Easter morning, twenty-five young people went to Callaway Memorial Tower for sunrise services and communion. After this they came back to the church for breakfast. At the regular morning service a combined senior and junior choir sang Easter songs. A total of four young people have become members of the church on confession of faith during the last month. An average of seventeen young people have attended the recreational programs held each week during the past month, and the minister, Rev. David W. Shepherd, is quite enthusiastic about this new program as a means of fellowship and provided wholesome recreation under the guidance of the church.

Vanderbilt Pastor's School.—Those attending the Pastor's School at Vanderbilt School of Religion, April 21-25 were: Rev. C. Lisle Percy, Rev. Philip M. Widenhouse, Rev. Malcolm Vernon White, Rev. David W. Shepherd, Rev. W. Carl Parker, Rev. Donald West, Rev. R. H. Booth, Rev. S. M. Penn and Chaplain Milford of Ft. Benning. Others were prevented from attending because of illness.

* * *

Palm City.—A special series of "Seven Sunday Evenings" was sponsored by the Pilgrim Fellowship beginning March 2 and ending April 20. The attendance and interest was gratifying. We regret to announce that the illness of Mrs. C. S. Laidman will make it necessary for Dr. Laidman to relinquish his work at this church. They have endeared themselves to the community and church.

* * *

New Port Richey.—Since the last issue was published the church has raised $1,200.00 to make possible the purchase of their parsonage. Our heartiest congratulations on this splendid achievement.

With the Florida Laymen.—With two laymen's meetings in March as background—one at Daytona Beach and the other at Lake Worth—the twenty-four laymen gathered at the Laymen's Luncheon on April 16, in connection with the annual state conference at Winter Park, voted to go ahead and form a Florida Congregational Christian Laymen's Fellowship. The hope being that in every church in the state some kind of a laymen's organization would result and they in turn be affiliated with the state organization. Temporary officers were chosen as follows: President, Robert G. Williams, Lake Worth; Vice-President, Walter A. Boutwell, Lake Worth; Secretary-Treasurer, H. R. Anderson, Coral Gables; Executive Committee: J. W. Cole, Ft. Myers; George Chindahl, Winter Park; F. W. Shockley, Avon Park. We already have some nineteen "key men" in the state. A "key man" is the one who is the connecting link between his church and the state organization. Secretary Anderson will do all in his power to see to it that we have a "key man" in every church in the state, as soon as possible. The plan now stands to have an executive committee meeting early in the fall to map out plans for a state-wide gathering of laymen, probably in November. At the later gathering it is hoped a permanent organization will be formed and a constitution and by-laws adopted. We need the help of every minister in the state. One of the primary aims of the fellowship is to assist the minister. A live fellowship in every church will mean much to the church in every way.

* * *

Macedonia Parish Meeting.—Palm Sunday was a great day for the churches of Macedonia Parish, meeting for the semi-annual gathering at Sardis Church. The churches of this parish consist of Sardis, Macedonia, Liberty and Duncan's Creek. Rev. Malcolm Vernon White is the popular pastor. Each church was represented for the meeting which began with Sunday school. The morning sermon was delivered by Chaplain Marvin D. Brown, Congregational minister located at Ft. Benning. Following lunch on the ground at noon, the parish business meeting was held in the afternoon, Albert Strickland, vice-president, presiding. All of the churches have paid their installments on the parsonage. It was voted to recommend to the churches that each pay a share in the dues of the pastor's annuity. Interesting reports were given by representatives of each church, and Rev. Philip M. Widenhouse of Central Church, Atlanta, gave a closing message.

* * *

Demorest.—The Union Congregational Church of Demorest has, throughout its history, been very closely associated with the work of Piedmont College, both in the service which is rendered to the college and by the college's helping to make possible a living salary for the ministers. At the present time, Rev. C. Lisle Percy, in addition to his work as pastor of the church, is teaching at the college. One of the outstanding contributions of the church has been the enlisting and training of college students in Sunday school and young people's work. Young men studying for the ministry at the college have been given opportunities to conduct services in the church. Union Church, through its pastor and members, is active in all community projects. At the present time the chairman of the board of deacons is conducting a Bible Class in the Oddfellow's Hall for young men. The pastor is president of the Civic Club and has a live group of boy scouts. The Sunday school rooms are being used as a nursery school during the week.

MOTHER'S DAY OPPORTUNITIES.

Another annual opportunity to make amends or atonement for protracted neglect of our mothers is at hand. Those unwritten letters, those indefinitely postponed visits, those neglected birthdays and anniversaries rise up to condemn us. Sunday is her day. Plans should be made in utter deference to her convenience and happiness. This is the one day in the year in which mother sits enthroned, lifted for a while above the humdrum plane in which she has willingly submerged herself. Letters, flowers, gifts, families and friends unite in high honor to the queen of this occasion.

Ministers may find an opportunity to enter a timely protest against the enemies of motherhood: ignorance, tenancy and slum conditions, superficial and artificial standards of life, the accelerated tempo of modern life caused by industry and commercialized pleasure, the threatened monopoly of all spare time by secular activities, and a world in which war is necessary or possible. Mothers must become aware of the dangers that threaten their welfare even as they are, by nature, sensitive to the dangers that threaten their children.

Other sermons may emphasize the need for a more intelligent and wholesome motherhood. Parent education may receive appropriate emphasis and aids to child-training may be made available. New and more daring endeavors may also be charted.

Ingenuity will reveal many ways of making this day significant. The home and the church, which have been so richly blessed by the presence and labors of this great sisterhood, may rise to the occasion and demonstrate in fitting ways their gratitude for God's great gift to the world. In addition to every tangible evidence of devotion and appreciation, the prayer so strikingly expressed by Dr. Henry Van Dyke may be included:

"I cannot pay my debt
For all the love she has given;
But Thou, love's Lord
Wilt not forget
Her due reward—
Bless her in earth and heaven."

"BEHIND GOD'S BACK."

This arresting title appears on a recently published book about Africa by Negley Farson. Mr. Farson gives a running account of his trip through British South Africa, the Belgian Congo and French West Africa. His narrative pictures the beauty and horror, superstition and enlightenment, abundance and poverty, human nature at its worst and best and in all stages of evolution from the child-like pigmy to the handsome giant, all existing in Africa. This is the Africa of Livingstone, Stanley, Schweitzer, McDowell, Childs, and Christoferson. If Africa can be developed, civilized and Christianized, any other part of the earth can.

Just now when Dakar, in French West Africa, has become a likely base for Axis operations, the eventuality of which would drastically threaten the claims of the Monroe Doctrine, an intimate knowledge of the geographic importance of Africa in the present conflict is greatly magnified.

The extent of Nazi activity and penetration in Africa is indicated by Mr. Farson. Their thoroughness in preparation and execution is evident. Their efficiency often stands in stark contrast to the clumsy Colonial policies of the British. And in view of prolonged British exploitation there is naturally widespread pro-Nazi sentiment. There is now no time for national atonement on the part of imperialistic countries. Nations can only look at their records and confess, "What I have written I have written."

Past mistakes, let us hope, may not be grossly repeated in whatever new order is to follow. Flagrant exploitation of helpless manpower and natural resources is not, of course, "behind God's back." No more reprehensible, however, is this "black" record than that of many white people in America who habitually invest in "nigger" property because there is more profit in it. Man's inhumanity to man is all of a piece in the eyes of God, regardless of location.

The point of view in this book has some value for mission study in that it is not specifically, and in some instances not remotely, religious. There is some danger in a purely religious viewpoint. One may have difficulty in adequately substantiating a position or verifying a truth when religious sources alone have been consulted. Christians can give an adequate "reason for the faith that is in them" only when it has been placed in secular as well as in religious scales.

SPIRITUAL INERTIA.

One of our fine Virginia laymen, speaking before a group of Sunday school officers and teachers, diagnosed our churches as suffering from "spiritual inertia." This layman reminded his hearers that while we often criticize other denominations for their extreme persistence in evangelism and their questionable tactics in general promotion, our spiritual lethargy has won for us no victory. The ability to criticize others is poor compensation for failure on our own part. While others may have been "cumbered with much serving," we have been slow to choose and exemplify the "better part" of utter fidelity to Christ.

Our spiritual inertia is pathetically reflected in a dwindling Sunday school attendance, sparsely attended preaching services, neglect in personal visitation, and consequent poverty in giving and lack of growth in membership. The approaching season of Pentecost should be a time of spiritual renewal and demonstrated vitality of our Christian faith. This is the ultimate and only solution for the ills that beset the church.

WHAT MAKES A NATION GREAT?

(TEXT—PROVERBS 14: 34.)

Believers in and devotees of peace will not lose heart nor faith because of the present war hysteria. "It is always darkest just before the dawn." The only thing that makes life worth living is the fact that there are some things worth dying for, and peace is one of those things. Man's extremity is God's opportunity. Every righteous cause has first had to experience defeat, before it gained its victory.

While the fate of so many nations today hangs in the balance, it is well that we Americans consider—"What Makes a Nation Great?" There are those who would say that a big population makes a nation great. India has a population many times larger than that of the United States, but no one would call India a great nation. China has a population many times larger than the United States. One-fourth of all the people in the world live in China. But no one would ascribe greatness to China. Switzerland is one of the smallest countries in the world—has one of the smallest populations, yet every student of history and of contemporary life would rank Switzerland as a great nation. There are those who would say that a nation which is rich in natural resources is great because of its great possibilities for development. Most of the countries of South America are fabulously rich in natural resources, but there is not a single country in all South America that is worthy of being called a great country. The United States is rich in natural resources, but our natural resources do not make our nation great. A nation may become great by rightly using its natural resources—but the right use of natural resources depends upon the nation having the right kind of citizens—not only those who lead in government, but those who serve on farm, in factory, in mine, in store, in office, in the home, or wherever men and women toil. Not material advantage, but moral and spiritual attainment make a nation great.

There are those who would say that a high rate of literacy makes a nation great—that the larger the percentage of a nation's population that are able to read and write—the greater will the nation be. All are agreed that intelligence may or may not be an aid to greatness for the individual and for the nation. It all depends upon how the intelligence is used. Education makes a people either an asset or a liability to society, according as it is used in the right or the wrong way. The more a person knows who is religiously and socially inclined, the greater blessing will he be to society. But the more a person knows who is selfishly and criminally inclined, the greater menace will he be to society. It is the personal equation that determines whether or not the knowledge possessed by the citizens of a nation contributes to the nation's greatness. Japan is rated as having the highest rate of literacy—the largest percentage of its people being able to read and write—of any other nation in the world. But no one could truthfully call Japan a great nation. No great nation would stoop to Japan's treachery in China.

Then there are those who would say that invincible military strength makes a nation great—that a big, well-disciplined army, and a formidable navy will bring greatness to a nation. We will readily concede that a great nation may have a big army and a big navy, not from choice, but from force of circumstances. However, no thoughtful person would contend that a big navy or a huge army in themselves have anything to do with making a nation great.

Today when war psychology is sweeping everything into its path of fury, it is well that we Americans as individuals and as a nation have a definite and constructive philosophy on national greatness. Honesty and integrity in all international diplomacy make a nation great. Even our own America has been weighed in the balances and been found wanting in that virtue at times. Sobriety and industry in the daily life of the common people make a nation great. Moral and religious idealism and practice among the high and the low, the rich and the poor, the learned and the unlearned make a nation great. Good sportsmanship as shown by people when, as losers or winners in an election, they can shake hands for a better tomorrow, helps to make a nation great. The ability of the citizens of a nation to stand up under war propaganda, and hold to their ideals of peace, indicates a nation's greatness, and will help to preserve that greatness.

The only nations that can afford to go crazy in preparing for war are the bankrupt nations. But a nation goes bankrupt morally and spiritually before even material bankruptcy takes place. It is after a nation suffers moral and spiritual bankruptcy that it consents to plunge itself or other nations into war.

Let America tell the world that there is only one way to end war for all time, and that is the way of the Cross. Jesus Christ could stop this war and all wars in less time than any man can calculate, if the nations would accept his ideals for individuals and for nations—the ideals of love toward humanity and loyalty toward God.

The day will come, please, God, may that day be nearer than we think, when instead of each nation spending billions for defense that should be spent for helping the poor and the handicapped, an International Police Force will give each nation its protection against dangers by air, by land or by sea. Building for peace and not for war makes a nation great. The Bible tells us what makes a nation great: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; righteousness makes a nation great."

DR. PAUL NEFF GARBER BECOMES DEAN OF DUKE UNIVERSITY DIVINITY SCHOOL.

President Robert L. Flowers of Duke University today announced the election by the board of trustees of Dr. Paul Neff Garber as dean of the University Divinity School. Dr. Garber succeeds Dean Elbert Russell, who has asked the trustees to release him from his administrative duties in order that he might give more time to teaching, preaching, and research.

It was also announced by President Flowers that the name of the School of Religion has been changed to that of the Divinity School.

Dr. Garber has been connected with the Duke School of Religion since its organization in 1926, serving as Professor of Church History and as registrar. He is a native of Virginia, and his academic training was secured at Bridgewater College, Crozer Theological Seminary and the University of Pennsylvania. He was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy by the University of Pennsylvania in 1923. After serving for one year as instructor at Brown University, in

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The most important organization in our churches is the Sunday school. Many organizations of a competitive nature have come and gone during its history. For the sake of change some churches have substituted other names such as the "Bible School," "Religious Education" and "School of Religion." The name is not the important part of its purpose, but its mission and its objectives are fundamental and essential to the growth and culture of any denomination. Any church which neglects the education and training of its constituency is doomed and destined to be defeated.

Because of its importance the forthcoming sessions of Sunday school conventions to be held in Virginia and North Carolina should mean much to the work of the Sunday schools. If it is granted that this organization has made a valuable contribution to our churches, and if it is further conceded that there is a need for its continuance, it seems reasonable to insist that greater emphasis shall be placed upon every department of its work. It must be admitted that no comprehensive program can be adequately developed in a one-day session of any organization. When consideration should be given to each department the program committee faces a difficult task.

For several years the Board of Religious Education and the committees on Sunday schools in the various conventions have taken it for granted that the Elon Summer School of Religious Education gives sufficient emphasis to the training of future teachers and leaders. This subject has been practically eliminated from our Convention sessions for several years. The ideal solution of this problem would be reached if every Sunday school could send all its teachers and future leaders to the Elon Summer School. That is not feasible, for they could not find accommodations at the college, and many could not attend for other reasons.

However, it does seem possible to select some point for special emphasis for each session of the Sunday school conventions. Leadership training, teaching the lesson, administration, enlistment of young people, increasing the membership of the Sunday school, and development of stewardship of life and property are among some topics which might be considered. Others may be added. A Sunday school should not limit its interest to what it has done in the past. Real leadership should turn its face to the future, survey the field and mobilize available resources for greater progress. A fisherman has little interest in the fish he has caught (unless they are very large) but he is seeking for the fish he may catch. Fishing is more interesting than dead fish. "I will make you fishers of men," said Jesus. Raising vegetables in a garden, if it is your garden, is much more interesting than buying canned vegetables in a grocery store. Churches take on new interest and new life when they enlist in a progressive program of growth and development. The Sunday school has great potential power and it is urgent that the present opportunity may be wisely used.

As a pastor there is an abiding conviction that our Sunday schools, in many churches, could double their membership and attendance within the next two years. Others could increase their enrollment fifty per cent; some twenty-five per cent and all could make some increase. Of course there are some who might favor revising the roll downwards when the per capita enrollment fee is to be paid to the convention. Such things do come to pass in some parts of the world—"up North" or "out West." But these are the exception. Let us hope that the Sunday school conventions this year will mark any advance in our work.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT— FIFTY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY.

The college is now in the last weeks of its 1940-41 session. This has been our best year in the last nine years from every standpoint. Our enrollment is larger, the spirit on the campus is better, and but for the disturbing fact of the war, our prospects for another year would be even brighter. Advanced enrollment for next year is slightly ahead of last year at this writing. The faculty has done a very good piece of work. From every standpoint the school is in a wholesome condition.

Our commencement program begins with an operetta written and conducted by Prof. and Mrs. Julian Gardiner of the Music Department, Saturday evening, May 24, at eight o'clock. This should be a very attractive feature.

The baccalaureate service will be Sunday at 11:30, not 11:00 A. M. Dr. Albert Buckner Coe, Pastor of the First Congregational Church of Oak Park, Ill., will be the speaker. Dr. Coe is a native North Carolinian by birth, is chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Council, and one of the more successful ministers of today.

Sunday afternoon at 4:30, the Music Department will present advanced students in a recital, instrumental and voice.

Sunday evening at 8:30, the Elon Festival Chorus, under the direction of Stuart Pratt, head of the Music Department, will present its annual commencement oratorio. This year they are giving the Verdi "Requiem."

The class of 1941 will give its class day exercises Monday at 10:00 A. M. At 11:00 o'clock Monday, instead of the Alumni Address dealing specifically with the contributions of the alumni to the college as heretofore, we will have the unveiling of portraits of the former presidents of the college, not including the founder and first president, Dr. Wm. S. Long, whose portrait is already at the college. The Suffolk Church is presenting to the college the portrait of Dr. W. W. Staley, second president of the college. Dr. John G. Truitt, present pastor of the Suffolk Church, will make the presentation speech. Dr. and Mrs. Frederick W. VanBuskirk, son-in-law and daughter of Dr. L. E. Moffitt, are presenting the college with Dr. Moffitt's portrait. The presentation speech is to be made by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, member and secretary of the Board of Trustees. Dr. Moffitt succeeded Dr. Staley as president. Some of the friends of Dr. W. A. Harper, fourth president of the college, are presenting the college with Dr. Harper's portrait. The presentation speech will be made by the Hon. D. R. Fonville. It is very considerate on the part of these friends to so memorialize the former presidents of Elon College. The college appreciates this gesture of interest and helpfulness.

The usual picnic luncheon will be given on the campus at 12:00 o'clock to which all alumni are invited. The alumni business meeting will be held Monday at 2:00 P. M. A large attendance is desired. At this meeting present and future policies of the association must be determined.

The annual alumni banquet will be held Monday at 7:30 P. M. The alumni address by Rev. J. Clyde Auman will be delivered this year as a part of the banquet program. This

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

We are happy to have another story from Mrs. June Joy House. I know that you are going to enjoy reading it. Finally, I have gotten another crossword puzzle worked out. How many of you can work it without any help from your parents?

Isn't the Children's Day program, which Mr. Lester sent out, splendid? If you haven't heard about it, you will. This one is much too fine for your minister to put into a wastepaper basket. I know that you are going to have lots of fun working it up. I believe that it will be one of the best Children's Day services you have ever had at your church.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

Dear Friends:

Mrs. Todd wrote you all about Oliver's christening. I want to tell you about a christening that I attended Sunday. Two little Armenian babies were christened. Armenia people come from the Near East. Many of them lived in Turkey and they have not been liked by all peoples because they were thrifty and loving and not greedy. I never knew any of them until I came to live in Richmond. George Eukuzian is Concertmeister in our Sunday school orchestra—that means he can play the violin best of all the others and direct the orchestra if the director needs him to. It was his little daughter, Dianna Gae, and his little nephew, Tony Johnson, who were christened.

The ceremony was at St. Paul's Church, and the Armenian Archbishop from New York came to hold the service. I wish you could have seen him. He was a very old man with snowy white head and beard. He wore sandals on his feet and a great white robe embroidered in purple and gold, which are beautiful colors. He wore lovely gold chains and crosses around his neck and on his head the mitre, which is the symbol of his high place in the church. In his hand he carried a shepherd's crook which is a bishop's symbol, too. He spoke some of the words and sang some others. He carried a brass box full of sweet smelling incense, some of the time. Another man helped him in the service. He had on green and gold robes, but his head was bare. A choir sang and chanted lovely songs and words. It was beautiful and very mysterious for we could not understand the Armenian language.

How did the babies like it? They were very excited because they had never seen so many people and things before. They were all dressed up in very fine clothes, but their mothers had to undress them for they were dipped into the baptismal fonts up to their necks. The Bishop named them and they were handed back to their mothers. They cried because it was all so strange.

I told you this service was at St. Paul's. That is a very old Episcopal Church. Long ago, Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee, great Southern men, came to this church to worship. The Armenians hold their services there because it is more nearly like their church in their old homes abroad. The Bishop comes from time to time to lead their services.

McCollum as president. Her untiring efforts and deep love for the work of her Heavenly Master have added enthusiasm and spirit to the hearts of the members, and greater interest has been created.

The World Day of Prayer was observed with the entire church. The pastor and many others took an active part. A wonderful fellowship was enjoyed. Every one present seemed to realize more than ever before those wonderful words of our Master when He said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." Every member present was also filled with a sincere desire to be a real worker in the vineyard of our Lord.

Pray for us that our church may continue to grow and that its pastor and members may be faithfully ambassadors for Christ.

is a departure from former customs but many think that it will be preferable.

Tuesday is graduation day. The largest class in the history of the college will graduate, numbering about eighty-six. The Hon. James Melville Broughton, Governor of North Carolina, will deliver the address.

In presenting to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN a resume of our commencement exercises, we wish to extend a most earnest and cordial invitation to all to attend these exercises. We want you to visit the college and see as best you can what is taking place here. Should you wish the college administration to arrange for overnight accommodations, will you please write me. We shall be very happy to do everything we can to induce you to come to the college and make your stay pleasant for you.

THE WOMAN'S BOARD.

The Woman's Board and Auxiliaries gave over half of the Mission Board's receipts last year. If the Mission Board is going to make any substantial gain this year it is necessary to have some gain from the women, young people and children's organizations. We are not soliciting these local organizations for any increase, or endeavoring to interfere with any proposed Memorial to Dr. J. O. Atkinson by the women, but as this is the year for an increase in offerings for missions, we feel the Woman's Board and Auxiliaries will increase their total receipts several hundred dollars.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Easter offerings for missions having been taken, the next step in our program is to increase Sunday school offerings for missions for year ending August 31, 1941, over previous year, in honor of Dr. Atkinson. If there was one thing above another that gladdened the heart of Dr. Atkinson it was to see another Sunday school join the army of those that take regular monthly offerings for missions, or Sunday schools increase their regular offerings.

Besides those Sunday schools, which have sent special offerings for the Honor Fund, I am delighted to know that Dendron Sunday school is going to join in the Honor Fund to Dr. Atkinson, which can be done in two ways:

1. Add up your offerings from September 1, 1939 to September 1, 1940 and increase your offerings for the period from September 1, 1940, to September 1, 1941, and the increase will be included in the Honor Fund.

2. Have a special offering for the Honor Fund, letting every class and member participate. Let children bring pennies, nickels and dimes. The children of the Christian Church, North, practically began the mission work of the church by funds raised by the children who were easily taught missions by the late Dr. J. P. Watson and his associates.

Wake up, pastors, teachers and parents and don't let the children spend all their pocket change on movies, chewing gum, candy and soft drinks. Present the Honor Fund and give the children an opportunity to give. This campaign is early. We must marshal every resource of the church in this effort to increase offerings to missions.

What children will be the first six to contribute one dime each to the Honor Fund?

We gratefully appreciate what the Sunday schools have always done for missions.

With your cooperation and help, we want to make a large increase in missionary giving by August 31, 1941.

Sincerely yours,
MATTIE COX PARKER,
Secretary.

WHAT THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY EXPECTS OF ITS PASTOR.

[The following was given by Miss Stella Dyer of Happy Home Christian Church at the Woman's Missionary Rally held in Burlington, N. C., recently.—F. C. L.]

There are several things that our missionary societies might expect of their pastors. Would you expect your church to grow if your pastor was only interested in the salary he was drawing, or the immediate community in which he was working? I dare say that you wouldn't; therefore, our pastors should be intensely interested in missions. The pastor should feel that the Christian Gospel is the only way out for our present world troubles. He should feel the conviction that he has a message for the whole world—nothing can limit it and nothing can stop it. It is the greatest message ever put on the lips of men. Yes, our missionary society should expect its pastor to believe in missions. This is fundamental and vital to our churches. When a church becomes too selfish to be missionary-minded that church will soon fold up and fade out of existence. The preacher must also be a man of more than ordinary good character. Preaching is the truth plus personality, and other things being equal the better the man the better the preaching. The truth is always the same. The difference in effectiveness lies in the men proclaiming it. Ordinarily the sanction and power of God is with the sermon prepared and preached by men living in daily communion with God. If our pastors will live in daily communion with God they will be missionary-minded and impress the great need upon their people, for Jesus was missionary-minded and they will follow his example.

The missionary society expects its pastor to preach some sermons on missions and to emphasize it throughout the year in his messages. His sermons should sound convincing enough that they might win his hearers to a favorable response. Our pastors should ever hold the missionary text before their people and let them feel their tremendous responsibility. In this we should attempt to make the church a missionary church and a living unit within the whole world of Christian fellowship. But we should also remember that the flowers of Christian graces grow only under the shade of the cross and the root of it all is humility.

It seems that this is one place that our pastors shift responsibility. We realize that our pastors are busy men but they should be the guiding staff in our missionary societies. They should attend its rallies and conferences, and support it with all kinds of publicity. They should not simply say something about it, but should actually take part in it, urge the people to come and take part in its programs. They should give an opportunity for public programs by the society and let the people really know what is being done in your society. However, there are too many religious meetings that are sadder than funerals. They are a hindrance to the cause rather than a help and this is where our pastors can really let their light shine for the Lord Jesus.

Our missionary society also expects our pastor to know the field of missions. He should be able to tell the history of the mission board of his church. He should know all the fields of missionary endeavors of his denomination. He should be acquainted with the missionary literature and the books and magazines.

The society expects the pastor to be on the outlook for missionary speakers, bringing missionaries to the church for messages of interest about their work. There are a number of missionary secretaries that might be secured during the year who will have the missionary interest at heart and will endeavor to lay it upon the hearts of the people present.

The society expects the pastor to be on the lookout for prospective missionary workers. We are in need of missionaries and we should be trying to discover new talent. We need youth as missionaries today. We need young preachers, young doctors, teachers and nurses. Perhaps our pastors can help discover this talent in their own congregations.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if you could send someone from your church to lift up the banner of our Lord Jesus to a dying, war-torn world?

I WANT TO GO.

If a group of Southern Convention women are gathered together, and there is a lively conversation in progress, can you imagine what is the topic just now?

Well, I can! The Elon School of Missions in June, 1940, and the coming Elon School of Missions, June, 1941.

Rarely has a project met with such universal enthusiasm and approval. The first session was a remarkable success; and it is evident that it is an answer to a desire and need on the part of our women for the inspiration of fellowship in mission instruction, in Bible study, in worship and in recreation.

Details of administration can always be improved because we learn from experience; but there is just one very vital way, in my opinion, in which our School of Missions can be improved this year. More of us can go. It is difficult to imagine a more able and challenging faculty than last year's, a more cordial host than Elon, or a more eager and friendly group of "students."

As I look back in remembrance of the many happy privileges of the 1940 school, and look forward in anticipation to our school this year, I know that I want to go!

MARGARET B. LIGHTBOURNE.

TO THE WOMEN OF OUR CHURCH.

The School of Missions at Elon College last year was the most interesting and inspiring school I have attended. I have been to other Schools of Missions but this was our own and how I do appreciate our own women. I knew it was a forward step in our woman's work. The Bible study, mission study and inspirational addresses made impressions that will last. There were seed sown that will bring forth an abundant harvest. The fellowship of "kindred spirits" made us love each other better and appreciate each other more.

I am looking forward to June 16-20, for I know we are going to have another great school of missions.

Don't miss it!

A WORTHWHILE BOOK FOR YOUR LIBRARY.

A recent publication by John Barnes Pratt is just what many pastors have been waiting for to give them the background of some of the most meritorious modern hymns.

The title of the book is "Present Day Hymns and Why They Were Written." It is the first book to deal with the origin of the modern hymns which appear in the leading hymnals of recent publication, giving the background of the hymns written by twenty-eight prominent authors such as Harry Emerson Fosdick, John Haynes Holmes, William Parson Merrill, Frank Mason North, Henry Hallam Tweedy, Grace Noll Crowell, etc., etc.

The book is the reward of most careful research and painstaking effort. Much of the data was received by the author through personal contacts with the writers, thus giving a personal touch and greatly added value to the contents of the book. The author is indeed to be congratulated on the unusually worthwhile piece of hymnology, and religious workers are indeed fortunate in having such a book available. A. S. Barnes and Company of New York City are the publishers, and the book can be procured from any religious book store.

JUNIOR HIGH CAMP PLANNED.

A week of vital experiences in Christian living is in store for the young people of junior high school age who will take advantage of the opportunity of attending the Junior High Camp, June 9 through 14. With the continuing growth of Elon Summer School during the past few years, and especially with the wide differences in ages, another conference has been needed. The Junior High Camp which is being promoted by the Promotional Secretary promises to be a successful answer to this need.

The Camp will be held at Crabtree Creek Recreational Area, between Raleigh and Durham. The location is a beautiful forest spot adjoining a lovely lake.

The program will follow a procedure similar to that of the Elon Summer Conference, each day consisting of a full schedule of classes, hand-work and interest groups, study and recreation; also time for eats!

The fee for the week will be only $5.00, and it has been announced that $4.00 of this amount may be paid in food supplies—chickens, eggs, and vegetables. As the Camp will be open to only a limited number, young people between the ages of twelve and fifteen, or those in the seventh, eighth or ninth grades, should begin to register now by sending $1.00 to Rev. F. C. Lester, Promotional Secretary, Elon College, N. C.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP SPRING RALLY.

The Spring Rally of the North Carolina-Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship was held at the Shallow Ford Christian Church on Sunday afternoon, April 20. Miss Ruby Wright of Reidsville, president, presided. The Pilgrim Fellowship Statement of Purpose was read in unison.

Reports from each of the churches represented indicated that a few still have no organized young people's societies, though in some of these, plans for organization are being made. Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne, superintendent of young people of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference, gave an interesting review of Otto Nall's Move On, Youth! one of the young people's mission study books. Miss Ruth MacPherson of Elon College rendered several vocal selections.

"Summer Activities for Youth" was the subject of an address given by Rev. W. J. Andes, in which he presented helpful hints for a busy and useful summer.

Following a fellowship supper, young people of the First Church, Greensboro, conducted an impressive vesper and installation service. The following officers were installed:

Miss Evelyn Dickey, Burlington, President; Jimmy Washburn, Elon College, Vice-President; Miss Mary Walker, Brown Summit, Secretary; Herbert Barber, Shallow Ford, Treasurer; Miss Geraldine Elder, Durham, Assistant Secretary and Treasurer; Miss Dorothy Cox, Greensboro, Superintendent of Missions; Miss Dorothy Hendrix, Greensboro, Superintendent of Social Action; Miss Ruth Gunn, Happy Home, Superintendent of Personal Religious Living.

VIRGINIA STATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

The Virginia State Christian Endeavor Convention will be held at Massanetta Springs, June 18-22. The theme will be, "Christ Living in Me." Convention speakers and leaders include the following ministers and young people from our church: Miss Lowrine Halstead, Norfolk, Va.; Rev. H. G. Couneill, Jr.; Rev. Jesse H. Dollar; Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr.; Mr. C. E. Warrington, Norfolk, Va., is President. The cost is $7.25. Registrations (young people, $1.00; high school and juniors, 50c) should be sent to Miss D. Josiephine Bennington, 915 Cabell Street, Lynchburg, Va.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP ORGANIZED.

The young people of New Elam Church are taking much interest under our new pastor, Rev. E. N. Clarke. A Pilgrim Fellowship Club was organized in February and the young people are enjoying the meetings which are held monthly.

Officers elected are: Lacey Trotter, Jr., President; Jessie Hearn, Vice-President; Miss Ima Jean Goodwin, Secretary and Treasurer; Miss Vada Goodwin and Mrs. R. L. Trotter, Counselors; Miss Vada Goodwin, Reporter.

The April meeting was held at the home of Lacey Trotter, Jr. After the program a social hour was enjoyed.

VADA GOODWIN,
New Hill, N. C.

At this time (Wednesday morning) copy for Christian Endeavor notes has not been received. We are sorry for the necessary omission.

DR. PAUL NEFF GARBER.

1924 Dr. Garber became a member of the faculty of Trinity College.

Dr. Garber is the author of a number of books relating to church history, and is a recognized authority in Methodist history. Two of his works, The Legal and Historical Aspects of the Plan of Unification (1938), and The Methodists Are One People (1939), are credited with having played an important part in the successful consummation of the union of three major branches of American Methodism to form the Methodist Church in 1939. In 1937, Dr. Garber also published the biography of Bishop John C. Kilgo, who was president of Trinity College from 1894 to 1910. Other books by Dr. Garber are The Gadsden Treaty and The Romance of American Methodism.

Dr. Garber is president of the Association of Methodist Theological Schools, vice-president of the Association of Methodist Historical Societies, and secretary of the Ecumenical Methodist Council. He is a member of the Board of Publication and the Commission on the Course of Study of the Methodist Church. He is a member of the Western North Carolina Conference.

Dean Russell has been dean of the School of Religion since 1928. During Dr. Russell's deanship, seven hundred students have enrolled. These alumni are to be found in many parts of the world, serving as pastors, missionaries, teachers, chaplains and secretaries of boards of Christian education, missions and church extension. Dr. Russell will continue his relationship with the School of Religion as Dean Emeritus and Professor of Biblical Interpretation, and as one of the University Chapel preachers.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE HOME REGARDING BEVERAGE CONTROL.

LESSON VI—MAY 11, 1941.

LESSON: Deut. 6:4-7; Jer. 35:5-10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 78:1-7.

GOLDEN TEXT: Train up a child in the way he should go, and even when he is old he will not depart from it.—Prov. 22:6.

Too much emphasis can not be put upon the proper training of children. There is an old proverb, "As the twig is bent so the tree is inclined." The foundations of adult life and character are usually laid in childhood, even in young childhood. It is important, therefore, not only that children should be trained in proper habits of taking care of their bodies and in doing things in the right way, but in attitudes and ideals. It is said that the Catholics say, in essence, that if a five or seven years of its life that they will have no fears about its religious outlook or affiliations later in life. This matter of training children can not be delegated entirely to the schools. As a matter of fact the pattern of the child's life is pretty well fixed when he enters school. His physical, his intellectual, his emotional and his volitional life will be very much conditioned by the atmosphere and attitudes, as well as by the formal training, which he has received in the home.

Precept and training are important, but atmosphere and influence are perhaps more important. Children learn by imitation, by suggestion, by example. Therefore, it is important that parents not only know what they want their children to do and to become but they themselves must embody these ideals and attitudes in their own character and their own conduct.

Not every child brought up in the right way will turn out good, but the principle does hold true: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Training Children in Religion.

"The Lord our God is one God: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might." This is what might be called the great confession of faith of the Jews. It was called the Shema, which means "hear" in the Jewish service, and belongs to the daily morning and evening prayer. It may be called the creed of the Jews. It calls attention to the fact that there is but one God. This fact needs to be emphasized in our modern world. Men of all nations worship their gods, but this is simply an evidence of the fact that they are feeling their way toward the one true God. They ignorantly worship him whom we Christians know as God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The Jewish children were taught not only that God was one, or there was only one God, but they were taught that they should love Him with their heart, that is, with their affections, with all their soul, that is, with all their being, and with all their might, that is, with their physical strength. Another version emphasizes the fact that they are to love Him with all their mind, that is, there is one God, and to love Him supremely is the first law of the religious life. We are not only to love, we are to love supremely. He is to be the first in our thoughts, our affections, and our lives.

This confession of faith was to be taught diligently unto the Jewish children. "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." What Moses is trying to say is that religion must be made a permanent and vital part of the home life. Instruction should be made sound and continuous. The whole atmosphere should be conducive to high ideals and to idealism. Religion was to be an integral part of the home and of family life. It was a natural part of home life. It was to be so simple and yet so pervasive that the child would accept it as a part of normal life. The Jews were masters in the field of religious education, and for a long time the center of that religious education was in the home itself. We moderns may have our efficient church schools, and should have them, as well as week day schools of religious education, but there is no substitute for the teaching of religion in the home.

Training Children in Abstinence.

A part of our lesson is concerned with an interesting experience and an interesting experiment of Jeremiah. Foreign armies had overrun the country and had driven the people living in the country into Jerusalem. Among the refugees who had come in were some Rechabites. These people were the descendants of Jonadab, a man of high ideals and heroic mold. He had commanded his followers never to drink wine, nor to build permanent homes, or to sow seeds, or plant vineyards; in other words, they were to be Nomads, living here and there, dwelling in tents, perhaps like our modern gypsies.

Now when these Rechabites were hungry and thirsty, Jeremiah, as an object lesson to the Jews who had broken their covenant with Jehovah, offered the Rechabites wine. They refused it, saying, "We have obeyed the voice of Jonadab, the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he charged us, to drink no wine all our days . . . and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab, our father, commanded us." They remembered their covenant and kept it. They believed in total abstinence, and practiced it. Needless to say, their action created a profound impression upon the Jews who had so carelessly broken their covenant with Jehovah. There is a moral here for us moderns. If we are ever to have again a sober nation, if prohibition is ever to become effective again, it is not going to be done simply by law. We are going to have to have temperance education, we are going to have to teach total abstinence, we are going to have to have a generation which obeys an inner law of Christian idealism rather than an outer law of civic compulsion. And the place to begin is in the home. We have too many homes, so called Christian homes, in which parents drink before their children and even drink with their children. Christians need to take this matter more seriously. There is nothing in common between the liquor traffic and the Kingdom of God, and Christians ought not in any way to give any support or encouragement to the liquor traffic. One wonders how parents can expect their children and the young people in their homes to be sober and abstainers when they themselves set an example of drinking. To be sure, there will be some young people who come out of homes in which there is no drinking who will drink, but here again the general principle holds true, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

MONDAY.

YOUR HOME.

"Come home with me and refresh thyself."—I Kings 13:7.

At home there is harmony or it is not home. Thus home is the most refreshing place on earth. Who made it so? Mother. Is yours that way? We know you want it to be so, "a thing of beauty and joy forever." It takes just one thing to make it so—God. Says Cabooch: "The ideal home does not need to be a luxurious place, fitted up with all sorts of conveniences and comforts. If one looks at the houses of the wealthy . . . he can see that this is true. God is harmony and where God is there is harmony." Where He is not there is discord.

Prayer—O, our Father, Thou who established the home and breathed peace in it, we of this household, as one, pray that Thou wouldst breathe upon us here and make our home Thy home. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE MAKING OF A HOME.

"He will bring home thy seed."—Job 39:12.

Bringing home the seed—the things that make home a home—is our duty. That means putting into the home the things that make happiness and avoiding the things that make unhappy. It also means that every one of the household must do this. One person of discord can make a hell of a home. "Thus we find," says the author, "the true home is nourished only by true infinite wisdom, divine love, true friendship and human compassion.

Prayer—Dear Father of Wisdom, Love and Compassion, be with us yet and through today that we may all have the seed of harmony and love and our home may be what Thou would have it be. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HOME, A SPIRITUAL THING.

"Honor thy father and mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."—Exodus 20:12.

In the beginning God established the home. That act was that of placing mother and father there. From that time, through the ages, home has been the center of the universe. There we find honor, ideals, helpfulness, love and friendship, said Cabooch, which bind the makers of the family together. "Such a home may be a single room, or an attic, whatever it is, it is sacred.

Prayer—Dear Father, we bow before Thee for grace, truth and power. Grant unto us that spiritual quality that makes each loving and good. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE GIVER A GUEST.

"If any one listens to my voice and opens the door, I will be his guest and dine with him."—Rev. 3:20. (Good-speed interpretation.)

"Every home should be a sanctuary for God and a fountain of blessing for man. It should be full of bright cheer. By making God an abiding guest in your home, and by keeping yourself aware of His being with you, household life cannot but grow wondrously sweet." The godly mothers and fathers of the ages have made all the sweet homes that have been, now are, and evermore shall be. Let us especially honor these mothers and fathers and dedicate our own lives to making more of them in the world, first by being that sort ourselves.

Prayer—O Lord, help us. We need Thee. We must have Thee. We cannot do well without Thee. We dedicate ourselves to Thee. For mother's, father's, home's and Thy sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

IT SEEMS TO TALK TO ME.

"Remember the days of old. . . . Ask thy father and he will show thee."—Deut. 32:7.

"Remember how short my time is?"—Psalm 89:47.

The days of our youth never get away from us. There is not a day that does not find our thoughts harking back to the old home, remembering what we did there and how we did it; remembering what father and mother said to us and why they said it. Their voices are still with us. The things they said still sound in our ears; and it all seems as but yesterday.

There is a saying that is true:
There is no place like home.
Your heart will yearn, then you'll return,
It makes no difference where you roam.

It seems that you find something there
That you really can't explain.
It seems to say, "Don't go away,
We're so glad that you are back again.

I don't care where you travel, friend;
Even though you cross the foam,
You'll never find a place so kind
As the place that you call your home.

SATURDAY.

FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD.

"For we are fellow-laborers with God."—I Cor. 3:9.

As we write, we are seeing (with our mind's eye) the millions of homes (Continued on next page.)

MIXED MARRIAGES.

The difficulties involved in marriages between those of different religious faiths are numerous. This fact was strikingly brought out in a recent letter to a large daily newspaper from a young man who was in love with a young lady of a different religion.

The young man stated emphatically that, much as he loved the lady in question, he would not think of marrying outside his church. He pointed out that the girl felt strongly about her own religion, and asked if he was justified in hoping that her love for him would eventually break down her religious objections.

The girl's principal objection hinged upon a law of his church that all children of a mixed union be brought up in that faith. She did not object to the boy's right to worship as he saw fit, but did object to surrendering any children born to them to his faith without giving them at least the opportunity of deciding for themselves what religion they wished to follow. In other words, she wanted her own religion placed on an equal footing with the boy's religion.

The answer published with the letter got to the heart of the whole problem. It pointed out that the boy must respect the girl's religious principles in as much as he expected his own to be respected, and that any attempt to use her love for him as a club to turn her to his faith was contrary to the lessons of the Golden Rule.

The approach of the Roman Catholic Church to this problem is shown by the following provisions of a pre-nuptial agreement that must be signed by both parties who contract a mixed marriage in the Archdiocese of Milwaukee, Wis.

1. The parties wishing to contract marriage, propose to do so with the understanding that the marriage thus contracted is indissoluble, except by death.
2. The parties severally and mutually promise, without any reservations, tacit or expressed, that all children of either sex, born of their marriage, shall be baptized only in the Roman Catholic Church, and shall be educated only in the Roman Catholic Faith, and according to the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church, in a Catholic School wherever possible.
3. The party of the first part (non-Catholic) further promises and agrees that shall in no way interfere with the party of the second part in the free exercise of religion: that shall carry out the provisions of paragraph two of this agreement as made above, even in the event of the death of the said party of the second part (Catholic).
4. The parties hereto expressly state that they do hereby give to the Most Reverend Archbishop of Milwaukee, as the representative of the Roman Catholic Church, or his delegates or representatives, the right to enforce each and every promise herein contained in the event of the violation of the same by either party or both, and empower him to give full force and effect to the agreements herein contained.

5. These promises and covenants herein contained shall insure to and be binding on our respective heirs, next of kin, executors, administrators, and/or subsequent guardians and their successors.

The following is signed by the Catholic party alone:

I, the undersigned, a member of the Catholic Church, desiring to contract marriage with not a member of the Catholic Church, do hereby solemnly promise, without reservations, tacit or expressed, that I shall practice my Catholic religion faithfully, and that I shall do all in my power, especially by example, prayer and the frequentation of the Sacraments, to bring about the conversion of the said

I further promise that I shall lead a married life in conformity with the teaching of the Catholic Church regarding birth control, realizing fully the attitude of the Catholic Church in this regard.

I further promise that I shall marry only according to the marriage rite of the Catholic Church; that no other marriage ceremony except that before a Catholic Priest shall take place.

Today the trend is toward cooperation between all faiths, and, in accordance with this policy, the Catholic Church constantly speaks of toleration. Yet the Catholic laws relating to mixed marriages preclude any possibility of religious equality between the contracting parties. It is obvious that, in this case, the Roman Catholic interpretation of the word means toleration only on its own terms. M. B. in Supreme Council Bulletin.

NIEMOELLER DENIES CONVERSION.

Dr. Martin Niemoeller, former Reich bishop and pastor of the German Lutheran Church, who has been incarcerated in a German concentration camp since 1937, again speaks from a barbed enclosure in his own defense.

Doctor Niemoeller, who, it was rumored several weeks ago, had embraced the Catholic faith, personally requested the Confessional Synod, as well as members of his family and friends, to deny these reports. Furthermore, Doctor Niemoeller is cited as saying that he never intends to join now or in the future. His denials have been read several times from Confessional pulpits at the request of his wife.

THE QUIET HOUR.

in this world. It is early in the morning. We see the hustle and bustle of those early hours when men are trying to get away to their duties and mother is doing her part to get them off.

"The man who goes forth in the morning from an affectionate loving wife and mother," said Cabooch, "from a loving happy home, into the world's strife, temptation, struggle, and duty, is strong and well able to do his best. His mind is at peace."

Prayer—Our Father, there are a few things, we know, in life that are well worth doing well, and the main one is the making of a beautiful and happy home. We thank Thee for this vision of ourselves, and we pray Thee for the spirit and the power to make our home what it should be. Amen.

SUNDAY.

MOTHER'S DAY—MY MOTHER.

"He gave her mother precious things."—Gen. 24: 53.

"Forsake not the law of thy mother."—Prov. 1: 8.

"Thy mother is like a vine thy blood."—Ezk. 19: 2.

Mother's Day has come to be an expression of the blessings of love in the world, of the homes of the world, of the love to God, and of the salvation of the world.

Home is mother's true kingdom, a kingdom where she is strongest and where her love finds its greatest expression; where she holds in her hands, as a sacred trust, the highest good and the happiness of the hearts that nestle there. It is she who has given the homes of the world its atmosphere and made it the stabilizer of humanity.

Prayer—Grant unto us, our Father, the fulness of this Thy day, that Thou hast set apart for the children of men that they may find the highest expression of their love and their life. May we enter into that fulness of this day. Amen.

There is no wealth but life. Life, including all its powers of love, of joy and of admiration. That country is the richest which nourishes the greatest number of noble and happy human beings; that man is the richest who, having perfected the functions of his own life to the utmost, has also the widest helpful influence, both personal, and by means of his possessions, over the lives of others.—John Ruskin.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The picture at the top of our letter this week shows one of our larger girls, who is a senior in high school, acting as big sister to one of our smaller girls. The larger girl has made a fine record in school. She has made "A" on every subject for the entire school year, except for one "B" during the first month.

It is interesting to see the larger children take a profound interest in the smaller ones. We have a little boy that has his home in the Johnston Hall Building. I believe every child in the building loves "Norman." He is a most lovable child and one cannot help but love the little fellow. He lost his mother more than a year ago, and it was necessary for him to come to the orphanage to live.

The writer was appealed to a few weeks ago to take a little girl who had lost her mother and had nowhere to go—a most pathetic case. She is now staying with her aunt who is a widow with seven small children, and it is out of the question for her to keep her on account of finances. We went to see the child last week and so we talked with her people and the little girl and learned the circumstances first-hand. The thought came to our mind that if our church people could see the little girl and know the circumstances as we do and were asked to vote on the case, the vote would be one hundred percent to take her in.

Here is a little child who needs a home and needs it very badly, indeed. The church has a home that can take care of her and make her feel at home and be comfortable and give her a chance in life. Don't you think you could get lots of real heartfelt joy out of contributing to help this needy child? Shall we take her in?

Marriages

CLARK-WYRICK.

Mr. William V. Clark and Miss Onie Mae Wyrick took upon themselves the vows of matrimony April 12, 1941, at 6:30 P. M., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wyrick.

A splendid altar had been erected in the parlor, lighted by candles and decorated with golden bells. Behind this altar the minister awaited the arrival of the bride and bridegroom to be, as Mrs. Nell Wyrick rendered special music for the occasion. The beautiful ring ceremony of the Christian Church was used.

Immediately following the spoken vows, the newly weds motored to Washington, D. C., as a honeymoon journey. They will be at home at Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wyrick's, Elon College, N. C., Route 2.

The bride and bridegroom are very popular and highly esteemed in their community. Their many friends wish for them a long, prosperous and peaceful life.

L. L. WYRICK.

No person was ever honored for what he received. Honor has been the reward for what he gave.—Coolidge.

In Memoriam

FELTON.

For fifty-five years James C. Felton, and his life-long companion, Mrs. Felton, served the Suffolk Christian Church. They did not serve it stintingly or half-heartedly, but like a host of others in this noble old church, they served it faithfully, regularly and lovingly. Brother Felton's life was as straight as the seam he sewed as a very skillful tailor, and his words for right were as sharp at times as the scissors with which he cut the patterns. The work he did was sturdy, and dependable, and so was his life.

Fifty-five years is a long time. How many faithful acts of service for their church did these two noble souls! Brother Felton, a deacon, a choir member, was ever on hand at church, Sunday school, prayer meetings, and business meetings of the church. A helper in hundreds of funerals with his kindly sympathetic word and as a member of a choir or quartet to sing songs of comfort. Behind the scenes much of the time, Mrs. Felton also served quite as well, preparing the communion service, and preparing the way for others in unseen and unsung places. God bless her kind and multiplying them.

Both have now gone to their reward. Mrs. Felton on February 13, and Brother Felton on April 7. Only tears of parting and tears of joy were shed, for both had suffered long and much, and both were ready and anxious to go; and God had been good to give them long lives of loving service. God's blessing on Miss Jamie Felton, their daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Kirkpatrick, and Stuart and James (Mrs. Kirkpatrick is Naomi, their other daughter). Yes, a noble layman, and a noble wife and mother!

JOHN G. TRUITT,
 Pastor.

WAGNER.

On February 13, 1941, Charles Lee Wagner, a member of Berea Christian Church, Driver, Va., was called to his reward, and we, the members of the church, wish to pay tribute to his memory.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we realize he was noble and useful, and held in high esteem by all friends and associates.
2. That we bow in humble submission to His will, knowing that our loss is his eternal gain.
3. That we extend to his bereaved family our deepest sympathy and emulate the kindness and neighborliness which radiated from his life.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family, one placed on the minutes of our church record and one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. W. B. WARRINGTON,
 Mrs. R. L. BRADFORD,
 Committee.

WHITE.

The Christian Temple suffered the loss of a loyal and faithful member in the death of Mr. G. V. White. Up until the time of his last illness, Mr. White had been one of the most faithful and regular attendants of the Christian Temple. He was a member of the Temple Choir and except on rare occasions was always at his post of duty both at the rehearsals and at the regular services of worship. He was a great lover of music and in addition to singing in the Temple Choir was also associated with other musical organizations in the city. He was a quiet, modest, friendly man, devoted to his church, and a genuine Christian. He came to the Christian Temple from the Bethlehem Christian Church and had been a member of the Temple for over twenty years.

Mr. White was the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. White. He is survived by his wife, who was Katie Hodges; by a daughter, Mrs. R. L. (Frances) Dickens; and by a grandson, Richard L. Dickens. He is also survived by a sister, Mrs. C. W. King, and two brothers, Ernotte and William White.

Mr. White was a faithful husband, a wise and loving father, a good neighbor, a true friend, a faithful member of the church, and a consistent Christian. As his pastor, I pay this sincere tribute to him, and on behalf of the church extend to the members of his family circle our sympathy in their loss.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

WILLIAMS.

Sister Virginia Brittle Williams, eighty, passed away on March 29, 1941, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. B. B. Andrews, near Wakefield. She was the wife of the late Charles T. Williams and the daughter of the late India Presson and John W. Brittle of Southampton County. She had resided near Waverly for more than forty years until about nine years ago, when she came to live with her daughter. Mrs. Williams was one of the most beloved ladies of her community and to know her was to love her. The high esteem in which she was held was evidenced by the large crowd attending the funeral and many floral designs.

Surviving her are seven daughters, three sisters, two brothers, fourteen grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held on April 1, from the Waverly Church, of which she was a faithful member for many years, by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. G. Bates, Jr., of Wakefield.

May God comfort the hearts of her loved ones.

T. FRED WRIGHT.

HOPKINS.

Funeral services for Mrs. Edwin J. Hopkins were conducted at the home on Clinton Avenue, Lynchburg, Va., April 26, by Dr. Graham Gilmer and Rev. J. Howard Smith. Burial was in Spring Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Hopkins was a devoted mother and a faithful Christian woman. She taught the Friendship Class of the Rivermont Baptist Church for a number of years. Mrs. Hopkins was the wife of Rev. Edwin J. Hopkins, a retired minister, who is a faithful and loyal member of our Lynchburg Church.

May the comfort and peace of our Heavenly Father be imparted to the loved ones.

FAMILY-MINDEDNESS

The season marked by "Mother's Day" suggests an emphasis on the family as a whole. Although there is no more worthy sentiment than love for mothers, the observance of "Mother's Day" has been over-sentimentalized and at the same time over-commercialized. An even better reason for a broadened emphasis is that mothers themselves are most happy when the ties of the family as a whole are strengthened.

In a disturbed and chaotic world good homes create little areas of inner security. When home life is chaotic and family ties cannot be relied upon, the result is a haunting unrest in the lives of men and women, and equally disastrous effects upon children. On the other hand, there is both joy and strength when members of the family live in close fellowship.

A keener consciousness of the family will exert a helpful influence upon the social mind. Discussion of social matters often slights the family unit and presents society as an aggregation of individuals disturbed by conflicting interests of classes. When we focus attention more definitely on the home, we become more sensitive to the human meaning of the social situation as a whole, for we think of others in terms of their most vital interests and of those concerns in which they are most like ourselves. As for the world situation, a new family-mindedness seems to be one of the conditions of salvation from the woes which threaten to engulf us. All that can be said about the disastrous effects of broken homes can be applied equally to the effects upon personality of a broken world.—Federal Council Bulletin.

RURAL CHURCH NEEDS

By THOMAS ALFRED TRIPP.

1. Trained pastors who have a sense of vocation regarding the rural church and the strength of conviction concerning the unique function of the Christian ministry as a means of meeting rural problems.

2. Laymen who are equipped with the capacity for rich human fellowship, a vision of the unlimited possibilities of the rural neighborhood and an unbounded faith in God who created the earth.

3. Leaders who are inspired by their love of God to faithfulness and team-work in building a Christian rural community and in passing on a growing religious tradition to rural youth.

4. Salaries sufficiently adequate for rural ministers who prefer to serve in the small town and the open country but who wish to provide at least a reasonable security for their families.

5. Pastorates of sufficient length to permit the minister to become a neighbor to his people and to understand the intricate workings of the dynamic processes of rural life.

6. A well-rounded program which takes account of the physical, intellectual, social and spiritual needs of farmers and of citizens in small towns.

7. A partnership with farmers' organizations and all other constructive community agencies which are working to build up the rural community.

8. A recognition of the Great Pattern in the ecology of soils and their care, of living things and their growing, and of communities and their social forces.

9. A service to all rural people, including those outside the towns as well as those within the "city limits," farmers as well as townfolk, tenants as well as landowners and those "across the tracks" as well as the more prosperous citizens.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Our North Carolina ministers held their annual picnic near Burlington last Monday.

Memorial Day was celebrated at Bethlehem, near Suffolk, Va., the second Sunday.

Dr. John G. Truitt recently preached the commencement sermon at Gatesville, N. C., High School.

Mr. R. B. Odom, well known layman of the Berea (Nans.) Christian Church, is quite ill in Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va.

Things to Remember: Junior High Camp, June 9-14; Woman's School of Missions, June 16-20; and Conference for young people, church leaders and pastors at Elon, June 23-28.

Don't forget Elon's fifty-first annual commencement. Exercises begin Saturday, May 24, at 8:00 o'clock and close May 27, at noon. There will be special services Sunday and Monday. The public is invited.

Chaplain and Mrs. H. E. Rountree have been in Suffolk, visiting Chaplain Rountree's sister, Mrs. Harry P. Taylor and family. Many friends will look forward to seeing the Rountrees at the Elon Commencement.

The Rev. Richard Jackson will become pastor of Waverly, Spring Hill and Centerville Churches on July 1, 1941. Mr. Jackson will graduate from the Divinity School of Yale University and be ordained in June. His home is in Columbus, Ohio.

The Rev. F. E. Church closes his pastorate with Howard's Chapel, Kalam Grove, New Lebanon and Mt. Bethel on May 18. He will go to Florida for a pastorate in the Methodist Church. Mr. Church came to us from the Methodists two years ago.

Have you sent in your contribution toward the memorial which is being placed at the site of Junto Academy, where Rev. D. W. Kerr first edited THE CHRISTIAN SUN. If you have not, then send a dollar bill to Dr. James H. Lightbourne, and he will see that you get proper credit.

Material for Children's Day has recently been sent to all pastors and Sunday school superintendents. Additional copies may be secured by writing to the Promotional Office at Elon College, N. C. The second Sunday in June is the usual time for Children's Day.

In less than three years the Promotional Secretary has helped to organize four churches. All families in these churches receive THE CHRISTIAN SUN. One church has not yet joined the conference. The other three have paid conference apportionments in full. The secretary tries to start the churches right.

Mrs. A. W. Andes of Harrisonburg writes: "Rev. and Mrs. Rowland Cross left this morning, May 9, for the mid-West. For this past week they have been visiting and speaking in the various churches and attending the missionary rallies here in the Valley Conference. Their work was much appreciated here and good crowds greeted them everywhere in the churches. We feel that our churches have been blessed by having them among us."

Dr. Paul Tillich, professor of philosophical theology at Union Theological Seminary, gave the Swander lectures this year at the Theological Seminary of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, Lancaster, Pa. In his five lectures Dr. Tillich covered the main outline of his theological system. The topics were: "Reason and Revelation," "Being and God," "Existence and the Christ," "Life and the Spirit," and "History of the Kingdom of God." Dr. Tillich became a citizen of the United States last year. One of the early refugees from Nazism, he has been on the faculty at Union since his arrival in this country.

INGRAM CHURCH TO CELEBRATE JUBILEE ANNIVERSARY.

On the second Sunday in June Ingram Church will celebrate its Jubilee Anniversary and hold the Dedicatory Service for the church. All former members, all present members, all former pastors and friends are cordially invited. The dedicatory service will be held in the morning. Dinner will be served on the grounds, and the Jubilee Service will be held in the afternoon.

ATTENTION: PASTORS AND CHOIR DIRECTORS.

Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk will offer a course in our Elon Pastors School on "A Program of Music for the Local Church." This course will be designed especially for ministers, song leaders and choir directors in our Convention. Mr. Poythress has visited the majority of our churches and is acquainted with our musical problems and needs. Churches should make some provision to enable those responsible for the music in the Sunday school and church to have the benefit of this course. The text to be used is "Better Music in the Church" by O. W. Moerner.

A RESOLUTION HONORING DR. C. A. VINCENT.

WHEREAS the Reverend Clarence Augustus Vincent, D. D., will in May, 1941, complete fifty-three years as a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ, twenty-four years of which having been devoted to the Florida churches; and,

WHEREAS he has announced his retirement from the active pastorate on May 31, 1941; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED that this Fifty-Eighth Session of the Florida Congregational Christian Conference officially recognize his long, faithful and fruitful ministry. That we express to Doctor Vincent our deep appreciation for his unfailing brotherliness to his fellow ministers and to his co-workers in the churches, his years of devoted service to the interest of the conference and to the broader interests of the Kingdom of God in this state and nation and the world, and that we express for Doctor and Mrs. Vincent years of happy living among us, continuing the friendships and devotions with which he has blessed us all.

The Rural Church

REV. W. MILLARD STEVENS, Convention Chairman.

THE RURAL CHURCH AND THE RURAL POPULATION.

There are two general occupational types of people to be found in the rural areas of the United States, these are: (1) the farmers, those who are dirt farmers or occupationally related to farming, and (2) those who just live in the rural areas and have their economic life in some nearby city or urban area.

In this first group are to be found those who are classed as general farmers. These include the landowner farmers, the tenant farmers, and the sharecropper. These people have their economic life rooted in the soil. What little social and religious life they have is centered in the rural section in which they live. Some go outside their own community for the satisfaction of these, but only a few. In addition to these there are commercial farmers, farm managers and foremen, and farm laborers. These usually have regular incomes and wider social needs.

In the second group are to be found those who live in the country and work in the factories, stores, or are otherwise gaining a livelihood in the city. A large "crop" of these have grown up in the past few years. This group includes, also, the small town merchants and politicians, the country merchants and service station operators, not to mention the "bootleggers" and rural "dead beats."

Moreover, the rural population is composed of all ages of people, each age with its own interests and needs. There are a large number of aged people who are not able to work, as well as a large number of children who are not counted among the employed. It seems that the majority of children, under twelve years of age, and the older people, above fifty-five or sixty, of the nation's population are to be found in the rural areas while the majority of the producing age are to be found in the urban areas. The high school age group is about evenly divided, with the rural areas having the advantage at present.

The economic types are determined largely by the standard of living. The larger producing farmers usually have a larger income than the renters and small owner producers, which tends to type the poor and poorer over against those who, through various means, have managed to reach a higher standard of living. However, none of these handle any large sums of money, but often more than we think.

A large number of these people are almost constantly moving. Population movements in the rural areas are important. They are moving to town, to different farms, to different communities, or from crop to crop in seasonal employment. There is now a trend toward the shifting of the population toward the country, a fact which has not been true for many years.

Every rural community has these facts true of its own population, in some respect at least. Each of these groups has needs which some institution should meet. There are many common needs which should be met. The church is the one institution within each rural community which should meet these needs.

St. John observed long ago that "the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." (I John 2:17.) This is true of rural life in many respects. Local rural agencies have passed away, that is, they have come and gone, but the church still remains. The church is the only agency in many rural communities today, outside the home, which can serve as a unifying force for the rural people. Thus, every rural church should learn the people of its community, who they are and where they are and their needs and then set itself to the glorious task of ministering to all these people, not just to the few that might meet the fancy of those in charge of the church program.

The church is not for any one group or class of people. Its mission is to all people. Rural churches are today in the very midst of the greatest opportunity which they have ever known. People by the thousands are turning to the rural sections as a place to live and find refuge from the great noise of conflict in urban life. People are recognizing the beauty and value of nature and are seeking communion with it. People are turning to the rural churches for help in the face of mounting rural problems. Young people by the thousands are seeking a place in rural life where they might serve. Electricity, the telephone, and good roads are bringing rural people into close touch with the rest of the world. The radio brings music, information, inspiration, and contacts hitherto unknown by rural people. Wider education and the coming of these non-farming people to the rural sections makes available local leadership of the highest rank. More people with regular incomes are to be found around our rural churches now than ever before. These facts, with many more, bring a real opportunity and a real challenge to the rural churches of the South.

Our chief problem at present is to rid ourselves of the dominating fear within our churches which keeps them from offering a real program of service to meet the needs of the people. The truth of the matter is that our rural churches are afraid to try to reach other than the few who are faithful to attend services. They are afraid to undertake an enlarged program, because the money to pay the expense is not in hand. The money will never be in hand until the church shows itself worthy to receive it, until the program of the church demands it. The Kingdom of God has always been financed through faith. Christianity is a religion of faith, an adventurous faith. Our rural churches need that faith to lead them into real service to that mixed and different people around their doors. Do something worthwhile in the name of Christ and it will find a way to the necessary funds to carry on. Make the program primary and the money will be found, we have been trying to make it the other way.

Our rural churches need the leadership ability of these people who are coming to the country, we need the contributions of time, talent, and money which they can give. I challenge the rural churches of our fellowship in North Carolina and Virginia to enlarge their programs so as to reach these people. They will never come so long as we stand back talking about their worldly ways and assume a Pharisaic attitude of fear that they might come within our midst and defile us. We need them, they need the church, they need the saving power of the Gospel; let us go get them.

Next Sunday, May 18, is Rural Life Sunday in the churches. Why not use this season to begin a program of service within the community which will make the church more than a "meeting house" and will give spiritual significance to life around us.

The balance between pride in past achievements and consciousness of present shortcomings is difficult to strike—John O'Ren.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" AND THE D. W. KERR MEMORIAL.

Through the persistent efforts of Dr. J. H. Lightbourne and interested members of the Burlington and Mt. Zion Churches a monument is to be erected soon on the site of what was Junto Academy, the editorial office for the first edition of "The Christian Sun." A copy of the present edition, carrying the life of Rev. D. W. Kerr, is to be placed in the monument.

"The Christian Sun" has evidenced remarkable ability to survive. Age, and especially birthdays, are carefully minimized in certain well known circles. Increasing years, however, may ultimately pass the delicate stage and actually become a matter of pride. One can now almost imagine a faint halo of dignity and honor around this "Sun of many Summers."

The fresh memory of Mother's Day lingers. This issue will be read by countless Christian mothers who have not missed an issue for more than half a century. Its periodic appearing has been the one bright spot in the week for many a home. Those who have read its pages have increased in wisdom and in spiritual stature and have walked in "the light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Christian character and Christian Church today demonstrate the value of the printed word. The resources and instruments which are ours must be used with ever increasing effectiveness if the Cause which is ours survives the testing of the coming days.

We hereby record our gratitude for the faith and the steady labors of our spiritual forebears and pledge our continued fidelity to the high principles which they so nobly set forth and exemplified.

RURAL LIFE SUNDAY.

A vigorous and continuous study of conditions in rural life is essential to the health of our entire church. The real source of our leadership and membership, the rural church, merits our careful consideration. Commendable progress has been made in a few of these churches, in the quality of organization, the type of instruction offered in the Sunday school, the physical facilities and equipment of the church, the frequency of church services and the method of financing the entire church program. Utter lack of imagination and vision has characterized others and robbed them of all reasonable gains. There has been little, if any, change in organization or administration during the last half century. Loss of prestige, patronage and power has been the inevitable result. They stand today, not as commanding monuments to the perpetual vitality of Christ, but as lingering advertisements of an emaciated faith and an anemic leadership.

The various agencies of our church must be studiously utilized in the promotion of the rural church. Our colleges can help. Our seminaries can help. A course, or courses, on agriculture, practical rural sociology and religious engineering would be of inestimable value. Adequate provision for courses that will train students for the country as a lifework rather than away from the open country would serve to counteract excessive "urbanitis." One often looks in vain for this type of course. There is a real danger that our educational system is educating men away from the rural field, not purposely, but as the result of an unbalanced curriculum. One sometimes wishes it were possible to really "farm out" ministerial students for training and experience as baseball clubs do their players, farm them out for a year to agricultural colleges, N. Y. A. projects, rural seminars, or to successful ministers in strong rural parishes.

Individual ministers may furnish definite impetus to our rural work. Young ministers with adequate training, practical religion, and a persistent faith may greatly advance the status and standard of our rural work. A competent leader in rural life can make a social survey of his community, recognize community assets and liabilities, detect the economic basis of prevalent human ills, formulate a program on the basis of his diagnosis, and cultivate a discerning rural mind without giving publicity to the fact that he is engaged in such a complex undertaking. A few conspicuous examples of constructive service in rural churches are needed to dramatize the latent possibilities in this field.

We must also continue to look to the Mission Board, Home Missions Committees, the Rural Church Committee, and the Town and Country Department for leadership in rural development. The methods and machinery of yesterday will not be adequate for the emergencies of tomorrow. The needs of our constantly evolving society demand constant study and adjustment. We look to these agencies for continued stimulus and orientation.

Forward-looking churches can help by demonstrating the workability of an educational and recreational as well as an evangelistic program. First rate churchmen are often developed in rural churches. This churchmanship may take the initiative in locating, or re-locating, churches in strategic areas, in the vicinity of growing industry or expanding suburbs, near consolidated schools, or at a more accessible and commanding location. In many instances the test of rural churchmanship is the challenge of a full-time ministry. This is not universally feasible, but it is extravagantly possible. Such a step must always be taken in faith, but faith that is not without precedent and multiplied vindication.

Even the poorest and most backward church can help in this program of rural rehabilitation. Through the providence of God and human ingenuity the least and the last often become the first. This is true of churches. At any moment unexpected life and leadership may assert itself and "stage a come-back." The dry bones of a defunct organization may suddenly show forth the signs of unbelievable vitality. A new voice, or a new leader, a new method, a reorganization, or a desperate venture of faith furnishes the spark for this transformation.

Daniel Wilson Kerr and "The Christian Sun"

By DR. JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE.

Daniel Wilson Kerr was a Virginian, born in Cumberland County of that state in 1796. Of his early life and educational opportunities we know very little. However, since he was a scholar of real attainment his education must have been the very best that could be secured at that time.

Converted at the age of twenty-two, he gave up his plan of being a lawyer to enter the ministry. The date of his ordination is not known but he was preaching in 1819 and was ordained sometime before 1828, at which time he is listed as an ordained elder of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference. It might be conjectured that James O'Kelly was one of the ordaining presbytery. From the beginning of his ministry he was given opportunities of leadership and the records of the conference indicate that he was very active in the committee work of the conference. One of Elder Kerr's chief interests was that of the union of the Christians, north, south and west, and perhaps to his influence may be credited the principle of Southern Convention autonomy. Another of Elder Kerr's chief interests was that of education. In 1826 he organized, as principal, the Wake Forest Pleasant Grove Academy, situated on the Oxford road north of Raleigh. In 1838 he was principal of Mount Pleasant Academy, the name of which was changed later to Junto Academy. This school was situated on what is now the farm of Mr. I. T. McAdams, Orange County, North Carolina, about one quarter of a mile from the present site of Mount Zion Christian Church. In 1842, according to a testimony of one of the students, the student body numbered fifty. The name of this institution was again changed, this time to Mount Zion Academy.

It was while serving a principal of Junto Academy that Elder Kerr found opportunity to engage in the realization of another of his great interests. Elder Kerr was convinced that his conference needed the services of a church paper. At a conference held at Mount Auburn in 1833, a resolution was adopted to the effect that efforts should be made to establish in North Carolina the printing of a paper to be entitled "The Christian Intelligencer." Elder Kerr was appointed to the committee to engage in this enterprise. Nothing came of this, but at a called session of the conference held at Union Church, Alamance County, in 1842, a motion prevailed "that a monthly periodical newspaper be established amongst us to be denominated 'The Christian Sun.'" A committee was appointed to serve as a Southern Christian Publishing Committee. This committee met immediately upon adjournment of conference and unanimously elected Elder Daniel Wilson Kerr as editor.

Sometime passed before it was possible to execute the wish of the conference, but on February 17, 1844, the first issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN made its appearance, with Elder D. W. Kerr of Junto, N. C., as editor and Dennis Heart of Hillsboro, N. C., as printer. This issue had sixteen pages and it was proposed to publish monthly. The price was one ($1.00) dollar per year in advance. So far as is known, except for the darkest period of the Civil War, THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been published since without intermission.

As has been the case with several editors since, Elder Kerr received no pay for his services. His first editorial was on "The Name Christian." Follows a list of the themes of the editorials of the first volume of THE CHRISTIAN SUN: The Name Christian, Eternal Things, Repentance, Christian Union, Second Advent of Christ, The Bible—the Only True Guide, The Christians in North Carolina and Virginia, Abolition and the New England Convention, The Christian Religion a Spiritual Religion, Translations of the Bible, The Christian Church, The Virginia and North Carolina Conference.

While Elder Kerr saw THE CHRISTIAN begun as a conference enterprise, he saw it become, before his death, what it has been since, the paper of the Southern Convention. In, or before, 1849 Elder Kerr moved to Pittsboro, Chatham County, N. C., and there edited THE CHRISTIAN SUN. On May 15, 1850, Elder Kerr was stricken with paralysis and several months later died. In 1857 his remains were taken up and re-interred at Union, Alamance County, N. C. Over his grave in the cemetery at Union church a plain marble slab about seven feet high has been erected. The Union Church is perhaps fifteen miles west of the location of the old Junto Academy.

There is now being erected at the site of the Junto Academy a monument which will commemorate the career of the Academy, the editing of the first issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, together with other papers of historical interest to our church and Convention in a copper box to be placed in the monument. It is also planned to place in the monument a piece of the timber of the administration building of the Junto Academy in which Elder Kerr gathered and composed the materials for the first issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

"Christian"—An Editorial

By REV. DANIEL WILSON KERR.

[The following editorial appeared in the first issue of "The Christian Sun." It is reprinted from the sketch of Rev. Mr. Kerr's life in "Lives of Christian Ministers," by the late P. J. Kernodle, former Secretary of the Southern Convention.]

The meaning of the word "Christian" is a follower of Christ. They who embrace the opinions and sentiments of others, and look up to them for direction and instruction in any of the arts and sciences, or in any of the systems of religion which have obtained a footing in the world, are properly their disciples; and are generally distinguished by certain distinctive and appropriate names, descriptive of such discipleship and adherence to particular systems. Hence, the followers of Pythagoras and Plato are denominated Pythagoreans and Platonists, and the followers of Mahomet, Mahometans, after their several masters. And hence the followers of Christ are called Christians, after Christ their Master. And it should be considered a matter of no little importance to the followers of Christ, to be distinguished by no other title than that of Christian as the name in every way suitable to their holy profession, and as entirely adapted to their secular circumstances, as being the disciples of him who has said his kingdom is not of this world. If this name, as we believe, be of Divine appointment, it very forcibly occurs that no option is left to the disciple of Christ as to the choice of names. He must take that name which the Master has given, and with his consent be called by no other. His enemies, by way of derision, may stigmatize him by any epithet they may think proper to use.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The defense program of the United States Government calls for many workers and much money. Millions of people are employed, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of making this a stronger nation. The citizens of this republic face a future fraught with the necessity of burdensome taxation, strenuous hours of toil and continuous sacrifice. Whatever the fortunes of war may be there is no escape from these inevitable hardships. The past twenty-five years have witnessed a rapid change in the ideals and purposes of this country. War always disrupts the spiritual standards of mankind. But there are other forces which make a definite contribution to moral weakness and spiritual depravity.

One of those dangerous foes of human safety is a widespread desire to avoid work. A weekly or monthly pay envelope is acceptable to any one. People love money. There is no doubt about that. The person who professes to despise money is abnormal. But does every one like to work? Most people who work by the hour or by the day have a deep interest in time. To test this, one has only to make a few visits to places where employees are at work. The question so often heard is: "What time is it?" This question reaches its high water mark of interest just before the hour for lunch, and the hour for leaving the place of employment. The blow of the whistle, the ringing of the bell, the striking of the clock—all are awaited with great anticipation. Apparently, workers are often more anxious to stop work than to begin their daily tasks.

People should love to work. Jesus said: "I must work the works of Him that sent me." And again He pleaded: "Work while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." There has been a growing tendency in America to reduce the number of working hours, increase the rate of wages and forbid people under and above certain ages to work. With this movement has come a demand for easier places and lighter work for those who are employed. The ease with which relief funds may now be secured and dispensed to people who claim to be unable to work discourages many able bodied people from really trying to make an honest living. They seek the easier way of putting in their claim to agencies which dispense public funds without requiring work for the same. A modest working law would thin the ranks of those who seek relief funds as a substitute for personal labor and a common sense use of what they receive.

The church needs a great labor movement. Too few people are at work in our churches. Working people who ask, "What time is it?" in their eagerness to stop work, should be asking the same question on every Sabbath Day, in their eagerness to reach their Sunday school and church services of worship on time. The familiar sentence used by people who learn to use a typewriter is: "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party." That sentence is a good starter for would-be typists. A good sentence for would-be church members is: "Now is the time for all good people to come to the aid of the church." The church needs workers. People are wanted who are interested in the promotion of the kingdom of God on the earth.

Heaven is described as a good place. But it is a busy place. And when a Christian is not busy he is in danger and the church is endangered by his spirit and attitude. A Christian should be profitable to God and to the church of Jesus Christ. It is our privilege to work in that church today—without keeping our eyes upon the clock.

I. W. JOHNSON.

O'KELLY'S CHAPEL.

The entire denomination will be pleased to know of the renewed interest in O'Kelly's Chapel. Miss Margaret Hall and sister of Durham, N. C., descendants of Rev. James O'Kelly, the founder of the denomination, are leading in the movement to rejuvenate the old church. They have completely overhauled the building, made all necessary repairs, painted the outside, papered the inside, and had the floors scraped and finished properly. These floors came from the original buildings erected during James O'Kelly's lifetime. They are beautiful, and the building is most attractive. The grounds are cleared of weeds and rubbish, and the whole atmosphere is that of a place of worship.

On the fourth Sunday in March a special program of services was arranged, the public invited. Great congregations gathered for all services. Sunday, May 4, all the descendants of James O'Kelly were asked to meet at the church for a reunion and fellowship. The writer served O'Kelly's Chapel as pastor from 1906 to 1910. Because of this connection he was invited to meet with the descendants of the founder of our church on this historic occasion. There were fifty-two of these descendants present. They came from Durham, Mebane, Graham, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, and other points. The program consisted of song, prayer, and statements from different ones regarding their connection with the family and their admiration of their distinguished ancestor. It was a pleasure to meet with this group and to relate some of the experiences that the writer had while pastor of O'Kelly's Chapel. It was my privilege which I shall always appreciate to receive into the church Dr. James O'Kelly, namesake and great-great-grandson of the founder of the church, administer the ordinance of baptism, and serve as his pastor for a while. Dr. O'Kelly was buried in the cemetery near the church. The Rev. James O'Kelly, founder of the church and of the denomination, was buried at the old home place about three-quarters of a mile from the church. The family has made plans to have the old family burying ground cleared of rubbish and put in condition. Rev. F. C. Lester is sponsoring a move to present a petition to the County Commissioners of Chatham County to open a road from the highway running by the church across the country by the old O'Kelly home place and connecting with another highway. The distance between the two highways is about fifteen miles. Following the morning service a delicious dinner was spread picnic style on the tables under the trees, and a delightful occasion it was. In the afternoon the regular monthly service of the church was held. Rev. E. M. Powell of Henderson, N. C., is the pastor and delivered the afternoon sermon. It was a very enjoyable and helpful day.

The Misses Halls and their associates are to be congratulated on restoring the old church and arousing new interest in it because of its historical position and spiritual value to our church. They have spent considerable money, and it would be a good gesture if the Home Mission Board could cooperate with them in what they have done and what they hope to do.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Today was Memorial as well as Mother's Day at our country church. Children and parents came to Sunday school and church together. The children had a part in the services as well as did the adults. The sky was deep blue, trimmed with big white clouds which looked very much like sky flowers. The church, with its floral gifts, was so lovely that one could not keep from thanking God for such beauty which He had created. The church grounds and cemetery were cleaned and beautiful flowers of every hue adorned the graves of those who had "fallen asleep." Parents and children had dressed with special care in their Sunday best! The services were very helpful and made you feel glad that you were a part of a family which is greater than just the "Jones Family." You learned that since God is the Great Father, that all of us who have accepted the "way" of life which His Son came to teach are members of the family of Christ and of His God!

I thought back upon the first Mother's Day service which I could remember having attended. I was only a skinny little girl with pigtailed. But those pigtailed had red ribbons tied on the ends of them. My white organdie dress with its ruffles had a red rose pinned on its snowy surface. That day I stood up with five other little girls, one of them Sister Joy, and helped to spell the word M-o-t-h-e-r. I was the "e" in mother. I could not forget it because there was a big blue "E" on the white paper band pinned across my chest. I could not forget what the "E" stood for either, because there mother sat on one of the very front pews with baby brother "Gene" on her lap. Her soft brown eyes were smiling right into mine as I said, "'E' is for her eyes with loveliest shining!" Her eyes looked very bright and proud as I said those words. I thought that she was the most beautiful mother in the church. I shall always carry this picture of my mother in my scrapbook of memories.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY TODD.

IT HAPPENED IN MAY.

A little baby girl was born one day in May. She was so chubby and adorable that her mother wanted to squeeze her harder than she dared. As she grew older everyone who met this fair-haired, plump little girl had that same desire to squeeze her. It was lots of fun to be round and rosy while she was little and to have people laugh at her antics. When she grew older it was the same about her size, but different in the way she felt when people laughed at her.

She was brought up in the city of Washington, D. C. Her one burning desire was to sing. She wanted to do that the most of anything on earth. But she had never had a music lesson in her life. Her family told her that she had better become a nurse. She took the advice of her family and entered training. Her heart still longed to sing so she gave up the nursing and went to New York. She got a comedy role in "Hit the Deck." It hurt her to feel that the folks who laughed so hard were laughing because of her great size. Many a night when she entered her small hotel room, after a hard day of having audiences laugh at her expense, she threw herself across her bed and sobbed. It was during these teary outbursts that she decided, one day, people will applaud me because of my singing and not because of the size of my waist.

Yet, she grew so tired of having people laugh at her that she had almost decided to give up her stage work and take up nurses' training again, when she was given fifteen minutes on the radio. She sang her heart out in those fifteen minutes. It went winging upon the air-waves, it found an answer in the hearts of myriads of other people who were "listening in."

Today she heads a big radio show of her own. Seventy people who work for her receive salaries from $20.00 to $1,500.00 a week. She has received more honors, titles, medals, plaques and honorary memberships than any other feminine star of radio. Who Is She?

DO YOU KNOW ME?

I fly through the air on wings. I visit your lawn in the early morning and late evening hours. I sit down hard sometimes when Mr. Worm comes up easily! I had some bright color spilled on my vest once so that now it is red. Who am I?

I come peeping out on the green hills in the month of May. My green is shinier and deeper than the green of the grass about me. As I grow taller, children like to break off my leg and hold me up for a doll's umbrella. If I am left to grow I have yellow fruit on me eventually. Who am I?

My coat is shiny black. Once I get beneath your doorstep I can sing sweet lullabys for you. If you try to catch me I shall do my best to out-hop you. Who am I?

You are apt to find my brown body among your flowers, in the grass or the garden in the evening. I pounce upon the insects which come to ruin your flowers and vegetables at night. I have four legs. My front ones are not so long as my hind ones. "You had better let me alone or I'll make warts on your hands!" Who am I?

CALLING ALL RURAL PASTORS.

The course on "The Rural Church" at the Elon Summer Conference will be taught by Rev. F. C. Lester. Mr. Lester is thoroughly familiar with the problems and resources of our individual rural churches. This course will be thoroughly practical, dealing with the methods, programs, organization and objectives of the rural church. Rural pastors are urged to take advantage of this course and rural churches are asked to encourage and assist their pastors in this worthy project.

LYNCHBURG.

The Central District Christian Endeavor Conference was held at the First Congregational Christian Church on Sunday, May 4. Dr. I. G. Greer, outstanding youth leader and superintendent of the North Carolina Baptist Orphanage, was the principal speaker. His subject was, "Christ the Same Yesterday, Today and Forever." Rev. George W. Ports spoke on "My Duty to My Church and My Community." Mrs. J. H. Davis discussed "Story Telling," and Mrs. J. H. Davis told, "What I've Done and How I Did It." A message also was given by Ramon Alveredo, a Spanish boy who is attending school in Lynchburg. Mrs. E. K. Coffey presided at the meeting.

that the older people in the Christian Church did not give the young people in the church a chance. I did not believe that then and I do not now. Our young people have the greatest privilege and the greatest opportunity of the young people of any age.

We are now honoring a great man and I invite every young person in the denomination to make a special offering for missions in honor of Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

J. E. WEST,
President.

A DREAM COME TRUE.

For many years I have sat at Masanetta Springs attending the various conferences that the women of the many denominations were conducting. While I sat there, listening to the great speakers of those other denominations, I dreamed of the time when we, the women of the Southern Convention, might ourselves be the sponsors of a similar conference. A conference where one might hear the inspirational and challenging messages of the able speakers of our church, and become more acquainted with our program of missions.

Last summer, through the efforts of our president, Mrs. J. Monroe Harris, and others, that dream came true at the Elon School of Missions. How wonderful it was to spend a week at our own church college, listening and learning from our church leaders and hearing missionaries from our home and foreign fields! The vital truths gained from attending the studies on St. John's Gospel under Dr. Hardcastle, through the lectures of Dr. Judd, and many others, will never be forgotten.

Then, too, we met not as women from one conference or another but all as "one big family." While being spiritually filled, I was at the same time vacationing and enjoying a physical rest. We were made to feel quite at home, being welcomed graciously by Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith. Also, one would not forget the abundant meals served in the college dining hall.

I consider it a mark of progress that the women of the Southern Convention are able to hold such a school as was held last summer, and will hold again this summer, June 16-20. I sincerely hope, that as many women as possible will avail themselves of this opportunity to enjoy this fine program that is being arranged for the Elon School of Missions in June.

Mrs. A. W. ANDES, Pres.,
Valley Woman's Conference.

SPECIAL GIFTS FOR MISSIONS.

The financial plan adopted by the Southern Convention authorizes the Mission Board to make appeals for support to individuals during March, April, May and June just as other departments and institutions do. Unless many individuals are willing to make special gifts to missions in addition to what they do through regular channels, it will take many years, if ever, for the Mission Board to have total receipts of $30,000.00, which would be an average of $1.00 per member for missions in the Convention. Ministers and laymen should just as well realize the situation and send in special gifts now and not wait for a letter of solicitation.

When our receipts were large we had large gifts from groups and individuals, and also one individual thrilled the Convention with a gift of $5,000.00.

Who will be the first to give $5,000.00, or some lesser amount to stress individual gifts? If you can't give that amount, give what you feel inclined to do. There has already been reported one fifty-dollar gift and several for twenty-five. Who will be the next?

J. E. WEST.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

We are happy to report that offerings for our Mountain Work are coming along fine. This week the Shallow Ford Christian Endeavor Society gave $30.00 to refinish the living room in our Elk Spur parsonage. The Hines' Chapel Missionary Society gave $8.00.

We have enough money on hand now to refinish the living room and two other rooms. Several other offerings for $5.00 have been made by individuals.

If you are planning to give to this cause will you please do so within the next few weeks. The pastor, Rev. G. H. Veazey, advises that the work will begin on the parsonage about June 1. We do want to have the funds in hand by that date. Send your gift today for the Mountain Work!

MATTIE COX PARKER,
Secretary.

MISSION BOARD GOAL.

On May 2, 1941, the receipts of the Board had increased $1,871.99. By cooperation and increases from all sources I believe we can reach the goal of a $2,500.00 increase by August 31, next.

Will every member of the Convention help us to reach such a goal?

J. E. WEST,
Secretary.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE A CHANCE.

A leading minister wrote in THE CHRISTIAN SUN about two years ago

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Moonlight Nights Mean . . . Death.—Clear blue skies and moonlight nights are no longer things of beauty but of dread to people in Chengtu, China. A little whistle is blown as the enemy approaches. Yellow flags are hoisted in conspicuous places. Next, comes the first siren and twenty minutes later a second or urgent siren. Everyone rushes to dugouts or basements to wait nervously until deep rumblings indicate that the enemy has arrived. Mrs. Charles H. Riggs tells of attending chapel service one beautiful day. They sang, "This Is My Father's World," and then "Faith of Our Fathers." At the words, "We will be true to thee 'till death," a special meaning was felt by all. "Death"—here today and where tomorrow? They went out under the blue skies to see the yellow flags waving.

Food for the Sick.—"Bring corn or beans or bananas, eggs or pumpkins," said the Zulu pastor in Dondi, West Africa, to his flock, knowing their poverty. It was to be a Christmas offering for the hospital. Everyone entered into the spirit of the thing, reports Miss W. Hurlbut of the American Board of Foreign Missions. There were eggs, beans, meat, corn, potatoes and even live chickens. Children brought bunches of cabbage leaves. The sum figured up to the equivalent of 200,000 angolars or ten ($10.00) dollars American money. At the Dondi Hospital patients are supposed to furnish their own food but sometimes they run out or are put on special diets. Since the small hospital budget will not take care of these extras they often come out of the missionary's funds. This giving service of food meant a great deal to the hospital as well as affording the people a chance to express their gratitude to the church and the hospital. —Missionary Herald.

"CHRISTIAN"—AN EDITORIAL.

But for himself, let him rejoice and not be ashamed to suffer as a Christian. There is something strange in the idea, that the disciples of Christ should consent to be called by other names, even by those of other eminent disciples, such as Luther, Calvin, Wesley, etc. It might be asked in the language of the Apostle, were those eminent saints and reformers crucified for you? or were you baptized in their names? And if you were not baptized in their names, how can you with consistency be denominated after them? I know that many pious and holy persons attach little importance to names; and conceive that if they possess the things signified by the name, it is a matter of no importance by what name they may be called. In this indifference about names many errors have been committed. The name Christian, with the thing signified thereby, constitutes the sum total of religion. It is always proper and correct to call things by their appropriate names. If we are Christians, why not be called by that title and no other? A rigid adherence to this course would long since have ended those divisions and subdivisions which most painfully harass and perplex the church of Christ. But there are some who contend that the name Christian was first bestowed upon the disciples at Antioch by their enemies, as an appellation of reproach. For this opinion I can find no evidence, either in the word of God or elsewhere. We may therefore conclude it to be a mere assumption. In opposition, however, to the notion that the name Christian was first applied to the disciples by their enemies in the way of reproach, we will first adduce two witnesses, whose authority in such matters will not be called in question. The first is Dr. Adam Clark, who, in his criticism upon the original word rendered in Acts 11:26, were called, expresses himself thus: "It signifies in the New Testament, to appoint, warn, or nominate by Divine direction. In this sense the word is used, Matt. 2:12; Luke 2:26; Acts 10:22. If therefore the name was given by Divine appointment, it is most likely that Saul and Barnabas were directed to give it; and therefore, the name Christian is from God, as well as that grace and holiness which are essentially required and implied in the character." The Doctor continues, "A Christian, therefore, is the highest character which any human being can bear upon earth; and to receive it from God, as those appear to have done, how glorious the title!" The next is the pious and learned Mr. Davis, who wrote a sermon expressly upon this subject, and in which he uses this language: "The original, which is here rendered called, seems to intimate that they were called Christians by Divine appointment, for it generally signifies an oracular nomination, or declaration from God; and to this purpose it is generally translated. Hence, it follows that the very name Christian, as well as the thing, was a divine original; assumed not by private agreement of the disciples among themselves, but by the appointment of God. In this view, it is a remarkable accomplishment of an old prophecy of Isaiah 62:2."

These views have been submitted, not with a design of impugning others, but for the purpose of exhibiting some of the reasons which influence us firmly and strictly to adhere to the Christian name. This rigid adherence to a name may be a subject of sport or derision to some, and of contempt and scorn to others. But still, experience and observation unitedly conspire to satisfy our minds completely, that too great particularity, in religious matters, even in external things themselves, can hardly be used. The Bible is the only criterion for regulating and guiding our course in relation to all religious concerns. No Christian man can esteem a strict and rigid conformity to its requisitions of little importance. What that book inculcates must bind the consciences of all true believers; and as we make this the standard of our religious opinions and faith, we dare not depart from it even in the selection of a name. Who but must wish that all the party names, which the circumstances of the church from time to time have given rise to, and the strife and contention which have accompanied them, were entirely obliterated, and their effects forgotten forever. The religion of the New Testament, when divested of mysticism, is a beautiful and most interesting scheme entirely adapted to the man. Its peculiar excellency consists in the simplicity of the means exhibited and insisted upon for his recovery and restoration. These means are repentance towards God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Here no complexity is presented. The conditions are plain and simple; and imply just what the awakening sinner feels to be the case—an utter inadequacy to save himself. When, by the grace of God, which is freely offered to all, the sinner feels the force and power of the divine truth freeing him from guilt and sin, and renewing him in the spirit of his mind, and enabling him to cry, Abba, Father; it will then be his duty to make a profession of his faith in Christ, and his subjection to him. Now, in scripture language, he has put on Christ, and as he has thus received Christ Jesus the Lord, so should he walk in him, and he is exhorted by the Apostle not to return again to the weak and beggarly elements of the world. How incongruous that such a one should take upon himself any other appellation besides the one descriptive of his connection with Christ as a follower and disciple."

SOUL EROSION

By REV. ARNOLD SLATER.

There is a psychological time for everything, so they say, perhaps the time is now, for the churchman to stop regarding the rural church as a problem child. Of course, it has its problems; they differ in size, shape and content from that of the town and city church, but that also holds true of the advantages, too. Much has been said, and could be written, about the rural church: its inadequate equipment, untrained leadership, often pastored by men who serve, though with longing eyes on the fair pastures of some city ministry. Even so, the figures of the Eastern Virginia Conference indicate the rural church has an enviable record, for considering the size of its membership, its total contribution bids fair to out-rival its sister, "Miss City Church," in average attendance, financial response and spiritual vitality.

The rural church, in one particular, has one task that is going to call for all the tact and skill at man's disposal. It is specifically the task of the rural church as it faces the present and immediate future trends.

It is said that four and one half billion dollars worth of fertile soil is carried down the Mississippi River every year—tragic and true—we call it "soil erosion." In terms of human personality we are confronted with a voluntary migration I might call "soul erosion." It is not entirely new, since history records other instances, and if history repeats herself—a habit she is quite capable of doing—this migration from rural to city life will come to the end of its cycle, and in keeping with previous occasions, mark the end of another tragic era when men in self-defense return to the good earth. But we face the added burden: that in the minds of many, the "escape to the city" is not some temporary change but a desire for permanent shift. In this manner rural life is being drained, and at the present rate without being given sufficient time to make the proper adjustments . . . and when the tide turns, the weakened communities find themselves incapable of giving due attention to the "saddened returned." The National Defense Plan has something to do with this migration but it has little or nothing to do with the mental condition of those who seek "escape," since this trend preceded National Defense.

What can ministers and alert lay churchmen do for the rural life and church?

1. Remind age and youth that agriculture remains in this, or any, country, in this age or any age—the most important industry. That there is a dignity, a freedom, a security about the profession that is not excelled, if equaled in any other. That it is infinitely better to "plant peanuts in an open field than drain crank cases in a garage pit"; to drain ditches for your own crops than dig ditches for another's profit; to make a straight line with mule and plow than drive a beer truck around the city block; to watch nature grow than hammer all day in crowded places; to work from sun-up to sun-down than not have any work at all; to say, "I'm tired," and lie in the shade to rest, than hear the boss say, "Keep going, Buddy, time means money."

2. Apart from this, or including this, it remains for us to state that rural life gives man a better chance to possess his own soul; to express his own opinion; to test his own initiative; to realize the significance of his own personality. He is artist and artisan; dreamer and worker; poet and plowman. In politics he exercises not only a vote but a voice; in community affairs not only an onlooker but a participant; in church activities not simply another member but a working unit in the most active institution of the community. The highest brand of freedom mixed with the highest grade of responsibility, with living space and breathing space to make the rural inhabitant one of God's blessed.

3. And contrary to popular belief the rural life reaches towards the co-operative approach in dealing with life situations. I speak from the spirit of cooperation that comes not by the order of the day, not by compulsion, not even for expediency's sweet sake. Experience, the staff upon which the rural dweller leans hard, has taught that one's own independence is best preserved when the social well-being of most is sought. That community life is best served when the good of all becomes the rule of one, when and where people assume a greater importance than things.

Happy is he who seeks to understand his people, thrice happy when he knows his counsel has direct bearing on all community interests. Such is the position of the rural pastor who keeps his ear to the ground, and perhaps he can do more than a little to prevent "soul erosion" by creating in the minds of rural people the worth and wonder of rural life. I am not a product of the country life myself, that's why I know.

WITH THE SHENROCK PARISH.

We have just closed a very successful revival at Palmyra in the Valley of Virginia. The meeting was well attended at every service. Many of those in attendance were from our other churches. And some from the churches in groups other than our own assisted throughout the entire fourteen evenings. The kind assistance given by the good people of the other churches was truly remarkable. Miss Louise Bowman of Joppa Church was of great and timely assistance. At the close we had Holy Communion and during the meeting eight souls were added to the church by confession of faith.

Most of the churches in this parish have a building fund started for the new building to take the place of Wissler's Chapel. We are praying that God will bless us to see the new building started up this summer. The young people here are active and have a going society. At one of the regular services there were thirteen united with the church. These people need a new building to worship properly. May God answer their prayers.

All the churches of this parish are showing marked improvement in attendance with the summer weather. The majority of our people are poor; and if they attend church they must walk long distances. The weather is a great factor here. At times we are made to marvel at the number attending from far away places who must walk from the hills.

Last Sunday, the young people of Wood's Chapel organized themselves into a Youth Fellowship society. Here we have very few young people. But they have held their first meeting and are trying to do what they can with what they have. Miss Elizabeth Shifflett is president. She is assisted by Mrs. Linda Gochenour and Miss Gertrude Hidden. They have planned to have a Children's Day program, using the material sent us by Rev. Lester.

The Bethlehem young people have struck upon a happy idea to have a Youth Fellowship in cooperation with the young people of Mayland. They will meet once at Bethlehem, the next time at Mayland. Nan Sellers is president, assisted by Mrs. Jean White. We expect great things here.

BROADENING CHRISTIAN HORIZONS: SAUL'S CONVERSION.

LESSON VII—MAY 18, 1941.

LESSON: Acts 9:1-31.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 6:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT: I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.—Acts 26:19.

The Persecutor Becomes a Penitent.

Saul started out for Damascus as a persecutor, breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, looking upon Jesus as an imposter and his followers as enemies of God. He was a seething volcano inside, so violent was his rage against what he called "Those of the Way." (It is significant that at first Christians were called "Those of the Way." The name is appropriate, for whatever else a Christian may be he is a man who follows a certain way of life.)

Saul entered Damascus as a penitent. On the way he had met the risen Lord Jesus Christ in a vivid and vital fashion. He had heard His voice. He had discovered a new vocation. In one of the most dramatic and one of the most significant conversions in all history, a conversion of far reaching consequences, Saul, the persecutor, had become Paul the Christian. There were, of course, strange factors in his conversion—a light shining from heaven above the brightness of even the Syrian noon day sun, a voice from heaven. This is not the norm, or the exact example, for every Christian conversion. Everyone who becomes a Christian does not have to see a light from heaven, or hear the voice of the risen Christ in person. God had a unique work for Paul to do; he wanted Paul to have a unique experience. From the day that Paul met Christ on the way to Damascus he never again doubted his existence, his power, Christ's relationship to him, or his relationship to Christ. The method as to how a man is converted matters little; the fact that he is converted matters much.

So bright was the light and so startling was the experience that Paul was blind for three days. He also fasted during those three days. His mind must have been in a turmoil as he tried to think things through, as he tried to put things together so that they made sense, as he tried to get his bearings from the new experience which had come to him.

The Human Helper.

The experience on the road to Damascus was an expression of the Divine in conversion. But there is usually, indeed it might be said that there is always a human factor in it, too. Conversion may seem sudden, it may seem directly and immediately a divine event, but if we could trace the thing back to all of its sources and untangle all the forces that enter into it we would find that there is some human helper involved in it—the word of some Christian spoken in season, the prayer offered in one's self, the influence or example of some sincere Christian life. It was true even in Paul's case. God chose to help Paul by sending him a human helper. In Damascus, there was a man named Ananias to whom the Spirit came ordering him to go to Paul, to be the divine instrument through which Paul should come to an understanding of Christ's purpose for his life. Like us, Ananias could think of many reasons, or excuses, why he should not be the one to do it; but unlike so many of us he did obey and had the great privilege of leading Paul into the light. How much it must have meant to Paul to hear the words, "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest hast sent me that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Spirit." What a great privilege it is for any man to have any part in leading another man into an experience of Christ!

A Chosen Vessel.

The Lord said unto Ananias, "Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel." A chosen vessel indeed! Where in the history of the Christian Church has there been another man like him? Although we do not know anything about his physical make-up, he must have been wiry and tough, for no man could have stood what Paul did if he had not had a remarkable physical constitution. And the man's mind—let any man read the letters which Paul wrote which show a profound grasp upon deep spiritual truths and the mysteries of the Christian religion, let him consider that this man gave us nearly two-thirds of our New Testament literature, let him consider that it was this man who gave the early Christian Church its theology and formulated its doctrines which it went out to preach in the pagan world, and he will see indeed that Paul was a chosen vessel of God with an intellect surpassed by few men. And what a heart he had, a heart that was warm in its devotion to his Lord and just as warm in its devotion to all men. There was a constraint about his love and a compassion about his spirit that made him willing to be a curse if only in some way he could share his experience of Christ with others. Paul indeed was a chosen vessel, cleansed and meet for his Master's use. Perhaps next to Jesus he was the greatest man who ever lived.

Doing Something About It.

"And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God." Paul knew that he had been converted. He immediately did something about it. He translated his great spiritual experience into practical action and service. He knew that religion was a matter of doing as well as a matter of believing. He knew that the best way to give abiding reality to the impressions he had was to give expression to them by service to others. One of the surest ways to help a young convert to grow into a steady Christian life is to give him something to do. Folks who profess religion and join the church ought to be put to work.

A Friend In Need.

When Saul later came to Jerusalem and tried to join himself to the disciples, they were afraid of him and did not believe that he was a disciple. But Barnabas, good-hearted Barnabas, became his friend, vouched for him, introduced him to the disciples, and stuck by him at a critical period of his life. One wonders what might have happened even to Paul if he had not found such a friend as Barnabas at such a critical time. How much it means to the young Christian who has recently become a convert to have some more experienced Christian take a friendly and personal interest in him, to help him with his problems, and to offer him a genuine friendship. This is one of the finest things which members of the church can do for new converts.

We are of different opinions at different hours but we always may be said to be at heart on the side of truth.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

MONDAY.

THE SECRET OF LIVING RIGHT.

"Get thee up on a high mountain."
—Isa. 40: 9.

Isaiah was the great prophet and leader of Israel that he was because he lived close to God. All cannot be great prophets nor great leaders but all can live just as close to God and be great in the service which He has given us to do. One whose life is to be a living witness and example is great, but he cannot be this without living close to God. He who helps others to be happy and better is great, but he must live close to God to do this. The one who "tells good tidings" must live above doubts and fears, must live with folks, but above temptation and sin. These things dull the vision and prevent closeness to God. Let us pray for strength to follow our faith today into that closeness that gives us security in Christian experience. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SEEING ABOVE THE LEVELS.

"Lift ye up a banner upon a high mountain."—Isa. 13: 2.

There is a certain peak up in middle California from which summit, on a clear day, one may see snow-capped Mt. Shasta in the north, the snow-lined Sierras toward the east, the great San Juaquin Valley to the south, the cities of San Francisco, Oakland, Berkley, Richmond, Vallejo, and a great number of smaller towns all around, and a great far vision of the Pacific Ocean to the west, which to the eye seems as smooth as a glazed surface. We travel to the Sierras where from the heights of twelve thousand feet or more we see in all directions wider spaces and greater glories. It is wonderful what one may see if one gets high enough.

"We cannot act wisely, live holy and useful lives unless we see clearly and do faithfully the will of God." Make that your prayer.

WEDNESDAY.

DOES SACRIFICE PAY?

"Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."—John 12: 24.

The law of sacrifice is the law of God, the law of all nature, and the way of man to truth and success. The way Jesus took was the way of thorns. He poured out his life that we might live eternally. He wore a crown of thorns that we might wear a crown of glory. He suffered that we might be pardoned. He died that we might live.

We, too, take the way of sacrifice, if we would gain heaven. By giving we get. By keeping we lose and become friendless. By dying we live. Let us pray for this Gospel message to dominate our lives this day and always. Amen.

THURSDAY.

DOES SACRIFICE PAY?

"He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal."
—John 12: 24.

Marginal notes to this passage explains: The word "hate" means "the spirit of martyrdom required by Jesus." Is the sacrificial life worth what it cost? Example: Moses—He gave up the riches of Egypt to be with the people of God. He gained eternal riches. Instead of being a mummy as others, he enjoys the riches of heaven. Dr. Grenfield could have stayed in London, rendered a great service to his country, and at the same time enjoyed a life of comparative ease and comfort. But he chose to serve suffering and needy Labrador and became a saint of our present age known of all men. Few have gone that far in the interpretation of Jesus to the world. Did these men lose anything? We cannot all be a Moses nor a Grenfield, but if we have Jesus in our souls we can have the sacrificial spirit, lead the sacrificial life and thus advance the cause of Christ. Let us pray for this. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE SALVATION OF QUIETNESS.

"In quietness and confidence shall be your strength."—Isaiah 30: 15.

Walking along a common road after a shower, you have seen pools of water here and there, dirty and unsightly, with the mud stirred up by the hoofs of men and animals. Return some hours later and lo! each pool has become a lovely mirror reflecting the trees and the clouds and the sunset and the stars.

So the mirror of thy mind, thy heart and thy soul, stirred much by the sediment of the things of the day, tiresome thought and many anxieties. To worry is to admit defeat, doubt oneself and doubt God. Settle down and relax, rest; and presently all will be clear. You will have entered into His rest—His living rest—ceased from troubling and will be saved (as Hebrews puts it) from unbelief. This real and eternal world is given only to the mind that rests. Let us pray for the power to enter into this rest every day. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE HOPE OF DARK PLACES.

"I say then, hath God cast away his people?"—Romans 11: 1.

The traveler by rail encounters a number of dark experiences—tunnels—tunnels particularly noticeable during the day. They are periods of night-like darkness that envelop one for a brief space of time, then bursting forth with all its brilliance as the end of the tunnel is reached, comes the light of day. Following each period of darkness one notices added progress, new altitudes reached, new beauties and glories to be seen, and new experiences to inspire.

THE SOIL AND THE SOUL UNDER GOD.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."—Genesis 1: 1.

"And God said, Let us make man in our image . . ."—Genesis 1: 25.

One of the rewarding joys of being a part of rural life is the recognition of the fact that we are very near the soil, with that which it produces, and human life. Both the soil and the human soul have infinite meaning under God. The Christian religion has recognized the importance of both throughout its history to some extent.

One of the outstanding doctrines of the church throughout its history has been its doctrine of the creation of the world and of man by God Himself. The various details of the doctrine have changed, but the basic belief in the creation has remained. The human soul is given spiritual significance, because it was created by God in His own image. Upon the same basis the soil, with all that is related to it, has spiritual significance. The same God who created the soul created the soil. Under God they are both of value.

Just as it is the duty and opportunity of the church to save human souls through Christ, so it is the duty and opportunity of the church to preach the "gospel of the soil." We are not departing from the Christian gospel when we give spiritual significance to the soil and the whole of rural life, we are rather fulfilling the Gospel.

The Soil.—One of the interesting things to me in this relation is the fact that two of the greatest movements for the conservation of the soil in history came from within religion. Each of these were undertaken because it was felt that the soil was a part of God's creation and should be treated as such. The first came from within the Hebrew religion and may be found in the "Holiness Code" of Leviticus. Its main purpose was to conserve the soil by giving it a period of rest every seven years and to prevent the upsetting of the rural economy by providing that the land should not become the sole property of one or a few individuals. Those who object to the effort of the church to give spiritual significance to the soil and to rural life should read this story in their Bibles.

The second movement was the agricultural activities of the Cistercian Order of the Christian Church in the period around the twelfth century. These activities were first undertaken for the purpose of reclaiming swamps and other barren land for productive purposes to assist in the proper care of human life. This movement is an interesting one in church history. It is true that this movement got out of hand and after a short time passed out. It passed away because the institution became larger than the ideal, this always happens. However, it serves to remind us that the Christian Church has at one time recognized the sacredness of the soil.

The Soul.—The church has always recognized as a part of its work the "reclaiming of souls." We have used many methods to cause men to see the folly of sin and to recognize their own sinful state. We have continually urged men to turn to Jesus Christ and find salvation. This we must never cease to do.

The sacredness of the human soul has been one of the main beliefs of the Christian Church throughout its history. Perhaps one of the reasons why the church is still alive is the fact that it has had this belief.

We have sought to save the souls of men for a future world. And no one believes more strongly in this and in the reality of this future world than I. It is something which we cannot get around in the Christian teachings. However, it is just as obvious that we must do something to save the lives of men and the souls of men for service in this world and in this time. After all the life we live here in this world is important and if this life and this world is to be Christian, we must have Christian people in it. We must reach the souls of men and point them to "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world."

What is the church to do about it? This is the question of primary importance today. There is something we can do about it. We can set our Christian forces in order and put ourselves to the task of not only finding God for ourselves as a real and vital reality but we can also make Him real to the world.

This matter of the stealing of the soil by man and the destruction of natural resources is one of religious significance. If these things were created by God, they are His, just as the human soul and life are His. And we Christians are stewards of them just as we are stewards of our own lives. Rural life must be given spiritual reinforcement, if it is to find its way out of its present problems. It is the business of the church to give this reinforcement. We can do it by putting ourselves to the task of calling men to a change of heart and attitude toward these things.

In the midst of economic depletion, religious poverty, social depression, and political tyranny, a whole people saw the coming of Jesus. They saw Him as He displayed fearless hope in the future, unquestioned devotion to God, and a determination to do the will of His Father. They heard Him as He proclaimed that hope by saying, "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He called for a change of heart, because he believed in a better world. If we could experience that change of heart, our attitude toward both the soil and the soul would be vitally religious and different.

"The heavens" still "declare the glory of God and the Firmament" still "shows His handy work." "The earth is" still "the Lord's and the fulness thereof." Let us have a change of attitude toward this world of ours and realize that both the soil and the soul are important under God.

THE QUIET HOUR.

Life has its periods of darkness now and then when every sunbeam of hope seems to have disappeared, but he who has the grace of God in his heart finds these periods of despair not despair nor defeat at all, but the very means of bringing us to new horizons, new inspirations, new faiths, new hopes and greater altitudes of glory. Let us pray for the gift that enables us to think of the dark places of life as a mere step to something better. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Christ's interpretation of the Sabbath was to show the people the Father, make it God's day for them, in which man shall learn his duty to man, and learn a service of love, mercy and gladness. And, most of all, he learns to spiritualize his every effort in these things. Let us not fail. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We are very happy to reach and pass the seventh rung in our financial ladder in this report. The Lord is real good to us and His people are generous. We find that people get a great deal of joy out of helping children who are left entirely dependent. It is sad to think of a child left without a home and no place to call home.

Since the orphanage opened its doors in 1907, it has helped 496 children. We dare say that no one is the poorer for having helped; but all who have contributed from time to time have been made the richer. It takes money to care for nearly one hundred children, but when we give money to help care for a little dependent child, it comes from the heart and there is a joy from this kind of giving that we get no other way. A few days ago a kind friend sent us one hundred ($100.00) dollars to help us in this work. He gave it because he got a joy out of giving. May the good Master bless him and his kind. We trust many will follow his example.

INDIAN "SOOTHING SYRUP."

He found grandma's opium box. He knew, even though he was only going on half past one, that the stuff grandma gave him from this box made him feel good. So he took a big pinch. Fortunately, he was discovered promptly and rushed to Wai Hospital, India. There they washed out his stomach and poured strong coffee into his small mouth. By constant vigilance they kept him awake until the caffeine began to work. Nurse Katherine Mix dangled keys before him when he threatened to doze off. At last he was out of danger. The family had learned a stern lesson. The habit of giving babies opium to keep them quiet still works havoc in India but the custom is growing less each year, thanks to the efforts of American missionaries. The Indian Bible women wage a continuous battle against this among the villagers.

ENTRANCE TO ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Elon College is located in the piedmont section of North Carolina. The climate is invigorating and healthful. The natural beauty of the campus is enhanced by careful landscaping.

The definite religious atmosphere of the College and its modern equipment provide the very best facilities available for the training for religious leadership.

The rates are most reasonable.

In Memoriam

FRIDDLE.

In loving memory of Mr. Thomas Rankin Friddle, whom God, in His infinite wisdom, removed from our midst on March 17, 1941.

We, the members of Mt. Bethel Christian Church, desire to express our devotion to his memory as a member of our church, knowing that the place he filled in his church, home and community will always be vacant. We believe that our loss is his divine gain and that he has gone to that mansion which God has prepared for his own.

We shall miss his kindly smile, his quiet manner, and his devotion to his church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will.
2. That we hold in remembrance his faithfulness to all.
3. That we extend anew our sympathy to the family.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and one to be placed on our church record.

WALTER SHELTON,
Mrs. S. E. ALBERT,
E. F. KNIGHT,
Committee.

SIMPSON.

We, the members of Concord Christian Church, find it our sad duty to record the passing of our dear sister, Mrs. Maggie Herndon Simpson, on February 16, 1941.

She was a noble Christian woman, a devoted wife and mother, a kind, cheerful and helpful person who devoted her life to her home and community, and was ever faithful to the church that she loved so well.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn her departure, we bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

2. That we extend sympathy to her husband and little daughter, to our beloved mother, and all members of the family.

3. That we hold in remembrance her faithfulness as a Christian.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be placed upon our church record.

Mrs. W. R. SIMMONS,
Mrs. H. E. TERRELL,
Mrs. J. C. TATE,
Committee.

RURAL CHURCH DAY.

The annual Rural Church Day program during Cornell's Farm and Home Week was held Friday, February 14. Special features of this year's program included displays of rural church work and the four-county rural church choir festival. The displays showed church bulletins and parish papers, a parish yearbook, photography, literature for rural churches, a handmade wooden altar set, and the Lord's Acre Plan. Two hundred singers from the rural church choirs of four counties participated in the choir festival.

SHENROCK PARISH.

The young people of Concord meet once a month. This organization is well attended. They are handicapped by so few young people willing to take part in the programs. We hope to meet more often in the future. The young people's society at Palmyra is strong and growing.

We are happy to report much progress in this parish. We give God all the glory. He has been good to us. Our work for the past five years has not been without heartaches and failures. We did not expect it to be. We would not have been worthy of the task if we had expected an easy job. However, the experience has been sweet. And as we look back to October, 1936, we see many changes—some good, some bad—but we are proud of them all. We have made many friends whom we love as God has given us to love. We have made some enemies, too. We are made to feel in these self-condemning hours that even Jesus had many enemies, and He prayed for them—so must we. The things I have fought for in our conference have been things I truly believed would be best for the church as a whole. My sole motive was to give others a chance. My firm conviction is that many young people leave the church because they have nothing to do. They are not given a chance to share in the business of our conference. They have a right to hold office when that office exercises authority over them. We do not say that they could do the job any better. We do say they have a right to try. All the important officers in the Conference have for many years come from only four of the churches of the twenty some odd in the conference. Are we to believe that other churches have none capable?

We have enjoyed the happy fellowship these occasions of breaking spiritual bread together bring. Some of them we can never forget. And when I read God's Word: "And all they of the land came to a wood; and there was honey upon the ground." Well, I just have to forgive everyone—even our enemies—whether they ask it or not. When a soul is empty of sin it is similar to a stomach empty of food. You are happy to be led to God's table set in the promised land to eat of the honey in the Rock. We have tasted the honey from the Rock, and it is sweeter than honey in the honeycomb. After such an experience it will be difficult to eat the wife's cooking for weeks.

We earnestly beg your prayers in our great task here. If ever one needed spiritual help, we do. Our humble prayers beside the sick and dying have made us feel wholly inadequate. Our counsel to the perplexed has made us feel ignorant. Our sermons, if of any power, have been truly from without our own strength. Any progress, spiritually, has come from God alone. And to Him be the honor, and the glory, and the power, forever and forever. Amen.

ROY D. COULTER.

William's Chapel successfully entertained the South Georgia Christian Life Conference on the week-end of April 5. Announcement was made that electric lights will soon be installed in the church and the young people are planning to paint the church and to help beautify the grounds.

OCEAN PARK

"AN ODE TO THE SEA OF LIFE"

By CLARENCE A. VINCENT

The sky is clear tonight.

The sea lies fair and still.

The full-moon with its waves of light
 Fills every space and shrinking nook until Sea and land and sky are strangely one
 In the radiance and hush of mystic night.
 Walk with me, love, along the winding shore
 And listen to the tide's low murmuring song
 As it comes in, gathering more and more
 In power as every tide-wave runs along.
 Here and there along the shore lights flash,
 Like twinkling stars, from nestling homes,
 While now and then we hear the distant splash
 Of cars and the laugh of happy lovers.
 On the Aegean shore Sophocles long ago,
 And Arnold looking out from Dover Beach,
 Heard in the never ending ebb and flow
 Of ocean, the restless, unsatisfied reach
 Of human longing and the turbid misery
 Of the tides that beat against Eternity.
 Yet in the tides a Voice that whispers of a goal.

The sea of faith

Was once at ebb, and the whole world lay
 As the bare flats when the tide is out.

Doubt, like a cloud,

Hung heavy round the earth, and, night and day,
 Chilled the aching heart and groping thought
 And to fair hope became a sombre shroud.

The night-wind's moan

Brought to the soul a melancholy tone.

But the tide's change.

And since the Galilean won with love's own charm

The hearts of men,

The mighty currents of his life and love
 Have swept in, fresh, cleansing, boundless, warm,
 And filled each space and nook with glory from above.

Ah, love, let us rejoice

That the world in which we live and dream,
 The world that suffers, toils, and often seems
 A broken reed, the prelude of a deepening night,
 Is part of that outreaching, endless life
 That ever lives and moves in fadeless light,
 That there are shores beyond the stretching sea
 Where love still lives and hushed is every strife,
 And limitations yield and men step free,
 Where immortelles and leaves that heal the Nations grows,
 And trees of life, whose boughs with fruit are hanging low.

Written after re-reading Matthew Arnold's
 "Dover Beach."

Working for the American Board of Foreign Missions

An editor across whose desk streams news from over four hundred correspondents, at the crossroads of the world, is the enviable position of Miss Dorothy P. Cushing, Publicity Secretary and News Editor of the American Board of Foreign Missions.

Miss Cushing handles all newspaper publicity concerning the American Board. Through her, news is collected from the entire foreign field and distributed in the United States to the churches and the press. She has been accepted by the newspapers as an authoritative source of accurate information on the American Board work and workers.

Miss Cushing also edits two special departments in the "Missionary Herald," a magazine which represents the Home and Foreign work of the Congregational and Christian Churches, and in the syndicated sections of the state papers. She also supplies colorful and informational material to other secular and other denominational magazines.

MISS DOROTHY P. CUSHING.

has had opportunity to know personally and "write up" most of the more than 450 missionaries, as well as witness the advances being made toward building a new world order through the Christian missionary enterprise.

Workers of the American Board, scattered throughout the world, are located in China, Japan, Ceylon, India, Africa, the Philippine Islands, and the Near East, engaged in educational, medical, social and church work, all of course, motivated by the Spirit of Christ.

Miss Cushing has been with the American Board for fifteen years and during this period

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Dr. Albert W. Palmer, President of the Chicago Theological Seminary, visited Rev. and Mrs. Aubrey C. Todd in Sanford, recently.

Dr. Carl S. Weist, author of the poem, "Gold Star," is a Congregational minister at Mt. Vernon, New York. Dr. Weist has recently published a volume of children's sermons.

Many will hear with pleasure that young Deacon Howard Cannon, of our First Church, Norfolk, and Miss Ruby Piland, a leader of the Bethlehem young people, were united recently in marriage in the Bethlehem Church, with Rev. R. E. Brittle officiating.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Memorial Day is designed to revive and perpetuate those memories too precious to perish. Fitting observance of the day in the churches is fitting and appropriate; only beware lest it become merely a patriotic occasion.

Relatives return annually from afar to celebrate this occasion at many of our rural churches. Friends cluster and talk of former days. The social occasion frequently monopolizes the time, and a few loquacious souls are determined that neither song nor sermon shall interfere with their long anticipated "talk fest." Other pilgrims come to visit the cemetery and not the church. They admire the flowers.

Few of these returning members make any systematic contribution to the old home church. A brief, pointed appeal for the missionary apportionment, the conference apportionment, or for some obviously needed local improvement would help utilize and conserve the financial as well as the fraternal values of the occasion.

NEWS FROM SUFFOLK.

Mrs. F. C. Lester received the foreign missions textbook, "Dangerous Opportunity," last Monday evening before the combined missionary societies.

Dr. Truitt is speaking on the following subjects at the mid-week services Wednesdays, at 8 o'clock: "The Southern Convention," "The Eastern Virginia Conference," "The Suffolk Church Goes to Conference," and "The Church Member's Church Privilege."

The teachers of Suffolk City Schools were entertained at a Rotary Club dinner in the Fellowship Hall, and Superintendent Sydney B. Hall, of the department of public instruction of Virginia, made the principal address.

Dr. and Mrs. Truitt will entertain the nineteen Christian Church members of the high school senior class this Friday evening. Dr. Truitt will give the commencement sermon the first Sunday in June. The service will be held in the Christian Church.

GOLD STAR.

By CARL S. WEIST.

*These noble dead of ours are heroes.
Gloriously they gave their lives upon
The field of honor for their country.
What higher fame than this, to die
For a great nation? . . . Thus spake
The minister, on Memorial Day,
A follower of the lowly Christ
Who lived the gentleness of love.
Lonely, bent, distressed of body and soul,
At the edge of the crowd, a woman stood,
A gold star crushed in her hand, a tear
In her eye, a child in her memory.*

Ten babies were christened on Mother's Day morning at the altar of the Suffolk Christian Church, by Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., pastor, as follows: Willard Henry Andrews, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Andrews, Jr.; Judith Rebecca Bolton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Bolton; Ann Garland Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Dunn; Betty Nelms Edmonson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey T. Edmonson, Tarboro, N. C.; Judith Elizabeth Hill and Ann Virginia Hill, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. Carr Hill; Sarah Lee Harrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Harrell; Regina Ann Holland, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Reginald Holland; Ronald Carson Luke, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Causey Luke; and George Earl Rogers, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Earl Rogers.

THE NEW PARSONAGE.

As you know, Bethel, Concord and Mt. Zion Churches of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference have voted to form a pastorate. These churches are now cooperating in building a parsonage, which is located at Bethel. This project will cost around $2,000.00, complete. The work is progressing very well and the people are giving fine cooperation. We appreciate the fine spirit in which the people of all these churches are entering in this work, and are sure that we will continue to have the active support and cooperation of all in this fine work.

Churches are sharing as follows:

Bethel Church.

Paid	$ 311.00
Additional pledges	87.00
Lumber, 1,200 feet; logs, 37.

Concord Church.

Paid	$ 92.00
Additional pledges	125.00
Lumber, 1,200 feet; logs, 15.

Mt. Zion.

Paid	$ 106.00
Additional pledges	166.00
Lumber, 8,400 feet.

Other Gifts.

C. M. A.	$ 200.00
Zimmerman Lumber Co. . .	50.00

Summary.

Cash received	$ 709.00
Additional pledges	378.00
Credit on account	50.00

Total	$1,137.00
Lumber, 15,800 feet; logs, 52.

This means that we still have around five or six hundred dollars more to raise. Your contribution will be appreciated.

SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE STILL INCREASING.

It is a pleasure to give the names of seventy-six (76) new subscribers. Welcome to THE CHRISTIAN SUN family!

Ninety-six (96) subscribers were good enough to renew since the last report. Thank you, every one.

The list of paid up subscribers is increasing. Several churches are reaching the quotas suggested by the confernee, and some are sending the paper to all families.

Prospects are good for THE CHRISTIAN SUN to pay its way this fiscal year (through June 30). Just a little more help from the churches and we will have no deficit this year.

We are trying to list subscribers by churches. Please help us complete the record. Thank you.

THE PRIVILEGE OF RARE FELLOWSHIP.

Dr. W. R. Cullom, President of the Board of Directors of the Rural Church Institute, called attention last week to the rare opportunities that are in store for those who attend the approaching session of the Duke Institutes and Bible Conference, June 2-7. It is not possible to measure the worth of a week spent in sharing the crystalized wisdom of a lifetime study and devotion to some subject or field of service. This will be available to all who may attend.

We would, however, call attention to another rich blessing which has been ours in former sessions. We refer to the fellowship with other ordinary "run of the mine" ministers like unto ourselves. It is fine to hear the specialist expound all the theories relative to his subject. But sometimes when the conference is over, we are not quite sure how to apply the theories in the special situation which which confronts us. Of course, modern programs attempt to provide ample time for "discussions." But discussion periods sometimes are used up on irrelevancies and minor phases. When four or five earnest pastors take the issue under consideration, they are apt to find a way to make the theory practical, if such a way is to be found. Perhaps the experts might profit if they could participate in the unofficial discussions.

Then there is the joy and inspiration of coming in contact with the pastors who have encountered all the problems and trials of the minister in this modern age, and who are still vitally alive. Their faith, hope and courage have not been dimmed by any of the difficulties which they have encountered. To share fellowship with such men is the surest way in all the world to come to a realization of the worthwhileness of Christian service. If you do not believe this is true, just come and see for yourself.

STANLEY C. HARRELL,
Member of Board of Directors, of Rural Church Institute.

IMPORTANT DATES TO REMEMBER.

- June 16-22—Blue Ridge Conference on "The Task of the Church in Community Building."
- June 23-28—Elon Summer School of Leadership Training.
- August 1-15—"Ashram," conducted by Dr. E. Stanley Jones at Blue Ridge, N. C.

THE MISSIONS PERIOD IS NOT OVER!

The fact that our churches in the Southern Convention concentrated their efforts on the Easter offering for missions should not create the impression that the mission period is now passed. March, April, May and June are the designated months for missionary emphasis throughout the Convention. The month of May nationally speaking, is American Board month. So it will be seen that the period designated by the American Board fits comfortably in our local program. Colonel J. E. West is currently soliciting special gifts to missions in addition to what has already been given through regular channels. Miss Dorothy P. Cushing brings to us in this issue a comprehensive picture of the work and spirit of the American Board. Our gifts are not sent credulously, nor blindly. The total picture is before us, awaiting investigation and consideration.

A letter from Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, Executive Vice-President of the American Board, calls attention to the immediate need for recruits for our service overseas. Positions in Africa, China, Turkey, India and Ceylon await the volunteering of recruits and our increased generosity.

We have the interesting account of one recent candidate. Desire to become a missionary lay dormant in the mind of Walter C. Wynn, pastor of the Pond Street Baptist Church, a Negro parish in Providence, R. I., until he read on the church page of the "Journal" that the American Board needed recruits for a field in Africa. He applied, and with his wife was accepted. After a year's study in Hartford Seminary of native culture and Portuguese, they will join a mission with a constituency of 1,600 in a population of 50,000. This station in Galangue, Africa, is manned entirely by American Negro missionaries of our Board. Mr. Charles P. Heineman of Hartford Theological Seminary has just been appointed to Madura, India.

We are being reminded that "days of crisis are always days of enlarged opportunity." Dr. Walter Marshall Horton made a critical survey of Oriental and Occidental cultures and arrived at the following conclusion: "Christianity's greatest contemporary opportunity for reorganizing a whole oriental civilization from center to circumference is in free China. In other countries it is at present debarred from direct self-propagation (as in Turkey) or restricted to the cultural periphery (as in Japan), but if and when any oriental culture fails in the attempt to save itself, it will probably turn for salvation in one of two directions: to Christianity or to Communism. Christianity is the more appreciative of ancient cultural values, and the better able to save them."

Christian people should be alert to grasp the significance of this contemporary opportunity and make an additional investment to insure its realization. Let no one minimize our contemporary difficulties. The potential universality of Christianity is being stubbornly challenged on many fronts. Dr. Henry P. Van Deusen declares that, "In lands where our faith has been securely rooted for centuries the hand of violence has reached and traditional Christianity has been wrested from its historic rootage." Too great importance can hardly be attached to the work of missions in this critical era.

No, the mission period is not over. The individual Christian and the local church can now dismiss missions for the next twelve months only at their own peril and the possibility of severe reverses in the Christian world mission.

ELON COMMENCEMENT.

Congratulations to the members of the senior class who graduate next Tuesday. The parents who sent them and the faculty members who instructed them deserve hearty commendation also. Those who go or return for this gala occasion may witness the pageantry of youth and experience the exaltation of this climatic academic occasion. It is a rejuvenating privilege and well worth the trip.

After commencement the students become alumni. This is a permanent relationship and should be a source of constant joy and mutual profit to the college and the alumni. The future of the college will be greatly affected by the quality and fidelity of the alumni. They have it within their power to advertise the college and commend it by precept and example. Let each one beware lest he, like Joseph's friend who promised to intercede with the powers that be for the release of his erstwhile friend in prison, go out from this academic confinement and straightway forget his promise. The denomination which has created and maintained this institution of educational opportunity at considerable sacrifice looks to them for service and leadership in the church as well as vocational circles.

We breathe a prayer for these young people who are now going out rather abruptly into a rather unfriendly world. All the tests of life have by means been passed. Students occasionally allow the success and popularity of college days to spoil their capacity for hard work which lacks the accompaniment of the spotlight and the swing band. This accounts for the fact that achievements in subsequent life are often out of proportion to all expectations and indications during student life. The boy or girl who has been schooled in patient study, who knows the pinch of necessity and does not feel that the world automatically "owes them a living" is likely to make the greatest contribution in the difficult days in store for us all.

Commencement is the logical time to focus attention on the continuing and emerging needs of the college. Alumni, friends and churches hold the key to an enlarged future. Additional and unusual gifts arrest attention and prompt further giving. The Edenton Street Methodist Church in Raleigh recently gave a scholarship to Duke University. The announcement of diversified gifts for Elon would greatly stimulate the morale of our entire church at this time, and make this commencement significant in the history of the college.

By MISS DOROTHY P. CUSHING,
News Editor.

When Lord Halifax, now British Ambassador to America, former Viceroy of India, was asked by church leaders in England if he felt people would be justified in diverting their gifts from missions to home relief during the war-time crisis, he replied:

"I am myself clear that the support of foreign missionary work in time of war is an essential part of the church's witness. It is a permanent and universal Christian obligation."

Today, as perhaps never before, the Christian missionaries stand as the vanguard of the Church of Christ in distant lands. When everything else, which for generations has seemed to be permanent, is being swept away, the Christian fellowship of all races still holds.

But this great enterprise is today feeling increasingly the strain which decreased income and depleted staffs are putting upon it. Particularly are the eyes of our churches turned during the month of May toward the foreign arm of their service—the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions—which has weathered five wars in which the United States was actively engaged.

This month has been set aside by denominational action as American Board month. The American Board today is serving the basic human needs of sixty million people; training leaders for younger churches in sixteen countries; building the foundations for a just and durable peace and strengthening the world encircling Christian movement.

It is not a bad time to remember that three weeks before the first missionaries were sent out in 1812, the American Board did not have the price of their passage! Yet, these men and women went out on faith and this work of Congregational Christian missions has continued on down through the years. It is true, sadly true, that today there are only as many workers as there were in 1885! There is a desperate need for new workers and more money. The relocation of some missionaries, the temporary withdrawal of a situation in the Near and Far East, have added $40,000.00 unforseen expenses to the current budget of the Board.

Yet, while war does complicate the work of the American Board, it does not halt it. No Congregational Christian missionary, as yet, has come home from the Near East because of the war. No Congregational Christian missionary has come home from Africa, or from India, or from Ceylon, or from the Philippines, or from Fukien Province (China), because of the war. Today, there are approximately 250 workers on the job in those fields. We say approximately, because furloughs—comings and goings—make this figure fluctuate from month to month.

As to the present conditions in the war areas we would refer our readers to an article in the May issue of the Missionary Herald by Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield, which gives as up-to-the-minute account as possible of personnel location.

This article is being written several weeks before publication date but at the present moment it looks as though there would be a temporary withdrawal of most of our workers from Japan by the middle of next summer. Some will come to America and others will go into other fields of service. In North China, missionary mothers and those not in vigorous health have either come home already or have made early reservations. For the rest—the majority of the staff there—plans are under way for work in other fields when and if action seems wise.

The important thing for members of the Congregational Christian Churches to keep in mind today is that their missionaries are ministering to suffering humanity not only in direct war areas but in isolated sections suffering from the backwash of war. Temporary relief is not their main job, however, just an added one. The big thing which they are doing is exerting every effort to keep alive for the days of reconstruction ahead the constructive forces of good will as represented by the Church of Christ both here and around the world.

They are carrying on with painfully limited funds and sadly depleted staffs. They are, side by side, with the Christian nationals, facing unprecedented opportunities. They are flesh and blood, however, and they cannot go on indefinitely holding that thin red line of Christian defense without reinforcements from the home base.

Therefore, the call of the American Board is not only for more financial backing but for thirty-four new missionaries who are urgently needed, namely, six physicians and their wives, two nurses, eight women teachers, two men teachers, five ordained men and their wives. "Add a missionary and multiply brotherhood."

Here then we have, in the foreign arm of the Congregational Christian Churches, these very churches themselves in action beyond the boundaries of this nation as an integral part of the Church of Christ around the world.

A sample of that deep bond of Christian unity which exists around the world in spite of war and sudden death, is illustrated in the story which Rev. and Mrs. Robbins Strong—two of the very few newly-appointed workers now in China—tell of two communion services which they attended, one in a Japanese city and one in a Chinese country town.

In each of these the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed, followed by a reception of members and the consecration of wiggling babies. Wrote Mr. Strong: "These two communion services will remain with me. . . . There was a bond between us that didn't need words as we stood to receive the new members, a bond that was and is greater than any differences. . . . In the Japanese Church was taken in a young soldier boy in uniform with his sword at his side. . . . The dedication of both the Japanese and Chinese churches brought with it the same craning of necks and admiring glances that a baptism of a child does in the United States. . . . Whatever the future may hold I feel sure that groups such as these will go on and grow."

In China, both in occupied and in Free China, the work goes on in school, church, rural center and even out into the isolated country areas. Schools have been bombed and moved bag and baggage into primitive country sections. Students and staff alike suffer often from insufficient food and malaria, due to the climate and poor living conditions. From the countryside come letters telling of the remarkable growth in interest in the Christian Church and its whole message. This is not a result of panic or a desire to find food and protection—it is a definite manifestation of the desire in the hearts of the people to get hold of the thing which they have seen worked out in the lives of Chinese Christians and missionaries in these terrible days. This faith, so practically represented, is making the non-Christian people say, "You have something we want for ourselves."

A startling testimony to the Christian message in China was published

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Two matters have claimed the attention of the churches of Eastern Virginia during the month of May. One is the memorial services held in a number of the churches in this conference during this month. The other is the serious drought in this section.

The churches having annual memorial services find a very valuable contribution is made to the fellowship of the churches and community. There is a real value in cultivating the public spirit of beautifying the cemetery and decorating the graves of the departed. It speaks well of a community to find a sincere appreciation of those who have lived, labored and passed on to their reward. As a nation becomes more materialistic there is an inclination to lay aside the sentimental functions of society. But dollars and cents do not always make sense. Feelings are as real as other facts in human experience. There are people who want the minister to avoid all expressions of sentiment in a funeral service. That attitude towards death must be recognized by the wise minister. But the minister should not become sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal and make such a service empty and meaningless. Any extreme attitude may be hazardous for the minister and tragic for the congregation he serves. Every church should have an annual memorial service. This service should not take on the aspect of a second funeral. It should be optimistic and encouraging, inspiring and comforting.

The second topic is the severe drought. There has been less than one inch of rainfall in this section since April 5—or for the past six weeks. Many farmers have not been able to prepare the ground for planting peanuts. Those who have planted their crops are doubtful about the prospect of having a good stand. The Irish potato crops in this section appear to be almost ruined. The growth of the vines has not reached one half of the usual size for this date under normal conditions. This situation is disturbing to people who invest their money and work to produce a harvest.

People should remember that they must depend upon God for their daily bread. Human skill cannot reach its highest efficiency when it is divorced from the recognition of the proper place of God in human life. Jesus taught His disciples to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread."

This was not a suggestion that men should ask God for a "hand out" or a free lunch. The important thing is to recognize one's partnership with God in the earning of one's daily bread. Praying for rain when needed is as important as plowing the field or gathering a harvest. People who follow the plow should be taught to pray. The carpenter's shop, the office of the people who control great business enterprises, the counting room, the school room and the studio should be places of prayer for daily bread. The parched earth and the withered crops affect every station in this life. The farmer feels the force of the drought before other people realize how serious the situation may become.

We need refreshing showers for the earth and the crops. But how much more do we need a season of refreshing showers upon our dry, thirsty souls. Yes, the churches in this section need a revival, and the sad part of it is the fact that so few people are concerned about this condition. We are reaping the terrible harvest of unpaid tithes, unuttered prayers and unattended services. And we are trying to palliate this illness by self-interest and self-praise. The fire alarm sounded a few moments ago and the city fire department went down the street with much noise and excitement. A fire always attracts attention. Maybe it is time for a general alarm to be turned in from our churches—calling the attention of the people to the fires burning upon the altar of the church. Have the fires upon the altars gone out? If the ministers are not meeting this situation, it is time to call a conference for prayer and consecration.

FORMER PRESIDENTS OF ELON COLLEGE.

Elon College was founded in 1889, opened its doors in September, 1890, making available for the young people of our church and others opportunities for higher education under positive Christian influences. The college has held to these ideals and purposes through the years.

Dr. W. S. Long, a Christian minister, was the founder and first president of the college. He rendered the church and the cause of Christian higher education valuable service during his four years of concentrated, conscientious, Christian efforts as president of the college. Dr. Long died as the result of an automobile accident August 4, 1924.

Dr. W. W. Staley succeeded Dr. Long as president of the college in September, 1893. Dr. Staley was then pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church and served as non-resident president for twelve years.

Upon Dr. Staley's resignation in 1905, Dr. E. L. Moffitt was elected president of the college. Dr. Moffitt served for six years.

Following Dr. Moffitt's resignation, Dr. W. A. Harper was elected to the presidency of the college in 1911. Dr. Harper served for twenty years.

Unfortunately, it would seem, and to the great loss of the college and the church, that Doctors Long, Staley and Moffitt have been called from our midst. They all three lived to a very mature age.

Through the devotion and a desire to honor their father, the children and son-in-law, Dr. VanBuskirk, of Dr. Moffitt, his portrait has been painted and is to be presented to the college on Monday morning, May 26, at eleven o'clock. Dr. Moffitt, at the suggestion and in cooperation with the administration of the college, before his untimely death arranged with the Suffolk Christian Church to present to the college an oil painting of Dr. Staley, and with friends of Dr. Harper to see that his portrait was likewise presented to the college. The portrait of Dr. William Samuel Long, the first president, was presented to the college some years ago, and a very excellent painting it is. These three portraits, that of Dr. Staley, Dr. Moffitt and Dr. Harper, will be presented to the college Monday morning with fitting ceremonies. Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor of the Suffolk Church, will present Dr. Staley's portrait. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Secretary of the Board of Trustees and a student at Elon College while Dr. Moffitt was president, will present Dr. Moffitt's portrait. Hon. D. R. Fonville, a member of the Board of Trustees and a lifelong friend, will present Dr. Harper's portrait. These portraits were painted by the Rev. McKendree Long, artist and minister and a nephew of Dr. William S. Long, the founder of the college. McKendree Long has known intimately all of the ones whose portraits he has painted. He has a keen interest in the college, and it is eminently fitting that he should do this work in behalf of the institution. These portraits will be received in behalf of the college by Dr. W. H. Boone, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the college. The alumni of the institution will be greatly in-

FOR THE CHILDREN

Dear Friends:

Are you getting your Children's Day program prepared? I would like to hear from some of you. Perhaps some of you will find time to write me about your plans for Children's Day and the part you are taking in the service. Just a month from today and you will be having the service. It may be that some of you will work up the service later on when you have Vacation Church School this summer. Be happy at your work and don't forget to put your best self into the service then you will make others happy also.

How many of you are eligible for the Junior High Camp? I just wish that I were that young again so that I could go! Mr. Todd and I met up there with a committee to look the camp over and to help plan for your camp. I just fell in love with the place. Just think of the fun you are going to have under those whispering pine trees and plunging into the cool waters of the lake. The joy that you will get out of worshipping and working with other young people your age! Working for the most worthwhile thing on earth—your church. Tomorrow you will be its leaders. That church of tomorrow will need the most courageous, loving leaders possible. Don't you want to be one of them? There is no better place to prepare yourself for that leadership than at such a camp as is being planned for you. I wish that I might sit down and tell you some of the wonderful experiences which have been mine at church conferences. They make my life rich with memories that are more precious than gold. If it were not for such training I would not be having the privilege of writing to you now! "Got to go to camp this summer, Mom!" Tell her that soon enough and she will help you to go.

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

Yes, she is one of those preacher's kids! But she is having the time of her life. She was born in Virginia just five days after Oliver was born. That makes her birthday November 17. When she was only three and one half months old she traveled 421 miles to see her maternal grandfather on whose seventy-fifth birthday she was born. At the time she had just moved 225 miles with her parents to their new parish.

She is as fat as a little butter ball and just as good natured as she can be!" She likes to play in her crib and in spite of the fact that she is the first baby, her parents declare that she is yet to be spoiled.

On Easter Sunday evening she was christened by a preacher who had been best man at her Dad's wedding. Her christening dress and white blanket were gifts from the churches back in Virginia, where she was born. Believe it or not she was the first baby to be christened in her father's present church. She just knew that the preacher was talking to her so, ladylike, she looked right up into his face and smiled all during the service.

Her parents have a car-bed for her and she adores riding. She goes to church each Sunday night. Her mother takes her fifteen minutes early and tucks her into her little bed in the study. Then mother goes and listens to daddy preach while baby daughter is the pet in her daddy's study until the service is over. All of this traveling and moving about doesn't bother her and she says that she wouldn't change parents with any baby living!

IT HAPPENED IN MAY.

He had been working steadily for eighteen years at the head of a school for his people in Alabama. He was weary beyond belief and yet he still struggled on. There could never be any rest for him as long as he could find one more task to perform which would help his people to rise. He had been a slave. He remembered the days before freedom from slavery was declared. He said that the future of his race depended upon whether or not it could become so valuable that the people in the towns and states where they resided would feel their presence necessary for the happiness and well-being of the community. It was his belief that every man who kept on adding something to the material, intellectual and moral well-being of the place in which he lived would one-day receive his proper reward.

In the spring of 1899 some good friends in Boston had arranged a meeting for him in the interest of Tuskegee. A large number of the finest people of Boston, both races, were present at this meeting. His friend noticed how very tired he seemed. When the meeting was over one of the women asked him if he had ever been to Europe. He told her that he had not. She asked him if he had ever thought of going. He told her that he had not because it was something entirely beyond him.

Not long after this he received word that his Boston friends had raised sufficient money for him and his wife to take a three- or four-month trip to Europe. They sailed for Europe on May 10. It all seemed like a dream to him. He was made to take a well-earned vacation for the first time in his life. He is called the father of his race.

A PRAYER.

At Thine Altar, O God, we remember the heroism of men and the fortitude of women in a time of terror and trial; those who endured with valor, those who suffered with patience, and those who gave all, even the sweet blood of youth, for a better day. God of Mercy, let us not by carelessness or indifference be guilty of the worst of all sacrileges—the waste of sacrifice.

God of justice, make us just in mind and spirit, that the kingdoms of the world may become the Kingdom of Justice. We pray not for a peace of ease, but for the peace of righteousness and goodwill, and the moral love that fulfills itself in fellowship. Comfort Thou Thy people; guide our groping humanity out of chaos into brotherhood. Enlighten our darkness; let ignorance, oppression and envy cease, and heaven and earth be joined in praise of the Prince of Peace. Amen.

ELON PASTORS' SCHOOL.

A healthy variety of courses will be offered at the Elon Pastors' School, June 23-28. Ministers may elect any of the following courses:

Stewardship—taught by Dr. Archie H. Hook.

The Rural Church—taught by Rev. F. C. Lester.

A Program of Music for the Local Church—taught by Rev. O. D. Poythress.

Worship in the Small Church—taught by Rev. Aubrey C. Todd.

Preaching from the Bible—taught by Dr. H. S. Hardcastle.

PERPLEXED, YET NEVER UTTERLY BAFLED.

By WYNN C. FAIRFIELD.

The words from Weymouth's translation of the New Testament which stand at the head of this article are a very accurate description of the spirit in which the American Board is doing its work these days.

In Greece, Anatolia College at Salonika and Pierce College at Athens had to close immediately after Italy's invasion began. The Anatolia College American faculty has largely transferred to other places of usefulness. President and Mrs. E. W. Riggs remained with the older Greek members of the faculty on the campus, helping with the hospital service to which three of their buildings have been put, and in relief work in the city until April 8, the day the city was evacuated, when they left for Athens. One member of the American staff of Pierce College is serving in Aleppo. The others are at the college, engaged with the Greek teachers and some of the students in many phases of war work. Dr. Marden and Dr. Parnelee are doing relief work, the former serving as agent for the distribution of relief provided by the Congregational Christian Committee for Assistance to War Victims.

No letters or cables have come from Bulgaria since the Nazi occupation, but the Near East College Association has had word that its American College at Sofia was continuing without interruption, so that we hope our workers also can carry on. Turkey is today on the verge of the war, with preliminary evacuation of Istanbul already begun. Unrest in Syria is ominous of increasing difficulties.

On the other side of Eurasia, the most significant developments of the first three months of the year have been in Japan. In January, as the House Committee on Foreign Relations heard Secretary Hull and other witnesses whose speeches were printed in Japan, the atmosphere became much more tense. A deputation from another mission board then in Japan advised all its missionaries to leave as rapidly as possible, very largely because it felt that Christian Japanese would be increasingly embarassed by association with potential "enemy aliens" in the persons of the missionaries.

Kuniai church leaders, expressing their deep appreciation of all the American missionaries had done, also expressed their reluctant but deep conviction that the time had come for the missionaries to take "furloughs" to America, because if hostilities should break out between the two countries, the unpleasant consequences which the missionaries would suffer would have no value as Christian witnesses, but would be simply those inevitable for "enemy aliens" still found in Japan. Educational leaders were not so clear in their conviction, but a month later Doshisha University gave similar advice.

These warnings from faithful friends led the mission to adopt a program of gradual withdrawal, with women and the few remaining children to take the first available accommodations, the men to follow later if still possible. This program was slowed down by the news that Miss Grace H. Stowe, who had been on furlough in America, had been issued her passport and was returning to Japan, which she reached on March 20, but plans are still in process and it would not be surprising if all American Board missionaries by mid-summer had left Japan for America or other fields of service. Every effort is being made to make their services available for similar work in this country during this temporary absence.

From North China, the missionary mothers and others not in vigorous health have as a rule made reservations for sailings not later than May. Plans are being made for possible transfers of the rest to other fields in China, when and if that course of action seems clearly called for. Since such decisions depend on factors beyond their possible knowledge, they are hard to make and to make wisely.

While events are forcing many missionaries to consider returning to America, they are also perplexing many missionaries in America all ready to return to their fields. Dr. Shepard of Istanbul made his way back around South Africa as ship's doctor. His wife and the new nurse went across the Pacific and flew from Penang to Bagdad in order to join him. The Nutes of Talas motored all the way from Calcutta to Karachi. Others have considered long bus rides through Africa, unable to pass through the Red Sea. Coming or going, our missionaries are "perplexed, yet never utterly baffled."—Missionary Herald.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AND WOMAN'S CONVENTION.

The latest news that is of great importance to all of our women is that Miss Seabury is to teach the foreign book, "A Christian Imperative: Our Contribution to World Order," and she is bringing with her Dr. Arthur E. Holt, the author of the home book, "Christian Roots of Democracy in America," who will teach his own book at our school. Can you think of any greater opportunity than that in store for those who will attend our School of Missions? Dr. Holt will also be the guest speaker for the Tuesday evening program. I hope you have already planned for a car load from each church. Virginia must get busy. Mrs. Wisseman is "moving earth" almost to get her North Carolina women there and I have news that several car loads from the Valley Conference are already headed in the direction of Elon.

We have a splendid program and unless you are there you can't enjoy it. Is it worth making a sacrifice for? Does your church need you to be informed concerning the program and business? The Convention will give two afternoons to business sessions and we need you there to help make plans for our next biennium. I do beg with all the earnestness that I possess that you plan now to take those days off as a vacation and help your church and yourself by meeting and enjoying the fellowship of our Southern women who are attempting with all their might to do the job that has been given in their care. Will you help to make this meeting a success by being there and participating in its issues?

Sincerely,
MRS. J. MONROE HARRIS.

CHRISTIANITY AND SUPERSTITION IN AFRICA.

The fearsome black spectre of superstition still controls the lives and destinies of a large portion of Africa's friendly people, reports Miss Minnie A. Tontz, R. N., daughter of Mrs. Amelia K. Tontz, 1746 S. E. 36th Avenue, Portland, Oregon, Congregational medical missionary under the American Board of Foreign Missions in Mt. Silinda, East Africa.

Fighting a courageous battle against disease and primitive fears, this small Oregon nurse, representative of the Staub Memorial Church in Portland, Rev. Henry G. Dietz, minister, writes of her work and how war touches her part of Africa but indirectly so far.

Men from Rhodesia have enlisted. Some have lost their lives. In Mt. Silinda the mission hospital now has no doctor since its temporary woman physician has gone to Johannesburg to take over duties of a man called to the front. Mt. Silinda hospital has been without a doctor of its own since 1939 and heavy responsibilities fall on Nurse Tontz, a second American nurse, Miss Theresa Buck, and the native girl nurses.

The nearest doctor now is a Government man (over twenty-one miles away) who can at best visit Mt. Si-linda but once a week and Chikore once a month. In addition to the hospital, which serves an immense area, there are some twenty little orphanages to be cared for at Mt. Silinda.

Among these youngsters is one named Posokufa. In Ndaui this means "about to die." Posokufa is two now. He was brought by his father who said the mother was dead. Later it was learned that the mother was down the road weeping bitterly for her son. What had happened? Posokufa had been born with a tooth in his mouth! And that, superstition said, meant illness for the father.

Sure enough, father became ill. So baby must go. In earlier days the little life would have been snuffed out. But Christian teaching and strict government rulings make this less likely now.

On a trip out into the bush to help dedicate a little school, also to be used as a church, Miss Tontz reported that her car had to travel through huge grass fires. Sometimes the flames ran right to the roadside and they held their breath while the driver put on extra speed to get by. To make the trip more interesting a heavy rain had left patches of sticky black mud into which the wheels often sank! At one point a variety of curious antelopes watched them and then bounded gracefully away over the veldt.

At the dedication of the little church in the veldt the native Chief, with his leading head man, was present. He wore proudly his half moon insignia and two medals, one from the Jubilee of King George V, and one of the Coronation of King George VI. Although not himself a professing Christian the Chief's three sons were Christians and he was eager for his people to learn.

At Mt. Silinda itself a new little church was dedicated last year. Miss Tontz reports an ardent spirit among the women. The native Ndaui pastor of this church gave up his position as Chief in his own right, to become a Christian minister, says Miss Tontz.

Minnie Tontz was born in Illinois and educated at Oberlin College and St. Vincent's Training School, Portland, Oregon. She is the sister of Misses Ida and Bertha Tontz, 1746 S. E. 36th Avenue, Portland, Oregon, and Knowles Tontz of Brooks, Oregon.

The month of May is American Board month in all the Congregational Christian Churches of the United States. Through this foreign arm of its fellowship—a fellowship numbering over a million and a quarter people of all races in ten countries—the American Congregational Christian Churches express their faith that only in real Christianity can be found the ultimate answer to the world's problems.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

They Come With Bed and Board.—With only a few workers scattered over a vast area the churches of the Elende Mission in West Africa find it desirable to meet periodically by districts. Miss Mary W. Hurlbut of Means School, Dondi, went on foot and by hammock, to one of these meetings. Everyone carries his own food, cooking pots and bedding. Between the regular meetings, Means School graduates gave cooking demonstrations surrounded by a group of women seated on the grass. Eagerly they saw how soup could be made of sweet potatoes and soy bean milk; how cookies could come from cornmeal and sweet potatoes. All the cooking was done over an open fire.

Strange Accident.—We are in great trouble," cried a man, rushing up to Miss Gertrude H. Merrill, R. N., in Chikore, Southern Rhodesia, Africa. "My sister has been bitten by a crocodile!" Soon, Nurse Merrill and John P. Dysart were on the way to help the child. She had been seized by a crocodile while dipping water from the Umsilizwi River. A companion had miraculously frightened the reptile away by beating the water, but not before the crocodile's teeth and thrashing tail had made bad wounds in the girl's arm, as well as broken it. It was twenty hours before Miss Merrill reached the little girl and then there was a fifteen-mile journey back to Chikore. Miraculously the infection which the doctor expected did not materialize.

SCHOOL CLOSES—WHAT THEN?

The most popular subject for thought this month among young people is the closing of the school year. Almost induced, it seems, by "exams" and an otherwise exceptionally crowded schedule, most of us find ourselves occasionally stealing a minute here and there from duty to do a little day-dreaming over the days ahead.

Summer is always great! Free as we are to choose at least some of the things we want to do, we find our minds so crowded with ideas that we're almost beginning to feel the need for a card catalog.

In the first place, this isn't just an ordinary summer. So much is happening in our world that even the duller of us are beginning to sit up and take notice, and to do a little thinking of our own—and to grow up. Certainly we can't go on drifting along with some slipshod, indifferent beliefs about life.

Members of Pilgrim Fellowship have had the opportunity of going a long way toward beginning a more disciplined, a more worthwhile, a more fruitful kind of Christian living. We would not see that way of life perish because a simple epidemic of carelessness struck our generation. How much better it would be to face honestly our sense of values and try to see more clearly the things we've thought about so long.

The opportunity to crystalize these thoughts into deeds is certainly to be found in the Pilgrim Fellowship program which is being planned. Summer conferences, the summer activities of the local church and young people's group, and the endless possibilities that are open for personal exploration, conspire to suggest a definite line of action to those who are really awake to the ever-growing necessity for life that is real. Let us never be left with an empty dream.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP CONSECRATION SERVICE.

In the April issue of the Pilgrim Highroad (page 63) there appeared an impressive consecration and communion service which forcefully presents the meaning of the Pilgrim Fellowship Statement of Purpose. This service which was prepared by Rev. Richard R. Hurlbut, assistant minister, First Congregational Church, Madison, Wis., has been used and revised by young people's groups, and may become a service of common worship for Pilgrim Fellowships throughout the land.

We mention it as a service extremely meaningful, which may find significant use among our own local conference groups.

The service centers about an altar, upon which have been placed a cross standing before a lighted candle, an open school book, a communion cup, a gear or machine wheel, a tennis racket, a garden trowel, and a globe of the world; beside the altar is an American flag.

The candle, symbol of the light of eternity, is the perspective through which one sees the cross of Christ. It points toward the objective: "To achieve Christian personality after the pattern of Jesus."

The second purpose in the Statement, "To seek a fuller understanding one of another in the interest of happy relations in home and community" is represented in the symbols of work and play—the garden trowel and the tennis racket.

The communion cup is suggestive of the fellowship and unity of all Christians in Christ, and is symbolical of the third purpose: "To work for a united church, practicing Christian freedom and definitely promoting the program of Jesus."

The school book symbolizes the need to make actual our fundamental ideals of freedom and equality to all people in our democracy, "To secure equal rights and opportunities for all classes and races as equally the children of God."

The American flag suggests not blind allegiance but the conviction of freedom of conscience which stems from the Christian heritage of our forefathers and thus makes pointed the fifth purpose, "To practice Christian patriotism which recognizes the authority of God in conscience as supreme."

The gear or machine wheel represents industry and agriculture. It (Continue on next page.)

HOW TO USE OUR RADIOS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR MAY 25, 1941.

SCRIPTURE: Phil. 4: 8; John 2: 15-17.

Daily Readings—

Monday—A Burning Bush Radio—Exodus 3: 1-6.

Tuesday—God's Broadcast to Elijah—I Kings 19: 11-13.

Wednesday—Listening to God—Psalm 85: 7-9.

Thursday—A Voice from Heaven—Matt. 17: 1-8.

Friday—A Missionary Broadcast—Acts 16: 6-10.

Saturday—A Broadcast from Prison—Eph. 4: 1-6.

There are fifty million radios in use in the United States and 850 stations in operation. Radio is probably something of a business, an art, and an entertainment. It can make a contribution to character building by developing right attitudes and providing for wholesome emotional expression, or it can be a liability to all that is in life.

Several persons should be asked to listen to radio programs for a week, and discuss at this meeting: "The best and worst I heard over the air this week." Such well known programs as Major Bowes' Amateur Hour, or Information Please, may be assigned to persons to report as to their (1) general appeal, (2) entertainment value, (3) cultural value, and (4) educational value.

Assign these short talks and follow each with a brief discussion:

1. The need for radio standards and ideals.
2. Radio courtesy: How loud or late should the radio be played? Should it be played when visitors are present and in conversation? When several members of the family each want a different program, who shall determine the one to be heard.
3. The search for breadth and depth: Discuss the narrow view in these expressions, "Oh, I never listen to anything but swing music," "All I want is news," and "All I care about is the stories by various soap products."

Work out a list of standards to apply to various types of radio programs. Also develop a list of rules for "radio etiquette."

For Discussion—

1. Why do you like a special program?
2. If you were a radio censor, what current programs would you ban?
3. How can Christian people make better use of radio facilities to extend the gospel?

BROADENING CHRISTIAN HORIZONS: PETER'S VISION.

LESSON VIII—MAY 24, 1941.

LESSON: Acts 10:1-11:18.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 98.

GOLDEN TEXT: And Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons.—Acts 10:34.

Cornelius' Vision.

This man, Cornelius, was a soldier, a devout man, one who feared God with all his family, one who was very generous in his gifts to the people, and one who prayed to God always. He had a hunger and thirst after righteousness, he wanted to learn more, and to him, as to many another man who prays, there came a vision splendid. On one occasion while he was praying, the "inner voice" spoke unto him directing him to send unto Joppa for Simon Peter. Through Peter, Cornelius was to learn more about the true way of life.

Prayer does many things. But perhaps there is nothing that it does and is more effective or more vital than to give new perspective to life and to open up new visions. These visions may not come to us with the same accompaniments that they came to Cornelius, but the man who does practice a prayer life, again and again will hear the quiet, still voice from within, directing his paths, giving light on his problems, renewing his strength, pointing out new fields of service. Of course, if the thing is to be made effective there must be obedience to the vision. Cornelius was probably a man accustomed to action, and as soon as he had seen the vision forthwith set about to obey it.

Peter's Vision.

In Joppa, some miles away, Simon Peter was visiting. He, too, had a vision, a strange vision. He came home at noon one day and dinner was not ready. He went up on the housetop to spend the time in meditation and prayer, and he, too, had a vision. A certain vessel, like a great sheet held at the four corners, was let down out of heaven. In it were all manner of four-footed beasts and creeping things, and birds. A voice said, "Rise, Peter, kill and eat." But Peter, as a Jew, had been particular what he ate. He had observed punctiliously the Mosaic regulations about foods. With some pride, and perhaps smug satisfaction, he politely told God that he had never eaten anything that was common, or unclean. He had not caught the point of the vision yet, and it was repeated the second, and even a third time. Like us, Peter was very particular about the jot and the tittle of the law and he had missed some of the weightier meanings and significance of religion. He thought that it was more important to observe certain petty laws about food than it was to give the bread of life to the Gentiles. While thinking over the meaning of this strange vision he was called down from the housetop to greet the messengers which had come from Cornelius. What strange ways God sometimes uses to make his will known and to accomplish his purpose. Here was a soldier of the Roman army praying in Caesarea, and here was a soldier of the cross praying in Joppa. The vision of each did not mean anything apart from itself, but when each acted in obedience to the divine impulse, or command, things made sense. It was through Simon Peter that Cornelius was to find the way into the Christian experience. It was through the strange vision that Peter was to be prepared to break across the boundaries of a narrow Jewish prejudice and bigotry, and to broaden the horizons of the Christian Church.

As the poet says, "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." A man can get on his knees in America and wield potent effect upon the work of a missionary in China, or India. A mother can follow the fortunes of her boy and undergird him with strength and power through prayer, even though he is far away. The work of a church can be renewed and quickened by this same spiritual exercise.

Peter's Visit.

When Peter put two and two together it made four. When he talked with the messengers of Cornelius the whole thing made sense. He, therefore went with them to Caesarea. He took along a few men from Joppa. Even then perhaps he was not quite sure of himself and he was a little skeptical about going as a Jew into the house of a Gentile. But he, too, was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. When he reached the home of Cornelius he found that this man and his household, and his friends, had already met in glad anticipation of hearing the word of life.

"Now, therefore, as we are all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." It was an ideal situation—a prepared preacher and a prepared people. Under the inspiration of the occasion Peter preached a great sermon. Because the people who were there had open minds and responsive hearts, God poured out his spirit upon them. Even before Peter got through his sermon, "the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word." It came as quite a surprise to the Jews who were with Peter that the Holy Spirit was poured out upon the Gentiles. They evidently thought that the spirit of God was reserved for the Jews, that the gospel was not intended for the Gentiles. But Simon Peter had a new spiritual insight. He rightly reasoned that if God had baptized these people with his spirit in the inner man that it was altogether fitting and proper that Peter himself should baptize them with water as an outward sign of an inner experience, a symbol of the casting away of their sins, and of their public witness to their faith in Christ and enlistment with his people.

Broadening Christian Horizons.

Thus do we see the way in which the horizons of the early church began to broaden. Jesus said that his followers were to be witness in Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Their horizons were being broadened and their sympathies were being enriched, their plans and programs were made more comprehensive. Christianity was destined to be a world religion. These men were gradually and under the patience of God discovering this basic fact. They were learning what a great many Christian people today still do not fully comprehend.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

suggests the technical advance of a culture which directed toward the ends of justice could afford an abundant life for all, the sixth purpose.

Symbolizing the seventh purpose, "To work for such international organization of the nations as will preserve peace and security," is the globe of the world.

The service is planned for the installation of officers, and a fellowship communion service following.

We suggest that program chairmen of local societies and conference groups look up the service in the Highroad and keep it for future use,

MONDAY.

CHECKING UP ON SELF.

"Example yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves."
—II Cor. 13: 5.

Paul is reproofing his hearers for demanding a proof of Christ in himself. He says that it is yourselves you must test, for it is Christ within you that is the proof. If you do not have your ear checked over regularly you may expect to pay for the oversight—and at much extra cost—perhaps not next week or next month, but ultimately. So how about yourself—your very own "get-about-body engine"? Let us pray for the proper understanding of the workings of Christ in the soul, for the courage and tenacity to examine ourselves, and for the temerity to judge others. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUR DAILY MESSENGERS.

*"Set ye up a standard in the land."
"One post shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another."*
—Jer. 51: 27-33.

Messenger service was on foot throughout Bible days. Later, there were the swift riders. Men were dependent entirely upon legs and horses. Now, nearly every one has a little instrument in his home that he can take down and send messages all over the world. In these days our Father has given us many swift messengers. The main question is: Have we anything worth while sending? Let us pray that we may be so conscious of the divine purpose of life that in every conversation they who listen to us, or they who receive our messages, may take knowledge of us that we, like the apostles of old, live with Jesus. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

IRRESISTABLE BELIEF.

"The man believed the word that Jesus had spoken."—John 5: 46-51.

Jesus chastened the Nobleman by classifying him with those who would not believe unless he saw "signs or wonders." This chastening brought forth the heart of the man who insisted on the faith which he had in Jesus. Jesus did not see fit to go. He only spoke the word. This was satisfactory to the Nobleman. He believed and his belief was rewarded.

Our Lord wants us to believe for what He is and not for miracles he performed. Today we have no miracles, such as was then, but we believe in Christ and we find Jesus more wonderful than His deeds. The best Christian evidence is Christ. The only cure for infidelity is Christ. Let us pray that we may know the Savior, that we may draw close to Him each day, that we may enter into His life, its graciousness and its love. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE SAFETY OF HOLINESS.

"I will both lay me down in peace and sleep: for Thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety."—Psalm 4: 8.

The celebrated minister, Rowland Hill, had a gardener many years and accepted as an honest man. But at last the gardener was convicted of many robberies and sent to jail. Mr. Hill visited him and in the conversation asked: "How is it that you have never robbed me?" Said he, "I was afraid. Many times I was on the point of robbing you, but something said, 'He is a man of God, this is a house of prayer; if you rob here, you'll surely be found out.'"

A friend of ours was walking down a dark street in New York one night. Two thugs grasped him as though to make way with him. They found a cross on his watch chain. One said: "Turn him loose; he is a Christian." Christians find their paths hedged about with divine protection. Pray earnestly that you may have the strength to withstand temptation and the courage to follow the Lord Jesus.

FRIDAY.

THE INDEPENDENCE OF SIMPLICITY.

"His food was locusts and wild honey."—Matt. 3: 4-10.

John was a most independent character, his independence lay in his power; and his power lay in his poverty, his simplicity and his freedom from envy or entanglements. He asked no favors of kings and therefore he could face them with their sins. He envied not the rich and so he could rebuke their greed. His outdoor life and simple fare strengthened his body and at the same time enfranchised his soul. Our way up is manliness and not by wealth or by the help of others. Let us pray for the lot that is best, and a life of contentment, strength, beauty and joy. Amen.

SATURDAY.

RIGHTEOUSNESS ALL THE WAY.

"Let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream."—Amos 5: 18-24.

The people were very religious but their religion was idolatrous. They brought many sacrifices to the altar, but they never made sacrifices of their lives or of anything for the good of others. They observed the feasts, but they did not meet God, because they did not live with God.

Amos woke them up. With one crashing sentence he told them of their sins and how their righteousness must be an everyday affair and a purifying stream. That is what God wants of you and me. He wants not the fragments but the full piece; not half way righteousness but all the way, thoroughgoing within our souls, and the pouring out of righteousness all the way. Pray for the large liberal spirit and righteousness as the supreme joy. Amen.

SUNDAY.

And wake dead souls to love and praise,
This is the day of peace:
Thy peace our spirits fill,
Bid Thou the blasts of discord cease,
The waves of strife be still.
This is the first of days:
Send forth Thy quickening breath,
And wake dead souls to love and praise,
O Vanquisher of death.

—John Ellerton.

THE AMERICAN BOARD.

not so long ago in the magazine of the Chinese intelligentsia, which formerly was not only skeptical to Christianity but bitterly opposed it. Said this article: “Christianity will have a larger place in China after the war not only because of the relief work carried on everywhere by missionaries and Chinese Christians but also because the meaning and value of Christianity is more widely appreciated than ever before. . . . One of the many things that has come out of the present war has been the realization that, whatever doubt may have existed in the past, Christian missions in China fully and indisputably justify their existence. . . . The Christian missions in China have built for themselves a record of which they may be justly proud. They have preached the gospel not with words but by practical demonstration of the love of God and the brotherhood of man. They have definitely found their place in the life of the nation, fulfilling great human needs in its hour of travail.”

Today, the American Board faces an unprecedented opportunity in the Philippine Islands. That great Island of Mindanao, especially, is their peculiar responsibility. It was recently opened up by the government to colonization and so thousands of homesteaders are pushing in to a rich but uncultivated wilderness starting little boom towns and living in an atmosphere of covered wagons. Right along with them have come the gambling dens, the red lights and all the rest. The Philippine Church follows its people, too, but these young sister churches of ours, called “Evangelical” in the Philippines, are poor in worldly goods. They have valiant spirit but badly need more trained leaders. They can produce the youth but not the wherewithal to train them.

Under James F. McKinley, in Siliman Theological Seminary, we are training many of these Filipino Christians both young men and young women. Before they can secure their degrees and graduate they have to spend at least a year in field work. This means that they go out into isolated, primitive communities, surrounded by poverty, paganism and superstition when many of them are not yet twenty-one years of age. These young men and women, and the Filipino pastors and deaconesses of larger experience, are called on to be not only ministers but doctors, nurses, agricultural advisers, child trainers and teachers. Our entire staff in the Philippines now includes only twelve workers—and some of these have to be home on furlough.

Those familiar with Dr. Frank C. Laubach and his vivid way of expressing a problem, will be interested in a paragraph which he sent recently and which speaks for all his co-workers in the Islands:

“We don’t want anybody to drop bombs on us but if they would drop the cost of a bomb it would blow us singing on the way into next June. Enough bombs dropped in one night without harming anything or anybody, would run all the missions we have had for a hundred years. The world does not worry about billions in war but to do God’s work we count, and decline, our pennies. Then those pennies go into taxes for more bombs. . . . And when we, here in Mindanao, want to fight for the King and are out of ammunition it nearly drives us mad. Every sincere Christian would rather have his money go into scattering the spirit of Christ than scattering death. Without shame or modesty, we say, if you have even a fraction of a bomb to give us, without starving yourself or going naked, we need it just as quickly as possible.”

In India and in Africa tremendous opportunities are opening up. In India there is not only the need of strengthening the Christian Churches and reinforcing the Christian educational work but perhaps a major contribution is the sort of thing which was described in a recent letter by Mr. Lloyd L. Lorbeer of Pasumalai when he referred to the threat of the Muslim League to divide India into Pakistan (the four northern provinces where Muslims are in the majority) and Hindustan. The Hindu Association is calling on Hindus to learn to fight.

“The greatest hope in India,” wrote Mr. Lorbeer, “is that many groups and communities have leaders permeated by the spirit of the living God. Usually this spirit has come from the witness of Christians or through reading the New Testament.

. . . Many British, Moslems, Hindus and Sikhs filled with this spirit are leading the people toward the common goal where there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, but all are one. May Christians everywhere be in this living vanguard.”

In Africa, our schools are crowded. The little churches are springing up and opportunities opening on all sides.

Rev. Frank T. Meecham of Mt. Silinda, East Africa, tells of the dedication of a new church school building where fifteen years earlier he had seen organized a little mission school in a hay-covered shed. Now the people have built for themselves a sun-dried brick building. The chief was there in his regimental splendor and his young son, Bernard, a pupil, interpreted his father’s message.

When Dr. Russell Henry Stafford, President of the American Board, said, “War time is no time for Christians to back down,” he was not thinking in parochial terms but with a world vision. In this new world about which so much is said these days—this new world which must emerge out of the present chaos and horror—the Christian Church must play an important part if such a tragedy is not to be reenacted in another twenty-five years.

While there are many channels through which it can work it has no better implement to use than its world-wide fellowship as represented by its missionaries, its schools, hospitals, clinics and social centers.

Miss Mary W. Hurlbut of Africa describes the connection between those of us in America and the work in Africa as similar to an African tepoia, or hammock. It takes someone on both ends to carry a tepoia. Her story is applicable to our work in all parts of the world. It is a sad but very true fact that we have dropped our end of the tepoia so many times during the past few years that there have been tears of anguish across the seas. Miss Hurlbut finished her illustration with a plea, saying, “Please, dear people, don’t forget that we are walking up-hill.”

The whole world today is walking up a hill—a hill it seems with a cross at the top and if that be so how can we who are Christians let down their end of the tepoia at a time like this?

Forget them not, O Christ, who stand
Thy vanguard in the distant land.
In flood, in flame, in dark, in dread,
Sustain, we pray, each lifted head.
Exalt them over every fear
In peril come Thyself more near Thine is the work they strive to do,
Their foes so many, they so few.
Be with Thine own, Thy loved, who stand Christ’s Vanguard, in the storm-swept land.

The Orphanage

MARTHA LEE WHITTEN.

JUNE DALTON.

Dear Friends:

The two pictures at the top of our letter this week are our high school graduates for this year. We had only two this time but have several in the senior class for next school term.

The picture at the top is Miss Martha Lee Whitten. Martha Lee came to us from Burlington, N. C., April 9, 1934. She has been with us seven years. The second picture is June Dalton. June came to us from Greensboro, N. C., September 1, 1933. She has been with us seven years and eight months.

Both girls came to the orphanage in their young and tender years and have grown into two fine young women. They have reached our age limit and will soon go out to fight their life's battles. They have been faithful girls here and have tried to do their best, and we feel sure that in whatever they undertake they will continue to do their best. During the years they have been with us they have won a warm place in the hearts of all of us and their leaving will cause a pain in our hearts and a silent tear to fill our eyes. We regret to see them go. We are happy to have had a part in training them thus far in their life and to have helped give them a chance to make good.

The writer is happy to have charge of an institution that devotes its time to the service of helping the helpless and dependent children. A great cause; a worthy work. It undertakes to fill the vacant place in their heart and life caused by the loss of a good mother. They crave to be loved as much as any children.

We have a little three-year-old boy in the orphanage that everyone loves. The little fellow lost his mother a year ago and with two other brothers was placed here. It is very touching sometimes to see him climb up on the matron's lap and put his chubby arms around her neck and kiss her on the cheek as he used to kiss his mother. He wants to be loved.

Any time you wish to mail us a check to help us it will make us happy.

In Memoriam

CARTWRIGHT.

Mrs. John Cartwright passed away at the Granby Sanitorium, Norfolk, Va., on Easter Sunday morning, April 13, 1941. Although she had not been well for several weeks previous to her death her passing came as quite a shock to her family and friends. She passed away quietly in her sleep.

Mrs. Cartwright was formerly Miss Augusta Benton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Louis Benton, and she was born in Nausmond County, December 5, 1869. After attending the elementary schools, she graduated from the Suffolk Collegiate Intitute. From there she went to Elon College. To the end of her life she remained a reader and a student, and had a well stocked mind. In 1900 she married John Cartwright, and to this union one son, Carlyle, was born. Mrs. Cartwright is survived by her husband; her son; two sisters, Mrs. Lyda Beamon and Mrs. Lucille Dudley; and a brother, Linwood Benton.

Mrs. Cartwright overcame many physical handicaps, especially in her later years. In 1926 she suffered a physical breakdown and spent nine months in the sanitorium at Catawba, Va. In 1936, while attending a missionary conference at Eaglemere's, Pa., she fell and broke a hip. Two years later she fell and broke her other leg. The second fall made her practically a cripple and made it necessary for her to spend much of her time in a wheel chair. She had been in failing health ever since the second fall.

Mrs. Cartwright, or "Miss Gussie," as she was more familiarly known, had been practically a life long member of the Christian Church. For a number of years she taught the Friendship Bible Class at the Christian Temple, and was very popular as a teacher by her original and incisive comments and interpretation of the lesson. She was also very much missionary-minded and gave herself devotedly to the interest of missions both in her local church and in wider contacts. She was interested in Y. W. C. A. work. At one time she was a member of the Board of the Traveler's Aid Society. She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, a gracious friend, a good neighbor, an independent thinker, a stimulating teacher, a genuine Christian. In her physical handicaps and in her suffering she maintained her Christian faith.

It was perhaps appropriate that Mrs. Cartwright passed away on Easter Sunday morning when we commemorated the resurrection of Christ from the dead, and falling on sleep in him she awoke in newness of life through Him who is the resurrection and the life. The Christian Temple hereby expresses its appreciation for her life and labors, and extends to members of her family circle its sincere sympathy.

ENTRANCE TO ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Elon College is located in the piedmont section of North Carolina. The climate is invigorating and healthful. The natural beauty of the campus is enhanced by careful landscaping.

The definite religious atmosphere of the College and its modern equipment provide the very best facilities available for the training for religious leadership.

The rates are most reasonable.

AN INTIMATE WORD

I have just come from a conference with our treasurer, Mr. Harold Belcher. I think you ought to know what we have been talking about. The officers of the American Board have made strenuous efforts to operate on a balanced budget. This has been achieved during the last two years and the entire deficit accumulated over the depression period has been liquidated. This year, September 1, 1940 to August 31, 1941, we have again budgeted with extreme care, as the members of the Prudential Committee will testify. We included in the estimates for this year $17,000.00, which we thought might be required if tensions in East Asia continued and temporary adjustments had to be made. Up to date not only has this amount, $17,000.00, been spent in connection with increased cost of travel, living and work, but it is now clear that $23,000.00 more will be needed for this purpose before August 31, 1941, making a total of $40,000.00 extra expense for the year. We have exhausted our reserves. Increased apportionment receipts and sacrificial gifts from individuals are our hope for another balanced budget.

FRED FIELD GOODSSELL,
Executive Vice-President.

A Call to Prayer

Addressed to the Christians of North America for peace about the Pacific based on justice, mutual understanding and reconciliation.

In view of the ominous threat of general war in the Pacific, and the continuance of the European conflict, we call upon our fellow Christians to join with us and with each other in a continuing ministry of prayer that God's will may prevail and that a just and durable solution may be found for the problems which are alienating the nations.

As never before, we realize that we are members of a Christian fellowship which transcends nations, races and classes. The potential influence of this fellowship for international guidance is a fact of major importance.

Upon us as Christians, therefore, lies an inescapable responsibility to seek through prayer to learn God's will. Let us reflect upon the causes of disturbance in international relations, the sincere viewpoints of other peoples, and the necessity of paying the price of peace. Let us enter with imagination, sympathy, and charity into the tragic experiences through which our brethren in Eastern Asia are passing; and under divine guidance, seek for a just solution of problems and so escape the tragedy of further armed conflict.

MEMORIAL DAY--1941

The Victors

They have triumphed who have died;
 They have passed the porches wide,
 Leading from the House of Night
 To the splendid lawns of light.
 They have gone on that far road
 Leading to their new abode,
 And from curtained casements we
 Watch their going wistfully.

They have won, for they have read
 The bright secrets of the dead;
 And they gain the deep unknown,
 Hearing Life's strange undertone.
 In the race across the days
 They are victors; theirs the praise,
 Theirs the glory and the pride—
 They have triumphed, having died.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

NEWS AND VIEWS

Rev. Harold Loman will begin a revival meeting at Gibsonville, Sunday. Three services will be held and dinner will be served on that day. Friends are invited to visit this young and growing church.

First Christian Church, Portsmouth, enjoyed the services of two former pastors on a recent Sunday. Rev. J. W. Harrell was the preacher for the morning service and Chaplain H. E. Rountree spoke at the evening service.

A series of successful revival services have been concluded at Hope-dale Christian Church. Rev. Harold Loman, the pastor of the church, did the preaching. Much progress in the work of this church has been made during recent months.

A service of ordination for Loring B. Chase was held at the Ledyard Congregational Church in Connecticut on May 28. Rev. Thomas Alfred Tripp preached the ordination sermon. Mr. Chase was a former pastor of the New man Congregational Church in Rumford, R. I.

Commencement speakers at Duke University, May 31-June 2, are Dr. Alexander Loudon, minister to the United States from the Netherlands; Dr. J. M. W. Gray, formerly Chancellor of American University and now pastor of Bexley Methodist Church, Columbus, Ohio; Dr. Hornell Hart, Professor of Sociology, Duke University.

The Eastern Virginia Ministers Association held its spring picnic at the Franklin Country Club. The following officers were elected: President, Rev. Arnold Slater, Vice-President, Rev. J. L. Neese; Secretary, Rev. H. G. Council, Jr., Treasurer, Rev. B. H. Watkins. Rev. J. Everette Neese, the pastor of Ocean View and Little Creek Churches, was welcomed into the association.

Twenty-one new subscriptions were secured in THE CHRISTIAN SUN campaign in the Suffolk Christian Church. One young working girl said: "Dr. Truitt, I wish to subscribe for it for myself, and especially my father, who is a shut-in and will enjoy it so much." Another working girl said: "Yes, I wish to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for I want it for my family and myself to read. We wish to keep up with all the working of our church."

ATTENTION, DRAFTEES!

Individuals or families affected by the draft should carefully read the sermon by Dr. Alfred Swan in this issue. A copy should be sent to those already in service. Dr. Swan is a member of the American Legion and is capable of speaking to men in the camps.

Alfred W. Swann was born in Chicago. He received his academic education at the college of Wooster, Ohio, being awarded there an A. B. degree, cum laude. He studied at Western Seminary, Pittsburg and McCormick Seminary, Chicago, and received his B. D. degree at Union Seminary. His earlier pastorates were at Marion, Ohio, and Greeley, Col.

Every Sunday during the academic year, Dr. Swan's church, which stands on the edge of the campus of the University of Wisconsin, is crowded with students. Dr. Swan is a member of the National Religion and Labor Foundation, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Fellowship of Reconciliation and the Council for Social Action.

EASTERN VIRGINIA—LET'S GO.

I feel that our School of Missions at Elon last summer was the finest project our Convention has ever undertaken. One of the greatest contributions was affording our women an opportunity to associate with one of our very own missionaries from the foreign field, Miss Mary McClure. This year we are having another of our very own missionaries with us, Miss Angie Crew, on leave from Japan. Miss Creve was one of the missionaries of our former Christian Church.

It will surely be a real joy and an inspiration to have Miss Ruth I. Seabury teach us, and associate with us for that week.

After reading a recent bulletin gotten out by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, President of the North Carolina Women, I am sure the North Carolina women will be there. And I hope that every woman's group in the Eastern Virginia Conference will take seriously having a representative, or representatives, at Elon, June 16-20, for this, our second School of Missions.

COMMENCEMENT AT ELON COLLEGE.

Elon's fifty-first commencement is history. It was one of the best commencements that the college has ever had. It was good from beginning to end. On Saturday evening the music and dramatics departments produced a comic opera written by a member of the music faculty. The writer did not reach the campus in time to hear this, but if reports were correct, it was unique.

We arrived Sunday morning just in time for the offertory, and also in time to hear the excellent baccalaureate sermon, which was delivered by Dr. Albert Buckner Coe of Chicago, Ill. Dr. Coe is not only pastor of one of the largest churches in metropolitan Chicago, but is also chairman of the business committee of the National Council. His sermon was one most fitting to the present times.

The recital by the department of music on Sunday afternoon was up to the Elon standard. The "Requiem" presented by the Elon Singers that evening was possibly a shade better than standard.

Monday started with class day exercises on the part of the graduating class. These exercises were followed by a special service in which the portraits of three former presidents were presented to the college: those of the late Drs. W. W. Staley and E. L. Moffitt, and that of Dr. W. A. Harper.

The writer missed the Alumni meeting in the afternoon. Dr. Coe received a telegram demanding his presence in Chicago on Tuesday, and we had a race with time together, that he might catch the train at Winston-Salem, this being the only possible way in which he could reach home at the time specified. Needless to say that the trip to Winston-Salem was a delight to us. That back to Elon was slower and not quite so pleasant, as we were alone.

The Alumni banquet was held Monday evening. Details will probably be given in a later issue.

On Tuesday morning, the commencement exercises were held at 10:30 o'clock. Governor Broughton of North Carolina delivered the address to eighty graduates. Governor Broughton delivered one of the best of the many fine addresses which it has been our pleasure to hear at Elon's commencements. We hope that it will be possible to get a copy of it for publication.

We are sure that more detailed write-ups of the commencement programs will be published in subsequent issues of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The Southern Convention

By DR. J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, Secretary.

Annual correction: page 177—In the Ministerial Directory the ordination date for Rev. William J. Andes is 1935 and not 1926.

--:-- --:-- --:--

There seems to be a pretty consistent call for donations. They come from many directions, for all kinds of enterprises and institutions and almost all of them are worthy. The probability is these calls will increase.

On how to meet these numerous calls our Chairman of the Committee on Stewardship may have a word for us. Besides being a problem in family and personal budgeting it is a problem in stewardship, for many of these calls are for Christian enterprises and institutions.

Within our Southern Convention at this time calls are being made for the J. O. Atkinson Honor Fund, the Kerr-Sun Monument, the Convention Debt, the Bethel-Concord-Mt. Zion Parsonage Fund, CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions, the American Board Extra Expense, the Promotional Secretary's Office Fund, and the women are girding themselves for the Atkinson Memorial Fund. Now who can raise a word of criticism regarding either the validity or the urgency of any one of these calls?

But let us not in our giving forget that which must come first in our missionary and benevolent giving, the apportionments of our churches to the conference and Convention budgets. It may well be our interest in one phase of our Convention program exceeds our interest in another or all others. But we must remember that these apportionments are made on the assumption that we are one body.

This is simply a plea for interest in concern for and support of the apportionments. Five more months and our conference sessions will be held. Will every minister and every interested layman reading this do all that he can to have his church or churches raise and report the apportionments in full?

As your secretary senses it herein is the important thing before our Convention now in the field of financial support. If our apportionments can be raised in full our boards and institutions and the Convention itself can carry on. If the apportionments are not raised in full then certain of these boards and institutions and the Convention itself experiences embarrassments, curtailments and deficits.

No church can report apportionments raised in full unless each apportionment is raised in full. This standard was adopted to give emphasis to our need to see our Convention program as a whole.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN" MEMORIAL.

Up to this meeting, four responses have been made to the invitation for donations toward the fund with which to place a monument commemorating the first edition of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the site of the administration building of the Junto Academy, where Dr. D. W. Kerr did the editing. These four contributions total four ($4.00) and they are gratefully acknowledged.

But it is the feeling of the writer others will wish to have a part in this undertaking. A costly shaft is not being raised. The monument, however, will be adequate for the purpose and commensurate with the surroundings. If you are interested send your gift to anyone of these three:

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE.

HAVE YOU READ THE ANNUAL?

As one of the five conference secretaries I wish to commend Rev. Jas. H. Lightbourne, D. D., on his work of editing the 1940 Christian Annual. I have read it through carefully twice since I received it. As secretary of the Eastern Virginia Conference, I noticed (page 93):

On motion, the following resolution was adopted by the conference: Resolved, That local churches be requested to send their church reports to the secretary of conference with check made to W. E. MacClenny, treasurer, attached to distribution sheet, not later than Tuesday after the third Sunday in October (October 21, this year) in order that a mimeographed report may be presented by the secretary of conference in its annual session.

That resolution was adopted and is now a rule of conference. It is hoped and expected that local churches in Eastern Virginia and the conference secretary will abide thereby.

Also, I read a special resolution adopted after the adoption of the report of Evangelism, page 92, as follows:

Upon motion the conference set the goal of five hundred (500) net increase in membership for the next twelve months, and asked the Committee on Evangelism to set up the plan of campaign for this increase.

President J. F. Morgan appointed the following on the Committee on Evangelism: Revs. R. E. Brittle, chairman; J. L. Neese and O. D. Poythress, than whom there are none better known for their evangelistic fervor in our conference. May God bless them in their work to get the conference to make the net increase of five hundred this year.

Have you read the Annual? I noticed the number of churches lost during the year, also the number received into conferences. Do you know how many there were of each? Was there a net gain in members in the five conferences? How many churches are listed in the five conference? What did they do? The Annual makes interesting reading.

SUPERANNUATION.

The Board of Superannuation meets in latter June to determine the mid-year appropriations and to authorize the payment of the same. If there are churches holding contributions to the Superannuation Fund or if there are individuals wishing to make a gift to this Fund it is hoped they will be forwarded to Mrs. Mattie Cox Parker, Elon College, N. C., by June 20.

The Board is called to meet at Elon College, Wednesday, June 25, at four o'clock in the afternoon.

CHURCH MUSIC TAUGHT AT DUKE INSTITUTES.

The announcement that Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Dickinson will be on the program of the Duke Institutes and Bible Conference, June 2-7, has brought a great number of inquiries from choir directors, organists, and other persons interested in church music.

Because of the numerous inquiries, I think we should offer the high privilege of hearing these ministers of music to lay workers who are responsible for church music. I am, therefore, extending an invitation to these musicians to attend the Institutes. The only charge that will be made is a nominal fee of one ($1.00) dollar registration.

CONCERNING COLLEGE AND SEMINARY GRADUATES.

Among the many college graduates this spring there will be a number of ministerial students. A few of these will doubtless volunteer for military service and training. We register the hope and belief that the majority will enter a reputable seminary this fall. The college graduate should engage in serious consideration and consultation before abandoning the possibility of seminary training. Thanks to generous benefactors, there are many avenues of assistance for the enterprising theological student in the major seminaries of our country. Marriage itself may discourage, but should not prohibit, continued training. Really, it should furnish additional incentive! Some of our churches have suffered because of a lack of competent leadership comparable to that found in adjacent churches of sister denominations. The ministerial student owes it to himself and to his church to make full and adequate preparation for the Gospel ministry. Conferences are wise in recommending such training as the basis for ordination and every effort should be made to conform to this standard. These requirements do not appear to be stringent when compared with those laid down for the study of law and medicine.

And now, having emphasized the need for and the almost universal requirement of training in a recognized seminary, let us pay deserved tribute to those worthy men who have never had the advantage of seminary training. Enduring service has been rendered in our Convention by modest ministers of limited training. Their integrity of character, their love for Christ and the church, have compensated in large measure for any deficiency in formal education. "By their fruits," said the Master, and not by their roots, ye shall know them.

More than a seminary education is necessary for the making of a minister. An antecedent work of grace or experience of Christ is the first essential. And without this prerequisite the seminary is endeavoring to make bricks without straw and the minister will be only "a blaring trumpet or a clanging cymbal." Seminary training is not an end within itself; it is an effective means to a worthy end. This asset quickly becomes a liability when it gives one a false sense of superiority or security.

Away with too rigid distinctions between the A. B.'s and the B. D.'s! Other obvious distinctions soon appear in every minister: distinctions in the quality of work done, the length of pastorates, the evidence of denominational loyalty, the cultural type and size of congregations attracted, the extra-denominational recognition of constructive leadership, and the continued personal development in post-seminary days. These are the important and ultimate distinctions. No stigma should be attached to the minister who failed to reach seminary and neither should such a minister go through life with a feeling of inferiority. With great humility let us exercise our ministry as ambassadors of Christ, utilize every opportunity to develop the talent that is ours, commend each other in a fraternal spirit, and participate freely in our united efforts to magnify the name of Christ and extend his rule in the hearts of men.

FREEDOM IN PRISON.

Imprisonment was a familiar experience in the early church. John, Paul and Silas knew the experience of prison life. Paul wrote some of his letters in prison. Bunyan wrote "Pilgrim's Progress" in Bedford jail. But all that seems so far away!

Now a new wave of imprisonment is circling the globe. Kagawa was arrested last August and spent a month in prison last fall. Niemoeller languishes in a German concentration camp. Nehru is serving his eighth term of imprisonment at the hands of the British in India. Gandhi has submitted to repeated imprisonments. But "it can't happen here!" Yes, a few young men, conscientious objectors, are serving their terms in America.

"Toward Freedom," the Autobiography of Jawaharlal Nehru (John Day, $4), is the record of a privileged and talented Brahmin who stands next to Gandhi in his influence over India's millions. Nehru is thoroughly acquainted with Western as well as Eastern culture. He is by no means a criminal. He is living a life of voluntary abnegation for the freedom of his native India. There is pathos in his confession that he has given up every luxury except an occasional book!

Life in prison obviously diminishes a man's freedom. At first it seems that all freedom has been rudely taken away. But not so! Nehru now found time to study animals and insects, the clouds, prison conditions, human nature in the rough, British imperialism, the theory and practice of non-violence and the mental processes by which his conduct was guided. The shortcomings of democracy, capitalism and imperialism came under his careful scrutiny. This autobiography of a disciplined soul contains none of the morbidness found in many published confessions. Students of psychology will find Nehru more interesting and wholesome than Freud. Students of missions and international relations dare not overlook this authentic record of noted leader and world democrat. "Toward Freedom" should be required reading in all missionary societies.

R. L. H.

Through suffering and despair men will rediscover the ancient truth that work is prayer, the ultimate power to which they must appeal for their freedom, safety and welfare. In the silent labor of the humble and obscure, done day by day in patient indifference to the pretensions of the State, the ambitions of its power seekers, and the burden of its parasites, every community will finally find strength to resist the pestilence of political exploitation which is the curse of mankind.—Virgil Jordan.

CHRISTIAN FAITH IN A WARTORN WORLD.

"Our warfare is not against flesh and blood . . . but against the powers of darkness that rule this world."—Ephesians 6:12.

These are the words of a man in prison. More fully St. Paul said:

For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.

He was describing the cosmic struggle by which good seeks to overcome evil. It is an accurate description of the Christian's warfare.

Fifteen hundred years later another man in prison translated these words into his vernacular. Martin Luther had it: Wir haben nicht mit Fleisch und Blut zu kämpfen. And he knew what it was to struggle with the powers of darkness, for they sometimes overcame him.

Four hundred years later a fellow countryman in prison wrote many other words about his "Kampf." His battle had very much to do with flesh and blood.

But at the same moment pastors in the Christian Churches in that land, where they have not been silenced, have been saying these words to their congregation. In every land we Christians can say to one another: Dear friends, our warfare is not against flesh and blood, but against the powers of darkness that rule this world.

That is, the Christian warfare is not against this nation or that nation, but against evil, and against none more certainly than war. This is not to slip over into the myth that this war, in which we may presently be engulfed, is a war to end war. It is nothing of the kind, and may be but an episode in a long series of struggles that lie ahead in history. But it is to say that the spiritual warfare of mankind is against those forces which perennially break through and destroy human life and moral values. It is Christian duty to wrestle against these powers of darkness, and when possible to outshine them with the things of light.

If the things of God are lost, our human bark is indeed in a sorry way. It is the duty and privilege of the Christian warfare so to illumine the things of faith that they may be seen to endure. Today we are to examine that faith which we hold as a little candle amidst the powers of darkness in this world's light.

I.

For one thing, Christian faith sings with Julia Ward Howe that "God's truth is marching on."

Christianity is not to be detached from historic movements, though it may rise above them. But it entered the continent of Europe to subdue it to the will of Christ. It has been wrestling a long time with the aspects of human nature that are drawn from the powers of darkness. They are part of the whole struggle of creation until now.

Among these forces are the blind organic drives of life. These are typified by two heroic plaster statues on Unter den Linden at the opening of the Olympic Games. They were very modern nudes of a sturdy German youth and a buxom German girl. But they were symbolic of something more than athletics; they represented the expansive drive of Teutonic race and blood. But those same drives are at work in every land, and St. Paul would have recognized them as part of the cosmic forces which we seek to control. The problem of population pressure on a purely competitive basis resolves itself into attempts to annihilate every other race; on a cooperative basis there might be room for every man and nation. God through men is wrestling with that dark problem.

The historic purposes of God are at work in and above monopolistic colonial imperialism. It has been the pride of Britain that she ruled the waves. While her colonial policy has been reasonably enlightened, it has been also predatory. And her Tory support of the Spanish counter-revolution has paved the way for the combination of powers now devastating her fair green island.

The moral purposes of history are now impinging upon us for our own selfish and prideful isolation. Europe is in upheaval today at least partly because we refused to lend a strengthening hand to a League that might have restrained the violent and sustained the weak. We are about to pay the penalty for that evasion of responsibility. And now our threatened involvement in the Orient is due to our insisting on making money out of human blood by selling munitions and materials to an aggressor nation. If now our sailors and marines are called across the Pacific, they will taste in their bodies the hot shrapnel that our own scrap iron piles have furnished. The reciprocal judgments of history are coming home in startling ways.

Unquestionably ideological affinities are at work in the present movements of history. It is not that the founding fathers of our country were chiefly of British stock, and blood is thicker than water. We now have as many people from backgrounds on the continent of Europe as from the British Isles. But the people who came here were the liberty lovers, who were ejected by the various tyrannies of Europe. So now our affinities are for British tolerance as opposed to German intolerance. The choice is so clear there is no doubt about it. Our spiritual kinships are with one side and not with another.

We are now in such a place as Lincoln confessed himself to be in, when he said, "I have not controlled events; events have controlled me." With him we can hold that every drop of blood unjustly drawn may be requited by one drawn with the sword of justice. And yet the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.

It is a part of Christian faith in a war-torn world that God's truth is marching on. Never doubt it for a moment.

II.

In the second place it is clear that Christian faith would hold with Washington Gladden "that duty lights the way for the beautiful feet of peace."

However we may differ on how peace is to be achieved and maintained, we are agreed that peace is a desirable good in human society. We are in diametrical disagreement with all who hold that war is a higher and nobler level of human existence. The human heart lives to its fullest in peace.

1. Granting that, some will feel that the surest road to enduring peace is temporary engagement in war. In good conscience such persons must be respected for their courage and resolution.

It is on this basis that our government has now elected to put peacetime conscription into effect. Many of us have been opposed to it, and

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Two red birds built their nest this spring in a rose bush near our kitchen window. Three young birds were hatched and received the daily watch care of these beautiful birds. One day recently we saw one of the young birds fly from the nest to some shrubbery a few feet away. This premature flight disturbed the mother bird and she flew back to the nest several times apparently trying to induce this little off-spring to make an effort to return to a safer place in the nest. She failed in her efforts and the little thing sought refuge among the shrubs, exposed to the alley cats which prey upon such helpless things.

The flight of that little red bird is a fine illustration of young life. The flight was made too early. Nature had not been able to hurry up the growth of feathers and flesh with sufficient strength to fight a successful battle with all the enemies of young bird life. The mother bird had not given the signal to leave the nest. The young bird needed a few more days of feeding and training for flight. Sometimes boys and girls become tired and impatient with the slow processes of reaching their full maturity. The restraints of remaining under the parental care, the limitations of home boundaries and the lure of the great out-of-doors disturb their peace of mind and make them restless for adventure. They want to leave home too early. And out they go, like the young red bird, from the nest where they were born and nurtured in helpless infancy, to face the dangers of countless enemies and relentless vampires who would destroy them.

A bird's nest is the safest place for young birds until they are strong enough to take care of themselves. The home is the place where boys and girls should be safe from danger and it should be attractive and uplifting. If young life does not receive some moral and spiritual inspiration in those early years in the home it is tragic for youth and heartbreaking for adults. Mother's apron strings may be shorter than her dress, but they should have a strong pull upon child life. And the child should not be in a hurry to cast aside the inspiration of mother's personal attention. There is safety in living within reach of her love and guidance.

There are two institutions which must be preserved and recognized if our nation is to be saved: the home and the church. When the home becomes a boarding house and a bedroom for late comers, it is time for the danger signal to be raised. When the church becomes an empty museum and a relic of forgotten authority, distress calls should be sounded from every hill top and at every cross roads. That red bird's nest is in the rose bush, but the little birds are gone. The church will remain after it is deserted by the people who protest its invitation and desist from attending its services. But woe unto the people who go out to face the inevitable conflict with evil, free from the sheltering wings of faith and un-failing love. The church is not fighting a battle of self preservation. It is seeking to rescue and save the lost and protect them in their hour of danger.

Let us labor earnestly to reenforce the spiritual powers of the home and the church. Youth is in peril and old age is threatened. Today is the day of salvation. Tomorrow will be too late. The night cometh. The God of hosts is our refuge and strength.

I. W. JOHNSON.

CONSCRIPTION AND COLLEGE STUDENTS.

The aggressive program of the axis powers designed to secure world domination for the dictators has occasioned for this democratic country a very grave crisis, a crisis that this country cannot evade. It would be suicidal to attempt to ignore it. The religious element looms large in the battle for freedom. The Christian religion is opposed to war. It stands for peace. However, the present conflict has as its major purpose the destruction of democracy which means the destruction of freedom. When democracy and freedom go, it will be impossible for religion to continue as is today.

We live in a mechanical age, and this is certainly a mechanized war. Machines, however, are dependent upon manpower. Operating submarines, piloting bombers and fighter machines require a high degree of intelligence. Anybody can fire a rifle or wield a sword, but a trained mechanic is required for the successful operation of aerial warfare. As in every war youth is required. Ingenuity, resourcefulness and alertness are required for successful combat in the present conflict. These are more nearly the assets of youth than of more advanced age. Our government, facing the situation thoroughly conversant with the criticalness of the situation, has laid and continues to lay hands upon the youth of our land, the flower of our manhood in the making. It has been estimated that a minimum of one hundred and eighty thousand young men now in college were included in the first draft. The question is advanced as to whether or not students should be taken from college to take their year's military training or be allowed to complete their college courses, whether one, two, or three years be required, and then take their year's training. These questions seem to me to be pertinent and deserving of the most careful consideration, viewing the interests of the country and the future from every possible angle.

There are more young men of draft age who are not in college than the country can possibly train at present. During the war and after the war there will be a premium upon trained minds. At present the country is terribly in need of scientists, physicians and nurses. These needs will be multiplied as the war progresses. When the war is over, more than ever before there shall be a demand for trained minds in professions, education, business and industry. Our recovery to the least discomfort and hardship will depend upon the intelligence and efficiency of available leaders. If the potential leadership of the nation now on our college campuses be transferred to training camps, there will be a "bottleneck" in the leadership of the nation from which society will suffer and will find great difficulty in meeting the needs adequately. It is easy enough and sounds entirely fair to issue universal laws and to demand strict adherence without reservation or omission, but foresight and the interest of days that lie ahead require wise selections and intelligent procedures.

There is today a serious threat to the principles enjoyed by free peoples of the world and to civilization that is the result of human progress through the years. It becomes this nation's responsibility to preserve these principles of freedom for generations to come and to see, regardless of what happens to the world by war, that civilization does not perish from the earth. We are all aware, I think, that freedom, Christianity, and civilization are dependent upon a capable constituency that is possible only through a system of instruction and intelligent direction. The colleges of

Dear Friends:

Two blocks from the parsonage here in Sanford there lives one of our church families who have a lovely play yard for children. There is a little boy who is five and a little girl who is two and one half years old in the home. But the interesting thing about it is that I have never visited the playground in the afternoon but what there were other children enjoying the soft green grass, the swings, see-saw, sandpile, playhouse, merry-go-round and toys.

Yesterday afternoon, Malcolm Allen, Oliver and I went over to see the new merry-go-round. There were five children having a big time when we arrived. Before you could count ten Malcolm was in the middle of the fun having the time of his young life. I sat in a lawn chair near Oliver's buggy and he laughed and squealed with the other little boys and girls. He adores children and will sit in his carriage for hours watching other children at their play.

We had been there just a short while when the mother of the two Patterson boys came back from doing the Saturday shopping with ice cream for a picnic. Mrs. Patterson brought five cups of strawberry ice cream, which cost five cent a cup. Malcolm had come while she was away. There was great excitement about making the ice cream go around. Mother Proctor went into the house and got a dish and a spoon. She took one spoonful from each cup and put it into the dish for little Patricia. One little boy had not been feeling well so he fussed when he had to give up a spoon full of cream. Oliver sat and watched the children eat without fussing for which I was very glad. He very often sets up a howl when we eat before him without offering him some. If you ever come to Sanford you are invited to come and play with us.

Sincerely,

DOROTHY TODD.

OUR GARDEN.

Summer sun has been beaming down on the parsonage garden. Do you have a garden? Don't you think that it is fun? We have just gotten our garden planted recently. The plot is low and it was too wet to plow for a long time. We got a negro man to come and plow it up for us. He had a big strong mule so he and the mule did a good job for us.

We have tomatoes, squash, peas, beans, okra, radishes, corn, onions, and butter beans coming up. The birds have been trying to help us by catching the insects which are trying to harm our plants. One old cut-worm got busy and cut down one tomato plant without being eaten by a bird. Yesterday morning when I got up to feed Oliver his breakfast at six o'clock I dressed and went out to work in the garden. I spent one hour having a big battle with the weeds. The birds came flying to see what I was "up to" and to see if they could find a worm for their breakfast. One bright cardinal got real chummy with me and acted real saucy! The robins came also and it was fun to watch them looking and listening for worms. They pounce on a worm just like a dog grabs his bone whenever Mr. Tom Cat comes around the corner.

All over the fence around our garden the honeysuckle vine is growing and just now it has a million blooms on it. It is worth getting up early to sniff its lovely fragrance on the morning wind.

Our garden needs rain just now to make the plants grow as they should. Isn't it interesting how much you notice the weather when you have plants that need rain and sunshine? It makes you feel more thankful for the rain when you see what it can do for a sickly, sunburned little tomato plant doesn't it?

THE SWITCH.

Are you afraid of a switch? Agnes was very, very much afraid of one. She was just as scared when she knew that one was coming her way as a grown man might be if he knew that a rattler was going to strike him. Because she was so afraid, Agnes tried harder than most children to be good so that she need not have a switch visit her.

One day in November, Agnes was sitting in her little rocker before the fire. It was one of the very first cool days. The fire felt so cozy and Agnes was having fun trying to find figures in the smoke and flames of the fire. Agnes loved her little rocker better than anything she owned. Big sister, Emily, had bought it for her with some money which she had earned by teaching school. Clara, a sister, four years older, was sitting before the fire also. Clara got tired of looking at her storybook so her "Terrible Twin" decided that it might be fun to tease Agnes a bit. "Go out into the yard, Agnes, and get some acorns from the ground beneath the oak tree and we will play with them." Agnes went out to get the acorns. When she returned Clara was sitting in her little rocker and refused to budge.

Agnes begged Clara to play with her, but Clara would not pay any attention to her pleading. Agnes tried to turn the rocker over and spill big sister out but she was too heavy. She asked Clara to get up and let her have her chair, but "No" was the reply. Agnes called to her mother and asked her to "Make Clara get out of her chair!" Mother was too busy to come to see what the trouble was. The battle grew hotter and words flew. Mother called and said that she was coming with the switch. Agnes made a dash for the door. Once outside she ran and climbed into the crib loft and hid in the corn husks. She waited and waited but no one came to hunt her. The shucks were not warm enough to keep her from shivering with cold and fear. Agnes did not know what to do. At last she decided that if she jumped out of the loft to the ground and hurt herself that her mother might not whip her. Down she jumped. Her feet landed in soft earth and were not hurt, but her hands struck some pieces of glass and both of them were cut. Agnes went to the house crying, the blood dripping in great drops from her hands.

Agnes had not much more than entered the kitchen door before her mother laid the switch on with no light hand. Agnes cried as if she were being killed! Her brothers and sisters came to the kitchen door and they, too, started crying. They saw the blood and thought that her mother was whipping the blood out of Agnes' body! There was such a howl that mother stopped whipping Agnes and stopped the bleeding. No questions were asked and no explanations were given. Agnes' mother could never guess how scared her little daughter was of a switch. That night Agnes vowed that if she ever had a little girl or boy of her own that she would never use "the awful switch" to punish them. There would just have to be some other way!

FORMER VIRGINIAN HONORS
DR. J. O. ATKINSON.

While being too late for last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, a check for $25.00 from Mr. Walter C. Rawles of St. Louis for missions is a most gracious gift and is most encouraging. If a former Virginian can make such a contribution there must be a hundred or so members of the Convention who will be delighted to do so. Who will be the next, either for a larger or a smaller gift than $25.00.

J. E. WEST,
President.

Actual income for Missions since Sept. 1, 1940 ...	$14,453.63

To correct the figures given two weeks ago as the increase made in missionary giving, you will note that we have deducted the amount of the sale of the Elm Avenue lots, which should not be counted along with the missionary offerings. Therefore, our total increase to date over that of this time last year is $764.07. The Mission Board has set a tentative goal of $2,582.55 to reach by August 31, the close of our fiscal year. We have to raise $1,818.48 to reach the goal. By reaching the goal set we would have an income this year for missions of $20,000.00, which would surpass any year since 1930-31.

We are grateful for all the above offerings and for the splendid cooperation of the Sunday schools and churches. MATTIE COX PARKER,
Secretary.

PROGRAM OF NORTH CAROLINA WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

Prepared by

Mrs. D. J. BOWDEN,
Cradle Roll Superintendent.

ANNUAL CRADLE ROLL MEETING: MITE BOX OPENING.

"Thou art a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

Aim.—To bring hope to the mothers of children everywhere; to bring our children as early as possible to an understanding and active love for their brothers and sisters, near and far; to shed the light of Jesus continually.

Program.—This annual meeting of the mothers of Cradle Roll members can be a time of spiritual communion; the bringing of the mite boxes an expression of gratitude, no matter what the amount in the box. This should be one of the big meetings of the Missionary Society for the year. We suggest an afternoon meeting, with christening service, if such has not been included in the church's year. It is important to arrange for children to be allowed to leave after their part of the service. Mothers cannot attend to service while worrying over restlessness of the children.

PRELUDE—While the children come in to take their places at front.

HYMN—"Faith of Our Fathers."

PRAYER—Our Father, Father of all mankind, who gave us thy Son Jesus; we remember this day Thy command: Let the little ones come into me. We acknowledge that these our little ones can hardly come to thee except through us. When we fail through indifference to bring our children to thy house, we shut them away from thee. Or when the work which is inevitable in the care of our little ones before our sympathy with their questions, makes us intolerant of their projects, or renders us joyless in our relation to them, remind us that we are putting the second thing first. Give us power and strength to guide the growth of a clean spirit along with a desire for a clean person. May we not in the pressure of the household keep saying "Don't," but show them how to "Do"! Cleanse us of selfishness and impatience; of anxiety and worry over trifles. We pledge ourselves to seek Jesus through our Bibles and our church, that we, having him in our hearts, shall prove worthy to be his guardian of these new lives; these lives which are our share in creation. Amen.

SPECIAL MUSIC BY CHILDREN—If possible, have the youngest Sunday school class learn one or two of the children's hymns between now and the June meeting so they can sing them at that time. "Jesus Loves Me" and "I think When I Read That Sweet Story" are suggested. They may not get the tune very accurately, but they feel the protection the words of these songs bring. Start them on learning the songs by heart next Sunday.

BRINGING OF MITE BOXES—Have the congregation sing some appropriate hymn for this presentation; let the children place the mite boxes on the altar. The four- to six-year-olds can take the boxes of those too young to bring them, but they can all march, with the help of an adult. Have the children march outdoors for their "party" while the mothers continue with a discussion.

CHILDREN'S PARTY—The children should be under the supervision of their teacher and two or three older girls: one girl for the one- and two-year-olds; the others with those who can play games. Ring Around the Roses, The Farmer in the Dell, London Bridge and similar games will keep the children entertained until time to serve a drink and cookies, or little bags of hard candy and a penny toy.

PROGRAM FOR MOTHERS—"The Little Child and God," by Jenny Lou Milton will make a fine background for this part of the program. It costs 5c and may be ordered direct from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or through Mrs. F. C. Lester, Elon College, N. C. Several leaders could present various points from this pamphlet or a discussion could be led using them as a basis. For example:

1. Children have a natural capacity for God.
2. Develop an attitude of love and dependence on God.
3. "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen cannot love God whom he hath not seen."
4. Some things in the home that interfere with the development of reverence in the child: Child rules the home; parents feeling no reverence for a higher power; parents not worthy of reverence; lack of respect for others, as shown in gossip, criticism, etc.
5. Some things that aid in developing reverence in the child: Beauty, associating the unknowable and the unknown with happiness, beauty and reverence, order and regularity in living.

CLOSING HYMN—

BENEDICTION—Our Father, we accept the trust Thou hast placed in our hands; we ask not for tasks to meet our power and understanding, but know that, if we seek thee, thou will give us power and understanding to meet our tasks. Amen.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

ELON COLLEGE, N. C.,
JUNE 16-20, 1941.

Registration.—Send your registration to Mrs. L. E. Smith at once if you wish a room reservation. Tell her whom you wish to be with.

Arrival and Departure.—Delegates to the School of Missions should arrive Monday afternoon, June 16, and remain until Friday afternoon, June 30.

How Much Will It Cost?—The entire cost of the School of Missions is six ($6.00) dollars. One ($1.00) of this will be for the registration fee which helps to pay the expenses of the school and five ($5.00) dollars will pay for room and board.

Theme for the School of Missions.—“Christianity and Democracy.”

The Mission Study for 1941-1942 will develop around two fields which today is first page news.

Christianity and Democracy for adults and young people will be emphasized by Dr. Arthur E. Holt who will teach his own book, “Christian Roots of Democracy in America.”

The church must be the conscience of the nation in the new crusade for democracy before us, declares Dr. Holt, in this prophetic book. Beginning with the early teachings of the Christian religion and the Old Testament he traces the growth of the democratic principle, particularly in America, and then shows the close relationship between the home mission enterprise and the rooting of a second democracy in our national life. Dr. Holt states with vigor and insight the distinctive mission of the church today in preserving and furthering a democracy consonant with Christian conceptions of life.

Christians and World Power—for adults and young people will be emphasized by Dr. Ruth Isabel Seabury who will teach the following book: “A Christian Imperative”: Our Contribution to World Order, by Roswell P. Barnes.

The author, who traveled during 1940 behind both both battle lines in Europe, presents an uncompromising picture of the present chaos and makes a keen analysis of the disastrous anti-social and destructive aspects of human behavior that have led to it. He writes out of an intimate knowledge of the ecumenical movement, and describes the distinctive contribution that Christians can make to a new world order.

The Whole Conference will unite in Whitley Memorial Auditorium for classes and special services, and will gather for twilight vespers on the Elon campus. Morning Watch will be conducted each morning a half hour before breakfast.

Bible Study will be Peter I-II, led by Dr. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va.

Music will bind the Conference together in worship and praise.

SUN'S PULPIT.

some of us will continue to oppose it. I am personally opposed to conscription to military service under any circumstances or at any time. Its presence here is the clearest evidence of a victory among us of those totalitarian powers of darkness against which it is the business of the human spirit to contend. In opposing the draft we have good company. Daniel Webster in 1814, when Napoleon was at large, stood on the floor of the United States Senate and opposed conscription in the most vehement terms as destructive of every liberty which the founding fathers sought to create. Canada, Australia and New Zealand are at war without conscription. We have hysterically embraced it. Even on military grounds you will get a better army of volunteers than you will ever get of draftees, and you will get them as fast as the need demands. And on ethical grounds it appears to me that the one thing you cannot conscript is conscience. “God alone is Lord of conscience and hath set it free from the commandments of men.” If we do not conserve that principle, we have nothing much to preserve.

But now conscription is the law of the land. And I should like to say that, while we profoundly regret the removal of one of our distinguished fellow citizens, Pres. Dykstra, to head the draft board, it is promise of tolerance in administration of the law that a citizen of liberal temper has been chosen for the task.
